Four Miners Slain When State Police Fired On Strikers

National Guard Has Full Charge In Northern Part Of Colorado Mine Area; Declare Revolt.

BLAME FOR CLASH IS PLACED UPON MINERS

Scores, Including Woman, Were Hurt After State Police Were Overwhelmed In Fistic Battle.

(By Associated Press.)
DENVER, Colo., Nov. 21.—The Northern Colorado strike zone where four strikers were killed and more than a score wounded early today was in charge of national guard troops tonight.

For the first time since the I. W. W. strike in the Colorado coal field was called five weeks ago, state police today resorted to gunfire against five officers fired point blank into an onrushing crowd of strikers at the Columbine in Weld county.

Within a few hours after the battle, five companies of infantry, two troops of cavalry, two armored tanks and a medical detachment of the state guard were on their way to northern Colorado. The guard officers are in complete charge of the territory and have the same jurisdiction as if martial law was declared.

In an executive order signed by Governor Adams, he declared that a state of riot and insurrection existed in Boulder and Weld counties and he gave Adjutant General Paul P. Newton full powers to proceed.

Rival Gangsters Open New Battle

Feud Carried to Door of Chicago's Largest of Police Station; Killer Waited in Court Room.

(By Associated Press.)
CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—A new war of extermination for gambling supremacy, today carried their feud to the doors of Chicago's largest police station where it was snipped by the authorities who for two days have been making a desperate effort to prevent the initial crack of gangsters' pistols and the roar of their sawed off shotguns.

A series of raids of machine and shotgun gangs by the police last night to frustrate an assassination plot believed directed mainly against Al "Scarface" Capone, notorious gangster, culminated today in the arrest outside the South Park street police station of three armed men, believed to have been Capone's body guards and the unsuccessful attempt of one of them to shoot his way boldly out of the office of William O'Connor, chief of detectives.

After questioning the three men, the police said they had obtained information there had been a plot to kill Capone when he appeared in court today, and that two killers were in the court room actually waiting for him.

Venire Exhausted, Texan's Flogging Trial Is Held Up

Legal Skirmish Regarding Admission of Osborne's Statement Marks Session of Court Monday.

(By Associated Press.)
TYLER, Tex., Nov. 21.—Exhaustion of the venire halted the jury interrogation about 3 p. m. Monday in the second trial of Cain Anderson, Harrison county farmer, charged with violating the state anti-mask law in connection with the flogging of two couples near Marshall last June. Court recessed until 9 a. m. Tuesday. Seventeen veniremen were tentatively passed.

Each prospective juror was questioned closely regarding his opinion on the anti-mask law and the rights of landlord and tenant.

The morning session was devoted to legal skirmishes in which the question of admission of an affidavit made by Pruitt Osborne at Eastern state prison farm, tending to exonerate Anderson was the principal feature. The state sought to bar the affidavit on the ground that Osborne is a convict and in violation of the co-defendant with Anderson.

Osborne and Anderson were indicted jointly at Marshall and later obtained a separation of the cases. Anderson's first trial resulted in a mistrial and Osborne pleaded guilty and accepted a one year prison term at Gilmer a few weeks ago.

KAISER'S SISTER WED Deposed Ruler Acquires Ex- Sailor Son-in-Law

BONN, Germany, Nov. 21.—The proud former Kaiser of Germany today acquired a brother-in-law who has been a sailor and professional dancer. The deposed ruler's 51 year old sister, Princess Victoria Schlegel-Lippe, was united here in a religious ceremony to Alexander Sybilleff, 27 year old Russian refugee whom she married in a civil ceremony Saturday.

The Princess became plain Frau Sybilleff amidst all the pomp and splendor customary in a Greek Orthodox church wedding. Shortly after the ceremony, the couple were seated at a banquet where they were joined by a large number of guests assembled in the magnificent "red salon" of Victoria's palace, the corners of which were decorated with huge bunches of white chrysanthemums, in the center of the room stood an improvised altar, bearing valuable carved gold and silver ritual vessels, lighted on each side by candles.

SURPRISE PROMISED District Attorney Ready for Move in Oil Quiz

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP)—A new and surprising move in the Pull-Sinclair oil trial jury inquiry is under consideration by District Attorney Gordon. Its precise nature will not be divulged today but it was known that it would be independent of the grand jury investigation and also of the inquiry being made by a committee appointed by Justice Frederick L. Steiwer of the supreme court of the District of Columbia to determine whether contempt of court had been committed.

The committee composed of James E. Lashley and James E. Baby-Smith, began its work today.

Bank Bandit Gets Death Penalty In Groesbeck Trial

A. B. Bruton, Held In Robbery of Tehuacana Bank, Given Extreme Punishment for First Time.

DEFENDANT PREFERS DEATH TO PEN TERM

Officials Believe Case Is First on Record in Which Capital Punishment Has Been Dealt.

(By Associated Press.)
WACO, Nov. 21.—A. P. Bruton, 21, charged with robbery with firearms in connection with the holdup of the First State Bank of Tehuacana, Texas, on November 3, today was found guilty and assessed the death penalty by a jury in district court at Groesbeck, Limestone county.

Bruton showed little emotion when the verdict was returned by the jury which had been out since Saturday.

After being sentenced to death Bruton, who says his home is in New York, Mo., said he preferred death to a long term in the penitentiary.

TRIO INDICTED IN RICHLAND ROBBERY.

CORHICANA, Nov. 21.—A. P. Bruton, C. C. Howe and Dew Potts were indicted by the Navarro county grand jury here last Monday for robbery with firearms in connection with the robbery of the First State Bank of Richland, on October 12, when $3,365 was taken.

The three were arrested in Fort Worth recently and complaints were filed here. County Attorney L. J. Woods announced late Monday that a special calling of the grand jury would be held for Monday November 28 and intimated that Howe would be the first man to be tried.

Ginnings Report Sends Market Up

Cotton Advances $2.50 to $3
Bale When Census Bureau Report Is Smaller Than Trade Expected.

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A census bureau report showing the amount of cotton ginned prior to November 14 to be smaller than the trade had estimated sent the price of cotton up to $2.50 to $3 a bale on the New York cotton exchange today.

Heavy profit taking and selling for short term account served to offset to some extent the effect of the smaller ginnings report.

While the trade gradually had expected ginnings report of 11,000,000 or more bales, the government figures showed only 10,825,000 bales. It now seems to be the consensus among brokers that the figures indicate a maximum crop not exceeding the last government estimate of 12,842,000 bales.

There was a continuous buying movement through the day, and it broadened during the afternoon. January contracts which closed Saturday at 19.40, advanced to 20.00 cents a pound. Spot cotton in the local market gained half a cent, being quoted at 20.30 cents a pound.

FAMILY QUARRELS Domestic Dissension Was Frequent Last Week

County Attorney L. A. Howard wants to know what there was in the atmosphere last week to cause family trouble.

He says that never during his term of office has he had as many complaints of family quarrels as he had last week. Wife desertion, cruel treatment, and unpaid divorce alimony constituted the cause of complaint in the majority of cases.

One woman wanted to file charges against an employer, who dismissed her from employment.

SERRANO AIDE LEAVES One Time Secretary for Rebel Chief Departed

LAREDO, Tex., Nov. 21.—(AP)—Luis G. Higgins, former secretary of General Francisco Serrano, arrived in the United States today as a refugee, having been deported by order of President Calles after his acquittal by a Mexican civil court on charges of sedition. With him arrived Col. Paulino Fontes, former director of the Mexican Railway Lines, also a deportee.

Mr. Higgins was in Vera Cruz when his chief, General Serrano, was executed. He surrendered to the Mexican troops a few days later. No statement was forthcoming from either Higgins or Fontes in regard to the actual political situation in Mexico, both refusing to say a word about the Mexican government or the outbreak of the revolution last October.

Committee Fixes $250,000,000 As Highest Tax Cut

Refuse Proposal to Mark
Out Federal Inheritance Tax; Will Make Cut on Corporation Income.

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Overriding the treasury proposal to limit tax reduction to $250,000,000, the House ways and means committee today tentatively voted to set the maximum at $250,000,000 in framing a revenue bill. They likewise turned thumbs down on Secretary Mellon's proposal of repeal of federal inheritance tax and a downward revision of surtax rates on incomes falling within the intermediate brackets.

The committee decided to confine prospective tax cuts primarily to reduction of the levy on corporation incomes and either reduction or repeal of those on admission tickets, club dues and automobile sales. Determination of what changes would be made regarding these taxes was deferred.

Adoption of the motion to set $250,000,000 as the maximum cut came near the close of a stormy session and after a number of other proposals had been cast aside.

At the outset the Democratic membership lost a motion to authorize a reduction of $500,000,000.

Brief But Dramatic Session Brings End To Kearns-Dempsey Damage Suit

Physical Combat Narrowly Averted

(By Associated Press.)
NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 21.—One of a pair of jacks called the other a knave today and the ensuing uproar completely obliterated, at least for the time being, the $12,322.33 damage suit against Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, by Jack Kearns, his erstwhile manager, for breach of contract.

After counsel for Kearns had charged Dempsey and his lawyer with deliberately "framing the court" and Tex. Richard, boxing promoter, with having boasted that he had the case "in the bag," both sides agreed to end the trial in a "voluntary nonsuit," a polite form of mutual carrying no convictions of guilt.

Counsel for Kearns announced that the case would be brought to trial again as soon as possible, but Dempsey's lawyers intimated that legal obstacles would be found in the path of such action and chuckled that Kearns unintentionally cut himself "up salt creek without a paddle" and would have

LIVERMORE, Ala., Nov. 21.—One of 34 alleged masked floggers tonight stood at the bar of justice, as Alabama, increased by more than a score of floggings in Crenshaw county, sought to convict on charges of assault and battery.

After a day given over to several minor cases, organization of the jury and other preliminaries, the state late today began to look among the 34 defendants present for its first case.

The thirty-fourth man under indictment, the Rev. L. A. Nallik, Georgiana, Ala., pastor, has been a fugitive since the grand jury action against him.

WITNESSES FINED $200 Each Is Cost for Non- Appearance at Court

Fine of $200 each was assessed yesterday against Mr. and Mrs. Berry Holmes of Limestone county by Judge Clark Mullican for non-appearance as witnesses for the defendant in the case of W. A. Duke, charged with pre. law violation, when the case was tried on a ninth day of the trial.

The trial was reset for Wednesday of next week. The two non-appearing witnesses had been subpoenaed. Attachments for the sheriff to secure their appearance when the case is tried next week were issued yesterday afternoon from the office of District Clerk Flora Green.

Judge Mullican, judge of the district court in which the case was to have been tried, issued a warning that the witnesses for the defense who did not appear when called would be fined heavily in the future.

State Gives First Evidence in Trial Of Ex-Booze Chief

Remus Produces Greatest Surprise of Case as He Refuses to Make Defense
Opening Statement.

(By Associated Press.)
CINCINNATI, Nov. 21.—The first evidence upon which the state depends to send George Remus, the former "king of bootleggers" to the electric chair, was introduced today.

Remus had sprung the biggest surprise of the trial, by declining to make the opening statement for the defense.

Nine times last week, Remus electrified spectators in Judge Lester Shook's court by clashes with the prosecution, but the surprise of none of them excelled that of today when Charles Elston opened for the defense.

Remus, suffering from a heavy cold arose just after Walter K. Shihbald, deputy prosecutor, had concluded with an appeal to the jury to vote for the execution of Remus for the cold blooded murder of his wife here last October.

Quickly the defendant, who is his own chief counsel, sat down. He leaned over and whispered to Elston.

"I don't believe I can make it," Remus said, "can you do it?"

Elston advanced to the jury with a moment's warning that Remus would not make the opening statement he had planned, virtually since the day of the slaying.

He based his plea solely on transitory insanity. His startling statement was that evidence would be presented to show that Remus had been insane for two years prior to the time he shot Mrs. Remus.

Blame Religious Leaders In Plot

Mexico City Police Chief Says Trio Have Admitted
Their Intent to Murder
General Obregon.

(By Associated Press.)
MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—General Roberto Cruz, chief of police, issued an official signed statement tonight, declaring that three prominent members of the league for the defense of religious liberty—the organization which is opposed to the new religious laws—were the actual and intellectual leaders in the recent plot to assassinate General Obregon, and that they have been arrested and have confessed their guilt.

The names of the men are: Luis Segura Vilella, an engineer employed by the Mexican Light and Power company; Miguel Augustin Profiro Zunera, a Catholic priest, and his brother.

General Cruz, in his statement says that Vilella has assumed entire responsibility for the plot to assassinate General Obregon. The police believe that this was done in an effort to avenge his accomplices.

The arrests came after consultations by Juan Trujano and Lamberto Ruiz, two of the men in the murder case who were shot by Obregon's companions after they had attempted to assassinate the general. Both of these men have since died. The police, on information gleaned from the confessions, found the house where they allege, the three leaders in the conspiracy, with Trujano and Ruiz, and perhaps two others not yet located, met to plan the death of General Obregon.

The conspirators styled themselves the "action group of the league for the defense of religious liberty."

In another house, the statement continues, where lived the priest, Profiro Zunera and Miss Josefina Montes de Oca, niece of the deceased, the conspirators planned the murder of Obregon. The police found four bombs and also tools and material for the manufacture of bombs.

It was in this place where the bombs, used in the attempt on Obregon's life, were made.

(By Associated Press.)
OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 21.—Taking the bit in their teeth, four members of the Oklahoma legislature late today issued a call for an extraordinary session of the Senate, to meet Tuesday, December 6, and at the same time petitioned Governor Henry S. Johnston to call the session.

The purpose of the session, the petition to the governor said, is "to investigate all departments of state including executive and judicial, deemed advisable."

Asserting that they had obtained the signatures of a majority of the House members, calling for the session, the authors of the petition declined to give the names of the signers to the governor or the press because, they did not desire to "subject them to the embarrassment of being continually harassed between now and the time for the calling of the session, as they have been in the past few weeks by employees and appointees of a number of departments."

Move To Amend The call was signed by Tom Johnston, of Pushmataha county; J. Tom Knight of Rogers county; E. P. Hill, of Pittsburgh county; and Robert C. Graham of Oklahoma county. The action brought to a head a movement that has been in foot for more than a month. A petition to the governor calling attention to ten allegations of irregularities in the various departments including the executive and the highway, was made public by Mr. Knight three weeks ago.

Race Segregation In Schools Upheld

Taft Sanctions Power of State to Regulate the Methods of Providing Education.

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Race segregation of children in public schools was sustained today by the supreme court. The ruling was on a case from Mississippi where an attempt was made to compel the state to permit Martha Lum, daughter of an American citizen of Chinese descent, to attend the Rice-ade consolidated high school in Bolivar county, provided exclusively for white children.

Declaring that "the right and power of the state to regulate the method of providing for the education of its youth at public expense is clear," Chief Justice Taft in delivering the opinion, said it "was within the constitutional power of the state legislature to settle, without intervention of the federal courts, under the federal constitution, whether it will require a Chinese citizen of the United States to send his children to public schools provided for the colored races."

The court held it was within the discretion of the state to segregate schools exclusively for the use of white children, provided equal facilities are furnished children of other races within the school districts, and that when schools are provided for Chinese in their native state, the state may require children of Chinese birth to attend them.

WOMAN'S DAY
By Allene Sumner

Some of our bright young men who make their living, and a good one, too, by going about the country lecturing to women's clubs on the various arts, have the cute little habit—at least they must think it's cute—of saying smart-alecky things about women, especially organized women. Louis Bromfield, for instance, out on a well-paid lecture, gave many a reporter "good copy" with his wise-cracks about the monotonous, peas-in-a-pod questions which women ask him about his novels.

"THESE WOMEN!"
Now another fair-haired boy, Richard Halliburton, is out on the same kind of a money-making jaunt. He leaves a lecture before some woman's club which has paid him several hundred dollars, to make fun of the dear ladies behind their backs, and to brag of the 11 answers which he has ready for the only 11 questions that they had brains enough to ask.

GOOSE HAD GOLDEN EGG
Now I know just as well as Louie and Dick the club woman mind, and ordinarily like it just as little. But it is one thing to criticize when one is not exploiting them, and another thing to do it when, just because of their gullibility, they are making it possible for a couple of youngsters to live well. After all, one never hears of men's clubs inviting them, young artists to design to accept a few hundred dollars and a chicken pattle luncheon in exchange for a few choice words. You may be killing the goose that lays the golden egg, boys!

HAR, HAR!
Thank goodness, the woman juror who talked in the Ford-Sapiro trial and caused a mistrial has been matched by the male street car conductor who told what the male juror in the Fall-Sinclair trial said. Now all the boys who warbled about the Ford woman and spread their remarks of "Just what you can expect with women on the jury!" may keep still for a while while "us girls" say "Just what you can expect with men on juries!" Maybe some day we'll act as human beings and not as men or women.

NICE RUTHIE

Ruth Elder's put her foot in it now! She did not turn down her wine glass at the American club where she was guest of honor the other day, dispatches say. My, my, the letters that will be written to her about that — "Disgrace America," and so on. I'm inclined to think, however, that a young lady who observes the conventions of other countries does much more as a good will emissary than one who sears their noses and manners while flaunting our own in their faces.

CAPSULE MEALS

Capsule meals continue to be talked about. One scientist after another retires to his laboratory, carrying not until he can bring with him a capsule of breakfast, lunch and dinner. They say that in the future a man will carry his many capsules of carbohydrates, vitamins and proteins. Good cooks will give way to good chemists, and wives as housekeepers will not be needed at all.

Most scientific promises for the future look rosy, but this is sad and tragic indeed. For who would exchange mother's warm apple pie with mild cheese for a vial of chemical formula, or roast turkey and cranberries for another one? I weep.

Matadors Driven For Turkey Day Tilt With Buffaloes

Close Battle By Teams Nearly On Equal Expected

Five Hundred Rooters From Canyon Coming to Boost Team in Effort to Win Over Texas Tech.

With the Thanksgiving battle in view with Big O' Eckhardt's herd of Buffaloes, the Matadors dug deep in the grass field of Tech's new athletic field and started their final week of work. Preparatory to the Turkey Day feature, the appetites of the Matadors call for plenty of Buffalo meat so they are sharpening their darts and cleaning their pistols for a big killing.

Director-in-charge of the Buffalo hunt, Ewing X. Freeland, welcomes the return services of Percy Walker, halfback, J. E. Red Hamilton, halfback, Leslie A. Jennings, end, and Floyd Woodbridge, quarterback, for the last round-up and charge of the flaming jerseys for this year. With the return of these four brilliant fighters, Coach Freeland feels no hesitancy in breaking into the Turkey Day racket with the Buffaloes of the North Plains.

As the time draws near for the annual feature between the state's two educational institutions many fans over the Panhandle and South Plains are making arrangements to be on hand in the Bullfight arena for the battle between the Buffalo and the Matador. Hundreds of students of the Teachers College have preferred the Texas Tech game rather than their annual homecoming event, which was held when the Teachers drubbed the Wildcats of A. C. C. 12 to 6.

The odds, according to figures will rest in the hands of the Buffaloes, but figures in football are different from most any others—they sometimes do not come out just to a balance. A greater spirit, a bigger scrap, and more color is expected of Freeland's machine in this their last game of the year than in any previous encounter of the 1927 card. Every Predator will battle a highly improved band of football on Thursday and the big fellow handling them is expecting a great day.

E. W. Providence, business manager of the college, stated yesterday that the W. T. S. T. C. fans had ordered 500 tickets for the game and will all be here. A special train has been chartered by the Teachers for the day and will run from Canyon on the morning of the game. The W. T. S. T. C. band and two pep squads will be here to boost their favorites onward.

The NUT CRACKER by Joe Williams

Richard silly as a fox. Can call away that many rox.

But he had to promise him something grand to get the celebrated six-man into the ring with John Risko, the redoubtable Rubber Man.

The Rubber Man is hoping to erase Ghodum's computations entirely.

The tap to the funny that key-rod Phil Scott has been called the "colle punch" by a New York seethe. Mr. O'Guffy was there and saw it, and he says it's some help.

RAIN GREETS SULTAN

Downpour Is Taken to Be Token of Good Luck

RABAT, Nov. 21. (AP)—A heavy rain, looked upon in Morocco as a token of good luck—since the sun shines here 300 days a year—greeted the new sultan, Sidi Mohammed Ben Muli Yusef today, as he entered Rabat, seat of the French residency and capital of his sultanate.

The youthful sultan, only 15 years old, drove from Fez in an American-made automobile to make his official entry into the city from which he will rule.

He alighted from the car just outside the city gates and mounted a white Arabian steed. The heavy rain poured down in sheets transforming the red sand and white burnous of the boy sultan into clinging skin fitting garments as the resident-general, J. L. Theodore, Stang, who accompanied the procession, smiled uneasily in his cutaway coat and top hat.

Participation In 1928 Olympic Tilt Planned Monday

Pave Way for Selection of Robertson as Head Coach of American Field, Track Team for Meet.

BL ALAN J. GOULD Associated Press Sports Editor CINCINNATI, Nov. 21.—Accompanied by sharp and some times acrimonious debate, the American program for participation and preparation for the 1928 Olympic games took definite shape today so far as it is controlled by the Amateur Athletic Union, in annual convention here.

The principal Olympic decisions consisted of paving the way for selection of Lawson Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania as head coach of the American Field and Track team that will go to Amsterdam, Holland, next July and in awarding sectional or national Olympic tryouts which in the case of track and field sports, boxing, wrestling and gymnastics, will be combined with the 1928 national championships.

Approve 125 Records At the same time the convention put its stamp of approval on 125 record performances, which included 41 in track and field and 84 in swimming and lifted the suspension of Harold Guttill, Boston clergyman, and erstwhile "flying parson" who was banned in 1923 for receiving alleged excessive expense money. Three of the major Olympic tryouts "pluses" were awarded to Boston, including the final track and field trials, to be held in Harvard stadium July 6 and 7, the Amateur boxing tryouts, probably in May and the marathon trial, to be held in conjunction with the annual Boston A. A. trial on April 15.

In each case the national championships as well as Olympic tests will be involved. The award of two of these events to the New England section boxing and marathon—developed the most spirited controversy of the opening days sessions, attended by delegates and athletic officials from all parts of the country.

Baltimore, through its A. A. U. representative, Charles Ornstein, applied for the Olympic Marathon tryout with the idea of holding it separately and late in May over the Laurel-to-Baltimore course. Committee approval by a divided vote was given this application but when the issue reached the floor of the convention, Richard M. Walsh of Boston and Herman Oberhuber, president of New York, led a fight which resulted in a decision to combine the Olympic test with the Boston classic on April 15.

Charging a Boston "monopoly" on Olympic tryouts, Ornstein indicated tonight he would carry the battle before the convention again tomorrow in the hope of reversing today's vote which was by the close margin of 11 to 18, based on a roll call by district associations.

Disputes over the awarding the boxing tryouts and championships again to Boston came after discussion by the chairman of the National Boxing Commission, William H. Caddy of Boston, of friction among athletic officials in the New England city and a report of sharp falling off in the receipts of the 1927 national tournament as compared with former years.

The final track and field tryouts at Boston will be preceded by ten sectional preliminaries, to be held on or before June 25 in the following locations:

New York City, Dallas, Detroit, Cincinnati, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Lawrence, Kan., or Iowa City, Atlanta or Birmingham, and Denver.

In addition such college championships as the intercollegiate A. A. U. in the past will be recognized as sectional trials qualifying the best men for the finals.

Westerners Open Training For Tilt With Vernon Team

Thanksgiving Battle Will See End of High School Careers for Several on Lubbock Squad.

The Lubbock Westerners went into training yesterday afternoon for their final week of football in the current season. For many it will be the final season of high school football. Les Smith, quarterback, and one of the best backfield men ever to don a Westerner uniform, is turning in his last week of work. Luther Williams, quarterback, and a first year man is, too, working his last week with the high school club. Backingham, center, who is only a first year man is halting his high school activities after the Vernon tilt. Curtis Allen, center, Kerr, Whitesides and Campbell, ends, Parkinson and "Tex" Hatch, Dickinson, guards, and Doherty, their halfback, are preparing for their last day with the Westerners.

The league game is in Vernon with the highly-touted Lions, who have had a good season in gridiron performance in the class A division. The Lions have won from Elletts, Quamish and Placerville and lost to the Stander of Anacortes and the Wichita Falls Coyotes, but these losses were by narrow margins. Their 29 to 0 victory over the Plainview Bulldogs was forfeited by the State Interscholastic League officials, due to the illegality of one of the members of the team some two weeks ago.

To defeat the Vernon Lions on their home grounds is a hard task and Coaches Henry Frink and Del Morgan are fully aware of the fact. The handlers of the Westerners' organization hope to turn loose with an unlimited supply of formations, and numerous plays and varied attacks. The homecoming offense was opened against the Chiefs of Quamish in the last week exhibition, much to the satisfaction of the coaches and fans. The Lions have a much larger line, but the lack of the Lubbock high school have, expect to shatter them with a more varied attack.

Passing from the numerous formations the field generals of the Westerners call, is the main reason that will be taken in the Turkey day classic at Vernon. The brunt of the running attack will be carried on by Les Smith, fullback, Doherty and Dowell halves. With Kerr, Whitesides and Campbell on the wing positions and Les Smith passing the yardage on passing is expected to be better for the local machine than in the previous performances.

The team will leave Lubbock Wednesday morning via buses for the scene of the last game on the 1927 card. Many local high school followers are planning to attend the game in Vernon.

Indications were that the man had pulled the trigger with his toe. Condition of the house where the old man and his blind wife, who was unconscious at the time of the shooting, told a story of poverty and despair that had created a weight too great to be longer withstood by the old man, once possessed of wealth.

Frank O'Rourke, who played third base for the St. Louis Browns last season, is unquestionably big league managerial timber. Several clubs are known to be considering him as a pilot. "If he could hit better, he would be in the headlines almost daily."

FLOOD CONTROL AS AN ISSUE

That flood control is the predominant
issue in this country at this time, regardless of party consideration of any kind whatsoever, goes without saying. It at least is the dominant issue with the masses
of the people whether it is to be made
such by the politicians in the coming national campaign or not.More especially is it the issue with the millions of people living along the Mississippi Valley—the millions who were made
homeless and destitute last spring when
the floods came and brought death, destruction and pestilence in their wake.While it was hard to make official Washington see this as the urgent need
of the hour at the time, it is not hard now.
It would seem that providence may have taken a hand to bring the seriousness of
the situation home to the powers that be.
For the powers that be at this time are
New Englanders and New England, along
the valleys of her chief streams, now lies
prostrate and bleeding, having just been
ground to powder by a flood as disastrous
and as horrifying in its aspect as was that of the Mississippi so far as it goes.Certainly flood control will now be looked upon as a pressing problem. Surely pettifoggish politicians will not be soul-
less enough to grime at and trifle with
a subject so serious and so close to the hearts of the great majority of honest
people who support them in their profession.Surely men presumed to be statesmen
will not go into the next congress and allow political prejudices and party bickering
to halt them in making the effort of
their lives to do something constructive
along this line. Surely they cannot be cold hearted and cold blooded enough to go
that congress with a multiplicity of proposals and deliberately kill a sensible
measure for flood control simply because
they cannot get their own program adopted.
Surely they will not be narrow enough,
and sectional and provincial enough to refuse to get together on some constructive
plan some plan first determined by a competent board of engineers to be the sane, sensible, effective program.If any do undertake to do this they should be relegated to political oblivion
at the next recurring election. If the present administration refuses to sound
the alarm and make this its first and most important business, it is not fit to represent the nation in an official capacity
and should be sunk to the bottom of a political hell, so deep that it can never be retrieved. If the saving of human life, the alleviation of human suffering and the protection of property and the means of
livelihood mean nothing to the present
administration, then it is too damnable
conscience seared to be worth retrieving.THE ADMINISTRATION'S NAVY-BUILDING PROGRAMThis country never has maintained a
navy commensurate with its population
and resources, particularly in peacetime.
Today its fleets are deficient in first-line
light cruisers, and in submarines designed
to operate with them. President Coolidge may recommend constructing two 10,000-
ton cruisers a year, until 18 such are built
or on the way. Accepting the General Board's recommendations, the Navy Department favors a five-year program authorizing construction of at least three cruisers annually. These ships each would carry eight 8-inch guns in main battery
and make 34 or 35 knots an hour. The
"Pensacola" and the "Salk Lake City"
will be completed in 1929, according to present plans. Besides the light cruisers,
the Department desires numerous destroyer leaders and fleet submarines. During the Great War the United States built
many destroyers, but the majority are obsolete now and would not be highly useful if recommissioned. Destroyer leaders —somewhat larger and faster than the ordinary type—are found in many navalestablishments. For example, France is building three 2,700-ton leaders. Ten American first-line light cruisers are in commission—7,500-ton craft, each carrying 6-inch guns in main battery. They would be hopelessly outmatched in battle by the so-called treaty cruisers, displacing 10,000 tons and armed with 8-inch pieces. Great Britain has launched five treaty cruisers and is building five more.
British shipyards also are constructing for Australia two 10,000-ton cruisers, not included in the homeland's program. In this country only four fleet submarines are commissioned, and two more probably will be completed in 1929. An increase in bluejack-strength—as well as in cruisers, fleet submarines and destroyer leaders—is needed, and the Department desires a minimum of 76,000. The budget provides pay for 82,500 bluejackets but the Department considers this number inadequate to man the ships in commission.
The Navy is maintained not only to defend the coasts and harbors in war, but to combat fleets and keep trade-routes open to neutral lands. This country's foreign commerce is almost ten billion dollars a year, and is growing rapidly. It is poor policy to withhold necessary enlisted naval personnel as an "economy," when American interests abroad are more extensive than ever before. An undermanned ship may be a center of discontent, but should the Department endeavor to arrange for full complements, it would be compelled to put many vessels out of commission.

THE POWER OF THE HOME

No picture painted by an old master is more nearly a universal favorite than that of the Holy Family—Joseph, Mary and the Child Jesus in an humble fireside setting. The theme was beloved of the artists, also; they returned to it again and again and lavished upon it those pains which constitute genius. It is plain why the scene touches the heart. It awakens the tenderest emotions and brings cherished associations to minds of everyone so happy as to have known a home, however unpretentious, in childhood. A sacred atmosphere hovers about the fire; it is the shrine where gather the deepest, most lasting affections.
The poet's "charm from the skies" is there—though perhaps to be recognized and appreciated only by the returned exiled. This mystical quality was symbolized by the ancient Romans' Lares and Penates. It is embodied in the Russians' icon and in the family altar of devout people everywhere. The old painters shed a marvelous light on the familiar domestic scene, and a halo played about the head of the Child. The ethereal glow also is emblematic of the home influence—a force so gentle and unobtrusive as to be scarcely perceptible, and yet most potent, for it is molding character and destiny.
What the child shall become is determined largely by its home environment—by the unconscious influence which parents, brothers, sisters and playmates exert; by the example and direction of these monitors during the fateful, impressionable early years. Child psychology—Itself but a fledgling among the sciences—has determined that the first seven years of life are the most crucial. That is the true plastic age. "A horse that has been badly broken during the first two years is always an unsafe horse; it is doubtful if it can become a satisfactory horse," writes
Dr. John B. Watson of Johns Hopkins University—famous Behaviorist—as an illustration. When it is considered that these early years are spent in the home almost exclusively, the parents' awful responsibility becomes evident. It is an obligation which cannot readily be delegated to school, church, Scoutmaster, Sunday school, governess or juvenile court—as so many attempt to do with their children who are a little older. The natural affections invest every word, deed, tone or fleeting facial expression of father and mother with a significance, in the child's mind, which no other instruction possibly can have. What an opportunity is that of the kindly, discerning, understanding parent in such circumstances! All the sermons ever uttered by the most eloquent ministers, all the precepts of sages throughout the centuries, cannot equal in weight a single word spoken by father or mother at the right moment. From such a source no doubt the Child Jesus drew His strength of spirit, acquired His wisdom, and learned to know the grace of God.
Fancy may depict angels hovering about the youthful Master and instructing Him; but may not the influence of a good mother or a thoughtful father, upon any child, be symbolized thus? And there is no reason why the parental sway should cease when the "impressionable" age is past. When the parent loses control of his son—as so many do in this day—he has not himself to blame. A few weeks ago the National Parent-Teachers Association undertook a country-wide campaign to "spread sound enlightenment on the subject of parenthood." Addressing that body's Texas convention the other day, Mrs. Ira E. Cain of Wichita Falls dwelt upon the relation of this subject to juvenile delinquency—a matter which latterly has given social workers so much concern. Mrs. Cain laid the blame for this condition squarely at the parents' door.
"We fail to remember that the power of a community is only the power of the homes it represents." That is a profound truth.
The moral and spiritual level of community or State can rise no higher than the fountainhead of these qualities, the home.

FLOOD CONTROL AS AN ISSUE

That flood control is the predominant
issue in this country at this time, regard-
less of party consideration of any kind
whatsoever, goes without saying. It at least is the dominant issue with the masses
of the people whether it is to be made
such by the politicians in the coming national campaign or not.More especially is it the issue with the
millions of people living along the Mississippi Valley—the millions who were made
homeless and destitute last spring when
the floods came and brought death, destruction and pestilence in their wake.While it was hard to make official Washington see this as the urgent need
of the hour at the time, it is not hard now.
It would seem that providence may have
taken a hand to bring the seriousness of
the situation home to the powers that be.
For the powers that be at this time are
New Englanders and New England, along
the valleys of her chief streams, now lies
prostrate and bleeding, having just been
ground to powder by a flood as disastrous
and as horrifying in its aspect as was that of the Mississippi so far as it goes.Certainly flood control will now be looked upon as a pressing problem. Surely pettifoggish politicians will not be soul-
less enough to grime at and trifle with
a subject so serious and so close to the hearts of the great majority of honest
people who support them in their profession.Surely men presumed to be statesmen
will not go into the next congress and allow political prejudices and party bickering
to halt them in making the effort of
their lives to do something constructive
along this line. Surely they cannot be cold
hearted and cold blooded enough to go
that congress with a multiplicity of proposals and deliberately kill a sensible
measure for flood control simply because
they cannot get their own program adopted.
Surely they will not be narrow enough,
and sectional and provincial enough to re-
fuse to get together on some constructive
plan some plan first determined by a
competent board of engineers to be the
sane, sensible, effective program.If any do undertake to do this they should be relegated to political oblivion
at the next recurring election. If the
present administration refuses to sound
the alarm and make this its first and most
important business, it is not fit to re-
present the nation in an official capacity
and should be sunk to the bottom of a political hell, so deep that it can never be retrieved. If the saving of human life, the
alleviation of human suffering and the protection of property and the means of
livelihood mean nothing to the present
administration, then it is too damnable
conscience seared to be worth retrieving.THE ADMINISTRATION'S NAVY-BUILDING PROGRAMThis country never has maintained a
navy commensurate with its population
and resources, particularly in peacetime.
Today its fleets are deficient in first-line
light cruisers, and in submarines designed
to operate with them. President Coolidge
may recommend constructing two 10,000-
ton cruisers a year, until 18 such are built
or on the way. Accepting the General
Board's recommendations, the Navy Department favors a five-year program authorizing construction of at least three
cruisers annually. These ships each would
carry eight 8-inch guns in main battery
and make 34 or 35 knots an hour. The
"Pensacola" and the "Salk Lake City"
will be completed in 1929, according to present plans. Besides the light cruisers,
the Department desires numerous destroy-
er leaders and fleet submarines. During
the Great War the United States built
many destroyers, but the majority are obsolete now and would not be highly useful if recommissioned. Destroyer leaders
—somewhat larger and faster than the
ordinary type—are found in many naval

SO THINK WE

We think that since a down-state jury has sentenced a Texas bank robber to the chair for robbery with firearms it is likely that others in this state may cease operations for a while. At least until the case is reheard.We think that Thursday will be another big day for the football fans of West Texas. The West Texas State Teachers college team will be here for the annual battle with the Texas Tech Matadors.
This game is expected to be a very brilliant exhibition and will have plenty of color. More than 500
Canyon fans are expected here Thursday.We think that perhaps the nations could end wars by erecting a few beacons of tax payers shelling out.We think that many Texas cities are planning air ports. Lubbock, too, should begin preparations for it. It is only a matter of a few years until aerial transportation will be in demand and the cities that are prepared will be the first chosen along the route that will be taken.We think that if it is true that women have more common sense than men, we wonder why some of them get married because of being tired of work.We think that there are only two kinds of people in the world that deserve flattery. These are men and women.We think that this fall has proven to the people that it pays to grow better quality products. Good cotton, chickens, cattle, hogs and turkeys are always in demand at high prices.We think that more caution should be shown with children on outings. Recently some 20 or more small children were killed while playing near a railway track. Children should be prohibited from playing near the tracks for there is no warning given by trains out from stations.

OPINIONS

AS DEATH GRIPS
WITH NATURE.Two of the news stories which have been circulating ever since in every newspaper of the United States in the past few days, serve to emphasize, when taken together, the limitations—the physical limitations—the physical limitations—which man suffers when he puts himself voluntarily or involuntarily in a contest of endurance with the new forces of nature.One of these had to do with the finding of the derelict ship which had been floating at random, without pilot or compass, over the Pacific Ocean for three months or more.The other was the chronicle of the Army balloonist who dared to defy the laws of gravitation and of respiration, flying in their face by sheer force of spirit until Nature at last took its fatal toll, conquering his body when it was impossible to conquer his will-power.The ship which drifted into harbor after it had been blown by contrary winds and currents perhaps over the broad bosom of the Pacific, was a small Japanese fishing smack, with an original crew of not more than two dozen men.
When its engines were crippled and its rudder and sails rendered useless, the men in the ship faced a contest of sheer endurance, whose ultimate outcome they could not predict. When at last the little vessel came pounding in upon the shore of a far-distant island, the living men first read the grim story of that fatal contest, in which men were reduced to the elemental condition of primeval man, and inwhich the last survivors literally devoured the bodies of the earlier victims of starvation, and then themselves succumbed to the twin demons of hunger and exposure. A death's head was the fitting symbol which strode the wave-washed deck when the ship finally drifted into harbor. In this case the crew did not voluntarily face death;
when once he showed his grinning teeth they fought him off as long as human endurance lasted.

YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene the Health MagazineUnquestionably the human skin has changed in the progress of man from an earlier day to the present.
Apparently all races of man have developed from a common ancestry, the diverse types being the result of adaptations to different environments in the course of thousands of years.It is interesting to know that the length of prenatal life in man and in the higher apes is approximately 180 days, whereas in the lower apes it is 120 days. Anthropologists are inclined to believe that the 60-day difference is required for the growth of the brain and head of man, which are the parts of man that differentiate him from the lower animals.In the development of man from a lower skin to his present form he changed his diet. The eating of fleshy foods provides larger and more rapid supply of heat than did the foods which man formerly ate.Evaporation of Heat:
One of the functions of the skin is to permit the evaporation of heat from the body and to secure a constant temperature within. A strong active man in a cool climate may emit 2500 calories of heat per day, whereas the man in a sedentary life under tropical conditions will emit only 1500 calories of heat.In consideration of the relationship of the character of the skin in its relationship to questions of race and health, Prof.
H. J. Fleure of the University College of Wales points out that the darker colorings of the skin occur where the sun's rays are most powerful, but that it is impossible to classify races of men on this point alone because migration, conquest, and other factors have modified this point as well.He believes that the earliest type of man had brown skin.
The pigment being developed soon after birth as a resultant action of the skin to the influence of light. The earliest forms of man also had hairy skin and indeed the new-born baby of today is likely to be covered with a slightly downy coat.Dry Heat, Brown Coloring Where the heat is of the dry type, there is a tendency toward brown coloring. It is likely that the earliest men had pigmented skin, since theories have been developed to account for the pigmentation of later types.Part of this resulted from travel into districts of lessened heat. An additional factor suggested by one observer is the fact that persons who travel north would change to a diet containing a considerable amount of salt and dried foods, and that this had to do also with the disappearance of pigmentation of the skin.In this discussion of the subject, Prof. Fleure points out that the fittest skinned Europeans have a high power of heat evaporation and an activity of body and mind that is more suited to rural than to town conditions.This type is free from serious tuberculosis when it remains in the country, but is prone to the disease when depressed into industrial conditions. The character of the skin and hair is itself an indication of the general constitution.

Defends Reputation.
Driscoll in a ringing voice asserted that Dempsey never would settle, even if it could be done for one cent. Another defense lawyer questioned Sager's remark that he had 25 years of service at the bar and Sager, rose in anger, Sager listening on his cheeks to defend his reputation.

At this point Judge Runyon plainly indicated that he intended to declare a mistrial, not because he believed there had been any guilt, but "because these charges have been made, the finger of suspicion would be inevitably pointed from certain quarters at the court." Sager hastened to assure the judge that he had not in any way intended to convey the impression that he believed the court had connived with the plaintiff's attorney to provide time for the plaintiff to influence the verdict, but had aimed his charges entirely at the defense. The judge then ordered the entry of a voluntary non-suit, and both accepted, Sager stipulating that it be understood such acceptance did not in any way affect the case, merely the trial.

Received Cordially.
Governor Johnston received the two men cordially and hummed as he opened the envelope that the documents were in.

Questioning the men briefly, the governor commented on the absence of names from the petition, that "this is peculiar conduct for men who claim to be in good faith." "Well, boys I'm much obliged to you and I'll look it over," Governor Johnston said in dismissing the two. Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, whose position as confidential secretary to the governor was attacked in the first petition made public by Mr. Kight, looked into the governor's office when Mr. Johnson and Mr. Graham arrived and listened for a short time as the governor read from documents. Then she retired to her desk in the small office adjoining the governor's, the door remaining open.

Mine Clash

as he saw fit to command the situation.

Occurs At Dawn.
The shooting at Columbine mine occurred at dawn today. During the darkness between 400 and 500 strikers gathered near the gate to the mine property. As they advanced into the property Louis N. Scherf, chief of the law enforcement department and 20 state officers, ordered the strikers to leave the property. They advanced and in a short struggle in which the police used their guns for clubs and the strikers used rocks, sticks and knives, the state officers were overwhelmed. Scherf collected his forces and drawing up in a line ahead of the strikers he again ordered them to halt. They kept advancing and Scherf fired two shots over their heads. When they continued to march toward him, Scherf ordered his men to fire and a sweeping hail of bullets cut down the strikers.

Twenty of the wounded strikers were taken to the Longmont hospital and doctors said that at least four of them did not have a chance to live.

Two were taken to a hospital at Boulder and the others of the wounded were taken to their homes. All of the state officers received injuries.

Governor Adams later issued a statement placing full blame for the killing on the strikers themselves and declaring the state police were forced to shoot as a matter of self preservation.

Strikers Unarmed.
The strikers' committee blamed a "fool speed cop" for the shooting and said that not a single one of the strikers were armed. The strikers said they were going to the Columbine post office when the state police opened fire.

Denver newspapers were ordered destroyed by the committee as they said the news that martial law had been proclaimed, would "incite rioting." Some of the rioters were taken from the property on stretchers, but the move did not excite strikers to further violence.

The strikers have been peaceable and lay the blame on state police. Trouble developed in other Colorado fields today and deputy sheriffs and strikers had a hand to hand battle in Las Animas county. Sheriff J. J. Marty arrested 43 of the strikers on picketing and placed them in jail at Trinidad. At Walsenburg the state police were searching all cars that entered the town for guns and knives. The state I. W. W. headquarters are located in Walsenburg and state officials have asserted that there was an apparent concentration of striking forces there the past few days.

ADJUTANT GENERAL TELLS OF SCENE.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 21. (AP)—The Colorado state budget commissioner, Sterling B. Lacy, who, with Adjutant General Paul P. Newton, and Thomas Annear, industrial commissioner, had gone to the Columbine mine to observe strike conditions, witnessed the battle this morning between striking I. W. W. miners and state police and gave the following description of it.

"I have never witnessed a more dramatic scene. Day was just breaking. The mob of cursing men, hurrying stones, sticks and wielding knives, came on like a tornado, entraining the mob members to stop.

"Retreating slowly before them," Adam Bell, I. W. W. organizer, gave the order for the mob to advance. "Come on boys, let's go in and get 'em. He refused to heed Scherf's plea. Four feet behind Scherf were the state police in two lines, all of them excited, all of them brave, some of them cursing back at the 'wobblies'.

"I have never seen a man with more nerve than Scherf displayed. Before he gave his order to fire one state policeman had his eye almost gouged out by a stone thrown by a wobbly, another lost a finger, wounded by a knife. Scherf was cut and bleeding and so were all the members of his force.

"When it became apparent there was no stopping the force of the strikers, now keyed up to their full fury, Scherf issued an order to fire. The first volley went over the heads of the mob. It did not stop them. The next volley was directed at them. The mob stopped. It was a matter of seconds before the wounded began to fall.

"As men in two ranks of the 'wobblies' toppled to the ground, the advance column of strikers hesitated, then turned and fled. As the main body retreated the wounded began to fall at intervals. It was a terrible sight to see the sprawled forms of the men lying on that bare stretch of ground. I counted 12 of them among whom we learned later was a woman. She was dressed as a man and in the pale morning light it was impossible to distinguish her as a woman. I doubt if she could have been so distinguished in broad daylight.

"As they fled the strikers continued to curse and hurl stones and took with them all but five of the wounded. Some of them may have been dead. It was impossible to tell.

"In all, I believe about 50 shots were fired. I don't think all Scherf's men fired at the same time. They were in two lines of 10 men each. The first line laid down a barrage while the second held itself in reserve. Medical aid was summoned from the Columbine mine. On being assured that physicians would start immediately for the scene of the battle we left for Denver to advise Governor Adams what had taken place."

Jasper Regime, Which Took Office in 1926, Quits

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 21. (AP)—The Jasper cabinet, which took office May 20, 1926, resigned today, after the conflicting views of the socialist and non-socialist ministers on the period of military service.

The Socialist attitude was finally decided at among causes of the socialist ministers with the Socialist Senator M. De Broeckere. This was to adhere to the demand for a reduction of military service from ten months to six months.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

With all the social activities of this week comes increased demands on our cleaning and pressing plant. To be sure that everything will be in readiness for Thanksgiving, send your clothes—or better, phone for our delivery—at once.

It isn't enough these days that clothes be cleaned thoroughly and properly pressed—BY ALL MEANS THEY MUST BE DE-ODORIZED!

And that's a service that costs you NOTHING when you send them to our plant. The installation of this de-odorizing machine meant a large expenditure to us—it means more labor for us—but it MEANS a great deal to our CUSTOMERS! And we are very careful of what our customers think and want. They MUST be pleased.

When you stop to think of the wear and tear we save in our cleaning process; when you think of a method that raises the nap of your clothing to their original newness—when you realize that our cleaning method ACTUALLY makes your clothes last you longer—then consider our process of DE-ODORIZING—we believe you will join the thousands of others in this section and become a regular patron of our plant.

Poultry Expert To Lecture Saturday

Dr. L. D. LeGear, Veterinary Surgeon, Will Advise on Poultry Production Here in Lecture.

Announcement that arrangements have been made with Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., national poultry expert and lecturer of St. Louis, Mo., to visit and hold a public poultry meeting at Lubbock, was made yesterday.

Dr. LeGear will lecture at the courthouse, Lubbock, Saturday afternoon, November 26, at 2 o'clock. His subject being "How to make the farm flock pay." An interesting feature in connection with this lecture will be a clinic demonstration in which Dr. LeGear will dissect several fowls, and through a post-mortem examination explain the causes of certain diseases.

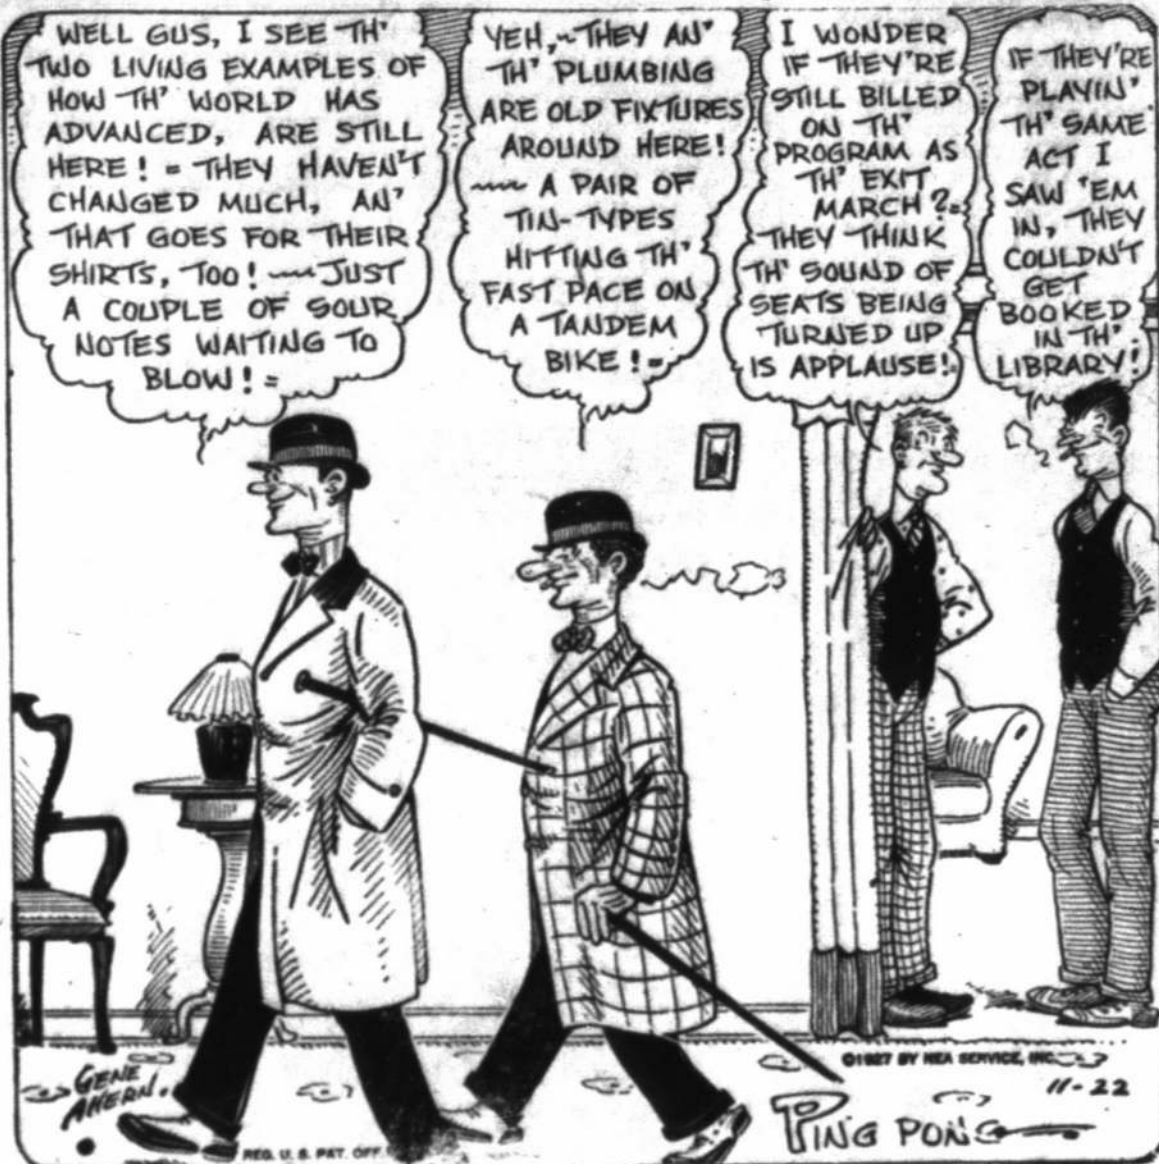

Dr. LeGear will tell of his successful methods of housing, feeding and caring for the flock; how to get highest egg production; how to successfully feed and hatch baby chicks; how to cure poultry diseases; how to cull flocks and many other subjects. Following the lecture he will answer questions and grant free consultations regarding the treatment of poultry or livestock.

Dr. LeGear is a graduate veterinary surgeon, a practical poultry raiser and a nationally known poultry expert, with 36 years' experience. He has given many poultry lectures from various radio stations and at scores of state and county fairs. Also at meetings given by chambers of commerce of many cities and towns throughout the country.

Dr. LeGear has said that the big value of poultry on the farm has been especially demonstrated during the past five years in the southwest, where poultry raising is becoming an important factor. Statistics show that while Texas is making great progress, much educational work is necessary throughout the state to help those who are attempting to, or are, raising poultry and that is the reason Dr. Le-

WAFFLES

Plain or Chocolate

A Tested Recipe

2 cups pastry flour 2 eggs
3 teaspoons baking powder 1½ cups milk
1 tablespoon sugar 2 tablespoons Crisco
¼ teaspoon salt

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Separate eggs and add milk to beaten egg yolks and mix into dry ingredients. Add milk and Crisco and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour by spoonfuls on very hot Criscoed waffle iron. Serve hot with honey or maple syrup.

For CHOCOLATE WAFFLES, add two tablespoons melted chocolate with the melted Crisco and follow recipe above.

I use Crisco, not only for my waffles, griddle cakes and hot breads, but for every shortening and frying use. Crisco gives me light tender cakes that you cannot tell from those made with expensive butter; flakier pie crusts; fluffy golden biscuits and all kinds of fried foods without smoke, unpleasant odor or waste.

To test your cooking fat—taste it.
Crisco's sweet flavor will astonish you.

Crisco is the best cooking fat for all purposes. It is pure and refined. It is the only cooking fat that is 100% pure. It is the only cooking fat that is 100% pure. It is the only cooking fat that is 100% pure.

13-7 Win Over Matador

CROSBYTON, Nov. 21.—The Crosbyton Chiefs, playing their last game of the season, won a thrilling victory from Matador with a score of 13 to 7. Both teams fought furiously from start to finish, and the game was rather rough. The Crosbyton offense, led by Allen, was the shining light of the game. All three touchdowns were made by forward passes. For Matador Captain Howell was their offensive star, assisted by his left tackle on defense. Crosbyton made 14 first downs to 6 by Matador. Crosbyton was penalized 7 times for 30 yards, Matador twice for 20 yards. The Chiefs close their season with five victories, two defeats and one tie. Basketball will start soon and Cochran Vaughn will have some 30 candidates to pick his squad from. Chiefs of certain large restaurants and hotels demand payment of as much as ten per cent of the bill from merchants who receive large contracts.

NORFLEET

The Manhunter's Own True Story

As told to Gordon Hines

WHAT HAS BEEN TOLD:

Frank Norfleet, a Texas rancher, is swindled out of $45,000 by a gang led by Joe Furey. Norfleet resolves to destroy the ring. Vague clues lead him across the continent several times in hot pursuit and three of his men are captured. He has yet to get Joe Furey and W. H. Spencer, two principals of the gang. Norfleet finds Furey's home in Glendale, California, and two Los Angeles officers are assigned to watch it. Following another tip Norfleet pursues Furey to Jacksonville, where, assisted by his son, Pete, he captures the man in a restaurant after a bloody fight. The Florida officers make an attempt to take Furey from the Texas but fail. Furey takes a headlong dive through the glass window of the Pullman drawing room but is recaptured and Norfleet is soon on his way to Texas with his prisoner. Norfleet learns that Furey had been captured by the two Los Angeles officers and had bought his freedom for $20,000. A mysterious Mrs. Street, who has followed Norfleet a great deal, comes to him on the train and warns him that two men are plotting to kill him. Norfleet warns Pete to stay in the drawing room with the prisoner when they reach New Orleans while he goes out to size up the situation.

Chapter Thirty-eight

Mrs. Street went through the train with me, agreeing that she would point out the plotters. There were twelve coaches and we ambled through to the smoker in front without finding a trace of the suspicious fellows. The little woman was chagrined and she became very apologetic, assuring me that they were on the train a short time before. I told her not to worry; that I would keep a close watch and be ready for any emergency.

The train drew under the sheds at New Orleans. Mrs. Street and I alighted from the smoker. Pete was in the last car, the entire length of the train from me. Furey and I would wait there until I sent for him.

The air was misty and the dim electric lights barely penetrated a fog or so of the haze that surrounded them. Figures bustled through the fog, black shadows in a blur of gray mist. I watched alertly and the little sparrow of a woman clung to my arm. She said she would give me a nudge if she saw either of the men. I called to a red-cap and gave him instructions about getting two others to help him to unload Pete, Furey and the luggage. He hustled off and we strolled down the platform.

I wore my overcoat, unbuttoned, and my arms were crossed so that each hand rested on a pistol under my armpit. Mrs. Street held to my arm, bouncing along and giving nervous little starts with every noise. The crowd had thickened by this time and we had to elbow our way through the throng. I said nothing to Mrs. Street about being armed and I'm sure she was not aware that each of my hands touched a six-gun. That would have increased her nervousness.

As we drew near the last coach it occurred to me that, if anyone were actually planning to plug me, they would probably ambush our party from the end of the last car, where the darkness would shield them. I walked slightly to one side and walked around where I could see into the shadows behind the coach.

Two figures crouched there. Then after an instant, they stole quietly toward the platform and peeped around. Another step and they stood in the glare of a light. They glanced about, then I could see that they had seen Mrs. Street and myself. She gave a peculiar little gesture that I've wondered about a great deal since. The hands of the men darted toward their hips.

I uncrossed my hands and threw my arms out with such force that the woman was thrown to the platform. Each of my hands gripped a gun and I threw down on the two dark figures.

"Stick 'em up!" I yelled, as I backed slowly toward the concrete pillar which would protect my back and keep me out of sight of the crowd. The two men were reaching for the sky.

"Who are you and what do you want?" I demanded.

There was a moment's pause, then one fellow spoke up.

"We're railroad police and we're going to arrest you."

"I don't believe you are." I replied and I began to edge toward them in a semicircle. I wanted to see their faces, but they held their extended arms close to their heads and I could not see their features in the dim light. When I had edged far enough away from the concrete pillar I ordered them to walk toward it, slowly. I made them face the pillar and place their hands against it, above their heads.

"Now stand there—and don't look around!"

I now had them where I had been standing and I stood where they had been when I threw them down on the platform. I glanced about for Mrs. Street, but she had vanished. Evidently she had fled in her fright.

The red-cap came back me with the wheel chair. They soon had Furey in the chair, the luggage in hand, and the party, with Pete in charge, had hustled off through the crowd toward the station waiting room. I backed away for a short distance, then turned and followed the others. I've often wondered how long the two pseudo-officers stood with their hands high on that concrete pillar.

We called the police station and they met us with a car, taking us to the city jail. Furey was locked in a cell and we went to the Planters Hotel for the first real rest we had had since Furey's capture.

In the morning we had an early breakfast and went immediately to take charge of our prisoner. The night sergeant was on duty and we asked him how our man got along through the night.

He rose slowly from his chair, shook the kinks from his legs and stretched his arms to yawn. His mouth stretched to great proportions and he patted it gently and seemed to awaken slightly. I repeated my question about Furey and he blinked at me as if trying to recall my face and the identity of the prisoner I was inquiring about. I told him I was asking about Joe Furey. He mumbled something about not knowing where the man was.

"It seems to me," he swallowed a yawn and talked dully,—"It seems to me that some one came during the night and got 'im."

I was stunned and the sergeant seemed very slightly interested in anything as he shook his sluggish form and yawned again.

It seemed that the jail floor would fly up and slap me in the face. My senses spun in a bewildered whirligig turmoil. I recalled, in a brief instant, all the hardships I had suffered in landing Joe Furey and now, he had been whisked from beneath my nose, figuratively, while I had been enjoying a much needed rest.

"Who? Why? Where is he?" I shouted, a little wildly.

"Lemme see—" he scratched his head, ignoring my anxiety. "Lemme try to remember. I believe—yeah, it must ha' been someone from the Humane Society. Um-humh, that's it. The Humane doctor mentioned it to me."

"The Humane Society?" I gasped. "Of all the blankety-blank-blank! Where is it?"

He took his time about telling us, and we rushed out. We covered the four or five blocks in two jerks of a lamb's tail. Pete left me to get a car and I dashed up the steps and into the building. I flew past the information desk with the girl shouting after me to stop. I saw a door standing open down the corridor and I heard the chatter of female voices. I looked in.

There lay Furey! Propped up among downy pillows on a snow-white bed! Uniformed women flattered about ministering to him and a pitiful smile played on his face. He certainly knew how to touch the wells of sympathy in women's hearts. I could almost see, beneath the pitiful look a smile of jubilation. These women were innocently playing his game and he was hopeful.

I stalked into the room and to the bed. Furey's face fell and he looked about the room at the women in mute appeal.

"Hi, Furey!" I exclaimed. I couldn't help feeling a little jubilant.

the three of us hurried out to the waiting car. The uniformed women and myself "How did you get down here?"

I could almost feel the fire of the belligerent glances which were upon me.

"How did he get down here?" exclaimed an indignant one. "Why, we went up and brought him down here where he can be kindly cared for. The poor man is suffering and we are going to take care of him."

"Furey ought to appreciate your kindness, ma'am."

Furey gave me a sarcastic look. "Well," the spokeswoman continued, "our doctor says he is a very sick man and that he will not be able to travel for at least fifteen days. Don't you dare touch him!" The whole flock scurried about the bed as if to protect Furey from me.

I smiled and flitted so that I could look over their heads and see Furey. I could feel the hostility of the childless, motherly souls and I seemed to irritate them a great deal when I tossed twitting conversation over their heads to Furey.

I asked him how he slept, if they had fed him yet and then inquired playfully as to his peculiar power over the emotions of women.

"You're taught me one thing, Joe. A swindler of widows and orphans—died-in-the-wool crook—can take a spectacular leap through the window of a moving train and get the tearful sympathy of all the women who see him. They don't think much of the lives you're wrecked."

"Aren't you ashamed?" cried one of the angry females as she careened Joe's brow with soothing fingers.

I laughed at them. I couldn't help it. Then I noticed that Joe's shirt-studs, his jeweled cufflinks and his diamond scarfpin were missing. I asked Furey what had become of them but, before he could answer one of the women admonished him to pay no attention to me. Strange! Furey's jewelry had disappeared. I knew he had no money on him. Perhaps some New Orleans officer is sporting Furey's diamonds now as his price for removing the man to a hospital. Perhaps not. It would be hard to learn the truth.

Then there was a flutter and all the women looked quickly toward the door. I breathed a sigh of relief. Pete stood there, handcuffs in one hand and a six-shooter in the other.

"I was waiting for you, son," I said. "Come on in and put the handcuffs on Mr. Furey and we'll be traveling."

Pete came to the bed, the women parting to make way for him. Their white faces indicated that they were terror-stricken. The handcuffs clicked. Furey was pulled to his feet and followed in a procession.

BROWNFIELD, Nov. 21.—Cotton production of Terry county will probably run about 1,000 bales above estimates made thirty days ago. At that time it was placed at 8,000 bales. Open weather for the past few weeks has caused some bolls to mature that would have failed to do so had heavy frosts been received at the usual date. Up to the 15th over 5,000 bales had been ginned with some parts of the county reporting seventy-five per cent picked out and others about fifty per cent.

Scout Training Program Planned
 Preliminary Step for Such Session Made at Meeting of Leadership Group on Sunday Here.

Preliminary plans for a training program for the South Plains Council of the Boy Scouts of America were developed at a meeting of the leadership and training committee yesterday. Dr. Paul W. Horn is chairman of this committee, and is assisted by J. I. Kikpatrick, J. T. Shaver, Dr. A. T. Stewart and J. J. Clements.

Rev. L. G. H. Williams, scout commissioner, and W. P. Knox, scout executive, are ex-officio members of this committee and were present for the initial meeting. A series of short training courses of six weeks duration will be held in the Lubbock district beginning Tuesday night, January 19, and continuing each Tuesday night.

A sub-committee consisting of J. T. Shaver, Dr. A. T. Stewart and Mr. J. I. Kikpatrick is working on the program for this training school. This program is to be approved by the educational department of the national council of the Boy Scouts of America, in order that men completing the course may receive a national training certificate. The course will be open to scoutmasters, troop leaders, Tech students and others interested in scouting. Number of men from surrounding towns are planning to attend this course. Details in regard to this course are being worked out by the committee.

The committee will probably sponsor a two-day training course at Lamesa between now and first of the year.

SEEK AVERAGE GIRL
 Denton Adopts Plan To Find Average College Student DENTON, Nov. 21 (AP)—The "just average" spirit has struck the College of Industrial Arts.
 A campaign to find the "just average" girl on the school's campus has been started by students in the journalism department. The search was inspired by the fact that recently at Fort Madison, Iowa, the average man in the United States was chosen.
 The selection will be made by student voting, the result of which is to be announced soon.
