Half show up to explain missed jury duty

Hearing makes effort to deter duty avoidance; avoiders to get visit from Sheriff's Office

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

In the county's first show-cause hearing since 2011, only half showed up of those summoned to explain why they missed jury duty. The others once again ignored the order.

To be exact, 108 out of the 222 summoned spent their afternoon in the Midland County Courthouse with a judge, telling their story and then receiving a fine based on their explanation. For the second time, 114 did not respond to a county-issued notice.

Judge Rodney Satterwhite, of the 441st District and one of the judges who organized the effort to deter jury duty avoidance, said he predicted that about only 100 were going to appear Friday afternoon, based on past show cause hearing turnout.

"It's not too bad, but it's not too good," Satterwhite said about Friday's turnout. "But we have plans for those 114."

Those who did not show up Friday at the courthouse will receive another show-cause order, but this time Sheriff Gary Painter or one of the four constables will hand-deliver the notice. Recipients will then have to explain why they missed not just jury duty, but also the show-cause hearing.

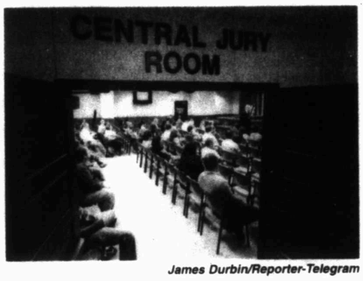

"They'll get a hearing much like the people did (Friday), and there may be some additional admonishments that were made at that time, depending on their circumstance," Satterwhite said.

And if a person ignores the third notice to appear, then a writ of attachment will be authorized, which means the sheriff will take the person into custody and bring them to the courthouse.

Of those who did appear Friday, Satterwhite said the explanations he heard included never receiving the summons but receiving the show cause order, having previous felonies, moving out of Midland and simply forgetting to respond the first time.

No one that Satterwhite heard from on Friday received jail time, he said, but fines were issued.

Corporal deputy dies after Utah motorcycle crash

By Cale Ottens
cottens@mrt.com

The Midland County Sheriff's Office is mourning the death of David Glenn, a corporal deputy who was hit by a vehicle Thursday while riding his motorcycle in Utah on vacation.

Glenn, 55, was a native Midlander and joined Sheriff's Office in 2006. He had served more than three decades in law enforcement.

He started his career with the Midland Police Department in September 1981 and retired after 25 years. But after only 30 days of retirement, Glenn asked Sheriff Gary Painter if he could work for him, Painter said.

"He was a natural; he was a superb officer; he was great," Painter said. "The only thing he asked for when he came to work was if he could work midnights. And that was so he could spend time with his family."

Glenn left behind his wife, Shawn Glenn, who Painter said was his "best buddy." The couple shared children and grandchildren together, he said.

Riding his motorcycle was one of Glenn's favorite hobbies, Painter said.

Two other Midlanders, one of whom also is a deputy, were traveling with Glenn at the time of the collision.

The three Midlanders were driving toward Colorado, after stopping at Mount Rushmore in South Dakota, when the crash occurred.

Abbott rallies Texas GOP, but platform fight looms

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Republican Greg Abbott urged his party Friday to imagine a Texas in 2036 with better schools and health care while rallying a GOP Convention that is bitterly divided now over immigration and confronting smaller fissures over gay rights and medical marijuana.

The favorite to replace Gov. Rick Perry next year, Abbott broadly outlined to roughly 10,000 convention delegates who've clashed this week over the party platform a plan for better schools and health care in Texas when the state celebrates its bicentennial in 20 years.

But that timeline is significant for another reason Abbott didn't mention: It's when Democrats predict the Lone Star State will swing back their way after decades of Republican dominance, riding an increasingly younger and Hispanic electorate in Texas to People hold signs Thursday during a same sex marriage rally outside the Fort Worth Convention Center in Fort Worth. The Texas Republican Party is poised to adopt a new platform this weekend that would support psychological treatments that seek to turn gay people straight.

Texas Republicans advance 'reparative therapy' for gays

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Gay Republicans in Texas said Friday they may stop fighting their party's proposed endorsement of "reparative therapy" over worries that even tougher anti-gay language could be added to the party platform.

The Texas Republican Party is poised to adopt a new platform this weekend that would support psychological treatments that seek to turn gay people straight. Such therapies were banned for minors last year by New Jersey Republican Gov. Chris Christie, and California has a similar law.

But a fight to remove the therapy language during the Texas GOP convention today could backfire, said Jeff Davis, chairman of gay conservative group Texas Log Cabin Republicans. A final platform vote would include nearly 10,000 delegates at the biennial convention, which has long been unfriendly territory for gays.

Davis said his group and its allies haven't settled on a strategy but that it might be better to adopt a longer-term plan to educate conservatives on the harms of psychological treatments that seek to turn gay people straight.

"Fighting it on the floor may not be the best court of action," Davis said. "It might be in our best interest to wait until the convention is over and regroup."

Under the new proposed plank, the Texas GOP would "recognize the legitimacy and efficacy of counseling, which offers reparative therapy and treatment for those patients seeking healing and wholeness from their homosexual lifestyle."

The American Psychological Association and other major health organizations have condemned such counseling, which generally try to change a person's sexual orientation or to lessen their interest in engaging in same-sex sexual activity. The groups say the practice should not be used on minors because of the danger of serious psychological harm.

But trying to strip the language from the Texas GOP platform could set off a contentious fight and result in altering the language even more. The therapy phrasing survived a key committee vote late Thursday, but hardliners had sought to change "homosexuality" in the platform to "sexual sins."

Also on the table is removing decades-old language that states, "homosexuality tears at the fabric of society." Davis said that was the only language his group sought to change at the convention and that he still wanted to go home with that win.

The therapy language was inserted at the urging of Cathie Adams of Dallas, leader of the influential tea party group Texas Eagle Forum and a onetime chairwoman of the Texas Republican Party.

Adams, whose group backed tea party outsiders who dominated Texas Republican primary races this year, said she simply promoted language proposed by a man she said was helped by such therapy, which has been defended by some smaller groups, including the National Association for Research and Therapy of Homosexuality.

"He knows what he's talking about. He is one of those who has benefited," Adams said. "I think the majority of Texans feel that way, too. It's not like this is mandatory. This is only a voluntary program."

Republican delegate Elizabeth Hunter, 20, said she didn't see any reason for removing language that describes being gay as tearing at the fabric of society.

"I don't see anybody leaving the Republican Party because of that language," she said. "I think it would actually encourage someone to join when they see that the Republican Party takes a strong stand rather than standing in the middle."

future victories.

Even the GOP's theme for its biennial convention in Fort Worth draws an unambiguous line in sand: Fight to Keep Texas Red.

"It has been 20 years since a Democrat has won a statewide election in Texas, and by God, we're not going to let that record be broken this year," Abbott said.

Abbott received a raucous ovation from GOP delegates, underlying his success as a rare conservative in Texas who's successfully courted both tea party supporters and establishment Republicans. Both those two sides haven't been so united at the convention on immigration.

Hardliners want stripped from the current state GOP platform the so-called "Texas Solution" that proposes a guest worker program to make it easier for immigrants in the U.S. illegally to get good jobs. Many in the tea party condemn it as a form of amnesty, while current party leaders say it satisfies the needs of a roaring Texas economy.

A contentious fight on immigration is expected today when the full convention votes on a new platform.

Endorsing the use of medical marijuana could elevate into a floor fight at the convention, though supporters were dealt a setback this week when a key committee removed earlier language that called for allowing prescription cannabis.

Hours before Abbott spoke to delegates as if he will be next Texas governor, U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz whipped them into a frenzy by sounding like a 2016 presidential candidate.

Cruz promised to lead a conservative revolution unseen since Ronald Reagan, likened President Barack Obama to his 1970s Democratic predecessor, Jimmy Carter, and decried the economy "being trapped in the Great Stagflation."

Cruz also not-so-subtly poked fun at the notion that gun rights that have been a sticking point at the convention, where supporters of open carry laws have rallied outside.

"In Texas, gun control means hitting what you aim at," Cruz said.

Houston state Sen. Dan Patrick, the new Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, will be the headliner today before the convention adjourns.

'No plans' to have Perry testify

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A special prosecutor said Friday that he does not plan to call Texas Gov. Rick Perry to testify before a grand jury investigating whether he abused his power by vetoing funding for public corruption prosecutors.

Michael McCrum spoke to reporters Friday in Austin before the expected meeting of a grand jury investigating Perry's threat to veto $7.5 million if Travis County District Attorney Rosemary Lehmberg refused to resign following her arrest for drunken driving.

Asked about Perry testifying, McCrum said, "There's no plans for that at this point."

McCrum has said he had specific concerns about Perry's conduct but declined to specify them. He wouldn't say Friday why he didn't plan to have Perry testify or how long the grand jury would take.

"Obviously, I don't want this to stretch too long," McCrum said. "It's not in anybody's best interest — not the governor's, not the state of Texas, not the people of Travis County. And so we're working diligently, but I'm not going to sacrifice quality of investigation for speed."

Two Perry aides, legislative director Ken Armbrister and general counsel Mary Anne Wiley, were seen Friday entering the room at the Austin courthouse where the grand jury is meeting. Both aides also appeared before the grand jury last month.

Two other aides also testified voluntarily, McCrum said. The aides declined to identify themselves or answer questions.

Perry said Lehmberg should resign after she was arrested and pleaded guilty to drunken driving in April 2013. A video recording made at the jail showed Lehmberg shouting at staffers to call the sheriff, kicking the door of her cell and sticking her tongue out at deputies.

Lehmberg served about half of her 45-day jail sentence but stayed in office, despite Perry's assertions that her behavior was inappropriate.

Perry eventually carried out his threat to veto the money. No one disputes that he is allowed to veto measures approved by the Legislature, including portions or all of the state budget. But the governor has been accused of coercion since he threatened to use his veto before actually doing so in an attempt to pressure Lehmberg to quit.

Port of Houston priest Rivers Patout dies at 76

Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — The Rev. Rivers Patout III, a feisty Catholic priest who for four decades "burned the candle at three ends" to minister to sailors at the Houston International Seafarer's Center, died Monday. He was 76.

A Galveston native, Patout was the founding chaplain of the Port of Houston center, which is credited as being the world's first such facility not associated with a single nation or religious group. Patout, who remained active at the center until his death, also was pastor at St. Alphonsus Catholic Church.

"It has been more than a sad week around the port," said former seafarers' center board director Tom Tellepsen. "We elevate ourselves when we think of what a blessing it was to have the Rev. Patout come through our lives. The port is the greatest asset of this city, and Rivers was a port institution, no doubt about that. He was an icon."

In the late 1960s, Patout joined two other Houston clergymen — the Rev. Sam Duree, a Methodist, and the Rev. Taft Lyons, a Presbyterian — in discerning a need for a center that would not only provide religious support for sailors, but a wide range of social and recreational opportunities.

The center, which opened with a Christmas Eve service in 1972, provided a swimming pool, track and soccer field. It staged athletic competitions between ships' crews and hosted dances.

"Rivers was the most internationally and interfaith-oriented," said the Rev. Ben Stewart, the center's Presbyterian chaplain. "He began to see the need for networking. Not only was he the standard-bearer, one of the founders and the first chaplain, but he also was assigned a parish church. If anyone ever burned the candle at three ends, it was Rivers. He understood what the center's meaning and mission could be: offering service to the men and women who have no voice and travel the world."

Patout, Stewart said, helped provide sailors "a place to get off those floating bombs, those big gas ships, to stand on dry ground and smell the grass, to see a face that wasn't fuzzy, to have someone look at them and not accuse them of being terrorists."

Added Cardinal Daniel DiNardo, who officiated at Patout's Friday funeral Mass: "He touched the lives of thousands of men and women from across the world. His leadership, dedicated ministry to his parishioners and his smile will be greatly missed."

Patout was ordained as a priest in 1967 and held pastorships at several churches in the Galveston-Houston Catholic Archdiocese, including Blessed Sacrament, St. Joseph-St. Stephen, Holy Name, All Saints, St. Theresa and St. Pius V.

2 arrested in connection to 19-year-old's death

From staff reports

Two Midlanders were arrested Friday in connection with the death of 19-year-old Haley Brianne Kemp, whose body was discovered last week on a South Midland caliche road.

Snyder

Aiken

Christopher Everett Snyder, 28, was being held Friday on a $115,000 bond for the second-degree felony charge of fabricating physical evidence involving a human corpse. Bond has not yet been set for Robert Douglas Aiken, 52, who is being held on similar charges.

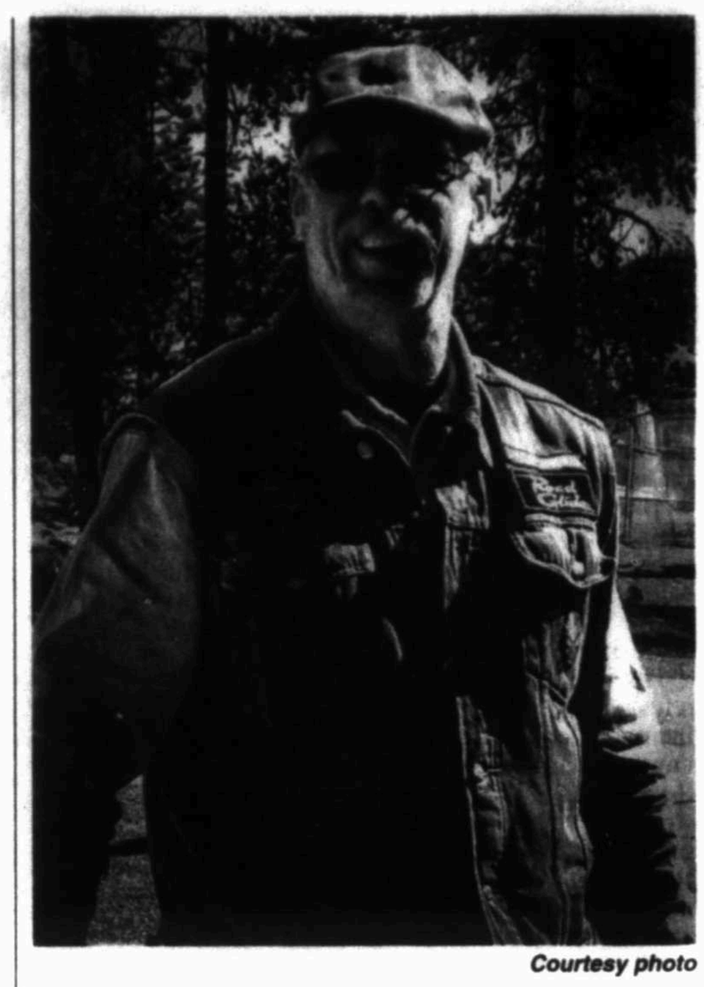

Midland County investigators found Kemp's body near the intersection of county roads 1205 and 135 on May 31. She was fully clothed without any visible marks, blood or indications of violence, but investigators determined her body had been placed there within a few hours of deputies finding her, according to a previous Reporter-Telegram article.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter previously said Kemp was involved in a drug rehabilitation program and had a history of narcotics use.

After determining Kemp had visited an address in the 2900 block of South County Road 1224 before her death, investigators questioned Snyder and Aiken, who "were not being completely truthful," according to a press release from the Midland County Sheriff's Office. Authorities executed a search and found cocaine, heroin and drug paraphernalia.

Snyder and Aiken, who were charged Wednesday with possession of a controlled substance, later admitted to moving Kemp's body from the residence to the location she was found, according to the press release. They were both charged Thursday with fabricating evidence.

The investigation continues. If convicted, Snyder and Aiken each face up to 20 years in prison for their second-degree felony charges.

Another vehicle had stopped abruptly to make a left turn, causing the three motorcyclists to wreck, Painter said.

Glenn died at the scene and the other two men suffered minor injuries, he said.

Painter, holding back tears, said he often has to notify next of kin after similar tragedies, but nothing compares to when it's a friend and colleague.

"You can't explain that," he said. "You're in a cloud; you can't think; you can't function; you just go. But in your head you know he's not there; he won't be back."

A memorial and funeral are planned for next week. Arrangements are pending with Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

One person who didn't ignore the order to appear on Friday, Julius Camarilla, apologized for ignoring his jury summons and received a $200 fine.

"I just felt bad that they didn't have enough people for jury duty. That's messed up," said Camarilla, who added he will appear for jury duty the next time he is summoned.

The goal of the show-cause hearings, set to continue in June and July, is to lessen the burden of jury service on those who do show up, Satterwhite said. Those who appear for jury duty — about 33 percent of the 750 who are summoned — typically have to serve multiple days because of vacancies in the jury pools.

"I would say so," Camarilla said in regard to the effectiveness of show-cause hearings on jury duty turnout. "It worked for me."

Vermont gun importer lays off 41, blames rules

Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. — A Vermont gun importer is blaming the White House for its laying off of 41 workers because the government blocked its plan to bring nearly $30 million worth of antique, American-made military rifles home from South Korea.

The White House's refusal to allow Century International Arms to re-import the World War II-era M1 Garand rifles is an apparent result of new rules set up last summer concerning requests to ship military-grade firearms back into the United States.

"This importation was denied despite our explaining that the denial would harm the company and pointing out that there is no rational, gun-control reason to block the importation of these historic, 70-year-old firearms," the company said in a statement Thursday.

An email to the White House press office seeking comment was not immediately returned Friday, but a press release from last August said the administration was blocking the re-importation of military firearms as part of two "common-sense executive actions" designed to keep dangerous firearms out of the wrong hands.

President Barack Obama's administration said the policy — with only a few exceptions, such as for museums — is intended to keep "military-grade firearms" off the streets.

But Vermont U.S. Sen. Patrick Leahy and Gov. Peter Shumlin had urged the White House to allow the deal to go through, noting the M1 is highly valued by collectors of military memorabilia and the rifle itself would even have been exempted from last year's proposed assault weapons ban.

Employers add jobs at pace not seen since 1999

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the first time since 1999, American employers have added more than 200,000 jobs a month for four straight months, offering more evidence that the U.S. economy is steadily growing while much of Europe and Asia struggle.

Last month's gain of 217,000 jobs means the economy has finally recovered all the jobs lost to the Great Recession. And it coincides with indications that American consumers have grown more confident. Auto sales have surged. Manufacturers and service companies are expanding.

"I don't think we have a boom, but we have a good economy growing at about 3 percent," said John Silvia, chief economist at Wells Fargo. "We're pulling away from the rest of the world."

Still, Friday's report from the Labor Department showed that pay remains subpar for many workers. Millions who want full-time work are still stuck in part-time jobs, and the number of people out of work for more than six months remains historically high.

Monthly job growth has averaged 234,000 for the past three months, up sharply from 150,000 in the previous three. The unemployment rate, which is derived from a separate survey, matched April's 6.3 percent, the lowest in more than five years.

Investors seemed pleased. The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 88 points.

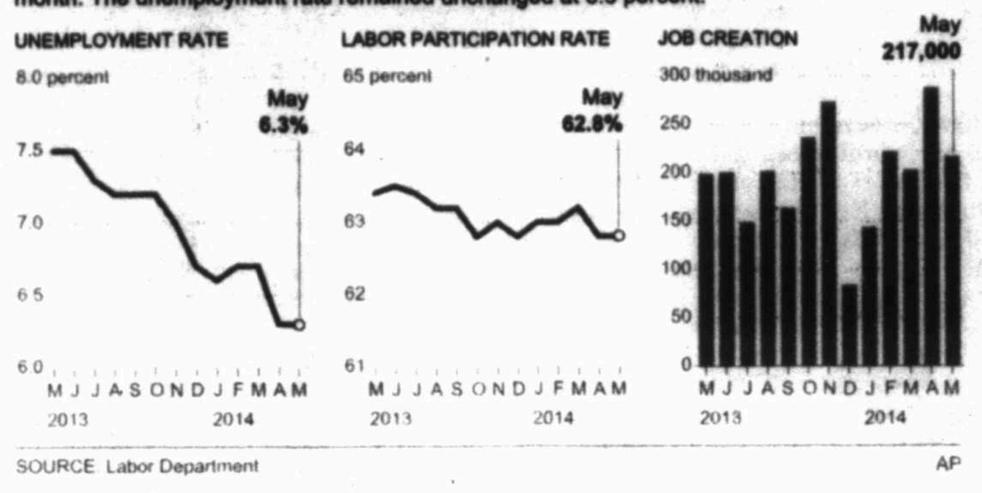

Though the economy has regained the nearly 9 million jobs lost to the recession, more hiring is needed, because the working-age U.S. population has grown nearly 7 percent since the recession began. Economists at the liberal Economic Policy Institute estimate that 7 million more jobs would have been needed to keep up with population growth.

In addition, average wages have grown only about 2 percent a year since the recession ended, well below the long-run average annual growth of about 3.5 percent.

And unemployment has fallen from a 10 percent peak in 2009 partly for an unfortunate reason: Fewer people are working or seeking work. The percentage of adults who either have a job or are looking for one remained at a 35-year low in May.

Strong job growth over last four months

U.S. employers added 217,000 jobs in May, a substantial gain for a fourth straight month. The unemployment rate remained unchanged at 6.3 percent.

EPA agrees to pesticide buffers to protect salmon

Associated Press

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — A federal agency has agreed to restore temporary buffer zones for spraying several common agricultural pesticides along salmon streams in Oregon, California and Washington while it continues work on a permanent rule.

The settlement agreement between the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Northwest Center for Alternatives to Pesticides was published Friday in the Federal Register.

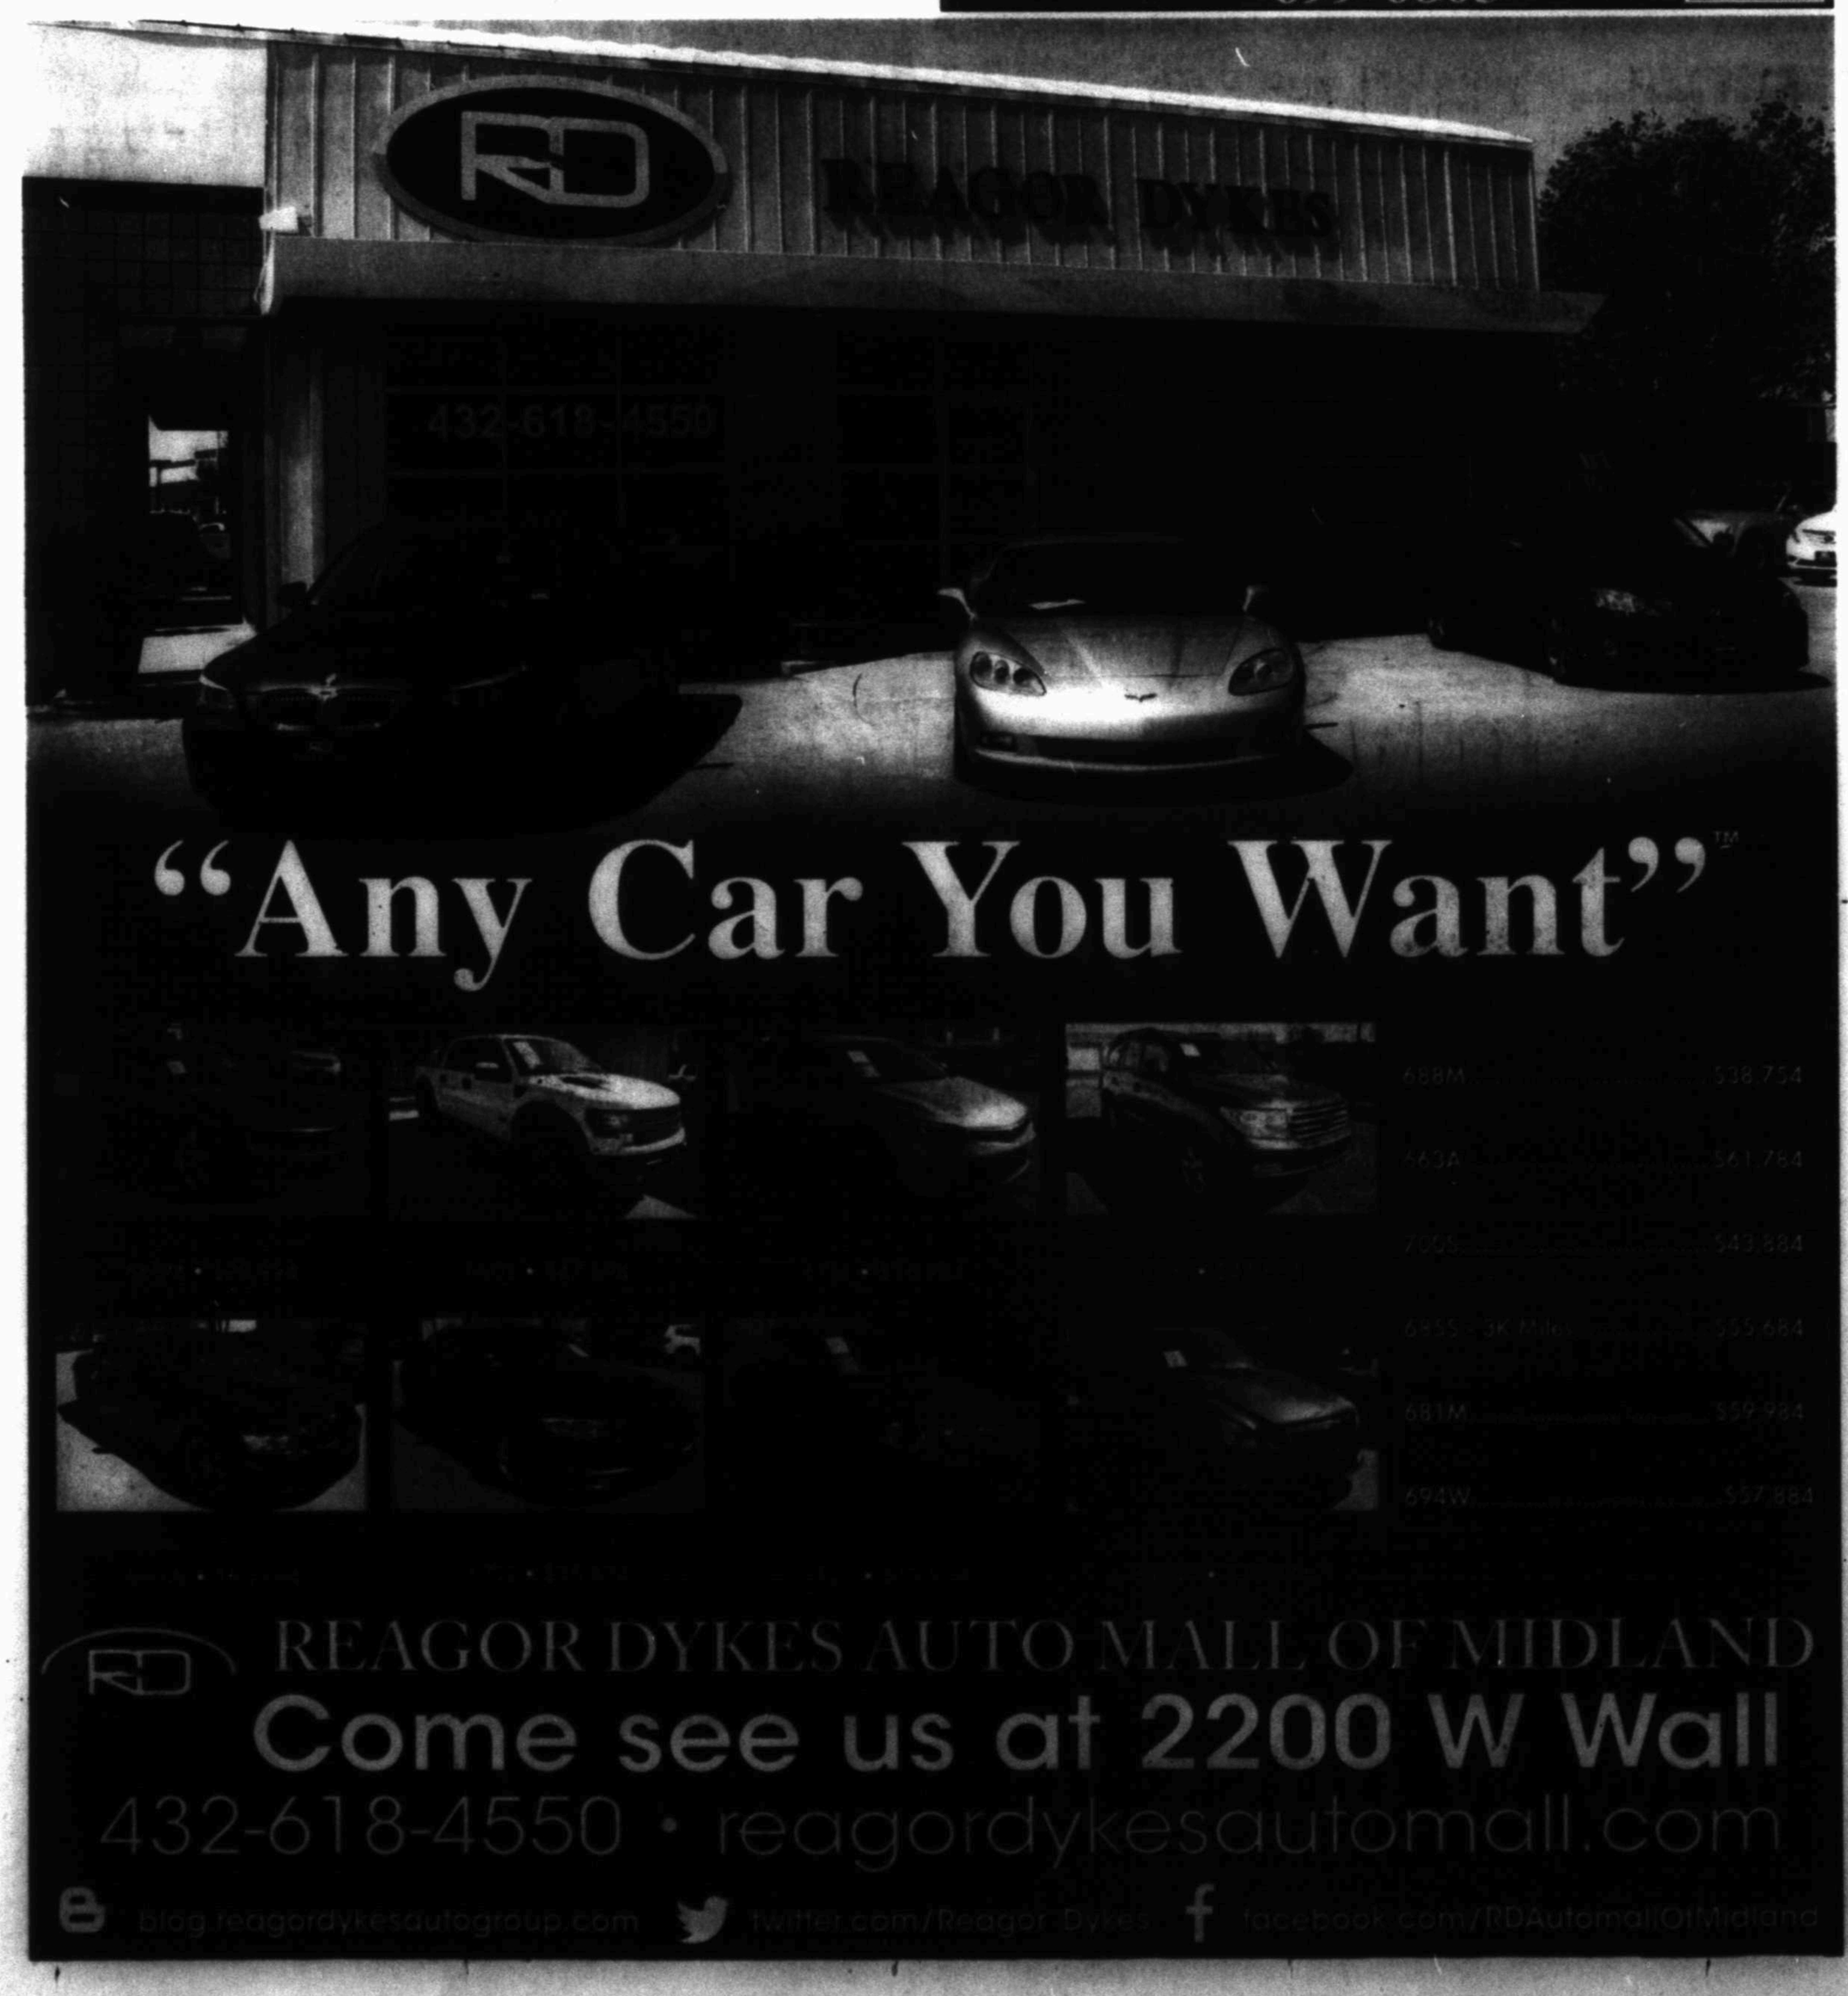

It stems from an injunction imposing the buffers that was issued by a federal judge in Seattle in 2004 but that had expired before EPA implemented permanent regulations. The buffers apply to all salmon streams in the three states.

The buffers prohibit farmers from spraying on the ground within 60 feet of a salmon stream and aerial spraying within 300 feet.

Federal biologists have found that the five broad-spectrum insecticides — carbaryl, chlorpyrifos, diazinon, malathion and methomyl — will harm salmon even at very low levels. The chemicals can kill vegetation in the water that fish use to hide and kill insects. The chemicals can also kill other food items for fish and interfere with a fish's sense of smell, which it uses to avoid predators and navigate on migrations.

One key element of the settlement is that the buffers will no longer expire once Fisheries Services scientists with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration finish updating an evaluation of the harm the pesticides cause salmon, said Kim Leval, executive director of the anti-pesticides group.

Veterans observe D-Day at World War II Memorial

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The granddaughter of General Dwight D. Eisenhower thanked those who carried out the D-Day invasion, telling them during a 70th anniversary commemoration Friday at the nation's World War II Memorial that "the world would have been a very different place" had their campaign failed.

Susan Eisenhower joined Elliot Roosevelt III, the great-grandson of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, representatives of 14 countries, several dozen World War II veterans and hundreds of spectators at the memorial on the National Mall to remember history's largest amphibious assault.

Dozens of veterans who fought on D-Day were present. Now well into their 80s and 90s, some could still walk without help, though most were in wheelchairs or used canes. A few wore military uniforms. Others wore hats, or pins.

Eisenhower read the D-Day order that her grandfather sent to the troops, and a letter the future president prepared in case the invasion failed. Roosevelt shared the prayer that his great-grandfather read over the radio on the morning of June 6, 1944. The president called the invasion a success thus far and asked the country to continue praying as the war continued.

"Had the operation failed, the world would have been a very different place," Susan Eisenhower told the veterans and others at the ceremony. "It is our duty ... that we do all we can to keep the story of D-Day alive."

Elliot Roosevelt said, "May we now and in the future live up to your standard and live up to what you have conferred upon us."

It was a warm and cloudless day at the memorial, very different from conditions under which Allied forces stormed the beaches of northern France. At least 4,400 troops were killed that day, and many thousands more died in the Battle of Normandy that followed.

Navy veteran Frank Shea, 88, of Clifton, New Jersey, enlisted at 17 with a forged birth certificate. He was a radio operator with a Navy ship on D-Day, eight days after his 18th birthday. His job was to relay the situation on the beach back to headquarters. His ship, more than 300 feet long, carried so many wounded soldiers that it ran out of space for them, Shea said.

He said he felt proud on Friday to be recognized for his service.

"When I got out of the Navy, I had to hitchhike home, with a seabag on my shoulder. That's the kind of celebration they were giving," Shea said. "This is very nice. It's very ornamental, and I appreciate it."

As people approached Shea to thank him for his service, 5-year-old Jacob Bobbitt of Baltimore walked up and silently handed Shea a small plastic American flag. Jacob's grandmother had a bag full of flags, and he was handing them out to every veteran he could find.

Watchdog: VA may have retaliated against workers

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal investigative agency is looking into claims that Veterans Affairs supervisors retaliated against 37 employees who filed whistleblower complaints, including some who complained about improper scheduling practices at the heart of a growing health care scandal.

The independent Office of Special Counsel says it has blocked disciplinary actions against three VA employees who reported wrongdoing, including one who was suspended for seven days after complaining to the VA's inspector general about improper scheduling.

The agency also blocked a 30-day suspension without pay for another VA employee who reported inappropriate use of patient restraints and blocked demotion of a third employee who reported mishandling of patient care funds, a spokesman said Friday.

The report by the special counsel's office comes amid a furor over allegations that patients have waited three months or more for appointments as VA officials falsified records to cover up delays at VA hospitals and clinics nationwide.

Special Counsel Carolyn Lerner said her office appreciates the VA's cooperation in agreeing to postpone disciplinary actions against the three employees who filed complains but said the VA should not retaliate against workers who are trying to disclose and prevent wrongdoing.

"Receiving candid information about harmful practices from employees will be critical to the VA's efforts to identify problems and find solutions. However, employees will not come forward if they fear retaliation," Lerner said in a statement.

The special counsel's office is investigating complaints of retaliation from employees at 28 VA facilities in 18 states and Puerto Rico, spokesman Nick Schwellenbach said. About half the 37 complaints have been reported in the past two months, after allegations about treatment delays and secret waiting lists at the VA hospital in Phoenix became public in April.

The agency also is reviewing 49 additional whistleblower complaints related to scheduling improprieties and other potential threats to patient safety at VA facilities, Schwellenbach said.

The agency's investigation is ongoing, Lerner said.

The VA's acting chief, Sloan Gibson, said Thursday that 18 Phoenix-area veterans whose names were kept off an official VA appointment list have died. The 18 who died were among 1,700 veterans identified in a report last week by the VA's inspector general as being "at risk of being lost or forgotten."

Gov't won't say how many immigrants released in US

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration is releasing inside the United States some immigrants who have crossed illegally into the country amid a surge in traffic across the Mexican border in southern Texas. But how many remains a mystery because the government won't disclose the number.

The Homeland Security Department started flying immigrants to Arizona from the Rio Grande Valley in Texas last month after the number of immigrants, including more than 48,000 children traveling on their own, overwhelmed the Border Patrol there.

U.S. Immigrations and Customs Enforcement has said the immigrants were mostly families from Central America. They were flown from Texas, released in Arizona, and told to report to an ICE office near where they were traveling within 15 days.

The administration would not say Friday how many immigrants were affected — hundreds or thousands — or how many of those immigrants subsequently reported back to the government after 15 days as directed. As many as 400 people were flown to Arizona during one weekend last month. Many were then dropped off at bus stations to travel to their original destinations in the U.S.

Most immigrants arrested at the border in southern Texas are from Honduras, El Salvador or Guatemala and cannot be immediately repatriated so they are handed over to ICE. The agency said after immigrants report back to its offices it would make "appropriate custody determinations" based on the government's enforcement priorities.

The perception that some immigrants could be getting a free pass into the U.S. could lead to even more attempts to cross the border. Illegal immigration increased heavily under a controversial "catch-and-release" strategy during the George W. Bush administration. Under that policy the government issued notices to appear in immigration court to migrants from countries other than Mexico until Bush stopped the practice.

Word that immigrant families are being released has spread south, and the Obama administration acknowledged this week that there is a perception that families and children traveling alone are being allowed to stay in the country freely. President Barack Obama's director of domestic policy, Cecilia Munoz, said such rumors are false and that immigrants caught at the border, regardless of their age, still face deportation.

In a draft memo from May 30, Border Patrol Deputy Chief Ronald Vitiello said releasing immigrants serves as an incentive for other would-be immigrants to try to cross the border.

Illegal immigration along the border is still near record lows in many places, but the Rio Grande Valley has seen a tremendous increase and now leads all Border Patrol sectors in annual apprehensions with more than 148,000 arrests so far this fiscal year. The region is seeing more children traveling on their own and migrants from countries other than Mexico.

Earlier this week Obama described the influx of children traveling alone as an "urgent humanitarian situation." The Office of Management and Budget told Congress last month that the government would need an extra $1.4 billion to deal with the situation.

Permian Basin rig count down two this week to 548

From staff reports

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin decreased two this week to 548, according to the weekly rig count report released Friday by Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

Texas as a whole added two rigs, ending the week at 896. In other Texas basins, there were 214 rigs in the Eagle Ford, up one; 67 in the Granite Wash, up one; and 28 in the Barnett, up two.

At this time last year there were 473 rigs in the Permian and 844 in Texas.

The number of rigs searching for oil and natural gas in the U.S. decreased six this week to 1,860. There were 1,536 rigs listed as searching for oil, unchanged; 320 for natural gas, down six; and four as miscellaneous, unchanged. A year ago this week there were 1,756 rigs in the U.S.

By trajectory, there were 389 vertical drilling rigs, down 14; 1,250 horizontal drilling rigs, down one; and 221 directional drilling rigs, up nine.

The top five basins by rig count this week were the Permian; the Eagle Ford; the Williston with 178, unchanged; the Marcellus with 80, down three; and the Mississippian with 77, unchanged.

The top five states by rig count were Texas; Oklahoma with 198, down one; North Dakota with 169, unchanged; Louisiana with 111, down three; and New Mexico with 86, unchanged.

In the U.S. there were 1,787 rigs listed as on land, down five; 14 in inland waters, up one; and 58 offshore, down two.

The Gulf of Mexico shed two rigs, ending the week at 56.

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in Canada increased 16 this week to 214. There were 122 rigs listed as searching for oil, up 17; 92 for natural gas, down one; and zero as miscellaneous, unchanged. At this time last year there were 152 rigs in Canada.

The total number of rigs searching for oil and natural gas in the North America region — which includes the U.S. and Canada but excludes the Gulf of Mexico — increased 10 this week to 2,074. A year ago this week there were 1,917 rigs in North America.

On Friday, Baker Hughes released its international rig count figure for May. The worldwide rig count was 3,371. The U.S. ended May with 1,859 rigs, more than half of all rigs worldwide. The following are the number of rigs in each region, with the top three or four rig counts in parentheses:

- Africa: 140 (Algeria, 47; Angola, 17; Chad, 13; Kenya, 13)
- Asia-Pacific: 243 (India, 128; China offshore, 28; Indonesia, 28; Australia, 20)

Oil little changed after jobs report

Associated Press

Solid employment numbers in the U.S gave a boost to oil Friday, though only a small one.

Benchmark U.S. oil for July delivery rose 18 cents to close at $102.66 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil traded in a narrow range all week and ended with a decline of 15 cents.

Brent crude, a benchmark for international oils, slid 18 cents to $108.61 a barrel.

The U.S. Labor Department said employers added 217,000 jobs to their payrolls in May, in the range of what economists had expected. The unemployment rate stayed put at 6.3 percent.

Heading into the weekend, U.S. drivers are paying an average of $3.66 a gallon at the gas pump. That's down 1 cent from a month ago, but 3 cents higher that at this time last year.

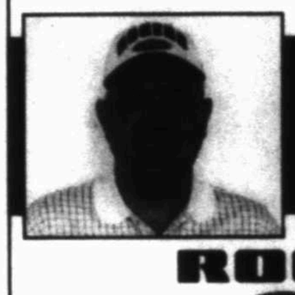

In other energy futures trading on Nymex:

- Wholesale gasoline fell 2 cents to $2.94 a gallon.
- Natural gas rose 1 cent to $4.71 per 1,000 cubic feet.
- Heating oil dipped 1 cent to $2.87 a gallon.

'Hounds have good week pitching, but Hooks win Friday

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Pitching defined the first three games of this week's series between the Corpus Christi Hooks and Midland RockHounds.

It was key again on Friday, but this time it was the Hooks that benefitted from a stellar pitching performance from right-handed starter Jordan Jankowski for a 2-0 victory at Security Bank Ballpark.

But the loss for the RockHounds, which broke a three-game winning streak, did little to take away from how the 'Hounds pitched this week at Security Bank Ballpark.

In the four games in this series, all four RockHounds starters went at least 6 1/3 innings, including a solid 6 2/3 innings from Chris Jensen on Friday. But on Friday, the RockHounds batters couldn't figure out Jankowski.

Jankowski pitched 7 1/3 innings, giving up no runs on three hits with seven strikeouts and one walk as Corpus Christi won its first game at Security Bank Ballpark this season.

Jankowski

"It's always nail-biting, and always a one- or two-run game, and it's nice to finally get a win here," said Jankowski, who is now 1-1 this season. "Both sides are always throwing the ball pretty well, and the hitters are good here. You have to have you're 'A' game every night."

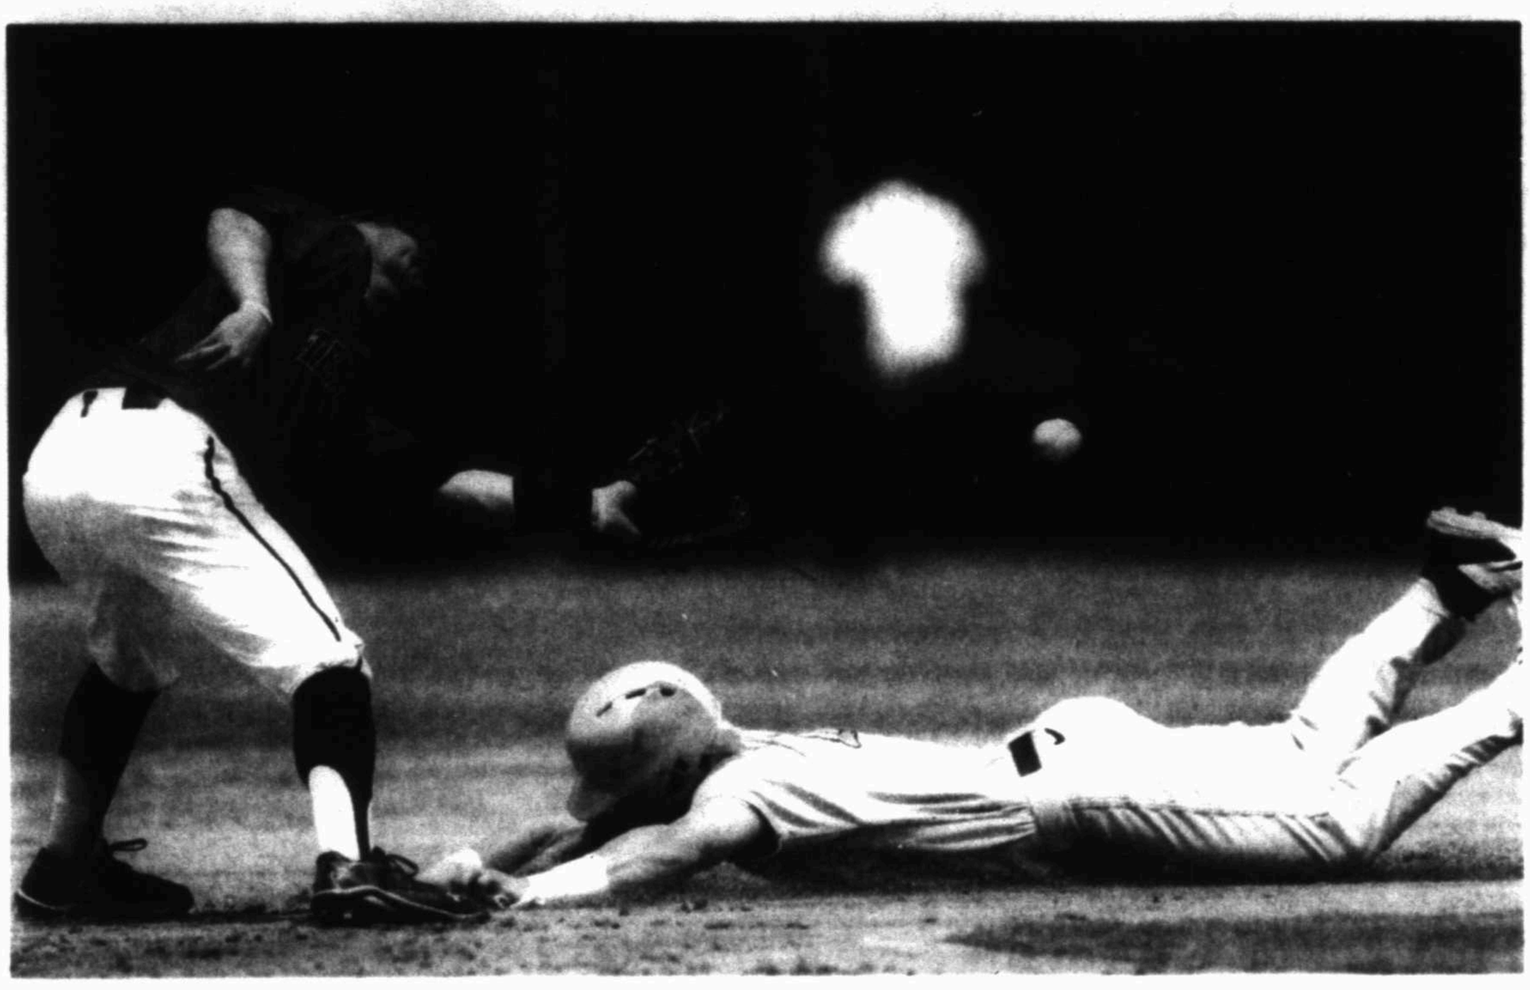

Midland (32-28) did win the series 3-1 and now will hit the road for eight games in Frisco and San Antonio after a solid home stand and pitching as well as it has all season.

"Starting pitching, bullpen, guys are starting to put together quality innings, whether it's starters or relievers, middle guys or back end guys," Midland manager Aaron Nieckula said. "Those guys are busting their butts doing their work. (Pitching coach Don Schulze) has a good program running there, and guys are getting better. That's the name of the game, development."

No team had double-digit hits in any of the four games this week. The two teams combined for a total of eight hits on Friday as each team had four.

Red Raiders in hunt for trip to CWS

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

The Texas Tech baseball team made history on Monday with its 4-0 victory against the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Florida

But it was on the flight home that the Red Raiders realized the accomplishment of making the NCAA baseball tournament super regionals for the first time was something that had an impact beyond just their watershed victory.

In the time it took the Red Raiders to board their plane Tuesday and take off, Rip Griffin Park, Texas Tech's home stadium, was sold out for this weekend's series with College of Charleston.

This weekend's best-of-three NCAA Super Regional Series begins at 12:05 p.m. today at Rip Griffin Park. The winner will advance to next week's College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska.

"It's crazy," said Texas Tech infielder and Midland Christian grad Bryant Burleson. "We were actually flying home from Miami on Tuesday, and they said tickets went on sale, and by the time we stopped they were saying it was sold out in less than an hour. We were blown away. It's crazy how much support we had."

The games

NCAA BASEBALL SUPER REGIONAL TEXAS TECH VS. COLLEGE OF CHARLESTON

Format: Best-of-three series
When: Game 1, 12:05 p.m. today; Game 2, 2:05 p.m. Sunday; Game 3, if necessary, 12:05 p.m. Monday
Where: Rip Griffin Park, Lubbock
Records: Texas Tech 43-19; College of Charleston 44-17
Today's starting pitchers: Texas Tech, Chris Sadberry (4-3, 3.49 ERA) vs. Taylor Clarke (10-3, 2.62 ERA)
Note: Winner will advance to the College World Series

The Red Raiders (43-19) have followed the lead of their coach in knowing that this weekend's series with the Cougars (44-17), who upset Florida and Long Beach State to advance out of the Gainesville Regional last weekend, is just one more set of baseball games to be played.

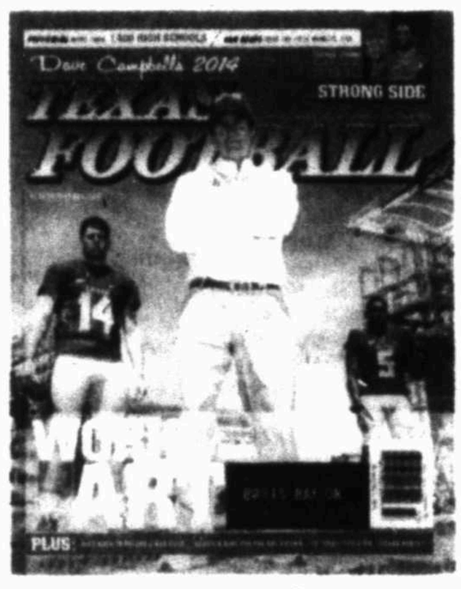

Burleson said that second-year coach Tim Tadlock has preached to the team constantly that they have to treat each game the same. It's seems to have worked for the Red Raiders this season including last week in Coral Gables.

Tech, who was the No. 2 seed in the regional, won its first two games of the four-team regional against Columbia and Miami and needed one win to advance to the super regionals. But Tech lost, 2-1, in 10 innings to the Hurricanes in a game that started on Sunday and was suspended because of rain. It was concluded on Monday afternoon.

But the Red Raiders rebounded in the deciding game later Monday to win, 4-0, and earn their super regional berth.

"I think really the ultimate goal is to play the best you can each day, and it doesn't matter where you are playing.

Former MHS star Goodley makes Texas Football cover

From staff reports

Baylor wide receiver and Midland High grad Antwan Goodley is on the cover of the 2014 version of Texas Football magazine, which was unveiled Friday.

Goodley appears on the cover with his coach, Art Briles, and quarterback Bryce Petty in front of Baylor's new football stadium.

Goodley, a redshirt junior, is one of the top wide receivers returning in the Big 12 this season after catching 71 passes for 1,339 yards and a team-high 13 touchdowns in 2013. He was an All-Big 12 first-team performer last season.

Goodley becomes the second player from Midland to appear on the cover of what many consider the bible for football fans in Texas. The other Midland high school football player on the cover was Lee grad Cedric Benson in 2000 before his senior season playing for the Rebels.

Two players with Odessa ties have appeared on the cover, as well. Odessa High graduate and former Texas Tech quarterback Rodney Allison was on the cover in 1977, and Odessa Permian graduate and former Texas wide receiver Roy Williams made the cover in 2003.

Goodley and Petty are the first Baylor players on the magazine's cover since 1981 when running back Walter Abercrombie was on the cover, and it's the first time since 1975 when Baylor was the main feature.

The magazine is set to be released on June 20.

MHS' Watson fully healthy heading into last high school football game

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Brady Watson isn't going to mince words in saying that last football season was a disappointment.

Watson's Midland High football team missed out on the playoffs for the second consecutive year, and he also missed three games because of a knee injury. But even in the midst of that disappointment, Watson also found what he wanted to do for the rest of his life.

Watson

During his rehabilitation for his knee injury during late September and early October of last year, Watson became interested in physical therapy and now wants to make it his career.

The game

ASCO WEST TEXAS ALL-STAR FOOTBALL CLASSIC

When: 7 p.m. today
Where: Lowrey Field, Lubbock

"The whole process made me want to pursue physical therapy and how it helped people," said Watson, who plans on attending Texas A&M and also walking on to the football team. "It's just amazing what they can do these days, and I've always had a science interest."

Watson, though, does have one more high school football game to play in as he will play in the ASCO West Texas All-Star Football Classic at 7 p.m. today at Lowrey Field in Lubbock. Watson is one of eight players from Midland High, Lee and Greenwood that will be playing in the annual all-star game for players from West Texas.

HOUNDS

From 1B

The gusty South-Southwest winds helped knock some hit balls down this week, but overall it was pitching that made the difference. Drew Granier's 6 1/3 innings helped keep Midland in Tuesday's game as the RockHounds won 4-3 in the final at-bat.

Sean Haviland had a solid seven innings on Wednesday, and then Nate Long's eight innings on Thursday was possibly the gem for the Rockhounds this week.

The only difference between Friday and the other three games was the Midland bats couldn't come up with the runs for a victory. Jensen threw 6 2/3 innings, giving up two runs on three hits with two walks and five strikeouts.

"Jensen did very well for us," Nieckula said. "He commanded the zone pretty well, and utilized a good mix and was just aggressive. He made pitches and got the job done, and gave us some strong innings. He gave us an opportunity to stay in the ball game and potentially come back and win it."

NASCAR Truck driver Erik Jones graduates at Texas

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Erik Jones walked across the stage wearing a cap and gown to receive his high school diploma. He then got into a NASCAR truck owned by Kyle Busch and went racing.

On the night of his high school graduation ceremony in Swartz Creek, Michigan, the 18-year-old Jones was instead at Texas Motor Speedway on Friday night making his first national-level start on a 1 1/2-mile oval.

"To graduate at a race track, I don't know that I would have had it any other way," said Jones, who finished 11th.

Before driver introductions, "Pomp and Circumstance" played while Jones went across the stage. He then received his actual diploma from TMS President Eddie Gossage, who also donned cap and gown and presented the young driver with another diploma signifying his graduation to 1 1/2-mile tracks.

Last November in Phoenix, Jones became the youngest winner in truck series history, winning at 17 years, 4 months on the mile track. The race at Texas came a week after his 18th birthday, making him eligible to race on the bigger tracks.

Sockers FC looks for 2nd win today

From staff reports

Sockers FC will hit the field today looking for its second win of the season.

The Sockers will take on the Houston Dutch Lions at 7:30 p.m. at Grande Communications Stadium. Sockers FC lost a heartbreaker to Austin last week on the road as the Aztex scored a goal in injury time for the 2-1 victory.

The Sockers are 1-3-1 with four points in the Premier Development League's Mid South Division standings. Houston is 1-3-2 also with four points.

Top pick Clowney signs with Texans

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jadeveon Clowney has his rookie contract with the Houston Texans. Now he needs to learn a new position.

The top overall choice in last month's draft, Clowney signed a four-year contract with the Texans on Friday. Houston has an option for a fifth year, as in all NFL contracts with first-round picks under the current collective bargaining agreement.

A star defensive end since entering South Carolina in 2011, Clowney will become an outside linebacker with the Texans. Rest assured he will have plenty of pass rushing duties, but Houston plans to use him in a stand-up position.

The Texans are moving to a 3-4 alignment and have 2012 Defensive Player of the Year J.J. Watt as one of their ends.

"For any rookie it's very difficult to make the jump from college to pro. It doesn't really matter if they were drafted No. 1 or undrafted, they're all trying to learn and keep pace with the veterans," new head coach Bill O'Brien said during a recent team workout. "I think he's doing a decent job of and he's working hard at it."

Clowney had 130 tackles, including 4.7 for losses, and 24 sacks in three seasons at South Carolina. He also set a school record by forcing nine fumbles in his career.

MCS grad Redman drafted by Dodgers

From staff reports

Texas Tech catcher Hunter Redman was selected by the Los Angeles Dodgers in the eighth round during the second day of the Major League Baseball Draft.

Redman, who is a Midland Christian graduate and also played at Midland College, was a second team All-Big 12 selection in 2014 after playing in 44 games and starting 37 behind the plate.

Redman hit .252 overall this season with 33 hits, three doubles and 17 RBI. He also hit .328 in Big 12 play with 13 RBI and 22 hits.

He's also regarded as one of the best defensive catchers in the Big 12 as he had a .993 fielding percentage this season with two errors.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

ARLINGTON — Michael Choice hit a tiebreaking homer in the seventh inning after ace Yu Darvish blew a four-run lead and the Texas Rangers snapped the Cleveland's six-game winning streak with a 6-4 victory over the Indians on Friday night.

Choice, who had an RBI single in a four-run second, went the opposite way just over the right-field wall against Marc Rzepczynski (0-2) with two outs for a solo homer. The shot made a winner of Darvish (6-2) after the Japanese ace gave up a season-high nine hits in seven innings.

Texas reliever Jason Frasor got a nifty double play from Elvis Andrus in a scoreless eighth, and closer Joakim Soria had two strikeouts in the ninth for his 13th save.

TIGERS 6
RED SOX 2

DETROIT — Ian Kinsler and Torii Hunter hit back-to-back homers in the fifth inning and Victor Martinez cleared the fences in the eighth, helping the Detroit Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 6-2 and end a season-high five-game losing streak.

Drew Smyly (3-4) allowed two runs on five hits over six innings. He struck out four and walked only one.

Ian Krol and Joba Chamberlain each threw an inning of scoreless relief and Joe Nathan pitched the ninth in a non-save situation with a four-run lead.

RAYS 4
MARINERS 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Erik Bedard struck out eight in six innings and the Tampa Bay Rays stopped a 10-game losing streak by beating the Seattle Mariners 4-0 Friday night.

The skid tied Boston for the longest in the majors this season. The Red Sox dropped 10 straight from May 15-25, with Tampa Bay handing them the last three losses in the streak. This was the Rays' first victory since then.

Bedard (3-4) scattered four hits and walked one in ending a three-start losing streak. Jake McGee, Joel Peralta and Grant Balfour, who gave up a ninth-inning single, all went one inning to complete a five-hitter.

ATHLETICS 4
ORIOLES 3, 11 INNINGS

BALTIMORE — Pinch-hitter Stephen Vogt singled in the tie-breaking run in the 11th inning, and the Oakland Athletics got home runs from Josh Donaldson and Derek Norris in a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Friday night.

It was the sixth win in seven games for the Athletics, who own the best record in the AL (38-23) and the best road record in the majors (21-11).

Chris Davis and Manny Machado homered for the Orioles.

ROYALS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chase Whitley pitched seven innings for his first career win, Brian McCann drove in three runs with a timely double and the New York Yankees beat the Kansas City Royals 4-2 on Friday night.

Brian Roberts drove in a run for the Yankees, who finally gave their young right-hander some support. Whitley (1-0) had allowed five earned runs in his first four starts, and left two of them with the lead, only for his team to saddle him with a series of no-decisions.

McCann helped take care of that with one swing of the bat. His bases-loaded double off Jeremy Guthrie (2-6) in the third inning broke a 1-all tie and gave New York the lead for good.

National League

DODGERS 7
ROCKIES 2

DENVER — Dee Gordon tripled twice among his three hits and drove in three runs as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat Colorado 7-2 on Friday night, handing the Rockies their eighth straight defeat.

Hanley Ramirez had two hits and stole two bases, and Justin Turner also had two of Los Angeles' 12 hits.

The Dodgers had lost six of eight but got healthy against the struggling Rockies. Hyun-Jin Ryu cruised through the first five innings before Drew Stubbs hit a solo homer with one out in the sixth.

PHILLIES 8
REDS 0

CINCINNATI — Left-hander Cole Hamels pitched into the eighth inning as he stayed unbeaten against Cincinnati, and Jimmy Rollins moved closer to the Phillies' hit record with a solo homer, leading Philadelphia to an 8-0 victory Friday night.

The Phillies ended their longest losing streak of the season at six games. Cincinnati dropped its third straight.

PIRATES 15
BREWERS 5

PITTSBURGH — Russell Martin had three hits, including a three-run double during an eight-run sixth inning, and the Pittsburgh Pirates rolled to a 15-5 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Friday night, handing nemesis Kyle Lohse his first loss since April 1.

Martin's double keyed an inning that increased Pittsburgh's lead to 13-3 and included Jose Tabata hitting two RBI singles and reliever Tyler Thornburg issuing two bases-loaded walks. The Pirates sent 13 batters to the plate.

Lohse (7-2) had won seven consecutive decisions, the longest active streak in the major leagues, but was tagged for eight runs and nine hits in five-plus innings. He had won his last six decisions against the Pirates, dating to 2011.

CUBS 5
MARLINS 3, 13 INNINGS

CHICAGO — Anthony Rizzo hit a two-run homer in the 13th inning to give the Chicago Cubs a 5-3 victory over the Miami Marlins on Friday.

Rizzo also had a two-run double in the eighth as the Cubs earned their season-high fourth consecutive victory. Jason Hammel pitched seven scoreless innings and Chris Coghlan had an RBI double in his first game against his former team.

Interleague

BLUE JAYS 3
CARDINALS 1

TORONTO — Jose Bautista and Brett Lawrie each homered, rookie Marcus Stroman won his second straight start and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1 on Friday night for their sixth straight victory.

Bautista hit a leadoff homer against Lance Lynn in the third and Lawrie connected with a two-out drive off Lynn (6-4) in the fifth. The AL East-leading Blue Jays have hit an ML-best 89 home runs.

TCU in 1st home super regional vs Pepperdine

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Jim Schlossnagle walked alone into the outfield at TCU's stadium on the night he became the coach 11 years ago and envisioned an NCAA super regional there.

"That thought's never left my mind," Schlossnagle said. "It was fun to play the ones we played in on the road, but to be in front of our crowd and play for the right to go to the College World Series is something that I've always dreamed of at TCU."

Schlossnagle's vision becomes a reality today when TCU (45-15), the No. 7 national seed, hosts Pepperdine in Game 1 of the best-of-three super regional.

The Frogs are playing in their fourth super regional in six years, but their first at home. They went to the College World Series in 2010 after playing a super regional at the University of Texas for the second year in a row.

Pepperdine (42-16) won the 1992 College World Series when coach Steve Rodriguez was an All-American player for the Waves. They are in their first super regional since the NCAA tournament expanded to that format 15 years ago.

The Waves were a No. 3 regional seed that swept through and advanced after beating host and top seed Cal Poly.

TCU was undefeated in its home regional, surviving an 11-inning opener against Siena, then outlasting Sam Houston State in 22 innings before beating the Bearkats again. The Horned Frogs have won 30 of their last 33 games since being 15-12 at the end of March.

"I don't think we could be more ready for this," TCU left fielder Boomer White said. "You don't necessarily want to be playing your best ball in the beginning, but right about now, and we feel like we're doing that."

Here are some things to watch at the Fort Worth super regional this weekend:

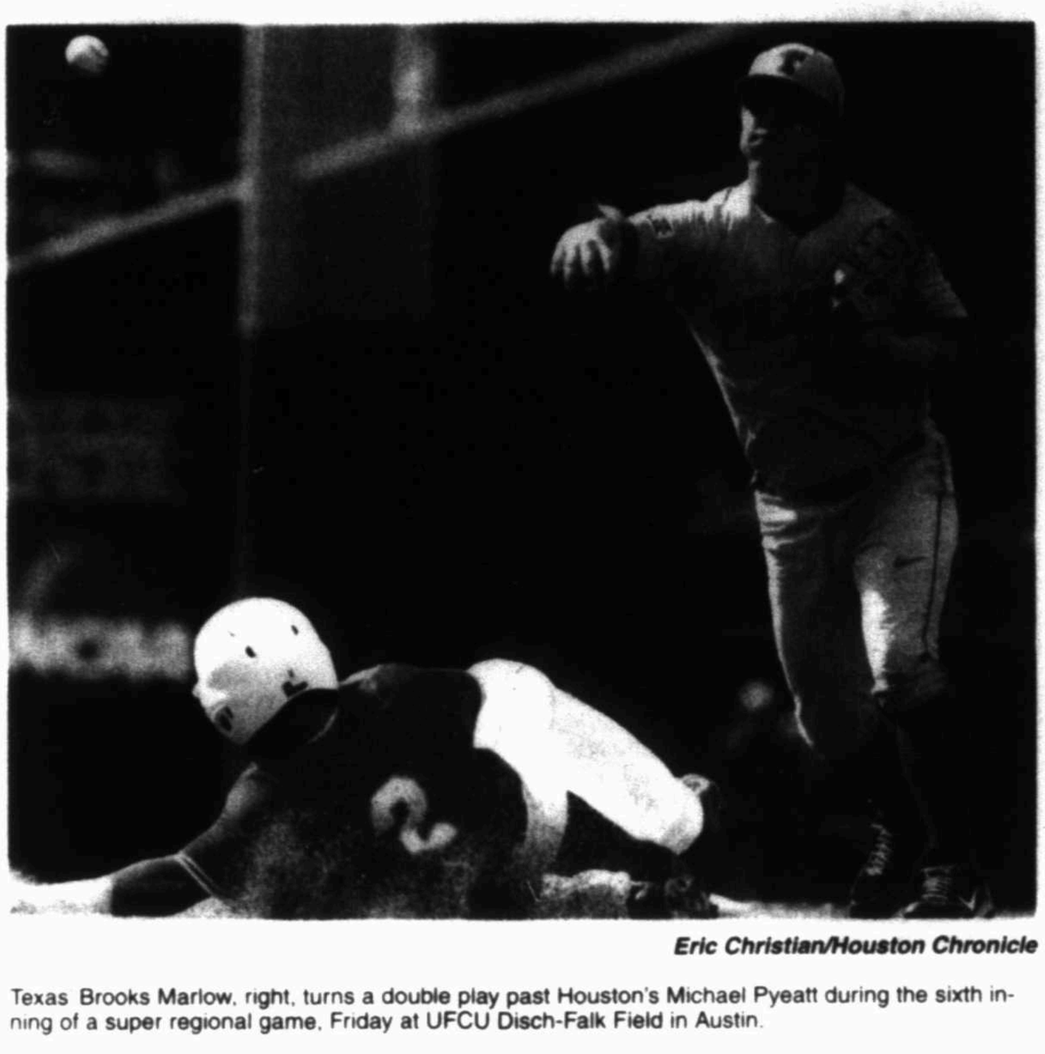

SPECTACULAR STARTERS: Pepperdine junior left-hander Aaron Brown (12-1, 2.07 ERA) is a two-way player who has homered in four games this season when he was also the winning pitcher, and TCU junior lefty Brandon Finnegan (8-3, 2.07) was the 17th overall pick by Kansas City in the first round of the draft Thursday night. The three Waves starters from last weekend are a combined 29-8 with a 2.33 ERA, while TCU's scheduled starting trio is a combined 27-9 with a 1.71 ERA.

BOOMER'S BIG BAT: TCU left fielder Boomer White was in a 2-for-27 slump before the NCAA regional. But he went 7 for 20 in the regional with the game-winning RBIs in both extra-inning victories. He also drove in a run in the 6-1 regional clincher.

CATCHING ON: Freshman catcher Aaron Barnett is Pepperdine's leading hitter with a .373 average and has only 11 strikeouts in 212 at-bats this season.

NOT PILING ON: There was no over-the-top celebration or dog pile when TCU clinched its regional Sunday, just handshakes and hugs. "That's just kind of imprinted on everybody's mind that we have bigger plans, and bigger things," junior infielder Derek Odell said. "So a dog pile's not really needed yet."

BEEN THERE BEFORE: Pepperdine and TCU have played only once before, when the Waves won in a tournament at Minneapolis' Metrodome six years ago. But the Waves practiced at TCU's Lupton Stadium last year, stopping there to practice on their way to Oklahoma after playing games at Texas A&M and Baylor.

AUSTIN — Nathan Thornhill pitched seven solid innings, fellow senior Mark Payton hit a two-run homer and Texas moved within a victory of returning to the College World Series by beating Houston 4-2 on Friday.

"This is where this program belongs," Thornhill said. "We wanted to be a part of getting it back."

Thornhill, a right-hander, allowed two runs and seven hits for Texas, which is trying for its record 35th appearance in the College World Series after missing out on Omaha the past two years. Payton had three hits, connecting in the first inning for his second home run in 415 at-bats.

"We just haven't seen any go out of this park ever. So you just hold your breath," Texas coach Augie Garrido said of Payton's homer, just the fifth by the Longhorns in 32 home games this year. "The two seniors that decided to come back kind of led the way, didn't they?"

Game 2 of the Super Regional is today.

Payton and Thornhill were picked in the 16th and 24th rounds of Major League Baseball's draft last year, but chose to return. Their reason: a desire to help the Longhorns return to the College World Series, where they haven't been since their freshman seasons.

"It took four months of begging on my part," Garrido joked.

The Longhorns (42-19) made it 4-0 by the time Houston (48-16) scored its only two runs in the fifth, starting the inning with three straight singles off Thornhill.

"He was outstanding," Houston head coach Todd Whitting said of Thornhill. "When you get a guy going against you who can throw all three pitches for strikes in any counts he wants, it makes it tough on your hitters. He didn't give us a whole lot of room for error."

Cougars starter Jake Lemoine was tagged for four runs in 4 2/3 innings and dropped to 1-7 with a 4.56 ERA in his last nine starts.

Red Raiders

From 1B

whether you are playing out here in Rip Griffin Park or playing anywhere," Tadlock said on Thursday. "That's what we are going to do is keep going, and keep it as a baseball game. We knew going down to Miami that we were going to have to turn a corner. Our guys definitely rose to the occasion there, and we've moved on from that and accepted the challenge we've got this weekend."

Both teams being able to win their regionals was somewhat of a surprise, and College of Charleston might have been the bigger one.

The Cougars earned the Colonial Athletic Association's automatic tournament bid but was the No. 4 seed in the Gainesville Regional. The Cougars then won three straight games to earn this week's super regional berth.

"They won over 40 games, and you don't do that by mistake," Tadlock said. "They play good baseball, and it looks like they pitched really good this past weekend. It's a challenge and an opportunity because they play the game the right way."

Tech winning in Miami wasn't as huge of a surprise as College of Charleston, but the Red Raiders had struggled playing on the road for most of the season.

Tech was 7-9 on the road this season, and were 31-4 at home, including winning their last 14 games at Rip Griffin Park. Winning a regional in a hostile environment was something that the players know is big for their confidence.

"To go into Miami and be able to do that and come out winning a regional like we did, that's a pretty big statement for us," Burleson said. "It's going to give us confidence especially being able to play here at home."

James recovering after dealing with Game 1 cramps

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — If the NBA Finals resumed Friday, there would be no way LeBron James could play.

There's no game until Sunday.

And James plans to be ready by then.

With his gait still affected by severe cramping and dehydration, and feeling the effects of a sleepless night brought on by several trips to the bathroom — an unavoidable drawback of having his body filled with fluids — James insisted he will play when the Miami Heat and San Antonio Spurs get together for Game 2 of the finals.

"I'll be in uniform on Sunday," James said Friday. "I should be 100 percent on Sunday. Obviously I'm going to take it light today. Training staff said I should take it light today. Give the body another day to recover. Tomorrow I should be back on my feet full go — and I got all day Sunday to get ready for Sunday night.

When he was there on Thursday, the Heat were right there as well.

When he was done, so were the Heat.

Up by seven at one point in the fourth quarter, Miami fell apart in the final minutes and James' ugly departure could have easily had something to do with that. San Antonio's lead was 94-92 after James scored with 4:09 left; he was out of the game for good and unable to move 10 seconds later. From that point, the Spurs finished on a 16-3 run.

Heat coach Erik Spoelstra made no excuses Friday, simply saying the two-time defending NBA champions needed to close the deal. James or no James.

"He's a competitor at the highest level," Spoelstra said. "So it was killing him being on that sideline, but you also have your health to look after. Look, 99.9 (percent) of people have never pushed their body to that level, at that level where you're past the point where your tank is empty and your body shuts down. For a competitor and for the best player in the game at this level to constantly push his body past that point, I think, is incredibly admirable."

Crampgate, as Spoelstra called it, was still the hot topic of the finals Friday.

Among developments:

■ Spoelstra revealed James took seven anti-cramping pills during the game.

■ The air conditioning was working again at AT&T Center and the NBA said a faulty breaker caused the breakdown. Arena events this weekend, including a Friday concert and Saturday WNBA game, were proceeding as scheduled.

■ Gatorade issued an apology over some tweets that made light of James' cramps. James is an endorser of Powerade, a rival sports drink.

■ NBA Commissioner Adam Silver told The Associated Press that he spoke with James' agent Rich Paul and manager Maverick Carter to check in on the health of the four-time MVP.

"They both assured me that he was all right," Silver said. "We all agreed that it was an unfortunate incident."

Silver said the league is satisfied that there was no chicanery involved.

"It's the nature of live sporting events," Silver said. "It's, for better or worse, part of the drama of these games."

The Heat used nine players Thursday night and guard Dwyane Wade said he'd like to see the rotation expand in Game 2.

"This time of the year you can't leave anything to chance," Wade said. "I look forward to us using more guys next game, keep guys fresher."

James has dealt with cramps in big games before, including Game 4 of the 2012 NBA Finals against Oklahoma City and Game 3 of this season's Eastern Conference finals against Indiana. He's been tested as to why he cramps; doctors, he said, have no answers. Heat trainers are typically not available to media, but Spoelstra said the team takes all necessary measures to keep James healthy.

"Maybe in his case, his ability to mentally push himself harder than the next guy just pushes his muscles more to the extreme," said Dr. James Gladstone, the co-chief of sports medicine at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai. "In some ways it's almost commendable that he pushes himself that hard."

Spoelstra said he doesn't compare Thursday to past cramping issues. The arena temperature made for an abnormal night.

"It's like trying to play an NBA basketball game in a hot yoga environment. It's not ideal," Spoelstra said. "We're not making excuses for it, we're trying to adapt on the fly and it was at an extreme level and he was competing at an extremely high level. The only other answer would have been to pace himself, and he doesn't have that in his DNA."

Kings, Rangers weigh lineup changes for Game 2

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The New York Rangers and the Los Angeles Kings both could have key defensemen back in their lineups for Game 2 of the Stanley Cup finals today.

Kings defenseman Robyn Regehr is likely to return from a 14-game absence with a knee injury, while Rangers defenseman John Moore also is expected to be back in the New York lineup at Staples Center.

Regehr hasn't played since the opening game of Los Angeles' second-round series against Anaheim on May 3, when he injured his knee on a check by Teemu Selanne. The 34-year-old defenseman has been skating in practice with the Kings, waiting for an opportunity to get back into a winning lineup.

x-Monday, June 16: Los Angeles at NY Rangers, 7 p.m. x-Wednesday, June 18: NY Rangers at Los Angeles, 7 p.m.

Coach Darryl Sutter said Friday that Regehr "probably" will play in Game 2. Assistant captain Matt Greene, who plays the fewest minutes among the Kings' six regular defensemen, is the most likely candidate to be scratched.

Regehr should be amply motivated, since he is among the few Los Angeles skaters without a Stanley Cup ring from the 2012 championship team.

The 14-year NHL veteran joined the Kings late last season in a trade with Buffalo, immediately fitting into Los Angeles' defensive scheme with his hard-hitting game. He also kills penalties for the Kings.

Regehr made the Stanley Cup finals with Sutter and the Calgary Flames in 2004, but hadn't returned to the NHL's biggest stage.

"When you're a younger player, you don't fully understand the opportunity when you're getting it," Regehr said. "That was me 10 years ago. We had a pretty good team, and you think you'll be around it for a while. Then we had the (2004-05) lockout, and when we came back, we weren't there. Now that I'm back in this position, I know how rare it can be for a player to get this chance, and you don't want to waste it."

WATSON

in late September, Watson said he was worried his season might be over. But who he was working with assured him he would be able to play later. He said he sprained his medial collateral ligament and had some cartilage damage in his right knee.

Watson missed three games for Midland High but returned for the Lee game and finished the season with 42 tackles, five sacks and 11 tackles for loss on the way to earning second-team honors on the 2-5A All-District team.

"When I first hurt my knee I was so devastated that I thought it was going to be it," said Watson, who plans to major in biology at Texas A&M. "But once I got started doing all the rehab and talking to the guys at Dr. Floyd's office they really helped me through it all. Pretty much from the beginning they told me I was going to play during the season."

And he will head into today's game fully healthy and ready to go for his last high school game, and having the chance to play with some players he played against this season.

"I think it's going to be a cool experience," Watson said. "I've known some upper-classmen that have played in the all-star game and they said how cool the experience was to get to play with those guys from all these different places. I've been excited about it ever since (coach Craig Yenzer) told us."

California Chrome chases history in Belmont Stakes

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

NEW YORK — California Chrome is 1 1/2 miles away from ending the longest drought in racing history — 36 years without a Triple Crown winner.

Eleven horses as good or better than him have tried to complete the sweep in the Belmont Stakes and failed since 1978. The chestnut colt with the modest pedigree and self-described "dumb ass" owners can either make history today or become just another near-miss.

"I've watched the other horses where they failed," California Chrome trainer Art Sherman said. "I don't know if they just got flat outrun or got tired from the Triple Crown races."

California Chrome and 10 rivals will run the longest race of their lives on Belmont Park's deep, sandy track with its sweeping turns. No other Triple Crown winner faced more than seven rivals.

"I feel more confident coming into this race than I did any race," said Sherman, who at 77 is overseeing the best horse of his career. "I'm getting pumped up."

California Chrome completed his final run-through on Friday, galloping two miles around the Belmont oval after visiting the paddock where he will be saddled on race day. He stood quietly in stall No. 2 before walking through the tunnel toward the track, pausing several times for photographers. His ears pricked at the sound of clicking cameras.

The Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner will jog again early today, about 13 hours before he tries to become the 12th horse to win the Triple Crown.

Hall of Fame trainer Nick Zito, whose horses spoiled Triple Crown bids in 2004 and 2008, said that how California Chrome handles the extra quarter-mile in the Belmont will be crucial to his chances.

"Smarty Jones was in front going a mile and a quarter, and that last quarter of a mile got him," Zito said. "It's a different race. It's just longer."

If there's one worry Sherman has, it's whether his chestnut colt with four white socks can run that far after a tough campaign of three big races in five weeks.

"One thing I always wonder about is stamina," Sherman said. "It could be walking pace the first part of it. All of a sudden, the guys kicking in the last part don't get there."

Ultimately, Sherman will leave the decision-making to Victor Espinoza, who saw his bid for a Triple Crown aboard War Emblem end in defeat at the 2002 Belmont. He and California Chrome have teamed to win six consecutive races.

"He gets him to relax. I never give him any instructions," Sherman said. "I'm sure there will be different tactics, but that's OK as long as Victor can have a spot where he can run the last quarter of a mile."

Racing has been aching for another Triple Crown champion since Affirmed became the third horse in the 1970s to sweep the Derby, Preakness and Belmont. California Chrome and his team would be welcome members of the exclusive club if the colt can pull it off in front of a crowd expected to top 100,000.

"It has to be a super horse to win that," Espinoza said.

Owners Steve Coburn and Perry Martin have shown that a couple of working stiffs who spent $8,000 on a mare they bred to a stallion for $2,500 can trump the sport's blue blood owners and breeders. They were called "dumb asses" by a trainer for buying a mare who gave no indication that she could produce a standout offspring who could run fast.

"This horse has given everybody else out there the incentive to say, 'You know what, we can do it, too,'" Coburn said. "This horse is letting America know that the little guy can win."

8-time champion Nadal, Djokovic in French Open final

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

David Vincent/AP

Rafael Nadal celebrates winning a semifinal match of the French Open against Andy Murray on Friday in Paris.

PARIS — This is what Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic wanted. It's what they expected. And now they'll meet in a French Open final with so much at stake for both.

Nadal is seeking championship No. 9 at Roland Garros, and his 14th major title overall. Djokovic is hoping to finally conquer the French Open and complete a career Grand Slam. Fittingly, whoever wins the rivals' 42nd head-to-head meeting Sunday will be ranked No. 1 on Monday; the runner-up will be No. 2.

"He has the motivation to win Roland Garros for the first time, for sure. But at the same time, he has the pressure to win for the first time," Nadal said. "I have the pressure that I want to win — and the motivation that I want to win — the ninth."

In Friday's semifinals, the No. 1-seeded Nadal was at his imperious, and nearly immaculate, best in a 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 victory over Wimbledon champion Andy Murray that lasted all of 100 minutes. Nadal never faced a break point, converted all six he earned, and whipped his uppercut of a forehand as only he can.

Toni Nadal, Rafael's uncle and coach, called the match "one of the best that he has ever played here."

That's sure saying something. Toni's nephew is 65-1 at the clay-court tournament and carries a 34-match winning streak into the final.

The thick, gray clouds and chill that became a staple these two weeks gave way to sunshine and warmth Friday, and Nadal reveled in it.

"For me, is much better when the weather is like today," he said. "My ball creates more topspin. The ball goes quicker in the air, and with my forehand I am able to create more with less."

All in all, Nadal made Murray look rather lost.

"You want to be competitive. You want to make it hard for him," Murray said. "I wasn't able to do that."

The No. 2-seeded Djokovic's semifinal was only slightly less perfunctory, a 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 victory over 18th-seeded Ernests Gulbis of Latvia that came first Friday, when the temperature hit 82 degrees.

Wrapping a cold towel around his neck during changeovers, Djokovic was brilliant through two sets, then faltered in the third, showing frustration by spiking a racket so hard he mangled it.

Djokovic has made no secret of the importance he places on a French Open title to add to the six majors he's won — four at the Australian Open, one each at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

"Obviously, Novak would like to win the one he is missing," said Djokovic's coach, Marian Vajda. "So all these hopes ... make him more tense than usually you see him. But I think this match helped him to release it."

Afterward, Djokovic said he felt "physically fatigued a little bit" and was looking forward to resting until Sunday, when the forecast predicts similar heat but also a chance of rain.

No two men in the Open era, which began in 1968, faced each other as often as these two. Nadal leads 22-19 overall, 8-3 at majors, and 5-0 in the French Open — including victories over Djokovic in the 2012 final and 2013 semifinals.

But Djokovic won their last four matchups, including on clay in the final at Rome last month, which the Serb said boosted his belief in himself.

Still, Djokovic conceded, "I don't know how much 'upper hand' I have, really. ... There is no doubt that he is the favorite to win the title."

Nadal's take?

"Probably he will come to the match mentally a little bit better than me because he beat me the last four," said the Spaniard, who won Wimbledon and the U.S. Open twice each, and the Australian Open once, and can tie Pete Sampras at 14 major titles, behind only Roger Federer's record for men of 17. "But at the same time, my feeling is I am doing the things better, and I am playing better again."

Carson weighing retirement vs. running for president

By George Bennett
Cox Newspapers

Book signing

Dr. Ben Carson signing "One Nation: What We Can All Do."
When: 4-5 p.m. today
Where: Barnes and Noble Booksellers.
barnesandnoble.com.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — World-renowned neurosurgeon Ben Carson was looking forward to a retirement in West Palm Beach filled with golf, sunshine and relief from the "enormous taxes" he was paying in Maryland.

Then a speech he delivered at the 2013 National Prayer Breakfast while President Barack Obama sat nearby on the dais made Carson an instant conservative hero and catapulted him into the 2016 presidential conversation.

"Life has never been the same for me since that day," Carson, 62, said in an interview with The Palm Beach Post in which he said he'll decide sometime after the November elections whether to launch a White House bid.

Before the presidential chatter, Carson's life was already movie screenplay material — literally. A 2009 made-for-TV biography starring Cuba Gooding Jr. focused on Carson's rise from inner-city Detroit to Yale to directing pediatric neurosurgery at Johns Hopkins, where he led a pioneering 1987 operation that successfully separated infant German twins who were joined at the cranium.

Carson was a regular on the motivational speech circuit and no stranger to presidential audiences. He spoke at the 1997 Prayer Breakfast with President Bill Clinton and first lady Hillary Clinton on the stage with him. But Carson's 2013 speech to the same gathering would send his life in a new, political direction.

As Obama listened, the soft-spoken Carson criticized liberal political correctness, the national debt, the complexities of the tax code and an education system that he said has "dumbed things down" and enabled America to drift from its founding principles. He argued for a flat income tax and implicitly took a shot at Obama's signature domestic policy achievement by calling for health care savings accounts.

A few weeks later, Carson was joining Marco Rubio, Jeb Bush and other potential Republican presidential hopefuls at the 2013 Conservative Political Action Conference. He spoke at CPAC again this year and finished third in the event's presidential straw poll, behind Republican Sens. Rand Paul and Ted Cruz but ahead of Rubio and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and other GOP stars.

Over the weekend, Carson finished a close second to Cruz in a straw poll at the Republican Leadership Conference, a conservative summit in New Orleans.

While Carson said a presidential decision is months away, he's been keeping himself in the political spotlight.

He has embarked on a bus tour to promote a new book filled with policy prescriptions. In speeches across the nation, he's been weighing in on the federal health care law, taxes, Benghazi, the IRS targeting of conservative groups, media bias and the perils of political correctness.

He has also drawn fire for saying political correctness is "very much like Nazi Germany" in suppressing speech and for saying the health care law is "the worst thing that has happened in this nation since slavery and it is slavery in a way because it is making all of us subservient to the government."

Such talk, and the criticism of it from liberals, is red meat for the Republican primary base. But Carson isn't a Republican. He's registered in Palm Beach County with the obscure Independence Party of Florida.

"I used to be a Democrat. Then during my residency I became a Republican just listening to a lot of common sense from Reagan. And then subsequently, just noticing a fair amount of hypocrisy in both parties, I decided to become an independent," Carson said.

Carson said he'd prefer to see party labels removed from the ballot. But, he said, "If I were going to run — and it's a big if — then I would run as a Republican."

Carson said this year's midterm elections will be crucial in his decision.

"I want to see what happens in November because that's going to tell me a great deal about the country," Carson said. "Do people actually recognize that we're off the rails and do they want to return to a nation that is for, of and by the people or are they for the most part committed to moving to a different system where we're for, of and by the government?"

If voters embrace the first scenario, Carson said, "certainly you would think more seriously about a larger commitment. Having said that, I would hope that someone would come along who really has a good appreciation of the Constitution and what America is all about, about personal freedom, about responsibility, about compassion and how we allow people to rise rather than stay dependent, about world leadership, about developing our resources while still having respect for the environment. If somebody like that came along and developed a lot of traction, I'd get behind them."

It's too early to tell whether such a candidate exists, Carson said.

Carson speaks frequently of his Christian faith and opposes gay marriage and abortion. But he doesn't sound interested in running as a culture warrior.

"People need to understand that you don't have to compromise your principles in order to be pragmatic. And you have to be able to look at the big picture," said Carson, who has voiced support for Oregon Senate candidate Monica Wehby, a physician who supports abortion rights.

"In a political context that means that because your candidate doesn't win in the primary and there's somebody who you have a little disagreement with and you say 'I'm taking my marbles and going home,' that's not helpful," Carson said. "It's much better to work with somebody you agree with 85-90-95 percent of the time than somebody who opposes you 100 percent of the time."

Some Ben Carson notes and quotes ...

After gaining international fame for separating conjoined twins, he made a cameo in the 2003 comedy "Stuck On You" about conjoined twins played by Matt Damon and Greg Kinnear; Carson said he did so after filmmakers agreed to hold the premiere in Baltimore to help raise money for the Carson Scholars Fund.

Contributed $1,000 to Republican Steve Forbes' 2000 presidential campaign, saying Forbes has "common sense." In 2006, he gave $250 to failed Maryland congressional candidate Peter Beilenson and $800 to losing Colorado congressional candidate David Jeffrey Thomas, both Democrats Carson knew personally.

On Sen. Marco Rubio: "I've not physically met him but he strikes me as an extremely intelligent man with a good set of values and I think he has a great deal of potential."

On former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush: "I know his brother quite well, but I've not met him. From what I've seen, he was an excellent governor."

On reaction to his 2013 National Prayer Breakfast speech: Organizers told him the White House was upset, but Carson said President Barack Obama "walked over to me and shook my hand and thanked me for coming. He didn't say he enjoyed the speech but he thanked me for coming. He didn't appear hostile."

November midterm prediction: "My sense is that people are waking up in droves and in that fact we're going to have a wave election in November and that people will indicate they really do believe in America and in American principles and that they don't want to fundamentally change our nation."

Dr. Ben Carson reads "Whistle for Willie" by Ezra Jack Keats to a group of students, in the Carson Reading Room, at Jefferson Elementary on April 24, 2012, in Houston. The school's leisure reading room was put together with funding from the Ben Carson Reading Project, with the goal of getting children to learn the enjoy of reading, said principal Kerry Hamilton.

Dallas incubates new dining spots

By Jamie Stengle
Associated Press

DALLAS — In a place that prides itself on doing things big, it stands to reason that Dallas' newest hot spot for dining isn't just one restaurant but a new development of nearly a dozen at the foot of a soaring bridge that is the city's newest landmark.

But the restaurants popping up in the 15-acre Trinity Groves are not your usual offerings — they are what the three investors behind the development call an "incubator." Prospective restaurateurs pitch their ideas to the investors, who fund the projects in hopes that successful concepts will spawn locations across the country.

"In essence, what we're doing down here is we're creating brands," said Trinity Groves investor Phil Romano, the man behind national restaurant concepts including Romano's Macaroni Grill.

"I'm looking for a point of difference, like what's going to make me go and eat their food rather than somebody else's food? Does it taste better? Does it look better? What is it? A different kind of food?" he said.

The concept has brought in a diverse array of restaurants — from barbecue to tapas to Middle Eastern to seafood to Asian-Latin fusion — over the last year and a half, transforming a rundown area to a glittering destination that greets visitors as they head out of downtown over the Margaret Hunt Hill Bridge spanning the Trinity River and into West Dallas.

Freeloader might have to pay the price of lost friends

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I have been best friends with "Jean" ever since grade school. We get along great, except for one thing — she's a cheapskate! Jean is single and still lives with her parents; I am a single mother living on my own. We earn about the same amount of money.

Whenever Jean is invited out for drinks, she brings only enough cash for one drink, and then comments loudly that she doesn't have enough money on her for another one and waits until someone offers to pay for it. When going out to eat, she eats at home first, and then asks to "sample" everyone else's food. If she wants to see a movie, she makes sure to bring a date to pay for her ticket.

I think her stingy behavior is keeping her from having serious relationships because she expects to pay for nothing. It has reached the point where I don't want to do anything with her because of her penny-pinching ways. Mutual friends have asked me to speak to her. What can I say to keep my friendship intact? — SEPARATE CHECKS, PLEASE, IN OHIO

DEAR SEPARATE CHECKS: Because you have reached the point that your relationship with Jean is in jeopardy, talk with her about how her behavior has affected you. But do not allow yourself to be the appointed spokeswoman for anyone else. And unless you know for a fact that her stingy behavior is keeping her from having serious relationships with men, keep it to yourself.

In the future, if you go out with Jean and she says she didn't bring enough money for a second drink, allow her to suffer the consequences. And when she asks to "sample" what you're eating, tell her calmly you'd rather she didn't. I agree that when behavior like hers becomes a pattern — and the person is able to pay but is mooching — that it's obnoxious. But it won't be corrected by enabling her, and that is what everyone has been doing.

DEAR ABBY: Because I'm a florist, my niece asked me to do the flowers for her wedding. I gladly agreed.

"Misty" put the priest through a lot to make this a very special occasion. She hadn't attended church prior to the wedding. When the priest asked Misty for a contribution to the church for having her wedding there, she was miffed. I asked her, "Who do you think pays the utilities and upkeep for the church for one-time users like you?" She hasn't spoken to me since! Was I wrong? — MIFFED MYSELF IN NEW YORK

DEAR MIFFED: Wrong? You gave your niece a dose of reality and stated it very well. It appears Misty has some growing up to do. Perhaps when her "bridal fever" subsides she will realize that life isn't one freebie after another, and offer the apology she owes you.

P.S. I hope she thanked you for the flowers.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 7, 2014:

This year you blaze a new path, and you're more willing to take a gamble on your ideas. A partner, friend or associate supports you, and he or she feels as strongly as you do about your decisions. If you are single, a romance could emerge from this association, and it is likely to become quite important to you. Expect things to heat up as soon as summer starts. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy each other's company a lot. LIBRA loves to be around you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ The presence of others inevitably involves you in their plans. If you don't want to head in this direction, buck the trend. Follow your chosen direction as politely as possible. Your thoughts and energy could be elsewhere; direct them accordingly. Tonight: Meet up with friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You deserve some time off from the overwhelming demands of others. If you want to cocoon at home, do. No one can say anything about taking some personal time, as you give so much in general. Screen your calls, and do what you want. Tonight: Keep it easy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You naturally choose fun plans. Your unusually high energy needs to be funneled into something you enjoy. Make choices that allow your self-expression to come through. Be direct with others. Tonight: Do not allow someone's comments to bother you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Keep communication flowing, even if you want to end the topic of conversation. You need to hear what someone else has to say. This doesn't mean you have to agree. Avoid a disagreement by respecting the other party's feelings and ideas. Tonight: Do what you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You don't need to stretch far to find agreeable plans that you'll enjoy. In fact, you might already have several invitations that appeal to you. Accept the one where you will be most physically active. You could feel awkward with a loved one. Tonight: Dance the night away.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Curb a need to be overly possessive and in control. That isn't how you typically are, so ask yourself how you can let go and head in a more positive direction. You might want to spend more than you should. Try to stay within your budget. Tonight: Accept a treat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Beam in what you want. Others can't resist you when you express the sunny side of your personality. A key loved one won't be able to say "no" to you. Let others figure out what they want to do; it could be amusing. Tonight: No matter where you are, you will be noticed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Listen more and speak less. You could be sitting on some anger that might explode if it's not handled properly. Try to understand these feelings, and share them in a way that they can be heard. Caring grows because of your willingness to be vulnerable. Tonight: Don't ask, don't tell.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Your popularity and the demands of others could be overwhelming. You know how to multitask, but with this much going on, you might want to run away. Reach out to a close friend and make plans to visit. You need more relaxation in your life. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You might be involved with a project, or perhaps you have to deal with a parent or friend. Once you fulfill your obligations, you'll have every reason to relax. Allow your sense of fun to emerge. What a good time you will have! Tonight: Choose something different.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You have a way of letting go and escaping the here-and-now that others wish they could replicate. You are unlikely to be found at your normal haunts. Remember that you do not need to tell people where you are. A new friendship might be building. Tonight: Go with the moment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Deal with a loved one directly. You will be far more successful if you relate on an individual level today. You'll seek one special person whom you would like to spend time with. Nevertheless, you can't just ignore everyone else. Tonight: Add some romance.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
My husband and I have been renting for years trying to save enough money to buy a house of our own. We're finally ready and started looking for opportunities. We decided we didn't want to live in a condo since we were already renting one and didn't like the rules and regulations. Last year we had to get approval from our landlord and the condo association to hang a wreath on our door for the holiday and they still issued size restrictions. Who knew holiday spirit had size limitations? We found a house we absolutely love in a great community. Then we found out that there is a homeowner's association that takes care of the common areas. I'm told the association also helps by making sure everyone in the community takes care of their properties, but I'm wondering if they also add regulations. I don't want to be asking about putting up my Christmas wreath again! Can you tell me more about a homeowner's association? Are we better off with or without one?

Cash: At least you're getting a jump on the holiday this year, even planning your decorations before you have the house.

Carry: Considering your previous experiences, we can understand your concerns. Homeowners associations, also known as HOAs, have grown in popularity since the 70's.

Cash: While some have received bad publicity with experiences such as yours, most homeowners find them to be an asset to the community, keeping up the neighborhood and the property values.

Carry: Most HOAs are set up to develop and manage the community during construction. When a set number of homes have been sold, the association is then transferred to the homeowners and typically governed by people in the neighborhood.

Cash: The rules and regulations they enforce can vary significantly from how often you have to mow your lawn to the color of your house. So it's very important that you investigate the regulations before purchasing any property. Ask the realtor or the homeowner to provide you with written information on the association. Then you can determine if the HOA is set up in a way to help you enjoy the benefits of the community.

Carry: Of course, be sure to check their restrictions on holiday decorations. You only have 28 weeks left until Christmas!

Fast Facts

Working at Home

With the massive growth of real estate and planned developments, homeowner associations are on the rise. In 1970, there were only about 10,000 communities governed with an association. Today you can find over 300,000 communities, including homeowner's associations, condominiums and cooperatives. It's estimated that more than 1.7 million homeowners have served on a community association board volunteering more than 110 million hours of time every year.

Being Neighborly

A study sponsored by the Foundation for Community Association Research found that most residences within community associations enjoy the benefits they offer. For example, 88% stated their community association board members strive to serve the best interests of the community. Nearly 74% said their community association's rules "protect and enhance" property values. And of those who had direct interaction with the community managers, 88% said the experience was positive.

Neighborhood Watch

Every Saturday when my neighbor sees me outside, he comes over to borrow something. I wouldn't mind except I have to track him down and remind him to return it. Last time when he borrowed my mower, I eventually just went over to his house and took it back.

Like clockwork, he saw me outside last weekend and came over again to borrow my table saw. This time I was prepared. "I'd love to let you borrow it," I told him. "But I'll be using it today to help my son with his school project."

Undeterred by my quick thinking, he replied, "That's no problem. But since your busy all day, can I borrow your golf clubs?"
