CEDs won't be impacted by rollback

Current system won't exist in 1993-94, Morales notes

From local, wire copy

County Education Districts have to comply with notice and hearing requirements under "truth-in-taxation" provisions of state law, but they won't be impacted by a rollback, State Attorney General Dan Morales has said.

Any successful rollback election this school year would require a CED to limit its tax increase during 1993-94. And since the Texas Supreme Court has ruled CED tax system unconstitutional after this year, they won't exist.

Morales said even though the school finance law essentially gives CEDs no discretion in setting their tax rates, notice and hearing requirements "will still help educate the taxpayers."

CED 11, which includes Snyder, Ira and Hermleigh school districts, is proposing a rate of 93.43 cents per $100 valuation. That rate is 3.07 percent above the rollback rate. The board has scheduled an Aug. 20 public hearing in regards to the tax rate, as required by the "truth in taxation" law.

The "truth-in-taxation" provisions require a taxing unit to calculate and publish its effective and rollback tax rates each year before adopting its actual tax rate.

The effective rate is the one the entity would need to adopt to raise the same revenue as the previous year, given current property values. School districts may increase their tax rates by 8 cents before triggering the possibility of a rollback election.

Before adopting a tax rate that exceeds either the effective tax rate plus three percent, or the rollback rate, taxing units must publish notices and have a public hearing. If a taxing unit exceeds the rollback rate, the taxpayers may petition for an election to determine whether the rate should be limited.

The Attorney General's opinion takes some of the pressure off CEDs, which were caught in the middle between the state and taxpayers.

In CED 11's case, officials have said they had no choice but to exceed the rollback rate of 90.64 cents.

Airport requests on Monday agenda for commissioners

Scurry County commissioners will consider three requests from the airport board and a petition to close a street in the Alamo Heights Subdivision at a 10 a.m. meeting Monday.

Commissioners are also expected to give County Judge Bob Doolittle authority to approve a prisoner custody agreement for fiscal year 1993 between the county and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Pardons and Paroles Division.

The court will be presented with a letter from Scurry County Airport Board chairman Wayland Huddleston requesting permission from the court to use space in the old airport terminal building for a flying school which will be instructed by Jarle Boe.

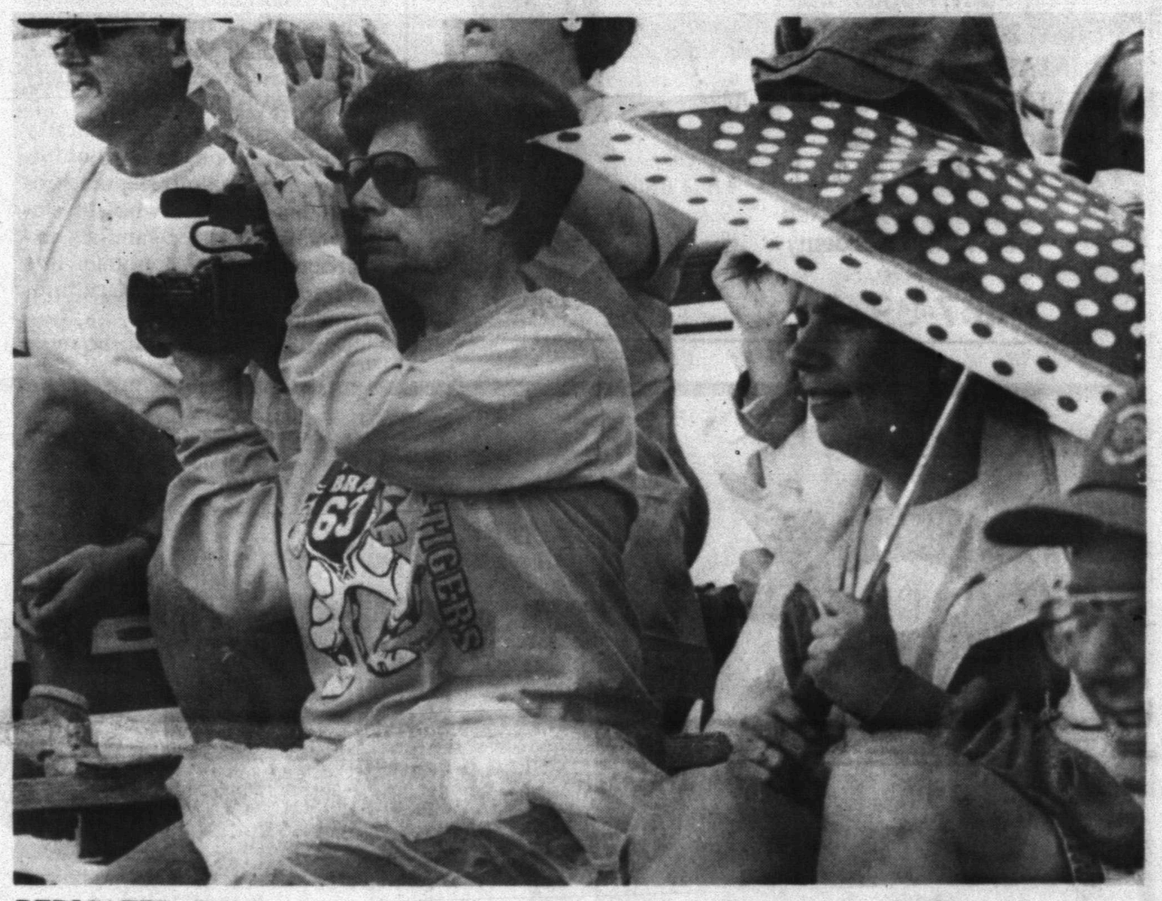

Other requests to be considered in the letter include a request from the Palette Club, which meets at the airport, to set a butane tank by the terminal building to be used for heat. The board will also make a recommendation to the court to set a $20 fee if airport employees are called out while not on duty.

Commissioners will again consider a request from J.E. Compton to close a road near Hillside Memorial Gardens. The request was originally made on July 20 and was put on file by the court to see if there were any objections to the closing.

The court will consider some 10 line-item budget transfers for county departments, including a $9,500 transfer from non-departmental repairs to the county judge for 911 expense and to the commissioners court for expenses.

Transfers of $7,500 from repairs and $3,600 from bookkeeping expense will be requested to cover county audit expenses, hospital audit expenses, unemploy-

Protected convoy heads to Goradze

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — In the first test of a U.N. resolution threatening force to back relief shipments in Bosnia, a convoy protected by U.N. troops Saturday headed for the Serb-besieged city of Goradze.

NATO on Friday had refused to commit large numbers of troops to protect U.N. relief convoys. But France, Spain and Turkey pledged limited forces and the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga headed for the Bosnian coast Saturday.

Earlier Saturday, a new round of talks in Brussels aimed at ending Bosnia's 5-month-old civil war broke down. Overnight fighting was reported in some areas of Bosnia, but only sporadic gunfire was heard in Sarajevo Saturday morning.

Eight trucks carrying 46 tons of food, protected by three armored personnel carriers manned by U.N. troops from Ukraine, left Sarajevo for Goradze early Saturday, said U.N. spokesman Adnan Abd-elrazed.

The last time a convoy attempted to go to Goradze, 30 miles east of Sarajevo, was 10 days earlier. It had to turn back when it ran into a Serbian minefield.

Another convoy left the Croatian capital, Zagreb, early Saturday en route to Banja Luka, another besieged city 100 miles to the southeast in northern Bosnia, U.N. officials said.

Bosnia's Muslims and Croats voted for independence Feb. 29. Since then, ethnic Serbs who want to remain in Yugoslavia have captured two-thirds of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Education workshop slated

Dr. Lee Hannel, who has conducted education workshops throughout the Southwest, will direct Snyder school personnel during in-service Monday.

Local public schools will be closed, and will reopen Tuesday for regular classes.

Campus staffs from the high school, junior high, and Stanfield, East and West elmentaries will attend the educational program, scheduled from 8:15 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre at Western Texas College. Personnel at Northeast and Central received the training at the end of last school year, and will be engaged in on-campus staff development Monday.

Other Snyder ISD staff members from who are not attending the training will also be involved with in-service on their respective campuses.

Tuesday, Dr. Hannel will be at the high school with a follow-up in additional training. He will be at East on Wednesday, at West on Thursday, at Stanfield on Friday and at the junior high on the following Monday.

During those days, Dr. Hannel take participants through a demonstration with students.

He will also return during the year to to observe effects of the training and to recommend or provide additional assistance.

"Dr. Hannel trains teachers to use structured, in-depth questioning techniques, which lead students through logical, higher-order thought processes," said SISD Assistant Superintendent Dr. Tom Scannicchio.

"Rather than passively receiving information from teachers, memorizing it, and giving it back on tests, students become active participants in the learning process and become generators of information," Dr. Scannicchio said. "This is a powerful teaching tool that best teaches children higher-order thinking and problem-solving skills."

Dr. Hannel resides in Phoenix, Ariz. and presents workshops for students in grades K through 12. His workshops have been held throughout Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "If you must exercise, why not exercise kindness?"

We think those TV talk shows where everybody ends up shouting at each other are simply unhealthy for a country already wound up too tight. It's senseless when somebody gets shot on the freeway for being in the wrong place at the right time.

Somebody dropped off an article concerning "random kindness." Such practice could solve many social ills.

A woman in a red car drove up to a toll booth and announced she was paying for herself and the next six cars behind her. One after another, the next six drivers arrived with exact change in hand only to be told that some lady has just paid their toll.

Somebody found out that the woman in the red car had read something on a friend's refrigerator door: "Practice random kindness and senseless acts of beauty."

Another lady saw the same message scrawled on a warehouse. She copied it down and shared it with her husband, a junior high teacher. One of his students was the daughter of a newspaper columnist who published it in the paper.

Two days later, he heard from a woman in a nearby county. She wrote it on a restaurant placemat. Someone seated nearby inquired about the meaning. "Anything you think there should be more of, do it randomly. Kindness can build on itself as much as violence can. Senseless acts of beauty spread."

They say it is impossible to be cheerful to others without cheering yourself up a little. Likewise, you can't commit a random act of kindness without feeling as if your own troubles have been lightened. And you can't be a recipient without feeling a shock, a pleasant jolt.

The woman had some good final advice: "If you are inspired by someone's act of kindness, do the same for someone else."

Folks in small towns have known this for years.

Sibling abuse has long-lasting effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children who are chronically roughed up or picked on by their siblings may show psychological problems in young adulthood, says research released Friday.

Two studies linked such childhood experiences to greater anxiety, lower self-esteem and more depressed mood in college students.

While some verbal and physical conflict between childhood siblings is normal, the problems can arise when the violence becomes severe, as in being threatened with a gun or knife, or when the child is constantly on the receiving end of violence or abuse and feels powerless to stop it, said Sandra Graham-Bermann.

"Kids insult each other all the time, but if there's one person in the family who's the scapegoat or the victim all the time ... that person may develop problems in young adulthood," she said.

"Children shove and push each other, they might even hit each other as a regular part of growing up. But when it's one-sided, if it goes on for years, when there's nothing the victim can do to stop it, then that child is at risk."

About a quarter of the childhood sibling relationships recalled by the primarily white, upper-middle-class sample of college students in the research were bad enough that parents should have stepped in, she said. Parents generally knew of the problem but many did not help, she said.

Graham-Bermann, an assistant professor of clinical psychology at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, spoke in an interview before presenting the work Friday at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.

One study focused on the psychological health of 202 students at Michigan who were distributed about equally among four groups: those who recalled being victimized by a high level of conflict with a sibling, those who initiated such conflict, those who both started fights and were attacked, and those who experienced only normal levels of conflict.

"High conflict" generally meant fighting on the level of hitting, spanking or slapping or worse that exceeded what the student believed other families experienced, and that continued as a long-term pattern, Graham-Bermann said.

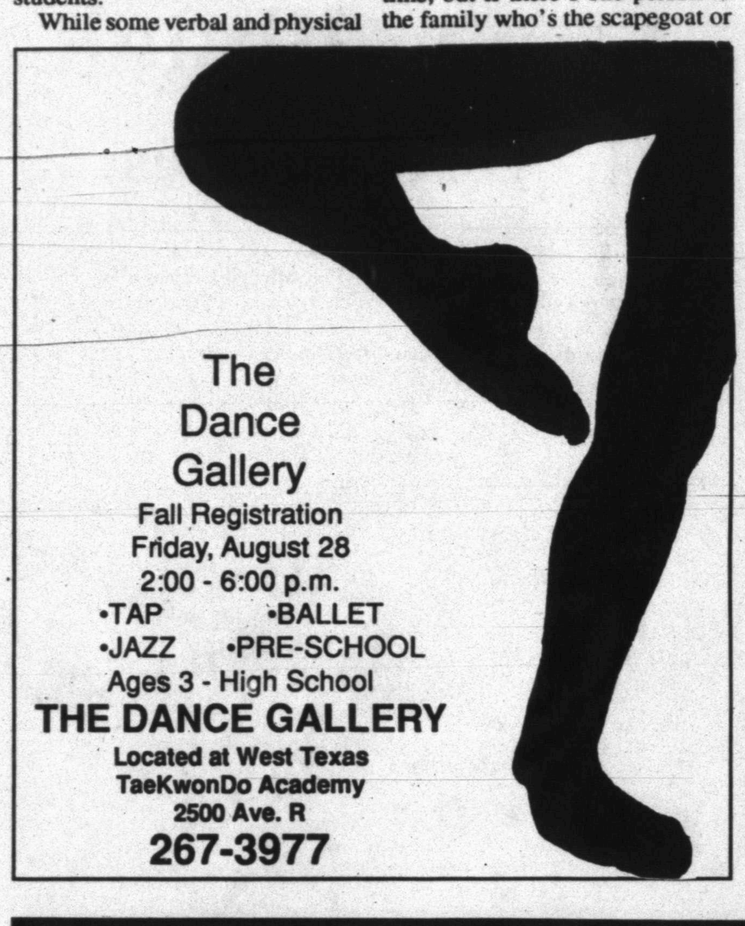

Conflict was found to be more common at ages 6 to 12 than at ages 13 to 18.

Psychological tests showed that for female childhood victims, the higher the level of violence, in terms of hazard and duration, the greater the anxiety, lowered self-esteem and persistent depressed mood as college students.

Male childhood victims showed only a link to lowered self-esteem.

However, the second study found that males who felt they had been highly abused by a sibling showed all three outcomes. Women showed only greater anxiety.

While the first study covered long-term physical conflict, this second study was limited to people whose experience went beyond that, into the realm of abuse. Examples included repeated pummeling with injuries, sexual abuse, or emotional abuse such as constantly being humiliated, ridiculed or shamed.

Turn of Barber's Chair Gives Client Safety, Barber Silence

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please add this to the list of reasons a barber turns the chair around so the customer can't keep looking at himself in the mirror: If my customer keeps moving his head while I'm working, I could accidentally nick him.

Also, our equipment is plugged into the counter behind the chairs, and it's hard for the electric clippers to reach with the chair turned around facing the mirror, without getting the cords tangled up in the customer's lap or even hitting him in the face.

Abby, I do not want my customer directing me while I'm cutting his hair. When a dentist is working on you, he doesn't hand you a mirror so you can see what he's doing, does he?

OLD-SCHOOL BARBER

DEAR BARBER: No. But a person in a dentist's chair doesn't have to worry about the dentist taking off too much enamel.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I were invited to attend a baseball game last night. He has four season tickets and asked us to join him and his friend.

During the game, prizes were given away by one's seat number and location. As I had never been to this event before, I did not pay too much attention to the location of the seats, but upon hearing the called series of numbers again, and with the help of those sitting around me, I knew I had won the prize. My friend went to claim it and, after receiving the item, the people who had invited us to the game watched as I opened it. Because these were his seats and we were the invitees, I asked if he wanted what I had won, and he immediately took it. I was shocked but said nothing.

Was this my prize to keep? Should I as his guest have offered to give it to him, or should I have remained quiet and kept what I had won?

LOST MY PRIZE

DEAR LOST: Your number was called — therefore, you won the prize. Since you graciously offered to give the prize to your host and he accepted — the prize was his.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine recently experienced the heartbreak of losing her cats. Her cats drank anti-freeze which, as you may or may not know, has a sweet taste which is appealing to animals.

One died within several hours and the other died several days later of kidney failure. Please remind your readers to dispose of household chemicals in a safe and proper manner. It is everyone's duty to protect animals and small children, not to mention the environment, from toxic substances. Thank you.

LISA WILT, RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR LISA: Since I'm sure the departments that handle the disposal of toxic waste have different names in the various communities across the country, one's best bet would be to call City Hall and inquire about responsible disposal practices.

There are many substances that should not be poured into the sewers — or placed in the garbage for general collection. To name a few: used motor oil, house paint and thinner, turpentine, corrosive cleaners and pesticides.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column faithfully for years, but I never thought I would be writing to you — but here I am.

I will get right to the point: I am 20, and separated from my husband because he was doing drugs and cheating on me.

Well, I met a very nice man who is 33 years old. He recently left his wife because he caught her in their bed with another man, so we had something in common right away.

I was called back home to another state because my mother was critically ill. I got there in time to see her ... but she died three days later.

When I returned from that trip, two weeks later, my boyfriend gave me the news that he and his wife are back together again! I couldn't believe it.

I really love him, and I know he loves me. What went wrong? He said he went back because he and his "ex" have three young children, and he has to consider them.

I know he still loves me, and I am going crazy. Please help me.

HEARTBROKEN IN ILLINOIS

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Having three young children to consider is a legitimate reason for a man (or woman) to try to make a marriage work. I think he is to be admired.

Do your best to go on with your life without him. See a therapist, and join a support group. People in the same boat can be wonderfully helpful for someone who's hurting as you are. Get going — and don't look back. Good luck!

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have been following your column for 30 years and have learned a lot from your answers. Here is my problem:

My neighbors have a swimming pool which they use year-round, as we live in Los Angeles. They have two children, and the girl is around 8 years old. She and her friends are very, very noisy in the pool — which they use every weekend.

They scream and shriek, and it is so shrill that we are unable to sit in our garden when they are outdoors! The boy, who is around 11 years old, also has his friends over, but they make the regular "happy noise" that children do, and we can easily tolerate that.

What can we say to the parents so we can enjoy our garden and also continue to get along well with our neighbors?

If you print the answer in the paper, we will give it to them. Thanking you in advance.

SCREAM, SCREAM, SCREAM, LOS ANGELES

DEAR "S.S.S.": The next time the children are raising cain in the swimming pool, tape record the sounds they make. (If you don't own a tape recorder, borrow or rent one.) Then, call the neighbors and make an appointment for a friendly chat, and bring along the tape recorder to make the point that a screaming child can not only be nerve-wracking over the length of an afternoon, but screams could also be the sound of a child (or children) in distress.

Their daughter and her friends should be taught to enjoy themselves while still having consideration for the neighbors.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: List this one, please, in the "Dear God, thank you!" category.

Our 2-year-old son, Raoul, regularly wakes up at about 5:30 a.m., toddles into our room and crawls into bed next to his mom.

Two nights ago, at about 3:30 a.m. — two hours earlier than usual — he repeated this procedure.

And about half an hour later, my wife and I were jolted awake by a very loud crash. Running into the children's room, we saw all the contents of one of those bolted-into-the-wall shelves, including several sharp-cornered boxes, splayed all over Raoul's bed. There had to be 50 to 75 pounds of stuff on that shelf. At best, my son would have been seriously injured.

Please, Abby, tell your readers to make sure that anything above their child's bed is secured. Or, better yet, just remove it.

We still get the shivers thinking of what might have been.

GOP is not for everyone

HOUSTON (AP) — As the Republicans complete plans for a ceremonious convention designed to convince voters to re-elect President Bush, some minority activists are getting ready to deliver their own message.

But it's more of a verbal one-two punch, rather than a resounding endorsement of the presidential policies.

"It is clear that neither the Bush Administration, the Republican Party, nor any of the politicians represent our needs," says John Anderson, a black community activist.

Anderson and activists from several local organizations gathered recently at the rundown, partially vacant Allen Parkway Village housing project to announce their protest plans for Aug. 16, the day before the GOP's four-day national convention begins at the Astrodome.

In an attempt to illustrate what they say are vast economic disparities that have only worsened under Republican rule, protesters will march on sidewalks about two miles from the impoverished Fourth Ward to the exclusive River Oaks neighborhood — home to some of Houston's richest residents.

Their demands? Better health care, adequate housing, more jobs, increased AIDS research and an immediate return of all U.S. troops from the Middle East.

Richards, Jackson tout health plans

AUSTIN (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson and Gov. Ann Richards toured a hospital Friday touting the need to make health care more accessible, especially to children and pregnant women.

Jackson said the nation's current health care system was immoral and inefficient. He urged voters to compare proposals made by Democratic presidential contender Bill Clinton and President Bush.

"We must seize this moment during this season to make certain that the national debate is on who has the best plan to heal and rebuild our country," Jackson said.

Jackson, a Democrat, said Clinton's proposals were a "bold step in the right direction," but added that the issue should be debated above partisan politics.

Jackson, who has been criticized by some Democrats for not doing more to help Clinton, said he was going to concentrate during the campaign on registering voters and getting them to the polls.

Richards, also a Democrat, said making health care more available to children and pregnant women would be one of her top priorities during the regular legislative session that starts in January.

Approximately 40 million Americans have no health insurance, Jackson said. Of those, 4 million are in Texas, and 75 percent of them are among the "working poor," Richards said.

Jackson and Richards, in a news conference at Brackenridge Hospital, said the federal government has not responded to the problem.

Referring to battles with the Bush administration over getting matching Medicaid funds, Richards said, "'We have to fight for every single dime that we can get to help children like the ones we have seen today."

Homes in collider's path up for bids

DALLAS (AP) — A 90-year-old Ellis County woman is trying to save her childhood home from the path of the nation's $8.2 billion superconducting super collider project.

Frances Dunaway-McGregor says she fondly remembers putting in "banister time" in the 136-year-old home her grandfather built.

"It's got a wonderful banister," Mrs. Dunaway-McGregor said. "I think everybody in the county slid down that banister."

Although there are 53 historic structures in the super collider's path, only 12 — including the 1856 Dunaway home — have a shot at preservation so far.

The fate of the remaining 41 has not been decided, collider officials said.

Super collider officials are offering the 12 historic buildings for sale to anyone interested in moving them out of the path of the atom smasher.

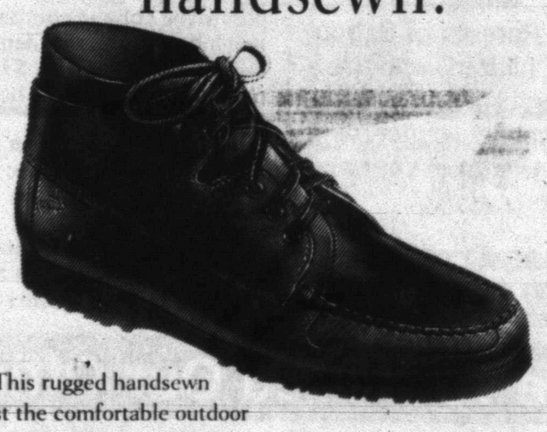

The Texas National Research Laboratory Commission has set an Aug. 19 deadline for bids on the homes.

The commission, which oversees land acquisition and site development for the collider project, bought the property about a year ago. The collider is designed to smash subatomic particles together. The experiment is supposed to render answers regarding the origin of the universe.

Three years ago, commission officials conducted a study of all historic structures near the proposed super collider campuses and its 54-mile ring.

About 3,700 sites, dating back more than half a century were identified, said Steve Smith.

New security measures to begin at courthouse

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Tougher security measures, including the use of metal detectors, go into effect next week at the Tarrant County Courthouse, the site of last month's shooting rampage.

The tightened security comes after the July 1 shooting in which a gunman stormed a courtroom and opened fire, killing two lawyers and injuring three others, including two judges.

County workers began setting up walk-through metal detectors Thursday at entrances to court and adjacent county buildings.

Beginning Monday, 29 new security deputies will be on hand along with the metal detectors stationed at entrances.

Several doors, which were usually left unlocked, will be kept locked as an added security measure.

Gary Kirby, county facilities director, said he hopes the opening of a new, more secure era will go smoothly.

"It could be a very interesting Monday morning around here, particularly since there will be 1,000 jurors trying to get into the Justice Center and they could get a little irate when they hit the locked doors and the metal detectors," he said.

Kirby said 12 metal detectors will be in place and operating by 8 a.m. Monday.

Kirby said all other entrances have been converted to emergency exits only and will not open from the outside. The converted doors in the old courthouse will be sealed shut with tape until panic bars can be installed in the next few weeks.

Panic bars allow locked doors to be opened from the inside in an emergency.

Six X-ray machines will be added to the metal detectors in some buildings next month, Kirby said.

The X-ray machines will be used to search purses, briefcases and other containers for contraband items and weapons.

The ground-level handicapped entrances to the old courthouse have now been converted to emergency exits, Kirby said. Disabled residents will be able to use another entrance.

George Lott, a non-practicing attorney, is defending himself in both the criminal case and a lawsuit filed by Judge David Farris.

Placements tests slated at college

The Western Texas College counseling office has scheduled placement tests for fulltime students who will be attending WTC for the first time this fall.

The test is used to determine the student's skills in English, writing and math for correct placement in classes dealing with those subjects.

Test scores from either the SAT or ACT exam may be used also and individuals with these test scores need not take the WTC placement test. They should bring copies of their ACT or SAT scores during fall registration, however.

For persons who have not taken either the ACT or SAT exam, the college's placement tests will be given twice this coming Thursday and on Aug. 24.

On Thursday, the test will be given at 1:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. and at 8:30 a.m. on Aug. 24.

Those taking the test should report to the college counseling office located in the Student Center both days. There is a $10 fee to take the test and a 1½ hour limit to complete it.

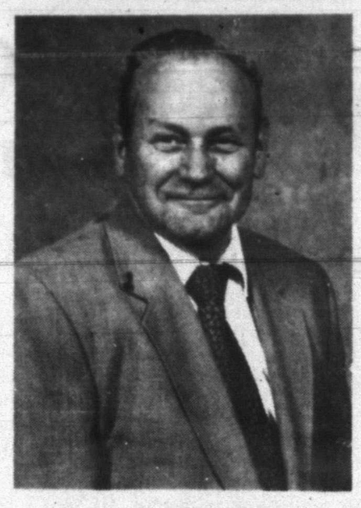

For more information, contact Deborah Baremore in the counseling office by calling 573-8511, ext. 313.

Two days of registration for the fall term at WTC begins Monday. Classes begin on Wednesday.

Medical fees redux: why overcharge?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a doctor and generally enjoy reading your column. However, your article about medical greed incensed me. Quite frankly, your concepts of what constitutes an appropriate office charge are so completely outdated as to totally undermine the credibility of your column. You thought $45 for an office visit was high and you know doctors who charge $30 for this service. Have any of these men practiced medicine since 1960?

We live in a post-inflationary society where all prices are quite high. For example, I recently paid $160 to have the radio in my van fixed. Plumbers who come to my house charge a $40 service fee plus parts and labor. Also, I had to pay about $125 to get my VCR repaired.

When I see a second-rate baseball player earning $25 million in a five-year contract, I am less upset about what the ophthalmologists, heart surgeons and orthopedists make.

I really do not feel that a $45 (or more) office visit is at all out of line. I feel your column gave the misconception that all doctors are millionaires and that we all charge people too much.

DEAR DOCTOR: You raise some important issues in your letter, which I have abstracted.

First, I do think that $45 is high for a routine office call and I do know doctors, practicing medicine in the '90s, who charge less. If you figure about 12 minutes for the average office visit, the doctor who charges $45 is clearing $225 per hour. Not bad. Not as good as the surgeons, mind you, but not bad nevertheless.

Doctor, I'm well aware of the expenses of running an office: overhead, malpractice insurance, the monthly lease payments on the Mercedes, and so forth. But $45 is a lot of money for most people, merely to have the doctor look at a throat or check a blood pressure. I object to practitioners who are so involved with maintaining their lifestyles that they fail to consider the impact of their charges on people less fortunate than they.

If you equate yourself with a baseball player, doctor, you are not solving the problem — you are part of it. People play professional sports or enter a business profession to make money. Doctors have customarily chosen medicine for less materialistic reasons.

Furthermore, your argument about repair bills is totally specious. Your VCR and car radio are devices for entertainment, hardly on a par with medical services. You can do without renting a videocassette but, when you're sick, medical attention may be obligatory.

My lawyer charges about $150 an hour, whether he's in court or sitting in his office machinating. Although I don't make nearly this kind of hourly wage, I don't begrudge him his fees. If I'd wanted to be a lawyer, I'd have gone to law school. Similarly, I don't compare myself with people who service machines, no matter how important their jobs may be. Medicine is, well, somehow different. If you don't feel that, doctor, you're missing an important aspect of professional satisfaction.

Therefore, I don't believe that my views are outdated, nor am I suggesting that most doctors are millionaires — even though many of them wish they were. We've got to be very careful that we don't overcharge patients. The attitude expressed in your letter is, in my opinion, antithetical to good patient care.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please provide information on gammopathy.

DEAR READER: Gammopathy means an abnormal amount of gamma globulin in the blood. In practice, the situation is far more complex, however, because there are at least 10 different types of gamma globulin (or immunoglobulin, the preferred term). Moreover, a person may have an abundance of one type (monoclonal gammopathy) or of more than one (polyclonal gammopathy).

Many kinds of disease will affect immunoglobulin and the nature of the gammopathy often diagnoses the disease. For example, multiple myeloma, a blood cell cancer, usually causes a sharp increase in one type of immunoglobulin. Other disorders, such as Hodgkin's disease, a lymph gland cancer, will cause a polyclonal rise. Therefore, analysis of the gammopathy will provide important information about the underlying disease.

The immunoglobulin pattern is customarily examined using a special blood test.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Blood — Donations and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: About eight months ago I had an orchiectomy because of cancer. The surgeon and my physician (who is a cancer specialist) said nothing about any side effects, yet I continue to suffer from hot flashes with heavy perspiration. My doctor's only comment was that if they continue, I can be injected with the same medication given to women who suffer from hot flashes. Is this appropriate therapy?

DEAR READER: Some men will undergo male menopause after surgical removal of the testicles (orchiectomy).

Unfortunately, this is usually a necessary trade-off for the benefits of the operation and will diminish with time.

Prostate cancer is ordinarily stimulated by the male hormone testosterone. Therefore, in treating progressive cancer, urologists will often recommend castration as a means of eliminating the major source of testosterone in males. After the operation, prostate cancer may be arrested. Impotence and menopausal symptoms are consequences, however.

What the doctor proposes is appropriate; you cannot be given testosterone because that could reactivate the cancer. Nonetheless, I suggest you sit tight. Your hormone balance is already out of whack without adding female hormones to it. If your hot flashes and sweats are bearable, tough them out; eventually they will disappear.

Financial Focus

Facing a decline in income on certificates of deposit (CDs) and other conventional bank investments, many investors are seeking higher income in quality government or corporate bonds and mutual funds that invest in these securities. Historically, high-quality, fixed income investments such as these have offered a steady, reliable source of income.

Unlike traditional savings, however, your principal investment, although returned in full at maturity, can fluctuate during the life of the investment. At any given time, your investment could be worth more or less than the amount you originally paid. To most investors this is acceptable if the income continues uninterrupted. After all, most investments--homes, rental property, common stocks, etc--are subject to market fluctuations.

The factor that has the most influence on the market value of fixed-income investments is current interest rates. For example, if you invest $10,000 in a bond that pays 8 percent, or $800 income each year, and interest rates change so that new bonds pay $900, your bond becomes less valuable. Investors are willing to pay less for a bond that provides $800 interest than they are for a bond that pays $900. The good news is that if rates drop to 7 percent, or $700 per year, on new bonds, your investment becomes more valuable. This is a typical market reaction to changes in interest rates.

The same scenario applies to mutual funds whose portfolios consist of many different bonds. The fluctuations are less obvious, however, because funds own many bonds of different maturities and interest payments, each reacting differently to interest-rate changes.

The income and market value can fluctuate on a mutual-fund portfolio or high-quality bonds. Assuming that $100,000 was invested into the portfolio on Jan. 1, 1975, and all the income was taken in cash. Note, that as interest income increases, the market value of the portfolio decreases. For example, on Dec. 31, 1981, when the income was $11,213, an all-time high, the value of the portfolio dropped to $78,854, an all-time low. On Dec. 31, 1991, when the income was $8,758, very close to the original 1975 income, the market value of the portfolio was $101,897, slightly more than the original investment.

Finally, see how the annual income from this bond portfolio closely follows the fluctuations of short-term CD rates. Typically, a fund can maintain a higher payout than the CDs because the bond portfolio consists of a wide range of maturities, giving it more predictability than highly volatile short-term interest rates.

Long-term investors who understand how interest rates affect the market value of high-quality bonds generally enjoy the monthly income enough to overlook the market fluctuation of their principal.

Reagan assailant liable for damages

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., the man who tried to assassinate President Reagan in 1981, is liable for damages to three men wounded in the shooting, a federal judge ruled Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge John Garrett Penn said the fact that Hinckley was found innocent by reason of insanity in Reagan's shooting does not absolve him of liability for damages to former presidential press secretary James Brady and two security men, Thomas K. Delahanty and Timothy J. McCarthy.

"The question of the defendant's sanity, at the time of the (shootings), remains a genuine issue of fact to be tried," Penn ruled.

Hinckley, who has been confined at St. Elizabeth's mental hospital since the March 30, 1981, assassination attempt, asked the court to dismiss lawsuits by the three because he was found insane.

But Penn said the government had the burden of proving beyond a doubt that Hinckley was sane in the criminal case. In a civil trial, Hinckley "bears the burden of proving that he was insane," the judge said.

In any case, he said, even "an insane person is liable for compensatory damages. ..."

Penn said the amount and whether Hinckley also should pay punitive damages must be determined at a trial. If Hinckley was found in the civil case to have been insane at the time of the shooting, he couldn't be held liable for punitive damages.

"Regardless of whether the jury finds the defendant sane or insane, he will be liable for compensatory damages," the judge said. "As the compensatory damages, then, the only issue left for trial is the amount that plaintiffs may be awarded."

Brady, Delahanty and McCarthy sued Hinckley in 1982, seeking compensatory and punitive damages. They contend Hinckley knew what he was doing when he fired the shots at Reagan that hit them.

McCarthy, a Secret Service agent assigned to protect the president, was shot in the chest; Delahanty, a District of Columbia policeman, was shot in the neck; and Brady, the worst hurt, was shot in the head. Reagan also was wounded in the assassination attempt outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

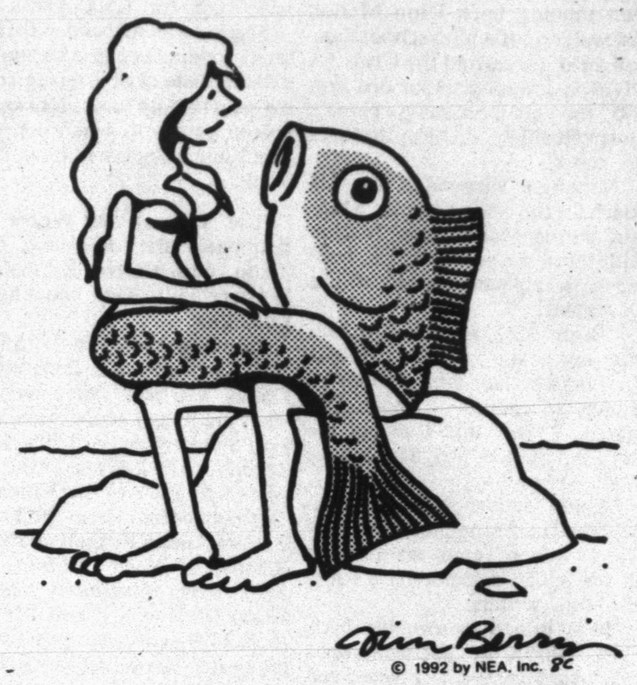

A trial on the lawsuits had been scheduled for September but has been continued. Attorneys for Hinckley and those for Brady, Delahanty and McCarthy had held off talks on a possible settlement while waiting for Penn's ruling.

Brady's attorney, Frederic W. Schwartz Jr., praised the ruling.

"It ensures that Mr. Hinckley's liability will be substantial whether it goes to trial or not," Schwartz said. "Mr. Hinckley has some very valuable intellectual property rights."

The plaintiffs contend that Hinckley's most valuable asset is his life story and that his victims, rather than him, should reap any royalties or profits from a book, movie or TV series portraying it.

Your Birthday

Aug. 15, 1992

Knowledge you've acquired from experience will successfully serve as your guide in the year ahead. Your chances for achievement look good — knowing what you now know.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Failing to appreciate the value an associate places on an object or condition could be instrumental in closing a bum deal today. Don't measure everything by your standards. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't deal in deception today, even when trying to spare someone's feelings. Even if your views are contrary to another's, tell the truth. It's the safest way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Make sure the objectives you strive for today are really what you want. Your efforts will be rewarded, but you might end up with a white elephant you can neither sell nor keep.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If there is a clique you've been unsuccessfully trying to penetrate, stop making the effort. Stand back and view things from a distance, and you'll see it's their loss, not yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Some days, we tend to be much luckier than we are on others. This is one of those times when Lady Luck could be a bit fickle, so don't count on her in situations where you should be fending for yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could have a tendency to hear only what you want to hear today. Later, when things don't work out, you'll wonder why you weren't provided with all the facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's not prudent to think you can safely spend funds you really don't have. Don't make matters worse by using money earmarked for essentials to gratify your whims.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best not to enter into a written agreement today — until someone whose opinion you trust looks it over for you. It's smarter to be safe than sorry.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Making promises today that you think you might not be able to keep will hurt you worse than the other guy. To be on the safe side, don't make any commitments in the first place.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might not be too good at reading people today, so before you decide to side with the individual who tells the best story, you'd better check it out thoroughly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In career matters today, if you can't back up your claims, don't try to bluff your way through. There's a chance you will be called out on it, and it could hurt your credibility.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your judgment could be questionable today because of inclinations to base your conclusions on optimism rather than facts. One is ineffective without the other.

Leos are endowed with many outstanding qualities and, in the year ahead, those you already possess may be accentuated. The revitalization of your better self will contribute to your success.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There are indications you might profit today from an arrangement where another has already done the initial work. Be alert for opportunities of this nature.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your judgment might be a trifle better than your mate's today, but your partner is likely to be more action-oriented. Each should try to follow the other's lead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The amount of zeal you express in your work today will set the tone for co-workers to follow. If you want to accelerate production, pick up your pace.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to have more fun and feel more at ease today at small gatherings than you will participating in a large group activity. Go where you're most comfortable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If your basic motivation in striving for an ambitious objective today is to provide more for those you love, your chances for achieving your goal are good.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Govern your behavior today by what your initial inclinations direct. Upon review, your second or third thoughts might not be as effective.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Profitable material currents are stirring today. There's a possibility you could achieve gains from something to which you'll be newly exposed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Personal interests can be advanced today, provided you assure those you're involved with that the measures you take tend to benefit them as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you occupy your time with activities you deem to be helpful and productive, your day could be very gratifying. Focus on doing the worthwhile.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're now entering a new, promising social cycle. It's to your advantage to start establishing new relationships today. The more contacts, the better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The key to overcoming competition today is to be more positive than your competitors. Don't permit yourself to think thoughts other than success.

Prep Super Team is selected

DALLAS (AP) — When Killeen running back Dion Marion last walked off a high school football field, he carried the Class 5A Division I trophy under one arm and the championship game's most valuable player trophy under the other.

Although suspended by his coach for the season opener, a bigger, stronger and faster Marion will return the second week, hoping to pick up where he left off last December.

"Right now, I think I'm running my best," said the 6-foot-1 Marion, who has gained about 10 pounds of muscle to reach 195 pounds. "Now that I've got the extra strength, I feel like I have more power."

Marion leads a powerful backfield for The Associated Press preseason Super Team, an all-class all-star squad selected by a panel of sports writers.

He is joined by running back Chris Abron of Richardson, a 2,000-yard rusher last year, and Beaumont West Brook's double-threat quarterback James Brown, who threw for almost 1,500 yards last year and ran for more than 700.

The Super Team's offensive line includes Bryon Llyod (6-foot-4, 270 pounds) of Spring, Trey Hide (6-6, 295) of Spring Westfield and Beaumont West Brook's Frank Middleton (6-4, 275). Brad Crowley (6-6, 230) of Corpus Christi Calallen is the center.

Houston Madison's Brian Guillory (6-3, 260) was the lone unanimous offensive selection.

Tight end Fred McClenon of Aldine Nimitz and wide receivers Rodney Mims of Houston Clear Lake and Tyler Lee's Fred Coleman round out the offense.

Coleman caught 56 passes last season for 1,201 yards and 11 touchdowns. Mims scored seven times on 37 catches for 560 yards.

Marion gained more than 1,500 yards last year on 195 carries and 30 receptions. This year, his goal is to rush for 1,500 yards.

Marion was suspended from the season opener because he attended a dance instead of a spring scrimmage, will only have eight regular season games to reach his goals. The Kangaroos are idle the fourth week.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area dominates the defensive Super Team, with Carter, Kimball and Western Hills each boasting two selections.

Brandon Ashley (6-4, 255) and William Carr (6-2, 266) star on Dallas Carter's defensive line. They are joined on the AP team by Fort Worth Western Hills' Henry Thomas (6-3, 240) and Matt Harper (6-6, 210) of McKinney.

Linebackers Greg Bell (6-3, 225) of Austin Reagan and Dallas Kimball's Allen Wilbon (6-2, 220) were unanimous choices. Waco Midway's David Maxwell (6-4, 240), who averaged 18 tackles a game last year, rounds out the corps.

Wilbon, a starter since his sophomore year, had 75 solo tackles as a junior and recovered seven fumbles.

The defensive secondary also had two unanimous choices in Tomell Hurd of Kimball and Lake Highlands' Corey McLane. Roderick Manuel of Western Hills joins them.

Hurd had 32 tackles and seven interceptions last year, none more important than a last-minute one which led to an upset of Dallas Carter, ending a five-year losing streak. McLane, who also had seven interceptions last year, ran a 10.4 in the 100 at the Texas Relays.

Mark Schultis of Sherman and A&M Consolidated's Kyle Bryant shared the top kicker-punter spot.

Schultis connected on 13 of 17 field goals last year including a 46-yarder. Bryant booted 55 extra points, six field goals and averaged almost 40 yards per punt.

Sandberg powers Cubs to 4-2 win

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg homered in the first inning and doubled home the go-ahead run in the fifth as the Chicago Cubs beat the Houston Astros 4-2 Friday and stopped a four-game losing streak.

Mike Harkey (3-0) allowed two runs — one earned — and six hits in seven innings, his longest stint since returning from shoulder surgery on June 20. Paul Assenmacher got four outs for his seventh save.

Darryl Kile (2-7) gave up four runs and six hits in six innings as Houston dropped to 7-11 on its 26-game road trip, which was caused by the Republican National Convention.

Houston took the lead in the first when Craig Biggio reached on third baseman Steve Buechele's throwing error and scored on Steve Finley's double. But Sandberg tied the score in the bottom of the inning with his 15th home run.

Chicago went ahead in the second when Steve Buechele tripled and Jose Vizcaino singled, but the Astros tied the score in the fourth on a triple by Ken Caminiti and a single by Luis Gonzalez.

Doug Dascenzo singled opening the fifth, and Sandberg doubled and took third on Eric Anthony's errant throw to the infield. Sandberg scored on a wild pitch by Kile.

Vizcaino took left fielder Derrick May's relay to shortstop in the fifth and threw out Craig Biggo at home plate.

Tigers outlast Rangers, 9-6

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Lou Whitaker homered and Gary Pettis hit a pair of triples and each drove in three runs to help the Detroit Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 9-6 Friday night.

Tiger starter David Haas improved to 2-0 in his second major-league start, allowing eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. He walked one and struck out four before getting relief help from Kurt Knudsen.

Mike Henneman retired the last five batters for his 20th save. He gave up Juan Gonzalez's 30th homer in the ninth, his second of the night, before finishing the game.

The Rangers lost their fifth straight home game and ninth of their last 10 at home.

The Tigers jumped over Roger Pavlik, just called up from Triple-A Oklahoma City. Pavlik (0-1) only got one out, giving up six runs on five hits before Brian Bohanon, the first of four Ranger relievers, entered the contest.

Houston ends training camp

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Houston Oilers wrapped up their training camp Friday with a one-hour practice at Trinity University.

Although many of the players and coaches said this training session was productive, all seemed ready to head home.

"When I came here I wanted to get my timing down, get my arm loose and learn the new plays and it doesn't take a whole month to do that," said quarterback Warren Moon.

"I'm ready to go home and concentrate on the season."

The team was to fly from Houston to Dallas Saturday for their second game against the Cowboys this summer.

Chargers dump Pats, 20-10

by The Associated Press

Bob Gagliano left little doubt that newly-acquired Stan Humphries can expect plenty of competition for the San Diego Chargers' starting quarterback job.

Gagliano went 7 of 11 for 123 yards Friday night in the Chargers' 20-10 exhibition victory over the New England Patriots at Foxboro, Mass. He completed four passes for 83 yards during an 87-yard touchdown drive in the second quarter.

"I think Bob Gagliano did one heck of a job," said first-year coach Bobby Ross, who was forced to switch to Gagliano after losing starter John Friesz to a season-ending knee injury in last week's loss at Phoenix.

Humphries, who did not play, was acquired from Washington on Thursday.

Patriots backup Scott Zolak cut the Chargers' lead to 17-10 with a 9-yard touchdown pass to Ben Coates with 6:41 remaining. Zolak, who completed 11 of 17 attempts for 85 yards after taking over for starter Hugh Millen in the second half.

San Diego's Eric Bieniemy rushed for 47 yards on 11 carries and had two receptions for 12 yards. Marion Butts rushed for 47 yards on 12 carries.

O'Hara helped clinch the game with a 10-play, 70-yard drive that ended with Carlos Huerta's 22-yard field goal with 1:57 left. Huerta also kicked a 33-yard field goal in the second quarter.

On Sunday, the New York Jets face Green Bay in Madison, Wis., and San Francisco plays Washington in Wembley, England. On Monday, Detroit is at Buffalo and Pittsburgh at New Orleans.

Owners' vote is not likely in St. Louis

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Commissioner Fay Vincent said Friday it was unlikely that major league owners would vote next month on a plan to sell the San Francisco Giants to a group of Florida investors.

The owners are scheduled to meet in St. Louis on Sept. 9-10, and the group seeking to move the Giants to St. Petersburg, Fla., has said it hoped for a vote then.

"It's unlikely. It would be too fast," Vincent said in Montreal before the Expos played the St. Louis Cardinals.

Baseball's executive council met by telephone conference call for an hour Friday to discuss Giants owner Bob Lurie's Aug. 7 announcement that he had agreed to sell the team for $111 million to a group that would move it to Florida.

Sauers takes 2-shot advantage

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gene Sauers has a two-shot lead and a game plan at the halfway point of the 74th PGA national championship.

"I'm just trying to take it as another golf tournament, not a major," the laid-back, low-key Sauers said after a 3-under-par 69 put him through 36 holes at 136.

There's just one problem with that plan, said Nick Faldo, the current British Open champion. It won't work.

"I can't imagine it will be that easy," said Faldo. "It's not another tournament. It's not another golf course. It won't be as easy as that."

With two rounds to go in the last of the year's Big Four events, Faldo is tied for second, two shots back at 138, with Jim Gallagher and lefty Russ Cochran.

Gallagher closed up with a 5-under-par 66 on the long, tough Bellerive Country Club course, and Cochran had a bogey-free 69.

Faldo could manage only a 70, but it was he who got Sauers' attention.

"He'll be a tough guy to beat," Sauers said. "Just look at his record."

It's one of the most impressive in golf.

Faldo, 35 and at the peak of his powers, is ranked No. 1 in the world. In less than six full seasons he has won three British Opens and two Masters and now is in position to become the first British-born player to win this title in 62 years.

But he isn't the only Englishman in the title chase. Steven Richardson, 26, a burly, 6-foot-1, 210-pounder from London, put himself in the picture with a 50-foot putt for an eagle-3 on the 17th hole, the highlight of a 66 that put him at 139.

Price, twice a British Open runner-up, shot 70. Morgan had a 69. Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA title-holder, and Mediate each shot 68s.

While those players were working their way up the leader board, some of golf's more promiment names were working themselves out of the tournament.

Among them were Jack Nicklaus (78 for 150), Curtis Strange (78-152) and Ian Woosnam of Wales (80-153). All missed the cut for the final two rounds.

U.S. Open champion Tom Kite, whose snap hook off the 10th tee was only inches over the heads of the gallery, flirted with the cut until he birdied two of the last four holes for another 73 and a 146 total.

Lady Tigers compete in 4-team scrimmage

The Snyder Lady Tigers, led by seven returning lettermen, will begin their quest for a third consecutive trip to the Class 4A volleyball playoffs with a four-way scrimmage in Andrews on Monday.

Also included in the practice matches are host Andrews, Denver City and Seminole.

"Workouts have been great," bubbled head coach Patty Grimmett.

"We have a lot of experience coming back and they're really a great bunch of kids to work with."

The experience Grimmett talks of includes seven seniors, led by 1991 All-District 2-4A selections Joellen King and Melanie Duncan, five juniors and one sophomore.

King, Duncan and fellow upperclassman Melody Sargent were elected team captains during first-week workouts.

"Our hitting is looking good," Grimmett continued. "our serving and everything is coming right along.

"We'll be working on lineups in the scrimmage on Monday to get ready for the Monahans Tournament."

The regular season begins Friday and Saturday at the Monahans tourney, followed by a trip to Big Spring and an appearance at the Denver City Tournament before getting a chance to play in front of the home crowd Sept. 1 against Plains.

The Lady Tigers, district runners-up a year ago with a 6-2 mark, were 15-7 overall.

Tennis coach hired at SHS

Snyder High School recently named Teri Hoerster as the new Tiger tennis coach.

Hoerster is a May graduate of Tarleton State University in Stephenville with a major in all levels of physical education.

Originally from Boerne, Hoerster was a four-year tennis player at TSU where she led the Texanns to two TIAA conference team titles. She was also a conference singles champion in her freshman year at Tarleton.

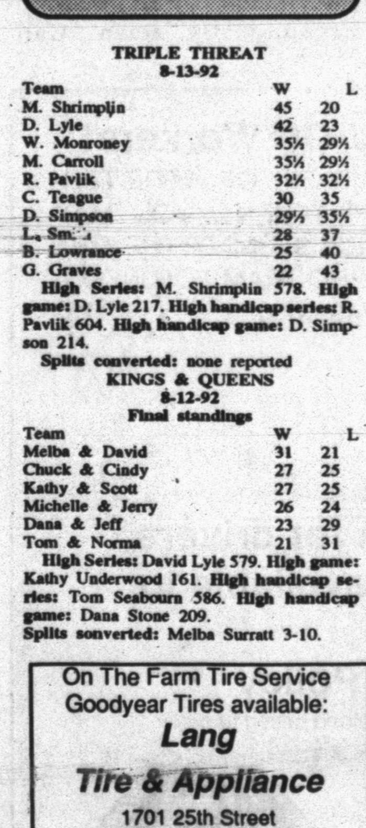

The new coach inherits a solid group of players, including seniors Jason Warren and Michael Hess, who both earned all-district honors in singles and doubles in leading the Tigers to two consecutive District 2-4A team titles.

"This is a good group here," Hoerster said. "I'm not yet as familiar with all of them as I want to be, but I know at least our top six players are very good.

"We should win district," she predicted.

The Tigers' fall team tennis season begins Saturday, Aug. 22 with a match in Big Spring against the Steers.

Hoerster takes over for coach Jerry Tucker, who came to Snyder last year from Ozona. Tucker resigned as tennis coach to take over the girls' basketball program at SHS.

Foyt auctions memorabilia

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It's probably the only time A.J. Foyt has shunned Victory Lane at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Foyt turned his back Friday while speedway president Tony George laid out $410,000 for the car Foyt drove to a record fourth Indy 500 victory in 1977.

"It was tough to see the car sell, and while it was being raised in Victory Lane, I couldn't look," Foyt said.

The 1977 Coyote was designed and built by Foyt, the first four-time Indy winner and only modern driver to win with a car of his own manufacture.

George's purchase paid homage to his grandfather, Tony Hulman, who bought the speedway in 1945 and died five months after Foyt won in 1977.

"It's always been an important car to us. It was important to my grandfather," George said. "I think he would have wanted it this way, so I was here for him to make sure we at least had an opportunity to make its permanent home in the museum."

Foyt made more from the sale of the orange car bearing his trademark No. 14 than he did for winning the 1977 race. He received $259,791.

Friday's sale of 28 vehicles netted Foyt more than $1.6 million. The three-day auction ends today, with scores of engine packages and parts and Foyt's old racing uniforms on the block.

"I really didn't do it for the money," he said. "I did it because I needed to get the stuff out of my shop and get it to somebody who would take care of it properly."

Foyt, 57, made a record 35th-consecutive start at Indianapolis in May, finishing 10th. His future as a driver has been in doubt since he sustained serious injuries to both legs and feet in a 1990 accident.

"If I would run any races at all anymore, it would be here, but that's so far away," he said.

"I've gained about 15 or 20 pounds. I figure I'm just going to take it easy for the next three to four months and then start back to work."

George won a fierce bidding war for the 1977 car against Pat Ryan, a retired car dealer from Montgomery, Ala.

"I really had my heart set on the winner," Ryan said. "I was outbid by the museum. If I have to lose to somebody, that's who I'd like to lose to."

Yugoslav navy readies to fend off Western threat

ABOARD THE J.R.M. KOSMAJ (AP) — A faint white sliver is all that can be seen of the NATO frigate through thermal imaging binoculars from the bridge of the Yugoslav navy patrol boat.

"She is at the edge of our territorial waters, but we can relax as long as she doesn't cross the line," said Lt. Vuceta Stanisic, commander of the Kosmaj, as he gazed into the night. Nearby, a Yugoslav missile boat prowled the Adriatic off the strategic Bay of Kotor.

"They are there for support if we should get into any serious trouble," said Stanisis, 25, noting his vessel's single 40mm anti-aircraft gun would be inadequate in a long-range ship-to-ship engagement.

Tensions were running high in the Adriatic after the U.N. Security Council voted Thursday to sanction the use of force to ensure humanitarian supplies reach war-torn Bosnia.

A flotilla of about a dozen NATO and Western European Union frigates and destroyers are stationed in the southern Adriatic. They are watching for cargo ships violating trade sanctions imposed by the United Nations in May against Serbia and Montenegro — the remainder of federal Yugoslavia blamed for inciting civil war in Bosnia.

Late Friday, the U.S. Navy ordered the aircraft carrier Saratoga and its 80 warplanes to move into the Adriatic closer to Bosnia, Defense Department sources said. The move places the Saratoga and its accompanying ship, the cruiser USS Biddle in position to support aid shipments.

Many in Serbia fear the U.N. resolution could pave the way to air and naval strikes on military targets in their country if Western troops escorting humanitarian convoys in Bosnia clash with Serb rebels there.

"I am, of course, concerned about an eventual attack. But this navy has no other coast to withdraw to, and there can be no dilemma that we will defend it to the very end," said navy Cmdr. Adm. Nikola Ercegovic.

"If the intention of the West is to provide humanitarian aid to people in Bosnia, there is no reason to attack Yugoslavia, much less our fleet," he said. "But our country has been demonized to such an extent abroad, that it is difficult to predict what their real intention is."

The feared confrontation comes at a particularly trying time for the navy, which has been transformed from a formidable blue-water force into little more than a coastal defense patrol as Yugoslavia disintegrated.

Unlike the army and air force, the navy managed to withdraw the bulk of its units unscathed from the war with Croatia — where its largest bases and repair yards were located.

But it lost about 40 percent of its officers and men — including all but three of the 16 admirals — when Slovenia and Croatia seceded last year. The navy now has less than 8,000 sailors and marines, a force insufficient to man all of its ships.

Prince ordered to give deposition in incident

HOUSTON (AP) — The brother of Saudi Arabia's King Fahd must submit a deposition in a civil case brought by two former employees who say the prince kept them as slaves in a Houston hotel, a state judge has ruled.

State District Judge Geraldine Tennant on Friday ordered Prince Saad Bin Abdul Aziz Al Saad to appear for the deposition on Sept. 18, despite arguments by his lawyer that the prince was "fragile" and had difficulty speaking because of cancer of the jaw and mouth.

But plaintiff's attorney, Jerry S. Payne, said a witness was prepared to testify that the prince was healthy enough to have been visited by a prostitute several nights this week.

Payne also alleged the prince and his lawyer were attempting to stall the deposition until after the Nov. 3 election. He claimed the State Department planned to grant the prince retroactive diplomatic immunity, as it had in the past to members of the royal Saudi family.

Ms. Tennant said she would consider ordering an accelerated trial date following the deposition.

In December, Sriyani Marian Fernando of Sri Lanka and Josephine Alicog of the Philippines fled the posh Ritz-Carlton Hotel, where they lived with the prince and his entourage.

One out of six Somalis now a refugee

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — As drought tightens its noose on Somalia, hundreds of thousands are fleeing to refugee camps in neighboring countries to escape starvation — and many are dying in a strange land.

The flow has increased as the famine has worsened. Tens of thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands of Somalis have died from starvation and civil war. Millions more are threatened. Continuing clan warfare in Somalia's southwest has spurred the exodus, particularly into Kenya.

About 1 million people — nearly one-sixth of Somalia's estimated population — have fled the Horn of Africa country since rebels ousted dictator Mohamed Siad Barre in January 1991.

More than 300,000 crossed into Kenya. About 500,000 Somalis went to Ethiopia; 15,000 to Djibouti; 65,000 more sailed in rickety boats across the Red Sea to Yemen.

About 100,000 of the better-off Somalis made it to Europe, according to the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees office in Nairobi.

Last week, about 2,000 a day arrived in Kenya, said Panos Moumtzis, spokesman for the U.N. Refugee program.

The influx heavily burdened cash-strapped and drought-stricken Kenya, which sheltered fewer than 15,000 refugees in 1990.

Today Kenya is bracing for a possible refugee population of 1 million by early next year, Moumtzis said.

Moumtzis said refugees were being fed only half to two-thirds' normal rations because the international community only recently woke up to Somalia's plight and has been slow to respond with funds.

Most of the refugees walk hundreds of miles, some for as many as 90 days, with little food and water, reaching the camps malnourished and weak. Untold numbers die along the way. Scores die daily in the camps.

Others pay 350,000 Somali shillings, or about $50, to board overcrowded, unsafe, wooden vessels called dhows, built on a design that has been plying the Indian Ocean for centuries. They sail south for Kenya's coast or east to the shores of Yemen. Many boats have sunk, drowning hundreds.

Insurance group proposes student insurance discount

HOUSTON (AP) — A statewide insurance trade group for the first time has proposed auto coverage discounts for students who maintain good grades, as well as to parents whose children are attending school away from home without a car.

No student discounts are currently offered in Texas, said Susan Slivinske, spokeswoman for the auto insurers group.

The proposed plan, presented Friday, allows insurers to provide either or both of the discounts, including offering up to 15 percent off liability, medical payments, personal injury protection and collision coverages.

Drivers must be at least 16 years old and full-time students to qualify. During the semester immediately preceding the anniversary date of the insurance policy, they must be in the upper 20 percent of their class; have a B average; or be on the dean's list or honor roll.

"By financially rewarding academic achievement, the good-student discount provides an additional incentive for young drivers to strive scholastically," said group chairman Jack Crisci.

"The benefits of this proposal extend beyond significant premium savings because the strength of our economy is tied to the education of our work force."

The proposed discounts wouldn't be available for drivers covered by the Texas Automobile Insurance Plan, the state's assigned-risk program.

They also wouldn't apply to motorcycles, all-terrain vehicles or golf carts.

Hospital sued for sending bill for donation of organs

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas-area couple is suing a hospital for damages after receiving a bill and graphic letter detailing the removal of their 8-year-old daughter's organs.

Although the bill eventually was paid by the proper source and the family received an apology, Ira and Pam Henson said they sued because of the way Parkland Memorial Hospital handled the case.

"I just hope no one else has to go through it — not again," Ira Henson said.

Parkland spokeswoman Esther Bauer said the procedure that caused the billing has been corrected, but that Henson has not been cooperative.

"We have gone to great lengths to appease him. It's unfortunate. My heart goes out to him," Ms. Bauer said.

The suit, filed in state district court, did not specify damages. Earlier correspondence from the Hensons' attorney asked for $250,000.

Erica Lynn Henson died in June 1990 after falling off a ladder on the back of her baby sitter's van. She suffered major brain damage, and that night the Hensons decided to remove their daughter's life support system.

The family chose to donate her organs.

Several weeks later, Henson asked the hospital if he owed any money and was sent two invoices. One of the charges mentioned a "sternal saw."

Henson said he called the hospital several times and was told he must pay the bills or face a collection agency.

Ms. Bauer said had Henson spoken with "administration, just once, it would have been resolved in one day."

"I asked to speak to the director every time I called," Henson said, "but never got to."

Henson said he later received a large file detailing the organ-removal surgery.

Police make six arrests

Snyder police made six arrests and began a burglary investigation Friday and early Saturday.

At 4:33 a.m. Saturday, Darrell Holmes contacted police in reference to the back door having been kicked in at Nolan Electric. Owner Bobby Nolan was contacted, who determined that an unspecified amount of property had been taken from the business. An offense report for burglary of a building has been filed in the case.

Officers transported two men from Municipal Court to the county jail to lay out fines Friday morning. Police picked up a 33-year-old man on fines for Class A assault and a 22-year-old man on fines for public intoxication.

At 3:39 p.m., police arrested two individuals after being called to a disturbance in the 1400 block of 24th Street. Snyder EMS was called but did not transport anyone. Officers arrested a 31-year-old male and a 20-year-old female, both for disorderly conduct/language. An offense report for family violence was also filed.

Police received a call from Pizza Inn at 9:15 p.m. Friday, in reference to customers who refused to pay. Police took a 38-year-old man and a 26-year-old man into custody for public intoxication at 9:25 p.m.

At 1:29 p.m. Friday, police were called to a disturbance in the 1000 block of 28th Street. Officers were able to determine that a woman had been assaulted. She refused to file charges, however. Police submitted an offense report for family violence.

In one other report, police were notified at 8:12 p.m. that some juveniles were breaking windows at the North Elementary building. No charges have been filed and parents will pay for the damages.

Officers also worked two minor traffic accidents Friday.

At 12:03 p.m., policed worked a mishap in the 3900 block of Austin. Involved were a 1984 Buick driven by Benny Wesberry of 121 34th St. and a 1990 Dodge Ram driven by Jacob Knelsen of Seminole.

At 5:09 p.m., police worked a second accident in the 2400 block of Avenue E. Involved were a 1991 Hyundia driven by Melanie Carpenter of 409 32nd St. and a 1987 Chevrolet driven by John Brammer of 1011 24th St.

Man gets life term for beating daughter

AUSTIN (AP) — A 29-year-old man has been sentenced to life in prison for beating his 2-month-old daughter so severely that she is now brain-damaged and blind.

Robert G. Lopez of Austin was convicted after a weeklong trial during which his 4-year-old son testified against him. The jury deliberated less than an hour Friday before handing down the maximum sentence.

The man's infant, Robyn, suffered severe head injuries Oct. 23 when she was beaten at the family home. Testimony showed Lopez was the only adult in the house at the time.

The child was hospitalized with skull fractures, but examinations found she had earlier suffered fractures in both legs, a wrist and two ribs, according to testimony.

Robyn, who had her first birthday Aug. 1, still suffers from seizures and is paralyzed on her left side, said assistant district attorney Judy Shipway. It's not known whether she will regain her sight.

Two injured in altercation

A disturbance near the intersection of 28th Street and Avenue F sent two men to Cogdell Memorial Hospital emergency room early Saturday, one with a gunshot wound.

Police said both men declined to press charges and were treated and released at the hospital.

Police received the disturbance call at 1:05 a.m. At 1:07 a.m., a caller told police that a man had been shot in the 600 block of 28th Street, and an ambulance was requested.

Snyder EMS transported the subject to the emergency room, where he was treated for a leg wound. Police said the man had been shot with a small caliber pistol. He refused to file charges, however, and was released.

Minutes later, Snyder EMS brought in a second man who was suffering from a severe head laceration. Police said the man had been struck with a blunt object. He also refused to press charges, and was released from the hospital after being treated.

At short time later, police were notified of a man hiding in some bushes in the 600 block of 28th Street. They arrested a 19-year-old man for disorderly conduct/language. No other charges have been filed.

In a separate incident, hospital employees contacted police at 2:15 a.m. concerning another assault victim. The man, who said he had been assaulted by three individuals at 35th Street and Avenue M, also refused to press charges. He was treated for head injuries and released.

CED

Agency) has determined that CED 11 must raise $20,972,379 for 1992-93," said Ray Peveler, CED 11 administrator. "In order to get that kind of money, with the value that has been certified by me, it will require a 93.43 rate."

The state Supreme Court in January declared the CED tax system unconstitutional but gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993 to fix it.

The system was designed to shift hundreds of millions of dollars from wealthier to poorer school districts within new taxing regions made up of one or several counties. It was meant to meet a Supreme Court mandate to equalize school funding.

The Supreme Court ruled that the plan violates the Texas constitution by imposing a statewide property tax, and by levying a property tax without voter approval.

However, the court deferred the ruling's effect so as to not interfere with the collection of 1991 and 1992 property taxes in the 188 CEDs. The taxes for 1992 are due in January 1993.

State Comptroller John Sharp asked Morales for the opinion concerning CEDs and the Tax Code.

LISA HALL

Hall attends Lions camp

Lisa Hall, 9, the daughter of Troy and Amy Hall of Snyder, recently attended the Texas Lions Camp in Kerrville. Sponsored by the Snyder Lions Club, Lisa had the opportunity to ride horses, study nature and participate in sporting events between classes designed to teach insulin dependent children to manage and understand diabetes.

A team of doctors, nurses, and dieticians from the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston taught campers about exchange diets, blood sugar level testing, the effects of exercise on blood sugar levels, and how to give their own insulin injections. The team helps campers to understand the importance and reasons for medical testing.

A well-trained staff supervises each camp activity with a ratio of one counselor to three campers. Located on 500 acres of Texas hill country, the camp serves diabetic children ages 7-17.

The Texas Lions Camp is a non-profit organization funded by persons interested in providing challenging programs for handicapped and diabetic youth. This service is provided free of charge for eligible children.

For more information, or if you know of someone who could benefit from this program, contact your local Lions Club or write to: Texas Lions Camp, P.O. Box 247, Kerville, Tex., 78029-0247 or 1-512-896-8500.

GOP, Demo platforms are miles apart

HOUSTON (AP) — Abortion is the most glaring difference between the Democratic and Republican platforms, but by no means the only one. The two documents are miles apart on a raft of social and economic issues.

The Democratic platform reflects the centrist, policy-oriented approach of the party nominee, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton. The Republican counterpart is a biting, socially conservative manifesto that one drafter called "a political race horse" for GOP candidates, including President Bush.

Democrats would raise taxes on the rich to help reduce the deficit, while Republicans are moving back toward Bush's 1988 no-new-taxes stance.

In education, Democrats reiterate their support for public-school choice plans while the GOP says parents should be able to choose any public, private or parochial school for their child and get federal tuition help.

Foreign policy presents a major difference that doesn't fit the usual pattern.

Trying to protect the president, GOP platform writers rejected changes that would have repudiated his policy of giving China preferential trade status. But it was clear after emotional debate that many agreed with the Democratic platform assertion that such status should be conditioned on restoration of human rights.

Here's a look at some key platform stands:

ABORTION

Democrats: "Democrats stand behind the right of every woman to choose, consistent with Roe vs. Wade, regardless of ability to pay, and support a national law to protect that right."

Republicans: "We believe the unborn child has a fundamental right to life which cannot be infringed. We therefore reaffirm our support for a human life amendment to the Constitution." Also oppose using public revenues for abortion and support appointment of judges who respect "the sanctity of innocent human life."

DEFICIT REDUCTION

Democrats: Would "eliminate non-productive programs; achieve defense savings; reform entitlement programs to control soaring health care costs; cut federal administrative costs ... and make the rich pay their fair share in taxes."

Republicans: "The only solution is for the voters to end divided government" and elect a GOP-controlled Congress that would enact the Balanced Budget Amendment and a line-item veto, and consider cutting back entitlements other than Social Security.

TAXES

Democrats: "We will relieve the tax burden on middle-class Americans by forcing the rich to pay their fair share. We will provide long-overdue tax relief to families with children."

Republicans: "We will oppose any attempt to increase taxes ... We want to expand the Young Child Tax Credit to $500 per child and make it available to all families with children under the age of 10."

HEALTH

Democrats: "All Americans should have universal access to quality, affordable health care ... That requires tough controls on health costs."

Republicans: Support the president's plan to reduce insurance costs and give tax credits and deductions to lower income Americans to offset insurance costs.

EDUCATION

Democrats: Support public school choice "with strong protections against discrimination," an apprenticeship program for students who don't go to college; and universal college aid paid back with community service or as a percentage of income.

Houston hosts arranging NASA tours, Neiman's cards

HOUSTON (AP) — When delegates to the GOP National Convention want a Neiman Marcus charge card or a jalapeno sucker, they are turning to their local cultural liaisons: the Houston Host Committee.

Host committee volunteers are lending a hand to delegates who want to know what to wear, how to get around — and where to get the best barbecue in town.

"We just kind of serve the role of a concierge," said Margaret Barnhart, official ambassador to Florida's delegation.

Each delegation will be welcomed with an informal party Sunday night, many at private homes — some of Houston's toniest. Others will be held at the River Oaks County Club, The Art Institute of Houston and the Waterford Harbor Yacht Club.

When the delegates check in to their hotels, they also will get a gift bag stuffed with goodies and "survival tools," Lyn Johnson, host committee spokeswoman, said.

Contents include T-shirts and sunglasses, a jalapeno sucker, vitamins — plus antacids, aspirin and lip balm, she said.

The committee has given out lists of tours available and organized outings to NASA's Johnson Space Center, the astronaut training site and home of Mission Control.

Mostly, though, the hosts have been offering advice. And most of the questions involve dining choices and transportation.

Mrs. Barnhart has mailed maps, answered catering questions and recommended restaurants — "everything from good old Texas hamburgers to five-star restaurants."

"Some of the ambassadors have gotten requests for Neiman Marcus cards from some of the groups that don't have access to one of those stores," she said, referring to the upscale Dallas-based department store with two Houston locations.

Other questions focus on Houston's notorious August weather.

"They wanted to know what kinds of things to bring, and we told them to be prepared for the ice-cold air conditioning indoors as well as the heat outdoors," Mrs. Barnhart said.

Mary Card said her Arkansas delegation seems dedicated to round-the-clock work during the convention — although delegates know their role representing Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton's home state will ensure media attention. They haven't really looked for entertainment outside the Astrodome, Mrs. Card said.

"Right now, they are so enthusiastic it sounds like they're going to be there every minute," she said.

Veterans Department to track Gulf illnesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Affairs Department is launching a program to look for unusual patterns of illness among people who served in the Gulf War, following widespread reports of mysterious ailments plaguing returning service members.

Soldiers coming home from the Middle East have been complaining of such maladies as fatigue, depression, hair loss, aching joints, rashes, parasitic infections and sore and bleeding gums.

"We're starting to see more and more anecdotal reports," of Gulf-related illnesses, VA spokesman Terry Jemison said Friday.

Marine Capt. Dave Fournier, for example, has been hospitalized at Camp Lejeune, N.C., with pneumonia and heart problems. He's going bald rapidly, has night sweats and is constantly fatigued. All of this began since the 41-year-old Fournier returned 16 months ago from the Persian Gulf War.

Doctors can't identify the cause of the mysterious and lingering ailments, but Fournier and other veterans blame fumes from the Kuwaiti oil well fires set by Iraq.

When Indiana reservists complained of such symptoms, an Army study of 79 war veterans resulted in a military finding that they may have been caused by stress.

But doctors recently found high levels of hydrocarbons in the blood of a Navy veteran in Texas. And at Fort Bragg, N.C., a private group called the Military Family Support Network says 100 soldiers on whom it has background have suffered an unusually high number of illnesses, birth defects and miscarriages.

Veterans Secretary Edward J. Derwinski said, "We are telling our people that (the veterans) could have problems that could be caused by smoke, contaminated food or drink, burning oil wells, all sorts of environmental conditions that the troops ran into."

Derwinski urged Gulf War veterans to register with the VA so they can be screened "even if they at this point don't have any special problems."

Local medical center officials will be trained to look for any unusual patterns of disease in these veterans and three special referral centers will be set up to offer treatment, Derwinski said.

The effort is being launched to avoid a repeat of the Agent Orange debacle, according to Derwinski.

Veterans complained for years of medical problems they believed stemmed from exposure to the herbicide widely used in Vietnam, but disability payments for those suffering nerve disease weren't approved until last year. The government still denies any connection between Agent Orange and lung cancer.

This time, Jemison said, "We are trying to get ahead of the science. We are trying to get the system set up before problems come in."

Sirica, Watergate judge, dies at age 88

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late John J. Sirica, the federal judge who presided over the Watergate trials that led to the fall of Richard Nixon's presidency, was praised for his fairness even by one of the men he sent to prison.

"I think he was a great judge," said the Rev. Jeb Magruder, who spent seven months in prison for his role in Watergate and later became a minister. "He was the one who broke Watergate, and he was a tremendously bright but sensitive person."

Sirica, 88, died at 4:30 p.m. Friday at Georgetown University Medical Center of cardiac arrest, a hospital spokeswoman said. He had been at the hospital since Tuesday, when he was admitted for tests.

Sirica sentenced Magruder, a top aide in the Nixon White House and later deputy director of the Committee to Re-Elect the President, to four years but released him after seven months, eight days and eleven hours, Magruder said. When he got out of prison, Magruder went to divinity school and now is senior pastor at First Presbyterian Church in Lexington, Ky.

Sirica faced down Nixon in a historic struggle between a determined court and a resisting executive, compelling the president to yield the secret White House tape recordings that ultimately led to his downfall.

The judge said later that "if he (Nixon) had been convicted in my court, I would have sent him to jail."

The quiet, self-effacing Sirica handled the whole spectrum of Watergate in his five-year association with the case: the break-in and cover-up trials; the indictments, guilty pleas and jailing of men who were among the most powerful in the nation; and the epic tapes battles, which included trying to learn how 181/2 minutes of crucial conversation was erased.

Although Sirica had been in robust health, looking much younger than he was, the strain took its toll. On Feb. 5, 1976, while speaking to a law school alumni group, Sirica collapsed in the middle of a sentence after suffering a heart attack that would have been fatal if a trained federal marshal had not given immediate emergency aid.

When he recovered, Sirica went back on the bench with a full case load, finally going into semi-retirement as a senior judge Oct. 31, 1977, when he had been on the bench 20 years. He retired in 1986.

President Carter once described Sirica as "a lasting symbol of unflinching devotion to duty."

All the major figures of Watergate paraded into Sirica's U.S. District Court except for the biggest one of all — the president. Yet, though Richard Nixon resigned because of revelations brought into the open by the judge's decisions, Sirica felt justice was ill-served.

At the time of the Watergate burglary, June 17, 1972, Sirica was chief of the 15-judge federal court for the District of Columbia.

As chief judge, the indictment against the Watergate burglars was returned to Sirica.

Convicted mom said 'disturbed'

DALLAS (AP) — A Fort Worth-area woman beginning a 99-year sentence for starving to death her 13-year-old son is completely self-absorbed, blaming her problems on a perceived abusive childhood, says her court-appointed attorney.

"She doesn't talk about Stephen," said Charles Baldwin, whose client Linda Hill and her husband Jay were convicted this week of injury to a child. Stephen died last fall weighing only 55 pounds.

"She talks about her own problems. She, in her twisted mind, believes she was abused, and she believes that we don't understand her pain. In other words, she isn't responsible for anything she does, because of her pain."

Baldwin said that in the nine months he represented Mrs. Hill she never asked about her other son, Douglas, 12.

The attorney also said Mrs. Hill became extremely angry at two of her sisters because they would not admit — under oath or to her personally — that she was an abused child and that her father did not love her.

Baldwin said the sisters refused to make the admission "because it simply was not true."

He said Mrs. Hill used Stephen as a scapegoat for her perceived problems.

"He was a terrible child, but it wasn't his fault he was hyperactive," Baldwin said.

David Montague, lead prosecutor in the case against the Hills, said Mrs. Hill appears to be "the meaner of the two."

"There is just a streak of sadistic meanness in her," he said.

Pari-mutuel betting on horse races in Texas was illegal from 1937 to 1989.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

Future seamen in the U.S. Navy will include three cousins from Scurry County.

Bobby Clinkinbeard, son of Bobby and Anita Clinkinbeard of Snyder, and Chris Haynes, son of Paul and Lois Haynes of Ira, are scheduled to report to boot camp in Orlando, Fla. by Aug. 24. Boot camp for Brian Clinkinbeard, son of Dave and Lucille Clinkinbead of Snyder, will be in Chicago, Ill. He will report by Oct. 19.

Both Bobby and Chris have enlisted under the Navy's "buddy system" which will allow them to share the same boot camp and schools for the first two years of their six-year enlistment.

Since they have both chosen to enroll in the nuclear program they will attend three schools before receiving their first assignment.

Bobby and Chris signed up in the fall of 1991 and Brian signed up over this past Christmas holiday.

They all said that they were "not exactly sure what we were getting into" but they "wanted to go anyway."

All three cousins said that they have not been discouraged by the Navy's recent Tailhook scandal or reports of sexual harassment.

Once Bobby had decided on the nuclear program he talked Chris into signing up. They were told the nuclear school is one of the top five schools in the U.S.

Originally, Bobby said, he had considered the advanced electronics program, but switched to the nuclear program after talking to someone who was already in it. The "basics" will be taught in the first school. They will be introduced to the study of nuclear power in the second school and the third school will be a prototype program which will allow them to receive "hands on" experience by actually working in a nuclear facility.

When they receive their assignments in two years, they may or may not be stationed at the same location.

Brian, who wants to be a machinist mate, will also attend three different schools, including basic training. During this time he will be trained to work on air conditioning and refrigeration units.

His due date isn't until October because that was the first available opening in the field he has chosen. The boys were told that more openings usually exist in the nuclear program.

Brian chose machinist mate because he has always "liked to work with my hands," he said.

Bobby had originally planned to join the Air Force, but changed his mind a few months ago. He said he enlisted because "it is the easiest way for me to get an education."

Once he had made up his mind, he talked his two cousins into joining. Similar to Bobby, both Brian and Chris, also picked the Navy for its education opportunities.

All three had to go to Dallas in order to sign up. First, they had to pass the basic military test given to all potential recruits. Both physical and psychological examinations followed. Bobby and Chris also had to pass still another test before they could be accepted into the nuclear program.

Neither Brian or Chris had any problems signing up, but Bobby ran into some two months of "red tape" before he could enlist.

He had mistakenly been sent to Amarillo to complete tests and paperwork. His test scores were later counted but Bobby had to make two trips to Dallas before he could enlist. During that first trip to the Dallas recruiter, Bobby was told that a traffic violation disqualified him. But, after taking a defensive driving course which nullified the blemish on his record, he enlisted during the third trip to Dallas.

Brian plans to continue working at the Plaza Truck Stop until the middle of September. After taking a couple of weeks to "do what I want to do," he said, he and his dad plan to go hunting in Colorado.

Bobby and Chris plan to enjoy their remaining weeks of freedom as well.

While in high school, Bobby was both a split end and a kicker for the Snyder Tigers football team. He also served as catcher and outfielder for the baseball team.

Brian was a guard and a forward for the varsity basketball team. In addition, he was also enrolled in the DECA program which allowed him to work at Long John Silver's and later the Plaza Truck Stop.

At Ira, Chris played split end and tight quarterback for the six-man Bulldogs. He was also a short stop and catcher for the baseball team, guard for the basketball team and was a member of the golf team.

NAVY RECRUITS — These three Scurry County cousins have all enlisted in the U.S. Navy. Bobby Clinkinbeard, left, and Chris Haynes, standing, will begin basic training in Orlando, Fla. On Aug. 24. Brian Clinkinbeard, right, won't report to Chicago, Ill. until Oct. 19. Bobby and Chris have enlisted under the "buddy system" and have signed up for the Navy's nuclear school. Brian wants to be a machinist mate and will be trained to work on air conditioning and refrigeration units. (SDN Staff Photo)

Candlelight ceremony unites Espinoza, Byers

DALLAS — Teresa Mae Byers and Tony Espinoza were married in The Church of Our Saviour at 6 p.m. on Aug. 1. The Rev. Calvin S. Girvin of Denison and the Rev. Paul Moore of Dallas, officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride's parents are Franklin and Katherine Byers of Dallas and the groom's parents are Juan Espinoza of Colorado City and Martha Espinoza of Hermleigh.

White bows marked the pews and three arrangements decorated the altar along with two Boston ferns. Peach gladioli, white snapdragons, carnations and peach gerberas also decorated the church's back mantle.

Amanda Prime of Dallas was candlelighter and acolyte.

Organist Hazel Smith of Athens and vocalists George and Finye Villegas presented "Darling," "Jesus, You are the Light of the World," (in Spanish) "Flesh of My Flesh" and "I Have Now Received."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a Morilee gown of white satin with reembroidered Schiffli lace. Her modified Sabrina neckline, covered in pearls and sequins, highlighted her bodice of the gown trimmed with crystal sprays. Her puffed shoulders and long sleeves tapered to fitted cuffs. The cathedral length train was embellished with embroidered cut-outs.

Her fingertip veil, made by T & G Bridal, was puffed with folded netting at the crown. It was attached to a floral headband with sequin appliques, shooting pearls and crystal sprays.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of silk English ivy, peach, teal and white roses, tiger lilies, gardenias and star fillers.

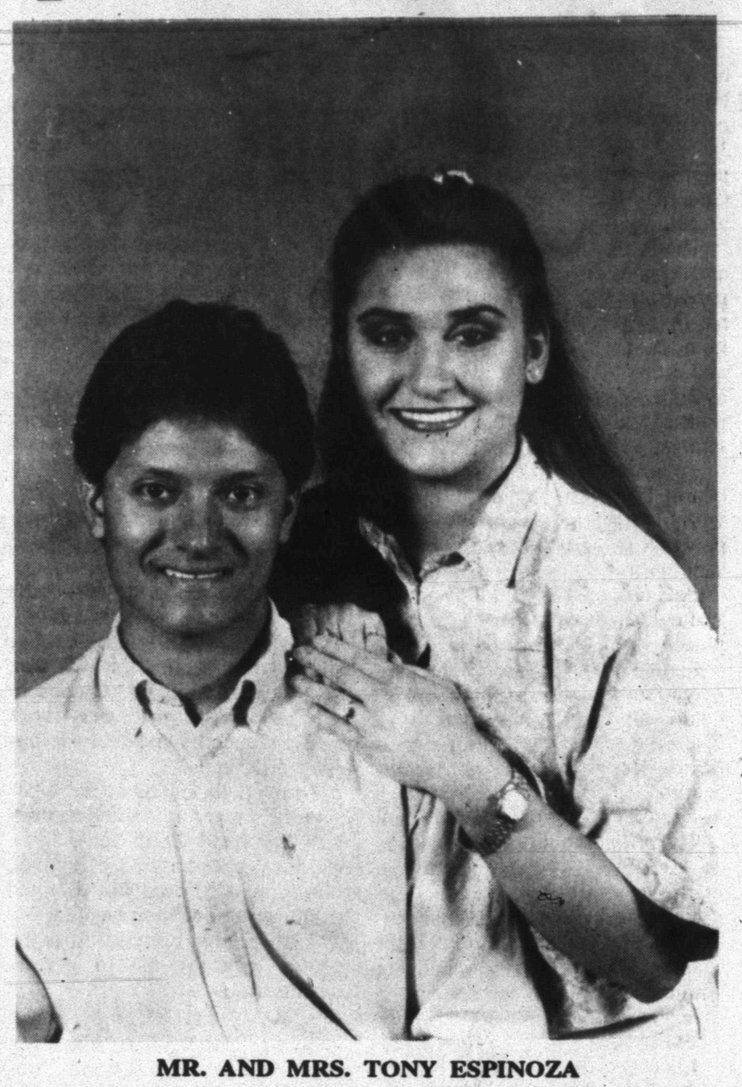

Maid of honor was Christina Martinez of Dallas. Bridesmaids were Dayna Mitchell of Lewisville, Amy Kenyon of Grand Prairie, cousin of the bride, and Brenda Espinoza of Hermleigh, sister of the groom. Attendants' flowers matched the bride's.

The maid of honor wore a teal dress and the bridesmaids wore peach, tea length dresses. The bodice was fashioned with two rows of off-the-shoulder ruffles, and a drop waist.

Flower girl was Julie Mireles of Hermleigh, the groom's cousin. Ring bearer was Joseph Murray of Grand Prairie, the bride's cousin.

Mark Flores of Colorado City served his friend as best man. Groomsmen were Bill and Michael Bretwieser of Hermleigh, cousins of the groom, Gilbert Flores of Snyder, and ushers were Matthew Scotch of Garland, cousin of the bride, and Andy Cox of Irving.

Groomsmen and fathers wore Christian Dior, single breasted tuxedos with satin covered buttons, peak lapel and pleated trousers accessorized with black ties and cummerbunds. The groom and ring bearer wore fulldress Christian Dior Reme tuxedos in black satin. The groom wore a white tie and vest and the ring bearer wore a black tie and cummerbund.

MR. AND MRS. TONY ESPINOZA

Michelle Byers of Dallas, sister of the bride, registered guests.

A dinner and reception followed the ceremony in the church's Parish Hall. The bride's table was covered with a white cloth with four bows on each corner. A peach ribbon connected the bows. An arrangement of peach, teal and white flowers surounding candles centered the table.

The bride's three tiered, white cake was accented with peach decorations. Swan columns divided the tiers and a top layer held two swans creating a heart shape, all lavished with peach ribbon accents. Serving were Lindi Lindsey of Abilene, Becky Smith of Vicksburg, Miss., and Joyce Simpson of Dallas.

The groom's table held a silver candelabrum with teal candles. The chocolate fudge, round cake was on a table covered with a white cloth draped with teal netting. Anita Rios of Hermleigh, aunt of the groom, and Lisa Jordan of Grand Prairie, cousin of the bride, served.

The couple's honeymoon was to Corpus Christi and San Antonio. Their new home is in Dallas where the groom is employed at Ken Pruitt Buick in Garland as a service dispatcher. He is a 1988 graduate of Colorado City High School and a 1989 graduate of Lincoln Technical Institute in Grand Prairie.

The bride attended Dallas Schools and graduated from W.W. Samuell High School in 1991.

BOOK FEATURE

"The Overworked American," by Juliet B. Schor.

Contrary to all expectations, many Americans enjoy less leisure today than at any time since the end of World War II. In the last 20 years, the average employed American has seen his or her working hours increase by the equivalent of one month a year. This dramatic spurt has hit nearly everybody, men and women, professional and low-paid service workers.

The author's explanation for the decline of leisure lies chiefly in the strong historical preference of employers for longer hours. This book shows how the demands of employers, growing unemployment, and ultimately the addictive nature of comsumption form a trap in which long hours are the typical outcome. The solution will require total restructuring of the way we work and play.

Formal church rites unite Camp, Conard

Amy Denise Camp became the bride of Scott Clinton Conard, both of Snyder, in a double ring ceremony at 3 p.m. on June 20. James Merrill of Abilene, former pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, officiated the ceremony at Morningside Baptist Church.

The bride's parents are Ronnie and Pam Black and the groom's parents are Van and Ruth Conard, all of Snyder. The bride is the granddaughter of the late Henry and Ruby Camp.

Balloons of purple, blue, silver, pink and mint green, tied with long strings, were held on both sides of the platform by white and silver hearts. Matching bows, adorned with dried flowers, marked the pews. A large pearlized blue basket with spring flowers in the bride's colors, graced with a large white lace bow and pearls, was placed on the piano.

Pianist was Betty Watts. She played several romantic selections while guests were seated and when the attendants entered. The bride entered to the "Bridal March," and the couple left the altar area to the "Wedding March."

The bride's brother, Gery Camp of Arlington, presented her in marriage as she was attired in a gown of white slipper satin. Alencon lace motifs, adorned with iridescent sequins and pearls, formed the neckline. Her fitted bodice was enhanced with short puff sleeves.

Lace jeweled appliques cascaded down the front and back of the bouffant skirt to form the hem which swept into a court train. Small satin bows accented the shoulder line, defining the back of the train.

Complimenting her wedding attire were rhinestone and pearl necklace and earrings. She wore a hat covered in lace, trimmed with iridescent flowers. Tulle bows accented the upturned back.

She carried a cascading bouquet of spring flowers of her chosen colors. Long ribbon streamers in matching colors were highlighted by long strings of pearls.

In keeping with tradition, something old was a white and blue handkerchief belonging to her great-grandmother, Pearl Head; something new was her dress; something blue was her garter made by Glenda Strickland; something borrowed was a gold rope bracelet from the groom's sister, Karen Conard. She carried pennies minted in the couple's birth years in her shoes.

Matron of honor was Gina Alvardo of Snyder and bridesmaids were sisters of the groom, Karen Conard of Sweetwater and Dian Jones of Snyder, and Candy Holdridge of Snyder.

They wore dresses fashioned of floral cotton satin in predominate shades of lavendar, pink and blue. Their fitted bodice featuring a high sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves were completed with a drop-waistline. Their white lined skirts ended in a symmetrical hemline. The dresses were fashioned by the bride's aunt, Dot Stokes of Snyder.

The attendants carried nosegay bouquets of spring flowers in colors matching the bride's, tied with satin ribbon falling into long streamers. The bouquets were interspersed with pearls and were fashioned by the matron of honor.

George Alvardo of Snyder was best man. Barry Lee of Hobbs, N.M., Wade Lee of Lubbock, and Rudy Garza of Snyder were groomsmen. Garza and Lee were also ushers.

MR. AND MRS. SCOTT CLINTON CONARD
(Photo By Harley Bynum)

Male attendants wore Christian Dior white dinner jackets, black pants, and black ties and cummerbunds. Their boutonnieres were of pink roses adorned with baby's breath.

Glenda Strickland of Snyder registered guests at a table covered with a purple cloth. It held pictures of the bride and groom at age four. Also on the table were a balloon bouquet in a white and silver heart, and a pearlized blue basket containing dried flowers made by the groom's aunt, Janice Shelton of Dimmitt.

The couple was honored following the ceremony in the reception hall of the church. The bride's table, covered with a white lace-over-blue cloth, featured a Rondure cake, a crystal plate serving extra flowers from the cake, and a crystal punch bowl holding lime punch.

The bridal cake's two bottom layers were decorated with latticework and pastel drop flowers. The cake top, by Jamie Lynn, featured two glass swans under a large heart decorated with iridescent flowers, pearls and netting, and bows of the bride's colors. These were enclosed in latticework trellises entwined in vines, lavished with pastel flowers.

The trellises separated another cake layer that held a half-ball, both decorated with latticework and drop flowers. Serving were Glenda Strickland of Snyder and Laura Wyatt of Abilene, cousin of the bride.

The groom's table was covered with a white cloth. Displayed were a Coke ice bucket and a straw holder. The groom's one-layer chocolate cake was decorated with the Coke Wave. Nuts and mints were also served. Attending the groom's table were Pam Camarata of Amarillo and Cindy Cannon of Seal Beach, Calif., sisters of the groom.

Following their honeymoon trip to Las Vegas, Nev., the couple are at home at 4111 Eastridge Drive. Born and reared in Snyder, the bride is a 1986 SHS graduate, and is employed at the Golden Corral. The groom was born in Amarillo, graduated from SHS in 1984, and is employed with Howard Gray Motors.

Computer use may increase eyestrain

Computers are part of classroom life now, but with them comes concern about eyestrain from using the machines.

Some safety tips from the American Optometric Association:

— Lower overall room lighting and use a desk lamp for reference material.

— Don't let lamps reflect on the screen. Draw shades or curtains to reduce window glare.

— Adjust screen brightness to three or four times the brightness of the room.

— Use monochrome — not color — screens for easier eye focusing.

— Equipment and furniture should be adjusted for children so they can avoid awkward head or body movement.

— Place reference material as close to the screen as possible to minimize head and body movement.

— Let children take 10- to 15-minute rest breaks at least once every two hours, or whenever their eyes feel tired. AOA warns that prolonged concentration on the computer screen can contribute to eyestrain.

— Schedule annual eye check-ups for children.

Which paddock is that?

Each country has its own harsh yet humorous expressions. I like the Australian, "He's a few sheep short in the top paddock." Do you think any of the players on today's deal qualify?

North made a pre-emptive raise to four hearts. There was a risk he would be pre-empting his partner rather than the opponents, but no other bid appealed.

West led the spade king and East signaled with the queen, promising the jack or a singleton. West continued with the spade ace and spade three, declarer ruffing East's jack.

South cashed the club ace, ruffed a club in the dummy, played a trump back to hand and ruffed his last club in the dummy. He cashed dummy's diamond ace, ruffed dummy's last spade, drew the final trump and played a diamond to the queen. He would have been all right if West had the diamond king or if East had started with king doubleton. As it was, though, he finished one down.

West suggested that East should have played the spade two at trick one to ask for a diamond switch, which would defeat the contract.

North pointed out that the contract was cold after trick three. Declarer should cash the club ace, ruff a club in the dummy, play a trump back to hand, ruff the last club in the dummy and cash the heart jack. Then South leads dummy's spade nine. When East produces the 10, declarer discards a diamond loser from hand. East is endplayed. He must either lead a diamond into dummy's A-Q tenace or play a club, which allows declarer to discard his second diamond loser from hand and ruff in the dummy.

Tips From Expert Hair Design by Gina Pierce

DON'T SHORT-CHANGE YOUR GOOD LOOKS

If you have a do-nothing hair style, you are short changing yourself. Todays products can add texture to shapeless hair or add brightness and shine to dull, limp hair. If you are willing to change, why not try both brightness and body with a perm along with highlights. The perms of today create texture along with natural looking waves or curls. Highlighting methods are so defined, that you get just the right amount of highlighting effects, whether you choose strategically placed streaks or subtle weaving. The coloring process itself, adds needed texture to fine or limp hair. Call Expert Hair Design for an appointment today, 573-0312. # Baker's policy of pragmatism produced results

By Barry Schweid
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Addison Baker III brought no strong ideology beyond a personal sense of caution to the job of secretary of state. Instead, he invested in it a canny political sense and a cool pragmatism. The result was success in most endeavors.

AP analysis

Arabs and Israelis were steered into peace talks through Baker's tireless Middle East shuttle diplomacy. The negotiations, due to resume here in less than two weeks, hold promise of at least an interim solution to the Palestinian problem and even hope of treaties between Israel and the Arab governments that devoted their energies to trying to extinguish the Jewish state at birth.

Baker is due credit, too, for cobbling together the coalition that defeated Iraq and forced the liberation of Kuwait. And he rolled up his sleeves this year and transformed himself into an arms control negotiator, concluding two major weapons-reduction accords.

As he steps aside, the Mideast peace talks are entering a critical phase, the Balkans are at the point of explosion, and crisis simmers in the Persian Gulf again.

"I know we still have some work to do together," Baker told some 1,000 foreign service officers and others crowded into the Dean Acheson auditorium at the State Department on Thursday. "It's still a dangerous world, as we see daily in Bosnia."

But, he said, after "long and serious thought," he and the president concluded Baker could serve the country best by moving to President Bush's side at the White House.

Later, a senior State Department official said Baker would remain engaged in foreign policy issues "as the need arises" even after his resignation takes effect Aug. 23.

Even as Baker said farewell, his voice cracking with emotion, the U.N. Security Council was preparing to authorize military force as a last resort to ensure deliveries of humanitarian assistance in Bosnia.

Baker's role in the crisis has been to keep the pressure on the Serbian government in Belgrade through diplomacy and economic sanctions, supporting force only as a last resort and only if aid shipments are blocked. But the war goes on.

Left undone, too, is the search for a way to overcome Iraq's cat-and-mouse game with U.N. inspectors — admitting them to some facilities to search for evidence of devastating weapons but barring the door on other occasions.

Baker, who's no expert on the intricacies of nuclear weaponry and is disdainful of bureaucrats' wrestling with them, nonetheless this year brought three new nuclear republics — Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Belarus — into the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty with the former Soviet Union.

And then he cleared the way in relentless bargaining with Russia for Bush to wrap up an accord for even deeper cuts at a Washington summit with Russian President Boris Yeltsin in June.

The list of accomplishments is long. It includes delicate dickering with Moscow over the unification of Germany and defusing the crisis in Central America that was inherited from the Reagan administration.

History gave Baker a hand along the way. In a sense, he was lucky. The Soviet Union cracked and then disintegrated in December. In its final throes, desperate for economic assistance, Moscow called off the Cold War and cooperated eagerly with the United States on arms reductions and withdrawing troops from Afghanistan and Angola.

America's victories were, in a way, about as hard as shooting fish in a barrel.

Jurors trying to understand reason for starvation death

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Jurors who sentenced a suburban Fort Worth couple to 99 years in prison for the starvation death of their 13-year-old son left the courtroom trying to understand the motivation behind such a crime.

Jay Hill, 42, and his wife Linda, 38, of White Settlement were sentenced Thursday, two days after the jury convicted them of injuring a child for the death last November of their 13-year-old son, Stephen, who was deprived of food and kept chained in the family's trailer.

Jury foreman Nancy Stanley was only able to make comments upon leaving the courtroom, while Jack A. Mitchell Jr. had to hold back his tears while discussing the case.

"They fed the cat, but they let the boy die," said Mitchell, a Santa Fe metal-finishing plant owner. "You just can't comprehend all the atrocities here."

Mitchell and Ms. Stanley said the Hills deserved the death penalty.

"You cannot assess the years to punish these people for what they've done," said juror Kevin Kelly, 34, an unemployed office manager from Hitchcock. "There's just no way."

The Hills' attorneys said they wondered how the couple could watch their son starve to death.

"We spent a lot of time talking about that and trying to figure it out," said Fort Worth attorney Larry Moore, appointed to represent Jay Hill.

"They couldn't explain it to us," Moore said. "There may not be an explanation for this kind of thing."

Linda Hill's attorney, Charles Baldwin of Fort Worth, said "it was a horrible crime."

"They weren't sympathetic people," Baldwin said. "The evidence was overwhelming. They got a very fair trial, and that's how our system is supposed to work."

The jury, which deliberated for more than 10 hours Wednesday and Thursday, agreed with prosecutors' contentions that the chain used to confine the boy was a deadly weapon, so the couple must serve at least 15 years of their sentences before they will be eligible for parole.

The Hills could have been sentenced to five years to life in prison, or to probation.

The case was moved to Galveston because of extensive publicity in Fort Worth.

On Nov. 2, paramedics found Stephen Hill in full cardiac arrest after his mother called 911 to say her son was having trouble breathing. He went into a coma and never regained consciousness.

Authorities said the boy weighed 55 pounds at his death, about half the normal weight for his age. They said he looked like a 6-year-old in the final stages of a terminal illness.

During the trial, which began last week, the Hills' other son, 12-year-old Douglas, testified he believed his parents intended to hurt his brother.

Douglas also testified that his parents chained Stephen to a cabinet door, starved him and beat him with a feather-duster handle.

Moore argued that his client did not take part in his wife's disciplinary treatment of the boy, which included starvation. Baldwin said his client was stressed by living in a small travel trailer with a hyperactive son.

Prison rodeo may be revived

BELTON, Texas (AP) — Bell County officials on Thursday met with state prison authorities to discuss reviving the Texas Prison Rodeo.

Officials say the rodeo, which was held in Huntsville for more than 50 years before being discontinued in 1986, would be held at the Bell County Expo Center starting next year if agreements on security and liability arrangements can be completed.

"My feeling is that if we can work out some of the minor details we'll get the prison rodeo," said Mike Dooley, director of the Expo Center.

Prison authorities said they were impressed by the county's proposal, but said any decision to revive the rodeo would be up to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice board.

"There's no decision as to whether we would use it or not, that's up to the board," said James Byrd, one of four state prison officials, including TDCJ board member Mamie Proctor, who toured the center.

"Today we were looking at suitability of the facility itself. It's a fine facility."

Dooley said the county would want to restart the prison rodeo in September 1993 during the Central Texas State Fair.

"We're still clarifying some numbers, going over some liability concerns," Dooley said. "There's no obstacles which can't be overcome at this point."

Dooley said prison officials indicated a decision on Bell County's proposal could come at the board's next meeting in November.

Kaplan was 10th ABC newsman killed

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — An ABC News producer shot in the back by a sniper became the first U.S. journalist killed while covering one of the most dangerous reporting assignments in decades.

David Kaplan, 45, died Thursday within hours of arriving in the Bosnian capital with an ABC television crew accompanying Milan Panic, the U.S. businessmen who last month became prime minister of Yugoslavia.

With Kaplan's death, at least 30 journalists have been killed in the fighting since Yugoslavia began disintegrating in the summer of 1991. Scores of others have been wounded.

Kaplan, on assignment with "PrimeTime Live" co-anchorman Sam Donaldson, was hit while riding in the back seat of a van taking him on the perilous route from the airport to the U.N. peacekeepers' headquarters. Part of the route has been dubbed "sniper alley."

Donaldson said it was unclear which side killed Kaplan. Snipers surround the Bosnian capital and daily pepper the city with bullets. Most of the attacks have been blamed on Serb forces that ring Sarajevo, battling Bosnia's Muslim and Croat troops.

Journalists try to avoid getting hit by driving around Sarajevo as fast as 100 mph.

Panic's vehicle had armor plate; Kaplan's did not. A single bullet struck Kaplan's back and went through his body. He was not wearing a flak jacket.

Donaldson, who was traveling in the motorcade in a different car, said, "My friend, David Kaplan, never had a chance, according to the doctor at the U.N. hospital."

"I wish we hadn't come for this story, but we did. And he paid the awful price," he said.

Donaldson, producer Ben Sherwood, soundman Dave Calvert and cameraman Doug Vogt were not injured. Kaplan was the 10th person in ABC News' history to be killed while on assignment.

Kaplan, who was based in Washington, is survived by his wife Sally, also an ABC employee, and his parents. He was born in Chicago and graduated from the University of Denver.

Before joining ABC News, Kaplan was assistant press secretary to Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., from 1971 to 1972.

The bullet that killed Kaplan was fired from a high-powered rifle and smashed through the closed doors of the van between two large taped-on letters spelling "TV."

Kaplan was rushed to the U.N. hospital, where he died on the operating table. His body was flown Thursday on a C-130 cargo plane to the U.S. Rhein-Main Airbase near Frankfurt, Germany, for shipment to the United States.

In an emotional news conference, Panic railed against "criminals and terrorists" whom he accused of killing Kaplan.

Jockey Dave Gall was the first rider to win eight races on a single card, performing that feat at Cahokia Downs in 1978.

Mrs. Bush won't say what her position is

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbara Bush won't say where she stands on abortion — and thinks the Republican Party shouldn't say anything about it either.

Matters such as abortion and homosexuality are "personal things" that "should be left out, in my opinion, out of platforms and conventions," the first lady says.

Nevertheless, the Republicans in Houston will vote Monday on a platform that calls for a constitutional ban on abortions and decries efforts to extend civil rights protections to homosexuals.

Mrs. Bush has always declined to state her position on abortion. But when a reporter told her that her most recent comments were interpreted in some quarters as pro-abortion rights, she didn't argue.

Her reply was a pause and a single word — "Really?"

The first lady sounded wistful Thursday as she went through round after round of question-and-answer sessions with reporters in advance of the trip next week to Houston and her husband's renomination.

She said she thought America needs four more years of George Bush at the helm. At the same time, she wouldn't be heartbroken if he lost: "We have so many things we want to do in real life."

"The pluses of the job are wonderful, but there are some minuses," she said. "They have not been kind to our children. That would be a big plus of leaving the White House — taking the pressure off the children."

One interview session came to an abrupt end when three Bush grandchildren — Sam Bush LeBlond, 7; Jeb Bush Jr., 8, and Nancy Ellis LeBlond, 5 — trooped in from play and dutifully stood still for kisses from a beaming grandmother.

In her eyebrow-raising comments concerning abortion, she offered the view that the Republican platform should say nothing about it "either pro or con."

"I have friends who are pro-Bush, pro-choice. I have friends who are pro-life, pro-Bush," she said. "I know you can argue yourself blue in the face, and you're not going to change each other's minds, and it's a waste of your time and my time to try to change minds."

Achy Breaky Heart?

Is there anybody else who cringes when they hear that thing come on the radio? What do they call that stuff, anyway, Western Wimp? Country Gumball? This has got to be somebody's idea of a joke. Country's answer to Yummy Yummy, I guess.

Sorry, I didn't come here to talk about bad music.

Well, I guess I did.

Smitty Thompson — you all know Smitty — he claims he saw Elvis again last Friday, sneaking around his pasture.

Smitty took out his 12 gauge, fired into the line of mesquites and Elvis took off.

This thing between Smitty and Elvis goes back a long ways, according to Smitty, anyway.

Smitty claims he has proof that he wrote Hound Dog and that Elvis stole it from him.

Of course, Smitty's version isn't exactly like the one Elvis recorded. It goes something like this:

"She talks like a hound dog,
yappin' all the time;
She acts just like a hound dog,
yappin' all the time;
And she cain't cook a lick,
That dog-gone wife of mine."

Like a thousand other people, Smitty claims that Elvis is alive and well. Elvis faked his death, Smitty says, because Smitty was about to prove the real truth about Hound Dog.

He's pretty sure that Elvis was trying to get into his house to steal the evidence when Smitty chased him off Friday.

Now, everybody knows that Hound Dog wasn't written by Elvis, and Elvis never claimed to have written it. So Smitty's gripe really shouldn't be with Elvis, but it is, and you can't tell him any different.

But if you ask Smitty why he hasn't ever shown anyone the evidence that proves he was the original author of the song, he always says the same thing.

"There's a conspiracy goin' on here, and I aim to get the goods on all of 'em before goin' after just one."

You see, Hound Dog isn't the only song that Smitty says was stolen from him. Oh no.

Maybe you've heard Blue Suede Shoes, the song that Carl Perkins made famous. Smitty says he actually wrote the song about two boys in a school playground getting ready to fight.

"You can pull my hair,
You can slap my face,
You can punch my head
All over the place;
You can do anything
That you want to do,
But hey-hey buddy
Don't use them shoes.
Oh don't use,
Don't use them pointy shoes.
You can do anything,
But take off them pointy shoes."

Smitty claims that Mac Davis' In The Ghetto, sung by Elvis, was stolen from a song he wrote about high school football playoffs:

"On a warm September Texas night,
They ran on the field
And they came to fight
From the Get-Go...(from the Get-Go-o-o-o-o)
But the coach, he yearned...
For if there's one thing that he might need,
It's a boy with some size and a boy with some speed
From the Get-Go...(from the Get-Go-o-o-o-o)"

Well, whether you can sympathize with Smitty or not, I don't know.

Yes, he's a failed song writer. And he may be an out-and-out liar. Or just crazy.

But I'll take Pointy Shoes over Achy Breaky Heart — from the Get-Go.

"You think you scare me? I'm a MOTHER! I could get out of it in five seconds!"

"Orderly!"

"Orderly? ORDERLY? How could I possibly be orderly? I have KIDS! They can trash a house before the vacuum cleaner winds down. Have you ever found molded food under a bed? Well, HAVE you?"

"Prepare da syringe."

"Oh yeah, gimme a shot. Big deal. I've been through LABOR!"

"Mrs. Mills, ve are here to help you. If you vill just hold still——"

"Wait a minute. I know what you're going to do. You're going to send me back, aren't you?

"If you vill put your arms just so——"

"Please, please don't send me back. I'll be good. I'll weave three baskets a day. I'll take my medication. Just don't send me back there."

"Vhat? You've come to your senses?"

"Sure. Just let me stay here until school starts. I'll be cured by then, I promise."

"Very goot! I see ve are making progress!"

"(mumble, mumble.)"

"Vhat did you say?"

"I said, shut up, stupid."

Editorial roundup

El Paso Times on deficit:

Some say the budget-balancing plan drawn up for one-time near-candidate Ross Perot by a former U.S. budget director was so tough Perot knew Americans wouldn't buy it.

Credit card living is certainly easier than living on what you earn and paying your debts. But we Americans must face facts: It's time for the federal government to pay its bills and get out of the habit of borrowing for luxuries.

That's going to take spending cuts — real ones — and perhaps higher taxes.

... Here are three ideas that those in Washington should look at to save us a few hundred billion.

—Index Social Security and Medicare benefits according to income. If you make over a certain amount of money in retirement, then your benefits should be reduced proportionately. If you make over, say $100,000 a year from any sources, you get no Social Security and no Medicare benefits.

—End the 20-year military retirement program. ...Military retirement benefits should start at age 59. But anyone who's already been in the service for 10 years should be exempt.

—Ask veterans with small disabilities to give up their monthly benefits — and make it easy to do so. Allow them to retain their disability ratings for tax purposes and future medical-care eligibility. But let them give up the $70 to $200 monthly payments for 10 to 20 percent disabilities if they are gainfully employed.

Waco Tribune-Herald on health care costs:

Exploding health care costs must be reined in before the American economy can expect long-term recovery.

The U.S. health care system costs Americans more per capita than completely nationalized systems in other industrialized countries that cover all medical costs for their citizens from the cradle to the grave.

Today Americans can work all their lives and see their entire retirement savings and everything they own disappear in a few months when a major medical emergency strikes. The system is not fair, and it needs to be changed.

Exploding health care costs are breaking state budgets as well as household budgets. Voters should insist that the candidates offer comprehensive health care.

Longview News-Journal on child abuse:

Little 2-year-old Donny Martin of Garland died May 16 from blunt force trauma to his stomach, according to an autopsy. Today, the child's common-law father, Robert Morris Rose Jr., remains jailed on a first-degree felony charge of injury to a child.

It's a tragic and complex story. The technical term blunt force trauma does not portray what really happened. Was the child punched, hit with an object or kicked? We don't know. But, this story is a reminder of the grim reality that 97 Texas children died last year from abuse or neglect. The public seldom hears about these cases or the thousands of children more who are raped, sexually molested, mutilated, tortured, starved, beaten or neglected each year.

Texas is losing the war on child abuse. Since 1988, confirmed cases of child abuse and neglect have risen from 28,377 to 34,759 in 1991. ...

Now, experts predict the number of abused and neglected Texas children will increase 18.4 percent this year to 41,170 children. Children's voices aren't very loud in speaking out for their own welfare. Certainly, little Donny Martin couldn't lobby the Legislature to keep him safe and his cries for help were missed. How many tiny voices like Donny Martin's won't be heard? ...

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am prompted to write this letter after the experience I had yesterday. I picked up my grandson from Stanfield. It was a nightmare.

Cars were parked four deep in the street because there is not enough room for all the traffic to park. Traffic was down to one lane, if and when you could move at all. To make matters worse, the street is a dead end, so when you are lucky enough to get out, you have to turn around and run the gauntlet again.

Mixed in all this mess are moving buses and children running across the street between the parked cars trying to get to their parents. No where did I see a crosswalk guard to help them. One little boy stood in front of my car for 5 minutes trying to get across. I was afraid he was going to get hit.

How many children are going to get lost or badly hurt before our high officials decide they have created a monster?

My opinion.

Dear Editor,

I have recently returned with my best friend, Stephanie Hedges, from spending four weeks in a city in southern Brazil. We went to visit the Brazilian foreign exchange student who lived and studied at Snyder High School last year, Renata Rezende. Many of you may remember Renata and how precious she is. During her stay here in the states she spent her first few months with the Jeff Lowrance family and her last months with my family. We became as close as sisters, so when the opportunity presented itself, I jumped at the chance to see her once again.

The purpose of this letter is not to draw attention to myself or what adventures I had during my stay. My intentions hit much closer to home. During our one month stay in Campo Grande, Brazil, Stephanie and I met so many people on numerous occasions. Renata's family is a very prominent and kind one so, as a result, they have many friends. It always amazed me to note the attention we received wherever we went. This was not due solely to the fact that we were foreigners, although we do not exactly look "Brazilian." I have personally never been so openly received in all my life. I honestly never met a stranger in Brazil. Everyone wore a smile and treated us in the most hospitable way. Our host family took us into their home and treated us not like guests, but instead like family members. Altogether the experience touched my life in a wonderfully special way, and one I will never forget.

I am aware that here in Snyder we host many foreign exchange students and tourists who in some way or another make their way through our little West Texas town. I feel that we, as citizens of this great country and proud residents of Snyder, Texas, should treat every guest with as much love and respect as I was so graciously offered in Brazil. Perhaps now a conscious effort could be made by all those who read this letter to always wear a smile and go the extra mile to make everyone feel welcome here. It has become my hope that all who left the city limits of Snyder truly believed Texas earned her nickname, "The Friendly State."

Remember that no matter the native language one speaks, the race, the sex, or the country from which one comes, we are all human. God placed each of us here to live together in harmony. Let us all do our part to make that happen.

Sincerely,

Julie Johnson

Dear Editor,

Recent news stories concerning the operations and budgeting process of the Scurry County Airport have been interesting to read and discuss. The Commissioners Court has refused to deal realistically with a ten-year problem at the airport and "business as usual," in my opinion, just won't work in today's fiscal environment. Consequently, I have written the Commissioners Court a lengthy letter seeking answers to unresolved questions and containing comments and personal opinions. Perhaps your readers, should they be so inclined, might utilize a similar method for attempting to obtain timely answers to relevant questions. Here are excerpts from my recent letter:

Gentlemen,

I am writing you today to express my thoughts, opinions and observations concerning the operation and management of the Scurry County Airport. I earn my living as a professional pilot for Patterson Energy, Inc. and I have been based at Winston Field since 1980. Consequently, I feel qualified and compelled to express my opinions concerning the operation and management of our hometown airport.

As you are aware, fiscal conditions and operational situations have changed dramatically during the past four or five years and I think it essential that all of us, elected officials and taxpayers alike, strive to achieve a balance between what "used" to be and what "has" to be.

I read in yesterday's Snyder Daily News (Tuesday, Aug. 11) that the court proposes to budget a loss of some $29,000 for the airport. In my opinion, this is unacceptable, and in view of the constant bickering and squabbling that is apparently ongoing regarding the airport, I'd like to pose some questions and state some

Second hand shopping considered hot trend

WACO, Texas (AP) — Not since "Annie Hall" first hit the movie theaters has second-hand shopping become such a hot fashion trend.

Most local thrift stores and consignment shops report a booming business, in part because of an economy that isn't.

"It's a steady flow," said Henrietta Villareal, assistant manager of a Goodwill Industries store in Waco. "I think a lot of customers come over here before they go elsewhere."

Ann Osborne, who volunteers at the Family Abuse Center Thrift Store, said clothes sales there have increased, especially among people who may not have previously shopped second-hand.

Business is also brisk at two local consignment shops where women take their clothes to be sold as second-hand goods, reports Lou McMains, co-owner of Angel's Encore, and Doris Eisen, owner of Mine and Yours Resale.

"People come here wanting to get good bargains," Eisen said. "I'm always busy at this time of year because it's the beginning of the time when they shop for school clothes."

"People are looking for something they've seen in department stores which are unaffordable," said Carolyn Meyer, manager of another Waco Goodwill Thrift Store.

She said people may shop for designer wear second-hand, or find inexpensive wardrobe items to fill in with the more costly things they've bought new.

Meyer said women often buy career clothing from Goodwill, and report their co-workers want to know where they got the outfits. "Sometimes, they'll tell them, sometimes they don't," she said.

Is there a stigma about buying pre-owned clothing?

"Definitely not," said Sheila Gould, sales director for Heart of Texas Goodwill Industries in Waco. "I was in a nice hotel restaurant the other day at lunch time. I saw a friend of mine who had an adorable knit blouse and skirt. I told her, 'I just love that outfit,' and she told me, 'I got it at Goodwill.'"

"I think people like to boast about it" when they find a thrift shop bargain, said Maj. Avedis Kasarjiam, commanding officer of Salvation Army, which operates a thrift store. "If they can find a dress for $4 or $5 that otherwise would have cost $40 or $50, they want to tell everyone. There may have been a stigma in the past, but that, I think, is passing by very quickly if not already past."

Gould said what reluctance people may have in buying second-hand clothes quickly evaporates when they find Liz Claiborne blouses on sale for $1 or Maggie London outfits for $12, when such brands may sell new for $100 or more.

"Name brand things go very well," said Caritas director of thrift store operations Ann Hayslett. So does "vintage clothing" from the '40s and '50s, she added.

She said younger customers, in particular, "like to dress unique, and this is a way for them to do it."

Most store personnel agree that better items are snapped up quickly, and finding such goods often is a matter of luck.

Meyer said some merchandise that ends up at second-hand stores started out at Neiman Marcus or other top stores. "I'm not saying that we have that all the time, but you can get lucky if you happen to come at the right time," she said.

Most merchandise is from more humble origins. Because of a drop in donations, some thrift stores admit to having to hang flawed or stained garments that would once have been rejected.

But the overall quality of second-hand clothing may be better than many believe.

"Usually, our clothes are no older than about two years," said Gloria Trevino, manager of The Penny Pincher, a thrift shop run by the Junior League of Waco. "We have Liz Claiborne, Polo for men, Jordache or Guess jeans, all kinds of name brands."

Career women who are bargain hunting make ladies' dresses and suits the best-selling category. However, more men are combing through the racks, Trevino said.

"We never used to have that many men," she said. "Now it's half and half" women and men customers.

Male customers may find some especially tempting buys, she said. "Men's clothes come in in a lot better condition than women's, I think," Trevino said. Expensive suits that would cost up to $300 new are sold for no more than $20, she said.

True bargain hunters often wait until sale days to snap up quantities of merchandise. Hayslett said each Caritas store has Bag Sale days — three days a week when customers may stuff merchandise into a paper bag and buy the entire contents for $3.

"That way, if you don't like how one item looked on you, you can still afford to donate it right back," she said.

Why does the Commissioners Court allow an individual to operate a personal, private, free-enterprise business on county property? I seriously doubt the court would approve of the county auditor operating a private CPA practice from his office in the courthouse. Likewise, I feel certain you'd frown if an employee of the county clerk's office opened a title and abstract business on the top floor of the courthouse, or the parks and recreation director began running a private health club at the county swimming pool. But the airport manager, Darrell Mize, does operate his personal maintenance and pilot service business from county property while supposedly serving as a full-time county employee at an annual salary in excess of $26,000 per year. Yet, if the court condones this practice only at the airport, can you express any reason why the county derives absolutely no income from it?

Can you explain why the Commissioners Court is spending taxpayers' dollars to provide heat, air-conditioning, water, and other services for Mr. Mize's private business, Nighthawk Aviation?

What is so attractive about selling aviation fuel products 40 to 90 cents below regional average prices? If other rural airports in West Texas derive much-needed operating revenue from competitively priced fuel, why can't we?

Is there a reason why the airport receives minimal maintenance when the county is paying the airport manager and two assistants 100 hours of labor per week? Come look at the weeds and grass growing up through our new two-million dollar reconstruction project, and while you're there, observe the trash that's been laying in the same spot for five months. Look, too, at the unmowed bulk of the entire facility, or take a close look at the decrepit condition of the old terminal building.

Why not accept the reality of the situation? The successful operation of a small, rural airport does not require the expense of a paid manager who does not work forty hours a week totally on airport business. Rather, it needs two, hard-working and capable people who would be required to work forty hours per week entirely for the airport. Part-time labor can be utilized to cover vacations, holidays and sick leave. If the Commissioners Court deems it necessary to have a mechanic available at the airport, then lease the maintenance concession to Mr. Mize or whomever else would pay for it on a profitable basis to the county, but please, try to get a week's work for a week's pay from every employee. Why give away business space and related utilities? Insist that the maintenance facility utilities be totally independent and separate from county expenses.

Another suggestion. Eliminate the Airport Board. I served on it for two years and I've watched it operate for twelve. In my opinion, this board is totally ineffective and serves only as a quasi-official confederation to facilitate the policies and programs of the Airport Manager. If the Commissioners Court, however, cannot run the airport without a board, empanel a true advisory board consisting of only one pilot, one airplane owner, but numerous business-oriented people in the community who would strive to serve the court and the community. Eliminate any possibilities of self-serving administrative decisions.

In short, airport salaries are too high, profit margins on aviation fuel sales are too low, and a conflict of interest exists under the current management scheme that is in place.

Please be astute enough to realize that your colleague, Roy Idom, does not have a vendetta against any county employee. Recognize, if you will, that Mr. Idom was elected by an overwhelming plurality of the voters of his precinct and that those voters, including my family, are demanding and expecting sweeping changes in the manner in which this county is operated. We are fortunate to have a college-educated, honorable, and candid man representing our precinct, and I can assure you that his views on spending reduction and budget reality represent those of many, many voters in this county. That, in itself, might be well worth remembering every four years!

I would urge you, the elected management group of Scurry County, to study and analyze the current situation at Winston Field. Be bold enough to step forward and put new and different policies into play. Just because something's been in place for forty years is not necessarily a demanding criteria for keeping it in place. The taxpayers who pay the bills will continue to demand accountability in all areas of county government. You can take a positive step by addressing the operations and management at Winston Field.

Thank you for the courtesy of your attention to this letter. I look forward to the manner in which you choose to address these issues.

Sincerely,

Lynn McLarty

Perot still richest in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Hard times means it takes less money this year to crack the list of the 100 richest Texans.

But don't think winning the $1 million lottery drawing will put you on it. According to Texas Monthly's latest listing, the minimum bank account needed to qualify as Big Money is $120 million.

Topping the list for the fourth-straight year is Dallas tycoon and presidential dropout Ross Perot. His fortune is up to $3.25 billion, the magazine said Thursday in its latest ranking of the state's Big Rich.

"Ross Perot may not be elected president, but he's still got bags of money," Texas Monthly said. "Subtract $10 million spent on his presidential bid — but he'll earn it back in interest in less than a month."

Perot, whose fortune from the data processing business was estimated to be up $250 million over last year, apparently is unimpressed with his showing.

The magazine quotes his thoughts on such rankings as, "Just a shopping list for nuts."

The $10 million drop in what was needed to qualify this year — down from 1991's $130 million minimum — was due to declining fortunes of nearly one-fourth of last year's 100 richest, according to Texas Monthly writer Christine Carroll, who compiled the listing.

"Since we first began tracking the wealthiest Texans in 1989, the state's economy has limped along while the super rich Texans have glided above the fray," Ms. Carroll writes.

"But now, in our fourth year on the trail of the 100 richest Texans, realty has crept into the boardrooms and mansions."

Not to worry, though.

According to the magazine, 44 of the 90 returning multimillionaires saw their fortunes remain the same and 24 saw theirs grow. Eight newcomers and two past top-100 members hit the list this year, taking the place of the 10 who failed to make the cut.

"No one individual suffered a truly spectacular decrease in fortune," Ms. Carroll said. "It was more of an across-the-board decline among 22 of those listed this year."

One winner this year is Houston, now hometown to 27 of the richest Texans. That's up two tycoons from last year, when Houston housed only 25.

Dallas dropped, however, from 31 Big Rich residents in 1991 to a tie with Houston at 27.

Fort Worth runs a distant third, with nine; San Antonio has six, Midland four, Austin and Corpus Christi three each, and two each live in Victoria, Denton and Vernon.

Behind Perot in the magazine's rankings are the Bass boys of Fort Worth — Perry, Sid, Edward, Robert and Lee — sharing $6.6 billion.

Water rules to be considered

AUSTIN (AP) — Proposed rules for management of the Edwards Aquifer will be released in less than two weeks, the Texas Water Commission has announced.

The rules will be introduced Aug. 26, starting a two-week period for the public to submit written comments regarding the rules, the commission said Thursday.

The commission is scheduled to consider approval of the rules at its Sept. 9 meeting.

Earlier this year, the commission designated the southern portion of the aquifer as an underground river subject to state regulation. Officials are concerned about overuse of the aquifer which supplies water to San Antonio and much of southcentral Texas.

The proposed rules will be written to delay the management plan until after the legislative session next year to allow time for lawmakers to adopt their own plan for the Edwards, officials said.

Unsinkable soldier found lots of adventure

MARSHALL, Texas — Generals fraternize with privates at that old soldiers' reunion known as City Cemetery.

A troop of Confederate vets and a few Yanks lie in the Marshall graveyard.

One stone marks the tomb of an almost unknown soldier of fortune, a war-scarred Irish bucko, who marched to many different drummers in his day.

He surely holds the cemetery's career record for close scrapes, diverse battles and swashbuckling adventures.

Walter P. Lane was nearly forgotten when Max Lale, past president of the Texas State Historical Association, recently began spurring interest in the old warrior.

Lale described him: "A man who had eight horses shot from under him in battle. He courted death a thousand times."

Born in County Cork, Walter Paye Lane was 19 when he met Sam Houston in 1836, a few days before the battle of San Jacinto. General Houston made him an "aide de camp," but young Lane soon blarneyed his way into a cavalry unit.

By turn, the Irishman became a hero of San Jacinto, a freebooter, a Texas Ranger major in the Mexican war, an Indian fighter and a Confederate general.

He left a salty memoir exhaustingly titled: "Sketches of the Texian, Mexican, and Late Wars, With Several Indian Fights Thrown In."

He told of a skirmish on the eve of the slashing victory at San Jacinto:

"We got in half a mile of their line, when their cavalry came out to interview us (yelling insults and inviting attack) ... Charge! rang out, and we went through them like a stroke of lightning ...

"My horse — a powerful animal — had got excited, and, having more zeal than discretion, took the bit in his teeth and ran me headlong into the midst of the enemy, much to my disgust.

"The order was given to retreat ... But my horse wanted to go through...

"Just then a big Mexican lancer charged me in the side, running me through the shoulder with his lance ... and knocked me 10 feet off my horse. I fell on my head, stunned and senseless.

"(Later Texas President Mirabeau B.) Lamar rode up to succor me, shot the Mexican, and, thinking I was dead, fell back on the command. My comrades had got some 40 yards when I regained consciousness and my feet.

"Twenty Mexicans were round me when I rose, but it so surprised them to see a dead boy rise to his feet and run like a buck, that I got 10 steps before they fired at me.

"Capt. (Henry W.) Karns saw me coming, and ordered his company to wheel and fire on my pursuers, which they did, killing a few. The balance halted.

"An old man told me: 'Son, get up behind; I reckon the old mare kin take us both out.' I did. She was a sorrel mare and thin in the flesh; I would know her hide if it was dried on a fence even now, and she had the sharpest backbone it has ever been my fortune to straddle ... "

The next day's fighting won him the rank of lieutenant. Captured Mexican General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna gave him a cigar and a light.

Lieutenant Lane rested a while and, as he put it, "ventilated my laurels."

Lale said that in the port of Velasco, Texas, "Lane found the privateer Tom Toby preparing to sail against Mexican shipping. He signed on, of course."

On the first cruise, the rookie freebooter and the Tom Toby's crew captured a Mexican ship, returned her to port, sold her and pocketed the proceeds. On a second cruise, he helped put down a mutiny. On a third, he and the Tom Toby crew seized another prize and sailed her to Galveston, where she was wrecked by a hurricane.

Lale said: "There followed a brief period as a teacher, from which Lane escaped by joining a survey party of 23 men at Franklin. Near what is now Dawson in Navarro County, the party was attacked by an estimated 150 Indians. Sixteen Texans were killed and five wounded, among them Lane." He escaped.

When Texas Ranger Capt. Jack Hays raised a regiment for the Mexican War, the Irish adventurer enlisted and was elected first lieutenant. The Rangers were disorderly but reputedly "the best light troops in the world."

Later Lieutenant Lane served with the 1st Regiment, Texas Mounted Riflemen. He fought house-to-house in the battle of Monterrey. When the city was surrendered, he recalled that he "never felt meaner."

Returning to the Rangers, he was made a major but soon argued about discipline with General Zachary Taylor. Lale said, "Lane was placed under arrest but eventually was released." The spat ended with the general offering a "grumbling kind of apology."

At the village of Encontallas, some of Major Lane's men were attacked by about 300 Comanches. He mounted his command and pursued them. At a cost of four killed and 14 wounded, the battalion killed or wounded "40 or 50" of the raiders, recovering six Mexican captives.

The exploit that may gain Major Lane lasting thanks of Texans came in the Mexican town of Salado. There he ordered Mexicans to exhume bones of Texans captured during the ill-fated 1843 Mier Expedition. Those were the luckless captives who'd chanced to draw from the pot the infamous black beans that doomed them to execution.

The bones were delivered to LaGrange in Fayette County, home of several members of the Mier Expedition. Today an impressive monument marks the spot where the bones were reburied.

Without a war, the warrior joined the California gold rush in 1849. In four years, he made and lost a couple of small fortunes. Then he lingered in Peru for months.

Prospecting for gold in what became Arizona, he recalled: "I found gold there very scarce and the Apache Indians very numerous. Before you found a dollar's worth of gold, you would find 100 Indians, all of them hostile."

He was 44 in 1861 when, sniffing gunpowder, he enlisted as a Confederate private in a Harrison County unit called the Texas Hunters. An earlier company had honored him by choosing the name "W.P. Lane Rangers."

In four bloody years, the Irishman rose to brigadier general. He returned to Marshall at war's end decorated with medals and wounds.

Lale's valedictory as president of the Texas State Historical Association was "Walter Paye Lane: An Appreciation," a speech and later a monograph. A departure from the traditional academic line of TSHA presidents, Lale's background is journalism. He's former publisher of the Greenville Herald Banner and a former editor at the Marshall News-Messenger. He once managed public relations for Thiokol Corp. at the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant.

In World War II, Lt. Col. Lale won the French Croix de Guerre with Gold Star, the Belgian Fourragere, a U.S. Army Bronze Star and four campaign medals (Nothern France, Rhineland, Bulge, Bavarian pursuit).

He's 75, retired, and married to Fort Worth writer Cissy Stewart, with whom he spends hours on Interstate 20 traveling between homes in Harrison and Tarrant counties.

He said General Lane was three weeks from his 75th birthday when he died in bed in Marshall on Jan. 28, 1892. It was bottles, not battles, that finally got the old war hawk. He died of cirrhosis.

"He was a pretty good drinker," said his biographer.

Former rock and roll musician now preaches Gospel instead

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — The Rev. Rick Mayo used to satisfy people's craving for heavy metal music. Now he uses his communication skills to satisfy their need to know Jesus Christ and to "bridge the gap between the fatherless and the Father."

Mayo was a guitarist with heavy metal groups such as Road Runner and Salty Dog after three years in the military and two years in college studying sociology.

"I understand what moves groups of people," he said of his college studies. Now he combines that knowledge with "God's perspective."

Part of Mayo's rebellious youth included being thrown out of high school and his parents' home. He earned his GED while serving in the U.S. Army.

The trappings of heavy metal success left him feeling cold and empty. Even the rock and roll dream of adoring fans seemed empty. He remembers a roomful of fans screaming his group's name and thinking, "Is this all there is to this business?"

The thought took him by surprise because he didn't usually think like that, he said. He looked into the lost eyes of the 15-year-olds and thought "I am what they came to see and I am nothing special."

"I was dying inside," he said.

After a number of bands, he was in despair and working on a solo project at age 30.

"My life was on the bottom," Mayo said.

It was then his younger brother Scott, whom he hadn't seen in months, came to Mayo's door and told him how God had changed his life during the previous four or five months.

"I thought the guy had lost his mind," Mayo said of that encounter with his brother. Mayo had a mixed reaction of thinking this wasn't for him and wanting to know more. He thought, "If this is real, I've got to have it," he said, after seeing the joy and peace on his brother's face.

Mayo went to a Pentecostal church at his brother's urging.

"It blew me away," he said. "I'd never seen people worship God like that before ... I was overwhelmed by the love of God that was in the people." By the third visit, Mayo was convinced there was something at the church he needed. Soon he repented and was baptized. "I've never been the same since," he said.

He later became outreach coordinator for his church and was ordained after feeling a call to the ministry. He has been evangelizing full time for nine months and plans to conduct revivals around Texas until early next year.

His former bandmembers were overwhelmed when they saw the changes taking place in the former heavy metal guitarist. Mayo said when he was in the music business, he was one of the "loudest, raunchiest and rudest" rockers around.

The evangelist is based at The Rock Church in Sacramento, Calif., where the Mayo brothers first started attending church together.

"It's got nothing to do with rock music," he quickly said about his church's name.

Mayo doesn't have anything to do with rock music either these days. He's expressing himself and his Christian convictions thorugh the spoken word instead having a music ministry.

"I didn't want to do what I wanted to do (but) do what God wanted," he said.

His musical aspirations had been a "rebellious search for identity," which he didn't need anymore when he found his identity in God.

His wife, Ellen, does express her Christian beliefs in music and has recently released a gospel album.

Julia Child will be featured on public television stations

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Get this straight: Julia Child did not drop a chicken on the floor on television, even though fans will swear to her that they saw it.

Which is not to say she didn't make mistakes on the air. As it turned out, those mistakes were key to the success of "The French Chef," which debuted on public television in February 1963.

Three years later, Time magazine remarked that New York matrons refused to go out to dinner when Child was on television.

Well, this Saturday, when Child turns 80, matrons and fans of all kinds should sharpen their knives, turn on their televisions and refuse all invitations to go out.

Two specials, "Julia Child at 80" and "A Taste of Norway with Julia Child," will air on public television, and some stations are rebroadcasting Child's cooking shows. WGBH in Boston, for example, plans eight hours of Julia Child.

"Julia Child at 80" is a charming half-hour profile, with Christopher Lydon interviewing Child at her Cambridge home about food, nutrition, pesticides and feminism, among other topics.

The program includes old photographs of a young Child and of her husband, Paul. Best of all, there are clips from her cooking shows.

The small budget in the early days at WGBH was partly responsible for the pratfalls. "We didn't stop. We had 27½ minutes. If you stopped, it cost too much money," Child said.

All to the good for viewers. They got to laugh, and they learned how to fix all sorts of foul-ups.

The dropped chicken of legend, Child speculated in an interview this week, was probably the potato pancake that flipped from pan to stovetop. She returned it to the pan, advising, "If we're alone in the kitchen, who is going to see?"

On another show, she patted a whole pig as she instructed viewers to clean its ears, teeth, nose and feet before cooking.

It's just so much fun to hear her talk about "buttery, beautiful, lemon-rich, eggy hollandaise sauce" or to watch her slam a mallet onto the counter and giggle a little before saying, "I'm Julia Child."

Child was 51 when she made her television debut, and went on to win a Peabody award in 1965 and an Emmy in 1966.

She understood the power of her television presence, but her enthusiasm and humor, and the relaxed atmosphere on the set, may also have led to the rumors that she took a swig from a wine bottle, "which I would never do," she said.

A well-known wine writer actually wrote that in a book, Child said.

Ex-district official accused

RAYMONDVILLE, Texas (AP) — A former Port Mansfield Navigation District director has been indicted on charges he used the agency's funds to buy a golf cart and building materials for his personal use.

Willacy County District Attorney Juan Angel Guerra said Thursday that he is still investigating allegations a dummy construction company was set up to bill the navigation district.

Guerra began the investigation last month after hearing allegations funds were being misappropriated.

Former Director David Mayfield, who resigned June 18, was indicted this week on two counts of felony grand theft. He is accused of misappropriating about $3,500 in district funds.

Mayfield is now the supervisor of the Woodland Community Association in Houston.

Migrant workers offered health plan

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Migrant farm workers in the United States are eligible for health coverage for their families at a discount through a program offered by Mexico.

Roberto Gamboa Mascarenas, Mexican consul general in El Paso, said Thursday the new program was adopted by the federal Mexican Institute of Social Services.

Migrant workers can purchase the coverage for $385 a year, about half what a Mexican citizen now pays for the same coverage. The coverage is extended to the worker's spouse, children within specific age limits and parents.

The insurance coverage is not valid in U.S. hospitals.

The coverage is being offered at a discount to farm workers because they are employed seasonally. Workers will be covered after crop seasons end in the United States and when the worker returns to Mexico.

"Eleven thousand farm workers in Arizona and 18,000 in New Mexico will be able to provide the coverage for their families under the new plan," Gamboa said.

Gamboa said that the plan will begin in late September.

Mexican Sen. Juan Ernesto Madera said Mexicans working in the United States left their families without any health insurance.

"In Mexico, only those who are employed receive hospitalization and other health coverage because the employer deducts it from their paychecks," Madera said. "Migrant farm workers, when they left to work in the U.S., had to worry about leaving families behind."

Board approves low mortgage rate

AUSTIN (AP) — The interest rate on veterans home loans has been reduced to 6.99 percent — the lowest rate offered since the program began in 1983.

"It's far and away the best deal in today's market if you're a Texas vet," Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Thursday.

The interest rates were lowered by the Texas Veterans Land Board.

Mauro said the lowered rates will make additional veterans eligible to buy homes.

For example, he said, the new rate means that the monthly payment on an $80,000 home financed with a $45,000 Texas veterans home loan at 6.99 percent combined with a $35,000 VA loan at 7.5 percent would be $544.

The board also reduced the interest rate on home improvement loans made to Texas veterans from 9.25 percent to 7.60 percent.

San Antonio to sell 10,000 cat carcasses every year

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio has approved a contract that would allow the sale of 10,000 stray and abandoned cat bodies annually for use in science labs and school anatomy classes.

The City Council approved a contract Thursday with California-based Sargeant's Wholesale Biologicals at $2.50-per-cat body for a total of $25,000 in revenue.

The bodies will come from euthanasia chambers at the San Antonio animal pound, The San Antonio Light reported in Friday editions.

Sargeant's Wholesale Biologicals will prepare and preserve the cat carcasses and sell them to scientific institutions and schools across the nation.

Micheners donate $15 million to UT

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas officials say a $15 million gift from author James Michener and his wife will give a UT-Austin writers' program the largest endowment of any in the nation.

"The nature and magnitude of this gift ensure that the Texas Center (for Writers) will have no equal anywhere," said UT-Austin President William Cunningham.

John Kings, associate director of the center, said the center's endowment topped $4 million before the latest gift.

The Micheners attended Thursday's announcement, which ended with an unrelated outburst by black protesters upset with the UT System regents.

"It came as a wee bit of a surprise," said Mari Michener of the protest by about 18 members of the Black State Employees Association.

The protesters stood at the end of the news conference and chanted, "No justice, no peace," and "What do we want? — Justice. When do we want it? — Now."

Association leaders said they did not have enough input before regents approved a change in admission standards to UT-Austin. They want the regents to have a formal public comment period at every meeting.

University officials said the association's leader was invited to meet with Cunningham, but declined. Cunningham said it's standard "to exhaust discussions with administration officials" before regents grant a request for a formal appearance.

Protesters said the outburst had nothing to do with the Micheners, whose gift was praised as "major and historic" by Cunningham. He will become UT System chancellor on Sept. 1.

William Livingston, vice president and dean of graduate studies for UT-Austin, said the announcement "marks the realization of a dream and the confirmation of a thousand hopes."

This gift brings total contributions by the Micheners to UT to more than $37 million, which officials said was the largest sum ever contributed to the university.

Michener said his commitment to writing has "paid me almost exorbitantly."

"The only sensible thing to do for somebody who loves writing as much as I do is to turn it back," said Michener, who helped create the Texas Center for Writers several years ago. He is professor emeritus at the university and leads seminars at the center.

Of the new money, $11 million will be dedicated to the Michener Fellowship Program to provide scholarships, fellowships and other grants for aspiring professional writers, Cunningham said. The university will contribute $3 million..

The remaining $4 million will be used to create a director's fund that may be used to compensate visiting writers, editors, agents and publishers, and to assemble conferences and summer seminars.

The program combines playwriting, screenwriting, and fiction and poetry, Michener noted.

"It is probably just as good to write a screen film for something like "E.T." as it is to write one of my novels," said Michener, who won a Pulitzer Prize in 1947 for "Tales of the South Pacific."

"It's certainly just as effective a communication with the world to write a splendid television screenplay for something like 'Lonesome Dove' as it is to write one of my other novels," he said.

"If I were a young man ... I might very conceivably with my attitudes find that I was going into screenwriting, or that I was going into television writing, or that I was going into radio, rather than the printed word in a book."

Tritt stunned

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Travis Tritt says he was stunned at being nominated for five Country Music Association awards, including entertainer and male vocalist of the year.

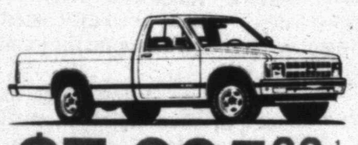

"This whole experience has been a dream come true for me," Tritt said Thursday after the nominations were announced.

Tritt faces competition in the entertainer and male vocalist of the year categories from Garth Brooks, who got three nominations, and Vince Gill.
