Ring smuggles in heroin worth $1.6 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — Italy's most wanted criminal used a Midwestern "pizza connection" in a ring that smuggled more heroin into the country than even the notorious French Connection — $1.6 billion worth over five years, authorities said.

Thirty-one people were charged Monday with participating in a conspiracy that imported 1,650 pounds of heroin from Sicily, shipped it to mobsters in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit, and hid the proceeds abroad.

Federal officials said they learned of the ring when two FBI agents infiltrated the Bonanno crime family of New York.

"It is the most significant case involving heroin trafficking by traditional organized crime that the federal government has ever developed," said U.S. Attorney General William French Smith said at a Manhattan news conference announcing the charges.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani said the case was bigger than the French Connection, the name given in the early 1970s to the smuggling by French nationals of hundreds of pounds of drugs by hiding them in luxury cars being shipped to the United States.

The new ring's crucial link was a group of Sicilian-born pizza shop operators in Midestern communities including Oregon, Ill., and Milton, Wis., officials said.

Discussions about seemingly innocuous topics such as cleaning pizza parlor tables or delivering flour were used as codes for drug deals, officials said. "Oven," for example, was said to be code for a kilogram of heroin.

Officials declined to say exactly how the heroin was smuggled into the United States. But Giuliani, alluding to the Midwestern ties, said it was imported "in areas where we would not necessarily be as watchful" as in larger cities such as Chicago or New York.

Gaetano Badalamenti, "the most wanted man in Italy" and leader of a Sicilian Mafia family, was at one end of the connection, Giuliani said. At the other end was Salvatore Catalano, whom authorities called the boss of a faction of the Bonanno family.

Badalamenti, 50, was arrested Sunday in Madrid, Spain, and Catalano on Monday in New York, where he runs a bakery and pizzeria. Giuliani said 24 of the 31 men were in custody when the charges were announced.

Catalano, his lawyer said at a hearing Monday, "works at that bakery 12 hours a day, six days a week" and drives a rented car.

The charges, the lawyer said, were based on "innuendo, speculation... and a lot of unnamed sources."

U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack set bail for Catalano at $5 million. Bail for a co-defendant — Giuseppe Ganci, identified by authorities as Catalano's top assistant — was set at $7.5 million.

The Sicilians in the Midwest "were the go-betweens" who would drive to New York with the heroin, said Giuliani.

$9 million expansion bid OK'd

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A low bid of $9 million was accepted for the construction of an almost three-year-old 77-bed expansion project at Midland Memorial Hospital during a special meeting Monday.

Acting on a recommendation from the Board of Trustees' Building Committee, the five-member Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors unanimously approved awarding the contract to Area Builders for $9,043,226. Area Builders was one of eight construction companies submitting bids.

Plans for the project began in spring 1981 when the hospital had experienced an occupancy rate above 90 percent, according to Dale Miller, MMH business manager. Patient occupancy rates have been running at about 82 percent recently, he said.

The bid included an $8.4 million base bid and several alternatives such as a built-in unit furnishing medical gases, patient care outlets and systems and the renovation of the present same-day surgery unit into patient rooms.

Also, Area Builders' bid specified an additional allowance for operating room lights and automatic door operators and options for Johnson Controls, undercounter refrigerators and manually operated projection screens.

The construction cost estimate submitted in a certificate of need to the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin was $11.8 million. That cost included new construction, renovaton, fixed equipment and a contingency, according to Arlene Strickland, MMH public relations director. The $15.1 million used to finance the project would cover the above plus architectural fees, financing and movable equipment, she said.

Another $900,000 for fixed equipment would be added to Area Builders bid, according to Ray Branson, MMH President. That would bring the cost to about $1.8 million less than originally anticipated.

Quadriplegic on her way to independence

By HALLYE JORDAN

After training for a year to be a respiratory therapist and then working as one for four years, Joyce Lynde woke up to a nightmare.

On Sept. 19, 1982, after returning home to Howard, S.D., for a brother's wedding and staying up late with other family members, Joyce fell asleep at the wheel of her car in the early morning hours on her way to where she was staying for the weekend.

"I used to have nightmares about that," the 26-year-old said. "I used to think if I woke up on a ventilator, it'd be the worst thing."

When she did wake up in the Sioux Valley Hospital in Sioux Falls, S.D., it was with a tube down her throat; a tube similar to the ones she had placed down the throats of other patients before her.

She was on the other side of the sterile metal machines.

"I remember waking up and I was so upset. I couldn't talk. It was weird because a nurse that I knew real well, that I'd worked with, was there. I mouthed, 'Take it out.' And she said, 'I can't, Joyce, because you can't breath on your own.' "

She had fractured C-6 and C-7, the sixth and seventh of the 12 cervical (neck) vertebrae. And she, the one who had decided to go into respiratory therapy to help others after a brother broke his neck in a diving accident and was put in a wheelchair for life, now was also quadriplegic.

Midlander's death probed

The Sheriff's Department is investigating the death of a 53-year-old Midland man whose body was found near County Road 210, about three-quarters of a mile west of FM 1788, shortly before 10 a.m. today.

The man had been reported missing about 7:15 p.m. Monday.

He appeared to have died of a gunshot wound. No other information was available at press time.

Some people unsure who is vice president

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

You could say being elected vice president of the United States is the political equivalent of volunteering for a cryogenics experiment.

A new vice president often is quick-frozen on Inauguration Day, kept in cold storage for four or eight years and then thawed out in time to make his own run for the presidency. If he doesn't make it, he disappears into political obscurity, only to re-emerge years later as a spokesman for American Express: "Do you know me?"

The political future of George H.W. Bush is still undetermined, but three years in office have had their inevitable effect on his visibility. Even in Midland, where he once lived, 40 percent of respondents to a Reporter-Telegram mini-poll taken Monday couldn't say who is the vice president of the United States.

Of course, the survey of shoppers at the Midland Park Mall was hardly statistically significant, with only 25 unscientifically selected respondents. And the 10 people who couldn't answer the question were somewhat embarrassed about it, a tacit admission that as good citizens they should know who their vice president is.

On the other hand, several of the 15 people who did name Bush only did so after several moments

Midland, Odessa sales tax rebate checks increase from April 1983

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland-Odessa are at that in-between stage — doing better than a year ago but not as good as two years ago.

That was the assessment made by the city of Midland's finance director Troy Gifford in looking at the city's sales tax rebate check for April. The one-cent sales tax collected by the State Comptroller's Office and rebated two months later amounted to $468,311.91. This was about a third higher than last year's April rebate of $340,165.73.

Odessa's check was made out for a similar amount — $458,969.96. It, too, ran about a third higher than last year's payment of $340,966,09, according to Frank Muser, fiscal services manager for the city of Odessa.

He explained that what looks like a high increase for both cities is due to a reclassification system instituted by the Comptroller's Office. Businesses that used to pay sales tax on a quarterly basis — or once every three months — are forced to pay every month.

"By the same token, some of the increase is real," he said. "It's good news, but..."

Two years ago, both cities were still feeling the effects of the economic boom when sales tax rebates hit record highs.

Last year, both cities watched as the rebates plummeted and threw their budgets into deficits.

Gifford noted the sales tax rebates are reflecting a "gradual recovery," and he suggested Odessa's recovery might not be quite as strong as Midland's.

Gifford had estimated Midland would receive between $450,000 to $475,000 this month and the payment fell between those marks. For next month, he has estimated Midland will get a check for between $950,000 and $1,050,000. Muser pegged his city's check at $800,000 next month, which would be about the same as last year. The last two payments, he said, stayed on track of what had been estimated for this year.

May's check will reflect sales made in March, the end of the first quarter, and will include those businesses that are allowed to pay once every three months.

Totals for the calendar year to date show Odessa down 0.60 percent and Midland up 2.76 percent. Odessa has received checks totaling $2,396,502 this year compared to

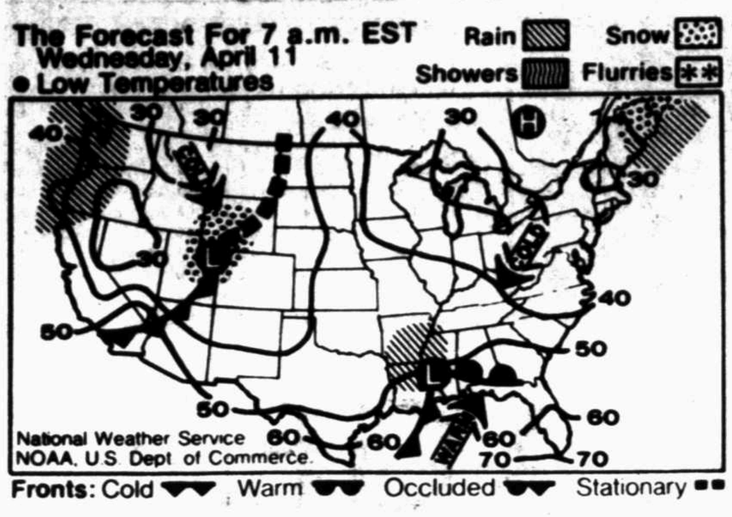
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for Wednesday for the central Rockies and Plains and rain for the Northwest and the upper Mississippi Valley.

More windy weather forecast for Tall City

Under clear skies, more wind will whip through the Tall City as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is forecasting more gusts of blowing dirt.

Calmer northwesterly winds are expected to breeze at 5-10 mph tonight, increasing to 15-20 and shifting southerly Wednesday.

The low tonight should drop into the middle 40s, with a high on Wednesday climbing into the upper 80s.

Monday's high of 88 was five degrees cooler than the record high of 93, set for that date in 1939. The overnight low of 52 was 22 degrees warmer than 1952's record low of 30.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms developing in West Texas early today were expected to spread across the northern and eastern parts of the state by evening, with some severe activity possible in East Texas, forecasters predicted.

At dawn, scattered rain was reported between Wichita Falls and Abilene, set off by a complex frontal system that accompanied a surface low pressure area moving rapidly eastward across the state.

The National Weather Service reported early today the frontal system consisted of a warm front lying east-west across southern Oklahoma, and a cold front pushing southward over the High Plains and extending from the low center in the Panhandle southwestward to El Paso. In addition, the NWS said, a dry line reached southward from the low center into the Texas Hill Country. An intense upper-level disturbance also was crossing the Panhandle this morning, supporting the low, the weather service said.

Despite some low cloudiness and fog along the upper Texas coast, fair skies were reported across most of South and Central Texas, with variable cloudiness in West Texas.

Temperatures at dawn ranged from the mid- and upper 40s across the High Plains to the upper 60s on the coastal, with extremes of 45 degrees at Amarillo and 70 at Laredo.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies across most of the state today with scattered thunderstorms across North Central and East Texas. Skies were expected to clear in the western half of the state by tonight, and in East Texas by tomorrow. Highs today were forecast from the upper 50s in the Panhandle to the lower 90s in far South Texas. Lows tonight were predicted to dip into the 30s in the Panhandle, to near 60 along the lower coast.

Warmer temperatures were expected to return to North Texas Wednesday, with highs in the 70s in the Panhandle and North Texas, with 80s through South Central Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley, and mid-90s in the Big Bend.

NATION

Thunderstorms stalked across the southern Atlantic Coast states today, drenching northern Florida and parts of the Carolinas.

Three inches of rain fell at Pensacola, Fla., today and nearly 5 inches triggered flooding around Apalachicola, Fla., on Monday. Charleston, S.C., was awash with 1½ inches and 1 inch hit Charlotte, N.C.

Two tornadoes hit Florida on Monday, one at Pompano Beach and the other north of Mascotte, and baseball-sized hail buffeted Pembroke Pines, Fla. No serious injuries were reported, but trees were damaged, power lines snapped to about 1,000 customers, cars damaged and sheds destroyed.

Meanwhile, damp weather lingered over the central Rockies and Plains and over most of the Pacific Northwest. Drizzle stretched from Colorado to Missouri and the Dakotas.

Fair skies prevailed in most other areas.

Today's forecast called for showers along the southern Atlantic Coast and scattered showers over New England. Showers were also expected from the Pacific Northwest to the northern intermountain region and the northern Plains, with thunderstorms erupting over the southern Plains.

Temperatures were expected to rise into the 40s over the northern Plains and New England. Highs along the northern Pacific Coast were expected in the low 50s. Readings in the mid-80s were expected across southern Florida, in the upper 80s in the Southwest and the low 90s over southern Texas.

Temperatures at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 21 at Houlton, Maine, to 78 at Key West, Fla.

Quadriplegic on way to independence

She really knew too much to be a "textbook case," she said her fellow friends and nurses told her. Even as a patient, she had trouble separating herself from her profession. As an example, when a catheter was placed into her lungs to suck the mucous, she would instruct the therapists on how much she could take.

"I'd only been there two weeks and they were talking about rehabilitation," she said. "I didn't want to think about it because I kept thinking this isn't permanent."

She had a choice of two rehabilitation hospitals: one in Minnesota and one in Denver, Colo. "But I didn't want to choose because it was like admitting I needed rehabilitation.

"There are still times when I'm going, 'OK, the joke's over, let me walk now.'"

She opted for Denver and was admitted Nov. 1, 1982. Through strong will and good physical and emotional therapy, she was released the following February.

Although the "only normal feeling I have is my shoulders," Joyce now has limited use of her right hand. She forced herself to learn to write right-handed, using a pen holder which she slips over her hand with her teeth to steady the pen.

Because she is no longer able physically to be a respiratory therapist, Joyce decided to earn enough college credits to be able to teach respiratory therapy.

More than teaching, however, she wants to go into social work, counseling others in "chairs."

She came to West Texas because three brothers in the 13-sibling clan live in Midland. The thought of fighting the cold and snow where other family members live helped her in her decision.

She enrolled in Midland College and lived with a brother and his wife until she decided it was time to make it on her own.

But when insurance covering the nursing care she needed every morning and night to get in and out of bed, bathe, and dress for class ended, she was forced to find a roomate to share her apartment.

That's when more obstacles arose.

A woman moved in in January. She moved out March 6, leaving a $160 phone bill. When Joyce called the phone company to find out what to do, she was informed the next bill equalled $500 and the phone would have to be taken out if the bill wasn't paid.

With spasms in her feet, which she cannot control, Joyce fears sliding out of her chair into a helpless heap on the floor. With a phone nearby, she knew she could always get help.

Negotiations began between Joyce, the roommate she tracked down through the numbers on the phone bill and Southwestern Bell employees. The roommate said she had found a job and would be sending half of her paycheck to make up the difference. But no money has been received from her yet.

Phone service was temporarily disconnected March 13. Bell officials advised Joyce to turn to her brother to co-sign to have the phone reinstalled. If she could settle the account or have a guarantor, no deposit, which would be about $400, would be charged.

Joyce refused. She didn't want to depend on anyone else.

"It's a sad situation," said Darlene Gifford, manager of community relations for Southwestern Bell. "The supervisor has been monitoring her account and feels the situation is sad, but we have to adhere to PUC (Public Utilities Commission) rules.

"She's the billing responsibility and we weren't aware of another person in the household until we got into this," Ms. Gifford said.

"We've been trying to work with her because we realize the predicament she's in," another spokesperson for Southwestern Bell said. "But we can't just take the $500 and stick it on someone else's bill. We're working very closely with her. Normally, in a situation like this — it's been almost a month — the account would have been cut by now."

"We could restore it this weekend if she could resolve the balance," Ms. Gifford said Friday.

Joyce Lynde

Joyce contacted Ms. Gifford Monday. Through the efforts of Father Cliff Blackburn and the generous members of St. Ann's Catholic Church, the bill could be settled.

"We've got everybody standing by, waiting anxiously," Ms. Gifford said Monday afternoon.

For Joyce, it's the end of a month of frustration. And the beginning of a new start on her independence.

Mondale looking for another win today in Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Walter Mondale, saying Pennsylvania is "very close," is looking for another big-state victory today while Gary Hart is hoping to get back on the winning track with the state's Democratic presidential primary.

At stake in this highly industrialized and economically hurting state were 172 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

But the bigger stake was momentum, the perception that one or the other is clearly the man to beat for the nomination.

Pennsylvania also provides another test for the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who attracted a record number of black voters to the polls last week in New York and almost edged out Hart for second place in that state's primary.

A poll released early today said Mondale has increased his narrow lead over Hart in Pennsylvania. The ABC News-Washington Post poll conducted Saturday, Sunday and Monday said Mondale had 43 percent, Hart had 33 percent and Jackson had 16 percent, with 7 percent undecided. The poll of 622 Democrats has a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

The ABC-Post poll taken Friday through Sunday had Mondale ahead 41 percent to 36 percent.

In the past four weeks, Mondale has surged back to the forefront of the Democratic race on the basis of victories in Illinois and New York.

Both men are predicting a close vote in Pennsylvania.

Hart told reporters that his chances lie with the undecideds and whether they opt for change or choose to stay with traditional Democratic Party policies.

"The pattern in the last two or three primaries is the undecideds get to the edge and then back off," he said, explaining his recent losses.

"Happily for us, I think the states that remain are more open to change," he said.

Mondale returned to Washington Monday night for a fund-raiser. Hart planned to greet commuters at a subway stop before flying to Washington to attend a memorial service for former Sen. Frank Church of Idaho.

Jackson scheduled a sunrise service in Pennsylvania Memorial Baptist Church in a final effort to bring out a large black vote. He had a similar service in Harlem the morning of the New York primary.

MMH board OKs $9 million expansion bid

The project should take 600 days to complete and will begin within three weeks. A $500 a day penalty for each day after the completion date and a $500 a day incentive to finish before the deadline is included in the contract, according to Miller.

Architect for the project is Flatow, Moore, Bryan and Associates of Albuquerque, N.M. The firm is being assisted by Neuhardt and Babb architects of Midland.

In other action, directors engaged Parkhill, Smith & Cooper civil engineering firm to study and finalize cost estimates for the engineering of the $4.1 million chemical dependency project.

A fee of about $35,000 is contingent on MMH entering into an agreement with a firm to develop and operate the facility. Negotiations with an out-of-state firm are continuing.

According to Tevis Herd, President of the Board of Directors, the civil engineering firm will be responsible for surveys to determine the costs of preparing and extending utilities to the site.

The Behavioral Health Center will be constructed on a 10-acre tract of land, valued at $1 million and donated by Scharbauer Brothers & Co. in February 1983. The site is 1,300 feet due west of the intersection of Thomason and Holiday Hill Road.

Directors also canvassed votes from Saturday's municipal election. A total of 13,230 votes were cast in the re-election of Herd and Pat Estes, both unopposed. Herd received 6,767 votes and Ms. Estes received 6,463 votes.

Evangelist accused of molesting rescued from attempted lynching

HARRISON, Idaho (AP) — A wandering evangelist was "up on his tip toes" hanging from a tree with a noose around his neck when deputies rescued him from an apparent lynching attempt by attackers who thought he was a child molester, authorities said.

Two men had confronted Keith Gilmore, 36, of Fountain Valley, Calif., and accused him of molesting children after he had handed out Bible quotations to youngsters in a town park, witnessses said.

Roger L. McDonald, 44, and Buster J. Sanchez, 32, were charged with aggravated battery Monday.

McDonald was released Monday night on $5,000 bail, while Sanchez remained in custody in lieu of $7,500 bail.

"If they were serious about killing him, I'm sure they would have taken care of it," Steve Cramer, a resident, said Monday. Cramer said he believed the attackers were trying to scare Gilmore away from town children.

But Gilmore's mother, Monica Gilmore, said Monday night that her son told her he expected to die. "It was quite an ordeal for him," she said.

McDonald and Sanchez were arrested Saturday night along an isolated stretch of road near Harrison by Kootenai County sheriff's deputies after a resident reported seeing a stranger in the area, said Sheriff's Lt. Robert Steele.

The deputies said they found two men attempting to pull Gilmore off the ground with a rope slung over a tree branch. His head was already in a noose, Steele said. "They had him up on his tip toes."

Although the two men accused Gilmore of being a child molester, police said a preliminary background check showed Gilmore had no arrest record involving child abuse or sexual crimes. There also have been no child abuse reports involving Gilmore filed in the county, he said.

Mrs. Gilmore said her son had been in town for about a week in his first visit since his parents moved to Harrison in September.

Cramer and another resident, Robin Rhodes, said they had heard that Gilmore would sometimes follow children or frighten them by hiding in the bushes and speaking as they walked past.

But Mrs. Gilmore denied it, saying, "He wasn't one to approach anyone."

Several children were asked about the stories, but none said they had any such encounters with Gilmore.

Gilmore, who was described by police as a wandering evangelist, was admitted to the Kootenai Memorial Hospital in Coeur d'Alene for observation Monday, Mrs. Gilmore said.

He suffered cuts and bruises during the attack, police said.

The incident scared many residents of this small northern Idaho town of 300 people, prompting them to warn their children against walking alone.

"I don't want any of the three men on the streets," said Judy Willey, who said she is the guardian of a 7-year-old girl. Mrs. Willey called the alleged lynching attempt "kind of unbelievable" and questioned "whether it was true."

'Terms of Endearment' awarded five Oscars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Terms of Endearment" won the lion's share of major honors at the 56th annual Academy Awards, including best picture and the first Oscar in the 26-year career of lead actress Shirley MacLaine.

Jack Nicholson won for supporting actor in the comedy-drama about the clashing wills of mother and daughter, and James Brooks was honored as the film's producer, director and writer.

"I've wondered for 26 years what this would feel like," said Miss MacLaine in her first win after five nominations. "Thank you for terminating the suspense."

Its five major awards made "Terms of Endearment" the overwhelming victor at Monday night's ceremony. It was followed by "The Right Stuff" and legendary Swedish director Ingmar Bergman's "Fanny & Alexander" with four apiece.

Robert Duvall, the booze-fighting country-music singer who finds a new life through his young wife and religion in "Tender Mercies," was hailed as best actor of 1983.

Linda Hunt, the New York actress who played a male Indonesian photographer in "The Year of Living Dangerously," collected the Oscar as best supporting actress.

Duvall, long considered one of the screen's best character actors and four times an Academy nominee, was honored for a role in which he changed types. He has excelled in flamboyant roles such as "The Godfather" and "Apocalypse Now," but through most of "Tender Mercies" he played the one-time country star in laid-back style.

"We set out to make a good, truthful film," said Duvall, pointing to the approval of such country stars as Johnny Cash, Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings. Their approval plus the award "makes this a complete evening for me," he said.

"Tender Mercies" also provided an Oscar for veteran writer Horton Foote, selected for his original screenplay.

Sales tax rebate up from April '83

$2,411,022.70. Midland's total has bounced up to $2,402,634.59 compared to last year's $2,338,156.01.

Gifford has estimated Midland will receive about $6.5 million this fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. Muser hopes Odessa will end the year at $7.6-7.7 million. This year's budget had pegged the sales tax revenue at $8.9 million this year, but Odessa has cut back on personnel and large capital expenditures.

Looking at the state overall, Comptroller Bob Bullock noted in a news release that sales tax payments were higher this month. "These receipts are up more than 16 percent over last year. This is just exactly where I estimated they would be when I gave the Legislature its estimate of revenues last year. Texas is in the thick of the national economic recovery."

'Pizza connection' helps heroin smuggling

An FBI affidavit said the case's key development occurred last year, when undercover agents bought heroin from one of the suspects, Benito Zito of Philadelphia, who allegedly was getting heroin from the Catalano group.

The affidavit said FBI agents saw suspects carrying a variety of sacks, bags, pizza boxes and briefcases around, exchanging money for heroin.

In one two-year period, from October 1980 to September 1982, the group allegedly sent more than $25 million in cash from New York City to Bermuda, Switzerland and other countries. Defendants opened accounts at brokerage houses like Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith and E.F. Hutton and made sophisticated business investments, according to court papers.

Charges of conspiracy to violate federal drug laws were lodged against 31 people. Eight defendants, including Catalano and Badalamenti, also were charged with conducting a criminal enterprise and could face life imprisonment.

Some unsure who is vice president of hemming and hawing, and then seemed disappointed that there was no prize for coming up with such an obscure scrap of information.

All of which shows that the nature of the vice presidency hasn't changed much since the first vice president, John Adams, described it in a letter to his wife:

"My country has in its wisdom contrived for me the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived; and as I can do neither good nor evil, I must be borne away by others and meet the common fate."

Whether Bush meets the common fate remains to be seen, but his immediate predecessor, Walter Mondale, is still resisting. But despite Mondale's efforts to separate himself from his service under President Carter, at least one person in Midland thought he was still vice president.

"I guess I'm just a couple of years behind," he said.

Grandmothers released from jail by federal judge

SHERMAN (AP) — Two grandmothers who spent five days in jail for refusing to tell a judge where another woman had hidden $45,000 say they won't change their minds, and their lawyer likened their incarceration to the "Spanish Inquisition."

A federal judge Monday ordered the release of Evelyn Hertzog and Dorothy Pauline Lindsay, both 65. They were freed on $500 personal recognizance and ordered to appear for a hearing April 27.

The women were jailed Wednesday after County Judge Lloyd Perkins cited them for contempt of court because they would not divulge where widow Mary Ellen Bader, 55, had hidden an estimated $45,000.

Mrs. Bader's son was declared temporary guardian of her estate after he convinced the judge that she was mentally incompetent, but she says the money is hers and that she is capable of fending for herself.

Mrs. Hertzog is Mrs. Bader's sister; Mrs. Lindsay is a friend. Although Mrs. Bader also refused Wednesday to tell where the money is, she could not be held in contempt of court because she has been declared incompetent.

"I feel my sister has not been justly treated," Mrs. Hertzog said after her release. "...If it was just and right, I would do it again. I am not stubborn. I stand for the law of God."

"I feel great. It's good to get out," said Mrs. Lindsay, who was held closely by her husband upon being freed by U.S. District Judge William Steger in Tyler.

Perkins said he had no choice but to order the women jailed when they refused to disclose the location of the money.

"I begged them to reconsider what they were doing," Perkins said. "I let them consult with their attorney before I cited them for contempt. I didn't feel I had any other choice."

Murder trial begins for man accused of ultralight killings

SHERMAN (AP) — Jury selection was scheduled to begin today for the capital murder trial of an Arlington man accused in the slayings of four men at an ultralight aircraft hangar last year.

A spokeswoman for defense attorney Jerry Buckner of Weatherford said jury selection could take two to three weeks as attorneys attempt to pare down a pool of about 350 Grayson County residents to a panel of 12.

Lester Leroy Bower Jr., 36, a chemical salesman and ultralight enthusiast, has remained in the Grayson County Jail in lieu of $400,000 since his arrest in January.

Bob G. Tate, 51, a Denison building contractor; Philip Good, 29, a Grayson County jailer; Jerry Brown, 52, a Sherman interior designer; and Ronald Mayes, 39, a former Sherman police officer, were found shot to death Oct. 8, 1983, in the hangar on Tate's ranch north of Sherman.

All had been shot twice in the head. Three of the bodies were found rolled up in a carpet. Mayes' body was found sprawled near a door.

An ultralight aircraft was missing from the hangar. Relatives said the men had gone to the ranch to meet a potential buyer for the aircraft.

Investigators said a search of Bower's garage turned up a pair of ultralight aircraft wheels inscribed with the name "Tate."

Two psychiatrists will rebut Lucas' defense testimony

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Prosecutors in Henry Lee Lucas' capital murder trial said they would call to the stand today two psychiatrists to rebut defense testimony about Lucas' sanity.

Defense attorneys rested their case Monday after a psychiatrist testified that Lucas should be "locked up forever," not executed, because he is schizophrenic, a condition "he was born with."

Lucas faces a possible death penalty in the slaying of an unidentified woman whose nude body was found along a highway near Georgetown on Halloween 1979.

After prosecutors present rebuttal witnesses, defense attorneys have one more opportunity to present testimony.

The prosecution's case has relied on five taped and written confessions that Lucas gave Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell. The defense contends Lucas was mentally incompetent when he made the statements.

Defense attorney Don Higginbotham of Georgetown would not rule out the possibility that Lucas might take the stand.

Quoting the title of an autobiography of noted defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, he said, "The defense never rests."

State District Judge John Carter of Georgetown said he expected testimony to be wrapped up today and the case to go to the jury on Wednesday.

Dr. Jay Fogelman of Austin, the final defense witness Monday, testified Lucas is schizophrenic and dangerous.

"Henry needs to be put in a hospital for the criminally insane, locked up forever, treated with strong medication, like Thorazine, and treated with lots of doctoring," Fogelman told Assistant District Attorney Ken Anderson of Georgetown during cross-examination.

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for Wednesday for the central Rockies and Plains and rain for the Northwest and the upper Mississippi Valley.

More windy weather forecast for Tall City

Under clear skies, more wind will whip through the Tall City as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is forecasting more gusts of blowing dirt.

Calmer northwesterly winds are expected to breeze at 5-10 mph tonight, increasing to 15-20 and shifting southerly Wednesday.

The low tonight should drop into the middle 40s, with a high on Wednesday climbing into the upper 80s.

Monday's high of 88 was five degrees cooler than the record high of 93, set for that date in 1939. The overnight low of 52 was 22 degrees warmer than 1952's record low of 30.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms developing in West Texas early today were expected to spread across the northern and eastern parts of the state by evening, with some severe activity possible in East Texas, forecasters predicted.

At dawn, scattered rain was reported between Wichita Falls and Abilene, set off by a complex frontal system that accompanied a surface low pressure area moving rapidly eastward across the state.

The National Weather Service reported early today the frontal system consisted of a warm front lying east-west across southern Oklahoma, and a cold front pushing southward over the High Plains and extending from the low center in the Panhandle southwestward to El Paso. In addition, the NWS said, a dry line reached southward from the low center into the Texas Hill Country. An intense upper-level disturbance also was crossing the Panhandle this morning, supporting the low, the weather service said.

Despite some low cloudiness and fog along the upper Texas coast, fair skies were reported across most of South and Central Texas, with variable cloudiness in West Texas.

Temperatures at dawn ranged from the mid- and upper 40s across the High Plains to the upper 60s on the coastal, with extremes of 45 degrees at Amarillo and 70 at Laredo.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies across most of the state today with scattered thunderstorms across North Central and East Texas. Skies were expected to clear in the western half of the state by tonight, and in East Texas by tomorrow. Highs today were forecast from the upper 50s in the Panhandle to the lower 90s in far South Texas. Lows tonight were predicted to dip into the 30s in the Panhandle, to near 60 along the lower coast.

Warmer temperatures were expected to return to North Texas Wednesday, with highs in the 70s in the Panhandle and North Texas, with 80s through South Central Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley, and mid-90s in the Big Bend.

NATION

Thunderstorms stalked across the southern Atlantic Coast states today, drenching northern Florida and parts of the Carolinas.

Three inches of rain fell at Pensacola, Fla., today and nearly 5 inches triggered flooding around Apalachicola, Fla., on Monday. Charleston, S.C., was awash with 1½ inches and 1 inch hit Charlotte, N.C.

Two tornadoes hit Florida on Monday, one at Pompano Beach and the other north of Mascotte, and baseball-sized hail buffeted Pembroke Pines, Fla. No serious injuries were reported, but trees were damaged, power lines snapped to about 1,000 customers, cars damaged and sheds destroyed.

Meanwhile, damp weather lingered over the central Rockies and Plains and over most of the Pacific Northwest. Drizzle stretched from Colorado to Missouri and the Dakotas.

Fair skies prevailed in most other areas.

Today's forecast called for showers along the southern Atlantic Coast and scattered showers over New England. Showers were also expected from the Pacific Northwest to the northern intermountain region and the northern Plains, with thunderstorms erupting over the southern Plains.

Temperatures were expected to rise into the 40s over the northern Plains and New England. Highs along the northern Pacific Coast were expected in the low 50s. Readings in the mid-80s were expected across southern Florida, in the upper 80s in the Southwest and the low 90s over southern Texas.

Temperatures at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 21 at Houlton, Maine, to 78 at Key West, Fla.

WEATHER FORECAST

Clear tonight with a low in the middle 40s. Sunny and warmer Wednesday with a high in the upper 80s. Winds from the northwest at 5-10 mph tonight, shifting to southerly at 15-20 mph Wednesday.

She really knew too much to be a "textbook case," she said her fellow friends and nurses told her. Even as a patient, she had trouble separating herself from her profession. As an example, when a catheter was placed into her lungs to suck the mucous, she would instruct the therapists on how much she could take.

"I'd only been there two weeks and they were talking about rehabilitation," she said. "I didn't want to think about it because I kept thinking this isn't permanent."

She had a choice of two rehabilitation hospitals: one in Minnesota and one in Denver, Colo. "But I didn't want to choose because it was like admitting I needed rehabilitation.

"There are still times when I'm going, 'OK, the joke's over, let me walk now.' "

She opted for Denver and was admitted Nov. 1, 1982. Through strong will and good physical and emotional therapy, she was released the following February.

Although the "only normal feeling I have is my shoulders," Joyce now has limited use of her right hand. She forced herself to learn to write right-handed, using a pen holder which she slips over her hand with her teeth to steady the pen.

Because she is no longer able physically to be a respiratory therapist, Joyce decided to earn enough college credits to be able to teach respiratory therapy.

More than teaching, however, she wants to go into social work, counseling others in "chairs."

She came to West Texas because three brothers in the 13-sibling clan live in Midland. The thought of fighting the cold and snow where other family members live helped her in her decision.

She enrolled in Midland College and lived with a brother and his wife until she decided it was time to make it on her own.

But when insurance covering the nursing care she needed every morning and night to get in and out of bed, bathe, and dress for class ended, she was forced to find a roomate to share her apartment.

That's when more obstacles arose.

A woman moved in in January. She moved out March 6, leaving a $160 phone bill. When Joyce called the phone company to find out what to do, she was informed the next bill equalled $500 and the phone would have to be taken out if the bill wasn't paid.

With spasms in her feet, which she cannot control, Joyce fears sliding out of her chair into a helpless heap on the floor. With a phone nearby, she knew she could always get help.

Negotiations began between Joyce, the roommate she tracked down through the numbers on the phone bill and Southwestern Bell employees. The roommate said she had found a job and would be sending half of her paycheck to make up the difference. But no money has been received from her yet.

Phone service was temporarily disconnected March 13. Bell officials advised Joyce to turn to her brother to co-sign to have the phone reinstalled. If she could settle the account or have a guarantor, no deposit, which would be about $400, would be charged.

Joyce refused. She didn't want to depend on anyone else.

"It's a sad situation," said Darlene Gifford, manager of community relations for Southwestern Bell. "The supervisor has been monitoring her account and feels the situation is sad, but we have to adhere to PUC (Public Utilities Commission) rules.

"She's the billing responsibility and we weren't aware of another person in the household until we got into this," Ms. Gifford said.

"We've been trying to work with her because we realize the predicament she's in," another spokesperson for Southwestern Bell said. "But we can't just take the $500 and stick it on someone else's bill. We're working very closely with her. Normally, in a situation like this — it's been almost a month — the account would have been cut by now."

"We could restore it this weekend if she could resolve the balance," Ms. Gifford said Friday.

Joyce Lynde

Joyce contacted Ms. Gifford Monday. Through the efforts of Father Cliff Blackburn and the generous members of St. Ann's Catholic Church, the bill could be settled.

"We've got everybody standing by, waiting anxiously," Ms. Gifford said Monday afternoon.

For Joyce, it's the end of a month of frustration. And the beginning of a new start on her independence.

Mondale looking for another win today in Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Walter Mondale, saying Pennsylvania is "very close," is looking for another big-state victory today while Gary Hart is hoping to get back on the winning track with the state's Democratic presidential primary.

At stake in this highly industrialized and economically hurting state were 172 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

But the bigger stake was momentum, the perception that one or the other is clearly the man to beat for the nomination.

Pennsylvania also provides another test for the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who attracted a record number of black voters to the polls last week in New York and almost edged out Hart for second place in that state's primary.

A poll released early today said Mondale has increased his narrow lead over Hart in Pennsylvania. The ABC News-Washington Post poll conducted Saturday, Sunday and Monday said Mondale had 43 percent, Hart had 33 percent and Jackson had 16 percent, with 7 percent undecided. The poll of 622 Democrats has a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

The ABC-Post poll taken Friday through Sunday had Mondale ahead 41 percent to 36 percent.

In the past four weeks, Mondale has surged back to the forefront of the Democratic race on the basis of victories in Illinois and New York.

Both men are predicting a close vote in Pennsylvania.

Hart told reporters that his chances lie with the undecideds and whether they opt for change or choose to stay with traditional Democratic Party policies.

"The pattern in the last two or three primaries is the undecideds get to the edge and then back off," he said, explaining his recent losses.

"Happily for us, I think the states that remain are more open to change," he said.

Mondale returned to Washington Monday night for a fund-raiser. Hart planned to greet commuters at a subway stop before flying to Washington to attend a memorial service for former Sen. Frank Church of Idaho.

Jackson scheduled a sunrise service in Pennsylvania Memorial Baptist Church in a final effort to bring out a large black vote. He had a similar service in Harlem the morning of the New York primary.

MMH board OKs $9 million expansion bid

The project should take 600 days to complete and will begin within three weeks. A $500 a day penalty for each day after the completion date and a $500 a day incentive to finish before the deadline is included in the contract, according to Miller.

Architect for the project is Flatow, Moore, Bryan and Associates of Albuquerque, N.M. The firm is being assisted by Neuhardt and Babb architects of Midland.

In other action, directors engaged Parkhill, Smith & Cooper civil engineering firm to study and finalize cost estimates for the engineering of the $4.1 million chemical dependency project.

A fee of about $35,000 is contingent on MMH entering into an agreement with a firm to develop and operate the facility. Negotiations with an out-of-state firm are continuing.

According to Tevis Herd, President of the Board of Directors, the civil engineering firm will be responsible for surveys to determine the costs of preparing and extending utilities to the site.

The Behavioral Health Center will be constructed on a 10-acre tract of land, valued at $1 million and donated by Scharbauer Brothers & Co. in February 1983. The site is 1,300 feet due west of the intersection of Thomason and Holiday Hill Road.

Directors also canvassed votes from Saturday's municipal election. A total of 13,230 votes were cast in the re-election of Herd and Pat Estes, both unopposed. Herd received 6,767 votes and Ms. Estes received 6,463 votes.

Evangelist accused of molesting rescued from attempted lynching

HARRISON, Idaho (AP) — A wandering evangelist was "up on his tip toes" hanging from a tree with a noose around his neck when deputies rescued him from an apparent lynching attempt by attackers who thought he was a child molester, authorities said.

Two men had confronted Keith Gilmore, 36, of Fountain Valley, Calif., and accused him of molesting children after he had handed out Bible quotations to youngsters in a town park, witnessses said.

Roger L. McDonald, 44, and Buster J. Sanchez, 32, were charged with aggravated battery Monday.

McDonald was released Monday night on $5,000 bail, while Sanchez remained in custody in lieu of $7,500 bail.

"If they were serious about killing him, I'm sure they would have taken care of it," Steve Cramer, a resident, said Monday. Cramer said he believed the attackers were trying to scare Gilmore away from town children.

But Gilmore's mother, Monica Gilmore, said Monday night that her son told her he expected to die. "It was quite an ordeal for him," she said.

McDonald and Sanchez were arrested Saturday night along an isolated stretch of road near Harrison by Kootenai County sheriff's deputies after a resident reported seeing a stranger in the area, said Sheriff's Lt. Robert Steele.

The deputies said they found two men attempting to pull Gilmore off the ground with a rope slung over a tree branch. His head was already in a noose, Steele said. "They had him up on his tip toes."

Although the two men accused Gilmore of being a child molester, police said a preliminary background check showed Gilmore had no arrest record involving child abuse or sexual crimes. There also have been no child abuse reports involving Gilmore filed in the county, he said.

Mrs. Gilmore said her son had been in town for about a week in his first visit since his parents moved to Harrison in September.

Cramer and another resident, Robin Rhodes, said they had heard that Gilmore would sometimes follow children or frighten them by hiding in the bushes and speaking as they walked past.

But Mrs. Gilmore denied it, saying, "He wasn't one to approach anyone."

Several children were asked about the stories, but none said they had any such encounters with Gilmore.

Gilmore, who was described by police as a wandering evangelist, was admitted to the Kootenai Memorial Hospital in Coeur d'Alene for observation Monday, Mrs. Gilmore said.

He suffered cuts and bruises during the attack, police said.

The incident scared many residents of this small northern Idaho town of 300 people, prompting them to warn their children against walking alone.

"I don't want any of the three men on the streets," said Judy Willey, who said she is the guardian of a 7-year-old girl. Mrs. Willey called the alleged lynching attempt "kind of unbelievable" and questioned "whether it was true."

'Terms of Endearment' awarded five Oscars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Terms of Endearment" won the lion's share of major honors at the 56th annual Academy Awards, including best picture and the first Oscar in the 26-year career of lead actress Shirley MacLaine.

Jack Nicholson won for supporting actor in the comedy-drama about the clashing wills of mother and daughter, and James Brooks was honored as the film's producer, director and writer.

"I've wondered for 26 years what this would feel like," said Miss MacLaine in her first win after five nominations. "Thank you for terminating the suspense."

Its five major awards made "Terms of Endearment" the overwhelming victor at Monday night's ceremony. It was followed by "The Right Stuff" and legendary Swedish director Ingmar Bergman's "Fanny & Alexander" with four apiece.

Robert Duvall, the booze-fighting country-music singer who finds a new life through his young wife and religion in "Tender Mercies," was hailed as best actor of 1983.

Linda Hunt, the New York actress who played a male Indonesian photographer in "The Year of Living Dangerously," collected the Oscar as best supporting actress.

Duvall, long considered one of the screen's best character actors and four times an Academy nominee, was honored for a role in which he changed types. He has excelled in flamboyant roles such as "The Godfather" and "Apocalypse Now," but through most of "Tender Mercies" he played the one-time country star in laid-back style.

"We set out to make a good, truthful film," said Duvall, pointing to the approval of such country stars as Johnny Cash, Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings. Their approval plus the award "makes this a complete evening for me," he said.

"Tender Mercies" also provided an Oscar for veteran writer Horton Foote, selected for his original screenplay.

Sales tax rebate up from April '83

$2,411,022.70. Midland's total has bounced up to $2,402,634.59 compared to last year's $2,338,156.01.

Gifford has estimated Midland will receive about $6.5 million this fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. Muser hopes Odessa will end the year at $7.6-7.7 million. This year's budget had pegged the sales tax revenue at $8.9 million this year, but Odessa has cut back on personnel and large capital expenditures.

Looking at the state overall, Comptroller Bob Bullock noted in a news release that sales tax payments were higher this month. "These receipts are up more than 16 percent over last year. This is just exactly where I estimated they would be when I gave the Legislature its estimate of revenues last year. Texas is in the thick of the national economic recovery."

'Pizza connection' helps heroin smuggling

An FBI affidavit said the case's key development occurred last year, when undercover agents bought heroin from one of the suspects, Benito Zito of Philadelphia, who allegedly was getting heroin from the Catalano group.

The affidavit said FBI agents saw suspects carrying a variety of sacks, bags, pizza boxes and briefcases around, exchanging money for heroin.

In one two-year period, from October 1980 to September 1982, the group allegedly sent more than $25 million in cash from New York City to Bermuda, Switzerland and other countries. Defendants opened accounts at brokerage houses like Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith and E.F. Hutton and made sophisticated business investments, according to court papers.

Charges of conspiracy to violate federal drug laws were lodged against 31 people. Eight defendants, including Catalano and Badalamenti, also were charged with conducting a criminal enterprise and could face life imprisonment.

Some unsure who is vice president of hemming and hawing, and then seemed disappointed that there was no prize for coming up with such an obscure scrap of information.

All of which shows that the nature of the vice presidency hasn't changed much since the first vice president, John Adams, described it in a letter to his wife:

"My country has in its wisdom contrived for me the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived; and as I can do neither good nor evil, I must be borne away by others and meet the common fate."

Whether Bush meets the common fate remains to be seen, but his immediate predecessor, Walter Mondale, is still resisting. But despite Mondale's efforts to separate himself from his service under President Carter, at least one person in Midland thought he was still vice president.

"I guess I'm just a couple of years behind," he said.

Grandmothers released from jail by federal judge

SHERMAN (AP) — Two grandmothers who spent five days in jail for refusing to tell a judge where another woman had hidden $45,000 say they won't change their minds, and their lawyer likened their incarceration to the "Spanish Inquisition."

A federal judge Monday ordered the release of Evelyn Hertzog and Dorothy Pauline Lindsay, both 65. They were freed on $500 personal recognizance and ordered to appear for a hearing April 27.

The women were jailed Wednesday after County Judge Lloyd Perkins cited them for contempt of court because they would not divulge where widow Mary Ellen Bader, 55, had hidden an estimated $45,000.

Mrs. Bader's son was declared temporary guardian of her estate after he convinced the judge that she was mentally incompetent, but she says the money is hers and that she is capable of fending for herself.

Mrs. Hertzog is Mrs. Bader's sister; Mrs. Lindsay is a friend. Although Mrs. Bader also refused Wednesday to tell where the money is, she could not be held in contempt of court because she has been declared incompetent.

"I feel my sister has not been justly treated," Mrs. Hertzog said after her release. "...If it was just and right, I would do it again. I am not stubborn. I stand for the law of God."

"I feel great. It's good to get out," said Mrs. Lindsay, who was held closely by her husband upon being freed by U.S. District Judge William Steger in Tyler.

Perkins said he had no choice but to order the women jailed when they refused to disclose the location of the money.

"I begged them to reconsider what they were doing," Perkins said. "I let them consult with their attorney before I cited them for contempt. I didn't feel I had any other choice."

Murder trial begins for man accused of ultralight killings

SHERMAN (AP) — Jury selection was scheduled to begin today for the capital murder trial of an Arlington man accused in the slayings of four men at an ultralight aircraft hangar last year.

A spokeswoman for defense attorney Jerry Buckner of Weatherford said jury selection could take two to three weeks as attorneys attempt to pare down a pool of about 350 Grayson County residents to a panel of 12.

Lester Leroy Bower Jr., 36, a chemical salesman and ultralight enthusiast, has remained in the Grayson County Jail in lieu of $400,000 since his arrest in January.

Bob G. Tate, 51, a Denison building contractor; Philip Good, 29, a Grayson County jailer; Jerry Brown, 52, a Sherman interior designer; and Ronald Mayes, 39, a former Sherman police officer, were found shot to death Oct. 8, 1983, in the hangar on Tate's ranch north of Sherman.

All had been shot twice in the head. Three of the bodies were found rolled up in a carpet. Mayes' body was found sprawled near a door.

An ultralight aircraft was missing from the hangar. Relatives said the men had gone to the ranch to meet a potential buyer for the aircraft.

Investigators said a search of Bower's garage turned up a pair of ultralight aircraft wheels inscribed with the name "Tate."

Two psychiatrists will rebut Lucas' defense testimony

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Prosecutors in Henry Lee Lucas' capital murder trial said they would call to the stand today two psychiatrists to rebut defense testimony about Lucas' sanity.

Defense attorneys rested their case Monday after a psychiatrist testified that Lucas should be "locked up forever," not executed, because he is schizophrenic, a condition "he was born with."

Lucas faces a possible death penalty in the slaying of an unidentified woman whose nude body was found along a highway near Georgetown on Halloween 1979.

After prosecutors present rebuttal witnesses, defense attorneys have one more opportunity to present testimony.

The prosecution's case has relied on five taped and written confessions that Lucas gave Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell. The defense contends Lucas was mentally incompetent when he made the statements.

Defense attorney Don Higginbotham of Georgetown would not rule out the possibility that Lucas might take the stand.

Quoting the title of an autobiography of noted defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, he said, "The defense never rests."

State District Judge John Carter of Georgetown said he expected testimony to be wrapped up today and the case to go to the jury on Wednesday.

Dr. Jay Fogelman of Austin, the final defense witness Monday, testified Lucas is schizophrenic and dangerous.

"Henry needs to be put in a hospital for the criminally insane, locked up forever, treated with strong medication, like Thorazine, and treated with lots of doctoring," Fogelman told Assistant District Attorney Ken Anderson of Georgetown during cross-examination.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, April 11, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Fashion designer Oleg Cassini, Ethel Kennedy, former New York Governor Hugh Carey and actor Joel Grey celebrate birthdays today. Those born on this date are direct, forceful and imaginative. Your personal relationships show decided improvement in the months ahead. Give them top priority. Although romance resembles a roller coaster, you enjoy the ride. If at all possible, avoid asking for loans. A logical approach gets you an agreement that has been elusive in the past. Family members influence certain decisions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romance flourishes. Sign agreements and contracts. Continue your efforts to increase your knowledge. New skills improve your job qualifications. Those in executive positions should cultivate the goodwill of their subordinates.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You probably work best away from the public eye. Learn to delegate more responsibility. A Leo plays a major role in your success. Great bargains can be found in secondhand stores.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone in authority is glad to let you do things your way. A friend makes good on a promise. Romance may not live up to your expectations. A social event brightens your evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Come to grips with a financial problem. A loan request is likely to be granted. You get more cooperation at home if you display a positive attitude. Make some personal sacrifices.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You get a golden opportunity to move up the ladder of success. Mate or partner is your best ally. Creative enterprises can bring in extra income. Romance is on an upward swing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Read the fine print before signing contracts. Your pressing business schedule could disrupt home life. If single, skip romance in favor of reading or research this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have greater self-confidence now and a new sense of conviction. Your popularity soars! Seek better rapport among family members. Business begins to pick up in foreign markets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not put too much reliance in your friends today. Get-rich-quick schemes will fail. Make plans for the evening only after consulting mate or partner. Home entertainment holds special appeal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your plans could be jeopardized by some new information that comes to light. Avoid signing contracts. Trips are unlikely to work out as expected. Improve home security and reduce spending.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Business negotiations require careful handling. Do not try to speed up the pace. Domestic difficulties prove easy to solve if you show greater affection and tact. Speak from the heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Higher-ups are watching you today. Be on your best behavior. Finish up completed chores. Contact with influential people is useful to your career. Fall in with a family member's social plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The results you achieve at work today will have a marked influence on your career. Do not indulge in office gossip. Problems that arise at the top level could hinder efficiency.

Movie tries to do too much

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Killing Floor," tonight on public television's "American Playhouse," manages to avoid a gratuitous display of anger and indignation in dramatizing the wretched lot of stockyard workers in Chicago during and after World War I.

That's refreshing in a medium that tends to exaggerate social and racial injustice, and reaction to it. The two-hour movie, the first in a series of six dramatic films collected as "Made in U.S.A.," is remarkable, almost magnificent, in its temperate treatment of a sensitive and provocative subject.

"The Killing Floor" is an imperfect film; why the principal characters behave the way they do is not always clear. There is, at times, a documentary quality to the picture that dilutes the more interesting, and probably more significant, human story.

The weakness is in a worthy attempt to do too much.

Despite the deficiency, the idea behind the "Made in U.S.A" project is to dramatize important developments in the lives of working Americans, and "The Killing Floor" succeeds in that respect.

For these are real, and appealing, people, summoned to the city by a naive hope that they will find something better there.

Frank Custer (Damien Leake) abandons a sharecropper's patch in rural Mississippi, leaves his family behind and quickly finds a job in a packing plant.

His desire is to be a meat cutter, and he saves to buy a butcher's knife.

At first, there is animosity between the arriving black laborers and the more entrenched white workmen. Soon, however, they see common interest in organizing, and Custer is talked into attending a union meeting.

His colleagues want recognition by the packing company, and a contract, but Custer and other black workers are reluctant to join the largely white movement. Then, one day, the foreman catches Custer learning to cut meat and orders him back to sweeping the floor. Bill Bremer (Clarence Felder), a German, comes to his defense, and the other white cutters threaten to walk off; the foreman relents.

Frank joins the union and talks many of his black co-workers into following his lead. But other blacks feel they owe their allegiance to the packers.

The fight for union recognition continues and, ultimately, a federal judge orders the packers to make some concessions to the workers. But when the war ends, the displaced workmen return and demand their jobs back.

Mike Lawrence is rapidly becoming this country's most prolific author. His latest effort is "Play Bridge With Mike Lawrence" (Devyn Press, 227 pages, paperback, $9.95. Available from Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10024.) It takes you through 52 hands of a pair tournament as you would play them at the table. After each hand Lawrence assesses the result in terms of possible matchpoints, and shows how this affects your play. The hands are interesting and the advice sound. If we have any reservations about the book, it is the price tag.

Note Lawrence's decision to jump to four hearts after the preemptive two spade opening bid at his left. Three hearts would be competitive, and would place an enormous strain on partner.

West leads his singleton spade. "I duck in dummy and East wins the king. Normally I would play the jack, leaving East to wonder who has the two. This time though, I am not sure that's best. If I play the jack and East is persuaded it is a singleton, he may find a diamond shift.

"No, instead I play the two. I think my best chance is to draw a road map for East. If he knows I have the jack, he may be induced to play ace and another spade. Against a good opponent, this shouldn't work. He would ask himself how come I'm not making the mandatory falsecard. And if he asks himself that question, he would be forced to the right conclusion . . . RHO . . . bangs down the ace and another spade.

"I ruff with the ace and draw trumps. Fortunately, they divide 2-1. When I lead the club ten, LHO grabs it and I have ten tricks.

"Matchpoint Evaluation: This looks like a solid position. Even if they decide to save, they should escape for 500. I expect to tie a few pairs and there might be a 790 . . .

"Further Analysis: You will often have to decide between a technically correct play and an anti-percentage line. Often the quality of your opponents will dictate whether you should try good bridge or sneaky bridge."

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Civilized Texas?

For a lot of years in the not too distant past Texas and Texans fought an ugly and unfair stereotype: A state wherein basic human rights did not exist because civilized people did not live there and no one in their right mind would go there if given a choice.

Because a number of Texans cared enough to devote countless hours of effort, that stereotype of the Lone Star State has been largely erased in recent decades. We said largely.

Then along comes a couple of news reports sure to convince critics of Texas that their worst fears are justified. Those reports even shake our conviction.

Last year, for example, three men were taken into custody on charges of enslaving 19 Mexican nationals, transporting them from Central Texas to East Texas and forcing them to work on a farm. The report revealed that the Mexicans were treated as something less than human beings, forced to sleep in an unheated 14-by-20 foot shack without windows in the dead of winter.

Now members of a Central Texas ranching family have been taken into custody and charged with aggravated kidnapping after being accused of holding drifters against their will and forcing them to work on the ranch.

News reports from Kerrville in Kerr County, near San Antonio, indicate the six people who claim they were held against their will were forced to sleep in a barn with a dirt floor and fed canned food cooked in an old wash pot. Furthermore, one of the six says he was forced to burn the body of another man who died on the ranch.

Time will reveal whether the allegations are true in this case. If they are, it will lend more credence to the charge of a "Dark Ages" Texas. And if the new charges are proven false, the charges in the former case, which led to conviction of the individuals, will be enough to tarnish the image of modern-day Texas.

These two cases are enough to cause concerned Texans to ask: "What's going on with these involuntary servitude cases? What's going to be the outcome?"

The answer to the first question is: More than meets the eye, apparently. The answer to the second is: A lackluster image for a state that seems to harbor more than its share of people who think slavery is still okay.

What price honor?

The case of Richard Craig Smith calls to mind Rebecca West's warning that this is the century of treason.

The 40-year-old native of Bellevue, Washington, was arrested by the FBI last week and charged with selling to the Soviet Union classified information concerning a U.S. Army operation responsible for infiltrating the Soviets' KGB spy network. Smith, a former counterintelligence agent during the late 1970s, handled several double agents, which is to say U.S. operatives who were ostensibly working for the Soviets.

Two years after leaving the army, Smith made his way to Tokyo where he allegedly met with KGB officer Victor Okunev on at least two occasions and supplied the Soviets with sufficient information to identify at least one U.S. double agent in exchange for $11,000 cash.

The extent of the damage done by Smith's treachery is not known publicly at this time. It is reasonable to assume, however, that the agent he exposed is either dead or suffering the painful ordeal of protracted Soviet interrogation. And because Smith's top-secret security clearance provided him access to sensitive operations of the U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command, it seems probable that several other American agents have also been sacrificed as a result of his actions.

His motive was presumably pure greed. By the summer of 1982, Smith found himself heavily in debt as a result of several failed business ventures. Shortly thereafter, he apparently decided to sell his information to the highest bidder.

Granted, Smith's $11,000 payoff exceeded Judas Iscariot's 30 pieces of silver. But given the inflation factor of two millennia, it can be said that Smith sold his soul for a pittance.

Another View:

Japan's 'Oshinomics'

Reaganomics no longer has cornered the market for belt-tightening. Japan now offers "Oshinomics."

Seems the long-debated Far East "economic miracle" has been on the skids for some time now. Unemployment burgeoned. Industrial production slowed. Japan's deficit rose. And the nation's middle class was grumbling.

Meanwhile, there was this charming, pretty, but poor country girl named "Oshin" who managed to achieve a modest success in life by enduring great hardship in a spectacularly popular Japanese television drama of the same name. She captivated the nation's heart. Viewers identified with their heroine's traditional Japanese virtues of patience, perseverance and stoicism.

Presto! Oshinomics became the talk of the land, as hard-working Japanese tried the prescription of endless belt-tightening, slow growth and a balanced budget as a way out of their woes. "Think small" became the Nakasone administration's badge of courage.

There's only one problem: It isn't working. Despite chopping spending to the bone, the government is still bathed in red ink. Unemployment is still a plague. And overtaxed white-collar workers are still grumbling.

Oh, well. The Reagan administration has our big federal deficit to worry about. But with a solid economic recovery afoot, it has plenty to brag about as well, including more jobs, lower taxes, more income, lower inflation and strong economic growth.

Dam project speculators dream

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is bending the rules to promote a $233 million boondoggle in Southern California that could bring immense profits to land speculators.

Jack Anderson

The project calls for construction of two dams — one on the Santa Margarita River, the other on a tributary. The Santa Margarita is the last free-flowing waterway in Southern California. It rises in the mountains east of Los Angeles, runs through fertile valleys of avocado groves, and reaches the Pacific near the Marine Corps' Camp Pendleton.

Damming the Santa Margarita would supposedly provide water for the avocado groves and the nearby community, as well as flood control for the Marine base. These benefits are cited to justify the cost of the project.

What proponents don't mention is the enormous benefit that could accrue to land developers and speculators from the lake the dams will create. Eager salesmen are already offering lots on the future lakefront.

In addition, avocado groves are notorious tax shelters — hardly the kind of irrigation beneficiaries that should be funded by the public.

The Pentagon is enthusiastic about the project and included it in a secret budget report sent to the Navy. Interior Secretary William Clark has given the Santa Margarita dams a high priority, and has said he plans to brief President Reagan on them personally.

Presidential counselor and Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese is another administration insider who has taken an interest in the project. After meeting the manager of the Fallbrook Public Utility District, the local utility that has been pushing for the dams, Meese wrote him a letter on Oct. 27, 1982. This was long before the administration publicly supported Santa Margarita. My associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson obtained a copy of the letter.

Meese wrote: "Although it is too early to predict the final outcome. ... I want to assure you that we will be giving very serious consideration to Santa Margarita as a possible new construction start ...."

The Fallbrook Public Utility District's public relations consultant for the dams project is Robert Garrick, a retired admiral and old Reagan hand. He served as Meese's deputy in the White House until September 1981, when he returned to his avocado grove in Bonsail, next door to Fallbrook.

Garrick denied he lobbied for Meese's support on Santa Margarita. He said Meese and other Californians in the administration are simply concerned about the growing water shortage in the area.

Environmentalists and other critics of the proposed dams say the project would have unpredictable effects on four endangered species and on beaches that depend on sand carried to the ocean by the river. The critics contend that the project would provide only 79 cents' worth of benefits for each dollar of cost. But the administration has recently decided, in effect, to do away with such guidelines as justification for water projects.

The administration, meanwhile, has shown an unseemly haste to nudge the Santa Margarita project along by approving it before many of the economic and environmental impact studies have been completed. And they note that the White House has requested funds for the dams before they have been authorized by Congress — an unprecedented reversal of standard operating procedure.

Footnote: Interior Department officials defend the project as a "model program." But at $9,660 an acre for irrigation, it will be the most expensive such project ever undertaken by the Bureau of Reclamation.

JUSTICE RECANTS: I reported recently how the Environmental Protection Agency knuckled under to the Energy Department, agreeing to respect DOE's claim of immunity from EPA rules on hazardous waste disposal.

The Justice Department supported EPA. But one day after the EPA-DOE agreement, Justice attorneys were arguing on the other side of the legal fence.

In a Tennessee suit brought against DOE by environmentalists, Justice attorneys representing DOE filed a brief for dismissal, citing the EPA-DOE agreement the day before.

The two agencies "agreed that ... DOE facilities are not subject to" the waste-disposal law, Justice's brief stated.

Questioned on the matter by Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., EPA administrator William Ruckelshaus quickly denied that the agreement had said any such thing. It was all a "misunderstanding," he said.

Justice then wiped the egg off its face with a retraction in the Tennessee case.

EVANS & NOVAK

'Scoop's' heirs carrying banner

WASHINGTON — On March 28, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy opened the Senate debate on Central American policy by predicting it would be "historic." But Sen. David Boren soon took the floor, converting that "history" into something quite different from what Kennedy intended.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"How can we turn our backs on those people?" asked Boren, a moderate Democrat from Oklahoma, in fighting Kennedy's efforts to halt military aid to El Salvador. "In my mind, it would be nothing short of criminal, a criminal act of negligence, a criminal break of faith with people who desire democracy ...." The Senate's 82-year-old Democratic patriarch, John Stennis of Mississippi, was mightily impressed by Boren's passion and said of him on the Senate floor: "He has changed my mind about some impressions I had."

That was a signal of what was in store for Ted Kennedy over a long week of Senate debate. As his efforts to hamstring Ronald Reagan in Central America were systematically cut down, approximately half of the Democrats voted against him on key amendments. That suggested reports of the death of the party's Scoop Jackson wing had been greatly exaggerated.

To be sure, the current race for the Democratic presidential nomination shows no fingerprints of the late Sen. Henry M. Jackson's muscular anti-communism. The supposedly "conservative" (and now eliminated) presidential aspirants seemed intimidated by the party's rampant leftwing isolationism, and their hesitant moves toward moderation in national security were rewarded by noisy rejection by party activists.

By mid-March, those views had no representation in the three-way competition between Walter F. Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Mondale's less dovish views on Central America expressed in Illinois to win Chicago's ethnics disappeared in New York, where he joined Hart in calling for a pullout of U.S. troops from Honduras.

In the Senate, meanwhile, the Scoop Jackson tradition seemed lifeless. Jackson's ally, close friend and heir apparent, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, had distinguished himself in hemispheric affairs this year principally by condemning the U.S. operation in Grenada.

But many Senate Democrats — including Sen. Ernest Hollings — were appalled by the turn taken in New York by the Mondale-Hart debate. Hollings had quickly endorsed Hart following the collapse of his own presidential candidacy, but now was disgusted by his position. Boren, consciously considering himself an heir of Scoop Jackson not in sympathy with Democratic neo-isolationism, was deeply impressed by what he saw in El Salvador as an official observer of the March 25 election.

The result was bipartisan collaboration on foreign policy sadly not seen in the Senate in many a day. Moynihan split his votes and skipped some roll calls entirely, but other Democrats sallied forth to combat Kennedy's effort to mobilize his party against the administration's anti-communism strategy in Central America.

On an early test vote to tie President Reagan's hands on the use of force in Central America, not only did Kennedy's amendment lose 71-20, but Democrats opposed it 20-17. On this and other key roll calls, Minority Leader Robert Byrd and Sen. John Glenn were among Democratic stalwarts opposing Kennedy. Such respected senior Democrats as Daniel Inouye of Hawaii and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas worked closely with Republicans through the week.

Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee and widely mentioned as a vice presidential possibility, evoked a Democratic voice heard all too seldom in recent years. "Where is the outcry in this body against left-wing death squads? Are we only concerned with violence from the right?"

Such statements are considered by the Kennedy wing to be a cynical maneuver to let Reagan stew in his own Central American juices this election year. But conversation with the anti-Kennedy senators indicates they feel they are bucking a popular isolationist tide in following their own consciences. "The next president should hire two historians and fire his polister," Fritz Hollings told us.

In fact, however, Hart's Central American gambit gained him nothing in New York other than pulling Mondale back to the left. Even though they did not recant, by the time of last Thursday's Pittsburgh debate, the presidential candidates had abandoned Central America.

As the Senate debate concluded, Kennedy was picking up more Democrats and his margin of defeat was narrowing. Only 10 Democrats opposed a last-ditch effort to handcuff Reagan in Central America by amending the War Powers Act. One of them was David Boren, who took the floor to plead for bipartisanship in foreign policy and in particular to ask the White House to meet Scoop Jackson's heirs halfway. In view of how Kennedy's "historic" debate turned out, the president would do well to listen.

CHARLEY REESE

D'Aubuisson victimized by liberals

I do not know Roberto D'Aubuisson, one of El Salvador's presidential candidates, from Santa Claus. He may be the George Washington of Central America or he may be as bad as his worst enemies say. I just don't know.

Charley Reese

But I do know that he has been the victim of a leftwing version of McCarthyism by a group of people in the United States who are opposed to President Reagan's policies in Central America.

Robert White, Carter's ambassador to El Salvador who was fired by Reagan, has repeatedly charged that D'Aubuisson is behind the death squads in El Salvador, a charge the Salvadoran denies.

The only "evidence" White has produced has been the uncorroborated allegations of a Salvadoran who was run out of the country. It now turns out that White and aides to three Congressmen who have not been identified as I write this promised their anonymous informant $50,000 if he would make the charges to a Congressional committee and to the American press.

In the meantime, the State Department has twice denied D'Aubuisson a visa so that he can come to the United States and defend himself. This is particularly absurd in view of the fact that the same State Department has granted visas to spokesmen for the Communist guerillas.

White also identifies five El Salvadoran exiles in America as financiers of the death squads. One of the men he named had died before the incidents White's informant described took place and now that another has threatened White with a $10 million libel suit, the leftist ex-Ambassador has begun a backstroke.

This whole bit has all the earmarks of a disinformation campaign.

D'Aubuisson, a strong anti-Communist, is president of the elected assembly and may well end up president of the country. Leftists hope by discrediting him to dissuade Congress from providing the funds necessary to prevent a Communist victory in El Salvador.

It is a fact that the United States government, with all its resources, says it cannot find any evidence linking D'Aubuisson to death squads or murder. It is interesting that the liberals in America, who like to flap their jaws about fair play when it comes to defending Communists, don't mind rotten, dirty tactics when it's an anti-Communist who is the target.

D'Aubuisson has been smeared without any evidence, without any opportunity to face his accusers or to rebut the allegation. Furthermore, the press has applied a double standard, too. I guarantee you that if I had the uncorroborated testimony of one man that Fritz Mondale was guilty of a crime not one newspaper would carry the story — nor should they. Yet, despite the fact that the U.S. government has several times said it had no evidence to link D'Aubuisson to the death squads, the same charge gets major play everytime it is repeated.

If you look at history, liberals in America have a lousy record. They were the ones who thought Fulgencio Batista was a bum and that Fidel Castro was a Spanish-speaking Thomas Jerrerson. They thought Sandinistas were better than Somoza and that Khomeini was better than the Shah and that Mao Tse-tung was better than Chiang Kai-chek.

The left in America has engineered one foreign policy disaster after another and now they are trying for another in Central America.

The Congress has to make important policy decisions about Central America and it deserves objective facts. The Congressional aides who chipped in to pay the informant should be identified and fired. If their bosses did not have the decency to tell their Congressional colleagues that they were hearing the words of a bought and paid for informant, they should be censored.

The American people have only one legitimate interest in El Salvador: That it not become a forward Soviet base for the further spread of Communism in the Western Hemisphere.

Other than that, it's none of our business who runs El Salvador or how they run it. We can know for certain, however, that D'Aubuisson is running for office in a democratic process while the guerrillas want to shoot their way to power. That makes him more of a democrat than some Americans I know.

Sharon continues to challenge for party leadership

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Despite criticism from colleagues within his Herut Party, former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon is pressing ahead with a bid for the party leadership and, in the process, working his way back into the national political limelight.

Leading Herut members have appealed to Sharon to bow out of Thursday's contest for the leadership post, held by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. They fear a party split that could damage the government's chances in the general election July 23.

But commentators agree the challenge, even if a failure, could help bring the fiery Sharon back to the centerstage of Israeli politics.

Sharon, in an interview broadcast today on Israel army radio, said: "I am not prepared to give up the challenge under any circumstances.

"It's not a question of a certain job or any promises," he said. "I view a respectable challenge as better than false unity."

In a speech Sunday in Haifa, Sharon said he does not want to split the party. He is challenging Shamir, he said, to resolve "differences on policy and outlook on defense, especially the war on terror and the question of settlement (in the West Bank)."

Herut is the senior party in Shamir's coalition of right-wing and religious parties. The coalition fell apart last month and Shamir yielded to the opposition Labor Party's demand for elections in July, 16 months ahead of schedule.

Israeli political analysts doubt Sharon has any chance of winning and see his bid as a tactic to return to a more active role in government. But the daily Hadashot said today that Shamir's associates in Herut had urged him not to make any deal with Sharon and to "finish him off" in an outright confrontation.

Sharon was forced out of the Defense Ministry in February 1983 following judicial inquiry into the September 1982 massacre of hundreds of Palestinians by Christian militiamen in two Beirut refugee camps. The inquiry found Israeli military had allowed Christians militiamen into the camps and placed part of the responsibility on Sharon.

Moshe Arens assumed the Defense Ministry post, and Sharon has remained in the government as a minister without portfolio, trying ever since to regain a position of greater power.

The conservative newspaper Maariv wrote in an editorial that the party leadership fight will only help the Labor Party.

"It will not be a demonstration of politeness and mutual respect...and the Labor Party's propagandists will find all their work being done for them," the paper said.

Columnist Yossi Melman, writing in the the left-wing daily Davar, said Sharon has nothing to lose and everything to gain from the competition.

Even if Sharon wins only 20 percent of the votes in the Thursday poll — as Shamir's camp expects — or one-third — as his own followers predict — he hopes that will be enough to bring him back to the center of the political stage, Melman wrote. This would in turn oblige Shamir to give him back the Defense Ministry if the governing coalition is re-elected.

The tough-minded Sharon has a hard core of supporters within Herut and among the Israeli population — people who believe he can provide the strong leadership the country needs in the fight against the Palestine Liberation Organization.

However, his electoral appeal is small. A popularity poll last week gave him only 3.5 percent of public support for the premiership, while Shamir won 10.9 percent and former President Yitzhak Navon gained 27.5 percent.

Herut faces a serious dilemma, Maariv wrote. If Sharon takes a central place in the party list, the party is likely to lose supporters.

Soviets accuse CIA of trying to recruit spies

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Soviet Union charged today that the CIA used Australian diplomats and a Japanese businessman to try to recruit Soviet officials as spies.

"We possess irrefutable evidence that the American spy agency, in close cooperation with the secret service of Japan, Australia and some other countries, conducts a manyfold subversive activity in Thailand," a Soviet Embassy statement said.

The statement was read at an embassy news conference at which Minister-Counselor Oleg A. Yershov described to reporters two unsuccessful attempts to recruit Soviet officials as Western spies, in Bangkok April 5 and 6.

The recruitment targets were identified as Alexandre V. Kilim, an attache, and G. Baranov, an official with the Soviet trade mission here.

Kilim said he had been invited to dinner April 5 by Australian Second Secretary Paul Bernard, but at the restaurant was met by a man who identified himself only as "John," who said he was a representative of the Australian secret service.

The Australian, Kilim said, asked for confidential information from the embassy in exchange for money and a choice of residence and work in the United States or Australia.

"The man unequivocally stated that his actions were fully coordinated with the representatives of the CIA in Bangkok. Later on this gentleman was identified as a counselor of the Australian Embassy in Bangkok, Mr. Ronald Ford," the statement said.

Lebanese agree on disengagement plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting tapered off in and around Beirut today after representatives of Lebanon's warring factions agreed on a military disengagement plan.

A spokesman for the committee that drafted the plan described it as "the first step" toward halting the fighting, which has wracked Lebanon during nine years of sporadic Moslem-Christian civil warfare.

Police said six persons were wounded overnight by sniper fire along the "green line," which divides the capital into Christian east and Moslem west, but for the first time in more than a week no deaths caused by fighting were reported.

In a meeting of the "higher security-political committee" Monday night, representatives of the warring factions agreed on the disengagement plan to separate combatants in war zones in the capital and surrounding hills.

The meeting, chaired by President Amin Gemayel, was held at the presidential palace in suburban Baabda, five miles east of Beirut.

The plan had been prepared by a military subcommittee that had met for the previous five days.

Committee spokesman Mounif Oweidat told reporters after the meeting that other committees "will be working continuously to prepare for the execution of this plan."

He added, however, that "this is not the definitive final plan" for bringing peace to Lebanon. "It's the first step on the way to stop the fighting."

Oweidat gave no further details of the plan. But government sources who asked not to be identified said the agreement calls for the pullback of fighters from current positions by several hundred yards to minimize cease-fire violations.

Sniper incidents started by taunts shouted across the frontlines have often, in the past, escalated into widespread fighting.

The government sources said the disengagement plan also provides for the deployment of some 2,000 policemen and 150 observers, including a 40-member French team, to patrol the new buffer zones along the green line and in the mountains.

Dead man's brother loses control

TOULOUSE, France (AP) — The grieving brother of one of nine French soldiers killed during a weekend explosion in Chad was shot and wounded today when he drove his car toward Defense Minister Charles Hernu during an outdoor funeral service for the soldiers.

Hernu, highranking officers including French Army Chief of Staff Jannou Lacaze, and family members escaped injury. The car drove half way around the open square before rolling to a halt after guards opened fire and wounded the man.

Witnesses at the scene said Lionel Rehal had verbally abused Hernu before jumping into his car.

In Paris, the Defense Ministry later confirmed that Hernu had been the target of Rehal's drive, during which his car struck and overturned one of the flag-draped coffins.

"Under extreme emotion, the brother of one of the nine victims lost control of himself, after having verbally abused the minister of defense, left the ceremony, got into his car and was heading straight for the minister," a ministry communique said. "Body guards were forced to stop him by wounding him in the thigh."

Hernu made a bedside visit to Rehal and was being kept informed of his condition following the incident, the communique said.

Hernu was attending the funeral to award posthumous medals to the nine soliders who died Saturday in eastern Chad in an explosion that has not been clearly explained.

The Defense Ministry has given three versions of the explosion in Chad, where about 3,000 French troops have been stationed since August to support the government of Chad's President Hissine Habre against Libyan-backed rebels.

In its first version Saturday, the ministry said the soldiers were killed during an explosion that occurred while they were clearing away wreckage of vehicles abandoned by rebel forces near the township of Oum Chalouba, about 280 miles northeast of the Chadian capital of N'Djamena.

Later Saturday, the ministry said the soliders were killed after they apparently stepped on a land mine during a reconnaissance mission. On Monday, the ministry said the soldiers were on a mine-clearing mission in an area that had been thought to have been cleared.

Hernu said Saturday the deaths were not the result of a rebel attack.

Hw also said there was "no question of modifying" French forces in Chad because of the accident.

Reagan awards golden apple to Teacher of the Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has given an apple to the teacher — a golden apple to Sherleen Sue Sisney, winner of the Teacher of the Year award.

In a Rose Garden ceremony Monday, Reagan told the teacher of history and economics at Ballard High School in Louisville, Ky., that she held "a critically important place in the life of our nation...because you shape the future by shaping the adults of the future."

About 20 of Mrs. Sisney's students attended the ceremony and its conclusion each received a presidential handshake.

Mrs. Sisney has been active in the development of a project designed to get local business involved with public schools.

The award is sponsored by Encyclopedia Britannica, the Chief State School Officers and Good Housekeeping Magazine.

There they were Monday perking up the usually staid pages of L'Osservatore Romano.

The drawings illustrated a long article about a recently published comic book of Mickey Mouse's adventures translated into Latin.

A figure of Mickey scampering across L'Osservatore Romano page said in Latin "Now without any delay turn the page."

The newspaper said the figure was taken from the comic book "Michael Musculus," the Latin-language version of the cartoon character who has delighted hundreds of millions worldwide.

The article noted that other Latin-language comic books, including one with the adventures of Walt Disney character Donald Duck, are helping maintain interest in the language of the ancient Romans.

On a tour of the General Motors plant Monday, the premier saw a newspaper cartoon of himself dolled up as Boy George, complete with braids and broad-brimmed hat, to court popularity with young voters.

Levesque tore it off the wall, looked at it, ripped it up, and handed the pieces to an aide as he walked off.

The caricature had been published in the Montreal Gazette last week.

A news photographer who witnessed the incident said the premier was not amused with his depiction as Boy George.

Fans cheer favorite celebrities

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fans who flocked outside this year's Academy Awards to cheer the arrival of such luminaries as Meryl Streep, Shirley MacLaine and Jack Nicholson also loudly noted the absence of a favorite — Barbra Streisand.

Hundreds of movie maniacs waited hours — or days — outside the Music Center for a chance to glimpse the celebrities as they arrived for Monday night's 56th annual Oscar ceremony.

Many of the young women in the group sounded as if they had died and gone to heaven when tall, good-looking John James, star of TV's "Dynasty," stepped from a limousine to make the long, red-carpeted walk inside.

Timothy Hutton's "aw, shucks" shyness also drew delirious screams from the mostly youthful crowd, who oohed and aahed over every elegantly dressed arrival.

"Hey, Meryl!" they screamed. "Chad (Everett), we still love you! Shirley! Shirley!"

Several homemade signs proclaimed the crowd's preference for Miss Streisand's relatively neglected "Yentl."

"Oscar, You Missed Her Blind," said a sign held by Patti Penalosa of Vista, who declared she was "enraged" that Miss Streisand, who was director, producer and star of "Yentl," had been shut out in major Oscar categories.

"God knows she deserves it," the 17-year-old said of Miss Streisand, who chose not to attend the ceremony. "You saw a lot of art and creativity in 'Yentl.' They (Academy members) neglected to see that. Maybe they're not artists."

Diminutive Linda Hunt, who later won a best supporting actress Oscar for her role as a male photojournalist in "The Year of Living Dangerously," waved timidly from behind long page-boy bangs as she strode past the bleachers jam-packed with fans.

Warm applause greeted Mary Tyler Moore, radiant in a deep purple, shoulderless gown with puffed sleeves.

Cher, the glittery singer-turned-actress who was nominated for best supporting actress for "Silkwood," drew one of the loudest ovations when she stepped before the curb-side microphone of Oscar greeter Army Archerd.

"Thanks a lot, guys," she told the cheering crowd. "Yeah, we've come a long way, huh?"

Movie star buttons, posters and signs of every description dotted the long bleachers swarming with fans, where one man brandished what he claimed was a real Oscar statuette he had inherited from an aunt who had been a Beverly Hills housekeeper.

"When her boss died, she got it," said William Prendiz, 37, of Los Angeles. He said he didn't know who had owned the statuette, but he believed it had been awarded in a music category in 1945. The figurine bore no markings or inscriptions.

Many fans waved posters for "Terms of Endearment," which won five Oscars, including best picture.

"Oh, it was wonderful," proclaimed Dorothy Kaiser of Los Angeles, who said she arrived Sunday night to sleep on the spectator bleachers outside the pavilion.

"I've been dying to do this," the secretary-bookkeeper said, recalling that two years ago she came all the way from New York state to watch the movie stars arrive.

Carmel Odriozola said she was hoping to catch a glimpse of actors Dudley Moore, Richard Chamberlain or Burt Reynolds.

Across the street from the television cameras, bright lights and popping flashes, a group of protesters waved signs decrying a lack of female film workers. The protesters were joined by some of the Streisand legions who held signs reading: "What About Babs!" and "What Did 'Yentl' Do Wrong!"

Town hunts business

MONTROSE, Colo. (AP) — Wanted: A new business, any new business, and the townsfolk here are putting up an old-fashioned bounty to anyone who helps capture one.

A $1,500 reward is being offered for information leading to the successful location of a new business in this western Colorado town of about 24,000, said Assistant City Manager Giff Stoke.

The offer has only two requirements. The company must employ at least 10 people full time, and it must remain in Montrose at least one year, he said.

Stoke said the reward, approved by the City Council, may give Montrose an edge over the "extreme competition" nationwide for new industry.

Soviets toss charges at IOC

Russians stop short of calling for Olympic boycott

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet newspaper charged today that the United States Olympic Committee violated the Olympic charter by seeking the removal of a U.S. delegate to the International Olympic Committee who opposed accreditation for Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe.

The newspaper, Sovietsky Sport, said that representatives of Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe were denied accreditation on the eve of the Sarajevo Winter Olympics

"This decision was approved by the world sports circles. It is common knowledge that they are financed by the U.S. CIA, and their subversive provocative activities based on political bias run counter to the provisions of the Olympic charter," the newspaper charged.

THE NEWSPAPER said the "heads of the U.S. National Olympic Committee played an unseemly role of the defenders of these broadcasting stations," and earlier this month "adopted a scandalous decision to denounce the stand of the U.S. member of the International Olympic Committee, Julian Roosevelt, because (he) opposed the support rendered to Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe and openly stated they were instruments of the CIA."

The newspaper charged this was a violation of Articles 12 and 13 of the Olympic charter because "members of the International Olympic Committee are representatives of the committee in their respective countries and not delegates of their countries to IOC.

"Thus, they are independent in their actions and can be expelled from the IOC only if they betray the interests of the committee or disregard them," the newspaper said. "As for Roosevelt, he maintained a principled stand on more than one occasion."

On Monday, the president of the LAOOC said that earlier Soviet allegations that the U.S. had violated the Olympic charter by requiring visas for athletes may have resulted from a mistake by an American embassy official in Moscow.

Peter Ueberroth, reacting to a strongly worded Soviet Olympic Committee charge distributed Monday by Tass, the nation's official news agency, denied that the United States had reserved the right to deny visas to the Soviet delegation coming here for the Summer Games.

Ueberroth said that a communique last week from the U.S. embassy in Moscow to the Soviet Union's foreign office had used the word "visa" in discussing the list of athletes' names.

"It was a mistake," he said."There will not be a visa required for their athletes."

UEBERROTH ADDED that the Soviet athletes would be treated the same as all others.

He described the strong Soviet reaction as "at best a nitpick."

The statement distributed by Tass called for an emergency meeting of the International Olympic Committee's Executive Board and alleged that anti-Soviet feeling was being fomented in the United States.

Ueberroth said neither his committee nor the IOC in Switzerland had received any communication from the Soviets about their complaints or the request for the special meeting.

F. Don Miller, chairman of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said, "From our viewpoint, we abhor any political intrusion into the Games. The Games are now rapidly coming upon us. It's in everyone's best interests in the Olympic movement to have the Soviet Union and the other countries participate in those games.

"Right at the very beginning we recognized that from time to time they (the Soviets) would have various items on the Games to talk about, and not necessarily in a most favorable manner. We feel we must constantly be aware of these and do whatever is required to maintain the ideals of the Olympic movement and stay within the Olympic Charter."

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Moscow said the U.S. was trying to expedite arrangements for Soviet Olympic delegation members and that Soviet participants would be treated "exactly like all countries throughout the world."

In Washington, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said, "We were surprised by the Soviet Olympic Committee making such accusations. The Soviets cited the guarantees made by the president to uphold the provisions of the Olympic charter. There has been no change in that position. The president has stated that the United States will welcome athletes from all nations to participate in the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles."

Midland opens against Dodgers

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Despite some reluctance to reveal his plans to the opposition, Manager George Enright admitted, finally, that Mike Capel would start for the Midland Cubs against the San Antonio Dodgers in the 7 p.m. Texas League opener today at Cubs Stadium.

David Anderson, who was 8-8 for the Dodgers last year and is one of four starting returnees, gets the nod from San Antonio Manager Jerry LaRoque, who last year was manager-of-the-year in the Florida Rookie League.

George Enright

Enright put the 1984 Cubs through their first workout at Cubs Stadium Monday night and predicted the Midland team would have some power and speed, but pitching...."it's tough to grade pitching in spring training. Pitchers go three or four innings in spring games, even if they get in trouble, just to get their work in. We'll just have to wait and see.

"However, in a park like this," said Enright, who managed Midland to a 46-41 record in 1980 after taking over as manager June 1, "walks will kill you. You've got to throw strikes."

Ernight went on, "With the offense we have, we should be able to score, so the pitching, right now, is the key."

THE POWER in the lineup will be supplied by Danny Norman, Mike Anicich and Jim Auten. Anicich, who hit 22 homers at Jackson in 1982, banged 21 in Midland last season. Norman, 28, is built like a power hitter and is new to the Cubs' organization. Auten, a UCLA grad in 1979, hit 16 and 13 homers in successive season in the heavy air of Memphis in the Southern League and should be even more dangerous in Midland's high, windy altitude.

Enright also labels third baseman Tony Woods, 6-1, 200 out of Oakland, Calif., as potential power. He hit five with 63 rbi in batting .278 at Quad Cities last year, "and here he is capable of 10 to 12 homers, although he is primarily a line drive hitter."

AS FOR SPEED, Rick Baker, who set the Cubs' stolen base record with 59 last year, is back. Others with impressive base-stealing credentials from a year ago are shortstop Shawon Dunston, 58 at Q-City; outfielder Darrin Jackson, 36 at Salinas; Woods, 24; second baseman Gary Varsho, 46 at Salinas, and Jeff Rutledge, 12 at Salinas.

Capel, a 6-1, 162-pound righthander, was drafted by Chicago after helping pitch the University of Texas to the College World Series pennant last year. He was a member of the Longhorn staff that had four 12-game or more winners, an NCAA record.

Capel was 1-1 at Midland and finished with a 3-2 record at Quad Cities, at Texas he was 13-1 with a 2.98 ERA.

Returnees for San Antonio are centerfielder Cecil Espy (.268, 51 stolen bases), leftfielder Stu Pedersen (.308, 10 homers, 66 rbi), and Anderson. Up from the Florida State League championship team are second baseman Mariano Duncan (.266, 56 sb), outfielder Don Cataline (.217, 14 homers, 59 rbi, 28 sb), shortstop Carmelo Alvarez (.214, 23 sb). Other starters will be Greg Smith at first and John Walker at third.

CUB-ICLES—Shortstop Shawon Dunston, Chicago's first round draft choice out Brooklyn Thomas Jefferson in 1982, couldn't understand why he was gasping for breath in the Cubs Stadium workout until he found out how much Midland is above sea-level...."Dunston is aggressive," said Enright. "He'll run just as hard on a sure-out bouncer back to the pitcher's box as he will on a ball to deep short."...Baker, who wintered in Chattanooga, and set the Midland mark for triples, 15, as well as stolen bases, was cut the last week of spring training from the Iowa club. "They sent Joe Carter down and then there was the trade that brought two outfielders from the Phillies. And having been in the organization only two years, they sent me down."...

Carlos Gil, an 11-game winner in the Venezuelan League last winter, followed up with a strong spring and stuck with the Iowa club, along with second baseman Trey Brooks, third baseman Tom Lombarski and control-expert Ken Pryee, who had a good winter season in Puerto Rico...Doug Welenc, who hurled for Midland the last two years, retired...Carlos Lezcano, traded to Oakland, had a terrfic spring and almost made the A's club....

Denver Gold back Bill Johnson (34) slips through the arms of Los Angeles Express defender Kevin Hood during a 35-27 USFL victory Monday night in Denver. The Gold is now 6-1 on the year.

Gold price rises in Denver

USFL Roundup

DENVER (AP) — A pair of fumbled Los Angeles kickoff returns late in the first half helped complete a 25-point second-quarter flurry that lifted the Denver Gold to an improbable 6-1 record.

Denver, everybody's choice to be an also-ran in 1984, posted its fourth straight victory and raised its Pacific Division lead to three games with Monday night's 35-27 United States Football League victory over Los Angeles before 19,115 rain-soaked fans.

Houston beat winless Washington 31-13 in the only other game of the night.

"We're on an emotional roll," said Denver Coach Craig Morton. "We're playing with great intensity and nothing seems to discourage us. We don't panic."

Panic might have set in after the Express jumped to a 14-0 lead in the first quarter. Steve Young, Los Angeles' $40 million rookie quarterback, set up the first score, beating the blitz by dumping a short pass over the middle to Mel Gray, who went 52 yards. Kevin Nelson scored four plays later.

With 5:23 left in the opening period, Los Angeles safety Dwight Drane intercepted a Craig Penrose pass and returned it 22 yards for the second Express tally.

The Gold rebounded with a vengeance in the second period.

First, Penrose lofted a 73-yard bomb to Kevin Williams, then David Martin scored returned a punt 79 yards. But the extra-point attempt failed and Denver trailed 14-13.

Then came the two crucial fumbles on kickoff returns.

Gray, trying to negotiate a muddy area of the field, coughed up the ball at the Los Angeles 17. Penrose hit Vincent White on a 5-yard pass for the go-ahead TD with 1:31 left.

Tony Boddie fumbled away the next kickoff return, giving Denver possession at the 10, and Bill Johnson's 5-yard run made it 25-14 with 30 seconds left in the half.

Los Angeles never fully recovered from that second-period onslaught. Nelson took a short pass and turned it into a 69-yard scoring play early in the third period. But Denver used its ball-control offense to eat up the clock and countered with a field goal and a touchdown before Young ran for the final score in the closing seconds.

"You can't fumble that many times (four) and win," said Express Coach John Hadl.

Gamblers 31, Federals 13

Houston running back Sam Harrell scored on runs of seven and 16 yards, sandwiched around a 39-yard field goal by Toni Fritsch, as Houston, 4-3, turned a 7-0 first quarter edge into a 24-7 halftime lead.

Quarterback Jim Kelly had a 51-yard TD pass to Clarence Verdin on the Gamblers' fourth offensive play of the game.

The Federals, 0-7, sacked Kelly three times and held the Gamblers without a first down for the first 24 minutes of the second half.

Perez case now in lap of Kuhn

ATLANTA (AP) — The case of Pascual Perez, the Atlanta Braves pitcher jailed for cocaine possession in the Dominican Republic, now goes to the office of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Dominican authorities freed Perez Monday, after keeping him in jail three months on a charge of possession of one-half gram of cocaine. He pleaded innocent, saying he didn't know what the stuff was, and that it had been given to him by an Atlanta woman.

Kuhn, who has suspended players in similar incidents, wants to see Perez as soon as he arrives in the United States, possibly as soon as Wednesday.

Whatever happens, the Major League Players Association "wants to be part of the process," said Don Fehr, acting executive director of the federation.

He reserved the right to take action against any move by Kuhn which the group considers unfair.

"We shoudn't take any facts for granted," Fehr said in a telephone interview with The Atlanta Constitution Monday. "There are some countries where I wouldn't pay attention to any conviction. We hope (Perez) can come here and satisfy everyone that there's no need for a suspension."

Braves Manager Joe Torre found some hope in the fact Perez has served three months in prison for a crime equivalent to a misdemeanor in this country.

"I hope the commissioner would take that into account. He wasn't found guilty of any felony, any criminal wrongdoing, and he spent a lot of time in jail.

"At least we're moving ahead. I just hope this round is shorter than round one."

Perez was released Monday from Fort San Luis prison in Santiago, where he had been held since his arrest Jan. 9. He was convicted March 23 on the possession charge, but prosecutors appealed, claiming he should have been convicted on a drug trafficking charge and sentenced to two years in prison. The appeal was rejected and prosecutor Miguel Garcia Cordero decided Monday not to make a final appeal to the Dominican Supreme Court.

"I'm all choked up," the 26-year-old Perez said as he left the prison Monday. "I knew I wouldn't be let down, and I won't let down the people who supported me."

Perez said he expected to visit the U.S. Embassy in Santo Domingo today to apply for a visa. He said he hoped to leave for Atlanta Wednesday or Thursday.

Dodgers' Reuss tames Cubs, 4-2

National Roundup

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Chicago Cubs had heard all about Jerry Reuss' arm problems, and the veteran left-hander's off-season elbow surgery.

But, as Manager Jim Frey put it, "If I hadn't read about it in the newspaper, I would have had no hint of it."

Reuss, making his first start of the season, scattered seven hits over 7 2-3 innings. He walked none and struck out four Monday night as the Dodgers snapped a three-game losing streak, 4-2.

"We've been hitting the ball well," Frey said, "but Reuss had good stuff, he shut us down."

AL Roundup on Page 3B

Catcher Mike Scioscia, who broke a 1-1 tie with a bases-loaded single in the fourth inning, said his batterymate looked unchanged.

"I see no difference in the way Jerry Reuss is throwing the ball than the way he threw it the last couple of years," Scioscia said. "He threw hard for a long time. I'd say he proved to everyone he's 100 percent.

Reuss wouldn't say that, but he did say, "I got the ball where I wanted, and that's the key for me.

"I had no problems from the injury," continued Reuss, who underwent arthroscopic surgery on his left elbow Jan. 24. "My biggest concern was not to try to impress people that I could still throw hard. My velocity was good, but I have thrown harder."

Reuss was lifted in the eighth inning after allowing an infield single to rookie outfielder Henry Cotto which scored Gary Woods, who had doubled.

Tom Niedenfuer took over, struck out two of the four batters he faced and got a double play ball to end the game and claim his first save of the season.

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second on a double by former Dodger Ron Cey and a run-scoring single by Jody Davis.But the Dodgers tied it when Pedro Guerrero, just 1-17 to start the season, led off with a homer off Chuck Rainey, 1-1.

Scioscia's game-winner followed singles by Ken Landreaux and Mike Marshall and a walk to Bill Russell.Steve Sax singled, stole his second base of the game and scored on a seventh-inning single by Terry Whitfield.

Reds 9, Expos 6

Nick Esasky drove in three runs and Duane Walker belted a two-run homer in his first at-bat of the season as Cincinnati hammered five Montreal pitchers for 14 hits.

The host Reds scored four runs in the first inning off Bill Gullickson, 0-2, with two outs. Esasky's double drove in two runs and Walker followed with his home run.

Gary Carter hit his first homer of the season and added a two-run double for Montreal.

Montreal's Pete Rose went 2-5, leaving him three hits shy of the 4,000 mark.

Jeff Russell, 1-0, gave up 10 of Montreal's 14 hits in five innings. Tom Hume got his first save.

Earl's 10 laws of strategy to help Altobelli, Berra

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

OK now class, pay attention. Professor Earl Weaver, who holds a Ph.D. in baseball, is about to conduct his seminar on strategy.

Hey, Altobelli, quit that whispering. Stop slouching, Berra. This is important stuff.

The gospel according to Saint Earl is contained in "Weaver On Strategy," a primer for managers, written with Terry Pluto and to be published April 23 by Macmillan. In it, the former boss of the Baltimore Orioles reduces this complicated sport to 10 laws. They bear repeating here.

Law No. 1: "No one's going to give a damn in July if you lost a game in March."

Translation: Don't take spring training too seriously. Save your acid stomach for when the games really count.

Law No. 2: "If you don't make any promises to your players, you won't have to break them."

Weaver's advice for dealing with rookies is simple. "You shouldn't tell a rookie anything."

That takes care of a multitude of problems.

Law No. 3: "The easiest way around the bases is with one swing of the bat."

This law, of course, requires a lineup of sluggers capable of repeatedly reaching the fences. You can understand then why Weaver developed such an affinity for guys like Frank Robinson, Boog Powell and Eddie Murray.

Law No. 4: "Your most precious possessions on offense are your 27 outs."

This is why Weaver frowned on the bunt. "Its name, the sacrifice bunt, tells you something," Weaver writes. "Sacrifice means you are giving up something. In this instance, you're giving up an out."

Outs are to be cherished and protected, not squandered carelessly. "There are only three an inning, and they should be treasured," Weaver explains.

Law No. 5: "If you play for one run, that's all you'll get."

In other words, be bold. Go for the gusto.

Law No. 6: "Don't play for one run unless you know that run will win a ball game."

Don't skimp. A 3 or 4 looks so much nicer on the scoreboard than a lonesome 1.

Law No. 7: "It's easier to find four good starters than five."

This is simple common sense. In this world, it is easier to find four good anythings than it is to find five of them.

Law No. 8: "The best place for a rookie pitcher is long relief."

Unless, of course, his name is Mike Boddicker. In that case, the best place for him is starting the second game of the playoffs and the second game of the World Series.

Law No. 9: "The key step for an infielder is the first one — to the left or right, but before the ball is hit."

Weaver may have been spoiled from years of watching Mark Belanger, the consummate glove, play shortstop for the Orioles. Belanger was a defensive wizard, the Ozzie Smith of his time. He was so good that Weaver learned to live with his light hitting. And Belanger could, at least, bunt on the off chance the manager might require one.

Law No. 10: "The job of arguing with the umpire belongs to the manager, because he can't hurt the team by getting thrown out of the game."

Weaver was thrown out of 89 games including one in the 1969 World Series and another during spring training, when he did not follow his own Law No. 1.

He was at his most argumentative in 1975, when he was run 10 times, including both games of an Aug. 15 doubleheader by Ron Luciano, one of his favorite adversaries.

Luciano's double pump hardly soothed Weaver, though. The next day, he was thrown out again, this time by Don Denkinger.

Confused Lee Trevino expects good outing

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) -- Lee Trevino comes into the Masters with a philosophy that seems self-contradictory.

He expects to play well in the tournament which starts Thursday because he doesn't expect to play well.

Confusing? Not when Trevino explains.

"When you're one of the better players on the Tour, you're expected to play well every week. You expect it. The galleries expect it. The press expects it. The sponsors expect it. The whole world expects it.

"That's a tremendous amount of pressure," he said. "I know. I've been there.

"But I don't have that pressure right now.

"I don't have any right to expect to play well.

"Since my last (back) operation, I can't practice like I used to. My doctor told me those days are done and gone. Never again.

"And, because of my television schedule, I haven't been able to play all that much this year.

"So I know I'm not supposed to be playing good. So I just go out there with a relaxed attitude and let 'er rip. No pressure. Just playing alone. Now, you get a man with that kind of attitude, and if he can play a little, he can do some damage.

"That's the position I'm in. I know I'm not supposed to be playing good. I know if I mess it up, I can tell myself, 'well, what do you expect? You're not supposed to be playing good.'

"I know I can excuse myself to myself so there's no pressure."

Trevino, now 44, a member of the World Golf Hall of Fame and one of the most colorful players the game has produced, now has parallel careers as a Tour player and as a television golf analyst.

"That's another thing that takes the pressure off," he said. "Playing golf isn't the way I make a living any more.

"So I'm really enjoying playing more than I used to," he said.

The winner of two U.S. and two British Opens and holder of a PGA title, Trevino needs only this one to join Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player as the only men to sweep the game's Big Four titles.

"That's pretty good company," he said.

His chances of joining that elite crowd were enhanced with a strong, runnerup performance two weeks ago in the Tournament Players Championship.

Knicks roll over Cavs

NBA Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Although the New York Knicks beat Cleveland to move within a half-game of Detroit in the race for a homecourt advantage in the playoffs, star forward Bernard King was worried.

"Lately we haven't played well as a team defensively," said King, who scored 32 points in the Knicks' 118-113 victory over the Cavaliers Monday night. "That can't go on in the playoffs."

The Cavaliers are 20th in the National Basketball Association in scoring, and New York is third in defense, but Cleveland hit 58.1 percent of its shots as World B. Free hit 14 of 21 attempts, including 12 of his first 13 en route to a 39-point night.

"The Cavs have always played well against us," King said. "We have injuries, but a good team has to have guys who pick up one another."

King is playing with a dislocated middle finger on each hand, while idle forward Louis Orr has a bad back and sidelined center Bill Cartwright a dislocated finger. Guard Darrell Walker left the game with a slight sprain of his left ankle.

Detroit, fourth in the Eastern Conference, is 46-32. The Knicks are 46-33.

Bullets 136, Bulls 134

Washington scored the final seven points, including the last three by Jeff Ruland, to beat visiting Chicago in the second overtime.

The Bulls led 134-129, but Ruland's follow shot with 41 seconds remaining put the Bullets ahead to stay at 135-134. He added a free throw with two seconds left.

Greg Ballard hit 16 of 20 shots and led Washington with 33 points, while Quintin Dailey had 32 for the Bulls.

Brain damage out for Houston's Thon

From Wire Reports

Doctors treating shortstop Dickie Thon said Monday the Houston Astros All-Star suffered broken bones around his eye and had blurred vision but apparently sustained no brain damage after he was struck in the face by a fastball in a weekend game against the New York Mets. Dr. Bill Bryan, the Astros' team physician, said the pitch from Mets starter Mike Torrez glanced off Thon's helmet and hit him in the forehead. The fractures are not expected to require surgery and barring complications Thon should be released from a Houston hospital sometime today, Bryan said.

Dock Ellis says drugs were to blame for his erratic, unpredictable behavior in 11 seasons as a major league pitcher and claims he hurled a 1970 no-hitter for the Pittsburgh Pirates after taking LSD. Ellis, now 39 and a counselor in a Los Angeles drug program, also said that he intentionally tried to hit several Cincinnati Reds' batters in a 1974 game while on pep pills.

People who do not believe Dan Quisenberry is the best relief pitcher in baseball are getting hard to find. Quisenberry is one of the few who are left. "Maybe nobody thinks of me as the underdog anymore," said Quisenberry, "But I think I'm the underdog. I still look at other people and think they're better than me." But since 1980, his first full year in the majors, Quisenberry has compiled 131 saves, more than any one else. Bruce Sutter has rung up 110 over that period and Rich Gossage had 105. Five games into this season he's picked up two saves with three innings of scoreless relief, giving up one hit and no walks and striking out three. At that rate, he would have 64 saves and break his own record by 19.

FOOTBALL — Running back Earl Campbell, who demanded last season that the Houston Oilers trade him, now says he's willing to return to the NFL club, The Houston Post reported Monday. Campbell, interviewed Sunday after undergoing his physical before the Oilers' mini-camp, said he met with General Manager Ladd Herzeg Friday and the two settled their differences. "After our conversation, I found out that Ladd has nothing against me," said Campbell. "Now I want to play football again. I want to finish out my career with the Oilers. And, hopefully, they'll allow me to do that."

Authorities in Tucumcari, N.M., today were investigating the shooting death of high school star athlete Rod David, who would have enrolled at Texas Tech this fall on a football scholarship. The 18-year-old multi-sport standout was found dead Monday afternoon outside the family's Tucumcari residence, police said. He died from a gunshot wound to the chest and officers said a 20-gauge shotgun was found near the body. David was considered one of the state's top athletes. He was a three-year starter on the Tucumcari High School basketball team, was an all-state football player and also rated one of the state's top hurdlers and long jumpers in track.

BANVEL® HERBICIDE

Kill kochia in sorghum.

Use Banvel® herbicide when sorghum is in the 2-5 leaf stage.

Consistent kochia control in sorghum. Your pre-emergence or pre-plant herbicide just isn't doing the job now...because of weather problems like too little or too much rain or just inadequate control. So switch...to Banvel® herbicide. Apply Banvel herbicide when your sorghum is in the 2-5 leaf stage. You'll get leaf-tip to root-tip control of kochia as well as Russian thistle, sunflower, cocklebur or pigweed... without carryover worries.

See your ag chem dealer for the best broadleaf weed control for your sorghum.

Texas Ranger rookie Curtis Wilkerson loosens up before recent home game. Wilkerson is replacing veteran shortstop Bucky Dent in the Texas lineup this year.

Rangers' rookie 'unknown risk'

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Two ground balls to the left side of the infield in the recent Texas Rangers home stand illustrate why rookie Curtis Wilkerson beat out veteran Bucky Dent to become the starting shortstop.

On one grounder, the 22-year-old Wilkerson gloved the ball going towards third base, planted his right foot on the outfield grass, and gunned out the runner.

On the other grounder, he was the batter. He hit a slow roller toward New York shortstop Bobby Meacham, who tried to hurry because of Wilkerson's speed to first base. Meacham bobbled the ball then threw wild and the Rangers scored the winning run.

"We want to get better athletes into the lineup and there is no substitute for quickness," said Rangers Manager Doug Rader. "Wilkerson is already above-averge defensively. With Bucky, he was never going to get any better. He was good but the hardest thing to do is depart from the status quo, to get away from the safe shot."

Rader admitted Wilkerson was "an unknown, a risk."

But added quickly, "The chances are we will get better with Curtis."

Asked about the handling of Dent's late spring waiver, Rader said, "We were trying to get Bucky another job. It was not a sudden decision. It was not a brainstorm that came out of the blue. Things didn't work out for a trade but we tried."

Dent has a guaranteed salary of $375,000 and if he clears waivers Monday another team can pick him up for $40,000 with Texas having to pay the remainder of his contract for 1984.

Wilkerson, who hit over .300 and made the American Association All-Star team at Oklahoma City last year, said he thought he might be Dent's backup in 1984.

"I was surprised they told me I would be starting," Wilkerson said. "I thought the plan might have been for me to make the team as a backup.

"I didn't think I would be the starter this quick."

The Rangers have had seven different opening day shortstops in the last seven years and eight of the last nine.

"I hope to change the revolving door," Wilkerson said.

"I think I can help the team if I hit what I hit this spring (.213) because of my defense and speed running the bases," he said.

Rader said Wilkerson is valuable because he can seldom be doubled up on grounders. He said the Meacham error was an example of what can happen.

"Wilkerson can run," Rader said. "Meacham would not have gotten him even if he had not bobbled the ball."

Wilkerson said,"I just put my head down and ran. I really took off. I didn't see Meacham bobble the ball. If I hit the ball to that side of the infield I'm going to try to beat it out."

Wilkerson is a switch-hitter who doesn't drive the ball deep.

"We don't have any goals set for him," said Rader. "He has enough pressure on him without us doing that. We just think he'll keep getting better and better."

Baseball awaits Perez decision

By JOHN NELSON

Analysis

Pascual Perez poses an interesting dilemma for baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

The Atlanta Braves pitcher, convicted of cocaine possession in the Dominican Republic, was released from jail Monday and will head for the United States this week to resume his career, he thinks.

It's well known that the commissioner has been investigating Perez's case, undoubtedly mulling possible penalties against the pitcher, including suspension, fine or both.

Under a cloak of secrecy, Kuhn is supposed to meet with Perez and Braves General Manager John Mullen somewhere in New York as soon as possible.

Mullen has said he hopes for leniency in Perez's case. He hopes Kuhn will take into account "the fact that he has served three months in jail."

"Hopefully he won't be too harsh on him," Mullen says.

Understandably, the Braves are concerned, considering Kuhn's track record in such cases. But one thing muddies the waters: an arbitrator's ruling last Tuesday softening Kuhn's one-year suspension of two similarly guilty players.

Perez, 26, has been jailed in Santo Domingo since Jan. 9. Originally, he was charged with trafficking cocaine, a felony punishable by two years in prison. On March 23, however, Perez was convicted of a lesser charge of possession, a misdemeanor that cost him $1,000, and, after a prosecution appeal, Perez is free.

His case is similar to that of three players — then all with Kansas City — who were suspended for one year, subject to review on May 15; fined, and put on two years' probation by Kuhn last Dec. 15.

The players were Willie Wilson, still with the Royals; free-agent Jerry Martin, who signed with the New York Mets, and Willie Aikens, who was traded to Toronto. These three had pleaded guilty in federal court in Kansas City, Kan., to attempted possession of cocaine, a misdemeanor. They were fined and imprisoned for three months.

Also suspended for one year — without chance for review — was Los Angeles pitcher Steve Howe, who admitted the use of cocaine but was not charged in any court.

At the time of the suspensions, Kuhn said, "... we have continually warned everybody in baseball that we cannot and will not tolerate illegal drug use ...."

Kuhn's ruling stood until last Tuesday when baseball's own arbitrator, Richard I. Bloch, responded to a grievance by Wilson and Martin by shortening the suspensions to May 15, regardless of the results of a review. That cut the suspensions from one year to five months. Aikens did not participate in the grievance.

While upholding Kuhn's right to suspend and fine players, Bloch said in his 14-page decision that the length of the suspensions was "too severe to be squared with the just-cause requirement, assuming, of course, good behavior by the players."

Now, Kuhn must rule on Perez's case.

The question is whether Bloch's ruling will be in the back of Kuhn's mind as Perez pleads his case once again. Should the commissioner invoke a one-year suspension and let baseball's grievance process run its course? Or should he temper his judgment with the knowledge that Bloch might once again soften the penalty?

All of this, oi course, comes with the knowledge that Wilson and Martin will miss only a month of the season since their suspensions technically began in December, while even only a five-month suspension would sideline Perez into September.

Fairness, however, dictates that Kuhn impose a substantial penalty. His own guidelines and those of his office demand a fine and suspension. Says Kuhn, "... our players are models for young people and must behave accordingly." Perez was convicted in a court of violating that precept.

Precedent and Kuhn's own conscience dictate that what was necessary in the case of Wilson, Aikens and Martin should be necessary for Perez. In fact, the three Royals players were convicted of lesser charges than Perez, albeit in a different court.

Perez, who continues to protest his innocence, says he "won't let down the people who supported me."

Unfortunately, he already has. And Kuhn must act accordingly.

Canadian teams eye Fergy

TORONTO (AP) — Pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, released by the Chicago Cubs last month after a 19-year major league career, said he will decide this week whether or not to accept an offer to play in the Intercounty Major Baseball League, a Canadian semi-professional league.

Two teams, the Toronto Maple Leafs and London Majors, are both seeking the services of the 40-year-old right-hander, who owns a farm in southwestern Ontario.

Jenkins, who won 284 games in the major leagues and won 20 or more games seven times, was released by the National League club at the end of spring training.

He said the only reason he is considering the Intercounty League is because baseball is a hard habit to break.

"I guess I miss it," he said. "There are always a few chores to keep you occupied around a farm, but playing baseball is a lot more enjoyable way to keep active."

He said any money he would receive for playing would go to charitable organizations.

Should he decide in favor of the Intercounty League, he said he hopes in some small way the move might persuade major league scouts that talent does not stop at the Canadian border.

A's deal Jays late inning blues

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays have the late-inning blues. Oakland A's Manager Steve Boros remembers the feeling well.

"We came from behind in a lot of games last season and let leads slip away," Boros recalled Monday night. "Now, we feel we can come from behind and then wrap the games up."

Carney Lansford hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning off Toronto's Dennis Lamp, and the A's beat Toronto 4-3 in the only American League game of the day. An error by second baseman Damaso Garcia got the Blue Jays in trouble.

It was the third come-from-behind victory for Boros' club, off to a 5-1 start and leading the Western Division. Lansford, missing from the A's lineup a year ago because of the death of an infant son, has collected seven runs batted in, including three game-winning RBI, this year.

"These kind of games can give a club a lot of confidence," said Lansford, who singled home a run in the sixth off Toronto starter Jim Clancy.

"We've played six great games and lost three of them, two in the eighth inning and one in the tenth," Manager Bobby Cox said. "That error tonight was the first we've made this season."

On Sunday in Anaheim, reliever Roy Lee Jackson tried to preserve a 3-1 lead for Toronto starter Jim Acker, but Reggie Jackson and Doug DeCinces belted homers in the eighth and the California Angels downed the Blue Jays 4-3.

On Monday night, Toronto pulled into a 2-2 tie when two runners scored on an infield single by Garcia in the seventh. George Bell greeted Oakland reliever Bill Caudill with a homer in the eighth and the Blue Jays led 3-2.

Caudill, who had 26 saves for Seattle in each of the last two seasons, earned saves his first two times out in an Oakland uniform.

"We know he can't do it every time out, but he's going to do it nine times out of ten," said Boros, who sent the hard-throwing right-hander in with an opportunity for a victory Monday night.

"Hopefully, on that tenth time when he doesn't come through, someone will come along and pick him up like Carney did tonight."

Caudill, 1-0, was most grateful, and he faced only three batters in the ninth, striking out pinch hitter Ernie Whitt to end the game.

"Bell got the better of me this time, but we've got guys with unlimited capabilities on this team," Caudill said. "We've got 25 guys picking each other up, the mark of a good team.

"I know it's awfully early to talk about, but I think we've got a chance to win a pennant. I've been saying that since the start of spring training."

Isles, Rangers: One headed home

By The Associated Press

NHL Playoffs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — The Islanders have the experience, they've rediscovered the confidence and intensity it takes to be champions, and they say they're ready.

The New York Rangers are without their captain, are coming off a shattering defeat and haven't been very successful in this position in the past.

Still, if you listen to players on both teams, none of that will matter when the Patrick Division rivals take the ice tonight for the decisive fifth game of their National Hockey League playoff series. The winner advances to take on the Washington Capitals.

In the other playoff series still going, Chicago is at Minnesota. The winner there moves on to play St. Louis.

The other two division finals matchups are Edmonton against Calgary and Quebec against Montreal.

The Islanders rallied for four goals in the third period of Game 4 to win 4-1 and force the fifth game. It was only the second time since they first won the Stanley Cup in 1980 that they've faced elimination.

"It's wonderful, keeps the door open for us going back into our building," said Islanders captain Denis Potvin. "We have a fairly emotional team and it's a great relief to be going back."

"If we couldn't win one period, win one game on the road, then we don't deserve it," added defenseman Dave Langevin. "We knew it was there to take. We felt confident and we played a perfect game.

"But we have to do it again. The Rangers won't lay down. They'll be ready and so will we."

Barry Beck won't, however. He suffered a separated left shoulder just prior to Brent Sutter's game-winning goal Sunday night. Islanders rookie Pat Flatley checked Beck into the boards and the burly defenseman was sidelined for the remainder of the playoffs.

Goalie Glen Hanlon, who has performed spectacularly in the series, hoped his team would respond to Beck's absence.

"We should look at it on a positive note," said Hanlon. "Barry's held us in all 80 games. He's been a tower of strength back there and I think we owe it to Barry to do something for him and maybe pull together.

"Why look at it on a negative note? He's gone, we can't bring him back. I'm sounding like he's dead. Why dwell on it? Hopefully, we'll win something for him because he deserves it."

As they seek their fifth consecutive Stanley Cup, a feat managed only by the 1956-60 Montreal Canadiens, the Islanders have generally been outplayed by their local rivals. The Islander power play is 0-19, they have yet to score in the first period of any game and have fallen behind in all four contests.

"The power play still is a concern," said Islanders Coach Al Arbour. "But this team showed it could overcome that with the way we played in the third period (Sunday).

"We came through in real Islander style."

The Black Hawks also rallied in the third period of Game 4 to force a fifth game with the North Stars, whom they've eliminated the last two seasons.

"It's down to one game, winner take all," says Chicago goalie Murray Bannerman. "In a situation like this, I don't think there is a home-ice advantage."

Added Chicago Coach Orval Tessier: "It didn't make any difference in the first game in Minnesota or the third game in Chicago. The team that gets the bounces and breaks should win."

Chicago won the first game 3-1 in Minnesota, but the North Stars came back with two victories — 6-5 at home and 4-1 in Chicago.

The Hawks' Bob Murray doesn't expect the North Stars to fold.

Senate wrangles over deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate drive to reduce federal budget deficits is off to a sputtering start.

A bill raising taxes and cutting spending by a total of about $63 billion over three years is tied up in the full Senate by wrangling over special-interest provisions of the legislation and unrelated arguments about Reagan administration policies in Central America.

Meanwhile, the Republican-controlled Senate Budget Committee, a majority of its members uncomfortable with a $150 billion deficit-reduction plan embraced by President Reagan, is struggling to find a consensus on an overall strategy for reducing the flow of red ink.

The Senate was going into its second day of work today on the package approved by the Finance Committee which includes $48 billion worth of tax increases and about $15 billion in spending reductions through Sept. 30, 1987.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, has vowed that he will press to root out 33 new "loopholes" contained in the 1,334-page bill.

But in the Senate's only substantive action on the measure Monday, Metzenbaum failed, on a 64-18 vote, to eliminate a provision that liberalizes the value of tax-free, tax-deductible gifts that an employer may give to a worker as a reward for long service, safety or productivity.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., then sought to attach a non-binding amendment to the bill declaring the sense of Congress that U.S. tax money should not be used to finance the mining of harbors in Nicaragua and that the United States should withdraw a challenge to the jurisdiction of the World Court to hears claims against the United States by Nicaragua. Action on that amendment was left unresolved unitl today.

There appeared to be little chance the Senate could finish the tax bill before a week-long Easter recess Congress is due to begin Friday.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Finance Committee, predicted that enactment of the measure "will have some effect on interest rates" and "show that we are not suffering from total paralysis in Congress" when it comes to cutting deficits.

Dole added the president supports the committee plan, which is at the core of the $150 billion deficit-reduction package Reagan worked out with senior Republican senators.

Democrats and some Republicans, though, want the Senate Budget Committee to draft a complete budget blueprint, including a deficit-reduction plan, before the tax bill is passed. The committee started that process Monday and was continuing today.

Republican leaders had hoped to bypass the committee and have the Senate simply endorse the $150 billion, three-year deficit-reduction plan they had worked out with Reagan.

Now that the Budget Committee has convened, prospects for such a scenario are clouded.

Republicans hold a 12-10 majority over Democrats on the panel, but at least six of those Republicans have publicly endorsed deficit-reduction plans other than that which Reagan has embraced and Democrats have rejected flatly the Reagan plan. Thus, some Republicans could join forces with the Democrats to defeat the president's plan.

Provisions of the bill pending in the full Senate include an extension of the 3 percent tax on telephone service, which is due to expire at the end of 1985; an increase in taxes on liquor by up to 40 cents a fifth, repeal the tax credit of up to $300 for home-conservation measures and dilution of the tax advantages of income averaging.

Most of the spending cuts would have to be absorbed by hospitals, doctors and other providers of health care through the Medicare and Medicaid programs. But Medicare recipients would face a gradual increase in the premium they pay for supplementary insurance that covers doctors' fees. That premium, now $14.60 a month, would rise to $26.70 by 1989.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., right, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, speaks with Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the panel's ranking minority member, on Capitol Hill. The Republican-controlled panel is struggling to find a concensus on a strategy for reducing the federal deficit.

Don Harvey elected commission chairman

Donald A. Harvey, Midland Real Estate Broker, President of Don Harvey Realtors, was recently elected chairman of the Texas Real Estate Commission.

The Texas Real Estate Commission is the regulatory body for the approximately 15,000 real estate licensees in the state. There are nine real estate commissioners for the state — six broker members and three public members. All members are appointed by the governor with the consent of 2/3 of the senate. Texas Real Estate Commissioners hold office for terms of six years.

Don Harvey

The Commission writes, administers and grades licensee exams; processes applications for licensure; prints and issues the licenses; oversees proprietary schools offering real estate licensing courses in Texas.

It also registers liceses of real estate inspectors for the state of Texas and administrates residential service programs for companies which sell service warranty policies in the state of Texas.

The Texas Real Estate Commission approves and sets licensing and renewal fees in the state of Texas; rulles and governs real estate practices in the state of Texas and gives the final approval to new contract forms.

Additionally the Commission holds hearings on verified complaints against licensees. The mandatory function of the real estate commission is the protection of the public. Texas is considered to have one of the outstanding real estate licensing acts in the country.

Don Harvey has been in the real estate profession since 1963 in Midland and has held many offices and received many honors on both the state and national level.

School's high gas bill yields hazardous leaks

AUSTIN — A complaint last week from officials at the West Texas Children's Home about a high gas bill alerted Railroad Commission personnel to a hazardous situation at the school located in Pyote. According to members of the Commission's Gas Utilities Division, the gas system serving the school was shut down and leaks that were discovered must be repaired before service can be restored to the 375 students and staff members.

School officials called the Gas Utilities Division March 21 to report that their February gas bill was twice as high as the bills in December and January. Commission inspectors were on the scene in less than two hours to determine if the high bill indicated gas leaks in the school's system. Leaks were found throughout the system that serves 40 buildings including dormitories and staff homes.

Southern Union Gas Co. stopped service to the school and work began immediately to correct the situation and restore service. Railroad Commission staff are monitoring the work.

"There's no way to fortell what could have happened if the leaks had not been detected," said Milt Fegenbush, head of the pipeline safety and engineering section of the Gas Utilities Division. "The good thing is that something was done quickly before anyone was hurt or before any property was destroyed."

Local realtors announce Private Property Week

From Staff Reports

Recognizing private property rights among the individual freedoms that are the "bedrock on which our democracy is anchored," President Ronald Reagan has declared April 8-14 as Private Property Week, Sara Newsom, president of the Midland Board of Realtors, announced.

The president has encouraged all Americans to join with members of the National Association of Realtors in observing Private Property Week, Newsome said.

The Midland Board of Realtors is participating in the celebration. Among the activities planned by the board are: assisting with the organizational meeting of the neighborhood watch group, April 10 at 7 p.m. at San Jacinto Junior High School; a Las Vegas party for Realtors with proceeds going to Christmas in April, April 13; a Realtor information booth at Midland Park Mall, April 14, all day.

In the presidential statement, Reagan said, "One basic freedom in this country which contributes to our national unity is the right of all citizens to own, transfer and sell private property.

"Private property ownership encourages citizens to participate in the allocation of civic resources and the localized decision making that truly makes our democracy work," Reagan said.

Tom Loeffler to speak at AIME annual event

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of A.I.M.E. will hold their annual Community Relations Program, Tuesday, April 17 at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Guest speaker for the event will be Congressman Tom Loeffler, third term 21st District Congressman from Kerrville. He will present "The Washington Up Date".

Congressman Loeffler serves on the powerful Appropriations Committee and was recently named to the prestigious Budget Committee. He is Republican Deputy Whip in the 98th Congress.

A fourth generation Texan, he was the first Republican to be elected from the 21st Congressional District. Loeffler attended the University of Texas on a footbal scholarship and earned his law degree there in 1971. He first went to Washington as Chief Legislative Counsel for Senator John Tower, concentrating on energy matters. Later, he became Deputy for Congressional Affairs at the Federal Energy Administration. In 1975, he was appointed Special Assistant for Legislative Affairs to President Gerald Ford.

Tom Loeffler

Loeffler is married to the former Kathy Crawford and they have three children. They maintain their Texas residence on the South Fork of the Guadalupe River near Hunt.

Uni-sex insurance delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to stop insurance companies from writing sex-biased policies may further the cause of equality but Congress should consider the possible high costs of the proposal, a General Accounting Office report says.

The GAO also recommends lengthening the transition period between the measure's enactment and its effective date from the proposed 90 days to at least a year. Individual insurance contracts should be exempted from the bill, the GAO added.

The report, released Monday, was the congressional auditing agency's analysis of "unisex" insurance legislation, which would bar insurance companies from setting rates on the basis of sex.

The report said important social issues are addressed by the legislation but that Congress "must consider both the social gains associated with furtherance of the principle of equal treatment as put forth" in the bills "and the possible costs which would accompany its enactment."

Women's groups have backed the similar Senate and House bills while insurance groups have opposed unisex insurance.

"The administrative costs would be substantial, even if the transition period were as long as 12 to 18 months," the GAO report said. "Most of these administrative costs could be avoided if the bill did not apply to existing individual insurance contracts."

The House Energy and Commerce Committee has passed the bill but only after approving an amendment that the bill's sponsors said would defeat the entire purpose of the legislation by exempting private insurance. Rep. Norman F. Lent, R-N.Y., said the committee "did have the benefit of the draft" of the GAO report before acting on the bill.

The report estimated that the bill "would be likely to increase unfunded liabilities by $7.7 billion to $15.1 billion in private and public pension plans." An unfunded liability is that which exists without a corresponding assets.

Natura Energy Corp. announces net loss

MIDLAND — Natura Energy Corp. announced a net loss of $920,000, or $.03 per share, on operating revenues of $489,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1983. In the prior year the company reported a net loss of $212,000, or $.01 per share, on revenues of $804,000.

Revenues were down as a result of a 30 percent decrease in oil and gas sales to $364,000 with gains on conveyances of unproved properties and drilling arrangements decreasing 80 percent to $37,000. Oil and gas sales were negatively affected by the general decline in oil and gas prices and declining production from older properties. Also contributing to the net loss was a 31 percent increase in total costs and expenses. This increase relates to the $436,000 impairment expense provided on the company's undeveloped lease inventory and an $80,000 bad debt expense.

The company also reported that at the end of March, it sold substantially all of its remaining interest in the East Texas Prospect, including its interest in the previously completed Alabama-Coushatta No. 1-9 well, in Polk County, Texas for $943,600 and simultaneously received 2,970,000 shares were received from the purchasing company, which had obtained these shares from the president of Natura Energy for a cash consideration and certain oil and gas property rights in the acquired property. The proforma effect of this transaction on the company's Dec. 31, 1983 Balance Sheet, assuming the entire $200,000 in escrow is received, would be to increase working capital from a negative $261,000 to a positive $683,000.

Natura Energy also announced the resignation of Chris F. Bosecker as president effective March 22, 1984, the subsequent election of Larry A. Stapp, formerly vice president and secretary, as its new president and the election of Thomas G. Newman to fill the unexpired term of Bosecker as director.

"As president of the Midland Board of Realtors, I urge all citizens of Midland to help us celebrate Private Property Week," Newsom said.

Natura Energy also announced that its bank debt which was $636,000 at the beginning of 1983 was reduced to $200,000 at year's end, and was completely paid down at the end of the first quarter on March 31, 1984.

RIBBON CUTTING

Gardski's formally open

Formal ribbon cutting ceremonies were held recently at Gardski's Restaurant and Bar, Loop 250 and Midkiff at Courtyard at Midland Park Mall. Members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and M-Squad and Gardski's owner Bob Skibell were among those present.

In a speech during the ceremony, Skibell said, "We view Midland as a very unique and dynamic city and have tried to capture those same qualities in the atmosphere and decor of our new restaurant."

Skibell described the restaurant's decor as late art nouveau-early art deco. "We wanted to project a feeling of richness in the restaurant, even to a point of using ash and birch woods throughout all phases of the construction," he said.

Headquartered in Lubbock, the original Gradski's opened in 1976. Skibell also operates other restaurants in Amarillo and Abilene.

The new Midland location is managed by Jerry Steen and will employ about 90.

Dollar up; Gold little changed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar advanced early today amid investor talk of higher U.S. interest rates. Gold was little changed.

A big factor in the dollar's strength was the prediction by Henry Kaufman, chief economist at the New York investment house Salomon Brothers, that the U.S. prime rate would rise to 13.5 percent by the end of the year. The rates represents the interest American banks charge their best corporate borrowers.

His remarks Monday in Detroit followed a 12 percent hike to 9 percent of the U.S. Federal Reserve discount rate — which it charges member banks for loans — last Friday.

IRA'S ARE EVERYWHERE.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Amoco wildcat opens new Strawn pay zone

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Amoco Production Co., Levelland, has completed a wildcat, the 9 W.G. McMeans for 303 bopd flowing. It is a new field designation for Amoco.

The well was drilled as a replacement well for Amoco's No. 4 well which had been producing in the Strawn C-l pay zone. It was drilled to the Ellenburger, a TD of 7851, plugged back to 7180 after the lower zones proved unpromising. It was completed in the Strawn with perforations at intervals between 7157-7169 ft. Formation tops were defined as: Wolfcamp 4930, Strawn 6866, Mississippi 7326.

The well tested 303 bopd flowing on initial production, following an acid cleanup with 250 gals. Choke was 29/64 and gravity 40.1 API.

The well is surrounded by Strawn production. One Strawn well has been completed to the north of the Amoco site, and Marshall R. Young is also drilling to the north. Amoco drilled the well in search of new pay zones, following depletion of production in the Strawn C-1.

Wildcat locations

Wildcat locations have been staked in Glasscock and Kent counties.

The No.l. Johnson, has been staked in Kent County by Newport Petro Inc. of Dallas. The location is 660 ft. from the north and east lines of Section 51, Block 5, H&GN survey, 15 miles northwest of Clairemont. It will be drilled to a total depth of 8100 ft.

L.R. French Jr., Midland, has staked the No.l Brunson, a wildcat oil test 13 miles northwest of Garden City in Glasscock, County. The well is located 467 ft. from the east and west lines of Section 13, Block 36, T&P survey. It will be drilled to a TD of 8600 ft.

The proposed well is one location away from the Weyman No. 1 drilled by L.R. French Jr., which was completed as an oil producer in the Wolfcamp. The Brunson well will also be drilled to the Wolfcamp.

Martin producers

Martin County has gained three producers, two oil and one gas.

Henry Petroleum Corp. drilled the No. 1 Wainwright '84' in the Sale Ranch (Strawn) field, located 660 from the east and north line of Section 43, Block 37, T&P survey, 6 miles southwest of Ackerly. The well was completed for 886 bopd and 218 Mcfd, pumping 36 bwpd on a 12/64 inch choke.

Drilled to a TD of 10,850 and plugged back to 10,205, perforations were shot at intervals between 10,084-10,150 ft.

The well in a one location step out from a John J.. Cox well in the field. The Strawn in the area is spotted.

Valero Production Co., Midland, potentialed its No. 1 Blagrave 'A' for 2 Mmcfd. The well located 660 ft. from the north line and 467 ft. from the east line of Section 43, Block 34, T&P survey, 6 miles southwest of Ackerly, was drilled to 10,850 Ft., plugged back to 10,205 ft. and completed through perforations between 10,084-10,205 ft.

Formation tops were established at 8,210 Dean, 9,908 Strawn, 10,052 Chester, 10,429 lower Miss., 10,700 Woodford, 10,780 Fusselman.

Tom Brown Inc. has completed a good producer for its own account. The No. 2 Holt Ranch 'A' completed for 1,136 bopd pumping 94 bwpd. It is surrounded by production and is a typical well for that part of the Spraberry trend.

Amoco selects Brown & Root to contract CO2 plant

HOUSTON — Amoco Production Co. has anounced the selection of Brown & Root Inc., Houston, as prime contractor for the engineering, procurement and construction of Amoco's first carbon dioxide (CO2) extraction plant for use in field scale CO2 tertiary recovery installations. Brown & Root will perform all project management functions and construct the plant, utilizing The Pritchard Co., Kansas City, Mo., for the detailed engineering.

The new plant, named the Mallet CO2 Removal Plant (MCRP), will be located in the Slaughter Field, Hockley County, Texas, about four miles west of Sundown.

The purpose of the plant is to remove CO2 from an estimated 100 MMCFD of Co2-rich casinghead gas produced from Amoco's Slaughter Estate, Central Malet and Frazier Units. The plant process design was developed by Amoco and uses a solvent system to remove the CO2 from the hydrocarbon stream, and to remove H2S from the CO2 stream before the CO2 is reinjected. Amoco will begin CO2 flood operations in these units in January, 1985.

Construction of the plant is expected to begin in May, 1984, with a planned startup in May, 1985.

In addition to the plant construction bid, Amoco has previously awarded the bids for the inlet compressors and CO2 recompressors to be installed at the MCRP. Ingersoll Rand Co. was awarded the bid to supply three 6500-BHP three-stage electric inlet compressors and three 7000-BHP five-stage electric compressors.

Amoco will operate the MCRP with 100 percent working interest.

Amoco Production Co. is the exploration and production subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

Proper attention still not given concerning core problems

AUSTIN — Recent congressional natural gas legislation proposals still don't give proper attention to core problems concerning the future of the country's gas supplies, according to Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace.

"The suppostion that price controls provide exploration and production incentives, and hence assure adequate supply, is without any basis of analytical support," Wallace said. "In fact, historic evidence that the contrary is true is overwhelming."

Wallace made his remarks in a letter to Texas members of the U.S. House of Representatives. In particular, the RRC Chairman referred to a proposal by Rep. Phillip Sharp of Indiana.

He noted that the Sharp proposal states that the "maintenance of price controls on certain natural gas is needed to protect consumers and to provide incentives for the exploration and production of adequate new supplis of natural gas."

"Although it is disguised as a consumer protection measure, Americans would be worse off than before and forever unforgiving of the shortsightedness of its legislators," Wallace wrote. "Price controls give short-term relief on price at the longer-term expense of supply."

Wallace described the natural gas system in the U.S. as "racked with extensive and wide-ranging market disorders." He traced the source of the disorders to the dual inter-intrastate market and said the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 with its diverse price categories of gas increased the problems.

"The fundamental weakness of te Sharp proposal ad its predecessors," he said, "is that it completely ignores the root causes of the market disorders and sticks with the political expendiency of price control."

He also noted, however, that the Sharp proposal includes a welcome repeal of incremental gas pricing, as well as power plant and industrial fuel use restrictions. "These provisions constitute the only positive aspects of the proposal," Wallace said.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

HNG, Southland sign pact with Petro-Lewis

HNG Oil Co., a subsidiary of Houston Natural Gas Corp., (HNG), and Southland Royalty Co. has announced the signing of an agreement with Petro-Lewis Corp. and certain of its affiliates and managed partnerships for the purchase of producing properties located offshore Texas and in the Permian Basin of West Texas. HNG Oil and Southland Royalty estimate total proven reserves to be 43.8 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 1.75 million barrels of oil.

The agreement, effective May 1, calls for HNG Oil and Southland Royalty equaly to own undivided fractional working interests in 362 wells on 57 leases in 10 different fields at a total cost of approximately $84.4 million or $42.2 million ach. Closing of the transaction is subject to the satisfaction of customary conditions.

The purchase includes all related surface producing facilities, salt water disposal systems, and certain natural gas gathering and liquids pipeline relatedto the offshore Texas properties.

DOE manual available to public

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — The Department of Energy has published a comprehensive reference manual on the storage stability of light hydrocarbon fuels. With this information, scientists and engineers can preduct the stability of fuels stored under different conditions and temperatures.

With increased sophistication of the modern engine, the quaity of fuels becomes more and more important. Furthermore, the quality of fuels is interrelated to the stability or instability of the fuels. Trends toward use of ower quaity fossil fuel feedstocks (coal, oil shale, etc.) also call for a better understanding of fuel stability when fuel is stored.

J.W. Goetzinger and D.W. Brinkman of the National Institute for Petroleum and Energy Research, formerly the Bartlesvile Energy Technology Center, and C.J. Thompson, former DOE scientist and now a petroleum technology consultant, have compiled "A Review of Storage Stability Characteristics of Hydrocarbon Fuels, 1952-82," which DOE has published as report Nl. DOE/BETC/IC-83/3.

Single copies of the report are available free from the DOE Bartlesville Project Office.

The report includes information on storage stability of gasoline, diesel fuel, jet fuel, fuel oil, altrnative or synfuel, crude oil, and pure hydrocarbons.

State-of-the-art information about fuel storage stability is presented along wih numerous references and abstracts.

MidCon to complete exploration activities

LOMBARD, Ill. — MidCon Corp. has announced plans to complete the consolidation of its Mid-Continent and Rocky Mountain oil and gas exploration activities. On April 30, Harper Oil Co., based in Oklahoma City, and Buckhorn Petroleum Co., headquartered in Denver, will be merged under the Harper Oil Co. name.

Harper Oil and Buckhorn have been operating in tandem since last fall under William L. Rader, president of both units, who will continue to head the reorganzed compay.

Fincher Engineering exclusive agent

HOUSTON — ATEL, S.R.L., based in Rome, Italy, has appointed Fincher Engineering Co. as their exclusive agent for North and South America.

ATEL designs and manufactures electronic devices to monitor corrosion in oil and gas production, pipelines, steam boilers and other industrial processes.

Two Midlanders approved for licensure

AUSTIN — Two Midland individuals have been approved for licensure as professional engineers by the State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers.

Those approved were Jason Dale Baley, of 2406 Auburn Place, and Ahmed Mohamed Omar, of 2901 Northtown Place, the board reports.

Upon filing a copy of their official Texas engineer's seals with the board, Bailey and Omar will be licensed by the state and may engage in the practice of engineering. The board approved 52 individuals for licensure recently.

1,863 drilling permits issued in U.S.

DENVER — A total of 1,863 permits to drill wells for oil or gas were issued in the United States during the week ended March 30, Petroleum Information Corp. has reported.

The number is below the 1,944 permits issued the previous week — a decrease of .2 percent.

Prime interest rate touchy subject

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — When the prime interest rate goes up, as it has twice in the past month, people naturally start asking whether further increases are in store.

Probably the best answer, however disappointing it may be, is that nobody knows for certain.

The prime rate is a sensitive subject for borrowers and lenders alike. It can be a touchy question politically, as well. If the interest rate on, say, bonds changes, there is no one to blame because the rate is set by an open market. But in the case of the prime rate, there is a group of people — bankers — to point a finger at.

The prime rate is the publicly stated rate banks use in formulas for calculating interest charges on many new and existing loans to their customers. Beyond its immediate impact on those borrowers, a change in the prime can exert a strong psychological influence on expectations about the future direction of all interest rates.

But its ups and downs can also lead to some misapprehensions. The prime rate is what is known on Wall Street as a "lagging indicator" of trends in open-market interest rates. That is, when interest rates generally rise or fall, the prime is often one of the last rates to reflect that change.

So most economists and analysts of the credit markets pay little attention to the prime rate as a predictor of what the future course of interest rates will be. The fact that the prime has gone from 11 to 11½ percent, and then to 12 percent, in the past few weeks, does not necessarily increase the likelihood that it will be 13 or 14 percent in the near future.

Like their customers, banks have to pay interest when they borrow money. Their interest costs are a central factor in determining where they set their prime rates.

To assess what is likely to happen to the prime rate in the future, analysts watch rates in the open market where banks borrow. These rates had been rising for some time before the prime recently began to move up.

In addition to the "cash" market for money, there is now a large "futures" market for money, where investors and speculators trade futures contracts on Treasury bonds, mortgage-backed securities and more. These markets tell something about where the experts think interest rates are headed.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

FDIC doesn't want deposit brokerage

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Why do FDIC and FSLIC want to do away with deposit brokerage?

A. Because a number of banks and S&Ls that have failed were loaded with deposits placed by brokerage firms and other "money brokers."

Doyle

When an insured bank or S&L goes belly up, FDIC or FSLIC has to pay off each depositor up to $100,000. Depositors don't lose anything — up to the limits of federal insurance coverage — but FDIC or FSLIC has its resources dented.

• • •

A. Do FDIC and FSLIC have enough money available to make good on all insured deposits? If not, what is the obligation of taxpayers through the U.S. government. How soon will I get my money if my bank or S&L fails? What interest am I guaranteed while waiting for my money?

A. The combined reserves of FDIC and FSLIC total approximately $21 billion. That's about 1 percent of the deposits insured. In the unlikely event more would be needed, both agencies can borrow from the U.S. Treasury — meaning taxpayers would pick up the tab.

When a federal deposit agency has to liquidate a bank or S&L, depositors are paid off promptly, usually within a few days. More often, the failed institution's business is transferred to a different bank or S&L, where your money would continue to earn the same interest as before.

• • •

Q. I read about the failure of a S&L in a different state. The story said FSLIC did not cover all depositors up to $100,000. What is the different coverage by FSLIC from the one state to other states?

A. None. You read wrong. Both FSLIC and FDIC coverage is nationwide and is $100,000 per depositor in all states. It must be stressed that no one has ever lost dime number one in any account with either FSLIC or FDIC coverage.

I suspect you read about the failure of some depository institution that had neither FSLIC or FDIC coverage. Some states have separate state agency insurance, which has proved adequate.

However, some S&L, banks and other depository institutions have neither federal nor state insurance coverage. Within the past few months, a couple of "industrial banks," which are somewhat similar to S&Ls, went under and their depositors took financial beatings.

Libertarian hopeful spreading the word

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Bergland

ODESSA — Forget the reaching crowds, endless rallies and entourages of secret service agents, public relations men and groupies part and parcel of the circus-like atmosphere of traditional presidential campaigns.

One candidate is running without these props, riding commercial airlines along with the common folk and depending on constituents for transportation at stops along the way.

David Bergland touched down at Midland Regional Airport to spend Monday morning in the Petroplex. He answered press questions until 10 a.m., spoke before a gathering at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin at 10:30 a.m., then caught a plane out at 11:45 p.m. headed for Dallas.

This is more than a presidential campaign for Bergland. While seeking the presidency, he is spreading the word about libertarianism (though distant, the third largest political party in the U.S.) to people across the country.

The cause has carried him to 28 states since his nomination in October. He is pushing himself as a candidate, but the bottom line is the attractiveness of the party's doctrines when compared to those of the two parties in power.

"I'm much more qualified than the other candidates running," said Bergland, a 48-year-old law professor from California and the Libertarian Party's presidential candidate for 1984.

Drawing the line separating him from his opponents, Bergland said "They look at you and me and everyone else as a means to their own ends." Following the Libertarian way of thinking, he promised to respect each individual's rights, rather than considering them "a national resource for any policy (office holders) can agree on."

Bergland — who is still in pursuit of his first political victory in his fifth try on the national level — does not see experience in public office as plus.

"The longer time you spend there, the less desirable you would be for the position," he said, pointing to what he called "an observable tendency" in experienced politicians to become more and more detached from the real world and lose concern for individual rights.

Denying that Democrats or Republicans have any basic policy, Bergland said "They have a basic motivation to keep control of the government machinery and to use it to do favors for themselves and their friends at the expense of the rest of us."

Libertarian candidates' campaigns are based on the promise to "respect the right of individuals to control their own lives," he said.

Midland Bahais

Representatives of the Midland Bahai Spiritual Assembly Dale Fowler, left, David Fly and Naghmeh Fly discuss the problems faced by members of the Bahai faith in Iran. A relative of Mrs. Fly is in prison in Iran.

Midlanders have personal ties to Iran

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Most Americans don't pay much attention to Iran anymore.

More than three years have passed since the hostage crisis ended, and the once-familiar television images of frowning Iranian clerics, chanting crowds and burning American flags have long since given way to film footage of fresher outrages.

The apathy may be less pronounced here in Midland, where the oil-based local economy could be strongly affected by events in Iran. But for Midland's Naghmeh Fly and her family, the connection is even more personal.

Mrs. Fly, 26, is of Iranian descent. She is also a Bahai, a member of a faith which originated in Iran and has always been considered a heretical Islamic sect by that country's fundamentalist Moslem clergymen. For that reason, things have never been particularly pleasant for Iranian Bahais, but when the Ayatollah Khomeini came to power in 1979, the sectarian prejudices of the Moslem clerics were enshrined as official government policy.

For Naghmeh Fly and other American Bahais, the hostage crisis has never ended.

"My mother's cousin is in prison, and they're after my aunt," says Mrs. Fly. "My uncle had to leave the country, but his wife was not allowed to leave."

Since Khomeini's regime was established, 150 Bahais have been executed simply for being Bahais, says Mrs. Fly's husband David, 30, the chairman of the Midland Bahai Spiritual Assembly.

"Thousands are in jail, thousands have been expelled from their jobs, and their children have been thrown out of school," says Fly. "Bahais are defenseless, innocent victims. There are no trials, no attorneys, their property is confiscated, the holiest Bahai shrine was razed and turned into a parking lot. They even make them pay for the bullets they use to shoot them with."

The United States Senate condemned the Iranian government in June 1982 for its "discrimination and brutal executions" directed against the estimated 300,000 Iranian Bahais, and President Reagan issued an appeal in May 1983 against the planned executions of 22 prominent Bahais. Khomeini, in confirming the death sentences, commented that Reagan's appeal was further proof of the Bahais' guilt.

The Bahais have had problems with Iranian Moslems since their faith was founded in 1844.

"We believe in progressive revelation," says Dale Fowler, 31, the treasurer for the Midland congregation. "We believe that all religions are one."

Bahais believe that God has revealed aspects of himself to different peoples at different times through a series of prophets which includes Buddha, Christ and Mohammed, and culminates with the Iranian prophet Baha'ullah. This puts them at odds with Moslems, who recognize no prophet after Mohammed.

Bahais believe in equality of the sexes, universal education, abstention from alcohol, a universal language and universal federated government. They also are committed to non-resistance and non-involvement in politics, which makes it harder for them to effectively resist persecution.

"That's why it's so important for American Bahais to speak out," says Fly. "The international outcry has helped."

Fly is chairman of the Midland Bahai community, but his position does not correspond to that of a priest or minister, because Bahais have no clergy. Originally from Odessa, he now lives in Midland and teaches at Lee High School. His wife is 26, an instrument engineer who originally moved to the area to attend Odessa College.

There are 11 adults and nine children in the Midland Bahai community, which was established in 1977 (a slightly larger Odessa community has been active since the 1960s). America has the second largest Bahai community in the world after Iran, but the faith has some adherents in almost every country.

The Bahais' world headquarters are in Haifa, Israel, a coincidence which explains some of the Iranian Moslems' animosity toward their faith. (Iranian Bahais are often accused of being Zionist spies.)

But Fly says the Iranian clergymen "are using the Bahais as a scapegoat to turn attention from their own problems. They're using this to consolidate their position."

Despite the efforts of American Bahais to help their co-religionists in Iran, the prospects are discouraging for any drastic change in the attitude of the Iranian government.

"We don't know, every time we turn around we just get more bad news," says Fly. "It just gets worse and worse."

Commissioners place library plans on hold

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Young

An assault from the library front hit the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday.

But there was only stalemate — no retreat, no advances.

Mary Jane Young, chairman of the nine-member advisory board of the Midland County Public Library, had asked the commissioners to hire architects James Rhotenberry and Andrew Hemphill at $50 an hour for a maximum fee of $3,750 to prepare a "construction cost analysis." This would be part of formulating plans on proposed renovations, expansions or repairs of the 1957-vintage library and "any other alternatives proposed by the advisory board."

The court held Ms. Young's request in abeyance since the county already has retained another architect, Walter Pate.

"He (Pate) is holding back right now (on the library project)," said

(See COMMISSIONERS, Page 2C)

Tricia Boyd and daughter, Lindsay, of Midland, enjoy some togetherness during Monday's singing performance by "Up With People." The group is helping raise funds for Midland High School's band, which has been invited to participate in next year's Rose Bowl Parade.

Ector County to pay off more than $4.4 million

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County will be paying off more than $4.4 million in interest and principal over the next 15 years as a result of a decision Monday morning by County Commissioners to sell $2.3 million in revenue bonds.

Interest on the bonds, sold to First City National Bank of Austin, came to nearly the amount of revenue the sale will produce for county use.

Along with the $2.3 million principal the county will be paying off until 1999, interest payments totaling $2,151,800.41 must be doled out to retire the debt.

Improvements the bond revenues will pay for include:

— $1.134 million for a three-story, 20,000-square-foot addition to the current courthouse.

— $594,000 for remodeling of the existing building.

— $188,000 for a new telephone system.

— $185,000 to upgrade the county jail, which is under scrutiny by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

— $134,000 in architectural fees.

— $50,000 for demolition of a building along the block just south of the courthouse, with this property to be used for expanding parking facilities.

— $15,000 for legal fees and the percentage charged by the investment bankers managing the bond sale.

The interest rate the county will be paying on the bonds will average 9.29 percent. Despite the county's recent financial troubles, including two sets of budget cuts in the past year, its bond rating remained "AA," avoiding the added expense a higher interest rate would have meant.

County Auditor Dan Ramirez estimated the county would be paying an average of $375,000 each of the next 15 years to retire the $4.4 million debt. The funds can come from revenues earned from county services or taxes.

Odessan sentenced for making false statement

From Staff Reports

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton on Monday sentenced a 41-year-old Odessa man to two years in prison for making a false statement in purchasing a firearm from a pawn shop and accepted guilty pleas from two others.

"I knew I was breaking the law," Eduardo M. Melendez Jr. told the judge.

Last month, he had pleaded guilty to making the false statement by indicating he had not previously been convicted of a felony. "...I did wrong."

In another case, Gwendolyn Jean Clark, 21, of Saragosa and formerly of Odessa pleaded guilty to misapplying investment funds in excess of $100 on July 28, 1983, when she was employed by Home Savings Association in Odessa.

The judge asked her why she took the funds. "You knew it was wrong."

"I needed some money to fix my car and (thought) that would be the easiest way to come up with it," she said. "I was going to pay it back with my paycheck."

Commented Bunton: "You were availing yourself of a loan without talking to anybody about it?"

The judge noted that the woman could be sentenced up to five years in prison, fined $5,000 and ordered to pay restitution.

Mark R. Dodd, 23, of Odessa pleaded guilty to possessing a Plainfield .30-caliber carbine which had been altered to fire automatically as a machine gun. Court evidence indicated the carbine had not been registered to him in the National Firearms Registration and Transfer Record and that he had shown the carbine to a federal undercover agent.

Dodd and Ms. Clark are to be sentenced at noon May 7.

These no ordinary currents, but 'Winds of War'

Two things are synonymous with April — the announcing of Academy Award winners and Midland dust storms. Now that the Oscar winners have been announced so should we prepare for another dust storm.

When dust blows on the city it seems as if I am in a bad movie — perhaps a remake of the tornado scene in the Wizard of Oz.

These are no ordinary currents. These are the Winds of War — so powerful that the element seems to lift everything from its prior existence. Addresses seem to change in a twinkling of an eye. When I walk down the street, papers are ripped from my hands only to be Gone with the Wind.

The particles clog my nasal passages, while just The Right Stuff forms in my teeth as True Grit.

The wind makes the Sound of Music as if The Jazz Singer is in the background whistling his deadly tune.

I shudder when I hear that a storm is suddenly approaching. I don't know why. I should realize that Midland weather is unpredictable with The Big Chill in the morning, dust at High Noon yet peace and tranquility In the Heat of the Night.

I fear the dust because it seems to grab me with its Jaws and penetrate my skin like The Sting.

When I know a storm is on its way the only thing I want to do is close my door, stay inside and vow never to leave the house until Mother Nature finishes her exhalation upon the city.

If you are like me, dust storms put you in the most irate mood. You usually become lazy because nothing's Going Our Way.

I simply become idle because of the Dog Day Afternoon. As a result, I miss my important activities.

— I don't jog around the park, I don't eat out and I won't visit my friends.

— I can't raise my windows; I won't water the yard; I can't wear a hat and most importantly I will not wear a full skirt.

— I refuse to go bike riding; I can't go swimming and I don't leave my car windows down.

— I shouldn't wear a new hairstyle; I can't go fly a kite and I hesitate to breathe when I'm caught outside.

I need to be Trading Places with persons of other cities who don't have the wind problems, such as New York, New York.

Once the storm is here, I pray for a temporary Deliverance from The Good Earth. I also ask that the Tender Mercies be bestowed on the city.

Dust storms are nothing to laugh about. I've heard of instances when doors have been removed from their hinges, windows ripped from their frames and trees removed from their Roots.

Staying Alive is the most important thing to me at this point. I want to take time out and smell The Rose. I don't want to be 'pushing up' The Lilies of the Field.

Maybe I take storms too seriously. But when I see dust forming On Golden Pond I become upset and think about The Way We Were in Atlanta. In April, everything is beautiful there.

In Midland, there's no place to hide during a wind storm. Every section of the city is covered with dust. It's not just an occurrence in east Midland but it's a West Side Story, too.

Ecclesiastes states that there's a time for everything and a season for every activity; and if there really is a woman and Man For All Seasons I'm not anxious for the arrival of the next dust season.

I'm not looking forward to the Same Time Next Year, because the dust will be back. But I will be anxiously awaiting the glamour and excitement of the next Academy Awards — where almost always A Star is Born.

Commissioners put plan on hold

County Judge Bill Ahders, "because of our problems with the FDIC (Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.)."

However, the commissioners said they would check with Pate, who is involved in county jail plans, on Ms. Young's proposal.

Members of the advisory board are on a steering committee that is proposing suggestions to the commissioners for 3-, 5- and 10-year library plans and for dealing with current needs, such as replacing the aging boiler and air-conditioning cooling tower. The commissioners already have ordered replacement of the tower and are planning to install a new boiler.

"We asked everyone to share their ideas and to prioritize their suggestions," Ms. Young said. "We had many ideas suggested, such as storefront branches, permanent branches, remodeling the present facility, (and) a new central library..."

The commissioners agreed that the library does need attention.

"We are not hurting for a library as much as we are hurting for space," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

"We need help," pleaded Ms. Young.

Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis sympathized.

"We are all very familiar with what has not been accomplished so far," he said.

He referred to the FDIC's hold on former First National Bank property surrounding the library and the FDIC's claim on about $601,240 of the $701,240 which the bank paid the county for library property. The county in turn paid the city $146,091 for its share of the property; $100,000 of the $146,091 came from the $701,240 and the balance came out of the county's general fund. The FDIC lays claims to the $601,240 plus interest.

The county, however, still holds title to the library, since the county-bank arrangement had never been finalized.

"We're going to fight to the death" to provide the citizens of Midland County with "appropriate" and practical library facilities, Davis said. Facilities could include storefront libraries, branch libraries and an expansion and renovation of the existing library, he said.

During the 1981 boom, the bank had planned to help the county finance an $8.5 million library. It would be on a site near the present library and within the scheme of the bank's envisioned Eagle Plaza and its one or two 40-story towers.

But the bank failed in October 1983, and the FDIC took over the bank's assets.

Just as Ms. Young said the steering committee is having to "prioritize" suggestions, Wright noted the commissioners are setting priorities on county projects and funds. Commissioners are studying means to finance a new jail, which they have given priority.

Due to that, the course for the library today is for "spruce-up work," Wright said.

"These things have to be more or less nebulous at this point," he said.

Wright said that "if" the county had millions of dollars for a library or "if" the people of Midland County were to vote in a library bond issue then either avenue might solve the library's ills.

"If, if, if, if," he said.

Prior to First National Bank's offer via then FNB President Charles Fraser to help finance a new library, Wright said the commissioners were considering a plan to double the library's size by constructing an underground library for $1 million.

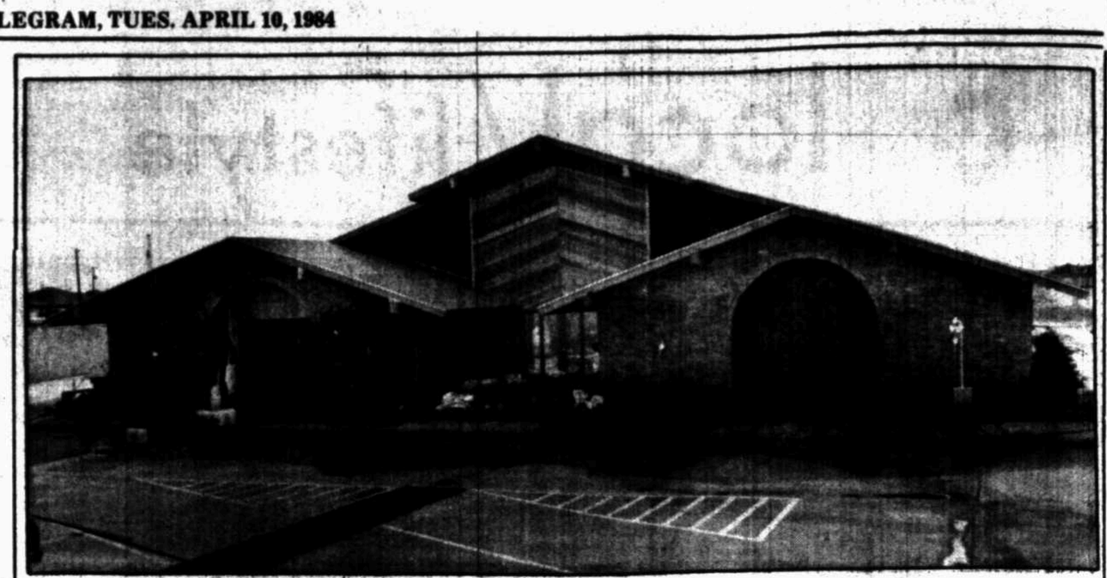
Later Monday, at the Friends of the Library's annual meeting, Wright reviewed the library's history, noted Fraser's "great and glorious" plans for the proposed library.

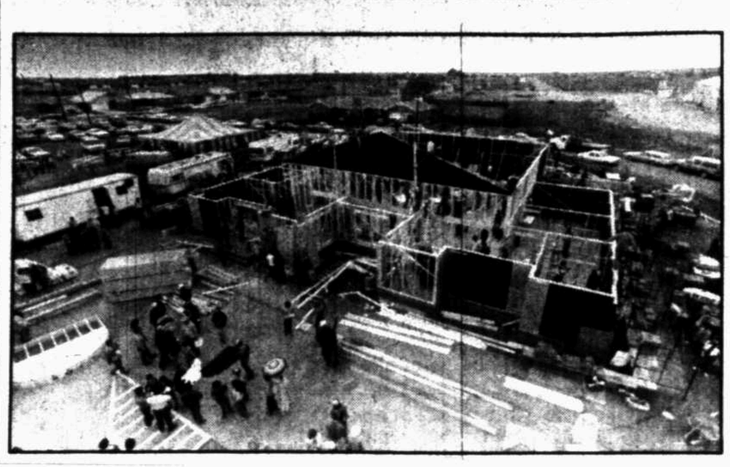
"It looked like the Taj Mahal or the city in the sky," Wright said. "We were elated; we were ecstatic."

The visions vanished with the bank's collapse.

Ms. Young said she "doesn't want to propose the most expensive way (to upgrade the library) but the best way."

She said the construction cost analysis by the architects would help determine "what's the most cost effective" plan for improving the library.





Witnessing

From foundation, left, to completed church, this Kingdom Hall at 1406 Westcliff Drive was built by the Jehovah's Witnesses in 36 hours over the weekend. More than 1,000 Jehovah's Witnesses from Texas, New Mexico and Arkansas showed up to build the church.

Terry died Sunday evening following a motorcycle-automobile accident in Whitehouse. He and his family had recently moved to that town. In Midland, Terry was a member of Christian Life Center and had attended Rusk Elementary School. He was born on March 14, 1973, in Midland.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Crane of Whitehouse; two brothers, Steve Crane of Springfield, Mo., and Jeff Crane of Whitehouse; and his grandfather, R.A. Crane of Tulsa, Okla.

Jocille Johnson

BRYAN — Jocille Hanover Johnson, 38, of Bryan, died Saturday in Temple of a lengthy illness.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today at First United Methodist Church in Bryan with the Rev. Jack Shelton and the Rev. Clifton Barnett officiating. Burial was to follow in Wheelock Cemetery, directed by Hiller Funeral Home.

She was born Nov. 6, 1945, in Bryan and had lived in Bryan 26 years. She was an artists' agent-manager and a technical writer. She was a member of the First United Methodist Church in Bryan.

Survivors include her husband, Dr. James Harvey Johnson of Bryan; her parents, Joe and Lucille Hanover of Bryan; her in-laws, Dr. A.V. and Virginia Johnson of Midland.

Memorials may be made to First United Methodist Church in Bryan and Leukemia Association of America.

Libertarian candidate spreads word about party

Positive reaction has come from those voters tired of the traditional two-party choice, said Bergland, pointing out that less than 25 percent of those eligible to vote chose to cast ballots in the 1980 presidential election.

"There's a very strong demand for an alternative to traditional politics," he said. Libertarians support the addition of a "none-of-the-above" alternative on ballots as is already done in Nevada.

"More and more people realize they are wasting their votes voting for Democrats and Republicans," Bergland said.

"Most Americans are libertarians, they just don't know it," said the candidate.

Federal income tax was begun in 1914. "Since then the federal government has grown by overwhelming proportions," he said."

He advocates abolishing this tax: "If we limit the federal government to doing its basic two functions, it's very realistic to do away with the federal income tax."

These two functions are: defense for Americans in America and protection of constitutional rights threatened by state and local governments.

"We want to remove compulsion as the premise for human relationships," said Bergland. "Taxation is theft." Also on Libertarians' least wanted list are unnecessary laws — any not providing protection of individuals from crimes against person or property.

Calling all federal election laws "incumbent protection acts," the Libertarian criticized the unfairness of the $1,000 contribution limit. While incumbents can solicit these contributions in exchange for political favors, he said a challenger is "limited to getting $1,000 from all his poor friends."

Also, Libertarians refuse matching funds accepted by major party candidates. "Federal matching funds are stolen property," said Bergland.

He estimated $100 million in matching funds taken from tax revenues would be used by the two parties during their 1984 campaigns, including $5.9 million to go toward each party's convention.

His campaign will be funded entirely by private donations, with his budget set at $1.5-$3 million.

After the stop in Dallas, Bergland was headed for the state Libertarian convention in South Carolina. Then on to other state gatherings.

When the last of the conventions is behind him in August, "We'll just go wherever we can do the most good," he said.

Ector County to pay off more than $4.4 million

Ramirez said the $275,000 budgeted for an anticipated 1984 payment would be supplemented with federal revenue sharing funds to make up the difference for the 1985 payment.

County Judge Jan Fisher cast the deciding vote, with Commissioner Julian Pr[illegible]o is seeking re-election, abstaining.

Commissioner David Childers (also up for re-election), who abstained March 12 when the county voted to issue the public notice that must be published before a bond sale can be made, was not at the Monday meeting. Voting with Fisher were Commissioners Bryan Henderson and Willie Hammond.

Almost $2.8 million has been cut from the county's current budget. More than $1.8 million was sliced in November 1983 to replenish depleted county cash reserves and avoid deficit spending, and another $934,000 was pared following the tax rollback forced by the Jan. 21 election.

The county has been instructed by the state to provide space for another district and county court that will be added in 1985. Most of the added space will be developed, along with remodeled areas, into the needed room.

The state jail commission has ordered the county to improve the jail's dilapidated plumbing system. Failure to comply with the standards could result in the facility closing, leaving the county to find another place to house its prisoners until improvements are made or an agreement can be reached.

The demolition will include the Masonic building, originally considered for renovation because of its historical value. But it was learned restoration would cost nearly $500,000. The entire block of buildings, except the Henderson Drug building and tax office, are scheduled to be cleared and replaced with a parking lot.

Ramirez estimated at the March meeting that a new phone system would pay for itself within two years. Rather than a centralized system running through a switchboard, the county now has about 200 individual lines — costing $75,000 annually in equipment expense alone.

This improvements plan represents a scaled-down version of one drawn up after department heads submitted their future space needs to Commissioners Court two years ago during budget sessions. A $5 million project — which would have included an annex — grew from these requests, but has been abandoned in the wake of the financial setbacks.

Mayors proclaim Permian Basin Lung Health Week

This week has been designated as Permian Basin Lung Health Week by the American Lung Association of Texas.

During the week, area residents will be provided an opportunity to learn more about chronic obstructive lung disease. Current methods of caring for people with lung disease, ways to prevent it and some cures will be discussed in various media presentations during the program.

The mayors of Midland and Odessa kicked off the week by signing proclamations Monday. In Midland, smoking seminars were to be presented by Cathy Harris, school nurse, this morning at Greenwood Elementary School. Midland Christian School will have a school smoking seminar at 1 p.m. Wednesday and lung disease inservices will be held in the Midland Memorial Hospital conference room at 10 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Thursday

A workshop entitled "Promoting Respiratory Health" for health care professionals will be held in the Midland College Allison Fine Arts Building Auditorium from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Friday. Because it is sponsored by Christmas Seals, no fee will be charged for the workshop. It is open to all area nurses, respiratory therapists, nursing faculty and other health care professionals.

Literature exhibits will be on display at Midland Park Mall from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. through Thursday.

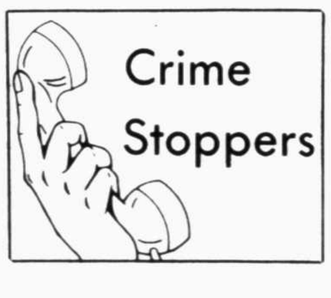
Crime Stoppers seek clues to armed robbery

Midland and Odessa Crime Stoppers are seeking information on an aggravated armed robbery that occurred in Odessa.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 in cash for information given this week only that leads to the arrest and indictment of the person responsible for the Feb. 2 robbery at Cook's Liquor Store, 2010 W. 2nd St.

Employee Chuck O'Kelley, who was working alone in the store at about 7:45 p.m., heard the door on the soda box close and went forward to wait on a 6-foot white male. The man informed him he needed a pint of Old Charter to go.

As the item was being rung up, the man pulled a pistol from under his shirt and demanded money, which was placed in a brown paper bag. The man then left the store on foot, heading west on 2nd Street.



The man was further described as in his mid-40s, weighing about 165 pounds with black hair, brown eyes and acne scars on his cheeks. He was wearing a long sleeve V-neck shirt and tan pants.

All calls made to Crime Stoppers can remain annonymous. Those with information should call Crime Stoppers in Odessa at 333-TIPS or in Midland at 694-TIPS.

Odessa police seek man's identity

ODESSA — A man taken Friday night to Medical Center Hospital after being struck by a car had still not been identified by police this morning.

Police are seeking information that would help in identification of a man hit on E. University near the University of Texas of the Permian Basin at 11:50 p.m. Friday.

He remains in critical condition, suffering from head and internal injuries, and a fractured pelvis after being thrown 91 feet in the collision.

The man is described as a Hispanic man, possibly a Cuban, in his early 40s, 5-foot, six inches to 5-foot, 7 inches tall and weighing between 150-160 lbs. He has black, medium-length hair and a receding hairline. brown eyes and a thin mustache.

Distinguishing marks include three tatoos: an eagle on the lower left arm, an anchor and chain on the lower right arm and a "jester-like face" on the lower right leg.

Anyone with information that might help in the identification of this man should contact the Odessa Police Department at 333-3641 and ask for Lt. Rusty Baker. Someone is on duty at the front desk around the clock if Baker is not in.

Quarrel sends sister to hospital

ODESSA — A quarrel between sisters Monday night ended with one in the Odessa jail and the other being taken to Medical Center Hospital.

Beverly McQueen, 22, Odessa, was treated and released Monday night from the county hospital, while her 19-year-old sister remained in jail Tuesday awaiting the filing of charges. Police have indicated both sisters want to file charges against the other.

Reports allege the two sisters had been arguing when the victim took up a cooking pan and her sister armed herself with scissors. Police arrived at the scene shortly after 8 p.m. to find the victim sitting on the curb in the parking lot outside the two sisters' residence with stab wounds to the head, right arm and stomach near the pubic region.

The sisters had reportedly argued earlier. When the victim returned home, she found her TV and clothes had been thrown out the window of their second-floor apartment. The older sister then proceeded to throw her sister's clothes out the window, setting off the fight.

Odessa youth killed in mishap

ODESSA — A teen-age Odessa youth died after the bicycle he was riding was struck by a car on West 16th Street early Monday morning.

Pronounced dead at Medical Center Hospital at 3:10 p.m. Monday was 16-year-old Paul Mussetter.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Mussetter was eastbound in the 4200 block of West 16th about 6:40 a.m. when his bicycle was hit from behind by a pickup truck driven by James Crownover, no age or street address available, of Odessa.

The boy suffered head injuries after being thrown to the shoulder of the road by the impact. Crownover was not injured.

Japanese designer likes classic 'Ivy League' look

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Kensuke Ishizu does not want to dress women like bag ladies. Kensuke Ishizu does not, as a matter of fact, want to dress women at all.

Nor does Kensuke Ishizu want to design flamboyant fashions that are so complicated that potential wearers cannot tell the front from the back.

All Kensuke Ishizu wants to do is dress American men in fabuloous suits that will make them look as if they belong in the best corporate board rooms long before they arrive there.

But what's a nice Japanese designer like Kensuke Ishizu doing designing traditional clothing at a time when to be a Japanese designer is practically synonymous with being far out, freaked out or - at the very least - unintelligible, fashion-wise? Simple, the 72-year-old acknowledged dean of Japanese menswear said during a recent interview. He is inaugurating the "fifth wave."

Ishizu is following designers like Hanae Mori, Issey Miyake, Kansai Yamamoto, Yohji Yamamoto, Matsuhiro Matsuda and Rei Kawakubo right into the hearts, minds and pocketbooks of American consumers. Ishizu, who was born in Okayama, a small city near Hiroshima, has a long list of accomplishments — achievements that have helped earn him the title Sensei, or "Master," from people like Kansai Yamamoto and Issey Miyake.

LAT Photo

Designer Kensuke Ishizu, dean of Japanese menswear, arranges one of his jackets at a New York show.

With practically no training in fashion — he learned his craft from magazines, books, newspapers and that old standby, trial-and-error — prior to, and during World War II, Ishizu worked in China, part of that time consulting with Allied forces on designs for military uniforms. Following the war, he returned to Japan where he established the Van Jacket Co. in 1953.

It was then that Ishizu virtually single-handedly introduced the buttoned-down, natural-shouldered tradition of the Ivy League to Japanese menswear.

In 1964, he became the only menswear designer to win Japan's prestigious Fashion Editor's Club award in its 27-year history. He designed the first uniforms worn by employees of Japan Airlines and the Sony Corp. — the uniform tradition is still going strong in Japanese corporations to this day — as well as the team uniforms worn by Japanese athletes competing in both the Saporro and Tokyo Olympic games.

And, like any good member of the fashion establishment, when he's not flying his custom-built gliders, golfing or skiing, Ishizu serves as an instructor and advisor to fashion schools like Tokyo's Men's Fashion School, the Gifu Design School and the Osaka School of Design.

But never mind all that. The primary question is why, in an Ishizu suit, does a vest actually look like a vest, are trousers indentifiably trousers and jackets designed with sleeves that neither button nor snap off? Simple, said Ishizu again, he's into classicism — not the confusion that's been espoused lately by some of his fellow countrymen.

"Now, many designers are coming from Tokyo with ideas that are very untraditional," he said. "They think that these untraditional things are very modern but I don't think so. There is something modern to be found in tradition. Fashion should not be a revolution, it should be an evolution.

"I don't understand who these designers (Miyake, Yamamoto, Kawakubo) are trying to sell. These people are more like artists but instead of working with paint or stone, their clothing is their art. Frequently, the result of their art is not wearable. Often it is barely functional. I believe that in order for fashion to be good, it must suit people's life-styles.

"You have to remember," he continued between sips from a bottle of beer, "that the Japanese people have only been wearing western clothing for about 40 years. We don't have a centuries-old tradition of western dress. We don't really understand what western clothing is for. Therefore it's easy for designers to do anything that they please, because there are no constraints. But a lot of this (the current wave of styles from Japan's young designers) is not fashion. It's only to get attention.

"You cannot wear this clothing. It is uncomfortable, it is bulky, it is confusing. No normal person wants to go out into the streets wearing these things. These are clothes for the young people in SoHo and on Columbus Avenue, not for Fifth Avenue. I believe that most American people want to be like the people that I see going into the stores and the restaurants on Fifth Avenue."

Still and all, when Ishizu speaks for classicism and against the avant garde, he is not speaking against innovation. Rather, he said, he favors new twists that help make clothing more beautiful and more comfortable.

And, like most of the Japanese designers now popular here, he has applied his sensitivity to color and pattern toward making suits that are just different enough to make a man feel special but never so different that his boss will stare.

"There is something good to be found in things that have lasted," Ishizu said of the way he has crafted his collection. "That's why they've lasted."

Elegance understated

Copley News Service

A great deal of advice each season is directed at women concerned about dressing fashionably. Are stripes in? Is hot pink out? Will wearing tailored suits help make you the next vice president of finance?

Jo Ann Molkenthine has her own ideas about what makes a discerning fashion statement. The 30-year-old New York custom clothing designer says:

"The true hallmark of the well-dressed woman is a look of understated elegance — flattering lines, fine fabrics and immaculate attention to fit and detail.

"Clothes shouldn't be ostentatiously expensive or excessively trendy. My clients, who range from a 29-year-old investment banker in Denver to an 87-year-old former movie actress in New York City, don't care about designer labels and aren't even all that concerned about this season's 'new look.' They are, however, very discriminating about the way garments fit."

Molkenthine does keep pace with some trends. "I've recently created a collection to coordinate with the new spring colors of L'Eggs Sheer Elegance hosiery," she says.

She recommends coordinating or contrasting hosiery depending on height. If you're under 5 feet 3 inches tall, hosiery in pale tints matching your dress and shoes will give a longer unbroken line. If you're tall, panty hose matching your shoes can provide a sharp contrast to a suit.

"Become an expert on what looks right for you," says Molkenthine, "and you'll look terrific every day."

Some additional pointers by Molkenthine for dressing with understated elegance:

— Select the best quality garments you can afford, even if it means buying fewer outfits this season.

— Choose transitional fabrics you can wear 10 months a year in a temperate climate — like wool and silk blends.

— Examine the inside of the garments for well-finished seams, skirt and jacket linings that fit smoothly. Don't court disaster by buying anything that's too tight and has skimpy seams.

— Have ready-to-wear clothes altered to fit you. A dress with an uneven hem, a jacket with one sleeve longer than the other or a skirt that binds in the waist won't look good regardless of how much you spend.

— Avoid large doses of trendy colors. A scarf or belt in an accent color like chartreuse is probably as much chartreuse as your wardrobe needs this season.

'Junior Miss' contest planned

Permian Basin Junior Miss competition will be at 7:30 p.m. June 9 at Odessa College Main Auditorium, according to Sandra Harrington, chairman of this year's event.

This competition is part of a state and national program for high school girls who are leaders in scholastic achievement, creative talents, self development and community betterment.

Permian Basin area girls can enter by attending the orientation meeting from 2-4 p.m. Sunday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Devonian Room. To qualify a contestant must be a junior in high school who is scheduled for graduation in 1985.

"Heavenly look" rises to the occasion in fashion

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PARIS — Where else will you see a bald model, a Madonna with child, Davy Crockett, Ingemar Stenmark, the Archangel Gabriel and a mummy all competing seriously for the right to represent France in the Miss Fashion contest currently being staged here?

Right now, it looks like Miss Japan has been eliminated from the top runners-up, as her oversized, atomic fallout look falls out of the running.

Haute Heaven, it seems, is replacing Haute Hell as the fashion inspiration for fall, 1984.

While individual pieces of Tokyo's rag-tag, holey-terror clothes remain valid, the shapeless shrouds associated with "the Japanese look" are a dying, if not a dead, issue here with the fashion pros.

Of all the new-wave Japanese designers who exploded on the scene here two years ago, the one who seems most likely to survive the atomic fallout is Yohji Yamamoto. Unlike many of his colleagues who continue to reissue the same shapeless, one-size-fits-all clothes they started with, Yamamoto breaks new ground. His heavy, ruglike sweaters that curl up at the hems much like real rugs are inclined to do, his pleated navy wool culottes with fullness controlled by strings tied around each pants leg, and his introduction of color — especially orange — go a long way to establish him as a designer with more than one idea.

While no one doubts the fact that the Japanese made a color — black — the fashion statement of 1983, most fashion-watchers here have been hoping for a post-black look to rise from the ashes of the post-atomic look. There is some color here, but the overall mood is still black, gray and strange. Rei Kawakubo of Comme des Garcons brightened her palette by adding a group of satin clothes in such shades as prune, orange, brit and a pinkish red. She also moved in on the body in a look that might best be described as raw-edged sweaters entangling the body in rips and rolls over matching jersey dresses with one bare arm.

Of all the Tokyo-based designers, the one who went farthest to bring the body back into focus is Junko Koshino, who literally wrapped the hips and one leg of a jersey jumpsuit in mummy-like bandages. Credit Koshino, too, with the most inventive furs of the season — a combination of fox and rubber — and the most intricate treatment of leather in slits that resemble latticework.

In the first-ever Paris fashion show witnessed by a paying public as well as the fashion professionals, Thierry Mugler proved that fashion is, indeed, theater, and can compete with rock concerts as an entertainment medium for the '80s.

His two-hour hosanna to fashion heaven was complete with a Madonna and child, saints, angels with wings, Superman, Superwoman, superskiers, wrestlers, housewives, movie stars and a crystal cathedral. In creating this new stage for Paris fashion, Mugler seemed to excite both audiences at the Salle Zenith — the 4,000 who paid about $25 each and the 2,000 retailers and press who were admitted free.

The Mugler of '84 sees the future of fashion in powdery pastels such as in his big-shouldered ski tunics and stirruped ski pants made in snowflake-patterned fake fur. The signature of this collection is the hood, and it appears on everything from Olympic ski parkas to bathrobe-sashed tweed suits. The one bald model to appear so far this season wore Mugler's shiny red Superwoman cape.

Mugler's idea of Heaven includes models with gold wings wearing strapless satin gowns, models with halos wearing violet satin hooded robes and a finale that featured American model Pat Cleveland descending from the clouds at the top of the gigantic stage in a seraphic gown of billowing chiffon. Mugler did not ignore his Hollywood look, but the Cyd Charisse numbers and the Betty Grable-fitted suits were outnumbered by his more futuristic jumpsuits and ski looks — many worn with full-length coats.

If Mugler's view of the future is heavenly — and it is — Jean Paul Gaultier sees life ahead as a circus complete with oversized ring master suits, backless sweaters for the trapeze — clown pants — clown frock coats and freak-show dresses featuring seven-inch bosom appendages shaped like nuclear warheads. Gaultier's signature is the scrunched-up look. He says he was inspired by the way sleeves look when you push them up. Picture, for instance, a long sweater dress scrunched up to form folds around the hips. Picture a long jacket so tight it looks like it's about to pop its buttons. Now scrunch it up and the excess fabric that rolls around your midsection becomes a look.

Well, to Gaultier it's a look, and to the world of children's fashion it's always been a look. By studying what kids do to their clothes in the normal course of dressing and playing, Gaultier has come up with: skirts with horizontal folds not unlike the look of pushed-up sleeves, shoes with scrunchy folds, backless dresses cut low enough to reveal red velvet scrunched-up panties, long gray lace skirts worn with big scrunched-up gray sweaters and one of the most amazing dresses of the season — a shiny gabardine creation with a button-front bodice that is cut so long it blouses into folds above the hip yoke, then bursts into bias fullness from the hips to the bottom of the calf. The dress is so constructed that the back fits smoothly, with only the front scrunching at the midsection.

Kimono wear declining in Japan

By The Associated Press

TOKYO — The elegant kimono was until about 60 years ago the everyday wear of Japanese women and is still the common dress of some elderly women. But for most women, the kimono is today worn at only the more formal occasions — New Year's, weddings and graduations — and even then can be prohibitively expensive.

"It is sad to see fewer people wear kimono," said Shinichi Kojima, general manager of the All Japan Kimono Promoting Association.

Kojima acknowledged that Japan's Westernized lifestyle has made the confining kimono impractical, but cost is another important factor in the kimono's retreat.

The industry now concentrates on silk kimono sales, at the expense of wool and cotton wear once popular for everyday use.

Kimono makers have had some success with this strategy. Despite fewer women buying kimonos, the luxury lines have kept sales at 1.8 trillion yen ($7.7 billion U.S.) annually, unchanged over the past three years.

The average kimono costs 120,000 yen ($515), Kojima said. An 11-piece set, including a silk kimono, underwear, an obi sash, zori and other necessary articles could easily go for 1 million yen ($4,290).

Even the cheaper models, at about a fifth of that cost, are equivalent to more than half the monthly income for average Japanese families.

Yet the kimono has managed to survive. Men, who exchanged their kimono for business suits more than a century ago, still enjoy slipping into a kimono, or cotton "yukata" in the summer, when they return from the office at night. Younger women continue to patronize "kimono dressing schools," where the kimono is approached as an art form and an instrument of good breeding.

According to Mrs. Shizu Naganuma, president of the Naganuma Kimono School, young women, some with no kimono of their own, are interested in the proper way to wear a kimono and the traditional customs and manners surrounding kimono-wearing occasions. That includes the right way to bow or sit on a floor cushion.

She says about 100,000 women take kimono-wearing lessons every year, many in the "bridal zone" of 22 and 23 years old.

Naganuma, one of three major kimono schools in the nation, has 26 branches throughout the nation under its direct management, Mrs. Naganuma said.

She said there were too many schools around the country to estimate their number.

Kimono's secret is simplicity

Hearst Feature Service

KYOTO, Japan —Here in a kimono factory in Japan's ancient capital city, kimono makers are fighting the inroads of Western styles, the recession and mass production.

Mitsumasa Wada, president of Koei Kogei Co. Ltd., operates a modern, five-story, glass-fronted factory in central Kyoto just outside of the Nishi Jin, the traditional center of the centuries-old kimono industry. Finished garments, many of them in the modernistic tie-dyed patterns which are Wada's specialty, adorn the walls of his showroom.

Despite the hard times that have befallen the business recently, the kimono is remarkably durable when compared with the lifespans of other fashions. Early versions were worn by Japanese men and women as early as the 6th century, but the form that has become traditional was developed in the 18th and 19th centuries.

The secret of the garment's success, according to one expert, is its simplicity: One size fits all. Its three pieces of cloth are flat and can easily be taken apart and sewn back together when the kimono needs cleaning.

The kimono almost fell victim to Japan's rush to adopt Western ways. By the 1960s, kimono wear and manufacture were at such low points that Norio Yamanaka founded the Sodo Kimono Academy to promote the use of kimonos in everyday life in Japan.

"Today, it would seem, the majority of Japanese regard the kimono as a ceremonial costume to be worn, at most, two or three times a year, and for the younger generation the kimono is little more than a relic of old Japan, having no connection with their daily life," Yamanaka writes in "The Book of Kimono."

But the Japanese still revere the kimono as a part of their heritage. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone poses for the press at leisure in a kimono. Wedding parties and social clubs will rent banquet facilities at a major hotel and all the women will wear kimonos. The men wear white ties and tails.

Price may have something to do with the reluctance of some younger Japanese to embrace the kimono. The kimonos decorating the walls of Wada's studio sell for between $30,000 and $50,000 in U.S. dollars.

"The market has changed a great deal during the last 10 years," says Mitsumi Shimizu, a kimono artist.

Is price a barrier to many young Japanese women?

"Yes, for people with fixed incomes, it is difficult," Shimizu says. "But people are starting to buy on time-payment plans."

Women may buy new kimonos when they graduate from college and when they get married. But more young women are renting kimonos for weddings instead of buying them, he said.

The health of the economy, he says, also has a big impact on the kimono market.

"In a recession, kimono sales are the first to suffer."

DEAR ABBY

Attitude important for teen-aged job hunters

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've had a clipping of your column pasted in the front of our job application book for 12 years.

Since we hire so many teen-agers, I hope some of them read it while filling out their applications. By the looks of it, I think they have. It's so dog-eared and yellowed nobody can make out the last half of it. Could you please print it again? We need a new one. Thank you. — THE GOLDEN EGG OMELET HOUSE, NOVATO, CALIF.

DEAR GOLDEN EGG: The clipping looks as though it's been fried, poached and scrambled. Here's a clean copy for you:

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a newspaper clipping that appeared in a section of the paper that very few teen-agers read.

I think it should be in your column — or maybe in the comics, where teen-agers would be sure to see it.

If you agree with me, please print it. Thank you. — MRS. E.B. CLINGNER, COVINGTON, KY.

DEAR MRS. C.: The piece appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer, in William Raspberry's column. It was written by Karen Rak, who teaches English to students at Center Junior High School in Strongville, Ohio.

Ms. Rak composed a letter (ostensibly from an employer) designed to let her youthful job seekers see themselves as they are seen. With so many young people looking for jobs now, I think this piece deserves all the exposure it can get.

"Dear Kid: Today you came to me for a job. From the look of your shoulders as you walked out, I suspect you've been turned down before, and maybe you believe by now that kids your age can't find jobs.

"But I hired a teen-ager today. You saw him. What was so special about him? Not experience; neither of you had any. Attitude, son. A-T-T-I-T-U-D-E. He did his best to impress me. That is where he edged you out.

"He wasn't dressed like Easter Sunday, but then that wasn't necessary. His clothes were clean, and he had gotten a haircut. He filled out the application form neatly and completely. He did not ask to borrow a pen. He carried his Social Security card, had basic identification and did not ask, 'What's a reference?'

"He didn't have two friends waiting for him by the pop machine. He didn't start to chew gum or smoke while being interviewed. He didn't keep looking at his watch, giving me the impression that he had something more important to do.

"He took the time to find out how we 'operate' here, and what his day-to-day tasks would be. I think he'll keep his eyes open and work for me like he'd work for himself.

"He was willing to start at that point where I could afford to pay. Someday, perhaps, he'll get to the point where he'll have more authority over others and a better paycheck.

"You know, kid, men have always had to get a job like you get a girl: case the situation, wear a clean shirt, and try to appear reasonably willing.

"Maybe jobs aren't as plentiful right now, but there are jobs. You may not believe it, but all around you employers are looking for young men and women smart enough to go after a job in the old-fashioned way.

"If you have even the vaguest idea of what I'm trying to say, let it show the next time you ask for a job. You will be head and shoulders above the rest.

"For both our sakes, get eager, will you? — THE BOSS"

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WIT'S END

Trivia usually very trivial

By ERMA BOMBECK

No one wants me on their trivia team.

They say by the time I go through the alphabet trying to resurrect a name and put my head between my knees and demand a 20-minute silence while I think . . . the evening's over.

It's a shame too because with most of the trivia questions, I was there when the original answers were given.

Actually, this trend couldn't have come at a worse time for me. During the past few years it has taken longer and longer to come up with names, places and facts. Since my husband and I are the same age and just as squirrely, our conversation has been reduced to a series of unfinished sentences where he nods and says, "I know," and he doesn't.

My problem is I've got to go through my memory bank and discard all the garbage I never use to make room for the stuff I need.

For example, my grandmother's phone number in 1936 was Adams 5817. I never called the number. She only had it for two years. It will not come back in my lifetime. It won't even be a trivia question. I don't need it.

I do need to commit to memory the phone number of my agent, whom I call at least three times a week.

I would like to toss out the names (including confirmation) of the five children who lived down the street from us 15 years ago and with whom I haven't had contact since we moved. I should like to substitute the names of my best friend's grandchildren.

You have only to play a couple of games of trivia to realize that your mind retains the dumbest things. For example, I knew the real names of every member of the "Leave It to Beaver" family . . . except the Beav. Why would I block out the name of the star and remember his mother, Barbara Billingsley, who wore a girdle to clean her oven, for God's sake?

And what kind of a human mind would allow a player to remember who discovered the Jackson Five and forget to put out the chips and the dip until the company was ready to go home?

The other night I had a great question. "Who was the Hollywood star who played the part of Melanie's baby in 'Gone With the Wind'?" I knew I had them stumped as I watched the other team huddle together in a frenzy trying to remember. When their time ran out they said, "We give up. Who was it?"

"Who was what?" I asked.

"Who was the Hollywood star who played the part of Melanie's baby in 'Gone With the Wind'?"

My mind went blank and I put my head between my knees to think.

When I raised it some time later, everyone had gone.

Radio host offers wide range of music

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Those who believe that music is a universal language are not on the same wavelength as Robert J. Lurtsema.

"But it's easier to understand another culture's music than their spoken language on first hearing," the host of National Public Radio's "Morning Pro Musica" program conceded in a recent preconcert lecture.

Since 1971, Lurtsema's dulcet voice has drifted out from WGBH radio's Boston studio to soothe an estimated 500,000 New Englanders seven days a week.

His eclectic taste in music means he'll play something that appeals to some of his listeners all of the time.

But just as Lurtsema's public is learning to appreciate a wide range of music, so is their radio host.

"My taste is not as catholic as the program might indicate," he said.

Occasionally, Lurtsema will draw from prepared lists for historical events to highlight, such as the birthdays of composers.

"With the biggies we generally do something big anyway, as we did this morning with Mozart," he told a lecture hall audience at Wesleyan University. on the 228th anniversary of the birth of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

But "every day's different," he said, and gave for example Jan. 26, a national holiday in both India and Australia.

Most of his listeners are unaccustomed to the dissonance of Indian music, he said, and "Australia has no baroque tradition."

"It meant that we had a five-hour program coming up that was going to be challenging to our listeners."

Lurtsema worried that people would call to complain about hearing the music, but none did.

Magazine aimed at divorced persons

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Len Harris is emphatic.

"The divorced person is not a single person," he says, and that's why he started "Single Again," the magazine for people trying to survive in the wake of a shattered marriage.

"Once you have been married, your attitudes, your ambitions, your philosophies change," the 59-year-old former scriptwriter and newsman said in a telephone interview from his Union City apartment-office.

Some six years ago — about the same time he was going through his own divorce — Harris created a 40-page monthly magazine for the divorced.

At first, he called it "Divorce," but the outcry about the depressing appellation caused the change to the more upbeat "Single Again." The magazine now has a circulation of about 5,000, mostly in the suburbs south and east of San Francisco.

Harris bills "Single Again" as "the only magazine published exclusively for the divorced, separated and the widowed."

It is a mix of advice, humor, the latest in family law and — as with all magazines dealing with singles — ads from the likes of "Romantic Italian Male," "Shy Lonely Virgo," "Sincere W-M" and "Overweight But Working on It," who are willing to try again, if not marriage, at least some kind of relationship.

Harris, a native of England who's been in the United States for more than 20 years, says the magazine is designed to help divorced people regain self-esteem and resume happy, productive lives.

"The main message is, 'We know you're hurt, we know you're raw, we know you're bleeding. You think you're alone and suspended out there in space, but you're not. There are many survivors out there'," he says.

In addition, there is a list of support groups for the divorced — and the ads.

Official: Rhetoric chilled relations with Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of President Reagan's commission on strategic forces says relations between the United States and Soviet Union are as bad as at any time in recent years, but chances of a nuclear war are declining.

Retired Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft also said Monday that Reagan's harsh criticism of the Kremlin, particularly at the start of his administration, had helped chill relations between the superpowers.

"The administration rhetoric has certainly given the Soviets a negative view of the possibilities of dealing with this administration," Scowcroft said.

He said "prospects are not bright" for progress in nuclear arms negotiations before the presidential elections in November. "They were not interested in doing anything which would contribute to the re-election of the president," Scowcroft said.

Scowcroft talked with reporters at the White House after briefing Reagan on his recent trips to the Soviet Union and China and discussing the commission's final report. Scowcroft reportedly had carried a letter from Reagan to the Kremlin's leaders, but did not deliver it because he was refused an audience with any senior Soviet officials.

"It was a very negative visit," Scowcroft said, refusing to elaborate.

In a written statement after meeting with Scowcroft, Reagan said he and leaders of the State and Defense departments, as well as the Joint Chiefs of Staff and other agencies, strongly endorsed the commission's final report. In that report, the commission urged Reagan to exercise "extreme caution" in allowing engineering development work on so-called "Star Wars" systems to protect against incoming nuclear missiles.

Reagan said his plan was limited to technology research. "This program is consistent with all treaty obligations and there is no conflict between our initiative and the recommendations made by the commission."

Scowcroft, responding to reporters' questions, said "It is not my impression that anything will happen very soon" in nuclear arms control talks with the Soviets. The Soviets have refused to resume negotiations in protest of the deployment of new American missiles in Europe.

Asked if he expected any progress before the presidential elections in November, Scowcroft said, "I think the prospects are not bright...They were not interested in doing anything which would contribute to the re-election of the president."

In an interview published in Pravda on Monday, Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko indicated he sees no prospects of a superpower thaw during this year but rejected the idea that Moscow was influenced by the American elections.

Assessing relations between the superpowers, Scowcroft said, "If you compare the political or psychological atmosphere between the two powers, it's as bad as it's been in my memory.

Jackson unhappy over timing of announcement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Rev. Jesse Jackson says he isn't happy about the government's announcement a day before today's Pennsylvania primary that it wanted $700,000 from an educational group he once headed.

And a lawyer for the group says the organization isn't ready to concede that it owes the money.

John H. Bustamante, counsel for PUSH for Excellence Inc., said the group will challenge claims made Monday by the Department of Education that it should return $708,431 to the government because the money was spent without proper justification or records.

At a news conference called at the group's Chicago office shortly after the department's announcement, Bustamante said, "There remain nine additional steps in the appeal process. PUSH for Excellence Inc. intends to exhaust all of its rights to appeal."

PUSH-Excel is a program aimed at encouraging young blacks to stay in school and prepare for job training. The group's parent organization is the Chicago-based Operation PUSH founded by Jackson.

Jackson once served as chairman of PUSH-Excel and made speeches to promote it, but he did not run the organization on a day-to-day basis.

While campaigning in Pittsburgh, Jackson criticized the release of the Education Department's reports on the funds, which came the day before the primary. He said "to put the preliminary report out in the public puts it out of context."

"What is significant about this process is the timing of the release," he said.

He downplayed the significance of the reports, saying no allegations of criminal conduct were made and "nothing of substance" has emerged from the government's scrutiny of the PUSH-Excel program.

"It's really a dispute between auditors and accountants...The process will continue until it's finally ended," Jackson remarked.

Charles Hansen, director of the management support division of the Education Department, said most of the money it wants returned was spent without proper documentation or justification for its use.

Hansen said most of the questioned expenses involved "bookkeeping matters here and there" and "some questions about keeping proper records."

He said the government was making no allegations of fraud or misconduct against Jackson or others.

The government noted that PUSH-Excel apparently gained more than $600,000 through some kind of fund-raising activity. It demanded a further accounting of those funds and an explanation of the purpose of the money.

Salvation Army finds unusual donation in bin

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — Salvation Army officials had no use for one donation left in a bin where used clothes and other items are deposited for the benefit of the needy.

This time they got four pounds of marijuana.

Police were puzzled by the donation, and said they had no clue to the donor.

Assistant Police Chief James Greif said an anonymous caller phoned Friday night and told police where to find the pot.

The marijuana had been placed into small bags.

"Unfortunately, that's something we just can't use," said Salvation Army Lt. Charma Green.

The Salvation Army often gets unusual offerings in the bins, Ms. Green said, everything from dead dogs to dirty diapers. But the marijuana was a first, she said.

Bathhouses to be inspected

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Health officials will inspect the city's gay bathhouses as part of a compromise plan designed to prevent the spread of the incurable disease AIDS.

Many city officials and homosexual leaders wanted the bathhouses closed. The plan announced Monday by public health director Mervyn Silverman allows the baths to remain open but prohibits sexual activity.

Acquired immune defficiency syndrome destroys the body's ability to fight disease. About 95 percent of its victims are gay men. It is believed that AIDS can be transmitted through sexual contact.

Law can't protect graves

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state law on desecration of graves probably cannot be used to stop a developer from building a condominium complex on an 18th century graveyard, officials said.

The law applies only to "misdeeds of vandals and ghouls," said Bob Finklestein, a lawyer for the Police Department.

But a lawyer for Vesta Construction Co. said the developer will let archaeologists examine coffins and bones from the graveyard as soon as the city lifts a construction ban imposed while it looked into the desecration law. The order probably will be lifted today, said Vesta lawyer Leon Rittenberg Jr. said Monday.

Defense arguments continue in trial of nine Klansmen

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A defense attorney says a civil rights conspiracy case against nine Nazis and Ku Klux Klansmen in the 1979 slayings of five anti-Klan demonstrators is "like an egg — hard to get a grip on and very, very fragile."

But U.S. Justice Department attorney Norajean Flanagan said the nine, motivated by racial hatred and opposition to integration, conspired to provoke a fight at a Greensboro anti-Klan rally which was attended by whites and blacks.

"Don't be misled or deceived by a band of men filled with racial hatred who try to hide their violence behind the American flag and portray themselves as American patriots," she said Monday in closing statements in a 13-week trial.

Five Communist Workers Party members were shot to death during a "Death to the Klan" rally on Nov. 3, 1979. Six Klansmen and Nazis were found innocent of murder in a 1980 state trial. Nine current and former Klansmen and Nazis, including five of the original defendants, now face federal civil rights charges.

Final defense arguments were to continue today.

Ms. Flanagan said testimony shows the defendants met before the rally and planned to disrupt it by "force or threat of force." She said the evidence showed the Klansmen and Nazis assembled an arsenal of shotguns, handguns, a semiautomatic rifle, brass knuckles and clubs before they drove to the rally in a caravan.

Oregon officials urge women to take 'every precaution'

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Faced with the latest of eight unsolved killings or disappearances of young females in three years, authorities have formed an investigative team and are urging Salem girls and women to take "every precaution" in isolated encounters with strangers.

The announcement Monday of a special squad of two dozen police officers came as authorities sought clues to the weekend disappearance of a "very pleasant and outgoing" Willamette University freshman last seen at a fraternity party.

"There are some peculiar things happening," said Marion County District Attorney Michael Brown. "Women in the community should take every precaution."

Altogether, eight females aged 9 to 27 have been killed or have vanished since February 1981. In one case, a young mother and daughter were found shot to death in their home.

Authorities have said the cases do not appear to be directly linked. But speaking at a news conference, Brown said anyone can see there are "striking similarities" between some of them.

The women who disappeared all vanished at night. In three cases, their cars were found abandoned. In at least two instances, the bodies were dumped into rivers.

Brown suggested that women should not stop to aid people signaling for help in isolated areas but instead drive to a safe place and call police.

A woman whose car breaks down in a remote area should ask passersby to summon police, Brown said. He also advised women to keep driving if possible if they're in minor auto accidents in isolated areas until they find a place where there are people.

The latest woman to disappear was Katherine "Katy" Iona Redmond, 18, of Mill Valley, Calif. Miss Redmond's car, its engine running and a door ajar, was discovered early Saturday about four miles from Willamette University on the city's eastern outskirts.

She was last seen about 2:15 a.m. Saturday at an all-night fraternity party on campus, police said.

Police said the car Miss Redmond drove belonged to the father of one of her roommates at Alpha Chi Omega sorority. Witnesses told officers Miss Redmond didn't have permission to use the car, that she left the party alone and didn't say where she was going.

Divers searched a nearby creek and pond, and a helicopter and light plane surveyed the area.

Several hundred fliers bearing the woman's picture and description were distributed at the school.

Students at the Beta Theta Pi fraternity party said beer was served but that Miss Redmond didn't appear intoxicated or upset before she left.

The most recent unsolved disappearance previously was that of Rebecca Ann Darling, 21, whose body was found two weeks ago near the Pudding River about 10 miles east of Salem. She disappeared Feb. 19 while working at a North Salem store.

Sometimes good laugh just what doctor ordered for cancer patients

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Sometimes a good laugh is just what the doctor ordered for cancer patients at the Shawnee Mission Medical Center.

That's why they go to the Laughing Room.

"I used to think I would try anything if it would give me some comfort, if it would take my mind off what I was going through, even for a few moments," said Joann Hull, of Overland Park, Kan., who has undergone painful treatments for cancer.

Mrs. Hull, 43, said she would become so anxious over her weekly injections of seven different drugs that her temperature would go up.

The best medicine for her was the Laughing Room with its videotapes of comedy acts like the Marx Brothers, The Three Stooges and Abott and Costello, Mrs. Hull said.

The room was begun by Wayne Anderson, director of pastoral care at the hospital. He borrowed the idea from Norman Cousins, who explained in the book "Anatomy of an Illness" that he believed watching funny movies helped him recover from a potentially crippling disease.

One Hour Fast Photo, located in the Town and Country Shopping Center, offers high quality photo finishing in just one hour. Slower service does not necessarily insure better quality print, so why wait to get your prints back?

Each print at One Hour Fast Photo is given individual attention. Each negative is printed by hand by an operator so that adjustments can be made on the computer to give you the best possible print.

The adjustments that can be made will compensate for over or under exposure. The computer also has a color balance for the different types of film. Each brand of film has different light characteristics so the computer adjusts to give the best print possible.

Besides one hour color processing, Fast Photo also does E—6 slide and one day black and white processing. Black and white enlargements can be made up to 16x20. A 20x30 is the largest color enlargement available.

Besides print and slide processing they offer passport photos in less than five minutes.

Mats, framing and albums are also sold at One Hour Fast Photo.

Next time you need your film processed quickly take it to the only fast photo service that uses Kodak paper. Take your film to One Hour Fast Photo in the Town and Country Shopping Center. If you have any questions give them a call at 699-5041.

As Spring arrives in West Texas "do-it-yourselfers" are popping up all over. Some are putting in fences or building a patio while others are edging flower beds.

These are wonderful home improvement ideas but they all require concrete. To have a company send out a truck with a small amount of concrete is expensive. If you are asking yourself "what other alternative do I have?". The answer is Bob Hawk and Associates.

Bob Hawk offers do-it-yourself ready mix trailers. They will mix the concrete to the right consistency for you and furnish the trailer. All you have to do is hook up the trailer and drive home. Once you have emptied the trailer just wash the trailer out and return it.

Concrete is available in small amounts only which is usually all a do-it-yourselfer needs. You can get ¼, ½, ¾, 1 or 1¼ yards of concrete at a time.

This convenient service is available Monday through Saturday, 8am to 8pm and Sunday by appointment.

For you contractors that have a smaller job coming, Bob Hawk will be glad to help you out also.

If you would like to find out more information call Bob Hawk and Associates at 694-6572. You can pick up your concrete and furnished trailer at 5508 W. Industrial.

Bob Hawk and Associates now offer you-haul-it concrete for the do-it-yourselfers of the Midland area. If you need a small amount of concrete but do not want to pay the high price of having it delivered call Bob Hawk today at 694-6572 for more information on this new service.

We could care less about your health.

But we couldn't care more. From nutrition to safety at home and in the workplace; from teaching the elderly to take care of themselves to simple first aid or emergency CPR; nobody knows more, or cares more, about your health than we do.
For more information, call or write your chapter of the American Red Cross. We have a very healthy interest in you.
