Carter To Mend Fence

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Carter has some fences to mend with Chicago Democrats, so he's going there on a political mission that can only warm their hearts. He'll be raising money for the fall campaign.

Carter, scheduled to arrive in Chicago late this afternoon, is holding a nationally televised regional news conference and addressing the local Democrats at their big precampaign dinner.

The still-powerful Cook County Democratic organization wasn't happy when Carter declined an invitation to a similar fund-raising affair last year.

Troops Pullout

PARIS (AP)-French Foreign Legion paratroopers began their withdrawal from southern Zaire today, less than a week after recapturing the city of Kolwezi from invading rebels and aiding in the evacuation of trapped foreigners, the Defense Ministry announced.

Word of the withdrawal came on the heels of a Belgian proposal for an all-African peace-keeping force to ensure an uninterrupted flow of Zaire's mineral wealth to the West.

Bus Sideswiped

OSLO, Norway (AP)-A lumber truck sideswiped a bus carrying 28 American tourists on a mountain road, sending thin boards slicing through the bus windows and killing seven passengers, police reported.

Seven other passengers were reported injured, four seriously, in the accident Wednesday.

Belts Could Cut Toll

CHICAGO (AP)-The National Safety Council estimates 400 to 500 people will die in traffic over the Memorial Day weekend but that the toll could be cut by 75 to 100 if all travelers used safety belts.

Even fewer lives would be lost, the council said Wednesday, if the 55 mph speed limit was observed.

The holiday period covered by the estimate runs from 6 p.m. local time Friday until midnight Monday.

Last year, 432 people were killed during the three-day Memorial Day period. The record for a three-day observance of the holiday was 507 deaths in 1969. A toll of 629 was recorded in 1968, but that was on a four-day weekend.

The SDN Column

LaVerta Lovell, the Snyder Chamber of Commerce assistant who helps out with just about every type of promotional work the local chamber sponsors, had another rude awakening in a motel up at Vernon the other day.

Taking a few days off before departing chamber manager Bill Henry took off for good, she went up to attend some of the Santa Rosa Roundup Rodeo at Vernon. Sometime during the wee hours Friday morning, there was a commotion that awakened people in the motel where LaVerta was lodged---that is it awakened nearly everybody. The motel office was robbed by a couple of men, one of whom brandished a pistol.

Several months ago, LaVerta was attending an event in Kerrville when a car ran into the motel where she was staying, awakening all of the guests in the pre-dawn hours.

But the robbery at Vernon and the commotion it caused probably will be remembered by those present more for those who failed to wake up than for those who did. One of the lodgers was Ken Curtis, television's most famous "deputy" as Festus on the Gunsmoke program. Festus slept through the entire incident.

When asked about it, Curtis was quoted as saying, "I never heared a thang." And he agreed that his old TV sidekick, Matt Dillon would have been disgusted with him if he had been working on the case.

Anyway, LaVerta says she had a most pleasant visit with Curtis and his wife at Vernon. Curtis, who has appeared in Snyder twice in recent years, was in Vernon for the entire run of the Santa Rosa Roundup.

Pilot Shoots Hijacker

MARION, Ill. (AP) - A former Vietnam combat pilot wrestled a gun from a hijacker and shot her to death while his helicopter reeled out of control 600 feet above the ground near the U.S. penitentiary at Marion.

Allen Barklage, 30, of St. Louis said Barbara Oswald, in her mid-40s, also of St. Louis, had ordered him to land Wednesday night in an exercise yard at the maximum-security prison where some of America's most dangerous criminals are confined.

He quoted her as saying they would be carrying off three convicts.

Barklage said the woman chartered the helicopter in St. Louis under the pretense of flying to Cape Girardeau, Mo., about 35 miles beyond the prison, which is about 90 miles by air southeast of St. Louis.

French Endorse US Offer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France today called for creation of a new world disarmament body and endorsed a U.S. offer to provide early-warning systems to detect attacks.

Speaking at a special U.N. disarmament session, he said a world institute of disarmament, attached to the United Nations and patterned after the International Monetary Fund, should be established.

Giscard d'Estaing also proposed a meeting by all participants in the 35-nation Helsinki security conference on disarmament in Europe to achieve "a genuine reduction in weapons within the geo-strategic complex of Europe from the Atlantic to the Urals."

Steak Dinner For Seniors

All Snyder High School seniors are reminded to attend the steak dinner tonight at the Towle Park barn, said Janet Wesson, high school counselor.

The dinner, she said, will begin at 7 p.m. and is open to all graduating seniors.

Conferees Break Deadlock....

Energy Accord Praised

HOUSTON (AP)-With the natural gas pricing compromise only hours old, initial reaction by members of the industry indicated nothing but praise and approval.

House-Senate energy conferees Wednesday ended an almost six-month deadlock to lift federal price controls on domestically - produced and newly-discovered gas on Jan. 1, 1985. The vote also provides for an annual 10 percent increase in gas prices until then.

Despite committee estimates it would take several months for the legislation to reach the floor of both houses, Gulf Oil Co. and Tenneco gas transmission company were obviously happy part of the President's energy package had finally gotten over the first hurdle.

In a brief, one-line statement a Tenneco spokesman said, "We are in favor of this bill."

Gulf was more elaborate.

"The conferees' action on the natural gas compromise is a significant break in the impasse over major provisions of the National Energy act, and Gulf has consistently supported the need for such a plan.

"The compromise includes two major features: bringing new gas prices on an energy equivalent basis - closer to world oil prices and decontrolling new gas in 1985."

A spokesman for Lone Star Gas said Wednesday night that company analysts wanted to study the compromise further before commenting.

Ask Us

Q - Why is there no playground equipment on the school grounds?

A - Supt. Bill J. Hood says apparently little need for such equipment was seen in past years, although some elementary schools do have a few items. Also, there is no "recess" as there was in earlier days and Snyder Public Schools have gymnasiums for physical education in all elementary schools, and the P.E. programs are supervised activities. Also, in times past, injuries to children likely have been a factor in curtailing use of playground equipment.

Billfold Owner Tracked Down

"I just felt like it wasn't mine. I could have used the money instead of sending it back, but I never would have felt right about it," said Ernest Waller of the $279 he found and returned to its rightful owner.

The billfold containing the money and several credit cards was found by Waller about two weeks ago. It was found beside the road approximately one mile north of Snyder on U.S. Highway 84. Waller said he first thought it was a piece of tire rubber.

"Something just told me to turn around and go back. I had already gone about half a mile before I did," he remembers.

Waller then took the money and billfold to his Fluvanna home and began a series of telephone calls trying to find the owner. The calls were made at his own expense, but he failed to find the owner.

So he took his find to the Scurry County Sheriff's Office and gave deputies the job of trying to find the owners.

They did. The billfold, they came to find out, belonged to Gleda Solomon, wife of a Fort Hood soldier. He was in the process of being discharged and they reportedly were moving to California. Nobody knew how the billfold was lost on the highway near Snyder, but apparently it fell from their car.

Contacted by the sheriff's office, the woman accurately described the billfold to deputies yesterday morning. Changed to a cashier's check, the money and billfold have already been mailed to her.

"I felt that if they could be located they should have it. I wouldn't have felt right about keeping it," Waller said.

Sunset Panel Calls For "Umbrella"

AUSTIN (AP) - The staff of the Sunset Advisory Commission said today Texas could save $2 million a year by bringing the 27 occupational licensing boards under a single umbrella agency.

It recommended a structure similar to Michigan's where the umbrella agency establishes uniform policies between the occupational boards and "greatly reduces" the possibility of boards acting in a manner not consistent with the public interest."

Staff director Bill Wells told the commission that licensing boards in Texas have generally been created at the behest of special interests and serve them rather than the public.

"Often these laws contain conflict of interests that are legalized. These are seen in the fact that the majority of licensing boards members are from the licensed occupations," Wells said.

The commission planned to vote later in the day on tentative recommedations on whether several such boards should be continued or abolished by the 1979 Legislature.

The commission won't take final action until this fall. It already has indicated a hard-nosed approach, however, voting to retire four state agencies at its April meeting.

Regulatory boards up for action today, and members of the professions and businesses they oversee all have testified before the commission in favor of continued operation.

If the next Legislature fails to renew them, they will expire automatically on Sept. 1, 1979, with a year to phase out operations.

The morticians board put on an especially long and sometimes lurid performance and promised to make some changes it previously had fought in the Legislature if only it could be kept alive.

At an April 22 hearing, board members said they now would accept non-mortician members on the board and require undertakers to itemize prices for specific services and merchandise.

Young Officials Serving Today In Colorado City

By JOHN DUNNAM

COLORADO CITY--If electing women, minorities and young people to high political office qualifies a city as liberal, this old cattle town is outgrowing the label of conservative branded upon it in past decades.

Two women were recently re-elected to the offices of mayor and mayor protem by the city council. And last month citizens elected to the council a 28 year old Mexican-American, Jessie Munoz.

Colorado City also employs its youngest chief of police, city manager and city clerk since it was chartered in 1881.

Riding herd on the whole county is Bill McGuire, a C-City original who is the youngest sheriff Mitchell County has seen since it was officially recognized 97 years ago.

The lady mayor of the town that was once thought only second to Dodge City, Kan., in the number of cattle it shipped is somewhat of a cattle baron herself. Marian Bassham is a native daughter of Colorado City and owns a portion of the Spade Ranch south of town. She also works as a registered nurse at Root Memorial Hospital and is a generous patron of the healing institution when it finds itself in a monetary drought.

Mrs. Bassham succeeded Larry Hammer as mayor. He was elected to the city's highest post at the age of 30.

Jody Neff assumes the duties of mayor in Mrs. Bassham's absence. She hails from New Mexico but followed her husband to Colorado City after college and has called it home ever since.

James Campbell is the city manager. He is a Sulphur Springs product who moved to Colorado City from Big Spring three years ago to accept the

Stars Honor Hope At Party

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) - Bob Hope's 75th birthday party attracted so many celebrities Wednesday night that comedian Mark Russell quipped, "Somewhere in Hollywood tonight there are two tourists from Alexandria wondering where all the stars are."

They came from Hollywood and elsewhere to celebrate at a noisy, happy party held in a local restaurant owned by a Hope relative. Earlier in the evening, Hope was honored by President Carter at a White House reception.

"I love him dearly," Dorothy Lamour said at the party.

"That's why I'm here."

"I'd go any place for Robert," said Lucille Ball.

Elizabeth Taylor Warner called him "one of the most unique people in the whole world."

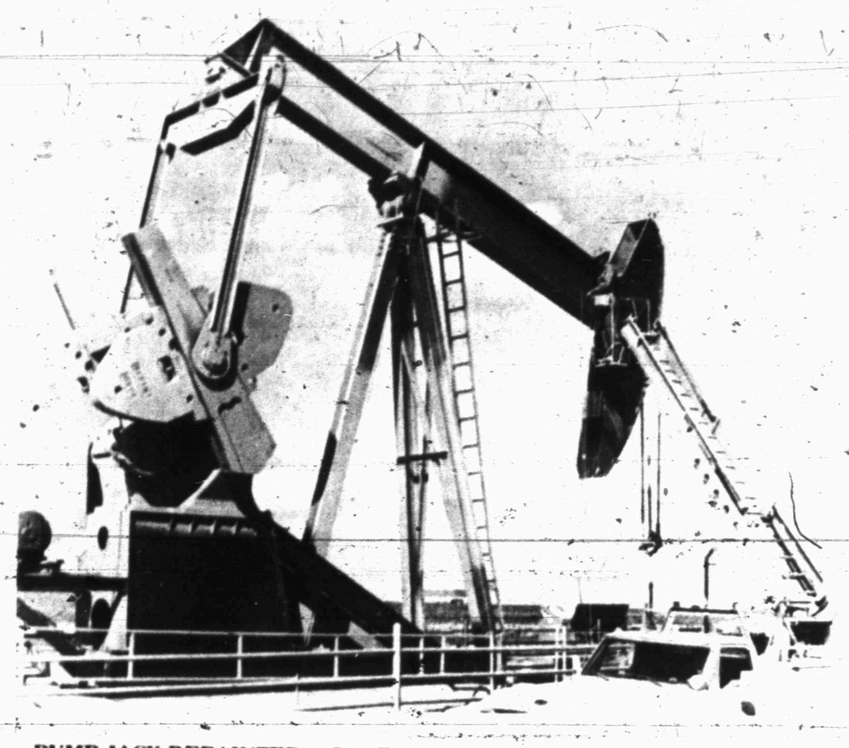

Hope and his wife of 44 years, Dolores, are in Washington for a series of birthday tributes including a Kennedy Center gala to be held Thursday night for the United Service Organizations. A tape of the gala will be televised May 29, which is Hope's actual birth date.

But Wednesday night the stars stepped out of limousines as hundreds of local residents stood in front of Peter's Restaurant, owned by Peter Malatesta, in this Washington suburban community. Malatesta is Mrs. Hope's nephew and a former aide to former Vice President Spiro Agnew.

Circulating among the 200 guests were actor Elliott Gould, singer Mac Davis, comedienne Phyllis Diller, retired Gen. Omar Bradley, former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford and retired Gen. William Westmoreland, who once commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam. Hope is famous for his Christmas season tours of American military bases overseas.

While most of the guests talked about Hope the entertainer, his 38-year-old daughter, Linda, spoke of Hope the father.

"He was terrific. He always gave 100 percent. And he was always funny," said Miss Hope, who is a producer with Bob Hope Enterprises in Los Angeles.

Defendant Acquitted

Herman Lewey Jr. was acquitted on a charge of driving while intoxicated following a jury trial Wednesday in county court.

The trial yesterday involved Lewey, not Lyndon Baize as reported earlier. Baize, also charged with a misdemeanor count of drunken driving, is scheduled to have a jury trial Friday in county court.

Lewey was acquitted following about one hour and 20 minutes of jury deliberation. The verdict was delivered about 4 p.m. yesterday by a four-woman, two-man jury.

Serving on the jury were Mrs. Joe Brown, Carl Stokes, Mrs. Jackie Pylant, Mildred Pierce, J.R. Meadows, and Helen Greenway.

The defendant was represented by attorney James Clark.

Residents Return Home

WALTON (AP)-After nearly two weeks, about 110 families who lived near that leaking East Texas gas well were to be allowed to return to their homes today.

The well began leaking deadly hydrogen sulfide fumes May 10. NFC Petroleum Corp., the Oklahoma-based firm that owns the well, made the announcement Wednesday after determining the site was stable.

Poll Claims...

Carter Couldn't Beat Ford Or Kennedy Now

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, whose popularity has dwindled steadily since he took office, could not now defeat Gerald R. Ford or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in a run for White House, according to a new poll.

A separate study by the Brookings Institution concluded Wednesday that the president has been courageous in proposing major changes in federal programs. But the study said Carter's first 16 months were disappointing because he has not accomplished much.

The poll, conducted by Louis Harris and Associates for ABC News, indicated that if a presidential election were held now, 48 percent would favor Ford, the 1976 Republican candidate, compared to 43 percent for Carter. Nine percent of those polled had no opinion.

A contest between Carter and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan would be closer, according to the poll. Reagan, who lost the 1976 Republican nomination to Ford, was the choice of 47 percent, compared to 46 percent for Carter.

But Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, could whip Carter in a race today for the Democratic nomination and then beat either Ford or Reagan, the poll indicated.

The latest poll gave Kennedy a 60-35 percent margin over Carter, a 52-43 lead over Ford and a 54-42 margin over Reagan.

ABC News said the poll has a 3 percent margin of error. It was based on about 1,500 telephone interviews last week with those who said they voted in 1976 and with a few persons, too young to vote 1976, who are now over age 18.

Claudia Townsend, associate White House press secretary said the administration would not comment directly on the poll or the Brookings study.

"The president believes he's doing the things that need to be done, but polls are bound to go up and down," she said.

Ford, asked about the poll at a meeting of Republican leaders here, grinned and said, "Well, let the polls speak for themselves." He added "the atmosphere is good" for a strong GOP showing in the fall congressional elections.

Sex Case Suspect's Probation Revoked

Robert Baker, 20, who is accused of forcing a 30-year-old man to engage in an act of sodomy, had his probation revoked Wednesday in 132nd District Court and was sentenced to serve a three-year prison term.

Charged with aggravated sexual abuse, Baker is alleged to have forced the man at knifepoint to engage in the sodomy March 21 along a road north of Hermleigh.

Baker was serving the three-year probated prison term as a result of an Oct. 30, 1976, theft in which he is reported to have stolen three citizens band radios.

The probation was revoked because of the aggravated sexual abuse arrest and because of the alleged drinking he is reported to have engaged in March 21.

Court records indicate Baker plans to appeal the revocation.

In two other court cases dealt with yesterday, the probation of David McCurry was revoked, and a guilty plea to a drug charge was entered by Larry Joe Wall.

McCurry, 35, was serving a 4-year probated prison sentence on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. The probation was revoked because of his alleged failure to report to his probation officer and for an unapproved change of address, court records show.

Wall, 25, pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a controlled substance. He was arrested April 13 in East Snyder when city police found in his possession a substance that lab tests indicated was cocaine.

He received a two-year probated sentence.

Project A Visual Pun

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)-Mixing magic with art, a Los Angeles artist who won a $100,000 commission to paint murals on the state Personnel Building says he plans to "make the building disappear." Terry Schoonhoven calls his project "a visual pun, but a serious one."

He says he will paint a picture of the state Capitol on the wall facing west, duplicating what the east-facing viewer would see if the six-story Personnel Building wasn't there.

On the south wall, he says he'll paint the street scene that would be seen if there was no building.

His plan was selected over 129 other proposals.

'Super Entrepreneurs'...

Independent Oilmen Don't Give Up Easily

AUSTIN (AP) - Independent oil operators are better educated than most, start drilling when they are young and do not give up easily, a University of Texas graduate student report indicates.

John Gunn of Dallas interviewed 16 independent operators in Midland and Dallas and found that on the average each drilled 21 dry holes in a row before striking oil.

The chances of hitting oil by "wildcatting" - drilling in areas where there are no producing wells - runs from one in seven to one in 10.

The figure for making a strike in developmental wells is in the 60-65 percent range.

Gunn, who received a master of business administration degree last Saturday, prepared the report under the supervision of Professor Albert Shapero.

Shapero said independent oilmen can be considered "super entrepreneurs" for even after 21 consecutive failures "they still came back and started over - it was like starting a new company each time."

"Axiomatic with being a successful independent," Gunn writes, "involves exposure to these risks each time he drills a well. As one independent put it, 'You have to get out where lightning can strike you.'"

The independents feel, Gunn said, that the productive search for oil and gas is limited to 20 years because of rising costs.

He found that their average age was 32 when they undertook their first venture.

In addition, he said, independents averaged 16 years of education, "significantly higher than the 12 years average for the United States a Texas population."

The overwhelming reason for becoming independent oilmen, they said, was a desire to work for themselves.

Missing Car Found; Youth Faces Charge

The car reported stolen Wednesday morning from Charles Robertson was found in Henrietta, police reports indicate, and a 15-year-old juvenile was taken into custody.

Robertson reported that his 1971 Buick was taken yesterday morning, along with $310 from his wallet, and wrist watch. Reports show the goods were recovered last night.

Officers reported this morning that a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle is expected to be filed on the juvenile.

In other reports, D.B. Lyle told police that his citizens band radio was stolen from his car between 4:45 p.m. and 11:45 p.m. May 23 while the vehicle was parked at Snyder Lanes. Value of the CB was set at $140.

Two mishaps were also investigated.

The first occurred at 500 33rd St. and involved a 1970 Chevrolet driven by Dolores Allen Alderete and a parked 1976 GMC pickup owned by Kermit Ford. The mishap took place at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday and resulted in minor damages.

The next mishap was in the 2400 block of Ave. N and involved a 1977 Chevrolet pickup driven by Cheryl Brown and a parked 1971 Ford owned by Joe Martinez. That mishap took place about 9 p.m. Wednesday and it, too, resulted in minor damage.

'Incentivize' Is Defended

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)-U.S. Rep. Frank Horton thinks there should be room in the dictionary for "incentivize."

The Rochester Democrat & Chronicle disagrees.

In a recent editorial, the newspaper praised the hometown Republican for a speech on energy, but criticized his choice of words. The newspaper said it hoped Horton could turn his attention "to pruning the language of some of its horrors, beginning, of course, with 'incentivize.'"

"Indeed, Frank might want to 'prioritize' that," the newspaper suggested.

Responding with a letter printed in Tuesday's editions of the paper, Horton said he felt that 'incentivize' serves as a good substitute for the phrase "to create incentive."

Horton added that if he had coined a word, he was proud of it. Why not add the very useful term 'incentivize' to our growing list of firsts?" he said.

The Democrat & Chronicle printed the congressman's letter under the headline, "How to Hortonize the Language."

West Texas Storms Dissipate

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms roamed over West Texas late last night, but dissipated early today and partly cloudy to cloudy skies were the rule over most of the west part of the Lone Star State and fair skies in the east.

Warm, humid air continued to feed northward over much of the state from the Gulf of Mexico.

The National Weather Service predicted another day of warm temperatures. The thermometer recorded readings in the 60s and 70s statewide before dawn, and afternoon highs in the 80s and 90s were expected.

But widely scattered thunderstorms are expected to move across western and southern sections of Texas this afternoon and evening. The Panhandle and South Plains can expect a few severe thunderstorms later today, the weather service said.

Hail was reported Wednesday night in the Panhandle community of Spearman.

Hansford County Sheriff R.L. McFarland said one of his deputies reported the windshield of his patrol car was knocked out by "hard ball-sized hail."

"We also had a report from a woman that she had her car windshield, a stormdoor and a house window knocked out by large hail," McFarland said.

CARNATIONS FOR GUESTS — These women were special guests at the annual Mother's Day luncheon of the Beta Sigma Phi held at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. Each guest was presented a long stemmed carnation after their introduction to the club members. (SDN Staff Photos)

Group Honors Mothers

Lambda Kappa Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held a luncheon honoring mothers and special guests of the membership at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. The registration table was presided over by Peggy Wilson and was decorated with a cut glass bud vase holding pink carnations. Carol Foust served at the silver punch service. Pam Fowler led the group in the Beta Sigma Phi table grace.

Cut glass bud vases holding pink carnations and pink tapers entwined with English ivy adorned the tables. Each guest's place was marked with a program book whose cover was an orginal pen and ink drawing by Barbara Bills. Carla Harper, guest pianist, provided a selection of luncheon music.

Following the luncheon, Carolyn Limmer, chapter president, welcomed members and guests. Anise Foster of Odessa won the door prize, a selection of poetry entitled "Treasures of Silver" by Jo Petty.

Dena Ellis, social chairman, introduced Mary Beth Vestal, junior high choir director, and the Snyder Junior High Ensemble who entertained with a variety of musical renditions. Ms. Ellis then introduced Laura Greene, who read selected poetry on the four stages of motherhood. Among the selection was a poem written by Marie Boone. Ms. Greene then presented each guest a pink carnation from a large wicker basket of carnations.

Guests attending were Eilene Snyder, Connie Arnold, Anise Foster, Lounette Null, June Browning, Rosemary Jones, Ruth Lewis, Tollie Ramsey, Ann Miller and Judy Bynum.

Also attending were Evelyn Perser, Lola K. Pohl, Billye Jean Townes, Ruby Lee Kerr, Mildred Hollis, Mary Alice Hollis, Bobby Browne, Thelma Ford and Lucille Early. Also attending were Donna Simpson, Jane Findley, Blanche Ince, Nell Kidd, Clara Myers Hoskins, Jo Harris, Jaye Harris, Cavalie Bachman and Evelene Davis.

Members attending were Bette League, Carol Foust, Dena Ellis, Lora Beasley, Marilyn Zoda, Debra Jones, Marie Boone, Carolyn Fortune, Kathy Roberts, Carolyn Limmer and Earlyn Loiselle.

Others attending were Carolyn Greene, Pam Fowler, Billie Smith, Phyllis Glasscock, Kay Hickman, Wanda Early, Barbara Bills, Gloria Myers, Mona Bryan, Bonnie Hollis, Linda Moreland and Sharon Hanzalik.

New Plants To Be Colorful

MILWAUKEE (AP)-At a plant which manufactures buried cable closures for the tele-communications and power industries, the outlook is bright.

What may sound like a financial forecast actually is a description of the interior of the plant here. Gone is the institutional gray of heavy presses. In its place are "gogo gold" and "honey yellow." A hydraulic press is amber here and beige there. Heavy shears range from royal blue to scarlet.

A new employee is permitted to select his or her favorite hue and the machinery is repainted.

"Don't forget, our workers spend most of their waking lives in this plant," said Kenneth Huff, company president. "We try to stress the fact they are not computerized clock numbers to us."

SHS Seniors Honored At East Side

Graduating senior girls from the East Side, 37th Street, and the Spanish Churches of Christ and their mothers were honored with a salad supper May 22 at the Christian Student Center at Western Texas College.

The candlelight buffet was served from a table centered with a large tiger and greenery. Individual tables were centered with small ceramic tigers and greenery. A short program was presented by Sue Lyon.

Girls and their mothers attending were: LaDonna and Betty Benson, Rita and Lavelle Eicke, Jeanne and Barbara McCormick, Marca and Sue Parham and their AFS sister and daughter, Liri Lestari, Peggy and Naomi Stephens, Laura Rollins and Barbara Tune, Jana and Janet Wesson, Andra and Bonnie Crenshaw, Rachel Coronado and Delia Pesina, Billie and Marie Voss, Belinda and Nell Price and Peggy Martin and Lana Long.

Hostesses for the event were: JoAnn McCormick, Lil Sullivan, Peggy Martin, Jane Scott, Sue Lyon, Fran Bowden, Anne Kitching, and Billie McCormick.

Equality Halts Discount Practice

COLUMBIA, Md. (AP)-That 10 percent discount on wine purchases for the ladies will no longer be offered on Tuesdays at the Richburn Liquor Bowl.

Store owner Herbert A. Richards said the promotion gimmick was started because men make most of the liquor purchases, and Tuesdays are particularly slow days.

Gene Eng was rebuffed in an attempt to take advantage of the discount, and he complained to the Howard County Office of Human Rights.

Richards was eventually told to stop the discount practice or give men a similar cut-so he dropped the promotion.

As for Eng: "I just wanted to make the point that equal rights are for everyone."

Hermleigh Quilting Club

Quilt Exhibit At Hermleigh

Approximately 130 people signed the register at the Hermleigh quilt show recently held in the Hermleigh Community Center. People from fourteen towns signed the registry book including Abilene, Munday, Hawley, Rotan, Roby, Sweetwater, Roscoe, Loraine, Midland, Fluvanna, Ira, Jacksonville, Fla., and Snyder.

There were 63 quilts on display. Pieced quilts, stamped quilts, stamped sheets quilted in the design, stamped materials quilted in the design and two samplers were among those shown.

Members of the quilting club are Clara Tate, Rella Young, Elree Baremore, Ota Groves, Ophelia Hobbs, Dean Wemken, Adala Drennon, Rachel Lassiter, Bertie Mae Herrley, Leta Loyd, Oleta Jackson, Roxie Soules, Josie Maule, Dorthy Martin and Thaba McMillan. They meet every Monday at the community center.

Wash Baby Toys In Mesh Bag

Baby's washable toys launder easily in a mesh bag such as the kind used to package onions.

Dunk the bag in detergent or soap suds--then, run it under clear water and hang up to dry of use the dryer's fluff cycle, explains Linda McCormack, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The weak jump overcall is designed to create excitement and upset the opponent's partnership communication.

When it succeeds it is wonderful. When it fails it means going back to the old drawing board.

West's preempt didn't keep North and South from reaching their normal four-spade contract which would be one down on normal play. However, it did give South a chance to try an abnormal play and the abnormal play let him make an impossible contract.

The play wasn't too abnormal. South just decided that West held just one spade as part of his preemptive hand.

Therefore, at trick two South led dummy's queen of spades.

What would you do as East? Looking at that singleton king in the West hand you would duck. But, you are just a bridge player sitting there — not superman. You don't have X-ray eyes. You don't see any way for your ace to do better than catch the queen. You play your ace. West's king of spades goes to the scaffold and North and South win the rubber.

Ms. Zoda Hosts Beta Sigma Phi

Beta Sigma Phi recently met in the home of Marilyn Zoda. A salad buffet was served. The entire membership was present.

Dena Ellis, social chairman, led the members in a game of guessing which member's baby picture was shown. Betty Richardson and Barbara Bills won the prizes for the most guessed.

Each member received a gift from her secret sister revealing the identity of the member who had sent cards and gifts to her for the year.

A short business meeting conducted by Carolyn Limmer followed.

Caracas Booming With Venezuela Oil Wealth

EDITOR'S NOTE — The conspicuous consumption produced by Arab oil money is well known, but not so a similar extravagance south of the border.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

CARACAS (AP)-Buy a three-foot tall salazar of French champagne from your local supermarket, price $450 not including the ice required to chill it.

Transport your purchase in a $45,000 white Mercedes Benz sedan from any one of a dozen nearby dealers.

And discreetly drink it with your secretary in any one of a dozen private clubs, membership fees up to $100,000.

All these items are available, and have ready buyers in Caracas, the capital of Venezuela, where cascading oil wealth has given new meaning to the cliche "boom town."

Living amidst this scene of conspicuous consumption, a U.S. Embassy official fretted, "I feel more financially underprivileged here than anywhere else in the world."

The "la dolce vita" Venezuelan style has its critics at home.

President Andros Carlos Perez complained in January that "there is too much superfluous importation of things, and vacations and spending abroad have reached a level disconsonant with our population.

"Millions of dollars have been wasted by this frivolity which seems to prevent many serious persons from taking responsibility for the present and future of Venezuela."

Maybe Perez had in mind the 1977 Pacific-rim summer cruise of the Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth 2. It included 40 Venezuelans who paid up to $90,000 each for the 79-day tour.

Or possibly he was thinking of the "Disneyland shuttle," the daily Pan Am 747 flight to Miami that returns to Caracas each evening with exhausted big spenders laden with purchases.

Few seem to heed the president's words. In the grand traditions of the gold rush days of the 19th century, Venezuela's nouveau oil rich are spending profits with a boyish enthusiasm unmatched in the world, except maybe in the similarly oil-endowed Arab sheikdoms.

"But the Venezuelans are much more light-hearted about spending money than the Arabs," says a Swiss hotel manager who also worked in Saudi Arabia. "They enjoy it more, I think."

The joy of spending has given Venezuelan executives and government functionaires entre to the international jet set, and they turn up at classy parties in New York and Europe. Convinced of the Venezuelans' durable spending habits, Air France made Caracas the destination for one of its first regular Concorde routes, and an airline spokesman reported that the weekly, six-hour flight is "selling well" at prices 20 percent higher than regular first class.

Venezuelans can afford these luxuries because the 1973 boost in oil prices made it the richest nation in Latin America. Now the world's third largest producer, exporting 2.3 million barrels of oil a day, Venezuela has amassed $8.3 billion in gold and dollar foreign reserves, higher on a per capita basis than in the United States.

With its treasury flooded in funds, the government is the prime spender and consumer. The feverish construction and spending booms of recent years have been accompanied by inflation and widely-publicized corruption, but the boom continues. "The rate of return on investments here is unbelievable," says Collin Nesbit-Smith, a visiting British financier interested in textiles.

Venezuela's wealth is easily visible as you fly in over its 1,750 miles of Caribbean coast. Flanking the picture postcard beaches at Nacuto, Naiguata and Barbella are clusters of modern towers secreting some of the most luxurious resorts in the world.

In one of them, the Puerto Azul beach club, 14,000 members mostly from inland Caracas pay an $18,400 annual fee for the pleasures of sunbathing on a white ribbon of surf-fringed beach or water-skiing in the bay. A serpentine-shaped pool winds through the grounds for those who prefer limper waters.

Beyond the sprawling clubhouses are the marinas where yachts and power boats cluster, some just returned from successful contests against the giant blue sailfish that swim majestically offshore. There is a waiting list for membership of the Puerto Azul club, just as there is for the older, upper crust Playa Grande club further along the beach with 1,000 members and an annual fee of $32,200.

"Membership of an important club is a necessary requirement for the upwardly mobile executive in Venezuela," says accountant Salvador Gosperr, who aspires to join the exclusive Caracas Country Club. Membership cost: $100,000.

But while the coast is indeed golden, as you drive along the $6 million-a-mile autopista highway through the brown hills into the high, once-verdant Caracas Valley it becomes apparent that the boom times are most visible in the capital.

Three million people now strive to prosper in a city that a little more than two decades ago was a provincial backwater. Thirty-story highrises have shot up alongside colonial relics. Apartment buildings march along the foothills, and one-bedroom nooks within these towering edifices with a view of the nearby blue mountains rent for $1,500 a month.

There are many sharp reminders that not all Venezuelans are sharing in the wealth. "About one third of the country's 13 million people are ill-housed, ill-clothed, ill-fed and ill-schooled," reads a U.S. government economic report in the waiting room of the Caracas Embassy. As many as a million people are said to live in poverty in the shanties that climb up the hills alongside the luxury apartments.

One American business couple pays $1,400 a month for what the wife calls "the doubtful privilege of looking directly from our 14th-floor window into a public toilet in a shanty town on the hillside opposite."

What seems lacking in crowded Caracas is the obvious social unrest bedevilling other Caribbean countries with similar large numbers of underprivileged. "They think they'll get money, too. It seems so near," says a Caracas journalist, and that hope brings 70,000 peasants into Caracas from the interior, according to Justice Ministry figures.

To windowshop in Caracas is to dream of riches. Pierre Cardin suits that sell for $150 in New York go for $700 in Caracas. And Yves St. Laurent tie brings $80 at Chacaito, best of the city's many modern shopping centers. Italian silk shirts at the Centro Simon Bolivar sell for $130. "And sales are brisk," according to clothier Vincent Losada who flies to Paris for the annual fashion pageants.

Women's fashions are similarly expensive.

Ballet Thriving In United States

EDITOR'S NOTE-It used to be that not even a Nureyev or a Fonteyn could lure middle America out of the bowling alley for an evening of ballet. Now one company is dancing on what used to be lanes. And bowlers, businessmen, teenagers, housewives are watching.

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP)-Between his modest home building business and a family of 12 children, Paul Bobrowitz never had much time, inclination or money for fine arts.

But this year, at age 56, he found himself in the unfamiliar surroundings of the Milwaukee Performing Arts Center, watching "The Nutcracker" ballet. He decided he'd been missing something.

"That must be what it's like in heaven," he marveled. "The dancers, they move like they're floating, like angels."

At the same performance was another initially blase initiate, a 13-year-old boy who became equally enthralled.

"Mom," he exulted, "it's even better than 'Star Wars.'"

The two converts are among new fans fostering a popular explosion in dance, particularly ballet, throughout the United States.

"Ballet has made a resounding turnaround for dance in general," says Archie Sarazin, manager of the arts center.

And nowhere is the boom louder than Milwaukee, the beer-and-polka town that has embraced its fledgling ballet company with the kind of gusto usually reserved for bratwurst and Lawrence Welk.

"We're not just riding the crest, we're helping create it," says Randy Voit, the Milwaukee Ballet's 24-year-old business manager.

Founded in 1969, the company relied mostly on guest artists until 1974, when internationally famed dancer and choreographer Jean Paul Comelin was hired as artistic director.

Since then, the season has expanded from 14 to 30 weeks, the number of performances from eight to nearly 100 a year. Season ticket sales nearly quadrupled to 2,000, and the company began getting good reviews on national tours.

"It's the college age people that have really done it," Comelin says, "but we're still developing a couple of new audiences."

In the middle 1960s, the national dance audience, the people who bought tickets for professional dance, was estimated at 1 million. Now it's somewhere around 20 million.

"It's just gone crazy," says John Gingrich of the New York-based American Association of Dance Companies. "The success of dance and its impact is very much reflected in the number of community-based companies."

He says there are 325 professional dance troupes in the United States, more than double the number a decade ago. About 60 of those are ballet companies, an increase of 20 in 10 years.

Gingrich says there are no solid statistics, but he believes the number of students taking up dance also is a sign of its growth.

"There are 2,000 students at the Alvin Ailey school in New York alone," he says. "Companies everywhere are looking for more space to expand their schools, and more colleges are offering dance courses.

Gingrich credits Olympic gymnasts Olga Korbut and Nadia Comaneci with leading many youngsters to study ballet and its similar disciplines of body movements.

Athleticism also has played a major part in developing what many critics see as an emerging American ballet style more creative, enthusiastic and sensual than centuries-honored European dance.

Also, there is the sex-and-the-superstar reputation. Sarazin says the off-stage image of Rudolf Nureyev and Mikhail Baryshnikov as rakish bachelors probably has attracted as many new fans as their soaring on-stage leaps.

Another recent factor is what people in ballet refer to simply as "the movie." It's the hit film, "The Turning Point," built around spectacular ballet performance scenes.

"The movie is turning a lot of people on to ballet who never saw it before," says Lydia Morales, 24, a San Diego native in her second year as one of the Milwaukee company's top ballerinas.

But the main reason for ballet's popularity, perhaps, is that people are realizing they don't have to be teethed on the classic to like ballet.

"Ballet is no longer the tutu," Comelin says. "We can do works now about any kind of human drama on the front page of the newspaper."

But the classics, basically, are what draw Milwaukee crowds that pay up to $12 a ticket.

Alexandra Daniloca, the legendary prima ballerina who played the aging teaching madame in "The Turning Point," says the classics will always have a certain romantic fantasy appeal.

One of the classics, "The Nutcracker," has become increasingly popular during the Christmas season in recent years, with more than 200 professional and amateur productions throughout the United States this past winter.

Full-length "Nutcrackers," were on national television during Christmas weekend, and all 10 of the performances of their extravagant version were sold out.

Voit says "The Nutcracker" and it sure-fire box office appeal keeps many companies afloat, and Sarazin says it always wins new fans.

In Milwaukee, another sellout is the "Beer and Ballet" series staged in a large rambling nightclub that was formerly a bowling alley.

But if there is a sour note to the growth of ballet, it is sounded, typically, with dollar signs. Again, Milwaukee is an example.

The company here has grown so rapidaly in bookings, performances and tours that its burgeoning expenses outpace increased revenues.

Demos Issue Vote Totals On Referendums

AUSTIN (AP) - It took 18 days to issue the results, but Democrats defeated horse race gambling, 685,505 for and 720,012 against, in the May 6 Democratic primary, says party chairman Calvin Guest.

Guest said Wednesday party headquarters finally had received results from all 254 counties.

The State Democratic Executive Committee will canvass the returns and officially announce the result at its June 13 meeting, Guest said.

The SDEC refrained from issuing vote totals at its May 16 meeting because not all counties' results had been submitted.

Horse race betting advocates threatened for a time to sue the party to force a delay in the announcement of results until recounts could be made, but they later dropped the threat.

They said there were some irregularities as well as erroneous reporting of vote totals.

Republicans had a similar referendum and defeated parimutuel betting, 74,281 to 69,638.

The referendum had no legal effect and was promoted by horse race advocates in the hope that majorities for parimutuel wagering might encourage legislators to legalize on-track betting.

Guest also said Democrats defeated another referendum issue, on whether Texans want higher interest rates; 144,083 for and 1,201,264 against.

Connally Blasts Carter

DENVER (AP) - One-time Democrat John Connally, saying he has no plans to seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1980, has fired a broadside at President Carter, calling him inept, poorly advised, frequently misinformed and generally "not a good president."

Connally, in Denver to speak at a Colorado Republican function for persons who have given $1,000 or more to the GOP, met with newsmen Wednesday and accused Carter of believing "the siren sound of his voice would convince the Soviets to be good boys" about arms control.

Connally, a former governor of Texas and Navy secretary to President John F. Kennedy before switching party allegiance during President Nixon's tenure, predicted the GOP might win as many as 10 governorships this year and gain 25 to 30 seats in the House of Representatives. He said he could see no Senate gains.

Connally said Carter came to Colorado in early May and acted "like the greatest environmentalist in the world." In a visit to Tennessee during the past week, Connally added, the president spoke in support of nuclear power.

Connally said Carter thinks he can change his positions without anyone noticing but the president is "losing his ability to lead the American people."

Petition Filed For Children

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - The three young children of a married couple jailed on capital murder charges have only the state to support them, says a Bexar County caseworker, who has asked a state judge to appoint a temporary conservator for the children.

John Averitt, 31, and his wife, Susan, 26, are charged with capital murder in connection with the March 20 shooting deaths of Mary Venus, 25, and Andrea Millican, 21.

The two victims, who were sisters, were found shot to death on a rural county road.

The three children, two girls ages 5 and 2 and a 1-year-old boy, have been in the Bexar County Children's Shelter since May 13, when their parents were returned to San Antonio. The Averitts were arrested May 2 in Indiana by the FBI.

Caseworker Kathleen Koehler filed the petition Wednesday asking that the three children be placed under the temporary conservatorship of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

The petition said relatives of the three children had been contacted, but refused to care for the youngsters.

"The children are apparently without support and dependent on society for protection," the petition said.

The petition, which will be heard June 2, also asks that the Averitts be required to pay child support for the children until the children reach age 18.

ROUGHING IT — This little Colorado City girl appears to know how to enjoy the great outdoors without straying a long way from home. Actually, the only part of the camp-out suggested by the photo that Christy Rich got to participate in was helping her mother, Kathy, clean the tent and gear after her father, Raymond, took her brother and three cousins on an old-fashioned "no-girls-allowed" camping trip last weekend at Champion Lake.

Home Directors Probe Child Abuse Charge

By JERRY SCARBROUGH
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - The board of directors of a southwestern Oklahoma Church of Christ boys' home that is under state and district investigations on allegations of child abuse said Wednesday the board is conducting its own probe and will resolve any problems.

Don Baucum, a Quanah, Texas, banker who is chairman of the 15-member board of directors for the Westview Boys' Home near Hollis, said the board started its own probe after being advised of the investigations by District Attorney Richard L. Dugger of Sayre and state Commissioner of Charities and Corrections Jack Stamper.

He said he and other board members met in Altus Tuesday night with Dugger to discuss the allegations, which included claims that some boys were beaten with a heavy paddle.

But Baucum said all who attended the meeting "agreed that everything discussed would be held in strictest confidence until we have had time to evaluate the situation."

Baucum said he believes some of the spankings administered by Westview officials "were a little severe, and I wish they had not occurred," but he said he also believes "they are isolated incidents."

"I don't think our administrators have ever intended for a whipping to turn into a beating," Baucum said. "There is just too much love between the administrators and the children for there to be that kind of brutality."

He said the board will determine whether any of the beating charges are true, however, and, if necessary, "will make personnel changes." He said he believes "most of these allegations are distorted and unfounded."

Huel Hamm, one of Stamper's investigators, has stated in a report that spankings at the home are administered with a thick, heavy paddle, and, on at least one occasion, was given with such force that it constituted child abuse.

Hamm's report said one boy was given 12 licks earlier this month, and, in his opinion, the licks were "administered with too much strength" and the paddle used was too heavy.

"I definitely feel the treatment of this boy could be classified as child abuse," he reported.

Dugger, contacted at Arapaho, confirmed he started the investigation after receiving complaints about the home, then asked the commissioner of charities and corrections to conduct an independent investigation.

Jaycee Program On Easter Seals

Clifford Johaning of the Easter Seal Society presented the program at the weekly meeting of Snyder Jaycees.

Bill Urban reported that the Superkids project had involved 207 competitors and that the money was being collected through an account at Snyder National Bank.

The group voted to make a yearly pledge of $100 to the Scurry County Industrial Foundation to be paid quarterly.

Joe Coronado accepted the chairmanship of a volleyball tournament the Jaycees are planning for the benefit of Kiddie Land.

Robert Pinkston reported that trashbag sales had resulted in collections totalling around $1,200.

Pinkston presided over the meeting. The creed was led by David Clemons, the pledge by Mike Overton and the invocation by John Meetze.

Frank Ortegon was a guest at the meeting.

LA, NY Workers Get More Pay

NEW YORK (AP)-The U.S. Bureau of labor statistics says Los Angeles and New York pay their uniform workers more than other cities.

The bureau said average salaries of Los Angeles police officers, police sergeants and fire-fighters for the year ended September, 1976 were the highest among 25 major cities surveyed. New York was second in those categories.

Figures on average salaries were not given, only percentages of variation among the cities. Fringe benefits and the value of pensions were not included.

Center Honors Onassis' Son

ATHENS (AP)-The Alexander Onassis Foundation's money is in Liechtenstein, but its heart is still in Greece.

In what was called the charity foundation's first grants, Christina Onassis, 26-year-old daughter of the late Aristotle Onassis and president of the foundation, announced Friday that Greece will be given $25 million to build a non-profit charity and cultural center.

The foundation, named for Aristotle Onassis' son, who was killed in a 1973 plane crash, was set up in Liechtenstein after the death of the elder Onassis in 1975.

Amy Will Try Contact Lenses

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Amy Carter, a familiar figure in her large-rimmed eyeglasses, soon may be able to come and go around town with fewer people recognizing her.

Mother Rosalynn Carter has confided that 10-year-old Amy is about to experiment with contact lenses. Mrs. Carter told reporters that an eye specialist has suggested Amy's impaired vision is less likely to deteriorate if she switches to contacts.

Mrs. Carter said she has taken to wearing a contact lens herself in her left eye when she makes public appearances.

"It's great for speeches," she said. "You don't have to wear glasses." The first lady rarely wears glasses in public but uses them regularly when working at her desk.

Carter Uses Sketchy Notes

President Carter has a corps of speechwriters but, quite often at informal events, he speaks from sketchy notes he writes himself.

Reporters got a rare peek at Carter speech notes last weekend when he hosted an evening "promonade" and picnic on the White House lawn for members of Congress.

On the back of his program for the event, which he left behind when he went inside, he wrote:

"Andre Kestalenetz
"Marine - Air Force - Army
"Family
"More good music
"52 million records
"Military together
"Cong leader bkfast - 1812 Overture
"Calvin Klein."

The president misspelled the name of music conductor Kestelanetz. He corrected another error, having first written "Cestalenetz."

Kestelanetz conducted a concert by the combined symphonies of the Army, Air Force and Marines. Carter to saluted the musician for "getting perfect harmony from three different military services - which is something I have not always been able to achieve myself."

The reference to Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" pointed to a small joke Carter offered his guests about a rousing fireworks display planned to coincide with the playing of that stirring number.

"I think when you hear the last selection," he said, "it will remind you of the leadership breakfast I have with the congressional leadership every two weeks."

Calvin Klein's name appeared in the notes because Carter wanted to thank designer Klein for designing tablecloths for the event.

Title On The Line In Burkburnett...

Tigers Fight For Bi-District Championship

The Snyder Tigers, District 3-AAA baseball champs, were to have left for Hayes Field in Burkburnett this morning in search of a second consecutive bi-district title.

The local squad, which swept the northern foe in two games to win the crown last year, went into today's action behind 1-0 in the best-of-three series after losing to the Bulldogs here Monday, 4-3.

Snyder was in a position to tie the totals with a victory in the 1 p.m. game, which would force the series into a third, decisive contest. If a third game were necessary, it was to be played immediately following the 1 o'clock battle.

"We really feel like we can come back," relayed Tiger Coach Albert Lewis. "We're not overconfident but we're confident."

The double-header, providing Snyder wins the first game, would be the Tiger's first since the season began.

"No, it doesn't worry me," said Lewis Wednesday. "We played in some tournaments early in the year to help us get ready for this. However, whenever you're playing for something it's tougher. That was a clear indication between Weatherford and Burkburnett last week," he added, refering to the District 1-AAA playoff in which Weatherford shut out the Bulldogs, only to lose two straight and give up the would-be title.

"I really thought Weatherford had the better team. I thought so last year when the same thing happened too, but they just couldn't do it in the playoffs."

But Lewis was confident his team could pull off the title, with "good fielding and pitching."

Snyder was to start veteran Mitch Mackey on the mound. Mackey, a left-hander, sports a 10-2 record and has an ERA of 1.84.

The junior was to go against David Nix, a one-time heralded pitcher, who hasn't performed as well this season, as his 5-5 record indicates.

"David is a super athlete," praised Lewis. "Last year he pitched three no-hitters. But this year he's down mentally," he said of the youth who won only his first game in two months last weekend.

With Nix on the mound, despite whether he could get his pitching together, the Bulldogs would have had to place an inexperienced sophomore at catcher, Nix's normal position.

"If we get to first base," Lewis half-joked, "we'll try to run (steal) the bases more. We have to get on base first, though."

Backing up Mackey were Sid Everton, Mike Hicks and Walter Banks. If a second game was to be played, Lewis was to start freshman Tony Degrate on the mound.

Nutt Signs With Abilene Christian

Shelly Nutt, daughter of Mrs. Martha Nutt of Snyder, has signed to play volleyball for Abilene Christian University.

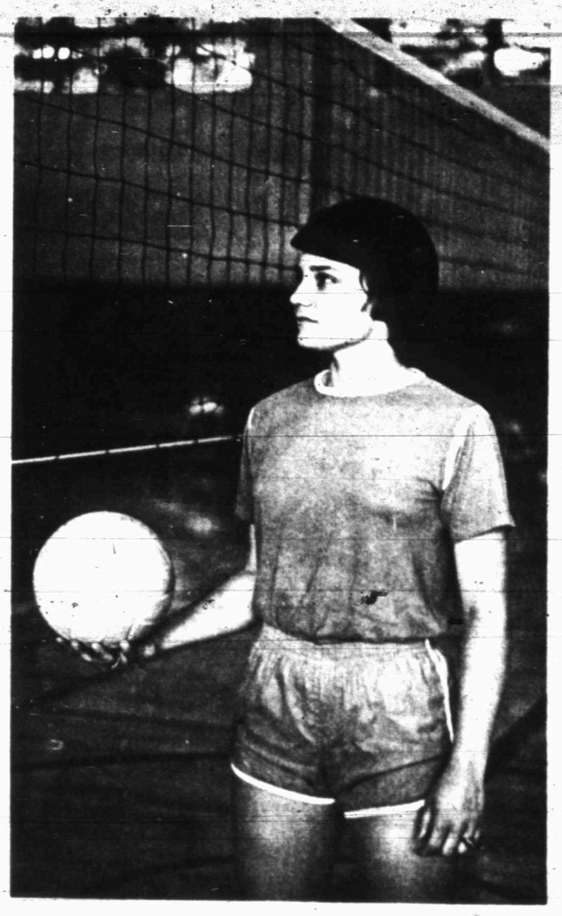

Miss Nutt, named to all-state, all-regional and all-district (unanimous) teams as a spiker for Coach Joyce Elrod's Tigers this year, signed the letter Wednesday.

She was drawn to the Abilene-based university for two reasons.

"I think they have a good P.E. program (physical education). And that's just where I've always wanted to go. I sort of grew up with it."

The P.E. program is important to Miss Nutt, because, "That is my major. I'd like to teach girl's volleyball."

In addition to her five-year expertise in the field, she participated in track as a junior. During the summer she plays girl's softball and is currently a member of the Bad News Babes, a senior-league softball team affiliated with the Snyder Girl's Softball program.

Indy Scoring Crew Suffers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - A.J. Foyt wouldn't be going for his fifth victory in the Indianapolis 500 this Sunday if someone hadn't caught an official scoring error made last year while he was going for No. 4.

At one point during his drive to the unprecedented victory - no other driver in the 61-year history of the race has won more than three - the scoring pylon showed Foyt one lap down. Some confusion followed; the scoreboard was finally adjusted, putting Foyt back up with the leaders.

The reason for the change was not announced. No error was acknowledged.

However, personnel changes resulted immediately in the timing and scoring crew. Prior to this year's race, it was announced that the chief of that division, Dick Sauer, was also being replaced.

No reasons were given.

The net result is a wider role this year for regular timing and scoring officials of the U.S. Auto Club, the sanctioning body for racing at Indianapolis.

That's both good news and bad news for some members of the racing community.

The regular crew should help in identification problems; it's harder to read the numbers on cars going by at 220 mph if you're unfamiliar with the cars in the first place. Identification is expected to be more of a problem this year because there are so many cars that look alike and are painted similarly (dark colors and blues are very popular).

The regular crew also scores two other 500-milers during the year, as well as a variety of other races. It's a regular business with them.

But there have been complaints about USAC scoring this season. In fact, results of three of the four Indianapolis car races so far in 1978 have been disputed. Protesters include the Penske team and Interscope Racing, whose cars comprise the front row for Sunday's $1 million race.

Two-car or three-car teams seem to cause the most problems.

Foyt and teammate George Snider have almost identical orange Coyotes.

Spike Gehlhausen and John Mahler start side by side in twin blue and yellow team cars.

The worst are the three Penske cars. All matching red, white and blue, their numbers are 1, 7 and 71.

Oliver Singles Texas Victory In Eleventh

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) - New relief ace Mike Marshall proved his humanity Wednesday night when he allowed his first run and lost his first game as a Twin as Texas edged Minnesota 3-2 at Met Stadium.

Al Oliver singled home pinch runner Bobby Thompson with the winning run in the 11th inning.

"I walked a couple guys I shouldn't have on close pitches," Marshall said. "They got a cheapie. I jammed him (Oliver), but he got it out there and you've got to give him credit."

In five earlier relief appearances over eight innings, Marshall had allowed only four saves and one win. When a reporter suggested that record had to end sometime, Marshall replied, "I don't worry about things like that. You've just got to keep pitching every game each day."

With one out, Mike Hargrove walked and was replaced by Thompson, who stole second. Bobby Bonds also walked before Oliver delivered the winning blow, his third hit of the game. He also drove in the first Texas run.

Marshall relieved starter Paul Thormodsgard in the 10th.

Ranger Coach Billy Hunter said, "When you win, you're happy. Al Oliver is hitting well now. What we need is a couple of guys to help him. We've got a couple of guys hitting. What I'm trying to do is get them to do it together."

Pinch-hitter Craig Kusick tied the game for the Twins in the bottom of the ninth with a two-out home run off Paul Lindblad. Lindblad, 1-0, relieved starter Dock Ellis in the seventh and had retired five Twins in order when he yielded Kusick's first home run of the year. However, Oliver's hit made him the winning pitcher.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when John Lowenstein opened the game with single, stole second and scored on Oliver's single. Bump Wills made it 2-0 in the fifth when he lofted a 3-2 pitch just inside the right field foul pole for his fourth home run.

The Twins got their first run in the bottom of the fifth when designated hitter Glenn Adams doubled and scored on Hosken Powell's single.

Washington Plans No Big Changes Tonight

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) - Washington Bullets Coach Dick Motta says he plans no major changes for tonight's second game of the national Basketball Association championship series against the Seattle SuperSonics, although two of his top players have offered a suggestion.

Forwards Elvin Hayes and Bobby Dandridge say a bigger role for reserve center Mitch Kupchak could be the key to unclogging the middle and opening up Seattle's defense.

Hayes and Dandridge, the Bullets' top two scorers, who combined to average 39 points per game during the regular season, managed just three baskets in the second half in Sunday's 106-102 loss to Seattle in the opener of their best-of-seven playoff final. Part of the reason, say the Washington forwards, is that Seattle's 7-foot-1 center Marvin Webster, was able to slough off Bullets' pivot man Wes Unseld and clog the middle.

"It's nothing new," said Dandridge. "Other teams just leave Wes alone and have their center double-team us inside. If Wes can't be more of an offensive threat, we should use Mitch more. That would open up things inside."

"They can't gang up on us when Mitch is in there," agreed Hayes. "When he has the ball at the top of the key, they have to respect him because he can hit that shot."

But replacing Unself, who excels at rebounding and setting picks but is a weak outside shooter, with Kupchak, who is more aggressive offensively, is not the answer according to Motta.

"We won't try anything different," he said. "People have been playing us the same way all year. We didn't see anything new on Sunday. There were no surprises. In maybe 60 of our 82 games, teams played us that way - fronting Hayes and Dandridge and dropping off on Unseld."

Motta says the answer lies with the Bullets themselves.

"We have the capability to counter the things Seattle did," he said. "I'm not worried about Seattle. When the Bullets play right, nobody can beat us. Half of the time, we're our own worst enemy."

Bullets guard Kevin Grevey, who suffered a sprained left ankle late in Sunday's game but expects to play tonight, feels that playing before the expected capacity crowd of 19,035 at the Capital Centre should help Washington.

"Their fans got behind them and got them fired up, which helped Seattle come back." Grevey said. "It should work the same way with our fans."

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens, facing the next two games of the series on the road, understandably has tried to play down the home-court advantage.

"The home fans are nice," he said. "But we're all professionals. We've proven we can win on the road or we wouldn't have gotten this far."

Amaya Rips Molina At Italian Tourney

ROME (AP) - Victor Amaya of the United States ousted Colombian Ivan Molina 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 in the second round of the $230,000 Italian Open Tennis Tournament.

In other second round play involving Americans, third-ranked Brian Gottfried beat Australian Colin Dibley 6-1, 6-3; fourth-seeded Eddie Dibbs got by Argentina's Jose Clerc 6-1, 6-3 and Arthur Ashe defeated Christoph Roger Vasselin of France 5-6, 7-6, 6-2. Also, Hank Pfister disposed of Australia's Paul McNamee 5-3, 6-3; Harold Solomon outlasted Victor Pecci of Paraguay 6-4, 4-6, 6-4; and Roscoe Tanner completed the U.S. dominance by eliminating Jiri Granat of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 7-6.

In women's quarter-final action, top-seeded Mina Jausovec of Yugoslavia bested Leslie Hunt of Australia 6-1, 6-2, while second-seeded Virginia Ruzici of Romania eliminated another Romanian, Mariana Simonescu, 7-5, 7-6.

Shipp To Play For Sul Ross

ALPINE--Snyder High School graduate Randy Shipp has signed a letter of intent to play football for Sul Ross State University this fall, said SR Head Football Coach Vernon Fewell.

Shipp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Winfred Shipp, lettered two years in football and was a team captain for the Tigers.

The young athlete will be competing in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association, a non-scholarship athletic conference.

Ayala Indicted For Attempted Murder

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - North American Boxing Federation featherweight boxing champion Mike "Cyclone" Ayala has been indicted on charges of attempted murder in connection with the December 1977 shooting of another boxer.

Ayala, 19, a former national Golden Gloves champion, is free on $10,000 bond in connection with the shooting of Gilbert "Machete" Galvan, 26, of San Antonio.

A Bexar County grand jury returned the indictment Wednesday.

Ayala and Galvan, a lightweight boxer, had trained together and boxed on the same card in 1977.

Galvan was shot in the head and back on Christmas night, but survived his wounds.

Ayala won the North American Federation featherweight title after being charged in the shooting. He scored a first-round TKO over Ronnie McGarvey of Baltimore, Md., here on March 18 after the Texas Boxing Commission refused to bar him from fighting.

No trial date has been set, but Ayala is scheduled to defend his title here June 6 against Eliseo Cosme of Mexico City.

Mariucci Inks With CFL

MARQUETTE, Mich. (AP) - Former Northern Michigan quarterback Steve Mariucci says he has signed a contract with the Hamilton Tigercats of the Canadian Football League.

Mariucci would not disclose the terms of his contract with the Ontario club, but said "it was too much" to resist.

Mariucci was last year's NCAA Division II total offense leader. He gained more than 6,000 yards passing during his college career.

As a sophomore in 1975, Mariucci led the Wildcats to the Division II national championships.

WHA Trustees Meet June 6

EDMONTON (AP) - World Hockey Association trustees will meet here June 6 to discuss plans for 1978-79, including cash deposits for teams intent on operating next season and a policy on underage junior players, it was announced Wednesday.

As Food Prices Soar....

Officials Ponder Beef Imports

WASHINGTON (AP)- The administration plans no action now to increase beef imports to help relieve spiraling prices at supermarkets, but some senior officials close to President Carter are thinking about it, qualified government sources say.

A reason for taking another look at the possibility of opening the door to more foreign meat is the Agriculture Department's latest prediction that retail prices of choice-grade beef probably will go up 16 percent to 18 percent this year, much faster than was anticipated a few months ago.

The increase is fueling a heftier boost in overall food prices than had been expected by the USDA and other administration experts.

The department is expected to announce soon, probably next week, a revised forecast on food prices. Sources say that the new report is likely to predict a 1978 food price increase of near 8 percent instead of the 6 percent to 8 percent range predicted in late March.

On Tuesday, the president's Council of Economic Advisers headed by Charles L. Schultze met to review the latest food price developments. The meeting, according to a source close to the council, did not involve major decisions nor break any new ground in administration feed policy. The sources asked not to be named.

Mainly, the sources said, the council wanted to be certain that current food price outlook projections by the administration, including the USDA, were "on track" and not likely to be upended by a sudden, unforeseen development.

"It was purely a forecasting effort and to make sure everyone felt comfortable with the estimates now available, and they do," the source said.

Although the source said that the council tentatively agreed with USDA's food price revision now in the works and the expected prediction that an increase of around 8 percent is now likely for 1978, there was some feeling that anoher, higher revision may have to be announced later.

One major reason for raising the food price estimate even higher within a few months is the cattle situation. If cattle market prices do not level off soon-or possibly decline temporarily-there will be a continued, sustained increase in consumer beef costs.

Should this happen, according to the source, another revision in 1978 food prices probably will have to be issued pointing to an average increase this year of at least 9 percent.

Cattle are not the entire reason for food prices going up this year by any means. But higher prices for cattle-along with hogs and poultry-are a main reason for food prices going up faster than the experts had thought.

Youth Care Experts To Meet June 1-5

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Too often children on the streets are "throwaways" - not "runaways," says Ben Standley, the founder of Texas Foundation of Youth, Inc.

Standley plans to get experts together at the desert town of Terlingua, Texas, to decide what to do about it.

He recently spread a half dozen or more clippings on a coffee table that he had clipped from a single issue of a newspaper. Each clipping was abouut troubled children.

Violent children and violence against children have reached epidemic proportions, says Standley, a low-budget crusader for better youth care.

Standley spews statistics and flashes documentation such as magazine articles as swiftly as a dealer handling playing cards.

-The No. 1 killer of children, ages 1-5, in the United States is child abuse.

-From 1964 to 1974 the suicide rate for youths 5-14 doubled.

-The FBI estimated three million runaways in 1977.

-School vandalism is costing taxpayers $600 million a year in repairs.

-There are 70,000 assaults against teachers each year across the nation.

His finger stabs at an underlined sentence in an April issue of U.S. News & World Report "...the risk of violence to teen-agers remains greater in school than on the street."

For five days, June 1-5, Standley has arranged for an all-star cast of persons involved in youth care to meet in a symposium at Terlingua, 100 miles south of Apline in the Big Bend country.

The program cover notes-"kids invited free." Standley estimates nearly 100 will be there.

"The idea for the symposium originated with the kids," says Standley. "They are concerned with the youth crisis. Each has his own prolems and can see the problems of his peers."

Why Terligua?

"We felt we had to get it out of the Hyatt Regencies and Ramada Inns," Standley said.

He says he is familiar with Terlingua since he worked for a weekly newspaper at Alpine and helped organize the 1977 World Chili Cook-off at Terlingua.

Those scheduled to participate include Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh, chairman of a committee on juvenile deliquency, and Maureen Reagan, daughter of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and a member of the National Women's Political Caucus.

The others are not so well known publicly, but Standley says they are extremely important professionals in the area of child care.

Dr. Brunc Bettelheim, professor of education, psychology and psychiatry at the University of Chicago.

Loretta Long, one of the hosts on the award-winning children's program, "Sesame Street."

Joseph Sorrentino, a former Brooklyn gang leader who was 1967 valedictorian at Harvard Law School and is now a professor at the University of Southern California and sits on the Los Angeles Municipal Court.

Michael Dann, formerly in charge of television programming for CBS.

Kenneth Wooden, executive director of the National Coalition for Children's Justice.

Caroline Hogue, director of Colorado Wildnerness Trails, a therapeutic camping program for youths.

"We accept that we have a problem with youth," says Standley. "The speakers and workshops will concentrate on what we can do about it."

Waitresses Aid Rehab Center

Plastic American flag pins are on the menu at almost 115 restaurants throughout West Texas this week as waitresses give the West Texas Rehabilitation Center a helping hand. The flag pins are being sold for $1 each during the Seventh Annual Memorial Day Coffee Project which is staged each year to help provide operating funds for the Center during the summer months.

James Hallmark, Media Director for the Center, expressed optimism in regard to this year's effort. According to Hallmark, thirty additional restaurants are joining in the project this year, and preliminary checks indicate that enthusiasm among the waitresses is running high.

Hallmark also pointed out that incentive prizes have been provided by friends of the Center for top waitresses. The top four waitresses in the Abilene area will receive gift certificates from Luskey's Western Wear of Abilene, while the top four waitresses in the San Angelo area will be given gift certificates from M.L. Leddy and Sons.

The top overall waitress will be awarded the grand prize which will be a weekend for two in Dallas. Supertravel Inc., of Abilene has arranged for airfare through Chaparral Airlines and lodging at the Fairmont Hotel in downtown Dallas, plus $100 expense money.

Last year's Memorial Day Coffee Project raised $5,000 for the West Texas Rehabilitation Center.

Pruner Puts Blame On Grape

SPOKANE (AP)-James Allen admits he did more pruning than was prudent. But he puts the blame on the grape.

Allen, who pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of first-degree malicious mischief, admitted chopping down seven mature apple trees at a local nursing home to fuel his fish smoker.

Spokane County Superior Court Judge John J. Lally dealt Allen a 30-day term in the county jail and ordered him to pay for the damage-worth $3,850.

Deputy County Prosecutor Clark Colwell said Allen, 41, was given permission to trim the trees in question on April 8.

But Allen told Lally that he got drunk before he started work and got a bit carried away, trimming the trees just above ground level.

'Sunset' Plan Urged For Federal Programs

Curtailment of unneeded federal programs and amendments to the Meat Import Act were the subjects of positions issued today by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

WTCC National Affairs Chairman, Joe Kloesel of Midland, stated that "the West Texas Chamber of Commerce strongly supported pending federal legislation comparable to the so-called 'Sunset Law' already in effect in Texas." Koesel said that, "an estimated 65 billion dollars could be saved annually by passage of Senate Bill 2, referred to as the 'Program Evaluation Act of 1977.'"

He explained that the bill would require authorization of a new budget authority for government programs on a six-year schedule, thereby providing an orderly and regular process of evaluation and justification of programs. Programs found to be unneeded could be identified and terminated much more efficiently within the framework provided by the "Program Evaluation Act" than is now possible.

A counter-cyclical method of determining meat import quotas was endorsed by the Regional Chamber as a means of providing a more stable market for both the producer and consumer. The counter-cyclical method would allow for increased imports in times of decreasing domestic supplies and decreased quotas in times of high domestic production.

Clarence Martin of Friona, Chairman of the WTCC Agriculture and Ranching Committee, pointed out that amendments to the present Meat Import Act were needed to increase its effectiveness. Additional amendments called for included provisions for quarterly, rather than annual, opportunities to set import quotas; limiting the power of the President to change quotas, once set, and inclusion of all forms of imported meat products including cooked and canned products when figuring quotas.

Martin commented that, "the U.S. meat industry is one industry that has survived under the law of supply and demand and that the American producer has been and is willing to continue to operate in a marketplace subject to the ups and downs of market price cycles. He said that it was, however, unfair to subject the U.S. meat industry to untimely restraints and competition under an act which often proves detrimental to both the producer and consumer." The proposed amendments would help remedy this situation.

Heart Assn. Regional Meet Held

ABILENE–The regional meeting of the American Heart Association was held at the Royal Inn May 23. The regional meeting consists of representatives from 14 counties. Robert Lightfoot regional representative to the board and state treasurer of the American Heart Association from Sweetwater, served as master of ceremonies.

Sylvia Voelkel from Snyder presented awards to Taylor, Scurry, Nolan and Coke counties. Miss Susan Petey, music teacher at Johnston Elementary School, presented several vocal selections for the group.

An orientation program for new program chairmen and officers was presented by Jan Gentry and Walen Sessans from the American Heart Association office in Fort Worth. Mike Skiles, council executive director in Fort Worth, was also present at the meeting.

Cyprus Chief For Arms Embargo

UNITED NATIONS (AP)-President Spyros Kyprianou of Cyprus says the United States should continue its arms embargo against Turkey until all Turkish troops are withdrawn from Cyprus.

Turkey has occupied about 40 percent of Cyprus since the 1974 invasion that led to the embargo.

Breakfast, Diet Bars Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Food and Drug Administration announced the recall today of 14 million Carnation Breakfast Bars and Slender Diet Meal Bars that may contain "varying lengths of wire."

The breakfast bars and Slender Diet Meal Bars in assorted flavors were distributed throughout the United States, England, Germany, Bermuda and overseas U.S. military installations, the agency said.

The FDA listed the recall as "Class III," which it defines as "a situation in which the use of or exposure to a violative product is not likely to cause adverse health consequences."

It said the Carnation Co. of Los Angeles, Calif., is conducting the recall of the diet bars made for it by R.A. Johnston Co. of Milwaukee, Wis.

The agency identified the recalled products as: Carnation Slender Diet Meal Bars for Weight Control in chocolate, vanilla and cinnamon flavors with the code numbers KB821 through KB828 and KC801 through KC804; and Carnation Breakfast Bars in chocolate crunch, chocolate chip, peanut butter and granola flavors coded KC806 through KC810 and KC813 and KC814.

The FDA said the firm reported that 9.8 million diet meal bars and 4.3 million breakfast bars were manufactured.

Blind Director Listens Closely

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) The first thing Robert Ravan does when he tackles a play is crawl all over the stage, talking to himself, feeling.

Then he picks actors by making them talk a lot and hearing more than they say.

For him, "Directing is more a case of listening than of seeing."

Ravan has been blind since birth. A circumstance he regards as challenge rather than handicap.

"Vision without sight," runs his reasoning, "is a helluva lot better than sight without vision.

"Anyway, about 99 percent of the directors working are creatively blind, so why shouldn't I get to work?"

After a half-dozen productions in small West Coast theater groups, the 36-year-old Georgian recently launched his initial New York exhibit, "James Joyce Is Leaving Paris."

The off-off-Broadway drama, Ravan realizes, is a modest start on his ambition to make Broadway on merit alone.

His lifelong addiction to theater began at age 7 when his parents took him to see Mary Martin in "South Pacific." Years later, Ravan met William Ball, director of the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, who "rejuvenated my belief that the stage could be a vital force."

One of seven children, Bob was born in Atlanta. His mother had German measles a few months prior to his birth, which resulted in his blindness and a host of other ailments.

"My parents were petrified by having a child who couldn't see," he says, "and I think they felt terribly guilty, but the result was they never said no to anything I wanted to try."

After graduating from the University of Georgia, Ravan went on a piano-playing safari of Europe for two years, then entered Yale for a master's degree in international relations.

His education completed, Ravan headed to the West Coast, became active in public relations and got involved with several transient theatrical groups. His first directing was of a Noel Coward play.

About a year ago he came to New York, passed a set of examinations and became an account executive with a large investment firm.

"I suppose this will sound very arrogant and cold," Ravan says, "but I find that other blind people have not been quite as lucky as I. They have not been encouraged to be themselves.

"They depend too much on organizations to give them their opinions.

Transition Of Burt Calculated

NEW YORK (AP)-Burt Reynolds says his transition from shy teen-ager to "good ole boy" was calculated.

"The thought of actually holding a girl in public was excruciatingly painful for me, because, believe or not, I was so shy," the actor said in an interview.

As his acting career emerged, Reynolds says, he calculatingly developed the "good ole boy" image to "get the clout, to do what I wanted to do...these good ol' boy roles and the talk shows have made me into a very well-paid personality."

But Reynolds says he was never completely at ease with companions of friend and talk show hostess Dinah Shore."...as clever and cute as I thought I was, I wasn't sure I could be interesting through a whole dinner party," he said in the interview, published in the current issue of McCall's magazine.

Top Women To Be Honored

NEW YORK (AP)-Readers of the Ladies Home Journal magazine have picked their 10 "Women of the Year," who will be honored at an awards ceremony June 13 in Washington.

First Lady Rosalynn Carter, a proponent of mental health programs, was named by readers in the category of social responsibility; Nobel Prize winner Rosalyn Yalow, science; actresses Cicely Tyson and Anne Bancroft, performing artists; tennis star Chris Evert, sports; New York City Council President Carol Bellamy, local government; Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, national government; Securities and Exchange Commission member Roberta Karmel, business; Margaret Hillis, founder and director of the Chicago Symphony Chorus, classical music; and singer Natalie Cole, popular music.

Club Likes Young In Name

SEATTLE (AP)-They're not exactly fooling anyone, but members of the Young Men's Republican Club would just as soon keep "young" in their name.

The club has tried several times to delete the word "young" from the name, but the 270 or so members, many of whom will never see 50 again, keep rejecting the proposals.

"When some of our members first joined, they were young," explained one member. The club was founded in 1900, and its oldest member is Philip Weiss, 93.

On Monday, the club had an 87th birthday party for its treasurer, Harold Anderson.

In 1977, Americans were the most numerous of any tourists to visit Greece. A total of 598,470 Americans visited the country last year.

Expert Urges Schools To Teach Math Better

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)- In life, says George Polya who has lived 90 years of it, "every thing is just a guess, concerning your job, your home, your family, even the laws of physics."

And you can make better guesses if you know some mathematics, says Dr. Polya, who is teaching math again at Stamford University.

"By knowing the essence of math, you learn to look at things closely, and not to accept them too easily. Math provides a school in judgment. It can improve your critical judgment."

Polya, white-haired, bushy-browed, slightly stooped but vigorous, talked about his favorite subject in his sunny home here on a recent weekend.

Internationally known, he is author of some 250 papers, some dealing with research in probability, number theory, and combinatories, and of "How To Solve It," a book giving advice to students that has sold 250,000 copies in 15 languages.

Polya started teaching math 60 years ago. Among other places, he taught for 26 years at the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology and 11 at Stanford until his retirement in 1953 at age 65.

When Sputnik put new emphasis on science and math, Polya began teaching high school teachers how to teach math.

Now he's back at Stanford, filing in for a colleague, teaching an introductory course to combinatories in the computer science department. This is a branch of science dealing with problems of choice and arrangement.

Born in Hungary, coming to America in 1940 "because Hitler was too close," and becoming a U.S. citizen, Polya finds "the American public is not sufficiently critical. What they see on TV, they tend to accept right away.

"Schools should teach math better. It tends to be the least popular subject. Math teachers should arouse the kids and make them like math. Give them problems that hold natural interest for them, something to do with baseball, for example. If they learn the essence of math, their decisions would be more rational. What is the scientific method except Guess And Test?"

Students and colleagues compliment Polya's teaching skills. "He describes abstract concepts in concrete terms. He has a great love for explaining things to people. He has always been full of very clever examples and ways of looking at things."

Polya became a mathematician somewhat by default after early interests in literature, biology, physics, law and philosophy- "my way of study was to zig and zag."

He had three math teachers along the way, "one very good, the other two bad, in different ways." Finally he decided "I was not good enough for physics, and too good for philosophy, so math was in between."

He received his PhD. in mathematics in 1912, after earlier qualifying to teach Hungarian and Latin and starting to acquire speaking knowledge of four languages.

Polya thinks computers are "especially important for business decisions. The directors of a company don't understand it, but what the computer comes some extent by those who don't know simple math, they can be dangerous. For kids, they are educational if you use them the right way."

He was given a calculator on his 90th birthday last Dec. 13, "but I don't use it. I use the slide rule I got in Gottingen Germany 70 years ago."

Retirement at 65, he says, "is good for the young; otherwise they don't have jobs. But we need to have busy hands all our lives."

Christmas Cards In May Urged

TULSA, Okla. (AP)-You can beat the government and the holiday crush if you take the advice of two radio station workers who are advising listeners to mail Christmas cards early - before the end of May.

Reporter Larry White and disc jockey John Lee Hooker of station KELI in Tulsa began a campaign Tuesday to get their listeners to mail their 1978 Christmas cards before a postal rate increase takes effect next month.

The increase will boost the cost of mailing a first-class letter by two cents, to 15 cents.

"This will do three things," White said. "People will save money, it will show the post office how many people protest the increase and it just might get the Christmas cards to people on time."

White said the station has received numerous phone calls of support from people who say they will mail their holiday greetings this week.

The idea is apparently catching on elsewhere.

In Duluth, Minn., Harold Bach, executive vice president of Inter City Oil Co., has suggested that his company mail its Christmas greeting cards before the rate increase takes effect.

Monkeys Are Being Recycled

SEATTLE (AP)-Want to buy a Rhesus monkey, slightly used: Or perhaps a new one?

If you are a scientist, you might find an experimental monkey in a "new and used monkeys" bulletin published weekly by the Primate Supply Information Clearinghouse at the University of Washington.

Maryeva Terry, manager of the center, said most of the animals are "used" but some are "new," having been bought but not included in experiments.

The clearinghouse does not physically transfer animals from one laboratory to another, she said, but makes contacts and follow-up inquiries.

Funded by the National Institute of Health, the bulletin, which goes to about 2,800 subscribers nationally, provides a way of using available primates rather than going to the expense of purchasing and importing more. It also helps conserve the world's supply of primates used for research, she said.

The Dallas Cowboys sacked opposing quarterbacks 53 times in 1977, a high for the National Football League.

Scientists Working On Space-Age Noah's Ark

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)-Animals used in future space experimentation will live in almost maintenance free containers during their trips into space, a space agency engineer says.

"We try to do as much by automated fashion as possible so that the experimenters don't have to spend three-quarters or all their time taking care of the animals," said Cletis R. Booher, an engineer in the Life Sciences Project Division at Johnson Space Center.

"The basic problem is zero gravity weightlessness is how to get rid of waste matter and how to provide food and water in a way they can get to it."

The basic containers being developed for the early experiments will be for rats only but later systems could be developed for larger animals, Booher said.

"We should be able to feed it, water it, and take care of the waste production," he said. "They (containers) will be configures so you can keep track of feed and water intake of each animal."

Booher spoke Wednesday at one of a series of mini-seminars at JSC on the final day of a two-day conference on life sciences and possible medical applications to space research.

About 350 doctors and scientists attended the event to see what experiments might be feasible when the space shuttle program gets under way in the 1980s.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston co-sponsored the conference.

The objective of the container is to eliminate handling of the animals except during experimental procedures.

Booher said there would be a surgical facility aboard the spacelab that would allow experimenters to dissect or operate on laboratory animals.

"There is a lot of experimentation, particularly when you talk about calcium loss, bone degradation and muscle degradation," Booher said. "If the experimenter wanted to see what happens after a coupie of days of exposure to zero G, they could either examine or dissect the organism at various stages of the flight."

The containers would accomodate 24 to 36 rats for up to 32 days, Boober said. Animals would be visible without opening the units and the cages would be interchangeable to accommodate different sized animals.

Cats Not Really Out Of Bag

DETROIT (AP)-Just mention tigers in Detroit, and people think you're talking baseball.

But the team was in Baltimore Wednesday when 10 to 15 policemen were ordered to check out a report that a pair of four-legged tigers were on the loose.

But the cats weren't really out of the bag.

Chrissy and Marina, two sleek, 300-pound Siberian tigers, were making a commercial for Chrysler Corp.

Trainer Thaine Clark of Rosemont, N.J., said the tigers had been in town since last week, living in a special van, but nobody seemed to notice.

He theorized a passerby looking through the store windows spotted Chrissy and Marina during a break in the shooting.

Dr. Donald Wood of the city's Animal Control Department followed police to the store and found nothing wrong. He did suggest to Clark, however, that somebody screen the windows of the actresses' green room.

The American zoologist and paleontologist Alpheus Hyatt was the principal founder of the American Society of Naturalists, and served as its first president in 1883.

Ban Of Liquor Sales On Ballot

NOME, Alaska (AP)-A church-backed group, working on the premise that alcohol is the root of health and crime problems in this hard-drinking Gold Rush town, has gotten a proposition on the ballot that would ban the sale of liquor.

Disgruntled opponents of the proposal say the town has to live up to its wild and woolly past to keep the tourists coming.

The Rev. John Shaffer, minister to both the Presbyterian and Methodist churches here and prime mover of the proposition, said Nome has one of the highest alcohol consumption rates in the world-about four gallons a year for every resident over the age of 15. That is 57 percent above the national average.

Nome also has a suicide rate 10 times the national average, and Shaffer said alcohol is partly to blame.

Bill Dann, executive director of Nome's hospital, does not endorse the ban but said, "Alcohol usually figures in our suicides, homicides, emergency room visits, child beatings and wife beatings."

Shaffer organized a petition drive that gathered 264 signatures, 40 more than were required in this predominantly Eskimo town of 2,500 people. The proposal was certified Wednesday, and voters will make their decision in October.

"I think Nome will become a ghost town," said Albro Gregory, publisher of the Nome Nugget. "There won't be any tourism, property values will go to hell and taxes will go up skyhigh?"

Gregory said taxes from liquor sales provided $89,600 of the $443,500 collected from sales taxes in Nome in 1977-20.2 percent of the total.

In a compromise effort, two bar owners, a local minister and two other citizens have formed a committee to try to find ways to reduce alcohol abuse without banning it.

One of the bar owners is Greg Tabor, manager of the Anchor Tavern and president of the Nome Bar Owners' Association. "We've changed our hours, we're policing ourselves better," Tabor said.

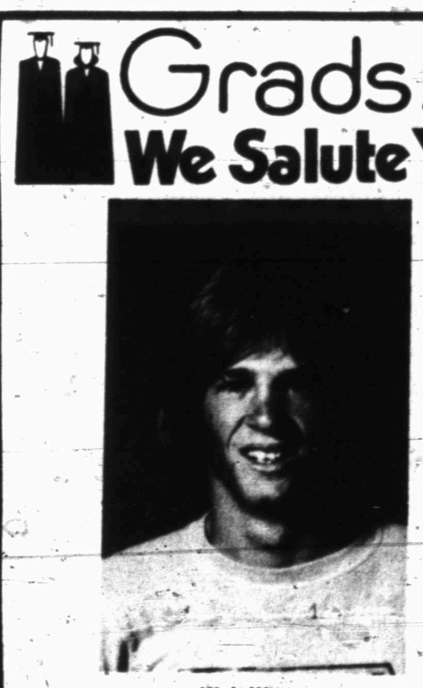

Shaffer said he is encouraged by these efforts, but says that if no results are seen before October, "the chances of the petition passing are very high."

some changes needed

According to an Austin news commentary published a few days ago Dolph Briscoe will have authority to make more than 200 appointments to positions in state government, some of them in top level category, in the more than six months remaining of his stay in the office of Governor.

Vacancies that can be filled by Briscoe include regents of the University of Texas and A&M Systems, State Highway and Public Transportation Commission, Texas Aeronautics Commission and Texas Turnpike Authority, among others. Nominations made between now and convening of the Legislature will be subject to approval by the State Senate. But that doesn't alter the fact that the appointments will be made by a lame duck chief executive.

Some undesirable aspects of this situation would be eliminated if party primaries were held later in the year. Another corrective step would be a change in the expiration dates of appointive positions to coincide with beginning of sessions of the Legislature.

Implementing this suggestion would require legislation which would itself create something of a problem when it first becomes effective. What the Legislature can and should do, however, is to move dates of party primaries nearer the date of the general election. This change would be an improvement over the present arrangement of having first primaries on first Saturday in May, with runoffs on the first Saturday in June.

Later dates, such as holding first primaries in August and runoffs in the first week of September, would make a lot of sense and avoid the chance that a defeated candidate for re-election as Governor wouldn't be a lame duck for more than six months. For years Texas primaries were held on the first Saturday in July. When the law was changed to provide for majority decisions the runoff was set for the first Saturday in August.

That arrangement was changed in 1960 to suit the convenience of Lyndon Johnson, who wanted to get himself renominated for his seat in the United States Senate in advance of the Democratic national convention where he hoped to be nominated for President. That didn't happen but he was chosen as candidate for Vice President and was elected to two offices in the ensuing general election.

Legislation changing primary dates was in the mill in 1976, but was laid aside to suit the convenience of Senator Lloyd Bentsen who was seeking two nominations, as Johnson was in 1960.

If our lawmakers want to do the people of Texas a real favor when they come together next January they should move primary dates to August and September and voting day from Saturday to Tuesday. Texas isn't a hick state any more. Our people have things to do on weekends they enjoy more than electing public officials.

the riyal strength

Hard currencies are a super-exclusive bunch.

Since the dollar has been misbehaving itself, there have been only three fully certified members of the club - West Germany's mark, Japan's yen and Switzerland's franc.

Suddenly there's a newcomer - Saudi Arabia's riyal.

Swiss bankers, according to a Wall Street Journal item, report a strong market in riyals which is beginning to attract speculators, a primary cause of the recent surges of the mark and yen.

The riyal is backed by the $31 billion worth of foreign currency held by Saudi Arabia. Its real strength, of course, lies somewhere else.

These days, what's money in the vaults compared to all that oil in the ground?

my turn

by john long

I recently had the occasion to go to the site of the Billionth Barrel of Oil ceremony while workers were repainting the pump jack and surrounding paraphernalia.

That, to me, represented progress. First, the Billionth Barrel of Oil celebration five years ago was something of a milestone in itself. The fact that someone actually thought enough of the old pump jack to have it repainted means something, too.

Things just aren't like that where I come from.

Most people think I come from Lockhart. That isn't completely true. Actually, I come from between Lockhart and McMahan, in South Central Texas.

Lockhart had a population of about 6,500 when I was graduated from high school. McMahan then had a population of about 50. McMahan today has a population of about 50.

Yes, progress just isn't too swift in McMahan. No sooner than a couple of old people will die than a relatively young couple will move in. Thus, the population of McMahan is relatively stable.

The irony of the situation is that McMahan has a sign posted near a crossroads as motorists enter from the east. On the top of that sign is written in bold letters "Welcome to McMahan." Below that, written in less bold letters, is "Where Progress Never Ends."

Up until several years ago you couldn't see the bottom line because the weeds had grown so high that they completely hid it. In fact, the weeds pretty well obscured the whole bottom half of the sign.

The weeds, I recall, were cut down once during my early high school days. And even then, as I recall, the deed was not done by one of the citizens of McMahan. I believe it was done by a highway worker who was cutting roadside weeds for the county, who went a little out of his way to mow down the weeds in front of that sign.

But for that man, who will remain unknown to history, the weeds would still be there, bigger than ever.

private schools, lookout

Why in the world would a college borrow money at a higher interest rate to pay off a low-rate loan? It happened.

Ohio Valley College, Parkersburg, W.Va., needed a new auditorium.

Government money seemed so easy.

Thus, with a federal government bond, Ohio Valley College built its new auditorium in 1969.

Then this Christian school learned that government money meant government restraints.

So this year the college borrowed money from a commercial source and paid off that government loan.

The college now has to pay a higher interest rate but the college is free again!

Now in that auditorium for the first time in 10 years prayer is permitted!

I have recited the experience of how a Christian college had to forfeit the right to pray in its own auditorium because that auditorium was partly financed by government money.

Now the Congress is contemplating federal funding of student tuition and again it's going to appear tempting.

Admittedly, middle-income families are having a hard time keeping up with the soaring costs of higher education.

The rich can afford to pay. The poor get direct student aid. It is middle-income Americans who are being squeezed out of the schools their taxes built.

Congress is considering helping that vast taxpaying majority with a hand up. But look out!

As surely as Title Thirty concealed a barbed hook, limiting the administrative prerogatives of private schools, this newest side-door assist may cost more than it's worth.

Emerging now from deliberations on the Hill is a tax credit for parents. Under this proposal, parents would be able to deduct from taxable income $100 for each youngster in a private grade school and up to $250 dollars for a son or daughter in college.

Another plan proposed would advance up to 5,000 a year to college students to be repaid by the student from subsequent income.

The history of the collectibility of student loans is not good.

Presently, a student has hundreds of scholarships, grants, low-cost loans and work study programs from which financial help is available. But most of this money goes only to low income families.

The average cost for a resident student at a private college is now $5,000 a year. More expensive private colleges top $8,000.

The pittance presently proposed in Congress would limit any family, however many children, to no more than $500 a year in tax relief.

It is difficult to imagine that thus to shake the government's piggy bank would justify the inevitable government snooper-vision which will have private schools as impotent as public schools now are.

inflation's fuel

NEW YORK (AP) - Inflation isn't just too much money chasing too few goods. It may also be generated by the changing pressures, evolving attitudes and varying values of society.

Such as the demand for a cleaner environment, the quest for better health, the desire for more comfortable retirement, the incidence of crime, the toleration of waste, the growth of government.

These added billions, unless offset by productivity gains, add inevitably to prices, although many Americans, legislators included, sometimes fail to see the association.

Edward Dennison, a Brookings Institution economist, estimates the cost of environmental and worker health and safety regulations, combined with a rising crime rate, reached $36 billion last year.

There is no mystery about the benefits, since they are so obvious: more concern for and sometimes better care of worker health, and markedly cleaner air and water.

But economists are often mystified that the association between costs and prices isn't more readily understood. Costs are prices, they say, or at least the former are passed on as the latter.

Well, many costs anyway. Expenditures that lead to greater productivity are partially absorbed before they reach the consumer. Unfortunately, that is not often true of environmental costs.

Nor of certain other regulatory costs, particularly those that add to paperwork burdens. The Commission on Federal Paperwork reports that 5 million small businesses spend $15 to $20 billion a year on paperwork.

The average of $3,000 per business doesn't tell the full story either, because the cost of time borrowed from duties that otherwise would add to the financial health of the business can hardly be calculated.

What can be calculated is that small businesses that do not pass on the costs as higher prices cannot survive - and that businesses which seek to absorb the higher costs might not survive either.

"The future does not look bright for many of these firms," the assistant director of the Center for the Study of American Business told the House Committee on Small Business recently.

"The impact of the recent expansion of federal government regulation of business has been particularly severe on the smaller companies," said Kenneth W. Chilton of the Center, based at Washington University.

Why regulate? To make our business institutions more responsive to the needs of society. Why so much paper? To check on how well businesses are responding to these needs.

And why higher prices? That's the penalty we pay for making greater demands on business, often from necessity rather than choice, demands that cannot be paid for immediately through greater productivity.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The A-300 Airbus, the newest commerical jet to provide air passenger service in this country, "is made by over 300 American firms from coast to coast," boasts the plane's first purchaser, Eastern Airlines.

"Some people think the A-300 is 100 per cent European-made. Not so," Eastern adds somewhat defensively, "although it's assembled in Europe, the largest share is American-made."

Those claims are indeed accurate, but they obscure the most important fact about the A-300's parentage: For the first time since the advent of the "air age," a commercial airliner not produced by a United States firm is poised to capture a major share of the American market.

For decades, production of passenger planes sold throughout the world has been virtually monopolized by three American corporations - Boeing, Lockheed and McDonnell-Douglas.

But the Airbus, produced by a consortium of European manufacturers, now threatens to unceremoniously terminate that tradition of almost total domination for one important reason: It is far superior, in several crucial respects, to any aircraft now being produced by the American firms.

Those aerospace companies find themselves in an uncomfortable position almost identical to that confronted in recent years by the Detroit-based auto manufacturers; because they grossly miscalculated market needs and demands, increasingly popular imports now account for about 20 percent of all United States car sales.

In an era of soaring petroleum prices and strident citizen complaints about jet noise, the Airbus uses 30 percent less fuel and is 50 percent quieter than Boeing's 727, by far the most popular American-made plane. No domestic product can match Airbus performance on short and medium-range routes.

Eastern last month signed a contract to acquire 23 Airbuses at a cost of $778 million. Four already in service will be leased on a long-term basis, while 19 others will be purchased and delivered between late this year and 1982.

Overly sensitive to the threat of "Buy American" jingoism, Eastern has sought to promote the Airbus as "truly a multinational effort, with the largest proportion of its components, 33 percent, being made inthe United States."

But the Washington-based consulting firm hired to help convince Eastern to make the purchase bluntly states that "Airbus Industrie is a partnership of French, German, Dutch and Spanish aircraft manufacturers."

Documents filed with the Justice Department by that company, DGA International, make no secret of the fact that the governments of those four countries "funded the venture with repayable loans."

In compliance with the Foreign Agents Registration Act, DGA International also has disclosed that since mid-1977 its contract with Airbus Industrie has called for a $100,000 annual retainer plus $100 per hour for professional time and reimbursement for all expenses.

Airbus Industrie's North American affiliate, based in New York, has filed reports showing that it has been authorized to receive more than $5.3 million payments since mid-1974 from its European parent, to promote sales in this country.

Boeing has complained to Congress that the Airbus enjoys an unfair advantage, in the form of governmental support that has produced a "predatory export financing scheme."

But one Airbus promoter notes, with little fear of contradiction, that the A-300's crucial competitive edge lies in the fact that "it's at least half a generation ahead of anything built in the United States."

If this country's aerospace industry fails to respond promptly and effectively to that challenge, passenger jets will join a growing list of products - including cars, steel and consumer electronics - in which America has lost its leadership.

american spirit

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Our American society has many unique features in its system. One is the spontaneous working of a creative public spirit. Out of this traditional spirit have come institutions such as libraries, museums, civic organizations, great colleges and universities, the Salvation Army, symphony orchestras, garden clubs, hospitals, religious organizations, 4-H Clubs and many others. This American spirit reaches into almost every field of human interest in every community across our Country.

Mr. John Gardner, writing an essay in Time magazine, recently described this spirit. "These Americans are a peculiar people. If in a local community a citizen becomes aware of a human need which is not being met, he thereon discusses the situation with his neighbors. Suddenly a committee comes into existence. The committee thereupon begins to operate on behalf of the need and a new community function is established. It is like watching a miracle because these citizens perform this act without a single reference to any bureaucracy or any official agency."

Now there is a new school of thought with a very different view. It would change this American tradition - that of private giving for public purposes - with the idea that the Government tax these sums and then when the Government found that there was a need, it would give instead of the individual.

We have already gone down this road a long way but now the "Government-knows-best-people" want to do away with the freedom of the tax deductible gift. Those who hold this theory propose to eliminate the deductibility of that dollar given to a school for the blind, take the money into the Treasury and if the school needs money, let Congress and the Federal Agency appropriate it. The American people average giving about $30 billion a year in contributions to various causes in the service of their communities. Now we are being told that Government bureaucracies can do a better job. The track record hardly substantiates this contention.

There is even a bigger question involved. Should Government take over all charitable functions, what would be left for the individual dedicated to caring and concern for others and for the institutions they wish to support?

The trend has been running against voluntaryism. Since the advent of welfarism, it is easy to say that if any need is involved, let Washington do it. But even so, people give. Two weeks ago, the Ways and Means Committee acted in a way to give encouragement to the reversal of this trend. It tentatively voted to allow taxpayers to deduct charitable gifts whether they itemize their tax returns or not. This was contrary to the idea of some that the Congress should act to either partially or entirely eliminate charitable donations.

There are attractive arguments to completely junk our income tax system and, in its place, levy a flat percentage of taxes on every taxpayer and eliminate all exemptions and deductions. No question it would simplify the tax code which is greatly needed. It could be made a progressive tax and reduce the burden in many instances but it would also lend itself to eliminate the various incentives and deductions vital to our system. No one could successfully defend many of the inequities involved in our present tax code but insofar as tax breaks are given industry to enable them to expand and produce, it becomes essential. The diversity and the qualities of individual giving for public good represents a freedom of judgment over which no Government authority should be imposed.

Good weight loss results

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 51-year-old male. I have had high blood pressure since I was 18. At that time I weighed 145 pounds. Since then doctors have suggested I lose some of my weight to lower my pressure. Since it was high originally at 145 pounds I didn't think they know what they are talking about. Since my mid-30s I have weighed between 190 and 200 pounds.

After my 51st birthday I went on a 1200-calorie diet and dropped from 205 to 163 pounds. My blood pressure dropped from 130 over 90 while taking three Ser-Ap-Es per day to 118 over 69 on two a day.

A number of friends have cautioned me against losing too much but I think I may continue as I still have some fat on my lower abdomen. As you often remark in your column, how much fat you have under your skin is more important than what the scale reads.

My waist measure has dropped from 40 to 36 inches but I'm disappointed by all the fat I still have in that area and the loose skin. One doctor has warned me the loose skin will probably stay there — just part of the aging process. Can you recommend an exercise to help with this? Or does this have to be done surgically? I will be having a second hernia operation soon and it could perhaps be done at that time. I had the hernia repaired five years ago and it recurred in less than seven months.

I have been doing about 20 to 30 sit-ups a night and they seem to help the muscle above the waistline but not below.

DEAR READER — The high blood pressure seen in young men is often caused by reflex constriction of the arteries and may have been something different from what you developed later in life.

In any case many people who have high blood pressure improve markedly if they get rid of the excess fat. I agree with your idea of staying with a program long enough to get rid of all your excess fat. You might need to go on a maintenance diet for awhile then go back to losing weight.

Your results show what a person can do if he will. Many people who take high blood pressure medicine would not need to if they would only get rid of all the fat.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control, Avoiding the Big Middle, to help you tighten up your abdomen. You have proved that the waist will shrink if you get the fat out and off. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It will give you the exercise program you need.

You are right, the sit-ups are for the upper abdomen only. If you want to do something about the "pot" area below the belt you need to do a variety of leg lift exercises. These will tighten you up.

And I strongly disagree with that doctor who said your loose skin is "old age." That loose skin occurs in anyone who has had too much blubber and is fortunate enough to get rid of it. Stay with your program and after your fat is all gone wait a year. Then if you have too much skin have someone remove it if you really can't stand the sight of it. The skin will regain some of its original elasticity and shrink some, but once overstretched it may not snap back. This is particularly true as you get older.

Finally I'd like to point out that too much blubber inside the abdomen causing pressure helps cause hernias. The best results from surgery are obtained in people who are not obese.

Your Birthday

May 26, 1978

Your horizons will be greatly expanded this coming year and you are likely to attempt things you never dared to do before. You could even take that distant trip you've dreamed of.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone presently separated from you by distance with whom you've neglected to stay in touch is worthy of a brief note or a phone call today. Find out who you're romantically suited to by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're a tough customer to deceive today. You don't take things at face value. However, if you catch someone telling a small fib, try not to embarrass him.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Others find you an agreeable person today because of your strong desire to be cooperative. Each concession you make will be matched in return.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Co-workers are likely to emulate your actions today because you'll handle yourself with such aplomb. You'll know what needs doing and how to do it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You absorb knowledge quicker than usual today. You're especially adroit at picking up pointers from people you encounter face-to-face.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The results you're hoping for today should work out, yet it would be wise to leave nothing to chance. Keep your hand on the tiller at all times.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sunshine will filter in today to several cloudy situations. This will be due more to the efforts of others than to yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your material prospects look encouraging today, especially where you offer your expertise or services. Rewards will be proportionate to your productivity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You place a great deal of emphasis on personal interests today, yet you'll do so in a way to gain needed support without ruffling anyone's feathers.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Making those you love happy is likely to be your priority project today. You'll find selflessness is compensation in itself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is a good day to launch new projects, especially if it's a venture where a close pal is involved. Be the one who kicks things off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Dealings today with persons who can do you good where your status is concerned should work out, and make you feel more secure.

Laws Vary On Rights For The Mentally Ill

EDITOR'S NOTE — President Carter recently received a report from his Commission on Mental Health. Here's a look at one of the issues - the constitutional rights of the mentally ill.

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) - "Lunatic Record ... In the matter of the alleged insanity of Mary Lincoln."

A jury ruled her insane and committed her to an asylum 10 years after the assassination of her husband.

The former first lady's involuntary commitment was an early seed in a war over the constitutional rights of the mentally ill that blossomed during the civil rights movement of the 1960s. Mrs. Lincoln's dilemma was resolved - 100 years after her trial - but it left the rights of thousands of other mentally ill in question.

Mrs. Lincoln's lunatic record said she did "not manifest either homicidal or suicidal tendencies." In 1975 the U.S. Supreme Court ruled such commitments unconstitutional.

"A finding of 'mental illness' alone cannot justify a state's locking a person up against his will and keeping him indefinitely in simple custodial confinement ...," the court ruled in O'Connor v. Donaldson.

Today if Robert Lincoln - or any other son - asked that his mother be locked away he would have to prove her dangerous as well as mentally ill. But who determines who is dangerous to whom? That is now the key constitutional battle.

In most states a person can be committed against his will if he can be proved "potentially dangerous" to himself or others. But some states - California, Pennsylvania and Michigan - have adopted laws restricting involuntary commitment to those who show they are dangerous by "overt act."

A similar law has been proposed in Illinois by a commission chaired by Circuit Court Judge Joseph Schneider of Chicago. Schneider, who also heads a commission studying mental health law for the President's Commission on Mental Health, presides in the courtroom where Mrs. Lincoln was committed 103 years ago.

A framed copy of her lunatic record hangs in his 17th-floor office, and he gives copies to anyone who asks.

"Mary Lincoln was deprived of her liberty because she was thought to be mentally ill," says Schneider. "Today a person can be deprived of liberty if he is found to be mentally ill and potentially dangerous. How can we deprive someone of liberty on the supposition that he might be dangerous?"

"... Who's to say who is potentially dangerous?" adds Paul Friedman, director of the Washington-based Mental Health Law Project. "Studies have shown that psychiatrists are only 50 percent accurate in their predictions of who is potentially dangerous. That's like flipping a coin in the courtroom. How can we take away somebody's liberty based on a coin toss?

"The power and prestige of psychiatrists have been struck a terrible blow by the crusade for rights for mental patients, and they're becoming terribly offended by the efforts to protect patient rights."

But, says Dr. Alan Stone, professor of law and psychiatry at Harvard University, "No one, including psychiatrists or judges, can predict with 100 percent certainty who will become dangerous. But waiting for a person to commit an overt act simply won't work. If we just wait until someone has already committed a crime, we'll just collapse the civil commitment procedure into the criminal justice system. Mentally ill persons will have to be treated as criminals."

In addition to the "overt act" provision, the state commission Schneider chairs has proposed that mental patients be read their rights before they are examined by a doctor and that they be given the right to refuse treatment once they are committed - rights that already exist in a few states.

"Who says they have any such rights?" asks Stone. "The Supreme Court has never ruled on it, and there is substantial case law saying persons who are mentally ill and potentially dangerous aren't covered by the Constitution. And society has a proven right to be protected from dangerous persons."

The Illinois Psychiatric Society also opposes the changes proposed by Schneider's commission.

Dr. Alex J. Spadoni, the society's immediate past president, says the overt act provision would require a person to commit a crime before he could be involuntarily committed. "Murders, suicides, rapes and assaults have increased in states where this provision has been adopted.

"The key to helping someone recover from mental illness is to treat him as early as possible, not after he's killed or hurt himself or someone else ... The idea of making doctors read patients their rights would destroy needed rapport between the doctor and patient and would turn doctors into policemen.

"And to give a patient who has been declared dangerous the right to refuse treatment once in the hospitals is ridiculous. That would simply turn hospitals into prisons and doctors into wardens."

Two years ago Wisconsin adopted a law similar to the one proposed in Illinois. But in mid-February the Wisconsin Legislature rescinded the law and returned to one that makes it easier for the state to commit a person against his will.

Dr. Darold A. Treffert, director of the Winnebago Wis. Mental Health Institute, helped prepare the new law. He says the 1975 law forced policemen and courts to charge and convict mentally ill persons with minor crimes and then commit them to mental hospitals as criminals.

"Mentally ill persons should not have to deteriorate to the point of dangerousness when it is obvious that they are in need of treatment and would predictably respond to treatment," he says.

The federal government may end up setting the standards for each state. Already federal courts have ruled - in 1972 in Wyatt vs. Stickney - that states must provide adequate care and security for institutionalized persons; and in the 1975 Donaldson ruling that nondangerous persons can't be locked away against their will.

Congress is considering a bill that would enable the Justice Department to file civil lawsuits against a state, county or city if they are "subjecting persons residing in any institution to conditions which deprive them of any rights, privileges or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution or the laws of the United States."

The bill, introduced by Rep. Robert Kastermeier, D-Wis., has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee. Committee staff counsel Tim Boggs says the bill should pass Congress this year. "The federal government has been frustrated in the past in efforts to guarantee constitutional rights for persons in mental hospitals and hospitals for the mentally retarded. This bill should help the Justice Department and the Civil Rights Commission get the job done."

Former mental patients also have begun efforts to protect the rights of institutionalized persons.

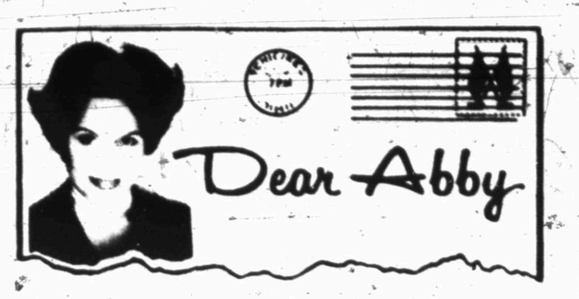

"Psychiatrists want it so anyone who doesn't fit the norm can be declared potentially dangerous and locked away," says Tanya Tempkin of the Network Against Psychiatric Abuse in San Francisco. "We want hospital inmates and the public made aware that the Constitution covers everybody."

Although California has one of the most liberal mental health codes, Ms. Tempkin says, "Most of the rights can be denied for so-called good cause, and that may be anything. People in mental hospitals aren't in a good position to stand up for their rights."

Grandparents: Your Love Is Spoiling!

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: What happens to parents when they become grandparents? Mine are too young to be getting senile, but they certainly don't show nearly the good judgment in handling MY children that they did when they raised me.

My parents ruled their children with an iron hand. No back talk, we did as we were told, and if we forgot our manners, we heard about it. We weren't permitted to eat between meals, and we had to be in bed with lights out at a certain time, and no nonsense.

But you should see the way they handle our children! All rules and regulations laid down at home are out the window at the grandparents' house. The kids whine and beg until they get their own way. They talk back, and are fed soft drinks, candy and cookies—all they want at all hours. And they don't have to nap or do anything they don't want to do.

I love my parents, Abby, but I wish they'd realize how tough they are making it for me when they do this. It's difficult for children of any age to tell their parents anything, so even though this is from Iowa, I hope you won't think it's too corny for your column.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR CEDAR RAPIDS: There's a kernel of truth in almost every corny letter. Let's hope your parents have ears, too. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 years old, not married, and I work to support myself. I'm not bad looking and live a fairly normal, happy life, but I'm beginning to wonder if maybe I'm foolish to work the way I do.

What I'm trying to say is, I have a girlfriend who works part-time—like maybe four afternoons a week. She has had three husbands, and now she's single again. She has boyfriends for everything. One pays her rent, another lets her drive his car, another painted and papered her whole house and she bragged that all she gave him was lunch and a few daughterly kisses.

She sees the rent-payer on weekends, and she also has a truck driver staying with her off and on when he's in town. I don't know how she gets away with it. Shouldn't someone tell these chumps the score?

BABE IN B'HAM

DEAR BABE: Don't worry about the chumps. Some men don't care what the score is as long as they're in the game.

DEAR ABBY: I am in the United States Navy. I love the service, but most of all, I love my parents. Before I came into the service I felt I knew just about everything. I was sure my parents no longer needed me, and all I could think of was the day I would be "on my own."

The first time I realized how much my parents cared was the day they took me to the airport to see me off. When my father said goodbye to me, he broke down and cried. I had never seen my father cry before, and I won't forget it as long as I live. I have had a lot of time to think. I never told my father I loved him, and I gave both my parents a hard time when they tried to guide me for my own good.

Now I write home every chance I get, and I am trying to make up for all the heartaches I must have caused them, and for my failure to be a better son. When my next leave comes up, I am going home to get acquainted with my wonderful parents.

I have written this letter in hopes that other thoughtless teenagers will wake up before it's too late. Thanks, Abby, for letting me get this off my chest.

WISER NOW

DEAR WISER: And thank you for a wonderful letter.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Grasso Chides Straub On Win

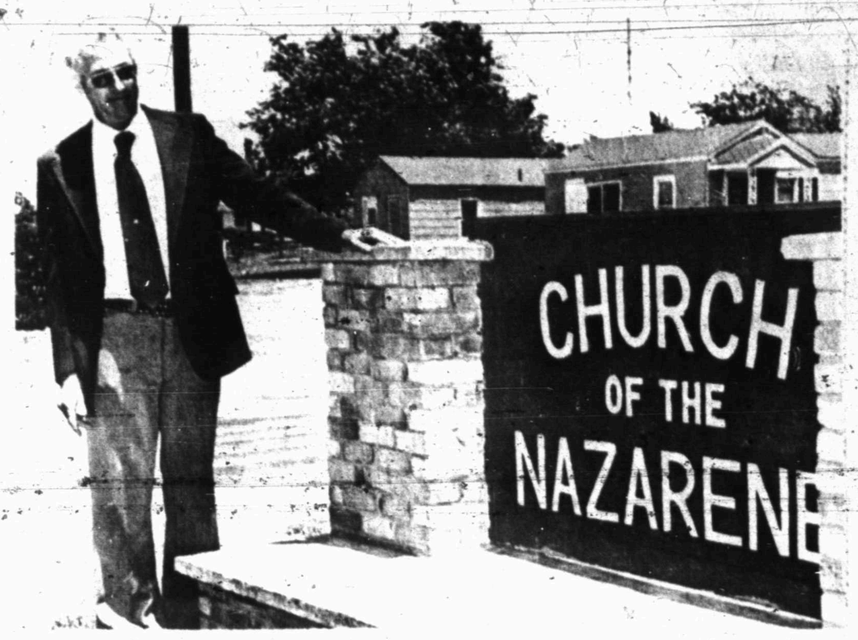

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)-In a little gubernatorial elbowing, Gov. Ella Grasso has chided Oregon Gov. Bob Straub about his winning entry in California's Calaveras County Jumping Frog contest.

Lil Nutmeg, a springy contestant representing Connecticut, the Nutmeg State, jumped 16 feet, 5 inches in the weekend contest, to finish second Sunday behind the entry of Straub's frog, Swamp. The winner outleaped Lil Nutmeg by 3½ inches.

Mrs. Grasso said the winner from Oregon "obviously was more attuned to the Pacific breezes of the West Coast than was our humble entry from Connecticut.

"If the competition had been held on the sunlit shores of the Connecticut River, the homefield advantage no doubt would have swung to Lil Nutmeg."

Hong Kong was ceded to the British at the end of the Opium War (1839-42).

Quinn Claims Jackie Snub Led To Film

NEW YORK (AP)-Had Jacqueline Onassis not snubbed him in a restaurant in Cannes, writes actor Anthony Quinn, he may not have starred in the just-released film "The Greek Tycoon."

The film is about a Greek shipping magnate who marries the widow of an assassinated president.

Quinn, in a by-lined story written for Ladies Home Journal, says that in 1975, when it was announced he would play Onassis in a film called "The Onassis Story," representatives of Mrs. Onassis asked him not to do the picture. He had decided that he could not, he said, because he did not want to hurt the woman he had come to know jogging in Central Park.

Quinn then recalled a night when Mrs. Onassis entered a restaurant in Cannes and refused to acknowledge his waves. A short time after the snub, he signed for "The Greek Tycoon."

Two Members Of Act Share Birthdays

NEW ORLEANS (AP)-Rosemary Clooney and Helen O'Connell, members of a new act called Four Girls Four, celebrated common birthdays and some of their famous songs with a huge cake in the shape of a phonograph record.

The platter cake was presented at their Tuesday evening show here by the other members of the group, Rose Marie and Margaret Whiting.

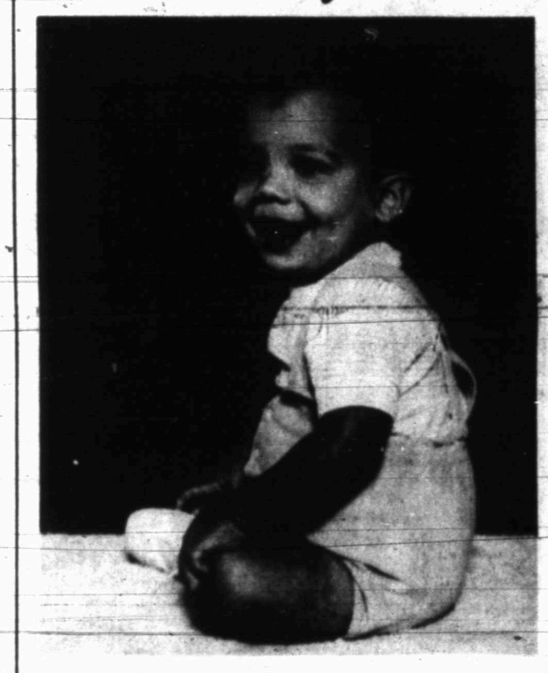

Decorating the cake were titles of some of their hits from the 40s and 50s: "Hey There" and "Tenderly" by Miss Clooney, "Green Eyes" and "Tangerine" by Miss O'Connell.

The singers were born on May 23. They declined to specify in which year.

Four Girls Four, an act made up of individual appearances by each member, was organized earlier this spring and is beginning a national tour.

About 80 percent of the nation's roads and streets are paved today, compared with 1921 when only 14 percent of the thoroughfares in the United States had pavement, says the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association.

Judge
J. Neil Daniel

THANK YOU FOR THE SUBSTANTIAL LEAD IN THE 1ST PRIMARY

- ★ Work and Experience constitute the record of Judge J. Neil Daniel. He refused to neglect his court while campaigning for promotion.
- ★ In the 1st Primary –the people, where the candidates live and work, gave Judge Daniel a majority of the votes cast. Judge Daniel's run-off opponent ran third.
- ★ Qualification is the only issue, and it covers many factors: Background - Integrity - Diligence - Ability for hard work - Education - Training and Experience.
- ★ Judge Daniel had extensive trial experience prior to becoming District Judge and and as District Judge has heard and disposed of more than 4356 cases.
- ★ Judge J. Neil Daniel is the only candidate with Judicial experience. He knows the law and he knows the courts.
- ★ The record speaks – there is absolutely no substitute for Judicial experience.
- ★ Promote Judge J. Neil Daniel to the Court of Civil Appeals.

VOTE FOR
JUDGE J. NEIL DANIEL
11th Court of Civil Appeals
