HHS has big group in UIL regional academic contest

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

Roxanne Balderaz, a Hereford High School sophomore, is not the only student with butterflies in her stomach.

Several Hereford High School students are competing in the Regional Academic UIL contest at Angelo State University (ASU) in San Angelo this weekend.

"I feel pretty calm now. But once we arrive in San Angelo I am sure the butterflies will begin to circle in my stomach."

"It surprises me that I have not pulled out all my hair. Well, at least not yet," Balderaz said.

The students competed in the District Academic UIL contest at West Texas A&M University in Canyon.

The following are the results of the district contest:

-- Justin Betzen, second in informative speaking.

-- Jay Crawford, second in current events team.

-- Andrew Del Toro, second in current events team.

-- Marivel Gamez, second in spelling team, second in Lincoln-Douglas debate.

-- Lauren Hansen, first in biology.

-- Kitt Jennings, second in spelling team, first in headline writing.

-- Carey Lyles, second in current events team, first in current events individual, second in persuasive.

-- Leslie Michael, second in editorial writing.

-- Eddie Montoya, second in spelling team, second in spelling individually, first in poetry.

-- George Pacheco, fourth in poetry.

-- Deanna Redelsperger, third in Lincoln-Douglas debate, third in persuasive.

-- Julie Schlabs, third in headline writing, second in feature writing.

-- Monica Tijerina, second in poetry.

-- Anna Witkowski, third in prose.

The alternates are Balderaz and Sarah Wright.

The sponsors are Lana Hall, speech; Nina Brown, journalism; James Perkins, science; and Scott Whitaker, science.

HHS competed against seven schools in the district. The school placed second in the district contest, Hall said.

Of the 15 speech slots to advance to regionals, HHS has nine slots, she said.

The top students are eligible for scholarships, Hall said.

At the state competition, more than $750,000 in scholarships will be awarded to the top students, she said.

Most students are going into the contest with lots of confidence.

"I'm pretty confident about our current events team," Del Toro said.

He watches TV news programs to prepare for the contest, Del Toro said.

Lyles also watches news programs, reads three daily newspapers, seven weekly magazines and views news on the Internet.

"I'm excited to compete on a regional level," Lyles said.

Hall, HHS speech coach, has helped build confidence in her students, Tijerina said.

"I am very confident in what I do," Tijerina said.

"I am very confident that I can be competitive if I just stay calm," Schlabs said.

And like all the students, she has prepared long and hard for this contest.

"If I can enter into the competitions with confidence and make full use of the skills I need to compose good feature stories and headlines, I think I will be able to perform well."

"And hopefully advance to state," Schlabs said.

Clinton 'not worried' about Whitewater

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton says that because he is blameless in the Whitewater affair, he is "not worried at all" about new information turning up in court now that former business partner James McDougal is cooperating with prosecutors.

"We did not do anything wrong," Clinton said at a news conference Friday. "We had nothing to do with all these business matters that were the subject of the (McDougal) trial."

Abandoning his once-staunch defense of the president, McDougal asserted that Clinton was present at a 1986 meeting where a fraudulent loan was discussed. "I just got sick and tired of lying for the fellow," McDougal said Monday as he was sentenced to three years in prison.

Prosecutors urged leniency, saying McDougal's cooperation had led them to information "previously unknown to us."

Clinton said he did not think the latest developments would cause trouble for him or his wife, Hillary.

"No, I'm not worried at all," he said.

Independent counsel Kenneth Starr is expected to ask - as early as Monday - for a six-month extension of the special grand jury in Little Rock, Ark., that is investigating Whitewater. The grand jury's 12-month term is set to expire May 7.

On another issue of interest to investigators, Clinton said he had no discussions with Indonesian businessman James Riady or former Associate Attorney General Webster Hubbell in the summer of 1994 about efforts to line up financial help for Hubbell, then under investigation for defrauding his former law-firm partners. The Lippo Group controlled by Riady's family subsequently paid Hubbell $100,000.

Clinton said his White House meeting with Riady was "basically a social call" for five or 10 minutes. "He said nothing about Mr. Hubbell that I can remember. I don't believe he did."

Grand Forks gives up; dikes fail to rein river

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) - Having held back the Red River for days, Grand Forks gave up when a bulldozed dirt dike gave way and water rushed in, submerging cars and filling basements in the blink of an eye.

All 50,000 residents of the city were urged to leave their homes late Friday and early Saturday after it became apparent that no amount of piled dirt was going to rein the river in. In some neighborhoods, only the roofs of houses could be seen.

Police Lt. Byron Sieber estimated Saturday morning that about 25 percent of the city was flooded, but that figure was growing. City officials were looking for more shelters to house those who were forced to leave the rising water.

"It's mostly on the eastern half of the city, and it's still spreading on us," Sieber said.

Mayor Pat Owens praised the work of flood crews, saying there was nothing they could do except wait for the water to subside.

"I believe the citizens within the region and the greater Grand Forks area fought to the last," Owens said. "We did not lose. We put everything into it."

Dikes had sprung leaks all over the city early Friday, but it was not until just before dawn that sirens warning of an impending break roared thousands living near the river.

About 800 people, including more than 100 residents of a nursing home, were taken from their homes before water surged over one dike. About 2,000 people had earlier fled their homes.

Students from the University of North Dakota, the state's largest college, helped top off already towering sandbag dikes along the river, which creates a border between North Dakota and Minnesota.

Buckle up! 210 ticketed in four days

Buckle up -- it's the law. And the Hereford Police Department is working hard to enforce this law.

"Seat belt enforcement is going to be a top priority with officers on the street," Lt. Ben Barrick said.

Officers implemented STEP, or Selected Traffic Enforcement Program, March 28 - 31, Barrick said.

The police department received a grant to implement STEP, which is funded by the Texas Department of Transportation, he said.

The city was divided into four quadrants. The police department had additional officers in marked and unmarked cars patrolling each quadrant, Barrick said.

The STEP program has been successful. Officers issued 210 citations during the four-day period, he said.

The state average compliance is 74 percent for seat belts and 61 percent for child safety seats, he said.

The Hereford average compliance is 77 percent for seat belts and 55 percent for child safety seats, Barrick said.

The next STEP program will be implemented during the Fourth of July holidays, he said.

For more information on the program, contact HPD at 363-7120.

HMO to pay $1 million fine

AUSTIN (AP) - Kaiser Foundation Health Plan of Texas, one of the state's largest health maintenance organizations, has agreed to drop its lawsuit against the Texas Department of Insurance and to pay a $1 million fine.

The company also agreed to make specific improvements to assure high-quality care for its members statewide, Texas Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer said late Friday.

The settlement announced between the company and the department does not reveal the allegations against Kaiser contained in a report by department attorneys accusing the HMO of quality-of-care violations and recommending a substantial fine. The report spurred the suit by Kaiser.

Protestantism makes strides among Hispanics in Texas

(Editor's note: This is the fifth in a series of articles about the booming Hispanic America.)

By MARK BABINECK

Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A lunch break during a recent middle-school field trip reminded teacher Hector Tavera of a common stereotype he's heard all his life.

It came while he ordered a burger. "Mr. Tavera, you can't eat that."

"It's Friday," said one of his students, a seventh-grader who assumed Tavera was Roman Catholic.

The fourth-generation Baptist had heard it before: "I guess people still think that if you're Hispanic, you must be Catholic. But that's just not true anymore."

Tavera is a prominent member of the Iglesia Bautista Templo, one of three Baptist churches in Lubbock and more than 900 in Texas that cater to Hispanics.

The Rev. Ed Sena tinges his mostly English sermons with enough Spanish to please bilingual members but not so much that non-speakers can't follow him.

On a recent Sunday, he spoke of the cross.

"That silver cross that you wear at home? After a few months, it tarnishes," Sena shouted. "My savior, Jesus, is the same yesterday, today and manana. And he never tarnishes."

The contrast was apparent to Sena's congregation, half of which he estimates left other Christian denominations, including Catholicism. He said many Catholics, Hispanic and otherwise, are rejecting the symbolism of Rome for the fellowship and Bible study of his church and others.

Sister Maria Elena Gonzalez, who runs the Mexican American Cultural Center in association with the Archdiocese of San Antonio, said the problem isn't with the church but in its slow response to immigration.

"I think it's a concern, but ... we welcome the fact that people are being welcomed in churches in ecumenical (evangelical) movement," she said. "We certainly have nothing against that. Many times people are leaving the Catholic church because we're not welcomed."

Templo began as a Spanish-only Baptist church in the heart of East Lubbock 30 years ago. It slowly evolved into a bilingual congregation that now has only two members who don't speak English.

When the Anglo congregation of Southcrest Baptist Church moved into a new building in the more affluent southwest side of town, Templo took over its 40,000-square-foot facility in near-town Lubbock.

Meanwhile, a small evangelical church bought Templo's old building. That's an example of Protestantism's progression in Hispanic Texas, according to Southern Methodist University professor David Maldonado.

"In the last 20 years, there's been more of an evangelical, Pentecostal movement with a different theology," Maldonado said. "Now you have Catholics, old-line Protestants and new Pentecostals among Hispanics."

The trend also has been driven by strong Pentecostal movements in Latin America that have resulted in a wave of Protestant immigrants flowing northward into the United States, Maldonado said.

Oklahoma City holds ceremony; 168 minutes of silence for dead

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - People fell silent and church bells tolled "Ode to Joy" and "Amazing Grace" Saturday in memory of those killed exactly two years earlier in the terrorist bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

Hundreds of people gathered next to the grassy mound where the building once stood, praying and leaving photographs and bouquets on the fence that surrounds the site.

At 9:02 a.m., the moment of the explosion, Oklahomans observed 168 seconds of silence - one for each of the dead.

And just as members of the crowd bowed their heads, a fire truck's siren

One result: Hispanics are becoming more mainstream in such groups as the Southern Baptist Convention. In Corpus Christi, a Spanish-only Baptist church that had evolved into a bilingual congregation recently went English-only and replaced its Spanish name with the generic Corpus Christi Baptist Church.

Jimmy Garcia, the SBC's director of ethnic ministries, said the Corpus church is an example of how Baptists hope to incorporate Hispanics.

"The time will come when the Baptist Convention in Texas will no longer think in terms of 'We have a Hispanic person trained as a minister, so let's go out and find him a Hispanic church,'" Garcia said. "In the future we'll see Hispanic pastors in all types of churches."

Conversely, Sena wants his church to reach in the other direction. Along with his other goals - building a school, boosting the congregation from 350 people to 1,000 in the next three years - Sena is hoping to attract other ethnic groups.

"My dream is to attract more Anglos and more blacks, simply because we've got every ministry to offer here, and we need to grow," Sena said.

Next: Hispanics strive for economic growth on South Plains.

- on an unrelated emergency call - sounded somewhere in the distance, an eerie reminder of the morning when firefighters and police rushed to the smoking rubble scattered by the blast.

After the tolling of church bells across the city and the state, the names of the dead were read aloud.

Before the ceremony, about 12 people held a prayer service in the newly reopened Heartland Chapel across the street from the bomb site.

Gov. Frank Keating asked that people leave a flower or other memento at the fence today, and declared the anniversary a day of remembrance and prayer.

Red Cross Update

Clothes will be given away in front of the Red Cross building beginning at 2 p.m. Wednesday, weather permitting. Please come if you need clothes. Please call the Red Cross office to have your name included on the class roster for Community CPR and First Aid classes. The number is 364-3761.

Tri County Chapter will also be offering three classes for people who are interested in volunteering to help victims of disasters. Disasters like the recent flooding and wind storms have affected and are affecting Texas residents.

Neighbors in other states need help, too. Flooding and freezing temperatures are forcing many families from their homes, and "Help can't wait. If you would like to train to be part of the team, you can begin now.

Classes will begin April 29 with "Introduction to Disaster Services." "Damage Assessment" will be offered April 30 and "Introduction to Mass Care" will be April 31. All classes will be held at 7 p.m. in the Red Cross building. Call if you would like to have your name placed on the class roster. The number is 364-3761.

This is the season for power outages in our area and the Red Cross recommends:

- *Use flashlights to see. Do not use candles because they greatly increase the chances of having a fire in your home.
- *Use a battery-powered radio to find out official information about the storm, power restoration, and road conditions.

*Turn off electrical appliance that was on when the power went off to avoid a power surge and possible damage to the appliance when power is restored.

*If power will be out for a long time, and roads are passable and authorities say it is safe to travel, consider going to a Red Cross shelter, a hotel or the home of a friend or family member.

All Red Cross disaster assistance is free, made possible by voluntary gifts of time and money from American people. The Red Cross is not a government agency. To help victims of these and other disasters, call 806-364-3761, or 1-800-HELP-NOW (800-435-7669), or 800-257-7575 (Spanish).

You may also contribute to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief fund by sending a check to your local Red Cross chapter or to the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, DC 20013.

As part of NetDay

Volunteers run cable to classrooms

Students in San Elizario, Texas, schools can learn about planets or the latest space mission in a flash, or find electronic pen pals in Canada or Japan.

But it took cable and the sweat of 50 volunteers to connect schools in that impoverished border town, where some houses lack electricity or running water, to the Internet.

"Just because we were poor, we were not going to lower our expectations," said Maria Pacheco, the school technology coordinator who led the effort last October to string cable. There are still more jacks than computers, but Pacheco noted, "This is a long journey, and I've got them more than halfway there."

Today - NetDay - that kind of volunteer effort repeats itself around the country, as parents, teachers, corporate officials, communications workers and retirees run high-capacity cable through classrooms.

President Clinton was calling attention to the effort in his weekly radio address today and take part with Vice President Al Gore in a video conference with students and volunteers in Los Angeles and Hartford, Conn.

Despite an abundance of information to be gained, it can take miles of cable to bring the data from the outside phone line to the classroom. The research firm Market Data Retrieval estimates that 27,000 to 40,000 public schools - about one-third to one-half of the national total - use the Internet.

But other surveys indicate that the connection reaches less than 10 percent of the classrooms, computer labs and libraries where students actually sit.

The founders of NetDay came across that reality when high-tech California wanted to wire its schools. The lowest cost estimate was $1 billion for labor and cable.

Two volunteers recruited others from high-tech companies in the state, and they made a day of it March 6, 1996. The idea caught on with encouragement from Clinton and Gore.

Other states held similar events last fall. Organizers estimate that last year, 250,000 volunteers in 40 states wired more than 50,000 classrooms.

Some states, meanwhile, have scheduled their own Internet days independent of today and some telephone companies have launched their own wiring campaigns.

The administration says it wants to help wire every American classroom and library to the Internet by 2000. Its budget request seeks $2 billion over the next five years to buy classroom computers, provide Internet access and train teachers to use it.

Access brings a range of materials to students from sources such as the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the National Geographic Society, the Public Broadcasting Service, Scholastic Network and America Online Education.

But some critics question whether people are blindly rushing to put schools on the "Information Superhighway."

Children's exercise video tapes trendy

WACO, Texas - The patter of little feet may be stomping to the aerobic beat, thanks to a new exercise trend among children.

Instead of being budding couch potatoes, more and more preschool- and elementary-age children are joining classes or popping in videos that have them following aerobic dance routines.

Fitness experts are hailing the new trend as something that's long overdue. Estimates are that more than 60 percent of children in the U.S. are inactive - and at-risk for such health problems as obesity and cardiovascular disease.

A lack of exercise has health consequences, said Van Davis, fitness coordinator of the Waco Family Y. Not only are kids heavier than generations ago, but they have higher cholesterol levels and are generally much less physically fit.

"The main thing is endurance," Davis said. "A lot of kids get tired right away" when asked to run relays at school.

Exercise helps kids improve the fitness levels, improve their cardiovascular fitness so they have healthy hearts and helps them develop better coordination, she said.

And, Davis said, aerobics has another benefit. Besides burning off blubber, it is noncompetitive.

Aerobic exercise has no scores, and no winners or losers. Therefore, an out-of-shape youngster doing aerobics won't be belittled because he can't catch the ball, make a home run or because he's always the last runner to finish a race, Davis said.

Those doing tapes at home have it even better. They are working out in a private setting, away from the eyes of other kids who could jeer them.

If kids are going to watch television, plunking a fitness tape in the VCR is a way to get them off the couch and physically active, said Davis. "It's a great workout for a kid," she added.

Jim Craft of Minnesota-based Collage Video, publishers of "The Complete Guide to Exercise Videos" mail-order catalog, said children's exercise video tapes are part of a growing trend.

"Five years ago, we couldn't give these things away," he said of fitness videos geared to children. "It certainly is more (popular) than it was even a few years back."

The videos are geared to small fry - as young as ages 2 to 5 years, in some cases. The routines are simplified to be age-appropriate so little ones can follow along.

And instead of Jane Fonda or Tamilee Webb, kids have their own stars. They're tickled when Elmo, the Sesame Street muppet who became last Christmas season's hottest-selling doll, leads them in "Elmocize."

Leadership Training Camp set in June

The Texas Youth Leadership Training Camp will be offered in San Marcos June 17-20.

This camp is a joint project sponsored by the Texas DARE institute and the Peer Assistance Leadership (PAL) program of Texas. It is a drug and youth violence prevention program.

During the camp, teams of drug-free junior and senior high student leaders are trained about drug abuse, youth violence and how to start or improve programs that help reduce these problems.

Participants spend four days on a college campus with hundreds of other student leaders sharing ideas, building friendships and absorbing valuable information.

The summer Youth Leadership Training Camp will help students:

- Become leaders.
- Get the facts about the physical and psychological effects of drugs and youth violence from experts in the field and learn about the roots of these problems.
- Learn about successful school and drug violence prevention programs.
- Create a plan to help reduce tobacco, alcohol and other drug use or violence in your school or community.
- Learn how to form a drug-free club and sustain and energize an existing club.
- Meet in small family groups where students will learn how to build trust and self-esteem, improve communication and appreciate differences in others.

The cost of the camp is $220, which includes all meals, double occupancy lodging, workshops, camp materials, all activities and a camp T-shirt.

Applications are due by April 23. If any students are interested, please contact Mrs. Cindy Simons at Hereford High School at 363-7620.

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says there's a risk associated with reading health articles. You could die of a misprint.

Yeah, and you can get in trouble with typos and omissions in all kinds of articles. I heard indirectly this week that I didn't print as many responses from one candidate as I did from another in the Candidates' Forum held here last Sunday.

Sorry about that but I really wasn't keeping score or evaluating performances. It was difficult for me just to sift through 2 1/2 hours of notes and try to get the quotes straight.

If one of our readers told us that their grandson had won first in a state UIL math test, naturally we would print it.

With that qualifying statement out of the way, let me report on our grandson, Ross Nieman, 12, a seventh grader at Shallowater. Last week at a UIL contest in San Antonio, he won first in state in math and was third in number sense. In team competition, his team finished fourth in math and number sense.

A group of state qualifiers and some of the parents from Shallowater attended the state meet. According to our son and daughter-in-law, they saw many beautiful fields of bluebonnets and Indian paint brush wildflowers.

By the way, Ross is also the grandson of Elmo and Kay Hall of Hereford. However, I feel quite sure that Ross got his academic skills from the Nieman side of the family!

Wednesday will be National Secretaries Day. Even the Census Bureau sent us a fax so we wouldn't forget...and to report these facts:

There were 3.4 million secretaries in the United States in 1995, down from 3.9 million in 1983, the earliest year for which comparable data are available.

The 1995 total of 3.4 million included 50,400 male secretaries.

Hope most of our readers got those income tax returns finished and mailed last week. Did you remember to list all your deductions?

Some folks have become pretty creative in trying to stretch the various deductions allowed by the Internal Revenue Service. Here are some examples:

—One woman wanted to depreciate a pit bull as a security device.

—A man claimed one and one-half dependents. One was for his wife, and one-half was for an unborn child.

—Another guy tried to treat a lakefront home with a few fruit trees as an agricultural enterprise with an orange grove.

—People use to list their pets as dependents. After the IRS demanded Social Security numbers for children, the number of dependents claimed fell by seven million.

—Children and other blood relatives who are provided at least half of their financial support are legitimate dependents. However, the IRS caught a man who listed his mother-in-law and dog on his tax return.

—One couple was convinced that paying their grandchildren's college tuition should qualify as a charitable deduction.

Medical expenses provide another source of deductions...and another source of mistakes. Many have tried to include veterinarian bills, plastic surgery, swimming pools, and stress-free vacations to Switzerland.

By the way, how long did it take to prepare your tax return? The IRS even provides estimates on the time needed to keep records, learn to fill out the form, and to copy and mail to the IRS.

Form 1040, without any schedules—11 hours, 35 minutes.

Schedule A (itemized deductions)—four hours, 35 minutes.

Schedule C (business income)—10 hours, 16 minutes.

And, no, you can't write off your time, but have a nice day!

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We were some of the members of the Family Camping Club of Amarillo who were privileged to visit Hereford on the Easter weekend. I want to thank you and several merchants of your town for the graciousness you all extended to us.

I especially want to thank you, the Hereford Chamber of Commerce, the Holly Sugar Company, and Mrs. Margie Daniels for the tour she led us through at the Senior Citizen Center.

Thanks also for the tour of the museum and the Black House. Hereford has many points of interest which you can be rightly proud.

Audrey Wendel,
Amarillo

Dear Editor:

I am a frequent reader of The Hereford Brand. In one issue, a reader referred to the prison system as a "country club." I'm here to tell you, it's not even close.

My name is Brian. I'm currently incarcerated in TDC at the Tulia unit. I was sentenced for seven years for credit card abuse...

This is far from being a country club. I was sent to prison in June 1993. Once you enter these doors, it's a totally different world. You are constantly stripped-searched, yelled at and humiliated.

I reached Pack II, Navasota, in late June of 1993. We didn't have air conditioning or, for that matter, ice water. It was hot and humid with temperatures sometimes reaching 105. The mosquitoes were almost as big as horse flies. During the winter months, it got down to about 30 degrees. To stay warm we would get fully clothed, put on jackets, get two blankets, and put our clip-on light under the cover with us, and we would still be cold.

Among the temperatures you have to put up with are the tempers of the guards and other inmates. If someone disrespects you, then you have to fight or everyone will disrespect you. You see things behind these walls that you never thought you'd see.

This place does have air conditioning and heat, but it was built for a county jail, not TDC. We get three hours of outside recreation a day and we work in the fields for free or in other places. We're told when to eat and change clothes, and when to go to sleep and wake up. Our lives are run by other people.

Here in the Tulia unit, it could be worse, but it's bad enough. Any mistake you make, intentional or not, you get a "case" disciplinary write-up. A lot of the guards will write you up for nothing, because the other guards will back them up. Inmates have a grievance process to write up officers, but 9 times out of 10 it doesn't work. All they do is ask the officer if he did it and if they say no, the grievance is denied.

I'm not complaining because it could be worse. I've been in Diagnostic and Goree in Huntsville, Navasota and Tulia. In all of these units, there is not one that even closely resembles a "country club."

I just want the people who think that to know it isn't so, and if a youngster heading in the wrong direction reads this, that he might change his path.

Everything that is stated in this letter is true to the best of my knowledge. I would greatly appreciate the printing of this letter.

(Editor's note: The inmate's last name is withheld since we could not confirm the author, but the letter came from the Tulia unit. The letter was edited for being too lengthy.)

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the HHS Band Booster Club, I would like to thank each person and local business for their support this past year. Thanks to those who contributed to our fund raisers by purchasing products and to the businesses that bought ads for our "Memory Books." Also a special thanks to Jim Steiert for his work on producing the books.

A special thanks also goes to Carey Black and H&R Manufacturing for their cooperation and work done for us during the year, and to the Whiteface Booster Club for allowing us to sell and retain the proceeds on the football programs at home games.

It was through everyone's unselfishness that we were able to provide scholarships to five HHS Band seniors, provide drinks for the band at football games, and contribute money to the high school band program.

Last but not least, thanks to every band parent who helped make this a very successful year. We feel the band is a valuable asset to the community and to the education of our children.

Senator Teel Bivins reports

One person can make a difference

AUSTIN—I was sitting at Gate 2 in Love Field a couple of weeks ago while waiting for my connection to Amarillo when I was approached by Gus Allen. After introducing himself he said, "This is just my idea and I'm sure there's no way it could ever become law but..." He proceeded to tell me about an idea he had for improving the virtually nonexistent brand laws in the state of Texas. Since we visited briefly that day in Dallas, I have often thought about his introductory remark.

It seems to reflect a growing sense of cynicism and fatalism about our system of representative self-government. With all the stories about powerful interest groups and thousands of dollars of political contributions, the average Joe is oftentimes led to believe that an individual cannot make a difference in the system. While it is true that organized efforts are generally more successful in democracy than individual efforts, that doesn't mean individuals don't make a difference.

I believe the most important thing I do as your State Senator is to conduct town hall meetings in communities throughout Senate District 31 before each legislative session. These meetings give me an opportunity to visit with anyone who's interested in coming regarding a variety of issues and concerns.

It was at such a meeting in Pampa that a school teacher came up to me and asked why it was that we required students to take the TAAS test (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) before they graduate from high school and then, oftentimes less than a year later, require them to take the TASP test (Texas Academic Skills Program) before completing more than nine hours of college work. Her very logical question was, "Couldn't we combine the two to cut down on the number of tests we force students to take?" Her question started me on a three-year campaign to accomplish just that. I am pleased to report that a bill has now passed the Senate and is pending in the House that would allow students, on a voluntary basis, to take the TASP test while still attending high school.

Immediately prior to this legislative session, at town hall meetings at Dalhart and Spearman, I was questioned by several sheriffs about the unfairness of forcing counties to house parole violators from other parts of the state for an inordinate amount of time before they were removed to their home jurisdiction. The daily cost of housing these prisoners, and the medical costs, can place a serious strain on a rural county's budget. Their comments resulted in legislation I have pending before the Senate which would significantly reduce the amount of time a parole violator is required to be held by another county and create an avenue to reimburse counties for their medical expenses.

In the summer of 1995 I attended a meeting of the Panhandle Justice of the Peace Association at the Wedding Chapel in Wellington Square. It seemed to me sort of a funny place to have a meeting of that kind but I soon forgot about the humor when these officials pointed out to me a new and emerging problem in the state of Texas that was quite serious. They told me stories of individuals who filed bogus liens against other individuals which purported to be issued from a nonexistent court or claimed that a nonexistent debt existed. At that time, the law was silent as to whether such an action was a crime — and worse, for the victim, the law provided no mechanism to undo the mess created in the deed records by filing such liens. I might add, these folks brought this issue to my attention long before the newspapers were filled with stories about the "Republic of Texas" involvement with bogus lien filings. As a direct result of that meeting, legislation has now passed the Senate creating a criminal penalty for the act of filing a bogus lien and, what is more important, creating a statutory mechanism for the victim of such filings to remove bogus liens from the deed records.

Then there is the Canadian River — for me the tarbaby of all political issues. Within a week following my election in 1988 I was approached by individuals from both sides in this boundary dispute asking me to carry legislation that would resolve the issue in favor of their side. I spent more time on this issue during my first session than all other issues combined. Ultimately, like three Land Commissioners and three State Senators before me, my attempts at compromise failed. However, the point remains that it was individuals in each instance that brought this issue to the legislature.

One more issue that comes to mind when I think of individuals having a direct impact on making public policy resulted in the telephone service known as Caller-ID. I was in my office in Amarillo when I got a call from my friend Bill Ware who asked, "Why in the h... can't we have Caller-ID in Texas?" Bill, frustrated from many late night phone calls, wanted a way to identify the teenagers who were calling his teenaged kids at all hours of the night. It turned out that the Texas law regarding criminal trap and trace devices was written so broadly that it prevented local phone companies from offering this service which, at the time, was available in a majority of other states. I filed what I thought would be a relatively simple bill to pass. But, like so many public policy issues, I found that this relatively simple idea had its share of complicated problems. Some folks simply don't want you to know the name and number of the person that's calling you. After considerable negotiation with victims' groups and battered spouses' groups and law enforcement, we finally arrived at a compromise bill. The bottom line is: because of one individual asking the question "why" we now have Caller-ID in Texas.

I don't know if Gus Allen's idea about brand laws in Texas will ever be enacted in statute. But, the point remains that by talking and presenting ideas to your elected representative you become part of representative self-government. My experience, and that of most of my colleagues in the Legislature, is proof that the system does work.

Man sleeps safely in paws of small Chihuahua canine

By BOB TUTT
Houston Chronicle
HOUSTON - G-No Bianchi enjoys the protection of a very special guard dog.

Dismiss images of a ferocious junkyard dog-type of guard dog. This one is a spayed female Chihuahua weighing about 5 pounds with the unlikely name of Kitty.

Bianchi suffers from a disorder called sleep apnea. When its victims go to sleep, obstructions in their respiratory passages threaten to shut down their breathing and suffocate them.

Kitty has become a constant companion of Bianchi, a disabled Vietnam War veteran, who lives in Livingston with his wife, Rita, and two other Chihuahuas.

When he goes to bed at night, Kitty retires with him, sharing his pillow or slipping under the covers in cold weather.

Bianchi must use an apparatus designed to help apnea sufferers to continue breathing normally while they sleep. He dons a mask similar to a diver's mask through which a stream of air is directed to his lungs.

As with all mechanical devices, glitches may occur in its operation. Sometimes he may move in his sleep and cause the mask's seal to slip. That perilously disrupts the vital flow of air.

Such a mishap alters the sound of the equipment's operation, and that she senses that her master is in serves as a literal wake-up call for Kitty, obviously a very light sleeper. (See CANINE, Page 7A)

Benedictine sisters put down roots in Canyon

By MACK HARRISON
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
CANYON, Texas - Tucked away on a quiet street corner lies one of Canyon's best-kept secrets.

Two white, wood-frame houses serve as home for the sisters of the St. Benedict Monastery, allowing the three professed and two novice members to escape the distractions of day-to-day life so they can concentrate on their relationship with God.

"I feel this is another world," said novice Sister Ana Teresa Cortinas of the Order of St. Benedict. "This is not a rat race."

The Order of St. Benedict began sending Catholic nuns from Fort Smith, Ark., on missions to the South Plains area in 1915.

The sisters taught school in Nazareth and elsewhere and worked in hospitals. In 1971, some of those nuns decided to put down roots on the South Plains.

"Five of us sisters wanted a community to live together and live the monastic life rather than (work outside the monastery)," said Sister Mary Hawkins, the superior and one of the founders of the Canyon monastery. "Our main work is living the monastic life."

The Encyclopedia Britannica calls the order's founder, St. Benedict of Nursia, "the patriarch of modern monks."

St. Benedict founded the order with which he is associated during the sixth century in what is now Italy and established the way of life that nearly all Western monasteries observe.

The Rule of St. Benedict, which says God may be glorified in all things, is still in use 1,400 years later. It includes a strong respect for the individual, combined with an emphasis on monastic community life, which includes hard work, prayer and Scripture reading.

That life also includes practicing the Divine Office, also known as the Liturgy of the Hours. It also means settling in one place rather than going from mission to mission.

"Putting down roots is a concept important to Benedictine life," said Sister Judy Varga. "To be a part of a community, especially in present times, where people are constantly on the move... The stability frees us to be more responsive to God."

The sisters grow fruits and vegetables in their backyard garden as well as sunflowers for birdseed. They currently are involved in an "ongoing war with the squirrels" that raid the birdfeeder. Also out back is a hermitage, a guest house for visiting priests or a place for one of the sisters to have some time to herself.

In addition to the yard, the monastery consists of the two neighborhood homes joined by a connecting corridor, which serves as the library. The buildings contain rooms for the sisters, guest rooms, kitchens, a dining room, a small office and a chapel where a visiting priest holds Mass two or three times a month.

Although a monastery is traditionally associated with monks, the nuns chose to call their community by that term because it reflects their goals.

"We're leading a monastic life together," said Sister Marcella Schmalz. "A monastery is where monastics live."

The sisters begin their day with hour-long prayers at 6 a.m. and pray six more times each day. Their evening ends in prayer at 8 p.m., and the nuns remain silent until the next morning's prayers.

The sisters' days are not all work and no play. They watch television - mostly news and weather - practice needlepoint, work on jigsaw puzzles, play cards and dominoes or just sit together talking and laughing while they mend clothing.

Becoming a full-fledged member of the monastic community takes almost five years. Aspirants first visit the monastery, spending about a week with the sisters.

Some aspirants decide on their first visit that the monastic life is not for them. Those who remain interested spend a six-month probationary period at the monastery as a postulant.

"We're not just taking young girls, but mothers and grandmothers," said Sister Cortinas, who has three children and several grandchildren. "They were willing to accept me at 58."

Sister Cortinas said she always had wanted to become a nun, but instead got married and had children. She later divorced her husband, who has since died. She said her children weren't too enthusiastic at first about her desire to join a monastery.

"When I first mentioned it to them seven years ago, one of them said that's a crazy idea," she said, adding that her son eventually drove her to the monastery for her visit.

Aspirant Susan Hensen of Florida recently spent a week with the sisters of St. Benedict and decided to become a postulant. She said the Canyon monastery attracted her the most out of all the Benedictine communities to which she wrote.

After the trial period, the postulant becomes a canonical novice for a year and gains the title of sister.

During that time, the novice is not allowed to work outside the monastery. At the end of her time as a novice, the sister makes her vows and becomes a temporary professed member. Three years later, she makes her final monastic profession.

St. Benedict Monastery is currently a dependent priory, meaning it receives support and instruction from the founding community in Fort Smith. The sisters in Canyon hope they can become an independent monastery within three years.

Independence means the monastery must have a means of support. Currently, some of the sisters work outside the monastery, but they hope to find some sort of business, such as baking, crafts or computer work, that they could operate at home.

"We're looking for some kind of work we can do in the monastery," Sister Hawkins said. "A lot would like to work here."

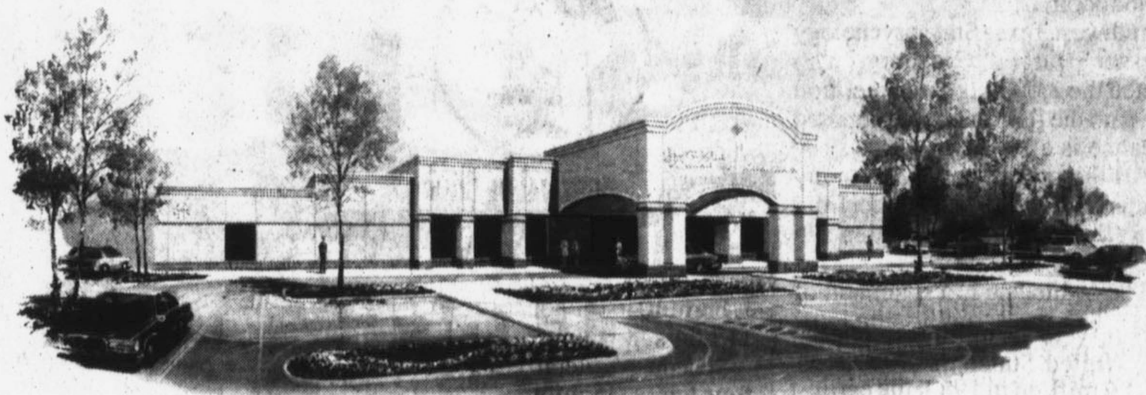

Sister Cortinas, who worked with the Texas Attorney General's Office for 16 years, said she hopes to find a job in which she could use her computer skills so she would not have to work outside the monastery once her time as a novice ends.

"We're perfect for a doctor, anything in computing or word processing," she said.

The sisters of St. Benedict Monastery have faith the Lord will help them find a way to support themselves.

"God willing," they said devoutly, then adding with a smile, "and the creek don't rise."

San Marcos residents fear May 3 ballot item

Proposal would allow marijuana to be used for medical concerns

By SARAH HORNADAY
Associated Press Writer
SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) - A May 3 ballot item that would allow marijuana to be used for medical purposes has some residents fearing this Central Texas town could become a drug-taking, hippie haven.

"There's an impression that we've lost our minds," said Larry Kendrick, San Marcos police chief.

"The ordinance only makes a political statement, but perception is what's so important," said Nina Manley Wright, spokeswoman for the San Marcos Drug Free Business Initiative.

Known for warm-weather inner tubing runs down the Blanco River, as well as 200 outlet stores, San Marcos sits about 30 miles south of Austin. Its population of 31,000 mostly consists of 20,000 students at Southwest Texas State University.

Critics of the ballot proposal say they fear their community will be perceived as soft on drugs, inviting drug users to move in.

Some argue it's a move toward legalizing marijuana, while others maintain the ordinance wouldn't serve its intended purpose and shouldn't even be considered.

The proposal would make it a city policy to use discretion in enforcing anti-marijuana laws for anyone using it to treat such diseases as glaucoma, AIDS, neuromuscular or seizure disorders and nausea caused by chemotherapy.

Marijuana is believed to ease pain, curb nausea, stimulate appetite and help glaucoma.

Southwest Texas State psychology professor Harvey Ginsburg, who initiated the 2,000-signature petition drive, said the flak about the proposed ordinance is all smoke.

"All the other arguments, in my terms, are a side show to detract from the fact there are medical patients in need," Ginsburg said.

"The ordinance is a statement of 'Does human compassion for suffering people play a role in how we lead and evaluate decisions?' Easing human suffering is a higher order moral value than the law and always is the law," he said.

Medicinal marijuana initiatives have been approved recently in California and Arizona.

"Unless the student population gets out and votes, it won't pass," said Joyce Healy, 50, of nearby Kyle, who described the political leanings of the community as "very old conservative."

The city's mixed emotions on the medicinal marijuana issue are depicted by Ms. Healy's mother, who suffers from arthritis.

"She's against it," Ms. Healy said. "Although if it does pass, my mother said she would get some."

The pulse of San Marcos beats through the doors of the Cafe on the Square every day. Old-timers arrive early for breakfast and others, ranging from students to working professionals, trickle in throughout the day to enjoy the brew pub's food, beer, music and conversation.

"If I had AIDS or cancer and it was marijuana that gave me relief, I'd use it," said Dan Biggs, 38. "From the parental standpoint, ... If you look at it that it could make it easier for children to get it, I don't know. I'm not for legalizing marijuana."

Brian Mason, 22, and Scott Thomas, 22, are students who can vote in the May election and are in favor of ballot item.

"It depends on how much the local media presses the issue," said Thomas, of Sherman. "You have to make people want to vote almost. If you give me an incentive, I'd vote. I'm too lazy to go if I'm not going to benefit."

The proposal asks the chief of police and all San Marcos police officers to "adhere to the spirit of this legislation" and exercise discretion and minimize the impact of marijuana laws on those using marijuana for medicinal purposes.

The proposal doesn't make marijuana for medicinal purposes legal in San Marcos, it simply asks the police to exercise discretion. It wouldn't supersede state and federal laws making marijuana illegal.

Law scholars say the ordinance would be meaningless.

Arizona allows doctors to prescribe the drug to critically ill patients if two licensed physicians agree on the use and offer research on its appropriateness. In California, the law decriminalizes possession of marijuana by patients and care-givers if its use is recommended by a physician.

Virginia adopted a law in 1979 that prohibits prosecution of people who possess marijuana if they have a valid prescription for the drug and are using it in the treatment of cancer or glaucoma.

California has made its differences in state and federal laws work. For example, the Mountain View, Calif., police department returned marijuana plants to a man suffering from AIDS-related dementia at the direction of Santa Clara County Assistant District Attorney Karyn Sinunu.

"We respect the voters' call that, in certain circumstances, upon a doctor's recommendation, we will honor a patient's right to use marijuana for medical purposes," Ms. Sinunu said.

The reality of enforcing such a proposed ordinance is unfathomable to Chief Kendrick.

"This ordinance does not accomplish what Dr. Ginsburg and his followers seek to have done," Kendrick said. "If an officer chooses to enforce state and federal law, I have no recourse for that officer. How can I discipline an officer for enforcing the law?"

BIBLE BAPTIST CHURCH
Is the whole Bible given just for the church or should it be divided up like 2 Tim 2:15 says to do. Notice (Rev 14:6-7) This angel who flies "in the midst of Heaven" preaches another gospel, which is not "Paul's gospel." But notice what Paul says in Galatians 1:8, This gospel is called the "everlasting gospel." If everything is for the church then the angel in Revelation 14 is cursed of God, and is not preaching the truth; and Simon Peter did not preach the truth at Pentecost in Acts 2:38. People quote Acts 2:38 as though it was the "plan of salvation" for a Gentile! What an insane thing! The context of the entire chapter is given to the house of Israel (Acts 2:14, 22, 36). Be careful how you read the Bible you might think you are going to Heaven and you end up in Hell. Continued next week.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you give me some knowledge about the use of the nasal spray salmon calcitonin, which my doctor is giving me for osteoporosis? I am apprehensive about using something like this, not knowing where it comes from, how much it has been used, or its possible long-range effects. According to the American Medical Association encyclopedia, its long-range use is not recommended, although the doctor says I should take it indefinitely. — R.E.P.

ANSWER: Calcitonin is a hormone made by the thyroid gland. It keeps the body's daily bone remodeling in balance, making sure that bone-building cells (osteoblasts) keep pace with bone-demolition cells (osteoclasts).

With menopause and decreased estrogen production, the balance is upset. Bone resorption outpaces bone build-up. That's the all-too-familiar osteoporosis.

Calcitonin comes to the rescue, bolstering bone build-up. Salmon calcitonin is a synthetic replica of the salmon's hormone. Why choose the salmon's hormone? It's more potent and its effects last longer than human calcitonin.

In England, however, synthetic human calcitonin is favored. Both get the job done.

Synthetic calcitonin has been used safely since 1975 for Paget's bone disease. In the '80s, it proved itself a worthy treatment for osteoporosis.

The drawback was it had to be injected. The new form, in a nasal spray, facilitates its use.

It has few undesirable side effects.

CREDIT REPAIR

MILLIONS OF TEXANS have seen ads promising to erase or repair bad credit with results 100 percent absolutely guaranteed! But if you have credit problems and are looking for a way out, don't be too quick to believe these false promises.

If you follow their advice, you may end up throwing away good money instead of erasing bad credit. In all too many cases, these outfits take your money and do little or nothing to improve your credit report.

We at the Office of the Attorney General believe that you should know the truth behind some so-called credit repair companies that charge from $50 to more than $1,000 to "fix" your credit report.

No easy fixes

There are no quick cures for a poor credit history. These are the plain facts:

- Your credit history is maintained by credit bureaus, private companies that collect information reported to them by banks, department stores, mortgage companies, and other creditors.

- The only information in your credit report that can be changed are items that are actually wrong or beyond a seven-year reporting period.

- If you have declared bankruptcy, that information can be legally reported for ten years.

- Accurate items that are within the seven- (or ten-) year reporting period cannot be erased from your credit record by companies advertising "credit repair" services. The only items that can be changed are those that are inaccurate, outdated, or just plain wrong.

If you find an inaccurate item in a credit report, you can fix it yourself, at little or no cost. In fact, you can do anything a credit repair company can do for free or for only a few dollars.

Annual checkup

How do you find inaccurate items in credit reports? Check them. Experts say it's a good habit to check your credit report annually.

Credit bureaus are required by law to share with you any information they have on file about you. You can find out what is in your credit report by contacting local credit bureaus. You can find them listed in the telephone Yellow Pages under "Credit Bureaus" or "Credit Reporting Agencies." Your local bank or retailer also may be able to identify them.

danger and immediately paws or nudges him to awaken him so he can make necessary adjustments in the gadgetry.

If necessary to wake him up, Bianchi says, "she'll actually bark. And her bark is different if something is not right."

Kitty wasn't trained to take this role, he says. Somehow she intuitively senses there is a danger and knows what she should do.

Bianchi says his apnea causes his respiration to halt anytime he falls asleep without his protective machine in use.

"If I'm sitting on the couch and doze off, I'll stop breathing," he says. "As soon as I do that, Kitty will scratch me or nudge me to wake me up."

Without his little guard dog's alerts, he says, his problems could range from "strangling and waking up" to "having a heart attack."

Dr. Connie Moore, director of sleep labs at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center and Baylor College of Medicine, treats Bianchi.

She describes the Chihuahua's actions as remarkable.

Rita Bianchi likewise praises

Kitty's performance.

"Before we got her, he would stop breathing, and I would have to wake him up," she says. "I would be afraid that sometime he would need me, and I wouldn't wake up. When we got Kitty, she took over my job."

There have been times Bianchi was in such deep sleep Kitty couldn't rouse him, she says.

"Then she would wake me up so I could wake him up," she says. "I can shake him harder."

Kitty's performance isn't perfect, Rita Bianchi concedes, "but 99 percent of the time she's on the job."

G-No Bianchi, now 48, was raised in a Galveston orphanage. He says he never knew his family nor understood the origin of his odd given name. Of course, his Italian surname suggests it should actually be Gino, not G-No.

He entered the Army in 1966 during the Vietnam War and served as a medic with special forces units making clandestine forays behind enemy lines. Injuries he suffered in these actions ended his plans for an Army career.

Additionally, harrowing experiences in combat situations caused him to develop post traumatic stress disorder, a malady afflicting many Vietnam veterans.

He was back in civilian life when sleep apnea began troubling him about 10 years ago.

In recent years Bianchi, 48, has become a priest for a Shaolin brotherhood that is an outgrowth of a Buddhist sect established in China 1,500 years ago. The Kung Fu television series brought it and its mastery of martial arts to the attention of the American public.

Hereford boxer debuts with TKO win

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor

AMARILLO - It was pretty, but Moses Diaz couldn't have been happier about the final result of his amateur boxing debut. As they say, a win is a win.

Diaz, admittedly battling a case of butterflies in front of a crowd of better than 2,000 fans, stopped Amarillo's Steve Colangelo midway through the second round Friday night to win his first boxing match. The fight referee halted the event with 22 seconds remaining in the round after a pair of hard right hand punches had left Colangelo with a cut below the left eye and a dislocated right shoulder.

With the win, Diaz earned the right to advance to the second round of the Tough Man Contest being held at the Tri-State Fairgrounds Coliseum.

"I got my butterflies out," he said after the fight. "It wasn't a very good fight, but at least I got the first one out of the way."

Diaz took the fight to Colangelo from the outset. After the bell rang to start the heavyweight bout, Diaz bolted across the ring and landed a quick left-right combination.

Colangelo stood his ground in the initial minute, however. The Amarillo fight, who enjoyed a two-inch height advantage, stood toe-to-toe with Diaz until a right hand staggered him late.

"He was coming in and I saw he had left himself open, so I took a shot."

The punch cut Colangelo and forced the ring referee to halt the fight and send the boxer to the corner to see the fight doctor.

Colangelo wasn't as fortunate in the second round, however. Diaz opened with a flurry of punches to the head and body that forced his opponent into the ropes, where seconds later Diaz unleashed a shot that forced Colangelo to quit.

"I just got a couple of good punches in and took him out. When I saw him back up I went after him," he said.

Hereford stuns Canyon

CANYON - The Hereford Whitefaces kept their playoff hopes alive Friday night in grand fashion. Hereford scored four runs in the fifth and then held on to take an 8-6 win over the district-leading Canyon Eagles at Connor Park.

The Whitefaces, who had snapped a 12-game losing streak in their previous outing, improved to 8-14 on the year and to 2-7 in loop play. Canyon fell to 11-11 and 6-2.

Tate Head and Joseph Artho keyed the Herd's heroics by cranking out a pair of two-run singlets.

HHS ace Eric Ambold scattered 12 hits over 6 2/3 innings and picked up the win.

Hereford had 11 hits in the game.

Herd fems open I-4A golf play Monday

By TOMMY WELLS
Managing Editor

Don't tell Stephanie Bixler and the Hereford Lady Whitefaces that just because they finished second in the District I-4A race that they'll have to play second fiddle at the Region I-4A Golf Tournament next week. They'll have none of it.

"I don't think they're (other teams) any better than us," said Bixler. "If we go there and get the job done, we can play with anyone there."

The Lady Whitefaces, who are making their 12 appearance in the regional meet since 1985, are scheduled to join 14 other teams from Region I on the Riverside Country Club course in San Angelo Monday for the first round of the two-day event. Hereford, according to head coach Stacy Bixler, will tee off on Monday morning at approximately 11:45 a.m.

Among the other teams set to compete in the event is Hereford district stablemate Pampa. The Lady Harversers overcame a strong first round challenge from Bezner and the HHS girls to win the District I-4A title this year. Also slated to play are squads from Snyder A, Snyder B, El Paso High, El Paso Ysleta, Fort Stockton, Andrews, Stephenville, Graham, Fort Worth Arlington Heights, Sherman, Burkburnett, Justin Northwest and Boswell.

Joining Stephanie Bixler at the I-4A meet this coming week will be HHS teammates Katie Bone, Jacque Bezner, Amy

The Hereford Lady Whiteface golf team will make the familiar trip to San Angelo Monday in order to compete in the Region I-4A Golf Tournament. Hereford, which has qualified for the regional meet 12 times since 1985, will tee off at 11:45 a.m. Monday at the Riverside Country Club. Members of the 1997 HHS squad making the trip include (left to right), Lindsey Ward, Stephanie Bixler, Katie Bone, Amy Killingsworth, Michelle Bixler, and Jackie Bezner. Jennifer Phipps is not pictured.

Killingsworth, Lindsay Ward and alternates Jennifer Phipps and Michelle Bixler.

"I always feel good about going down there," said Coach Bixler. "We got some good work in this week, so I think we have just as good a chance as anyone down there if we can play a couple good rounds."

Experience is one thing the Lady

Whitefaces shouldn't have any problem with. All five girls slated to play this weekend have played at the regional level before, including Bixler who has made the trip to San Angelo in each of her four high school seasons. Bone has qualified three times, while Bezner and Killingsworth will be making their second straight appearance.

"It's definitely an honor to make it to regional," said Stephanie Bixler, while practicing Friday afternoon on the greens at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course. "I think it says something about the quality of the high school gold team we have to be able to make it."

The Lady Whitefaces' tee time on Tuesday will be determined by how they place in the first round.

Rockets trip Mavs, 112-102, in OT

HOUSTON (AP) - Charles Barkley was proud the Houston Rockets won the game, not that he provided the overtime key to victory.

Barkley had 18 rebounds and 17 points, including seven straight Houston points in overtime, as the Rockets rallied to beat the Dallas Mavericks 112-101 on Friday night.

"I'm just proud we won, we could have quit several times, that's why I'm proud of this team," Barkley said. "You've heard of the dog days of August. We call these the dog days of April."

The Rockets had a good reason to beat the Mavericks. They can gain homecourt advantage for the first two rounds of the playoffs by beating San Antonio in Sunday's regular-season finale.

But they had to beat Dallas first. Clyde Drexler led the Rockets with 27 points and Matt Maloney added 24, including 6-of-11 from 3-point range. But it was Barkley who took over in overtime after regulation ended in a 95-95 tie.

"I don't want to talk about personal accomplishment," Barkley said. "Everybody chipped in and we just won the game. It would have been a real heartbreaker if we'd have lost."

Dallas led 95-91 lead with 2:24 left, but Olajuwon scored two baskets down the stretch to tie it at 95 and Maloney's steal in the final seconds forced the overtime.

"We should have won the game," Mavericks center Shawn Bradley said. "We didn't get the shot up in regulation and our turnover in overtime and their 3-pointer killed us."

The Rockets finally got it going in overtime.

After Maloney hit a 3-pointer and Eddie Johnson added a basket for a 100-95 lead, Barkley hit two free throws, a layup and a 3-pointer for 107-99 lead with 49 seconds left.

"It's one of those games you say, 'Oh no' if you start to lose it," Barkley said. "I was sluggish and didn't play well early in the game."

The Rockets swept their four-game series with the Mavs.

"I expected them to play us really tough," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "I knew there would be a little bit of human nature in our play - not lazy, but just not real sharp. This shows you how tough this league is."

Dallas took a 54-45 halftime lead on a 19-8 run in the second quarter and led 73-60 with 3:13 left in the third period when the Rockets closed the period with a 15-4 surge.

Sasha Danilovic led Dallas with 23 points.

OU breaks ground on complex named in honor of Barry Switzer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) - Eight years ago, Barry Switzer left the University of Oklahoma in disgrace. Now a building on campus is being named in his honor.

School officials broke ground Friday on the Barry Switzer Center, a $5.57 million building that will house a new weight room, a training room, coaches offices and a "legends hall" to honor former OU athletes in all sports.

The building, scheduled for completion in August 1998, will be adjacent to the south end zone building of Memorial Stadium. It will be used by all OU athletes, not just football players.

"Life holds very few moments for people, and today is one of those moments for me," Switzer told a crowd of several hundred, which included coaches, former players, athletic department employees and fans.

Switzer, now coach of the Dallas Cowboys, spent 23 years at Oklahoma. He was head coach from 1973 through 1988, compiling a record of 157-29-4 with a dozen Big Eight titles and three national championships.

But he resigned in June 1989 with the program in turmoil. The Sooners had recently been placed on probation, and five players had been arrested on drug, weapons and sex charges.

"I don't think what three or four people can do to detract from hundreds will ever blemish what those (other) guys accomplished," Switzer said. "It's not fair and I don't think anybody recognizes that."

"It's sad that more attention is given to them than are those that did so well and have been so successful since who were part of those programs."

The warm feelings for Switzer were evident during the ceremony. The crowd gave him a standing ovation when he was introduced and again when he finished his remarks.

He drew a roar when he said one reason it was nice to be on hand for the ceremony was because "it's always great to come home, north of the Red River, where I'm appreciated."

University President David Boren joked that the building originally was to be called the Barry Switzer Complex, "but we didn't want anyone to think Barry had a complex."

Athletic director Steve Owens spoke of the influence Switzer had on him and other athletes. Switzer coached running backs when Owens, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1969, played in the late 1960s.

"I would not have had the success I've had in my life, because Barry challenged me every day to get better," Owens said. "I think it's something that's carried over in my life."

Switzer touched on some of his fondest memories while at OU, and rattled off the names of many of his greatest players.

Rangers activate Clark from disabled list

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The Texas Rangers placed Mickey Tettleton on the disabled list Friday and activated Will Clark, even though he's several days away from being totally healthy.

Clark, out since March 28 with a sprained left wrist and broken left middle finger, was not in the lineup Friday night against Toronto, but was available as a pinch-hitter.

Texas manager Johnny Oates said Clark could be the designated hitter on Saturday "if he improves over the next 24 hours as much as he has over the last 24 hours."

Oates said that when players are recovering from injuries he tries holding them out one extra day as a precaution. Although Clark wasn't quite ready, Oates brought him back because there were enough signs of progress.

"He couldn't even swing three days ago. He swung without pain today," Oates said.

Tettleton has remained active even though he's been out since Tuesday night, when he suffered a deep bone bruise on the inside of his left knee while stepping on first base. Tettleton had surgery to repair torn cartilage in that knee in October. The DL move is retroactive to Wednesday.

Tettleton has been in a tailspin at the plate since homering in three straight days (April 5-7). He doesn't have a hit in 18 at-bats since then and those three homers are his only hits of the year.

Otherwise, the report from the trainer's table is pretty good.

Outfielder Warren Newson is rehabilitating in Class AA Tulsa and may be activated Sunday when he's eligible to come off the DL. Infielder Domingo Cedeño also is progressing well and could be back next week.

The best news for the Rangers is that Juan Gonzalez is on pace to return in a few weeks after surgical repairs to a torn ligament in his left thumb.

Dallas daycare program provides lessons for both parents, children

By BERTA DELGADO
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - Every morning as soon as he wakes up, Cesar Cortez asks his mommy the same question: "Are we going to school today?"

The 4-year-old boy loves going to school, he loves learning the alphabet, and he loves knowing that his mom is right upstairs, learning, just like he is.

Cesar and his mother, Luceli Carpio, go to class at the Ross Avenue Center in Old East Dallas where parents learn English while their children, 6 weeks to 5 years of age, are cared for and also taught the language.

"We've only been coming for three months, and we've both learned so much already. He learns a lot faster than me," said Ms. Carpio, who studied geography during a recent class while Cesar practiced counting past 10 with his classmates.

The Basic English Program was started in 1992 by PTA members at James Fannin Elementary School on Ross Avenue to help mothers become more involved in their children's schooling.

The free program is now administered by Dallas Services for Children, Dallas Independent School District board member Kathleen Leos, who works for the agency, expanded the program by pulling together PTAs, churches, schools, agencies and private corporations.

More than 150 parents, mostly mothers, and about 50 children are enrolled in the program, which holds class on Mondays and Wednesdays from noon to 3 p.m. Ms. Leos said she would like to expand the program to two more sites beginning next school year because of the high demand.

That, of course, requires funding, she said.

"It's an ongoing process," she said. "It's like taking a program that you know works and shouting it from rooftops, always looking for funding sources. ... We just beg and borrow from everywhere."

She said the program needs corporations to sponsor sites in their communities.

Ms. Leos said she has seen the program's benefits. She's seen women go on to get jobs, she's seen an increase in the PTA memberships at Fannin and James Bonham elementary schools, and she's seen the number of volunteer hours increase in those schools.

And the self-esteem and confidence of the women in the program are quickly boosted once they start attending class regularly, she said.

"What I've seen is women who come in feeling very intimidated and after a month or two, they come in dressed up with makeup on, and they feel comfortable with the language," she said. "They start communicating in English."

"At first, I used to be the one slipping over to Spanish when we talked and I thought, 'Wait a minute, that's not helping them practice.' Now they're forced to speak English."

Leticia Hernandez gets embarrassed when asked how long she's been in the country because her English isn't very good. But it's gotten much better since she found the program five months ago, she said. Before, it was impossible to find a class where she could bring her sons along. When she learned of the Basic English Program, the 38-year-old woman and her youngest boy, 4-year-old Eddie, walked right over from their home, two blocks away.

"Everywhere I go people are speaking English, and it used to make me feel badly, that I wasn't good enough because I didn't understand what they were saying," she said. "Now I can understand a little and it makes me feel better. And now I will be able to understand what my sons bring home from school."

Classes available for parents include pre-literacy (for people who can barely read or write in any language), beginning, intermediate and advanced. The students also have access to computers with English-lessons software, donated by a Houston company.

And the children are in the hands of bilingual instructors who teach them the basics and help prepare them for pre-kindergarten.

During a recent Wednesday class, the 4- and 5-year-olds in Josie Rodriguez's class brushed up on the alphabet and their counting, sang songs and played games. Their teacher spoke to them in both languages, switching back and forth to make sure they understood what she was saying.

Cesar, a quiet little boy who knew no English just three months ago, was already singing in his new language.

He smiled a shy smile when asked if he liked school. Then he pointed up at the ceiling.

"Mi mami esta en otro clase," he said. My mommy is in another class, still more comfortable in his native tongue.

Then he turned away, eager for Ms. Rodriguez to teach him more.

For more information about the program or to find out how to help support it, call (214) 828-9900 and ask for Kathleen Leos or Robert Berger, executive director of Dallas Services for Children.

Names in the News

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) - An auction of Zsa Zsa Gabor's jewelry and an Oscar won by one of her deceased husbands was apparently news to her.

The auction at Henry's Auction House in Mutterstadt was called off when the sellers learned Ms. Gabor may not have known the stuff was on the market.

Auction house spokeswoman Britta Werner said that Ms. Gabor's current husband Frederick von Anhalt provided the items to a dealer.

"It wasn't auctioned because it seems to be that Ms. Gabor has problems with her husband. She didn't know that he sold her jewelry," Ms. Werner said Thursday.

Among the items for sale was the best supporting actor Oscar that George Sanders, Ms. Gabor's former husband, won in 1950 for "All About Eve."

Contacted by the The Associated Press in Los Angeles, Ms. Gabor replied: "The whole story's ridiculous. I would never sell it."

She said she lost the Oscar several years ago.

"I'd like to know who sells it. I'd probably buy it," she said.

Sanders, who died in 1972, received the Oscar seven years before his divorce from Gabor.

Cow-boy Band concludes concert season Community Concert Association begins membership drive

The Dodge City Cow-boy Band will be the final concert for the 1996-97 season of the Hereford Community Concert Association.

The concert will be presented at 7:30 p.m. April 24 in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Persons interested in becoming members of the Community Concerts are invited to attend the concert as guests of the Association.

Memberships may be purchased prior to or following the concert in the foyer of the auditorium.

Americus Brass Band is offering a new recreation of another of America's greatest historic bands.

The Dodge City Cow-boy Band was organized in 1897 by Dodge City cattleman, musician and sheriff, Chalk Beeson. It later was brought to national prominence by eccentric Capt. Jack Sinclair.

The group entertained the country for 35 years touring most of the major cities in the country and serving in the U.S. Cavalry as the regimental band for Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders in the Spanish American War.

This recreation will feature a fascinating group of cowboy-musicians complete with costumes from the period and original instruments and music provided by the Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum and the Fiske Museum of Musical Instruments.

Original arrangements from the brass band will complete the enjoyable evening of Americana and new perspective on the music and history of this great nation.

"When Was The Last Time Your Television Got A Standing Ovation?" is the theme of the Spring membership drive for the Hereford Community Concert 1997-98 seasons.

Questions concerning memberships may be directed to Helen Langley, president; or Bera Boyd, membership chairperson.

Lt. Jessie J. Guerrero of Hereford is assigned to the Naval Submarine Training Center in Pearl Harbor. The center provides realistic submarine training using high-tech computers and simulators.

Hereford officer keeps Pacific Fleet prepared

By CHAD MCKIMSON
PEARL HARBOR - The U.S. Navy has a long history of deploying ships, aircraft and submarines all over the world to maintain a peace-time forward presence. Not only does this presence act as a deterrent to potential aggressors, but promotes positive relations between the United States and other countries.

Submarines routinely train for deployments through exercises and drills, but some of the training must be done using high-tech computers and simulators because of the potential hazards to equipment or personnel.

Lt. Jessie J. Guerrero, the 29-year-old son of Jessie and Maggie Guerrero of Hereford, is assigned to the Naval Submarine Training Center in Pearl Harbor. Guerrero feels the realistic training the center provides is essential in ensuring the submarines in the Navy's Pacific Fleet are ready for anything.

"Scenarios are made as real as possible and are run as close to real time as possible to enhance training," said Guerrero, a 1985 graduate of Hereford High School.

The center's primary mission is to provide submarine training to the Pacific Fleet submarine force. They provide team training in tactics, sonar employment, weapons employment, fire control systems, submarine navigation and emergency procedures, as well as operational and technical support. Guerrero knows his job is important in maintaining each Sailor's readiness.

"I provide training in sensor employment, weapons employment and submarine tactics for the entire Pacific submarine fleet," said Guerrero, a seven-year Navy veteran.

Although trained as a submarine tactics instructor, Guerrero enjoys being an instructor and teaching the fleet to be better Sailors.

"My job to train every submarine on the waterfront is very challenging. It's also interesting to watch every submarine become more proficient at their jobs based on our training," said Guerrero, who is married to the former Renec Blaylock of Hereford.

Not only do the submariners get the chance to practice operations at sea, but with the center's high-tech computers and simulators they also have the opportunity to practice realistic scenarios in port. Guerrero feels the level of realism the center provides is crucial for training effectiveness.

"The center provides the facilities for realistic training without the consequences of serious mistakes. This builds good skills for future use in the fleet," said Guerrero.

Continuous training of our submarine fleet is important and Guerrero feels it is equally important for the Navy to deploy submarines overseas.

"Threats to the United States still exist. It is our job to deter any action towards the United States. Deployments still show the rest of the world the strength of the United States," said Guerrero.

Deploying ships, aircraft and submarines overseas will always be important. Sailors like Guerrero ensure the submarine crews are well trained to help keep the peace or respond immediately to any worldwide crisis.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Patience is a virtue. Virtue is a grace. Put them all together and they make a happy face.

And there were some happy faces when the History Day/Courthouse Project students finished their work on the workday Saturday, most of the students were able to attend and those who could not will take up the slack during the next two weeks. Their bibliographies are growing and we feel they will be ready for competition.

The Computer Club will take a trip to Kilgore Computer Center and Amarillo College Center on April 26. They will also see how WT's computer system works.

G/T English classes are presenting a Medieval Fair on Monday, April 21 from 12 noon until 1 p.m. Parents and interested patrons are invited to come by and view the research and projects that will be on display in the library.

The Categories Club Chess Tournament has begun the preliminary rounds. Finals should begin around May 5 after TAAS is completed.

The library has been hosting a Troll Book Fair. Students and teachers have been invited to sign up for prizes to be given away at the end of the fair. These prizes include bookmarks, books, pencils and bookcovers. There is a good selection of books for all ages.

During HAT, on Wednesday, students met in the gym to hear Senior Deputy U.S. Marshal Albert F. Arias from Amarillo. He shared with the students his experiences as a U.S. Marshal and also the fact that he grew up on San Antonio's West Side, the barrio area; and was reared by a single parent, his mother. He stressed that each person is responsible for his or her own actions and that they each have the opportunity to be somebody, not a loser. He is soon to be transferred to Sherman but has visited numerous Panhandle schools during his tenure in the area.

Yellow Team history students are doing well with their recitation of the symbols of Texas, pledge to the Texas flag, "Texas, Our Texas" and the Edgar A. Guest poem, "Myself." Some have even surprised themselves with learning them so quickly and easily. They will receive extra credit if they recite the poem for their parents and have the parent sign their copy of the poem.

"People have been painting pictures and writing songs and making movies about heaven and all every since they could breathe, but they never come close!"

Hints from Heloise

THE KEY TO REMEMBERING

Dear Heloise: I used to clean houses for a living and there would be times that I would do some grocery shopping on my way to one of the houses.

I would place items that needed refrigeration in my client's fridge. Half the time I would forget them and would have to go back. Oftentimes it was at the end of a very long day, and I would be clear across town!

My remedy for this was to put my car keys with the items in the fridge. Now I use this remedy for a number of different things, such as when I go out to eat and get a doggy bag. I don't walk off without it when my keys are placed with it.

I do this same trick with my husband and friends. I sure get funny looks when I ask for someone's keys, but then they don't go off and forget they have something in my fridge. — Laura Lorooco, Bozeman, Mont.

Employees receive certification

Employees of K-BOB'S in Hereford, from left, Allen B. Parson, Eugene Hicks, Eddy Mullins, Todd Murray, Allen D. Parson and Jennifer Parson, received the SERVSAFE Serving Safe Food Certification from The Educational Foundation of the National Restaurant Association.

Food safety certificates awarded to employees of local restaurant

Allen B. Parson, Eugene Hicks, Eddy Mullins, Todd Murray, Allen D. Parson and Jennifer Parson of K-BOB'S in Hereford received the SERVSAFE Serving Safe Food Certification from The Educational Foundation of the National Restaurant Association.

SERVSAFE educates individuals on the latest, most up-to-date information on food safety and sanitation according to Food and Drug Administration regulations.

To receive the certification, each of the employees had to complete an extensive training program and pass a comprehensive exam on safe food and sanitation procedures.

Topics covered in the training include potentially hazardous foods and common food handling errors, the Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point (HACCP) system of food safety, proper receiving and storage practices, and proper cleaning and sanitizing practices.

The six employees received the SERVSAFE training through a program hosted by K-BOB'S, a family style stachyose, with a chain of restaurants in five states.

Allen Parson has operated K-BOB'S Stachyose of Hereford for more than 25 years.

"Servsafe is vitally important in our restaurant's operation because we believe it is the primary food safety standard in the industry today," Parson said.

The Educational Foundation of the National Restaurant Association, a nonprofit organization based in Chicago, provides education and training to the foodservice industry.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER

County Extension Agent-FCS Appliances, furniture and other big ticket items present consumers who cannot afford to pay cash a costly decision.

Some consumers assume that because rent-to-own offers a weekly or monthly payment option with no interest, it is the best buy.

Before signing any contract, figure the actual cost of credit, rent-to-own, and layaway if offered as an option.

The following is an example. Your consumer choices may be different.

If you wanted to buy an appliance that cost $258 cash, and they offered you layaway payments of $43 a month for six months, the total cost would still be $258.

If the same store had a credit plan or accepted your payment through a bank credit card on which you paid 21 percent interest, over the next 20 months, you would make the minimum payment of $15 a month, adding up to a cost of $303.

If you could pay the creditor $43 a month as you would have for layaway, it would take seven months and a cost of $270 to buy the appliance using credit.

Andreas Vesalius, a Belgian-born physician of the 1500s became known as the "Father of Anatomy."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our 22-year-old daughter is a beautiful, loving and religious person who recently completed her training as a physical therapist. Much to our dismay, she has announced that she is in love and planning to marry her first patient. The man is 20 years her senior and bedridden. Even after years of physical therapy, the best he can hope for is a wheelchair. He will never walk.

We have tried to explain to "Dolores" that patients sometimes transfer feelings of gratitude and hero worship, which are mistaken for love, to their nurses and doctors. She does not believe this and insists that compassion is as strong a bond as love. Moreover, she is convinced that God gave her to this man as a gift and whatever sacrifices she must make are "the will of the Lord." We respect her religious views but fear that she is turning herself into a martyr.

This man has suffered terribly and considers Dolores a "miracle" that has enhanced his sad existence enormously. I know we should keep quiet and let her live her life -- mistakes and all -- but we grieve for her lost youth and the years of difficulty that lie ahead. Please advise us. -- Heartbroken in Orlando

Dear Orlando: There is little that can be done to counteract the "martyr complex." These individuals are compelled to sacrifice themselves for what they perceive as a noble cause. Trying to talk them out of it is an exercise in futility.

There's always the chance that this really is love. Pull back, say no more and be there for her when reality sets in. Dolores is going to need a lot of support in the days ahead, and it will be up to you to provide it.

Dear Ann Landers: This is in reply to a letter you received from a mother who said she was tired of yelling at her kids to pick up after themselves. Nothing is accomplished by yelling except a sore throat and frazzled nerves.

I am a 73-year-old grandmother with an excellent memory. I raised two sons alone. Their father was one of those famous "deadbeat dads." I supported my children without help from the state or federal government. By the time my sons were 10 years old, they had to clean their rooms, put everything away in its proper place, clean the floor and change the sheets every Saturday morning. If everything was done properly by noon, they got to go to the movies or whatever. If not, they helped me with the rest of the cleaning and did yardwork.

There is a simple way to deal with children effectively. Let them know exactly what you expect of them. Yelling is not the answer. It accomplishes nothing. Taking away privileges is what works. Take my word for it. I've been there. -- H.T.B. in Encinitas, Calif.

Dear H.T.B.: Your words of wisdom deserve to be taped on refrigerator doors in every home where children from 5 years of age through 18 reside. They are inclined to be "mother-deaf" until they hear something that jeopardizes their social life. Being grounded is the most effective way to get teens to shape up. I recommend it.

Dear Readers: What follows is something for computer buffs who rely on spell checkers to contemplate:

Dear Ann Landers: Sum won tolled me wee wood knot knead two learn how too spell because computers wood dew it four us. Eye disagree. Dew ewe? -- P.E. in St. Louis Park, Minn.

Dear St. Louis Park: Ewe our write. Thank ewe four a good clothes look at what "progress" has dun fore education.

My laugh for the day (Credit Dick E. Bird): A father answered the phone when his daughter's boyfriend called. "No, this is not Dreamboat," he said. "This is the Supply Ship."

What's the truth about pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, crack, speed and downers? "The Lowdown on Dope" has up-to-the-minute information on drugs. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Military Muster

NATHAN DILLER

Air Force Cadet 4th Class Nathan Diller, son of Ralph and Shelly Diller of Hereford, who is presently assigned to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Co., has been named to the Dean's List, the Commandant's List and the USAFA Flying Team.

Cadet Diller, through his academic performance during his first semester at the Academy, is on the Dean's List, and through his military performance during the first semester is on the Academy's Commandant's List. He has also recently become a member of the Academy Flying Team.

The process for trying out for the Flying Team takes about nine months.

During tryouts, prospective team members take a variety of tests on aeronautical knowledge. They are also interviewed and must go through a flight checkride.

Selections for the team were made in early March. There were six members of the class of 2000 chosen and they spent their spring break, the last weekend in March, in Phoenix, Ariz., with the rest of the Academy Flying Team competing against Embry Riddle Aeronautical University.

The team competes twice a year, at regionals competition in the fall and nationals competition in the spring, and consistently places among the top in the nation.

Most members of the team, after receiving their degree from the Academy, go on to European NATO Joint Jet Pilot Training at Sheppard AFB, Wichita Falls.

Army Pvt. Michael A. Brown has graduated from basic military training at Fort Leonard Wood, Waynesville, Mo.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

Brown is the son of Rose N. and Lester Brown of Hereford.

The private is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School.

Catholic church takes more liberal view toward unsuccessful marriages

BOSTON (AP) - Henry VIII had to create his own church when he couldn't get his first marriage revoked by the Roman Catholics, and annulments remained almost unheard of for the next four-and-a-half centuries.

Not anymore.

In the past few decades the number of unions dissolved with the church's blessing has risen from hundreds to tens of thousands each year in the United States as Roman Catholic leaders have adopted a more modern view of marriage.

In the past few decades the number of unions dissolved with the church's blessing has risen from hundreds to tens of thousands each year in the United States as Roman Catholic leaders have adopted a more modern view of marriage.

Once granted in only extreme cases, such as a spouse's refusal to have children, the church now recognizes there may be more abstract psychological reasons for ending the sacrament of matrimony.

Observers say tribunals, the bodies charged with acting on annulment requests, are simply recognizing a fact of life - marriages aren't necessarily forever.

"We're all concerned, across the board, about divorce. But it is our intent to try to help the people in this situation," said Monsignor Robert Deeley, judicial vicar at the Archdiocese of Boston's marriage tribunal, which granted about 700 annulments last year.

Tribunals don't consider a request until a civil divorce has been granted. An annulment declares that a marriage never really existed in the eyes of the church because something essential was missing.

Picnic for parents

In observance of April 12-19 as the Week of the Young Child, the 3- and 4-year-olds at Hereford Care Center hosted their parents for a picnic Thursday.

Wedding information must be submitted by 5 p.m. Wednesday to be included in the next Sunday Brand. Wedding information forms, as well as those for engagements and showers, are available at the news office, 313 N. Lee.

The Successful Family

EMOTIONAL ABUSE: "Stupid! You never do anything right!"

Words can be painful. Name calling, put downs, humiliation in front of others...These are words that make a child feel worthless. Ugly. Not loved.

Parents may not know how damaging their words can be. They may think harsh will help their children behave. But the pain of a parent's mean words can last forever.

Parents hurt their children without lifting a hand.

Can you remember a time when someone you loved hurt you with words? The sound of those words might last for years....

BUILD UP YOUR CHILD WITH KIND, PROUD WORDS.

To find out how other parents are doing this, join THE SUCCESSFUL FAMILY PROGRAM activities which take place very Tuesday from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the HISD Administration Building, 601 N. 25 Mile Ave.

On April 29, representatives from the Hereford police Department and the Probation Office will present a special program on gang violence and how it affects the family.

During the final session May 6, the drawing will be held for the TV and VCR. You must be present to win. There will also be a special drawing for those who have had 100 percent attendance.

For more information contact Tili Boozer, counselor/facilitator at 806-363-7668.

YOUR EYES

Low Vision Aids

Serious visual impairment, often beyond the help of ordinary glasses or contact lenses, is referred to as low vision. More than 11 million Americans have some form of it, often as a result of age or illness. Most common causes are macular degeneration, a deterioration of the retina that destroys central vision; cataracts, clouding of the lens of the eye; glaucoma, a condition of high pressure in the eye; or diabetic retinopathy.

It's important to remember that people with low vision are not blind. As long as there is some residual vision, they can be helped to read and function in their daily lives with special visual aids that the optometrist can prescribe.

Among the options are magnifiers (with and without illumination), telescopic lenses that can fit into ordinary eyeglass frames, microscopic lenses, even video print enlargers. Some devices can even help those with low vision watch television comfortably.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Is the customer always right?

The television set he returned was nearly three years old. The customer who brought it back demanded a new TV. "If you don't give me a new set, I'm going to stand in front of your store everyday and drive your customers away," he said. What would you do if you owned the appliance store?

The dress was less than a week old when the customer returned it. The clerk pointed out the perspiration stains under the arms and the spot on the front. "I can't take this back because you've worn it," she said. The customer grew angry and shouted, "I did not wear it, those stains were on the dress when I bought it. That's why I'm returning it." What should the clerk do?

The car's odometer showed 7,000 miles when the owner returned it to the dealership for the fourth time. "It still isn't running right," he stated angrily. "If you don't get it right this time, I'm calling the manufacturer and I'll have my attorney invoke the lemon law. I want my money back." On previous visits, the car had checked out fine. The sales manager and three different mechanics had all driven the car and could find no fault in its performance. The owner of the dealership is certain that nothing is wrong with the car. She also knows the car's owner lost his job just weeks after buying the car and may be struggling financially. What should she do?

The new breed of customer

Today's customers are more demanding and less willing to accept mediocre service. They are value driven and much less tolerant of inconvenience. Customers are getting harder to please and many businesses are feeling the sting of unhappy customers.

I call this new breed of customer the "Four-A Customer." They want anything they want, anytime they want, anyway they want, anywhere they want it. As competition for customer loyalty increases, this new breed of customer is even more likely to get it their way.

This brings us back to the original question: "Is the customer always right?" The answer of course is a resounding "NO!" However, our customers - even when dead wrong - are still the only reason our businesses exist. Without enough customers, we quickly become devoid of profit and have to close our doors.

So how do you handle unreasonable customer requests like the true-life examples mentioned earlier in the column? Do you give away the farm? Do you risk litigation? Do you chase away customers with a cat-o-nine-tails?

A panel discussion

On April 29, the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce will host its annual Business Connection Trade Show. One of the exciting business development training programs offered will feature a panel discussion titled "Is the Customer Always Right?"

You'll hear how National chain store managers and savvy small-business owners handle challenging customers. It will be my privilege to moderate this panel, and I think you'll glean some valuable tips on negotiating settlements, establishing customer service policies and culling unreasonable customers.

Four other workshops are scheduled for the day as well. The schedule of training events is as follows:

- 9:00 am Checks and Balances - Reduce your losses from bad checks
- 10:00 am The Management Smorgasbord
- 1:00 pm Is the Customer Always Right?
- 2:00 pm Is the Gold Mine On Line?
- 3:00 pm Selecting the Best Legal Structure for Your Business.

We'll see you at the show.

Don Taylor is the co-author of "Up Against the Wal-Marts." You may write to him in care of "Minding Your Own Business," PO Box 67, Amarillo, TX 79105.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Did you miss us while we were gone? Yes, Martha Russell and I were gone April 7-11. During that week we attended the Texas Library Association Annual Conference along with 7,000 other Texas librarians.

Our days started very early and ended very late. Martha and I learned about digital imaging or maybe I should say we learned there is a lot involved in developing a collection that can be indexed or retrieved once it is scanned into a database. It means we will have to write another grant, get organized and get to work.

We also had the opportunity to hear several authors. Among them were Elmer Kelton, Sandra Cisneros, Roger Rodriguez and children's authors Jon Scieszka, and Jerry and Gloria Jean Pinkney.

The most impressive author and speaker in my opinion was Melba Pattillo who wrote Warriors Don't Cry. Melba was one of the black Alabama high school students that chose to go to the white high school. She talked about that experience and why she chose to be one of those students.

Melba says she wasn't trying to change colors, or even prove a point. All Melba wanted was access.

She wanted access to the same education, books, and opportunities that were available to the rest of the world. Being a daughter of a librarian, Melba knew there were libraries with more than 100 volumes for first grade through 12th and she wanted access to those books.

Melba's school had one stove and a corner in a room of the homelike classes. The other school had a whole department with several stoves and rooms.

As I continued I realized that if anyone had just cause to hate or to be bitter it was Melba, but the hate and bitterness was not there. That even though life threatening situations were a constant in her life during that time, Melba has a love and respect for all people of all colors and economic background.

At the age of 57, Melba became acquainted with 4-year-old twin boys that had been in four different foster homes. She saw their need for a home and adopted them becoming a single parent. Melba told of the little ones that had never been taught manners, but knew every curse word ever invented.

For days Melba tried to reach the boys and establish a common ground with no success. Then one day they visited the library and Melba checked out a video of Barney. When the video began to play the boys were still for the first time, glued to the TV.

Melba says, "There is God, and then there is Barney." Barney has given her the link to the boys and through Barney she has been able to connect the boys to books, proper behavior, affection and love.

Once again I had to back up and look at what I considered good and not so good, and even though I'm not crazy about Barney he has a place in our collection so others can have access. All of you have access to Melba through her book Warriors Don't Cry.

Cosby! The Life of a Comedy Legend by Ronald L. Smith is another inspiring story. Bill Cosby is one of the most successful and respected entertainers in America even though he came from a poor broken family.

In an interview, Bill told the story of taking his children back to his old neighborhood. Bill's children didn't believe him and thought he had hired a bunch of actors to greet him and tell stories about him living and growing up there.

Bill's comedy career began when a teacher sternly told him, "In this classroom there is only one comedian, and it is me. If you want to be one get your own stage, and get paid for it." So he did.

This book also explores the inspiration he drew from his teachers, the strong female figures in his life, and the books he read.

His Name is Ron: Our Search for Justice by the family of Ron Goldman is about Ron and members of his blended family. The family puts a name, face and soul to the young man so many times referred to as "a friend of Nicole Brown Simpson."

For the first time the family candidly speaks about the criminal trial and its heart-stopping verdict. The family describes their determination to bring needed reforms to the criminal justice system and to give voices to other victims of violent crimes. You will be surprised by what the family has to say.

McNally's Gamble by Lawrence Sanders continues with his most delightful and beloved character Archy McNally. Edythe Westmore is being urged to purchase a Faberge Imperial Egg. However the family of the well-to-do widow are violently opposed to the investment. Archy's services are employed to investigate the "bejewelled" trinket and the aged antique dealer. Greed, passion and murder are soon a part of the story and Archy fears he may become the next victim.

The Ranch by Danielle Steel is another new title available this week and I'm sure that is all I need to say. Danielle Steel fans are already lined up on the list. Three college friends plan a reunion in the Grand Tetons of Wyoming, after many years. Despite the changes in their lives they all treasure and bond with the friendship they share. With renewed love, healing and release of old hurts take place and the girls become even closer.

Other titles of interest: Naked Justice by William Bernhardt.

Jackson by Max Byrd.

Cleaning the highway

Don't mess with Texas. As part of the Adopt A Highway project, several Hereford FFA members picked up litter off the sides of the Highway 385 on Thursday. The highway clean-up is part of the club's community service project.

Olson qualifies for two NJAA awards

Sy Olson has qualified for the Bronze and Silver Awards of the National Junior Angus Association.

Olson, the 17-year-old son of Steve and Ginger Olson, is a senior at Hereford High School.

He has shown his Angus in many local, state and national shows. He has participated in the beef cook-off and team sales competitions at the National Angus Show.

He is active in the Texas Junior Angus Association, having served as first vice president and director, and is a junior member of the American Angus Association.

The Bronze and Silver Awards are the first and second levels of the National Junior Angus Recognition program that began in 1972.

Junior Angus breeders must apply for the award and then meet point requirements in many areas of participation before receiving the honor.

Applicants are evaluated in the areas of junior Angus association activities, participation in showmanship and leadership competitions, using performance testing to improve their herd and their progress in producing and merchandising Angus cattle.

The National Junior Angus Association promotes the involvement of young people in raising Angus cattle, while also providing leadership and self-development opportunities for its more than 9,000 members nationwide.

Abney leads FFA judges to state

The Hereford FFA livestock judging team has qualified for the state contest April 26 at Texas A&M University in College Station.

The team members are Darrin Gilley, Cassie Abney, Zachary Vascek, Erin Auckerman and Ben Sublett.

Abney was 13th high individual out of 364 contestants. She also was the high point individual on the Hereford FFA team. The team placed second in district and seventh in area.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent-AG

As I mentioned last week, many producers are concerned about the effects of the freezing temperatures on the 1997 wheat crop.

The wheat was damaged by the freezing temperatures received on April 10 to 14 when a Canadian cold front brought unseasonably cold temperatures to much of north and west Texas.

When wheat is in a vegetative stage, colder temperatures, even down well below zero won't hurt the hardy plants.

However, when the wheat begins to joint and develop the wheat flower or head, this is normally Feekes scale 6.0 to 7.0, then this critical temperature is much higher.

When freezes occur, the less physiologically developed the wheat plant is, the more likely it is to survive.

The delay in development can be determined both by planting date and also by grazing.

Freeze can damage wheat in several ways. It can reduce leaf area, damage stems which will not allow the plant to take up the needed moisture and it can damage the developing head.

Damage to leaf tissue on wheat that has not yet jointed can appear very serious, but it usually does not affect yield.

Tall wheat that has not jointed will appear to be damaged the most as the leaves begin to turn yellow and dry up. This wheat will give off a distinct silage type odor-as leaves begin to decay.

Reproductive tissue (the developing head) and the tissue immediately surrounding above ground nodes are the most susceptible.

Stem injury is difficult to assess. The area around the uppermost node or two nodes is most likely to be damaged.

Apparent symptoms include discoloration (a light colored band), splitting or complete collapse of the internodes and the enlarges dark colored nodes.

Wheat that is damaged will stress a little quicker than uninjured wheat. In wheat where stems have been lightly damaged, lodging may be the result as the wheat reaches maturity.

In severe cases, you will see sudden desiccation of the plants and leaves, plus severe lodging of plants.

This is accelerated as temperatures warm and the plants' need for moisture increases.

The frozen stem tissue will be soft and mushy with a "water soaked" appearance.

The developing head has very little tolerance for the cold. Typically, temperatures in the 22 degree range will damage the head.

However, it is more of a function of the crop canopy holding the warm temperatures of the soil in jointed wheat than the reproductive tissue being less tolerant of cold temperatures at the boot.

The one thing that we have going is that wheat tends to have tillers in various stages of development up until the time of maturing. This simply means that there are those tillers on the plant that are much more susceptible to freeze at a given time than others.

Because this takes place, tillers on the plant that normally would not have developed and made grain take over and become productive tillers.

In many instances, the main tiller will be damaged, but the second, third and fourth tillers will still develop and give acceptable yields.

It is important when assessing wheat freeze injury, to look at all tillers in a row segment to determine what fraction of the total number of viable tillers have survived, what is the potential head size, evaluate stem and vegetative injury.

Frozen wheat tissue is difficult to recognize for seven days. Early this week, producers should be able to more accurately determine the extent of the damage.

Immediately after a freeze, injured tissues assume a slightly darker coloration.

The level of damage cannot be accurately assessed until the damaged tissue has time to deteriorate.

Early symptoms look water soaked, followed by a brown, mushy appearance. As the tissue has time to dry, frozen tissue becomes white. If the head is killed in early growth stages, growth of that tiller ceases, whereas younger tillers not developed may continue to grow.

To estimate injury, try to assess the percentage of heads killed per foot of drill row. This is done by simply splitting the wheat stem with a razor blade.

If the developing wheat head is brown or had a deteriorated look, the tiller will stop growing. The oldest heads are usually damaged most, and also contribute to more yield than young tillers which may have survived the freeze.

Dr. Brent Bean, area extension entomologist, surveyed five locations in Deaf Smith County for me this week and reported that they ranged from very little to about 20 percent damage.

He stated that the larger the wheat, either due to early planting, early irrigation or pulling cattle off early, was the hardest hit. This is to be expected.

He compared our damage as relatively mild compared to the damage he saw on the North Plains. He stated that he found a number of fields with 80 to 90 percent tillers damaged.

Freeze damage is perhaps the most difficult thing to determine. Remember the damage we had to our cotton in September. But because of cool, wet conditions, the plants tended to heal themselves and make a crop.

In wheat, I think the damage will really be visible to producers this week. I would caution producers to give the crop some time before making any drastic decisions on whether to graze or hay the crop or prepare the land for a summer crop. A week in this situation will really make a tremendous difference.

For more information, please contact the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at (806) 364-3573 or come by room 402 in the county courthouse.

Think Rain and warmer weather. See you next week.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

(NAPS)—Whether you're painting, mulching, or hiking, you should always keep an eye on safety. Something as simple as a twig thrown from a mulcher can damage your vision. That's why it would be farsighted of you to wear protective eyewear when doing chores in the yard.

To protect your eyes from the dangers of working in and around your home, Titmus Optical, a leading manufacturer of protective eyewear, has developed a line of attractive eyewear called Safespecs. These glasses are available in a variety of frame styles and colors. Additionally, if you wear corrective lenses you can have your prescription put into one of these stylish frames.

Protective eyewear today can accommodate the most technological advance in lenses. Progressives, transitions, tints and coatings such as Anti-Reflective coatings or scratch-resistant coatings are all available from your eyecare professional in safety frames.

Most of the more than two million eye injuries that occur in the United States each year happen at home. Some 90 percent of these could have been prevented through the use of protective eyewear. Here are some safety tips from the experts that will help you prevent accidents in and around your home.

When working around the house or in the yard keep children at a safe distance. For safety, wear protective eyewear.

• Protect your eyes from flying particles, fertilizer and pesticides by wearing protective eyewear.

Red-hot Rimes riding high at Country Music Awards

By Dan Ladd

©TVData Features Syndicate

Hey, country music fans, grab your hats and boots and tune in to Tinseltown. That's right, the 32nd Academy of Country Music Awards telecast airs from Hollywood's Universal Amphitheatre Wednesday, April 23, on NBC.

This year's show features hosts George Strait, Jeff Foxworthy and Crystal Bernard leading a pack of more than two dozen performers.

No stranger to awards shows, Strait has taken home the ACM's entertainer of the year and top male vocalist awards in the past. He is nominated in both categories again this year as well as three others.

Foxworthy is returning for his second consecutive hosting appearance. Last year, he was recognized by the ACM with a special achievement award for his contribution to country music.

Bernard's career recently has broadened to include country music with the release of her album The Girl Next Door—a far cry from her cello-playing Helen on Wings. Fans curious about her musical talent should note that she'll perform a duet with Billy Dean.

There's been a lot of talk this year about newcomer LeAnn Rimes stealing the show. The 14-year-old singing phenomenon, who recently won several Grammy Awards, has been on fire since last summer's release of her debut album, Blue.

Rimes is nominated in five categories, including top female vocalist and top new female vocalist (it's rare to be nominated for both).

Rimes' recent album, Unchained Melody/The Early Years, was recorded when she was only 11 years old and already has topped the Billboard country charts. She also has been enjoying some success on the pop charts, making her yet another country music crossover.

While Rimes hopes to duplicate her Grammy success, viewers will be sure to find other treats at this year's show.

Highlights of the major awards are:

ENTERTAINER OF THE YEAR:

This is a tough one to call, with Strait, Garth Brooks, Brooks & Dunn, Alan Jackson and Tim McGraw nominated. All are coming off big years, but look for Jackson, country music's master cowboy, to take the prize.

VOCAL DUET: Brooks & Dunn have won for the past five years. Make it six.

TOP NEW MALE, FEMALE VOCALIST:

These artists go around the Amphitheatre during the show singing short versions of their songs. Trace Adkins should win the male award over James Bonamy and Kevin Sharp. Rimes should win the female award, but has stiff competition from Mindy McCready and Deana Carter.

TOP FEMALE VOCALIST: Rimes could take this also, but Patty Loveless has been one of country music's greatest in recent years. Shania Twain, Trisha Yearwood and veteran Reba McEntire also are contenders.

TOP MALE VOCALIST: The nominees are Vince Gill, Alan Jackson, Collin Raye, Strait and Bryan White. Jackson is the front-runner, however. White and Strait also were hot in '96.

SONG/SINGLE OF THE YEAR:

What's the difference between song of the year and single of the year? Song of the year recognizes the writer(s) of the tune; single of the year recognizes all parties involved. This year's nominees for both categories are identical. "Blue" did well at the Grammys, but Carter's "Strawberry Wine" and Tracy Lawrence's "Time Marches On" were enormous hits and could win.

In addition to the awards, expect performances by Clint Black, Gill and the Mavericks to make the Academy of Country Music Awards a solid evening of entertainment.

Crystal Bernard (Wings), Jeff Foxworthy (The Jeff Foxworthy Show) and George Strait (not pictured) saddle up to host the 32nd Academy of Country Music Awards Wednesday on NBC. The three-hour event features performances by Clint Black, Vince Gill and LeAnn Rimes.

Q: Do you have an address where I can send cards and encouragement to Scott Hamilton in his fight against cancer? -Ellen B. via e-mail.A: Address your cards to Scott Hamilton, c/o Keith Albrecht, IMG, 1 St. Clair Ave. East, #700, Toronto, Ont. M4T 2Z7. If you're mailing from the United States, remember to include sufficient postage to Canada.

In case you haven't heard, the much-loved skating star is expected to make a full recovery from testicular cancer.

Q: Why do so many actors leave hit TV shows to pursue other interests, then are never heard from again? Are they taking their chances or what? -Jennifer Waterworth, Weare, N.H.A: Here's the best answer I can give you, Jennifer. Yes, there are actors who leave hit shows because they start to believe their own publicity or just get greedy. But there are two other principal reasons they make the jump.

First, appearing in a long-running sitcom can irreparably typecast an actor, who then might find it difficult to be considered for roles other than those similar to his TV character. For actors who go into their profession because of the variety it offers, this is frustrating.

Perhaps the biggest reason, however, is that the odds against succeeding as an actor are astronomical, and many actors remember those early hand-to-mouth years.

If the brass ring looks even slightly as if it's within reach, they feel compelled to go for it.

Are they taking chances? Yes. That's how Shelley Long and David Caruso have gone from hot TV commodities in Cheers and NYPD Blue, respectively, to the punch lines in cruel jokes.Q: Is there a possibility that *Due South will go into syndication? I missed most of the first season and was sorry to see the series canceled. -S. Akui, Honolulu.A: Reruns of the series have run heavily in Canada, but there are no plans to air the old episodes (which number about 35) in the United States. Due South resumes production for CTV in Canada this fall, and it seems likely the new episodes will air in the states via cable or syndication.Q: Did Scott Wolf of Party of Five have a small role in the series Saved by the Bell? -Melody and Ashley, Sarasota, Fla.A: Yes. Wolf's Party bio indicates that prior to signing with the Fox series, he had recurring roles on Bell and Evening Shade.Q: What was the movie in which Henry Winkler played a wrestler? Is it on video? -Don via e-mail.A: Call Movies Unlimited at (800) 4MOVIES for video information on The One and Only.

Mothers & Daughters shows life is not like a greeting card

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

Open a Hallmark Mother's Day card this year and find these words:

"Mom, when nobody else would have bothered to look, you saw me as somebody special."

Sentiments of another kind emerge in the Hallmark-sponsored special The Story of Mothers & Daughters, airing Monday, April 21, on ABC. The hour is a mixture of mothers who cherish their daughters and daughters who, as often as not, are irritated or hurt by their mothers' behavior.

As the special shows, real mothers and daughters have conflicts, and there comes a time in each relationship when the younger must tell the elder she will find her own way. For many, there is even a day when the roles are reversed. Yet the fortunate majority find joy at the end of that journey, if not all along the way.

Though many of the women's comments are rendered as isolated sound bites, the special is at its best when the cameras linger in their lives. Memorable segments include an encounter with a mother who uses a wheelchair and adopted a daughter with a disability, and a multigenerational family whose matriarch falls ill.

Another segment about a Chinese-born woman and her very American daughter shows that like the biblical Mary, every mother "hides things in her heart." But they still may show in her face.

The 27-year-old rankles at her mother's habit of telephoning her at bedtime to ask a silly question -- and hear her voice. Cameras capture the two at a portrait studio, where the daughter frets that her mother does not express herself through physical closeness, but she fails to see the profound love and pride in her mother's eyes.

Regrettably, the voices of girls between 5 and 15 -- the age of affection and imitation -- are barely heard in Mothers & Daughters. Instead, as one 11-year-old viewer puts it, "there was a lot of pain and suffering in the film, so much it made you want to cry."

Ultimately, whether viewers find more pain than pleasure in the film may depend on what their own stories have been.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
