Inflation now at 13.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline and fuel oil price increases slowed substantially in October, but overall consumer prices still climbed 1 percent over the previous month, the government reported today.

The advance in the cost of living last month was led by a sharp jump in housing costs, including higher mortgage interest rates, home prices and rents, according to the Labor Department.

Food prices, which had been level through the summer, rose 0.7 percent in October, just under the 0.9 percent increase of September.

The October increase marked the 10th consecutive month in which the Consumer Price Index has risen about 1 percent.

Patrick Jackman, a Labor Department economist, termed it "the same abysmal level we've had, more or less, since the start of the year."

He cautioned that although energy price increases have slowed down, "I wouldn't forecast that this would be the situation in the coming months. ... I don't think anyone expects stability in those prices in the next year or so."

In a related report, the department said retail gasoline prices averaged slightly more than $1 per gallon in October. "This price reflected a small monthly change of only 0.8 cents compared to the August and September increases of 3.7 cents and 3.1 cents, respectively," the report said.

Fuel oil prices averaged 85.6 cents a gallon last month, up 0.8 cents from September, for the smallest monthly increase in fuel oil prices this year.

Inflation also is taking its toll on workers' income, the department said. Average weekly earnings, adjusted for inflation, declined 1.1 percent in October and were 5.2 percent lower than in October 1978.

Jackman said that if price increases continue in the next two months at the same rate they did the first 10 months this year, the nation will end the year with a 13.1 percent inflation rate, the worst since price controls were removed after World War II.

The Consumer Price Index in October stood at 225.4. This means goods and services that cost $100 in 1967 sold for $225.40 last month.

The October index was 12.2 percent higher than 12 months earlier.

By contrast, the index stood at 211.5 in April. The index rose 1.1 percent in May, 1 percent in June and July, 1.1 percent in August and September and 1 percent in October.

The Labor Department gave these breakdowns:

—The cost of housing rose 1.5 percent in October, the ninth consecutive month of large increases. Mortgage costs were up 1.1 percent; home prices up 1.9 percent and rents up 1.3 percent.

—Medical care rose 1 percent, the largest increase since January.

—Clothing costs were up 0.2 percent, reflecting fall sale prices.

—Grocery store prices rose 0.7 percent in October versus 1.1 percent in September. Prices for meats, including beef and pork, poultry, fish and eggs were up. The cost of restaurant meals rose 0.9 percent compared with 0.6 percent in the previous month.

The Carter administration had hoped to hold inflation below last year's 9 percent increase. But in July, it admitted prices would rise at least 10.6 percent this year.

In recent weeks, administration officials have been even more pessimistic. One presidential adviser, who asked not to be identified, said, "I hate to admit it, but 13 percent or more is more than likely."

A 13 percent inflation rate would be the nation's worst since prices rose 18.2 percent in 1946, when wartime controls were lifted.

Oil prices have been — and continue to be — the biggest threat to U.S. efforts to lower inflation, the economists said.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised prices for crude oil 60 percent this year, and consumers have seen gasoline and home heating oil costs skyrocket. In addition, the prices of other goods have gone up because it costs more to transport them.

OPEC members could raise prices again at their Dec. 17 meeting in Caracas, Venezuela. Reports indicate an increase of about 10 percent is being considered.

Other major inflation culprits in recent months have been food and housing prices. But there are some signs these costs, especially interest rates, are beginning to moderate.

Last minute questions debated

$1,950,000 funding okayed

By JAMES WERRELL

Old questions about improvements at the Big Spring Sewer Treatment Plant surfaced anew at today's regular meeting of the city council.

As members were on the brink of a decision of whether to authorize issuance of $1,950,000 in certificates of obligation, citizens at the meeting balked at the idea. Essentially the questions about this method of funding the improvements amounted to the one asked for several months: Is there a cheaper way to meet state requirements in regard to the sewer plant?

The answer from City Manager Don Davis and Financial Adviser Joe Smith was also essentially the same: No.

As the emergency reading of the authorization came up for consideration, Davis informed council members that a deadline loomed both for making an agreement with the State Water Development Board to purchase the certificates and with Belco Construction Company of Temple to begin the work on the project. The funds must be secured before a formal contract is signed with Belco.

When the discussion of the proposal was opened to public discussion, Pat Githens, local minister, rose to present an alternate proposal of his own.

In the introduction of his proposal, Githens said "the state water resources people have stated that the rehabilitation of the plant is not necessary to bring the plant up to state standards. The plant can be made to meet those standards at less expense than what the proposed plans suggest."

Githens then pointed out that the city's plan consists of 12 items totaling $2,906,000, with the major cost item being $1,560,363 for rehabilitation of the existing plant. The new proposal called for elimination of this item for seven years, with an option to begin the rehabilitation at the end of that period.

The rest of the items specified in the plan would be financed through local banks and savings and loans institutions.

In answer to this, Ron King, president of Belco, stated that the figures used by Githens were only for accounting purposes, and could not be broken down as true cost estimates. Furthermore, said King, in order to honor the contract submitted by his company, only listed deductive alternate items could be deleted.

"I can answer only as a contractor, although I, too, am a taxpayer, and I sympathize with your dilemma," said King. "But I have seen other cities try to do the job piecemeal, and it ends up costing them more in the long run."

Davis also pointed out that the deductive alternates in the contract amounted to just over $300,000.

"If we lopped off the deductive alternates, we could save the $300,000, but we would lose the option finance the project through the Water Development Board. The interest rate they are giving us would save the city $500,000," he said.

Another question to arise was why such a large discrepancy existed between the city's estimated cost for the project and the actual cost submitted by Belco.

"Can you see how costs could rise over 30 percent in just 30 days?" Councilman Larry Miller asked King.

"I see no way in which that could happen," he answered.

Miller posed the question several times, but the only answer came from fellow Councilman Jack Y. Smith, who said, "I guess it was just an error on the part of the city engineer, and that's all we'll ever be able to determine."

When nearly an hour of debate and discussion ended, the council voted unanimously to support the city's original plan.

After authorizing the issuance of the certificates of obligation, the council voted to raise sewer charges by $2 a month to pay for them. The ordinance also specified that the surcharge would be dropped when the debt is retired, but the council will not be legally bound by this in the future.

The final action needed to begin the project was the authorization of a formal contract with Belco. This was approved unanimously by the council, enabling construction to begin near the first of the year.

'We Like Mike' event attracts 100

House speaker heaps praise on Ezzell

By EILEEN McGUIRE

"It takes a great man to be elected to office and an even greater man to maintain his standing," Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives said in reference to the honoree of Monday night's "We Like Mike" reception and dinner at Howard College.

More than 100 persons were registered by Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce President Johnnie Lou Avery and 30th Senatorial District State Committeewoman of the Democratic Party Jane Ray at the reception honoring State Representative Mike Ezzell. Ninety plates of dinner were served to persons attending the $100 and $250 plate affair.

Among the distinguished guests at the dinner were Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa, Rep. Gary Thompson of Abilene and former Rep. Renal Rosson, formerly of Snyder, now of Austin.

Rep. Tom Massey of San Angelo and former Rep. Roger Brown of Big Spring were among the many people who expressed good wishes to Ezzell at the 5:30 to 7 p.m. reception.

A concern for apathy, a subject touched on in the 7:30 p.m. dinner invocation delivered by Dr. Rex Kiker of Abilene Christian University, was further expressed by the program speaker, Speaker of the State House of Representatives Bill Clayton.

Clayton's speech was preceded with a welcome by Howard College President Dr. Charles Hays who credited Ezzell and another prestigious guest, Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls, as having been partly responsible for acquisition of the institute for the deaf here. He noted that Howard College and Western Texas College at Snyder would be "impossible" without the support of district state representatives such as Ezzell and Farabee.

A standing ovation followed Farabee's introduction of Clayton, who is the first person in the Texas history to be elected to three consecutive terms as Speaker of the House. A farmer-businessman from Springlake, on the High Plains of West Texas, Clayton is the 59th Speaker of House, having been elected Speaker in 1975 and re-elected in 1977 and 1979.

"He has spearheaded every major piece of legislation passed since he's been speaker," remarked Farabee.

Clayton said in reference to Ezzell. "It's almost impossible to believe the issues you have to answer to each legislative session."

He credited Ezzell for his devotion to the health needs and health care of Texans. Ezzell chairs the Human Resources committee, which deals with everything from welfare to health care.

"Our system of welfare takes care of needs while providing an intitiative to get off (of welfare)," Clayton remarked. "We provide help for the needy, but still offer initiative to break the welfare cycle. If we don't, we'll have generations of people who don't know what initiative is." This last remark provoked a round of supportive applause from the 90 in attendance.

Clayton observed that initiative, free enterprise and great job opportunity resulted in Texas being the third largest state in the union. He held Houston up as an example of the growth economy of Texas. Houston, he said, is growing at an alarming rate, experiencing a growth rate the size of Waco each year.

Migration to Texas, he said, is due to job opportunities in Texas. Job opportunities and Texas' growth economy is in part due to dedication of representatives such as Ezzell and Farabee.

Speaking on apathy, Clayton said, "It's easy to mistake an issue not supported by the majority, but by a vocal group. So, legislators may cast a vote that doesn't meet the needs of the majority."

Directing his remarks to Ezzell, Clayton observed "There are certain members of the Legislature who you know if you call on them, you'll get the job done." Ezzell, he said, is one.

Ezzell, a second term veteran of the 63rd District, currently serves on the Sunset Commission and has chaired and served on a number of major committees. According to Clayton, "No one questions his honesty and integrity."

During a brief speech, Ezzell expressed his appreciation for his colleagues, his wife, Betty, who accompanied him to the dinner, and to the people of the 63rd District.

"It's a great honor to serve you in the Legislature," he said.

In his closing remarks, Farabee noted Big Spring's record as a leader in health services with its four general hospitals, state hospital, V.A. hospital, and rehabilitation center.

Guests from Odessa, Snyder, Lamesa, Austin, Sterling City, San Angelo, Abilene, Houston, Dallas, Pampa and Wichita Falls registered at Monday night's "We Like Mike" gathering to honor the man who, in addition to his legislative achievements, has been named "Outstanding Alumni of Abilene Christian University, "Outstanding Legislator" by Retarded Citizens of Texas, "Outstanding Legislature" at the close of the 66th legislative session, and has been the recipient of the Appreciation Award by Texas Hospitals.

Medical team removes gallstone from deposed Shah of Iran

NEW YORK (AP) — A team of doctors headed by a Canadian radiologist has removed the remaining gallstone from the deposed Shah of Iran but wants to keep him under observation here for "the next few days," a hospital spokesman said today.

The successful removal of the gallstone was expected to be the last medical barrier to the shah's being able to travel, which would allow him to leave the United States if he chooses.

Eamon Brennan of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, where the shah was being treated, said a team led by Dr. H. Joachim Burhenne of the University of British Columbia, removed the stone in an operation late Monday night.

Burhenne helped develop the special non-surgical procedure used on Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

A statement issued by the hospital today said the shah would not be allowed to leave immediately.

The hospital said the shah's bile duct became infected after the earlier operation to remove his gallbladder, but that the infection was controlled.

The shah was toppled last February and eventually settled in Mexico. After he came to the United States last month for surgery, militant Iranian students seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in protest and to demand the shah's extradition to face trial for alleged crimes during his reign.

Fearing attack from U.S. military?

Moslem students mine entrance to embassy

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The Moslem students holding the U.S. Embassy and 49 American hostages warned today they had mined the entire compound, apparently fearing a U.S. military attack. The Iranian armed forces stepped up ground, air and sea activities.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini declared, meanwhile, that the American hostages must be put on trial as spies within the embassy "spy den" itself, and he rejected beforehand any U.N. Security Council decision on the Iran crisis "dictated" by the United States.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet this afternoon and is expected to call for release of the Tehran embassy hostages.

It was unclear from Khomeini's statements, broadcast by state radio, whether he had definitely decided to begin a trial of the hostages, and when it might begin. Previously he said they would be tried if the exiled shah is not returned to Iran.

The students who have occupied the embassy for the past 24 days said mines had been rigged throughout the compound and Moslem militants should not try to enter the embassy or harm the hostages during the emotional holy days of Tasua and Ashura, this Thursday and Friday.

Devout Shiite Moslems in Iran traditionally whip and slash themselves with knives on these two days to signify their willingness to be martyred for Islam.

Previous student statements indicated they had planted explosives they would use to kill the hostages if the United States launched a military attack.

A trial of the hostages would add a dangerous new dimension to the crisis. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said last week, when Khomeini mentioned the possibility of a trial, that it might be the only thing "more unacceptable" than the hostage seizure itself.

"It is an outright violation of diplomatic relations and diplomatic protection," he said.

Khomeini's statements about a trial and rejection of Security Council action seemed to rule out a plan put forward by various quarters — that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi be investigated by an international tribunal.

"Any council or court under the direct influence of the United States, and which has its verdict dictated and which welcomes the conviction of our oppressed nation, is unacceptable to our people," Khomeini declared.

Referring to the hostages, he said, "Furthermore there are many files here, and an investigation of the spy den must be conducted in the locality of the so-called embassy, because the evidence relating to the crime is in the same location."

The increase in Iranian military activity came a day after Khomeini exhorted his followers to mobilize to fight the "satanic" power of the United States.

Paratroopers in full battle dress were seen at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport, which is also a major air force base, embarking on Hercules transport aircraft for an unknown destination.

Local newspapers reported that the Iranian navy "started defensive operations" in the Persian Gulf.

The commanders of the army the navy and the air force all stated that their forces were on alert, "ready to defend Iran with the last drop of their blood."

The ground forces commander, identified only as Gen. Fallahi, was quoted in the Islamic Republic newspaper as saying he had ordered the air space over the holy city of Qom closed to all aircraft. Qom, 120 miles south of Tehran, is the permanent residence of Khomeini, Iran's religious and political leader.

Outside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where 49 American hostages were detained for the 24th day, the revolutionary guards and militant students guarding the compound started distributing weapons-training pamphlets to hundreds of demonstrators who gathered outside the gates.

The war fever and expectations of imminent U.S. military intervention reached such a pitch that the governor of Busher province issued an official denial through the Pars news agency stating that rumors about the "landing of Marines in the province are untrue."

Busher is in the southeastern corner of Iran next to Pakistan, with its shoreline along the Arabian Sea. Last week the U.S. government announced that units of its Pacific fleet had set sail for this area.

The Busher governor, Ahmed Moudaresi Zadeh, told Pars that Iranian naval radar units are on constant alert. He said one of them "picked up an unidentified flying object and we fired a rocket at it." The agency did not elaborate.

Khomeini said in a speech broadcast Monday by Tehran Radio, "An Islamic country ought to be a military one.

"Everyone must learn shooting and military skills....In addition to the religious equipment and faith that the young of our nation possess, they must also be equipped with materials and arms. ...A country that will have 20 million youths in a few years time should have 20 million armed men."

The central headquarters of Khomeini's revolutionary guards, Iran's only effective military force, announced it had formulated a program of nationwide military training and would explain it in future announcements.

Grand jurors to probe two manslaughter cases

The Howard County Grand Jury Wednesday will hear evidence in manslaughter cases against Lonnie Green and Steve Eugene Willis. The two were charged with involuntary manslaughter for deaths resulting from traffic accidents.

Green was driving Oct. 30 when two vehicles collided at the intersection of FM 700 and Cedar. Raymond Edward Brown, 50, Lamesa, was killed. Willis collided with a vehicle ridden in by O.L. Elrod, 64, 403 Washington. Elrod died after the wreck on Nov. 14 at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

District Attorney Rick Hamby will seek indictments on 25 other defendants. They are: Robert M. Aguilar, theft; Johnny Arispe, marijuana possession; Simon Balderas, criminal mischief; Disidoro Junior Canales, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon; George Chester Cox, Jr., DWI — second; Ricardo Flores, aggravated robbery; Oscar Garcia, theft.

James Curtis Hayes and Dwayne Dean Johnson, aggravated robbery; Larry Lara, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle; Linda Lara, theft; Tomas V. Leal, burglary; Gary Wayne Long and William Douglas Long, possession of marijuana; Gilbert Martinez, forgery by passing; Erma L. McCarrell, failure to stop and render aid; also Juan Flores Pereida, aggravated assault; Earnest Howard Phillips, DWI second; Jean Ann Reeves, forgery by passing; Thomas Wayne Savell, DWI second; Carol Ann Scaggs, theft; Albert Louis Stuart, burglary; Herman Eugene Tinsley, DWI-second; Willey Willey Willey and William Noel Tucker, theft.

Cases on two defendants are being brought before the grand jury on investigation status. No charges have been filed on a man arrested on suspicion of assault and another arrested on suspicion of check felony.

Carter will take retaliatory action in Iran, senator says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said today after a meeting with President Carter that he believes the president will take some sort of retaliatory action against Iran once American hostages are released in Tehran.

Johnston also said that while Carter "showed the greatest concern for the hostages," the president considers the honor of the United States more important than the hostages and is not prepared to "do anything" to secure their release.

"The president made it clear that the honor comes before the lives of the hostages," Johnston told reporters after he and other Democratic congressional leaders attended a breakfast meeting with Carter at the White House.

Later, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter, at the breakfast, "made no reference to any sort of punitive action."

Powell added: "He did make a brief reference to the fact that the slate would not be wiped clean simply with the return of the hostages. Everyone knows an incident like this will have an impact on relations."

Referring to Johnston's comment that Carter considered honor more important than the hostages, Powell said the president merely reiterated earlier statements that the United States "will not yield to blackmail and will not negotiate under duress."

The press secretary said he did not know whether Carter actually used the word "honor," but Powell added: "That is obviously an important point, and when we say we will not yield to blackmail that is obviously the reason for it."

Powell said Carter told the congressmen the incident in Tehran, in which U.S. Embassy personnel have been held hostage by militant Iranian students since Nov. 4, "will obviously have a continuing influence on our relationship" with Iran.

Johnston later amplified on his remarks, saying he did not mean to imply any lack of concern for the hostages by the Carter administration.

"He (Carter) showed the greatest concern for the hostages," Johnston said. He said Carter told the congressmen that "there are certain things you cannot negotiate away."

Johnston, in quoting Carter as saying his first concern is the honor of the nation, also said the president meant that there were certain things he would not do to secure the release of the hostages, such as extradite the shah. "There are conditions this country will not pay."

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., said the administration should take stronger action, pointing out he had also urged stronger action during the year-long captivity in North Korea of crewmen from the USS Pueblo.

"I think all nations ought to take the attitude that to seize their embassies is an act of war," Long said. "I think we ought to treat it as an act of war."

He stopped short of urging military action, saying, "There's no point in me saying what I would do. I am not the president."

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., said all the participants at the breakfast "felt it was important to continue to take a restrained position ... because we all know any other action could endanger the lives of the hostages.

Burglars get all but sink

They stopped short of the kitchen sink but got away with the faucets.

Numerous assorted items were lifted in a burglary of the home of Roy Longshore, Longshore Drive, Monday at 11:45 p.m. including a six pack of beer, a fifth of whisky and new faucets for the kitchen sink. Other items included a radio, adding machine, parka, razor and redwood chairs.

The burglar entered by prying open the back door.

Police beat

'Soap opera' investigated

A 19-year-old man was arrested Monday night on suspicion of stealing two bars of soap from a local supermarket.

The man was arrested when a police officer allegedly saw him putting a bar of soap in one of his pockets at Safeway College Park and then leaving the store without paying.

When arrested outside the store, a second bar of soap was found in possession of the suspect. The value of the two bars of soap was estimated at $1.61.

Oscar Solis, 1208 Marijo, told police subjects unknown to him stole his six week old bulldog Monday morning. Value, $150.

Two mishaps were reported Monday.

Alfred John Legris, 1211 Runnels, was driving westbound on the North Service Road of FM 700 from Gregg when he lost control of his vehicle. It jumped the curb and struck a pole, 12:30 p.m.

Vehicles driven by Debney Shane Farris, 703 Scott, and Esteban Chavez, 307 N.E. Ninth, collided at Sixth and Benton, 4:05 p.m.

Shuttle rockets positioned

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians have begun positioning the two rocket boosters that will launch the space shuttle Columbia into orbit.

Officials at the Kennedy Space Center said Monday they hope to have the boosters in position by late December. The current schedule calls for Columbia to be rolled out of the orbiter processing facility about March 21 and attached to the rockets. The strange-looking piggyback craft then will be moved to the launch pad in late April.

The boosters are designed to burn for two minutes before being parachuted back to Earth so they can be used again.

Publisher donates $600,000

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Black athletes won high praise from publisher Walter H. Annenberg and no doubt figured in his $600,000 pledge to the United Negro College Fund.

In a letter to Thomas A. Murphy, chairman of the fund's Capital Resources Development Commission, Annenberg said black athletes have won "the admiration and respect of the entire nation."

The fund's executive director Christopher Edley said that to receive the full $600,000, the Philadelphia-area drive must top the amount raised last year by $50,000 to $458,000. Otherwise, the Annenberg grant will be $500,000, he said.

Reactor operating again

RED WING, Minn. (AP) — Northern States Power Co.'s Prairie Island nuclear reactor, which went down for the second time in two months on Nov. 15, is back in operation, according to a company spokesman.

The reactor, one of two at the plant, shut down automatically Nov. 15 when a cooling water pump motor burned out. The same reactor had been shut down for 21 days as a result of a radiation leak Oct. 2.

NSP spokesman Steve London said the burnout caused no radiation leakage. Plant Manager Pat Tierney said a backup emergency system prevented overheating when the motor burned out.

Judge allows visitation

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A judge has ruled William Walker can visit his comatose wife in the hospital — if he's accompanied by a guard.

Before Monday's ruling by Circuit Judge Benson Trimble, Walker was barred from seeing his wife Patsy at all. Trimble ordered Walker to stay away, police said, after a nurse last month found someone had stuffed Mrs. Walker's mouth with sleeping pills. Walker visited that day. No charges were filed.

Mrs. Walker has been unconscious since Oct. 4 when she was admitted for treatment of a head injury that Walker said came from a fall. The reason was disputed by Mrs. Walker's doctor.

Long campaigns test tolerance

AUSTIN — The problem of ever-longer presidential campaigns may soon replace the weather as the thing everyone talks about but no one does anything about.

Even President Carter is saying campaigns are too long. That's ironic since Carter started his campaign for 1976 in 1974.

His success undoubtedly helped persuade the many ambitious candidates of 1980's election to crank up early.

It's always hard to tell when a campaign began. Official announcements usually come long after everyone knows someone is running.

But even the announcements are coming early this time. Most of them already are in, and the general election still is almost a year away.

Until a few years ago, candidates would have been called crazy if they announced before Jan. 1 of the election year. Now we say Gerald Ford cannot be considered as a possible candidate because he doesn't have several months of campaigning behind him.

The price we pay for these long-range political fights is substantial.

Candidates must pull in more contributions to try to maintain momentum over a longer period. That makes them more vulnerable to the special interests that are willing to provide funds.

Probably the greatest danger, however, is that the American people will become more bored than ever with the political process.

How tired can we be next summer of the rhetoric and ranting? Very.

The Texas Railroad Commission races are off to early starts also.

Jim Hightower, the Denison-born populist who formerly edited the liberal Texas Observer, is blasting away at incumbent Jim Nugent.

In contrast, State Rep. Buddy Temple of Diboll is more into quiet planning and money-raising for his challenge of commission Chairman John Poerner.

Temple has lined up some heavyweights for his political corner, ranging from former Ladybird Johnson press secretary Liz Carpenter to Dallas Cowboys owner Clint Murchison.

Nugent and Poerner aren't officially politicking yet.

Delaying an official announcement of candidacy is an advantage to an incumbent commissioner. Until he announces, the commission's Information Services Office will put out news releases at state expense quoting almost any speech or comment.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally's fund-raising abilities are causing headaches for Democratic candidates as well as other Republicans.

"Connally has gone through this state with a vacuum cleaner," one Democrat with a prominent role in the Carter campaign said recently.

New voter registrations mailed in Howard County

Mrs. Zirah Bednar, tax assessor-collector, advises the new voter registrations have been mailed to all registered voters in Howard County. They will be valid beginning March 1, 1980 through Feb. 28, 1982.

As required by law they have been mailed, individual, first class mail. Also, the law requires they cannot be forwarded. What this means is anyone who has moved, changed mailing address, or name and not corrected their voter registration in this office will not receive their new voter registration, said Mrs. Bednar.

Any errors on your new voter registration should be corrected. To do so please make the correction on your card and return to this office and a new one will be mailed.

Credit counseling: Bad times boost business

By the Associated Press

Thousands of people from all walks of life are jamming credit counseling centers in a last-ditch attempt to get out from under a personal mountain of debt.

"We've had attorneys. We've had doctors. We've had CPAs. There's nobody exempt from this," said Harry Strain, head of the counseling office in Portland, Ore.

There are 190 nonprofit centers like the one in Portland. They operate under the umbrella of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit and they try to help families who have stretched their budgets as far as they will go.

In 1978, the centers held 114,000 counseling sessions. No figures are available for this year, but Robert Gibson, the director of the Washington-based foundation, said the number of applications has "increased dramatically."

Gibson and other counselors say there are lots of reasons for the increase: Inflation. High fuel bills. The loss of a job. Too many credit cards. An income that doesn't stretch quite as far as you thought it would. The total outstanding consumer installment debt today — not counting mortgages — is over $1,300 for every man, woman and child in the country.

For some people, counseling is enough. A little advice — sell the second car, spend less on non-essentials — is all it takes.

For about half the applicants, however, the problem is more serious. They need debt management programs.

These families are put on strict budgets: no credit cards, no extras. Each month, they set aside a lump sum of money and turn it over to a counselor who, in turn, uses it to pay the bills — a little at a time. The counselor works with creditors to reach an arrangement that will be fair to both sides. People who can afford it pay a small fee, but local businesses often underwrite counseling programs since the centers offer them a chance to recover money they otherwise might never collect.

Strain's office in Portland is typical. "We have shown quite an increase in our requests for counseling," he said. "It's a lot of things ... A lot of people have ... gone ahead and spent as they would have ordinarily and that dollar didn't bring what the other dollar did."

Credit cards are the downfall of some, Strain said. "What so many people have not realized is that they use this card as phony money — and it isn't money at all. And they have that day of reckoning."

Gibson said the inflation psychology — buy now before the price goes up and pay for your purchase with cheaper dollars — is dangerous, particularly in an economy as uncertain as today's. "If we do indeed get into an unemployment situation where the percentage of unemployment grows to 8 or 9 or 10 percent, those families ... will have no dollars — cheap or otherwise."

Mayneen Dykstra of the Central Illinois Consumer Credit Counseling Service in Peoria said that a comfortable income is no insurance against debt. "In Peoria, the economy is good. The take-home pay really is good. But I think families believe they can do more with their dollars than what they can actually do ... They've never taken home so much money and they think it'll buy more than what it really does."

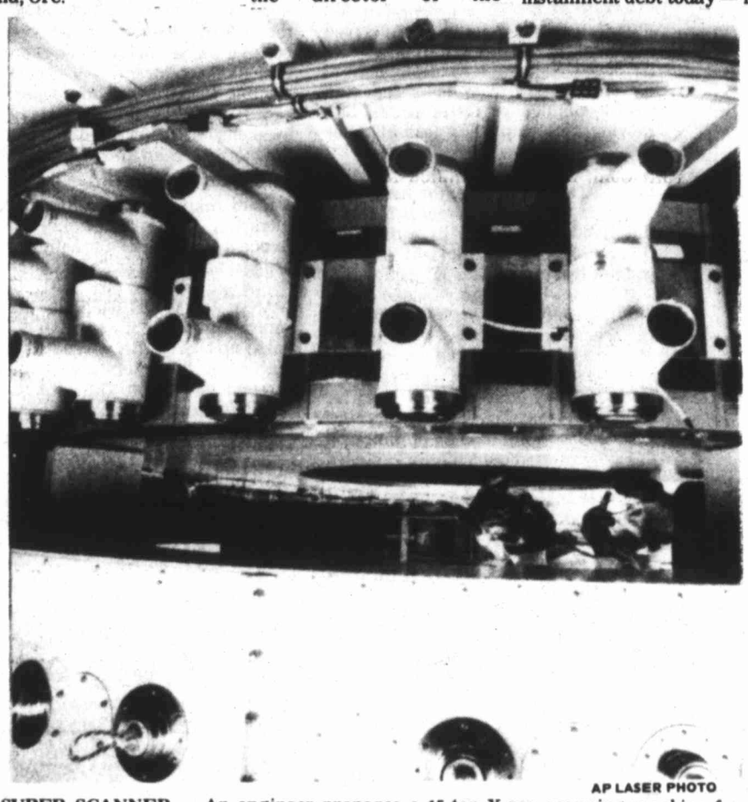

A profile of the families in trouble in Peoria in the first six months of this year shows an average annual income of $17,049 and an average outstanding installment debt of $10,627. Both income and debt are about 20 percent higher than they were in 1978.

The 1979 families are older than last year's: The average age of the client is 31 as opposed to 29. They have more creditors: 13 instead of 12. And more are buying homes: 34 percent versus 28 percent.

It takes most families from one to three years to get out of debt, Mrs. Dkystra said. There are few repeaters.

Strain said the transition from red ink to black isn't easy. "It's the first two or three months that's the hardest," he said. All credit cards must go. "We take them and cut them in half and mail them back to their creditors..."

Strain said cooperation from creditors has been "excellent." They are willing to wait for their money; in some cases, they suspend finance charges. "We're dispersing nearly $2 million a year out of this one office to creditors so we've proved it works," he said.

Danger signals

By the Associated Press

Warning: Your family budget may be headed for trouble.

Here are some of the danger signals:

—Delaying payments a little bit each month.

—Charging necessities and little things. Using credit to buy groceries. Or pulling out a piece of plastic for a $5 purchase.

—Paying only the minimum due each month on revolving accounts.

—Using savings to meet current expenses. You should keep an easily usable savings account equal to one or two months of income.

—Letting debts pile up. As a general rule, your monthly installment debt — not counting the mortgage — should equal no more than 20 percent of your monthly take-home pay.

—Regularly writing checks for more than you have in your account, then rushing to the bank a day or two later to deposit money to cover yourself.

Families in trouble can get help from local affiliates of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, 1819 H St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20006. The 190 local counseling centers — listed in the white pages of the telephone book under "credit" or "consumer" — work out budgets and help people plan extended debt repayment programs.

Oil-state senators want to trim $10 billion more

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oilstate senators, savoring a firstround victory over backers of President Carter's "windfall-profits" tax, want to trim an additional $10 billion from the scaled-down version approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, urged the Senate to exclude from the tax the first 1,000 barrels of crude oil pumped each day by independent operators. That would exempt about 15 percent of the nation's production and benefit all but the largest oil companies.

The Senate refused to kill the Bentsen amendment Monday in a preliminary 52-32 vote and scheduled a yes-or-no vote on it today.

The Bentsen proposal would reduce the estimated take from the tax over the next 11 years from the $138 billion expected under the Senate committee version to about $128 billion.

On a 50-32 vote Monday, the Senate defeated an attempt by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., to junk the Senate Finance Committee bill in favor of the $277 billion version approved by the House and endorsed by President Carter.

Bumpers' substitute would have set aside $138 billion of the tax revenue over the next decade for reducing Social Security taxes and for helping Americans pay rising energy costs. The Finance Committee version designates more than $60 billion for energy assistance and opens the way for a one-year Social Security tax freeze in 1981.

Thirty-two of the Senate's 42 Republicans joined 18 Democrats — including 10 from big energy-producing states — to defeat the Bumpers proposal. Five Republicans and 27 Democrats opposed it.

Bumpers said the real question is whether the American people should have a bigger share of the estimated $1 trillion that will flow to oil producers over the next decade as a result of Carter's decision to phase out price controls on U.S. crude oil. Decontrol will mean increased revenues for producers and higher prices for consumers.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., supporting the committee bill, cited estimates that ending price controls with no "windfall" tax at all would increase U.S. production by about 4 million barrels a day by the late 1990s. Passing the House bill would cut that increase to 2 million, Dole said, while the Finance Committee version would mean an increase of 3 million barrels daily.

Chrysler Corp. resigns from Roundtable

DETROIT (AP) — Lee A. Iacocca, chairman of Chrysler Corp., has pulled the struggling automaker out of the New York-based Business Roundtable because the group opposes federal loan guarantees for Chrysler.

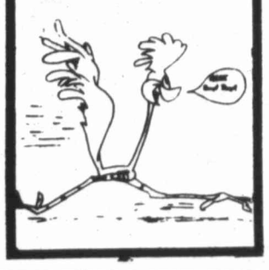

The Policy Committee of the coalition of business leaders said in a Nov. 13 meeting that "whatever the hardships of failure may be for particular companies and individuals, the broad social and economic interests of the nation are best served by allowing this system to operate as freely and fully as possible ...

"Now is the time to reaffirm the principle of 'no federal bailouts.'"

Iacocca said the group had not given Chrysler a chance to explain its request for $1.5 billion in loan guarantees. Chrysler is expected to lose nearly $1 billion during fiscal 1979, analysts have said.

The Roundtable contended federal assistance would best be offered if Chrysler first goes bankrupt. But Iacocca said Chrysler would be unable to raise large amounts of capital while in bankruptcy court, and claimed the Roundtable had not consulted bankruptcy experts.

We should exercise maximum caution

"It's interesting to note (in a publication called "Insurance Facts") that the most expensive fire in American history occurred in San Francisco in 1904 when (with the help of a massive earthquake) 28,000 buildings were destroyed at a cost of about $350 million.

The only conflagration which comes close to the tragedy in the California metropolix occurred in Chicago Oct. 8-10, 1871. After Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern, 17,430 buildings went up in smoke, resulting in a total loss of $175 million.

ODDLY ENOUGH, the loss of life in Chicago's great fire didn't approach the number killed in a Peshtigo, Wisc., halocaust the same day the Chicago fire broke out. Chicago's persistent blaze, although it lingered for three days, killed 'only' 250, whereas the Wisconsin flames resulted in 1,152 deaths. Not even the fire on the New York riverboat, the SS General Slocum, claimed as many lives, although the Slocum tragedy was the only one in American history to stuff how the lives of as many as 1,000 people. The Slocum toll was ultimately reported at 1,030.

Some of the worst fires have occurred in Texas. Dallas had a department store conflagration in 1964 that resulted in a $7 million loss. When a chemical complex at Texas City was rocked by explosions in 1969, the loss was estimated at $30 million. In Beaumont, flames swept a chemical manufacturing plant, resulting in a loss of $16,050,000. A Galena Park grain elevator was wiped out by fire in 1976, resulting in damages totaling $42 million.

As recently as last year, an apartment complex in Houston was razed by flames, resulting in a loss of $4,623,900.

Texas' biggest loss of life due to fire occurred Sept. 7, 1943, when the Gulf Hotel burned, ending the life of 54.

It might surprise a lot of people to learn that at least 33 earthquakes in the United States have caused damages ranging anywhere from $1 million to $553 million.

WE MERE MORTALS are largely helpless when nature misbehaves and delivers an earthquake unto us but all of us could exercise more caution in controlling the threat of fire.

So many great forest fires have been destroyed with a carelessly thrown match. So many urban blazes have been started by open flames where safety precautions were not observed.

My brother's keeper

William F. Buckley, Jr.

My brother the bard of Scrabble, Virginia — the Right Honorable James Jackson Kilpatrick, who presides over a distillery that manufactures more truths, insights, cogencies and songs than anyone in the business — has a fox in his bosom; and for old time's sake, I want to help him out. It is that Ronald Reagan is unqualified to be president because he hasn't had any experience in Washington D.C.

I TEASED HIM about that one and said the real reason he had turned against Reagan was that Reagan once referred to him on "Meet the Press" as "Jim," whereas he is known as Kilpo, or Jack, or — to the cognoscenti — as Numero Uno. I mentioned this in order to seek to amuse John Sears, the manager of Mr. Reagan's campaign, and Sears brightened and said "Kilpatrick has problems? Reagan regularly refers to Perry Duryea as 'Dan,'" — thus nicely confusing a very active political figure in the State of New York with a veteran Hollywood tough-guy.

Anyway, the subject comes up every now and then, often from people who despair finding in Mr. Reagan any signs of physical decomposition. "What does he know about Washington? All his experience has been in California."

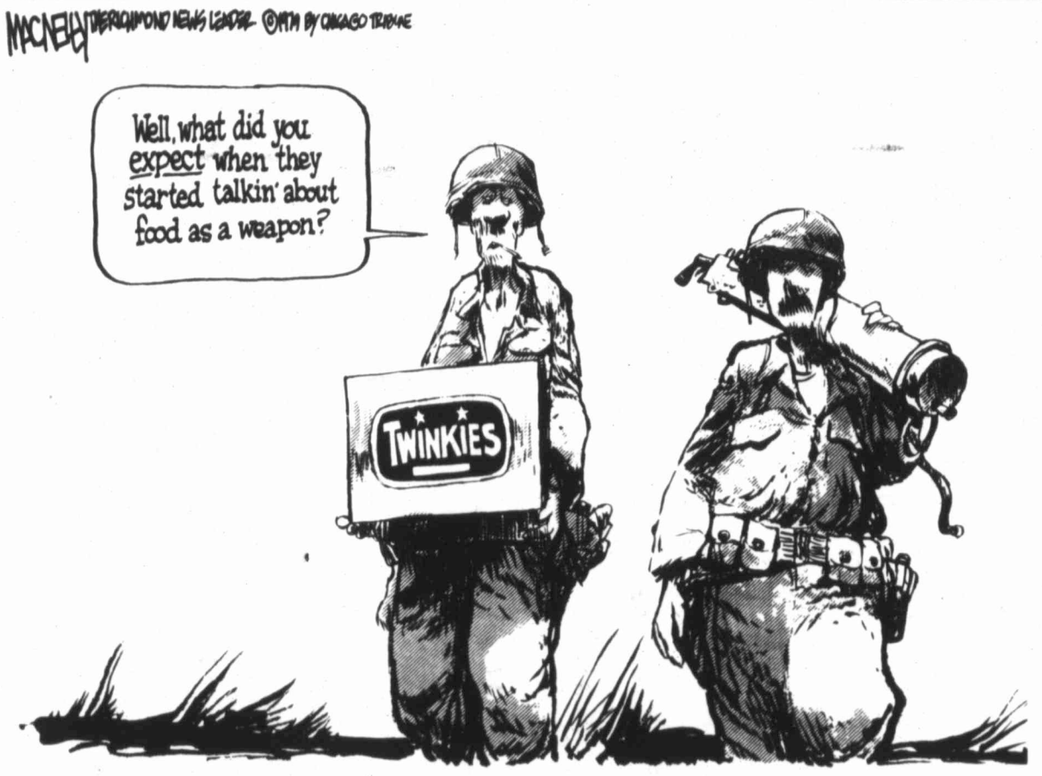

Now it is true President Carter has given not-knowing-anything-about-Washington a bad name. But because Mr. Carter is a poor president, it does not follow that he is a poor president because he didn't know anything about Washington. As a matter of fact there are those who believe that if not knowing anything about Washington means that he has less success than he would otherwise have had in getting his bills through Congress, then the country has been spared some very bad legislation on account of that ignorance.

NO, IT ISN'T a matter of not having had experience in Washington that paralyzed Carter. Carter is immobilized by moral electrodes that flash through his mind giving out impulses that are inconsistent with reality and often contradictory. That sort of thing doesn't seem to impair Ronald Reagan, as witness that even while a declared conservative, he presided serenely over the fortunes of the hectic state of California and left the patient in very good condition.

But the key answer to the question is, surely, that abstractly stated it isn't possible to be prepared for the presidency — if by a qualified president is meant someone who executes the authority given to the president by the Constitution of the United States and the 96 Congresses that have imposed on the chief executive burdens at an exponential rate of speed. In theory, we have presidents who are bionic men, capable in a single day of setting the day's quota for dill pickles, scrutinizing the credentials of a proposed federal judge, placating the dissidents in his cabinet, saying yes and no to a request by the CIA, lecturing to the convention of Girl Scouts of America, preparing for a press conference at which he might be asked what will be the impact of entitlement transfers on the windfall profits tax, hurrying to the Situation Room to figure out how to help the Saudi's define Mecca, giving him little time to decide whether a Baptist has any business worrying about Mecca, changing for dinner and going over the speech prepared for him recounting the benefactions to mankind's Sekou Toure for that evening's state dinner.

THE ANSWER OF course is written into the aphorism, "Where there are no alternatives, there are no problems."

Liver 'bounces back' well

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is there any other disease that can be mistaken for cirrhosis of the liver? I have it, and it certainly can't be alcoholism in my case because I'm not a heavy drinker. I also have hepatitis. I don't work with chemicals, so that can't be it either. How is cirrhosis definitely diagnosed? — Mrs. J.S.

Cirrhosis of the liver means scarring of that organ from any cause. Absolute proof of cirrhosis is made by examining a piece of tissue under a microscope. The tissue usually is obtained with a special needle.

Although cirrhosis is found in those who abuse alcohol, many other illnesses can cause the scarring, your hepatitis among them. Besides chemical poisoning, other causes of cirrhosis include a peculiar form of bile duct disorder. Even heart failure can lead to liver cirrhosis.

In answer to another reader (J.W.), there are no specific diet restrictions with cirrhosis, but if scarring has been extreme, protein intake has to be modified, vitamins prescribed and salt restricted. As to yourself, J.S., you should avoid alcohol now, no matter what the immediate cause of your cirrhosis. The liver tissue must be given time to recover. It is a remarkable organ, the liver. Well over half of it may be destroyed, yet the rest can continue to perform all the duties necessary to a healthy life.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is it true that nose and mouth sores can mean a certain vitamin deficiency? Which ones? Are there tests for this? — Mrs. R.W.

These can be signs of a B6 deficiency. There are tests to show if one is deficient. The many questions concerning vitamins prompted the new booklet, "Vitamins: Facts You Need to Know." it's now available. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have pancreatitis and take Pancreatin for it. What is the pancreas and what part does it serve in digestion? Is there any drawback in taking Pancreatin indefinitely? — C.J.J.

The pancreas is a large, somewhat tongue-shaped organ at the rear of the abdominal cavity. It has two functions — to make insulin for control of blood sugar and to produce enzymes that break food down into chemicals that can be absorbed by the body. It's sort of a chemical blending machine.

Inflammation can cause the pancreas to lose one of its functions, yet retain the other. That is, it can lose its enzyme function and still produce the insulin needed for blood-sugar control. Since you mention using Pancreatin, I assume that function is lost or diminished in your case. Loss of insulin production would cause diabetes (high blood sugar).

Pancreatin (marketed under various trade names) is a mixture of those digestive enyzmes the normal pancreas makes. It has few side effects and can be taken for long periods of time. The purpose is, of course, to replace the substance the pancreas is not producing naturally.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am writing for my husband. He just turned 50 and is a tractor operator. He does not get enough exercise for one thing. For the past year he has complained about a burning sensation in his feet. He walks around barefooted when he gets home and can't stand covers on his feet. His feet seem normal to the touch.

He is 5 feet, 8 inches and weighs 190 pounds. He drinks a fair amount (too much), and otherwise says he feels OK. Don't you think he needs his blood tested or something? His doctor has him on vitamins. An answer in the paper would be appreciated. — P.G.

The burning sensation may well be due to malfunction of the nerves to his feet, although being overweight can be a part of it, too. Excessive alcohol can cause this sensation. It may be due to a lack of certain B vitamins, especially one called "pantothenic acid." Does his doctor know about his alcohol intake?

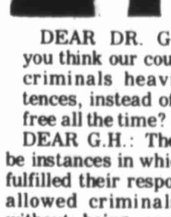

The constant jostling from the tractor work can place pressure on spinal nerves and contribute to his problem.

There's an old saying — if your feet hurt, you hurt all over. Dr. Donohue's booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," shows you how to avoid and take care of foot problems. To get your copy, write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Should I be concerned about my 12-year-old daughter who consumes about three cups of sunflower seeds each day? She likes the salty kind. — O.A.

You probably should be concerned because of the amount of salt. Otherwise the seeds are a source of some essential (not made by the body) fatty acids, protein, fiber and some B vitamins. But this is too much of a good thing.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Don't you think our courts ought to give criminals heavier prison sentences, instead of letting them go free all the time? — G.H.

DEAR G.H.: There certainly may be instances in which courts have not fulfilled their responsibility and have allowed criminals to be released without being sentenced justly for their crimes. The principle of justice — which I believe is clearly taught in Scripture — is that a person should be held accountable for his actions. If a person refuses to abide by the just laws of society, then he should pay the consequences. I believe the government also has a responsibility under God to be just in its legal system. The Bible says the governing authority is "God's servant, an agent of wrath to bring punishment on the wrongdoer" (Romans 13:4).

At the same time, studies suggest that our present way of dealing with those who have broken the laws may be missing some key ingredients. Prisons in many instances are filled, and yet they have a very high percentage of persons in them who have been in prison before. In other words, they have seemingly done little to rehabilitate criminals, and therefore are not helping to lower the crime rate very much. Personally, I like the suggestion of some experts that criminals not only be subject to prison sentences but also be made responsible for restitution (in some cases as a substitute for prison). In other words, if (for example) someone stole a sum of money, part of his punishment would be making sure he paid back what he had taken. I am not in a position to judge this proposal politically, but it has had encouraging results in some experimental programs.

There is another thing I want to bring to your attention. Why is there even such a thing as crime, and why do we need prisons? The problem is ultimately a spiritual one — we are selfish and sinful. That is why prisons alone are not the answer, no matter what their programs may be. Only Christ can change the human heart, and I have seen Him do it in the lives of many — including people in prisons I have visited. No matter who we are, we all need the spiritual rebirth which only Christ can bring when we turn to Him in faith.

Thank you, thank you

Around the rim

Marie Homeyer

Now that Thanksgiving has come and gone and with it the tremendous traffic and calorie-rich food, I wish to compile a list of thank-yous about the fact that it is all over.

I am thankful that the traffic from Big Spring to Shreveport was not worse than it was this past Wednesday. If it had been any worse, then my fiance and I would have been crawling at a snail's pace along the interstate and would have arrived after the turkey and trimmings were devoured. As it was, we got caught in a traffic jam west of Tyler that had traffic stopped at some points and moving at 40 mph and less at other points.

I AM THANKFUL that my stomach survived the beating I put it through this holiday weekend. In addition to turkey and dressing and all the goodies there was more. The day after was worse. Hot fudge sundaes and a late night orgy. Now, before you all get the wrong idea, let me explain. The orgy I am talking about is a seven-course Mexican dinner with refried beans and chicken tamales and the works. To eat that much at any time is a sin, but at 10 p.m. and the day after Thanksgiving goodies makes it that much more of a sin.

I am thankful also that after all that spicy food that afterwards the "old married couples" we were with wanted to take advantage of a night out without the kids. At least the food had time to settle before we had to sleep on it.

I AM THANKFUL that I am not the parent who has to buy Christmas presents this year. After one afternoon in the toy departments of several different stores with the kids, my much-depleted pocketbook is glad it is not the one that will be dishing out the money to pay for the very expensive things that are manufactured for today's children.

I am thankful for my nice, quiet bedroom where the only thing that awakens me before eight o'clock in the morning is an alarm clock and not four screaming kids.

I am thankful that all the anxious moments I had about meeting my fiance's family were for nothing. They are just as special as he is.

AND, I AM THANKFUL that the return trip was not as bad as the trip going up there. There was hardly any traffic on the interstate. I made it through downtown Dallas and Fort Worth without any close calls and the trip was an hour shorter than it was going up.

And, last of all, I am thankful that I had a day to recuperate from the adventure before having to return to work. I don't know if I could have made it any other way.

Seduced by big oil

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — The U.S. setbacks in the Middle East, culminating in the outrage in Iran, had their origins in a sordid love affair — the seduction of the Washington establishment by the oil industry.

The story goes back to the early 1920s when the American oil majors got the U.S. government to bulldoze their entry into the previously closed-off Middle East oil lands. Once inside, the companies joined with their European counterparts in closing the door to anyone else.

For the next 50 years, the State Department not only intervened with foreign governments to gain oil concessions but adjusted U.S. foreign policy to accommodate the oil industry. Throughout the Middle East, our embassies served virtually as branch offices for the oil companies.

The Central Intelligence Agency stood ready to undermine any foreign government that tried to defy the oil companies. To protect oil privileges in Iran, for example, the CIA deposed Mohammed Mossadegh in 1953 and installed the shah upon the Persian throne.

WITH WASHINGTON CONNIVANCE, the oil industry established a corporate world government in oil matters dominated by a handful of companies. Of these, the greatest were Exxon, Shell and British Petroleum.

For the participating American companies, the main result was that the American consumers were never to benefit from the incredibly cheap-to-produce Middle East oil. Nor would anyone else in international commerce. For the world price was pegged to the high production cost on the U.S. Gulf Coast, not to the 10 cents a barrel it cost to pump oil out of the Middle East.

The price-fixing was enforced by a complex system of worldwide marketing arrangements and spheres of influence. Then the growing world demand for oil made it possible for the cartel simply to control the world supply of oil at its main source — the Middle East.

IT WAS A LESSON that did not go unnoticed by the oil caliphs. Soon Mossadegh's throttled cry was picked up by Egypt's late Gamal Abdel Nasser who preached Arab unification and screamed "Oil is for the Arabs!"

As with most prophets, Nasser found his goals largely thwarted in his lifetime. But one of his most fervent disciples, Libya's Muammar Qaddafi, confronted the oil companies. As he suspected, the companies were far less willing than he to go without oil profits.

He divided them, as a wolf would cut out sheep, by imposing selective cutbacks, first on Occidental, then Exxon, then others. In a year of grand blusterings and splendid ruses, Qaddafi conquered the oil companies one by one.

After he was through, OPEC heavyweights such as Saudi Arabia and Iran, which had been watching raptly from the sidelines, jumped in and got the same terms Qaddafi had won. Thus began the tyranny of the aggressive weak over the self-disarmed strong and the tolerability of torn-up contracts, unilateral cutbacks, illegal nationalizations and political blackmail.

By the early 1970s, the lordly oil majors had become reduced to the role of lackeys for the Arabs. The oilmen pleaded that, in the hairy times ahead in the Middle East, price was not their vital interest since they could pass price increases on and profit by them. What was vital to the oilmen was continued preferential access to Middle East oil by the majors.

IN RETURN, the oil companies offered their magnificent worldwide system of exploration, production, transport, refining and marketing — without which a sheik's decrees were but weak whispers lost on a sea of chaos. But of far greater value, the oil barons agreed to use their influence in Washington to help the Arabs manipulate the United States.

Their success must go down as one of the greatest scandals of our times. First, the United States stood by in 1973 while the shah or Iran led the drive for a gigantic oil price increase. Top-secret documents show that Washington had the muscle to shut up the shah and to restrain the Saudis.

It needs to be repeated again and again: The United States could have stopped the oil gouge! Not only did our leaders fail to do this, they also managed to lose Iran and alienate Saudi Arabia in the interim.

Our only protection against being both closed down for want of energy and bankrupted by its cost, meanwhile, was to steadily increase the percentage of our energy produced at home.

This seemed a task that America, brimming with natural resources, bursting with technological know-how, fortified by a traditionally public-spirited citizenry and a can-do mentality, seemed uniquely equipped to undertake.

BUT THE OIL MAJORS had a different goal; their aim was to continue raking in oil profits from the Middle East. The greed of the oil companies rather than the desperate need of the nation, won out.

In the six years since President Richard Nixon emptily promised "energy independence by 1980," our dependence on imported energy has jumped from 33 percent to 50 percent.

The performance of the Washington establishment has been pathetic, aimless, ignoble, listless, ignorant and self-indulgent while the problem has gone from worse to intolerable.

"Why sure, good buddy! Hop right in!"

Security Council debate to begin today

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council planned to begin its debate on the U.S.-Iranian crisis this afternoon and Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim raised the possibility the Iranians might free their 49 American hostages in exchange for an international inquiry into their charges against the shah.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said that in addition to the situation of the hostages the Council session must focus on the shah's dictatorship. He told his followers to arm themselves to fight the United States, and his revolutionary guard said it would launch a program of military training for all Iranians.

In response to the wave of hate Khomeini is whipping up against the United States in the Islamic world, the State Department said it was urging dependents and non-essential personnel attached to its embassies in 10 Moslem countries to return to the United States.

The 15 members of the Security Council met privately until almost midnight Monday. Afterward Waldheim told reporters they would continue their informal discussion at 11 a.m. EST today and then hold a formal open meeting at 3 p.m. in response to his request for an urgent debate on the crisis that erupted Nov. 4 when Khomeini's followers seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and demanded the return of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran to stand trial.

Iran requested that the council meeting be delayed until next week, contending that Acting Foreign Minister Abolhassan Bani Sadr could not attend until then because of a religious observance Friday and the national referendum on Iran's new Islamic constitution Sunday. But most of the council members felt they could not delay that long because Waldheim had called for an "urgent" meeting.

U.N. sources said Iran then agreed to a short meeting at which only Waldheim would speak followed by adjournment until next week. But they said the United States also insisted on speaking to keep the spotlight on the hostages and their plight.

This conflict was expected to be cleared up during the morning consultations, and it was assumed that the United States would speak at the public meeting.

Waldheim told ABC-TV's Barbara Walters he had the impression Iran and the United States would agree to an international inquiry into the Khomeini regime's allegations against the shah in exchange for the release of the hostages. Khomeini and his supporters charge that the deposed monarch was responsible for the death of 60,000 Iranian opposed to him during his 37-year reign and that he and his family looted the country of billions.

The Venezuelan government said Bani Sadr and Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akhbar Moinfar told Venezuela's energy minister, Humberto Canderon Berti, in a meeting in Tehran Monday the crisis could be resolved by trying the shah before an "international jury" made up of one representative each from a Western country, a non-aligned nation and Iran, and eventually a member of the International Court of Justice.

Khomeini told a Japanese television interviewer in Qum, the ayatollah's residence 100 miles south of Tehran, "Iran cannot recognize it if a U.N. Security Council meeting was held to discuss only the American hostage issue. The debate should also be held on the chaotic administration of the former shah... and a group of plunderers who had supported it. Our purpose is not to retaliate but to make clear before the world the truth of who had supported Pahlavi, who had suppressed and exploited the Iranian people."

The ayatollah told his followers, in a speech broadcast Monday by Tehran Radio, that "an Islamic country ought to be a military one. Everyone must learn shooting and military skills...In addition to the religious equipment and faith that the young of our nation possess, they must also be equipped with materials and arms...A country that will have 20 million youths in a few years' time should have 20 million armed men."

Khomeini's revolutionary guards, Iran's only effective military force, announced it had formulated a program of nationwide military training and would explain it in future announcements.

Two young American women married to Iranians and a third American woman living with an Iranian family for two months told a news conference in Tehran Monday they supported the takeover of the U.S. Embassy and that the hostages should be tried as spies.

The three, all in their 20s, Mariam Kazemi, formerly of New York; Molly McComb, formerly of Los Angeles, and Margaret Hunter of Atlanta.

The shah continued under treatment for cancer in a New York hospital, and medical sources said a Canadian radiologist would attempt in the next few days to remove a gallstone by a new non-surgical technique. The shah's doctor said if the attempt failed, an operation would be required and it could not be performed for a month or more.

U.S. reaction to Iran running hot and cold

By The Associated Press

In New York, a multimillion dollar Iranian restaurant closed its doors. In Spokane, Wash., a businessman ran an ad seeking help for the hostages held in Tehran. And in St. Louis, an Iranian youth was presented with the city's Good Citizen award.

Meanwhile, as 49 Americans adjusted to their fourth week of life in captivity at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, scrutiny of Iranian visas and protests against the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini continued in cities around the country.

The actions came as the U.N. Security Council agreed to meet to discuss the crisis and as Khomeini urged the 35 million residents of Iran to learn to handle weapons and unite against the United States.

'People from Hoboken, N.J., to Spokane are angry. All we do is get kicked in the pants by these 12th-rate military countries," George Bible, president of Personnel Unlimited, an employment agency, said Monday after running an ad calling for "an expeditionary force to go to Iran and free Americans held captive there."

"I'm not some right-wing radical or out of my tree," Bible said, adding he has received a number of calls, some of them from veterans. "I'm a reasonable man, but the government hasn't done a damn thing to free those 49 people."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., meanwhile, cautioned against any rescue similar to the 1976 Israeli raid to free hostages held at a Ugandan airport.

Gusty cold front moves into state

By the Associated Press

A gusty cold front moved into the Texas Panhandle early today, bringing with it strong winds and much colder temperatures.

The front was moving southeastward along a line from near Wichita Falls to just north of Midland during the predawn hours.

Forecasts called for gusty winds and colder temperatures across most of the state. Highs were to range from the 40s in the Panhandle to the 80s in far South Texas, but most of the state was to have highs the 60s and 70s.

Low cloudiness was reported across the eastern half of the state and some early morning fog was reported in South Central and South Texas.

Dense fog reduced visibility to about one-fourth of a mile in San Antonio before dawn, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a travelers advisory for the San Antonio metropolitan area.

FORECAST

WEST TEXAS — Fair and cooler today. Clear and cooler tonight. Sunny and colder most sections Wednesday. Highs middle 40s Panhandle to near 70 Big Bend. Lows middle teens Panhandle, upper teens mountains to low 30s Big Bend. Highs Wednesday middle 30s Panhandle to middle 60s Big Bend.

What about the Cambodian Crisis?

No one, for the past several weeks, has been able to pick up a newspaper without reading something, in bold black print, concerning the nightmare in Iran.

Although there is no doubt in anyone's mind as to the seriousness of the situation, another problem, although of a different nature, but of equal caliber, has been over-shadowed by the news coverage given to the Iranian crisis.

What about the Cambodian crisis? What about the 31,000 refugees starving to death in Thailand in the overcrowded refugee camp?

Should the American people help feed and clothe the suffering Cambodians?

The sight of the sick and dying refugees was emotionally overwhelming to First Lady Rosalynn Carter who visited the Cambodian refugee camp in Sa Kaew, Thailand Nov. 9, says a recent Associated Press story.

In the words of the First Lady, "It's like nothing I've ever seen."

Is the Cambodian issue humanistic or political? Should America help or not?

The Herald asked several Big Spring citizens and they had their own opinion concerning the situation.

Mary Dudley, assistant to the president at Howard College said "We've just got to help those poor babies over there starving to death. When I saw pictures of the starving Cambodians in Time Magazine, there was no question about it. We've just got to help them."

Mrs. Dudley said, in her eyes, the issue was dominantly humanistic, not political.

"It may be, in reality, both political and humanistic. But when I see pictures of those starving babies, the human issue, to me, is far more pertinent."

Dr. Robert P. Patterson, a local dentist, had this to say:

"In reality, the Cambodian crisis is a human issue, but politics have gotten into the picture and caused a great deal of confusion.

"I feel that private, humanitarian organizations should be the main avenue of aid to the Cambodian people, possibly with government help," he continued.

"The main problem with the aid that we've already given these people is that the corrupt government is skimming the cream off of what is being sent. The actual aid never gets to the refugees because it is confiscated by the captors," he concluded.

Rev. Phillip McClendon, pastor of Hillcrest Baptist Church, feels it is America's obligation to aid the Cambodian refugees.

"Any time people are starving and dying, we are responsible," he explained. "I believe the distribution of aid should be supervised, however, in order to make sure the ones who are suffering are the ones who are aided. But there's no way to guarantee that," Rev. McClendon concluded.

Nell Dickson, clerk at Poncho's News Stand said "Christian people should seriously pray in order to combat the evil of the Cambodian situation. In addition, underground organization of the natives of Cambodia should be considered similar to the underground organizations in operation during slave days in America in order to get food and medical supplies as far inland in Cambodia as possible."

The Eagle's Forum president, Nelda Reagan, wanted to know what her particular church organization was doing to relieve the suffering of the Cambodian people.

She said, "The Baptists have sent innumerable truck loads of food over with people to distribute it at the Thailand border, but the workers that accompanied the supplies are utterly exhausted with no sign of relief in sight."

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Rybolt feel America should feed their own poor and hungry before trying to save the world.

"The American Indians in New Mexico and Arizona reservations are needy and we feel that Americans should look after the hungry children in our midst before tackling the world's hunger problems in far distant lands," they argued.

Rev. Alan Tinnerstet, pastor of the First Church of God, feels that between the Iranian conflict and the Cambodian crisis, the Cambodian problem is the greatest human tragedy of the two.

"Sheer numbers of people are dying," he stated. "There is a type of civil war going on there where the Vietnamese are supporting one side of the Cambodians civil war and the Chinese are supporting the other side of the war and neither side is willing to open up the country for aid to the people that are starving."

He concluded stating "The Cambodian forces supported by the Vietnamese are threatening to push the war into Thailand in their effort to destroy the remainder of the former government."

Dear Abby

Mom's a Critic Of Son's 'Art'

DEAR ABBY: While putting underwear in my son's drawer, hidden far back I found several pages of sexy nudes, torn from a girlie magazine. To say I was shocked is putting it mildly, since he is an upright 14-year-old Christian boy of high ideals. His father died when he was 12, and we have always discussed everything openly. I thought we had a good relationship.

I took the pictures from his hiding place and taped them on the door of his room. When he came home from school I told him I had cleaned his room and put his "art pictures" where he could see them and enjoy them. He said thanks, and three minutes later he took them down and put them in the trash.

Was there a better way to handle this?

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MOM

DEAR MOM: I suppose because your son disposed of the pictures, you feel you "won." You could be wrong.

It is important for young people to know that their privacy will not be violated. I am not accusing you of deliberately snooping, but having come across that which was obviously hidden, you should have left it alone.

All your son will learn from this incident is that next time he wants to hide something, he'll have to find a better hiding place.

DEAR ABBY: Although I have been reading your column religiously for years, I never dreamed I'd be writing to you. However, I do not know to whom I should turn to settle this issue. You may think I'm a bit crazy, but it seems I get moody and irritable when there is a full moon.

Does the moon affect human behavior?

ROSEMARIE IN BROOKLYN

DEAR ROSEMARIE: Those who have studied astrology claim it does. And I've read statistics indicating that the full moon activates the "crazies." (The word lunatic supports this loony theory.)

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor across the way keeps standing in front of his window stark naked!

I do not catch accidental glimpses of him in this state. He actually stands by the window that way hoping to be noticed. I have reported him to the police, but they say he is in his own home and there is nothing they can do about it. He has a wife and children, but he does this while they are not at home.

Should I tell his wife? I don't know her very well, but I will speak to her if you think it will do some good.

NEW NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEW: The man needs help. Present the bare facts to his wife.

Want a pen pal?

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dear Teens: In the last several weeks, all with the same theme: "Can you please tell me how I can get a foreign pen pal?"

I had been contacting various people trying to line up such a thing but nothing seemed to be what I was looking for.

Then came a letter from Dave Scott of Modesto, Calif., who said he would like to have an American pen pal and asked if I could help.

If you would like a pen pal, please follow these directions:

First, write to me in care of this newspaper and say that you would like a pen pal. Please print your name, age, sex and one or two interests or hobbies you might have. Then tell me if you want a male or female pen pal and in what area of the country you would like your "pal" to live.

Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will see that you get a pen pal. I'll do my best to see that you get the teen you are asking for, but this will not always be possible.

The way my "system" will work is this: I'll send your letter to your pal and his or hers will go to you.

FDA blunders in pumpkin pie caper

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cooks in thousands of Thanksgiving Day kitchens shuddered. The radio was saying, over and over again, that the government was recalling cans of pumpkin pie filling as potentially hazardous.

But to Frank Patane, manager of the company that canned the filling, the announcement was "dirty business" by a bungling federal agency.

"When they break you up and then come back and stomp on you, that's going too far," he complains.

Patane is manager of Sterling Cooperative Inc. These days, he sits in his Sterling, N.Y., office answering phone calls — from food buyers and distributors, newspapers and broadcast stations.

Patane explains to all that the recall actually was conducted in late summer and that it involved pie filling distributed more than a year ago, before October 1978.

Through a string of apparent coincidences, the Food and Drug Administration announced the recall at the one time of year, almost to the minute, when it would be guaranteed intense national publicity, whether or not the public was in reality endangered.

And, both the FDA and Sterling agree, it really was not.

The pumpkin tale began in August, when company auditors discovered that a batch of Sterling pumpkin pie filling had been underprocessed, leaving the possibility of bacterial contamination.

The filling had been distributed between Oct. 14, 1977, and Oct. 26, 1978. Although cans of the product had been on the shelves for as much as 22 months, no illnesses had been attributed to it. Patane said local health authorities told him the act of baking the pie would destroy any harmful bacteria.

Nevertheless, on Aug. 28, Sterling sent letters to its customers telling them to pull any remaining pie filling from their shelves. Copies of the letters were routinely sent to the FDA in Washington.

While Sterling was conducting its recall, the FDA was sending letters back and forth to its Buffalo district office, which has jurisdiction over Sterling. Over the next two months, the FDA determined that the recall was, indeed, a recall and assigned it a classification and a number.

By Nov. 1, its paperwork virtually complete, the FDA drafted a notice announcing the recall and sent it by intra-department mail for publication in the weekly FDA enforcement bulletin.

Unfortunately, the FDA says, the notice did not reach the bulletin office until Nov. 15. Once there, it was routinely scheduled for publication in the next issue — Nov. 21, the day before Thanksgiving.

"If they'd only announced it a week earlier, there would have been explanation and everything," moans Patane.

But announcing the recall of a traditional Thanksgiving food the day before Thanksgiving was a red alert for reporters.

All Wednesday night and all day Thanksgiving, every hour on the hour, radio stations in the areas where Sterling distributes its products announced the recall and gave the brand names Sterling uses.

The reports were well-intended, but the brief news reports did not always say the pie filling had been distributed as much as two years earlier or that the recall had been conducted three months earlier.

In fact, said FDA spokesman Wayne Pines, publication of the recall in the enforcement bulletin should not have created such a furor. Publication amounts to recording the recall rather than enforcing it.

"In this country, there are over 1,000 recalls each year in areas regulated by the FDA," Pines said. "Most of them do not involve a direct hazard, but a technical violation of food and drug law" such as a labeling violation or a short weight.

Pines said the FDA published the notice simply as a matter of routine. There was little public hazard and no press release was issued on it, he said, because "we do not seek publicity for recalls like that. We try to avoid crying wolf on product recalls."

For Patane, however, the FDA is clearly the villain because of its poor sense of timing.

"I'm really thoroughly discouraged by this," he said. "It's terrible on the people here."

Other canned goods are also being returned to the factory as unsalable. Patane says he cannot guess how much the recall will hurt sales of other Sterling products.

"I can't give you too many answers there," he said. "They're calling back and saying they're returning two truckloads here, four truckloads there...."

Pasadena doctor looks forward to new medical practice despite prison term

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Dr. Archie Herman Burkhalter says he looks forward to farming and starting a medical practice in Fredericksburg.

Those plans are from a man who faces a 10-year prison term following his conviction Monday on attempted murder charges in the Feb. 15 shooting of his ex-wife's husband.

The 52-year-old former Pasadena, Texas, physician calmly reflected on the outcome of his three-week trial in the plush library of one of his attorneys.

"I was disappointed of course," he said. "I need to get with my children. They are very proud their father is coming home."

State district judge Darrell Hester allowed Burkhalter to remain free on $50,000 bond until formal sentencing Dec. 17. Hester will decide whether to let the doctor continue on bond pending appeal.

The doctor was charged with attempted capital murder in the early morning rifle shooting of John Hensley on South Padre Island. Hensley survived the attack but lost his sight and sense of smell.

A co-defendant in the case, Scott David Minnick, won acquittal on all charges in the case.

Burkhalter expressed confidence his long-time lawyer Warren Burnett of Odessa will win reversal of the conviction.

"I was put in jail three years when I was innocent and eventually I think justice will be done in this case," said the short, slight man.

Burnett defended Burkhalter during three trials stemming from the 1966 slaying of the doctor's partner in Pasadena Memorial Hospital. Burkhalter won reversal of his conviction after serving three years in jail and received a mistrial and finally acquittal in subsequent proecutions.

In the Hensley shooting, jurors found the state did not prove its allegation that Burkhalter offered Minnick and S. J. Wilburn a 1977 blue Cadillac Eldorado for the shooting.

Hester had told the jury it could not convict either defendant of attempted capital murder unless the state proved the car was part of a payoff. Jurors returned the lesser charge of attempted murder against the physician.

Wilburn was convicted in a separate july trial and sentenced to life imprisonment for what prosecutors said was his role as triggerman in the shooting. He was arrested minutes after the incident driving a car equipped with gun mounts, port holes and an insulated trunk.

Police witnesses said the arrangement allowed someone to fire a weapon unseen from the vehicle.

Wilburn and Minnick had driven from Pasadena to South Padre Island for what Minnick said he thought would be a fishing trip.

"I don't know what my horoscope said today but it must have been pretty good," Minnick, Wilburn's nephew, said after hearing his verdict.

Prosecutor Joe K. Hendley told jurors Burkhalter used his hospital as a setting for planning the Hensley attack. Wilburn was a hospital patient in December 1978.

State evidence in the trial included several letters Wilburn wrote to his Houston girlfriend following his arrest. The writings mention "the doctor."

Also introduced as evidence were telephone company records that showed Burkhalter's hospital was called the morning of the shooting from a motel Wilburn and Minnick had stayed in and another motel where they ate breakfast.

Hensley and his wife, Laurita, testified Burkhalter visited them before their Oct. 30 , 1978, marriage and threatened violence unless Hensley stopped seeing her. Hensley said Burkhalter offered him $5,000 to break off the relationship.

Burkhalter's lawyer said the admission of Wilburn's letters will be a significant issue in his appeal.

"The state's case consisted entirely of S.J. Wilburn's letters which were admitted into evidence over our objection because there was no one there to cross-examine," Burnett said. He acknowledged Wilburn was available to be called as a witness by either side.

Minnick testified at the trial. Burkhalter did not.

KNOW YOUR CARRIER

Ronald Holland

Fourteen-year-old Ronald Holland has been the Herald carrier for Route 294 since June. His route conveniently covers an area near and including his home at 4209 Parkway where he lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Holland. The route includes the Crestwood Trailer Park, Bilger, Muir and the east side of Parkway, from Hearn to the San Angelo Highway.

Ronald, a ninth grader at Big Spring High, was chosen as September Carrier of the Month. Candidates are selected on the basis of sales, service, collections and record keeping.

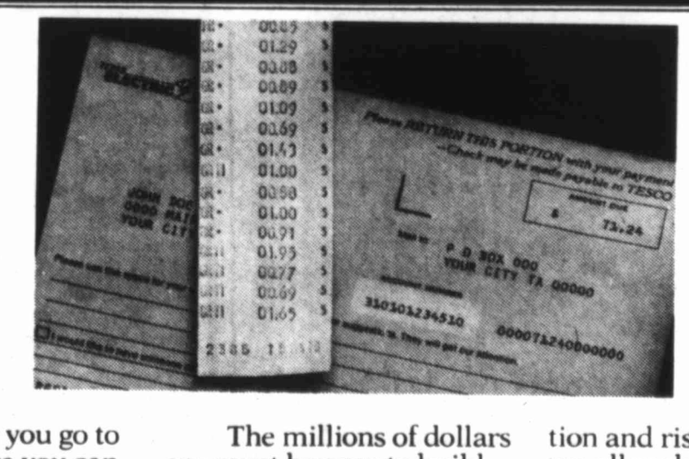

Ronald is a responsible carrier who enjoys the feeling of earning his own money. He spends a little and puts the rest of his route profits into a savings account.

Many successful people began their first jobs as news carriers. A total of 17 U.S. presidents were newsboys, plus a long list of leaders in sports, business, government and the arts.

The point is a paper route is an excellent way for young people like Ronald to get started in any career. It teaches how to get along with all kinds of people, how it feels to have people depend on you, how to handle money and how to manage it. And as Ronald, a Carrier of the Month knows, it gives a taste of the deep down satisfaction of doing a responsible job well and getting paid for it. If you're interested in a Herald route, call 263-7331 or stop by the Herald circulation department for an application.

Inflation hits your electric bill just as hard as it does your grocery bill.

Every time you go to the grocery store you can see what inflation's doing to your food bill. But because you don't buy electricity by the can, you probably don't realize how inflation affects the cost of electricity.

Fuel costs are up, particularly natural gas. Equipment costs are up. Power lines, transformers and poles cost us more every day. Just like milk costs you more every day.

The millions of dollars we must borrow to build plants to ensure your electricity needs in the future are costing us more.

The cost of building these plants is higher, too, because of inflation. And because of the time and money it takes to comply with an ever-increasing number of government regulations. The longer it takes to build, the more inflation takes its toll.

Inflation, overregulation and rising fuel costs are all making your electricity cost you more. But by using electricity wisely you can do your part in keeping that cost down in your home.

At Texas Electric, we want you to know what you're paying for.

Blaze on oil tanker diminishing

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Coast Guard officials say fire aboard the burning tanker Burmah Agate is steadily diminishing but there is no way to predict how much longer the crippled ship will burn.

Until the fire is out, pollution fighters are unable to surround the 772-foot vessel with booms to contain the oil that has been seeping out of the ship since Nov. 1.

Capt. Robert Ingraham, head of the Coast Guard's marine safety office here, said 11 of the Burmah Agate's 30 crude oil tanks still are full. How much oil remains in the burning sections of the ship is unknown, Ingraham said.

The Burmah Agate and another Liberian freighter, Mimosa, collided shortly before dawn near the entrance to the Galveston Ship Channel. Seventeen crewmen have been confirmed killed in the accident and another 15 still are missing.

The Burmah Agate has experienced extreme heat since the collision but Ingraham said naval architects believe the ship still has a lot of strength even though it has buckled at the point of impact, at about mid-ship on the starboard side.

Meanwhile, workmen finished mopping up operations on Texas beaches Monday, gathering in more than 800 cubic yards of oil that had washed ashore from the tanker.

"The beaches are basically clean," Chief Petty Officer Ray Baker said. "A few patches of oil remain, but scientists from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration say it's better to let the surf break it up because it does less ecological damage."

Paul Preus, president of Clean Water, Inc., termed the oil cleanup operations a success.

"I would not have done one thing different," he said. "We were amply prepared for the emergency. We had ample people for what we were confrointed with."

Cleanup operations have been criticized as being too slow and not having a large enough work force.

Dr. Roy Hann, an oil spill expert with Texas A&M University, said the crude oil was allowed to sit on the beach too long before it was removed. He said the oil soaked into the sand and may be a continuing environmental hazard.

"Anybody can stand back and be a Monday morning quarterback when they dolln't have the experience," Preus sais. "Every time we had oil coming in we had people out there."

Names in the news

Estrada still eligible

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Erik Estrada fans, relax. The darkly handsome bachelor, one of the most eligible in Hollywood, is still eligible, friends say.

Marriage reports began flying Monday when a deputy county clerk in Las Vegas said she was pretty sure she recognized Estrada as the man who took out a marriage license Sunday. The man getting a license to marry Joyce Miller of Beverly Hills was wearing dark glasses, but Alberta Yanke said she recognized the smile of the star of the television series "CHiPs."

However, Estrada's sister, Carmen Estrada, said she was having lunch with her brother and his friend, Joyce Miller, at the time Estrada was reported to be in Las Vegas. Miss Estrada said her brother and Ms. Miller are "just friends."

Estrada was unavailable for comment, but Karen Hacker of the actor's management firm, said, "I got it right from the horse's mouth. He denied the whole thing. The story is a complete hoax..."

Actor's trial date set

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A trial date of Jan. 9, 1980, has been set for blond actor Jan-Michael Vincent, who pleaded innocent to charges of growing and possessing marijuana.

Vincent, who co-starred with Burt Reynolds in the movie "Hooper," was charged with one count each of cultivating and possessing marijuana.

He remained free on bail following Monday's Superior Court arraignment.

Vincent waived his right to appear at a planned series of pre-trial hearings, and will next appear in court for the trial.

Musicians reap benefits

NEW YORK (AP) — Needy musicians will reap some of the benefits — if not the calories — from Dolly Parton's recipe for banana loaf and Neil Sedaka's formula for a stuffed leg of lamb.

The recipes are part of a new book called "Harmony in the Kitchen." Several musicians turned out Monday to help promote the collection and help Prize-winning composer Virgil Thomson celebrate his 83rd birthday.

Thompson, composer of such works as "Four Saints in Three Acts," signed volumes of the work by Maida Glancy and Ettore Stratta at a Fifth Avenue bookstore. The book includes his own recipe for roast lamb.

Part of the proceeds will go to a fund to benefit needy musicians.

Troopers need pay raise, officials tell legislature

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans will be protected by an inferior brand of Department of Public Safety trooper until the Legislature comes up with a healthy pay raise, according to DPS officials.

"We are graduating people — I'm sad to say — who 10 years ago would not have been accepted; much less graduated," Jim Jordan of the DPS training school Monday told a house subcommittee.

Officials from several state agencies told the House Subcommittee on State Personnel Policy that low pay is forcing their best employees to look for new jobs.

Texas Employment Commission statistics show a 28 percent turnover rate for state employees in the fiscal year that ended in September. The rate was the highest since the 31 percent turnover in 1966.

Jordan said the best prospects are attracted by the higher salaries offered by Texas cities and private industry.

Lee Johnson, a DPS trooper at Beaumont, said he surveyed police departments and found the DPS' $1,324 per month top trooper salary is lower than most Texas cities pay their policemen.

Jordan, talking about the inability to attract good prospects, said: "If you think the last crop was poor, wait until you see the next one. We can't even get anybody to come by and get an application."

DPS Director Col. Wilson Speir, who is retiring at the end of the year, appeared before the subcommittee to make a "parting plea."

"Our troopers are having an extremely difficult time living and doing their jobs," Speir said. "It's extremely difficult to recruit, and morale is suffering."

Gary Hughes, executive director of the Texas Public Employees Association, said Texas now ranks 37th in nation in employee pay. The state was 24th in 1975. Only 10 states employ fewer persons than Texas, he said.

The state comptroller's office had the same complaint as DPS. Jack Reynolds said it takes three years to train an auditor — "and that's just about when we lose him" because of better offers from the private sector.

"We'd rather have high quality personnel auditing the big firms than going to work for them," Reynolds said.

A release issued by Bullock's office said it is "penny wise and pound foolish" to try to save money on state salaries. He said sending inexperienced auditors out to check on big corporations is "like picking a bunch of grammar school kids to scrimmage against the Dallas Cowboys."

Steer fems rout Lamesa

The Big Spring Steers girls basketball team used a stingy defense to take a 45-24 win over Lamesa High School in a game played Monday night in Steer Gym.

The win boosted Coach Barbara Fletcher's crew to a record of 3-2 for the season. They resume play Thursday in the Sweetwater Tournament.

Big Spring, using a balanced scoring attack, jumped out to an early lead in the contest and never looked back, as excellent defense by the Steer fems prevented any Lamesa attempts at a rally.

Fletcher had mixed feelings on the win, stating, "We were really playing good defense throughout the game. We also rebounded well defensively, especially Pam Banks and Candy Walker. But we're still having trouble putting the ball in the basket. We're relying too much on our scoring on the inside, and need to improve on our outside scoring and our full court press."

The 6'2" Banks led all scorers in the game with 15 points. Debra Ausbie added 14 for the Big Spring crew, while Vicki Slaughter and Marilyn Jackson led Lamesa with five points each.

Big Spring also won the junior varsity game by a score of 34-24. Rochelle Rutledge was the high point scorer for the Big Spring JVs with 17, while Ladonna Douglass paced Lamesa with nine.

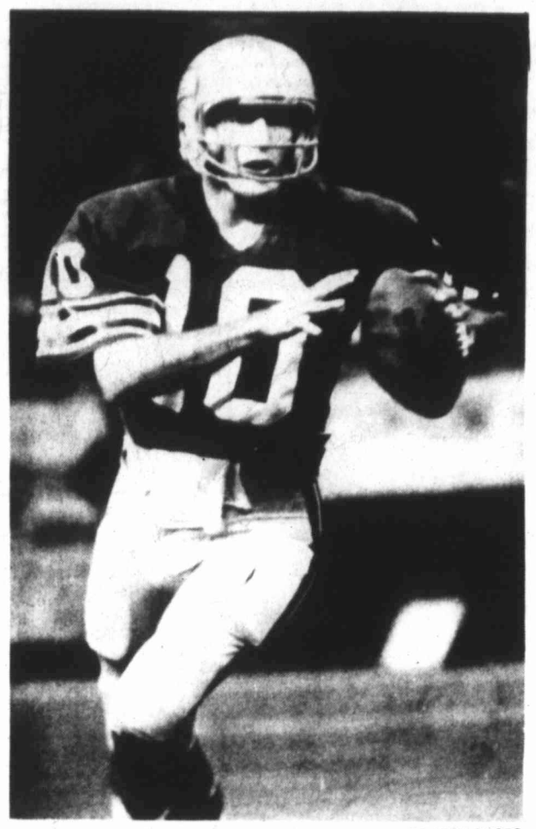

Lamesa avoided a complete shutout in the series by taking a 48-33 win in the ninth grade game. Jill Froman was the high point scorer for Lamesa with 12 points, while Cindy Fulmer and Sylvia Randle led the Big Spring freshmen in scoring with 14 and 12 points, respectively.

LOOKING FOR ACTION — Seattle Seahawk Jim Zorn had control of the ball Monday as he had a big game against the New York Jets in their NFL game in Seattle. He completed 25 of 32 passes for 285 yards. Seattle won 30-7.

Zorn's passing awesome as Seahawks sink Jets

SEATTLE (AP) — It's as if Jim Zorn and the Seattle Seahawks can't do anything wrong.

They're streaking right along with the best of them in the National Football League.

With Zorn setting two more club passing records in the first-ever Monday night game in Seattle, the Seahawks crushed the New York Jets 30-7 for their third straight victory and fifth triumph in six weeks.

"I'm really confident now," said Zorn. "I wouldn't say I'm in any kind of a groove but I feel like when the receiver makes his move, the ball is going to be there."

"He's a pretty effective quarterback," said Jets' Coach Walt Michaels of Zorn.

Coming off a club record 384-yard passing performance against New Orleans, Zorn once again was in command, picking apart the Jets' secondary behind an offensive line that didn't allow him to be sacked once.

He completed 25 of 32 passes for 285 yards and three touchdowns, including 14 straight completions. The 25 completions and 14 straight completions were Seattle club records.

Because of the strength throughout of the American Football Conference, the Seahawks, now 7-6, will have a hard time making the playoffs in their fourth NFL season.

They virtually have to win all three of their remaining regular season games.

"All we can do is play like we have a chance," said Seahawks Coach Jack Patera.

"I've got to give our line and our receivers credit," said Zorn. "Our line really has been blocking well and our receivers have been running great routes."

Zorn's touchdown passes were 14 yards to his favorite target, Steve Largent, in the second quarter, 16 yards to running back Sherman Smith in the third period and 11 yards to Sam McCullum in the third quarter. All came on third-and-10 situations.

The victory gave the Seahawks a 2-0 Monday night record. They won at Atlanta 31-28 four weeks ago.

"It's great any time you win," said Zorn, "but it's even more fun when you win in the only game of the day."

"They (the Jets) play pretty conservatively on defense," Patera said. "They take away the long stuff so you just throw in front of them."

Richard Todd, the Jets' quarterback, was 19 of 36 for 226 yards and drove his team to a touchdown in the third quarter. Kevin Long tallied for New York on a 1-yard run.

Efren Herrera accounted for Seattle's other points on field goals of 49, 45 and 42 yards.

Three Seattle players were injured. Special teams member Don Dufek broke a leg, offensive guard Bob Newton left the game with a knee injury and guard Tom Lynch suffered a back injury.

Hawks take impressive 107-96 win over Cisco

CISCO — The Howard College Hawks exploded for a 50-32 halftime lead en route to a 107-96 win over Cisco Junior College in a game played here Monday night.

The win boosted the Hawks record to 5-1 on the season. Howard College returns home Thursday to open their Western Conference schedule against Frank Phillips College at 8:00 p.m.

The Hawks increased their halftime lead to a 27-point bulge of 85-58 with ten minutes remaining to play, but the Cisco team, coached by former Big Spring High School mentor Tommy Collins, rallied in the final minutes, but could get no closer than nine points.

Mike Wallace and Ron Akins continued to lead the Hawks in scoring, as they produced 25 and 23 points, respectively. Others scoring in double figures were Ray Robinson with 15, Walter Hall with 12 and Bobby Word with 11.

Frank Sullivan and Derrick Eaglin led Cisco with 21 and 18 points, respectively.

Wilder, who is hoping that last night's performance is an indication that his squad is ready for WJCAC play, praised the play of his entire team. "Everybody played alertly and had good hustle. Wallace and Akins always play consistently, but one thing that really helped us against Cisco was the play of forwards Hall and Robinson. We're going to need that from now on."

Castino, Griffin share AL Rookie of the Year honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Infielders John Castino of the Minnesota Twins and Alfredo Griffin of the Toronto Blue Jays were surprised after being named co-winners of the American League Rookie of the Year award.

Castino and Griffin each received seven votes from a 28-member committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Relief pitcher Mark Clear of California, the only rookie named for the midseason All-Star Game, was third with five votes.

Relief pitcher Ron Davis of the New York Yankees, first baseman Pat Putnam of the Texas Rangers and pitcher Ross Baumgarten of the Chicago White Sox received three votes apiece.

"I never expected it," said Castino, 25, a third baseman who became a starter in midseason and finished with a .285 batting average and 52 runs batted in.

"I am humbled," added Castino. "It will probably take a month for the importance of this to set in.

"I am extremely surprised," said Griffin, 21, a shortstop who batted .287 for the Blue Jays, set a team record with 179 hits and also led the club with 20 stolen bases.

"All those other guys did a good job," added Griffin, who is currently playing winter ball in his native Dominican Republic. "I honestly thought Ron Davis would win because of the publicity he gets in New York."

Griffin, a switch hitter, was acquired by the Blue Jays from the Cleveland organization at baseball's last winter meetings. After a slow start he came on strong, hitting safely in 24 of his last 27 games and winning Player of the Month honors for September.

This is the first time since the award was instituted in 1949 that two players have shared AL Rookie honors. It happened once in the National League, when pitchers Pat Zachry and Butch Metzger shared the award in 1976.

The tie is the second in BWAA honors this year. Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh and Keith Hernandez of St. Louis were co-winners of the National League's Most Valuable Player award.

That tie came despite the fact that 10 players were named on each ballot and votes were totaled on a points basis. In the rookie balloting, two voters in each league city were required to pick just one player each.

The winner of the National League Rookie of the Year award will be announced Wednesday.

USC moves to No. 2 in college poll

By The Associated Press

Alabama, idle last week, remains atop The Associated Press college football poll, but high-scoring Southern California has edged past Rose Bowl foe Ohio State for the No.2 spot.

Alabama, which ends its regular season Saturday against No.14 Auburn, received 34 of 62 first-place votes and 1,193 of a possible 1,240 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, who voted the exact same 20 teams into this week's poll as last week.

Southern Cal, which clinched a Rose Bowl berth by whipping arch-rival UCLA 49-14 to wind up its regular schedule with a 10-0-1 record, received 12 first-place votes and jumped from fourth to second place with 1,142 points in the results next-tolast poll of the regular season.

That was one point more than Ohio State, which was idle last week and dropped to third place with 13 No.1 votes and 1,141 points. That's five first-place votes and 73 points less than the Buckeyes received last week.

Florida State, 11-0 and bound for the Orange Bowl, continued its season-long climb, moving up from fifth to fourth with 997 points on the strength of its 27-16 victory over Florida.

Oklahoma, Florida State's Orange Bowl foe, jumped from eighth to fifth with one first-place vote and 963 points, thanks to its victory over Nebraska.

Texas is sixth in this week's poll, followed by Nebraska, Arkansas, Brigham Young and Houston. Unbeaten Brigham Young, which walloped San Diego State 63-14 on national television Saturday, received one first-place vote, while the remaining No.1 ballot was split among Texas, Arkansas and Houston.

Hawk Queens struggle past Cisco, 65-61

CISCO — The Howard College Hawk Queens overcame a poor shooting performance to take a 65-61 win over the Cisco College Wranglerettes in a game here Monday evening.

Both teams were extremely cold throughout the contest, as the Hawk Queens could connect on only 27 percent of their shots from the floor, while Cisco was shooting just 39 percent from the field. To complicate matters for the Hawk Queens, who earlier defeated the same Cisco team by a score of 100-58, was the fact that they could only manage to make 17 of 39 free throws.

The Howard College crew jumped out to a halftime lead of 34-25, but could not pull away from Cisco as they did in the first battle between the two schools earlier in the season.

"We were fat and flat," Hawk Queens Coach Don Stevens said following the game, obviously referring to the fact that the Thanksgiving holidays had something to do with his team's sluggish performance. "We'll have to play much better tonight against Tech."

The Queens travel to Lubbock tonight to play the Texas Tech Red Raiders girl's basketball team on the Lubbock campus. Game time is 7:00 in the Tech Women's Gym.

Joanne Lefridge was the leading scorer for the Queens with 14 points, while Susan Martin and Jane Jones added 12 each. Mitzi Henderson led Cisco with 14 points, with Sandra Winters chipping in with 13.

Stevens did praise the play of Hawk Queen Jayne Jones, who had 11 rebounds in the contest, as well as 10 points.

Following tonight's game, the Hawk Queens return home to host Frank Phillips College in the Western Conference opener on Thursday at 6:00 p.m.

Alborn, Yeoman turn to comics

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston and Rice University football teams were the brunt of a couple of standup comic routines Monday — by their own coaches.

"We really should put some of our receivers in the (defensive) secondary because they've knocked down everything close to them this season," Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said of UH's passing attack. "Hubert Miller has been the most consistent. He hasn't caught a pass all year."

Rice's Ray Alborn said he needed to find a "godzilla type linebacker that doesn't need much coaching. Just line him up and say 'go find the football.'"

Alborn said he'd put some of his receivers in the secondary if they were fast enough.

Yeoman had this to say about starting running back John Newhouse: "He tried to psyche the coaches out early in the year. When we told him to do something he thought that was just a starting point for negotiations. Now he's ready to play an entire game."

The Yeoman-Alborn show was performed Monday before a delighted audience of 300 at the Touchdown Club's annual luncheon renewing the battle of the Bayou Bucket, given annually to the winner of the UH-Rice game.

Most of the frivolity was in jest. Miller actually has caught five passes this season and Rice wide receiver Darrell Mouton qualified for the NCAA national track and field championships in the 200 meters.

And there won't be much slap-stick comedy by Saturday.

The Cougars still could represent the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl if they defeat Rice and Texas loses its finale to Texas A&M Saturday. Otherwise, Houston will accept an alternate offer to play Washington in El Paso's Sun Bowl.

And for the Owls, 1-9, a victory could mean an entire season.

In boys game at 8:00 p.m.

Steers host Sweetwater

The Big Spring Steers boys varsity basketball team, fresh from winning the consolation bracket of the Sweetwater Tournament, return home tonight to play host to the always tough Lamesa Golden Tors in an 8:00 p.m. battle in Steer Gym.

Coach Ed Haller's crew lost to Lamesa on Friday morning in the opening round of the Sweetwater Tourney, but then rallied to defeat Pecos and Sweetwater to win their consolation trophy.

The Steers, who now sport a season record of 3-2, employ a number of people in their attack, which thus far has been a group trying to perfect an effective full court press. Those expected to see playing time for Big Spring tonight include James Doss, Dickie Wrightsil, Cesar Espinosa, Blake Rosson, Mike Domino, Moe Rubio, Robert Rubio, Mark Knight, John Green, Fletcher Johnson and Brocky Jones.

Lamesa, still coached by O.W. Follis, returns a veteran crew from last year's team that lost to Snyder after tying for the District 3-AAA championship. Follis yearly turns out outstanding teams at Lamesa, including some state championships in the past.

Runnels fems overwhelm Lamesa

The Runnels Yearlings girls basketball team increased their record to 2-0 for the season by taking a 36-18 win over Lamesa Junior High in a game played here Monday evening.

Runnels led from the beginning, and gradually increased their lead throughout the contest. Monette Wise was the high point scorer for the Runnels crew with 14. Others scoring for the Yearlings included Laura Baum, with 11, Debra Rubio with nine and Tracy Williams two.

The Yearling fems return to action on December 6 at Seminole.

Score by quarters:

Runnels	8	6	8	14--36
Lamesa	4	2	6	6--18

American pulls upset in Australia Open

MELBOURNE (AP) — Unheralded American Diane Morrison upset Chris O'Neil of Australia, the current Australian Women's Open champion, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 in the first round of a $100,000 tennis classic.

In other first-round action, Pam Shriver defeated Janet Newberry 6-4, 6-0; Australian Wendy Turnbull posted a 6-2, 6-0 victory over Czech Regina Marsikova; Britain's Sue Barker eliminated American Diane Desfor 6-3, 7-6; Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia ousted American Roz McCallum 4-6, 6-3, 6-2; and Sweden's Mimi Wikstedt whipped American Dianne Evers 6-0, 6-2.

To allow both parts of China in 1980 Olympics

IOC backs Lord Killanin's plan

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Lord Killanin has won his longest battle, and the athletes of China are in the Olympic Games at last.

The jolly Irish president of the International Olympic Commission, after years of resistance from conservative members, was given overwhelming backing for his plan to let both parts of China compete in the Games.

Athletes of mainland China may now take part using the name, flag and anthem of the People's Republic. But the politically stubborn Taiwan authorities must abandon the name and flag of the old Republic of China and use a special flag to be approved by the IOC.

IOC members voted by 62-17 to back the plan and Peking already has accepted the plan. Now the national Olympic committee of Taiwan has until Jan. 1, 1980, to swallow its pride and change its name.

No one can guess what Swiss judges might make of the situation if it reached the courts because the IOC is a law unto itself. It is answerable only to itself.

The Olympic committee in Taiwan has screamed defiance, claiming that the IOC's new plan contravenes rules 64 and 65 of the Olympic charter. These rules spell out quite clearly that every team in the Olympic Games must march behind its national flag in the opening parade, and that its national anthem must be played at the medal presentation ceremonies.

But rule 23 of the charter says: The IOC is the final authority on all questions concerning the Olympic Games and the Olympic movement.

Lawyers might argue that this gives the IOC the right to bend its own rules any time it wants to.

Killanin knows now that when the full IOC meets before the Winter Games at Lake Placid in February, he can get rules 64 and 65 changed to fit the situation, if necessary.

In the past, Killanin has failed to break heavy support for Taiwan. Its champions have claimed that it always obeyed Olympic rules and that its choice of name and flag and anthem were its own affair.

But at last the IOC has come to see that unless it turns away from its traditional course it might have never ending trouble over Taiwan whenever the Games are held.

The absence of China, the world's most populous country, has been the biggest gap in the IOC's idealistic bid to bring the youth of the world together in sport.

Team entries close Dec. 1, so the Taiwanese have five days to decide whether to send their athletes — or their lawyers — into action.

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 28, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's difficult to see just how you can put in effect new plans which now mean so much to you. But you can get better organized so that tomorrow you are in a better position to get into a new line of activity that intrigues you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study into every idea and detail connected with a plan you have in mind so that it can be successful. Entertain, but budget your money.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get rid of stumbling blocks in the path of your progress. Listen to the ideas of a wise adviser. Forget business and think of pleasure now

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Instead of seeking new friendships, get present ones on a more ideal basis. Social pleasure is best in the evening. Handle business affairs well early in the day.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Safeguard your reputation in your community. Civic work is best done in the evening for best results. Avoid a tense situation at home.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study projects you want to get involved in and then put in motion early in the evening. Seek those who have the data you need and get it.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be conscientious in handling responsibilities and you get right results. Strive for more harmony at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't start any new associations in the morning and avoid arguments with co-workers. An emergency arises to test your ability.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be efficient at your work and come to a better understanding with co-workers. Don't argue with anyone; use energy constructively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do not spend too much money for entertainment or you will regret it later. Show more affection for loved one. Forget frustrations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show courtesy at home and avoid arguments with kin. Don't jump into any new interest that comes to your attention now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can produce more if you are really cooperative with associates. Don't be so suspicious of them. Use care in travel.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how to save and make more money instead of spending foolishly. Get estimates so that you can repair property that requires fixing.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to analyze anything well and pick out the flaws in any ideas or projects, but has to be taught to finish whatever has once been started. Give good ethical and religious training and teach good manners, courtesy toward others.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

What next? Worm Day?

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Move over Punxsutawney Phil. The woolly worms are here.

Pennsylvania's prognosticating groundhog may be able to predict when winter will end, but researchers at Appalachian State University say the woolly worm can forecast what winter weather will be.

The verdict this winter: "as mild if not milder than 1979 and significantly milder than 1977 and '78."

The university's Center for Woolly Worm Studies has issued winter weather predictions for five years, based on the black and red bands of 667 woolly worms, the caterpillar stage of the Tiger Moth.

The furry worms, called woolly bears in the North, have been used to predict winter weather for more than 200 years.

The forecast is based on the colors of the worms 13 bands, which are said to correspond to the 13 weeks of winter. Segments seven, eight and nine on all of the worms collected were 100 percent red, a sure indicator of mild weather, said Sandra Glover, director of the center.

Ms. Glover said the scientific accuracy of wooly worm predictions has yet to be documented.

History in a mouse hole

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Clair the cat refused to investigate the mouse hole, so John Coleman stuck his hand in. Instead of a mouse, he found some negatives, a letter written in Finnish, a 1913 whiskey bottle — and a penny possibly worth as much $1,000.

The battered coin, dated 1848, was in use before the Gold Rush.

Last weekend, Coleman, a 31-year-old truck driver, found a hole in a wall behind a cupboard drawer. Mice, he figured.

Clair, his 5-year-old black-and-white female cat, regularly catches snakes, but she draws the line at mice. So Coleman reached into the wall and made his discovery.

The penny, he said, is to be passed on to his daughter, Kelly Adele, when she reaches the age of 18 in 1997.

"I don't care how much it's worth now," he said of reports the coin might bring $300 to $1,000. "I'm saving it for her when she gets to be 18....This is for Kelly — this is something for her to have when she grows up, a memento of the old days in San Francisco."

Retiring to pursue hobbies

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Arthur B. Ingham — at 95, the oldest school board trustee in California — is retiring to have more time to study geneology, read and watch the surf crash near his ocean home.

Ingham retires Wednesday from the Monterey Board of Education, ending a career in education that began more than 75 years ago in a one-room school house in Iowa.

"Every age has a value," said Ingham.

When told that the next oldest board member in the state is 90-year-old Edwin Gardner of Riverside County, Ingham said, "As long he is able to function, age is not important."

School superintendent Jim Stefan said of Ingham's performance:

"He sits quietly, listens carefully and his reasoning is very sound."

Ingham, grandfather of 12, has served on the board for 21 years.

Life insurance fact book is available

WASHINGTON — New purchases of life insurance in 1978 totalled $407 billion, a record yearly high, the American Council of Life Insurance reports. This brought the total life insurance coverage with legal reserve companies to a record $2,870 billion in protection for Americans.

This and other information about the life insurance business is reported in the 1979 edition of the Life Insurance Fact Book, just published by the Council.

Now in its 34th edition, the Fact Book is widely used as a reference tool by economists, financial analysts, investment specialists, researchers, life insurance executives, businessmen, government officials, educators, students, editors, writers and speakers.

Some key statistics from the new Fact Book include:

The average amount of life insurance coverage for each insured family in the U.S. increased to $40,800 in 1978, up 8.2 percent over the $37,700 of protection held a year earlier.

Payments to beneficiaries, policyholders and annuitants last year topped $28.6 billion, up 8.1 percent from $26.9 billion in 1977.

The assets of U.S. life insurance companies, which back their insurance and annuity obligations, rose to $389.9 billion last year from $351.7 billion a year earlier.

More than 21.6 million people were covered by pension plans administered by life insurance companies last year, an increase of 2.4 million over 1977.

Single copies of the 1979 Life Insurance Fact Book are available without charge by writing to Dept. ND, American Council of Life Insurance, 1850 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

Shrine Crippled Children's Party will be held Dec. 15

The Annual Shrine Crippled Children's Party will be held on Saturday, Dec. 15 at the Brass Nail Restaurant. As in the past, crippled children in the Big Spring-Howard County area are invited to attend as the guest of a Shriner.

Entertainment is planned for the youngsters and Santa Claus will present each a gift after a turkey dinner with all the trimmings. Efforts have been made to secure the names of eligible crippled children but if the parent or guardian of such a child has not been contacted, they should notify Verlin Knous at 267-5577 or 267-6426 as soon as possible.

All Shriners are encouraged to attend this special event!

Big Spring Employment puts right person in job

Success is finding a job or in finding the right person to fill a position is better assured by consulting a professional employment service such as Big Spring Employment Agency, located in the Permian Building.

Finding the right persons for the right job is the duty of Mrs. Sue Brown and Mrs. Ruby Taroni, the experienced personnel counselors at Big Spring Employment.

Each employer has the right to demand the person best qualified for the job, considering the requirements of the work, the salary to be offered and the availability of applicants. With this in mind, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Taroni carefully evaluate each applicant before he (or she) is sent for an interview.

They spend many hours screening job applicants so employers do not waste time interviewing persons not qualified for the job opening. The agency refers only those who measure up to the job's requirements.

Thus, fewer rejections plague the employer or the applicant. The employer sees fewer people, and fewer rejections make for better public relations. There is also a smaller personnel turnover, and the efficiency of employees tends to rise.

Many highly qualified job applicants prefer to use the services of a private employment agency, thus protecting their own identity.

Big Spring Employment carries on an extensive testing program in the area of office skills, exposing applicants to personnel tests in business and industrial situations.

Both the employment counselors and the employers may refer to these tests as an indicator of future possibilities.

All services are handled on a confidential basis.

From the minimum-wage clerk to the highly-paid executive, job applicants come to Big Spring Employment because they know private agencies are specialists in job-hunting and can, because of experience and contacts, place them in desirable jobs sooner than they could locate jobs themselves.

Applicants desiring employment in other parts of the state or country can be referred for interview through associated agencies.

CLOSE CALL — Two wind surfers narrowly escape a collision Sunday in the waters off Miami's Rickenbacker causeway. High winds kept all but the most experienced wind-surfing enthusiasts home Sunday.

Hijacker was 'a chance in a million' Saturday

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — There was just "a chance in a million" that someone could sneak a knife past San Antonio's airport metal detector and use it to try to hijack a passenger jet, said a federal security chief.

But that's what happened Saturday in San Antonio, and it led to a 3½-hour standoff when the plane touched down at El Paso International Airport later that day, according to federal security agents.

Gerald James "Skipper" Hill Jr., of Chester Mass., commandeered the American Airlines jet, holding 19 passengers and seven crew members at knifepoint, authorities said, before FBI agents overpowered Hill and arrested him.

"There is no question that he bought the ticket at the San Antonio airport and was processed through the security point there," said John Adams, chief of the Federal Aviation Agency's five-state security operation.

Adams described Hill's getting a knife on board as "a chance in a million, but it obviously happened."

Hill was charged with armed interference with a flight crew and appeared in federal court Monday, where his bond was kept at $500,000 and attorney John Langford was appointed to defend him.

"I've requested the court to order that a psychiatric evaluation be made," Langford said, adding he also asked for postponement of another hearing scheduled for Thursday. Neither motion had been acted upon, he said.

Adams said the San Antonio airport's security system was checked before and after Saturday's incident.

"The equipment was working as it should be," he said from his Fort Worth office. "There is a possibility of momentary equipment error or human error or both."
