Although some residents' feathers were ruffled at first, the only problems at Wadley-Barron Lake swim around dogfights with the ducks and the pool's burgeoning population of fine, feathered friends.

Lake creating fewer ripples

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

It rose during controversy and now laps peacefully at its shores.

Waves over Wadley-Barron Park Lake on North A Street were created when some nearby residents rose in furor over what they perceived might be problems crashing down on them. One year after the lake was formed, the controversy is at low tide.

The biggest problems that have surfaced are dogs and ducks and the fact the two don't mix.

The lake came about as a solution to a problem. The ground water level had risen above the bottom of the park, which was an old playa lake. The city tried to pump out the water, but with no success. Much of the park's ground remained soggy.

The Parks and Recreation Department suggested digging out the land and allowing nature to retake its lake. A survey of nearby residents by that department reflected a majority agreed with the suggestion. The council adopted the idea, and work began.

But in March 1982, more than 20 persons showed up at a Midland City Council meeting claiming the lake's proposed uses for canoeing and fishing would attract too many people to the area. Subsequently, they felt, the area would see too much trash and too many cars.

That hasn't come, said two of last year's protestors. Gary Wisener, 901 Harvard, said his opposition had been to the activities, not to the lake.

"It's been very pleasant," he said of the park lake. "On weekends it sometimes gets a little crowded. I think everyone's quite happy about it. I do wish they would put more trash containers in the park."

Before a large portion of the park was scooped out to form the lake, Wisener said there had been trouble with "pot-smoking and dope-dealing" groups hanging around the lake. Police supervision was stepped up and that element has been eliminated, he said.

Louis Bartha, 905 Bedford, agreed the park "is working out real good. It's just exactly the way it should be."

"Dogs are the big problem now," said Wayne Kohout, director of parks and recreation. He has received several complaints of dogs harassing ducks, or attacking and killing them.

An ordinance to require all dogs on a leash is being written and will be taken to the council for adoption, he said.

Did military moves lead to cut in aid?

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's warning, related stories — Page 2A

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of President Reagan's allies in Congress say recent and planned military moves by the administration probably contributed to House rejection of U.S. undercover aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

With a handful of GOP members joining most of the House's Democratic majority, the lawmakers voted Thursday to call off all secret military and intelligence aid to the Nicaraguan guerrillas by the end of the year.

With Republicans in control of the Senate, there is little chance the measure will reach Reagan's desk, where he would probably veto it anyway.

"It was a free vote," said Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, the Republican whip. "They know it really won't go into law."

"We will have to wait and see what the Senate does, but I think it sends a very powerful signal," said Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, the Democratic leader.

Lott said he thought the opponents of administration policy probably picked up two or more Republican votes because of announcements of naval and troop maneuvers in Central America, and the same developments may have "hardened" some Democratic votes against the administration.

Rep. W.C. Young, R-Fla., said , "Probably politically, it would have been better if this legislative debate and the exercise had not come at the same time."

Rep. William Whitehurst, R-Va., however, said he did not think the maneuvers had any effect.

The final count was 228-195, but Lott and others said the key to the outcome was an earlier vote of 223-203 against an administration-backed amendment to allow covert aid to continue. The assistance would have stopped only if the president or the Organization of American States certified that Nicaragua had forgone its support to rebels in other Central American countries.

Nine Republicans joined 214 Democrats on that vote. There were 156 Republican votes and 47 Democratic votes for it.

"It was pretty much as we expected on our side," said Lott.

Before the final vote, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger criticized the congressional actions to reporters in Hartford, Conn., saying, "There are many situations in which it is very much to the interests of the United States to have covert actions take place where there has been a proper presidential finding. To say that we can't ever under any circumstances engage in those types of activities ... could conceivably require actions of a different kind that would not be nearly as effective."

Meanwhile, Democratic congressional leaders wrote Reagan calling for "an ongoing system of timely briefings" when future military exercises are planned.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd said they were given no advance notice of the planned deployments in Honduras and off the coast of Central America.

"We deeply regret ... that virtually all of our information has been derived from published reports in the news media," they said.

Republican and Democratic supporters of the president in the House debate echoed his description of the 12,000 Nicaraguan guerrillas as "freedom fighters," but Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., said:

"We are preparing to do a land version of the Bay of Pigs with the thousands of thugs, brigands and thieves that we are proposing to finance."

Apartment owner confident that 'God will provide'

HOUSTON (AP) — Apartment owner Walter F. Rode, following what he says are instructions from heaven, opened his complex to the poor last May and stopped paying the bills because "God will provide."

The poor showed up; money for the bills has not.

Sixty-four families now live rent-free in Rode's Severne Apartments, but the electric company has cut off power and a bank says it will repossess the complex next week.

"I'm not worried," says Rode, a 43-year-old native of Germany. "I walk in the faith of Jesus Christ. God will provide."

Many residents of the complex aren't so sure.

Most are unemployed, and tempers were raw Wednesday as tenants sweltered inside dark apartments without air conditioning. Doors stood open in the two-story complex, and some residents sat on steps or under trees around the empty swimming pool, seeking relief from the 90-degree heat and grumbling about Rode.

"He doesn't want to hear about the problems," said Debbie Inclima, as nearby residents nodded in agreement. "He's just trying to control everybody."

Rode says the problems are only temporary and the residents are just "worried and confused. They need to have faith.

"They will not be able to foreclose and there will be a time when the lights are on and all the bills will be paid. Christians will unite and provide for those who believe."

What Christians will provide, he believes, is $440,000 to pay off the mortgage and all the other debts. That includes $29,000 in back mortgage payments and penalties, a $13,000 water bill, $8,400 for the power company and $1,300 to the gas company. There are also back payments on his home in nearby Sugar Land and $24,000 owed on his Mercedes Benz, he said.

So far, though, an appeal to the Christian community has brought in only $150 in food and $40 in cash.

Rode said he stopped collecting rent after seeing a vision in which God showed him a "mission."

"God spoke to me and told me to transform the whole complex into a home for distressed people," he said.

He went on television to tell of his plan just after tornadoes had struck the Houston area. A number of homeless families moved into the complex, followed by others who were on welfare or out of work.

Residents complain that although Rode doesn't require rent, he has rules they don't like, including curfews of 8 p.m. for children and 10 p.m. for adults and bans on alcoholic beverages and swearing.

"We're not going to live here much longer," said Mrs. Inclima's husband, Luke, a truck driver who was sipping a beer in a neighbor's kitchen. "Nobody is going to dictate to me when I have to be in."

Another resident, Judy Becraft, said the rules were necessary because "the kids were running around until 1 and 2 in the morning. They were started for their own good, but they aren't enforced."

Following appeal, youngsters receive new livers

By The Associated Press

The parents of a 16-month-old liver transplant patient are giving President Reagan credit for locating an organ donor for their daughter, while a Tennessee boy was in critical condition today after similar transplant surgery.

Candi Thomas, the daughter of a White House electrician, could not have lived another year without a new liver, her pediatrician said. After a presidential radio appeal on her behalf, Candi received an organ from a brain-dead Colorado child and was in critical but stable condition — standard for a recent transplant patient — after the 10½-hour operation Thursday.

"She's awake, she's alert," said Dr. J. Jeffrey Malatack, one of the pediatricians caring for Candi, who had suffered since birth from biliary atresia, which prevents the proper flow of bile.

Reagan called the Thomases on Thursday and the Accokeek, Md., couple expressed their gratitude for his help.

"I thanked him for opening the doors for us and for families like us and making people aware of how much livers are needed for children," said Stewart Thomas, 36. "He said he was grateful he could help out."

However, a spokesman for the University of Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital, where Candi was recovering, warned against pinning too many hopes on individual appeals, like those made for Candi and two other children on the president's Saturday morning broadcast.

"You can't order one (a liver), you can't buy one, you can't be next in line for one," said Dick Riebling. "It depends on the condition of the patients on all the (waiting) lists, versus the size and shape and weight and blood type and all the medical statistics."

But Riebling said general publicity does help. Four transplants have been performed since Wednesday, two in Pittsburgh and one each in Memphis and Minneapolis.

In Memphis, 8-year-old Louis Ragsdale was in critical but stable condition early today at LeBonheur Children's Medical Center, where he was taken after transplant surgery Thursday.

"The liver seems to be functioning well," said Dr. James Williams, chief surgeon of the University of Tennessee transplant team.

Louis also had President Reagan's intervention to thank.

Mother's plea may have spurred program

By SARAH MCCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A 20-year-old Texas mother of a desprately ill baby said just the right words to President Ronald Reagan when he called to inquire about her baby, Ashley Bailey, and as a result today the president and the nation are on their way to saving five other lives and to establishing a permanent organ procurement program in the United States.

Annette Bailey Gossett spurred the president on and as a result he made a radio appeal to the nation last Saturday. Today, five transplants have been arranged. Sadly however, so far, there has not been one suitable found for her baby but she still has hope.

Friday, her congressman, Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, will go before the House Science subcommittee on Health and Environment to testify to the need for the national procurement system. Stenholm first brought the child's plight to the attention of Reagan.

When Reagan first asked Mrs. Gossett what he could do help her and the baby, she said "There is something you can do, Mr. President, and that is to get out the word to the American people that we need an organ."

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecast sunny, warm weather for most of the nation Saturday. Showers are forecast for the Dakotas, southern Florida and from the Midwest to the Northeast.

Temperatures near 102 forecast

Listless Midlanders tired of the office can liven up this weekend as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport sticks with it's sing-song summer forecast.

Once again, temperatures tonight will drop near 70 and the high Saturday should reach around 102 degrees.

Southerly winds will breeze at 10-15 mph tonight and Saturday.

Thursday's high of 102 was four degrees below the record high of 106, set in 1944. The overnight low of 75 missed 1961's record low of 65 by 10 degrees.

High winds, storms reported

By The Associated Press

Scattered rain and thunderstorms stretched from the mid-Mississippi Valley to portions of the Eastern Seaboard early today after a fast-moving line of storms drenched north central Kansas, whipping through the area with winds over 100 mph.

Winds gusting to 109 mph surged through Russell, Kan., where utility poles were knocked down, and cars and buildings damaged. The storm produced 2½ inches of rain in 45 minutes.

The line of storms dumped 2 inches of rain on Chase, Kan., in an hour and high winds blew apart a metal building and ripped shingles off a house. Winds hit 65 mph at Wakefield, Kan., and hail was reported in other areas of the state.

Billionth gallon of water used

Someone in Midland today drank, flushed or watered their lawn with the billionth gallon of water pumped into the city system this month, setting a new record.

Utilities Director John Lowe said 987 million gallons of water had been used by Thursday. Adding in 35 million gallons expected for today, it pushes the total over the 1 billion mark.

"Everybody brags about the billionth barrel of oil. I thought I'd brag about the water," he jested. "I realize it's not quite the same thing."

This summer has been a record one for the water department with 38-plus million gallons pumped out on July 2. The figure hasn't reached that mark since then, but has hovered "down" at 36 and 37 million gallons.

To celebrate, Lowe said he's going to buy some new pants. "I've done wore the knees out on these" praying for rain.

Although July isn't over, a corresponding record should be set with billing. According to the customer service department, June set a record with $904,560 billed for 794 million gallons of water.

In June 1982, citizens were billed for $698,000, said Bill Tatsch, customer service director. July will set a new record, he noted.

Lowe's prediction for August is more of the same: "Hot and dry with record water sales for the utility department."

Wadley-Barron becoming peaceful, scenic place

Ducks are a strong drawing point of the park, Kohout said. "A lot of kids like to go out there and feed them. And the residents are helping to feed them."

But the interest in the lake is mutual: the duck population has been growing faster than expected. Kohout said there have been two nests of ducklings hatched this year and wild ducks have stopped for a brief rest and apparently decided to stay.

The duck population will have to be brought down, he said, but the department is waiting until fall. At that time, some of the wild ducks will leave. "Some will stay; the water doesn't freeze over entirely. And that's where the residents will help in not letting the ducks starve."

Wisener agreed with Kohout that "someone needs to exercise control over the number of ducks. The only complaint has been with the ducks and their numbers."

The city originally had planned to allow fishing, canoeing and model boating every day. But with the residents' objections, it was limited to twice a month for canoeing and fishing.

Neither Wisener nor Bartha has changed his mind about the restrictions, although Kohout would like to see some easing on the rules.

"We can't maximize the use of the lake for canoeing and fishing," said Kohout. "People call and we have to say no permits are available. We wanted to increase it to one group a day," rather than twice a month. That idea was rejected.

Wisener believes "the park is not big enough for that kind of recreation. It's not supervised well enough. It should be kept on a limited basis." Bartha agreed.

Kohout noted complaints that people are fishing without a permit and admitted it's an ordinance "that should be strictly enforced." Another problem has come from people dumping in species of fish which the department doesn't want there.

"Some catfish have been put in — we didn't put them there — someone just dumped them in, plus some other things," he said, listing goldfish. "Someone said they caught a perch, and there's some large-mouth bass."

Other than ducks and dogs, the only other major problem appears to be dying shade trees. The roots of existing trees edging the lake were flooded with the rising water table, said Kohout. These are being pulled up and replaced with other trees. But the new ones also are young and won't provide good shade for a number of years.

"It's still not as attractive as it used to be" with the large shade trees, he said of the park. But that hasn't stopped the numbers of people from swelling, he noted.

Lebanon negotiates for Tripoli

By The Associated Press

Lebanon's police chief went to Tripoli today to negotiate a government takeover of the lawless city from warring militias who moved into neighborhoods abruptly vacated by Syrian troops.

In east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, fighting lulled between rival Palestinian guerrilla factions after six days of fighting that left 26 people dead and 53 wounded.

In the southern town of Kfar Falous, Christian Phalangists halted protests of the Israeli military's decision to close a Phalangist militia barracks. Phalangist Party officials ordered the dispute resolved peacefully.

The protests Thursday aggravated the strained relationship between Israel and the Phalangists, who supported the Israeli drive into Lebanon in June 1982 to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization. The friendship cooled after Christian militiamen massacred Palestinian civilians in Beirut last September.

Lebanon's state radio said chief Col. Osman Osman started talks with several militia chiefs in Tripoli, a port 50 miles north of Beirut, one day after Syrian forces unexpectedly pulled out. The withdrawal touched off sporadic shootouts by 12 militias vying for control of Lebanon's second largest city.

The rightist Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said Tripoli's Islamic Unity militia has refused to abandon its positions and threatened to fire at the Lebanese army or police forces if they move in.

Syria gave no reason for the sudden departure Thursday. But Lebanese police and radio reports suggested the Syrians wanted to prove their claim that they keep peace in the city.

In the riot-scarred West Bank city of Hebron, Israeli occupation forces maintained a curfew that was hastily reimposed Thursday after angry Palestinian Arabs stoned them. The curfew had been suspended so residents could shop.

The Israeli military command ordered the curfew in Hebron and Nablus on Tuesday, after terrorists killed three Palestinian students and wounded 33 at an Arab university in Hebron and escaped.

Palestinians blamed the killings on armed Israeli settlers, who have been rebuilding the city's largely abandoned Jewish quarter. Israeli authorities have promised to find the killers but have not speculated on their identities.

At a Jewish cemetery in Hebron, Israeli Interior Minister Yosef Burg attended a memorial service Thursday for 63 Jews slain in the Jewish quarter in 1929. He appealed for peace between Arabs and Jews in the West Bank.

Israel captured the territory from Jordan in the 1967 Six Day War. Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government has been encouraging Jewish settlers to move into the West Bank, a policy viewed by many Palestinians and Arab nations as an attempt to annex the territory and drive the Palestinians out.

In the Bekaa Valley, Palestine Liberation Organization factions battled with heavy weapons Thursday in east Lebanon, setting several houses afire in the battle-scarred town of Jdeita.

Envoy to tell Arab leaders Israel's withdrawal now hinges on Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's new Mideast peace envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, will travel to Arab capitals this weekend carrying a message that Israel is firmly committed to leaving Lebanon if Syrian troops also leave.

McFarlane participated in talks with Israeli leaders this week at which they assured the administration their plans for a partial troop withdrawal should not result in a permanent partition of Lebanon.

A senior State Departent official said McFarlane will be carrying some new ideas for gaining a withdrawal of Syrian forces, but that the ideas are consistent with the May 17 Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement that Syria opposes.

Another official, who insisted on anonymity, said McFarlane will try to encourage the Saudis and other moderate Arab nations to pressure Damascus to withdraw, on grounds its refusal is all that is keeping Israeli troops in Lebanon.

However, such pressure tactics have failed in the past.

McFarlane will visit Syria, Lebanon, Israel, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Jordan during the next week. Syria has agreed to receive McFarlane — it wouldn't receive his predecessor, Philip C. Habib — but has been cool to his mission.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said following a 30-minute meeting Thursday between Reagan and Israel's foreign and defense ministers, Yitzhak Shamir and Moshe Arens, that the Israelis had made clear they intend to withdraw all their forces from Lebanon eventually.

"Any notion that this redeployment is part of an effort to divide Lebanon is totally wrong," Shultz said. "Exactly to the contrary, it's a step in the direction of total withdrawal."

Shultz said he hoped the Israeli position "will have some impact" on Syria.

Arens and Shamir continued to insist that Israel won't completely withdraw its troops until Syrian forces also leave.

Syrian troops pulled back unexpectedly Thursday from Lebanon's northern port of Tripoli, an action Lebanese police accounts suggested was staged to show Syrians are needed to keep peace among more than a dozen rival militias seeking to dominate Lebanon's second largest city.

Syrian soldiers manned checkpoints on the outskirts of Tripoli, 50 miles north of Beirut, but none was seen in downtown areas.

Arens told a group of reporters later that the Israeli withdrawal was being done "in the anticipation that this will be a first move that would lead to the evacuation of all of Lebanon by all foreign forces."

Arens declined to say when the redeployment would begin, but said it should be completed by winter. He stressed it would be done in the context of the May 17 agreement with Lebanon, a point Shultz also made.

However, Arens said the agreement, which calls for a complete Israeli withdrawal over eight weeks to 12 weeks, won't be formally implemented until the Syrians leave.

He also said Lebanon can help its own cause by stepping up pressure on Syria to withdraw. "The general impression is that they really have not gone all the way in an unequivocal demand for a Syrian withdrawal," Arens said.

While he said Israel would cooperate in trying to arrange a cease-fire between warring factions in the Chouf region before Israeli troops leave, he said the partial pullout wouldn't depend on it.

"Our withdrawal is not contingent upon anything other than our security interests," he said. The Israelis plan to leave central Lebanon and withdraw to a security zone in the southern part of the country.

A senior State Department offical, who briefed reporters, and Arens said the multinational peacekeeping force might play a useful role in backing up the Lebanese army if a cease-fire can be arranged.

The United States already has contributed 1,200 Marines to the peace force. The senior official said they wouldn't be "inserted into a hostile environment" so a cease-fire is essential.

Central American ministers meet

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Nine Latin foreign ministers are meeting today in an attempt to bring peace to Central America, but Nicaragua says the United States wants to derail their effort with menacing war games and battle fleets.

Elsewhere, U.S. special envoy Richard Stone was reported trying to arrange a meeting in Costa Rica with El Salvador leftist insurgents, the U.S. House voted to end covert aid to rightist-led Nicaraguan rebels, and Nicaragua denied President Reagan's claims that Soviet ships are en route to supply it with more weapons.

In Havana, President Fidel Castro said Thursday his government would support an agreement by "all the parties involved" to withdraw advisers from the region and end weapons supplies to Central America, CBS reported.

He described President Reagan's news conference Wednesday night, called to explain the administration's position on Central America, as "positive," but added "that doesn't change all the measures taken regarding military exercises in Latin America."

Castro's remarks were carried on the CBS "Morning News."

"If there were to be an agreement among all the parties involved about withdrawing all the advisers, we would be willing to support such a settlement," the Cuban leader told a news conference. "If an agreement were reached on the basis of cessation of sending weapons to any state of Central America, we would be willing to abide by it."

The United States has up to 55 military advisers in El Salvador, and Cuba is said to have a few thousand advisers in Nicaragua.

Castro said Reagan appeared "more cautious, more moderate" at his news conference. "In that sense I feel it is positive. Though in substance that doesn't change all the measures taken regarding military exercises in Latin America."

Reagan played down the upcoming military maneuvers, saying they should be viewed as routine exercises.

Castro said a negotiated political settlement for El Salvador was the "key point" for any negotiated regional settlement.

The foreign ministers from Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama, known as the Contadora group, organized the Panama City conference, which for the first time includes Nicaragua and four other Central American nations. The Contadora group got its name because of the Central American peace plan it first proposed Jan. 5 during a meeting on the Panamanian island Contadora.

"To some extent, we are here at this meeting with a gun at our head," Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said Thursday.

Reagan, who has said it would be highly difficult to negotiate with Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, has ordered 19 warships deployed off Nicaragua's Atlantic and Pacific coasts. He also has ordered military exercises involving 3,000 to 4,000 U.S. troops in Honduras.

Reagan has insisted the United States has no plans for military intervention in Central America. But he claims the Sandinistas threaten the region's stability by supporting leftist revolution, building a large army and developing close ties with the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Referring to the U.S. naval deployments, told reporters, "This goes to prove what we have been saying all along. The (United States) is trying to boycott, is trying to run over, is doing everything possible so that the initiative of Contadora fails. You can't ask a country that is suffering from aggression not to arm itself. That's absurd."

Bentsen warns that commission must not be 'rubber stamp'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a congressional advisor to President Reagan's new commission on Central America, has warned that if the commission "turns into just a rubber stamp of the administration's policies and moves, then I think it will be a failure."

Bentsen, a Democrat, said that he would advise that the commission "make a tough, hard-nose, objective analysis of the administration's policies for Central America.

"...I think it's very important that it be bipartisan and objective in trying to make recommendations that will serve the long-term interests of the country," Bentsen said at a news conference Thursday.

Bentsen is one of eight members of Congress selected by the House and Senate leadership to advise the 12-member commission, appointed recently by the president to make recommendations on Central American policy.

Bentsen indicated he expects to meet soon with former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who is heading the commission.

Of Kissinger, Bentsen said, "He guarantees controversy for the commission...He's also a very experienced diplomat and a very bright man."

Bentsen said he had even recently purchased investigative reporter Seymour Hersh's highly critical new book on Kissinger, in order to "better understand him."

Report need not be supplied, attorney general's decision says

AUSTIN — State Attorney General Jim Mattox has ruled that the Ector County Sheriff's Department is not required to supply prison inmate Johnny Wells with an investigative report he had sought in connection with his conviction on kidnapping and child rape charges.

Wells, who was charged with aggravated kidnapping and the aggravated rape of a 12-year-old girl in 1980, had requested the internal investigative report on the case. But Mattox ruled that the information does not fall under the state's Open Records Act because it identifies the victim.

"We conclude that information which identifies the victim may be withheld under the common-law right of privacy," Mattox wrote in his opinion.

"We further conclude that this indentifying information accounts for such a large part of the police report and is so inextricably intertwined with the remainder of the report that it would (not be feasible) to attempt to separate the remainder and make it available."

A spokesman for Mattox's office said today that the opinion was "a very narrowly defined one" because it involves a rape victim who is also a minor. "It does not apply to victims of crime in general," he added.

The opinion was requested by Capt. Gene Kloss of the Ector County Sheriff's Department in Odessa. Wells is serving a 40-year sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Qatar student earns 70 credits from five colleges in three months

Hearst Feature Service

There is such a thing as being too smart for your own good, Ebrahim Meftah Al-Maamon has discovered.

In just three months in 1982, the 24-year-old student from the Persian Gulf sheikdom of Qatar collected 70 credits by enrolling in more than 14 classes at five public and private colleges in Oregon and Washington.

While attending City University in Portland, Ore., during the summer of 1982, he was also a full-time student at Portland State University, Concordia College and Warner Pacific College, all in Portland, and Tacoma (Wash.) Community College. And while the average student takes three of four courses for about 15 credits a quarter, Al-Maamon apparently passed all 14 classes and earned the 70 credits with grades as high as B, at a cost of more than $5,000 in tuition and fees.

Bewildered college administrators are still shaking their heads over Al-Maamon, whose Herculean exploits have raised questions on the collegiate grapevine. The administrators are uncomfortably aware that Al-Maamon's academic success has cast a bad light on their educational standards, as well as their screening procedures.

"It should be impossible for that kid to take that many credits and pass them," admitted Lou Foltz, dean of faculty at Warner Pacific College, a private religious college where Al-Maamon collected 10 credits. "He should've flunked them all."

U.S. immigration officials in Portland confirmed that Al-Maamon is currently listed as a student at Marylhurst College, a small Catholic college near Portland that specializes in part-time adult education. But Marylhurst administrators refused to comment on his status or whereabouts.

Government officials said Al-Maamon came to the United States in 1980 from Qatar, an oil-rich desert nation of 200,000 which boasts one of the world's highest per capita incomes. The developing OPEC country has made education a top priority and sends approximately 600 students a year overseas to study. But Qatari consulate officials in Washington said Al-Maamon is a self-supporting student and disavowed any knowledge of his background or studies in America.

Al-Maamon's plan began unraveling last fall at City University after he requested that his credits from summer quarter be accepted toward a degree at City University. When the transcripts began rolling in, bewildered City University administrators did a doubletake: Tacoma Community College, 20 credits; Portland State University, seven credits; Concordia College, 18 credits, and Warner Pacific College, 10 credits. All in the same quarter. And all during the same period he was enrolled in 15 credits worth of classes at City University.

City University refused to accept the transfer credits and eventually notified the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges. The accrediting organization reviewed the matter and sent a letter to its 145 member colleges with a word of warning.

Sorcery spreads in France

From Wire Reports

PARIS — The death of a 6-year-old child while being "exorcised" of evil spirits has pointed up the mounting alarm of French authorities over a revival of sorcery, a practice that appears to be spreading even among the educated.

Little Ilan Taieb, the victim of an exorcism in the university town of Montpellier, died after swallowing a "potion" given to him by his 33-year-old mother and an aunt to free him of "possession." His mother is a qualified pharmacist, his father a physician.

This isone of a growing number of cases of black magic which have been attracting attention here, although the only one to result in death.

An official of France's interior ministry said there was evidence of a "renewed and thoroughly disturbing belief in the supernatural occurring in France, creating its victims among the gullible and most vulnerable."

The logical French always have had a certain taste for the irrational. Sorcery was prevalent here well into the 18th century and, in remote districts, long afterward. To this day, astrologers, necromancers and the like prosper even in sophisticated cities like Paris to a degree that may be unmatched in any other advanced nation.

Many middle class and professional people readily admit to belief in astrology. The late President Georges Pompidou was said to have employed a personal palmist.

Professor Jeanne Favret, who has written two serious studies of the subject, believes that faith in the occult never died, but has recently gained new adherents among the educated classes because of the decline in religious faith.

"Sorcery isn't a marginal phenomenon," she asserted. "More French people believe in it than believe in psychiatry. The practices are very ancient and for many they seem to be surprisingly effective psychologically."

She estimates that upward of 10,000 practitioners of the "black arts" are operating in France. Contrary to what is usually assumed, most are in urban communities.

Many have regular jobs, exercising their occult powers as a sideline. But some have become wealthy.

A faith healer and exorcist jailed last year in Mulhouse was arrested not for witchcraft but for income tax evasion. He was allegedly earning the equivalent of $125,000 annually from his clients, none of it reported.

Fraud is, of course, rampant. So much so that the interior ministry now has a section dealing specifically with the problem. But it is exceedingly difficult to obtain evidence leading to convictions in court.

"Those who have been victimized seldom come forward," the ministry official explained. "Sometimes it's because they're afraid of public ridicule. But more often they fear the 'evil eye.' Most convicitions are obtained for practicing medicine illegally because we can usually obtain evidence from local physicians. However, many of these charlatans are getting very cagey and avoid actually prescribing for or treating the ill."

White says consumers hurt by AT&T breakup

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says Texas telephone users could wind up as the casualties in the U.S. Justice Department's legal war on American Telephone and Telegraph.

Texans face a "very real prospect" of significantly higher monthly phone bills because of the government-forced breakup of the AT&T telephone monopoly.

"My telephone that I've had out there for 10 years is the same old telephone I've had for 10 years. It doesn't work any better or worse than it did 10 years ago. My service hasn't improved. I just wonder how they justify some of the things they are attempting to get, and loading it up on my back and the backs of everyone else," White told reporters Thursday.

Southwestern Bell has a $1.7 billion rate hike — which could triple monthly bills — pending at the Public Utility Commission. Much of that request is attributed to the AT&T break-up.

The governor said the divestiture suit filed by the Justice Department against AT&T "may very well have been" a mistake.

"I don't know what their motivation was, but it seems that in an effort to protect the consumers, and that's what the anti-trust laws were designed to do, they're really burdening the consumer with prospects of an extremely large increase on phone service," he said.

"It's just going to be another opportunity, it appears to me, for a monopolistic practice to be rewarded with higher revenues, without any increased service," said White.

Former Texas state representative David London, accused of cattle theft, leaves the Hopkins County Courthouse Wednesday afternoon after the first day of testimony in his trial. He is accused of stealing five head of cattle.

Committee begins study of farmworkers' insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — The Joint Committee on Farmworkers Insurance began a two-month study Thursday they hope will end in a compromise with Texas farmers and ranchers over farmworkers insurance.

Committee chairman Tony Korioth, Austin attorney and an expert on workers compensation law, pointed out the controversy also affects hospitals, county governments, lawyers and insurance companies.

Korioth scheduled the first public hearings on the issue Aug. 18-19 in Harlingen.

"We have lots of people who want to talk to us," he said.

Other public hearings will be held Sept. 8 in Lubbock and Sept. 9 in El Paso, before a final committee session in Austin Sept. 23.

Gov. Mark White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby urged the 24-member group at an organizational meeing Thursday to settle the issue before it is settled in the courts, or by the federal government.

"This is one of the most important social issues that faces the state," Hobby said.

Coed testifies in rustling case

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — A University of Texas coed has testified that former State Rep. David London spent the night with her in Austin on June 1, 1982, when he is alleged to have stolen five cattle from a ranch 50 miles east of Dallas.

Tracie Brown, 24, said London was still at her Austin apartment when she left for classes the next morning. She spoke to him by phone at his Austin office later in the day, she told a jury on Thursday.

Defense attorneys called Ms. Brown as a witness shortly after the state rested its case against London. The defense indicated it would rest today, allowing the case to be turned over to the jury.

London is accused of taking the cattle on June 1 from the ranch of Ed Furrh, near Wills Point in Van Zandt County, and selling them the next day at Sulphur Springs, 45 miles to the northeast in Hopkins County.

Employees of the sale barn have testified London was the man who brought the cattle in for sale on June 2.

On cross-examination, Hopkins County District Attorney Jim Chapman asked Ms. Brown if she recalled whether she was with London from March 23-25 or April 21-22 of this year. She said she did not remember.

Those are the dates of two other cattle thefts London is accused of — one in Robertson County, about 40 miles north of College Station, and the other in Austin County, about 50 miles west of Houston.

London has denied he stole cattle from anyone and said the charges against him were "politically motivated." He cashed checks from the sale of the cattle as a favor for two men, London said.

A bank teller in Commerce, 20 miles west of Sulphur Springs, testified Thursday that she watched as London endorsed checks made out to Jimmy and Johnny Rogers, the names under which the cattle were sold.

Geanna Romans said London deposited $650 into his account, took approximately $60 in cash, and made out a money order to Kyle Barlen for $900, she said.

Barlen was called to the stand and testified that London owed him $900 on a Super Bowl bet the two had made in January of 1982. London placed $50 to $200 bets with him on various sporting events, Barlen said.

San Antonio Republican to head agricultural office

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Alma Esparza, San Antonio, who has already held two important jobs in the Reagan administration, has been promoted to be director of the Office of Equal Opportunity in the Department of Agriculture.

She expressed delight at being the head of her own office.

The job consists of assuring equal opportunities for women, Hispanics, blacks and other minorities in the Department. In addition, she will oversee the services administering food stamps, women's and children's programs involving nutrition and the agricultural extension services. She will be the guardian of civil rights in all agricultural departmental programs.

Ms. Esparza, a Republican, first began working for the Reagan administration at the White House under Alex Armendarez during the transition period from Carter to Reagan. According to one of her collagues, Nancy Ellis, "We all liked her work so much that we took her from the White House to the Pentagon to work on finding appointees for the Department of Defense." From there, she became an aide to Assistant Secretary of Defense Lawrence Korb, who has charge of Manpower, Logistics and Reserve Affairs. She became his executive assistant. From that post, she was promoted to executive assistant in the Office of Small and Disadvanaged Business, Deprtment of Defense.

Ms. Esparza who is 4 feet, 10 inches tall, likes to laugh about her height and to point out that even though she is small no one can ignore her. She is highly respected among official circles.

She attended high school in San Antonio, Our Lady of the Lake College, San Antonio college and the Universityof Texas.

Commission to travel nation exposing crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission investigating organized crime in America wants power to subpoena witnesses and evidence and will hold public hearings throughout the country to "reveal the threat criminal cartels pose to our nation's well-being," says its chairman.

U.S. Circuit Court Judge Irving R. Kaufman of New York was named Thursday by President Reagan to head the 20-member commission, charged with carrying out a three-year investigation.

As a federal district judge in 1952, Kaufman sentenced convicted Soviet spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg to die in the electric chair for passing secrets about the atomic bomb. In 1960, he presided at the trial of crime leaders arrested in the famous 1957 Apalachin, N.Y., conference, a gathering that brought national attention to the mob.

Reagan said the commission's aim is to "break apart and cripple the organized criminal syndicates that for too long have been tolerated in America." The 73-year-old Kaufman said, "We will recommend strategies and legislation to make the business of organized crime unprofitable."

With Reagan's blessing, Kaufman said the commission will ask Congress for subpoena powers for its work.

OTHER MEMBERS of the commission include former Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart; Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee; Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee; Stanford University Law School associate dean Thomas McBride, a former member of the Watergate Special Prosecution Force; and several state and local law enforcement officials.

Attorney General William French Smith compared the commission to the investigations of organized crime in the 1950s by the late Sens. Estes Kefauver and John McClellan.

Kaufman said organized crime is moving into new areas and constantly changing. "And therefore, the president and the attorney general and all concerned thought that it was time for a fresh and concerted investigation to devise new methods for confronting this blight," he said.

No schedule has been set for the public hearings that Kaufman said will be held in every region of the country. "We want to expose to the public this menace," Kaufman said.

ANNOUNCING the commission's makeup, Reagan said the panel will undertake "a region-by-region exposure and analysis of organized crime, to measure its influence and impact on American society, and make judicial and legislative recommendations."

Appearing in the White House briefing room with Attorney General Smith and FBI Director William Webster, Kaufman told reporters, "Criminals have moved into regions of the country previously untouched, and extended their control to new lines of businesses. Organized crime today is more dangerous and pervasive than ever before, yet we lack a comprehensive strategy for confronting this menace."

Smith said organized crime is turning up in the form of prison gangs, motorcycle gangs and drug rings based outside the United States but operating in this country. He said that "Japanese organized crime (is) spreading its tentacles into Hawaii and California and the West Coast."

Webster said he hoped the commission would pay particular attention to organized crime taking over legitimate businesses, using money derived from loan-sharking, gambling, prostitution, narcotics and bribery.

The officials were asked if their law enforcement jobs were made more difficult by the fact that Reagan attended the convention of the International Longshoremens Association, and counts their leaders, as well as Teamsters union officials, among his political supporters.

IMF supporters predicting victory; O'Neill skeptical

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of an $8.4 billion hike in U.S. support for the International Monetary Fund predict it will be adopted by the House despite a skeptical forecast from Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

"We do feel that we have the votes now," said a spokesman for Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who has spearheaded the administration's effort to get aid for the international lending agency through Congress.

The bill's backers predicted it would come up for consideration today in the House of Representatives, despite indications from O'Neill that he would not schedule further action until after Congress returns from its monthlong August recess.

The supporters said converts have been made because a substitute version was suggested by Rep. Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the House Banking Committee, to alleviate fears the legislation was a bailout for large banks that had made imprudent loans to developing nations.

The administration has been scrambling the past week to salvage the legislation, which it contends will ease the international debt crisis and help developing nations crippled by the recession become strong markets for U.S. exports.

"The IMF legislation is essential to the nation," said St Germain in announcing his substitute, which would tighten control over the release of U.S. funds to the IMF and impose safeguards against excessive lending overseas by the U.S. banks.

A Banking Committee source who asked not to be identified said, "The compromise is pulling in votes that were not there previously."

Another committee aide, who also asked not to be named, said the new language in the compromise was a "slap at the banks" that would appease critics of the bill.

President frustrated by claim of racism

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the wake of a racial dispute that prompted the withdrawal of his nominee to a government broadcasting post, President Reagan says "nothing has frustrated me more" than claims that he is prejudiced.

In remarks to a group of black women Thursday, Reagan made no reference to the withdrawal of Thomas Ellis, a Raleigh, N.C., attorney as his nominee for a seat on the Board for International Broadcasting.

But he said it frustrates him to be considered "prejudiced, if not an outright bigot."

"I've lived a long time, and I can't remember a time when I didn't believe that prejudice and bigotry were the worst of sins in the sight of man and God," Reagan said in prepared remarks for the National Council of Negro Women.

Ellis, in a letter asking the president to withdraw his name, told Reagan that racial charges against his nomination were "an obvious partisan political effort to drive a wedge between you and the black community."

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., who led the criticism of Ellis in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said, "I think if he would look he would see that there was a wedge long before I got there. If the president wanted to remove the wedge, why this appointment?"

Tsongas and Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., lined up a majority of the committee as signers of a letter to Reagan on Wednesday requesting him to withdraw the nomination.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis fluctuate

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have rheumatoid arthritis and the hardest part of the day is getting going in the morning. What I mean is that I feel stiff when I get out of bed, but once I'm up and around, I begin to feel a lot better. Is this unusual? — Mrs. J.B., San Antonio, Texas

Dear Mrs. B.: A number of studies have shown that the symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis do tend to fluctuate during the day. The pain and stiffness associated with the disease, as you have learned, tend to be greatest in the morning. Over the years a number of my own patients have made the same observation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had a case of shingles a couple of years ago, and a friend of mine tells me I should be going for regular checkups because I can get cancer. Is there anything to this? — Bernie, Vineland, N.J.

Dear Bernie: I assume you are asking whether a person who has had shingles (herpes zoster) is at an increased risk of developing cancer. According to a study conducted at the Mayo Clinic, this is not the case.

Dr. Mark Ragozzino followed about 600 herpes zoster patients for six years after the disease was diagnosed. He found that the incidence of cancer in these patients was no more than that expected in a similar population of patients who had not had herpes zoster.

While periodic physical examinations are a good idea for everyone, patients who have had herpes zoster do not seem to require special surveillance for cancer.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor is everything I would want a doctor to be. He's kind, considerate and capable. But when he prescribes medicine, he never tells me anything about how I should take it. Is this the pharmacist's responsibility to explain? — Fannie, Morristown, N.J.

Dear Fannie: Without excusing your physician's failure to explain how medication should be taken I must say that I believe that patients have a responsibility to ask questions and to be absolutely certain about the answers before they leave the doctor's office. My patients ask me questions and I welcome them.

The effectiveness of medication may be substantially reduced or even negated if it is not taken properly. For example, some should be taken with meals, some before meals and some after meals. Patients should also make certain they know how long the medication is to be continued. Is it until they feel better? Until the medication is all used up? Or are they supposed to take it for a specific period of time?

Patients who do not know the answers to these questions will not be able to comply with what their physician expects them to do, regardless of how motivated they may be.

For Peter, Wilkes-Barre, Penn.: It would be very rare for a case of sexual dysfunction in a man to be either all physical or all emotional. I think you would agree that even when the cause of the dysfunction is found to be organic, the man will invariably have an emotional reaction.

Toxic waste bills in final stages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bills tightening federal controls over toxic wastes are awaiting floor action in both houses of Congress in the first major congressional action on the issue since this year's furor over the Environmenal Protection Agency.

The bills would expand the number of businesses subject to EPA regulation and close what critics say are loopholes in the current law governing toxic wastes.

The Senate Environment Committee put final touches on its version Thursday before approving the bill and sending it to the Senate floor. The bill would not be considered by the full Senate until after Congress' August recess.

A similar bill had been scheduled for debate this week in the House, but was delayed by the congressional debate over Nicaragua.

The bills would amend the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, the law that is supposed to govern the handling of toxic wastes from their production to their disposal.

The law is intended to prevent future occurrences such as New York's Love Canal. Its companion law is superfund, the $1.6 billion program to clean up abandoned chemical dumps that came into being before toxic wastes were regulated.

It was superfund that was the subject of the investigation by a half-dozen congressional panels.

The House approved a bill rewriting the resource recovery law last year, but it died in the Senate, in part because of opposition from small businessmen concerned about the paperwork and expense regulation would cause.

Congressional leaders say, however, that the bills have a better chance this year because of increased public awareness of toxic waste problems and because of the EPA investigation into the agency's handling of the superfund program.

Both bills seek to end disposal of liquid hazardous waste in landfills, a restriction that the Senate committee's chairman, Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., said was especially important in preventing future incidents such as Love Canal.

"Experience has shown us that it's just a matter of time before these poisons end up in somebody's drinking water," Stafford said.

The bills also expand federal jurisdiction over so-called small generators, businesses and plants that produce smaller quantities of hazardous waste.

Current law regulates only those businesses producing more than 1,000 kilograms — one metric ton — of hazardous waste each month. Critics say as much as 4 million tons of hazardous waste escape regulation each year because of that threshhold.

The bill approved by the Senate committee Thursday would lower that threshold to 100 kilograms, or 220 pounds, per month. The House bill sets the threshold at 25 kilograms, or 55 pounds, and the Senate environmental pollution subcommittee originally had recommended that level as well.

Dozens injured as train derails

WILMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — Luggage tumbled from overhead racks and everything else inside went flying as an Amtrak train carrying 107 passengers derailed after hitting a truck that tried to cross its path, witnesses said.

The accident Thursday left the truck driver critically injured while at least 57 passengers were treated for injuries. Eighteen of those were admitted to two Joliet hospitals while the remainder were treated and released.

"Luggage started falling," said 38-year-old Dianne Fribbs from her hospital bed. "A red suitcase hit the lady across from me. It all started flying and going back and forth."

Will County Sheriff Sgt. Shirley Eichholzer said when rescue workers pulled passengers from derailed train cars that had tipped on their sides, "it looked like people came out of a submarine."

"One little old lady came out of the train with no shoes and walked down the track over large stones," Ms. Eichholzer said. "She dragged herself to the crossing and then to the ambulance."

Another victim said the wreckage was so bad he was surprised no one was killed.

"People were falling on top of each other," said passenger Bill Gossett, 59, of Lincoln, who escaped injury. "I think it's God's grace that we didn't have any fatalities. I don't think I ever saw such total wreckage."

As the train approached, an eastbound car followed closely by a semi-trailer pulled into the crossing, which has flashing warning lights but no gate, engineer James Doerr of Bloomington told authorities.

Amtrak spokesman John Jacobsen from Washington, D.C., said the locomotive and three cars derailed, but the locomotive and the first passenger car remained upright while the two trailing cars tipped on their sides.

A portion of the 700 to 800 feet of track that were torn up in the accident had been replaced Thursday night and cranes were to be brought in today to place the toppled cars on the repaired track, Jacobsen said.

The train struck the truck at mid-section, police said. The derailed cars then skidded for about 100 yards before coming to rest.

"I saw the truck just flying," said Linda Clark, 20, of Jacksonville, another passenger. "There were pieces flying all over."

"There were shocks and we sensed we were off the track, then my Coke and cheeseburger left me," said passenger Larry Ahern, 33, of Franklin Park, Ill. "I put my head down between my legs and tried to relax. Then the train rolled over."

The driver of the truck, Mickey Pursley, 22, of the west Chicago suburb of Cicero, was pinned in the wreckage. He was given emergency treatment at the scene, police said, and later transferred to Silver Cross Hospital, where officials said he was in critical condition.

The Prince and Princess of Wales leave London's St. Paul's Cathedral following their fairy-tale wedding, July 29, 1981.

Charles, Diana celebrate quietly

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana celebrated their second wedding anniversary today, but how and where they were spending it remained a closely guarded secret.

Buckingham Palace refused to give any details but said the royal couple had no official engagements.

Asked where Charles, 34, his 22-year-old wife, and their 13-month-old baby William were, a member of the staff of palace press secretary Michael Shea would only say: "It could be in London or it could be in the country."

The prince and princess of Wales have two homes, one at London's Kensington Palace, the other, Highgrove mansion, in rural Gloucestershire 90 miles west of the capital.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — An attorney for TV anchorwoman Christine Craft, who claims she was demoted because of her sex, says he told the station during contract talks that his client was a "California surfer," not a "beauty queen."

Attorney Bob Hamilton, who handled negotiations with KMBC-TV before Ms. Craft was hired as a news co-anchor, testified Thursday that Ms. Craft's appearance was discussed several times before she was hired.

"I told them she was a California surfer, not a beauty queen," Hamilton said. He said he told KMBC news director Ridge Shannon that Ms. Craft was "what they saw when they interviewed her" and did not want to be made over.

Ms. Craft, 38, has filed a $1.2 million discrimination suit against Metromedia Inc., KMBC's former owner. The station itself and its current owner, Hearst Corp., are not named in the suit.

The suit contends that Ms. Craft's removal from the anchor desk on Aug. 14, 1981, represented discrimination based on sex; that Metromedia paid her less than her male co-anchor for doing the same work; and that the station misrepresented the job when she was hired.

FORT SIMPSON, Northwest Territories (AP) — Britain's Prince Andrew is up a tricky river in the Canadian wilderness north of Edmonton — and the Mounties say he's "quite good" in a canoe.

"Everything is going just lovely," Cpl. Ed Farrell of the Fort Simpson Royal Canadian Mounted Police said Thursday. "He's having a good time."

Queen Elizabeth II's 23-year-old second son is on a canoe trip along hundreds of miles of the Nahanni and Liard rivers in the Northwest Territories with 12 students from Ontario's Lakefield College, which he attended for six months in 1977.

The prince began his trip July 21, Farrell confirmed, but he refused to say when he is expected to arrive at Fort Simpson.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Singer Bette Midler planned a concert in Minneapolis tonight after a two-day hospital stay for treatment of exhaustion and a stomach disorder, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 40-year-old entertainer was released from Pontiac General Hospital Thursday in good condition, said nursing supervisor Sue Edwards.

Ms. Midler was performing on the last night of a three-day stint at the Pine Knob Music Theater near Clarkston when she fainted Tuesday night. Theater officials canceled the concert and offered ticket refunds.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Nick Nolte, who recently settled a $4.5 million "palimony" suit by a Minnesota model, has filed for divorce from his wife of five years, a spokesman says.

Nolte, 46, cited irreconcilable differences when he filed Wednesday to end his marriage to singer Sharon Lee Haddad, spokesman Paul Bloch said Thursday.

The couple, married in Las Vegas in 1978, separated last month. They have no children.

NEW YORK (AP) — If automaker John DeLorean had not been arrested on cocaine conspiracy charges, he and his wife, Cristina, might never have had the "enriching" experience of turning to the Bible, Mrs. DeLorean says.

"That singularly has been the most major change in our lives and had this (arrest) not happened, I don't think we would have had this experience which has been so enriching and fulfilling," Mrs. De Lorean told Barbara Walters on ABC-TV's "20-20" program Thursday.

However, she also said her husband's arrest crippled her modeling career and made their celebrity friends stop calling.

De Lorean, 58, is scheduled to go on trial in October in Los Angeles on federal charges of conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine. Prosecutors claim he intended to use the profits from the alleged drug deal to save his troubled car business, DeLorean Motor Co., which he lost to bankruptcy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Saving money isn't just for those who must. Celebrities from model Cheryl Tiegs to race driver Jackie Stewart have their methods, too: from buying champagne by the case to squeezing the toothpaste tube dry.

"I buy my champagne by the case," Ms. Tiegs told Money magazine in an August article on thrifty stars, "and when it's on sale I buy six cases at a time."

Said Stewart, now a TV sports commentator: "I never leave a tube of toothpaste unfinished."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, July 30, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: English novelist Emily Bronte, automotive prioneer Henry Ford, economist Thorstein Veblen and coloful baseball manager Casey Stengel were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Linda Ronstadt, singer Paul Anka, writer-director Peter Bogdanovich, bodybuilder Arnold Schwarzenegger. A hidden factor has caused recent setbacks. Find out what it is and you begin to make rapid progress. Actors, artists find new success and greater public recognition. Give others the room they need to make changes and a financial sacrifice may not be necessary. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences. A rewarding romance makes you happier and more productive. Be willing to forget past grievances.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A business proposition sounds lucrative. Investigate the ideas that others bring to you. Your friends are willing to help in any way they can. Come to grips with family problems.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friends and relatives continue to play a major role in your life. Keep a close eye on your money. Business transactions contain an element of risk. Evaluate someone's work fairly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your work associates may act strangely. Expect to participate in office politics if you want to climb the ladder of success. Who you know counts more than who you are today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not count on support of business associates. Your personal life becomes exciting when an attractive stranger flies into town. Avoid rushing things.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Heed your intuition. Keep a watchful eye on financial matters—including your insurance coverage. Singles are able to pursue ther romantic fantasies while socializing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Creative work continues to be lucrative. Seek professional advice on marketing your special talents. Family members fall in with your vacation plans.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Tackle odd jobs around your home. Do-it-yourself types save money. Ignore the investment suggestions of well-intentioned friends. Avoid talking shop in social situations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Iron out any differences that spring up between you and your friends or neighbors. A backyard picnic or barbecue is an excellent and inexpensive way to entertain. Romance looks mostly happy.

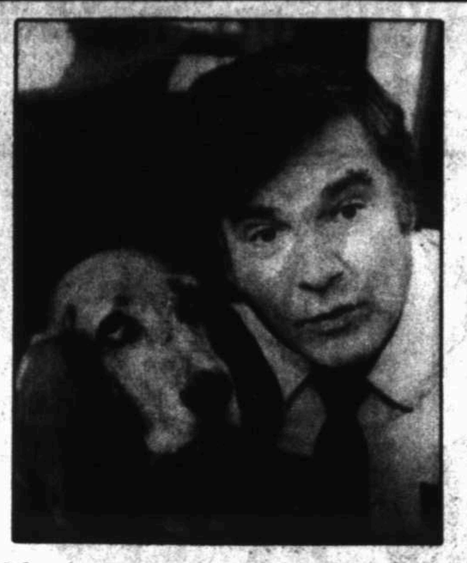

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family members look to you for leadership. Your friends are full of exciting ideas that could prove expensive. Come to grips with chores you have been postponing. Go over bills.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Creative work is favored for those who stay home today. Artistic ventures can prove highly lucrative. Repay a past favor. Visit an ailing relative or friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your relationship with a parent or older relative improves. Perform household chores yourself. Reading gives you new insights. Set aside more time for meditation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Something that occurs today forces you to rearrange your schedule. Your interest in higher education is stimulated. Seek professional advice before agreeing to a long-term commitment.

NBC video music show airs tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — How do you like your rock music? Heavy metal, soulful or just plain loud? A new generation may be growing up and answering that sound doesn't matter, just give us sight.

Video music is here to stay, it may never die. That's the assumption of the newest entry into the teen-age television market, NBC's "Friday Night Videos," which debuts following Johnny Carson's show tonight.

The weekly 90-minute program revolves around what NBC calls "musical minifeature films," a Felini-esque elitism for what everybody else calls "music videos" — the kind broadcast 24 hours a day on cable television's MTV.

The new program is part of a wave of video-music clip shows. Pay-cable's Playboy Channel has a raunchy one, "Hot Rocks," showcasing the tapes that MTV censored or didn't want. WABC-TV in New York has "New York Hot Tracks," featuring black performers who don't get much play on MTV.

MTV has been criticized for being too suburban, and not reflective of black musicians or black audiences. MTV's response is that its format is rock 'n' roll, not rhythm and blues.

"Friday Night Videos" will include any musician who meets the show's criteria, says executive producer Dick Ebersol. "Videos have to be exciting and good visually, and either good rock or good rhythm and blues."

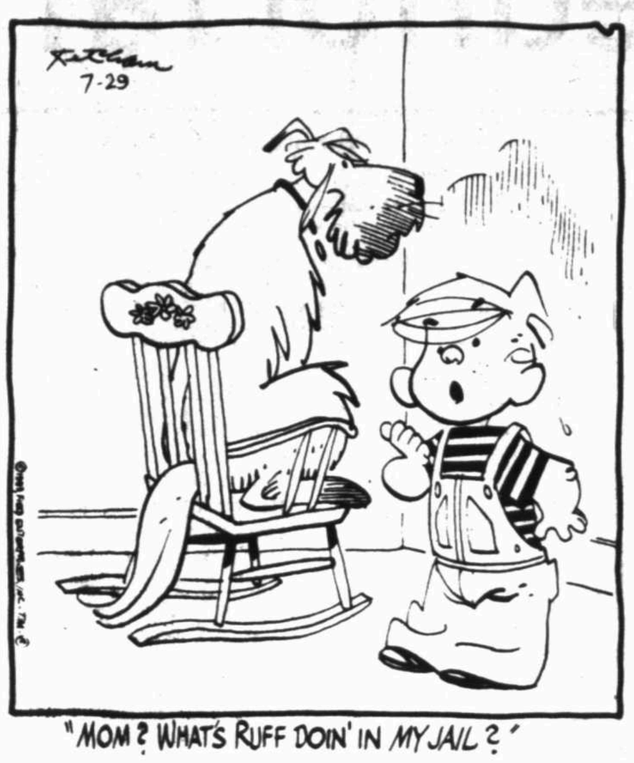

The fact that "Friday Night Videos" is stealing MTV's format may be one indication of cable's ability to create programming tailored to individual demographic groups. "Besides sex, the two things kids really want to do are listen to — or watch — good rock music, and go to the movies," says Ebersol.

Ebersol claims that NBC's use of video music will benefit MTV. "They're in 15 percent of the country. We're in 100 percent. This will whet the appetite."

The popularity of MTV, which is in the red but expects profits in the near future, paved the way for "Friday Night Videos." The idea came to Ebersol when he saw a piece on video music on the "CBS Evening News" last year.

Ebersol, also executive producer of "Saturday Night Live" and, previously, the concert-style "Midnight Special," decided to combine the formats of both those shows in "Friday Night Videos."

Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡.

We have often remarked that winning bridge players are pessimists. You have to be alert for bad breaks on hands where you seem to have an abundance of tricks.

The bidding was a matter of simple arithmetic. North added his 9 points to his partner's announced minimum of 25, and got enough for a slam. So he wasted no time getting there.

West led the ten of hearts, and a careless declarer would go down in no time flat. He would win, cash the ace-queen of spades and enter dummy with the ace of clubs. He would then cash the table's high spades and lead a club. When that suit did not break and declarer had to surrender a trick to East to set up his long club, East would cash the thirteenth spade for down one.

The careful declarer is aware of the fact that there might be bad breaks in the black suits. He also realizes that he needs only four tricks from the club suit for his slam — he has four spade tricks, three hearts and a diamond as well.

So after winning the opening lead and clearing the high spades from his hand, the wise declarer leads a club and finesses the ten. He does not care whether it wins or loses — the contract is safe in either case.

As the cards lie, East wins the jack of clubs and his best return is a diamond. Declarer rises with the ace of diamonds, crosses to the ace of clubs and cashes dummy's winning spades, discarding diamonds from his hand. He can then return to hand with a heart to cash the king-queen of clubs, extracting the enemy clubs, and the fifth club is declarer's twelfth trick.

School trouble

Public education has its share of problems.

The fact that Midland Independent School District is experiencing some difficulties finding sufficient numbers of qualified teachers in math and science should come as a surprise to no one. The shortage of math and science teachers extends nationwide, with a recent report by Education Week noting that 40 states are reporting shortages of teachers in the two fields.

The problem is symptomatic of the changing face of American industry. America is no longer the only manufacturer of quality automobiles, or large volumes of high grade steel. Now there's more demand in the marketplace for those proficient in mathematics and science, and more possibility for industry to lure teachers away from public education.

Teachers won't necessarily abandon public education solely because the profession's low paying. Teaching has a lengthy history of dedicated professionals who've remained because of the recognition they were fulfilling their purpose by feeding young minds.

But when you give a teacher a job to do and then strip away the ability to do that job effectively, you have given that teacher every reason in the world to walk away from public education and not look back.

That's what has happened through a combination of court rulings and bureaucratic nonsense peddling during the past couple of decades and it's pushing teachers out of the public schools today. A teacher earning low pay but enjoying his or her job may well reconsider if you strip away the right to maintain discipline in the classroom, respect in the hallways, decorum in the cafeteria AND offer them several thousand dollars a year more to do something else in private industry.

Finally, after years, public attention is being focused on the public schools and that's exactly where it should be. Through the efforts of President Ronald Reagan, Gov. Mark White, various professional education organizations and others, maybe education's problems can be spotlighted and corrective steps taken.

Then, maybe, what we'll hear about is all the wonderful math and science students our schools are turning out and our society is demanding.

What gender gap?

One of the highlights of President Reagan's latest press conference was his effort to set the record straight on the matter of appointment of women in this administration. A reporter brought up the question of a "gender gap," pointing out that there are no women on the recently appointed commission to take a look at Central America. The questioner added: "Doesn't that add to the perception that you're insensitive to women?"

Not a very respectful question, to be sure, but the president responded respectfully, and factually. He said, point-blank, that "... if anyone really wants to dig into the fact, I will match our record against any other administration." At first this may have sounded like hyperbole, but the president immediately came up with some incontrovertible facts about women in high office in the Reagan regime.

For starters he said that, "for the first time in history," there are three women in the Cabinet. In other words he is doing even better than Franklin Roosevelt, who made history by naming the first woman to the Cabinet. Frances Perkins was his secretary of labor.

President Reagan then went on to remind the press, and the public, of another historic fact. He appointed the first woman, Sandra Day O'Connor, to the Supreme Court of the United States.

So much for the "gender gap."

What Ronald Reagan did at his press conference was to remind us, as Al Smith used to say, to "look at the record." On the matter of women in government, the Reagan record is indeed convincing.

Stanford enrichment

From a severe test there is often substantial gain, and it may well be that the recent tenure fight involving an award-winning historian at Stanford University will leave her field of scholarship stronger for the struggle. After months of review, Stanford Provost Albert H. Hastorf has recommended that Estelle Freedman be granted tenure. He said that his decision was based in part on Freedman's contributions to the emerging field of feminist studies.

Feminist scholars are re-examining women's roles in all aspects of life, from religion to prison reform. The studies have proved controversial on many male-dominated faculties because the scholars are challenging what has been taught and, by extension, what will be taught. The Freedman case made feminist studies a topic of discussion on a department-by-department level to an extent that might never have occurred without the tension of a fight to preserve a job.

It took a strong network of support to keep Freedman's case alive and high on Stanford's agenda. There was enormous pressure from both sides, and yet the university admirably never deviated from its established procedures.

Although the history department recommended tenure, two faculty committees and a dean did not. The department and her supporters elsewhere in the university disputed the committees' contention that her scholarly credentials were not of high enough caliber, saying that her career actually was in jeopardy because she had chosen a ground-breaking field threatening to some of her critics. In that context the decision by Hastorf and an earlier appeals decision by Vice Provost Herant Katchadourian supporting Freedman were extraordinary. They were a positive sign of the importance that the university administration attached to the case.

It was an unfortunate experience, but one that can prove enriching to Stanford, Freedman and the field of feminist studies — now that it's virtually over and ending well.

CHARLEY REESE

Communists just aren't nice guys

Every time former President Jimmy Carter opens his mouth I utter a prayer of thanksgiving to Almighty God that the republic was spared his re-election.

Charley Reese

Carter's latest outrageous misrepresentation of reality is a recent statement that President Reagan's policies are going to drive the Sandinista government of Nicaragua to seek the help of Cuba and the Soviet Union.

The core leadership of the Sandinista government was openly Marxist-Leninist even before the Carter administration helped them into power. Any one less ignorant than Carter might have guessed that since the word Sandinista is derived from the name of an early anti-America Nicaraguan communist. You cannot drive a Communist to Communism and the Sandinistas were reviling America even as they spent the $75 million Carter sent them. Cubans, Palestinians and other Red mercenaries were already in their forces when they took power and there are now some 6,000 Cubans and over 500 Russians and East Europeans already in the country.

What Carter and other liberals are trying to do of course is distract the public's attention from the fact that they helped install a Communist government in Nicaragua. It was Carter who cut off all economic and military aid to Anastasio Somoza, Nicaragua's elected president, called for his overthrow, prevented other nations from helping him and ultimately forced him out of office.

That being the case, it's interesting to contrast Somoza's rule with the Sandinistas' rule.

Under Somoza there was religious freedom, elections, an opposition party, a free press which freely criticized Somoza, a relatively small army and not more than 1,000 political prisoners being held without benefit of due process.

Under the Sandinistas, there is no free press, no elections, no chance for elections, at least 3,000 political prisoners and 5,000 victims already murdered; Jews have been driven out of the country, Protestants are being persecuted and Catholics, harrassed (except, of course, for the Marxists with turned-around collars); atheism is the religion being taught Nicaraguan children; the Sandinista army numbers 20,000 with a 20,000-man trained reserve and 50,000 in the militia; Soviet armor and heavy artillery are already in place and airfields and pilots are being readied for MIG fighters.

In addition all of the Indian leadership has been arrested and the Miskito Indian population forcibly removed and their villages destroyed. Cubans, East Germans and Palestinians are training the secret police and the army. The familiar Communist block system has been installed where a Communist fink on each block spies on all his neighbors and reports any who waiver in their enthusiasm for the revolution.

Furthermore, the Sandinistas have openly boasted of supporting the guerrillas in El Salvador and openly proclaimed their goal is a "revolution without borders." Liberals who persist in claiming there is no hard evidence of Sandinista support for the insurgency in El Salvador are either liars or ignorant as donkeys.

You have a communist government in Nicaragua already allied with Cuba and the Soviet Union and as hostile to democracy as a hornet. Your choice is not to win them over because that is never possible. Your choice is either to leave them free to pursue their mischief or overthrow them. They will not go away and they will not turn into nice guys.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

CIA data an investor's dream

WASHINGTON — The CIA's presiding curmudgeon, William Casey, placed his financial holdings in a blind trust just in time. I was all set to reveal that he has access to inside financial transactions that would be an investor's dream.

Jack Anderson

The CIA happens to be a clearinghouse for the most sensitive intelligence the United States gathers. This includes intercepted messages that pass by cable and computer between the world's leading banks and corporations.

The hush-hush National Security Agency taps into the world's financial and commercial channels. The agency intercepts international telephone calls, cables and electronic transfers. This information is funneled into the CIA.

In the protected corridors and look-alike cubicles of CIA headquarters, more than 100 analysts reduce the accumulated data into classified studies, reports and forecasts. Treasury and NSA analysts also submit their reviews to the CIA.

The penetration of secret files is my traditional forte. With the help of my associate Dale Van Atta, I have examined the incredible investors' information that is available to Casey.

The intercepts from NSA are usually classified "secret" or "top secret," with an extra code word such as SPOKE to identify them. Some of the code words are themselves classified, and it would serve no public purpose to reveal them here. I will cite a few typical messages, taking care to omit crucial details that would identify the date and place of the intercepts.

"According to an intercepted message," one secret report reveals, "several international and Japanese copper companies are trying to form a company to buy up Japan's large copper stocks in an effort to control sales and stabilize prices." The report provides details that would be invaluable to investors.

Other examples: The CIA had early word on the Hunt brothers' attempt to corner the silver market; NSA has been following the twists and turns of Japan's deals with mainland China; and, of course, NSA has kept a watchful eye on the OPEC countries.

One top-secret report reveals that Saudi Arabia would provide hundreds of millions of dollars to Algeria in long-term loans. Another deals with Saudi investments in the United States.

The CIA got the first word, for example, that "the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency, acting through a U.S. intermediary, began negotiating... to buy $100 million in U.S. corporate bonds."

Another top-secret CIA report, based on NSA intercepts, confided that "Kuwaiti investment companies have set up several joint foreign ventures for specialized investment." The details followed.

The first details of an Italian-West German venture to produce defense equipment were picked up by the CIA long before investors had any inkling of the news. I could go on.

Meanwhile, Casey's subordinates have reviewed his stock transactions and pronounced the boss innocent of any conflicts. Nevertheless, the venerable CIA chief, blinking as if he had just awakened from a Rip Van Winkle nap, announced that he had "insulated myself from the management of my investments... in order to avoid future questions and misunderstandings."

But my sources caution that other CIA officials have access to insider tips and are quietly trading on the financial markets.

GAO ON THE GRIDDLE: The federal agency that polices the government's affirmative action programs is itself the target of a class-action suit charging racial discrimination.

More than 250 upper-level black employees of the General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog agency, have filed suit, claiming they are being denied promotions because they are black. The taxpayers have already paid more than $4.4 million in the past 10 years to settle racial bias claims.

Sources inside the agency say the lawsuit — and much of the minority dissatisfaction over promotion practices — could have been avoided if the GAO had a working affirmative action plan. But they say it hasn't had one since 1980.

That was the year Congress exempted the GAO from scrutiny by executive branch agencies, including the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

GAO employees say the agency has been dragging its feet on an affirmative action plan for more than two years. GAO officials have claimed they needed further study of the matter and lacked updated guidelines from the EEOC.

Milton J. Socolar, special assistant to the comptroller general, acknowledged "widespread disgruntlement" among GAO's minority employees, but blamed it on "limited promotion opportunities." In a letter to my office, he concluded: "In sum, I am of the view that GAO's equal opportunity program and its affirmative action results are good."

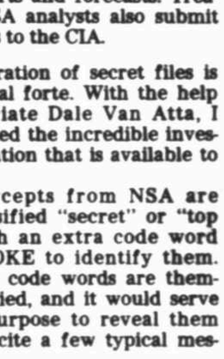

Footnote: GAO sources told my reporter Anthony Miller that the glacial pace of the GAO's affirmative action effort appears to have accelerated a bit since he began his inquiries. In a typical bureaucratic response, GAO employees contacted by my office have been ordered to report the substance of their conversation to their superiors.

INSIDE REPORT:

Sleight-of-hand hides remarks

WASHINGTON — In an incident revealing the flippancy of decision-making, White House prestidigitators made a last-second decision July 20 to expunge three paragraphs of an official statement, embarrassing President Reagan and astounding the few in his small, select audience who knew what was going on.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The sudden switch happened to deal with the subject of anti-Semitism by Nicaragua's Sandinista government. It could just as easily have concerned high-level disputes over arms control or redeeming the president's pledge to rescue Lebanon.

As control over policy flows out of Secretary of State George Shultz's seventh floor and into the cluttered basement office of national security adviser William P. Clark, it leaves a chaotic train. "We have so many different players and so many different wavelengths these days," one high-level policymaker told us, "that chances for error are staggering."

The error that transpired last Wednesday in the Old Executive Office Building adjoining the White House was indeed staggering. The July 20 issue of the White House Digest, an occasional publication written for special-interest groups invited in by the Public Liaison Office, contained three explicit paragraphs under the subheading "Persecuting the Jews" in Nicaragua. It was being handed out to a picked guest list in Room 450. The guests, including American Jewish leaders, were there for briefings on the Central American crisis — to be topped with a personal appearance and remarks by Ronald Reagan asking their support for his hardening policy.

Just before the president arrived, White House agents rushed into Room 450 and hurriedly scooped up copies of the White House Digest. Each guest was handed a new copy that contained not a single word about the persecution of Jews in Nicaragua. Not a single other word in the nine-page Digest had been changed.

Involved here was no failure to receive the routine clearances that are standard procedure before the White House issues any official words, attributable or not to the president himself. The swooping in by White House sleuths to retrieve copies of the Digest containing the offending three paragraphs (which said "The Sandinistas seem always to have been anti-Semitic") was a calculated, last-second decision. The official policy charging the Sandinista anti-Semitism had been exchanged for an official policy of silence.

The original plan called for exploiting the fact that there has indeed been savage anti-Semitism under the Sandinistas, and lining up the influential Jewish community for political support. The policy replacing it in that split-second last week called for caution in dealing with the Sandinistas, possibly out of deference to incoming Latin Commission Chairman Henry Kissinger.

But so nimble was the decision to switch, like the flashing fingers of the prestidigitator, that President Reagan himself was permitted to deliver a closed-door version of the anti-Semitism charge. He launched into his prepared script in Room 450 with a vigorous denunciation of Sandinista anti-Semitism. Reading from the index cards he invariably sports, Reagan quoted almost verbatim from the three paragraphs expunged from the first copy of the Digest: Sandinista supporters had "torched the doors" of the Managua synagogue and later confiscated it, covering the Stars of David "with propaganda posters."

"The president was eloquent," one of those who heard him told us. But Reagan eloquence in Room 450 on July 20 went unnoticed and unrecorded beyond the few who were invited to hear him. White House officials decided not to release his words.

One explanation of the sudden flip-flop could be a diplomatic telegram to Shultz from U.S. Ambassador Anthony Quainton in Managua early last week. Perhaps for the reason that Sandinista anti-Semitism has now just about frightened away all Nicaraguan Jews, Quainton told Shultz that anti-Semitism does not exist in Nicaragua.

But that explanation is a cop-out. In the bewildering dipsy doodles of President Reagan's ever-changing makers and conductors of policy, swift shifts that confound the beholder like the conjurer's sleight-of-hand are the reality.

Farmers praise new grain sales pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm organizations and grain-state congressmen welcomed news of a new five-year grain sales pact between the United States and the Soviet Union, but most cautioned that it will do little to move the mountain of grain now depressing prices.

"It's modest, but welcome," said Robert B. Delano, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, noting that U.S. supplies of wheat, corn and feed grains available for overseas sale total 100 million metric tons.

The new agreement to sell the Soviets up to 12 million tons a year through 1988 "is not going to move that mountain very far," Delano said. But he added, "It can't hurt farm income, and might give it a little boost."

Agriculture Secretary John Block and U.S. Trade Representative William Brock announced Thursday that U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Vienna, Austria, had reached "agreement in principle" on a grain pact to replace the current agreement which expires Sept. 30.

The agreement, to be signed late in August, will require that the Soviets buy at least 9 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat, in roughly equal amounts, each year. Another 3 million tons could be purchased without seeking permission, and even more could be bought after consulting with government officials.

The current agreement, signed in 1975, called for minimum purchases of 6 million tons and up to 8 million tons without consultations. Traditionally, the Soviets have bought somewhat more than the specified maximums. They purchased about 14 million tons last year, but have bought barely 6 million tons so far this year.

Agriculture spokesmen said the most beneficial aspect of the new agreement may be its signal that the Soviets once again regard the United States as a reliable source of grain.

U.S. fields once produced 70 percent of Soviet grain import needs, but that level dropped to 20 percent after President Carter in 1980 imposed a partial embargo on grain sales because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"This is a gateway which opens opportunities for us to expand our trade with the Soviets," said Carl Schwensen, director of the National Association of Wheat Growers. He said the terms of the agreement were largely expected and therefore would not have a great immediate impact on market prices. But the speed with which negotiators reached agreement during their third meeting came as a surprise, he said.

Rep. Pat Roberts, a Republican whose western Kansas district is the nation's largest wheat producer, said the move also "is a breakthrough for ending the use of agriculture as a foreign policy tool."

In announcing the agreement, Block said it was "a happy hour for American agriculture and for the country" and said the pact met the objectives the administration had set out when it agreed in April to begin negotiations.

Agriculture secretary buys groceries with food stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says he'll be able to tell critics of the food stamp program, "I've been there," now that he and his family have done their grocery shopping from a list prepared for food stamp recipients.

Block's trip to his local supermarket Thursday was staged to demonstrate that a family of four can eat nutritionally on a food stamp budget of $58 a week.

"I've committed myself to investigate how well we are feeding needy people," Block said in an interview at his home later the same day. "There's a lot of concern in the food stamp program that we aren't satisfying the needs of the people.

"It's easy for me to say you won't run out of food. But it's harder for me to demonstrate that myself. When critics argue a point, it's easier for me to challenge them by saying, 'I've been there.'"

Block and his wife had spent their noon hour cruising the aisles of a local supermarket, filling their cart with items such as hamburger, chicken, grits, baloney, cheese and peanut butter.

Their groceries, which totaled $54.14, would provide the week's fare for the Blocks, their 19-year-old daughter Christy, and a 19-year-old house guest, Joyce Hamilton of Springfield, Ill.

The food stamp program, which will cost about $12 billion this year, feeds about 22 million low-income Americans. A pending supplemental appropriations bill would keep the food stamp program operating through Sept. 30.

Under federal rules, a family of four must have a gross income of less than $12,876 to qualify for food stamps. The value of a household's allotment is based on the Thrifty Food Plan, a menu designed by USDA nutritionists.

Standing in the supermarket aisle in shirtsleeves, Block said the administration has been criticized for not providing enough help to low-income people and he wants to be able to prove that it is possible to eat nutritionally within the food stamp budget.

"I am convinced you can do it," Block said. "It does require judgment in shopping."

The 40-minute trip through the supermarket also required patience. It was a media circus with Block and his wife in center ring. Five network camera crews, as well as dozens of reporters and photographers, tripped over each other for the perfect shot of Block pushing his cart.

Afterwards, the Blocks were asked if there was anything they would have liked to buy that wasn't in the food stamp budget.

"Oh no," Mrs. Block replied. Her husband smiled and said he would have liked a big watermelon.

When the groceries were loaded into the family stationwagon, Mrs. Block took the wheel and drove the couple home. They pulled into the driveway of a modern, centrally air-conditioned brick house, located in one of the city's most exclusive northwest neighborhoods and assessed at $317,500 by city real estate records.

While "Shadow," their black Labrador retriever, pranced at their feet, the Blocks unloaded groceries in the kitchen, equipped with a double oven and a refrigerator with a drink dispenser on its door. Block pushed aside a half gallon of white wine to make room for the groceries.

The family normally spends about $60 a week for groceries, Block said, but he added quickly that the couple has an active social life and receives invitations for lunch or dinner three or four times a week.

But this week they will stick to the diet, Block said. He plans to bring sack lunches to the office, turn down all social invitations and not use vegetables from their garden.

One critic quick to challenge the validity of Block's experiment was Nancy Amidei, executive director of a lobbying organization called the Food, Research & Action Center, located in Washington.

Red carpet rolled out for astronauts

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The red carpet was finally rolled out for the crew of the seventh space shuttle mission, but "you can't walk on it until you land here," the Kennedy Space Center director teased the astronauts.

The bright scarlet carpet — emblazoned with white lettering reading "Welcome Back to KSC STS-7" — was intended for use after the first-ever shuttle landing at Kennedy Space Center last June 24. Since bad weather forced Challenger to put down in California, KSC Director Richard Smith put the carpet in mothballs until Thursday.

"You can touch it. You can admire it. But you can't walk on it until you land here," Smith told the astronauts during a lighthearted, 30-minute ceremony Thursday to thank the technicians and engineers who helped put the shuttle in orbit.

CBS to save money by layoffs

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS has laid off 14 staffers on two television news shows and 35 employees of the company's five TV stations as part of a cost-cutting plan which will eliminate 300 jobs by the year's end.

The news division will also save money by consolidating some staff and studio functions on the two news programs, the "CBS Morning News," with Bill Kurtis and Diane Sawyer, and the overnight "Nightwatch." Beginning Aug. 29, the morning news show will use the same set as the overnight broadcast.

George Schweitzer, vice president of communications for the CBS Broadcast Group, said Thursday that the layoffs mainly involved clerical personnel and no on-camera personnel were affected.

Police videotape male prostitution

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Reacting to eight unsolved killings of young men linked to the city's homosexual community, police have resumed videotaping male prostitution in downtown areas.

The taping, done both openly and covertly, began Wednesday night, and is "the most effective deterrent" to prostitution, Police Chief Joseph G. McAtee said Wednesday.

Police taped male prostitutes downtown for a short time last fall, and began taping female prostitutes on the north side this summer.

Police have said they believe at least two killers are involved in the slayings, which began in June 1980.

Survivor of plane fire files suit

DALLAS (AP) — A survivor of the fatal Air Canada DC-9 fire has filed a $650,000 lawsuit against the airline and McDonnell Douglas, the jetliner's manufacturer, claiming negligence.

Harry Moseley, 42, was one of 18 who survived the June 2 fire on the Dallas-to-Toronto flight. Twenty-three passengers died when the jet burst into flames after making an emergency landing in Cincinnati.

Moseley, of Dallas, filed the suit Wednesday in U.S. District Court. The suit alleges Air Canada was negligent in operating the jet and McDonnell Douglas knew materials in the aircraft were flammable.

Spokesmen for Air Canada and McDonnell Douglas both declined comment, saying their companies had not yet seen the suit.

Zoo visitor awarded for injuries

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A zoo visitor has been awarded $35,000 for injuries he received when he was hit on the head by a rock heaved by an African bull elephant.

Douglas County District Court Judge Theodore Richling ruled Thursday that the Henry Doorly Zoo was liable for Thomas M. Caron's injuries, and a jury awarded the money for medical costs, lost earnings and unspecified general damages.

Caron, 37, suffered a fractured sinus and faces the possibility of blindness as a result of the May 25, 1981, incident, according to his lawyer, Warren Schrempp.

Violence erupts in Sri Lanka again

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Once again Sri Lanka, the lush island republic of tea and spice plantations, palm forests and golden beaches, is showing its darkest side — bloody ethnic violence.

Reports from Colombo, the capital, tell of terrorists ambushing soldiers, prison inmates butchering fellow prisoners, and mobs burning and looting shops and pulling people from trains and buses to massacre them.

Regardless of the causes, it is evident the island's political leaders have failed since the last major communal upheaval two years ago to achieve a compromise that would have strengthened moderate, peace-loving elements against extremists of the two rival communities.

At war again are the majority Sinhalese who make up 70 percent of Sri Lanka's 15 million people and the minority Tamils who account for 22 percent.

The Sinhalese are mostly Buddhist and the Tamils mostly Hindu. Religion, however, appears to be less a factor in the tension than language and geography and the competition for education and security in a poor country with 25 percent unemployment.

The Sinhalese would appear to have few worries because of their numerical superiority in the population and their clout in President Junius R. Jayewardene's ruling party. He is Sinhalese.

But they feel threatened by the tactics of Tamil extremists and by the nearness of the Tamil homeland — Tamil Nadu state in India. Fifty million Tamils live in that state, just 18 miles across the water at its nearest point.

This geographical reality gives Tamil militants great self-confidence despite their small numbers in Sri Lanka.

Indian politicians in Tamil Nadu frequently talk as defenders of the Tamil minority in Sri Lanka, and Colombo authorities say there is a constant flow of arms and people by small boat between Tamil Nadu and the Tamil-dominated Jaffna region in northern Sri Lanka.

Mussolini's 100th birthday hailed

PREDAPPIO, Italy (AP) — Hundreds of nostalgic Italian fascists gathered in this mountain village today to hail the memory of the late Italian dictator Benito Mussolini on the 100th anniversary of his birth here.

The ceremonies take place following a year-old national debate between Mussolini devotees and foes who claim the commemoration could intensify right-wing extremism in the country.

"We are not planning speeches, mass rallies or anything like that," said Massimo Maglioro, spokesman of the neo-fascist Italian Social Movement. "We only want to solemnly pay tribute to the memory of a prominent Italian leader."

The movement is the fourth largest political party in Italy and was one of the biggest gainers in general elections in June, increasing its share of votes from 5.3 percent in 1979 to 6.8 percent.

Ceremonies in Predappio, in central Italy about 55 miles northeast of Florence, climax activities organized by Mussolini's 66-year-old son, Vittorio. He heads a procession to his father's tomb in the local cemetery after a Mass.

The commemoration also includes a "private awarding of diplomas to loyalty to the Mussolinian ideals" to delegates from throughout Italy.

Mussolini, known as "Il Duce" (The Leader), ran Italy from 1922 to 1943 and became a World War II ally of Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler. Mussolini was shot and killed by anti-fascist partisans in 1945 and his body was taken to Milan and hung upside down in a public square.

Though many Italians hated him and have embraced the democratic ideals of Italy's postwar governments, Mussolini supporters have re-emerged with the approach of his 100th birthday. This has sparked both an emotional controversy and a booming memorabilia business.

A last-minute debate erupted on the eve of the main ceremonies regarding the wording of a commemorative plaque to be attached to the outside of the modest, two-floor brick house where Mussolini was born July 29, 1883.

Predappio's Communist Mayor Mauro Strocchi rejected a petition signed by 400 residents who wanted a plaque that reads "In this house was born Benito Mussolini, head of the government of Italy from October 28, 1922 to July 25, 1943."

Strocchi said the plaque should carry Mussolini's name alone, deleting the dates and the reference.

Uncharacteristically, the neo-fascist party's newspaper Il Secolo D'Italia agreed with the mayor.

"May our friends of Predappio forgive us," the daily said in a front-page editorial. "But we prefer the mayor's wording...Mussolini has left a profound mark...People to come will obviously have no need of indications to remember who Benito Mussolini was."

Termites eat their way to stardom

ROME (AP) — Teatro Argentina, the 253-year-old auditorium where Verdi's "Rigoletto" made its debut, has a floor show thath danagement hopes to exterminate.

The performers are termites, and they are everywhere.

The tiny creatures have eaten their way into boxes, are working their way down one aisle and pose an immediate threat to the stage, theater officials announced Thursday.

In describing the latest woe to hit Rome's theaters, artistic director Maurizio Scaparro said the termites could destroy the theater within 15 years if left undisturbed.

Starting Monday, he said, a company from Florence will begin a $200,000 extermnation project at the theater lasting through Sept. 26. The theater is closed for the summer.

"It will be a long, difficult and complex operation," said theater manager Fulvio Fo. "We have had to close off the stage with an iron gate to prevent the termites from reaching it."

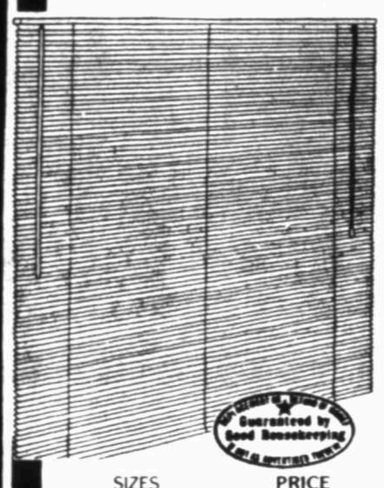

The Argentina, once a showcase for Italian opera, is now part of the city-managed Theater of Rome and hosts mainly prose performances.

In addition to the debut of Giuseppe Verdi's "Rigoletto" in 1851, the first performance of Gioacchino Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" was held in the Argentina in 1816.

'Tar Bat' is illegal, but...

AP Laserphoto

American League President Lee MacPhail holds George Brett's bat during a news conference Thursday after ruling that the bat was illegal, but not in a way that gave Brett an advantage in hitting a two-run homer against the Yankees Sunday.

NEW YORK (AP) — George Brett spoke of the "courage" of American League President Lee MacPhail. Rick Cerone wondered why MacPhail would overrule his umpires. And Joe Brinkman, one of those umpires, hoped the rule in question would be changed.

They were reacting to Thursday's decision by MacPhail to overturn the ruling of the umpires and uphold a protest by the Kansas City Royals, who wanted Brett's two-run, two-out homer in the top of the ninth inning at New York last Sunday restored.

(Ruling Reaction, Page 3B)

The home run gave the Royals a 5-4 lead...until Brinkman and crew ruled Brett's bat was illegal because it had too much pine tar on it.

"I think it showed a lot of courage," said Brett. "He's a native New Yorker and he lives there. I would not have wanted to make that decision.

"That was a very, very tough decision."

IN A long statement read at a news conference Thursday, MacPhail said the fact that Brett had too much pine tar on his bat was not sufficient grounds to nullify a potential game-winning homer.

MacPhail said in the statement that the intent of the rule was to discipline batters using doctored bats "to increase distance potential, but not to treat pine tar excesses in the same manner." The intent, he said, of the pine tar rule was to keep baseballs from getting dirty.

So, the game will be resumed with two out in the top of the ninth inning and the Royals leading 5-4, instead of the Yankees winning 4-3 through the nullification. They could resume on Aug. 18, an open date for the two clubs, or continue after the season, if it has a bearing on either division title, MacPhail said. If it can't be replayed during the season and is unnecessary at the season's conclusion, Brett's homer still stands, but the game will not count.

Cerone, who was the catcher when Brett blasted Rich Gossage's pitch into the seats, thought the umpires weren't getting a fair shake.

"What makes me feel funny is that the integrity of the umpires is being questioned," said catcher Rick Cerone. "They showed me a lot of character that day and if I was an umpire, I know I'd be making some pretty strong statements right now."

Added Brinkman, the crew chief for the game: "In definitions of an illegally batted ball, it definitely states that any pine tar or any substance beyond the 18 inches will constitute an illegally batted ball," said Brinkman. "Therefore, you have to call the batter out. That's in Rule 2. That's the rule that everybody seems to be missing. Everybody's going from Rule 110 to Rule 66 and they're leaving out Rule 2 which definitely states that the batter shall be called out for illegally batting a ball. "We did what we had to do on the field," Brinkman added. "Lee MacPhail, of course, is the judge. He can overrule us and he did in this case. I wasn't happy with it, but he is the judge, he is the president and he is the boss.

"I DON'T think it's going to change the umpires' thinking at all. You're still going to have to do what you've been trained to do. We can't get into what would've happened or what should have happened, which team should have won the pennant, which team should have won the ballgame. We just have to officiate balls and strikes and safe and out.

"I definitely think it (the rule) should be changed. I was hoping they would change it after the fact, maybe at the end of season or after the incident. But he sees fit to change it now and overrule us, and I think it's a good rule to be changed ..."

The ruling ended one of the most celebrated investigations in baseball and also marked the first time in his tenure that MacPhail has upheld the protest by a club of an umpire's decision.

The ruling also, at least temporarily, knocked the Yankees out of a first-place tie with Baltimore in the American League East. Club owner George Steinbrenner, at his Tampa, Fla., office, called the ruling "ridiculous" and said:

"If the Yankees should lose the Eastern Division race on the ruling of American League President Lee MacPhail, I would not want to be poor Lee living in New York City. He better start house hunting out in Missouri, close to Kansas City."

The original umpires' ruling, made by Tim McClelland at home plate and backed by Brinkman, was made when Yankees Manager Billy Martin protested Brett's bat immediately after the homer.

The rules say pine tar may be applied to the bat no farther than 18 inches from the end of the handle. Brett's bat was illegal. That was never in contention, MacPhail said. The question arose from McClelland's decision to call Brett out and pretend as though the homer just didn't exist.

"Although Manager Martin and his staff should be commended for their alertness," MacPhail said in a statement, "it is the strong conviction of the league that games should be won and lost on the playing field — not through technicalities of the rules..."

The league president said later, "The pine tar was excessive, but the fact that it was beyond the 18-inch limit is not sufficient reason to call him out."

WHEN McCLELLAND raised his arm to signal that Brett was out, Brett ran full-speed from the dugout, nearly missing a train-wreck collision with the umpire when he was restrained by Brinkman. Also involved in a wild argument were Royals Manager Dick Howser and coach Rocky Colavito.

That prompted Richie Phillips, attorney for the Major League Umpires Association, to say that when the game is resumed, Brett, Howser and Colavito will be ejected "for behavior that followed the conclusion of the game."

MacPhail said that was news to him. There had been no ejections mentioned in the umpires' reports on the dispute, he said.

"That's something we'll have to consider," MacPhail said. "We'll have to take that under consideration along with the events that took place after the incident."

McClelland, a rookie umpire, said he had been assigned to work home plate tonight when Detroit plays host to Kansas City. He said he wouldn't be looking for tar on Brett's bat though. Once in a rookie season is enough.

"I would have liked to have had Mr. MacPhail back our decision," McClelland said. "We went right by the rule book. We were only doing our job. We weren't trying to give the game to New York or take it away from Kansas City."

According to MacPhail, the umpires might have going by the wrong book.

Women's Open is survival battle

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — There were only survivors following the opening round of the 31st U.S. Women's Open golf tournament on the hard, baked Cedar Ridge Country Club course.

"I really feel like I survived," said Patty Sheehan, who battled the sun-blistered course to an even-par 71 to tie Betsy King for the lead going into today's second round. "I feel like, thank God it's over and I don't have to play another hole."

THE 6,298-YARD layout was hard, fast and mean as only 14 women came within two strokes of par. Sixty-five women logged scores of 80 or higher. The average score was 79.

"I don't know. I think the course is fair," said Buddy Phillips, the course pro. "It rewards the good players and penalizes the bad shots."

There weren't many rewards Thursday. Most of the pre-tournament favorites — including JoAnne Carner, Donna Caponi, Kathy Whitworth and Janet Anderson — shot themselves out of contention, and several others scrambled to stay alive in the 103-degree heat.

"The greens were really baked out, and when they're like that you can't be aggressive," said Amy Alcott, a pre-tournament favorite who couldn't negotiate with her puteer and was 4-over-par after her first round. "But that's the way the USGA (United States Golf Association) likes it. They don't like for people to come in way under par."

Sheehan, who earlier this year won another of the major tournaments on the women's tour, the LPGA Championship, expressed surprise that her 36-35—71 score would lead the tournament.

But Jan Stephenson, who logged a one-over 72 to stay in the hunt, expected such high scores.

"I said a long time ago that 4- or 6-under would win, but now I think even par will ... maybe even 4-over will win," she said.

CARNER, THE leading money-winner on the tour this year with more than $153,000, suffered through a dismal 10-over-par 81 that threatened to cause her to miss the cut for the first time in the 19 Opens she has played.

Whitworth, who has never won the Open in her record 84 tour victories, was nine strokes off the pace after a 39-41—80, while Anderson, the defending Open champion, blew to a 45 on the back nine and came into the clubhouse with an 82.

"The greens were hard but they played fair; I didn't," she said.

Caponi, a two-time Open winner, shot a 41 on the front side — including a double-bogey 7 on the fifth hole — en route to a 7-over-par 79.

And Kathy Young, who has never won a tournament in her four years on the tour, recorded a 45 on the front nine and withdrew from the tourney.

That left the door open for Sheehan, who put together a round of consistency foreign to Cedar Ridge so far.

"I had two birdies and two bogeys. I hit 15 greens and only took 31 putts. I felt like I played pretty well," the four-year tour veteran said.

"I'm surprised there isn't anyone under par ... It's hard to feel like I'm in the lead because there aren't many tournaments where you lead with even (par)."

KING, A 27-year-old pro who has never won on the tour, also played the front nine in 36 and the back side in 35, and later said she hopes for more of the same.

"Even par for four rounds would look mighty good," said King, who was 2-under through 16 holes but bogeyed the 17th and 18th.

Beth Daniel, who earlier this week was unsure whether a bad back would prevent her from playing, shot a 74, while Hollis Stacy, another pre-tourney favorite, overcame a 42 on the front side and logged a 78.

Arkansas beats Cubs again, 7-3

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Arkansas pitchers Jose Brito and Terry Clark teammed up for a six-hit 7-3 Texas League victory over Midland Thursday night at Cubs Stadium.

The victory gives the Travelers a 2-0 edge in the five-game series and keeps them one-half game ahead of Shreveport, 8-4 winners over El Paso, in the East Division second half standings at 18-13. The Cubs, losers of 16 of their last 21 ball games, fell to 14-21 in the West.

Brito, now 2-0, went eight innings, allowing five hits and three runs (two earned) before Arkansas manager Nick Leyva made the pitching change to start the bottom of the ninth.

"He was a little inconsistant but he made good pitches when he had to," said Leyva about Brito. "He'd get behind the hitter at times but was able to pitch out of jams. Eighteen hits doesn't hurt either."

In his lone inning on the mound, Clark gave up one hit on a bunt laid down by Bill Hatcher down the third base line while striking out one.

Midland pitcher Daryl Banks, the loser at 10-8, had only one inning of one-two-three pitching in his 5⅓ innings of duty — the fifth. When Arkansas collected two hits in the sixth, allowing one run to score to trail 5-3, manager Tommy Harmon made the pitching change.

With one out and Rod Booker on third, a single off Banks, a stolen base and a throwing error by Don Hyman on the steal, Jim Gerlach came in. He intentionally walked Mark Salas and gave up two singles to score Booker and Salas to give Arkansas a 7-3 lead. Gerlach four-hit the Travelers the rest of the way.

CUB THIRD baseman Tom Lombarski broke the RBI century mark in the bottom of the third inning with his double to right-center that scored Rick Baker from first.

The Cubs' final two runs scored in the fifth inning when the Travelers suffered from a bit of carlessness. Rick Baker led off by reaching first when Booker mishandled his grounder at short and went to second on Lombarski's single to left. Both runners advanced on the first of three Brito wild pitches.

Mike Anicich followed with a sacrifice fly to center field. Randy LaVigne got Baker running and eventually home when first baseman Barry Saylor fielded his grounder and then threw wild past Salas covering first.

Arkansas turned a double play to end the inning, the second of the game, and used a third in the sixth to secure the win.

AT THE plate, newly acquired Darren Thomas, 0-for-15 coming into the game, set the pace with a 4-for-5 effort including a double and RBI.

"That's a 200-point increase on his average," said Leyva who was happy with his team's overall performance.

"We need to keep it up because we're in a fight for first place. There's still a long ways to go but it's nice to be on top," said Leyva. "We're hot right now and when you're hot things go your way. You get the bad hop or the error on key plays in a game."

For Midland, Lombarski and Otis Tramble collected four of the six hits with two each, Lombarski's double being the only Cub extra base hit. Hatcher and Baker each added hits.

Schizophrenic Cubs fizzle in hardball slide

If Midland's baseball team is going down for the count, the knockout punch probably felled them Tuesday against Jackson when the Cubs threw everything at the Mets — literally — and still got bombed, 21-8.

The Cubs have a malady known in psuedopsychology as the skits. As in schizophrenia. Talk about your split personality. Midland struggled through the first half of the Texas League calendar with little success. After the break, Midland decided to show some muscle and took eight of twelve games on a road swing and woke up the sunny day of July 2 in first place.

THAT NIGHT, Midland beat El Paso 8-3 to go 9-4 and looked on their way to a second half crown.

Then came the fizzle. After a loss on the 3rd, the Cubs planned a fireworks display for Independence Day after the Diablos game. Threatening skies forced the cancellation of the fireworks before a huge throng of 3,805. The weather strangely dissapated. Unfortunately the Cubs fizzled too, losing the game and getting hosed down by the Diablos for the remainder of the series.

The skid reached eight before Midland managed a win at Jackson. Since that 9-4 getaway start, the Cubs have let the race get away from them and have since dropped 15 of their last 20.

There are a variety of reasons for the Midland swoon, all valid and none the single key.

For example, the blame for the Cub demise could go to the pitching staff, the offensive effort, or otherwise. After all, sometimes the Cubs simply lost to the better team. But the chief culprit may be the batsmen.

Seven times in the 20 games before the start of the Arkansas series did the Cubs get more than 10 hits. Midland won three of those games and lost four. In ten games, Midland had less than seven hits. Of those, the Cubs won only once and it took a shutout to notch the win.

BEFORE THE hot-hitting Mets visited the area and roughed up Cub pitching, Midland hurlers had looked to be lily-white where blame was concerned.

However, incompetent pitching cost Midland a few games in the slump, too. In a 3-2 loss at Jackson, the Cubs got only four hits. Had the pitching staff not walked nine opposing Mets, Midland could have ended an-eight game slide one night earlier. At Arkansas July 14, Midland had an 8-5 lead entering the bottom of the ninth, but the pitching fell asleep and the Cubs lost 9-8.

Home against Jackson, Cub pitchers became un-bearable. The Mets bombed Midland in the five game set. In all, Midland surrendered 73 hits and 46 runs in the series. Amazingly, Midland won two of those games but countered with 47 hits and 29 runs. Those figures would be competitive had the pitching staff kept things within reason. In Tuesday's 21-8 laugher, things got so bad that shortstop A.J. Hill pitched two innings.

The sad part is that Hill threw better than the Cubs paid to pitch the ball.

IN MOST cases, Cub setbacks were a team effort. Things are not as bad as they seem. Midland is capable of playing well. Their start in the second half is evidence of this, but of late, Midland has not had many breaks. At the times when one department has produced, the other has had problems. The same Jackson team that dented the outfield walls of Cubs Stadium while here also was a tamed kitten in Mississippi. On that road trip, the Mets scored 17 runs in five games, and seven runs came in the series finale. Midland, who averaged six runs an outing against Jackson here, scored six runs in the entire series at Jackson.

If it wasn't for bad luck, and a little bad timing, the poor Cubs wouldn't have any luck at all.

MIDLAND STILL has five games to play at El Paso, currently leading the Texas League West and the perpetrators of the Cub woes begun July 3. And Midland's final homestand wraps up the season with five against — you geussed it, the same Diablos.

Ten games against the division leaders offers ten opportunities to win. While the Cubs right now don't appear ready to make a title drive, anything can happen in the Texas League. The fat lady hasn't even warmed up her voice yet.

City golf race wide open

The Midland City Golf tournament is slated to get underway Saturday with 66 golfers competing at Hogan Park golf course.

The championship flight is wide open, with 32 entrants competing for bragging rights for at least one year as Midland's top amateur.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram is once again sponsoring the event.

Royce Woodard, the defending championship flight winner, will not defend his title Saturday.

Championship flight golfers are handicapped from 0-6.

The tournament will be played over the next two days and will consist of two rounds, eighteen holes each day. Waiting in the winner's circle Sunday will be prizes worth up to $350 in merchandise from the Hogan Park golf shop.

For opening round play, contestants will be paired randomly, but first round leaders will stare each other down and play together for Sunday's final eighteen.

According to assistant Hogan pro John Dill, the competition in the City Golf showdown is usually very good. "They turn out to be a pretty good battle," said Dill. "Last year, the flights were all even and the competition was very good. In the championship flight, it spreads out a bit."

Hogan Park's course layout will separate the men from the pretenders Saturday and Sunday. Sixty-five area golfers are entered in the annual tourney.

Midland's city championships once were 72 holes long, but scheduling difficulties have reduced the tourney to a weekend format so that virtually anyone can compete. "A lot of guys can't take off from work four days to play in a tournament," says Dill, in his second year at Hogan Park. "In the oil business, if they're needed, they're needed. Some guys have trouble enough just getting off on weekends."

The size of the championship flight will be halved. Top scorers will continue to play in the flight, and the remainder of golfers will comprise a President's Flight on Sunday.

Following are pairings and tee times for the City Golf tourney's first round:

THIRD FLIGHT (16 and over handicap): 11:30 - Massey, Sullivan, Kayme. 11:37 - Ainsworth, Bannin, Coleman, S. Luttrell. 11:45 - R. Luttrell, Reed, Nelson, Falk.

SECOND FLIGHT (12-15 handicap): 11:52 - Benefield, Cunningham, Potter, Salcedo. 12:00 - Flournoy, Daugherty, Hulme, Weatherl. 12:07 - Jackson, Day, Walls, Wright, Faulkner.

FIRST FLIGHT (7-11 handicap): 12:15 - Sikes, Milam, Higgins, Coffman. 12:22 - Langford, Schubarth, Eisenbeis, Butler, Hudgins.

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT (0-6 handicap): 12:30 - Johnson, Nolen, Bergeron, Montanez. 12:37 - Hubbard, Delay, Gibb, Scott. 12:45 - Hammit, Childers, Marburger, Pyle. 12:52 - Haywood, Foster, Valdez, Thompson. 1:00 - Castillo, Walker, Miller, Schmidt. 1:07 - Raney, Loyd, Young, Minnix. 1:15 - Workman, Word, Roberts, Wampler. 1:22 - Baker, Spencer, Opperman, Swart.

Landrum exploits PGA short field

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — A certain amount of pre-tournament annoyance was expressed by local officials over the large number of withdrawals, more than two dozen, that produced a short field for the $425,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

It bothered Ralph Landrum not at all.

"The way it works, under the system they have now, if they've got a short field, I'm the last guy they call," Landrum said.

And Landrum, playing in his first tournament as a full-fledged member of the PGA Tour, responded with a 6-under-par 65 that gave him a tie for the first-round lead with Vance Heafner.

The field was short, with 144 starters against the authorized strength of 156.

Cal Peete, who had scored his second victory of the season last week in the Anheuser-Busch Classic, suffered a recurrance of a chronic back condition and had to pull out.

Landrum, who got into the field only at the last minute, gained his tour playing rights by meeting the money-winning requirements.

"I understand it became effective today," he said Thursday.

Landrum, 25, a club pro from Florence, Ky., had used sponsor's exemptions and open qualifying berths to fight his way into six tournaments. And he made those appearances pay off, particularly with an eighth-place finish in the U.S. Open, worth $11,000, and a fifth-place finish last week, worth $13,300. In six appearances, he won more than $30,000, qualifying him for a spot on the tour.

And he took full advantage of it in his first start as a tour member. He did not make a bogey on the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course and capped his effort with a chip-in eagle-3 on his final hole.

"This is new to me and I'm kind of nervous, seeing my name on the leader board and all," he said.

Heafner, who has won once and often been in contention, birdied four of his last five holes to gain his share of the top spot.

Barry Jaeckel was a single stroke off the pace with a no-bogey 66, and was followed by Australian Greg Norman and Mike Holland at 67.

Robinson takes glove to Fame Hall Sunday

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Like so many things that come so naturally, Brooks Robinson has a hard time explaining how he became one of the finest-fielding third basemen in baseball history.

"I always had that sense of timing," he said with a smile. "It's nothing that you can say you're going to go out and learn. It's something you're born with."

On Sunday, Robinson, who won 16 consecutive Gold Gloves and played in 18 All-Star games, will receive the game's highest honor when he, along with Juan Marichal, George Kell and Walter Alston, will be inducted into the Hall of Fame.

"I knew I could field," recalled Robinson, "but the big question when I came to the major leagues was whether I could hit."

IN HIS 23-year career, all with the Baltimore Orioles, he batted .267 with 268 home runs and 1,357 runs batted in. He was the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1964 and was the MVP of the 1970 World Series as the Orioles crushed the Cincinnati Reds.

During the series, Robinson turned in a slew of sensational fielding plays and hit .429.

"You know, a lot of people forget that I made an error on the first ball I handled in that series," he said. "But at no time in my career did I ever have five straight games like that."

Robinson, now 46 and a television announcer with the Orioles, became the 14th player to ever be elected on the first ballot — not including the original five elected in 1936 — when he received 344 of 374 votes cast in the Baseball Writers Association of America election in January.

Not coincidentally, Baltimore will play the St. Louis Cardinals on Monday in the Hall of Fame game. Orioles officials, anticipating Robinson's election in 1983, had asked several years ago to be scheduled for the annual exhibition game.

Also voted into Cooperstown in January was Marichal, renowned for his high-kicking style and blazing fastball.

Marichal compiled a 243-142 record with a 2.89 earned run average in his 16-year career, all but the last two years with the San Francisco Giants. He pitched a no-hitter against Houston in 1963, and won more than 20 games in six seasons.

Marichal, 44, and director of Latin American scouting for the Oakland A's, missed election in his first two tries, and some voters publicly said a 1965 incident in which he hit Los Angeles Dodgers catcher John Roseboro over the head with a bat during a game had something to do with their ballots.

KELL, A third baseman, hit .306 in a 15-year career, primarily with the Detroit Tigers. He was selected to the Hall by the Committee on Veterans in March during his first year of eligibility of the "repechage" — or second chance procedure.

Kell, 60, is now a Tigers television announcer and also runs an automobile dealership in his hometown of Swifton, Ark.

Oiler favors drug ruling

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Professional athletes convicted of drug violations offer a highly visible example of what can become of drug users, Houston Oiler safety Mike Reinfeldt says.

"If we get caught, it's something that everybody can see," Reinfeldt said. "Busting one of the NFL players is an example to people that read the paper everyday. Maybe that can help some other people stay out of trouble.

"Maybe that's the way the DAs (district attorneys) or the authorities are looking at it. If that's the case, that's probably not a bad way to do it. They can spend less money, do less work and still make the same example to the public."

Three of Reinfeldt's teammates in the Oilers' starting defensive secondary were arrested during the off-season and charged with drug and alcohol violations.

FORMER OILER cornerback Greg Stemrick and three other players were suspended through the fourth game of the regular season by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle for their connection with drugs.

"It's a chance for certain authorities to make examples and we do make good examples," Reinfeldt said. "Drugs are wrong. We shouldn't be doing them and the public shouldn't be doing them."

Oiler Coach Ed Biles applauded the suspensions.

"They should be appreciative that the commissioner showed a degree of leniency in their cases," Biles said. "That gives them an opportunity at some time in the future to continue their professions. I think the commissioner was extremely fair with these people."

Carr may play games in Tulsa

COTTON VALLEY, La. (AP) — If the Seattle Seahawks want to play games, wide receiver Roger Carr said he may do it in a Tulsa uniform.

Carr, the only unsigned member of the Seahawks, said Thursday the National Football League team prematurely announced his retirement — and he knows why.

Mike McCormack, Seattle's president and general manager, disclosed Carr's retirement on Wednesday, at the same time he was announcing the signing of former All-Pro tight end Charlie Young and three others.

"That wraps up all but one (of the Seahawks' unsigned players) and that young man is retired," McCormack said in Cheney, Wash.

He said he had not talked with Carr in a week and, when he did, the nine-year NFL veteran asked to be traded.

Wrong on both counts, said Carr, contacted in his hometown here.

"As far as retiring, no," Carr said. "I haven't officially done anything. He's just using several little ploys, and this is one of them. Just contract hassling a little bit, is all it is.

"I don't know what's going to happen. We haven't gotten anything settled. This is just another little deal — one of the ways they try to put pressure on you.

"They've got to put me on their roster, release me or trade me," Carr said. "I have not retired. I'm just going to sit back and, hopefully, things will work out. Like most athletes, they're not going to retire until they have to quit."

Carr said his holdout also was a ploy — one he has used before — to get more money.

Women's teams seek state title

The 1983 Women's State Class A Softball Tournament will be played Saturday and Sunday at Hogan Park with last year runnerup, the Diamondbacks of San Marcos and the third place team, Alcorn Ruffnecks of Victoria, back to take a shot at the title.

Twenty-five teams from 18 cities across the state are entered with teams from Lubbock, Wichita Falls, Liberty, New Braunfels, McKinney, Abilene, El Paso, San Marcos, Amarillo, Crane, Andrews, San Angelo, Victoria, Kountze, Baytown, Odessa and Midland.

Local teams include the Zodiac Misfits and Western Transmission from Midland as well as Superior Engine, Sandies and Stroh Light from Odessa.

Games will run from 8 a.m. until 11 p.m. Saturday. Sunday's action will resume at 8 a.m., with the championship game set for 1 p.m.

A Beaumont team won last year's title, but that team moves up in classification this year.

All of the team managers will meet at 7 p.m. today at the Holidome.

Midland will also host the Men's Open State Softball Tournament, Aug. 13-14, at Hogan Park.

Volleyballers to report

All girls who are going to play volleyball at Midland Lee next year need to report Monday, Aug. 8, at 8 a.m. at the Lee gym. All physicals and UIL forms must be completed and brought to the first workout.

C-City offers tournament

Colorado City will host a Class B and under Slow Pitch softball tournament, Aug. 5-7, with an entry fee of $90 per team.

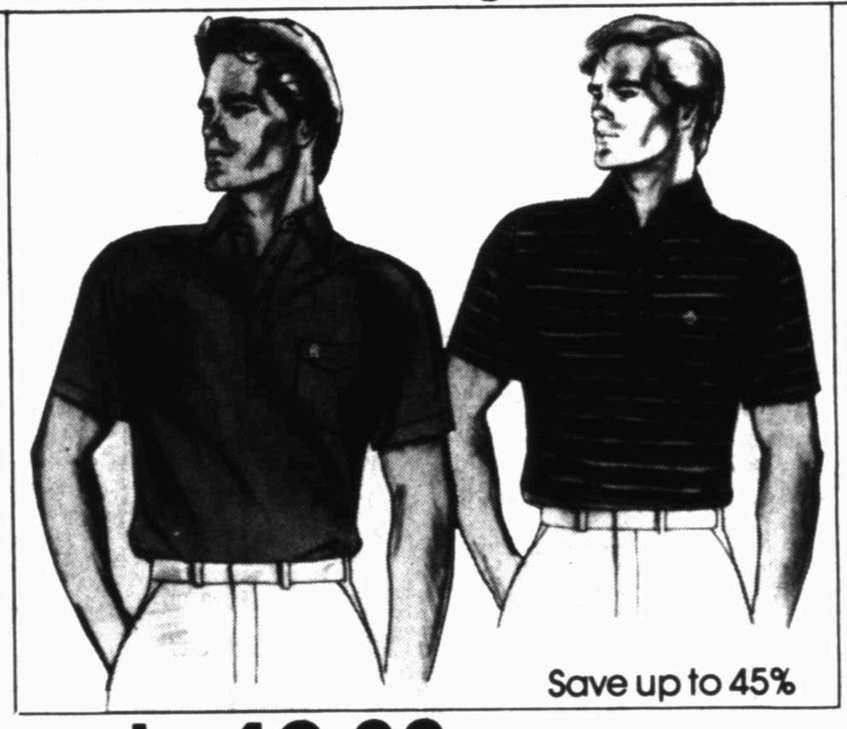

Trophies will be given to top three teams and top two individuals and there will be a 10-player All-Tournament team. Only two homeruns per game will be allowed. For further information contact Tanis Moreno at 728-5009.

Hagen, Starnes gain title

Cindy Hagen and Barbara Starnes recently won the Midland Tennis Club's Women's Doubles club championship by defeating Jill Bramlett and Kathy Carlson in the finals, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Cindy Williams and Mary Jane Beldon won the A Division with a 7-5, 3-6, 6-4 win over Janie Pollard and Blythe Thomas.

Eskimos crush Ottawa

OTTAWA (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon threw for three touchdowns and running back Jim Germany scored twice as the Edmonton Eskimos crushed the Ottawa Rough Riders 44-4 in a Canadian Football League game Thursday night.

Moon, the former University of Washington star, connected with wide receiver Waddell Smith of Kansas on a 16-yard scoring toss to cap Edmonton's first possession of the game.

Pittsburgh starts pointing fingers

By The Associated Press

Even when the Pittsburgh Pirates were losing, Manager Chuck Tanner said, "no one was pointing any fingers at each other." Now that they're winning, he's pointing at everyone — sharing the credit.

"We're blending our young players with our old ones," Tanner said Thursday night after the Pirates beat the New York Mets 6-2 to remain first in the National League East, one-half game ahead of the streaking St. Louis Cardinals.

"Our attitude has been great all season," Tanner said. "No one is overconfident on this team, but we do have a very good attitude. They said we weren't that good. They're always saying we aren't that good. When we won the pennant and World Series (in 1979), they said we weren't that good."

The Pirates, striking for five runs — two on Mike Easler's double — in the first two innings, won for the the 18th time in 23 games since the All-Star break (a real break for the Bucs) while the Cardinals stretched their winning streak to six games by sweeping a twi-night doubleheader in Montreal, 3-2 in 10 innings and 10-1.

In the only other NL game, Philadelphia edged Houston 6-5. In the only American League game, Detroit defeated Seattle 6-1.

Tanner said he rested the Pirates during the All-Star break, wouldn't let anyone come to the ballpark. "I told my players to go home and go fishing, just forget about baseball," he said. "Of course, I've had times when that didn't work but it seems to be working this year."

Cardinals 3-10, Expos 2-1

St. Louis won the first game when Tommy Herr drew a two-out, bases-loaded walk in the top of the 10th from Jeff Reardon, then made it a sweep as Bob Forsch scattered eight Montreal hits while Ozzie Smith and Mike Ramsey drove in three runs apiece.

The Expos lost both Steve Rogers and Woodie Fryman in the 10th inning of the opener. Rogers got the first out before experiencing a cramp in the palm of his right hand. Fryman got the second out but with a full count against pinch-hitter Floyd Rayford he reinjured the ligaments in his left elbow.

Reardon then gave ball four to Rayford, yielded an infield single to Ozzie Smith and walked Lonnie Smith and Herr to force in the deciding run.

In the second game, Ozzie Smith had two doubles and a single and Ramsey a three-run triple in St. Louis' 17-hit attack. The Cards jumped on Dan Schatzeder for five runs in the first two innings.

Phillies 6, Astros 5

Mike Schmidt followed Joe Morgan's run-scoring triple in the top of the eighth inning with his 23rd homer of the season, tops in the NL and tied for the major-league lead, to catapult the Phillies to victory.

"I can just feel things starting to come together," Manager Paul Owens said after Philadelphia won its third in a row.

Schmidt wasn't so certain. "I can't say this will get us started," he mused. "All it means was we won three games in a row. Now we have to go out and try to win four in a row and then five in a row."

Steve Carlton fanned nine Astros to put his career-record strikeout mark at 3,597, six ahead of Houston's Nolan Ryan. But Lefty wasn't around at the end, chased during a three-run seventh inning.

Tigers 6, Mariners 1

In Detroit, doubles by Chet Lemon and Tom Brookens triggered the Tigers' four-run second inning, but the surprise play was Alan Trammell's suicide squeeze — on Manager Sparky Anderson's orders — that brought Brookens home with the second run of the inning.

"When I went up there, he told me to be looking for the bunt sign," Trammell said of Anderson. "When the count got to 3-and-2, though, it was the only thing I wasn't looking for...It was a slider, down. But you are taught not to be cute. I just made sure I got it down somewhere and Brookie got a good jump."

Baseball Roundup

Ruling on Brett bat brings mixed reaction

By The Associated Press

From all over the baseball world — and from outside the sports universe — came reaction to American League President Lee MacPhail's decision to overrule his umpires.

The comments were triggered by MacPhail's ruling Thursday to reinstate George Brett's two-run homer, which had been nullified by the umpires in Kansas City's game Sunday against the Yankees because Brett's bat had excessive pine tar.

New York had won the game 4-3 but now trails 5-4. The game will be finished if it has any bearing on the division races.

"I was delighted," said Royals General Manager John Scheurholz. "This was not a matter of a league president overrruling an umpire's decision. It was more in the way of a clarification."

Added Kansas City Manager Dick Howser, "This will not have any effect at all on the way players get along with umpires."

But two Yankees weren't so sure.

"The American League expects the umpires to interpret the rules," said Yankee outfielder Lou Piniella, "and when they do, it's proper that they be backed up. Mr. MacPhail is now saying that pine tar can be used from the nob all the way up the barrel and the umpires can't do anything about it."

"What makes me feel funny is that the integrity of the umpires is being questioned," said catcher Rick Cerone. "They showed me a lot of character that day and if I was an umpire, I know I'd be making some pretty strong statements right now."

Richie Phillips, attorney for the umpires' union, said, "My reaction to is is that Lee MacPhail had agreed with the interpretation of the rules by the umpires. However, he decided to bring equity to the situation and decided the league standings in making his decision.

"An umpire's job is to enforce the rules. They did so and did so courageously. MacPhail was courageous in admitting it was not the fault of the umpires, but rather his own fault."

Gabe Paul, president of the Cleveland Indians, wondered about the rule itself, which states that no foreign substance is allowed to be added to the barrel of the bat to aid in making a batted ball travel.

"I don't think the rule is a very good rule," said Paul, "because of the vagueness of the rule."

Atlanta General Manager John Mullen agreed with MacPhail's decision.

"I kind of thought that Lee MacPhail would rule that way," said Mullen. "I think the intent of an illegal bat rule from the standpoint of a player being called out was more for a bat that would propel the ball farther.

"The pine tar can't make a ball go farther. That's why I think it's a good ruling."

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner was struck by what he felt was the absurdity of MacPhail's ruling.

"If you are asking for one word to describe the rationale behind that decision, in my mind the word would be ridiculous," said Steinbrenner. "But I feel for Lee because he is a fine and decent man and I am a supporter of his."

Bill Bradley joins Gunslingers of San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Former NFL All-Pro Bill Bradley plans to join San Antonio Gunslingers of the United States Football League franchise to evaluate players and possibly do some coaching.

Bradley, who retired from the National Football League in 1978, will have the title of special assistant, according to executive vice president Gil Steinke.

Bradley has been a co-partner in Sports Management Inc., a Philadelphia company that represents professional athletes, since finishing his football career with the St. Louis Cardinals.

He played college ball at the University of Texas, starting as quarterback in 1966 and 1967 and moving to wide receiver and defensive back in 1968.

Bradley has lived in his native Palestine, Texas, the past five years.

Raiders taking ho-Humm look

NFL Camps

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Raiders' newest quarterback has had a ho-Humm career in the National Football League. In eight pro seasons he was a perennial backup to, among others, Ken Stabler, Joe Ferguson and Bert Jones.

Hardly the best way to gain exposure.

The odds are even worse this time around for David Humm. He is one of seven — count 'em, seven — quarterbacks wearing black and silver and red jerseys in Santa Rosa, Calif., where the Super Bowl XV champs are working to attone for last year's loss to the New York Jets in the AFC playoffs.

"They didn't promise me anything, just that they'd take a look," said Humm, who is in his second tour of duty with the Raiders after being dropped by the woeful Baltimore Colts after last season.

But as Humm looked around, he saw Jim Plunkett and Marc Wilson, who are pretty much expected to retain the 1-2 ratings they had for the past two seasons. Also on hand is seven-year veteran Matt Robinson, who saw action with New York, Denver and Buffalo of the AFC before the Raiders picked him up during the offseason.

"There's a lot of guys waiting to see," Humm said, referring to an anticipated decision by NFL owners on whether or not to expand rosters from 45 to 49 players. That decision will dictate whether there will be third-string quarterbacks throughout the league.

Injuries are dictating some shuffling around the NFL. The Chargers lost Chuck Loewen for the season with a ruptured dick in his back, leaving San Diego with a huge gap in the offensive line. Veteran Russ Washington has remained unsigned, reserve Andrew Gissinger is nursing an injury suffered in a mini-camp and Bob Rush was traded during the offseason.

The Washington Redskins' injury list grew with the addition of offensive lineman Mark May, who will miss at least three weeks with a torn tricep in his right arm. Also ailing are safety Greg Williams, tackle Todd Hallstrom, tight end Rick Walker and defensive end Mat Mendenhall.

If that isn't enough to unsettle the defending Super Bowl champions, they also are having problems tightening their grip on defensive end Dexter Manley, who not only is threatening to play out his option this year, but emphasized his dismay at the negotiations by firing his agent, Jim Kiles. Manley wants a two-year contract while the Redskins are offering a long-term deal.

The Miami Dolphins had better luck with defensive tackle Bob Baumhower, who signed a long-term contract Thursday and aborted his threat to jump to the United States Football League.

Stars missing for Fame tilt

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Five more immortals will step into the Pro Football Hall of Fame shortly before the Pittsburgh Steelers and New Orleans Saints meet in the season's opening exhibition.

Sid Gillman, only the fourth modern-era coach to be enshrined, will join former players Sonny Jurgensen, Bobby Bell, Paul Warfield and Bobby Mitchell in the Hall of Fame Saturday, pushing its 21-year membership to 119.

In the opening exhibition, Terry Bradshaw won't play at all and Kenny Stabler will make only a cameo appearance when the Steelers and Saints square off at 1 p.m. CDT (ABC-TV) before a Fawcett Stadium sellout of more than 23,000.

Bradshaw is expected to miss a minimum of two exhibitions in recovering from right elbow surgery in March. In his place, Steelers' Coach Chuck Noll will open with seldom-used veteran Cliff Stoudt. Mark Malone also will see action at quarterback for Pittsburgh.

Bum Phillips, the Saints' coach, indicates he will start Stabler and use him on a limited basis before turning the quarterbacking over to Dave Wilson and Guido Merkins.

Both teams are expected to be title challengers in their divisions after their 1982 finishes.

THE STEELERS, 6-3 and second to the Cincinnati Bengals in the AFC Central, made the National Football League playoffs for the first time since 1979, but lost to the San Diego Chargers 31-28.

New Orleans, rebuilding under Phillips, was only 4-5, but still finished in a second-place tie in the NFC West behind the Atlanta Falcons.

This will mark Pittsburgh's third appearance in the Hall of Fame exhibition, but first since 1964, when the Steelers lost to the Baltimore Colts. The previous year they beat the Cleveland Browns. New Orleans' lone previous appearance in Canton resulted in a loss to the Minnesota Vikings in 1970.

Gillman, 71, joins Weeb Ewbank, Paul Brown and the late Vince Lombardi as the only modern-day coaches to be elected to the shrine.

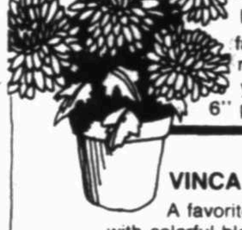

Gillman, now general manager of the new Tulsa franchise in the U.S. Football League, will be presented by his long-time coaching associate, Joe Madro.

BOWLING BEAT

Randy Higgins is back on top

By RANDY ISENBERG

Randy Higgins once again moved to the top among bowlers in Midland on the strength of a 254 game and 714 series while bowling in the BOWL Hospital League. Debbie Delk paced the women with a 288 game and 609 series.

Also bowling well during the past weeks were Scott Pope with a 670 series and Johnny Henderson who rolled 100 pins over his average with a 289 game while bowling in the Civic Commercial League. Henderson is sporting a 179 average this summer.

While many bowlers are really improving their games, Higgins, Gilbert Rodriguez, and Mario Jimenez have really shown the improvement over the past 12 months.

Shreveport stays close to Travs

By The Associated Press

Mark Schuster hit two homers as Shreveport beat El Paso and stayed within a half game of the lead in the Texas League's East Division.

Arkansas defeated Midland 7-3 to hold on to first place in the East.

In other games Thursday night, Tulsa swept a doubleheader from San Antonio 9-6 and 3-0, while Beaumont clipped Jackson 7-6.

Schuster hit a solo homer in the fourth and added a two-run shot in the sixth, bringing his league-leading total to 27.

Bryan Snyder hit a two-run homer for the Captains in the eighth.

Bogus Marv keeps up act

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — "My name is Marv Xavier Fleming," said Arthur Lee Trotter at a news conference in the Natchitoches police station where he wore handcuffs, leg chains and jail clothes.

Why does the FBI say he is Arthur Lee Trotter, 49, according to fingerprints and files? The prisoner shrugged and said Arthur Lee Trotter is an uncle, now dead, who lived in South Bend, Ind.

He said his step-parents told him when he was 14 that he was Marv Fleming, and had told him earlier that he was Bill Russell. Who was he to argue with them?

Trotter, a muscular 6-foot-4, never played football under any name.

The real Marv Fleming, a former football player who lives near Los Angeles, said Trotter has been misusing his name since 1974.

Police said Trotter got some people to believe that he was Russell — a towering pro basketball star — and excused his lack of height by saying that he had 10 inches of bone removed from his legs so he would be short enough to fit into his fancy car and hotel beds.

Asked about those missing 10 inches Thursday, the prisoner insisted he underwent surgery in Baltimore and "some part was taken out of my leg. Maybe I had cancer."

Flanked by Police Chief Burl Lee and Detective Larry Vaughn, Trotter lounged at ease before reporters and cameramen.

Some questions he answered, some he slid around.

Trotter was picked up in Natchitoches last week on a charge of attempted felony theft by fraud.

At the time of his arrest, Trotter was enjoying himself as Bill Russell, Vaughn said. But a woman who didn't believe he had 10 inches of bone removed from his legs called police and said there was something funny going on.

USC lowers standards

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The University of South Carolina may admit football players barely able to read or write despite cancelling a controversial remedial program for freshman athletes who fall below USC's academic standards, The State newspaper said today.

The State quoted unnamed sources familiar with the situation as saying the school is considering admitting up to seven freshman football players with academic qualifications similar to players in the program last year.

Education professor Lorin Anderson, who developed the remedial program, confirmed Thursday that it will not be offered this year.

Anderson also said he understood "there will be no substantial reductions in the presidential admissions," referring to the program allowing school President James B. Holderman to bypass normal admissions standards when he believes the students can make unusual contributions to the school.

However, university Admissions Director John Bolin said Thursday that no decision has been made about admitting athletes through the presidential program this fall.

The State reported in April that the presidential program was used to admit at least 16 athletes during the 1981-82 and 1982-83 academic years with college entrance examination scores under 600, well below the minimum for regular admissions. The top score on the Scholastic Aptitude test is 1600.

The newspaper also reported that five of the 16 scored 200, the equivalent of zero, on the verbal portion of the SAT. Twelve others scored below 250 on the SAT verbal, which tests reading, writing and vocabulary skills.

The story was based on documents provided by unnamed university sources.

A related article described a program established by the USC athletic department and the education college offering two semesters of intensive remedial instruction to the athletes with the worst problems.

The program sparked controversy among South Carolina faculty, primarily because the course was offered for credit and was listed in school catalogs as "independent study in education psychology."

Lineup complete for Senior tourney

Midland Elcor is among six teams which will be shooting for the 1983 Texas Teenage Baseball State Seniors title at Cubs Stadium Tuesday through Thursday.

Other teams will come from Waco, Tyler, North Mesquite, Brownwood and Snyder. Snyder recently won the Class 4A state high school baseball title and the team features some of those players.

The Midland Elcor team features many of the 5A playoff representatives from Midland Lee and the team also has some Midland High players on it.

Team pairings will not be made until Monday night when all the team managers are expected to arrive in Midland.

The tournament gets off to an early start Tuesday with a 10 a.m. opener, but the pairings of that opener won't be known until Monday night. A game will follow at 12:30 p.m. and first round action ends at 5:30 p.m. A loser's bracket game will be held at 8 p.m.

Wednesday's schedule is the same as Tuesday with games at 10 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 5:30 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Thursday's action will have a 10 a.m. contest prior to the possible championship game at 5 p.m. An 8 p.m. contest will be played if necessary.

U.S. synfuels industry demoralized, jeopardized

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The nation's synthetic fuels industry, started with great fanfare and billions of tax dollars two years ago, today is demoralized. Its future is uncertain and jeopardized by stable oil prices, high interest rates, soaring construction costs and an administration and Congress prepared to leave energy development almost entirely to the free market.

The fate of the Synthetic Fuels Corp. (SFC) may be decided when the Senate Oversight of Government Mangement Subcommittee holds hearings Friday (July 29) to review the agency's management. The federal corporation was created in 1979 to develop a commercial synthetic fuels industry.

The corporation potentially may commit $88 billion in financial assistance to synfuels projects.

Today, only two major plants are under construction, each initiated with government assistance before the SFC was formed — Union Oil Company's oil shale venture in Colorado and the Great Plains Coal gasification project in North Dakota.

The SFC has authority to draw immediately on the U.S. Treasury for nearly $15 billion to provide financial assistance to private companies involved in synthetic fuels development but may not call for the rest of the money until 1986. With budgets getting tighter by the day, legislators on Capitol Hill eyeing those billions may want to sink the corporation.

"In view of the tax dollars at stake, Congress must ensure that the business of the corporation is conducted as efficiently, economically, and effectively as possible," Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, chairman of the panel, said.

The 98th Congress has before it several bills to abolish the SFC, including a just-introduced measure by Reps. Vin Weber, R-Minn., and Howard Wolpe, D-Mich.

Introducing his bill, Weber called the agency "a wasteful government entity promoting, with $15 billion in tax dollars, a technology that is not, and will not soon be, commercially viable."

Created in 1979, the agency has already spent $3 billion in loan guarantees and plans to spend an additional $14 billion before the end of the next fiscal year.

Despite these expenditures, assert the congressmen, the three projects in which the SFC has been most involved have a dismal track record.

In a joint statement, the congressmen said that the Colony Oil Shale project, in which the agency has sunk $1.2 billion, was closed down by Exxon when construction studies proved the venture was not economically viable.

They said that the Great Plains project recently reported losses of nearly $750 million for its 10 years of operation, and project officials have stated that for the venture to break even, natural gas prices will have to more than double. If they don't, losses could total $1.7 billion.

The Union Oil Shale project will require federal price supports of up to $400 million from now to 1989, the congressmen said, while the price of oil on the world market remains at depressed levels.

Weber cited other reasons to terminate SFC, including environmental concerns, the agency's exemption from congressional review, and personnel practices and benefit policies more generous than those of other federal agencies.

Organizations seeking termination of the SFC include the National Taxpayer Union, the National Federation of Independent Business, the Environmental Policy Center, the National Audubon Society, Environmental Action, Environmental Defense Fund, the Sierra Club, the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Wilderness Society.

Government Spending

Government will spend $5,587 per each U.S. resident — $15,345 per household — during fiscal 1983, a total outlay of $1.3 trillion by federal, state and local government, some $103 billion higher than last year, according to Tax Foundation analysts.

The federal government will account for nearly two-thirds of the spending, $864.8 billion, with the remaining governmental units raising the rest — an estimated $435.5 billion.

The analysts say that in the last seven years alone, total government spending has more than doubled. During the same period, federal spending has increased by 122 percent, and state and local spending, by 85 percent.

Energy news

— The nation's nuclear electric utilities have signed contracts by which the department pledged to provide for the eventual disposal of the utilities' nuclear waste, although a means of safe disposal has not yet been developed. The utilities would pay the full program costs. Seventy contracts were signed with 56 organizations, including 46 nuclear utilities.

— The Energy Department intends to open contract talks this month with seven research laboratories which are proposing ways to improve production of synthetic liquid fuels from coal.

— The agency has continued its research program despite creation of the SFC and has worked with private organizations to determine if there are any ideas now at the laboratory stage which might boost the prospects for these fuels in the future.

Business on Capitol Hill

Among a variety of bills of interest to business and industry on Capitol Hill are measures that would:

— Increase competition in government contracting by imposing new restrictions on the use of non-competitive contracts. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Wiliam Cohen, R-Me., was reported out for floor action by the Senate Armed Service and the Governmental Affairs Committees. The measure is designed to curb the government's routine procedure of awarding contracts non-competitively for items that could easily be purchased on the open market.

— Ensure that federal lands will not be sold until the areas are properly inventoried and the public allowed to comment. The administration is planning to sell so-called "surplus" lands to help reduce the federal deficit.

— Expand the range of financial services which may be offered by bank and thrift holding companies, a measure sponsored by Sen. Jake Garn, R- Utah. The bill would authorize the underwriting of municipal revenue bonds, sponsoring and managing of mutual funds, underwriting and selling of insurance and the right to develop, invest in, and sell real estate.

— Temporarily halt the mixing of banking and other financial services which has returned with increasing frequency in the past few years. The moratorium would run to Dec. 31, 1983 and prohibit non-depository organizations from acquiring other types of banks or savings and loans. The bill is sponsored by Senator Garn.

— Improve the ability of small businesses to compete for government contracts by requiring agencies to advertise more contracts in the Commerce Business Daily, a bill sponsored by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.

AROUND AND ABOUT

If all refrigerators in the U.S. were as efficient as the most efficient model, 12 large coal or nuclear power plants could be eliminated, according to the American Council for an Energy-Efficient Economy . . . President Reagan has signed a bill authored by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., to give the Small Business Administration additional authority to select federal contracts for minority-owned small firms . . . The Nuclear Energy Commission is tightening its regulations governing staffing at licensed nuclear power plants, including a requirement that a shift supervisor with a senior operator's license be at the facility at all times when there is fuel in any reactor unit . . . The women business owners conferences announced by President Reagan are designed to offer present and potential women business owners advice and counseling on a wide range of practical subjects.

AOSC members serious

Business-Energy Writer

The American Oilwell Servicing Contractors meeting in San Francisco recently was extra-serious, and not as much fun as it had been before said Fred George, Odessa, out-going president of the organization.

"There was a different atmosphere, because people are so concerned about the welfare of this industry," George said of the meeting.

The organization elected a 1983-84 national president at the meeting, James S. LeVoy, who is president of WellTech Inc., Houston. LeVoy had been with Conoco in several positions before joining the well servicing industry. He has served on the boards directing operations at AOSC, WellTech, Independent Petroleum Association of America, and Seiscom Delta Inc.

In San Francisco, six industry experts spoke to contractors at their Workover/Well Servicing Market Seminar, offering information and personal insights into that market.

"Inflationary psychology surrounded the oil industry and reduced cash flow. A survival mode has been adopted," in the industry with oil and gas reserves remaining flat, said J.K. Jamieson, chairman of Crutcher Resources Corp. and former chairman of Exxon Co. USA. "Slight improvement can be expected over the next 12 months, with well servicing activity linked directly to the price of oil and gas," he said.

Maintaining production, rather than completing new wells, will dominate revenues for well servicing firms, Jamieson said. There will be "slow growth, with rig supply and demand coming into balance."

Kye Trout Jr., President of IPAA, said "If you are not involved, get involved" in the politics of oil and gas. He called President Reagan's $859 billion budget a 'great travesty' in which Washington creates more government jobs.

On the U.S. economy, Dr. Vincent Malanga of LaSalle Economics said, "Fears of re-inflation (after recovery) will prevent interest rates from falling to levels that would accelerate economic activity." He thus predicted that energy demand will stay restrained and a drilling upturn will be delayed until 1985.

With completion work down, demand will rise for workovers and servicing — but Malanga said the current oversupply of rigs must be worked off before rates charged and utilization percentages will rise.

Editor of Petroleum Engineer International, Bruce Bleakley, said his survey showed $3.6 billion will be spent on well servicing and workovers by both major oil companies and independent operators. "Many operators are repairing and working over old wells instead of drilling new ones," he said.

Bleakley told the contractors that gas well work is all but dead (because decontrol talk is causing confusion). He noted that enhanced recovery operations demand more servicing because of the corrosive environment they cause downhole. He predicted 1984 will be a better year for AOSC members.

The "forecast is based on uncertainties," said AOSC business analysis chairman Bill Hubbell. "To survive, we as an industry must continue tight cost control programs and explain to our customers just how bad the state of the industry is — and hope they will help us improve our profitability."

The vice president for foreign operations at Standard Oil of California, E.R. Lowry, said he wanted to dismiss three myths about OPEC. The price of OPEC crude doesn't necessarily increase when supplies are tight, he said. OPEC is in serious disarray, he said, with members no longer willing to cooperate. In terms of global economic influence, Lowry said OPEC is dead.

Lowry said there is a 50 percent chance oil prices will stabilize at $29 per barrel, and called efficient well servicing "an excellent potential investment."

Producer groups behind gas bill

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Two industry associations associated with independent natural gas producers are making a strong effort to convince Congress to adopt a bill deregulating natural gas that was approved by the Senate Energy Committee.

Lloyd Unsell, vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, and Nick Bush, president of the Natural Gas Supply Association, are leading the campaign to get the bill through Congress. They scheduled a press conference in Washington today.

Unsell believes the bill should be passed, despite some misgivings. He said the bill is not ideal, but represents an improvement over present regulations and statutes. He also thinks it can be the start toward real deregulation. He is "very hopeful" now that Congress will approve it.

Bush shares Unsell's opinion and outlook.

Both of their organizations count a large number of Texans among their members.

At present the bill is not expected to be voted on in the Senate until September. The House Energy and Commerce subcommittee is struggling to develop a compromise on the thorny issue of ending price controls on so-called "old gas," according to Rep. Ralph Hall (D—Rockwall).

Security professionals organize, elect officers

Business-Energy Writer

The American Society for Industrial Security, established in 1950, is now represented in Midland/Odessa, and held its first meeting recently to elect its new officers.

The officers are: chairperson, Jim Mills, Trobaco Ind.; vice-chairman, Al Mitchell, Tom Brown Inc.; secretary, Don Aldridge, Resources Unlimited; treasurer, Freddie Gilbert, El Paso Products Co.

They scheduled their next meeting for August 17, noon, the Executel at the airport. Thirty people attended the organizational meeting.

The local ASIS is planning several security workshops for members and guests during the remainder of 1983 and the first part of '84.

Organizers say ASIS is a society fostering professionalism in a field that is routinely "put aside — the first thing to be taken out of, and the last thing to be added into, a company's budget."

Member Jim Mills, of Trobaco Industries Inc., El Paso, has been organizing ASIS in this area after moving to Midland early this year.

Mills' company is setting up new electronic parking control at Midland Regional Airport and video security and alarms at First City National Bank's drive-in facilities.

Mills said the ASIS organization offers something more important than a forum for members to discuss security.

The ASIS certification program for security professionals is open to anyone in the business, not just ASIS members. Strict criteria on education and experience must be met for certification, and an examination has to be passed to the satisfaction of the accrediting board.

Periodic re-certification, Mills said, makes sure security people keep meeting the standards set up for certification as a protection professional.

In talking about the security field, Mills said the work now involves electronic surveillance, controlled access by computer, guards, video cameras, and other methods.

He mentioned time-theft as a large factor in corporate budgets. If employees use a coded credit-card size "electronic key" when they report to work, it helps management monitor workers and the time they put in.

"No one knows when some workers take three hours for lunch or come in late," he said. Of employees, he said 80 percent could be swayed either way, ten percent are totally honest, and another ten percent are likely to steal from the company.

One of Mills' assertions is that internal and external theft has been a factor in oil-industry troubles.

"Every employee is a link in a complete security system," Mills said. "Security awareness starts with employees" who must feel the duty to report security violations or security problems on-the-job.

Panhandle earns less

HOUSTON (SWN) — Panhandle Eastern Corporation reported a decline of net income for the second quarter and first half of 1983.

In the second quarter, consolidated net income was $27 million, equal to 64 cents per share of common stock, as compared with $63 million and $1.53 per share for the same period of 1982.

For the first half of the year, net income amounted to $88.5 million, or $2.13 per share, as compared with $136 million, or $3.33 per share in the first half of last year.

OIL FACTS

On the Martha Goff farm, Harrison County, West Virginia, the Hope Natural Gas Company's well No. 4190 was drilled to 7,386 and became the "world's deepest well" record to the U.S. Previously, the deepest well drilled had been drilled at Czuehon, Upper Silesia, Germany, total depth 7,345 feet.

Investment advisor uses logic to outperform peers

Hearst Feature Service

BRENTWOOD, Calif. — Al Frank is a winner these days, perched up there in the cathird seat. The investment adviser and market-letter writer has outperformed all his peers, using a strategy rare for stock pickers: old-fashioned logic.

"I used to teach the philosophy of education, and in college I studied logic," he says. "All that stuff helps in the market. It cuts through a lot of jargon and baloney."

Such a "cutting through" resulted in a 78.2 percent gain for Frank's picks in his Prudent Speculator newsletter this year, tops in the land, according to newsletter rater Mark Hulbert of Washington. Frank also placed first for June, up 8.7 percent.

Of course, rating investment portfolios can be tricky business, and many a professional has challenged Hulbert's methods — especially the losers. But Frank himself challenges Hulbert only on understatement. "Actually, I'm up 119 percent this year," he says. "But if Hulbert calls it 78 percent, that's all right."

The well-named Frank is quick to note that much of his gain was due to the leverage of margin. He calls the current market "nerve-wracking" and warns that many of his winners, such as Stop & Shop, have gone up too much to merit current recommendation. Thus, for many stocks, the party may be over for awhile.

How about the market as a whole? Is the correction everyone says is coming about to hit? Frank admits he really does not know. "With that as my caveat, I'll say I expect the bull market to advance on average up to the election next year," he says. "Reagan went to the White House after getting only 23 percent of those who could vote. So more than half the people after a presidential election are disappointed."

The idea here is that presidential cycles create high hopes that usually result in disappointments. Yet, Frank says "the market will be higher later this year and higher next year."

That statement certainly does not rule out a near-term correction. And the very bull market itself gives cause for concern; stocks are high by recent historic standards. Other factors that could be immediately negative are that the market began its big rise about a year ago and some winners will be cashing in to take advantage of long-term capital gains tax rules.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 252 taxable funds)		37	8.44	8.30

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 252 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased $534 million to $162.0 billion for the week ending July 27, 1983.

The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.44% from 8.36%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.30% from 8.22%.

The funds' average maturity figure lengthened to 37 days, after staying at 35 days for three weeks.

William E. Donoghue says, "The gap between the average money fund yield and the average rate paid on bank and thrift money market deposit accounts closed today. Donoghue's MONEY FUND AVERAGE hit 8.44%, as did the average MMDA rate reported by the Bank Rate Monitor.

"Average maturities on money fund portfolios lengthened two days as managers locked into current yields. The rise to 37 days from 35 days indicates managers believe that interest rates may be stabilizing."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, g - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability. MMH operating 'in the black'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Despite coming out of the red for the first time in several years, Midland Memorial Hospital trustees were thrown into darkness as they peered at the future of the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center.

With a $300,000 profit after June's operational expenses, Finance Committee Chairman Tom Bruner said: "This is much more favorable than what we've operated in during the last few years. We operated in the red."

"It's definitely been three years since we've operated in the black," said MMH Business Manager K. Dale Miller.

But trustees meeting during a regular board meeting were told the future of the cancer center looks gloomy in the light of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA).

In other action, trustees and directors approved a motion allowing ancillary charges — all patient expenses except room rates — to be adjusted without approval of either board unless the total adjustment exceeds 1 percent. Financial statistics on hospital operations for the month of June also were approved and trustees accepted the resignation of a trustee.

According to Margaret Purvis, chairperson of the trustees' Allison Cancer Center Committee, the new tax law known as TEFRA has chased local medical oncologists into opening an additional — but private — office.

MMH IS expected to lose $1.2 million in Medicare reimbursements during the next two years.

To combat the $500,000 loss expected this year, the hospital will increase productivity, reduce payroll, shorten the patients' length of stay, scrutinize new services and programs and provide more services on an out-patient basis, MMH President Ray Branson said earlier this year.

"Medicare has made it virtually impossible for a medical oncologist to make a living practicing in an outpatient clinic in a hospital," Ms. Purvis told trustees. "They only can be reimbursed 40 percent of what a family practitioner would charge in his office."

Because of TEFRA, local medical oncologists, or physicians who treat cancer patients with chemotherapy, have opted to open another office outside of the cancer center. Under construction at Ohio Avenue and N Street, the office is expected to open in November.

While the medical oncology team said it will continue to treat patients at the cancer center, the office will be used primarily for outpatient treatments.

"The impact on the Allison Center will be tremendous," Ms. Purvis told trustees. "The patients they would see (at the center) would probably be on their death beds.

"It's not an optimistic picture right now," she said, adding a study of other cancer centers' operations is being conducted.

"(TEFRA) can and probably will have a tremendous impact on the operating income of this facility," said Trustee Chairman Gene Abbott.

"About the only winner is going to be the federal government," Trustee Dr. Walter Parks agreed.

Under construction

Work has progressed at top speed for the Ranchland Apartments, 3216 Sage, according to management. Ninety days after startup, the first 16 of 204 units will open today. Remaining units are to be finished within the next 90 days.

New complex counts on marketing

Business-Energy Writer

Ranchland Apartments — 3216 Sage, off East Wadley — hopes to open 16 of its 204 Phase I units today. Its grand opening comes at a time when more Midland apartments are empty and managers are increasing their advertising and offering gimmicks, lower rents, and other amenities to attract tenants.

David Hamble, general property manager (with 18 years in his field), has his eye on all the apartments available in town, because he wants to do some selective marketing.

"I only know of one property in town in direct competition with us, and rents are higher there," he said. He said his tenants are out there, and he hopes to reach them with newspaper ads and a couple of radio and TV spots.

Is this city now tough for apartment builders? If so, the company Hamble works for — Campbell Housing, Houston — apparently has faith in Midland's future. It's opening two brand-new complexes after-the-boom, in a somewhat depressed rental market that has hosted gimmicks from clowns to Puerto Vallarta vacations.

Ranchland Apartments will open with rents from $415 (one-bedroom) to $615 (two-bedroom).

Campbell Housing's other complex, 140-unit Countryside, will be coming to North Loop-Apartment Row later this year. Both of the complexes required investments of over $4 million.

Both properties may double in size within existing boundaries if increased demand calls for Phase IIs to be constructed. Occupancy rates in 1984 will help determine that.

Both complexes' apartments will come with electric gadgetry like ceiling fans, icemakers, and a washer/dryer pair included in the rental price. The units are not huge but they are well-built and energy-saving, said Hamble.

He called the construction — and materials like carpeting and wallpaper — "top-grade" and said the opening of livable units within 90 days of April's startup has been an "exceptionally fast completion."

Within another 90 days, the Ranchland complex should be finished. Countryside may take until 1984.

"The apartment market is soft now, but we're not a fly-by-night company," Hamble said. "We feel Midland is a good market. And this is going to be a classy development.

"The $300-a-month, two-bedroom apartment dweller who has been (at one complex) for years will probably stay there until he moves to a house or dies, whichever comes first," said Hamble. He seemed confident Ranchland Apartments can reach 50 percent occupancy by the end of 1983 and nearly fill up in '84.

Hamble is aiming at the person who likes to move to the newest apartment scene, and also at upwardly-mobile, white-collar jobholders who've "achieved certain steps in their careers and are able to move up" to a better apartment.

"If you give value for the dollar — give people what they're paying for — I think there are residents available. Obviously, you have to market correctly to reach those people," he said.

There are nearly equal numbers of one- and two-bedroom units in the Ranchland complex. Two-bedrooms are judiciously divided, with equal bedroom space so roommates won't fight over them, he added.

The Ranchland Apartments will be offered with a move-in package while dirt is still flying at the site — a month or two rent-free, or similar inducements, said the manager.

The complex will have in-house satellite cable TV, and may even host its own channel.

The Midland apartment marketplace was tight in 1980 and '81, with complexes 100 percent full. Now, the complexes are only 67 to 70 percent full, according to Midland Apartment Association figures.

With 8,553 apartments shown available in the Midland Chamber of Commerce study, 2,566 empty ones are theoretically out there.

Ranchland Apartments' owners are betting their development won't fail to bring in tenants and will make a return on investment in a reasonably short time.

Bingo going strong in Midland County

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Though bingo is not "big business" in Midland County, the chance game of cards and bouncing balls sponsored by a church and a veterans' organization grossed $77,813.70 in the first quarter of 1983, according to the Texas Comptroller's Office.

Of that, 25 percent — $19,293.10 — was bound for charities.

Another Midland bingo-sponsoring group, however, made only 2.4 percent for charity in its first reporting period — the April-May-June quarter.

Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church netted 25.7 percent of its revenue for charities. The Tall City Post 7208 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars earmarked 24.7 percent for charities.

"That's pretty healthy," said Greg Lopreato, a spokesman in the Comptroller's Bingo Regulation Division in Austin.

However, the American Legion's Sam Burnett Ladies Auxiliary Unit 574 ended up with 2.4 percent of its gross receipts from the sale of bingo cards and refreshments for charity.

"That sounds a little low to me," Lopreato said. "We're taking a close look at the (payout-charity) ratio. I have a feeling we'll be auditing."

Statewide, the average payout to bingo players has been 67 percent of the gross receipts, Lopreato said.

Farmers, ranchers may be eligible for loans

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Drought-stricken farmers and ranchers in a 23-county area in West Texas may become eligible for 8 percent federal emergency loans if they are assessed at having sustained a 30 percent monetary loss, a Farmers Home Administration official said Thursday.

"We received (Texas Gov. Mark White's disaster loans) request July 15, and currently we're asking the local FHmA and Soil Conservation Service...to assess the situation to find out what types of crops are affected and the numbers of farmers involved," said Chet Bailey, acting branch chief for FHmA's emergency loan and designation branch.

"We expect those disaster reports by some time next week...We'll analyze it for (Secretary of Agriculture John Block) who ultimately makes the decision."

Bailey noted however, that Secretary Block "is concerned with" reports that "there seems to be as many (non-agriculture) persons who don't want it declared a disaster area as those who do."

Should Block determine the area is in need of federal assistance, ranchers and farmers would make application to the nearest FmHA office. "We'll look at it and if in fact they have rangeland, we would figure what the drought has cost as far as yield on rangeland," said Bailey. "If there were cattle losses, we would consider that a physical loss."

Doctors discuss CareFlite

Dr. Michael Stanley

Dr. Thomas Howard

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Fast is not always best when transporting critically ill babies for specialized care, according to two Fort Worth physicians.

Dr. Michael Stanley, medical director of the newborn intensive care units at Harris Hospital-Methodist and Fort Worth Childrens Hospital, and Dr. Thomas Howard, head of maternal and fetal medicine at Harris Hospital-Methodist, spoke Thursday to local pediatricians and obstetricians about emergency transport.

During an interview before a planned dinner meeting with the local physicians, Stanley and Howard explained a Fort Worth-based CareFlite program at Harris Hospital-Methodist.

Midland doctors — pediatricians and obstetricians — have been using the 24-hour emergency air ambulance service since 1982.

They have been in close contact with Stanley and Howard, but this is the first time they met the Fort Worth physicians. Howard and Stanley said the purpose of their meeting was to let physicians know they are in Fort Worth to help.

There are three emergency transport services — a mini-intensive care unit in a van ambulance, which travels up to 30 miles from the Fort Worth hospital; a helicopter, which travels from 30 to 150 miles for an emergency transfer; and the "fixed-wing," or airplane which goes beyond the 150 miles.

Jim Wilmes, manager of the Ritz Theatre, checks the theater over before its opening today. Showtimes for the double feature are: "The Dark Crystal" 1, 4:15 and 7:30 p.m. and "Clown and the Kid" 2:50, 6 and 9:15 p.m. The house, which has been closed since 1980, has been leased from the City of Midland by the Ritz Theatre Corp.

Locals once again go to the Ritz

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"Ritz Theatre. Last time today. Fannie Brice in 'My Man.' Pathe Sound News. Talking Topics of the day and Aesop's Fables in sound."
— Midland Reporter Telegram advertisement
Monday, July 29, 1929

As of today, Midlanders have another cinema to choose from in addition to UA Cine and Midland Park Mall. It is not a new house, but rather an old one revisited.

Since 1929, the 200 block of Main Street has housed, at different times, motor companies, beauty shops, a hotel, a soldier's recreation center, a dry goods store, a jeweler's, department stores, apartments, a graduate center and two cinemas. Of all of the block's residents only one has remained constant.

When the Yucca Theatre had its grand opening Dec. 5, 1929, the Ritz was already operating, along with the Goddard Amusement Company, at 207 N. Main St. During the 1940s, housed next to it at 205 N. Main St. was the Ritz Sandwich Shop.

Jay H. "Timber" Floyd Jr.

The Ritz was closed in the mid-1970s for renovations, opening as Cinema I Jan. 21, 1977.

During the time it was closed, J. Howard Hodge, the man whose name had been synonymous with Midland theater houses for more than 40 years, died. He, along with the Oklahoma-based Video Independent Theatres Inc., had, at one time, owned all of the theaters in town — Ritz, Tower, Rex, Westwood, Howard Hodge (called Howard Hodge Cinema II after it was twinned in 1977) and the Chief, Texan and Fiesta drive-ins — except the Yucca, which Hodge leased.

When Hodge's wife, Veda Wells, died May 17, 1978, the theater became the property of Howard Payne University. The university never operated the theater, but leased it to Video.

Video gave up its lease March 13, 1980. The gas company shut its service down May 1, 1980, pulling the meter Nov. 11 of that year.

At that time it seemed that downtown Midland cinemas had become an item of history. And it had been an active history, one which had included two cinemas, The Ritz and the Tower, at the same time in the 200 block of Main because, as Fern Rice, who has been with Video for 41 years, said, "We had to have that many to supply the need. People were going to the theater."

Dec. 30, 1980, the darkened theater was sold to Original Town Limited II, which was a partnership of 27 local residents. Original Town Limited II sold it to the City of Midland March 31, 1982.

The city's interest centered around future plans for the downtown area.

"We owned the lot to the south of it," said Gordon Marcum II, a member of the city council. It was the city's intention to use the property in a possible trade with another Midland business when the proposed civic auditorium is built.

Early in 1983, the city considered tearing it down and building a parking lot on the site. It seemed certain that the (then) 466-seat auditorium would be lost to Midland audiences until another group of Midlanders asked to lease it.

The infant died Thursday night at an Odessa hospital.

He was born Thursday.

Other survivors include a sister, three grandparents, three great-grandparents and several aunts and uncles.

Mary Townsend

BIG SPRING — Services for Mary Bell Townsend, 78, of Big Spring, will be at 2 p.m. Monday at Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Townsend died Thursday in Big Spring.

She was a homemaker and a member of the Church of Christ.

Gene Marks

BIG SPRING — Gene Marks, 41, of Big Spring, died Thursday in Big Spring.

There will be no services.

He was a dispatcher for a trucking company.

Cities alcohol rebates similar

When it comes to drinking, Midland and Odessa almost rank on an even par.

Figures on rebates of the mixed drink sales tax given to the cities and counties for the second quarter of 1983 were released earlier this week by Comptroller Bob Bullock's office.

Midland County's tax revenue amounted to $355,281.29 and received $53,292.19 in a rebate. Ector County's revenues tallied up to $369,938.90 with the rebate being $55,490.84.

Midland ran slightly ahead of its neighoring city on selling mixed drinks within the city limits. The Tall City posted $328,007.92 in tax revenue and a rebate of $49,201.19.

Odessans drank up $311,461.31 in liquor and the rebate totaled $46,719.20.

Bullock said collection of the state's 10 percent mixed drink tax during the second quarter was up 5.4 percent over the same period last year.

The state collected $37.9 million in taxes on the sale of mixed drinks. Texas cities and counties each receive a 15 percent rebate of the tax collected on the drinks sold within their boundaries.

Police and EMS personnel place 45-year-old Lloyd Sisson on a stretcher after he fell from the roof of Carver Center shortly before 3 p.m. Thursday. Sisson, an employee of the Industrial Roofing Co., suffered a broken knee in the 16-foot fall and was in satisfactory condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Friends to hold prayer vigil

"Friends of Banks Campbell" will hold a prayer vigil starting at 7:30 a.m. Monday in the Glass Memorial Chapel of the First United Methodist Church, according to Homer Fort, director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

Campbell, a 64-year-old Midland geologist, has been missing since Sunday when he left a friend's house on his bicycle shortly after 9 p.m.

The bike and his street clothes were found in his office at the Permian Basin Sample Lab, 401 N. Colorado Ave. He was wearing blue shorts, blue sneakers and a blue T-shirt when he disappeared.

Also found in the office were his key ring, belt and pocket change. His pickup truck was parked on the company lot. Missing was his wallet, which contained $300 to $400, according to his son, Pete Campbell.

The elder Campbell was a widower who lived alone. There was no sign of a struggle at either his house or his office, according to police, but foul play is suspected.

Anyone with information on his disappearance is asked to contact Det. Sgt. Jeff Haile at the Midland Police Department, 683-4281.

The prayer vigil will conclude at 5 p.m. Monday. "Its purpose is to offer prayers for Banks Campbell's safety and for the comforting of his family," said Fort.

The church is located at 305 N. Baird.

Helicopter pilot arrested

Midland helicopter pilot James Clyde Short Jr., indicted for violating the U.S. Airborne Hunting Act, was arrested this morning at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport following a flight from Hawaii, U.S. prosecutor Jose A. Toro said today.

He was to appear before a U.S. magistrate in the Dallas area for a preliminary hearing and for release following his posting of bail. Shortly after his federal indictment in Midland on Tuesday, U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith set his bail at $25,000 cash or corporate surety.

In addition to Short, the grand jury indicted Midland farmer Lee Milton Bell, Midland taxidermist Karl Douglas Brosig and Odessa sportsmen Larry Weldon Todd for violating federal wildlife laws. Lee, Bell and Todd were arrested Tuesday afternoon and were released after posting bail then.

Short was arrested at D-FW Airport by agents of the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service.

Reportedly, Short, who hires himself and his helicopter out for killing predators, such as coyotes, and allegedly for hunting wildlife and other game, had been flying in Wyoming.

MMH garners profit of $300,000 in June

In the minutes of the July 13 meeting of the cancer committee, Ms. Purvis stated Dr. Merrick Reese indicated the negative impact of TEFRA was the principle reason for consideration of opening an outside office. He also said a provision in the July 1982 contract with MMH required establishing such an office by August 1983.

In other action, trustees and directors approved a recommendation made by the finance committee which allows Branson to increase — or decrease — ancillary charges "so long as such increases do not increase total ancillary revenue by more than 1 percent of the fiscal year."

Previously such adjustments required board approval.

"(Requiring the approval of the board) was typically unhandy and at the same time, perhaps unfair," Bruner said. "We need the authority to be competitive with other hospitals."

ACCORDING TO Trustee Roy Campbell, "there will be things outside of this authority. (Branson) might raise an item 20 percent — but the impact of all those items cannot change the total by more than 1 percent."

If trustees or directors decide to change the policy later, the authority may be revoked, Campbell said.

There are slightly more than 2,000 ancillary charges, according to Bruner. The charges include everything from aspirin to meals for those on special diets, MMH Public Relations Director Arlene Strickland said.

In other action, Bruner told trustees gross patient revenues declined $126,000 from May for a total of $2.9 million — which exceeds the budgeted amount by $192,000. Year-to-date actual revenue exceeds the budget by 4 percent.

Bruner also said salaries and benefits were $53,000 below budget and full-time employees were 18 above budget due to vacations and holidays.

Total supply expenses exceeded the budget by $88,000 due partly to inventory adjustments made in the pharmacy. Supply costs also increased in the blood bank and radiology. Central supply's increased costs were directly related to the department's revenues being 47 percent in excess of the budget, he said.

EMERGENCY ROOM visits and same-day surgeries were above budget while patient days and operating rooms were below, Bruner said.

"The average length of stay declined to 5.1 days. This decline, coupled with actual patient days being below budget, substantially impacts revenues in an adverse manner," Bruner stated in his report.

Other expenses exceeding the budget by $41,000, included a $23,000 increase in the ServiceMaster contract, $12,000 in recruiting-related expenses and a $6,000 increase in physician fees.

Action taken by directors included approval of the following checks: $104,537.15, June indigent care expenses; $19,478.56, Lubbock General Hospital for burn unit expenses; $48,468, architectual fees for the 77-bed expansion.

Bailey said the major criterion for loan eligibility would be a "30 percent loss in that farmer's livestock enterprise" based on an average of the "best four out of the last five years."

For example, he explained, if a specified rangeland normally provided forage for cattle at a ratio of 10 acres per cow, but because of drought now required 20 acres per cow, "we would consider this a 50 percent reduction in yield, and turn that into a dollar value."

He added that supplemental-feeding costs also would be considered in determining whether a 30 percent loss had been sustained. But liquidation of livestock would not be a consideration, he explained, as "we consider that a management decision."

Should a farmer or rancher become eligible for a loan, he normally would pay it back to the government at 8 percent interest over one to seven years. However, said Bailey, the loan possibly could be carried longer "depending on the type of security."

FmHA, he noted, "is concerned with farmers continuing their existing operations."

Counties being considered for disaster aid include Upton, Andrews, Martin, Midland, Reagan, Crane, Ector, Brewster, Coke, Culberson, Howard, Jeff Davis, Mitchell, Nolan, Pecos, Presidio, Sutton, Terrell, Ward and Winkler.

Fort Worth physicians discuss CareFlite program

Each emergency vehicle has a specially-trained intensive care team and equipment. It takes about 20 to 30 minutes for the team to load the equipment and depart.

Stanley and Howard said Midland physicians have done a good job with their sick babies, especially in stabilizing them before an emergency transfer. The doctors said the time factor in transporting is not as crucial as the type of care the baby receives.

"We call this a prime referral area," Stanley said. "We know Midland will be sending their sick babies to us. I have up to 60 babies in our critical care unit daily. When you have that many everyday, you run into all kinds of unusual cases."

"Recently, we've used the service a lot," said Dr. Ronald Boren, Midland physician who brought the Fort Worth doctors to the Tall City for the meeting.

"Last year we had 2,253 births and 34 were transferred," he added. "This year, my educated guess would be at least 12 (have been transferred)."

Howard said although only one pregnant mother has been transferred, he did anticipate more after talking to the doctors.

He said it is better to transfer a mother who is having complications and near giving birth to a facility where there is an intensive care unit for infants.

Boren said most Midland pediatricians and obstetricians used to request transport to Lubbock or El Paso, but there was some trouble securing beds. Consequently, after one patient was sent to Fort Worth, a rapport was established.

"They have a specially-trained team, we have no problem getting babies in and we have excellent communication," Boren said.

Howard said he encourages communication from Midland physicians.

"Many times a doctor will call and ask a question," he said. "I am in an advisory role for these calls. It gives a physician who may not be familiar with a particular problem an element of security."

Bingo games going strong for local organizations

The Bingo Enabling Act, which went into effect in 1982, authorized the State Comptroller Bob Bullock to regulate the game and gave local jurisdictions the option of legalization of the game similar to the legalization of the sale of alcoholic beverages — by a vote of the electorate. Midland County voters sanctioned the game in a 3-to-1 vote on Jan. 15. Only 6.5 percent of the county's then 43,000 qualified voters cast ballots in that election.

To date, 104 of Texas's 254 counties have voted in bingo. Five rejected it. In addition, 112 justice of the peace precincts have voted in the game; eight turned it down.

In 1983's first quarter, Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church grossed $10,369. Of that, $2,672.25 was netted for charities.

The Tall City VFW post grossed $67,444.70 and set aside $16,620.85 for its charities.

Second quarter reports from the church and VFW post weren't available.

The American Legion Unit 574 showed no bingo played and no income in the first quarter of 1983. In the second quarter, the unit grossed $82,038.85 and netted $1,950.84 for charity. Its expenses totaled $10,834.01.

The comptroller's bingo spokesman alluded to the Legion's 2.4 percent, if that's an "honest figure," for charity.

"It's possible to have negative (net) receipts and doing your damnest to make money for charity," he said.

"It's not a sure thing," he said of bingo earnings. "You can be very well meaning and not have any luck at it."

Since bingo by law in Texas is not a profit-making undertaking, the net proceeds after the payout to winners and after expenses are paid go to charity. By law, an organization sponsoring bingo may award up to $2,500 in prizes in any one "bingo occasion" — an afternoon or night game, for example. The top prize to any one player is limited to $500.

The spokesman suggested how an organization might lose money — come up with "negative receipts" — in a bingo occasion. If the bingo group advertises $2,500 in cash prizes but if the income from the sale of bingo cards and refreshments falls short of that, the sponsoring group must come up with $2,500 anyway, he said.

"It's somewhat of a gamble. There's the possibility of a market saturation just like in any other thing."

Midlanders go to the Ritz

The group's spokesman, Jay H. "Timber" Floyd Jr., said, "I asked them (city officials) if they would be interested in leasing the building out for the same price they would get on putting in a parking lot."

The affirmative answer from City Hall on Feb. 22 once again saved the Ritz.

The Ritz Theatre Corp.'s future plans for the cinema include opening with G-rated films and, as Floyd said, "later on adding Spanish speaking films. Then perhaps some classic films. We will probably be looking in your foreign films for the classic period. We will be working with Midland College, or if the high schools want to work with us on getting a film we will be glad to do that. And we may put in a Saturday morning deal with the serials."

In addition, the theater will be renovated. This work will include enlarging the stage for live productions and band performances.

"I am hoping that we can get it (the stage) in within two months and have a grand opening after that," Floyd said.

The Ritz was closed because, as Mrs. Rice said, "it was not profitable."

Floyd, who feels there is a Midland market for G-rated films, said, "I think if you are very selective about what you are running, that you can pick up your people that want to see movies."

Odessa man dead after mishap

ODESSA — An Odessa man is dead after his car went out of control and rolled over near here early this morning.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Medical Center Hospital was 23-year-old Thomas Foley, a laborer. According to the Department of Public Safety, Foley was southbound on U.S. 385 when his 1975 Ford left the road and struck a barricade and a curb before overturning 1½ times.

The accident occurred near the intersection of 385 and Yukon Road 1½ miles north of Odessa about 12:30 a.m today. Foley's body was taken to the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Professor: Anyone can become child abuser in week

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — "In a week anyone can become a child abuser," says a Purdue University sociologist who believes it takes only the right set of circumstances to trigger a case of abuse.

"There's a myth that only people who were abused themselves will abuse their children, or that it is a lower-class phenomenon, or even that you have to be mentally ill," says Dean D. Knudsen, associate professor of sociology.

But just put a person into the right setting — add a lot of stress — and Knudsen predicts any normal person could become an abuser.

A father laid off from work, for instance, may be a model parent — until he is jobless and forced to stay at home. As tension increases, so does the potential for first-time child abuse.

Knudsen, who has been researching child-abuse cases in Tippecanoe County, Ind., for more than a decade, observes the frequency of reported cases of suspected abuse or neglect is up, from roughly 30 a year in 1970 to more than 1,100 in 1982.

Does this reflect a nationwide trend? Probably. "There's really no way to estimate the national figures, although reports are around a million a year," says the sociologist.

The figures translate into one of every 14 children being abused, most by friends and relatives.

Knudsen believes it's stress in everyday living, from finances to relationships, that causes abuse to cut across the population. "Families don't get much support; they often don't even know their neighbors, and they can't seem to ask for help," Knudsen says.

Knudsen has observed what he calls a "cycle of violence," with two great contributors of modern life being TV and air-conditioning.

"Instead of sitting out on the porch or going to the park after supper, we're isolated from others, prisoners in our own homes," he points out. Worse still, no one is there to check our transgressions against our own kids, he adds.

Among the most frequent abusers, he says, are young, socially isolated parents who move frequently. They have low incomes and little access to help, he suggests.

Knudsen agrees with most theorists that the institutionalized violence in American society contributes to violence in the home. Prisons, for instance, and even schools, condone corporal punishment.

"There's a cultural milieu of legitimate force and violence surrounding child abuse in America," Knudsen says. "Violence is part of our background and heritage — it happens with tremendous regularity."

Knudsen notes that in this country parents are assumed to have nearly total control over their children, and in child-abuse cases parents must be proven unfit in order to remove children. In Sweden, he explains, it's the opposite: Parents are recognized as potential abusers and must prove themselves to be fit.

Another factor in abuse, Knudsen adds, is simple ignorance.

Heat fatal to pets

Anyone who has ever climbed into a closed auto on a hot summer day knows how stifling it can get in there. That heat can quickly become fatal for a dog or other pet closed inside.

Even if the car windows are left partly open or if the driver is making only a quick stop in the market, the heat can build up and kill an animal quickly, warns the Humane Society of the United States.

Temperatures inside a car have been measured as high as 160 degrees Fahrenheit, the Humane Society said.

Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler tours the national AIDS hotline in Washington with Bob Schreiber, public affairs specialist with the National Institute of Health. The toll-free line (800-342-AIDS) averages 500 calls an hour.

Officials say blood free from AIDS risk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are saying blood supplies are safe despite the death of three Los Angeles babies who may have contracted AIDS after receiving transfusions.

Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler and Dr. Edward N. Brandt, assistant secretary for health, said Wednesday that blood banks throughout the nation are using new guidelines which minimize the chance that AIDS victims can donate blood for transfusions. They also said the three infants whose deaths were reported Tuesday all received transfusions at least a year ago.

"Those were before the guidelines were out. We think the guidelines will help considerably (to reduce risk)," Brandt told reporters after he and Mrs. Heckler inspected a busy AIDS information hotline system established by the Public Health Service.

"I don't think we have had any indication that it has gone beyond high-risk groups," Brandt added.

Mrs. Heckler called AIDS "the number one health policy question in America."

She said none of the health personnel who have treated AIDS victims have contracted the disease. "We think that is the clear indication that the disease is of low communicability," she said.

By July 18, there were 1,902 reported cases of AIDS and 723 deaths from the disease.

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome renders the human immune system ineffective and makes the body susceptible to a variety of infections. About 75 percent of its victims are homosexual men with multiple sex partners, Brandt said. Other high-risk groups are intravenous drug abusers, recent Haitian immigrants and hemophiliacs.

The Los Angeles County department of health services reported the deaths of three infants as probable AIDS cases to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. Dr. Joseph Church, a pediatrician who treated two of the babies, said he was "95 percent sure" that his patients had AIDS "picked up during transfusions."

By June, CDC knew of 21 AIDS cases among infants. But most of those children were infants born to parents in high-risk groups such as bisexual males or users of intravenous drugs.

'Cure-all' causes problems

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — At one time it began to take on the dimensions of a cure-all.

Cheap and readily available, thyroid hormone was given out for a variety of ailments including obesity, low body temperature, short stature, infertility, abnormal menstruation, hair loss, mental problems and a form of fatigue known as the "tired housewife syndrome."

For many it relieved the unpleasant symptoms caused by a shortage of thyroid hormone.

But for another group of people who were given the medication unnecessarily, it has exposed them to a variety of medical complications, ranging from irritability to heart irregularities and bone deterioration.

Many of them have been steadily showing up in hospital clinics and the offices of endocrinologists, suffering from overdoses of thyroid hormone.

"We see large numbers of patients on thyroid hormone who should not be," said Dr. Richard Guttler, an endocrinologist and associate professor at the University of Southern California Medical School. "Doctors are still improperly giving it out for slow metabolism. We now take as many people off the medication as we put on."

AN ESTIMATED 3 MILLION to 4 million people may be taking thyroid medication without good reason, according to an article by Dr. Samuel Refetoff, a leading endocrinologist at the University of Chicago.

Another indicator of the problem is the pharmaceutical industry's own figures showing there are at least 21 million prescriptions filled a year in the United States for thyroid hormone.

"If we go on the drug companies' sales figures, we have a tremendous hyperthyroid problem. Actually, naturally caused hyperthyroidism is not that common," said Dr. Andre Van Herle, an endocrinologist and professor at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center.

In addition to Guttler, clinics at UCLA and USC medical schools report that cases of people who have been incorrectly prescribed thyroid hormone are relatively common.

But Dr. John Nicoloff, an endocrinologist at USC said, "I don't know that it is a major medical problem. Sometimes people get fixated on it. Most of the time this is just unnecessary medication."

THE CENTER OF THE controversy is the thyroid — a small gland in the lower part of the neck which makes a hormone to regulate the metabolism of every cell in the body.

When it does not make enough of the hormone, most bodily functions slow down and when it makes too much, metabolism speeds up — sometimes with serious complications.

Blackouts possible heart trouble sign

BOSTON (AP) — People who faint because of irregular heartbeats face an exceptionally high risk of dying suddenly, according to a study published today.

Those people whose blackouts are brought on by stress or other causes, however, are not in any particular danger, the study said.

Doctors surveyed all the patients treated for fainting at a hospital during a one-year period. They found that in about a quarter of the cases, the spells were caused by heart trouble, mostly irregular heartbeats. During a year of follow-up, 30 percent of those with heart problems died.

"What it boils down to is you have to evaluate the patients carefully in order to be able to show that arrhythmia wasn't a cause and something else was," Dr. Wishwa N. Kapoor, who directed the study, said in an interview.

Arrythmia, or irregular heartbeat, has many causes, but often it can be controlled. A pacemaker will speed up a heart that beats too slowly, while drugs can calm a heart that beats too rapidly.

Moslems worldwide

Of the three religions that sprang from the Middle East, Islam dominates there today. But Islam is not limited to the Middle East: it is the principal belief in some 40 nations in Asia and Africa, according to National Geographic.

Some 800 million people — almost one of every five people on Earth — are Moslems. Most Middle Eastern countries, such as Egypt, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, Iran, Libya, and Yemen, are heavily Moslem, yet the countries with the most Moslems are outside the Mideast.

There are 2 million Moslems in the United States. — (AP)

Storefront clinics innovative

Copley News Service

In a society where you can buy a chicken dinner or a six-pack without leaving your car, it was just a matter of time before someone thought of medical convenience stores.

Dubbed "Doc in the Box" and "Medical McDonald's" by critics, minor-emergency clinics offer instant care of everything from rashes to gashes at prices that are making some emergency rooms squirm.

The convenience and lower prices of the storefront centers are undisputed. But the medical establishment worries about this capitalistic health care, the antithesis of socialized medicine.

And the new approach is breeding new concerns, among them the quality of care, treatment of major emergencies, cash-only requirements and the financial impact of quick-care centers on emergency rooms and physicians' offices.

Some doctors are nervous because storefront emergency clinics are not regulated. Others balk at corporate ownership of walk-in clinics, or resent peers who work an eight-hour day without ever becoming entrenched in the traditional medical community.

Clinics are sprouting up rapidly nationwide. Ultimately, their success will depend on consumers.

"Clearly, the scramble is on for patients," said James J. Smith, vice president of Urgent Care Centers of America, based in Encinitas, Calif.

"Quite frankly, the mobility of the population has sort of phased out the family doctor. I don't have one myself. In small-town America, sure, you had one physician who brought you into the world and treated you through college.

"What happened was, people became very sophisticated very quickly. We watched Dr. Kildare and Marcus Welby do triple bypasses in 45 minutes.

"Now, when someone in the family needs medical care, we want all of it. And we want it now."

In recent years, hospitals have noticed a trend toward people using emergency rooms instead of having a family doctor, partly because they are convenient for families new to a community.

Walk-in clinics aim to bridge the gap between family doctors and emergency rooms, while making it easy for people to receive primary care without going to specialists.

Dr. Nathaniel Rose, who opened his EmergiCenter in San Diego in May, said, "I really firmly believe this is the tidal wave of medicine for the future. People know what they want, and that's what we give them here.

"They don't have to go to one guy when something's wrong with their eyeball, and to another for a sore throat."

On any given day, people walk into a minor-emergency clinic with a variety of illnesses and injuries, checkbooks in hand. A thick case file documented one day's work: a headache, separated shoulder, dermatitis, sprained wrist, sinus infection, arthritis, hypertension, infected Fallopian tubes, rash, two broken arms, mononucleosis, two cases of bronchitis, scalp wound, tonsillitis.

As usual there were no heart attacks or massive chest wounds.

Lifestyles influence new products

By The Asssociated Press

Few Americans today are unaware that new types of consumers are influencing the development of home furnishings products offered for sale.

Manufacturers and marketing consultants have spoken often about consumers who are single by choice and live alone or with another unrelated adult; couples who both work and can't stay home to wait for a repairman; individuals who prefer to do their own repairs to save time and money, and those inner-directed persons who have money to pay for services but prefer to spent it on other things.

To appeal to the perceived needs of these consumers, appliance manufacturers have initiated do-it-yourself repair programs, housewares makers have designed small appliances for preparation of one or two servings, and furniture makers have produced furniture the individual can take home in a box and put together himself.

Taken together, these various items geared to single, affluent, well-educated, do-it-yourself oriented individuals are sometimes known as "personal use" or "lifestyle" products.

Recently, Singer Co. entered the field with four new "personal use" sewing gadgets designed to handle all or most of an individual's mending chores.

Singer is best known as a maker of sewing machines, but the company points out that its new "Easy Menders" product line is not aimed at sewing enthusiasts.

The four new products are not sewing machines, but were engineered specifically to do one or two mending jobs. They are aimed at those who do not necessarily know how to sew and who don't necessarily wish to learn.

Instead, they are for men and women who have neither the time nor inclination to mend clothing but who would like an alternative to paying a tailor to do minor clothing repairs, explained a spokesman for Singer.

At $80, the most expensive item in the line is a portable, 6-pound electric machine which looks like a small sewing machine but can only go forward. It is preset for mending, patching and minor alterations and will stitch through several fabric layers.

The other products include a hand-held patching machine which will hide holes, tears and cigarette burns; a device that attaches two-, three- and four-hole buttons with thread, and an appliance that tacks hems and seams in an emergency. Each of the latter three products sells for $29.95 and weighs less than a pound.

All four products fit the guidelines established for personal-use products. They are easy to handle, lightweight, require no special skill to use, come with a simply written instruction booklet, and come in "gift oriented" cartons. The company intends to promote them as gifts as well as for personal use.

National distribution is to begin late this summer, at first through housewares departments in major department stores, and eventually through chain stores, hardware outlets and discount stores.

One way the new items differ from traditional new products for the home is that they were designed by consumers, not engineers.

The line grew out of consumer comments made in focus groups which Singer had organized to discuss mending concepts. Since fewer American women are now sewing their own clothes, the company decided to investigate the development of other products that would meet consumer demands.

The focus groups established that mending is a problem for both men and women. As more women have gone to work outside the home and more men have begun living on their own, the necessary skills are often not available to those who need to mend their clothing.

The rising cost of professional alterations has priced them outside the means of some individuals. Furthermore, the inconvenience of taking garments for professional repair and then having to wait for them was mentioned by some consumers in the discussions.

Brain has slow cells

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — If the human brain worked like a modern computer, says a University of Rochester computer scientist, it would take a person an hour — instead of a second — to recognize a familiar face.

The reason: Each individual neuron (nerve cell), which acts as a computing unit, works much more slowly than a silicon chip.

According to Professor Jerome A. Feldman, "The reason we can think so fast with our slow-working neurons is that millions of them work simultaneously on each task. For example, we can see all the elements in a picture at once, whereas current computers must look at them one at a time."

Apartment decor can be inexpensive

Copley News Service

Q. I'm moving into an apartment where I plan to live for about three years.

The quarters are in rather bad shape and so I want to do a lot of fixing up. However, I don't want to put any more money into the apartment than I have to to make it pleasant.

I need to buy furniture and I want to select pieces that will give me a sense of permanency and yet will be flexible enough to fit into other rented quarters until I can purchase a home.

I'm pretty good at painting and sewing and I think I'd like to try some craft work. Please give me some ideas. — P.P.

A. Wall color is perhaps the least expensive and most dramatic way to stretch decorating dollars. Choose a handsome color that you'd like to live with — whether it be a delicate pastel or a medium shade.

Painting a floor is also another inexpensive way to go. If your floor is wood or cement, you might stencil a design over a background color. Of if you feel up to it, try peel and stick vinyl squares topped with an interesting area rug that you can take with you.

Rather than purchase a large sofa and a couple of chairs, consider a pair of short sofas for your living room. This will give you good seating and plenty of flexibility. Small sofas are a lot easier to move into and out of the small openings of many apartments.

For a sense of permanence without going to the expense of built-ins, purchase a wall system that perhaps includes a number of storage cabinets.

Repair queries answered

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. I hope you will send me advice on the following matter:

The duplex where I live has been recently repainted. Since the job was completed, I have tried and tried to open the windows. The painters are out of t own and I just do not know what to do.

Is there anything that I could buy to pour around the windows, especially at the bottoms? They just won't budge for me. — Elizabeth M.K.

A. A small, heart-shaped, serrated-edge gadget is now available at most hardware, paint and variety stores to remedy this problem. It is run around the window and cuts the paint film.

Frequently, tapping a small block of wood, held against the window frame, with a hammer loosens the window.

Or tapping a putty knife or small screwdriver between the sash and frame using a hammer, is usually successful in breaking the paint film.

Q. We always read your column. Now we find ourselves in need of advice regarding our fireplace chimney. Our problem is that occasionally smoke will back up into the room.

We live in a house which has an embankment higher than the house. Actually, we are in a canyon. We have been told this is the reason why this occurs. Can you suggest a solution? — Amy H.E.

A. Here is some general advice. To overcome the smoky starting of the fire, just before starting it, light one end of a twisted piece of newspaper and shove it up the fireplace throat. This is usually enough to start a draft in the chimney.

If the fire continues to smoke, it may be due to draft interference, caused in your case by the embankment and the wind direction. In that event, it may be necessary to heighten your chimney. At any rate, the chimney should be at least 4 feet above a flat roof and 2 feet above the highest point of a gabled roof. In your case, the flue may need a cap to shield against a down draft.

Among other general suggestions, always be sure the damper is open sufficiently to provide proper draft. The depth of the fireplace should not be less than 20 inches, and the opening at the front should be greater than 10 or 12 times the area of the flue.

Another possibility is that your fireplace opening may be too high. This can be remedied by installing a metal hood across the top of the fireplace opening.

Underwater tank tells true weight

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — According to exercise specialist Bob Rich, the best way to find out what you're really made of is to take the plunge into an underwater weighing tank.

"Height-weight charts are not very accurate for determining how much a person should weigh," said Rich, director of the Fitness Inventory Testing Clinic at the University of California-Los Angeles. "Everyone's level of body fat is different, even for people of the same height and weight. You need to know what the ratio of body fat is to your entire weight to know how much you need to reduce, if at all."

Underwater weighing, which records the body's true weight, minus fat, and thus allows a calculation of how much out-of-water poundage is fat weight, is one of the fitness tests offered by the non-profit program, which provides a fitness report card and an exercise "prescription" for the individual who wants a personally-designed exercise plan.

"I put on a little weight since I stopped smoking, and even though I've been working out for over two years, I still haven't been able to take it off," said Emanuel Schegloff, a professor at UCLA. "I figured I must be doing something wrong, so I came here."

"People come here for a variety of reasons," said Dr. Carol Otis, a physician who gives medical exams to FIT patrons before the testing begins. "Some are really in excellent shape, and want it confirmed. We had one 65-year-old librarian who was in super physical condition. And then again, we've had some 24-year-olds who were in very poor shape."

Other services offered by the program include stress-bike testing to measure cardiovascular fitness and calisthenics to determine muscular strength and flexibility.

Good fingernail grooming important

Copley News Service

When it comes to looking good, no one knows more about the subject than the stunning Super Beauty Linda Evans of "Dynasty" fame. And, according to her new book, "The Linda Evans Beauty and Exercise Book" (Wallaby/Simon & Schuster), one of the most important parts of your appearance is your nails.

To help give your nails that well-manicured, "professional" touch at home, Linda, together with her nail-care expert Teressa Reno, offers these suggestions:

1. When filing, choose an emery board that does not shed its granules as nail is filed. Hold it vertical against the center edge of the nail and don't let it lose contact with the nail, as you gently move the file back and forth.

2. Before working on cuticles soak hands in pure soap in water, and then if needed use a mild cuticle solvent. Loosen the cuticles with a cuticle loosening tool only, holding it lightly and using a circular motion.

3. Wash away cuticle debris and then wrap an orangewood stick in cotton and dampen. Circle the nail under the cuticle to wipe away film.

4. To clean under nail correctly: Use a tool with a round, thin point. Start at the corners and draw the tool to the center and then to the opposite edge.

BOSTON, Mass. (AP) — Statements not necessarily made under oath, so better not bet on 'em:

—"Open wide, now, this isn't going to hurt a bit."

—"No need to put anything in writing, a handshake will seal the deal."

—"It's easy to assemble, just follow the simple directions."

—"Please, Dad, I'll walk him and feed him and train him and everything."

—"We'll make up that time between here and Chicago."

—"And now a brief message from our sponsors."

—"Funding for this program will lay no additional burden on the taxpayers."

—"It fits you like a glove. That bulge at the collar will work itself out."

—"Doesn't seem to be anything major. We'll put it up on the rack and have a look-see."

—"Of course I'll write to you every day when I'm off at college."

—"You haven't changed a bit after all these years."

—"Mother's only staying for two weeks; you'll hardly know she's in the house."

—"I got the dope straight from his hot walker, Soldier Blue is a sure thing in the seventh."

—"Your Honor, this will only take a minute."

—"I'm stopping off to have one drink with the boys, so I'll be a little late tonight."

—"Of course I'll always feel the same way about you: the end of the summer vacation isn't the end of the world."

—"I gotta see the end of this show; I can do my homework in study period tomorrow morning."

—"You'll hardly notice the 45 easy monthly payments; at this price it's a steal."

—"Haven't seem him."

—"Who?"

—"You can't go wrong with this little number. They don't build cars like that anymore."

—"Those front tires are good for another 10,000 miles."

—"I'll just have one more for the road, then we'll get going."

—"Stop bugging me; I know my capacity."

—"Our Tuesday night film will be back after these few messages."

—"I didn't get up here to make a speech."

—"Broccoli-yogurt quiche may take a little getting used to, but you'll love it."

—"Your table will be ready in just a few minutes; why don't you wait in the bar?"

—"I know a shortcut that avoids those big trucks on the Interstate."

—"Two can live as cheaply as one."

—"Buckwheat and fennel futures are a sure thing in today's market."

"The mechanics are working on it now, so our flight today shouldn't be delayed too long."

—"I'll just shape it a bit and take a little off the top."

—"The state troopers never patrol these back roads."

—"You don't need a manufacturer's guarantee: these models are practically maintenance-free."

—"Would I lie to you? Trust me."

U.S. parasite lab in France

Established in Auch, France, in 1919, the European Parasite Laboratory is the oldest overseas U.S. government biological-control facility. In 1920 it was moved to Sevres, a Paris suburb.

It has identified the natural enemies of more than 65 target insects and 11 weeds. In 1980 alone the laboratory shipped more than 5 million specimens of several hundred species of beneficial organisms to the United States for use in combating exotic pests.

Record snowmelt creates problem for illegal aliens

SOUTH EL PASO (AP) — The Rio Grande is running deeper with the record snowmelt from the Colorado and New Mexico mountains and creating a new peril for illegal aliens crossing the border river usually waist-deep in summer.

Illegal aliens in the summer normally can just wade across the river where it flows between El Paso and Juarez, the most populous U.S.-Mexico border sector.

But this year the snowmelt has made the Rio Grande, the fifth longest river in North America, deeper and more dangerous. And the combination of higher numbers of undocumented workers trying to swim across higher water has some Border Patrol officials worried.

Rio Grande runoff into Elephant Butte Reservoir — 130 miles north of El Paso, and its main reservoir — peaked July 20 at its highest level since 1945. Reservoir outflow peaked July 22, David Overvold of the federal Bureau of Reclamation's Rio Grande Project said.

The day after the peak reservoir outflow, an unidentified Mexican man with a tattoo of the name 'Ramon' was pulled from the Rio Grande after being spotted floating face down near the Cordova Island bridge.

Police call the drowning victims floaters, and the man was the seventh floater found in El Paso this year and the fifth in July. Authorities said the bodies of at least three others were spotted but never recovered or counted in the total.

An average of 10 to 15 people a year drown in the river here, including illegal aliens and picnickers who take a dip in the water to escape the heat. This year, police said they believe six of the seven known victims were illegal aliens.

"Because the river is higher than usual, we're worried," Sgt. Al Martinez said. "And this year, nearly all have been Mexican nationals."

No one knows how many Mexicans die during the crossing — El Paso and Juarez officials don't keep such statistics and authorities would not speculate on how many perish down river, away from the two border cities.

But with illegal alien apprehensions along the 1,760-mile U.S.-Mexico border up 46 percent in the first half of 1983, it's easy to see why drownings are occurring more often.

Economically pressed, record numbers of Mexicans are coming to the U.S. in search of farm work and higher wages. Many come from the interior of Mexico, and cannot swim, agents say. Others are Juarez residents who daily cross the river to work in El Paso.

July 14, a Mexican man in his 30s drowned while trying to cross from Juarez. He was the second floater found that week, police said.

Last week, border patrol agents helped pull a dead man from the river canal near the Santa Fe bridge. The man, in his 20s, also carried no identification.

With the recovery of two other bodies this month, authorities became concerned about the possibility of a worse river-crossing situation.

"Every year we find a lot of bodies," deputy El Paso border patrol sector chief Dale Cozart said Monday. "In past instances, our officers at risk to their own lives jump in the canals or river to try to save (river crossers)."

He said some of the bodies of drowning victims are never recovered.

Most drownings occur in the summer, when alien crossings are highest. But even in winter, when an occasional snow hits El Paso, floaters have been found.

Norwegian cruise ship Sunward II only one to have officer in skirts

MIAMI (AP) — In a corner of a cabinet on the bridge of the cruise ship Sunward II is a bottle of clear nail polish and an emery board, the only clues that the first officer is a woman.

Ingerid Bjercke is fourth in command on the 492-foot, 14,110-ton Norwegian Caribbean Lines ship. As such, she is responsible for the 300-member crew and up to 850 passengers who take three- and four-day cruises from the Port of Miami to the Bahamas.

Miss Bjercke is also a full-fledged captain who spends part of her summers skippering the Skiblandner, a 206-ton, sight-seeing, steam-powered paddle-wheeler, across Lake Mjosa, the largest lake in her native Norway.

This veteran mariner is only 27.

"I have a slogan," she said. "You always regret the most what you don't do." Going to sea, she explains, was her dream since she began as a ticket collector on the Skiblandner when she was 16.

Still, the dream fulfilled, she wonders about her future.

"I'm so happy now, but in my private thoughts I sometimes think about being married and having children," she said.

"I'm scared of the thought of spending the last 30 years of my life alone.

"And yet, there are days when I go crazy being at home. It's difficult to explain this kind of life. I couldn't tell other women to go out and do the same."

"She's a fine worker," said Capt. Gunnar Oien. "She's probably the only woman deck officer on a cruise ship in the free world today. Conceivably, she could become the first woman to captain a cruise ship."

Her road to the bridge on the gleaming tour ship was a tough one. After high school, she went to sea as an apprentice seaman on cargo vessels, chipping paint and doing all the other menial chores required of rookie mariners.

She was the only woman on long voyages to the Far East, the Indian Ocean, the Red Sea and across the Atlantic. One seven-month trip took her around the world.

"The personal side of my life was difficult," she said with a grin, "but I learned to make the crew respect me."

In June 1981, she finished navigation school. After three more months at sea, she enrolled in master's school and graduated the following June with captain's papers for limited tonnage ships.

As was her practice each summer, she returned to the Skiblandner. This time she signed on as chief officer. One month later, she was made relief captain.

"My life changed Jan. 2, 1983," she said. That day, as her cargo ship was being unloaded in Miami, Miss Bjercke took a stroll along a nearby dock lined with cruise ships. She stopped at the Starward, another Norwegian Caribbean Lines ship.

"I looked up at that beautiful white ship and wondered if I could ever sail on one," she said.

Two months later, she joined the Sunward II as first officer. Along with Rolf Karlsen, the other first officer, and the ship's chief officer, she works the bridge at sea in four-hour shifts with eight hours off between tours.

'Orbis' teaches medical skills to foreign physicians

LOS ANGELES — Project Orbis, a flying teaching hospital founded by a group of Texas ophthalmologists and funded primarily through private donations is on a yearlong trip to combat blindness in developing countries.

The converted DC-8, which houses a mini-hospital complete with operating room, sterilizing equipment, operating microscopes, television equipment for teaching and related equipment.

Some experts in international health are critical of the project because it emphasizes treatment in areas of the world where resources to care for the overwhelming number of afflicted people are minimal and where prevention is seen as the best use of meager health budgets. Because the entire health budget in many developing countries is less than $5 per person per year, these experts fear that leaders in those countries will be lured by the glamour of high technology into spending a disproportionate amount of money on treatment rather than prevention.

Dr. Simon Holland, a staff ophthalmologist who will be aboard the jet on its visit to Costa Rica, the Caribbean, Africa and the Middle East, said that the importance of prevention is one of the things learned by the staff during the first Orbis expedition.

During the 12-month trip, the Orbis team "exchanged skills" with about 1,500 foreign physicians in 20 nations and performed 1,000 eye operations aboard the craft.

"We agree that it would be unethical to raise expectations about curative medicine when it would not be available in those countries," he said.

Consequently, according to Holland, Orbis is blending more preventive instructions into its teaching program. But the problem, he said, is that people — not only in developing countries but in industrial ones as well — are interested in curative medicine.

Nevertheless, Holland said the project has "been more effective in getting laws changed in some countries than we have in doing hands-on therapy."

Orbis Executive Director George Hambleton told how Orbis was responsible for the government of Peru changing a law that forbade transplants. This occurred after the president of the country witnessed a corneal transplant operation aboard the plane and was so impressed that the law was changed a few weeks later.

It is this kind of awe for curative medicine, however, that makes some health experts worry that heads of government and health ministries will become too infatuated with technology, to the detriment of prevention.

Already, in many developing countries, fully 50 percent of the national health budget goes to a single hospital in the capital city.

'Adoptive father' waits for grandchildren

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Wally Weerts isn't passing out cigars, but its obvious he's proud of his adopted family — a duck and her six offspring.

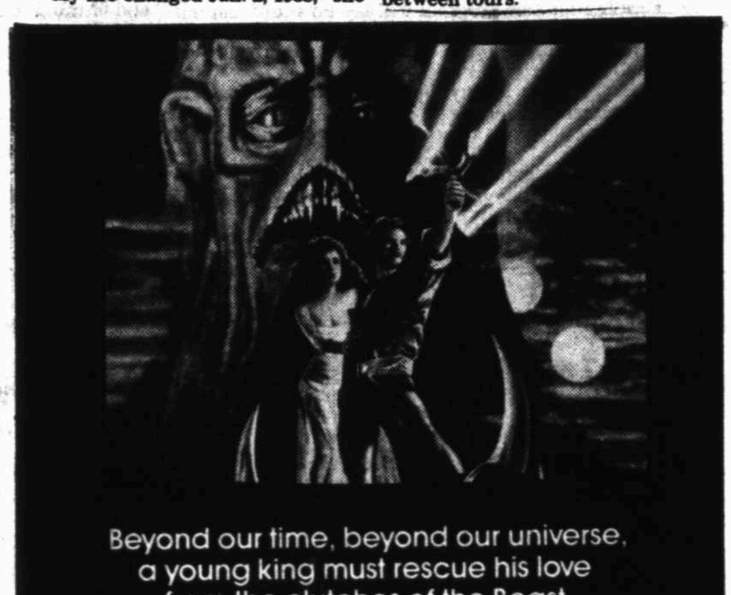

One day in early July, the unlikely stepfather found an egg on top of his pleasure boat, which he keeps on a hoist at Lake Decatur. He moved the egg to go boating, then replaced it.

"Next time I came out it was three eggs. Everytime I came it was another egg, 'til it was up to six," said Weerts, 61.

Not one to disturb an expectant mother, Weerts got a box for the eggs and bolted it to a perch on the electric hoist. Now he can lower the boat without disturbing the nest.

"We're both happy," he said recently.

Weerts feeds the new family every day. "We're waitin' for the grandchildren," he says.

Women's jobs may be outlawed

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The young women who earn their living performing in this North Sea port's peep shows are fighting an effort by the city to outlaw their line of work.

Authorities cite a recent Berlin court ruling that the work "violates the dignity of women." But Angie, who said she was a spokeswoman for Hamburg's peep show performers, disagrees.

"We don't consider our dignity violated, because what we we show is clean sex," she argued at a meeting called by the women to express opposition to the city plan.

Peep show customers pay the equivalent of about 38 cents a minute to view naked women on a rotating platform. There is no contact between the customer and the performer, who is behind a glass panel.

'Love affairs jeopardize security'

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says diplomats and other public officials who engage in love affairs jeopardize national security because they become more "vulnerable."

She commented Thursday to the House of Commons as the government published a Security Commission report on Rhona Jane Ritchie, a former diplomat who pleaded guilty to passing confidential telegrams to her Egyptian diplomat lover.

"People in the public service who allow themselves to enter upon such relationships as that between Miss Ritchie and the Egyptian diplomat need to be aware of the dangers and pressures to which such relationships make them vulnerable," Mrs. Thatcher said.

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — President Efrain Rios Montt has moved up the date of next year's scheduled constituent assembly elections by four weeks — from July 28 to July 1, 1984.

The assembly, which will rewrite the constitution and draft new election laws, will be installed Sept. 15, 1984, the presidential press office said in a statement. It said Rios Montt chose the new date after a meeting Thursday with 22 leaders from several political parties.

Last month, the president said elections would be held July 28. The statement said he changed the date at the urging of most of the parties.

AIDS diagnosed in Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The director of the state Nutrition Hospital says five cases of AIDS have been diagnosed in Mexico City.

Dr. Manuel Campuzano said Thursday that five people suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome are at the hospital, which specializes in research and treatment of rare diseases.

Newspaper defends Coca-Cola

PEKING (AP) — A Chinese newspaper has come to the defense of Coca-Cola, rebutting charges in a national magazine that Coke has too much caffeine, drains China's economy and symbolizes the wicked West.

The front-page articles in the Yangcheng Evening News of Canton are the latest salvo in a debate that flared when the Chinese magazine "New Observations" attacked the well-known soft drink, now produced in China.

"New Observations" said last month that Chinese who drink Coca-Cola are unpatriotic slaves of the West and are ruining their health with a decadent drink.

The Canton newspaper, in Wednesday and Thursday editions seen here today, quoted officials who contended that Chinese Coke contains less caffeine than tea and brings in more foreign money than China spends to buy the patented American syrup.

"Since constant tea drinking won't harm the health, why should Coke drinking be harmful?" it quoted a Chinese deputy director at a Coca-Cola bottling plant in Peking.

"We earn far more foreign exchange than we spend on importing syrup," he was also quoted as saying.

China buys the syrup concentrate by agreement with the U.S.-based Coca-Cola Bottling Co., then bottles the drink in Chinese-owned plants in Peking and Canton which opened last summer. Coca-Cola Co. provided free equipment and technical assistance.

The drink is sold primarily to tourists, who pay 33 cents a bottle in foreign currency. Some Chinese can buy a bottle for the equivalent of 10 cents.

Chinese sources said the Foreign Trade Ministry was furious about the "New Observations" article criticizing Coca-Cola and said it does not represent the government's view.

Chile reaches refinancing agreement

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Foreign banks have agreed to postpone collection of $3.4 billion in debt repayments due from Chile this year and to lend the country another $2.69 billion to pay debt interest and finance imports.

The debt relief package, signed Thursday, is a major step in Chile's effort to overcome a recession troubling most of Latin America. It will raise Chile's foreign debt, already the highest per capita in the region, Chile's effort to overcome a recession troubling most of Latin America. It will raise Chile's foreign debt, already the highest per capita in the region, to more than $20 billion.

The agreement between Chile and 611 creditor banks calls for sharply increased interest rates similar to those set in recent debt refinancing talks between bankers and Brazil, Argentina and Mexico, which account for two-thirds of the region's $300 billion debt.
