Lance resignation cuts into campaigning

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

NORTH OAKS, Minn. — Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro were reviewing strategy after the embarrassing departure of Bert Lance as general chairman of their Democratic presidential campaign 19 days after he took the job.

The resignation Thursday of Lance — whose appointment was supposed to help the ticket in the South — tarnished a successful southern swing that the presidential and vice presidential nominees had completed earlier in the day.

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro were meeting today at Mondale's suburban Minneapolis home before she returned to New York for the weekend. Neither had public appearances scheduled through the weekend.

Mondale had issued a statement Thursday night saying he regretfully was accepting the resignation of his "friend and advisor," Lance, who was forced to step down as former President Jimmy Carter's budget director amid allegations of irregularities in his private banking business in Georgia.

"I have become a major focus of the campaign, through the efforts of different people raising once again old charges which have been fully resolved through our system established by the Constitution of the United States," Lance said in his resignation letter to Mondale.

"I want to be a part of a successful effort in your election as president of the United States, not the focus to divert attention away from substantive issues which are so important to this campaign," said Lance.

"I regret Bert's decision, but I respect it," Mondale said in his statement. "In recent days he has been subjected to some very tough and adverse publicity. ... Bert and his family have been hurt by helping me."

Lance met earlier Thursday in New York with Robert Beckel, who is Mondale's campaign manager.

Back in Minnesota Thursday night, Beckel took responsibility for having "terribly underestimated" the adverse reaction to Lance's appointment.

But Beckel insisted, "I think the judgment that Bert Lance should join this campaign was the right one."

Lance's appointment on the eve of the Democratic National Convention last month in San Francisco drew sharp protests from party leaders, who pointed out that he had been a close aide to Carter, whom Mondale served as vice president.

Lance and three others were indicted in 1979 on charges of bank fraud and conspiracy arising from allegations of false statements, false entries and misapplication of loans related to hundreds of overdrafts and loans totaling $20 million to the four men, their friends and members of their families.

Lance was acquitted on nine of 12 charges in 1980, with the jury deadlocked on the remaining three counts. Those counts later were dropped by federal prosecutors.

Some Democratic officials said that appointing Lance risked reviving old allegations that could hurt the Mondale campaign.

Lance's appointment was arranged hastily one week prior to the Democratic National Convention after Mondale considered, then dropped a plan to install Lance as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Party officials protested that possibility, and Mondale named Lance general campaign chairman.

Mondale made the appointment in an effort to appeal to the South, where he is hoping to cut heavily into President Reagan's 1980 sweep of the region.

Even after Lance was installed as general chairman, the protests continued and there were suggestions, including one from House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., that the Georgia state Democratic Party chairman, play only a regional role in Mondale's campaign.

Bomb rocks Indian airport

Associated Press

MADRAS, India — A bomb that exploded in a suitcase at the Madras international airport collapsed a section of the terminal and killed at least 25 people, officials and witnesses said today.

At least 15 people reportedly were hospitalized with injuries in the blast late Thursday, which blew out one wall of Meenambakkam Airport's customs hall and caused the ceiling of the arrival lounge to cave in.

About 30 people were waiting for a flight to the Persian Gulf country of Abu Dhabi when the blast occurred, officials said.

But it was not known how many people were in the international arrivals lounge, the customs section or other adjacent areas when the bomb exploded, blowing debris to the edge of a runway and reducing a 30-yard portion of the building to rubble.

Rescue workers had recovered 18 bodies by midday, according to United News of India, but witnesses saw at least seven more. Some of the bodies were dismembered, and a leg dangled from an overhead girder.

Unofficial but reliable sources said airport authorities received three anonymous telephone calls warning that a bomb would blow up, but the airport was not evacuated.

K.K. Gulati, general manager of the Madras airport, said bomb threats are frequent — as many as one or two a week — but they have always proved in the past to be hoaxes.

Airport officials, asking not to be identified by name, said the warning calls may have been placed by an unidentified man who bought a ticket for a flight to Sri Lanka, but did not get on the plane.

Officials said the bomb evidently was in a piece of luggage that was destined for Air Lanka flight 122, which left Madras for Colombo at 7:20 P.M.

Hispanic vote wooed

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale and running-mate Geraldine Ferraro courted the Hispanic vote in a campaign swing through Texas.

"I'm not saying let's win for myself and Geraldine. I'm saying let's win it for us," he told a heavily Mexican-American crowd gathered Thursday for a rally at El Mercado, San Antonio's marketplace.

Mondale had Mayor Henry Cisneros by his side, describing the former vice president as "our hermano" (our brother).

"Walter Mondale has been a brother to this city for a very long time," said the mayor, who interviewed with Mondale for the vice presidential spot on the ticket.

As a senator in the 1960s, Mondale worked for bilingual education and "as a vice president, did an outstanding job of representing the interests of the working people," Cisneros said.

Mondale, who threw away his speech after part of it blew away, told the Hispanics in the crowd of about 2,500, "It's never been what we can do for you.

"It's what Hispanics can do for this country if we give them the chance," he said, his voiced drowned out by applause and shouts.

Mondale pooh-poohed predictions by a pollster that the Democratic ticket cannot win in Texas.

"Mark White said that's the same pollster who said Bill Clements would be re-elected," the former vice president said.

Clements, a Republican, was beaten by White in 1982.

White, who traveled with Mondale and Ferraro on their two-day trip through Texas, told the crowd, "After seeing the enthusiasm for Geraldine Ferraro today and yesterday in Texas, I have one thing to say: 'Watch out George Bush.'"

"Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro are here to let Texans know they are here to give us back our government," he said.

Mrs. Ferraro nearly stole the show from Mondale by devoting much of her speech to Texas issues.

Promising to return to Texas during the campaign, Mrs. Ferraro said she liked Texans because they are "fair, competent, can-do people."

"You really know how to pick leaders," she said, naming Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, White, and U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio.

She also gave a plug to Democratic Senate nominee Lloyd Doggett.

Reagan to drop two lesser Polish sanctions

Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Buoyed by Poland's amnesty for political prisoners, President Reagan is dropping two of the lesser sanctions imposed in 1981 after the government crackdown on the Solidarity union.

A formal announcement was expected today.

Reagan, who is vacationing here at his mountaintop ranch, has decided to resume scientific and cultural exchanges with Poland and allow the Polish national airline, LOT, to resume scheduled flights to the United States, according to an administration official, who spoke Thursday night on condition that he not be identified.

The president apparently will not restore so-called "most-favored nation" trading status to the communist government, will not disturb the refusal of new credits and, for the moment, will not support Poland's application for membership in the International Monetary Fund.

The official said, however, the United States may drop its opposition to Polish IMF membership later. "We will look at the performance and will conider IMF downstream," he said.

"I think it will be considered sympathetically — that is not a guarantee — and I think the president feels strongly that performance" will decide the issue, he said.

Rebels hold about 100 hostages in Salvadoran bank

SOYAPANGO, El Salvador — Heavily armed leftist guerrillas held about 100 hostages in a bank today while considering a government offer of temporary asylum in exchange for release of the captives.

The rebels seized the bank Thursday in an apparent robbery attempt, killing a guard in the process. Witnesses said there were six gunmen, armed with rifles, pistols and grenades.

The guerrillas later released three children and seven women, and early today — as troops surrounded the bank and helicopters circled overhead — they appeared ready to release the other captives in exchange for asylum at the Spanish Embassy and safe conduct out of the country.

However, the Spanish Foreign Ministry said Spain would shelter the guerrillas in its San Salvador embassy "when and only when a third country has agreed to grant them asylum outside El Salvador."

"Acceptance of a third country to receive the guerrillas is the sine qua non of Spain's agreement to provide temporary protection," spokesman Santiago Salas said today in Madrid.

A Red Cross official at the bank scene said earlier that Spain's conditions apparently had caused a "deadlock" in the talks this morning.

Col. Rinaldo Golcher, director of the Treasury Police, said Spanish officials and the Salvadoran Foreign Ministry were working out details of the proposed asylum arrangement. He also told reporters the rebels had agreed to release the hostages and leave behind "a large sum" of money they had stolen from the main vault during an aborted holdup.

Witnesses said the rebels seized the Banco Agricola, a state development bank, at about 11:30 a.m. Thursday after shooting and killing the 53-year-old guard, Jose Mauro Gonzalez.

They said the six guerrillas identified themselves as fighters of the Armed Forces of National Resistance.

About 100 soldiers and civil defense guards with submachine guns and automatic rifles immediately surrounded the building in Soyapango, a working-class suburb of San Salvador.

About 2½ hours later, a Red Cross team evacuated two girls, ages 5 and 6, and a 9-year-old boy from the bank. Witnesses said they were the only children involved.

Later, as talks progressed with the government; the guerrillas released a pregnant woman, and later other women who complained of illness.

Gloria Mirna Diaz, the pregnant woman released, told reporters there were six guerrillas and about 100 hostages inside, including 45 bank employees.

She said all the captives were in good health and the guerrillas "have been treating the hostages correctly."

Guerrillas apparently arrived at the bank in a gray Mercedes-Benz. Bomb experts defused a dynamite bomb found inside the car, parked about 80 yards from the bank.

A guerrilla spokesman said in an interview with radio station YSKL that the rebels belonged to the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the umbrella group of the National Resistance and four other guerrilla groups. The organization is known by its Spanish initials, FMLN.

July's unemployment climbs to 7.5 percent

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON — Civilian unemployment climbed to 7.5 percent in July, the first gain in 20 months, as 413,000 Americans joined the jobless rolls, the government reported today.

The 0.4 percentage point gain in the seasonally adjusted rate, the first increase since unemployment went from 10.4 percent to 10.7 percent from October to November 1982, increased the number of the unemployed from 8,130,000 to 8,543,000, the Labor Department said.

At the same time, the total number of Americans with jobs, which hit a record 105.7 million in June, fell by 353,000 to 105.4 million.

Deborah Klein, a Bureau of Labor Statistics analyst, said:

"What it seems to be is a reversal of everything which took place the month before, and took many people by surprise, which suggests that (June's) improvement was somewhat overstated."

"What is unclear at the moment is what this is really signalling," Ms. Klein said. "What it says is, We're not exactly sure of the trend."

The increase was the steepest one-month gain since joblessness rose from 9.5 percent to 9.9 percent from June to July 1982.

In advance of today's report, several private analysts said the days of plunging unemployment were numbered and forecast only minimal improvement for the rest of the year.

In February 1983, when the nation experienced its first significant drop from high unemployment, President Reagan hailed the news, saying the nation was "on the road to recovery."

But the president cautioned then that "we may see some ups and downs on the way."

An alternative rate, which combines the 113.9-million member civilian labor force with the 1.7 million members of the military stationed in the United States, rose by 0.4 percentage point last month to 7.4 percent.

STATE

Thunderstorms rumbled across portions of East and West Texas before dawn today as an upper level storm system centered over Arkansas continued to trigger scattered storm activity.

The showers in West Texas extended from near Guadalupe Pass northeast to the South Plains. Other scattered thunderstorms developed from north of Longview to near Shreveport, La.

High clouds hovered over Central and far West Texas while low clouds dotted northeastern sections of the state and the Lower Rio Grande Valley. The rest of the state reported mostly fair skies.

Pre-dawn temperatures were generally in the 70s. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 68 at Longview to 80 at Laredo.

Winds were mostly from the south at 5 to 10 mph. Northeasterly breezes were noted along with the shower activity in Northeast Texas.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies with widely scattered thundershowers through Saturday. Most of the shower activity was expected to end late tonight, followed by scattered showers Saturday in Northeast Texas and southern portions of West Texas.

Along the coast, scattered thunderstorms, along with southeasterly winds near 15 knots, were possible through Saturday.

NATION

Thunderstorms packing heavy rain soaked much of the nation today from the Dakota hills to the Florida Keys, while flash flood watches were posted in southwest Alabama and a thick, warm fog enveloped parts of the Northeast.

A surge of tropical moisture from the Gulf of Mexico was blamed for another night of torrential rain in the Gulf Coast states and much of the South, with high seas and intense lightning reported today in the Florida Keys.

Man survives near-decapitation

Associated Press

TUPELO, Miss. — A 74-year-old man — his head half cut off when he fell on his chainsaw — got mad "and just threw that saw off," dug himself from beneath a fallen tree and calmly went to a hospital, where doctors called his survival "a miracle."

With one leg broken and his head dangling by arteries and his spine, Forthman Murff finally received treatment an hour after his accident.

"There's no way he should have lived through that," said Dr. Roger Lowery, an ear, nose and throat specialist. "The whole thing is amazing."

Murff, released from the hospital Wednesday, recalled how he was cutting timber in an isolated area May 26 when the freak accident occurred.

"I cut one big tree that fell toward the north, and I got back out of the way," the Monroe County resident said. "Then all of a sudden, a down draft pulled a limb from another tree 80 or 90 feet high. It fell on my shoulder and knocked me about 10 feet and into a ditch."

At the same time, the falling tree pulled down another tree and it fell on Murff's leg, breaking it and crushing the bones in his foot, he said. As he was going down, he fell on his still-running chainsaw, which cut into his neck.

"It made me mad, and I just threw that saw off," Murff said in an interview Monday. "I looked over and saw a stream of blood about the size of my little finger. It wasn't coming in spurts, so I thought I might have a chance."

Remaining calm, he dug himself from beneath the fallen tree and hobbled to his truck, his windpipe, esophagus and other vital parts cut clean through.

He drove a half-mile to the nearest house, where a neighbor took him to the hospital in nearby Amory. From there, he was transferred to the North Mississippi Medical Center.

Besides severing the windpipe and esopnagus, the chainsaw cut through muscles and three of four jugular veins, Lowery said. Only the cervical spine and carotid arteries were left intact.

"Initially we had to put everything back together," Lowery said. "It cut through his larynx, and he had swelling through his vocal chords."

Sawdust embedded in the wounds sparked an infection. For a while, Murff had trouble breathing and swallowing. He continues to speak and breathe with the aid of a tracheotomy, but Lowery said Murff "probably will eventually be normal."

Murff believes he survived the accident because the Lord needed him to take care of his ailing wife.

Lowery said that he's seen Murff's kind of injury before, "but never anyone who survived.... Just think about walking one football field and a half with your head half cut off.

"It's a miracle he's alive," Lowery said. "To think he was an hour away from medical care. It could have happened to someone out here in the parking lot and they could have died."

He said the assault was done "to impress people with our struggle and the struggle of the FMLN."

"Please, please tell the authorities to pull out all the military people from the area!" one woman hostage said in a telephone interview with the radio station Thursday. "There are approximately 125 people, and they include women and children and pregnant women. Two pregnant women have fainted."

Golcher arrived with two American men shortly before Mrs. Diaz was released. One of the Americans identified himself as Capt. Emilio Gonzalez of the U.S. Defense Attache's office. He said he was not involved and had come along to observe. The other American did not identify himself.

Earlier in the day, police had appeared to be readying an assault on the bank.

Soviet police beat Marine

MOSCOW (AP) — Plainclothes and uniformed police beat a U.S. Marine attached to the consulate in Leningrad and then held him in a police station for two hours, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

An embassy source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Marine was attacked by six men who drove up to the sidewalk on which he was walking. Three men held the Marine as the others punched and kicked him, the source said.

The embassy spokesman, Jaroslav Verner, said the Marine did not require hospitalization after Thursday's attack and that officials believe he did not suffer any permanent injury. Verner said he assumed the Marine was not in uniform because he was off duty at the time of the attack.

The Marine's name was being withheld pending notification of his relatives, Verner said.

Verner said the attack took place on a Leningrad street early Thursday morning. He said the embassy had lodged a protest with the Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow and with the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

"This inexcusable act on the part of the Soviet police has been vigorously protested both in Washington and by the embassy here in Moscow," he said.

"The embassy cannot understand how Soviet authorities can allow this and other similar incidents which interfere with the normal working conditions of U.S. officials in Moscow."

Valentin Kamenev, deputy head of the press department of the Soviet Foreign Ministry, rejected the American protest and said Soviet authorities had in turn strongly protested the behavior of the Marine.

Senate panel revives chances for aid package to El Salvador

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — One day after the House turned its back on President Reagan's request for $117 million in emergency military aid for El Salvador, a Senate panel has given new life to the proposal.

The Senate Appropriations Committee gave swift approval Thursday to a move by Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis. tacking the money onto a 1984 emergency money bill.

Kasten called the move vital, a way to ensure the success of Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte's fledgling administration.

"We feel that since Duarte is now exerting leadership and control over the military, they need (the resources) to move forward," Kasten told reporters.

The maneuver sets up an election-year confrontation between the two chambers over their differing views on military aid to the embattled nation, but Kasten said he hoped sufficient bipartisan support would ultimately sell the plan.

He said the additional money was earmarked to provide the Salvadoran forces, battling leftist rebels, with transportation gear such as helicopters, trucks and jeeps.

The Democrat-controlled House approved its $5.4 billion version of the spending measure on Wednesday, after avoiding an attempt by Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., to tack the $117 million in military money onto the bill. No vote on Kemp's proposal was taken and it was ruled out of order.

In the Senate, Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said he expected the Senate to take action on its version of the omnibus money measure early next week.

So far this year, the United States has provided El Salvador with $126 million in military aid.

Although President Reagan is expected to receive nearly all of the $132 million he has requested in military funds for that embattled nation for 1985, critics of his Central American policy have adamantly opposed adding any more to the pot this year.

One of the chief critics of the president, Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said that to provide the new funds for the remaining two months in the fiscal year "would be thrusting money down their throats."

But Kasten said the funds amounted to a "down payment" by Congress on the administration's proposals to enact the recommendations of the Kissinger Commission. Kasten is the chairman of the panel's foreign operations subcommittee.

Many of the administration's proposals were contained in the Senate's foreign aid bill, but Kasten said prospects for passing that measure appeared dim in an election year so it was decided to deal with some of the proposals in the emergency funds measure.

Kasten's plan was approved without any debate. Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, the ranking Democrat on Kasten's subcommittee, said he would not fight the proposal in the committee but expected to do so on the Senate floor.

The panel headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger proposed long-range policy for the region and recommended a five-year, $8 billion economic commitment to the region that many on Capitol Hill found too lavish.

For the Central American region overall, the Senate panel approved $367 million in economic and $197 million in military aid. The House, in contrast, approved only $106 million in economic assistance and $25 million in military funding for the region.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the House Intelligence Committee said Thursday that the United States lacks a "smoking gun" proving Nicaragua's role in arms shipments to leftist Salvadoran guerrillas, although the circumstantial evidence "is convincing."

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., made the comment while urging the House to again bar CIA covert aid to 15,000 rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government. He argued that the "senseless war" had interdicted few arms, while trying instead to oust the Sandinista regime in Managua.

JOBS

In testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Commissioner of Labor Statistics Janet L. Norwood said, "The July data are difficult to interpret. ... These are clearly not a consistent set of data for an evaluation of current labor market trends."

Mrs. Norwood noted a conflict between two separate measures of labor market health in today's report — a survey of households and a companion survey of payrolls.

The household survey, used in compiling the unemployment rate, showed that total employment dropped by 353,000. But the business survey, reported by the bureau but not used in the jobless rate calculation, showed that total payroll jobs rose by 300,000 to 94.4 million.

She said that seasonal adjustment, a statistical process designed to filter out such variations as weather and school terms, which occur at the same time each year, "is especially difficult during these summer months."

Although the civilian jobless rate rose to 7.5 percent, returning to the level of last May and matching the rate when Reagan took office in January 1981, the total number of the unemployed, at 8.5 million, was far below the post-Depression peak of more than 12 million in December 1982.

The BLS said that the increase in July unemployment occurred "primarily among adult women, whose jobless rate returned to the level that had essentially prevailed between February and May" — at 6.9 percent.

The jobless rates among the various population groups rose across-the-board, with the largest increase suffered by blacks, whose unemployment rate jumped to 16.9 percent, up from 15 percent.

Some economists, saying the nation was nearing "full employment," have asserted that, with more than 6 million jobs created since the depths of the 1981-82 recession, the nation was coming close to absorbing the pool of skilled eligible workers.

These economists maintain that the unemployment rate might not improve significantly in the near future because those remaining in the jobless category consist largely of people lacking adequate education and needing job-skill training. In many urban ares, a large number of such people are under-educated, relatively unskilled blacks.

In July, for instance, the unemployment among black teenagers soared from 34.3 percent to 42.4 percent, the report said.

For the other population groups, these were the July unemployment rates:

—Adult men, 6.5 percent, up from 6.3 percent.
—Teenagers, 18.3, up from 17.6.
—Whites, 6.4, up from 6.1.
—Hispanics, 10.6, up from 10.0.

Robert Gough, senior vice president of Data Resources, Inc., a forecasting firm in Lexington, Mass., said on Thursday that "the (employment gains) become more marginal the further you go along in the expansion, and they tend to be less and less in nature,"

"You're not going to see big improvements in the labor force," Gough said in a telephone interview.

Several other economists predicted that the civilian unemployment rate would level off, pointing to the fact that the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, announced earlier this month, fell 0.9 percent in June. Some analysts said they welcomed the decline in that index as a signal of the needed slowdown rather than the approach of any new recession.

Hurricane tracking should resume soon

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — An important weather satellite is being nudged eastward across the heavens to a spot where it can photograph all of the continental United States, thus restoring some of the hurricane-tracking ability lost by the breakdown of another satellite.

While the GOES-west satellite is being moved — at the rate of 975 miles a day, 22,300 miles above Earth — the accuracy of any tornado or severe thunderstorm or flash flood watches will be reduced, says the National Weather Service. Its coverage of the central Pacific will gradually be lost.

The availability of satellite data over the tropical Atlantic and Caribbean, at the start of the hurricane season, also will be restricted and the weather service will have to rely on data, taken far less frequently, by satellites in polar orbit.

That was the testimony before a Senate subcommittee Thursday by Richard Hallgren, director of the weather service, and John McElroy, who heads its satellite programs.

GOES is an acronym for "geostationary operational environmental satellite." The satellites are positioned high over the equator, appearing to remain over one spot, and taking pictures of the United States every 30 minutes. The photographs are vital to forecasters who track the movement of clouds and winds.

The GOES-east satellite, which pairs with its twin to provide the weather picture used by newspapers and television, broke down on Sunday because of two burned out light bulbs that cost a few hundred dollars each.

District removes asbestos from 11 schools

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Carolyn Ransome never thought much about asbestos until her 13-year-old son John came home from school one day, saying the ceiling in his classroom was crumbling.

Although school officials insisted there was nothing to worry about, Ms. Ransome decided to tutor John at home for the final three months of the school year. "No way would I let him go back in that school," she declared.

About 150 other parents also took their children out of city schools for the last week in May, officials said. All cited the danger posed by asbestos used in construction of the city's school buildings.

In what school officials say is one of the largest projects of its kind, Philadelphia is beginning to rid its 260 schools of the material, which is known to cause cancer and other respiratory diseases. But officials say they are only beginning to understand the magnitude of the problems caused by asbestos, a common building material for 40 years until the discovery of its hazards in the late 1970s.

THIS SUMMER, workers in white protective suits, face masks and respirators are collecting and hauling away asbestos from 11 schools that are attended by about 20,000 of the district's 200,000 students.

Over the next three years, Philadelphi schools will spend $17.7 million on the asbestos cleanup.

The decision to close John's school for the summer didn't come soon enough for Ms. Ransome, who was charged by the district with parental neglect for violating the state compulsory attendance law. A hearing on that charge is scheduled in September.

School officials said the asbestos levels were within federal standards. But those standards are so outdated that a contractor may remove visible asbestos from a building but leave invisible fibers in the air that would make the school more dangerous, according to Anthony Natale, president of the Duall Corp. of Mount Laurel, N.J., the contractor who is cleaning up one of the schools.

THE FEDERAL Environmental Protection Agency does not require that asbestos be removed from school buildings, although it does set standards for inspection and posting notices of the presence of asbestos. Last March, the Philadelphia district was fined for violating notice requirements.

In response to pressure from a union that represents maintenance workeres in school buildings, the EPA agreed last March to revise its asbestos standards. The agency also is seeking congressional approval for a $50 million program to help with the cleanup.

As many as 650,000 teachers and other workers and three million children are exposed to asbestos every school day in 14,000 institutions, according to the National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers union.

Duall's crew of 22 is removing the asbestos from the Webster Elementary School in northeast Philadelphia, a project that will take about six to eight weeks.

First, the rooms are sealed with polyethylene so they resemble the inside of a large plastic bag. Workers enter through an airlock that contains shower units in which they change into protective clothing.

THE ROOMS ARE soaked with water, and the area becomes as humid as a rain forest as workers slosh through and collect the debris. The asbestos is hauled through another exit in bags or cardboard drums, then bagged again and hauled to a dump in New Jersey.

Contaminated air is sucked into the sealed area and filtered. Later, the workers check the air and dust to make certain it is clean.

Asbestos, which comes from a Greek word meaning "indestructible," was discovered more than 2,000 years ago and was developed for commercial use in the early 1900s. By 1936, it was a common construction material.

But 40 years later, asbestos use was curtailed by national health warnings that it could cause asbestosis, a disease that destroys the lungs; mesothelioma, a quick-spreading cancer caused by mutating cells, and other diseases.

There have been no confirmed deaths of teachers in the Philadelphia District as a result of asbestos, said Martin Schuman, president of the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers. "But there's really no way to know," he added.

THE UNION HIRED a consultant, who found that asbestos levels at some schools were "extremely hazardous."After the school board's own consultant reached similar conclusions, the district put its removal program in high gear.

Poverty rate increases; Family income rises

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Census Bureau Thursday reported that 35.3 million Americans were living in poverty last year, a slight increase over 1982, but median family real income increased for the first time in four years, up $390 to $24,580.

"The poverty rate was 15.2 percent, not a statistically significant change from 15.0 percent in 1982," the bureau said.

Median family income grew 4.9 percent between 1982 and 1983, but when adjusted for inflation the result was a more modest 1.6 percent. This gain follows declines of 1.4 percent in 1982, 3.5 percent in 1981 and 5.5 percent in 1980.

The poverty threshhold for a family of four in 1983 was $10,178, up from $9,862 in 1982 when 34.4 million persons were considered below the line.

The findings were based on a March nationwide survey of approximately 62,000 households conducted by the bureau, an arm of the Commerce Department.

Under the official definition of poverty, no non-cash benefits paid by the federal or other governmental units are counted. Accordingly, the bureau issued a second report Thursday estimating the number of persons in poverty if the value of such non-cash benefits as food stamps, school lunches, public housing, Medicare, Medicaid, low-income energy assistance and child nutrition programs were included.

Using three different valuation techniques, the bureau found that the poverty population would decline to 23.7 million, 30.0 million or 30.2 million or to rates of 10.2 percent, 12.9 percent or 13.0 percent if non-cash benefits were counted.

The income survey showed that the real median income for white families ($25,760) increased 1.4 percent while black ($14,510) and Hispanic ($16,960) families showed no statistically significant change over 1982.

Families with a college-educated householder did better, recording a real increase in median income of 2.6 percent to $40,520.

Married-couple family income rose 1.6 percent to $27,290 while the median for families with a female householder, no husband present, was $11,790, not significantly different from 1982.

Real median income for men was up 1.6 percent to $14,630, reversing a three-year trend of declines. Women's income was $6,320, up 4 percent.

The bureau said poverty rates among whites, blacks and Hispanics showed no significant change and reported the number of persons in poverty increased by approximately 900,000 among those under 45 years of age, but stayed about the same for those older than that.

The elderly have been faring better in recent years, according to the bureau.

"Between 1980 and 1983, the poverty rate for persons 65 and over fell from 15.7 percent to 14.1 percent while the rate for all persons rose from 13.0 to 15.2 percent," it said.

Months at sea creates anxiety, touches hearts of Navy fathers

ABOARD THE USS KITTY HAWK (AP) — Through choice and duty, Gustavo Vejar has spent much of the last three years aboard the USS Kitty Hawk, a floating home and office that he easily tolerated and sometimes even liked.

That was until his second child was born and he joined the ranks of other Navy personnel who became fathers while at sea.

Vejar, a resident alien from Mazatlan, Mexico, practiced silent self-control each day since he learned in India on May 30 that his daughter, Edelmira, was born three weeks earlier.

He knew when he left for the western Pacific on that Friday the 13th in January that his wife, who speaks no English, would give birth while he was at sea.

Before a tearful reunion Wednesday at the North Island Naval Air Station in Coronado, Calif., Vejar had not talked with his wife since a stop in Hawaii three weeks ago.

His status as a new father put him among the first to leave the aircraft carrier on Wednesday morning. He walked quickly along the rope restraining anxious wives and families come to meet the returning crew of 5,300.

He saw no trace of wife Edelmira and the two children. Vejar hoped aloud that a friend had driven them the 120 miles from Los Angeles to San Diego. What about his 2-year-old son. Would Gus Jr. remember him?

"When I left, we were buddies," Vejar said. "He would call me 'Poppa.' We would play all the time. Oh, I hope he remembers."

Chaplain Commander Don Den Dulk deals with the Gus Vejars of the Kitty Hawk. On this mission, he flew home from Subic Bay in the Philippines to San Diego to meet with the 127 new mothers. The questions from each parent-to-be, he said, are identical.

"Does he still want me? Does he still need me? Does he still find me attractive and, most important, does he still love me?" Den Dulk said.

"He has the same anxiety but won't express it as readily. I'm not trying to cast stereotypes, but that's the way I've found it," he said.

Vejar failed to spot his family in two passes of the line. A brisk walk to a bay of telephones at the end of the dock and he dialed his Los Angeles home. A sister-in-law said Edelmira had left the city for San Diego at 6 a.m. She was wearing a blue dress.

The search of the burgeoning crowd narrowed. Three minutes later, he spotted his friend, who led him to Edelmira. Tears flowed as the couple embraced and kissed. Vejar's eyes spotted his daughter, now almost three months old. Her big, brown eyes flashed, she smiled and gurgled.

Gus Jr. laid to rest his father's biggest fear with a single yelp. "Poppa!"

Hundreds storm center after reports of sex abuse

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of angry residents stormed a city-funded day care center, trapping workers inside, after authorities announced the arrest of three employees on sex-abuse charges involving 10 children and said it could be just "the tip of the iceberg."

News of the alleged rape and sodomy of children aged 4 to 8 in Praca Day Care Center triggered angry salvos from a prosecutor aimed at the city's Human Resources Administration for allegedly delaying reports of the incidents to authorities.

Defense rests; De Lorean won't testify

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former automaker John De Lorean sat silently as the defense rested in his 21-week cocaine trafficking trial without ever calling him to the witness stand. "We didn't want to prolong this circus," his lawyer said.

"We didn't think we needed him," attorney Howard Weitzman told reporters Thursday, moments after the dramatic finale of testimony in the highly celebrated trial.

"If I thought it was necessary to have Mr. De Lorean testify, we would have," said Weitzman. "We were not afraid to put him up there."

With the government offering no rebuttal witnesses, U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi scheduled final arguments for Monday. The case was expected to be submitted to the six-woman, six-man jury Tuesday or Wednesday.

De Lorean, 59, a former General Motors executive who launched his own sports car company in Northern Ireland, is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine to save the firm from bankruptcy. If convicted, he could face 67 years in prison.

The tall, silver-haired De Lorean was smiling as he left the courthouse with his wife, model Cristina Ferrare, at his side. He refused to comment on the decision for him not to testify in his own defense.

"I don't think John De Lorean has anything to defend against," said Weitzman. "He didn't do anything wrong. He's been through enough."

"We didn't want to prolong this circus," Weitzman said.

The end of the 10-day defense came after the most emotional moment of the trial — a fomer drug enforcement agent's struggle for composure on the witness stand as he fended off personal attacks and declared, "the government would go to any lengths to prosecute Mr. De Lorean."

Gerald V. Scotti fought back tears as he voiced his disenchantment with his former employer, the Drug Enforcement Administration, and a supervisor he once considered his friend.

Scotti was bristling from a prosecutor's questions about his broken marriage and financial problems when Weitzman, in re-direct questioning, triggered an emotional response.

He asked Scotti to whom he had confided his deepest problems. Scotti named his DEA supervisor, William Waters, a man he "admired and respected" and who assisted government prosecutors in the De Lorean case.

"And you understood it was in the strictest confidence?" asked Weitzman.

"Yes, sir" said Scotti, adding he now assumes Waters told his secrets to Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Perry for use in the trial.

"Does it kind of suprise you he would relay that information?" asked Weitzman.

"I'm not sure I know anymore," Scotti said.

There was a long pause during which Scotti put his head in his hand, gulped hard and sighed loudly in the hushed courtroom. When he spoke, his voice was breaking.

"I knew from a long way back the government would go to any lengths to prosecute Mr. De Lorean," he said. "But I thought there was a limit to it — a bottom to it. Now, I'm not so sure of that anymore."

Perry then rose and accused Scotti of having told virtually everyone in the DEA about his personal problems, not just Waters. Scotti left the DEA last year amid allegations of impropriety.

Farmer to appeal sentence

DAKOTA CITY, Iowa (AP) — A farmer sentenced to 60 days in jail for letting 167 cattle starve and freeze to death while he attended the Gator Bowl football game in Florida last year says he will appeal the sentence.

"I deeply regret that it happened," Warren Wood said before he was sentenced Thursday on 25 counts of cruelty to animals.

An autopsy on one animal indicated that it died of severe malnutrition. Wood maintained during the trial that his bank cut off financing last fall, making it impossible to buy feed.

The bank contended that it gave Wood the money.

Navy to post numbers

DENVER (AP) — The Navy has promised to post telephone numbers that will be answered around-the-clock on its torpedo shipments after a truck carrying the weapons crashed and local officials couldn't immediately find anyone familiar with them.

Mayor Federico Pena said Thursday the federal government was "grossly negligent" in responding to Wednesday's crash on Denver's busiest highway interchange, and asked President Reagan for an explanation.

It took more than an hour to locate the right authorities after the accident.

Officials ask CDC for help

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — State officials say they have asked the national Centers for Disease Control for help in finding the source of mysterious fumes that have caused nausea, dizziness and fainting in a state office building.

"We're scratching our heads," Dave St. Louis of the state Department of Environmental Quality said Thursday, one day after the 80-year-old Commerce Building was closed indefinitely.

Dick Kraus, spokesman for the state government's workers compensation insurer, said the agency is "very concerned about potential liability" for claims stemming from the illnesses.

Fisherman facing prison

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A Japanese fisherman who led authorities on a high-speed boat chase will be sentenced to one year in prison, the first criminal prosecution for violating the 200-mile U.S. fishing zone, officials said.

Kenji Yoshida pleaded guilty Thursday to endangering the lives of U.S. Coast Guardsmen who tried to apprehend him in U.S. waters in 1981, U.S. Attorney Michael Spaan announced.

The government agreed to drop four other charges stemming from the two-day, high-seas chase in which Yoshida's vessel, the Marunaka Maru No. 88, defied the Coast Guard's orders to halt.

Man dies from plague

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — One of seven people who have contracted the plague in New Mexico this year, a 70-year-old man, has died of the disease, authorities said.

The unidentified man, who died early Wednesday, became ill Sunday and entered a hospital Tuesday evening with the septicemic form of the plague, said Dr. Harry Hull, state epidemiologist.

Hull said septicemic plague victims are more likely to die because of the serious nature of the infection. Unlike the bubonic plague, which swells the lymph glands, the septicemic infection is confined to the blood, Hull said.

Officials break law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials broke the law by lobbying against a bill to legalize heroin as a painkiller for terminally ill cancer patients, the chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee says.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., made public Thursday a letter he sent to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, urging her "to direct your staff to cease immediately any such unlawful activities relative to this or any other legislation."

Dingell said federal law bars use of government funds for letters designed to influence legislation. He said his oversight and investigations subcommittee "possesses a letter, authored by a regional director and written on official stationary of the Department of Health and Human Services," urging the addressee to "act now" to help kill the Compassionate Pain Relief bill.

Stations to collect money

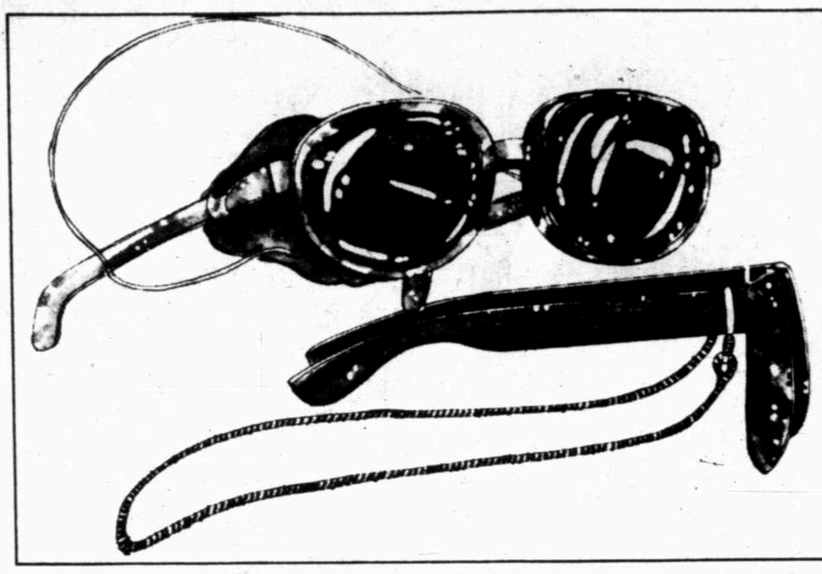

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radio stations that must install more powerful transmitters to overcome interference from Cuba will be able to collect more from the federal treasury to offset that expense under new guidelines issued by the Federal Communications Commission.

The commission said Thursday it is dropping the $250,000 ceiling on such payments as well as other restrictions imposed earlier at the urging of the United States Information Agency, which under law must defray such transmitter expenses made necessary by stepped up Cuban interference.

The Cubans say they will boost the power of their AM radio broadcasts to retaliate against the federally supported Radio Marti service, which plans to transmit to Cuba from the Florida Keys on a Voice of America frequency.

Getting tough

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has issued an ultimatum to parents in the state who are behind in their child support payments. What Mattox is saying should have been said a long time ago: They had better pay up or "I'll see them at the courthouse or I'll see them in jail."

Mattox's ultimatum is the culmination of years of non-payment of court-ordered child support. In fact, Mattox estimates that less than 25 percent of all court-ordered child support payments are being rendered in Texas. Furthermore, an official with the attorney general's Child Support Enforcement Division said that division has 179,838 cases. Those cases obviously represent only the tip of the non-support iceberg because the office concentrates on winning payment of support due to welfare recipients.

There is the moral aspect to child support. Both parents are responsible for the welfare of their siblings — whether or not they are both residing at home. A divorce degree doesn't cut one free from that moral obligation; in fact, it actually solidifies that obligation by bringing it under the protective cover of the law, in the interest of the welfare of the young.

That non-payment contributes to a significant social problem is obvious. The Texas Department of Community Affairs said in 1978 that one of every five children in the state lives in poverty with that criteria being determined by a Census Bureau guideline of $5,050 or less for a family of four.

Changes in the family structure, particularly increases in the divorce and inflation rates, during the past couple of decades have made payment of child support even more crucial if youngsters are going to receive the minimum basic care they need.

That hasn't been happening too consistently in Texas, evudebced by the Department of Community Affairs statistics, and now Mattox sounds as though he means business. That may irritate some who believe that government is already too involved in the affairs of the family. Not in this case. Non-payment of court-ordered child support is blatant disrespect for the law and civilized society.

Mattox is correct is getting tough.

Polls for democracy

George H. Gallup, who died recently in Switzerland, left a permanent mark on America and the world. He once called public opinion polls "one of the most useful instruments of democracy ever devised." And they are, if used with caution and an awareness of their limitations.

Poll results are no better than the questions asked and the answers given. There are countless ways to skew the results by concocting the questions and placing them in a continued context. And, as for the answers, there is no way to measure the degree of confidence established in a brief interview nor the amount of candor present or absent in the answers given.

Polls have an important function in society, and Gallup's statement about their value as "instruments of democracy" contains much truth. In a democracy like our own, the governing power resides in public opinion. Any instrument that gives valid expression to that power makes our system of government more responsive, more efficient and more just.

But, in advising our elected leaders, we also hold with Winston Churchill, who said: "Nothing is more dangerous than to live in the temperamental atmosphere of a Gallup Poll, always taking one's temperature. There is only one duty, only one safe course, and that is to try to be right."

Another View:

59 cents and falling

Time was — and it wasn't that far back — when feminists were making much of statistics showing working women were being paid 59 cents for each dollar earned by men. Appearing on buttons and bumper stickers, the two digits were a shorthand rallying cry for all who objected to the ingrained pay practices and prejudices that were responsible for this.

Women didn't know how lucky they were. As figures from the Census Bureau show, those were the good old days.

The average working male in 1979 earned $16,929, more than twice the $8,238 the average working woman was paid. Two years later, things were no better. A man with four years of college was earning $27,340 a year while his wife was likely to be pulling down just $10,860.

What accounts for this? Factor in experience, and the gap is still there. Forget, too, any idea that women lose their tenuous toehold on well-paying jobs in order to rear families. The Bureau of Labor Statistics put that myth to rest with its report that 47.7 percent of all women with children ages 3 and under were either working or looking for work in March, the latest month for which figures are available. The percentage was greater still — about 60 percent — for mothers with preschool or school-age children.

About all that's left to explain this gap is the fact that so many of the jobs traditionally occupied by women do not command pay equal to those held by men with similar education and skills. Small wonder that pay equity legislation, cumbersome though it may be, is regarded more and more as the only hope of launching a beachhead against these last barriers to full equality for women employed by government agencies. In the rush to equity, though, other time-honored labor levers should not be overlooked. Unions and professional associations may yet perform a key role in giving women their full due at the workplace.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 3, 1923, Calvin Coolidge was sworn in as the 30th President of the United States, following the death of Warren G. Harding.

Five years ago: The financially-strapped Chrysler Corp. proposed a two-year wage-benefit freeze.

One year ago: President Reagan's apology to a women's group appeared to backfire. In apologizing for a canceled White House tour, the president said, "If it wasn't for women, us men would still be walking around in skin suits carrying clubs."

Today's birthdays: Mississippi Sen. John Stennis is 83. Author Leon Uris is 60. Singer Tony Bennett is 58. Actor Martin Sheen is 44.

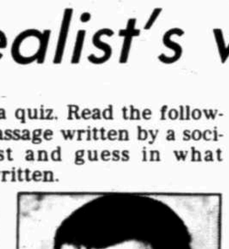

Thought for today: "Life is like an onion; you peel it off one layer at a time, and sometimes you weep" — Carl Sandburg, American poet and author (1878-1967).

CHARLEY REESE

Idealist's view sees only 'ying'

Here's a quiz. Read the following passage written by a sociologist and guess in what year it was written.

Charley Reese

"We gradually observe a general loosening of morality, a disappearance of logic from thought and action, a morbid irritability and vacillation of public opinion, a relaxation of character. Offenses are treated with a frivolous or sentimental indulgence which encourages rascals of all kinds. People lose the power of moral indignation, and accustom themselves to despise it as something banal, unadvanced, inelegant, unintelligent. Deeds that would formerly have disqualified a man forever from public life are no longer an obstacle in his career, so that suspicious and tainted personalities find it possible to rise in responsible positions...Nobody is shocked by the most absurd proposals, measures and fashions, and folly rules in legislation, administration, domestic and foreign politics...Everybody harps upon his 'rights' and rebels against every limitation of his arbitrary desires by law or custom. Everybody tries to escape from the compulsion of discipline and shake off the burden of duty."

I think that is a remarkable description of the present, but Max Nordeau wrote it in 1912. He was describing a society dominated by mattoids which are people of unsound mind verging on insanity.

If anyone doubts a general loosening of morality, I invite them to watch "Saturday Night Live," pick any five movies and see them or read any copy of such nationally successful magazines as "Playboy" and "Penthouse."

If anyone doubts the disappearance of logic in thought and action, I invite them to pay close attention to the presidential campaign speeches and to the actions of Congress.

If anyone doubts the irritability and vacillation of public opinion, I refer them to the public opinion polls and to the rapid rise and disappearance of celebrities (where is Tiny Tim?)

If ayone doubts that offenses are treated with frivolous or sentimental indulgence, I invite them to observe the death penalty debate. The Miami Herald recently published a letter to the editor from an educated reader who castigated the San Diego SWAT team for killing the man who committed mass murder at McDonald's.

If anyone doubts that moral indignation has come to be despised, I direct their attention to the unceasing criticism of the Rev. Jerry Falwell and the Moral Majority as well as at Christian activists in general.

If anyone doubts that deeds which formerly would have barred a man from public office are no longer an obstacle in his career, I direct their attention to Sen. Ted Kennedy, Reps. Gary Studds and Dan Crane, and Richard Nixon who is undergoing resurrection No. 3.

If anyone doubts that nobody is shocked by the most absurd proposals, measures and fashions, I refer tham to their daily newspaper.

If anyone doubts that folly rules in legislation, administraion, domestic and foreign politics, I refer them to Lebanon, the deficits and the U.S. tax code for starters.

If anyone doubts that everydoby harps on his "rights" and rebels against every limitation of his arbitrary desires by law or custom, I refer them to the American Civil Liberties Union, to women's rights and to gay rights and to students' rights and to the Democratic National Convention.

All of the above is the bad news. Now here's the good news. Remember that Nordeau was writing in 1912. What does that tell us? It tells us that the age is always more golden in the past. Nordeau was convinced apparently that the United States had gone to hell in a hurry by 1912.

Nordeau, like most Jeremiahs, was an idealist probably with a keen eye for those fellow humans who did not measure up to his ideals. He saw the bad so clearly he couldn't see the good which was also present. How could a world which didn't measure up to his standards possibly survive? Well, the answer is it always does and so will ours, despite our folly. After all, all ying and no yang would make for a dull existence.

'Lantirn' wins dim-bulb award

WASHINGTON — This is the story of a lantern that sheds no light, another in our depressing series on Pentagon profligacy.

Jack Anderson

Earlier this year, I reported serious problems with the Navy's new superplane, the FA-18 Hornet. The admirals and the manufacturer swarmed all over me, but the Hornet is now undergoing major modifications. I also reported that the Navy's Aegis-equipped cruisers had never been adequately tested; months later the Aegis was the subject of intense criticism on Capitol Hill.

So I anticipate an outcry from the Pentagon over this report on the Air Force's latest multi-billion-dollar brainstorm, called Lantirn, for Low Altitude Navigation and Targeting Infrared System for Night. The acronym may be the best feature of the contraption; it's certainly the cheapest.

Lantirn is supposed to enable pilots to find their targets at night while flying low enough to elude enemy radar. But Air Force officials familiar with Lantirn say it takes potentially valuable technology and renders it virtually useless.

They described it to my associate Donald Goldberg as the equivalent of looking through a 4.5-inch-diameter soda straw while skimming the treetops at 500 miles an hour in the pitch dark hoping to hit a target. The glorified soda straw is the pilot's only link to his surroundings.

The price tag on this questionable gadget, according to a 1982 Air Force study, is about $7 million each — roughly $1 million more than the Air Force has been assuring Congress that Lantirn will cost. Development costs alone have more than doubled: from an initial estimate of $96 million to the current estimate of $198 million.

Worse than the cost overruns, however, are the quality problems that have plagued Lantirn. An internal Air Force report identifies these, and they're fundamental. For example:

— The manufacturer, Martin Marietta, has organized the Lantirn project so that quality-control personnel are subordinate to the head of operations, not independent. This means that "quality decisions adverse to production can be overridden ..." the report explains. "In times of production needs, product quality can be compromised to meet schedule requirements."

— This is not a theoretical problem. The report notes that in one instance, Lantirn work was allowed to proceed with material that didn't meet specifications, while another case showed that quality-control personnel have no say over design changes incorporated into the system. "The implications are that the real power of the organization resides in manufacturing, thus reducing the likelihood that design changes necessary for quality would be implemented," the report warns.

— The Air Force allows the use of substandard components for Lantirn, provided they are later "screened" for higher quality. This dubious procedure may "mask incipient failure modes," the report says.

— Inspectors found serious inattention to quality-control procedures at Martin Marietta. "Operators were observed working at their stations, in what was supposed to be a clean room environment, consuming food, with purses on top of their bench, with no hair protection, in street shoes, and assembling printed circuit boards with no gloves or finger cots," the report charges.

These are not frivolous complaints; even minute particles of dust can ruin an entire electronic system. "The concern is that this lack of discipline will 'carry over' to Lantirn once Martin Marietta receives production go-ahead," the report explains.

Despite these actual and potential problems, the Air Force is expected to give Martin Marietta production approval early next year for 658 Lantirns — costing almost $4 billion.

Footnote: An Air Force spokesman said the problems with Lantirn were no greater than with other weapons systems at the same stage of development. A Martin Marietta spokesman said Lantirn has received high marks for quality.

ON HANDLING JESSE: The Reagan administration learned the futility of trying to control the Rev. Jesse Jackson's personal diplomacy, and decided it was better not to try. State Department files reveal that the Carter administration made roughly the same decision four years ago.

Jackson had charged publicly that State was being "racist" in its refusal to accept the flood of Haitian refugees who were fleeing poverty and repression in their homeland. Officials hastily arranged for Jackson to meet with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, and reminded the secretary of the need for diplomacy.

"You will, of course, want to avoid arguments ... but you may wish to ... show that we have not been inattentive to the human issues involved," said a memo dated April 22, 1980. It urged Vance to "hear his (Jackson's) description of the situation ... (and) get a full understanding of his suggestions for change."

THAT TILT TO IRAQ: Has Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein really cleaned up his act? Two years ago, as a first step in its tilt toward Iraq in its war with Iran, the Reagan administration removed Iraq from the list of countries that support international terrorism.

Now Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., and other members of Congress want Iraq put back on the list — a move that would, among other things, prevent U.S. military aid to Baghdad. The State Department has been busily trying to persuade these congressional doubters that Hussein really has stopped sheltering terrorists, as he has publicly claimed. But my sources doubt there has been any fundamental change in the past two years.

Amusing concern

In following the plight of the Lancaster house, I was amused at the concern of the museum board that a volunteer group could not be allowed to conduct a clean-up day at the museum without carrying liability insurance and "indemnifying the museum of any and all responsibility."

As a member of a local garden club, I well remember all the years that the individual garden clubs and the Midland Council of Garden Clubs were in residence in what everyone then caled the "Lancaster Garden Center." During this time, the club members, their husbands, their children and anybody else they could get, spent many hours cleaning, sweeping, washing windows, waxing floors, cutting grass, fertilizing, watering, weeding, planting hundreds of dollars worth of plants, and anything else that needed to be done ... without benefit of liability insurance and also without benefit of any financial assistance from the museum. During that time, the home was a loved and well cared for residence for the garden clubs.

It is especially a shame in this approaching centennial celebration time for the City of Midland that symbols of the heritage of the city are not more respected.

Save the Lancaster House.

Committee 'for' house, museum

Recently Museum of the Southwest Director Jerry Porter was quoted in a newscast as being openly critical of the efforts of the Save the Lancaster House Committee.

This committee has three goals: to get community support to save the house, to raise the funds necessary to save the house, and to find a use for the house that would allow it to become an income-producer.

We have never made any attempt to draw income away from the museum's expansion plans. And, since the land on which the house now stands would become a park area, the committee does not believe that saving the house stands in the way of museum expansion.

I would like to remind Mr. Porter that the committee has assumed responsibility for saving the house. Also, all our ideas for eventual use of the house revolve around making it not only an income producer for the museum but also a vehicle for drawing community support to the museum. The committee's efforts have been "for" not "against" the museum.

I believe Mr. Porter has nothing to gain and everything to lose by openly criticizing the committee's efforts. The success of our recent barbeque demonstrates the growing community support for saving the house. Mr. Porter would do well to take our committee more seriously.

Those of us who have lived in the area of Lancaster house for two decades have taken much pride in the house. I don't even mind driving a few blocks out of my way since the street is closed.

I walk down to the house a lot. I hope folks who care can come up with a solution and leave it for posterity.

Hijacked passengers will be returned to France

Associated Press

The hostages released from an Air France jetliner before hijackers blew up the cockpit prepared to fly from Tehran to Paris today while West German officials investigated how weapons and explosives were smuggled onto the plane at Frankfurt's heavily guarded airport.

None of the 60 passengers and crew released in Tehran had been hurt during the two-day ordeal, which began Tuesday when three hijackers ordered the Boeing 737 to detour to Iran from its Frankfurt-to-Paris route.

Another Air France Boeing 737 arrived at the Tehran airport today to take the passengers and crewmembers to Paris. A spokesman for the French national carrier said he anticipated the return flight would arrive in France late this afternoon.

The hijackers, demanding that the French government release five "comrades" imprisoned for an attempted assassination of a former Iranian prime minister, made two threats — to kill French passengers one by one and to blow up the plane with everyone aboard.

At one point Thursday they brought a man outside the plane and indicated they were about to kill him, but relented after Iranian officials agreed to read their demands over Tehran radio.

Eventually they agreed to let the final group of 46 hostages go free in return for setting off an explosion in the cockpit. Iranian Foreign Ministry and airport officials said the hijackers were "taken away" after their surrender. But neither their identities, nor their nationalities were revealed.

Today, several French newspapers questioned the role the Iranian government had played in the hijacking, noting that the sky pirates had acquired explosives and submachine guns after spending the night at the Tehran airport, although passengers said they saw only knives and crude grenades when the takeover began.

Serge July, editor of the newspaper Liberation, said the arms were not available at the beginning, "but at the arrival at the airport. There was complicity that appears to go as high as the Iranian state apparatus."

The hostages — three Americans, plus French, Japanese, Indian, Swiss and Finnish passengers — spent the night in a Tehran hotel after their release.

"One minute the hijackers seemed to be quite calm. The next they were running about carrying bombs in one hand and lighters in the other, threatening to blow us all up," said British nurse Jane Wallington, 27, who was released along with 11 other women and two children at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport during negotiations between Iranian officials and the Arabic-speaking hijackers.

"Towards the end, it became more and more tense," she said in a telephone interview Thursday with Britain's domestic news agency, Press Association. "They suddenly produced more weapons which we didn't know they had."

West German investigators hoped to have some initial answers today about how the explosives and weapons were smuggled past security at Frankfurt airport, the busiest in contintal Europe.

West German television broadcast an interview Thursday night from Iran with a West German passenger identified as Volkhard Mitschke, who said he believed the hijackers retrieved their weapons and explosives from the baggage compartment in the plane's underbelly after the jet was airborne.

The hijacking began 22 minutes after the plane took off from Frankfurt.

Hostage says hijackers cared for passengers

LONDON (AP) — One of the 60 hostages held captive for two days on an Air France plane said today, from the safety of his hotel room in Tehran, that he doesn't think the hijackers ever intended to hurt anyone.

But watching the three Arabic-speaking hijackers patrol the aisles of the Boeing 737 with Sten guns and grenades made the passengers worry, Briton John Shingleton said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

"It was very very strange because they were obviously very, very serious people," Shingleton said. "There was no mistaking their intent when they got this explosive out and started wiring the plane. But on the other side, they were very humanitarian.

"They said: 'Don't worry, things will be OK.' They made sure we had plenty of water and we had plenty to eat," Shingleton said.

He and 45 other men were released from the plane at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport on Thursday just before the hijackers set off explosives in the cockpit.

Earlier, two children and 12 women had been freed in Iran, and a steward had escaped from the plane when its stopped for refueling in Cyprus. The hijackers had commandeered the plane Tuesday as it flew toward Paris from Frankfurt, West Germany.

They ordered it to Tehran and threatened to kill French passengers and blow the plane up if the French government didn't release five men imprisoned for a 1980 assassination attempt.

France refused to comply. On Thursday afternoon, the hijackers freed the remaining passengers, set off the explosion and surrendered to Iranian authorities.

Giving an example of the hijackers' kindliness, Shingleton said, "I woke up Wednesday night to find that they were walking round the cabin with blankets, putting blankets over people who were sleeping to make sure they weren't cold.

"And yet there they were with Sten guns (light machineguns) walking up the aisles as well. It was very very strange.

"If you look back on it, which one can do now in a slightly sort of relaxed way, I think it was very unlikely they intended to hurt anybody at any time," said Shingleton, director of a market research company at High Wycombe 30 miles west of London.

Retelling the sequence of events, he said:

"We were just coming into Paris and suddenly there was a sort of commotion and a sort of rush and I suppose it was somebody rushing to the front because I looked up and there were these two blokes standing there.

"They were shouting: 'Don't move, don't move. Sit down, sit down.' In their hand each one had a green object which we assumed to be grenades.

"It later transpired there were three of them and they had one Molotov cocktail and the other two had these grenade things, which we assumed to be grenades. But I must say there was some debate among the passengers if they actually were bombs at all or whether they were fakes."

Asked if the hijackers had guns, Shingleton replied:

"Yes they did. We woke up on Thursday to find that they had .45 pistols, Sten guns. They really looked as though they were going to World War III, and about the middle of the day, I think it was, they suddenly produced plastic explosives and a lot of wiring.

"It was very obvious that they were going to wire the plane and blow it up."

He added: "When they produced this plastic explosive and started wiring the plane they eventually told us that they were actually going to take us out of the aircraft before blowing it up.

"But I must confess they took a little bit of time telling us and I think most of us felt that if things got really bad they were going to blow it (up) and we would be inside it."

Floating mines damage cargo ships in Red Sea

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Two ships were damaged by floating mines in the Red Sea off the coast of North Yemen, a spokesman for the North Yemen government said today.

The ships were identified by the North Yemeni official only as Greek and Turkish cargo vessels and damage sustained was described as minimal, according to the Gulf News Agency. No casualties were reported.

The Greek ship reportedly was damaged Thursday, but the report did not specify when the Turkish ship was hit.

In Athens, a spokesman for the Greek Ministry of Merchant Marine today identified the Greek ship as the 6,956-ton Kriti Koral and said it had continued on its voyage to the North Yemeni port of Al-Makha with a cargo of sheet metal.

In Egypt, meanwhile, the official Middle East News Agency reproduced a report by the East German government news service ADN saying that an East German ship had run into a mine further north in the Red Sea.

According to the ADN report, the vessel was sailing from the Ethiopian port of Assab to Port Sudan, and the explosion caused damage to the rudder.

An organization calling itself Jihad (Holy War) claimed responsibility for mining the Red Sea "to punish imperialism," according to a report by the state radio in the Persian Gulf sheikdom of Qatar. The radio said the claim was made in a telephone call to a London news office, which it did not identify. No more details on the group were given.

The Bahrain-based Gulf News Agency quoted the unidentified North Yemeni official as saying his government was investigating "these aggressive perpetrations which are aimed primarily at destabilizing security and stability" in the southern parts of the Red Sea.

"The government of the Yemeni Arab Republic condemns such criminal acts and will not hesitate to pursue its legitimate right in defending its territorial waters and freedom of navigation in them," the official said.

Freedom of navigation and security in the Red Sea is the responsibility of the countries — Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Ethiopia and North Yemen — bordering its shores, he said.

The Gulf News Agency is an umbrella organization of official government news services in the Persian Gulf region.

Former Argentine president jailed in deaths, disappearances

By EDWARD SCHUMACHER
New York Times News Service

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Former President Jorge Rafael Videla was indicted and jailed Thursday by the military's top court, on charges related to the thousands of deaths and disappearances that took place under his rule.

Videla, the first officer to be indicted by military courts in the human-rights abuses, was the most powerful leader in the military circle that ruled for nearly eight years before the election of President Raul Alfonsin last year.

Videla led the coup that brought the military to power in 1976 and was president for the next five years. Almost all of the more than 8,000 disappearances — as well as hundreds of summary executions and countless cases of often gruesome torture — took place during an anti-terrorism campaign in the first four years of Videla's rule.

The terms of the indictment were not made public Thursday, but Videla and eight other former junta members were charged personally by Alfonsin last January with ordering the abuses and spreading "terror, pain and death throughout Argentine society."

Government officials and human-rights leaders, frustrated for months by what they said was the slow pace of military justice, said they hope the indictment of Videla sets a precedent for more indictments to come soon.

"The military courts have finally moved after so many public complaints," Emilio Mignone, president of the Center for Legal and Social Studies, a leading human-rights group, said in an interview. "This is an important step."

To that end, the military's top court, the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces, questioning Air Force Brig. Orlando Ramon Agosti, a member of the first junta with Videla, and court sources said the council would decide Friday whether to jail the brigadier as well.

Before Thursday, only two officers, Adm. Ruben Chamorro, head of a torture center, and Brig. Gen. Ramon Camps, a police chief, were being held by the military on accusations of human-rights abuses, and both detentions were ordered by the government, not the military. The two await trial.

The three members of the junta that led the country into the 1982 Falklands War with Britain have been jailed by the supreme council, but on charges related to the war. The three are former President Leopoldo F. Galtieri, Adm. Jorge Isaac Anaya and Brig. Basilio Lami Dozo.

Several hundred officers have been charged in civilian courts with human-rights abuses, and about a half-dozen of these have been indicted and are jailed. Among the jailed are Adm. Emilio E. Massera, a former junta member; Gen. Otto Paladino, a head of state intelligence; and Maj. Ernesto Guillermo Barreiro, who may be the only indicted active duty officer, human-rights leaders said. None of the officers has been convicted.

Most of the civilian court cases are being transferred to military jurisdiction, however, with the result that the decisions by the nine retired officers who make up the military's supreme council are seen as of eminent importance. Two former military presidents, Gens. Roberto E. Viola and Reynaldo B. Bignone, were jailed by civilian judges but were freed by the supreme council after their cases were transferred recently.

The transfer has been a political gamble by Alfonsin to allow the military to cleanse itself. The government pushed a law through congress requiring the military trials, though civilian appeals courts still have automatic review over the military court decisions.

The supreme court Thursday rejected what seemed to be a paradoxical appeal by the nine accused junta members and Camps to be tried by civilian courts. While many critics of the government have charged that military judges will be too lenient in judging their own, the accused officers opposed the harshness of the military code of justice, under which requirements for proof are less stringent than under civilian law.

There was no public reaction by the military Thursday to the indictment of Videla. The military has been increasingly restive about the prosecutions of middle-level active duty officers who followed orders.

WORLD in brief

Soviet soldier honored

MOSCOW (AP) — In an unusual saga of death and glory among Soviet forces in Afghanistan, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda has memorialized a young paratrooper who killed more than 30 rebels and "saved his comrades at the cost of his life."

Sgt. Nikolai Chepik was elevated to "hero of the Soviet Union," the nation's highest title, and a tank and a harvester combine were named in his memory, Pravda said in its tribute Thursday.

The article, headlined "A Lad From Chervony Mai," was given a prominent spread across the top of Pravda's widely read back page and included a photo of a boyish Chepik in dress uniform.

Although articles on Soviet heroism in Afghanistan appear from time to time, the Pravda story marked one of the rare instances in which the official press has spoken of the death of one of the young men fighting the 4½-year-old war against Moslem guerrillas in the central Asian nation.

Paris offices bombed

PARIS (AP) — The European Space Agency's headquarters building was seriously damaged by a bomb that exploded near an entrance, and six people were injured by flying glass, police said today.

The explosion occurred just before midnight on Thursday, two days before the agency's scheduled launch of its 10th Ariane rocket from a base in French Guiana.

Four of the injured were hospitalized, police said. They were hurt when the blast shattered windows of nearby apartments in the central Paris neighborhood.

A message smeared in red paint on the wall of the seven-story building claimed the blast was the work of a small radical French group called Direct Action, which has claimed responsibility for several attacks on public buildings and businesses in the past few years.

Former policemen jailed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Mexico City judge ordered 12 former members of an elite police commando unit jailed without bail Friday for the 1982 murder of 14 men in what has become known as the "Tula case."

Judge Roberto Villalobos of the 27th Penal Court ordered prison for the 12, who were arrested and arraigned last Sunday on charges ranging from theft to aggravated homicide.

They are charged with involvement in the January, 1982 slaying of 13 Venezuelan and Colombian bank robbers, and a Mexican cab driver, whose bodies showed up in a sewage canal near the town of Tula, 58 miles north of the capital.

Windsurfer treated well

TOKYO (AP) — A French adventurer who reportedly windsurfed from northern Japan to the Soviet island of Sakhalin said today dozens of Russian soldiers came running to greet him and treated him kindly during his brief stay.

Sakhalin is a strategic island that made headlines after a South Korean jetliner was shot down on Sept. 1, 1983, when it entered Soviet airspace over the island. All aboard were killed.

Street battles waged

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Moslem militias waged street battles in Syrian-controlled north Lebanon today, while Israeli forces reportedly surrounded a village in south Lebanon after pro-Israeli militiamen were fired on.

At least two combatants were killed and 13 wounded today in a second day of fighting for dominance of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city, 50 miles north of Beirut, police said.

Hundreds of families in the neighborhoods of Kubbe, Baal Mohsen, Bab Tabbaneh and Shaarani spent the night huddled in basements and bomb shelters. Police said they had no report on civilian casualties.

Vidmar misses gold medal; Blatnick doesn't

Track, field start competition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Vidmar wasn't quite the Golden Boy he hoped he'd be. But Jeff Blatnick, living a nightmare only two years ago, achieved the dream of his life.

Vidmar was hoping to match the U.S. men's gymnastics team feat of a gold medal with one of his own Thursday night. But the 23-year-old blond from Los Angeles settled for silver instead as Japan's Koji Gushiken won the individual all-around championship. Gushiken was in tears as he completed his performance.

Blatnick was in tears, too — but he had much more to be thankful for than just a gold medal in superheavyweight Greco-Roman wrestling. The 27-year-old from Niskayuna, N.Y., who celebrated his birthday just a week ago, climaxed a journey which began when he battled back from Hodgkin's disease, a form of cancer.

After five days of competition, track and field, the keystone of the Olympics, gets under way today. Carl Lewis and Edwin Moses, a pair of American medal favorites, make their first appearances, Lewis in two 100-meter heats, Moses in a 400-meter hurdles preliminary.

The 20-kilometer walk and women's shot put medals will be awarded tonight, as will be the gold in the women's all-around individual gymnastics championship. Mary Lou Retton of Fairmont, W. Va., leads Romania's Ecaterina Szabo 79.05-78.75.

The gold will also be handed out today in the 1,000-meter sprint cycling, and an American will get it — either Mark Gorski of Costa Mesa, Calif., or Nelson Vails of New York. They won their semifinal heats Thursday to set up the first all-American final in the history of Olympic cycling.

The United States began today's competition with 37 medals, 22 of them gold. China is second with 15 medals including seven gold.

U.S. swimmers resumed their competition Thursday and, although not nearly as dominating as they were when they swept all five of Tuesday's available golds, they did win three races, setting a world record in one.

Mary T. Meagher of Louisville, Ky., won the women's 100-meter butterfly in 59.26 seconds to the 1 minute, 0.19 seconds by runnerup Jenna Johnson of La Habra, Calif. George DiCarlo of Denver captured the men's 400 freestyle in 3:51.23. And Rowdy Gaines of Winter Haven, Fla., won his second gold, anchoring the men's 400 freestyle relay team to a world-record 3:19.03.

Victor Davis of Canada and Petra Van Staveren of the Netherlands applied the brakes to the American gold rush, Davis breaking his world mark with 2:13.34 in the 200 breaststroke and Van Staveren winning the women's 100 breaststroke in an Olympic-record 1:09.88.

U.S. swimmers now have won 14 gold medals in 19 events. With 10 golds to go, they have a good shot at eclipsing their Olympic record of 21 golds, won in the 1968 Mexico City Games.

In Thursday's other events:

— A flotilla of American rowers reached the finals and the French team's eight-man shell, apparently sabotaged, was given a berth in Sunday's final.

— Cheryl Miller of the University of Southern California scored 16 points to lead the U.S. women's basketball team to an 84-47 thumping of South Korea.

— The U.S. water polo team beat Brazil 10-4, the American baseball team plastered Italy 16-1 as Shane Mack of Cerritos, Calif., Will Clark Jr. of New Orleans and Oddibe McDowell of Hollywood, Fla., homered in a nine-run first inning, and the U.S. men's volleyball team swept South Korea 15-13, 15-9, 15-6.

— The American men's field hockey team was eliminated from medal contention in a 4-1 loss to Malaysia, the U.S. soccer team likewise was eliminated as it was tied 1-1 by Egypt, and the American men's handball team was defeated 21-18 by Sweden.

— Meldrick Taylor of Philadelphia, boxing Romanian left-hander Nicolae Talpos in the 125-pound class, and southpaw Robert Shannon of Edmonds, Wash., fighting Sammy Mwangi of Kenya at 119 pounds, scored unanimous decisions in second-round bouts.

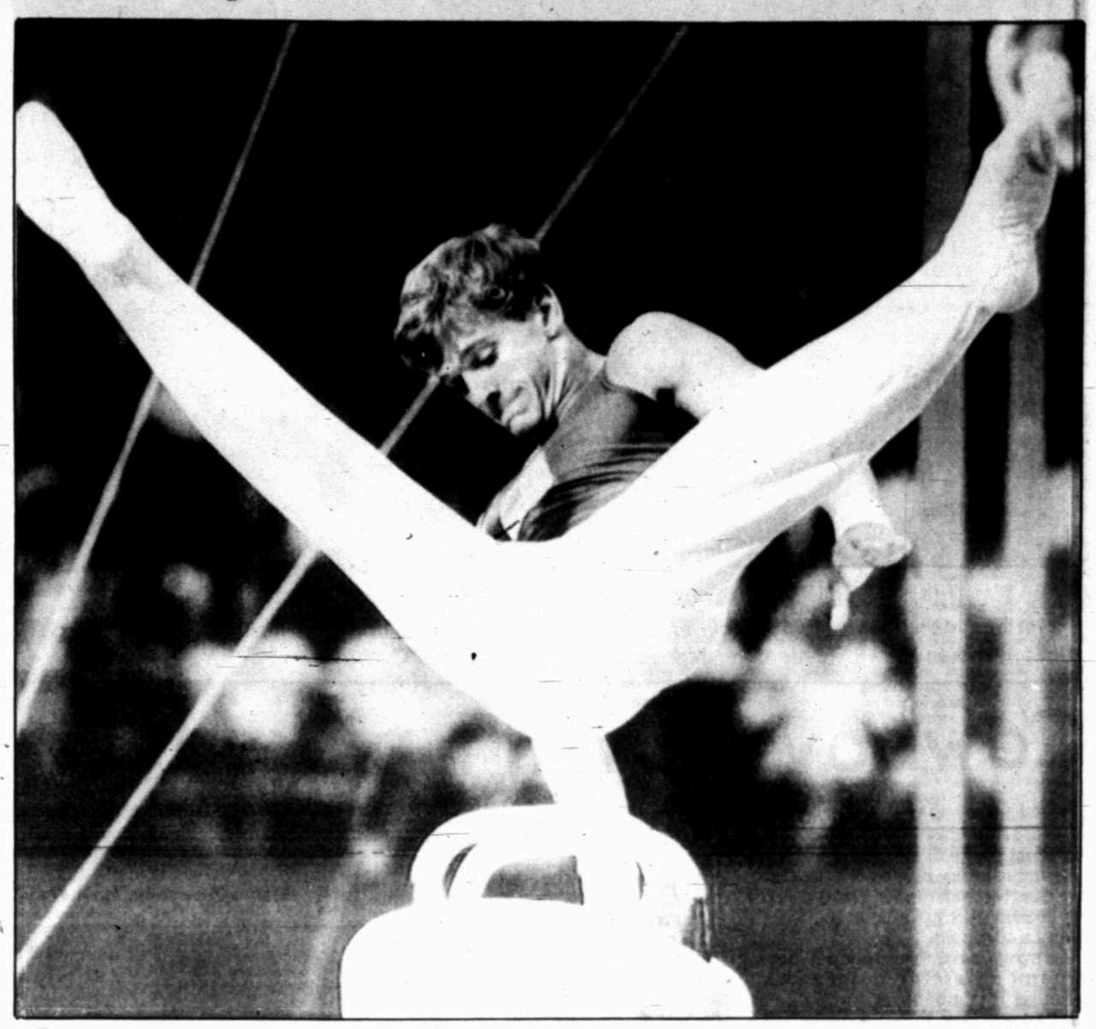

— Wu Xiaoxuan of China became China's first-ever double medalist in Olympic shooting, winning the women's three-position small-bore rifle gold to go with her bronze in the air-rifle competition. Wanda Jewell of Wahiawa, Hawaii, won the three-position bronze. Japan's Takeo Kamachi won the rapid-fire pistol gold.

— Karl-Heinz Radschinsky of West Germany won the 165-pound weightlifting class, ending China's run of four golds in the competition.

— Mauro Numa of Italy won fencing gold in the individual foil.

— Atsuji Miyahara of Japan, in the 114½-pound weightlift, and Jouko Salomaki of Finland, in the 163-pound division, won gold medals.

Cotto's defense, hitting pace Cubs past Expos, 3-2

Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs and New York Mets continue to go in opposite directions.

Center fielder Henry Cotto, a former Midland Cub, made a sensational catch in the top of the seventh and drove in the winning run with a grounder in the bottom of the inning as the Cubs nipped the Montreal Expos 3-2 with the help of a bizarre game-ending double play.

It was their sixth victory in the last seven games and gave them a 1½-game lead in the National League East when the Mets lost their seventh in a row, bowing to the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4.

Chicago's Keith Moreland tied the game 2-2 with a sixth-inning homer. Cotto made a diving, one-handed catc an inning later on a drive by Tim Raines, preventing at least a triple. And his grounder in the bottom of the seventh scored Ron Cey, who doubled.

Winner Rick Sutcliffe left after singles by Tim Wallach and pinch-hitter Mike Stenhouse put runners on first and third with one out in the top of the ninth. Pinch-hitter Pete Rose lined a shot off reliever Lee Smith's right shoulder, but shortstop Dave Owen caught the ball in the air and doubled Stenhouse off first.

Meanwhile, Lee Lacy tripled home the tying and lead runs in the eighth inning and scored on Dale Berra's sacrifice fly as the Pirates rallied for three runs to defeat the Mets.

Although Lacy tripled off New York relief ace Jesse Orosco, the loss snapped the seven-game winning streak of starter Ron Darling, who hadn't lost since May 22.

Jason Thompson opened the Pirates' eighth by drawing a walk and, after Tony Pena was hit by a pitch, Orosco replaced Darling. Johnny Ray forced Pena at second, but Lacy then drilled his triple into the right-center field gap, scoring pinch-runner Doug Frobel and Ray. Berra followed with his sacrifice fly. Don Robinson held the Mets scoreless over the final three innings in relief of Jose DeLeon for his first victory since July 16, 1983.

Elsewhere in the NL, Philadelphia edged St. Louis 3-2 and San Francisco defeated Cincinnati 5-2.

Shane Rawley pitched seven scoreless innings and singled for his first major-league hit to ignite a three-run uprising that helped the Phillies end the Cardinals' six-game winning streak. The triumph left Philadelphia 4½ games behind the Cubs and three in back of the Mets.

Rawley's leadoff single in the third inning off Danny Cox was followed by Juan Samuel's ground-rule double. Greg Gross singled Rawley home and Von Hayes grounded into a forceout as Samuel scored. Mike Schmidt followed with another ground-rule double before Len Matuszek capped the burst with an RBI single for a 3-0 lead.

Chili Davis ended a 1-for-19 slump with a 4-for-4 performance and Jeff Leonard slammed a two-run homer to help the Giants defeat the Reds and break a four-game losing streak.

Leonard belted his homer in the first inning and Davis ended a five-game slump by collecting three singles and a triple and driving in two runs. Mike Krukow allowed 10 hits and struck out eight in 8 1-3 innings for his fourth straight victory.

In the American League, Lou Whitaker cracked a two-run homer and Jack Morris scattered seven hits over eight innings for his 14th victory as the Detroit Tigers beat Cleveland 2-1. Morris, who had lost of his last five decisions, allowed only Andre Thornton's 23rd home run in the fourth inning in tying teammate Dan Petry for the league lead in victories.

Whitaker's shot, his ninth, came in the bottom of the fifth off Bert Blyleven following Dave Bergman's single. The Tigers lead Toronto by 11½ games in the AL East.

Rick Cerone's bloop single drove in the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning as the New York Yankees defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 6-4 and reached the .500 mark for the first time since April 20. The triumph, which completed a four-game sweep of the Brewers, was the Yankees' seventh in their last eight games, giving them a 52-52 record and 16 victories in 22 games since the All-Star break.

The Brewers tied the score with two runs in the seventh on Willie Lozado's sacrifice fly and an RBI single by Robin Yount. But pinch-hitter Steve Kemp opened the bottom of the eighth with a walk off reliever Tom Tellmann. Vic Mata sacrificed pinch-runner Omar Moreno to second and Cerone followed with his third hit of the game. Willie Randolph doubled Cerone home.

Minnesota was at California in a late night battle for first place in the AL West.

Dedeaux, Knight a pair of opposites

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They carry the same credential clearance — a large "F" followed by a small "D" — identifying them as coaches in the Olympic Games. But that's where the similiarity between Rod Dedeaux and Bobby Knight ends.

They are America's Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, two very opposite sorts aiming at the same targets — Olympic gold for their teams.

Dedeaux leads the U.S. baseball squad, a grandfatherly type who has coached for 43 years at the University of Southern California. He wears a twinkle in his eye and a smile on his face and his University of Southern California teams have won an unprecedented 11 national championships including six straight college World Sewries from 1970-74.

Knight coaches Uncle Sam's basketball team, a tough-talking, nononsense guy whose disciplinarian system leaves little room for levity. He has produced seven Big Ten, two NCAA and one National Invitation Tournament championships in 13 years at Indiana University.

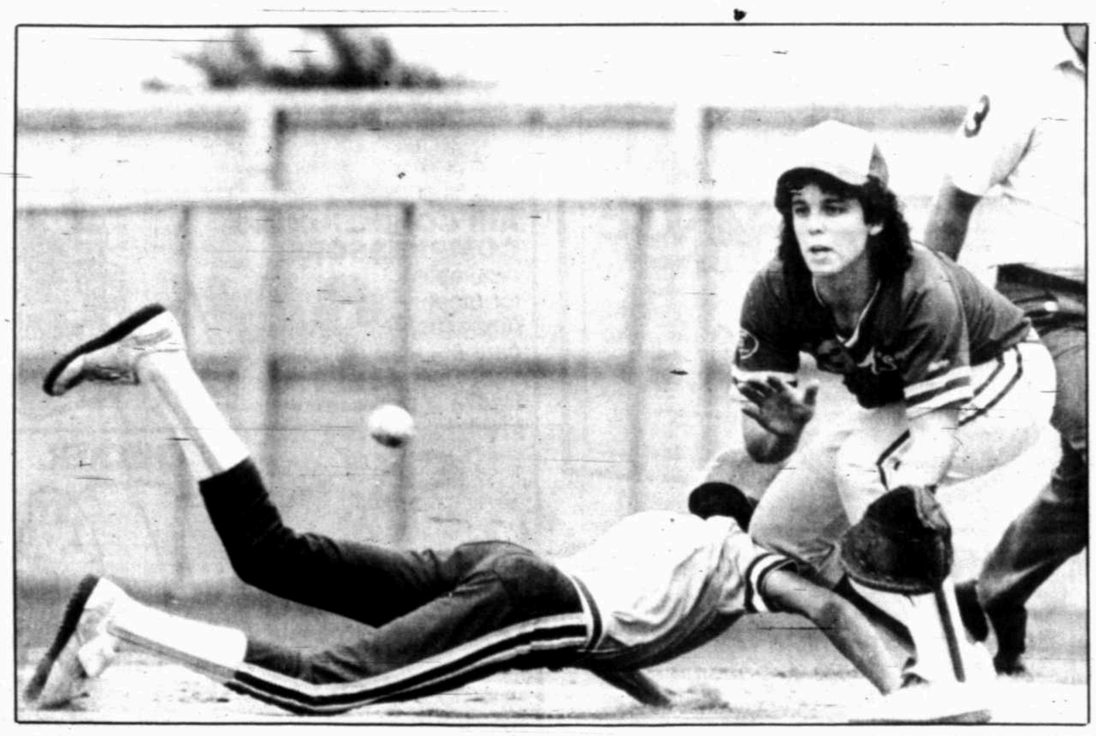

Dedeaux would be lost without a laugh. As his team prepared to play Italy in the baseball tournament, a demonstration sport in these Games, the coach confessed that he was worried.

"I dreamed they had Tommy Lasorda, Joe DiMaggio and Yogi Berra on their squad," he said.

Then he paused for the appropriate giggles. They arrived, as if on cue.

After his team had defeated Canada by a comfortable 21 points, Knight was not in a comical mood. Instead, he berated the players. Some of them were confused by the tirade, but not Steve Alford, the guard who started for the coach as a freshman at Indiana last season.

Shamrocks gain Hi-Junior finals

From Staff Reports

The Midland Shamrocks used a five-run third inning and five innings of shutout pitching from Mike Rittenberry to pave the way to a 9-4 victory Thursday in the second game of the Texas Teen Age Baseball Hi-Junior district tournament at Cubs Stadium.

The Shamrocks then advanced into Thursday's third game of the night, meeting the Midland Astros — 8-5 winners over San Angelo's Athletics in the opening game of the tournament — to decide the first team to gain today's championship game at 5:30 p.m.

That game was no contest. The Shamrocks scored in every inning, including nine in the second, collected 15 hits and ran away with a 19-0 victory.

The Shamrocks will face the winner of losers' bracket games played earlier today. San Angelo and Odessa opened today's play with a 9 a.m. game with the winner meeting the Midland Astros at 11:30 a.m.

In the Shamrocks first victory Thursday, Midland got to Odessa starting pitcher Shane Lunceford in the third inning with five runs that proved to be the difference. Lunceford took the loss and Rittenberry went the distance for the victory.

Shamrock Gary Stanton had the game's only triple while teammate Scott Smith and Odessa's Paul Chavez each collected a double.

Against San Angelo, the Astros were upset 8-5 winners. The Astros used a four-run fifth inning to build a 7-2 lead, added their final run in the sixth and held on for the victory.

Astro pitcher James Flatt went the distance for the victory while San Angelo's Adam Martinez suffered the loss.

In the third game, both the Shamrocks and Astros went through several pitchers. Michael Gonzalez started the game to collect the victory while Danny Jordan took the loss.

The winner of the tournament will advance to state competition in Brownwood.

South beats North, 27-7

HOUSTON (AP) — South quarterback Shannon Kelley and receiver Kevin Nelson will continue their pass-catch act this fall at the University of Texas.

But they gave a sneak preview in the Astrodome Thursday night of what Longhorn opponents can expect as Kelley threw two touchdown passes and Nelson caught two TD throws as the South defeated the North 27-7 in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game.

Kelly, from Spring Branch Memorial, hit touchdown shots of 27 and 14 yards to future University of Houston receiver Mike Rhodes of Aldine and Nelson hauled in scoring catches of eight and four years from Mark Motley of Ore City.

"The way everything was clicking in practice I knew everything would be good come game-time," said Kelly, who completed 15 of 25 passes for 173 yards and earned the game's most valuable back honor.

Dulles, caught nine passes for 67 yards

"This offense was kind of like a run and shoot offense," Nelson said.

Texas All-Stars

"We did a lot of hard practicing this week. I was reading the defensive backs and going the opposite way."

The South built a 14-0 halftime lead on Kelley's 27-yarder, Motley's eight-yarder and a safety.

Motley, who completed seven of 11 passes for 74 yards, hit Nelson for four yards in the third quarter and Kelly added the final shot with 37 seconds left in the game.

The North averted a shutout with 4:55 left in the game when quarterback Charles Eipper of Wichita Falls Hirschi, plunged one yard for a touchdown.

"Kelley's unbelievable and the receivers were really good, not just one but all of them," North Coach Tim Edwards of L.D. Bell said.

Ben Hummel of Rockwall earned the game's outstanding lineman award but wasn't totally happy with his performaance.

"I didn't play up to may capabilities," he said. "To have a good game, I would have had to made every tackle. It's a disappointment. We had a couple of bad breaks.

"We had a lot of fun," Rhodes said. "You want to make a good showing for your high school on your last time out there."

An Astrodome crowd of 7,076 was the smallest attendance since the 1949 game in Beaumont when 5,985 fans attended.

Oops! Race horse clerk trusts customer

MIAMI (AP) — A pari-mutuel clerk at Calder Race Course made a $31,000 bet on a customer's honesty, and lost.

Now the clerk's been suspended, and the horse track is deciding if she will have to repay the money.

"She has been suspended pending the conclusion of the investigation," Calder President Kenny Noe Jr. said. "Then we'll make a determination."

State and local agencies are looking for the confidence man who pulled his scam on the clerk last Friday after setting her up in advance.

"A man who claimed to be associated with a big Las Vegas hotel had been betting $10,000 or $15,000 cash with the clerk for 10 days before she said he conned her," Noe said.

"Finally, last Friday, the clerk said the con artist told her, 'I'm carrying a lot of money today that I intend to bet. I don't want to be flashing it around. So, I would like to make my bets and then settle up with you at the end of the day.'"

When the races were over, a $31,000 deficit remained, but the fast-talking bettor did not. The race course is not insured for the loss.

Officials declined to identify the clerk who accepted the credit. "It has already caused her a great deal of embarrassment," Noe said.

Cowboys haven't picked QB

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys open their National Football League exhibition season Saturday night with the starting quarterback choice for the regular season still up in the air, Coach Tom Landry says.

Landry said he doesn't have ground rules for determining whether incumbent Danny White or challenger Gary Hogeboom will take the first snap for the Cowboys when they play the Los Angeles Rams on Sept. 3 in Anaheim, Calif.

"I really don't know what will decide it," Landry said. "I really don't."

In 1971, when a similar quarterback situation arose between Roger Staubach and Craig Morton, Landry said Staubach won the job on the basis of "leadership" and "what is good for the team."

"This year I am going to do what is good for the team at that particular moment," he said. "It's just a feel that you get. I'm not going to base it on statistics or how they do in one particular game or how they do in training camp. I'm looking for the best leader. The quarterback is just not picked strictly on the basis of how he plays."

Landry said the decision won't matter to the offense because team members can adjust.

Hogeboom, whose patience as the No. 2 quarterback is running out, said the game on Saturday at Texas Stadium is not a do-or-die situation for either quarterback.

Trainer Don Cochren believes White irritated his right elbow by throwing too hard the first week of training camp in an effort to impress the coaches. White has been wearing a wrap on his right arm the last two weeks.

"It just appeared to me that he was trying to throw hard to impress Tom," Cochren said. "You know how he gets tired of hearing that Gary's got such a great arm."

White denied he was trying to throw Hogeboom-like passes.

"There are so many theories about me and my arm that I don't know which ones to believe," White said. "Somebody would come up with a theory about me if I got a hangnail."

White says he doesn't think his sore arm will affect his throwing during Saturday's game.

"Once I get in the heat of the game and get the adrenalin flowing, everything will be all right," he said.

Oilers' France facing more shoulder surgery

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Veteran Houston Oiler offensive tackle Doug France, who started 13 games last season, is facing his fourth shoulder operation in less than five years in a move that could hand a starting job to rookie first-round draft choice Dean Steinkuhler.

France, 31, experienced soreness in the shoulder last week but dismissed it as a bruise. But on Tuesday France was unable to continue a goal-line drill and now may face more surgery.

"A decision will be made within the next 24 hours on whether Doug will have to have an operation or if it will heal itself," Coach Hugh Campbell said. "Doug definitely figured in our plans."

Steinkuhler, the Oilers No. 1 draft choice from Nebraska, has been working at the right tackle position, although he was a collegiate guard. The Oilers hoped France, who was having a good training camp, would be ready at right tackle if Steinkuhler couldn't make the adjustment.

France was dejected by the latest setback.

"I went through two (operations) on my right shoulder in 1980 and one on my left shoulder in 1981, so now this makes two in each shoulder," France said. "I can't figure it out. Nobody ever told me nothing.

"I lift weights, I work out. I don't want to talk about it."

France started for the Oilers last season wearing a cast on his right hand for the final 10 games to protect a severed tendon. France joined the Oilers in 1982 after sitting out the 1982 season with the Los Angeles Rams.

The Oilers also announced that defensive end Ken Kennard had failed his physical examination and is free to try to pass another team's physical.

"His official status is that he failed our physical," Campbell said. "We had hoped that his knee would get better but unfortunately, it never did."

Kennard underwent arthroscopic knee surgery in July 1983 but had been limited to agility drills during Oiler training camp.

The Oilers open the exhibition schedule Saturday at Tampa Bay and will return to the Astrodome Aug. 11 against the New York Jets.

Brittany will star in 'Glitter'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

All that glitters is not gold — unless you're Aaron Spelling.

Armed with "Glitter," an appealing ensemble cast and a proven one-hour series formula that has made hits of "The Love Boat" and "Hotel," Spelling will offer a new show for ABC next fall, featuring Morgan Brittany.

"I play Kate Simpson, a Radcliffe girl who's had all the advantages of life and decides to get into the reporting business," Ms.Brittany said.

So Kate sends her resume to the owner of a People-like magazine called Glitter. Or maybe she just hands it to him over breakfast; the owner, played by Arthur Hill, is her father.

"They make a deal that she will work without anyone knowing their relationship," said Ms. Brittany.

"David Birney — he plays my partner — is unkempt, eating all the time. We're an odd couple. They're always bantering with each other, putting each other down, but you can see the possibility of a romance."

You can also see the possibility of another Aaron Spelling hit.

That wouldn't be new to Spelling, but a lead role, and a sympathetic one at that, would be a twist for Ms. Brittany.

She will also begin her fourth season this fall as Katherine Wentworth, Pam Ewing's slick half-sister on "Dallas."

In "Glitter" Ms. Brittany becomes an angel rather than a devil and takes on the responsibility of a lead player rather than a supporting star.

"I'll be good on Thursday and bad on Friday," she said of her new show and continuing "Dallas" role, which probably won't last much past Christmas.

"Which is better? The evil ones are the ones that are talked about," she said, but she should enjoy greater visibility in "Glitter."

Actually, visibility has never been a problem. At 32, Ms. Brittany has compiled a long list of professional credits.

The list is long because she started early, at age 5, appearing with Lloyd Bridges in his "Sea Hunt" series. Other '60s TV work followed, along with commercials.

There were movie parts too, in "The Birds," "Yours, Mine and Ours," and the role of Baby June in "Gypsy." She also has become the answer to a trivia question: Who played Vivien Leigh in the movies "Gable and Lombard" and in the NBC miniseries "Movieola"?

For the past three years, Ms. Brittany has combined her career with marriage to Jack Gill, a stunt man who has mangled cars on "The Dukes of Hazzard" and "The Fall Guy."

She has also found time to work for the March of Dimes, an interest that took her on tour recently.

"Glitter" will follow the formula of "Hotel" and "The Love Boat," introducing guest stars who develop separate story lines, all of which are brought to tidy conclusions in one hour flat.

Life copies art; art copies life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here's a case of life imitating art and art imitating life: an old radio show, "Mr. Keen, Tracer of Lost Persons," inspires Lloyd Shulman to become a missing persons investigator and he in turn inspires an upcoming ABC series, "Finder of Lost Loves."

"As a kid that was a fantastic program and I used to think, what a fantastic way to make a living," Shulman said. "I never thought that someday I would be doing that kind of work. In fact, I call my company 'Mr. Keen, Tracer of Missing Persons.' "

Shulman, 55, has spent 24 years tracking lost persons — most specifically, lost loved ones. He estimates he's found more than 85,000 persons.

"A lot of people don't know where their mother or brother or daughter is. I solve so many of these problems and every time I do I get a tremendous personal feeling," he said.

Shulman said he began by tracing missing persons for banks and insurance companies but found it too impersonal.

"I usually feel that next to the person I'm looking for and the person I'm working for, I'm the person who cares the most," he said. "I feel like I'm part of the family. I feel I'm related to them for that one investigation."

Shulman was the inspiration for "Finder of Lost Loves," according to Sal Ianucci of Aaron Spelling Productions. But, he said, the detective played by Tony Franciosa is not directly based on Shulman.

Shulman said loved ones usually become lost because of divorce and broken families or because someone leaves home after an argument.

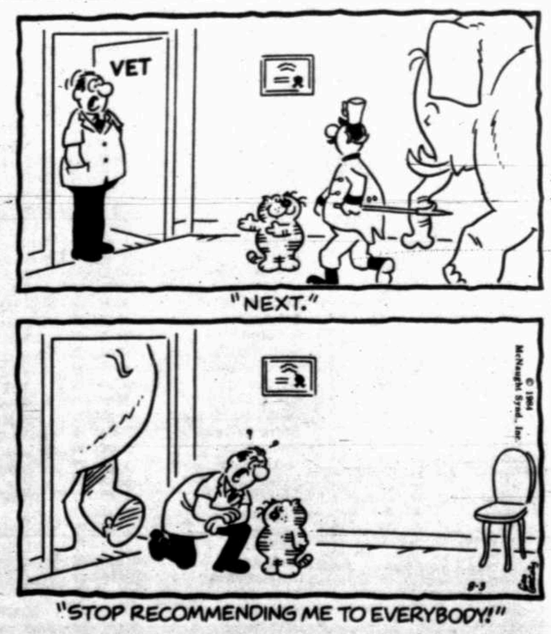

Shulman said he traced people with the help of 10 staffers and numerous contacts around the country.

A simple case that's quickly solved costs about $500, he said. Tougher cases can run to $2,000, but the average is less than $1,000. Shulman said clients pay 10 percent of the estimated cost in advance and nothing more until the person is found."

"Pessimism Pays" could easily be the slogan of many winning bridge players. If you imagine the worst, you may be able to find a way to combat it.

North-South bid well to an excellent game. Since South could have had considerably less for his balancing double, he had no hesitation about showing his spade suit at the three level. North had an easy raise to four.

West led the king of hearts and continued with the ace. Blithely unaware of the trouble lurking, declarer ruffed. When he cashed the ace and king of spades and West showed out, it began to dawn on declarer that there was trouble brewing. But it was too late — he had already lost control of the hand.

Declarer could not afford to draw the rest of the trumps before forcing out the ace of clubs, because the defenders would then be able to run their heart tricks. So he abandoned trumps in favor of clubs. West held up the ace of clubs one round, won the second club and gave his partner a club ruff for down one.

The contract was not hard to make. Declarer had an unavoidable diamond loser. He could have retained control of the trump suit if, instead of ruffing the second heart, he sluffed his losing diamond.

Now, if West continues with a heart, declarer can ruff on the table. If he plays anything else, declarer can win, draw four rounds of trumps and force out the ace of clubs. He will still have a trump to prevent the defenders from taking any more heart tricks.

KNON-FM 'people's station'

DALLAS (AP) — Charlie "Sonny" Rawls is a program director at a major market FM radio station. That's about where the similarity ends with his counterparts at various commercial outlets that churn out rock 'n roll, country and western music and non-stop newscasts.

Rawls' station — which he says is "held together with paper clips and chewing gum" — exists on a budget of $3,000 to $4,000 a month.

Most of the funding comes from knocking on doors asking listeners to toss a few dollars into a kitty that pays the electric bill, the salaries of three-full time staff members and keeps some 80 non-paid volunteers in jobs at KNON-FM.

Neither does the station's programming schedule have much similarity with others in the area.

During a week of tuning in, a listener can find a melting pot of programming not found anywhere else in Dallas — gospel, soul, progressive country and blues, not to mention Latin American tunes, music for breakdancing and programs for Vietnamese, Laotians and Cambodians.

KNON also serves as a public forum that has had representatives ranging from "the Socialist Workers Party to the John Birch Society" on the air espousing their views, Rawls said.

"Welcome to the people's station," is how Rawls, 33, recently greeted a visitor to KNON's studio, jammed into the second floor of a sweltering, decades-old house in east Dallas whose first story serves as the local home of the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now.

KNON is a "community station," a term that Rawls says is difficult to define, even though he works what he calls "48-hour days" — and often uses a bedroll in a spare room to catch a bit of sleep — in an effort to keep the outlet on the air.

In Rawls' words, "We'll put almost anyone on the air," who has an issue he or she wants discussed. Rawls also says he listens to any member of the public who has a particular idea for a program — be it music or news.

"If they have a decent idea, we'll try to fit it in," he said.

So far, that's how KNON has stayed on the air for nearly a year — "average Joes" coming forward to dedicate their time and creativity to put together KNON's unique blend of non-commercial programming.

"We want to display that wonderful thing Americans have — freedom of speech," Rawls said.

KNON signed on July 30, 1983, on 90.9 mhz, a frequency that was occupied for a brief time during the middle 1970s by KCHU, which ran out of money and went off the air in 1977, Rawls said.

A major fund-raising campaign, mostly manned by door-to-door volunteers, put together the initial money to put the station on the air. The same basic process, with the help of a few "underwriters," keeps the station running today, Rawls said.

Just the same, Rawls and the other paid workers sometimes "have to wait" before they can cash their paychecks, he says.

Despite the financial handicaps, KNON plans to broadcast from both the Republican National Convention Aug. 20-23 and from a "counter-convention" of protesters that plans to be at the scene in Dallas, Rawls said.

Already, spokesmen for various protest groups have discussed their planks on KNON, Rawls said. Representatives of the Republican Party have been invited, but so far have declined, he said.

KNON also concentrates much of its public affairs time on issues that affect low- and moderate-income people, such as utility rate hikes. At the same time, representatives of utility companies always are invited to present their side — but always have declined, Rawls said.

"We want people to hear all sides and made up their minds," Rawls said.

The concept of "community radio" has been greeted in the past with something less than enthusiasm in Texas. In Houston, station KPFT was bombed off the air twice during its first year of broadcasting in 1970. So far, KNON has been received more amiably by the public, Rawls said.

Rawls, who had previous radio experience at three stations in North Carolina, found out about the KNON job while he was working with Carolina ACTION, a group that worked on issues affecting low- and moderate-income families.

Two aspects of KNON have given Rawls particular satisfaction, he said.

First, the station plays a wide variety of local, unknown artists whose recordings would never see the light of day on commercial, mass-appeal stations, he said.

"There's a heck of a lot of talent in this area," he said. "We want to break new artists and give them a chance for it (professional recognition) to happen."

Rawls said Dallas had only one club specializing in reggae — a form of popular music of Jamaican origin influenced by rock 'n roll — before KNON began broadcasting the music form. There now are three reggae clubs, he said.

Secondly, KNON has given its corps of volunteer announcers a chance to break into broadcasting, he said. Several KNON volunteers have moved on to jobs in commercial radio, he said.

In the future, KNON plans to increase its signal from 10,000 watts to 100,000 watts and upgrade its equipment, much of which is now borrowed, Rawls said. The station also wants to do more remote broadcasts, he said.

THE BETTER HALF

"Do we want to join the Health Fad Of The Month club?"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, August 4, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The English poet Percy Bysshe Shelley was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Washington Redskins all-star John Riggins, actor Kristoffer Tabori, hockey's Maurice Richard and Cincinnati Reds pitcher Ben Hayes. Wield your authority wisely and the sky is the limit where your career is concerned. Invest any extra funds you get. A real bonanza is possible! Put an end to secret deals. Behind-the-scenes maneuvers could prove counterproductive. Your ideas find wider acceptance when you tone down your approach. Romantic partner makes you realize there is much more to love than you knew. A total commitment holds new appeal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The paperwork will really mount up if you postpone tackling it. Seize an opportunity to work out a problem with a co-worker. Romance takes a temporary backseat to career.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get to the bottom of whatever has come between you and your relatives. Contact with old friends proves very reassuring. So is a new romance. Do not be afraid to make a commitment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New job opportunities arise. Those who enjoy their work make the greatest progress. A family problem seems smaller this morning than it did last night. Be willing to compromise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A power struggle looms. Do your homework and you will win! Self-improvement projects pay rich dividends. Singles could decide to marry. Domestic changes bring new peace of mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You meet someone who has a lot in common with you. Money, not romance, could be your mutual interest. Having a conference with an employee could make you both more productive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Correct a habit that is impeding your progress. Fresh ideas are the key to bringing family members closer together. Put your work aside and devote your full attention to home life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance grows in intensity. You may want to back off a bit. Cultivate a family member who does not really know you well. Discuss a financial problem with your offspring.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your spirits rise when you are with people who think positive. Dress well to impress a blind date. Romance is in the air. Regular exercise and good eating habits keep you feeling fit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take a loved one along on a weekend trip. Romance and good luck go hand-in-hand now. Set aside time for your favorite recreational activities. Obstacles disappear when you level with partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Put work aside for a while. You and your loved ones deserve a break. A period of recreation will make you more productive when you return to work. Relax and have fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel brings you and old friends together for a wonderful reunion. Your creative juices flow freely. Get to the typewriter or drawing board! Straighten out a misunderstanding before it spoils the weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Forcing an issue will only drive a bigger wedge between parent and teenager. Find new ways to handle your differences. An invitation puts you in touch with someone who can improve your finances.

Division II consists of girls in the 11-13 age bracket. The fast pitch finals will be held in Abilene this weekend.

In the state meet in Snyder, Midland beat Snyder 26-3 and Odessa Turquoise 13-1 before losing to Odessa Maroon by a 6-5 margin in the double elimination tournament.

However, Midland came back in the championship finals to earn the national berth with an 18-6 win over the Maroon team.

Midland's Division I Blue team (ages 8-10) finished in second place while the Red team was fourth. Midland's Division III Blue team (14-16) also placed second in its division while Red placed fifth. In Division IV (17-19) competition, Midland Blue was second.

Casey McMillan and Josh Riley will be heading to San Diego Wednesday to compete in the nationals. All national qualifiers will be treated to a day at the Olympics and a trip to Sea World.

In the 10-11 age group, McMillan won the region long jump title with a 13-7½ while Riley won the 200-meter dash with a 26.93 in the 12-13 age group.

Bikes race Saturday

Peyton's Bikes will hold its first annual Twin Cities bike race Saturday at 8 a.m. Entry fee is $6 per rider and covers the cost of a T-shirt.

The race will begin at the "Friendship" monument on Highway 191 between Midland and Odessa. It will run east to the 191/Andrews Highway crossover then west to the Loop 338 crossover in Odessa and then back to the starting point. The course is 22 miles in length.

COACHES

"A lot of the players didn't understand," Alford said. "He doesn't play by the scoreboard. (Kentucky's) Adolph Rupp always said he wanted to coach the perfect game — without fouls, without turnovers, without defensive mistakes. Coach Knight is like that. He wants to coach a perfect game and a perfect player."

Knight amplified on the theme.

"I want my team to be the best it can be and I do the most I can to achieve that," he said. "I am able to walk away from a game we've lost if I thought we played well more easily than a game we won that I thought we didn't play well.

"Your ego gets involved. I breathe a sigh of relief when we score because then I know it won't be a shutout. I do the same thing when we get to 10 because then I know we'll be in double figures.

"I'm not sure I'm a good coach. From a coaching standpoint, what I try to do is examine the reasons why you lose and eliminate them."

Knight emphasizes fundamentals, something that heads Dedeaux's coaching manual, as well. The baseball coach's edition, though, has a section labled humor.

When he learned that Knight and his team had been caught in a traffic jam caused by a freeway accident, Dedeaux expressed his concern.

"I'm glad it's not serious," he said. Then, playing off Knight's well-known temper, he added, "For a moment, I thought he'd attacked the chief of police at Seventh and Figueroa."

That's Dedeaux's style, always looking for a laugh. He is a collegiate Lasorda, playing to the crowd, using tested routines, working the room like a nightclub performer.

"You should have seen him and Lasorda at a Rotary Club luncheon that was held for us," said Barry Larkin, a University of Michigan infielder on the U.S. team. "They're interchangeable. Coach Dedeaux is funny, clever, quick, a real pepperpot. He's always talking. If you have a headache, don't come into our dugout. If you do, it's gonna get worse."

OLYMPICS

Blatnick battled Thomas Johansson on even terms for most of the two six-minute halves before dropping the Swede twice to his knees — then falling to his knees in exultation and tears when time ran out.

"The story of my life is that when there is a setback, I just bounce right back," said Blatnick who, two years ago was diagnosed as having a form of cancer. He was operated on for the removal of his spleen, underwent radiation therapy — and was back wrestling just three weeks after surgery.

He rattled off the names of teammates, coaches and friends and said they deserved the medal as much as he did. "I wish I could break it up. ... If I can be an inspiration to anybody, that's great."

Vidmar, who two days ago helped the U.S. gymnastics team win its first gold in 80 years, held a slender lead over Li Ning of China going into Thursday's six exercises. But after Li faded (he won the bronze), so did Vidmar while Gushiken, posting two 9.95 marks and two 9.90s, took control.

Gushiken won by a slim 118.700-118.675. "I left Japan determined to win two golds since I missed Moscow," he said, a reference to being a member of Japan's 1980 Olympic team which joined the United States-led boycott. He can get his second gold Saturday in the apparatus finals.

As far as the American swimmers were concerned, the biggest surprise was that it wasn't all that easy for the men's 400 freestyle relay team.

Chris Cavanaugh of Mountain View, Calif., Mike Heath of Dallas, Matt Biondi of Moraga, Calif., and Gaines needed their world-record performance to hold off Australia, which finished .65 of a second behind the U.S. team.

"To tell you the truth, I thought we'd walk away with this event," said Gaines. "We have to face it that other countries are catching up with us in swimming, even though I think we have the best team ever assembled."

The United States reached the rowing finals in six categories — women's and men's single sculls, men's double sculls, pair oars with and without coxswain and four oars with coxsain.

The French eight appeared to have lost their chance for a medal when an oarlock pin broke during their 2,000-meter race. But International Rowing Federation President Thomas Keller put them into the final, ruling the break resulted from "wiliful damage."

"From the sports point of view," Keller said, "it's the only thing the council could do." The French eight will row in an outside lane normally used for practice when they join the six other qualifiers.

Wee Willie leads Memphis Classic

Scramble with unfamiliar tools ends with 67

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Willie Wood had a share of the lead and some more familiar tools when he set out for the second round of the $500,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

Wood, the slightly-built rookie called "Wee Willie" by his fellow tourists, got maximum mileage from a backup wedge and a borrowed putter when he scrambled to a 5-under-par 67 and tied Loren Roberts for the first round lead Thursday.

Using those unfamiliar weapons, he got up and down for par five times, chipped in once and made but a single bogey.

"I didn't hit the ball all that well, but I scrambled real well — and that's a surprise considering I thought I'd lost my sand wedge and putter," said the 5-foot-7, 135-pound Wood.

But Willie's putter and sand wedge, were not lost, only misplaced. They were located in the locker room shortly after he completed first-round play on the longer, tougher Colonial Country Club course and were happily returned to his bag.

"I've used 'em for seven years and I'm glad to get 'em back," said Wood, a runner-up in the recent Anheuser-Busch Classic. "I'm surprised I scrambled as well as I did with a new putter and wedge."

The wedge, he said, was a backup he carries with him and the putter was borrowed from a member's bag.

Roberts, who reeled off a string of three consecutive birdies, did not make a bogey in his effort over the Colonial Country Club course that has been lengthened to 7,282 yards, the longest on the PGA tour, and was toughened by more narrow fairways and more difficult rough.

Mark Pfeil, who holed two putts from about 20 feet and another from 30, also got around without a bogey and was alone at 68.

The group at 69 included Lon Hinkle, Danny Edwards, Jim Simons, Joey Sindelar, Dan Forsman and Tom Lehman.

Defending champion Larry Mize matched par 72 in the mild, overcast weather.

Wood one-putted five times to reach the turn 1 under par. He chipped in from about 50 feet for birdie on his 11th hole, birdied three of the next five and then saved par with a full 9-iron third shot that stopped a foot from the cup on his 17th.

Roberts, who also recorded a chip-in birdie, made his round with a burst of three consecutive birdies beginning on his 10th, then saved a share of the lead with a six-to-eight foot par-saving putt on his final hole.

Speidel tough golf course to play

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Oglebay Park's 6,100-yard Speidel golf course, the site of this weekend's West Virginia LPGA Classic, is no place to lose your concentration, defending champion Alice Miller says.

"You have to be thinking two shots ahead on the course," she said. "If you don't think about what you want to do on the following shot, you can get into trouble.

"It's the kind of course where no one ever runs away from the rest of field, which is why there have probably been so many playoffs."

A playoff has determined the tournament winner for five straight years, an LPGA record.

Miller, who won last year's tournament on the fourth playoff hole over Debbie Massey and Lori Garbacz, is 10th in earnings this season, making her the leading money winner entered in the $150,000 tournament beginning Friday.

Miller and Jan Stephenson, still seeking her first tournament victory this year, are the big spectator draws in a 122-player field, which includes four other former champions but only five of the year's top 20 money winners.

"We have the largest field we've had in the history of the tournament," said William Ihlenfeld, chairman of the 11th annual tournament. "The quality of the field has improved more than ever. If you look at the stroke average between one and 25, there's very little difference.

"The people and the spectators want to see quality golf and the LPGA tour is a lot deeper than ever before. It used to be that if JoAnne Carner or Nancy Lopez showed up, they won. That's not the case anymore. There are a lot of outstanding golfers capable of winning every week."

Judy Clark, Rosie Jones, Stephenson and Chris Johnson also are top 20 money winners entered in the 54-hole tournament.

Other returning defending champions are Susie McCallister (1975), Jane Blalock (1976, 1978), Debbie Austin (1977) and Massey (1979.)

Meanwhile, Wheeling Area Chamber of Commerce officials are scheduled to meet Friday with LPGA Commissioner John Laupheimer to discuss the tournament's future.

The West Virginia LPGA Classic, the only tour stop without a major corporate sponsor, is in the final year of a five-year contract with the LPGA.

"We've got dates and purse to discuss and then we'll know more," Ihlenfeld said.

Pittsburgh Pirates broadcaster Bob Prince says if Wheeling does not pick up the tournament, he will try to move it to Pittsburgh.

"We've heard about that," Ihlenfeld. "My feelings would be that we would prefer to keep it in West Virginia rather than have it anywhere else."

Raiders' Hendricks retires

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Perennial All-Pro linebacker Ted Hendricks, who never missed a game during his 15 years in the National Football League, has formally announced his retirement, the Los Angeles Raiders said Thursday.

Raiders officials did not give the reason for Hendricks' decision but it had been reported that the 36-year-old linebacker failed his physical examination at the Raiders' Santa Rosa training camp in July.

Hendricks could not be reached for comment.

A Pro-Bowl selection last season for the fourth consecutive year and the eighth time during his career, Hendricks was a member of three Super Bowl Championship teams — in 1977, '81 and '84 — with the Raiders.

"Ted Hendricks is one of the truly great players to have ever played professional football," said Raiders Managing General Partner Al Davis. "He was a major contributor to the Raiders winning three World champs and is destined to be a Hall of Fame member. We wish him well in all his future endeavors.

Hendricks was selected to the NFL's Pro Bowl, the league's post-season All-Star game, eight times

Midland County taxes to go up in 1985, official says

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County taxes will be going up in 1985, but apparently they'll still be among the lowest county taxes in Texas.

"We will be increasing taxes," Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright said Thursday following a Commissioners' Court budget study session. "The range will be somewhere between 3 and 7 percent...There must be some slight increase."

The county commissioners, in budget study this summer, are to set the 1984 tax rate and are to approve the 1985 budget in their Aug. 13 meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

The current-year budget approaches $12 million, and the 1983 tax rate is 18.23 cents per $100 valuation based on fair-market values. The countywide valuation in 1983 was $4.048 billion.

Projected budgetary increases and a hike in taxes are due in part, Wright said, to the need for interim financing of the proposed new jail, an expanding county government, and possible renovation of the courthouse's fifth-floor jail. Such renovation would allow more space for the courts. The commissioners are considering building a $6 million jail near the Midland County Exhibit Building, located just east of Midland off U.S. Highway 80. However, cost of building the jail could vary. After interim financing via a loan is made, the commissioners would sell certificates of obligation to raise additional revenue to construct the facility.

The commissioners are considering setting the 1984 tax rate from the upper 15 cents to the mid-16 cents per $100 valuation.

However, Midland County Tax-Assessor Collector Frances Shuffield computed the 1984 effective tax rate at 15.40 cents per $100 valuation based on countywide valuations of $5.067 billion.

The effective tax rate is that rate needed to bring in revenue comparable to that of the previous year. The effective rate of 15.40 cents is below the 1983 rate of 18.23 cents, due to a 20.1 percent increase in countywide valuations: from $4.048 billion to $5.067 billion.

Were the effective tax rate of 15.40 cent adopted, for example, taxes on a $100,000 house would be $154 a year and on a $50,000 house, $77.

A 3 percent increase above the effective tax rate to 15.86 cents would raise those taxes to $158.60 on a $100,000 house and $79.30 on a $50,000 house.

An 8 percent increase to 16.63 cents would hike those taxes to $166.30 and $83.15. A 7 percent hike would convert to $164.80 on a $100,000 house and $84.40 on a $50,000 house.

The difference between the effective tax rate and an 8 percent increase would be $12.30 on a $100,000 house and $6.15 on a $50,000 house.

Were a homeowner's house not increased in appraised value from 1983 to 1984, then county taxes on that house would decrease. That drop would be based on the 1983 tax rate of 18.23 and the proposed 1984 tax rate of 16-plus cents. But, in general, appraised values are on the rise.

The commissioners may increase the tax rate up to 3 percent without calling a public hearing. Any increase between 4 percent and 8 percent requires public hearings. An increase in the effective rate of more than 8 percent could trigger a rollback election, according to Ms. Shuffield.

Were the effective tax rate adopted, the county would count on getting $7.8 million in revenue for the 1985 budget year. A 3 percent increase would hike the revenue to $8.036 million, a 7 percent increase would bring in $8.35 million, and an 8 percent increase, $8.427 million.

Of Texas' 254 counties, the proposed Midland County tax rate of approximately 16 cents ranks 25th from the bottom, Wright said. But his calculations are based on the 1982 rates, which, he said, are the latest available to him and which wouldn't vary substantially.

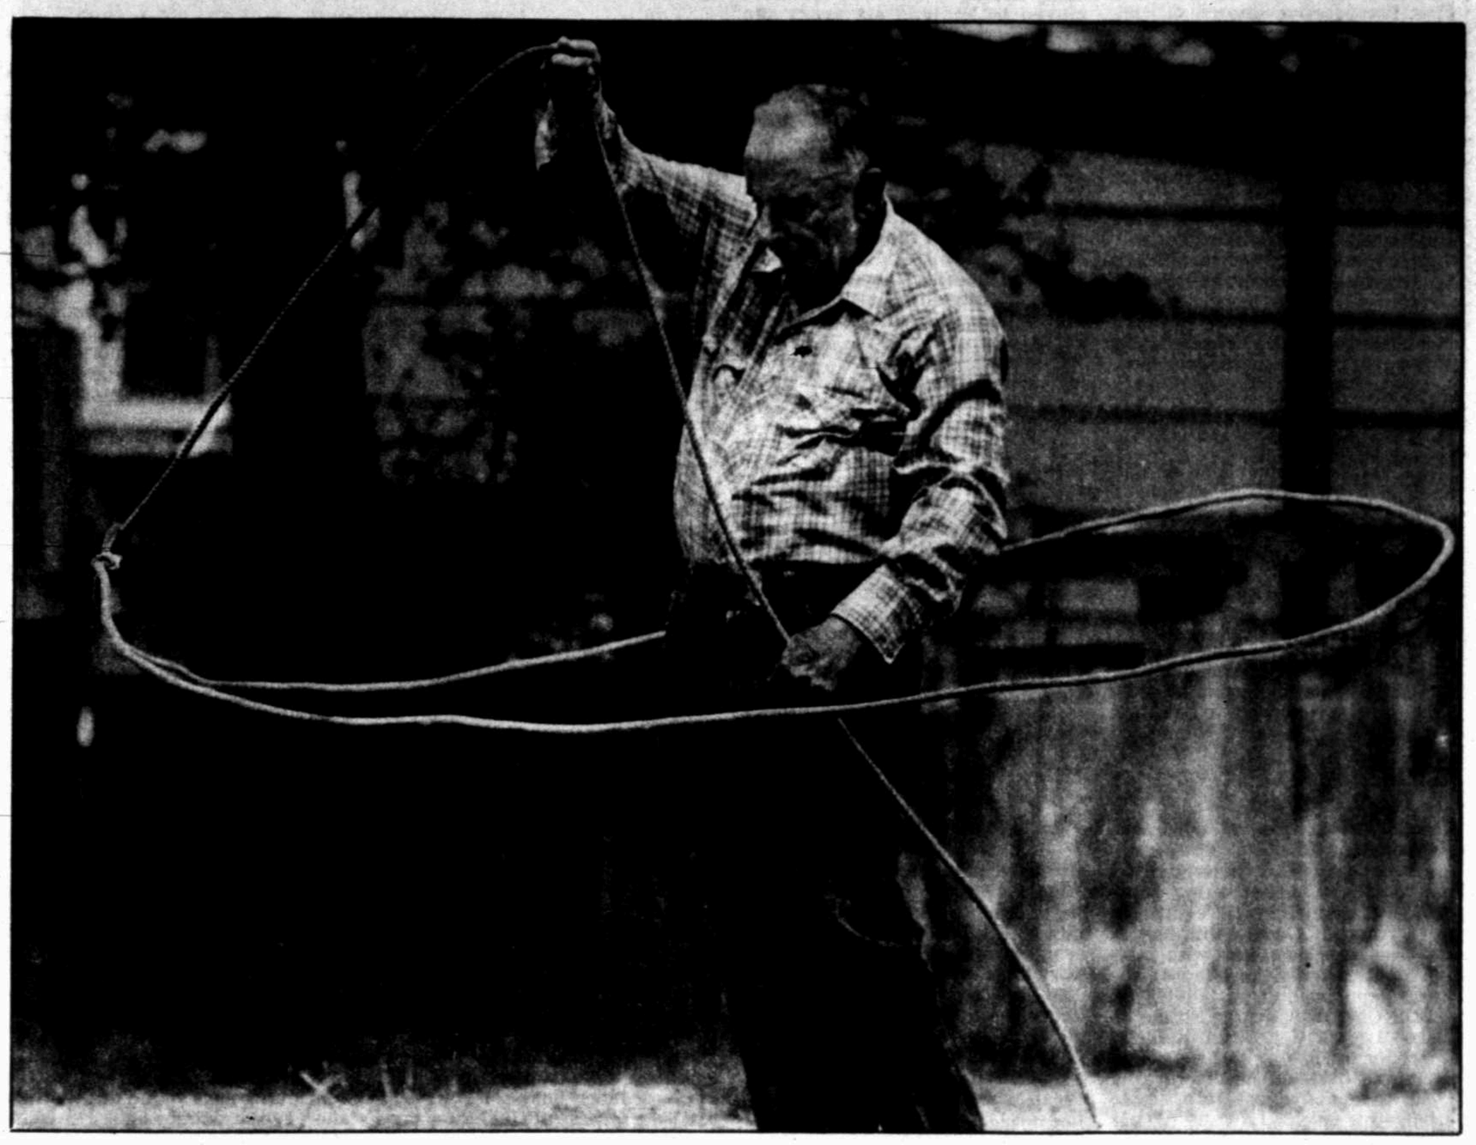

"That means there are 229 counties with higher tax rates than Midland County," he said.

Among the lowest on his list are the counties of Pecos (Fort Stockton), 6.88 cents; Morris, 7.1 cents; Yoakum, 9.8 cents; Loving, 10 cents; Freestone, 10 cents; Refugio, 10.1 cents; Cass, 11 cents; Washington, 11.12 cents; Andrews, 11.2 cents, and Crane, 11.32 cents.

Neighboring Ector County (Odessa) in 1982 had a 28-cent tax rate. Tom Green County (San Angelo) had a 40-cent tax rate, Wright said, and Martin County (Stanton), 21 cents. Howard County (Big Spring) was 24 cents, and Taylor County (Abilene) was 23 cents.

The highest rate was 81.5 cents for Jim Hogg County in South Texas. Duval County was 75 cents, and Deaf Smith in the Panhandle was 46.8 cents.

"We are very, very, very conservative," said Ms. Shuffield.

Texas Ranger probe clears city police

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A Texas Ranger inquiry has exonerated city police of any wrongdoing in the case of a former prisoner who had told relatives his paralyzing neck injuries resulted from being beaten by police after he was jailed for public intoxication last spring.

Juan Rodriquez, 33, of Big Spring, was arrested at an eastside Midland grocery store the afternoon of May 9 and was found unconscious on the floor of his cell shortly after 5:30 p.m.

He was initially treated at Midland Memorial Hospital, then was transferred to John Sealy in Galveston. He suffered a broken neck and severe head lacerations, according to doctors, and may never walk again.

Rodriquez' mother-in-law, Yolanda Juarez of Big Spring, said police told her he "beat himself up." But she said she didn't believe the police and that Rodriquez told her "the officers beat me" when she talked to him by telephone from his Galveston hospital bed.

During a July 9 tape-recorded interview at the hospital by Ranger Joe Haralson of Texas City, however, Rodriquez said he remembered getting drunk and being put in a cell by himself but couldn't remember anything after that.

"They just put me in the cell," he says on the tape. "I went to sleep or something. When I woke up, I was here (Galveston). I don't remember the rest."

Asked if anyone had beaten him, he said: "I don't know. I was drunk. I was sitting on the bunk and may have went to sleep."

Rodriquez replied "I don't know" when asked how he hurt his neck. He repeated basically the same story when re-questioned with the aid of two Spanish-speaking hospital employees.

Police speculate that he either rammed his head into the bars of his cell or fell from the bunk and struck his head on the concrete floor.

Rodriquez reportedly had told doctors at MMH that he beat his head against the bars "because he was angry."

"Based on the information received from Mr. Rodriquez himself, there's no apparent violation of the law on the part of police," Ranger Capt. Maurice Cook said Thursday.

Cook added that the Ranger inquiry also looked "at other aspects of the case. Our formal conclusion is that the injuries were self-inflicted."

Said Chief of Police Wayne Gideon: "Our reports reflect what the Rangers found. We were pretty well satisfied that the injuries were self-inflicted. But we had not had the opportunity to interview Mr. Rodriquez ourselves. That was the missing link for us.

"As far as I'm concerned, I am now well satisfied that the injuries were self-inflicted. We'll turn our files over to the city attorney's office."

Woman recounts events leading up to 'buy-bust'

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — After listening to more than two days of testimony in the attempted murder case of Jana Denise Matheny, it will be up to jurors in the 70th District Court today to decide her guilt or innocence.

Ms. Matheny, 22, was on the witness stand for most of Thursday's proceedings, recounting the events leading up to the Dec. 9, 1983 "buy-bust" set up by narcotics officers.

Michael Grant Matheny, the defendant's 33-year-old husband, died in gunfire which erupted when Ms. Matheny noticed plain-clothes officers trying to enter the room where the deal was being made.

Two officers trying to force their way in were wounded by bullets which passed through the room's door. A third defendant, who had been taken into custody by another officer participating in the planned arrest, escaped temporarily when the officer rushed to the aid of the fallen officers.

Gerald Leon Hardin, 33, escaped the scene, but was arrested after a high-speed chase through northeast Odessa when the engine in his getaway truck failed.

Hardin and his aunt, Ms. Matheny, have been indicted for delivery of cocaine and attempted capital murder. This week's proceedings deal only with the attempted capital murder indictment brought against Ms. Matheny.

She faced more than five hours of questioning Thursday from her attorney and the prosecution. Her husband and Hardin worked for an Odessa business partially owned by Matheny's sister. The business was experiencing financial trouble in fall 1983, according to her testimony.

When the business continued to struggle, the other co-owner allegedly convinced Matheny and Hardin to get into the drug business. James Walter Torrence, 45, Odessa, was indicted in February 1984 for delivery of cocaine to Ms. Matheny.

Torrence, co-owner of the oil-field-related business, supplied the money used to purchase the cocaine and provided the guns Hardin and her husband were carrying Dec. 9, said Ms. Matheny.

She told jurors how the couple had returned from Colorado, where Matheny had been undergoing methadone treatments for a drug addiction, to work for the company. Torrence convinced Hardin and Matheny to first look for heroin to sell, then supplied $12,000 she used to purchase cocaine in Lubbock, said Ms. Matheny.

During her testimony, the defendant admitted her guilt on the delivery charges, and also told the court how she had bought, sold and used the drug — all felony offenses.

She told jurors Matheny had a "pleasant personality," but had beaten her on several occasions. In the weeks before her arrest, Ms. Matheny testified her husband took overdoses of the drug through a syringe seven times, calling for her to administer first aid to revive him.

The seventh overdose convinced her she needed to get rid of the drug, said Ms. Matheny, leading to her first meeting Dec. 8 with Odessa Police Det. Steve Frederick, the undercover officer who shot Matheny to death in the room at the La Quinta Motor Inn the next day.

After Ms. Matheny spoke with Frederick the next morning to set up the ill-fated deal, she said she met with Torrence, who provided 2½ of the 3½ ounces of the drug brought to the motel room.

Her testimony indicated she had no idea either her husband or Hardin were carrying guns. While some testimony indicated she secured the room's deadbolt before the shooting started, she admits no memory of this.

The state hopes to convict Ms. Matheny under "the law of parties," which implicates accomplices. Sullivan has insisted in his defense that she took no part in the shootings.

He has emphasized throughout the case that it was virtually impossible to recognize the officers as law enforcement because they were not wearing uniforms.

Ms. Matheny spent seven days in jail before posting $25,000 bond. Hardin posted a $20,000 personal recognizance bond. Both were orginally held on $100,000 bond.

Torrence, who posted a $10,000 bond the day of his indictment, waived arraignment February 13. Sullivan said attempts to locate Torrence were unsuccessful, with subpoenas returned unserved.

Final arguments will be made today, before jurors begin their deliberations.

Moves transfer problems to spouse

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Not too many years ago, it was relatively easy for a wife to pull up stakes and join her husband when he was transferred to a new city.

If she was a housewife, she simply resumed her duties in the new location. And for many women who were employed, their husband's jobs took precedence; they thought of themselves as partners in his career.

Obviously, times have changed.

"Women are not looking for just a job now — they want a career," says Kathy Blackman, a Midland placement consultant.

This has complicated the relocation process for today's two-career families. When a man or woman is offered an opportunity for advancement in another city, the advantages must be weighed against the possible damage to the other spouse's career.

"It's been a fact of life with us for several years," says Carl Springer of Exxon USA's Employee Relations Department. "It's much more common for a person to decline an offer because the husband or wife has a good job which they don't want to jeopardize. Even field workers have turned down (transfers) because their wife has a good job."

For those who do decide to transfer, Exxon makes an effort to help the other spouse find work.

"We'll do what we can to refer them to employers," says Springer. "But they often don't need our assistance. The majority of folks who move to Midland are professionals, and the majority of the husbands and wives tend to be equally educated — they have marketable skills."

But those skills may not be as marketable in Midland as elsewhere, because the local economy is so dominated by the oil and gas industry.

"Midland is not as versatile because there aren't as many industries you can be in," says Ms. Blackman. "We have a lot of very well-educated spouses of both sexes who are not working."

Although two-career families are more prevalent these days, for many couples the husband's career is still more important, says Ms. Blackman.

"I think times have not changed as much as you might suspect as far as Midland is concerned. The husband is still the main breadwinner."

Wives who have trouble resuming their careers in the new location "often regroup and go into civic organizations," says Ms. Blackman, "But it's different for the men. I've seen marriages disintegrate because of the inability of the man to find employment."

Age is also an important factor in the readjustment process, says Ms. Blackman.

"The younger generation is more flexible. They still have time left to change their whole career. The older you get the harder it is to start over."

Starting over is something Arlene Strickland is familiar with. She gave up her public relations job in Canton, Ohio, in 1980 when her husband Ted became assistant director of Theatre Midland, but quickly resumed her career as public relations director for Midland Memorial Hospital. She recently took a new job with the United Way of Midland, but when the fall fund-raising campaign is over she'll be moving again — to Chattanooga, Tenn., where her husband is starting a new job.

"Ted's job is in theater — he's got to go where the jobs are," she says. "I'm fortunately more flexible (with public relations)."

"The two hardest things are coping with having to leave a job you really like, and having to put yourself back in the job market. It's very stressful, especially if you're moving to a new town. That's difficult to face."

To help relieve that kind of stress, many companies are actively trying to help place the accompanying spouse when they transfer someone into town.

"We were at one point ready to start a network of major companies in Midland" to help place spouses, says Ray Guerrero, a RepublicBank First National Midland vice president who deals with personnel. "It never got that far, but we realize the spouse's position many times now is just as important. We view it as a total family move."

"Our approach doesn't reflect a generous policy of Exxon," says Springer. "It's just what people expect."

Addressing convention not soapbox to success

AUSTIN (AP) — Addressing a national political convention is not the soapbox to success it's cracked up to be, according to a man who coached several major speakers at this year's Democratic National Convention.

"It's a fantastic opportunity for the people in the spotlight, the real limelight. For the rest it's an honor, but not much of an opportunity," said Neal Spelce, a former television news anchorman.

The problem is that convention delegates become speech-numb as speaker after speaker addresses them during the four-day sessions, Spelce said. Many delegates find better things to do.

"A convention itself, by virtue of all the things going on and all the distractions, plus the general demeanor of delegates, ranges from no attention whatsoever to rabid enthusiasm and everything in between," said Spelce, who now owns an Austin public relations firm.

As a volunteer called into duty by a friend who served as the Democrats' "podium producer" in San Francisco, Spelce often was holed up in a small room beneath the podium. There he prepared speakers for what they would find on the podium and in the Moscone Center.

Spelce spent five hours with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, whose keynote address was hailed as a convention highlight. He also coached Sen. Gary Hart, former President Jimmy Carter, Sen. Edward Kennedy and Texas Gov. Mark White.

He was not asked to help the Rev. Jesse Jackson, whose revival-like speech ignited the crowd.

"His speaking style is his speaking style and he's very good at what he does. It's like my mother, who is a great primitive painter. You don't try to fine-tune something like that," said Spelce.

Working with Cuomo was easy for several reasons, according to the coach. The New York governor got "rapt attention" from the crowd and a "reasoned, straightforward address" that did not depend on theatrics.

So Spelce and Cuomo worked on what the governor would do when he wasn't speaking — when the crowd was reacting.

"In his case, he drank a lot of water," said Spelce.

Tower wants Senate process streamlined

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress "simply cannot do its work" because of a committee system that duplicates effort and bogs down in "bickering" over jurisdiction, says U.S. Sen. John Tower.

Tower, R-Texas, who is retiring at the end of the year, made his suggestions Thursday during testimony before the Committee on Committees, which is preparing a report on ways to streamline the Senate committee process.

He said his suggestions would mean eliminating special-interest committees and diminishing the power of some senators.

"When all these practicalities are considered, it may well be that the system cannot be substantially changed," Tower said. "But if that is the case, then it is the country that is the loser, because we now have a Congress which simply cannot do its work."

Government programs which require federal money currently go through two processes: first, before the authorizing committee which approves the programs, and second, before the appropriations subcommittee, which approves the money for the programs.

Spending limits are supposedly set by the Budget Committee before the authorization process begins since the 1974 Budget Act was written.

"And if the fiscal discipline is imposed at the beginning of the process, there is no reason to have both an authorization and an appropriations process. One or the other can be deleted," Tower said.

"I fully recognize that there are 29 members of the Appropriations Committee," Tower said. "I fully recognize that each of those members has a plum of an assignment."

Disbanding the Budget Committee and letting the Appropriations Committee take over its functions was one of his suggestions.

Tower said two-year spending measures would allow departments and agencies to plan further in advance and give Congress time of to consider broader national issues.

"It has become increasingly apparent to me that we are obsessed with the budget," Tower said. "All we can do each year, it appears, is struggle to pass a budget resolution to pass a tax bill which now seems to be an annual event, to enact some portion of the appropriations laws, and to perhaps have a reconciliation measure. And we seem to be having a terribly difficult time doing even this small amount."

Mattox memo riles state GOP chairman

AUSTIN (AP) — In writing a memo to aides encouraging attendance at a Democratic campaign rally, Attorney General Jim Mattox confused public business with partisan politics, says the head of the Texas Republican Party.

GOP Chairman George Strake on Thursday said he considers it improper for Mattox to have sent a memo to division chiefs, urging them to encourage employees to attend this week's rally for Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro.

"I would like to know what it will take to convince Mr. Mattox that politics and public funds don't mix," Strake said.

Mattox's press secretary said the attorney general personally paid for printing the memo and insisted there was nothing improper in his distributing it.

Spokeswoman Elna Christopher also said employees who chose to leave work early to attend the rally were told to work through lunch or skip coffee breaks so the state government wasn't deprived oi their work time.

"There was absolutely nothing improper in this," Ms. Christopher said.

"It wasn't pressure. It was just a memo saying this will be a great event and hope you all can come," she said. "He's a Democrat. He supports the Mondale-Ferraro ticket."

The memo was dated Tuesday, the day before the rally that was held on the Capitol lawn for presidential Mondale and Ms. Ferraro.

The typewritten memo, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, noted that the rally was scheduled to begin at 4:45 p.m.

"I hope you will encourage your associates and their families to attend this historic event," it said. "If you have children, bring them. In years to come, they will have rare memories, truly something to tell your grandchildren about."

Handwritten at the bottom of the memo was the notation: "Hope you can get everyone to come. All the statewide officials will be there."

Ms. Christopher said a state employee typed the memo — but during a lunch hour. She said Mattox paid to have it duplicated at a private printing service not connected with state government.

"He had 20-some copies done at a private place," she said.

She said several employees inquired about taking off time to attend the rally.

"What we told people was that if they were going to take off (to attend the rally), don't take lunch, skip coffee breaks, whatever. But do not go on state time," she said.

She said "six or seven" of Mattox's employees were driving in the Mondale motorcade, but all of them took vacation or compensatory time off to do so.

The Texas GOP's Strake said he believed the memo was the latest in a series of incidents.

"It just doesn't stop with Jim Mattox. Just another incident in the continuing saga of mixing politics and payroll, public funds for political purposes," Strake said.

"First, he hires a state employee to plan a Christmas party and to do arrangements for a political fundraiser. Then, he gets a group of state lawyers to harass firms who do bonding business. And now he's apparently used state property to encourage employees paid by the taxpayers to attend a Democratic rally," Strake said.

Six days of rain won't end Abilene's conservation plan

ABILENE (AP) — Despite six consecutive days of rain that have eased effects of a drought in this thirsty city, the amount of precipitation is not enought to lift a mandatory water conservation plan, officials say.

Early Thursday 1.55-inches of rain were recorded, the largest since Oct. 20, 1983 when the city had a 1.73-inch downpour.

"An inch and a half will make some difference but it won't solve the problem," said Ken Cash of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service local office.

"Basically, to catch up you'll have to have a flood," said Water Administration Director Dwayne Hargesheimer.

Hargesheimer said the conservation program, which began a week ago, will have to continue through winter unless there is a prolonged rain.

'Good Samaritan' loses his life

From Staff Reports

An elderly "good Samaritan" lost his life early this morning when he was struck by a car after stopping to help a motorist who had been involved in a minor accident.

The "bad chain of events," said a Department of Public Safety spokesman, occurred at 12:35 a.m. today on the south service road of Interstate 20 about three miles west of Midland.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry was 64-year-old Joseph Callicott of Gallion, Ala. He had been hit by a westbound car driven by Samuel Moore of Midland, no age or street address available.

The DPS spokesman said Callicott was in the roadway assisting an unidentified driver who had been involved in an earlier accident. "It was a bad deal for a good Samaritan," he added.

Callicott's body was taken to the Ellis Funeral Home. No charges were filed.

Seventy-two-year-old pilot too busy to be frightened

HOUSTON (AP) — Doyle Grigsby says he was too busy to be scared as his plane plowed throught a wooded area and crashed near Hobby Airport.

Fear didn't set in until he was taken to Memorial Hospital Southeast, where doctors stitched his head and hand, the first injuries he's suffered in 56 years of flying.

Grigsby, 72, of Eufaula, Okla., and John Cochran, 68, of Checotah, Okla., had just taken off from Hobby in Cochran's newly purchased twin-engine Beechcraft when the plane lost power Thursday afternoon.

The two kept the craft aloft long enough to clear a residential neighborhood, but lacked the power to turn back toward the airport or to clear the power lines in their path.

In a manuever he later compared to a crop-dusting stunt, Grigsby clipped the wire and hit the trees in a field southeast of the Gulf Freeway. Grigsby estimated his speed when he hit the trees at 100 mph.

The left wing tip was severed and there was extensive damage to the plane's nose. The engine was crushed.

Grigsby began flying in 1928, and Cochran started in 1941. Their 99 years of experience added up to a safe escape, the two men said.

"Only one in 10 pilots could have clipped that wire and put it down without flippin' it," Grigsby said.

FBI searching for teen-ager accused of kidnapping girl

DETROIT (AP) — The FBI is searching for a teen-age baby sitter who allegedly kidnapped a 3½-year-old girl from a suburban Detroit motel, authorities said.

U.S. Attorney Leonard Gilman said Thursday that a federal kidnapping warrant has been issued against Lisa Mize, about 18, who is thought to be from Houston.

She is charged in the disappearance of Jessica Marie Klapp, who was reported missing Monday by her father, Wallace Lee Klapp of Taylor, Gilman said in a statement.

Miss Mize was a friend of Klapp and was caring for the child at the Siesta Motel in Taylor while he worked as a dispatcher at the Detroiter Truck Stop in Woodhaven, said FBI Special Agent Robert Mott.

Witnesses said Miss Mize checked out of the motel with the girl at about 5:30 p.m. Monday and spent about five hours at a nearby restaurant. The woman and child were last seen in the restaurant parking lot accompanied by a man, Mott said.

Klapp returned from work, found the child was missing and called Taylor Police at about 11 p.m., said Assistant U.S. Attorney Virginia Morgan. Ms. Morgan said Jessica's mother died more than a year ago in an automobile accident.

Mott said authorities were unsure of the motive for the apparent abduction, and that Miss Mize had not contacted Klapp.

Because the woman said she was from Texas and had a southern accent, the FBI office in Houston was involved in the search, Mott said.

"If we have to guess at a direction (to look), I guess we're guessing south at this time," he said.

Coast Guard wants to dump toxic wastes in Gulf

HOUSTON (AP) — The Coast Guard has asked the Environmental Protection Agency for permission to dump 10 tons of toxic waste in the Gulf of Mexico because it has run out of other options, an EPA spokesman says.

Pat Tobin, director of the EPA's Criteria and Standards Division in Washington, D.C., said Thursday the Coast Guard was unable to find another feasible way to dispose of the chemical.

"We will probably not make any decision until Friday whether to grant a permit," said Tobin, whose office gathers information backing up emergency requests to dump hazardous waste.

The Coast Guard asked the EPA for an emergency permit to empty 7,000 metal flasks containing aluminum phosphine, which killed a Port of Houston dockworker last week, after workers finished unloading containers of the chemical from the Argentine freighter Rio Neuquen.

To get the permit, Tobin said, the Coast Guard must prove that an emergency exists, that the chemical poses an unacceptable public health risk, that there is no other way of disposing of it and that it is in the public interest to dump the chemical in the Gulf.

Walter Reno, 36, of Jacinto City, was killed Saturday when one container was dropped in the hold during unloading operations and exploded, causing a crane to fall on and crush him.

Odessa police arrest two men in record store robbery

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two of three suspects sought by police in Wednesday's robbery of more than $2,500 in tickets and money from an Odessa record store have been arrested.

Chris Dale Richardson, 24, was arrested at 12:35 p.m. Thursday at his home at 716 Snyder in southeast Odessa. He is charged with the aggravated robbery of the Endless Horizons record store on Andrews Highway. Richardson remained in the city jail this morning, with bond set at $35,000.

Oscar Earl Brady Jr., 34, was arrested at 7:40 a.m. today at 1502 S. Jackson and is in jail awaiting arraignment.

Police continued to search this morning for the third suspect, Victor Drake McCowman, a 22-year-old Odessan.

The store manager told police two men entered the store about 1:30 p.m. Wednesday and made off with $1,250 in two bank money bags and 120 $11.50 tickets to Jefferson Starship concert scheduled for Aug. 15.

One of the robbers struck the manager over the head with a revolver and called for others in the store to take cover before moving behind the counter and taking the money and tickets, according to reports.

A customer arriving at the store as the robbers escaped the scene, followed them and provided a description of the getaway car. Warrants were issued Thursday on the three suspects. Initial reports did not include the third suspect, who allegedly drove the car.

None of the tickets or money has been recovered, said Lt. Rusty Baker.

Board says whooping cough vaccine still needed

AUSTIN (AP) — The board of the State Health Department wants the department to continue the use of the vaccine against whooping cough despite what it says are infrequent harmful side effects.

State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said Thursday the vaccine saves lives.

"Without the use of the vaccine, the disease will return in large numbers, and many children will die," Bernstein said in a statement.

Bernstein said 50 years ago 7,518 deaths were reported from whooping cough, and in 1983 there were fewer than 10 deaths.

The DTP vaccine, which the department buys from commercial manufacturers and distributes free to local health departments, protects against diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis or whooping cough.

The health board went on record July 21 as supporting the continued use of the vaccine although Wyeth Laboratories had announced the previous month that it was discontinuing production because of the high costs of defending lawsuits over the vaccine's harmful side effects.

Bernstein said with the price rising from $1.60 for a 15-dose vial to an estimated $42, the 45,000 vials needed by the health department each year would cost $1.9 million.

Bob Crider, director of the department's Immunization Division, said the department still has another source, and possibly two, for the vaccine.

"The pertussis vaccine infrequently causes reactions which on very rare occasions are serious," Bernstein said. "The important thing, however, is that it does provide the needed protection against whooping cough."

The health department said statistics show that serious reactions to the vaccine occur in only one out of 300,000 immunizations.

Inmates locked in cells until prison unit 'clean'

PALESTINE (AP) — As violence spread in the state's prison system, a prison spokesman said 700 inmates at the Texas Department of Corrections' Coffield Unit will remain locked in their cells until officials determine it's safe for them to come out.

"We're going to try to get that place clean," TDC spokesman Charles Brown said Thursday, a day after four Coffield inmates were stabbed. "We have an obligation to protect inmates," he said.

The 700 inmates locked down Wednesday were in one of two cellblocks where guards discovered 346 homemade knives and 143 other weapons in an overnight search July 19 and 20.

Two inmates were stabbed in other incidents Thursday, Brown said.

Inmate Bobby Wiley, 27, was stabbed in his right shoulder and the upper part of the left side of his back in a fight over a missing kitchen knife Thursday morning, Brown said. He said Wiley was not seriously injured.

A 29-year-old inmate serving a 10-year burglary sentence was being questioned, he said.

The fight in a kitchen of the Huntsville Ellis II Unit occurred about 9:45 a.m., Brown said. It broke out when the second inmate accused Wiley of taking a kitchen knife assigned to him. Wiley, serving a 45-year sentence for aggravated sexual assault, was also being questioned about the fight, Brown said.

Brown said officers did not know what started a fight at the Eastham Unit near Weldon at 9:05 a.m., but said it left 28-year-old Thomas Howard with stab wounds in his stomach and arm. Brown said Howard was transferred to the Huntsville Unit infirmary. He was stabbed with a weapon which appeared to be made from a fan guard, Brown said.

Howard is serving a 25-year sentence for theft from Hopkins County. A 22-year-old inmate serving a five-year term for two years of aggravated robbery was being questioned in the incident, Brown said.

The four inmates stabbed at Coffield were black and seven prisoners being questioned about the attack were Hispanic. Asked if the stabbings were racially motivated, TDC Director Ray Procunier said, "It looks like it. I don't know."

Three of the four men were hospitalized and another treated at the unit for stab wounds, Brown said.

Procunier said Wednesday "there's a hell of a potential for more violence" at the Coffield Unit. He said the inmate weapons problem is "astronomical."

Brown said the lockdown at the troubled Coffield Unit would continue indefinitely until warden Jack Garner is satisfied the prison is safe.

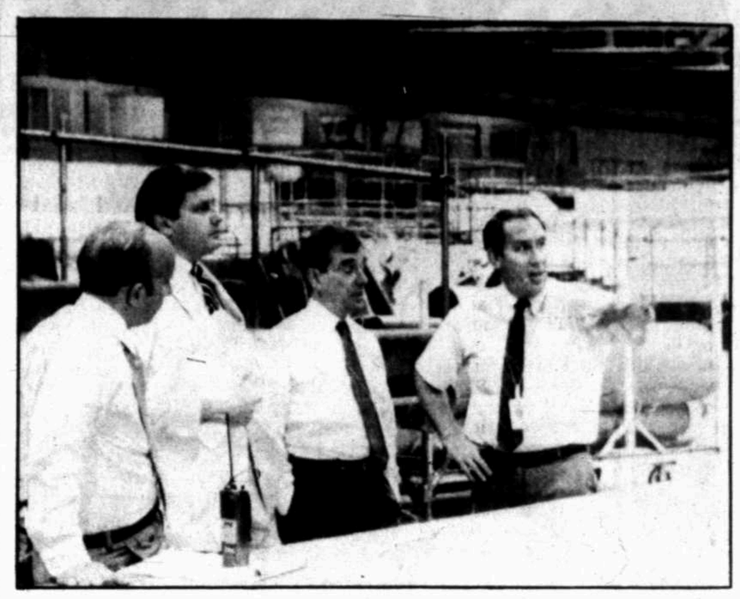

He also said 67 inmates were under severe restrictions at the Ferguson Unit, near Lovelady in Crockett County, after a prisoner who refused to go to classes punched guard Oscar Tisdale in the mouth.

A wing of the Ferguson Unit was partially locked down after Tisdale was punched by a prisoner, Brown said. One of the guard's teeth was knocked out and two others were chipped, he said.

"The inmate repeatedly refused to come out of his cell to go to school," Brown said. "An officer instructed him to stay in the day room while he let others out to go to classes. When the guard went to put him back in cell, he was punched."

Brown said as a result of the fight, guards will conduct strip searches of prisoners and movement will be restricted in the unit.

Judge: GOP buffer zone must be reduced

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has told the city to reduce a fenced buffer zone during the Republican National Convention, but a protest group says it will appeal to have the barrier removed altogether.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders Thursday told the city it must by Aug. 20 revamp plans for the 1.5-mile long, 6-foot-high fence that will encircle the Dallas Convention Center. The GOP gathering will run from Aug. 20-23.

The city had planned to set aside a 57,000 square foot area — the back third of a parking lot — for demonstrations. It was 700 feet away.

Sanders ordered the fence moved 150 feet closer to the convention center entrance, and also told the city to include a long, grassy slope in the protest area.

The ruling adds about 30,000 square feet to the protest site, city officials said.

"To simply move the fence 150 feet does not solve the problem," said Joe Murray, a spokesman for the Dallas March and Rally Committee which contended the fence violated the protesters' constitutional right to free speech.

"The fence is symbolic of the elitism and callous disregard of Ronald Reagan and his party," Murray said.

The group said it would appeal the judge's ruling.

Sanders said that if the city was going to deny access to public areas, it had to compensate by providing an "adequate" place to march, rally and demonstrate against the convention.

"The proposed demonstration area is insufficent to qualify as an effective communication site," the judge said.

John Albach, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney representing the protest coordinators, had called the decision "a significant victory."

"We will be close enough to be seen and heard" by Republican delegates and officials, Albach said.

"This is fine," John Teipel, head of the city's street and sanitation department and the man responsible for emergency preparednesshe said after the hearing. "We anticipated it. We're gratified at the ruling."

City officials said the fence was needed for security and traffic control and denied it was designed to shield GOP delegates and officials from protests.

Sanders said his decision on how far to move the fence hinged on testimony from police and U.S. Secret Service officials, who estimated a 300- to 350-foot buffer zone was necessary to protect convention-goers from "hurled objects" and handgun fire.

Who's afraid of homosexual play? Edward Albee

ARLINGTON (AP) — A controversial all-male version of Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" has been canceled after producers conceded to the playwright's wish that the production be scrapped.

The play was to have run today through Sunday, but it ran up against Albee's objections that it was illegal and its interpretation at odds with the author's concept.

Three Arlington City Council members also lobbied to ban the play. But their reasons were that the production was immoral — not that it was an aberration of the play's authenticity.

The director had maintained Albee originally envisioned his work as depicting the lives of two homosexual male couples.

"We still feel strongly that the councilmen's attempt at censorship was and is inappropriate. But as a responsible theater group, we always follow the wishes of a playwright," said Tate Kelly, president of the Theatre Arlington board of directors.

On Thursday, the theatre received a telegram from Albee's agent, Esther Sherman of the William Morris Agency in New York, objecting to the play.

"The arrogance of this group is truly offensive," Ms. Sherman said. "They have no respect for the author's work."

Cliff Redd, the theater's managing director, said he is a longtime admirer of Albee and has staged "Virginia Woolf" several times using the normal complement of male and female performers.

"Had the playwright himself not objected, we would have no-guts-no-gloried it all the way through Sunday," Redd said. "This is a fine production, a valid one, and I wish we could have continued it."

Redd added that the play's cast received a standing ovation at Friday's performance.

Dov Fahrer, the director of an actor's studio that staged the play, said he based his plan to use an all-male cast on a long-standing rumor in the theater world that Albee originally envisioned the script built around the lives of two homosexual couples.

But Sherman said the playwright insists the work be staged "with all characters as the gender in which they were written...This is not a gay play, and that's all there is to it."

Arlington City Councilman Jim Norwood was joined earlier this week by Councilmen Richard Greene and Leo Berman in calling for cancellation of the play. The city officials said the homosexual theme of the play was inappropriate for Arlington.

The theater's board of directors had met in emergency session Tuesday and had voted to continue the production. The controversy then attracted national publicity, and the telegram from Sherman arrived Thursday afternoon.

Fewer than 100 people saw the show during a three-night run last week, but more than 300 reservations had been made for this weekend's shows.

Four teens terrorize small town

ANTHONY (AP) — Three of four teen-agers who killed dogs and damaged homes during a 90-minute rampage in this far West Texas town will remain at a juvenile detention center for at least 10 days, a judge has ruled.

El Paso County Juvenile Judge Henry Baca reviewed the cases of the boys Thursday and ordered that three remain in custody, while one was released because "he was not engaged in any of the aggravated offenses," said Assistant County Attorney Joe Lucas.

El Paso County sheriff's Capt. Chuy Reyes said the boys, three 16-year-olds and one 13-year-old, terrorized Anthony Wednesday afternoon before being taken into custody by police officers.

The teen-agers entered an Anthony home about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, killed two German shepherd dogs by stabbing them about 20 times each, "broke a microwave all over the floor, threw plants all over and even threw food on the floor," Reyes said.

They also burglarized two other residences, he said.

Nearly 30 law enforcement officers were called to Anthony, a small town on the New Mexico-Texas border near El Paso, to help end the disturbance, Reyes said.

He said the large number of officers responded because the first call that went out over police radios was that a police officer was being assaulted.

"They threw bricks at the first officer who responded and all the others came in after hearing that an officer was in trouble," Reyes said. "All the officers came in handy because we had a lot of people in the residential area and had to block off streets."

After terrorizing the area, two of the teen-agers tried to flee and were caught by police, Reyes said.

The other two boys barricaded themselves in a house, tossing bricks out at police. Officers had to flush them out with tear gas, he said.

"We had to forcibly fight them to take them into custody," Reyes said, adding that the boys apparently also had made small cuts on each other with small butcher-type knives.

"I just thank God that we were all gone when they came," said Alberto Lucero, who lives in the home where the two barricaded themselves in before police brought them out with tear gas.

"Technically, my wife and kids were supposed to be home," Lucero said. "So there are things to be thankful for. We just have to bounce back."

Lucero's home still reeked of tear gas Thursday, and the family had to stay at a relative's home until their home is cleaned up.

Lucero, who said the family had lived in the home for 26 years, said he has not been able to estimate the damage.

Reyes said the boys, two of whom were brothers, were under the influence of drugs and alcohol when the rampage began.

PUC candidate says high costs, technology may dim nuclear power

AUSTIN (AP) — Increasing costs and energy-saving technological advances could wipe out the need for future nuclear power plants, according to a top candidate to fill a vacancy on the Public Utility Commission.

Gubernatorial aide Dennis Thomas also said that some nuclear plants under construction might never produce "economically feasible" power.

Gov. Mark White is expected to soon announce a replacement for PUC member Al Erwin, who resigned last week. Sources say White is "leaning" toward Thomas, his deputy executive assistant for programs.

Thomas and Rafael Quintanilla, director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, have been mentioned as top contenders for the post. Both said Thursday they had not been told if White had made a decision.

Thomas said he has not studied the nuclear plants under construction in Texas. If he is appointed to the commission, among the first rate cases he would face are two filed by Houston Lighting & Power and Texas Utilities Electric Co.

Both companies have nuclear plants under construction.

"In general, I'm concerned that the power that comes out of nukes which are about to go on line in some cases may not be economically feasible," said Thomas, 36.

"Right now, I can't see how there would be any new nukes started, out of economics," he said.

New technology that could cut energy demands includes motors — such as are used in air conditioners and refrigerators — that require less power, according to Thomas.

It will be up to the PUC to decide whether consumers should pay for construction of nuclear plants that never go on line.

"You get into the idea of, and it's a lousy term, 'prudency.' When you cancel a project...if you can show it was bad management on the part of the utility, why should the customer be expected to pay for that?" he said.

Thomas is working on a doctoral dissertation that takes a utility company's look at dealing with state regulators.

Dennis Thomas

But he said that doesn't mean he would be a company man — as opposed to a consumers' man — if he gets the job.

"I kind of doubt it," the Austin native said.

His educational background and work as a utility consultant paid by utility companies would be a plus in rate cases, according to Thomas.

"I know a lot about utility companies," he said. "I know which ones are serious about (energy) conservation and which ones aren't. I think I have experience in moving them toward the direction they are going to have to move anyway."

Thomas was vice president of Planergy Inc., an Austin firm that sold conservation plans to utility companies and contracted with several states that wanted conservation plans.

He said the Planergy experience (he sold his shares in 1981 when he went to work for White) could help consumers because he knows "how a utility company is structured...and where the dead wood is."

City to warn swimmers of high bacteria levels

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — High bacteria levels have led officials to declare the the Comal River unsafe for swimming, and Mayor Barbara Tieken wants Comal County declared an economic disaster area.

Signs warning swimmers of "high bacteria levels" will be posted along the river route as soon as they are printed, city officials said Thursday.

The New Braunfels City Council, during an emergency meeting, also decided against chlorinating Landa Park Pool, closed for a week because of high fecal coliform bacteria levels, the San Antonio Light reported.

The entire river has been contaminated with fecal coliform, City Sanitarian Rick Lane said, with counts ranging from between 200 and 1,700 bacterial colonies per 100 milliliter sample.

"We are not a public health menace, but we do need to take precautions," Tieken said. "We have a moral obligation to post these signs."

Tieken said she will ask Comal County Judge Fred Clark to begin the process of having the county declared a disaster area by Gov. Mark White.

New Braunfels' all-important tourist industry has been hit hard by the summer drought, with area businessmen reporting a 25 to 80 percent drop in revenue.

The Light said the signs, affixed with the city's seal and posted at six to eight locations along the two-mile route of the Comal River, will read: "Warning — Swim at your own risk. High bacteria levels — Health Department."

The council acted on the recommendations of City Manager Joe A. Michie, who met for more than two hours with Texas Department of Health sanitation officials before Thursday's emergency meeting.

State health officals have already issued a warning that many bodies of water in drought-stricken Texas, because of low levels, sluggish flow and high temperatures, can promote the growth of dangerous organisms.

The warning came after Ben Wright, a 12-year-old Uvalde boy, contracted amebic meningoencephalitis while swimming in the Frio River nearly two weeks ago.

He was still in critical condition in Methodist Hospital Thursday. The rare disease almost always is fatal. A Dallas area boy also was stricken with the disease after swimming in Lake Grapevine last week.

Lane said after the half-hour council session that coliform counts had been above the state and federal safe level recommendations of 200 since early June.

However, New Braunfels health officials have been waiting for a trigger level of 500 before acting to close both the spring-fed Landa Park Pool and now the river.

"We have had background studies that show this river normally has coliform levels near 200," Lane said. "So we felt comfortable with pushing that limit a bit."

But, he added, the signs will not come down until the counts drop below 200.

The council also decided not to reopen the Landa Park Pool by attempting to chlorinate it.

SCS considers consolidating people in regional offices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soil Conservation Service is considering moving about a third of the employees in its state offices into 10 regional offices in order to save about $2 million a year, agency officials say.

But Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas, who is organizing congressional opposition to the plan, argues that, "It just gets back to that old axiom, if it ain't broke don't fix it."

Lee Shields, acting information director of the Soil Conservation Service, said the study was the result of recommendations from the Grace Commission, appointed by President Reagan to come up with ideas for improving federal cost efficiency.

The Office of Management and Budget recommended consolidating the agency's administrative employees in the 10 existing federal regional centers, Shields said. But he added that, "we haven't necessarily bought off on that."

The Soil Conservation Service, created in 1935, provides technical and financial assistance to farmers, ranchers and local governments for programs to increase agriculture productivity, reduce soil erosion and preserve water quality. The programs are carried out through 2,950 conservation district offices within the states.

Personnel director Ken Novak said of the approximately 2,500 employees now working in state offices, about 800 would be asked to move to regional offices under the proposal.

He estimated the change would save about $2 million a year because fewer employees would be required to handle contracts, personnel and property management. He said no one would be fired, but "we know that some people are not going to be able to move" and others would opt to retire.

Leath says the change would result in "false economy" by trading cheap office space in smaller cities for more expensive space in big cities, and would unnecessarily uproot employees.

"I still happen to believe that government works best when it's closer to what it's working with. I think the system has proven that it works," he said.

House votes to cut synfuels subsidies by $5 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, reaffirming its support for developing alternative energy sources through federal subsidies, says the Synthetic Fuels Corp. can continue to spend money on new projects — but not nearly as much as it wants.

The House voted Thursday to cut $5 billion from the $13.2 billion in federal money now available to the synfuels corporation. They money is earmarked for loans and price guarantees for the fledgling industry.

But the $5 billion cut represented a partial and hard-fought victory for synfuels supporters.

It was proposed as a compromise to stop passage of a deeper $10 billion cut proposed by critics of the corporation and supported by the Reagan administration.

The measure that passed was coupled with a pledge to seek the transfer of an additional $2 billion from synfuels into other alternative energy programs, such as solar power generation and geothermal energy.

Further, the House prohibited federal assistance for the two most expensive synfuels projects being planned — Union II, at $2.7 billion, and Cathedral Bluffs, $2.19 billion. Both are Colorado plants intended to produce oil from oil shale.

The bill was adopted only after an impassioned plea by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, for Congress to spend for the future, despite what he called the "far from admirable" record of the corporation so far.

"What message would this send to the Khomeinis and the Khadafys of the world?" asked Wright, referring to the leaders of Iran and Libya, just before the vote on whether the House should cut $5 billion or $10 billion.

He said the United States each year proves its willingness to spend $60 billion a year on imported oil, and asked, "Are we unwilling to invest $5 billion in a program to free us from that addiction?"

"We have the resources in this country to be energy independent — if we have the will," Wright said. "Let the future not lament that we lacked the will to do what was necessary."

The House opted for the $5 billion reduction 236-177.

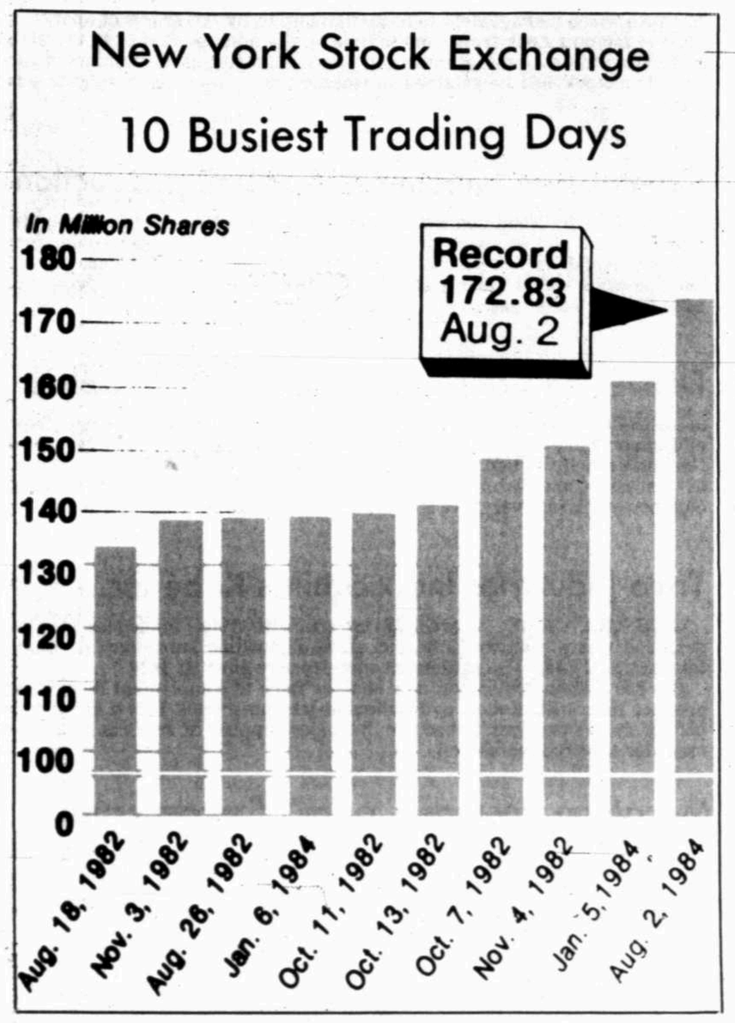

The $20 billion synfuels program was created by Congress in 1980 to encourage development of usable fuel from such raw material as oil shale and tar sands. Its tools were to be price guarantees, a promise by the government that it would make up the difference between market prices and the price needed to make a profit, and outright loans.

Att the time, most analysts predicted rising crude oil prices as far as the eye could see. Instead, prices have fallen.

But the corporation has been in trouble almost from the beginning. Mismanagement quickly soured its original support. Resignations have brought business to a halt because the board can no longer muster a quorum. And the criticism peaked with a recent report that the corporation planned to guarantee one oil company almost three times the market price of crude oil to develop an oil shale plant — $92 per barrel against the current $29 market price.

"Is it 'energy security' to announce to OPEC that we are prepared to pay from $60 to $92 per barrel of oil?" asked Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., one of those supporting the $10 billion reduction. "This program has become nothing more than corporate welfare."

The synfuels provision was attached to a 1985 appropriations bill for the Interior Department and related agencies. In other action on the bill, the House accepted, 212-181, a Republican effort to cut spending in the bill by 3 percent across the board, a move that would cost the affected agencies about $255 million.

Wall Street buzzes with busiest trading in history

Bullish investors set loose by signs that economic growth is slowing and interest rates have peaked pushed Wall Street to its busiest day in history, trading nearly 173 million shares as the Dow Jones industrial average soared 31.47 points.

After bidding up prices somewhat cautiously in the five previous sessions, traders ignited a ferocious rally Thursday. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped to 1,166.08, its highest level since May 10. The advance was the largest since a 36.43-point gain on Nov. 30, 1982.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange exploded to 172.83 million shares, shattering the record of 159.99 million shares set Jan. 5.

The strong economy itself had been a major cause of investors' concern because it triggered a big increase in business borrowing, which helped drive interest rates higher.

But a series of government reports — including a dip in factory orders and a drop in the government's index of leading economic indicators — have signaled investors that the economy would stop expanding at the torrid pace of the first two quarters of this year.

Major U.S. retailers Thursday reinforced that perception by reporting only moderate sales gains for July compared with a year earlier. Industry leader Sears, Roebuck & Co., for example, said sales edged up only 1.1 percent.

Wall Street initially remained skeptical about the government reports, but the seeds of the stock market's historic session took root on Wednesday, when New York Stock Exchange volume hit its highest level since Feb. 9 — 127.5 million shares.

The heavy trading signaled that institutional investors — those who manage the multimillion-dollar portfolios of pension funds, insurance companies and bank trust departments — were moving into stocks in a major way.

With interest rates high, they had accumulated major investments in short-term instruments that carried attractive yields and were readily convertible into cash.

Once institutional investors turned bullish, even those still skeptical about interest rates probably were swept up by the stock market's "herd instinct."

"About 80 percent of all the activity you see on the Big Board is institutional," said John J. Smith of the investment firm of Fahnestock & Co. "Once the institutions decided interest rates were not going up, they took some of these huge reserves they had built up because of fears on interests rates and bought stock."

"It's as if every investing institution in America at once decided it was OK to buy stocks again," said James Davin, a managing director of the First Boston Corp.

"If the market goes up and you're not there, you have to be very impressive not to loose your job," said Peter Lynch, portfolio manager of the Fidelity Magellan Fund.

The bond market also rallied, and was further buoyed by the Federal Reserve's report late in the day that the basic U.S. money supply fell $1.7 billion in the week ended July 23.

The decrease appeared to preclude the Fed's having to tighten credit in order to cool the economy, a move that would lift interest rates.

"This is the slowdown we've been expecting," said Jeffrey Edelman of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "No one really knew when it would come."

All of this added up to good news for President Reagan, one analyst said.

"It looks like the election year will be taking place in a best-of-all-possible worlds scenario for the president," said Leon G. Cooperman, chairman of an investment policy committee at Goldman, Sachs & Company. "The economy should be good, unemployment will be declining and people's wealth, as measured by the stock market, would be at a relatively high level, assuming the rally continues."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Holding company sells interest in center

ALBUQUEQUE — Moncor Inc., the second largest New Mexico-based, multi-bank holding company has sold its interest in Moncor Center, the future downtown Albuquerque headquarters of the banking organization.

"We have sold our interest in Moncor Center in keeping with our policy not to retain long-term ownership of our facilities," Moncor president Reed H. Chittim said.

The holding company's interest in the project has been sold to Robert O. Moore, chief executive officer of The Moore Organization, and M.B. (Pete) Ford, chairman of the board of the Jaynes Corporation, according to Chittim.

Firm agrees to sell units for $40 million

HOUSTON — Galveston-Houston Co. has announced that it has entered into an agreement to sell its GH-Foster and GH-Thornhill Craver operating units to Joy Manufacturing Co. for approximately $40 million. The sale is subjcet to certain governamental approvals. Proceeds of the sale will be used to reduce the company's bank debt.

Nathan M. Avery, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Galveston-Houston Co., indicated that while it is apparent a recovery of the oilfield economy has begun, this sale makes the company less dependent upon the cyclical nature of oilfield activity with approximately one third of its business unrelated to the petroleum industry.

ITT announces common stock dividend cut

NEW YORK — Reflecting a fundamental policy change, ITT Corp. has announced that its board of directors had voted unanimously to reduce the quarterly common stock dividend from sixty-nine cents ($.69) per share to twenty-five cents ($.25) per share.

The company said that its dividend to earnings ratio had become inconsistent with the intensely competitive high technology environment in which ITT is one of the leading companies worldwide.

The action affects shareholders of record at the close of business on August 9, 1984, with the first reduced dividend payment due October 1, 1984.

Record steel imports surge into U.S. market

WASHINGTON — Foreign steel surged into the United States at a record-shattering pace during the first half of 1984 — hobbling the domestic steel industry's recovery from its worst recession in nearly a half century and underminingg efforts of companies to generate funds needed to sustain modernization programs.

Foriegners aided by signs at DFW airport

DFW DALLAS — International kiosks and signs are currently being installed to aid international travelers in finding services at Dallas/Fort Worth Airport. The kiosks feature foreign language instructions in French, Spanish, German, Arabic and Japanese. Travelers reading the signs and following the instructions should be able to easily locate Airtrans, Surtran and Airporter bus services, car rental companies, hotels and other amenities.

Poverty study brings outcry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrats were quick to react to a Census Bureau study showing the highest number of American poor in 19 years, with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. calling it "the smoking gun of Reagan unfairness."

"President Reagan denies that his policies are unfair. He denies that his policies make the rich richer and the poor poorer. Today we have facts from the Census Bureau that this is exactly what is happening under Reagan," O'Neill, D-Mass., said.

"Today we have the smoking gun of Reagan unfairness," he said.

The report showed 35,266,000 Americans, or 15.2 percent of the population, below the poverty line in 1983.

It is the most Americans officially listed as poor since 1964, before President Johnson launched his Great Society programs to attack the problem.

Oil slick endangers Texas wildlife

HIGH ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Wildlife refuge officials were watching a 65-mile-long oil slick that loomed off the Texas coast close to environmentally sensitive estuaries and choice fishing grounds of Galveston Bay.

"This stuff is such a thick crude that I hope the birds will avoid it," said Russ Clapper, who supervises three national wildlife refuges along the coast. "My main concern is the mess it's gonna make on the beaches."

The oil, which spilled from a British tanker grounded off the Louisiana coast, was expected to hit north Galveston jetties sometime today, away from popular beach resorts.

But red drum, spotted seatrout, white shrimp and menhaden are among the marine life which could be hurt this time of year, said Leland Roberts, resource protection branch chief for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"The possible damage which would result from the slick entering shallow bay and marsh areas would be even more destructive," Roberts said. "An oil spill could pose a considerable threat to bird life."

Clapper said he was worried about the "Bolivar flats," a popular bird-watching spot on Bolivar Penninsula near Galveston.

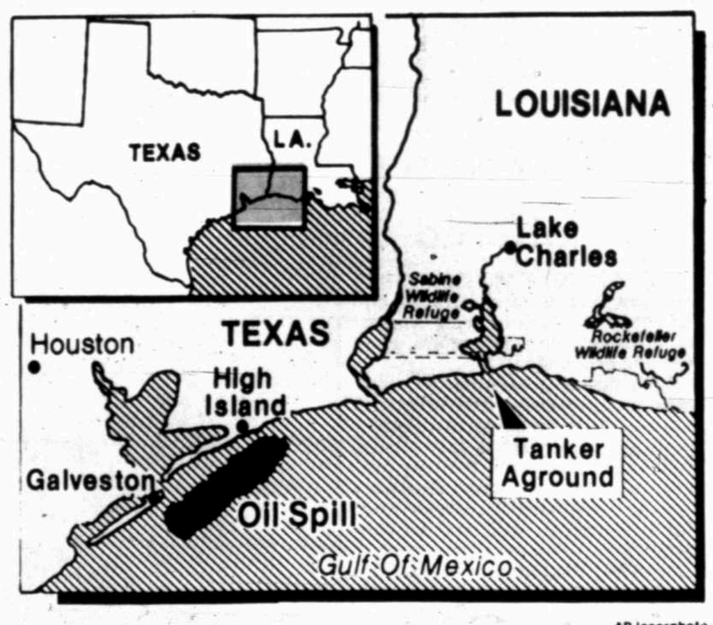

"Those birds could be vulnerable," Clapper said. "There might be some need to frighten the birds away."

Bruce Thompson, a biologist with the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife in Austin, said the upper Texas coast shelter five species of marine turtles, alligators, various mammals and numerous migratory shore birds and wading birds.

Sea Rim State Park is 25 miles south of Port Arthur and has five miles of beaches. The state also operates the J.S. Murphree Wildlife Management Area near Sabine Pass.

Stiff winds pushed a 25-mile-long oil slick from a grounded tanker to within six miles of the Texas coast Thursday and the Coast Guard predicted the wildlife-threatening goo would blacken beaches by Friday. the oil, spilled from a British tanker that grounded off the coast of Louisiana coast Monday, could wash ashore anywhere along the 25-mile stretch between High Island and Galveston, according to a Coast Guard spokesman.

Southland Corp. executives to be tried

NEW YORK (AP) — Two top executives of the Southland Corp. will be put on trial, one of them for the second time, on charges of conspiring to bribe a New York state tax official in 1977, according to federal prosecutors.

A Brooklyn grand jury on Thursday indicted Clark J. Matthews II, the chief financial officer of the Dallas corporation, and re-indicted S. Richmond Dole, whose first trial ended in a hung jury.

U.S. District Judge Charles P. Sifton fined the corporation itself the maximum $10,000 and gave former City Councilman Eugene Mastropieri an 18-month prison sentence for their role in the conspiracy.

The same jury that deadlocked on Dole ruled June 8 that Mastropieri took part in a bribe plot and that Southland, which operates the nationwide 7-Eleven convenience store chain, defrauded the Internal Revenue Service by deducting a $94,000 payment in the scheme as a legitimate business expense.

Prosecutors contend the bribe plot was hatched to help the corporation avoid paying up to $1 million in a tax dispute with the state. No bribe target was ever identified and no bribe paid, the government maintained.

A former Southland vice president, Eugene DeFalco, pleaded guilty last September and became the chief government witness. The corporation, Dole and Mastropieri all contended they were innocent, as did a lawyer for Matthews.

Agency to lower lead amounts in gasoline

WASHINGTON — Armed with new evidence that even tiny doses of lead are toxic to children, the Environmental Protection Agency moved Monday to slash by 91 percent the amount of lead in gasoline sold for use in older cars and trucks.

EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus predicted that the new restrictions, which would take effect by 1988, will lead to the elimination of all lead in gasoline by the mid-1990s. He stopped short of ordering such a ban, however.

The lead cutback would not affect the performance of the dwindling number of vehicles that still use leaded gas, Ruckelshaus said. Most vehicles sold in the United States since 1975 are designed to operate on unleaded gas.

The announcement drew cautious praise from environmentalists but was greeted coldly by the petroleum and lead industries.

EPA's proposal would require refiners to cut the amount of lead in leaded gas from 1.1 grams to 0.1 grams per gallon by Jan. 1, 1986. An option would give refiners until January 1988 to reach the 0.1-gram level but would require cutbacks to begin earlier, in mid-1985.

The action was prompted by studies showing that small doses of lead may be more damaging to human health than was thought and that the use of leaded gas has declined more slowly than was hoped.

Health studies by the federal Centers for Disease Control showed that lead interferes with brain, liver and other body functions at levels as low as 10 micrograms per 1-10th liter of blood, especially in children. Lead ingestion is linked to mental retardation, liver and kidney damage and other disabilities.

The center now says blood levels of lead above 30 micrograms are toxic but has proposed to reduce the figure to 25 micrograms. About 20.5 percent of children between 6 months and 5 years of age have blood concentrations between 20 and 29 micrograms, and 3.9 percent have even higher levels.

EPA surveys also showed that a 1973 regulation aimed at reducing leaded gas use has been subverted by motorists who have pumped cheaper leaded fuel into cars built for unleaded gas.

Controversy continues as Barbie celebrates 25th birthday

Hearst Feature Service

She's got a wardrobe that would make Princess Di weep with envy. Her handsome, brawny boyfriend is just as devoted to her now as he was 20 years ago. She's got cars, dozens of houses and Arabian horses. She's been an astronaut, a nurse, a fashion editor and a beauty queen. And although she's 25 this year, there still isn't a droop or wrinkle in her flawless 5¼-3-4¾ figure.

Happy 25th, Barbie.

She's been praised as a role model for little girls and criticized for teaching females nothing more weighty than the art of rampant consumerism. She's been linked to the rise of anorexia, the "me" decade and feminism.

But back in 1959, Barbie was just a new idea introduced to toy buyers, who predicted the tiny fashion doll would be a flop. Little girls loved her, though. Now, a generation later, their daughters send her out on Dream Dates in her own silver Corvette with that dream doll, Ken. They snap her up to the tune of 16 million dolls a year — and that's not counting her dazzling wardrobe, her houses, luxuries like a hot tub and swimming pool, a van and a motorcycle and even her very own McDonald's restaurant.

"Barbie is popular because she's always up on the latest," said Candace Irving, the spokeswoman for Mattel Inc., the California toy company which celebrated her silver anniversary by commissioning an 11-1/2-inch sterling silver Barbie by Tiffany and Company.

Irving stresses that it's an anniversary, not Barbie's 25th birthday. "Can you imagine Barbie turning 30?" she said, with a laugh. But, it's no laughing matter. Mattel conducts countless surveys to determine what little girls want. And what they don't want is a doll, married and matronly, like their mother.

Barbie is fantasy, dreamy dates in dreamy gowns with dreamy men. She has a pimple-free complexion and is the girl most likely to succeed. Busty Barbie never agonized over whether a AAA bra would fit her, either.

Not everyone is enthusiastic about this curvaceous, glamour puss preadolescent role model, though. In his book "Hide and Seek," California psychologist Dr. James Dobson writes that Barbie was an unhealthy role model for young girls.

"There could be no better method for teaching the worship of beauty and materialism than is done with luscious Barbie. These idealized models load an emotional time bomb set to explode the moment a real live 13-year-old takes her first long look in the mirror."

Dobson goes on to say that Barbie and Ken, with their emphasis on dating, "leads children into premature adolescence and a sexual awareness that they are not really capable of handling."

"Hogwash," responds Irving. "Barbie gets blamed for a lot of things and she's just a hunk of plastic. People don't realize that kids know the difference between reality and fantasy. Every boy who played with a cap gun didn't grow up to be a murderer. People have to give kids more credit."

Irving also brushes aside criticism from feminists who claim Barbie shows young girls how to be clothes-crazy, boy-hungry dizzy blondes.

"What most feminists fail to remember is that Barbie was introduced with a career in 1959 as a fashion model. She has been a doctor, a scuba diver, a fashion editor. In 1965, she was an astronaut, long before Sally Ride."

Through her 25 years, Barbie has mirrored American trends. In 1959, she was a prom queen with a bouncy ponytail and cat-eye sunglasses. Since then, she's been through the bubble hairdo, pillbox hat Jackie Kennedy look, the shocking pink and lime green psychedelic era, along with the rebellious "hippie" jeans and bare feet statement. She's been several shades of black, Hispanic, Hawaiian, European and Asian.

Today, "Crystal" Barbie is all glamour, looking as radiant as a Dallas socialite in her shimmering ball gown and sparkling stole. Partnering her is her steady beau, Crystal Ken, in a white tux and silver vest. No food stamps or unemployment lines for Barbie or Ken.

Barbie has become a hot item with about 3,000 collectors around the world. These mostly older women, many of whom would have been too old to play with Barbie as children, now write Barbie newsletters, hold conventions and store such facts as the year Barbie went from arched to curved eyebrows (1960), who was the first black Barbie family member ("Colored" Francie in 1967) and why feminists got mad at Skipper in 1975. (By twisting the doll, she developed breasts and a skinny waistline.)

Such enthusiasm isn't unusual for collectors. A Bronx, N.Y., housewife, Ruth Cronk, started collecting nine years ago. Today, she has 2,000 dolls and is president of the International Barbie Doll Collector's Club.

Practical investment pieces can be added to first home

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q: Our studio apartment is a real jumble of cast-off furniture from our folks. My husband and I are both finishing school and will be living in this apartment for probably about two years.

We now want to buy some good furniture that will make our quarters attractive and that will be usable when we move into a home.

Please give us some ideas on what we should invest in now. — P.D.

A: You really need to think multipurpose when you select furniture for a studio apartment.

Probably the most expensive piece you will purchase will be a comfortable sofa bed. There are dozens on the market today that are so attractively designed that you don't actually know whether they are sofa beds or standard sofas just by looking.

End tables and coffee tables can also do double duty. Look for ones that will provide you storage as well as a place for a lamp and accessories.

Use the walls of your studio apartment to the maximum. Hang up what you can on wall shelves you could install. Or invest in freestanding wall units for your stereo, television and other cumbersome items.

Choose a small dining table that can double as a desk.

These pieces of furniture will be good investments for you when you begin to furnish a new home.

Q: I have just finished redecorating my dining room and have purchased a new Queen Anne dining room table and six chairs. The floor is covered with an old French rug and I have just selected a new chandelier.

My problem is that I have run out of money and still need to decorate the walls. What would be a simple and reasonably inexpensive way to bring my walls up to the decorating quality of my new furniture? — O.B.D.

A: How about purchasing an art book of flowers — the kind that contain those beautiful botanical prints? Cut out a dozen or so prints and frame them in inexpensive frames. Touch up simple black frames with gilt paint and add pretty mats to the pictures.

Hang them in rows on the wall and you will have a great, traditional look. Massing botanical prints on a wall or walls can be terrifically effective.

Add a few lacey green plants to the room, too, to help fill in for the lack of accessories.

Q: I am trying to update my otherwise very traditional living room. I've recovered my camel-back sofa in a cream-colored fabric.

I want something new on the floor that will lighten the look of this dark room with dark wood floors, but don't want wall-to-wall carpeting. What would be pleasant? — F.V.

A: Why don't you consider a dhurrie rug in light tones.

Dhurries, hand-woven in India today, are available in delightful combinations of pastels and slightly deeper colors and the designs are wonderfully fanciful, just right for adding color and a light-hearted touch.

Sociologists challenge 'living alone is bad for mental health' theory

By JOANN RODGERS
Hearst News Service

Along with theories of a flat Earth and an unbreakable sound barrier, we may now add to the scientific ash heap the "fact" that living alone, isolated from family and friends, is bad for our mental health.

This challenge to traditional wisdom about social isolation comes from sociologists at Virginia Polytechnic State and Vanderbilt University. They aren't claiming that recluses and hermits are models for human happiness, but are suggesting that social scientists largely have ignored both the negative effects of living with others and the positive effects of not.

According to Michael Hughes and Walter Gove, the large amount of evidence that living in families or groups brings benefits has blinded us to the fact "that many of the problems and difficulties of life are part of family living and marriage. Our research has led us to look beyond the benefits of close social relationships and to focus on their negative effects — the dark side of social integration."

In a paper prepared for the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Hughes and Gove said they first became interested in the impact of social isolation when they uncovered flaws in research on overcrowding. Studies, notably on rats forced to live in overcrowded conditions, concluded that the aggressive, depressed, sick behavior of these animals was due simply to too many animals in too small a space and that humans who were overcrowded could be expected to have the same emotional and physical problems.

However, Hughes and Gove say, when they surveyed crowded Chicago residents in 1973-'74, they found there were "many subjective factors" such as lack of privacy, incessant demands from children and other adults and overcrowding involved in their mental ill-health or well-being. When they added these subjective factors into their analysis, "the relationship between (mere) crowding and mental illness largely disappeared," they said.

They did not find the bizarre consequences of crowding found in the rat studies, but did find substantial evidence that crowding is associated with poor mental and physical health. But, they concluded, "These effects are largely explained by the fact that social relations (social living arrangements) impose excessive social obligation on persons and deprive such persons of their privacy.

In short, living with other people is tough on mental health.

These findings led them to investigate the effects of crowding or living alone on different kinds of households and people, including married and unmarried, households with and without children and adults living with unrelated persons, parents or other relatives.

This time — again taking subjective factors into account — they found that crowding appears to have its worst impact on the mental health and well-being of persons living in families, and that the impact is heaviest on women who are charged with nurturing children and spouses. For adults living with spouses, children, other adults, unrelated adults or distant relatives, the impact was negative. On the flip side, they found that among nonmarried people, those who live alone are typically in better mental health.

DEAR ABBY

Deodorant 'essential' to girls in U.S.

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last summer, a very dear friend of mine who lives in France sent her two daughters, ages 16 and 17, to be my houseguests for the summer. They were very intelligent, good-looking girls. Although they showered every day, they used no underarm deodorant, and their B.O. was noticeable.

Without making an issue of it, I gave them some deodorant and told them what it was for. They thanked me politely, returned the deodorant and said, "We never use it." The friends I had introduced them to were put off because of their B.O.

The girls are returning soon for another visit. Should I mention it again? And if so, how can it be done without offending them or their mother? — NAMELESS IN FLORIDA

DEAR NAMELESS: By all means mention it again — only this time call or write their mother, and inform her that in the United States, underarm deodorant is essential to good grooming. Tell her that last summer when you noticed her daughters needed a deodorant, you offered them some, but they rejected it.

Your friend should be grateful, not offended. Far better to risk offending your friend than to have your young houseguests offend others and be avoided.

DEAR ABBY: "Frustrated in Maine" asked how to make her son-in-law wear a shirt when he came to the dinner table shirtless.

She may want to try my solution: The first time my newlywed husband came to the table shirtless, I promptly left the table and returned topless!

However delighted he might have been, he got the picture, even though it was a double exposure. — TAN IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

DEAR TAN: You're lucky. He might have been titillated to the point of no return.

DEAR ABBY: You recently toyed with the name "Chuck" in reply to a reader's question. (You told the reader to "chuck Chuck.")

Well, my name is Chuck, and I object to your taking liberties with us Chucks. We're tired of chuck it, chuck-a-luck, woodchuck, upchuck, downchuck — you think of it, we've heard it.

I wouldn't dream of calling you "Blabby Abby" or "Gabby Abby," nor would I say, "Can Abby see de E-F-G?" That would be unkind.

This type of treatment — like buying a goose — gets us down. I think you owe us Chucks an apology. — CHUCK WILCOX, RICHFIELD, MINN.

DEAR CHUCK: Sorry you're down. Please accept my up-ology.

Working mothers increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-five percent of the nation's estimated 32.2 million women with children 18 years old and younger held jobs outside the home in March, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports.

In a new survey giving further documentation to the increasing trend toward working mothers, the agency also said that 47.7 percent of an estimated 9,248,000 women with children 3 and under were either working or looking for jobs in March.

About six out of every 10 mothers with pre-school or school-age children were in the labor force — meaning they either held jobs in March or were looking for work during that month, during which the survey was taken.

The report said that a record 19.5 million women with children under the age of 18, including 8 million whose youngest children were under 6, were working or looking for work. In contrast, the bureau said, just four out of 10 mothers, roughly 12.1 million, were in the civilian labor force in 1970.

In March, 17,770,000 women out of a total U.S. population of 32,285,000 — or 55 percent — had jobs, the report said. Among these 17,770,000 women, it said, 70.7 percent were working full time and 29.3 percent were working part time.

Surprisingly, there was a smaller labor force participation rate among women with no children than women with children.

While 60.5 percent of the 32,285,000 women with children either were job-holders of job-seekers, the labor force participation rate among women with no children was only 49.3 percent.

Among divorced women, the report said, the labor force was 74.3 percent, the highest participation rate of any of the various groups of women.

The bureau said that of an estimated 7,418,000 divorced women, roughly 5,514,000 either were working in March or looking for jobs.

Department preparing new curriculum

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Students in secondary schools throughout New York State will give more attention to the cultures of nonwestern countries and to the history of the United States since World War II as a result of a new social studies curriculum being prepared by the state education department.

These changes are part of a curriculum framework that will follow a chronological approach rather than a thematic one that had been proposed in an earlier version. Critics had complained that the thematic approach would not have introduced students to historical events in logical sequence.

Two totally new courses on economics and responsibilities of citizenship have been created for the 12th grade as a result of a recent decision by the Board of Regents to require a fourth year of social studies for a diploma. The new curriculum will replace units adopted as long ago as the 1950s. It will enhance the traditional approach to social studies after years in which the primacy of history has increasingly given way to elements of anthropology, sociology and political science.

The required fourth year of high school social studies has enabled the state to head off a dispute over whether too much material about the United States and Europe would have been sacrificed to permit more extensive treatment of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Workers will 'beep' at long distance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to a series of last-minute agreements, nine communications companies plus National Public Radio may soon have a stake in building nationwide telephone paging systems, allowing "beepers" to work over long distances.

The Federal Communications Commission picked three companies through a lottery to become paging "network organizers," entitled to construct competing systems that can transmit "beeper" tones or even brief messages coast to coast. A New York businessman traveling in California, for example, could be "beeped" by his home office.

After the lottery was over, however, the three winners disclosed they had formed partnerships with some of the other 13 original applicants before the lottery, dramatically altering the list of winners.

Assuming the FCC approves the arrangements, the three new paging systems will be built by:

— CyberTel-Cox Beep USA Inc., a subsidiary of Cox Communications Inc. of Atlanta. This permit was won in the lottery by the United Paging Corp., a subsidiary of the United Cable Television Corp. of Denver, one of the nation's largest cable TV companies. CyberTel-Cox, United and a third applicant — Amcom Paging Services Inc., a small California firm — agreed before the lottery that if one of them won, CyberTel-Cox would lead a joint venture and hold an 80 percent ownership interest, with United and Amcom holding 10 percent each.

— National Satellite Paging Inc. This firm is 40 percent owned by the Mobile Communications Corp. of America, a major paging and mobile telephone firm based in Jackson, Miss.; 40 percent by the Western Union Corp., and 20 percent by National Public Radio. The permit was actually won by Radiofone Inc., a New Orleans-based carrier that provides paging services in Louisiana. National Satellite Paging joined Radiofone and three other applicants before the lottery — National Paging Networks; the Contemporary Communications Corp., and PageMemo Inc. Under the agreement, National Satellite Paging is guaranteed a minimum 70 percent ownership of the new paging system.

— PageMemo. This is a new firm based in Santa Monica, Calif. The founders of PageMemo include two men described as communications engineers and consultants, Lawrence Rogow and Garry Spire; and an investor, Lawrence Brandt. PageMemo was going to be part of the National Satellite Paging partnership. But since it won its own permit, the other members of that partnership now have the option of joining either National Satellite Paging or PageMemo.

Each of the network organizers will be responsible for constructing a long-distance transmission system using either satellite or telephone facilities to link local paging companies across the country. They will also oversee the use of one of three special radio frequencies by their local affiliates, which will retransmit paging signals.

Although NPR's share is small, the interest in National Satellite Paging could eventually be worth millions to the financially strapped public radio network. It is NPR's satellite transmission system that is to be used by the National Satellite Paging system.

"This is very encouraging," said NPR President Douglas Bennet. "We think this offers us a potential revenue source."

According to the Telocator Network of America, an industry trade group, local paging has grown at the rate of about 25 percent a year since 1979 thanks to the declining price of "beepers" and the increasing mobility of American families. By next year, the association estimates the industry will be serving roughly 4 million subscribers and splitting $1.4 billion in revenue.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband and I went out to dinner with some friends, and during the meal one of the men began complaining of some pain in his chest. My husband wanted to take him to an emergency room, but the man said he would soon be all right, and within a few minutes he did feel better. My question is: How is someone supposed to know when someone is having a heart attack, or indigestion, or something else? — Mrs. O.K., Youngstown, Ohio

Dear Mrs. K.: The American Heart Assn. publicizes the warning signals of a heart attack, and it would be a very good idea for people to keep them in mind. They include:

1 — An uncomfortable pressure, squeezing, fullness, or a pain in the center of the chest behind the breastbone, which may spread to the shoulders, neck, or arms.

2 — A heart attack is a possiblity if the sensation lasts for at least two minutes.

3 — There may be severe pain, dizzines, fainting, sweating, nausea, and shortness of breath, but these symptoms do not always occur.

Medical attention should be sought if there is any doubt about the significance of the symptoms. It is always better to take one trip too many to an emergency room than one trip too few.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read that doctors in Germany and Mexico have a cure for AIDS, and that it can also be cured through the use of vitamins. Do you have any information on this? — Brent, Pittsburgh

Dear Brent: A disease such as the acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) gives rise to a number of unproven, ineffective, and sometimes downright harmful remedies. The best course of action for a person with AIDS is to place himself or herself in the hands of a competent physician, and to work together to manage the problem.

The same kinds of claims, which were later found to be without basis, have been made about cures for cancer, arthritis, and other diseases. Unfortunately but understandably, some patients out of desperation turn to thee so-called remedies, often ignoring treatments that might be helpful.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you give me some examples of what frequency of noise has to do with hearing loss? — Ms. S.W.

Dear Ms. W.: If you are losing high frequency sounds, words that rhyme and begin with higher frequency consonants (like hill, fill and sill) may sound exactly the same. You may need to have confusing words repeated or even spelled out, or guess at the meaning of whole sentences.

For Bernard, Milwaukee, Wisc.: Walking is an excellent form of exercise for everyone, including older individuals. The results of a study of 200 older people by the Veterans Administration and the University of Utah showed that walking was associated with an improvement of reaction time, in short-term memory, and in reasoning power.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been hearing a lot lately about testosterone, but I'm not sure about what it is or what it does. Can you help? — Ned, Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Ned: Testosterone is a male sex hormone. A lack of testosterone is associated with a decrease in sexual drive and potency, a lower rate of hair growth and a reduction in muscle strength.

If one thinks he may have this problem, then physicians can test for it. If one does have the problem, the physician can treat the patient with testosterone replacement therapy.

Homosexual rape major problem in prison system

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Male dominance and sexual frustration are major reasons for the runaway inmate violence in the Texas prison system, the director of the nation's second-largest prison system says.

Most of the violence is aimed at the younger and weaker inmates by older, stronger convicts trying to obtain sexual favors, according to Texas Department of Corrections Director Raymond K. Procunier.

"It is the biggest problem today in prisons across the country," he said.

To ease the problem, Procunier says he is trying to establish a new prison classification system, in which younger inmates would be separated from hardened criminals within the 32,000-inmate prison system.

During the first four months of this year, the TDC reported 10,000 stabbings and other major infractions. Seven prisoners were killed in the first half of this year.

"Somewhere between 50 percent to 80 percent of the violence we have today is started because of sex," Procunier told the Houston Chronicle.

Criminologists say convict "ring leaders" use homosexual rape, which rarely is reported, to degrade and control other inmates.

"The attack is a type of degradation ceremony," says Frank Williams, a Sam Houston State University research criminologist. "If one inmate can degrade other inmates through rape, then he can control them. That inmate can then control the inmate hierarchy and make things a little softer for himself."

Procunier says although prison officials are trying to lessen the number of homosexual rape incidents, their efforts are stifled by the prisoner "code of silence."

"It's not hard to get indictments against the inmates," says Richard Handorf, district attorney of Anderson County, where the TDC's Coffield Unit is located.

Prince escapes harsh punishment in school

LONDON (AP) — Prince Edward says he escaped the harsh punishment meted out at the military-style high school he and his two brothers attended, but that doesn't mean he was a "goody-goody."

"But that's always the sign of a good criminal — if you get away with it," Edward said in his first television interview. "Everybody thinks I was a proper little goody-goody, but they don't really know, do they?"

In the BBC documentary on Gordonstoun, the school in northern Scotland attended by Edward and his brothers, he recalled that he was rarely subjected to the school's unusual punishments, such as cross-country jogs or long, solitary walks on the Scottish heath.

"Just because I wasn't on punishment doesn't mean I was on the straight and narrow," said the 20-year-old prince.

The prince said corporal punishment is sometimes necessary.

It's "a sort of last resort, really," he told the British Broadcasting Corp. "A beating or a thrashing, if used in the right context, is I think very valuable."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police said they confiscated Olympic tickets with a face value of $10,000 when they arrested the wife of Apple Computer co-founder Steve Wozniak on charges she scalped two gymnastics tickets for $400 each.

Candace Wozniak, 29, was cited on a misdemeanor charge and released Wednesday after police found her at the center of a "bidding war" involving about 30 people outside UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, said police Lt. Dan Cooke.

The bidding for the two tickets started at $300 each, and they were sold for $400 apiece, police Sgt. Bob Warren said.

Mrs. Wozniak told police her husband obtained $11,000 worth of tickets to the Games in exchange for a $100,000 contribution to the Olympics, but authorities hadn't confirmed the claim, police Cmdr. William Booth said Thursday.

John Williams

BOSTON (AP) — Composer John Williams, who quit as the Boston Pops' conductor when he reportedly became upset by the orchestra's behavior and poor morale, has decided not to give up his baton after all.

Williams, best known for the movie scores of "Star Wars" and "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial," has rescinded the resignation he tendered in June when members of the orchestra jokingly hissed at one of his compositions, associate conductor Harry Ellis Dickson said Thursday.

The Pops' musicians received the news enthusiastically. "Everyone applauded and everyone was happy," Dickson said.

Williams was said to be angry over the behavior of musicians during rehearsal and orchestra morale, Dickson said when Williams resigned.

"John Williams is a very sensitive man. Conducting is rather new to him, as he himself will see. You have to be a little bit hardskinned to conduct an orchestra," Dickson said.

LONDON (AP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth, who will be 84 on Saturday, was given a clean bill of health after a regular three-day medical check-up at a London hospital, a royal official said.

She was admitted for routine tests Monday at King Edward VII Hospital and has been "found to be in very good health," a spokesman at her Clarence House residence said Thursday.

Her hospital appointment had been planned for some time and came after a busy round of public engagements this summer, said the spokesman, who according to British practice refused to be identified.

Among 22 scheduled public appearances this autumn, Elizabeth, the mother of the reigning Queen Elizabeth II, will make her first official trip to Italy in October.

Jimmy Cagney

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Cagney's wife of nearly 62 years says the veteran actor is his own harshest critic.

"He's always saying that whatever he did was just a job," said Frances "Willie" Cagney. "Even today it is a terrible struggle to get him to watch any of his old pictures.

"When I watch one, he'll say something like, 'Why did I walk like that? God, I look like I'm hitting the walls on both sides of the hall!' I like to tell him that he's just looking at one scene and not getting the whole picture."

In an interview in this Sunday's Parade Magazine, the wife of the 85-year-old actor said their marriage has lasted so long because they had the sense "to get out of Hollywood as often as possible."

'Hill Street' tops Emmy nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After NBC's "Hill Street Blues" scooped up 18 Emmy nominations, executive director Steven Bochco laughed and asked, "How do you spell whoopee?"

The show which nabs Emmy awards as readily as its roughhouse cops collar suspects won another lopsided victory Thursday as it dominated the nominations for the fourth straight year.

Since 1981 the gritty police drama has gotten 77 nominations and collected 20 awards, making it one of the most honored series in the history of television. Among regular series, only "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" with 26 and "The Carol Burnett show" with 22 have done better.

"The Day After," ABC's nightmarish story of nuclear holocaust that drew a record TV movie audience of 100 million, received 12 nominations from the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, as did NBC's witty barroom comedy "Cheers."

NBC, third in the ratings, once again led all the networks with 98 nominations.

The "Hill Street Blues" nominations ran the gamut, from best drama series to eight for acting, three for directing, two for writing, two for sound mixing and one each for film editing and film sound editing.

Michael Conrad, who died last November, received a posthumous nomination for his "Hill Street Blues" role as Sgt. Phil Esterhaus. He previously won two Emmys as best supporting actor in a drama series.

Daniel J. Travanti was tapped for his role as the precinct captain in "Hill Street" and as the father of a kidnapped child who is roused to action in the NBC movie "Adam."

He said, "I'm relieved and delighted. And I'm so thrilled for 'Adam' and all the people who were involved with it. Especially JoBeth Williams. I'd really love to win."

Another double nominee was Ted Danson, selected for NBC's "Cheers" and the ABC movie "Something About Amelia," in which he played an incestuous father. Danson said, "I'm so excited and overwhelmed. I did not expect these nominations and I'm very grateful."

The Emmy awards will be presented in ceremonies at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium on Sunday, Sept. 23, to be telecast by CBS. Carol Burnett, a five-time Emmy winner, will be the host.

Bob Hope will receive the academy's highest award, the Governors' Award.
