Hall County Native

Chappell Named FHA County Supervisor

James E. (Jim) Chappell is the new county supervisor for the Farmers Home Administration, coming here from Levelland, where he was assistant supervisor of Hockley County. He succeeds Newt Goodwin, who returned to the Plainview office, serving Hale County.

Announcement of the change was made Tuesday, July 6 by J. J. Roan, district supervisor.

In addition to administering the FHA loan program, Chappell's first work will be concerned with the installation of the Samnorwood Water Supply Corp. system, and in this he brings a backlog of experience.

Two similar FHA-financed projects are located in Hockley County.

He has been with the Farmers Home Administration a little over two years and prior to that he was with the Soil Conservation Service.

Chappell is a native of Hall County, born at Lakeview and reared at Pliska and Memphis, where he graduated from high school.

He has served on active duty with the Army three times: during World War II he was a second lieutenant in the Infantry, with combat duty in Germany; he was recalled to active duty during the Korean War and again was in Germany. His final active service came during the Berlin Crisis when he was at Fort Polk, La.

Now a captain in the National Guard, Chappell is assigned to the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 131st Artillery, the parent battalion of Battery A in Wellington.

Chappell was graduated from Texas A&M College in 1950 and in October of that year he joined SCS. He was with that agency at Jacksboro, Archer City, Paducah and Childress.

Active in civic work, he was commander of the American Legion Post at Archer City, and president of the Archer County Chamber of Commerce. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge and the family is active in the Baptist Church.

Chappell is married to the former Gwen Phillips of Thornedale and they have five children: three sons, Bill 14, Jimmy 9, and Chuck 8, and two daughters, Dee 13, and Jackie 5.

Quail School Opens Term August 30

The Quail school board has set the date for the opening of the 1965-66 school term as Monday, Aug. 30.

Supt. Herman Moseley said the announcement is being made now so parents can arrange vacations to meet the opening date.

Mr. Moseley also pointed out that the Quail school has been fully integrated since December 1964.

"We will accept all students living in our school district regardless of color or race. They will all ride the same buses, eat in the same cafeteria, use the same rest rooms and take part in all school activities for which they are eligible," he declared.

Holidays for the school term were announced Tuesday, July 6 by Supt. Moseley, to be effective unless school has to be dismissed for bad weather or other unforeseen circumstances.

Thanksgiving holidays will be Nov. 25 and 26; Christmas, Dec. 23 through Jan. 2; Easter, one day only, which will be Friday, preceding Easter Sunday, April 10.

The date for the closing of school will be May 13 if the schedule does not have to be

Passenger Bus Line Opens Through Wellington to Give Needed Service

Passenger bus service was re-opened through Wellington Wednesday, June 30 and the city will be served by Texan Bus Lines, an extension of the line now operating from Abilene to Childress.

Wellington has been without bus service approximately 8 years.

Business leaders hailed the opening of the new line as a major step in the effort to make Wellington a desirable location for industrial prospects.

The city will be served by one bus from each direction on Highway 83 for the present, according to N. M. Higdon, Chamber of Commerce manager, who was instrumental in bringing in the service. The southbound bus will arrive here at 6:20 a.m. and the northbound bus at 6:30 p.m. The Wellington station will be at John Smith's Enco Station at the intersection of Highway 82 and 8th Street.

Direct connections will be offered for Abilene and all points south, and for Amarillo and Oklahoma City.

A new 9-passenger bus is used on the line. The driver is Sam W. Hammack, who is living in Shamrock, the northern terminal of the line.

Texan Bus Lines is owned by Mrs. Gay Glaze and Mrs. Ima Hammack of Abilene. The latter is the mother of Sam W. Hammack.

Efforts to secure Texan Bus Lines began several months ago, with Jessie Glaze, husband of one of the owners, working closely with the Collingsworth Chamber of Commerce officials.

In a hearing before the Texas Railroad Commission at Lubbock May 18, Higdon and George Shadid presented 28 letters from Wellington business firms requesting that a franchise for operation of the line be granted.

Texan Bus Lines has operated from Abilene to Childress for a number of years, and the Childress to Shamrock route is an extension.

No opposition to the franchise

COLOMBIAN RANCHER STUDIES TEXAS METHOIDS

Santiago Diaz, whose father has large ranch holdings stocked with Brahma cattle in Colombia, is spending the summer at the James Doneghy Ranch near Wellington to learn how Brahma operations are carried out in Texas. Senior Diaz is shown at right and with him is Jack Moreman, ranch manager for Mr. Doneghy. He is a student in a special two-year agriculture program at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

Young Colombian Rancher Studies Texas Methods

Santiago Diaz, son of a Bogota, Colombia, rancher and a student in Cornell University is spending his summer vacation at Wellington, to learn about ranch operations and cattle management as they are carried out in Texas.

Diaz is working for James Doneghy, owner of the Raindrop Brahma Ranch, and he lives at the ranch headquarters with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moreman.

He chose to work for a Brahma rancher because that is the breed raised in his country.

His description of ranching procedures in his country are not unfamiliar to West Texans. In many ways they are like those here before this became a farming country.

The Diaz family lives at Bogota, capital city of Colombia, but the ranch is 300 miles away in the rich llano country, a land of vast stretches.

This is open range—the Diaz ranch is unfenced.

Here his father runs 10,000 head of Brahma cattle, Sabu, this breed is called in Spanish.

The cattle are sold when they are three years old, weighing 1200 pounds. A steer of this size will sell for about 1500 pesos, at the rate of 20 pesos for $1, Santiago figured.

The buyer accepts the cattle at the ranch—then drives them to the railroad point, a trail drive that may take up to 30 days.

"Most of our meat goes to the European market," Diaz said.

The roundup of cattle for this drive is known as trabajo de llano, "working the plains."

Moreman is keenly interested in learning about ranching operations in Diaz' country and has discovered that among ranchers of Colombia, internal parasites, a problem of Southwestern ranchers, is not a big problem, but external parasites are. Hoof and mouth disease may be serious in steers.

Cattle rustling, once a problem, now happens only occasionally.

Besides the cattle, Senior Diaz keeps approximately 500 mares

First Cotton Blooms Found

With some of the county's cotton barely in the ground, one farmer is reporting blooms in his field.

D. F. Downs reported that he found the first blooms July 5 on the F. O. Masten farm, two miles east of Wellington. The cotton was planted May 5 and is of the Half and Half variety.

Downs said the stalks were beaten down by the hail which struck in June, but apparently are overcoming the damage.

Norwood School Board Hires Two Teachers

One new teacher was hired and a former instructor rehired by the Samnorwood school board in a meeting Monday night, June 28, Supt. Robert Dwight announced. Other business, routine to the board this time of year, was handled.

John Dwyer, who taught vocational agriculture at Norwood four years prior to the past term, was rehired in that capacity.

Donald Bradley, who taught ag during the 1964-65 year, is leaving the teaching profession to operate a ranch south of Shamrock. He replaced Dwyer for one semester several years ago.

Dwyer also operates his own ranch in the west part of the county and before coming to Norwood taught ten years at Groom.

Kenneth Martindale, a graduate of Samnorwood high school and former Eagle basketball star, was employed to teach driver education and junior high physical education. He attended West Texas State University and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bart Martindale.

The school board also set the 1965-66 tax rate at $1.50 per $100 valuation, the rate it has been several years.

Supt. Dwight reported on a trip to Austin, where he conferred with the Texas Education Agency on the foundation program teacher allocation for the coming year. He indicated that the school district will gain

MISTLETOE BRIDGES THE YEARS
With this 1931 Ford Model A delivery truck, Mistletoe Express opened business in that year. It no longer hauls freight, but shined and in tip-top condition, it is used for exhibition purposes by the company. R. G. Bannister, district supervisor for the company, and a veteran of approximately 25 years service, drove the truck here to mark the opening of service to Wellington recently. It will travel around 40 miles per hour, Bannister said.

Driver Education Class

29 Young Drivers Will Start Tests July 13

Twenty-nine more Wellington students will soon be driving on the nation's streets and highways. That is, if they pass the driving part of the drivers test. They are the students who have completed the Driver's Education Course taught this summer by Randall Raburn.

All have passed the written part of their examination and have had their restricted licenses for some time. The restriction of having a licensed driver in the front seat will be removed when the driving test is passed.

One group will take the test on July 13, and others on July 27. The test will be given by Patrolman Leon Hughes of the Drivers License Division of the State Department of Public Safety.

Karen Jones and Eddie Patterson have finished the written phase but because of their ages, will have to take the driving phase later.

Those soon to become full-fledged drivers are Jim Clark, Teddy Martin, Kay Taylor, Elaine Karnes, Patricia Thomas, Carol Burba, Beverly Hedger, Jennifer Leeper, Joye Huds-peth,

In a Year of Change

Clint Small Jr. Heads Texas Bar Association

By NAT HENDERSON
Staff Writer
Austin American-Statesman

Clint Small comes to the presidency of the State Bar of Texas at a time when the bar is urging citizens to support major changes in the judicial system of Texas.

These changes, which go to voters in November, deal with involuntary retirement and removal of judges.

Charles Clinton Small, Jr., a member of the Austin firm of Small, Small and Craig, will assume the presidency at the close of this week's convention of the State Bar in Fort Worth on Saturday.

The former Longhorn lineman who graduated with high honors from The University of Texas School of Business Administration and with highest honors from the UT Law School, will tackle such projects as the revision of the penal code and a vast array of other proposals which could prove beneficial to both lawyers and laymen.

A native of Wellington, the 50-year-old attorney was admitted to the State Bar in 1939. He served as an attorney in the General Land Office until 1941, when he became a member of his present firm.

The firm is in general practice with emphasis on oil and gas matters, administrative practices and legislative counseling.

Small is a former director of the Travis County Bar Association and its former president. He was a director of the State Bar from 1961-64 and a member of its legislative committee.

The attorney is also the current vice president of the Austin school board.

Small graduated from Wellington public schools and Amarillo Junior College before attending the University. He was on the Longhorn team in 1934-36.

He is a big man with a dry sense of humor with such remarks as: "I only weighed 200 pounds when I played ball, which is a lot less than now."

Small expects to lose "a pound or two" with his heavy duties as president of the State Bar. He will make extensive speaking tours in addition to directing the activities of numerous committees.

Appointments to the many committees will be made by Small with the approval of directors.

Page Keeton, dean of the UT Law School, already has agreed to serve on Small's blue-ribbon committee on proposed revisions of the state penal code.

The State Bar has just succeeded in revising the state code of criminal procedures, but that committee will continue to study the new code to see if it is living up to its expectations.

One of the major projects this year will be to support HJR 57, a constitutional amendment which will be submitted to Texas voters for adoption in the November elections.

Small said the proposal, which he described as one of "extreme importance to the bar and the state as a whole," sets up a system for retirement for judges as well as a judicial qualifications board which will have power to initiate "remov-

FFA Boys Go to Convention

Four Samnorwood Future Farmers and their advisor will attend the state FFA convention which convenes in Houston from Wednesday, July 14 through Friday, July 16.

The four are Stanley Oldham, Ken Baxter, who is the chapter delegate, Nelson Dwyer, and Jay Wischkaemper.

John Dwyer, vocational ag instructor, will accompany them.

Side trips to the domed stadium and to Galveston are planned.

al proceedings against incompetent judges or those otherwise unfit to hold their jobs."

He said the state bar will urge passage of the proposals. He said he also expects the judiciary to support it.

Small said attorneys and citizens now have "nowhere to complain" when they believe a judge is incompetent. He said ten attorneys who practice in a judge's court now must get together to bring their complaints before the State Supreme Court. He said only one judge has ever been removed from office under the present system.

The new proposal sets up a grievance committee of three laymen, three judges and three practicing attorneys to hear charges. The committee in turn could call in the judge and investigate the complaint.

The committee then could advise the judge to change his ways if the complaints warranted giving him a chance, or it could bring charges against him if the allegations were of a criminal or unethical nature.

Among other projects which Small will push are studies on improving the efficiency and effectiveness of criminal prosecution, a committee on the administration of justice in civil cases and a committee to study professional economics for attorneys themselves.

Small also will have the responsibility of submitting the State Bar's annual budget to the board. It will amount to about $250,000.

He adds, "There are so many things going that the biggest job is to keep everything moving."

Small's father, C. C. Clinton Small, Sr., and Dick Craig will handle much of his work in their law firm.

"Dad and Dick will just have to work twice as hard while I attend banquets around the state," Small said.

Yorks Return After 32 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Joe York of Corsicana were in Wellington from Thursday until Saturday, July 1 to 3, for their first visit since moving from here 32 years ago.

Only once have they passed through the town, and that was Aug. 6, 1946.

"I'm visiting everyone I can find," said York, a friendly, warm-hearted man, of his friends here. While he spoke of the changes in appearance of Wellington, it was the people he knew that he was interested in.

Mr. and Mrs. York own a furniture and appliance store in Corsicana. One son, Joe Davidson York, who was a child when they lived here, is in business with them. He is also a major in the Air Force Reserve.

Their younger son, Jerry, lives in Dallas.

When the family lived in Wellington, he operated a Gulf Service Station at the corner of East Avenue and 10th Street, across from Strongs Flowers, and also worked for Taylor Creamery.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnson of Quail.

An arch, covered with emerald leaves in which white roses were entwined, was at the center of the decorations, and at each side were baskets of caladiums and candelabras holding lighted tapers.

The long sleeves tapered to points at the wrists. Her full floor-length satin skirt had a Chantilly lace overskirt, scalloped at the edge. A coronet of pearls and iridescent rhinestones held her elbow length veil, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations, with satin streamers tied in lovers knots.

FHA Completes Summer Work in Family, Social Relations

Thirteen girls, students in the Wellington high school home-making department, finished summer experiences by the deadline date, June 30.

"Any girl who has had at least one semester of home-making the previous school year may earn one-half credit for summer work," explained Mrs. Dee Coleman, home-making instructor.

"She must plan before May 15 what she will do, then carry the plans to completion before June 30."

A student entering this program may choose from any of these phases of home-making education: child development, family and social relationships, home management, home improvement, personal improvement, consumer buying, laundering, feeding the family and clothing the family.

Experiences in child development consisted of baby-sitting with younger brothers and sisters while the mother was at work, taking neighbor children to the park once a week, and working with children in various vacation Bible schools.

Working with the Hospital Junior Auxiliary, visiting elderly people, helping their fathers at their shop or business are examples of family and social relationship experiences; keeping house and yard while the mother works are home management experiences.

Two girls in this summer's class redecorated bedrooms; two learned about the family's laundry. One girl works for wages and kept a record of how she spent or saved her money.

Ten girls chose clothing the family as part of their experience and made 30 garments. Three girls prepared and served 46 meals.

"Each experience must have two parts, something tangible to do with the hands and something to make the girl a better citizen for her home, community or church," explained Mrs. Coleman.

Mitzie Hartman completed work for a chapter degree in achievement, while LaJuanda Peters and Patricia Thomas completed their junior degree work.

Mrs. T. W. Devenport helped Mrs. Coleman work with a group of girls learning to knit. In this group are Virginia Patterson, Jan Bowen, Beth Smith, Kathy Kiker, Susan Coffee, Glenda Kiker, Delores Moody, and Joyce Hudspeth.

Rhonda Kersten and Susan Coffee are co-chairmen of a committee to work on a float to be entered in the Collingsworth County Fair in September.

Girls in the program were Virginia Patterson, Susan Coffee, Glenda Kiker, Cherry Lewis, Nancy Sikes, Patricia Thomas, LaJuanda Peters, Deborah Peters, Freida Minareta, Faith Chambliss, Kathy Kiker, Linda Winton and Rhonda Kersten.

Little League Baseball Needs More Workers and Watchers

One of Wellington's valuable summer programs needs more support.

Little League baseball has the boys—enough for four teams. It has the equipment. It has a few men—but not enough—with the interest to give most of their summer evenings. Some of those who are working hardest do not have boys in the program.

What is lacking are more men to work with the boys and crowds to cheer the teams on. These youngsters offer a good brand of entertainment for a hot summer evening—laughs that are unintentional, plus the thrill that comes with watching a group of youngsters develop skill at America's favorite sport.

It is no hotter in the shaded bleachers of Marion Airpark field than it is at any other outdoor summer sport, and not as hot as most.

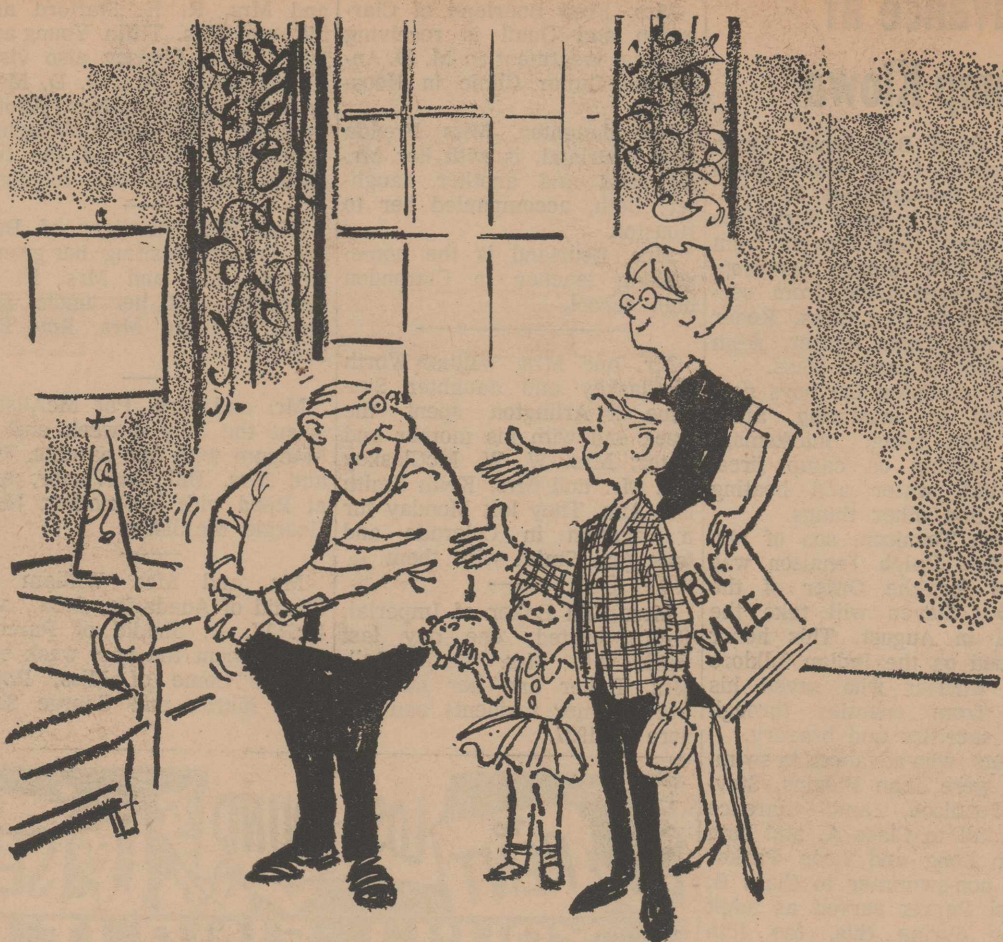

No one is expected to sit through both games of the double header every night of play. But enough people are needed to provide a cheering section, and since there is no admission, drop-ins are always welcome. Come when you can, but the important thing is, come!

CROSSROADS REPORT

Dear Editor:

My TV-hexed neighbor says even with his vast experience as a trance-box viewer, he don't always get the message that may be coming through.

Like the hour and a half show the other night with weird noises and weird wiggling, which he first took to be a pre-emergence travelogue showing an orgy in the Congo jungle.

Then he noticed the film was made just recently in the U.S., so he reckons it must have been an Officially-blessed preview of The Great Society.

Newspapers say a herd of mammas in St. Louis got them some baseball bats the other day and cleared a gang of teenage toughs out of neighborhood park, so their children could play there.

My thug-irked neighbor says the ladies showed that positive type action beats make-work jobs and intellectual blubbering as a means of controlling turbulent youth.

But he says this demonstration of counter-violence is apt to inspire a pest-protective Congress to run up a law that people who are not in the hoodlum business can't buy baseball bats.

News story in the papers the other day tells about a trigger-happy farmer in Louisiana who gunned down an underprivileged citizen who was merely trying to rob him.

My equaliberal neighbor says this goes to show what terrible things can happen when the general public is allowed to own guns.

He says the blood of that dead wealth-equality seeker is on the head of Congress, which has been stalling on its project to disarm all greedy individuals possessed of lives and property and selfishly wishing to keep same.

The news says that a U.S. lieutenant got his pay stopped and himself expelled from the Army in Viet Nam when he balked at an order to go up front where the shooting is.

My socially concerned neighbor says this is unequal treatment the lieutenant got, on account of students here at home tearing up their draft cards don't get thrown out of college

Skip-row Interplanting Cuts Irrigation Need

Farmers the world over are looking for ways to make higher yields of crops, and at the same time, cut the cost. The High Plains Research Foundation, Halfway, Texas, has been working on a system to help solve this problem.

In 1958, the Foundation began research in what was called "skip-row interplanting", row known as High Plains Foundation Farming System. This method of planting two rows of cotton, skip one row and plant two rows of another crop, not only boosts yields and quality of crops, but also cuts water needs by 50%.

One 160-acre field of skip-row interplanted cotton and grain sorghum, required only seven days to irrigate. Formerly, this same field planted in the conventional method took 21 days to irrigate. Reason? In the High Plains Foundation Farming System (skip-row interplanted) pioneered by the Foundation, only the rows that are planted are irrigated. In this method, irrigation water is allowed to run between the planted rows.

Water conservation is not the only advantage of this system of farming. Yields are boosted in both of the crops grown as is the quality. The yield increase of the crops are by far offset having one blank row every third row.

Research at the High Plains Research Foundation has also shown that blow-outs in early spring are greatly reduced by using this system. When planting two rows of cotton, skip one row, two rows of grain sorghum, skip one row and so on across the field, blowing out and other wind damage is greatly reduced and in some instances completely stopped.

Foundation personnel have found through research that these are some of the advantages of skip-row interplanting: (1) raise production significantly, and therefore, farm incomes; (2) conserve irrigation water and speed irrigation; (3) lower production costs; (4) make the best possible use of available crop land; (5) improve cotton quality; (6) maintain organic matter level on the soil; and (7) reduce wind and sand damage to seedling cotton.

The grain sorghum and other crops interplanted with cotton help to cut down on the wind action blowing around the cotton. This, along with the blank row, helps to keep the soil temperature up for better cotton fiber development.

Fiber development, or cellulose synthesis, has been found by scientists to be related to the degree and hours that air temperature is above 70 degrees F. This temperature can be maintained longer at night and earlier in the morning due to the blank row. By irrigating only between the planted rows and not the fallow rows, a higher temperature is maintained for better fiber development.

Under research at the Foundation, comparisons of cotton yield and quality of High Plains Foundation Farming System and convention planted cotton resulted in a yield of 1,065 pounds of lint per acre in the skip-row while at the same time the conventional cotton yielded only 769 pounds of lint per acre. Micronaire on the skip-row was 4.16 and on the other 3.62, while the percent of white cotton harvested on the skip-row was 73.0 and the white cotton on the conventional was 1.8 percent.

The high yield on the skip-row was obtained by using only 50 percent of the irrigation water needed to make the solid planted crop.

On the Texas Plains, the mid-act of irrigation has made it possible for this area to produce over one-half of the cotton grown in the state. Texas leads the nation in production of cotton for these reasons: good land, advanced farming methods and techniques and irrigation.

Cotton is grown on 1.6 million irrigated acres in the Plains which is 16 percent of all the cotton grown in the nation. Here also is grown 40 percent of the nation's grain sorghum on 1.9 million acres of highly irrigated land.

This production is possible only as long as the underground water supply lasts. Skip-row interplanting is one way that the life of the irrigated Plains can be extended while the farmer still makes a good return from his crops.

This year, the High Plains Research Foundation has selected some 25 different farmers throughout the Plains of

SALT SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

LIVESTOCK WATER STORAGE FACILITIES

By Norman Wilson

Many of the farmers and ranchers in the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District have been installing new water storage facilities for livestock.

The type of storage tank that is generally being built in the district is the corrugated metal siding with reinforced concrete bottom, ranging from 10 to 30 feet in diameter.

Some of the local farmers and ranchers who have recently installed new water storage facilities are Wendall Morgan, Louis Patterson, W. R. Ward and W. A. Cooke III. The area in the pasture where the storage facility is usually placed is determined or limited to where good livestock water can be found, but if good water can be found anywhere in the pasture, the well and storage facility need to be placed in an area where livestock do not generally graze. By placing the trough in this manner, you will get better grazing distribution, also you can do this with salt by placing it away from the water.

Water storage facilities should be large enough to supply at least 7 days storage. By multiplying 15 gallons times the number of cattle in the pasture times 7 days, you can determine how large a trough is needed.

If this much water is kept on hand, pump and windmill breakdowns will not leave you short of water.

If you are interested in installing a water storage facility or drilling a well for livestock water, contact your local Soil Conservation Service personnel assisting the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District and they will help you determine what size trough and the best materials to use in building it. The Great Plains Conservation program will cost-share 50% on both well and trough if you need either and can qualify.

Total atmospheric pressure on your body is between 30 and 40 thousand pounds.

Deck's DIDACTICS

—By Deskins Wells

That was a most interesting edition The Amarillo News published on Lake Meredith last Sunday combining as it did beautiful pictures of the huge new lake with stories of the years of effort it took to build it. Those of you who have never been to Meredith but have been to Conchas will be interested to know that Meredith is much larger.

The June rains have produced an increase in the size and depth of the lake that has been totally unexpected. It would have taken three years of normal rainfall to raise the lake to its present size; but floods on the watershed accomplished it in a matter of weeks. Elvis White's sister, Mrs. Marie Farris, who has been with The Bureau of Reclamation for years, has promised to give us figures on the sensational rise in the water level during the month of June. A part of her job is to keep a record of such things.

Let's get impatient about the progress of our smaller lake on Salt Fork, we might remember the long years of planning and hard work it has taken to make Lake Meredith a reality. Our lake should take a much shorter time.

By 1970 the Arkansas River will be navigable from Tulsa, Oklahoma to the Mississippi which means that Tulsa and such towns as Fort Smith and Little Rock in Arkansas will have access to the sea. There will be an industrial valley rivaling the Ohio in our neighboring state.

Texan Bus Lines, which began service through Wellington this week will provide a much needed service. The south bound bus which will come through here at 6:20 in the morning will make direct connections with Abilene and all points south, and the north bound bus, which comes through here at 6:30 in the evening will make direct connections with Amarillo and Oklahoma City.

Mickey Kendrick has received an old almanac from his aunt in Tennessee. It was printed in 1897 and is a marvelous piece of printing craftsmanship. The quality of the paper was excellent enough that it is still in excellent condition despite its 68 years and much handling. Instead of halftones, it is filled with etchings showing famous buildings of that era as well as scenes of rivers, harbors, and countryside. From it you learn that the people of this land had been in sixteen wars prior to the Spanish American War and such bits of information as the fact that there were 52 million whites and 7 million Negroes in the United States at that time.

Chaplain Gets Post in Japan

Chaplain and Mrs. Don Smith and their children were visiting her father, G. T. Austin, and Mrs. Austin over the week end before leaving for their 3-year assignment at Itazuke Air Base near Fukuoka City, Japan. They were at Biggs Air Force Base, El Paso, two years. Prior to that, they lived in Wichita Falls. Chaplain Smith holds the rank of captain in the Air Force.

The children, Faith, 12, Hope, 9, and Mark, 6, will attend school on the Air Base. In addition to his work as chaplain, the family will work with a Baptist mission at Fukuoka City, which is on the southern tip of the island. Faith, who is studying violin, will continue her work under the Suzuki method, an old method of teaching which was revived by the Japanese and within the last two years introduced into schools in the United States, including those at El Paso, Mrs. Smith said. Mrs. Smith, who is the former Zedell Austin, will continue teaching piano during her stay in Japan.

Seven Register During June

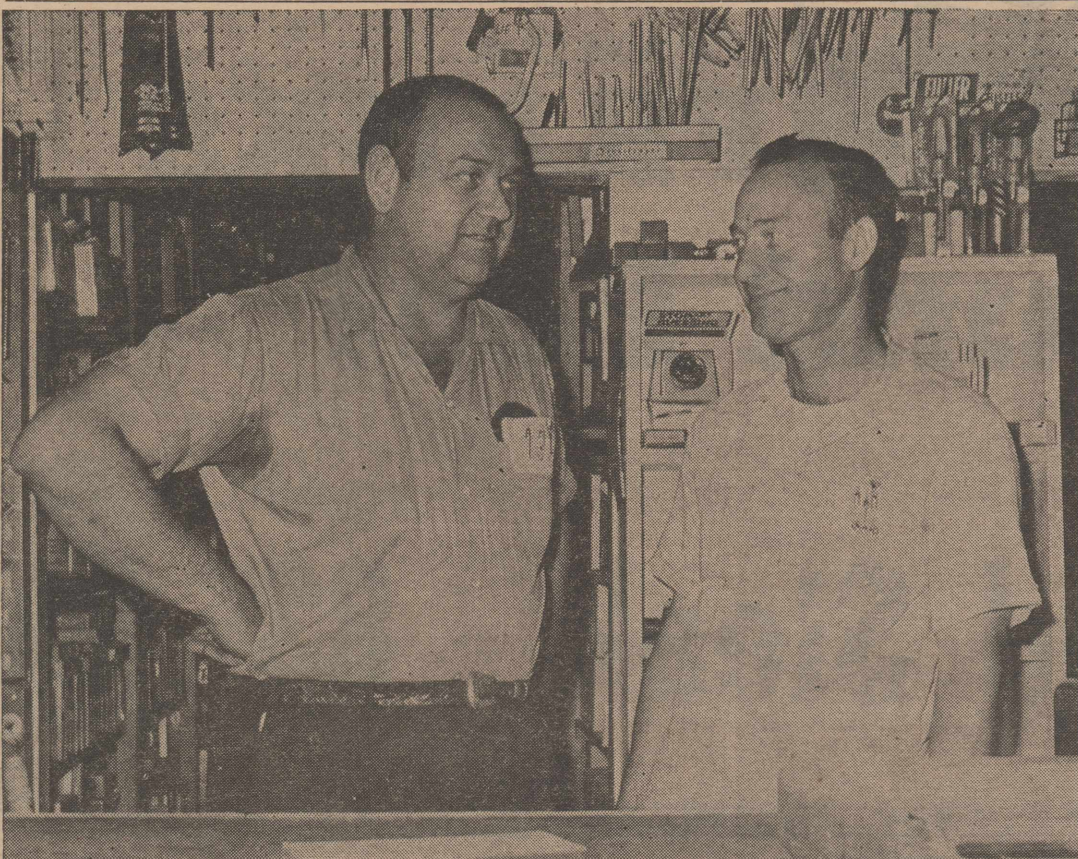

Seven Collingsworth County boys were registered for Selective Service during June, according to Bill Hatch, a member of the draft board representing Collingsworth County. These were Randy Warren Woodridge, John L. Green, Johnny Melvin Maxwell, Bobby Joe Powell and Foster Glenn Riley.

TEXAN BUS LINES SERVE WELLINGTON

This 9-passenger bus is now a regular part of the Wellington scene, making a morning run to the south and an evening run north. In the driver's seat is Sam Hammack, and standing beside him is N. M. Higdon, Chamber of Commerce manager, who has led Wellington business men in efforts to secure a bus line for several years. The line serving Wellington is an extension of one which has operated from Abilene to Childress for a number of years.

BUYS AUTO SUPPLY

Glen (Tiny) Taylor, left, has bought Brooks Auto Supply and will operate it as Taylor Auto Supply. He has managed the business for 5 years. With him here is Louis Berg, and employee of the firm for 19 years.

Glen Taylor Buys Brooks Auto Supply

Sale of Brooks Auto Supply by J. T. Brooks to Glen (Tiny) Taylor, effective this week, was announced by the two men.

Taylor also stated that the name of the business will be changed to Taylor Auto Supply. He has been manager of the business almost five years.

There will be no change in policy, and as far as the customers are concerned, there will be no change in the business whatever except the name.

Louis Berg, who is a veteran employee of the business, and Danny Ammons, associated with it for a shorter period, will remain, Taylor said.

Mr. Brooks bought the auto supply in October 1960, from Robert Posey, who established it in the 1920s and developed it into one of the largest businesses of its kind in the area. The same policies and complete stock was continued by Brooks and will be further continued by Taylor, he said.

Tiny Taylor became associated with the store as manager at the time Mr. Brooks acquired ownership. Prior to that, he was coach in Crowell high school for a number of years.

He has been a member of the Wellington school board for a year and a half, and along with others in his family, he is active in First Baptist Church.

Taylor was one of the organizers of the Skyrocket Booster Club and continues a keen interest in athletics. Mr. Brooks, whose home has been at Crowell for many years also sold his store at Childress, but is continuing ownership of Brooks Auto Supply in Crowell.

Pan Fork

J. R. Manning of Pampa, evangelist; Carlos Ramirez of Amarillo, missionary; Bob Estes of Hedley, director of recreation; Rev. Earnest, music director; and Rev. Dale Cain of Wheeler, morning watch.

Camp counselors will come from among the members of the Pan-Fork churches. The Pan-Fork Encampment has been cleaned up and repaired since it was damaged by a tornado last month, although the four buildings which were destroyed were not replaced before this camp.

One of the older buildings will be used as a tabernacle and other existing houses will take care of this year's needs, Rev. Earnest said.

Mistletoe Express Begins Service to Wellington

The Mistletoe Express Service, with headquarters in Oklahoma City, has been granted authority by the Interstate Commerce Commission to serve Wellington, and Don Manuel of Don's Texaco Station will serve as local agent.

Here to open service last week was R. G. Bannister, district supervisor, of Oklahoma City.

Mistletoe is an express carrier operating on a set schedule, serving more than 500 towns and cities in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas. It has been in operation since 1931.

Bannister pointed out that his company offers Wellington overnight express service from Tulsa, Oklahoma City, and Dallas, as well as Fort Worth, Wichita Falls and other points.

He explained that Lawton is the gathering point for express shipped from all these cities. It is sorted and placed on the right truck, and leaves at 3 a.m. Coming by way of Altus, and Hollis, the trucks will arrive in Wellington at 8 a.m.

To offer this overnight service, Bannister said that the trucks will leave Dallas at 7 p.m., Fort Worth at 8, and Oklahoma City at 11.

mid-1920s, when he enrolled in McMurry College, Abilene, that he attended at intervals for six years. At the same time he was pastor of the Abilene Methodist Circuit and other churches of that area.

Rev. Damron was pastor of Trinity Methodist Church three times, from two to four years each, and the couple lived a total of nine years in the Trinity parsonage. They first came here in 1932, when the Methodist Circuit was made up of a group of small rural churches.

The present Trinity church building was once the Quail Methodist Church, built by Rev. Damron during one of his pastorates there. Nor was this the only place at which he built, for he has a number of churches or parsonages to his credit during his long pastorate.

Other pastorates he served were at Zibach, Dunn, Rochester, Odell and Toll.

While he was pastor of Southland, near Lubbock, Rev. and Mrs. Damron were awarded a certificate for outstanding rural service to their church.

He was chosen to attend the Commission of Town and Country Work of the Methodist Church of College Station.

Rev. Damron was superintended at the age of 65 and he and Mrs. Damron returned here, making their home at their farm several years before moving into town.

Funeral services were conducted at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the First Methodist Church, with the Rev. Ellis Todd, pastor, and the Rev. O. A. McBrayer of Lubbock officiating. Burial was in the North Wellington Cemetery under the di-

Two Injured in Accident

Two Plainview men employed on the Samnorwood Water Supply Corp., line construction project were injured Saturday afternoon, July 3, when their pickup truck missed a bridge and fell about eight feet into a dry draw bed.

The accident occurred southwest of Samnorwood on FM road 1036.

James Earl Brake, 52, a passenger in the pickup, was given emergency treatment at Shamrock and transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where his condition was still reported as critical early this week.

He was reported to have received severe face lacerations and chest injuries.

Bill Conklin, 31, listed as the driver of the truck, was treated in Shamrock General Hospital for similar but less serious injuries and was reported as having been released.

Investigating officers said the truck was traveling west on a dirt road and landed on its right side in the creek bed without hitting the bridge. The occupants were trapped in the vehicle about 15 minutes before the wreckage was found.

Both men are employees of the Conklin Brothers Construction Company of Plainview.
