Groups gearing up for 'Love Ya Midland' rally

From Staff Reports

In the tradition of the age-old high school pep rally before the crucial last game of the season, a group of Midlanders are organizing a gathering Thursday to dispel a sense of negativism they say is pervading the city.

"We just don't want people to get down. We're trying to remind them that citizens are West Texas' greatest asset," said Joan Baskin, president of Midland's Chamber of Commerce.

"I want people to focus on what's really important. And that is their talent and their ability to deal with what the world deals them," Ms. Baskin said.

Businesses sponsoring the mass meeting are encouraging all Midland employers to let their workers off at 4:30 p.m. Thursday to attend the 4:45 p.m. rally at Midland Center, 105 N. Main. The rally entitled "Love Ya Midland" will last about 30 minutes. The meeting will include refreshments, speeches, a film by the Bridge Company, a media organization, and a helium balloon launch.

A similar rally for Odessa will be held at the same time at Odessa College.

Organizers are hoping to fill the Midland Center that has a standing room capacity of 1,800 people. Some employers have already indicated their employees will attend, Ms. Baskin said.

To get through these hard times Midlanders need to fall back on the pioneer spirit that took their ancestor farmers and ranchers through droughts, disease and other disasters, Ms. Baskin added.

"We are not taking the stance at all that these are easy times and the rainbow is just around the corner," she said.

United Way President Bill Morrow said, "Things aren't great. We're not going to stand up at the rally and say everything is grand and glorious. It's just time to rethink your position, pull up yourselves and go to work.

"I'm not a Pollyanna that doesn't recognize disaster, but you have to analyze where you are and where you want to be.

"We're saying the world has not come to an end. Midland is still a great place to live. You don't achieve anything by being negative," he said.

Midlanders don't have control over OPEC and other oil producing nations, but they do have control over their attitudes, Ms. Baskin said.

Morrow said, "We can't affect the oil price, so that's not going to change. The economic situation is not going to change because of the rally. But if we can get people's attitude directed toward positive solutions and other problems, then we would really achieve our purpose."

Ms. Baskin said, "It's an attitude really. Folks you've been handed a lemon. OK, lets make lemonade."

Speakers at the rally will include former Midland Mayor Hank Avery, businessman Jack Swallow, St. Nicholas Episcopal Minister Joseph H. Schley Jr. and a speaker from Odessa. Midland is sending Doug Henson, chairman of the chamber's Industrial Development group to speak at that city's celebration.

Rally sponsors include the Chamber of Commerce, City of Midland, Midland College, Midland County, the Midland Independent School District, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland Reporter-Telegram, the Sesquicentennial Commission and United Way.

Fish declared winner after ballot recount

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

From machine to machine and through the paper ballots, the numbers were the same: 1,093 for Lawrence Connolly; 1,198 for Kelly Fish.

At the end of the hour-long recount for District 3 in the City Council race this morning, Fish was declared the winner with the same vote totals as announced Saturday night. Midland City Council was to meet at 2 p.m. today at City Hall to canvass the results in all city races and declare them official.

Connolly, however, had requested the recount on Monday because of the 105 difference in the 2,291 votes cast in that race and some confusion over a precinct. Precinct 303 is surrounded by the city limits but is considered in the county.

Appointed to the Recount Committee were Doris Howbert, chairman, Ciro Sanchez, Tom Wageman and Dr. Weldon Horton. Alternate was Boley Embree.

Neither candidate attended the recount. Fish sent Kip Hyde as his representative; Connolly sent his campaign manager, Lori Westmoreland.

After the results were announced, Hyde said, "We're pleased with the results. They were as expected. We're sorry 15 more people didn't vote for Kelly; then we couldn't have had a recount."

Ms. Westmoreland said she was glad the recount was over but she felt it had been necessary to prove to Connolly's campaign workers and supporters there had been no human error.

Later, Connolly said the results were not a surprise. "We knew the possibility of human error was remote. I want to reiterate that our request for a recount was made without any suspicion of improprieties by anyone.

"Midland has always been recognized for its fairness in conducting elections. The official results are a credit to the men and women who work the absentee and general election."

Connolly congratulated Fish on winning a hard-fought race and thanked City Secretary Bill Clanton, First Assistant City Attorney Keith Stretcher and Midland County Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert for expediting the recount.

He also noted that Ms. Westmoreland and the supporters had taken "someone who was not known in Midland's political arena and made me a competitive candidate in this City Council race."

Connolly said he will continue to be involved in issues as a concerned citizen.

However, his immediate plans are to mow the lawn, re-introduce himself to his dog, get his business in order, work on his income tax return and sleep, "and not necessarily in that order."

Council votes to redeem bonds for airport projects

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A new Air Park planned for northeast of the city and expansions to Midland Regional Airport have been shelved after the City Council voted Tuesday to redeem the $27,440,000 revenue bonds obtained in November 1984 for the projects.

This marks the first time in recent history a council has stopped work on a bond project and paid back the "loan."

"The longterm goal is to move Air Park but it's not financially feasible at this time," said Councilman Steve Davidson.

To continue the projects, on which some engineering work had been done, "We would have had a $2 million shortfall in the Airport Fund to make up the debt," said Councilwoman Oralia Corrales. "One of the main concerns I had was how would people wanting to bring their business to Midland look at it, but it's just not fiscally possible now."

The resolution passed unanimously by the council (with the exception of an absent Mayor G. Thane Akins) calls for the airport projects to "be postponed; that bonds issued to finance such acquisition or construction should be redeemed...the City Council has reviewed and reconsidered the acquisition or construction of the project and determined that such acquisition or construction is not practical in the light of economic conditions."

Almost ironically, the "100 percent drawings" for Air Park which would be used for advertising for bids arrived Tuesday at the office of Jon Mathiasen, assistant director of aviation/administration. "We're ready to go at any time the council sees fit," he said. Some minor work will have to be redone later, and the Federal Aviation Administration will have to be notified by letter each year to keep that air space reserved, he added.

The downturn in the local economy has taken its toll on general aviation, which uses Air Park, according to Mathiasen. "Our work was just completed and it will be put on a back burner. Because of the declining revenues it just doesn't make sense to take the responsibility of that project at this particular time. We're all tightening our belts and training to maintain until the economy turns around."

The city will pay almost $1 million to redeem the $27.4 million in floating rate demand airport revenue bonds, according to City Finance Director Troy Gifford. The figures broke down to: $2,838,400 for reserve; $17,282,681 for construction; $510,521 for cost of issuing the bonds; $411,600 to the underwriter; and

West Germany orders two Libyan diplomats to leave

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany today ordered two Libyan diplomats to leave the country, but officials said the move was not directly connected to "indications" of Libyan involvement in the bombing of a West Berlin nightclub.

A U.S. Army sergeant and a Turkish woman died in the blast Saturday at the La Belle discotheque and 230 people were injured, including 63 Americans. American officials have indicated they believe Libya was behind it.

West German government spokesman, Friedhelm Ost, said Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmerman told the Cabinet that "certain indications point to an involvement by Libya. There are indications, but no solid proof."

Ost told a news conference the decision to expel the Libyans was made after police began investigating the Saturday bombing but was not directly connected to the bombing. He said they had been under surveillance for some time.

Ost refused to specify why they were being expelled, saying only that their activities violated norms of diplomatic behavior.

"The security interest of the Federal Republic of (West) Germany and the protection of persons and installations of our allies, especially our American friends, make it urgently necessary to end these activities," he said.

Earlier, Foreign Ministry spokesman Juergen Chrobog said the two were ordered to leave based on evidence emerging from the investigation into the bombing. He would not elaborate.

Ost said the diplomats were of "middle rank," but refused to release their names.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Heath told The Associated Press, "We welcome these steps and are continuing our intense consultations (with West German officials) to see that all steps are taken to insure the full protection and security of American personnel in installations in the Federal Republic."

Telephone calls to the Libyan embassy in Bonn were not answered.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy threatened terrorist attacks on American targets worldwide after the clashes in the Gulf of Sidra two weeks ago between his forces and the U.S. 6th Fleet.

Ost quoted Chancellor Helmut Kohl as telling the Cabinet, "We will not let our American friends be bombed or terrorized out of the country."

Communist East Germany's official news agency ADN today expressed "horror and indignation" at the attack.

It quoted a spokesman for the East German Foreign Ministry as saying it was wrong "to try to bring the GDR (East Germany) into any connection with this criminal act."

"Such acts should not be misused to poison the international atmosphere," the unidentified spokesman was quoted as saying.

His statement apparently was in reaction to reports that a Libyan diplomat in East Berlin, Elamin Abdullah Elamin, was sus-

Soviets back in oil market; Prices drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Word that the Soviet Union is back in the oil market after suspending sales over the winter has dampened the price climb that followed the shutdown of Norway's strikebound North Sea oil rigs.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S crude grade, plunged nearly $2 on Tuesday to close at $12.47 a barrel, down from Monday's $14.33.

Sunday's strike by caterers who serve the rigs took about 900,000 barrels off the market. Traders reacted by driving the price of May contracts up by $1.59 a barrel over Friday's close.

Then Tuesday, it was reported that the Soviet Union had agreed to sell its Urals export blend crude oil to some European contract holders at netback, or product-related prices, finally abandoning fixed-price sales.

One factor in Tuesday's oil price decline was that prices had "been up five days in a row, and some of the bear traders decided to come in and test the mettle of the market. They found there just wasn't anything beneath it."

— Peter Beutel
analyst at Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc.

The oil had been held off the market because of high drilling costs and winter demand within the Soviet Union and its Eastern European allies.

European oil industry sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Soviet Union has begun shipping under its new pricing formula for April delivery. The formula was negotiated in March.

In addition to a few contracts for April delivery, one or two shipments of Urals are being offered on the spot market this month, they said.

Peter Beutel, an analyst at Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc., said a second factor in Tuesday's decline was that prices had "been up five days in a row, and some of the bear traders decided to come in and test the mettle of the market."

"They found there just wasn't anything beneath it," he said.

Mike O'Himmel, an analyst at the Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. securities firm, said the market's failure to break through the $14.50 level — after four runs at it in the last seven weeks — added to the selling momentum.

In addition, he said, the "anti-climactic finish" of Vice President George Bush's visit to Saudi Arabia was a letdown to the market, which had been hoping that some move to cut production would result from his meetings with Saudi officials.

In Houston, meanwhile, oil exploration and pipeline company Tenneco Inc. said Tuesday that the slump in petroleum prices was forcing it to lay off about 700 employees at corporate headquarters and several subsidiaries.

Tenneco chairman James L. Ketelsen said the layoffs were necessary to deal with "today's business environment and forecasts that indicate little or no improvement in crude oil and natural gas prices in the near future."

Combustion turbine generators to be installed at electric station

From Staff Reports

Three combustion turbine generating units will be installed at the Permian Basin Steam Electric Station near Monahans, the Texas Utilities Electric Company announced today.

Construction of the units, which will be supplied by General Electric, was approved in late March by the state Public Utility Commission. The three units will cost between $90 and $100 million.

Despite the cost of the new projects, no rate increases are planned in connection with the turbines' construction, said C.W. Barclay, western division manager.

Any future rate increases would be tied to the completion in 1987 of the corporation's nuclear plant 45 miles south of Fort Worth in Glenrose, Barclay said.

Installation of the turbines will begin in January 1987 and a contract for constructing the units should be awarded by late this year.

The three 67,000 kilowatt generating units are the first of five that will be installed at the Permian Basin station. The remaining two units will be installed in early 1989.

TESCO, which provides electric service to Monahans and much of West Texas, is a division of TUEC. With headquarters in Dallas, TUEC divisions provide electric service to about one-third of the state's population. The corporation's divisions include Texas Utilities Generation Company, which operates Permian Basin and other power plants in its system.

About 50 construction workers will be needed at the peak of the one-year project to build the units. Because the units will be operated with the large generating units at Permian Basin, the company does not expect to hire any more permanent employees.

Combustion turbine generators are small units, fueled by natural gas and oil, that can be built in a relatively short time. The first three Permian Basin units are scheduled to go into operation in 1988 and the others in 1990.

The units can be started in a few minutes, which makes them suited for meeting peak demand for electricity by the company's customers, company officials said.

The company plans to install similar units at two other power plants, the Morgan Creek plant at Colorado City and the DeCordova plant near Granbury.

The units are part of the company's 10-year resource plan for meeting growth in demand for electricity.

$6,896,788 for the capital interest fund ("what we borrowed to pay the interest during the construction period of three years").

With the money invested during the construction, it would have earned enough in interest to bring the total construction figure to $21.5 million, according to Gifford. Of that, $17.5 million was designated for a new Air Park on land northeast of the city; $4 million for expansion of Midland Regional Airport. That expansion would have included two gates — one at each end of the concourse — more ticket counter space, an enlargement of the baggage handling area on the north and repair of the leaky roof.

During calendar year 1985, interest and other costs on the bonds amounted to 6.6 percent; the interest they earned averaged 9 percent, according to Gifford.

"This whole deal had come to pass beautifully," he said. "There is no doubt in my mind this spread would have stayed. This was the most complex issues the city has done and one of the most complex the bond counsel had done." They were issued in November 1984 under a financing procedure that no longer is available.

But the council had planned to pay off those five-year bonds by selling the land on which Air Park now is located as soon as the new facility was completed, according to the finance director. In late 1984, revenues had been on a slight increase. Councilman David Godfrey said, "In 1984, we had projected increasing revenue at the airport. Now, it's decreasing."

With the economic downturn, the council indicated the Air Park land might not sell for what they had hoped in 1989 or 1990.

The engineering work completed by Daniel, Mann, Johnson and Mendenhall of Houston and Los Angeles will be retained, said Gifford. The city will pay about $1.1 million for the $1.3 million in engineering costs. "We've gotten a bargain on that engineering work," he added.

The bonds can be redeemed the first Wednesday of each month, which means the city probably will complete the process the first week in May, he noted.

Fixing the Terminal building's roof is a priority and the city will determine how much money is remaining from a 1983 Certificate of Obligation $7 million issue, Gifford said.

Teacher feared abducted in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A French teacher at a school in Moslem west Beirut disappeared today and was feared kidnapped, a French Embassy spokesman said.

The spokesman, Francois Abi Saab, identified the teacher as Michel Brian of the College Protestant Francais.

Embassy sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said gunmen kidnapped Brian as he walked from his apartment in west Beirut's Hamra commercial district to the school in Koraitem neighborhood about five blocks away.

But Saab would not confirm that Brian had been kidnapped. He said the school had reported to the embassy that Brian failed to show up for work today, and that the embassy was "making all the necessary contacts to investigate his fate."

Eight other Frenchmen are missing in Beirut, and a Lebanese-born French physician has been negotiating with Shiite Moslem radicals for the release of at least some of them.

The French Embassy sources said the embassy reported Brian's disappearance to the Lebanese Information Ministry and asked for government intervention to help free him.

Michel Brian

Friends at the Information Ministry's press center said Brian had told them he would go to the center to make a telephone call Tuesday evening, but did not come.

Sally Dirgham, superintendent of the College Protestant Francais, told reporters she has been instructed by the French Embassy not to provide any information about Brian's disappearance.

Brian has been a teacher at the school since 1980.

His disappearance was reported as about 400 students at the International Language Center in west Beirut staged a one-day strike to protest the disappearance of British teacher Philip Patfield.

Patfield, 40, of Bideford, has been missing and feared kidnapped along with Leigh Douglas, 34, of Norfolk, England, political science professor at the American University of Beirut, since March 28.

They were last seen together that night in a popular nightspot a block from the American University.

No one has claimed responsibility for their disapperance.

Brian is the 11th French citizen to be reported missing in Lebanon since last year. Two, a man and a woman, since have been released.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, a Shiite Moslem extremist faction, claims to be holding four of the hostages. It said last month that it killed one of them, 37-year-old researcher Michel Seurat.

His body has not been found, and there is no proof that he is dead.

Islamic Jihad, which is believed to be linked to Iran, also claims to hold diplomats Marcel Fontaine and Marcel Carton and journalist Jean-Paul Kauffmann.

It has demanded that France stop military sales to Iraq, which is at war with Iran, and free five people convicted in the July 1980, attempt on the life of former Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar.

Islamic Jihad also claims to hold American hostages in Beirut. It claims it is holding five Americans, and that it killed a sixth, U.S. Embassy Officer William Buckley. However, Buckley's body never has been found.

The group is demanding the release of 17 comrades imprisoned in Kuwait for a series of bombings in December 1983, against U.S., French and Kuwaiti targets.

Another shadowy faction, the previously unknown Revolutionary Justice Organization, has claimed it abducted a four-man French television crew on March 8.

Bush calls Khadafy 'mad dog'

ABOARD THE USS ENTERPRISE (AP) — Vice President George Bush today described Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy as "a mad dog" and said the United States taught him a lesson by striking Libyan targets in the Gulf of Sidra.

Rejecting the idea that the U.S. military action bolstered Khadafy's image in the Arab world, Bush said: "I don't see how you can be taller when your nose has been bloodied and you've shrunk about three feet."

Bush's comments were drowned out by cheers and whistles from hundreds of sailors gathered in an aircraft hangar below the main deck of this carrier, carrying more than 5,000 sailors, aviators and support personnel.

The carrier, based in the Indian Ocean, was steaming in the Gulf of Oman about 30 miles east of the sultanate and about 90 miles south of the coast of Iran.

Bush flew to the ship to showcase the ability of the United States to project military power in oil shipping lanes of the Middle East.

Three carrier battle groups sailed to the Gulf of Sidra last month to challenge Khadafy's so-called "line of death," a self-proclaimed Libyan territorial limit extending across the Gulf of Sidra.

The United States and most other nations recognize only a 12-mile territorial limit skirting Libya's coast. Libya claims the entire gulf.

Carrier-based warplanes attacked Libyan patrol boats and a coastal radar site on March 24-25 after Libya fired six missiles at U.S. forces, U.S. officials have said.

Bush said the U.S. presence in the Gulf of Sidra was intended to demonstrate the right of passage in international waters.

"This was not something to provoke this madman over there. This was the ninth such crossing demonstrating freedom of navigation, freedom of the sea," he said.

Bush said the U.S. action might be considered provocative in some quarters, "but we're talking about a mad dog in the sense of Khadafy."

The vice president said the United States could not bow to arbitrary borders set "by any individual, no matter how nutty he might be deciding on what his line should be."

Bush flew to the ship immediately after his arrival in the sultanate of Oman from a two-night stop in Bahrain and a visit to Saudi Arabia.

His arrival coincided with the departure from Oman of Jordan's King Hussein, a key player in efforts to start Arab-Israeli negotiations.

Hussein flew to Oman on Monday to brief Sultan Qaboos bin Said about Jordan's position on strategies for Middle East peace talks, according to Arab diplomats. Bush will meet with Qaboos on Thursday.

Oman, an oil producing nation of 1.5 million people on the southeastern rim of the Arabian Peninsula, is the third stop on Bush's eight-day trip in the region. The final stop is North Yemen. Bush already has met with leaders of Saudi Arabia and Bahrain.

At a news conference Tuesday in Manama, Bush reported that Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy had left his entourage to pursue a peace initiative in the Middle East.

Even before Murphy arrived in Tel Aviv, Israeli officials said the secretary would take part in discussions on how to speed the resolution of the border dispute over Taba, a small Red Sea resort claimed by Egypt and Israel, which signed a peace treaty in 1979.

"There seemed to be an opportunity to make some progress on one of the issues that had been hung up for some time, and that was why he (Murphy) was pulled away to do it," said Donald Gregg, Bush's national security adviser.

During his trip, Bush has praised Hussein's efforts toward peace in the Middle East but has said the king was betrayed by the PLO's Yasser Arafat.

"Arafat left the king out to dry, if you will," Bush told American businessmen in Bahrain on Tuesday.

Hussein's year-long effort to forge a common front with Arafat on peace in the region collapsed in February.

pected of involvement in the nightclub bombing.

A West Berlin Interior Ministry official Tuesday confirmed a report by the Bild newspaper that Elamin, 47, was "urgently suspected" of organizing the bombin. Bild said the diplomat previously was stationed at the Libyan embassy in Bonn.

"This report is correct," said the West Berlin official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He refused to elaborate.

Dieter Piete, deputy chairman of the police commission, said police did not suspect the Libyan diplomat had placed the bomb in the nightclub, "but as to whether he is suspected as an organizer or had any other link, I will not say no."

A woman who answered the telephone at the Libyan embassy in East Berlin — which Libya calls the Peoples' Bureau — refused to discuss the bombing, saying only: "We don't wish to comment on any problems of any kind."

The Allied military command in West Berlin issued a statement saying that "exceptional measures should be taken to reinforce" security measures in the city's Western sectors.

West German officials have said it was unlikely that the Bonn government would join the U.S. economic sanctions against Libya that were imposed after the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports.

The chief of staff in the chancellery, Wolfgang Schaeuble, said the government feels economic sanctions are "inefficient."

After Italy, West Germany is Libya's biggest trading partner, and 1,500 Germans live in the North African nation.

USDA says heptachlor hasn't been found in samples of ground beef

From Staff Reports

No heptachlor has been found in samples of ground beef from warehouses in Texas and California that was to have been distributed to public schools, a U.S. Department of Agriculture spokeswoman said today.

The Agriculture Department tested 106 ground-beef samples from eight warehouses in Texas and California, department spokeswoman Nancy Robinson said. More tests are being conducted.

Officials said the ground beef may have originated from cattle that ate feed from a Van Buren, Ark., company. Tests showed the feed made from grain that was used to make gasohol, was contaminated with heptachlor, a banned pesticide supected of causing cancer.

Heptachlor was found in thousands of gallons of recalled dairy products. Officials said the Van Buren company, Valley Feeds, sold heptachlor-tainted grain to farmers in Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, and some dairy herds in those states have bee quarantined.

Ms. Robinson said the Agriculture Department has begun a release of ground beef from specific production lots which already have been tested and proven negative.

The meat was to have been distributed through an Agriculture Department lunch program to public schools and day-care centers across the country.

Patricia Grillos, director of food services with the Midland Independent School District, said about 5,500 pounds of ground beef is being held in freezers across the district until testing is complete.

The Agriculture Department said the packing companies that handled ground beef from herds fed with tainted grain were the Laredo Packing Co. of Laredo, H and H Meat Products Co. of Mercedes, Leonard and Harral Packing Co. of San Antonio, Supreme Beef Processors of Dallas and Service Packing Co. of Los Angeles, Calif.

Vatican assures Catholics wine for Mass not tainted

ROME (AP) — Italy faces an international backlash from contaminated wine that has killed 20 people, but a Vatican official assured Roman Catholics that the wine used during Mass is not tainted.

Cardinal Paul Augustin Mayer, who heads the Vatican's Congregation for Sacraments and Divine Cult, said Tuesday that a long-standing church regulation requires that only the "purest wine" be used and that bishops and priests make sure it is obeyed.

Authorities said 20 people are to known to have died in Italy from drinking wine laced with methyl alcohol used illegally to raise the alcohol content, and many more have gotten sick.

Police continued a nationwide seizure of poisonous wine and three more people who allegedly supplied methyl alcohol to Italian wine merchants were arrested in northern Italy, raising the total arrests in the case to 10.

Hundreds of people lined up in health offices in several Italian cities this week to have wine examined. Many Italians bottle their own wine bought from wholesale dealers.

Italy is the world's largest wine producer and the government fears the scandal could lead some countries to bar imports. The Agriculture Ministry has ordered that bottles intended for export carry a certificate guaranteeing they are free of methyl alcohol.

U.S. officials have said none of the tainted wine has been found in the United States.

However, contamination fears have already prompted some countries to take action.

French officials on Tuesday said nearly 5 million gallons of suspect Italian wine had been seized in that country and nearly 1,100 tests had been conducted on both bottled and bulk wine from Italy.

Union Carbide head says OSHA 'sandbagged' petrochemical firm

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal safety inspectors are picking on the safest industry in the United States — the petrochemical business, says the chairman of Union Carbide, hit last week with record fines for alleged violations at the company's Institute, W.Va., plant.

"These people spent five months in our plant, then they sandbagged us," said Warren Anderson, referring to Occupational Safety and Health Administration inspectors.

OSHA inspectors converged on the Institute plant in September, a month after a poison gas leak sent six workers and 129 residents to Kanawha Valley hospitals.

OSHA announced last week 221 safety violations, including 130 alleged "willful" violations.

"If the OSHA report on Institute is an opening salvo for a basic attack on our industry, the message is — when the attack comes, forget about fairness," Anderson said Tuesday in a speech to the International Petrochemical Conference.

"If you go into this assuming like we did that we could work together, then the petrochemical industry better be careful," he said.

"That's not what's going to happen. They happen to be picking on the industry that's the safest in the United States," Anderson said.

The citations and record fines totalling $1.37 million against Union Carbide were announced last week by Labor Secretary William Brock and OSHA officials.

Never in history has a labor secretary announced such violations on television, Anderson said.

"Why he chose to do that, I don't know," Anderson said.

"God knows Union Carbide is not perfect, but we are more than concerned about safety," he said. "We know people are frightened and we are responding.

"If government agencies take up the role of chief antagonists, it could hurt what we are trying to achieve," he said.

Anderson described as a "terrible catastrophe" the Dec. 3, 1984, methyl isocyanate gas leak at its Bhopal, India, plant. The leak killed more than 2,000 people and injured more than 200,000.

"Here we are several months later and we still don't know what happened," he said.

Relief to the victims in India has not come as quickly as Anderson would have liked.

"The real relief for the victims is getting closer and closer," he said.

Asbestos workers win $145 million settlement

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 700 former asbestos workers will share an estimated $145 million as part of a settlement of a class-action federal lawsuit in which workers blamed manufacturers for their asbestos-related diseases, attorneys say.

The settlement ended the first class-action asbestosis trial in the nation.

"I was very pleased with the amount — very much so," said Port Arthur attorney Walter Umphrey, who represents 539 of the 741 plaintiffs. "It is two or three times the national average (in such cases)."

He estimated his clients alone would divide about $88 million.

A spokeswoman in U.S. District Judge Robert Parker's court in Marshall said the case was settled Thursday, but Parker issued a gag order that was lifted Tuesday.

Umphrey said attorneys would meet later with Parker to determine how the settlement will be divided among the plaintiffs, who he described as "tickled to death."

"I've only talked to two or three," Umphrey said. "Of course, they don't know their individual amounts. What I intend to do is within a week have a meeting with all of my clients and explain in detail what happened and what's going to happen."

But the money should begin being dispensed within 90 days, he said.

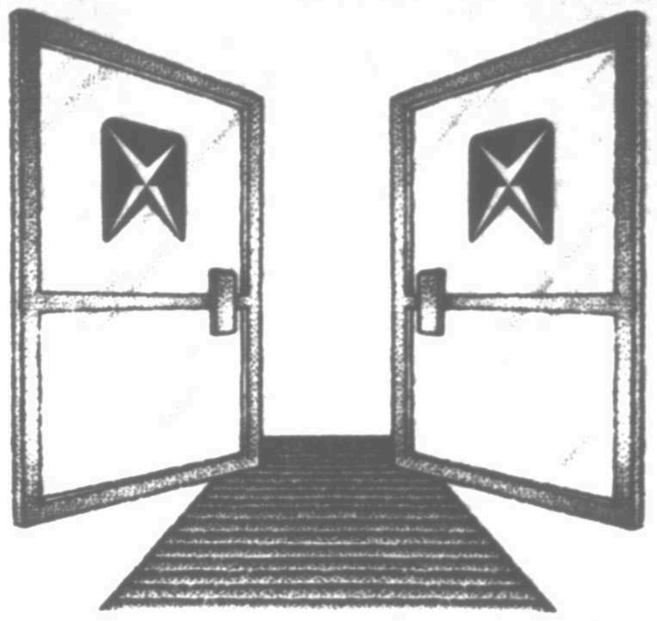

"The court will set individual amounts for individual people," Umphrey said. "We have been asked to submit a breakdown on each of our cases, depending on what type of asbestosis they have, their age, whether they are disabled or not, whether they have cancer."

Rex Houston, another plaintiffs' attorney, estimated individual settlements will range from $75,000 to $450,000.

Workers claimed their health was damaged or destroyed because of their exposure to asbestos products and sued 13 companies, primarily manufacturers of the products. In October, Parker consolidated the hundreds of cases into a class action.

Earlier in the trial, which began March 10, four companies settled with workers and dropped out. They were Combustion Engineering, GAF Corp., Nicolet Inc. and Raymark Industries Inc.

Abilene man who won new trial given 99 years in car theft case

ABILENE (AP) — An Abilene man who won a new trial on a technicality may wind up serving extra time in prison after being convicted again in a car theft case.

After just 17 minutes of deliberation, a state jury on Tuesday convicted Marion Alexander Chaney Jr. of the Jan. 1, 1984, theft of three new Pontiacs from Western Pontiac-Datsun.

After hearing evidence of five prior felony convictions, jurors set Chaney's punishment at 99 years in prison.

Another jury had given Chaney a life prison term in the same case in January 1985, but Chaney appealed and won a retrial because of the improper introduction of a conviction that had been reversed.

Punishment range this time was five to 99 years, or life, and Assistant Criminal District Attorney James Eidson again asked for "the maximum."

Jurors sent Judge Billy John Edwards a note asking the difference between a 99-year term and life, but the judge said law prohibited him from answering the question.

The 99-year term was announced an hour later.

After the trial, a state parole officer, Matt Spears, explained the difference: For purposes of parole, the Board of Pardons and Paroles regards a "life" sentence as 60 years. A specific term of more than 60 years, like 99 years, is considered just that.

If a crime is not "aggravated" by the use of a deadly weapon or the age of the victim, a person becomes eligible for consideration for parole after he has received credit for one-third of his sentence.

With "good time" and other credits, a person conceivably could be paroled from a life term not aggravated in as little as six to seven years.

If the sentence is aggravated, he must "flat time" one-third of the sentence (20 years for a "life" term) before being eligible for parole consideration.

Parole consideration does not mean parole is automatic, Spears said.

Because Chaney's 99-year term was not aggravated, he will be eligible for parole consideration after receiving credit for 33 years in prison, Spears said. That could be done in as little as about 10 years, based on the current guidelines for "good time."

"They (the Board of Pardon and Paroles) change it (the guidelines) daily if they are overcrowded," Spears said.

Texas Supreme Court justices call subpoenas politically motivated

John Hill

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Texas Supreme Court justices, saying they won't honor a legislative committee's subpoenas, called the summons both illegal and politically motivated.

"The preservation of an independent judiciary requires us to reject your subpoenas," Justices C.L. Ray and William Kilgarlin said Tuesday in a letter to the chairman of the House Judicial Affairs Commitee.

The letter to Rep. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, said the subpoenas violate the Texas Constitution's provisions separating the three branches of government.

"While we would relish the opportunity to discuss these matters fully and openly...we do feel it would be a violation of our oath of office to appear in this manner," the justices wrote.

The justices also implied that the committee investigation was sparked by politics. Tejeda faces Rep. Tommy Adkisson, D-San Antonio, in the May 3 primary for a state Senate seat.

"The rushed manner and press conference approach to this whole situation leaves us no option but to believe that the pressure of the current primary campaigns has impacted on this process," their letter said.

"While certainly meaning no disrespect for you or the committee, we must also point out that it is a violation of the canons of ethics to involve the court in political campaigns," they said.

The subpoenas for Ray, Kilgarlin and two court staffers were delivered to the court about 11:30 a.m., while all nine justices were in conference.

The subpoenas summoned the four to testify before a committee hearing on Friday.

Tejeda says his panel is investigating requests for transfer of two multimillion-dollar cases from a San Antonio appeals court to other appellate courts. The requests were made of Ray by San Antonio lawyer and campaign contributor Pat Maloney Sr.

Ray and Kilgarlin told Tejeda it would be appropriate to answer the committee's questions at a public session in the Supreme Court offices, as suggested Monday by Chief Justice John Hill.

"We are certainly willing to attend a meeting in an appropriate forum, and hopefully, you also are interested in a full and open discussion," the Ray-Kilgarlin letter said.

They also said the session should be held "after the pressure of your political race is over."

After seeing the subpoenas, Hill reiterated his belief that they violate the Constitution.

"I'm not aware of any precedent for the subpoenaing of a sitting justice before a legislative committee," Hill said.

The committee wants Ray to testify about the transfer of cases, communications between court members with attorneys having cases before the court and the conduct of court members or its employees involving pending cases.

Kilgarlin was called to testify about transfers, communications and acceptance of gifts by the court or its employees from attorneys with cases pending before the court.

In an interview, Kilgarlin said he was eager to answer the committee's questions.

U.S. must keep illegal aliens out, INS region director says

DALLAS (AP) — The United States must find ways to curtail a record number of illegal aliens entering the country and protect jobs for the unemployed, an Immigration and Naturalization Service official said.

Acting INS southern region director David Vandersall, basing his projection on field reports compiled for the first half of fiscal year 1986, said more than 337,000 illegal aliens were apprehended over a six-month period.

The figure released Tuesday for the 13-state area, from New Mexico to Florida and along the Eastern seaboard to North Carolina, represents a 42 percent increase over the same period during fiscal year 1985, he said.

"Illegal aliens don't complain about lower wages, and he can be taken advantage of more than the U.S. citizen," Vandersall said. "It's not a good situation we have. The only way to control our borders is to eliminate the illegal alien's motivation to come to this country."

Vandersall attributed the increasing influx to economic problems in Mexico and Central America.

"There is a real push factor to leave and also a real pull factor for people to come here," he said.

Although Congress has helped increase the number of apprehensions by adding 850 border patrol agents, 370 of them in the southern region, Vandersall said more legislation is needed.

"It's illegal for (aliens) to work here, but not for employers to hire them," Vandersall said. "That's why we are pushing for employer sanctions."

The 50,727 apprehensions in McAllen, one of seven border control sectors under the southern region's juridisdiction, represents the highest increase at 63 percent.

Marfa, the smallest sector in Texas, had the smallest increase from 9,360 in 1985 to 11,906 for the same period of 1986.

Sanctuary activist says prison term hasn't weakened her committment

CINCINNATI (AP) — An Ohio woman serving a two-year sentence in a West Virginia federal prison for smuggling an alien into the United States says her prison term hasn't weakened her commitment to the so-called Sanctuary Movement.

Lorry Thomas says that, if anything, she has been comforted in the Women's Federal Prison at Alderson, W.Va., by other inmates who are serving sentences for adhering to their beliefs and committing civil disobedience.

Among the high-security prison's more prominent inmates are a member of the Plowshares organization and a Roman Catholic nun, two anti-nuclear activists serving sentences for civil disobedience.

Ms. Thomas, a Sanctuary Movement activist and mother of two from Hamilton, Ohio, is completing a two-year prison sentence at the West Virginia prison. She was moved there in March from the Federal Correctional Institute in Fort Worth, Texas, where she had begun her sentence for sneaking a Nicaraguan refugee across the Texas-Mexico border last May 12.

She was welcomed upon her arrival at the West Virginia prison by inmates who, Ms. Thomas said, understand the cost of following their conscience instead of the law.

"I'm in contact with other prisoners of conscience," Ms. Thomas wrote from prison, in a statement published Tuesday by The Cincinnati Post. "The...community that encircles a natural concern for justice has been a very healthy thing for me here in prison."

Her two-year sentence was the harshest yet against a member of the sanctuary movement, which aids Central American refugees in defiance of U.S. immigration law.

Ms. Thomas's repeated refusals to submit to strip searches and drug testing at the Texas federal prison led to two stints in solitary confinement. Prison officials there requested her transfer to the higher-security prison, saying Ms. Thomas posed a threat to security.

Voters 'make Eastwood's day'

Eastwood

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood, hero of detective films and spaghetti westerns, proved to be as big a draw at the polling place as the box office as voters turned out in record numbers to make him mayor.

Smiling broadly, Eastwood said the triumph "ranks solidly" with his successes as a director and star. "It's a hit movie at the moment," he said.

"It's surprising and yet it's not surprising," the star of 40 movies and one election said in his victory speech Tuesday night. "I knew there was a lot of dissatisfaction.

"I think the great turnout of the voters and the wide margin by which we won are very important."

According to complete but unofficial results, Eastwood had 2,166 votes, or 72.2 percent, to 799 votes, or 26.6 percent, for two-time incumbent Charlotte Townsend. Two other candidates had a total of 37 votes, or 1.2 percent.

Business was brisk at all four polling places in the 1-square-mile village, with 72.5 percent of the 4,142 registered voters turning out. City clerk Jeanne Brehmer said that in five years in office, turnout hasn't topped 30 percent.

"It was a fantastic, enthusiastic turnout," said official poll watcher Louis LaBarbera. "A lot of young people voted and a lot of the retired people. Some had trouble getting here, in wheelchairs and all, but they came."

Townsend conceded less than 90 minutes after the polls closed, saying, "This whole campaign has been totally out of focus and so abnormal."

Eastwood, 55, takes over the $200-a-month, two-year job on April 15.

A resident of this tourist village for 14 years, he complained during the campaign about waste in a $6 million budget, too many consultants and lawyers and about rudeness on the part of the planning commission and city council, which vetoed his plans to build a small office complex.

He also attacked the "negativity" of Ms. Townsend, a 61-year-old former librarian who heads the five-member city council.

Eastwood was painted by Ms. Townsend as a "pawn to developers," but he claimed he had no interest in letting Carmel turn glitzy.

Eastwood said before the election that he didn't feel his tough-guy image hurt him with his neighbors. "People here are intelligent enough. They realize that's my profession, that it's just a role I'm playing," he said.

Eastwood said he enjoyed his first campaign, but that he didn't expect, and didn't want, all the attention the race received. More than 130 newspapers, TV and radio stations, magazines and wire services covered the election.

Vote expected on handgun bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gun lobby's 18-year campaign to ease federal firearms controls is set for a crucial vote, as House members face "a test of courage" on an issue that may decide their political futures.

Two rival bills — one supported by police and handgun control groups, the other by sportsmen and gun dealer organizations — are pitted against each other today in what amounts to the survival of the fittest.

Both measures will be on the House floor simultaneously, giving each side the chance to sabotage the other's bill with unfriendly amendments.

Caught in the uncomfortable crossfire are lawmakers who are not staunch supporters of either side and who are likely to be portrayed to voters as either anti-sportsmen or as foes of law enforcement.

A vote is expected tonight or Thursday.

"Members are wavering, they feel the pressure," said Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., sponsor of the bill endorsed by police and gun control groups. "They never had to decide between the National Rifle Association and the police before. It's going to be a test of courage. There's going to be a penalty either way."

Wayne LaPierre, chief lobbyist of the 3.1 million-member NRA, said the need to ease restrictions for the "law-abiding" gun owner and dealer is so important to sportsmen that there will be political consequences.

According to figures released by Handgun Control Inc. and not disputed by LaPierre, the NRA's Political Victory Fund spent $541,674 in 1983-84 and $98,288 so far in 1985-86 on behalf of the 218 House members who signed a discharge petition.

Media to view shuttle wreckage

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Members of the National Transportation Safety Board were set to give the first public viewing of the space shuttle Challenger wreckage recovered from the ocean and laid out in two hangars.

NTSB expert Terry Armentrout, who is aiding NASA in an investigation of the Challenger accident, was to brief reporters today on the progress of attempts to assemble and study the winged spacecraft's wreckage.

Reporters are then to be allowed to walk through the hangars for a look at the space shuttle parts that have been laid out on a grid.

Between 12 percent and 14 percent of Challenger's wreckage has been recovered, J.R. Thompson, vice chairman of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration investigation task force, said in a briefing Tuesday.

The recovered debris includes parts of the crew cabin, the wings, external fuel tank and chunks of the solid rocket booster hulls.

A search of the ocean floor for more debris will continue through this month, Thompson said. Nine ships and three small submarines are taking part.

Officials hope to recover key parts of the right solid rocket booster. Thompson said a faulty joint in that booster definitely caused the Jan. 28 explosion that destroyed Challenger and killed its crew of seven.

Challenger blew up just 73 seconds after being laucnhed from the Kennedy Space Center. Debris was scattered over a wide area of the Atlantic Ocean just offshore from the space center.

Thompson declined to discuss recovery of the crew compartment or of astronaut remains, but sources close to the investigation say searchers believe they have retrieved all the human remains they can expect to find. The remains are being examined and identified at a medical laboratory here.

Paper says fireworks may have caused explosion, fire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An explosion in a clandestine fireworks factory may have caused the warehouse explosion and fire that claimed at least nine lives and injured 22 people, the San Francisco Chronicle reported today.

"A fireworks-making machine was found half buried in the building's smoldering debris Monday by arson experts with the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms," the newspaper said.

The machine's owner was using the device when the blast occurred Friday at Bayview Industrial Park, said the Chronicle, citing unidentified sources close to the investigation. The owner's name was not released.

About nine badly burned bodies have been pulled from the ruins of the sprawling warehouse, but city Fire Department investigator Richard Kusich said a few more bodies could be found.

The most recent discoveries came Tuesday morning, when at least three bodies, probably four, were recovered, said Lt. Gary Meltzer of the county arson task force.

Contac to be reintroduced

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The cold medicine Contac, pulled from store shelves last month because of tampering, will be reintroduced in the fall for the cold and allergy season, SmithKline Beckman Corp. has announced.

The company indicated Tuesday that Contac will be available in capsules as well as in new forms, including tablets. It had been sold only as capsules.

Contac was recalled along with the allergy medicine Teldrin and diet aid Dietac on March 21 after the FBI discovered small amounts of rat poison in nine capsules. A man calling himself "Gary" in telephone calls to the media and authorities took responsibility for the tampering, but his motives were unclear. No arrests have been made, officials said.

Spokesman Jeremy Heymsfeld said SmithKline also will reintroduce Teldrin next fall but has decided to discontinue Dietac because of disappointing sales.

According to the company, the three drugs accounted for about $100 million in sales last year, or about 70 percent of all sales of the company's over-the-counter drugs.

Man surrenders to mayor

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A father with a shotgun surrendered and released his three pre-school children after talking face-to-face with Mayor James D. Griffin, who offered the man a ride home in the mayor's car, authorities said.

Kenneth Palidwodzinski held the children at a house for four hours Tuesday before giving up, said Patrolman James Leatherborrow. A shotgun was found in the house, Leatherborrow said.

No shots were fired and no one was injured in the incident, which stemmed from a domestic dispute, police said. The children ranged in age from 5 months to 3 years old.

Griffin said he recommended to police officials that no charges be filed against Palidwodzinski.

Leather of Distinction

Durability
—Leather outlasts any other upholstery material
—Leather finishes are permanent and will not rub off or fade
—Leather will not stretch out of shape or crack

Uniqueness
—No two pieces of leather are alike. It took nature years to custom make each hide
—Leather allows air to move through it. It is never hot or cold because it rapidly assumes body temperature —Over the years, leather becomes richer and more supple
—Genuine leather bears proof of its history-the distinctive markings are healed barbed wire nicks, brands and nature's hallmarks

Economy
—Leather may be more by the yard, but it is less by the year
—Leather appreciates with the years, other materials depreciate
—Leather will last-it won't fade, stretch or tear

Pride of Ownership
Leather has been treasured through the centuries, from imperial courts to congressional offices for its touch, aroma, richness, durability and comfort. This piece of leather furniture carries a noble tradition and is something to be enjoyed day by day for generations.

Care
Dust it, wipe it with a mild solution of soapy water, wipe dry and forget it. No saddle soap, polish or wax should be used. The natural oils are sealed in for permanent beauty.

Latin leaders favor negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The failure of peace talks has not shaken the committment of Latin American leaders to negotiations as the best way to end turmoil in Central America, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. says.

O'Neill, D-Mass., returning Tuesday from a trip to Brazil, Argentina, Venezuela and the Dominican Republic, said the leaders of those nations told him they "remain committed to the negotiation process, rather than further military escalation."

The findings of O'Neill, a leading House opponent of Reagan's Contra aid proposal, put him in direct conflict with the administration and its congressional supporters, who hope the recent breakdown of the Contadora peace talks in Panama will tip the balance in Congress in favor of Reagan's plan to equip the Nicaraguan Contra rebels with $100 million in arms and supplies.

During House debate on the issue last month, O'Neill warned that the assistance would lead to U.S. military involvement in the region. He said Tuesday that the Latin leaders he visited shared "a common concern ... that the conflict in Central America must not trigger U.S. military involvement."

"They believe that such a development could undermine their own democracies by igniting extremist movements (which) would use American military intervention as a means of gaining public support," he said.

"They expressed this concern both privately and publicly," said O'Neill, apparently attempting to counter an administration claim that most Latin American leaders privately support aiding the Contras, even though they may not feel they can say so publicly.

Gander crash panel reveals little data

OTTAWA (AP) — Something went very wrong Dec. 12 as an Arrow Air military charter was lifting its nose from the runway at Gander, Newfoundland, but investigators still don't know exactly what happened.

Chief investigator Peter Boag, testifying Tuesday at a Canadian Aviation Safety Board hearing, said his team is still looking for clues to the cause of the crash that killed 256 people.

Among the potential causes under consideration are engine failure, pilot error, excess weight, ice on the wings and "airborne catastrophic failure," perhaps from sabotage, he said.

But no explanation is convincing. There is no evidence of sabotage, and if one engine failed, the plane should still have been able to take off. The plane was at least 12,000 pounds heavier than the pilot estimated, Boag said, but not too heavy to fly.

Since there is no clear answer, the investigators also are considering whether the cumulative effects of several problems could have caused the crash.

The DC-8, carrying 248 American soldiers home from Egypt, refueled and picked up a fresh crew in Frankfurt, West Germany. It stopped in Gander, on Canada's east coast, before dawn on Dec. 12 for more fuel for the final leg to Fort Campbell, Ky.

Pointing to large charts and maps and a scale model of a DC-8, Boag told the five-member safety board that the Arrow Air plane reached an adequate takeoff speed of 171 knots and appeared in good shape as its nose lifted off the runway.

Aquino may scuttle plant

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino, who has said she plans to scuttle operation of the Philippines' only nuclear power plant, today gave her Cabinet a week in which to submit recommendations on the $2 billion project, her spokesman said.

However, presidential spokesman Rene Saguisag said it appeared that most of the ministers were in favor of abandoning the plant for reasons of safety and economy.

"It seemed the drift was against proceeding with the operation of the plant," Saguisag said at a news briefing. "At one point President Aquino reminded all of us that (scuttling the project) was one of her campaign commitments."

Construction of the plant began in 1977, but was stopped for a year because of a scandal involving $35 million in commissions Westinghouse allegedly paid a close associate of Marcos.

Secret murder

The Free World will never win the war against international terrorism so long as any of its prominent members are willing to make secret, craven deals with the terrorists themselves. Incredibly, France and Italy struck a deal with international cutthroats during the 1970s.

According to news accounts, these countries allowed Libyan-sponsored terrorists and Palestine Liberation Organization operatives to pass freely through their airports, in return for assurances that French and Italian citizens would be spared from terrorist attacks. The details of these contemptible agreements were discovered last year by Reagan administration officials as they attempted, without success, to mobilize a united counter-terrorism campaign against Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

The secret deals have since fallen through for the obvious reason that there is no such thing as a gentleman's agreement with terrorists, who are not known for keeping their word.

Last year, to solidify the point, Arab terrorists bombed restaurants in Paris and attacked the Rome airport killing and maiming hundreds of innocent victims. It was this final shock that prompted the French and the Italian governments to scrap their non-aggression pacts with Khadafy and his PLO brethren.

Italy has partially redeemed itself of late by taking a tougher line against international terrorism. More than 40 terrorists are being held in Italian prisons. And guards armed with submachine guns now patrol the Rome airport that uses electrical devices to check passengers for weapons.

But France has yet to see the light. Despite the recent kidnapping of a French television crew in Beirut, Paris continues to resist the Reagan administration's call for economic and political sanctions against nations that harbor terrorists. In fact the French even provide most of the maintenance for Khadafy's state-owned airline that delivers these merchants of death to their appointed destinations.

Incredible as that is, Paris defends this business-as-usual approach to Libya by citing its need to maintain relations with the outlaw nation. Such rationalizations are almost identical to those four decades ago, when the Vichy government collaborated with Adolf Hitler.

Modern-day democracies that collaborate with Khadafy and his thugs are the spiritual heirs of those governments that gave aid and comfort to the Nazis. As such, their appeasement is the single greatest obstacle to the day when the Free World will finally join forces against international terrorism, one of the most feared evils in the waning years of this troubled century.

Terrorism is on the agenda of the economic summit meeting of the major democracies in June, and the French government says it will discuss the issue. President Reagan will have a golden opportunity to persuade President Francois Mitterrand to get off the fence. He certainly should attempt to do exactly that.

Duke fan missed 'humor'

Once again, the MRT sports editor, Ted Battles, has displayed a less than insightful basketball story which demonstrated his "blinded by Texas" attitude. Specifically, I'm referring to the post-NCAA championship game story of April 1.

Come on Mr. Editor, are you trying to strike a low blow at both Louisville and the state of Kentucky with your University of New Jersey, Louisville branch comment? I guess you forgot about the New York origins of our beloved Midland College team. A responsible sports editor should not throw stones in glass houses. But more importantly, don't try to demean the great achievement of some hardworking college kids with your irrelevant animadversions.

However, Mr. Editor, my real beef is with your disrespect of the Duke University basketball team. Maybe you don't think they deserved their No. 1 ranking, but let me explain to you why it's more than justified.

First, the Duke team epitomizes the concept of student-athlete. Just how many other college programs can boast a 100 percent graduation record (with no 5th year seniors and no physical education majors!)? Second, this Duke team you berated has won more college basketball games than any other team in history, they did it in the toughest conference in the nation, and they played many non-conference Top Twenty teams along the way. Third, to suggest that Duke was the overwhelming underdog is inane. The close score throughout the contest proved that was not the case. And finally, Mr. Editor, what was the logic of your statement that, "with victories over UNC and Duke...Denny Crum can claim the ACC title." To use that logic, since Louisville lost to both Kansas and NC State, both of which lost to Duke, Coach K could claim the NCAA title without even playing the championship game.

In closing, let me add that I did notice that this story of yours did appear in the April Fools Day issue. If I missed your attempt at a joke, please forgive me. As a loyal Duke fan, I just didn't think it was funny.

Forum draws thanks

I want to thank Midland's American Legion Woods Lynch Post 19 for hosting a political forum for local candidates Wednesday night, March 26.

In addition, the Post presented each candidate with an American or Texas flag and Texas Sesquicentennial lapel pin. These two patriotic items will serve me as kind reminders of the campaign.

For their interest in the local political process and their generosity, I thank the American Legion.

Where's civic pride?

Privatization does sound like a good idea to pursue. But how about civic pride and individual initiative?

Every shop owner and building manager pays for janitorial services. Would it be that much of an imposition to have the cleaning staff sweep the sidewalk, pick up trash in the gutter in front, and contribute to a cleaner Midland?

Cables track Khadafy's acts of terror

WASHINGTON — A series of State Department cables disclose the far-ranging, Libyan-sponsored acts of terrorism and subversion that aroused the Reagan administration's ire against Libyan troublemaker Moammar Khadafy.

Jack Anderson

The cables covered five years of incidents, from the Italian island of Sardinia to the deserts of Sudan — each one chronicled in detail by American Embassy officials in the countries targeted by Khadafy and his assassins. A 1981 report by the State Department's intelligence and research bureau, which had been classified Secret, attempted to sum up what was then known about Khadafy and to share this information with U.S. embassies.

"Libya has been an active supporter of international terrorism since at least 1972," the intelligence analysis noted, citing evidence that Khadafy had "targeted several world leaders" and carried out assassinations of Libyan exiles and dissidents in Europe and the Middle East.

"Khadafy's current focus is on subversion of neighboring North African states," the report warned. It specified that Sudan, Niger, Mali and Chad "have been among his targets." The intelligence experts estimated that Khadafy had spent "hundreds of millions in support of international terrorism since the early 1970s."

Among the disruptive actions Khadafy's oil millions financed were "operational assistance" to subversive militants, provision of safe houses and weapons, the use of Libyan embassies "as support bases for terrorist operations," and the sharing of intelligence.

Interestingly, the 1981 report noted that Libya also "provided false documentation for a variety of terrorists" — exactly what it was accused of doing for the terrorists who attacked the Rome and Vienna airports last December.

Reports from U.S. embassies in the next few years confirmed the 1981 intelligence warning. Here are some highlights of these cabled reports, which were obtained under the Freedom of Information Act by our associate Lucette Lagnado:

— In July 1982, the Madrid embassy learned of a Libyan plot to assassinate Saudi Arabia's King Fahd. "The group which would carry out the murder had access, through a U.S. agency intimately connected with the CIA, to the Saudi royal family's security measures," the embassy cabled.

— In March 1984, the embassy in Amman, Jordan, reported on a plot to destroy the Jordanian embassy in Libya. The cable said the Jordanian prime minister had provided details about the planned attack.

— In December 1982, the embassy in Rome reported a Libyan plot to help "separate Sardinia from Italy." Fifteen Sardinians had been arrested in the conspiracy. An Italian political party was implicated, as was "a Libyan by the name of Geri Mehed Tabet, currently at large, with whom the separatists apparently had contact in October 1981." The Libyan government was to supply money for the breakaway militants, who planned "to undertake a number of ambitious acts of sabotage at airports and a NATO military base ... (and) to kidnap an American military officer."

— In June 1984, a Libyan airline employee gunned down a Libyan-born shop-owner in downtown Athens. The victim, who survived, was the publisher of an anti-Khadafy paper. Three other Libyans in Greece were killed the following month.

— In July 1984, the embassy in Khartoum, Sudan, reported a plot by Libyan-backed terrorists to assassinate then-President Gaafar Nimeiry and blow up the American Embassy and other targets. The plotters were caught and confessed that their Sudanese revolutionary movement was led by "a Libyan hireling."

PENTAGON WATCH: When Congress passed a law in 1969 requiring ex-military personnel to report their employment with defense contractors to discourage favoritism among old service buddies, a sponsor of the bill remarked: "Sunshine is a great disinfectant." Unfortunately, the Pentagon's less than enthusiastic enforcement of the law has produced an environment more suited to mushroom-growing than disinfecting. Only 13.6 percent of former Army personnel comply with the law, according to a General Accounting Office investigation. About 18 percent of former Navy and Marine Corps people comply, while some 60 percent of ex-Air Force employees do.

JAMES RESTON

Shultz proposal favors quiet diplomacy

WASHINGTON — When Secretary of State Shultz came back from Europe the other day, he said that "we're not going anywhere" in U.S.-Soviet relations until we're able to have "some discussions that are relatively quiet and direct."

James Reston

It was a modest proposal. He wasn't arguing for the Old Diplomacy, when secret deals were struck between the nations, often at the expense and without the knowledge of their peoples.

Nor was he defending Woodrow Wilson's diplomatic dream of "open covenants openly arrived at." He was just saying that there was a time to shout and a time to shut up, and he seemed to be suggesting that maybe this was a time to follow General Jackson's famous order at the Battle of New Orleans: "Elevate them guns a little lower!"

There is, however, little chance that Shultz's common sense will be followed by this administration. It lives and may die by publicity and propaganda. It thinks that the gabby arts of politics work in the quieter corridors of diplomacy, and the Russians suffer from the same delusion.

Shultz knew when he came back home that Anatoly Dobrynin was returning to Washington to arrange another summit meeting between President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev. Shultz and Dobrynin will meet next Tuesday when the United States, having rejected Gorbachev's proposal for a ban on the testing of nuclear weapons, will be exploding another nuclear device underground in the Western desert.

Quiet diplomacy may be the secretary of state's formula for breaking the stalemate on arms control, regional conflicts and human rights, but ideological confrontation and warrior diplomacy is more popular at the Pentagon and the White House.

No sooner had Shultz's idea hit the headlines than some anonymous officials came forward with a different analysis of the forthcoming summit meeting.

The administration, they said, is not going to be fooled by Gorbachev's effort to concentrate on what the United States regards as the "narrow focus" of nuclear arms control. It wants a nuclear agreement, but is prepared to do without it if it cannot get agreement on other issues in Afghanistan and elsewhere in the third world.

Nothing new in that. This is what is called the Reagan Doctrine: defend democracy everywhere from Nicaragua to Angola. Regardless of what Shultz says, there are others here high in the administration who, like the anonymous officials, think that Washington now has Gorbachev "on the run"; that Reagan has produced a new balance of power in the world; that as they say, he "got the best of Gorbachev" at the Geneva summit, and that Gorbachev is trapped in a failing economy and must negotiate on the president's terms.

All this may be true, but it's not precisely what Shultz had in mind as the best way to have a "quiet and direct" discussion of U.S.-Soviet differences.

The Old Diplomacy had its faults, but it also had its standards, developed over the centuries. One of them was that diplomacy wouldn't change geography, and that the nations would probably have to live together long after contemporary politicians had vanished from the scene.

The Old Diplomacy boys were particularly skeptical of what they called "the fatal artillery of popular excitation," and of encouraging animosity between one nation and another.

They had a catalogue of maxims, all of which are out of favor today in Washington and Moscow, but may be worth mentioning in the present fevered atmosphere:

— Diplomacy is a written, rather than a verbal art. The high roads of history are strewn with little shrines of peace that have either been left unfinished, or have collapsed when completed for the sole reason that their foundations were built on the sands of some verbal misconception.

— Doubtless the art of lying has on occasion been successfully practiced ... but a lie always leaves in its wake a drop of poison.

— Don't be deceived by the narcotic power of ill-considered slogans or propaganda. In the end it is not brilliance but rectitude that counts.

— Talleyrand: "Et surtout pas trop de z'ele!" — And above everything, do not allow yourself to be excited about your work.

— Propaganda is the curse of diplomacy because it violates the two most important qualities in negotiations between states: truthfulness and precision.

There is a world of difference between U.S. and Soviet diplomacy, but they have at least one thing in common: they have debased modern diplomacy by breaking almost every one of the old maxims.

ART BUCHWALD

It's plane crazy to land on golf course!

Since the Reagan Administration has put parts of the United States up for sale, everyone is bidding on our more valuable properties. A British company has tendered an offer through the N.M. Rothschild Bank to buy Dulles and National airports. The Brits are willing to pay $1 billion. This seems like a lot of money if you're thinking landing strips. But it's a spit in the bucket if you're talking real estate.

Art Buchwald

Jeff Doranz, America's leading developer, hopes to outbid the British for the two airports. He believes that air terminals have a great untapped potential for mass housing.

"If you bought Dulles and National airports, would you tear down the present terminals?" I asked him.

"On the contrary, the terminals are very decorative and fit in with our housing and shopping architecture."

"Will you still permit planes to take off and land?"

"We will not only permit it, but encourage it. What we'll be selling with our condominiums is access to the airports. We're aiming our sales at the person who is always on an airplane. As a matter of fact we want to put flashing signs at the ends of the runways which will say, 'If you lived here you'd be home now.'"

"Where on the field do you plan to construct your housing developments?"

He took out his blueprints. "Right here, along both sides of the runway. We want to make this place a family community. On warm nights we hope people will sit in their back yards, drink beer and wave at the passengers as they whiz by."

"The houses don't leave much room for the pilots to land," I pointed out.

"The pilots don't need much room as long as the townhouse gaslights act as beacons for them."

"Will the frightful noise be a negative factor for your homeowners?"

Doranz said, "Why should it be? Residents will have pride of ownership in what the airports do. When they hear a roar overhead they'll sleep better knowing People's Express is bringing another payload safely home."

I studied Doranz' blueprints. "What's this circle located in the middle of the runway at National Airport?"

"That's the golf course."

"You are seriously building a golf course on the National runway?"

"Where would you build one if you owned an airport? As the primary developers we don't have much space to work with. We have the Potomac on one side and this highway on the other. The only place for golf links is here, unless the government wants to sell us I-95."

"How do you play golf with the planes taxiing up and down all day long?"

"Golfers who buy into the development will have priority over the planes. Our flight tower will be instructed to hold up on all landings and takeoffs until the members play through."

"Where are you going to put the shopping center?"

"Here on the first three floors of our 40-story hotel and office tower. We have to build up because we can't spread out."

"Does that mean you will raze all these giant repair hangars?"

"Of course not. We're just going to move the planes out and the cars in. Airplane hangars make marvelous parking garages for automobiles. When you buy a terminal you have to use every inch of the ground for revenue. The reason airports are losing money these days is they spend too much on servicing planes."

"Tell me the truth, Doranz. If you buy National and Dulles airports from the government, will you still allow air traffic to use them?"

"We will for the time being. But all bets are off if we need another golf course."

WORLD in brief

Railway bomb reported

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A bomb exploded in a public toilet near a Johannesburg railway station today, killing one man and injuring four other people, police said.

Maj. Steve Von Rooyen at police headquarters in Pretoria said an explosive device went off at 1:04 p.m. (6:04 a.m. EST) in a municipal toilet at a bus stop near the Verdedorp railway station in downtown Johannesburg.

Von Rooyen said he had no details on the condition of the injured.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing.

Source denies TV report

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A Luxembourg television station says Soviet dissident Andrei D. Sakharov will be allowed to leave the Soviet Union before May 18, but a government source denied the report.

RTL-Plus, a German-language television station reported late Tuesday that Sakharov, who has been banished to the closed Soviet city of Gorky, will be traded on Berlin's Glienicke bridge for spies held in the West.

The bridge is the same place where Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky was freed Feb. 11.

However, a West German government source who is in a position to know, said: "There are no such plans."

Tehran blast reported

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A bomb concealed in a van exploded today on a crowded street in Iran's capital, Tehran, killing a 70-year-old passerby and injuring 17 other people, Iran's official news agency said.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said six of the injured were in critical condition at Sina Hospital.

It said the bomb was planted in a van parked on Khayyam Avenue, near Tehran's bazaar, and exploded just after 1 p.m. Four cars were destroyed and 22 shops were damaged, it said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing. IRNA, however, blamed "counter-revolutionary groups, backed by imperialist governments."

Indian eunuchs gather

BHOPAL, India (AP) — Three thousand eunuchs wearing garish makeup, gaudy saris, bangles and bells are holding their first national convention, a carnival of singing and dancing in the streets.

Eunuchs, despised but tolerated, have gathered in this central India city for a 10-day festival to proclaim their cult's new national guru, 65-year-old Bismillah Bi.

India is thought to have more eunuchs than any other country, with estimates ranging from 50,000 to more than 100,000. Known as "hijras" in Hindi, they are increasingly active, politically organized and demanding fair treatment and equal rights.

Most are beggars, singers and dancers. Eunuchs still are invited to sing and dance at weddings and especially at the births of children. They also are known for threatening those who don't pay.

Chinese collision kills 14

PEKING (AP) — Fourteen people are known to have died and six are missing and presumed dead in the collision of a freighter and a dredging vessel at the mouth of the Pearl River east of Canton, the official English-language China Daily reported today.

All 20 people on board the freighter Yuehai 311 were thrown overboard in the March 27 collision, it said.

Fourteen bodies have been recovered and six are still missing, it said.

Two terrorists arrested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Security forces have arrested two Libyan-trained terrorists sent to South Africa to assassinate prominent black leaders, Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel said today.

Nel, at a news conference in Cape Town, said the men were members of the Pan African Congress, a black nationalist guerrilla group, and were arrested during the last weekend in March.

Nel said the two arrested suspects were among a group of 150 Pan African Congress members who received political and military training in Libya starting in 1982. He said they were sent to South Africa to mobilize black university students and assassinate certain black leaders.

Group asks for change

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of 60 Western Hemisphere opinion leaders called on the United States today to end its support for Nicaraguan rebels and also urged the Sandinista government to renounce subversion and reduce its Soviet bloc military ties.

A report issued by Inter-American Dialogue, a group of citizens from the United States, Canada, Latin America and the Caribbean, said the present course of both the Reagan administration and Nicaragua "could produce U.S. military intervention."

In calling for an end to U.S. aid to the Contra rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government, the report said present American policy offers no solution to the security problems posed by Nicaragua and "obstructs progress toward a negotiated settlement that could protect all of Central America."

Gavin resignation nets criticism

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican press met U.S. Ambassador John Gavin's surprise resignation much as it has throughout his five years here — with criticism.

The actor-turned-diplomat announced Monday he was stepping down in mid-May as head of the largest U.S. diplomatic mission in the world. But Gavin, 55, gave no hint of his future plans, saying only he "would return to the private sector ... to meet new challenges."

Gavin had telephoned President Miguel de la Madrid to tell him of his decision before announcing it to the press Monday, and the two met privately for about 30 minutes Tuesday, the government news agency Notimex said.

De la Madrid told Gavin it was the "permanent policy of Mexico to maintain cordial, dignified and fruitful relations with the United States and always to use the diplomatic route to solve problems," Notimex said.

Newspapers, meanwhile, had another field day with Gavin, who once said such criticism was predictable in his position.

A front-page political column in El Universal said, "One of the best news stories that Mexicans have received ... is the resignation of John Gavin as U.S. ambassador in our country."

The same column also said, "Arrogant, imprudent and meddlesome in national affairs, the ex-actor is one of the most ghastly ambassadors" in many years.

The leftist La Jornada newspaper also noted Gavin was roundly criticized for meeting with members of the conservative opposition National Action Party, a move that prompted widespread charges two years ago that the ambassador was meddling in internal affairs.

El Financiero, the financial daily, ran a cartoon of a man reading a newspaper with the headline "Gavin Resigns" and saying, "Now, who will follow, Woody Allen or Jerry Lewis?"

Missile resolutions readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional opponents of selling nearly 2,000 missiles to Saudi Arabia say they will introduce resolutions disapproving the Reagan administration plan.

The White House sent Congress on Tuesday the formal notification of the previously announced deal, starting a 30-day period during which Congress can block the sale.

Sens. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said they have 55 co-sponsors for their disapproval resolution, which they said would be introduced today in the Republican-controlled chamber.

Lautenberg said he opposes the sale, which would include ground-to-air Stinger missiles, because the Saudis already have all the missiles they need and because they support the Palestine Liberation Organization, which has sworn to dismantle Israel.

"Since the Saudis already have enough Stingers for their own needs, and have a history of cooperation with the PLO, the Stingers we sell might be provided to, or fall into, the hands of the PLO," he said Tuesday.

In the Democratic-run House, Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., planned to introduce a similar resolution, but it only had 152 co-signers Tuesday, which is less than a majority in the 435-member body.

For the deal to be blocked, both the House and Senate would have to pass disapproval resolutions and then would have to vote by a margin of two-thirds to override a presidential veto.

The deal was smaller than the original proposal, which would have provided about $1.1 billion worth of U.S. arms to the Saudis.

Thunderstorms in area forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Cloudy to partly cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms are in the forecast for Thursday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The high is expected to reach into the lower 70s.

Tonight, the chance of showers or thunderstorms is also 30 percent. The overnight low will be in the middle 50s with easterly winds at 10-20 mph. Winds will shift to the southwest at 10-15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 88 was 7 degrees below the record high set for the date in 1963. This morning's low was 33 degrees above the record low of 20 set for this date in 1973.

STATE

A weak cold front moved into extreme South Texas today, triggering scattered showers in the middle Rio Grande plains and thunderstorms over parts of the Hill Country and eastern sections, where trees were blown down.

The National Weather Service said other showers and light rain were scattered over the eastern Panhandle, northern South Plains and the Red River valley around Wichita Falls.

The front triggered strong thunderstorms over parts of South Texas Tuesday night. Winds and large hail toppled trees and interrupted utility services in some counties in Southeast Texas.

A Polk County sheriff's officer removed a tree from one road near Livingston, where three-quarter inch hail was reported from one of the stronger thunderstorms, a Livingston police dispatcher said.

A high-pressure system building southward across the state kept skies partly cloudy to cloudy elsewhere in the state as drier, cooler air continued to filter into North and West Texas.

NATION

Nevada high country had snow today, snowshowers ranged from the Great Lakes to northern New England and rain dampened sections of the Plains, Gulf Coast and Atlantic Coast regions.

A snow-prompted travelers' advisory warning of as much as 4 inches of snow was posted in northeast Nevada for elevations above 6,000 feet while the central Rockies had snowshowers at higher elevations and rainshowers elsewhere.

Snowshowers spread from the Great Lakes across upstate New York to northern New England.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the central Gulf Coast region and the southern Plains while rain spread over the middle Atlantic Coast region.

Guzman, Rangers record opening night surprise

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Jose Guzman became the first rookie to record a win in a major-league opener in five years Tuesday night. It wasn't easy.

The right-hander from Puerto Rico had to survive a sixth-inning scare to take the Texas Rangers to a 6-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays before a record opening crowd of 40,206.

Guzman, who got his chance because veteran knuckleballer Charlie Hough broke a finger shaking hands in training camp, celebrates his 23rd birthday on Wednesday.

"This is my present to my fans in Puerto Rico," he said.

Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers was the last rookie to win an opener, in 1981. Guzman, who was 3-2 after coming up from the minors last year, allowed eight hits in eight innings.

AL Roundup

Guzman appeared to tire in the sixth inning but Manager Bobb' Valentine stayed with him until Greg Harris came on in the ninth.

"I wasn't tired and I told him (Valentine) that I'll be more aggressive," said Guzman. "I got out of the jam and I felt good but Bobby wanted a fresh arm in there in the ninth inning."

Guzman said he didn't have opening night jitters.

"I wasn't nervous because I had pitched with the Rangers last year," said Guzman. "I had a good sinker and a good slider and good control."

Guzman struck out three and didn't walk a batter.

Don Slaught hit a two-run homer and Larry Parrish drilled a three-run opposite field homer to give Guzman all the backing he needed.

The crowd beat the old mark of 40,078 for an opening game against the New York Yankees in 1978.

Toronto's Dave Stieb, the AL earned run king last year, lasted only 41-3 innings in taking the loss in the managerial debut of the Blue Jays' Jimy Williams.

Slaught hit an 0-2 pitch over the left field wall after Parrish had singled in the fourth inning. Curtis Wilkerson then walked, stole second, and scored on Oddibe McDowell's single for a 3-0 lead.

Rookie Pete Incaviglia delivered his first major league hit, a double, Gary Ward singled and Parrish hit a three-run homer off reliever Mark Eichhorn in the fifth inning.

The Blue Jays struck for three runs in the sixth. Damaso Garcia singled and moved to third on Lloyd Moseby's double. Rance Mulliniks doubled both runners home. George Bell scored Mulliniks with a single to cut the deficit to 6-3.

Mariners 8, Angels 4

If the Seattle Mariners played every game the way they perform on Opening Night, they'd be a smash hit throughout the baseball season.

The Mariners won their fifth straight opener Tuesday night in dramatic fashion. Trailing 4-2 in the ninth, Seattle rallied on two home runs by Jim Presley — a two-run shot off California relief ace Donnie Moore in the ninth and a grand slam against Ken Forsch in the 10th — to stun the Angels 8-4.

"You bet I'm excited," Presley said. "It seems like these guys beat us all the time last year and I wanted to go out and play as hard as I could against them."

Presley hit 28 homers for the Mariners last season. But he rarely has been in a position to provide such dramatic fireworks.

Cooper frosh wears down Rebels, 6-5

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

So much for the theory that experience is necessary in a big game. It's a good bet Abilene Cooper's Scott Pugh doesn't believe it. That's Pugh, as in freshman, ninth-grader, young.

DISTRICT 4-5A

All the Cougar first baseman did in a 6-5 win over Midland Lee Tuesday was go 4-for-4, score one run and knock in one that proved to be the difference in the game. Also, he was 2-for-2 in stolen base attempts.

"That Pugh kid, he's only a ninth grader and he wore us out," said Rebel coach Ernie Johnson.

"He's got more natural talent than any player I've ever seen," said Cooper coach Andy Malone. "He's going to be something."

The Cougars, who moved into sole possession of first place with the victory, combined with a 4-2 Big Spring win over Odessa Permian, had two scoring rallies against Lee and Pugh was involved in both.

IN THE top of the first inning, with two runs already in because of the only two Lee errors of the day and the bases empty, Pugh started things anew with a single up the middle. He eventually scored on Danny Whitford's single to left for a 3-0 lead.

The Rebels countered in the bottom of the inning with an infield single by Terry Baxter which led to David Barrow reaching on a fielder's choice. After stealing second, Barrow went to third on Danny Guerra's pinch hit groundout for injured catcher Jason Logi.

Raul Pena, one of two Lee hitting stars with 3-of-4 performances — the other being Jay McCarty — stroked a single to left for a 3-1 Cooper lead.

PITCHERS DAVID Tollison for Cooper and Tuey Rankin for Lee took over and went through the next four innings without giving up any runs, taking the two-run margin into the sixth.

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Abilene Cooper's Danny Whitford dives back to first as Midland Lee's Michael Acosta fields the pick off attempt in Tuesday's District 4-5A action. Cooper won, 6-5, to take over first place all alone.

After a walk and two singles for a run, Johnson called on Durian Jenkins to relieve Rankin. However, two more runs would score before the top half of the inning would come to an end, including the deciding run knocked in by Pugh.

Undaunted, the Rebels mounted a rally in their half of the inning. With one out, Scott Smith, who replaced Logi at catcher, walked, went to second on Pena's infield single and scored on McCarty's single to left.

Jenkins collected a third single to load the bases and Chad Jordan knocked in two runs with his single to right. Joe Eldridge walked and and J.P. Kistler came in to relieve.

With Mike Acosta at the plate, the Rebels almost got a free run when Kistler bounced a pitch to the back stop. Cooper catcher Chris Moore ran it down, tossed it back to Kistler who applied the tag on Jenkins.

'Dogs win, return to tie for 2nd

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The Midland High Bulldogs moved back into a District 4-5A two-way tie for second place Tuesday with an 8-1 victory over Abilene High combined with a 4-2 Big Spring win over Odessa Permian.

The Bulldogs and Panthers are tied at 6-3, one game behind district defending champion Abilene Cooper, a 6-5 winner over Midland Lee. In other actioi, Odessa High finally notched one in the win column, knocking off San Angelo 9-8 despite making six errors and being out-hit 15-6.

4-5A

The Bulldogs jumped on Eagle starter Victor Rodriquez in the first two innings for three runs and picked up five more in the fifth, all but one unearned as Abilene defenders booted five chances.

Meanwhile, Bulldog starter Kenny De La Garza returned to form, going the distance allowing five hits and one walk for an unearned run while striking out 12.

THE BIG Spring Steers continued to play the hottest baseball in the league Tuesday with their fifth straight victory to reach .500 for the first time this season.

At 8-8-1 overall, the Steers have made a tremendous comeback and, after losing their first four district games, are seeing glimmering hopes of playoffs. With five games left to play, the Steers are only one game behind Permian and Midland High.

Midland takes early lead, but falls to San Antonio, 5-3

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO—Midland's Angels started the Texas League season off and running Tuesday taking an early 3-1 lead, but the pitching staff couldn't hang on as San Antonio came back to earn a 5-3 opening night victory.

Midland starter Mike Cook yielded a pair of runs to the Dodgers in the fifth inning to knot the score at three, then reliever Rafael Pimental served up a two-run triple to designated hitter Tracy Woodson for the game-winner in the eighth inning.

The Angels got the ball rolling early, however, playing a run in the first inning thanks to a walk to Mark McLemore, and back-to-back singles by Raul Tovar and Sap Randall.

Tovar, the center fielder, tripled home another run in the third and came home himself on a fielder's choice by Randall. Starter Shawn Hillegas earned the win for the Dodgers, while Jeff Edwards earned a save.

The Angels, 0-1, will try again tonight at 7 p.m. (KUFO radio) with Sherman Corbett on the hill against San Antonio.

Dickens signs with West Texas

From Staff Reports

District 4-5A's player of the year, Anthony Dickens of Midland Lee, will sign a national letter-of-intent to play basketball with West Texas State tonight at his home.

Dickens, the leading rebounder and scorer for Lee's district runner-up team, chose to play basketball for West Texas State rather than accept a football offer.

Dickens was a three-year starter for Rebel coach Paul Stueckler and averaged 16.1 points last season.

In 1986-87, the Buffalos will break a 14-year association with the Missouri Valley Conference and drop down to Division II as a member of the Lone Star Conference.

WTSU head coach Gary Moss and assistant coach Anthony Smith envision Dickens, a 6-5 post player for Lee, as a power forward whose main task is rebounding in his freshman season.

"We think Anthony can help us build a strong foundation to be competitive year-in and year-out in the Lone Star Conference," Smith said. "We think he can play a power forward right now, and as he develops more ballhandling skills, maybe a shooting forward. He's never been through complete basketball training, he's gone straight from the football field onto the basketball court."

Other Tall City players like Dickens' teammate at Lee, Lee Dixon, and Midland High's Elvin Mackey, Matt Sears and Anthony Deande will be looking to play at smaller schools and junior colleges next season.

Hampton to sign with UT

From Staff Reports

Hurdler Quinuts Hampton, a senior on the Midland Lee track team, will sign a letter-of-intent today to compete for Texas.

Hampton holds the Rebel record of 37.23 in the 300 hurdles and is unbeaten in that event this season. He also runs the 110 high hurdles for the Rebels. At Texas, Hampton will run for track coach Stan Huntsman, who will be the U.S. Olympic coach for the 1988 games.

Hampton's 37.23 in the 300 is the second fastest time in the state this season, trailing only James Armstrong of Dallas Pinkston at 36.22. But Hampton, who has been slowed by a hamstring injury this season, expects to go much lower before the season comes to a close.

Sherrill through second guessing

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

When Jackie Sherrill walked off and left the team that was favored to win the national championship at Pitt, it was because Texas A&M made him an offer he couldn't refuse.

"We had finished No. 2 three straight times," recalled Sherrill, and arrival of quarterback Dan Marino was about to end all that always-a-bridesmaid business.

It would have been understandable if Sherrill, in the face of adversity, criticism and disaappointment, had had second thoughts about the move. And now that the Aggies have tasted success and reign as Southwest Conference and Cotton Bowl champions, it's still a case of accepting the bitter with the sweet.

During A&M's moment of triumph last December Cotton Bowl preparations for Auburn were flagged in the press for illegal procedure, particularly in regard to Kevin Murray, the Aggies' talented quarterback.

A&M hasn't been alone. Virtually the entire SWC has felt the slings and arrows of suspicion...ever since the NCAA threw the book at SMU.

"THE SWC isn't any different than the SEC, the Pac-10 or Big 10," Sherrill said, pointing out the publicity involving SWC teams was fueled by circumstances.

"The Texas and University of Houston charges broke during the Final Four build up. With A&M, it was before the Cotton Bowl game. All received maximum publicity. On the other hand, the University of Tennessee didn't receive that kind of attention. They also aren't in an area where media competition is as keen."

As for the Aggies' plight, Sherrill, despite the fuss and his discouraging of interviews during the bowl preparations, feels A&M is clean.

"We asked the NCAA to look into the charges involving Kevin Murray. I feel comfortable with our position. Some 200 to 300 people were interviewed," said Sherrill who flew into Midland after practice Tuesday to speak to the Permian Basin Landman's Association in the Midland Center.

IN THE area of tightened admission standards for incoming freshmen, Sherrill, who already had a faculty group serving as a screening committee for Aggie student-athletes, says "It won't affect us. This year's group was the strongest we've recruited academically and we have outstanding students on the team, players carrying 3.3, 3.2 grade point averages.

Sherrill started out at Alabama as a biology major with an eye toward medicine and then switched to business. "I was getting straight A's and looking ahead to becoming a CPA until I encountered Cost and Theory." That's also about the time that Sherrill began hearing the coaching call. The point is that academics were never regarded as a necessary evil by the A&M coach.

"In fact, a football player is the No.1 student in liberal arts, Kip Corrington, our free safety," he points out proudly.

THE AGGIES received high grades for corralling talent in the recent high school signings, but Sherrill cautions, "You never know until they get there how well you've done. But I think we definitely got some help up front."

To make it back-to-back SWC titles, Sherrill feels it is imperative Domingo Bryant and Doug Williams and the other top seniors be replaced. "We must find one or two receivers for depth, two offensive tackles and in the secondary we have five or six, but need eight or 10."

On turning points in the Aggie program, Sherrill contends it came from the character and determination of "the seniors we recruited four years ago, our first group. A lot of coaches like to take the credit for success, but it wasn't Jackie Sherrill or an assistant who stopped Bo Jackson down on the goal line in the Cotton Bowl Game. It was the kids on the field.

"Our job is to teach, motivate and make the players understand what we are trying to do. But it's the players who get the job done."

THE DIFFERENCE between coaching at Pitt and in the SWC, says Sherrill, "is speed. At Pitt we had more size. We are getting bigger down here now, and the SWC still has the advantage in size and skill people."

And what's it like moving from Pitt to Texas? "When I came to College Station they called me a city slicker," says Sherrill who was born in Texas, raised in Oklahoma, has a father buried in Rankin and once, as a 10-year-old was a pin-setter at a Midland bowling alley while visiting his sister.

"Of course, when I went to Pittsburgh, they called me a country bumpkin."

Sometimes a guy just can't win for losing, although in Sherrill's case maybe it should be can't lose for winning.

Grace chooses Sooners over SMU

From Staff Reports

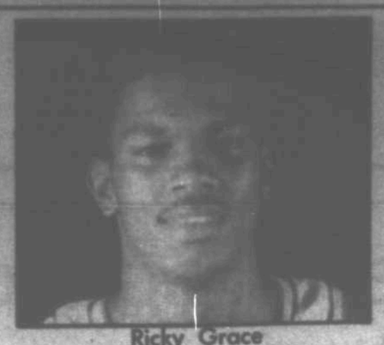

Midland College's Ricky Grace will sign a national letter to play for Oklahoma and coach Billy Tubbs today, leading a parade of four MC sophomores that will attend four year schools.

Grace, the Chaparrals all-time assist leader, will step in and play point guard for the Sooners, runners-up in the Big Eight in 1985-86. Joining Grace in stepping up to four-year schools are Eddie Frazier and Derrick Lewis who are expected to sign with Central Missouri in Warrensburg, Mo., and Tony Wright who is leaning toward Iona, in New Rochelle, N.Y.

The four are the only sophomores MC coach Jerry Stone carried his 33-1 team last season.

Grace agreed to Oklahoma despite an 11th hour pitch by North Carolina State's Tom Abatemarco at the NJCAA All Star Classic on Sunday. He had also been seriously considering SMU. Frazier chose Central Missouri though Wyoming's Tom Brandenburg showed considerable interest after his all star showing.

Lewis picked Central after earlier talks with Eastern Kentucky.

Tulsa drilled by Shreveport in TL opener

Texas League

Shreveport centerfielder Deron McCue scored on a first-inning groundout to help the Captains to a 6-2 victory over the Tulsa Drillers in a Texas League baseball opener.

McCue walked, then advanced to third on single by catcher Mackey Sasser and scored on the groundout by rightfielder Alan Cockrell.

In other league play Tuesday, San Antonio edged Midland 5-3, El Paso beat Beaumont 3-0 and Arkansas squeezed by Jackson 5-4.

The Captains added two more runs in the third when McCue and Sasser singled and Cockrell doubled both in. Shreveport also had runs in the fourth and eighth innings.

The Drillers scored in the fifth on a double by third baseman Bob Gergen and got a single by designated hitter Javier Ortiz. Tulsa scored again in the eighth on three singles and a sacrifice fly by catcher mike stanley.

Charlie Corbell was the winner while Dan Olson took the loss.

Alex Madrid, 1-0, was credited with the win for El Paso. The Diablos outhit the Golden Gators 8-3. Candy Sierra was the losing pitcher.

Arkansas third baseman Dave Clements doubled a 2-2 pitch with two outs in the bottom of the ninth off the left-field wall, scoring two runs.

The Travelers went up 1-0 in the first inning when Lance Johnson. He reached on a double, advanced to third on Rod Booker's single and scored on a wild pitch.

In the third, Jackson took a 3-1 lead when Shawn Abner tripled to score two runners and then went home on Paul Hertzler's single.

Booker scored in the fourth on a single by Eddie Tanner but Jackson made it 4-2 in the fifth when Abner doubled and scored on a single by Jason Felice. Tanner scored Arkansas' third run after walking, stealing second and going home on a Mark Dougherty single.

Rick Embser won the game in relief of Al Morelock. Jim Adamczak took the loss for the Mets.

Local Golf Roundup

MC returns to WJCAC play

From Staff Reports

Midland College's first place golfers return to conference action Friday when the when the Chaparrals visit the New Mexico Military Institute course at Roswell.

The tournament at NMMI is the fourth conference tournament of the season and the first since fall action concluded with the Chaps in first place.

Coach Delnor Poss had to find some mid-year replacements and his concern is how well they can respond to the pressures of conference play.

Midland College leads the conference race halfway through with 15 points, New Mexico Junior College is second with 13 points, Odessa College has 12, NMMI has 10, Western Texas has 8 and South Plains has 6. Teams receive six points for a first place finish, five for second place, and down to 1 point for a sixth place finish.

Poss will count on sophomore lettermen Raymond Cole and Leon Van Rensburg to balance a young team. Newcomers Ken Tresoor, Glenn Collins, Tracy Hayden and Gordon Wessels round out this spring's squad.

MC Mustangs host tourney

From Staff Reports

Midland Christian's Kevin Wallum fired an 80 to lead the Mustangs to a second place team finish in the first annual Midland Christian Invitational at Hogan Park Tuesday.

Seagraves, led by a fine 73 from Randy Cavasos, took the team title by 14 strokes over runner up MC. Wallum's 80 was good for third place after Brett Dillon of Seagraves defeated Wallum on the first hole of a playoff for second.

MC qualified for the state Texas Association of Private Schools tournament in Waco, April 25-26. Midland Christian team members are Wallum, R.P. Johnson, Danny Sartain, Lucas Hendrickson and Robert Franklin.

Midland Christian Invitational (at Hogan Park),
Team Totals: 1. Seagraves 337. 2. Midland Christian 351. 3. Loop 385.
Individuals: 1. Randy Cavasos, Seagraves, 73. 2. (tie) Kevin Wallum, MC, Brett Dillon, Seagraves, 80; Kevin Wallum, MC, 80.

Brewer to hold clinic in Odessa

Lee's Jake Young a THSCA All Star

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee's Jake Young has been selected to participate in the Texas High School Coaches Association All Star game in Houston at the end of July.

Young, Lee's All State offensive lineman, has signed to play for Nebraska. He is the lone Tall City selection in the prestigious statewide all star game.

Tors' Mason a Raider

From Staff Reports

Texas Tech's Gerald Myers dipped into the local talent pool to come up with sharpshooting Jerry Mason of Lamesa today as national letter-of-intents were signed around the nation.

Mason, selected to the first team Class 4A All State squad for the second year in a row, chose the Red Raiders over Wyoming, Seton Hall, Texas and Missouri.

Mason, a four-year starter for Tornado coach Wayne Roberts, averaged more than 30 points a game his senior season, helping Lamesa stretch their three year win streak in District 2-4A including a pair of buzzer-beating jumpers over arch-rival Andrews.

The 6-3 Mason could step right in to the shooting guard spot for the two-time defending Southwest Conference tournament champions.

"Coach Myers told me he was No. 1 on the list this year," Roberts said. "He definitley thinks Jerry will be a scorer in the Southwest Conference. He also thinks the three-point play will be right in his range. Some people think with Jerry and point guard Sean Gay they will have one of the top backcourts around."

REBELS

Two walks later, including an RBI walk to Michael Brown, and Kistler was replaced by Scott Malone who got David Barrow to hit a dribbler to third to end the inning at 6-5.

The Rebels threatened again in the seventh. With Tollison back on the mound and one gone, Pena singled to left and moved to second on McCarty's burning shot toward third base.

Whitford dived for the hit and kept it in the infield when it smashed into his shoulder, keeping Pena from advancing any further. Jenkins followed with a pop out to center field and Chad Jordon grounded into a fielder's choice to end the game.

"THAT'S TWO times in a row in this town we've had it rough," said Malone, referring to a 2-1 loss to Midland High in the first half of the season. "Lee played us as well as they could play without an overpowering pitcher. It's hard to win without an over-powering pitcher."

According to Malone, the key to victory was Whitford knocking down McCarty's single in the seventh inning which, if it went through, could've put Pena on third and made for a different ball game.

"That was the play that saved us," said Malone. "Whitford knocked that ball down in the seventh. It liked to have killed him."

Johnson, whose team is 4-5 and in a deep hole as far as playoffs are concerned, "thought we fought real hard, tried real hard. We had our chances with the bases loaded but didn't get the hit."

As to the pitching of Rankin, Johnson said, "Tuey just ran out of gas. He pitched well until that last inning when he lost control. But, he hasn't gone that long before and it finally took its toll."

And, about hitting, he added, "If two players got six hits, we must not have hit very well. Pena has never had any trouble hitting the ball, he's been the most consistent overall this year. McCarty is real hot right now and that's why he's moved up in the order. He was eighth for awhile but he's been coming on."

REBEL NOTES: The Rebels travel to Odessa on Saturday where they take on the troubled Mojo at Permian Field at 2 p.m. The Panthers have lost two straight, including Tuesday's 4-2 gorging by the Big Spring Steers...Logi's injury in the first inning was somewhat of a fluke. While batting, the Rebel catcher drilled a pitch into the dirt only to have it bounce back up and bust his nose. "The doctor told him not to do anything unitl about Thursday," said Johnson, who is going to look for a batting helmet with a face guard...

Big Spring took the lead in the bottom of the second inning and held it until the top of the sixth when Randy Hayworth stroked a two-run triple.

However, the Steers weren't to be denied, ending the inning with two runs of their own for a 4-2 lead.

Carey Fraser lasted five innings before giving way to Mike Dodd, who gave up a hit and walked two before leaving for Aaron Allen.

The sophomore lefty pitched out of the jam and went on to claim the victory for a 1-2 record. Larry Hill took the loss and fell to 6-3 on the year.

ODESSA HIGH can offer proof that hitting and defense don't mean much when the opposing team can't pitch.

The Bronchos were outhit 15-6 by the Bobcats and committed six errors against San Angelo's zero. Yet, they won the game, 9-8 because San Angelo pitchers walked 11 batters and hit one.

The Bronchos mounted their rally in the final two innings. Trailing 8-0, OHS scored five in the bottom of the sixth and four more in the seventh for only their third win in 17 games this season.

Jeff Wright was the only Broncho with more than one hit, going 2-for-3 with two runs and two RBIs.

'Old men' Kriek, Noah advance in WCT finals

DALLAS (AP) — Johan Kriek, in his third appearance at the WCT finals tennis tournament, says he changed his strategy against Brad Gilbert in the fifth set of a two-hour, 45-minute marathon.

"I tried to come in (to the net) a little bit more, and then I served and volleyed some on my second serves," Kriek said Tuesday. "I gambled a little bit more. It surprised him."

Kriek, a native of South Africa, defeated the 24-year-old Californian, 6-4, 6-1, 2-6, 4-6, 6-3 on Tuesday night after turning a 0-2 deficit around.

The two "old men" of the $500,000 tournament — Kriek at age 28 and Yannick Noah at age 25 — won their first-round matches and advanced to the quarterfinals tonight and Thursday night.

Kriek, ranked 14th in the world, will meet top-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden tonight in the quarterfinals of the tournament, whose 12 players have an average age of 22¼.

MHS JV wins

From Staff Reports

The Midland High junior varsity squeezed out a 6-5 win over Seminole varsity Tuesday, to up the District 4-5A record to 8-2.

Sam Sowder led the Bullpups with two hits and three RBI, including the game winner. Scott DeVore also stroked a hit and an RBI as the 'Pups only managed four hits total. Jamie Surratt earned the win.

MHS will return to action Friday with a non-district game at Andrews at 4:30 p.m.

Thursday, April 10, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Improve the lines of communication at work and you will enjoy greater job satisfaction. Your energy and enthusiasm are contagious. You appreciate variety and find it in a constantly changing romantic relationship. Partner refuses to be taken for granted. Be open to new ideas. Those who cannot adapt to changing conditions will be left behind. Show your flexibility. An imaginative promotional campaign brings intriguing job offers.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Clare Booth Luce, former Davis Cup captain Arthur Ashe, actor Omar Sharif, actor Chuck Connors, CBS sports commentator John Madden, actor-sportscaster Don Meredith, Russian leader V.I. Lenin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keeping your financial dealings secret will work to your advantage. Discuss original ideas only with those who can put them into action. A letter or phone call brings exciting news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stay within your budget and pay closer attention to detail. The spotlight is on your ability to manage both money and people.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A long-distance call could open important doors, enabling you to move up at work. Travel may be necessary to finalize business negotiations. A candid chat will get romance back on track.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Investments need constant attention. Profits rise when you stay on a steady course. Concentration is the key to making the right choices now. Steer clear of troublemakers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An emotional upset could work to your advantage in the long run. Your hopes and confidence rise. Better days lie just ahead! Refuse to be pressured into making a commitment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Unconventional thinking could line your pockets with extra dollars. Be imaginative. Do what higher-ups request even if you don't understand their strategy. Time will show who had the right idea.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone who comes on strong at work today may have hidden motives. Probe beneath surface; you cannot afford to accept an offer at face value. A personal relationship receives a welcome boost.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not let someone take advantage of your availability. Keep some distance between you for a while. A hasty decision could doom a budding romance. Move slowly. Avoid revealing too much too soon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Speculative ventures are best avoided. Stick to the tried-and-true. There are no shortcuts to success. You improve your chances for obtaining financial support when you lay your cards on the table.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The financial help you give someone will be repaid with moral support. You value your personal relationships and have knack for winning others' loyalty. Continue to move forward with confidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A casual conversation with someone you barely know gives you valuable food for thought. Your experience and specialized knowledge give you a big advantage in the marketplace. Use inside information judiciously.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your business plans could be on a collision course with romance. Keep your priorities straight. Travel plans regain the attention of someone pulling away. A friend's tastes may be too expensive.

Opening lead: Nine of ♠

East found a pretty play to defeat South's three no trump contract. However, the declarer had failed to give himself the best chance for nine tricks.

North was a trifle aggressive in jumping to three no trump with 9 points and a flat hand. However, his ten of spades gave the suit solidity, and we do not fault him for choosing to try to end the rubber.

Declarer won the opening spade lead in hand, then overtook his remaining spade honor with the ace. He successfully finessed the queen of clubs, cashed the ace and set up two long cards in the suit by conceding a trick to East.

A diamond shift was obvious, and the defender found the perfect card to lead—the jack! Declarer covered. West won the ace and returned the nine, surrounding dummy's ten in the process. The defenders collected four diamonds and a club for down one.

To make his contract, declarer needed three club tricks. Obviously East was the danger hand, so South should have planned to try to keep him off lead. After winning the second spade on the table, declarer should have led a club and inserted the nine when East played low. West cannot profitably attack diamonds. Declarer can still get back to the board with the ace of hearts to cash his two spade tricks and lead another club to the queen.

Remember the card combination in the club suit. It crops up frequently in several disguises and you should know how to handle it.

Baez cancels concert because she thinks tickets priced to high

Baez

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Singer Joan Baez has canceled an April 17 concert here, saying she was unhappy that ticket prices were too expensive.

"I think the ticket prices bother me...because I've always been a stickler for keeping them as low as humanly possible so that as many people who wanted to come could afford it," Ms. Baez, a leading voice in the '60s protest era, said Monday.

Ticket prices for the one-show event at the Green Bay Performing Arts Centre were $25, $22 and $19.

"The ticket prices were quite high in order to make any money on the show," said Jeff Miller, booker for the Performing Arts Centre.

About 300 tickets were sold, Miller said. More than 800 of the theater's 1,037 seats would have had to been sold for a profit to be realized, he said.

Kennedy

MARSHFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Joseph P. Kennedy II and attorney F. Lee Bailey have entered the real estate market in this posh town.

The town planning board held a hearing Monday on Kennedy's proposal to build a gravel road on 32 acres he owns with his wife, Sheila, who said the couple wants to build a summer home on the property and that they still expect to move soon from their century-old house in Marshfield — part of the 10th Congressional District — to Brighton in the 8th District.

Kennedy, the 33-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and nephew of the late president, is a candidate for Congress in the 8th district.

In another part of town, Bailey put his house on the market for $950,000, his broker said.

The Marshfield Hills property, which includes a 15-room house, two swimming pools, a guest house with sauna, a helicopter landing pad and 7.46 acres of land, went on the market a week ago, said broker Dave Stenberg of Hunneman Better Homes and Garden in Duxbury.

Wagner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Lindsay Wagner is being sued by a bank that alleges the former "Bionic Woman" TV star defaulted on a $450,000 loan.

The Bank of Los Angeles filed the Superior Court suit Monday, saying Miss Wagner owes $417,857.12 on the 1982 loan, plus interest.

"The money was owed, it was not paid on the due date, we made demands and we filed the action," bank attorney Alan Chappell said Tuesday.

Joel Brokaw, publicist for Miss Wagner, said the 36-year-old actress could not be reached for comment on the suit.

Hawkins

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Paula Hawkins was in good condition after undergoing surgery to relieve chronic back and shoulder pain, her doctors said.

The Florida Republican should be released from Duke University Hospital in several weeks to resume her re-election campaign in which she is being challenged by Democratic Gov. Bob Graham.

"She can't play baseball. She can't throw darts. She can't do aerobic dancing," said Dr. J. Leonard Goldner, her main surgeon.

Mrs. Hawkins probably will be out of bed by the end of the week and out of the hospital in several weeks, said Goldner. She will wear a neck support for about four months, he said.

The 50-year-old first-term senator has suffered headaches, neck and back pain since a television studio backdrop fell on her in 1982.

TOKYO (AP) — A town crier dressed in a medieval coat and three-cornered hat has announced — literally — the May 3-13 visit of Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

Norman Roberts, 55, of Leicester, Britain, delighted travelers Tuesday at Tokyo's international airport at Narita as he rang a bell and asked the Japanese public to extend a warm welcome to the royal couple.

Town criers formally made public announcements by shouting news through streets in medieval Britain.

During their visit, Prince Charles and Princess Diana will visit the ancient capital of Kyoto, where they will stay in a former imperial palace and meet with 84-year-old Emperor Hirohito.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A copy of the film "Hail Mary," which has provoked protests for its depiction of Christ's mother as a gas station attendant, was stolen, a theater manager said Tuesday.

Two large reel canisters holding the film were taken and two projectors were damaged in the theft Monday, said Tom Ladd, manager of the Uptown Theater.

About 40 people picketed the Uptown on Friday, the film's opening night, calling the movie tasteless and blasphemous.

In the French film, directed by Jean-Luc Godard, Mary has a child out of wedlock, and Joseph is depicted as a taxi driver. The movie includes frontal nudity.

The theft forced the cancellation of three evening showings at the Uptown, but Ladd said the corporation that owns the theater was flying another copy of the film in from California.

Ladd predicted the theft and vandalism would boost interest in the film, which he said has drawn crowds three times larger than most Godard films.

"We made an astonishing amount of money over the weekend," said Ladd. "A lot of customers are calling, wanting to see the film because they've seen the protests."

Police Lt. Stephen Strehlow said officers were investigating in the theft.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Chester Erskine, a director, producer and writer, died Monday. He was 80.

After working on Broadway, he came to Hollywood in 1932 as assistant director to Lewis Milestone on "Rain," the film credited with making a dramatic star of Joan Crawford.

Mahler, Dravecky post shutouts

Associated Press

Give Rick Mahler the baseball on Opening Day — and then just get out of his way.

"I don't know what it is about opening night, maybe the pitchers are ahead of the hitters," the Atlanta pitcher said Tuesday night after he continued his string of Opening Day gems with a 6-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Three of Mahler's five career shutouts have been pitched on Opening Day assignments.

"It's always great to start this season this way," said Mahler, who also pitched a 6-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies last year.

Mahler's effort was a highlight on a day of strong pitching performances in the National League.

The 32-year-old Mahler was Atlanta's ace last season with a 17-15 mark for a club that was fifth in the NL West with a 66-96 record. He usually is a fast starter, winning seven in a row at the start of last season and he pitched two straight shutouts to open the season in 1982.

Mahler's performance Thursday night helped Chuck Tanner to a victory in his debut as the Braves' manager.

"We've got a new attitude this year," Mahler said. "Everything is positive."

The Braves' runs came on a two-run homer by Dale Murphy in the seventh inning off loser Bryn Smith and a three-run sixth inning that included a pair of bloop singles by Rafael Ramirez and Ken Oberkfell, two walks, an error and a run-scoring passed ball. Terry Harper and Ozzie Virgil had RBI groundouts in the inning. Claudell Washington added a sacrifice fly in the eighth for the Braves' final run.

"It's always exciting on opening night, especially when you get off on the right foot," said Murphy, who also had a double and a walk and scored twice.

NL Roundup

Giants 8, Astros 3

Pinch-hitter Candy Maldonado hit a three-run triple in the seventh inning and rookie Will Clark homered in his first big league at-bat to lead the Giants over the Astros.

Maldonado hit the second pitch by reliever Jeff Calhoun to score Chris Brown, Bob Brenly and Brad Gulden, who were put aboard by Houston starter Nolan Ryan. Maldonado's hit snapped a 3-3 tie.

Clark became the 53rd player in major-league history to hit a home run in his first major-league at-bat with a first-inning homer. Brenly also had a solo homer for the Giants, in the ninth.

San Francisco starter Mike Krukow was the winner after departing for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

Padres 1, Dodgers 0

Dravecky pitched the sixth shutout of his career, yielding only singles to Reggie Williams in the third inning, Bill Madlock in the fourth and Mariano Duncan in the ninth. Dravecky retired 17 of the last 18 batters he faced, finishing with two strikeouts and a walk.

The loss ended an 11-game winning streak for Orel Hershiser. The last time that Hershiser lost in Dodger Stadium, where he also carried an 11-game winning streak, was Sept. 9, 1984.

The Dodgers, the defending National League West champions, failed to get a runner past first base against Dravecky, who came out of spring training with a 6.49 earned run average. The Padres got their run when Kevin McReynolds led off the third with a single, stole second, took third on Steve Garvey's fly ball and scored on Terry Kennedy's base hit.

Cardinals 2, Cubs 1

John Tudor took up where he left off a year ago as he helped the Cardinals beat the Cubs. Tudor's triumph was his 22nd in his last 23 pitching decisions for the defending NL champions dating to May 29, 1985. Tudor overcame a two-hit performance by Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe, who lasted seven innings.

The Cardinals scored their winning runs in the fourth on a two-run single by Andy Van Slyke. Chicago had only two baserunners through the first five innings against Tudor before finally breaking through in the seventh when Keith Moreland hit into a forceout, advanced to third on a single by Leon Durham and scored on a sacrifice fly by Jody Davis.

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog thought Tudor's outing was his best so far this spring.

"He had good stuff," Herzog said of Tudor, who only threw 99 pitches. "He's an example of what can happen to you if you just keep throwing the ball over the plate."

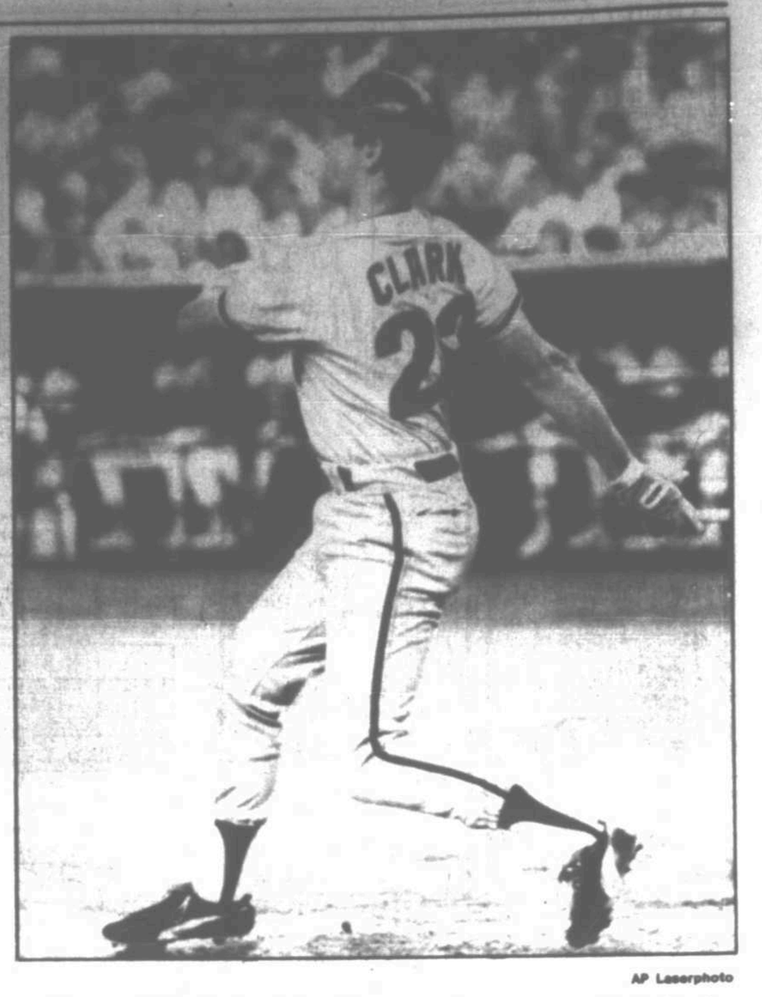

Mets 4, Pirates 2

Gooden, the major leagues' Cy Young Award winner last year when he was 24-4, wasn't overpowering, striking out six while walking one. But he checked the Pirates on just one run and five hits after after giving up a first-inning home run by leadoff batter R.J. Reynolds. It was the first homer Gooden had allowed in 75 innings.

The Mets, meanwhile, took advantage of unusual wildness by Pittsburgh right-hander Rick Reuschel, who walked five in six innings. Keith Hernandez drove in two runs for the Mets.

The loss spoiled the 100th National League opener in the Pirates' history and the debut of Manager Jim Leyland. The team played its first game under new, local ownership following nearly 40 years under owners headed by Columbus, Ohio-based John W. Galbreath.

"I've seen him throw a lot harder but he was throwing his breaking ball for strikes most of the time," said Pittsburgh's Steve Kemp, who struck out three times against Gooden in an 0-for-4 performance. "We faced a great pitcher and he got me tonight, but maybe some night I'll get him."

Bullets upended by Pacers

Associated Press

With three consecutive victories, the Washington Bullets had put themselves in a better playoff position. Then the Indiana Pacers, a team with nothing to gain but its pride, upset that momentum.

"This was a very disappointing effort," Washington Coach Kevin Loughery said after a 111-104 defeat Monday night that snapped the Pacers' nine-game losing streak.

The loss dropped the Bullets into seventh place in the NBA's Eastern Conference, a half-game behind New Jersey, which must play the Boston Celtics in two of its final three games. The winner among the Nets and Washington plays injury-riddled Philadelphia in the first round of the playoffs, while the loser must face Central Division champion Milwaukee.

76ers 116, Pistons 112

Julius Erving recorded two season highs with 31 points and nine assists as Philadelphia beat Detroit for its fifth straight victory.

Warriors 129, Mavericks 115

Eric Floyd scored 29 points and Terry Teagle 23 as Golden State overcame the loss of three starters to beat Dallas.

The Warriors, playing without Chris Mullin and Purvis Short for the entire game and center Joe Barry Carroll after the third quarter because of a cut lip, outscored the Mavericks 11-4 early in the fourth period to take a 101-91 lead.

NBA Roundup

Hawks 131, Bulls 118

Chicago also lost ground in a playoff race as Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins outdueled Michael Jordan.

Wilkins scored 37 points to expand his narrow NBA scoring lead to .15 points over Adrian Dantley and .23 over Alex English. Jordan scored 30 for the Bulls, whose lead over Cleveland for the last Eastern Conference playoff berth was cut to a half-game.

Celtics 126, Bucks 114

Boston, which already has clinched the NBA's best record and a homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs, started five players who usually come off the bench and still managed to complete a five-game sweep of Central Division champion Milwaukee.

Bill Walton, in a starting lineup with Greg Kite, Scott Wedman, Rick Carlisle and Jerry Sichting, had 22 points and 12 rebounds, while Larry Bird came off the bench for 26 points and 14 rebounds for the Celtics.

Rockets 109, SuperSonics 95

Reserve guard Mitchell Wiggins scored a season-high 22 points as Houston held Seattle to 39 points in the second half and ended the SuperSonics' slim playoff hopes.

Seattle, which got a season-high 32 points from Tom Chambers, led 56-53 at halftime, but the Rockets outscored the Sonics 23-13 in the third period to take the lead for good.

Lakers 120, Blazers 114

Los Angeles improved its record to 6-0 over Portland this season, the first Lakers sweep over the Blazers since 1972-73.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit five consecutive sky hooks in the fourth period and finished with 26 points, while Earvin "Magic" Johnson added 25. Kiki Vandeweghe had 22 points and Mychal Thompson and Terry Porter 20 each for the Blazers.

AL

The Seattle third baseman got his chance to win it after Forsch walked Phil Bradley, gave up a single to Ivan Calderon and walked Gorman Thomas. Barry Bonnell fouled out, but then Presley hit the ball into the seats.

Yankees 4, Royals 2

New York posted its first Opening Day victory in five years as Butch Wynegar hit a three-run homer. Wynegar homered to left in the second off Bud Black after Dave Winfield walked and Dale Berra singled.

The Yankees got their fourth run in the fifth on Willie Randolph's bloop RBI single. Rod Scurry worked 2 1-3 innings in relief of Ron Guidry, who retired after five innings with a slightly strained right calf. Dave Righetti pitched out of a couple of late jams to preserve Lou Piniella's first win as Yankees manager and Guidry's first opening day victory.

Twins 3, A's 2

Reliever Ron Davis got Dusty Baker to hit into a game-ending double play with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to preserve the victory for Frank Viola, who has won six straight starts dating back to last season.

Minnesota scored three unearned runs off A's starter Chris Codiroli, including two in the first inning following an error by first baseman Dave Kingman.

TDC's man-hunting dogs trained to sniff out escapees

By JEFF BROWN
Associated Press

ROSHARON — Nine dogs race across a sunlit, grassy field, gathering in the shade of a live oak to stare into its dark boughs and bark.

It's the successful end of an afternoon hunt.

Their quarry is Robert Dugger, a 44-year-old Texas Department of Corrections inmate.

Dogs are one of three prime security measures prisons have against escapes, says Rudy Artherholt, dog sergeant at the TDC's Ramsey II Unit.

"You can't beat that count, you can't beat the radio and you can't outrun the dogs," he says.

But dogs are not natural manhunters. They must be trained.

Their training starts when they are weaned.

They are taught first to ignore the instinct to chase animal scents and to recognize and follow human scents instead.

Artherholt has been in charge of the Ramsey II dog packs for eight years. Inmates do most of the actual training under his direction.

They start by playing with the puppies and running away, enticing them to follow.

Each day, they run a little farther until the puppies understand "hey, when he does that, I'm supposed to go find him," Artherholt said.

"For a puppy to mature into a good one, it takes about two years on an average. And not all of them make it," he says, estimating that out of a nine- or 10-puppy litter, only six or seven will make good tracking dogs.

Dogs that don't make the grade are eventually sold by the state.

The manhunting instinct is refined in frequent practice tracks in which dogs follow scents left by inmates.

Artherholt has 32 adult dogs divided into four packs and uses only one pack per track. The pack is released into the run where they are teased into a frenzy by an inmate outside the fence or atop the kennel roof.

Artherholt whistles and tell the dogs, "Look for him."

One of the dogs stops and looks up every time he hears that command.

The dogs leave the kennel about noon and a short time later reach the pasture. They fan out, appearing to be meandering through the field. But they aren't meandering aimlessly.

This is an experienced pack sniffing for a scent.

"We don't use pre-scent technique here," Artherholt says. "We drag our dogs." Dragging means working in outward circles, or semi-circles, noses to the ground.

Officials know who was supposed to be where on a prison every minute of the day, so the dogs are taken to the site where the escapee was last seen, Artherholt says.

The silence is broken when one dog barks.

The others file behind him, start sniffing and bark in response. They pick up Dugger's scent and "line it out," running briskly behind the lead dog, barking the entire way.

"They're testifying," Artherholt says. "As long as they're on the trail, they'll testify."

The track proves difficult, though. Dugger's scent gets mixed with those left by bulls and cows that frequent the fields he zig-zagged.

It is also a warm day, so the dogs get overheated quickly and frequently.

The pack stops barking a few hundred yards into the chase.

It fans out and starts dragging.

Eventually the dogs head for a water ditch.

Artherholt doesn't stop them. They need the water to cool off and open up their noses, he explains. Then they'll come back and start the search again.

"They always go back to the last place they smelled it," he says. "And they go to work and that's what you want them to do."

Soon after returning to work, the dogs let out a howl, the pack reforms and the race continues.

It is the first of several breaks. Each time, the dogs search until they pick up the trail again.

Artherholt knows roughly where the trail should be. He told Dugger where to put it. But he won't help the dogs find it.

This is training and if he helps them now, they'll expect help every time the job gets difficult, he says.

Artherholt runs short tracks. His predecessor at Ramsey II used to run 15-mile tracks around the perimeter of the 15,088-acre prison unit.

"I don't lay a long track, but I put a lot of work in a short track," Artherholt says.

Arhterholt says an actual track is easier for the dogs to follow because escapees will run off in a straight line.

There are other problems during an actual prison break, though, when escapees often have several hours' head start.

Under other circumstances, particularly on a cool, dewy night, the dogs would be hard to keep up with.

"A dog can run a horse to death. When the dogs pick it up, you try to stay with the dogs," Artherholt says. "If those dogs pick up a good, warm scent, they're going to leave you in the dust. Try to stay in hearing distance of them. Keep riding and listening. That's all you can do."

It is easy for an officer and an inmate on horseback to keep up with the pack today. They can see the dogs in the daylight and the problems they encounter along the way keep the pack from getting too far ahead. It takes about two hours to complete this track.

Near the end, they testify louder and run faster. The scent is hot and the dogs know they are getting closer.

Dugger, who was standing beside the tree watching the dogs go through the paces during the last few minutes, climbed into the tree as the dogs came down off the levee beside the Brazos.

Within minutes the hunt is over. They know where Dugger is. Dugger puts on a show, teasing the dogs with a yellow raincoat that the dogs grab and tear away from him.

"What are you doing down there," he yells, calling the dogs by name. "Come on up here and get me."

He stays in the tree until told to come down.

Artherholt is concerned that people believe the TDC raises and uses man-killing dogs. The dogs aren't dangerous, but they know their job, he says. They are supposed to find their quarry and hold him until help arrives.

Nola Copus looks at one of six grave markers that are near the lot she and her husband own in Brazoria County. Many treasures have been found on their land, including musket balls, a buckle dated 1857 and a bullet mold.

Couple buy house because of its history

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Spud and Nola Copus knew the two-acre lot they bought last fall had some history behind it. But they never dreamed they'd find so many artifacts, or that they'd have so much fun finding them.

At first glance, the property appears to have hardly been touched by mankind. Only a dirt path for a road leads to the land, about a mile off of County Road 288 near the Brazoria County Airport.

The Copuses' two-acre tract sits deep in the woods with a nearly dried-up creek on one side and the dead-end path along the front.

A closer look, however, shows evidence of human life. A brick cistern, a storage tank for water, sits in the middle of the lot. Inside is garbage piled more than four feet deep.

Portions of a brick sidewalk are visible where the Copuses have dug around, trying to see where it leads.

Near the back of the lot on someone else's property are six graves almost overcome by vines and weeds. The graves are those of former owners of the Copuses' property, Joseph and Sarah Dearcy.

Two other graves may be the Dearcys' daughter and her husband. And the remaining graves which have no names or dates are those of a 26-day-old infant and a 7-year-old child.

The Dearcys lived in the mid- and late 1800s with Sarah dying most recently in 1910 at the age of 63.

The Copuses' curiosity of what might have once happened on their new property has grown with each visit. One time they brought a friend, Freeport Police Chief Charles Bankston, to comb the lot with his metal detector.

Almost endless amounts of metal appeared to be underground.

Mrs. Copus says Bankston believes a house may have burned on the lot once because of all the nails and metal that was picked up by the detector.

Two more expeditions, this time by the Brazoria County Treasure Hunters Association, brought even more interesting finds.

Steve Scott, former owner of the property and member of the Treasure Hunters Association, said 15 to 20 club members armed with metal detectors searched for treasures on the lot one day.

It was nice the group was able to search out the property since most of the good places for treasure hunting are privately owned, he said.

A wide variety of objects were found on both days the group combed the lot, he said.

One interesting find was a small buckle dated 1857. Another was a metal cork from a whiskey bottle. Several musket balls and one even with a hair mark on it were found. A bullet mold that looks like a pair of pliers also was discovered.

Mrs. Copus says the bullet mold is one of her favorite finds because it's whole and people can see how it works.

Other artifacts that have been discovered include a key measuring 4 inches, the end of a fork, a button from a Confederate soldier's uniform, the back of a thermometer, a jackknife, a Confederate officer's spur, a cooking spoon, part of a hurricane lamp and a silver thimble.

"This is just junk really," Mrs. Copus says. "But it's neat because it all came from this lot."

Another one of Mrs. Copus' favorites is a flatiron. She says she can't imagine having to iron with the heavy metal piece weighing about 5 pounds.

"We've never found anything out here to indicate electricity," Scott says.

Richard Ray, a professional treasure hunter with a business in Alvin, said one of their better finds may be the powder flask, Scott says.

If the flask is a certain brand, it could be valuable, he said.

Mrs. Copus says she and her husband bought that particular piece of property because they knew it had history behind it.

"The fact that someone lived here years ago made us pick this lot," she says. "I like history. I like the feeling that something old gives me.

"We never knew we'd find all the stuff that we found," she says.

The Copuses bought the property with the idea that someday they would build a log cabin on it.

But Mrs. Copus says, "We probably won't do anything with it but play with it for five or six years."

For now, they'll probably continue to live in their Clute apartment.

Mrs. Copus says she knows her husband has taken an interest in the history behind their lot when he goes to the library and starts bringing home information on their property's former owners.

Joseph Dearcy, who is mentioned in "A Narrative History of Brazoria County, Texas," was brought in to work on the sugar mills. He was the only man available to set the sugar kettles in the county in the 1860s. He also was an expert brick mason.

The next project for the Copuses is to empty out the cistern.

"We've got to find out what's at the bottom," Copus says.

He's already cleared out several feet of trash and has another 4 feet to go, including pouring out water just as deep.

Some people used to store Confederate money in their cisterns, Copus says.

"There could be some old bottles, just about anything, maybe even a body," he said with a smile.

"What are you going to do if you find one (a body)?" Mrs. Copus asked.

"Call Chief Bankston," he replied, laughing.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell against nearly all major currencies in quiet early European trading today. Gold prices were mixed.

Currency dealers in Frankfurt, West Germany, said trading was calm compared with Tuesday's nervousness while finance ministers from the main five industrialized countries were meeting in Washington.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell 1.25 yen to a closing 180.20 yen from Tuesday's 181.45. Later, in London, it was quoted at 180.08 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.323 West German marks, down from 2.338

—1.957 Swiss francs, down from 1.97

—7.3925 French francs, down from 7.45

—2.6229 Dutch guilders, down from 2.633

—1,595.50 Italian lire, down from 1,600.50

—1.38175 Canadian dollars, down from 1.38345

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4633, cheaper than the $1.4745 quote on Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $339.60 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $337.50. At mid-morning today the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $338.65.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $338.80, down from $340.50 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell the equivalent of 99 cents to close at a bid $339.17.

In New York Tuesday, gold rose 50 cents to close at $340.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.32 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.34.

Mobil director warns oil industry to unify

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The oil industry should heal its wounds, repair its divisions and once again become a single family working in concert to get the government out of its business and keep it out. That was the theme of a speech delivered Tuesday at Green Tree Country Club by Alexander H. Massad, a director and executive vice president of Mobil Oil Corp.

Massad, who is also president of Mobil Exploration and Production and started his career as a roughneck in the Permian Basin in 1946 told a joint meeting Permian Basin sections of American Petroleum Institute and International Association of Drilling Contractors that the petroleum industry was once unified — almost like a big family varying from small companies to multinationals.

Alexander Massad

"We even had seven sisters in the family," said Massad. "But why do we always allow our critics to separate and divide us? They pit us one against the other and eat our lunch while we bicker." He added that the industry had allowed itself to become to segmented and insular in protecting its own turf, and now had great difficulty in maintaining a dialogue between the segments. Massad warned that unless the industry members began to talk to each other they would soon find themselves without anyone to talk to, because the oil industry had become the least appreciated industry in America.

MASSAD CITED the natural gas issue as one which had fragmented the industry: "It has pitted royalty owners against oil companies; independents against majors, producers against transmission companies. We have played right into the hands of those who would split us by zeroing in on particular legislative items and losing sight of industry and national needs."

The petroleum engineer from Drumright, Oklahoma, who served three tours in Midland with Mobil and was general manager of the division in 1985, said Texas and the Permian Basin would survive the recent oil price collapse but it would be a period full of difficult challenges. "The builders of the Lone Star state did not put down roots that wither and die easily," he said.

He said the oil price collapse resulted because the world was awash in crude oil and nobody was ready to stem the flood. He also cited the proliferation of crude pricing methods, futures trading, market uncertainty, seasonal declines and the psychological effect of OPEC's intention to hold market share as other factors compounding the problem of low prices.

Said Massad: "The price problem is real, but few realize that actual oil supply and demand have not changed quite as much as the price fall would indicate."

HE SAID energy demand outlook would not improve much between now and the year 2,000, growing only at about one percent a year, a sharp contrast to the 1965 to 1973 period when energy demand grew at a rate of 5.5 percent per year.

"What this means," said Massad, "is a continuing worldwide surplus of crude oil and natural gas. Barring a major catastrophe, we see a surplus capacity of 8 million barrels per day in the free world in the year 2000."

He said the current price drop was not totally unexpected, but it was a change in Free World oil producing patterns that caused the "free-fall" in crude prices as OPEC lost market

Senate committee considering expanding oil, timber tax breaks

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee is deciding whether to expand tax breaks for oil and timber as part of a tax-overhaul plan that would cut or end special provisions benefiting other industries.

President Reagan's tax plan would raise taxes on the natural resource industries — oil, gas, farming, mining and timber — by about $8.7 billion over five years. The bill passed by the House last December would cost them about $11 billion. The plan offered by Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Finance Committee, would reduce taxes on those industries by about $1 billion.

Most of the 20 members of the committee, which tentatively approved this part of Packwood's plan two weeks ago, are from states heavily dependent on one or more of those industries. When Packwood promised further consideration of the provision, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said he would offer amendments to scale back some of the special tax breaks.

The committee has made so little progress since it started writing its version of tax overhaul on March 19 that Packwood announced Tuesday the start of twice-a-day sessions. His goal is to have the bill approved by the committee by early May and ready for Senate action by about June 1.

"I fear for the life of the bill if we can't start (debate) on the (Senate) floor by the first of June," he said.

If Packwood can meet those target dates, there is a good chance Congress can complete action on the bill — a top priority for Reagan — and send it to the White House by yearend, or perhaps before the November elections.

But first Packwood must convince a majority of his committee, which so far has shown little enthusiasm for the undertaking. Although all members seem to agree on the basic goals of lowering individual and business tax rates, there is a wide variety of opinion on what existing tax benefits should be taken away to pay for those tax cuts.

GM dedicates Saturn plant site

By JENNIFER JOHNSTON

SPRING HILL, Tenn. (AP) — About 500 people huddled under huge white tents and sipped cups of cold cider as a light April drizzle ushered in the dedication of 2,400 acres of farmland for the $3.5 billion Saturn plant.

From the opening benediction to the closing high school band rendition of "God Bless America," Tuesday's ceremonies offered plenty of color and pomp but little on how General Motors Corp. plans its industrial revolution.

"The thing to remember about this project is its mission — to develop a small car to beat the pants off the competition," said Richard G. LeFauve, president of GM's Saturn Corp. subsidiary.

Basin firm shows off 'new', 'old' products

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Diversification is a word heard with increasing frequency as oil industry activity followed the downward price slide.

To many people, diversification simply means finding new industry not related to the oil industry, but diversification is, or can be, a two-sided coin as the Parker Drilling Co. Midland-based subsidiary OIME Inc. demonstrated Tuesday with a showing of some of its "new" and "old" products.

A sign that welcomed those invited to to the first public viewing of some of its new products provided, what might be called, a diversification credo: It is a matter of making up our minds that we can and will diversify our manufacturing resources in the Permian Basin. While holding onto the resources we have, we can nurture new and innovative ways to improve our capabilities. Diversification means change, which requires team work, humility, and most of all, a positive attitude.

Those who remember driving along U.S. Highway 80 and Interstate 20 between Midland and Odessa during the "boom" will recall seeing land and offshore drilling rigs in varying stages of construction scattered all over OIME's 64-acre site and a workforce that exceeded 2,000 scampering around, trying to meet a seemingly endless demand.

Today, the workforce has shrunk significantly and most of the activity is confined to the interiors of OIME's mammoth shops that house a multitude of highly sophisticated "state-of-the-art" machine shop equipment.

OIME still produces compressor and pump units for oilfield use worldwide, but demand is not what it has been, needless to say. Because of this, OIME has become a producer of products critical to high tech research and development.

OIME serves as the production facility for Parker Kinetic Designs Inc., a research and development subsidiary formed by Parker Drilling about two years ago. Parker Kinetics, working with The Center for Electromechanics of UT Austin, is building sophisticated and high-powered electric supply units known as homopolar generators for the Balcones Research Center, which is doing high velocity projectile research for the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), more popularly referred to as the "Star Wars" defense system.

Homemade treats available at new store

By MELLA McEWEN

With the weather heating up, so does the yen for ice cream. Not only does SCOTTY'S ICE CREAM offer homemade ice cream, it offers homemade sandwiches, soups and a salad bar.

According to owner John E. Offenbaker, the store showcases 22 flavors of ice cream ranging in price from $.70 for one scoop to $1.75 for three scoops. If you wish, you can get your ice cream in a homemade waffle cone for $.25 extra.

Or Scotty's offers deli-type sandwiches on homemade white or wheat bread, homemade soup or a salad bar Monday through Fridays from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. And if you're in a rush, everything can be made to go.

Offenbaker, who worked for Mustang Mud 11 years before opening this store, said response has been excellent since the store's opening. By the way, Scotty's is named after his youngest son.

One of the newer automotive repair shops in town is QUALITY AUTOMOTIVE REPAIR, located at 607 S. Big Spring. According to Pat Petrilla, who owns the shop with husband Henry, the garage can do minor and major auto repair, with the exception of body repair.

One thing the Petrillas offer is delivery service — picking up and delivering your car at your home. "You don't even have to leave the house," Mrs. Petrilla said. Also, beginning May 3, Quality Automotive will be open on Saturdays.

It's the same company, but a new name. Midland-based Pressure Coring, Inc. has changed its name to PCI WORLDWIDE. According to Frank Swinehart, vice president and general manager, the new name reflects the worldwide operations of the company.

From its West Texas headquarters, PCI Worldwide offers conventional andpressure coring services, and during the last year developed the "Compresion System Core Catcher," the methane gas measurement process and the "Sat-Core" 30 ft. pressure core barrel. To go with its new name, the company intends to open offices in California, on the Gulf Coast, Canada and the North Sea area during 1986, Swinehart stated.

Area geologists now have another source of information with DWIGHT'S ENERGYDATA, INC., of Richardson, expanding its HOTLINE ENERGY REPORTS division into the Midcontinent, Gulf Cost and Texas regions.

As it has been doing with the Rocky Mountain states, the company will maintain a database of both current and historical drilling information. Data will be updated, and will be available in hard copy reports, microfiche and direct on-line access.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Shell finals 236 barrel producer

From Staff Reports

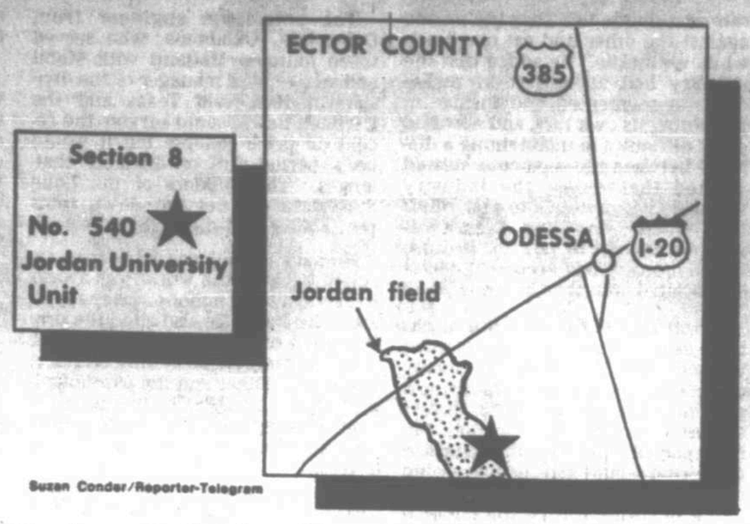

SHELL WESTERN EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION CO., Houston, continues development in Ector County fields, testing a producer in the county's Jordan field.

On potential test, the No. 540 Jordan University Unit tested to pump 236 barrels of 35 gravity crude, 95 Mcfd and 248 barrels of water from perforations 3,289 to 3,352 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,428 gallons of acid and fractured with 12,830 gallons of gel. Gas-oil ratio is 403:1.

Shell drilled the well to a total depth of 3,800 ft., where seven inch casing was set, and plugged it back to 3,754 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,819 ft., include the Rustler at 892 ft., Yates at 2,025, Seven Rivers at 2,142, Queen at 2,485, Grayburg at 3,156, and the San Andres at 3,314 ft. Pay was topped at 3,289 ft.

Location is 10,250 ft. from south and 1,600 ft. from east lines of Section 8, Block 35, ULS survey, seven miles south of Penwell.

Probandt field gains 4.1 Mmcfd extension

INDIAN WELLS OIL CO., San Angelo, extended the Probandt (Canyon) field of Irion County southwest with completion of the No. 3 Schlnke "18".

The producer potentialed the well for a calculated absolute open flow of 4.1 Mmcfd from perforations 6,308 to 6,342 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 50,000 gallons of frac and 55,000 lbs. sand.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 6,475 ft. and was plugged back to 6,455 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the San Angelo at 1,530 ft., Leonard at 4,840, and the Canyon at 6,280 ft. on ground elevation of 2,346 ft.

Location is 607 ft. from south and 525 ft. from west lines of Section 18, Block 6, H&TC survey, 13 miles northwest of Mertzon.

Mobil completes two in Crane County field

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM, INC., Midland, has been active in the Dune field of Crane County, completing two Grayburg producers in the field.

Both wells are in the Texas University 15 & 16 lease, located in Block 30 of the ULS survey.

On potential test, the No. 1637 Texas University 15 & 16 pumped 21 barrels of 32 gravity crude, 15 Mcfd and 148 barrels of water from perforations 3,394 to 3,469 ft.

The second, the No. 1564 Texas University 15 & 16 tested to pump 18 barrels of 32 gravity crude, 18 Mcfd and 231 barrels of water from perforations 3,356 to 3,591 ft.

SPE to examine deep well methods

RICHARDSON, TX. — With the price of West Texas benchmark crude oil falling daily, the drilling industry seeks new ways to overcome field economics for the difficult days ahead. SPE's timely 1986 Deep Drilling and Production Symposium, to be held at the Amarillo Civic Center, offers a close look at evolving technology and economics in the science and art of deep-well drilling and completion.

"The drilling professional will find this symposium very practical. It's not classroom theory, but the personal experience of those who've been in the field and used the methods examined," said general chairman Ken Moss of Pioneer Production Corp.

According to Moss, more than 500 drilling professionals are expected to attend the 22-paper technical program beginning April 7.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Amoco enters into agreement with Jordan

HOUSTON — Amoco Jordan Petroleum Co., a subsidiary of Amoco Production Co., has entered into a production sharing agreement with the government of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan.

The agreement, signed Tuesday in Amman, Jordan, provides for petroleum exploration in two blocks covering about 10,950 square kilometers (2.7 million acres.) Block 4 is in the Jordan Valley Dead Sea area and Block 1 is in the central part of the Eastern Desert.

Amoco Jordan will conduct geological and geophysical studies and drill as many as five exploratory wells during the 7 1/2 year exploration period.

Connally to speak to Petroleum Independents

TULSA — John B. Connally, Jr., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Chapman Energy, Inc., will be the featured luncheon speaker on the opening day of the 1986 National Conference of Petroleum Independents.

The Conference was designed to offer independents from across the country practical solutions to the problems they face today, and was developed in consultation with a Program Advisory Group of Industry leaders from 24 oil producing states, leading consultants, and representatives from state and national industry associations.

Lower oil prices creating new opportunities

DALLAS — Today's lower oil prices are creating new opportunities for applying advanced technologies already past the laboratory stage, according to a report in the April issue of Petroleum Engineer International magazine.

One new concept involves the use of horizontal wells extending beneath producing formations. Estimates are that the rate and amount of oil produced through vertical fractures originating from the horizontal wells will greatly exceed the recovery performance of conventional infield drilling.

Mills named IPAA communications director

WASHINGTON — Alex Mills has been named communications director of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA), Raymond Hefner, IPAA chairman of the board, recently announced.

Mills moves to the IPAA post from Abilene where he was executive vice president of West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association.

Coastal expects continuing oil price decline

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. said it expects the continuing decline in world oil prices since mid-March to result in a net loss for the first quarter of 1986 and unless oil prices rebound, Coastal's earnings for the full year are expected to be less than previously anticipated. However, the Company said it expects no change in its plans to reduce debt by at least $300 million in 1986.

Coastal said the declining oil prices will result in a first quarter operating loss for its refining and marketing segment and require a reserve to reduce the carrying value of oil inventories to reflect current market prices. If markets later stabilize at higher levels Coastal will have higher operating profits in subsequent periods.

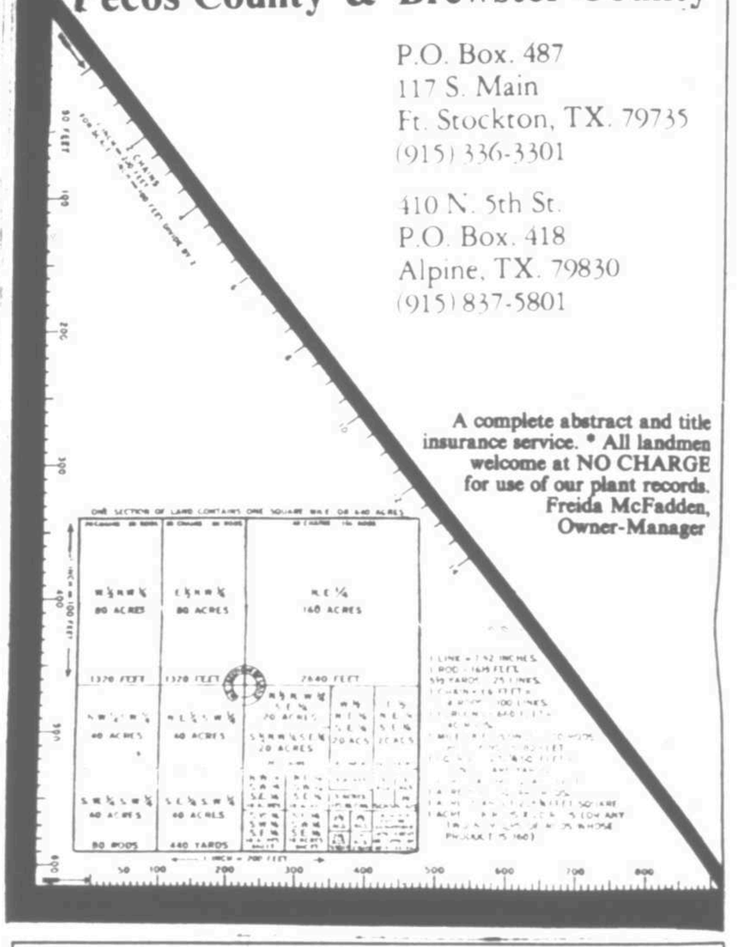

Conoco subsidiary purchases more pipelines

HOUSTON — Continental PipeLine Co. has purchased more than 300 miles of pipelines and certain other assets in the Rocky Mountain area from Cheyenne Pipeline Co., a unit of Flying J, Inc.

Continental, a subsidiary of Conoco Inc., purchased the Cheyenne products pipeline, the Pierce gathering system and the Shoshone pipeline, plus two petroleum products terminals.

The Cheyenne products pipeline stretches 209 miles from Cheyenne to North Platte, Nebraska. It is a six-inch products pipeline that connects to the Wyco Pipeline and a refinery at Cheyenne. The system includes product terminals at Sidney and North Platte, which were included in the purchase.

Expert says low prices will lead to more consumption

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Householders won't pull the insulation out of their homes and drivers won't immediately abandon their small, gas-thrifty automobiles, but low prices inevitably will result in greater oil consumption, according to the president of the American Petroleum Institute.

At a Tuesday luncheon with oil state reporters, Charles DiBona said he and other analysts cannot be precise about the timing of the process, but predicted consumption inceases coupled with domestic oil production losses means big new demands on world production capacity – "That is, OPEC."

OPEC's hand will be stregthened worldwide and U.S. vulnerability will increase, DiBona said.

The U.S. cannot be assured that oil prices – hovering around $13 a barrel this week – will stay down over the long term, the API executive said. "In fact there are strong reasons to believe that the exact opposite will occur."

If oil prices remain at or near this spring's levels, a large portion of OPEC's excess capacity will be absorbed within three to five years. That would be the point at which the price of oil would probably rise sharply.

Policymakers would be wise to encourage domestic exploration and development to prepare for the day when OPEC raises the prices once again, DiBona said.

It would be smart to permit exploration on the most promising government lands, including those off California's coast, he added.

Provisions in the House-passed tax reform bill and in the Senate Finance Committee's draft tax proposal would result in reduced investment in oil exploration and production, he said.

The effects of the sudden price drop on the U.S. oil industry has been dramatic. A recent Oil & Gas Journal study estimated that exploration and production spending would drop by 25 percent in 1986, after a 21 percent drop last year. Several large companies have said they will cut exploration and production spending from 20 to 33 percent.

In the oil fields this year the number of active drilling rigs dropped from 2,000 at the beginning of the year to 1,000 in late March.

The retrenchment has caused thousands of jobs. API estimates that a one billion dollar reduction in exploration and production spending translates into the displacement of almost 20,000 workers – about 11,000 in drilling and another 9,000 in supplier industries that represent a broad cross-section of the economy, from manufacturing to maintenance and from chemicals to computers.

DiBona quoted Oil & Gas Journal's estimate of spending reductions of about $13 billion for 1984-86, translating into a loss of more than a quarter of a million jobs. These employment effects are felt not only in oil states but throughout the country, he said.

Oil companies are shutting down stripper wells (producing fewer than 10 barrels of oil a day) and heavy oil wells that are not profitable to operate.

Phillips recently announced the closing of 35 stripper wells in the Permian Basin of Texas and Texaco closed 1,500 heavy oil wells in Kern County, Calif.

DiBona emphasized that no one can say how far this trend will go, but the National Stripper Well Association estimates that 100,000 of the 460,000 U.S. stripper wells would be shut-in at a wellhead price of $15 or less.

API estimates that the effect of greater consumption and consumer demand worldwide will mean imports will grow from about five million barrels of oil a day in 1985 to some 10 million barrels a day in 1990

Government urged to continue filling reserves

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The Strategic Petroleum Reserve can help protect the United States' national security and economy in the event of a disruption in petroleum supplies in this decade, and the government should continue filling it at least to the 750 million barrels authorized by Congress.

That was the strong recommendation of a National Research Council committee of nine scientists and energy experts Tuesday at a public seminar focusing on the SPR.

The committee warned, however, that given the trends in energy supply, demand, production and transportation, the SPR probably will not be capable of mitigating the kind of disruptions experienced in the 1970's Arab oil embargo.

Research was conducted and the committee's report written before the recent sharp drop in oil prices and the resulting shut down of hundreds of oil rigs, but that didn't change the picture, according to Edward N. Krapels, a Washington, D.C., energy analyst on the panel.

Krapels, in an interview, predicted that the administration will "come around" to the view that the SPR should be filled, despite attempts to cap the reserve at its present 490 million barrels of oil in an effort to save money.

"Before, they (government planners) were thinking about importing five or six million barrels of a year by 1990; now, they're thinking in terms of eight or nine million barrels a year," Krapels said.

Another reason that the reserve probably will be filled is that Congress, so far, has refused the president's requests to cap it. With oil prices hovering below $15 a barrel, many members of Congress believe the government should take advantage of the bargain price to fill the reserve.

Krapies said there is disagreement between some Department of Energy officials and some White House planners over the question of the need of a larger oil reserve.

Construction of the last of the planned storage facilities under construction at Big Hill, near Beaumont, Texas, has been on-again, off-again for several years as the president requested deferrals of appropriations and Congress overruled them.

The committee recommended that plans for future construction, at Big Hill and elsewhere, be carefully re-examined. "We are not sure that the Department of Energy has thought through the question of where the very best place for the last 250 million barrels would be," said Krapels.

A 500 million barrel reserve would be the equivalent of 108 days of net imports of crude oil and petroleum products in terms of 1985 usage.

This level should deter embargoes and provide some options for occasionally using the reserve in response to an extreme disorder in the international market, the committee reported.

But because of decreased domestic production in the 1990's, and greater dependence on oil imports, a 500 million barrel reserve will no longer provide 100 days worth of protection.

TAXES

Much of the Senate has given a cold reception to a major revenue-raising part of Packwood's bill: his proposal to raise excise taxes by about $75 billion over five years. In an attempt to temper some of that opposition, he agreed Tuesday to a public hearing of the excise proposals on April 21.

At the same time, a business group that is leading opposition to the excise provisions released a study concluding that the increase would wipe out a major part of the income-tax reduction promised in Packwood's bill. And, according to the study by deSeve Economics Associates of Washington, the excise increases would fall hardest on lower-income Americans.

"This plan is not tax reform, it is tax regression," said Thomas J. Donohue, president of the American Trucking Associations and spokesman for the anti-excise group known as Coalition Against Regressive Taxation. The coalition commissioned the analysis.

The trucking industry pays excise taxes on fuel, trucks, parts, tires and use of the highways. The average owner-operator pays $9,000 a year in excises, and Packwood's bill would raise that by 35 percent, or about $2,400, Donohue said.

But truckers are unable to pass along the full increase because their competitors — the railroads — pay relatively little in excise taxes, he said.

Packwood's bill, which also includes lower tax rates and a higher personal exemption, would cut individual income taxes by an average of 8.4 percent. According to deSeve, when the effects of the higher excise taxes are considered, the average reduction would be cut to 4.2 percent.

The proposal also would raise the tax on the alcohol in wine to the same level as the alcohol in beer; automatically raise the tax on alcoholic beverages, tobacco products and fuels as prices increase; and take away the deduction now allowed businesses for excise taxes and tariffs they pay.

MOBIL

share and the Saudi's led the charge to get it back. Massad said OPEC supplied 60 percent of the 50 million barrel per day demand for crude oil in 1979, but in 1985 that share had slipped to only 35 percent, as a result of increased production by North Sea nations.

He warned that on the supply side, continuing low prices, might cause some high-cost crude such as stripper oil, heavy oil, and high water cut wells to be shut-in, and added that shut-in production might eventually help bring about a supply-demand balance in the crude oil market. He said supply-demand balance and stability in the market was essential to provide incentive for the continued search for oil and gas.

"MOBIL'S ESTIMATE is that crude oil prices will not remain at today's depressed levels, but could rebound to the $20 per barrel range by year end," he said. "But even after we have price stability, we will still have the problem of declining reserves to face. It will be our principal dilemma. Despite the lull in demand and intensive drilling in recent years, U.S. crude oil reserves declined 9.6 percent from 1978 to 1985." He blames part of the decline on "those who have a need to play around with incentives for finding oil and gas."

Massad also sees a continuation of natural gas surplus to the year 2,000: "The worldwide surplus producibility of natural gas will be 26 BCFD or 17 percent of the Free World demand at the end of the century." He said this surplus would be the result of OPEC excess and Russian exports into the european market.

On a brighter side, he sees U.S. natual gas demand and supply coming closer together by 1988 or 1989, with the possible need for increased Canadian imports of natural gas.

Massad said Mobil opposes an import tariff because it would create more problems than it would solve: "When you play the quick-fix tune, you have to be prepared to pay the piper."

HE DOES, however, endorse plans to restore incentives to the oil industry which were recently proposed by Michael Halbouty of Houston. The plan would:

- eliminate windfall taxes, retroactive to January 1, 1986,
- repeal the Fuel Use Act,
- deregulate all categories of natural gas,
- recommend restoration of permanent 20 percent depletion allowance
- maintain all current tax provisions for intangible drilling costs

"Mr. Halbouty's plan represents the kind of industry-wide equitable solution we ought to be able to support, as one cohesive industry working together to meet the needs of the U.S.A.," Massad concluded.

Refinancing demand exhausts Ginnie Mae authority

By JAMES ROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ginnie Mae officials say they will ask Congress to extend the agency's $65.3 billion authority to guarantee mortgage-backed securities that was exhausted by the rush of homeowners to refinance mortgages at lower interest rates.

The 1986 fiscal year authority to guarantee securities backed by mortgages insured by the Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration was exhausted on Friday, said Lou Gasper, Ginnie Mae's executive vice president.

"We have never run out, it's the first time we've done it," Gasper said Tuesday.

After the Veterans Administration lowered the rate of VA-backed mortages from 10 percent to 9.5 percent last month, "there was a tremendous volume of refinancings through FHA and VA loans," said Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association. FHA rates are generally tied to VA rates.

"Since most FHA and VA loans are financed through Ginnie Mae securities, they just had this wave for Ginnie Mae securities," he said.

The Office of Management and Budget is expected to ask Congress to extend Ginnie Mae's commitment authority by at least $20 billion, Gasper said.

The exhaustion of Ginnie Mae's commitment authority "does not affect the existing securities and the lenders who have already gotten authority to issue can go ahead and use that authority," he added.

But Ginnie Mae, a federally chartered corporation known formally as the Government National Mortgage Association, will not be able to guarantee any new security issues until Congress extends the commitment authority, he said.

RepublicBank Corp. reports first quarter income

DALLAS (AP) — RepublicBank Corp. Tuesday announced net income for the first quarter $23.1 million, or 75 cents per share, a decrease of 35 percent from a year ago.

RepublicBank's net income for the same quarter in 1985 was $35.4 million or $1.16 per share. The full year net income was $140.2 million or $4.60 per share.

The provision for loan losses was $52 million for the first quarter of 1986, an increase of $32 million above the year-ago quarter, primarily as a result of the recent decline in oil prices, the company said.

The increase in the allowance for loan losses reflects RepublicBank's expectation that oil prices will recover later this year and average slightly in excess of $18 per barrel over the next three years, the company said.

OIME

The homopolar generator is not new. It was first invented by Michael Faraday in 1831 and the concept is the basis for all electrical machinery. Until recently, homopolar generators, according to Parker Kinetic Senior Vice President Dale Pryor, "remained a primarily laboratory curiosity."

Aside from use as a power source for rail guns, which can fire projectiles at speeds several times faster than that of conventional guns, in SDI research, pulsed homopolar generators have a great many commercial applications because they produce low voltage, high amperage pulsed (intermittent) power (as much as 10,000,000 amps).

General commercial applications include: pulsed high strength magnetic fields, high current switching, generation of high energy arcs, high speed welding, high speed pulsed resistance billet heating and pulsed magnetic forming.

OIME President David Holland says, "Basically the generator is a flywheel rotating in a magnetic field. Mechanical energy is stored in a flywheel and is removed as electrical energy in a short but extremely high current pulse."

Production of homopolar generators requires extremely close tolerances, as little as .0002 (2/10,000) inches between rotor and field, with the rotor weighing a ton and measuring 22 inches in diameter in one model.

In a Machine Design article by Pryor and Center for Electromechanics Director William F. Weldon, published in January 1984, exploring future possibilities, Pryor and Weldon speculated that pulse welding will be widely used for large-area welding and cited such examples as the oil field, gas transmission pipe, boiler tubing, railroad rails, structural shapes and heavy plate.

More exotic uses, they indicated, include nuclear fusion, particle beam weapons (such as for the Star Wars project) and high velocity projectiles that require high-energy electric pulses. Pryor and Weldon observed that "the speed of a projectile powered by chemical propellants, for example, is limited to a maximum speed for a shock wave, about 5,000ft/s. But projectiles launched by high cureent pulses (such as possible with the homopolar generator) have no theoretical limit short of the speed of light."

Holland says the homopolar generator "is only one of the diversifications being pursued by OIME and sister company Parker Kinetic Designs Inc., located in Austin. We believe that through this diversification and others like it, we can aid in the renewing of the economy in the Permian Basin."

White says free market won't work

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White said in a letter Tuesday the idea of a "free market" won't work in the international oil industry.

The governor's letter was to Secretary of Energy John S. Herrington, who appeared with White Sunday on the "Meet the Press" television program.

During the appearance, Herrington rejected White's plea to increase the tax on imported oil.

White's letter said, "You referred many times to the policy of the present administration as one which will rely upon the free market to determine the final outcome of the present upheaval in our domestic energy industry.

"Our national defense is not a free market issue," White said.

"Furthermore, let me assure you that the world oil market is not a free market — it is a controlled market. It will never be a free market. The only question is who we allow to control it. We saw in the 1970s what can happen when Saudi Arabia and OPEC control it We cannot let this happen again," White said.

SATURN

LeFauve, other company officials and United Auto Workers union representatives sidestepped most questions about the plant, its pre-construction labor agreement and the Saturn car during a pair of news conferences and a public dedication ceremony.

"I can't go into a lot of details here today, but let me assure you, we've got a beautiful car," LeFauve told the mixture of local and state government officials, dignitaries and local residents gathered on the lawn of the farm's antebellum-style mansion.

"We will be more than competitive with our foreign competition," he said.

LeFauve said that since he took over as president of Saturn in February, he has cautioned GM officials to keep details of the project close to their chests.

"We're getting to a point where that information is more important to our competitors," he said during a news conference.

Company and state officials also balked at questions about GM's promise last summer to give half of the 6,000 Saturn plant jobs to Tennesseans.

LeFauve skirted the issue, saying details had not yet been worked out.

Gov. Lamar Alexander quipped, "Everyone who works for Saturn is going to live here, so they're all going to be local."

GM's agreement with the labor union was also a taboo subject. Guy D. Briggs, GM's vice president for manufacturing, declined comment on the labor agreement, saying legal challenges to the GM-UAW pact were pending.

Before GM announced where it planned to put the nation's largest single industrial investment, the corporation and the UAW negotiated a preliminary labor agreement covering the plant's workers.

Anti-union groups contend the agreement violates federal laws because it covers workers who have not yet voted on what union, if any, they want to represent them.

Alexander pinned the future of the American automaking industry on Saturn, saying it is a test of how U.S. companies can fare against foreign small-car competition.

"The success of all other car plants in the U.S. depends to some degree on Saturn," the governor said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Basis would change with joint ownership

By BILL DOYLE

Q. All my stock is in my name only. I understand that when I will the stock to an heir, the heir's cost "basis" will be the market value of the stock on the date of my death. If, while I am still living, I name the person who will be my heir as joint owner with right of survivorship, will the same basis rule apply?

A. No. In that situation, only half of the stock's basis will be its value as of the date of your death.

Doyle

If you put the stock into joint ownership with that other person, he or she will become half owner of the stock. Then, when you leave this vale of tears, that person automatically will become the sole owner.

At that point, the basis for half of the stock will become its value on the day you die, unless the executor or administrator of your estate uses an alternative valuation date. The basis on the other half will remain unchanged.

Here's an example. Say you bought 100 shares of XYZ stock at $10 a share. Your basis is $1,000. Say that XYZ is worth $50 a share at the time of your death.

If that stock is in your name, your heir's basis becomes $5,000. If the stock is jointly owned, the surviving joint owner's basis becomes $3,000. That's because half of the basis — $500 on the half he or she already owned — remains unchanged and the basis on the other half "steps up" to $2,500.

It's important to keep track of the basis. When stock or any other capital asset is sold, the difference between the basis and the proceeds from the sale is either a capital gain or capital loss and must be reported on the seller's income tax return.

Q. My husband has quite a bit invested in stocks. Some are in my name and his name. But others are in his name only and I can't get him to add my name. If he passes away before I do, won't I have trouble selling the stocks registered in his name?

A. Assuming you inherit the stocks now registered in your husband's name, you'll have no more bother selling them than you will selling the jointly owned stocks.

If the stocks have risen in value, you'll have less capital gains tax to pay on the stocks you inherit than on jointly owned stocks. As noted above, only half of the basis on jointly owned stocks steps up when one of the joint owners dies.

Q. We are in the process of settling an estate and selling its assets — a house, stocks, etc. — to distribute the money among heirs. Your column confirms that the basis of all the assets is the value at the date of death.

However, we don't want any tax surprises. Where is it written that the Internal Revenue Service "relinquishes its share" by not levying capital gains tax on the difference between the prices at which the assets were purchased and the values at time of death?

A. In the Internal Revenue Code.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 would have made the basis of inherited assets the value of that property as of Dec. 31, 1976 — a so-called "fresh start date" — and would have resulted in heirs getting hit with more capital gains tax. That provision also would have required everybody who owned any capital assets, including houses, securities, jewelry, furniture — even my rolltop desk — to have inventories of values as of that date.

If that crazy system had been put into effect, heirs would have had much lower basis — and higher capital gains tax — when they sold inherited assets.

That provision of the '76 Tax Act caused so much confusion and so many complaints to Congress that our lawgivers, in a rare demonstration of common sense, repealed it before it became effective.

Don't fret. You're in for no surprises, in the form of capital gains tax on appreciated assets in that estate you are settling.

Q. I would like to engage in arbitraging in stock index options and futures. How much money is need to get a piece of the action in that game?

A. Some estimates put the number at $5 million; others say the ante must be at least $25 million. If you try to play with smaller amounts, the brokerage commissions will kill you. Also, the big experienced players in that game will take you to the cleaners.

CALCIUM FOR A SLICE OF THE BETTER LIFE

Today's brunch or luncheon party guests expect more than food that looks good and tastes great. There's an additional ingredient required by our health-oriented society — food that is good for you.

For women especially, one of the many important factors in healthy eating is calcium intake.

The best sources of calcium are found in dairy products among which is the "all-American" processed cheese food slice

Calcium is essential for building bones, muscle contraction, blood clotting and nerve function. If the body does not get enough, hormones will cause calcium to be released from the skeleton into the bloodstream to make it available for nerves and muscles. Long-term inadequate intakes of calcium have been associated with the development of osteoporosis — porous, brittle, breakable bones. For approximately one out of every four women over the age of 65, this disorder is all too well-known.

Although osteoporosis is most commonly observed in persons in their sixties, the disorder may actually begin in the mid 30's. The key to reducing potential risk is to build maximum bone mass before age 35. But no matter what the age, steps can be taken today to insure an adequate calcium intake.

1) EXAMINE YOUR DIET: The Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) for calcium is 800 mg for adults. However, getting the RDA for calcium is not always easy, especially for women. In fact, two out of every three women over the age of 17 do not consume the RDA for calcium — most are getting only about 600 mg per day. But according to some experts, even this may not be enough for the average woman. These experts suggest the RDA be raised to 1,000 mg before menopause and 1,500 mg after menopause. In selecting foods rich in calcium, this chart may be helpful to you.

CALCIUM CONTENT OF SELECTED FOODS

EXCELLENT SOURCES	AVERAGE SERVING SIZE	CALCIUM (mg)	PERCENT OF ADULT RDA (800 mg)
CHEESE:
Cheddar, mild	1 oz	204	25.5
Colby	1 oz	194	24.2
Monterey Jack	1 oz	212	26.5
Swiss	1 oz	272	34.0
American Processed Singles	1 oz	167	20.9
MILK:
Skim	1 cup	296	37.0
Whole	1 cup	288	36.0
Yogurt (low fat), plain	8 oz	347	43.4
FISH (with bones):
Salmon, canned	3 oz	167	20.9
Sardines	3 oz	370	46.3
Collard Greens	1/2 cup	176	22.0
MODERATE SOURCES
Oysters	3 oz	81	10.1
Spinach, cooked	1/2 cup	88	11.0
Cottage Cheese (2% fat)	1/2 cup	77	9.6
Soybean Curds (tofu)	3 oz	108	13.5
Almonds	1/4 cup	83	10.4
Broccoli, cooked	1/2 cup	68	8.5
Ice cream, vanilla	1/2 cup	88	11.0

2) BE AWARE OF CALCIUM LOSS FACTORS: Coffee, alcohol and nicotine from any source may increase calcium loss.

3) EXERCISE: Exercise involving movement and muscle pull is recommended. Interestingly, NASA medical consultants have noted an immediate loss of bone mass in astronauts spending even a short amount of time in zero gravity. Likewise, people who require complete bed rest for long periods of time lose calcium from the bone. Hence, walking, jogging, aerobic dancing, gymnastics, tennis and weight lifting all work on behalf of the bones. Exercising outdoors in the sun allows the body to make vitamin D, further benefiting calcium utilization.

To achieve an all around good diet which provides plenty of calcium, learn the best food sources of calcium and then incorporate these foods into your daily diet. (Milk and American cheese are convenient sources of calcium.) Incorporating these dairy products into the three meals of the day is an easy way to help you get the recommended allowance for calcium.

Other suggestions include: 1) adding cheese in sandwiches and salads; 2) snacking on cheese and crackers; and 3) using milk and cheese in casseroles.

The recipes featured here from the Kraft Kitchens provide some new ideas for creating brunch or luncheon items with American processed cheese food — for an added dose of calcium.

BAKED VEGETABLE CROISSANT

1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped tomato
1/2 cup mushroom slices
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon margarine
1/4 teaspoon dried basil leaves
4 croissants, split
4 American singles pasteurized process cheese food, cut in half diagonally

Saute vegetables in margarine; stir in basil. Fill croissants with vegetable mixture and process cheese food. Bake at 350°, 5 to 10 minutes or until process cheese food begins to melt. 4 sandwiches

TASTY TURKEY SANDWICH

1 3-oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
2 tablespoons chopped red or green pepper
1 tablespoon chopped chives
4 whole-wheat bread slices
Lettuce
4 cooked turkey slices
Tomato slices
2 American singles pasteurized process cheese food

Combine cream cheese, peppers and chives, mixing until well blended. For each sandwich, top one bread slice with cream cheese mixture. Top with lettuce, meat, tomatoes, process cheese food slice and second bread slice. 2 sandwiches

SKILLET READY EGGS

3/4 cup chopped tomato
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
3 tablespoons margarine
8 eggs
6 American singles pasteurized process cheese food

Saute vegetables in 1 tablespoon margarine. Beat eggs until foamy; stir in two process cheese food slices, chopped. Melt remaining margarine in 10-inch skillet over medium heat. Add egg mixture. Cook, stirring occasionally, until eggs are set. Top with vegetable mixture and remaining process cheese food slices, cut in half diagonally. Continue cooking until process cheese food begins to melt. 4 servings

HAM DANDY

1 8-1/4-oz. can crushed pineapple, drained
1/4 cup applesauce
12 raisin cinnamon bread slices
12 American singles pasteurized process cheese food
12 boiled ham slices
Soft margarine

Combine pineapple and applesauce; mix well. For each sandwich, cover one bread slice with one process cheese food slice, pineapple mixture, ham slices and second process cheese food slice. Top with second bread slice. Spread sandwich with margarine. Grill until lightly browned on both sides. 6 sandwiches

DEAR ABBY

Invitation angers divorced mother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My 7-year-old daughter (I'll call her Jessica) received a mailed invitation to a bridal shower. The bride-to-be is "Thelma" — a young woman who is marrying Jessica's father, whom I divorced when I learned that he and Thelma were having an affair.

Since Jessica doesn't drive yet, or do her own shopping, am I expected to purchase a shower gift for the bride and take Jessica to this event?

A little background: My husband met and fell in love with Thelma while he was commuting to work for his latest job change from Los Angeles to Newport Beach. Since I was not aware of the affair, I put our home on the market so we could relocate in Newport Beach. It sold in a few months, and we moved.

In less than a week, I learned about Thelma. I immediately moved back to Los Angeles, where my family, friends and career have always been. I also filed for divorce. I'll admit, I was burned up about selling our home and disrupting Jessica's school, plus bearing the expense of moving — both ways, since I wouldn't have moved in the first place had I known the score.

I need to know how to handle Jessica's invitation to the bridal shower. It seems thoughtless and in poor taste, but I want to do the right thing. — JESSICA'S DISGUSTED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I have never recommended ignoring an invitation, but considering the tastelessness of this one, I am making an exception.

DEAR ABBY: We have seen letters in your column praising Worldwide Marriage Encounter; it offers weekend retreats for married couples who want to strengthen their marriages. Worldwide Marriage Encounter weekends are offered to couples through their churches and synagogues.

Please be fair, Abby, and acknowledge the existence of National Marriage Encounter. We are not affiliated with any specific church or faith, and will accept ANY married couple whether they are churchgoers, into second marriages, or whatever.

We do not discriminate against mixed marriages, ethnic groups or anything else.

Father Gabriel Calvo, the founder of our movement, believes that all married couples should have the marriage encounter weekend experience, and so do we.

Anyone wanting information about National Marriage Encounter may write to: Chuck and Sandy Ogg, 4704 Jameson Place, Orlando, Fla. 32807, or Father Bob Lexa, St. Joseph Church, Appleton, Wis. 54911 — THE LOPACKIS, FOUNTAIN VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR LOPACKIS: Thanks for the information about National Marriage Encounter. It was news to me, and should be good news to couples who have no religious affiliations but who want the marriage encounter experience.

Readers, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, as this is a non-profit organization.

Mini-Cheese Loaves need little kneading

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: You once gave a recipe, using a standard method, for making mini-cheese loaves. Now I'm wondering whether you could tell me how to make the loaves in a food processor so that it will do the kneading. — WEEKEND COOK

DEAR WEEKEND COOK: Here is the Mini-Cheese Loaves recipe you requested, adjusted for the processor. — CB

MINI-CHEESE LOAVES

1 package dry yeast
¼ cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
¼-pound cheddar cheese
3 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
¾ cup cold milk

In a cup dissolve yeast in warm water.

In a food processor using medium shredding disk, shred cheese; remove disk. Insert dough kneading blade; add yeast, flour, salt and sugar. With motor running, through the feed tube, pour milk in a steady stream as fast as flour mixture absorbs it — about 30 seconds. Continue processing until dough cleans inside of bowl. (If dough is too moist, add flour through the feed tube by the tablespoon. If too dry, add milk by the teaspoon.) Process about 1 minute longer to knead dough.

Place in an oiled bowl, turn to oil top; cover bowl with saran, let rise in a draft-free warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 1 hour.

Punch down; divide into 4 equal portions and form each into a small loaf. Place each in a greased 4½ by 2½ by 1½-inch mini-pan. Cover with saran. Let rise as before. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 20 minutes. Turn out on a wire rack; cool completely. Makes 4 loaves.

Whiskey regulated

Copley News Service

America's early distillers made rye whiskey from a grain mash that was mostly rye, and they distilled corn whiskey from a mostly corn mash. Today the law requires rye whiskey to be at least 51 percent rye and corn whiskey of at least 80 percent corn.

TEXAS ★ CELEBRITY ★ RECIPE

(By RUSSELL M. GARDNER and CHRIS FARKAS)

"The sands have run through the glass, but we can see it all over again by turning the glass over; let's celebrate turning the glass over." — Richard "Racehorse" Haynes

EGGS RANCHERO

1 stick of butter or margarine
½ cup onion, finely chopped
1 cup tomatoes, peeled and chopped
¼ cup green chili peppers, chopped
1 dozen eggs

Melt butter in large frying pan, add onions, tomatoes and chili peppers. Cook over medium heat for about 30 minutes, stirring periodically to keep from sticking. In a large bowl, beat the eggs and then pour into pan with tomato mixture. Stir until eggs are firm. Top with sliced jalapeno peppers. Serve with sausage and flour tortillas.

WHAT'S COOKING

Practice makes pastry

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Bonnie Darville enjoys a very sweet profession. She is pastry chef at Mission Country Club.

A chef for about 1½ years, Ms. Darville said she is mostly self-taught, "out of books and because I love it so much — and just practice, practice, practice. And I apprenticed under Bob (Robert VerVynch, Mission Country Club's executive chef) for a few months."

Although being a chef has traditionally been a male career, Ms. Darville said she had no trouble entering the field. The job is demanding and one that she thoroughly enjoys: "After all, you have to love it or you just won't make it."

Some of the favorite sweets at Mission Country Club include Ms. Darville's Danish pastries, which are "all the rage now," and are also a treat for her to make.

At home, she prefers to make simpler desserts, such as family favorites chocolate mousse, banana pudding, lemon meringue pie and "I make strudel at home. Actually, it's a lot easier than what you would think.

"I wouldn't say I make fancy stuff (at home), but I don't buy ready-made, I never have. If I'm going to bake, I don't worry about time as much, but then because I'm trained, it doesn't take me as long."

No matter how long a dish takes, Ms. Darville said, if it looks beautiful and tastes good, "it has been worth the effort."

The following recipes are foods that she makes at home for her family:

Ron Jaap/ Reporter-Telegram

Bonnie Darville

BASIC SWEET DOUGH

2 packages yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
¼ cup butter
5 cups all-purpose flour, approximate
2 eggs, beaten

Soften yeast in lukewarm water; set aside. Scald milk and add sugar, salt, shortening and butter. Cool to lukewarm (80° to 85°). Add part of flour to milk mixture to make thick batter and mix well.

Add soften yeast and beaten eggs; beat thoroughly. Add enough additional flour to make dough which is soft but does not stick to hands.

Turn dough out onto floured surface and knead until smooth and satiny (about 8-10 minutes). Place in greased bowl and turn dough over so both top and bottom of dough are greased.

Cover dough and allow to rise in warm place until doubled in bulk (about 1½ hours). Punch down and allow dough to rest for 10 minutes.

Shape into rolls or loaves. Allow to rise again until doubled, about 1 hour. Bake at 350° F. for 20-25 minutes for roll, 35-45 minutes for loaves.

Makes 36 rolls or three medium-sized loaves

BANANA PUDDING

Note: Ms. Darville said the key to a great banana pudding is this custard recipe and ripe bananas. Just cut bad places off fruit before using.

2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
⅓ cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 egg yolks
1 tablespoon butter
3 to 4 bananas
Vanilla wafers
1 teaspoon vanilla

Heat 1½ cup milk in saucepan. Blend remaining milk, egg yolks, sugar, flour and salt in mixer or blender. Pour into hot milk and cook over medium heat until thickened, stirring constantly.

Cook two to three minutes more, stirring constantly to cook the flour. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla and butter. Cool, stirring occasionally.

Pour over layers of sliced bananas and vanilla wafers. Cover and refrigerate.

Carrot cake prepared 'Irregardless'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A love of cooking, from the time he was very young, brought Arthur Gordon into the restaurant business, even though when he was growing up a career in the food field never entered his mind.

Born in Durham, N.C., he studied chemistry and later philosophy at The University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. But eventually he joined a group that opened a vegetarian restaurant, "Irregardless Cafe," in Raleigh, and his restaurant career began. Ever since he has had a marvelous time developing his own recipes.

A few years ago he became sole owner-chef of Irregardless Cafe and enlarged his menu. Nowadays he offers fish, poultry and eggs as well as fresh vegetables and fruit.

Several years ago he wrote a cookbook called "The Irregardless Cooks" (Ten Speed Press). In it is a recipe for an unusual carrot cake.

ARTHUR GORDON'S CARROT CAKE

¼ pound butter
¼ cup oil
¾ cup honey
½ cup molasses
4 eggs
2 tablespoons vanilla
1½ cups white flour
⅔ cup whole wheat flour
2 teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon salt
2½ cups grated carrots
Cream Cheese Icing, see recipe

Melt butter and blend with oil, honey and molasses. Add eggs and vanilla, beat well. Stir in the flours and spices, leavenings and salt. Add carrots and stir to distribute evenly. Spread into 2 greased 8-inch round pans. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 45 minutes. Spread Cream Cheese Icing over top and sides.

Cream Cheese Icing: Mix together 1 pound cream cheese (softened), ½ pound butter (softened) and ½ cup honey until blended.

Crystal apples glazed with carmel

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The caramelized apples served as dessert at Chinese restaurants are delicious. The recipe is fairly standard, so here is a slightly Americanized recipe from our files with a note that you must serve this dessert within an hour of cooling. You will notice that the dessert is made to order at Chinese restaurants. That is because the glaze tends to liquefy upon standing. If you want to vary the fruit, try strawberries.

APPLES IN CRYSTAL
2 cups sugar
1 cup boiling water
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
2 to 3 tablespoons sesame seeds
4 or 5 apples, cut into wedges
Ice water

Combine sugar, boiling water and cream of tartar in 1-quart heavy saucepan. Bring to boil over high heat and boil, without stirring, until syrup registers 300 degrees on candy thermometer, or until syrup just begins to turn light caramel color. Turn heat off and stir in sesame seeds.

Working quickly, dip apple wedges, which have been speared on forks or skewers, in syrup, then dip quickly in ice water to crystallize. Apple wedges should be dipped 1 at a time. If syrup becomes too thick, heat until thin enough for dipping.

Apples should be served at once after cooling and never longer than 1 hour after they are glazed. Serve as dessert. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Applesauce filling used for squash

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

APPLE SQUASH
1 acorn squash
1 cup water
⅔ cup applesauce
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons raisins
2 tablespoons chopped pecans
1 tablespoon butter

With a sharp heavy knife halve squash lengthwise; discard seeds and stringy membranes. Arrange halves, cut side down, in an 8-inch square pan. Pour water around squash; cover pan with foil. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until tender — 40 minutes. Turn cut side up. Stir together applesauce, brown sugar, lemon juice, raisins and pecans; fill squash cavities with mixture; dot with butter. Continue baking in the 400-degree oven for about 15 minutes longer. Makes 2 servings.

Board asked to delay boundary changes

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A group of Midland parents have asked local school board members to take no action on high school boundary changes until the impact of the current economic depression is reflected in next year's enrollment figures.

The Midland Parents in Action Committee submitted its written request to school board members just hours before the Tuesday deadline seeking public input on the issue.

Trustees met in regular session Tuesday to accept the proposals. A public hearing is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. April 29 in the Sam Houston Elementary School cafeteria, 2000 W. Louisiana Ave.

The request, delivered by committee spokesman Tom E. Johnson, asked Midland Independent School District trustees to allow the current economic situation to stabilize. In doing so, he wrote, "the Board can get back on the time line originally recommended in their August 1985 Retreat, which did not call for recommended boundary changes until December 1986."

A high school boundary change, said Johnson, is by its nature an "emotional issue, and in these hard times Midlanders should be doing everything they can to pull together. The stresses attendant to the current high school boundary study are divisive, unfair and unreasonable to those of us whose main concern today is to survive the storm."

Specifically, Johnson was critical of the fact that none of the data compiled for the recent projections took into account the severe downturn in the price of oil, and the resulting slowdown of the local economy.

The group suggests the board hold off on any decision until it is able to review enrollment figures this fall when the economic scene should be easier to analyze.

"IF A boundary change seems necessary, we recommend that a long range plan be implemented which will carry us forward for many years without having boundary change disruptions every five to ten years. This plan should be arrived at with input from a Board-appointed planning committee (both anglo and minority), and such other specialists as the Board deems necessary," Johnson wrote.

Trustees also accepted input from three other residents just prior to the Tuesday afternoon deadline.

Rural Midlander Julia Roper said she understands the school board's desire to balance Midland and Lee high schools on the basis of total and minority enrollment.

However, she asked the board to vote against the proposal to alter rural students to achieve equalization.

"Since when did 'rural' become a classification requiring an equal balance between the schools and more importantly, why?" she asked. "This makes even less sense when you consider the fact that this creates an imbalance in head count that you are trying to prevent, thus requiring the movement of even more students."

Midland Realtor Sarah Crowe criticized a plan to bring additional upper socio-economic areas into Midland High School.

Though there are exceptions, Ms. Crowe wrote, there is a correlation between family income/education level and student achievement in academic and extra-curricular participation.

"As a Realtor in Midland for the past ten years, I am aware that there are homes available in all price ranges in both high school areas," she stated.

ACCORDING TO Ms. Crowe, the areas with houses that normally sell for $100,000 or more within the Lee High School boundary are Trinity Estates, Greentree, MaMar, Crestgate and the south Emerson Elementary School area.

In the Midland High School attendance area, houses that sell for $100,000 or more are located in Saddle Club North, Warwick, Racquet Club/Crescent Place, Polo Park, Saddle Club South, Skyline Terrace, the north Emerson area, Plantation Hills, Vista West, Meadowpark, and along Scharbauer Drive, Garfield Street and Golf Course Road.

"The successful solution to high school population disparities will not be found through bringing additional upper economic areas into Midland High School," Ms. Crowe wrote. "MHS is already top heavy."

She asked trustees to allow both current and future Midland families to have a choice of high schools regardless of their socio-economic level.

Seree Whitlow, vice president of the Lee High School Parent Teacher Association, asked trustees to address in detail its long-range plans for the next 20 years when it meets April 22 to consider the staff's proposal for boundary changes.

Ms. Whitlow, who conducted her own independent study of projected enrollment figures, said MHS and LHS will be 1,080 students over capacity by the 1991-92 school year. By 1995-96, she noted the high schools will be 2,092 students over capacity.

"INHERENT in any decision made now is the need to contemplate future demands," Ms. Whitlow wrote. "As the leaders of public education in Midland, I feel sure you have made long range plans, communication of these plans is necessary to gain public support and understanding of the current decisions."

In other action Tuesday, trustees approved revisions in board policy for the promotion of students, the selection and removal of controversial instructional and library materials and adopted new board policies on educational and ethical standards for school board members.

Trimble spreads CIA gospel to world

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The most unusual request he received came from Jerusalem. A lot flow in from Canada. But they're all wanting the same thing — more information about Midland's Christmas in April program.

Bobby Trimble is ready. He sends out literature, talks with people on the phone and gives tours when they come to town.

Tuesday was no exception. He spent the day showing Kristen Hoggatt with Strategies to Elevate People (STEP) in Dallas how Christmas in April operates — a housing repair program done all on a volunteer basis with no state or federal funds. Meanwhile, he was preparing for Thursday's session with the various groups across the city who will select houses they will work on during the April 26 event.

The Thursday session will start at 7 p.m. and will be in the second floor conference room of RepublicBank First National of Midland. With a record 215 houses on the list this year, Trimble is asking for more groups of volunteers. Or instead of taking one house per group, he is suggesting they take one large project and possibly two small ones.

Christmas in April is starting its 14th year of repairing elderly persons' homes. It has been recognized nationally for its concept of working only with volunteers — the money comes from persons and groups locally and the work is done on the last Saturday in April by Midlanders.

With the program's reputation, there is no need to advertise. Trimble said he gets calls year round from people needing help on their house. And if it is an emergency situation, such as a leaking roof or no heat, that job is done immediately.

Christmas in April has raised about $100,000 this year to pay for the supplies. And Builders and Homeowners Supply, 1701 W. Industrial, stays open that Saturday to assist. Trimble said the employees volunteer their time that Saturday to keep the store open and help with advice.

But until Thursday's signup session, Trimble said he won't know how many groups will be participating in the April 26 work day. "We'll lose some groups on account of companies closing their offices here. But we're hoping to pick up new ones. We want to encourage any new group or individual to sign up. There are a lot of projects where two or three people can do the work."

Age makes no difference, according to Trimble. One Sunday School class of people over the age of 65 helped put on a roof one year. School teacher Bob Cornell always brings a group of fifth and sixth graders. And Cub Scouts and Brownie troops are good at helping to clean up yards and work areas, he said.

Because of the program's reputation, it has found its way into numerous magazines and newspapers. And as a result, Trimble has received many requests for more information on how to operate the program. He sends out the literature and only rarely gets a call for additional help. "They look at it and say it can't be done. Most of them don't follow up," as with the request from Jerusalem.

But Ms. Hoggatt was the exception. STEP, working with several churches in Dallas and with some funding assistance from the city, has completed a smaller-scale housing project.

With cutbacks expected in the city budget, she can see the day coming when the program will have to be funded by private donations and the work done by volunteers. The problem, she noted, is finding someone like Trimble who has enough interest to spearhead the project and keep it going.

Failed cooling system causes trial's early recess

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While the government was building its kiting case against a Tulsa, Okla., engineer, the judge was getting so hot that he sent himself and everybody else home early.

It was 5:15 p.m., the indoor temperature was 81 degrees, the air-conditioning system had failed, the courtroom players were sweaty, the courtroom doors were wide open, the air was stilled, and there were no fans to move the air.

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton had permitted the jurors to fan themselves with court documents.

The cooling system in the basement of the George Mahon Federal Building had broken down, and the General Services Administration, which owns and maintains the 12-year-old building, was trying to repair the system.

"It's interesting," said the judge, who was donned in his black robe, "that the court has to pay the rent."

He sent the court into recess, and the lawyers and the defendant immediately shucked their coats in exposing suspenders and belts. They continued toiling for the trial's resumption today.

"We'll get it running tomorrow, maybe," a GSA employee said of the cooling unit.

This morning, it didn't matter. The weather intervened, a cool front had moved in to sharply contrast with the Tuesday's high of 88 degrees. And the courtroom was relatively cool.

"What the GSA couldn't do," the judge reportedly noted, "God did."

'First link' in city's chain of emergency workers honored

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Cindy Lewis has never fought a fire, but when Midland firefighters respond to an emergency in time to save a life, she and the other Fire Department dispatchers deserve part of the credit.

"We're the first link," she said. "It's us that gets (emergency personnel) to them as quick as possible — sometimes quick enough to save their life. I think a lot of people don't think about that."

To remedy this lack of recognition, Midland officials have proclaimed "Telecommunicator Week" to honor the 30 men and women who handle the telephones and radios for the Midland Police and Fire departments, the Midland County Sheriff's Office and the Midland office of the Department of Public Safety.

Telecommunicators "often work long and hard hours without the proper recognition," read the proclamation signed by County Judge William B. Ahders. The dispatchers "need and deserve the informed support of our community."

Telecommunicators must juggle reports from teletype machines, the public and their own personnel, and generally be able to do "a dozen things at one time," according to Richard Kolas, communications supervisor at the Fire Department.

"We also have to be able to give out emergency medical instructions over the phone," said Kolas, whose four dispatchers handle calls for the Fire Department and the Emergency Medical Service ambulances.

These dispatchers get all the "911" calls, and how well they do their job "makes all the difference in the world — the difference between them getting help and not getting help," Kolas said.

But to the public, "We're just somebody on the other end of the phone line," he said. Even in their own office, "Dispatchers are usually physically separated from the rest of the agency. We don't have much contact with other folks."

Dispatchers must process a constant flow of communication, even when nothing very exciting is going on, according to Wayne Clay, one of four full-time radio-room employees at the Sheriff's Office.

Council accepts award for wastewater plant

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland City Council accepted an award for its wastewater treatment plant and approved several zone change requests during its meeting Tuesday at City Hall Council Chambers.

Glen Doty with the engineering firm of Black & Veatch presented the award from the American Consulting Engineers Council for the city's $20 million sewage disposal project located 15 miles southeast of Midland.

That project was initiated when the holding ponds just outside the city limits began overflowing and running down Midland Draw. The holding pond area was moved to the new location and the effluent water is used to irrigate adjacent land.

The project was entered in the national contest at Washington, D.C., and made it to the finalist category, according to Doty. It will be displayed in one of four places in Washington over a period of time, he added.

"I would like to say thank you. This council was always an active part of the project team. We came to you for counsel and advice and you were there. You were receptive and always had input," Doty said.

In other action, the council approved a resolution supporting the University of Texas of the Permian Basin which will be forwarded to the Select Committee on Higher Education.

The council also approved a zone change requested by Robert C. Boyd, DVM, for a veterinary clinic in North Park Shopping Center, a mobile home two-year special permit for Earl Green, a permit for the sale of beer and wine at Candilejas Fine Mexican Cuisine, a zone change for KMID—TV at Midland Regional Air Terminal to allow three satellite dishes, a permit for a day nursery on Austin Street and a zone change on the north side of Castleford Road for a retirement center.

VIEWPOINT

Overseas terrorism makes many locals want to stay home

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Last week four Americans were blasted out of an airplane traveling from Rome to Athens in a incident authorities believe was terrorist related.

Saturday a bomb in a West German disco killed an American soldier and a West German woman.

Because of these incidents and others in the past year, the U.S. State Department has warned Americans that it can no longer guarantee their safety overseas.

On Tuesday a random selection of 14 Midlanders were asked: "Would you travel overseas now in light of the recent terrorist incidents?"

Only three out of the 14 interviewed said they would travel overseas. The majority said they wouldn't go overseas because of safety reasons, and a few said they had no desire to travel overseas.

Dan Fender, 4504 Princeton, said he wouldn't travel overseas because, "There's too much unrest. I don't think it's safe. We've got too much over here to go overseas. You can see all you want to see in the state of Texas." Fender owns a tire company.

Tommy Livingston, 805 Lawson, said he would only travel overseas if it was necessary for business.

"I'd be very cautious about any trip overseas. I would go only if it were necessary," said Livingston, who works for a chemical company.

Robert Hoves, #4 Winchester Court, said he would be wary about traveling overseas. "I would not go to the Middle East. I might go to England or France — it's safer over there. You're going at your own risk. Like the government says, we can't be responsible for everybody that travels." Hoves is a landman.

Fender

Livingston

Savage

Shuting

"I wouldn't go for a while even though they say security is stepped up. So many people out there might be willing to strike out at Americans overseas," said Darryl Savage, 3727 Andrews Highway. Savage is a television reporter.

Ed Fritz, 8 Greenview Lane, said he would not travel because airlines are not doing enough to secure passenger safety.

"I do not think the airline industry is taking enough initiative to secure passengers," said Fritz, who works as a draftsman. He said airlines should X-ray cargo baggage to make air travel safer.

"You don't know whether you're going to return or not. It's just too dangerous," said Pat Bertreaux, 3800 N. Loop 250. Ms. Bertreaux is a nurse.

"Everything is happening down there. I wouldn't go overseas, period," said Damas Salgado, 105 E. Cedar. Salgado is involved in an office supply business.

Others said they wouldn't travel overseas because they had no desire to.

Benny Job, 4305 W. Illinois, said "I wouldn't go overseas. I've had all that I want in the Korean War and Vietnam." However Job, who also served three years in Europe, said if he had the desire to travel again he would go despite recent terrorist attacks.

"It's just like a lot of other things. Too many people take trips over there. They're not going to bomb them all," said Job, who works with a geophysical service.

Thomasine Handley, of rural Midland said, "I have no business over there and I have never had the desire." However, Ms. Handley said if she had the desire she would go because "If it's your time, it's your time."

Sherry Martinez, 4310 Trevino, said she would feel safe traveling overseas because terrorists are targeting U.S. government personnel, not citizens.

"It's people involved with the government. Those are the people that have a threat down there," said Ms. Martinez, who works as a market researcher.

Clare Ariene Shuping, 107 E. Michigan, said "I'd believe I'd go today. I would just go and take the risk."

DEATHS

Sammy D. Williams

Sam Williams

CRANE — Sammy D. "Sam" Williams, 43, of Crane, died Tuesday at a Monahans hospital from injuries he received in an automobile accident.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Crane Christian Church with the Rev. Jim Hester and the Rev. Sam Jordan officiating. Burial will be at Crane County Cemetery under the direction of Richard W. Box Funeral Home of Crane.

Williams was born March 23, 1943, in Midland. He attended Midland High School. He served in the U.S. Navy from 1960 to 1963. He married the former Gloria Looney on Nov. 20, 1970. He was the former owner of Town and Country Electric in Midland and was the owner of Sampson Electric in Odessa at the time of his death. He was a member of the Crane Christian Church and of the Odessa Racquet Club. He was on the board of directors of the Crane Country Club.

He was preceded in death by his father.

Survivors include his wife; his mother, Mrs. Rheba Williams of Midland; three sons, John Williams of Stephenville, Sammy Williams Jr. of Crane and Kirksey Gregg of Odessa; three sisters, Barbara Simpson and Patti Jones, both of Midland, and Doris Lewis of Brownwood; six brothers, James Williams of Colorado City, Charles "Chock" Williams, Johnny Williams and Robert "Butch" Williams, all of Midland, and Joe Williams and Lynn Williams, both of Odessa.

Woodrow Milton Jones

ROSCOE — Services for Woodrow Milton Jones of Ava, Mo., will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Methodist Church of Roscoe.

The Rev. Norman Patton will officiate. Burial will follow in the Roscoe cemetery.

Jones, 73, died Sunday following a brief illness.

He was born July 15, 1912, in Roscoe. He married Faye Slaughter in Roscoe in 1929. Jones worked in oil field drilling and was a rancher before his retirement.

Survivors, include four sisters, Ruth Todd of Abilene, Tennie B. Ringo of Kingsland, Edith Haynes of Monahans and Lois Levy of Hobbs, N.M.; one brother, M.D. "Mac" Jones of Roscoe; two sons, B.D. Jones of Houston and J.M. Jones of Monahans; and one daughter, Peggy Hahn of Midland; 14 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Claudia Williams

Services for Miss Claudia Williams, 71, were to be today at 1:30 p.m. at First Baptist Church with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Miss Williams died Monday at a local hospital.

Pallbearers were to be Charles Howe, C.D. Johnson, Bob Wilson, Bill Probandt, Bill Flynt and Lynn Durham Jr.

W.C. Hunter

FORT WORTH — W.C. Hunter, 89, of Fort Worth, died Monday.

Services were to be today at 3 p.m. at the Greenwood Garden Chapel in Fort Worth with Chaplain Tom Hollingsworth officiating. Burial was to be at Greenwood Memorial Park in Fort Worth.

Survivors include one son, W.C. Hunter of Garland; two daughters, Elizabeth Hatfield of Midland and Bobbie Williams of Fort Worth; two brothers, Joe Hunter and Henry Hunter of Fort Worth; one sister, Lillian Morlock of Hurst; nine grandchildren; and 16 great-grandchildren.

Former Texan gaining reputation as successful Hispanic activist

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — After only a few years in Oregon, Jose Angel Gutierrez, 41, is gaining recognition for creating successful social service programs for Hispanics.

During the past two years, Gutierrez has been director of both the Oregon Commission on Hispanic Affairs and the Oregon Council for Hispanic Advancement. He took control of the state commission in early 1984, after it became a legislative agency rather than a governor's commission.

In May 1984, the United Way of Columbia-Willamette hired him to supervise the creation of the Oregon Council for Hispanic Advancement. The group was launched after a March 1985 conference on Hispanic strategy from 1985 to 1990. United Way then hired him as a full-time director of special projects for the council.

"He's kind of a catalyst, he keeps things ignited," said Raquel Aquillon, administrative assistant for the Hispanic commission. "A lot of things that are happening with OCHA and the commission wouldn't be happening if it weren't for him.

"He inspires people to get involved and to give 100 percent. If he were to leave the state, I can't think of anyone who has the strength to keep the commission alive."

Gutierrez doesn't mince words about his mission to assist Hispanics. He said he's "paid by the United Way, but I work for OCHA."

Gutierrez believes that for some, the American dream has been replaced by "an ugly American nightmare."

"The black and Hispanic youth are en route — as the Indian youth is already there — to becoming a subclass, where they could remain in unemployment and poverty," he said. "It's going to take people like them to understand that this is happening and people like me in partnership to help get them out of that.

"I firmly believe that you can make things happen, for yourself anyway," he said.

In his council work, Gutierrez has obtained funding to start several social and business groups for Hispanics. Gutierrez will directly supervise a newly formed Youth Leadership Institute and a regional non-partisan voter registration organization.

"We're fortunate to have him," said York Haines, vice president of communications for United Way. "This has been a very positive experience and, I think, a win situation for the United Way and the Hispanic community."

The Hispanic services project was intended as a pilot for future programs, Haines said. But it's been more.

"It broadened the concept and gave the Hispanic community a vehicle to become self-sufficient," Haines said.

The United Way expected the project to take three to five years, but Gutierrez made the independent Hispanic council possible in just a year and a half, Haines added.

"He's not just someone with a cause, he's results-oriented," Haines said.

Gunman killed self during attack, police rule

EULESS (AP) — After police ended a 48-hour standoff by blowing in a door to a convenience store, a man who had been holding his ex-wife hostage committed suicide by shooting himself in the head, officials have ruled.

Marlon Mataele, 28, was shot once in the left leg by police but died from a contact gunshot wound to the head consistent with the .38 caliber pistol police said he was carrying, according to a statement released Tuesday by Tarrant County Medical Examiner Dr. Nizam Peerwani.

Earlier police said they thought they had shot Mataele to death when they stormed the convenience store after learning that the woman was dead.

Mataele's ex-wife, Sandra Lobendahn, 26, died after being shot once in the right temple, according to the autopsy. Her death was ruled a homicide and the autopsy also indicated she had been dead at least two hours before police entered the premises.

Shortly after taking over the Kwik Pantry convenience store where Ms. Lobendahn worked as a clerk, Mataele had shot and wounded a police sergeant in the shoulder as the officer responded to a silent alarm.

After the tragedy, relatives said Mataele and Ms. Lobendahn's relationship was stormy from the time they ran off together as teen-agers in Hawaii.

The two ran away together shortly after meeting in high school in Honolulu.

After their marriage, they lived in Hawaii and had two children, Malani Jr., 10, and Pauline, 8.

Mataele worked as a landscaper and on yachts, but drank heavily and relied on his wife, who was fluent in English and able to get jobs easily, for support, said Helen Lobendahn, Ms. Lobendahn's mother.

Odessa man wounded in hand during drug raid

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 31-year-old man was wounded in the hand early today during a drug raid on the man's southside home by search warrant-armed police officers and a sherriff's deputy.

The man and his 32-year-old wife were scheduled to be arraigned in Municipal Court today. The two face charges of possession of cocaine and marijuana. Additionally, the man is to be charged with attempted aggravated assault on a peace officer, police spokesman John McAhon said.

According to McAhon, police narcotics officers and Ector County sheriff's narcotics deputy Jim Dickson obtained a search warrant and went to the home of the couple about 12:23 a.m. today to search for suspected drugs. Unable to get anyone to answer the door, officers forced it open.

As Dickson entered, the 31-year-old man pointed a 9 mm semi-automatic pistol at him, McAhon said. Gunfire erupted and a bullet struck the gun hand of the man.

Officers then searched the residence in the 1100-block of W. Clifford and confiscated an undetermined quantity of substances believed to be cocaine and marijuana, as well as a quantity of pills that have been sent to the laboratory for analysis, said McAhon.

The man was taken to Medical Center Hospital where he underwent emergency surgery for the wound in his hand. His wife was jailed pending filing of formal charges.

FRAUD

Meanwhile, the government is seeking to convict 43-year-old Roger Harris Clark of mail fraud, wire-transfer fraud, and making false statements in order to secure loans to finance his businesses, which included Clark Engineering Inc. of Odessa and Clark Manufacturing of Tulsa.

He is charged with submitting false and fraudulent invoices to Texas Western Financial Corp. to secure loans, with using fraud to get a $50,750 wire transfer from Odessa's Permian Bank & Trust where he was a director, for making false statements to get a $75,000 loan from Permian Bank & Trust, and making another false statement to secure a $35,200 loan from Bank of the West in Odessa.

Texas Western Financial Corp. today is known as Heller Financial Corp. of Dallas.

The government claims that Clark had overvalued his property to get loans in 1982 and 1983, had pledged non-existent Lo-Boy trailers he manufactured to secure loans and had pledged collateral which already had been assigned to the First National Bank of Midland to get other loans. Courtroom testimony indicated that Clark had borrowed $2.5 million from the First National Bank in 1977 to buy manufacturing businesses in Odessa and Brownwood.

"It's just a big kite," Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship said of Clark's alleged schemes. "It's robbing Peter to pay Paul, and it's not explained by the slump in the oil industry. The oil slump is what brought it to a head."

The government had submitted names of 32 possible witnesses but only swore in 13 on Tuesday afternoon.

"This is a kiting scheme on a grand scale," charged Blankinship. "It went on for several months. He (Clark) liked to put blame on other people. This man does not like to accept blame."

The federal prosecutor said "The oil industry just fell apart." Apparently "it was all right to steal. It was all right to lie. I disagree with that," he told the jurors in his opening statements, "and you do, too."

Clark's defense attorney, Travis Shelton of Lubbock, said that the "robbing-Peter-to-pay-Paul" cycle was commonplace during the Great Depression.

"If that was a crime," he said, "there wouldn't be enough penitentiaries to put people in."

In noting that "hindsight is a wonderful thing," Shelton said that bankers and other lenders "want to loan money, because that's the way they make money."

Shelton referred to Clark's business enterprises in which he built rigging for trucks and trailers.

"The trucking industry needed Mr. Clark," Shelton said, "and Mr. Clark needed the trucking industry."

Mark Thannisch, a former First National Bank officer who once handled Clark's loan account, said Clark was "trying to make things happen."

"Eighty-one was a good year," Thannisch said, "and Clark was one of those problem loans even during that good period of time."

The oil boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s began to languish in late 1982. And the First National Bank, which was Texas' largest independent bank and a major lender of energy-related loans, failed on Oct. 14, 1983.

DISPATCH

"It's a very highly stressful job. There's always something to do," even during the all-night graveyard shift, he said. "There's never a dull moment."

"Sometimes it's very stressful," agrees Sheri Dirlam, one of 15 Police Department telecommunicators who work in three shifts of five. But the job is also interesting, she said.

"There's something new going on all the time. You never know what kind of call will come in next."

For local telecommunicators who labor in relative obscurity, the attention they're receiving this week is welcome, according to Jerry Warren, one of six DPS dispatchers in Midland.

"It doesn't hurt to get a little recognition once in awhile," he said.

Midlander hospitalized after mishap

From Staff Reports

A 17-year-old Midland youth was listed in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital after a Tuesday night traffic accident on Loop 250 near Wadley Avenue, according to police and hospital reports.

Randy Sample, 4433 Leddy, was a passenger in a 1981 Oldsmobile driven by 16-year-old James Horton, 3503 W. Louisiana, according to police reports. Sample was injured when Horton's car ran into the rear of a 1983 Ford pickup driven by Kerry Robertson, 4400 Holiday Hill Road, reports said.

Robertson, 20, was treated for a possible lumbar strain and released, according to an MMH spokeswoman. Sample was being observed for a possible head injury. Horton, who was listed as Brad Horton in hospital records, was treated for facial lacerations and released, she said.

Robertson's pickup was stopped at a traffic light in the northbound lane of the Loop when the accident occurred about 7:55 p.m. According to police, Horton's car left skid marks 108 feet long before hitting the pickup from behind. The Oldsmobile's speedometer was broken at 85 mph, reports said.

Youth expected to be charged

From Staff Reports

A 17-year-old Midland youth was expected to be charged with burglary of a habitation today after Midland police arrested him Tuesday in a house at 907 Washington, according to police reports.

Officer Elias Hernandez noticed the break-in while on patrol about 11:30 p.m., and called in other units, reports said. The youth was being held in city jail this morning pending the filing of formal charges.

In other reports, a house at 503 N. Mineola was damaged Tuesday night by a fire of undetermined origin, according to Fire Department reports.

The house, owned by Leroy Ellis Sr., sustained moderate damage to an outside wall, where the fire apparently started. There was minor smoke damage to the interior. No injuries were reported in the fire, which was reported at 8:46 p.m. It was extinguished with about 250 gallons, reports said.

Police Roundup

Boy in good condition after shooting

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 5-year-old boy, accidentally shot in the chest Tuesday night, was reported in good condition at Medical Center Hospital late this morning.

According to police spokesman John McAhon, Jesus Enriquez LaZoya, 1200 N. Hancock, and a 17-year-old youth were playing with a .22 caliber derringer about 9:15 p.m. when the gun discharged. A single bullet struck LaZoya in the chest, McAhon said.

The boy was taken to Medical Center Hospital, where he underwent emergency. He was in the MCH intensive care unit "doing well," about mid-morning, said McAhon, who said the shooting has been classified accidental and no charges are expected to be filed.

Grandy's jumps on bandwagon with Sesquicentennial essay contest

From Staff Reports

Grandy's, the Lewisville-based restaurant chain, is sponsoring a Sesquicentennial essay contest in conjunction with the Texas Wagon Train's arrival in Midland-Odessa.

Titled "Grandy's Grand Essay Contest," the competition will continue in the Midland-Odessa area through April 25. Essays will be judged and winners will be announced shortly thereafter, in time for the winners to ride in the wagon train when it arrives in the Tall City on April 30.

Open to elementary and junior high school students in grades three through nine, the competition offers a chance for young Texans to think about — and write — "What the Texas Sesquicentennial Means to Me."

Essays written in the Midland-Odessa area will be judged by a panel of volunteers from the community. Winning essays will be judged according to four criteria: originality of ideas, spelling, grammar and composition.

Winners will be announced in two categories: a third to fifth grade competition whereby students are asked to write 100 word themes and a sixth to ninth grade category in which students write 250-word essays. Spelling, grammar and composition will be judged on a sliding scale, taking into account the age and grade of the student.

In addition to a chance to ride on the Grandy's wagon when the wagon train arrives, winners will receive a $50 savings bond, a Texas wagon train pin, a certificate, a Texas wagon train souvenir program and other prizes.

Grandy's has prepared an entry form on which the essays may be written; however, essays may also be written on regular lined paper. All essays should be handwritten by the student, and to be eligible for competition, themes must include the name, grade, name of parent or guardian and telephone number of the entrant.

Completed essays should be deposited in the "Grandy's Grand Essay Contest" box at a local Grandy's no later than the contest deadline on April 25.

MISD

Trustees voted to require students on the senior high school campus to be assigned to classes according to the following requirements: sophomores must earn three credits before they move on to the senior high school, juniors must earn 10 credits and seniors must earn 15 credits in order to be promoted.

The board also adopted a resolution to support the University of Texas of the Permian Basin as an upper-level institution. The resolution will be presented to the Select Committee on Higher Education.

In addition to state minimum requirements for Career Ladder Level II, trustees voted that a MISD teacher must have been in continuous employment a a full-time teacher during the 1983-84, 1984-85, and 1985-86 school years.

Further, the teacher must meet additional stricter criteria which shall be based on the results of the 1983-84 and 1984-85 official summative teacher performance appraisal, trustees voted. Assignment to the Career Ladder will be made starting with the highest composite average performance score and continue in descending order until this year's Career Ladder funding is depleted.

Voter totals up in city elections

From Staff Reports

The Elections Administrator's office has announced that 9,431 voters went to the polls Saturday. This is 17 percent of a total of 55,085 registered voters. In 1985 municipal elections there was an 11 percent voter turnout.

It had been reported the total voters couldn't be tabulated Saturday night because the election judge at Lee Freshman High School failed to get the total number of voters from the back of the voting machine.

Bettye Calvert, elections administrator, said Tuesday the number of voters from that polling place were turned in to her office Saturday night along with the votes. She said she regrets her office failed to find the report on the number of voters when the votes were turned in, as they were returned that evening by the election judge.

Indians discover street-vending their only means of support

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Migrating 1,000 miles to this border city to escape poverty, several hundred Mazahua Indians only to find street-vending their only means of survival, officials say.

Some residents in this border city call the Indians, who huddle silently downtown and near movie theaters to sell candy bars and chewing gum, "Marias," or street vendors.

Hurried passers-by notice Maria Ignacia Ramirez, with her ragged but colorful frilled apron and long braids, but few buy anything from the blanket she has spread on the sidewalk.

"The lands in Santa Maria de Cachendad have been eroding for years, and the Mazahua originally migrated to Mexico City," Guillermina Valdes Villalva, a Juarez social psychologist familiar with the group, told the El Paso Times.

"The women traditionally are vendors, but the mayor of Mexico City didn't want them there. And police often threatened to cut off their braids," she said. "So they came to Juarez."

As more Mazahua have sent for their relatives, the number of families has increased to more than 100, said Rosalia Solarzano, a University of Colorado sociologist who has done did field work among the Mazahua in Juarez.

"When they first came, they had nothing," Solarzano said.

Ramirez, 55, and her husband, Pedro Hilario, 60, first arrived 25 years ago.

"There were only about seven Mazahua families then," said Ramirez.

Ramirez, who speaks only halting Spanish, said she is from Santa Maria de Cachendad, an isolated town in the state of Mexico near Mexico City. She now lives in the dusty Colonia Revolucion Mexicana.

The family lives within a three-block area that the Mexican government gave the Mazahua a few years ago. They are currently the only settled community of Indians living in Juarez.

Another group, the Tarahumara, frequently travel to Juarez from the Sierra Madre region of Chihuahua state. But they come to solicit donations for their drought-stricken community and never stay in Juarez for more than two weeks, Valdes Villalva said.

Ramirez said her cinderblock home in the poverty stricken southeast side of the city may be modest, but it is much better than what she had in her Indian village.

"We have little parcels of land there, but uyy, you can't make a living from them," she said.

Ten years after death Hughes still attracts attention he tried to avoid HOUSTON (AP) — Ten years after his death, billionaire Howard Hughes still attracts the attention he so desperately tried to avoid in life.

A few regulars frequent the Houston cemetery site where Hughes is buried next to his parents, and curious visitors still seek directions to it, a Glenwood Cemetery caretaker said.

Relatives have refurbished the once humble gravesite, erecting an elegant concrete wall graced with six black trumpets. Flowers, including a paper cup filled with daisies and red carnations, rest on the simple marker.

A decade ago, a private jet carrying Hughes' 94-pound body flew from his Mexican seaside hideaway to Houston, where he was born. The Hollywood playboy-turned-recluse had died of kidney failure at age 70.

Hughes, known for his exploits as a filmmaker, pilot and financial wizard, was buried two days later in a brief Episcopal ceremony. He left a legacy of money, adventure and glamorous women, but apparently no will.

The case of Hughes' millions fell to Houston Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who said more than 500 people have claimed to be related to Hughes and entitled to his money.

A worldwide search failed to produce a legitimate will, and in November 1981, Gregory declared an aunt and 21 cousins heirs to the Hughes fortune, estimated to be worth up to $2 billion when he died.

"We still get our regular complement of people who purport to be related to Mr. Hughes or an heir," Gregory said.

"I even met Howard Hughes himself," he said, explaining that a young, black man came to his office saying he was Hughes.

One woman who says she is a queen living in Alabama often writes to the judge, making claims to Hughes' money. She even sent Gregory an Easter card.

Although Gregory never met Hughes, he said he grew to know the man during court proceedings.

"As in many contested cases, you learn more about the person in death than others did in life," he said. "He was a total enigmatic person in my opinion."

Gregory said after hearing all the testimony, claims and odd bits of information regarding Hughes, he wasn't surprised Hughes did not leave a will.

"He was a procrastinator. That was one of his inconsistencies," the judge said.

Although litigation designating the heirs is complete, Gregory said he would not be surprised to see a motion filed concerning expediting the distribution of the estate.

William R. Lummis of Las Vegas, Nev., was named an heir and administrator of the Hughes estate. Neither he nor an attorney who works on distributing the fortune could be reached for comment.

As if Hughes himself issued a command of silence from the grave, heirs and lawyers contacted either refuse to comment about the estate or do not return telephone calls.

Temple Grandin of the University of Illinois plays with young pigs and their toys at the Swine Research Center in Urbana, Ill. Farmers have known for years that pigs love toys, but new research indicates that bowling balls are out and hanging hoses are in.

Playing pigs produce preferable pork

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Pigs love toys, and farmers have known that for years, but new research shows that bowling balls are out and hoses are in.

"If you're going to give pigs something to play with, give them toys they really like," said Temple Grandin, an animal behavioralist at the University of Illinois.

Pigs given their favorite toys seem less likely to hurt each other and more likely to produce good meat, said Ms. Grandin.

She and her associates have conducted research to determine which toys pigs like best and how long they play with them.

They found pigs prefer strips of cloth or rubber hoses hanging above their pens. Some chew on the ends "like gum," and others "jerk and shake" the toys like a dog pulling on a towel, said Grandin.

The pigs rejected two toys frequently provided by farmers: chains were too heavy and hurt their mouths, and balls became coated with manure from rolling around the pens, she said.

When the pigs have toys they like, they play with them regularly. Pigs played with the dangling objects about an hour a day the first week, then tapered off to a consistent half-hour "of intense activity" daily, Ms. Grandin said.

"And, they had distinct times when they wanted to play with their toys," she said. "It certainly looked like the pigs were enjoying themselves."

There's a practical value from the toys for the livestock producer.

"Toys occupy the pigs and keep them from engaging in vices like tail-biting, which can hurt the animals," said Ms. Grandin. "And, putting toys into the pen also helps make the pigs more calm."

That makes them easier to handle when farmers get them ready for market and when they are unloaded at the slaughterhouse, she said.

Barbecue fans resent remark

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The response of Columbia's barbecue lovers to the theory that barbecue makes Southerners dumb and slow can be seen on the back of cars and pickup trucks all over town.

The "I love Columbia & Barbecue — And I'm not dumb or slow!" bumper stickers emerged after barbecue fans saw red when they tuned into NBC-TV's "Today" show on March 21 — the day before the capital's 200th birthday — to hear Columbian Jan Dreher say the South lost the Civil War because Southerners ate too much barbecue, making them dumb and slow.

Nora Sikes of Sikes' Barbecue in Eastover said the dumb-and-slow theory has not slowed up barbecue sales out her way.

And Bill Larimore, who's up at 4:30 a.m. to cook barbecue at Prince's Bar-Be-Cue in West Columbia, said he's keeping an eye out for a bumper sticker.

"I'll put it on my car," he said. "I love barbecue. I must eat barbecue probably two or three times a week. If I eat too much it hasn't affected by IQ."

'Martial Arts Hall' becoming true hot spot in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — Singer Tina Turner, Emperor Hirohito and 10,000 Japanese farmers have something in common. They all chose the same place to air their messages in 1985.

Originally built for the 1964 Olympic Games, Budokan, or "Martial Arts Hall," has become one of the city's most popular indoor arenas for musical concerts and other events. As it is located on the grounds of the Imperial Palace, ceremonies involving Japan's head of state get preference — after judo and karate contests.

"Budokan was built to promote martial arts and encourage youth to study Japan's traditional sports," said Hisao Saito, deputy secretary general of the Nippon Budokan Foundation.

But, he said in an interview, after elementary, junior high and high school clubs complete their annual meets, almost 300 days are left for others to use the imposing structure, reached by crossing a moat and passing under the centuries-old stone Tayasu Gate.

Budokan was built in an octagon, reminiscent of a wing of the classic 8th-century Horyuji Temple in Nara. Its copper roof, shaped in the image of Mount Fuji, is capped with a golden onion-shaped ball.

The traditional touch the Tokyo landmark lends to the midtown skyline is sometimes deceptive of what's going on inside.

Political groups for the most part are not welcome, but almost anything else goes.

Foreign heads of state and government gathered there for the funeral in 1981 of Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

In 1985, a year of milestones, Hirohito led ceremonies at Budokan on the 40th anniversary of Japan's war defeat in August, and returned in November to celebrate 60 years of his reign.

For a fee, the hall is available for bargain sales or college graduations.

Only imagination limits items made from myrtlewood

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press

BANDON, Ore. (AP) — In the forests along the southern Oregon coast, the myrtle is a humble tree, dwarfed by Douglas fir and Port Orford cedar.

But as a roadside attraction, it matches the California redwood, the Florida orange and the Vermont sugar maple.

It's a rare traveler who can resist the siren's call of Oregon's myrtlewood shops.

"They get tired of driving and seeing 'Myrtlewood, Myrtlewood, Myrtlewood,' and they come in to see what myrtlewood is," says Joan Besenhofer, who owns Seagull Myrtlewood, one of many myrtlewood shops along coastal U.S. Highway 101.

"The first thing I ask them is, 'Where are you from?' " Mrs. Besenhofer says. "If they say, 'Oregon,' I say, 'Well, you know all about myrtlewood.' If not, I bring them over to the window here to show them the myrtle tree and I tell them the story."

The story is that the myrtle is an aromatic evergreen hardwood that grows only along the rain-soaked southern Oregon coast and in the Holy Land.

The Holy Land version, which doesn't get much bigger than a bush in that arid climate, earned a place in the Bible at Isaiah 55:13.

"Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

But people cut off plenty in Oregon's myrtlewood country, where a pickup load of unseasoned wood can fetch a few hundred dollars before it's turned into the bowls, candle holders, seagulls and peppermills that line the shelves of the gift shops.

The myrtlewood, however, isn't unique to Oregon in this country. Its California cousins are the bay laurel and pepperwood, says Larry Akers, the owner of Zumwalt's Myrtlewood.

"The trees grow bigger here and the wood grows more colorful here," says Akers, who hand-turns myrtlewood bowls in the back shop. Oregon's myrtlewood is more valuable than California's pepperwood because of the minerals in the soil and the climate, according to Akers.

The first tourist to succumb to myrtlewood's lure may have been British explorer Capt. James Cook, who was looking for the Northwest Passage in 1778 when he spotted some trees along the Oregon coast resembling the myrtle found in the Holy Land, says Akers.

The Oerding family has been making myrtlewood bowls and other items in Coquille since 1907, but the rush to myrtlewood appears to have come with the completion of the last five major bridges on U.S. Highway 101 in 1936.

That opened up the coast to tourists. Ten years later, Al Zumwalt opened his myrtlewood shop now owned by Akers.

"We were the first ones between Bandon and Port Orford, as far as I know," recalls his wife, Lena Zumwalt.

Now you can't make a living at a roadside shop without myrtlewood, says Astrid Siebrect, who owns Otasto Gallery.

"We started out without myrtlewood two years ago," she says. "But we didn't sell anything to the tourists."

There is plenty of competition. The southern Oregon Coast telephone book lists 21 myrtlewood shops in the 110 miles between North Bend and the California border, not counting the restaurants and other shops that also sell a few items.

Woodworkers like myrtlewood for its grain and color, which ranges from pale gray through honey gold to dark brown, says Akers.

Only the woodworker's imagination and the marketplace limit the range of items that can be fashioned from myrtlewood.

"People will come in and ask, "Do you have this?' and we'll say, 'No, but it's a great idea,' " says Jenny Sonsalla at the Oregon Myrtlewood Factory.

The myrtlewood classic is the hand-turned bowl, which is roughed out on a lathe while the wood is green, kiln dried, then turned again to the final shape, sanded and oiled.

But myrtlewood also is sold in the form of plates, plaques with woodburnings of the Bandon lighthouse, machine-carved dolphins and fruit, mug racks, perfume, jewelry, rolling pins and grandfather clocks.

It is made into tables, hand-carved birds and bears, piano-shaped music boxes, hurricane lamps, Oregon-shaped napkin holders, spaghetti measures, desk sets, thimbles, gavels, and a gadget called a bacon button that keeps bacon from curling in the frying pan.

Myrtle leaves can spice up a spaghetti sauce or keep fleas out of dog beds. The seeds can be glued together to make little animals with eyes that rattle when shaken.

"Almost anything you make in myrtlewood sells," says Akers. "It's amazing."

Joan Besenhofer stands outside her Seagull Myrtlewood shop in Bandon, Ore., one of many that line U.S. Highway 101 along the Oregon coast. She says tourists stop because after seeing so many myrtlewood signs they want to see what it is.

Zoologist says bats valuable, harmless

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bats, those mysterious creatures that ride the night winds and chill the ethers with their piercing screams, engender revulsion in many humans.

But the killing of individual bats or routine slaughter of millions of them, often seen as justifiable acts of self-defense, ultimately may hurt people as much as it does the animals, according to a man devoted to preserving the world's only flying mammals.

Merlin D. Tuttle, a zoologist dedicating a career to enlightening the dark fears that surround bats, said the creatures bear little resemblance to their public image as the personification of evil or harm.

On the whole, Tuttle said, bats are clean, valuable, harmless and misunderstood servants of mankind who do incalculable good around the world.

"People are out there killing them off, millions at a time, for no other reason than that they don't understand them," said Tuttle, a visiting scholar at the University of Texas at Austin and founder of Bat Conservation International.

Populations of flying fox bats, which have faces that look like dogs, have been reduced by 90 percent in parts of Australia, Southeast Asia and the Pacific islands, he said, because they are hunted as food or as pests.

In the United States, where five types of bats are on the endangered-species list, bats are subject to eradication programs by people who consider them a health threat, acts of vandalism and random killing by frightened people.

Myths have grown up around bats in the U.S. because people rarely see the small species native to this country and because the animals lurk in dark places that people fear, such as caves and attics, he said.

"The problem of bats carrying rabies and parasites is also greatly exaggerated," Tuttle said in an interview. "Bats have much less of a rabies problem than foxes and raccoons, and parasites are no worse than with dogs or cats."

More than 1,000 kinds of bats have been identified worldwide and they make up almost a quarter of all mammal species, he said. The animals vary greatly in color and description, and range in size from the giant flying fox bat with wingspans of up to six feet to the bumblebee bat of Thailand, which only spans a couple of inches and weighs less than a penny.

Bats are vital worldwide for insect control and for pollinating and spreading seeds for many economically valuable plants, including bananas, dates, avocados, figs and balsa trees, Tuttle said.

Over several nights, he said, bats may carry more than a ton of seeds from a single wild fig tree and distribute the seeds over a wide area in dropping feces. In Africa, up to 95 percent of forest regrowth comes from seeds dropped by bats, he added.

As the main predator of night-flying insects, bats also help man fight these pests. A mouse-eared bat, for instance, one commonly found in buildings in North America and Europe, can eat more than 500 insects in an hour, he said.

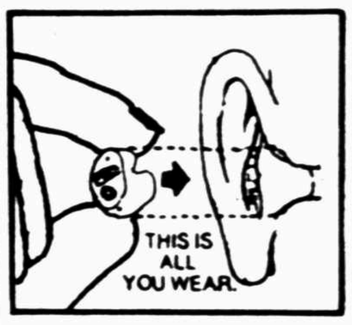

Yet bats are hunted systematically by those who erroneously consider them agricultural pests or health threats to humans, Tuttle said.

Ranks of life-sized terra cotta soldiers guard an ancient tomb.

TERRA COTTA ARMY

A protective roof, above, covers partially excavated Pit No. 1 in Xian, China, where the remarkable Terra Cotta Army was discovered in 1974. Archeologists continue the work of excavation and restoration of the first three pits and are formulating plans to open 300 to 400 more. Tourism in the region has grown around the discovery. A peasant, left, sell small models of the 21,000-year-old soldiers.

Text and Photos by The Associated Press

XIAN, China — This smoky industrial city is becoming a major tourist center — and even greater changes are in store — because of the exquisite Terra Cotta Army found in 1974 by peasants digging a well.

It was one of the great archaeological finds of modern times — an array of colorfully dressed, terra cotta soldiers guarding the tomb of Emperor Qinshihuang, who unified scattered Chinese kingdoms into a single nation in 221 B.C. and died a year later.

About 210,000 foreign tourists last year visited three partly excavated pits at the site, putting a heavy strain on Xian's limited accommodations. By 1990 the foreign influx is expected to reach 600,000 in addition to millions of Chinese flocking in to see the life-size warriors.

A new airport is scheduled to be ready in 1988, and thousands more first-class hotel rooms are planned.

Archaeologists have resumed their work on the site, sharing Xian's wealth of history with tourism-minded officials and peasants who have reaped a bonanza selling souvenirs.

The archaeological digging had been halted after discovery of the underground army so the three pits could be turned into a museum. As one archaeologist explained, the discovery was "a world sensation."

The archaeologists acknowledge they may never in their lifetimes gaze into the emperor's crypt, which has been closed for more than 2000 years.

"We thought the pit (believed to be the site of the crypt) would take a week to excavate," said archaeologist Yuan Zhongyi in an interview. "Now it's been 12 years, and it may take one or two centuries."

Rushed digging, he added, would risk the loss of valuable historical data.

Yuan, 52, vice president of the Shaanxi Provincial Archaeology Association, was among the first summoned when the peasant well-diggers found the army.

About 700 warriors have been found so far, some painstakingly reassembled in ranks and rows, eerily ready for battle. They guard the tomb, which is about two miles away.

"What we know are the three pits," Yuan says. "But there are 300 to 400 pit sites which have been found, or will be found. The entire necropolis is more than 50 square kilometers (20 square miles)."

At the center is the underground tomb of Qinshihuang, whose brief but historically significant reign included the construction of the Great Wall.

"We will do all the sites nearby the mausoleum first, then key satellite tombs will be excavated," Yuan said. "So far, we haven't discussed a date for opening the main tomb."

Surveys, historical records and relics make Yuan and other archaeologists confident of the site of the tomb.

The terra cotta warriors have yielded invaluable clues to the dress, weaponry, military organization and physical appearance of the era.

The emperor's tomb, when it is opened, could turn out to be the find of centuries.

Chinese records tell of a magnificent crypt, with running streams of mercury, maps showing the location of precious metals, and boobytraps to halt looters.

Yuan said the research teams would prefer to work without tourists around.

"Tourism promotes archaeology, but it is difficult to work under the gaze of thousands of tourists," he said. "Normally in China, pits are closed to the public."

But tourists have been a boon to Xian's peasants, who sell their souvenirs and wares to visitors in a chaotic free market outside the museum. Many local Chinese have left the land to sell trinkets or scale models of the warriors.

Xian, according to a provincial tourism official, Wang Kejian, is tilting toward a tourism-based economy that would replace its smokestack industry.

The region is dotted with the pagodas, temples and tombs of other dynasties, including the illustrious Tang.

Dear Boss...

Remember April 20-26 is National Professional Secretaries week!

I understand that the Midland Reporter-Telegram will be featuring a

"SALUTE TO PROFESSIONAL SECRETARIES"

on Wednesday, April 23rd.

This gives employers a chance to brag about their secretary and the job she does to over 65,000 readers!

Sure hope I measure up!

...Jo Ann

P.S. I also heard that these "Lucky Secretaries" will be receiving a pretty red rose from Midland Floral Company at 1705 West Wall!
