Tournament honors oilpatch, judge

The Scurry County oilpatch and a recently retired district judge will be honored in early March as Snyder hosts the Region V Basketball Tournament for junior college teams in the Western and North Junior Athletic Conferences.

Monday, the Western Texas College board voted to change the name to the Oil Belt Region V Tournament, in honor of the oil industry in Scurry County.

In addition, trustees approved naming Wayland G. Holt, who served as district judge here the past 15 years, as the honorary tournament director.

The tournament will be held in Snyder for the first time this coming March 5-9.

"To be selected by almost 20 colleges throughout much of Texas to be the host college for both the men's and women's tournaments (the last stops before national tournaments) is a signal honor," commented Dr. Don Newbury, WTC president.

"We have the oil industry to thank, in large part, for our college, our coliseum, and other excellent public facilities and accomodations which combine to offer citizens a high quality of life," he said.

Regarding the naming of Holt, who retired effective Dec. 31, Roy Baze, board president had earlier submitted this statement.

"Judge Wayland Holt is set apart as one who represents the highest ideals of mankind. He has supported Western Texas College over the years, and I can think of no person more deserving of being named 'honorary tournament director' than Judge Holt.

"His sense of fair play and sportsmanship, his devotion to the common good and his abiding support of WTC are both appreciated and admired."

Baze could not attend Monday's meeting and College Trustee Bill Jones presided in his absense.

In other business, at the request of Dr. Duane Hood, dean of student services, trustees voted to rescind their decision last month to construct a three-bedroom duplex in favor of a two-bedroom structure.

Hood explained that while they "could live with the three-bedroom duplex," students preferred the two-bedroom units and that they were easier to fill and keep filled.

Trustees also approved three bid items.

The first was for 200 chairs, 15 round tables, four table trucks, and rectangular folding tables from American Desk of Temple in the amount of $6,212. The items will be used to replace tables and chairs in the cafeteria.

Other bids were submitted by Dalsew Commerical Furnishings of Dallas in the amount of $5,068 — a lower bid but one which did not include 200 chairs — and Hester's Office Supply in Lubbock in the amount of $8,996.

Trustees also agreed to purchase two IBM-PC computers including 256k RAM, two double

Trustees discuss per-student rate items for budget

A budget preparation agenda item listed for discussion only took up the majority of time Monday at an approximately 75 minute school board meeting.

The thrust of discussion centered around a request by administrators to raise the per-student budget figure at elementary schools from $50 to $55 next year.

This per-student estimate is used as the basis for operational expenses at these campuses and is unrelated to expenses required for building improvements.

Artie Butler, assistant superintendent for business, noted the $50 figure per child had not been raised since 1978 here.

Superintendent Bob Hawes said Tuesday morning that the extra $5 per child was needed to offset inflation increases during this seven-year period and to eliminate the out-of-pocket expenses some local teachers are now experiencing for smaller classroom items.

No action was taken regarding the request. Hawes did note that his staff is aiming for a stepped-up budget schedule this year, hoping to have most operational items set by the end of the school year.

At Monday's January meeting of the board, Hawes was also officially given a one-year extension on his contract.

An evaluation session for the superintendent — conducted in executive session over two meetings — preceded the contract extension.

The superintendent's contract is traditionally considered by the board as the new year begins. Hawes was hired last May 24.

Trustees Monday also officially called the spring election to decide two seats on the Snyder ISD board.

Pat Falls was again named election judge with school staffers Ann Walton, Janet Davis and Patsy Taylor named absentee clerks.

Absentee voting will be at the school administration building from March 18 through April 2. The election is scheduled for April 6 and the voting location will be combined with the city council election at city hall.

Two positions will be decided on the school ballot, Lillie Sullivan, place 1, first elected in 1979; and Leslie Butler, place 2, first elected in 1982. Trustees serve three-year terms.

School startup 'later'

Snyder students won't report to classes next school year until after the Labor Day holidays — a change related to House Bill 72 mandates for Texas schools.

The official first day of school will be Sept. 3 — a Tuesday.

School board members Monday approved the 1985-86 School Calendar, a schedule which includes the later-than-usual school startup date and "like dates" with other District 2-AAAA schools for several key events during the year.

The district committee comprised of superintendents for these schools established the like dates to assist in the scheduling of related UIL events.

The dates which will match include the start of school, the end of school, the end of the first semester and the days for spring break.

Since schools will be starting later, classes will also end later in the spring of 1986. The final day students will be in class is May 29.

For teachers, the first day to be back at work next year is Aug. 26 and the final day is May 30.

The Christmas break will begin Dec. 20 — a Friday. For students, it will end on Jan. 6 — a Monday.

Leftwich chosen museum director

Shirley Leftwich has been named director of the Scurry County Museum after serving as interim director since last August.

She replaces Eunice Irwin, who resigned July 31 to become curator of education at the Center for Transportation and Commerce Museum in Galveston.

"I'm looking forward to a continuing association with the museum," Leftwich said. She first joined the museum staff in October, 1983, when she was named curator-registrar. Prior to that, she served as a volunteer gallery attendant and docent in the Diamond M Museum.

A native of Connecticut, Leftwich was graduated from Meriden High School in Connecticut. As a student there, she was chosen for four consecutive years to attend special summer art school for students of exceptional artistic ability.

She later attended San Antonio College where she earned a diploma in hotel management. She is continuing her studies, currently working toward a degree in art and history at Western Texas College.

Her duties as curator-registrar of the Scurry County Museum included development, research and implementation of exhibits, recording items being added to the museum collection, maintaining records and managing and

Some 700 concert tickets said sold

An estimated 700 tickets have been sold to the George Strait concert slated Thursday at the Scurry County Coliseum, reports Olivia Rogers, executive director of SCOOP, the concert's sponsoring agency.

Since local stores are still selling tickets and all monies have not been turned into SCOOP headquarters, she said the total number of ticket sales could be higher.

Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door. Tickets will be sold in advance through Wednesday afternoon.

The concert gets underway at 8 p.m. Thursday, but tickets may be purchased at the door beginning at 6 p.m.

Also featured will be Ronna Reeves and Clay Blaker.

Chairs will be arranged on the coliseum floor and all seating will be on a "first come basis," Rogers said. The only guaranteed front row seats are the two that were auctioned off at the Teen Center, Rogers said.

Proceeds from the concert will go toward the operation of Friendship Home, a home for abused or neglected teenage girls which SCOOP hopes to open next month in Snyder. SCOOP will receive 15 percent of the total concert ticket sales, Rogers said.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "After you've heard two eyewitness accounts of an incident, it makes you wonder about history."

The week before Christmas is alway hectic for teachers. Students are hyper in anticipation of a holiday break and the arrival of Santa.

Caddye Claborn, sixth grade teacher at Central, had the added frustration of losing her wedding rings. It was shortly after lunch that the teacher discovered the rings missing from her finger. Knowing that the rings are never taken off, she concluded they must have fallen off before or during lunch.

Kids and fellow teachers began a frantic search of the waste baskets in the room, and they vainly searched the restroom and other areas of the building.

Finally, Mrs. Claborn decided the rings must have been lost in the cafeteria when she put her tray away at lunch. A mad dash to the cafeteria was in vain as the lunch room workers had emptied the garbage into the outside dumpster with all of the other trash from the building. This included about 700 milk cartons from morning breakfast and noon lunch plus hundreds of soggy napkins and straws.

Mrs. Claborn made a decision. She was determined to find the rings which she figured rested at the bottom of the dumpster or in some milk carton hidden there. A sentry was posted to keep the garbage truck from making its daily pickup. Mrs. Claborn left school early to go home and change clothes. She had already enlisted three of her students and her own two daughters to help search the dumpster starting at 4 p.m.

It was dark before the last milk carton was retrieved, and with the help of flashlights, the dedicated crew finished their task–but the rings were still missing.

A dejected Mrs. Claborn and her children arrived home late that night, resigned that the rings were lost for good.

Settling her head into the pillow for what little sleep she hoped to get, she felt something strange beneath the pillow. Turning on the lights she discovered the lost rings that must have fallen off as she slept the night before.

Christmas week is tough enough without digging through milk cartons and soggy napkins in a smelly city dumpster.

4 chamber directors to be seated

Four directors recently elected to their first term on the Snyder Chamber of Commerce board will officially be seated Tuesday during the regular January meeting.

New to the board will be Margaret Drum, Tom Latos and Mike Banta. Gene Thomas — appointed to fill an unexpired term — will also begin his first full term.

The meeting will begin at 4 p.m. at the chamber offices, 2302 Ave. R.

Stock gift to college is revealed

Western Texas College is the beneficiary of a gift of 300 shares of Exxon stock from Mrs. Evelyn Davies, her third donation to the college in as many years.

Dr. Don Newbury, WTC president, made the announcement Monday afternoon during the regular January session of the board of trustees.

The stock is valued at $13,000, Newbury said, adding "we deeply appreciate Mrs. Davies's generous support of the college."

An announcement will be made at a later date as to how the donation will be used, he said.

Q. — In the "Tony Degrate Day" special paper, a junior high teacher named Don Parsons was mentioned. No one remembers a teacher there by that name. What years did he teach?

A. — The story — which was reprinted from a story originally written for the Texas-Penn State football program — referred to Degrate being caught circulating a drawing of his junior high math teacher, an incident he credited as the "beginning" of his art career since the teacher — after punishing him — commented that he had talent as an artist. The writer — a staffer for the University of Texas — was likely referring to Harmon Parsons, a junior high math teacher now retired.

In Brief

Execution set

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Doyle Edward Skillern, convicted in the slaying of a narcotics officer, was moved from death row today to a holding cell outside the Texas death chamber to await his scheduled execution after midnight.

Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Phil Guthrie said Skillern was taken from his cell at the Ellis II Unit and transported the some 15 miles to the Walls Unit in downtown Huntsville. He arrived at 9:02 a.m., Guthrie said.

Court rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today made it easier for public school officials to search students for drugs and weapons.

By a 6-3 vote, the court said teachers and administrators do not need court-approved warrants and do not have to have "probable cause" to believe a student is violating the law before searching that student.

Former governor dead at 77

AUSTIN (AP)–Alan Shivers, who was governor of Texas longer than anyone and was one of the state's most influential and respected politicians, has died of a heart attack at the age of 77.

Shivers, who was governor from 1949-1957, was taken from his downtown office to Seton Medical Center about 5:30 p.m. CDT Monday and died an hour later, said Diana Resnik, director of community affairs for the hospital.

A daughter-in-law, Robin Shivers, said the former Democratic governor was in good physical condition and had not had previous heart ailments or other illnesses.

Shivers, who led the "Shivercrats" in backing Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower, for president three decaded ago, was praised by present and former state leaders for his strides in mental health, education and highway programs.

A senior chairman of InterFirst Bank in Austin, Shivers had attended a late-afternoon board meeting before he was stricken, said George Christian, a political consultant and friend of Shivers.

"Texas has lost one of its most dedicated public servants, respected by friends and adversaries alike. I will miss contact with the good friend I had in Allan Ahivers," Gov. Mark White said.

Shivers, a Lufkin native, was elected to the Texas Senate at the age of 26, the youngest ever to hold that office. As senator, he represented Jefferson, Hardin, Liberty and Orange counties.

His political career was interrupted by service in the army in Europe during World War II.

In 1946, Shivers was elected lieutenant governor and succeeded Gov. Beauford Jester, who died in July 1949 after both began their second terms.

Texas voters then elected Shivers to three straight terms in 1950, 1952, and 1954. He was the first to be elected for three full terms. Price Daniel (1956, 1958, 1960) and John Connally (1962, 1964, 1966) also were elected to three terms.

Shivers made a record of expanding state services in such fields as mental health, prison reform, education and other humanitarian services. In the wake of veterans land and insurance scandals. He pushed in his last term for reform measures in both fields.

He campaigned extensively over the state in 1952 and 1956 for Eisenhower and in 1960 headed "the Texas Democrats for Nixon and Lodge." He still insisted that, he remained a Democrat, even though he supported many Republicans up through Ronald Reagan in 1984.

Although he has supported Republican presidents, Shivers did support Lyndon Johnson when Johnson was thrust into the presidency after John F. Kennedy's 1963 assaion.

In 1952 when Sen Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, Shivers' friend, won, the Democratic nomination, Stevenson thought Shivers would back him.

But Stevenson told Shivers that, if elected he would veto a bill giving Texas jurisdiction over a Gulf of Mexico area called the Tidelands.

Shivers decided to organize and lead the campaign for Eisenhower. As a result he appeared on the covers of both Time and Newsweek the same week. His followers were known as "Shivercrats."

Upon retiring as governor in January 1957, Shivers devoted his time to his business interests, especially the Western Pipelines Co., of which he was half owner and chairman of the board.

He had a number of enterprises to manage, including Rio Grande Valley citrus acreage, cattle, banking and real state, much of it the inheritance of his wife, the former Marialice Shary, from her father, John H. Shary.

Shivers is survived by his wife, whom he married in 1937; by their four children, John Shary Shivers, Allan Shivers, Jr., Marialice Sue Shivers and Brian McGee Shivers; and 10 grandchildren.

Funeral services were pending.

Observances set to honor King

ATLANTA (AP)–Singer Stevie wonder and civil rights leader the Rev. Ralph Abernathy were among 300 people at a ceremony empowering a commission to plan the first federal holiday honoring a black American, Martin Luther King Jr., who would have been 56 today.

In New York, where Mayor Edward Koch refused to make today a city holiday, blacks were asked to boycott public transporation in protest, while in Florida a green ribbon signifying life graced an oak tree planted in king's memory near the state capitol.

A judge once barred from law school because he is black gave the oath of office Monday to commissioners in Atlanta who will plan observerance of Martin Luther King Jr. day, a federal holiday beginning Jan. 20, 1986.

King was born in Atlanta in 1929.

U. S. District Judge Horace Ward swore in members of the Martin Luther King Jr. Federal Holiday Commission during a ceremony in the auditorium of the Freedom Hall complex, built in memory of the slain civil rights leader.

King's widow, Coretta King Scott, will serve as chairman of the commission, which will go out of existence next year after planning and staging the first observerance of the King holiday.

"We must see that Martin's day is a holiday to honor, through him, the achievement of all black people of this nation who have struggled over the years for racial and social and political justice," Mrs. King told the crowd of about 300.

Twenty-one of the 31 commission members, including Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., Illinois Gov. James Thompson, Wonder and Abernathy, were on hand for the ceremony.

Legislation establishing the third Monday in January as a national holiday honoring King was passed by Congress last year and signed into law in November by President Reagan.

Black New Yorkers were urged to take a leaf from King's book today and boycott public transporation in memory of the successful boycott of buses in Montgomery, Ala., during the 1960s.

Dear Abby

Long Journey to Sobriety Begins With Hesitant Steps

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing the letter from "Optimistic," the female college student who said she felt as though she had really accomplished something that day even though all she did was go to the mailbox. She said, "I didn't have the guts to go to a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous, so I wrote and asked for some literature. I just read it, and I feel better already."

Abby, please print this message for "Optimistic": I, too, am a female. I'm now 43 and was in your shoes for eight long, wet, miserable years. I also sent for the Alcoholics Anonymous literature and prayed a lot. I even found the guts to attend a meeting about once a year, but I always arrived late, hid in a corner and left early, afraid of being recognized—then complained (to myself) that it was an "unfriendly" organization.

Last year I became so depressed that it was either treatment or suicide. Even in that state of mind I knew that treatment offered me more of a future.

I contacted the Jefferson Alcohol and Drug Abuse Center here in Louisville, and went into its 35-day treatment program last February. It's been slow. Twenty-five years of drinking takes its toll, mentally and physically, but today I know I am a survivor. Eleven months of sobriety is nothing to brag about, but I feel better now than I have felt in years.

Contact A.A. again and tell them you don't have the guts to attend a meeting yet, and they'll send someone to take you, or have someone meet you outside the meeting place. (It's always easier to walk into a large group of people with someone else.) Go early and hang around the coffee pot and just smile. You'll meet a lot of nice friendly people who have been in your shoes. Once you make the commitment to try to work the program, your life will improve.

I know this can be said better, but never more from the heart. I'm still not strong enough to go public, so if you print this, sign me ...

DEAR ABBY: After 12 years of marriage, my husband and I realized that our sex life was practically dead, so we went to a marriage counselor.

The counselor (a woman) told us that a good way to put a little pep in our marriage would be to tell each other about our sexual fantasies.

Should I tell him about mine? He's not in any of them.

Committee raising inaugural monies

WASHINGTON (AP) — If it's a party, Texans will be there. If it's a really big party, they'll figure out how to pay for it.

A "calling all Texans" cry brings a passle of people out of their offices over at the inaugural committee headquarters in southeast Washington.

Many have helped bring in the $10 million in private funds that are expected to provide for the official inaugural activities.

Jill Collins, who ran her own public relations firm in San Antonio before joining up with Vice President George Bush's campaign last summer, is assistant director for promotion of inaugural souvenirs. She's one of the people who tries to figure out how to sell everything from a $1,750 porcelain eagle to a $5 poster.

"We're cranking out press releases so people will know, even if they're not going to be in Washington for the inaugural activities, they can still be a part of it," she said.

Eileen Harris of Dallas is in merchandising. This year, she said, souvenirs will be sold in Washington-area retail stores, gift shops and hotels.

"This is the first time it's been done," she said, "so I'm very proud — 'right proud' as we say in Dallas."

Dave Frederickson, an advertising executive from Houston, pulled off a coup, signing USA Today as a media sponsor for the inaugural. The newspaper is donating full-page ads for the inaugural souvenirs.

Dot Vannerson of Houston "started in fund-raising and raised $1.78 million."

"When we finished raising all the money, I moved over to operations to help spend it," she laughed. "It's always fun and a pleasure to do something for the president."

But Texans aren't just paying for other people's parties, they are throwing their own.

Mike Hudson, an Amarillo native who is now White House legislative liaison officer, normally spends his time negotiating with Congress over budgets and appropriations. For the past few weeks, though, he has been negotiating with caterers, hoels and country-western bands for the Texas "Black Tie and Boots" inaugural gala honoring the Bush family.

"We're not turning people away if they don't have boots on," Hudson laughed. "I personally don't have any black cowboy boots, but I'm going to wear my brown ones.

"We just wanted a real 'Texas' event," he said.

The Saturday night party was not on the list of official inaugural balls, but Hudson says it wasn't an official event last year either and 5,000 people came.

GUEST SPEAKER — Pat McEachern of Lubbock, former fashion designer for Hemphill-Wells, was featured speaker for the January luncheon meeting of the Christian Women's Club. (Club Photo)

Trusting God helped gain renewed self-confidence

At one time believing that suicide remained her only alternative, Pat McEachern of Lubbock told Snyder Christian Women's Club members how God brought peace back to her life.

McEachern, a former fashion designer with Hemphill-Wells, spoke to the women during their regular monthly luncheon meeting Jan. 9 in the Snyder Country Club.

As a child, she had developed no self-confidence or sense of self-worth. Her stepfather's Air Force career caused several family moves and made forming strong friendships difficult for her.

Able to convince family and friends that she was well adjusted by "painting on my happy face," her depression deepened even after she married.

Remembering an invitation "just to talk," McEachern visited her Sunday School teacher's wife. "Listening to her talk, I understood for the first time that Christ died for me on the cross and that Jesus is the bridge that fills the gap in our lives."

Through a Friendship Bible Coffee, she learned how to live the Christian life every day. She said that in time, with the help of her Christian friends and family, she developed the self-confidence that made it possible for her to become a fashion designer.

In addition to the speaker, the program included musical selections by Sheila Smith and a winter fashion show by Snyder Athletic Center. Helen Feinsod and Judy McLarty presented a skit to familiarize the women with the purpose of Friendship Bible Coffees.

CWC's next luncheon is set for Feb. 13 in the Snyder Country Club. Express It will present gift ideas for Valentine's Day. Speaker for the event will be Velma Cunningham of Lubbock with music by Glenda Hollingsworth.

SKIT TELLS STORY — Ladies attending the Christian Women's Club luncheon on Jan. 9 were treated to a skit by Helen Feinsod (on the left) and Judy "The Box Lady" McLarty. The two women used the skit to emphasize the importance of Friendship Bible Coffees. Interested persons are asked to call Billie at 573-8341 for more information. (Club Photo)

Opening lead: ♠ 8

Many of Paul Soloway's peers place him at the top of the world's great players. His play of today's three no-trump contract should win him more votes for that estimable position.

The two-club overcall by West was an artificial bid showing both majors. In view of the vulnerability, North had no desire to inflict a penalty on non-vulnerable opponents, since he felt his side could do better. He immediately bid game in no-trump, and all passed.

Soloway won the opening lead with the spade 10 in his hand. Who among us would not now play the queen of diamonds? Soloway didn't. He knew that he had nine tricks if the king of diamonds was with West. But if not, he needed to grab a heart trick before the spades were established for the defense. Accordingly, at trick two he led a low heart. West ducked and declarer went up with the king. Now he played back to the ace of clubs to take a diamond finesse. East won the king and could now take three heart tricks but had no way to set three no-trump.

Try playing diamonds before playing a heart to the king. East will win the diamond and return a spade. The spade suit will now be established. When hearts are led, West will grab the lead with his heart ace and run spades to set the hand.

Odor-neutralizing products available

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Years ago, the late entertainer Jimmy Durante used to raise a laugh when he tilted his head to one side, touched the tip of his nose, and remarked "the nose knows."

It turns out Durante was right. When it comes to measuring the pungency of aromas, the only instrument available is the nose, according to John D. Bryson, president of a Milwaukee-based company which makes odor-neutralizing products for home, commercial and health facility use.

If you should want to compare perfumes or decide whether an industrial facility is polluting the atmosphere with noxious odors, you'd have to assemble a panel of sniffers, Bryson said.

The fact that bad odors can't be precisely measured, however, does not mean they don't exist. A rather wide variety of situations exist in which odors need to be neutralized in the interests of safety, health and wellbeing, he said.

On the home front, smoke damaged houses, areas where pets have sprayed, some cooking odors, and the presence of damp and mildew can smell bad enough to require neutralizing.

In industry, plastic-laminate manufacturing plants which use formaldehyde-based products are among sites requiring attention. Others include sewage treatment plants, tanneries, slaughterhouses and landfills.

In the hospital and health facility field, a variety of diseases such as some types of cancers produce piercing odors.

Beginning with strewing herbs, used as early as the Middle Ages, odor-masking devices have traditionally been employed to overcome some of the problems. But a more recent development has been the use of odor-removing charcoal and other types of filters.

Bryson's firm, however, has come up with a new system that seems to fall somewhere between the two methods. It includes a liquid which saturates a fabric material and is released into the atmosphere as a gas through a plastic "envelope." The plastic holder can be opened to a greater or lesser extent to release the odor-neutralizing liquid. According to Bryson, this envelope is patented and is unique at present.

The company's product line ranges from large electric filters for industrial installations (at a cost of $1,000 or more) to small disposable units for use in a kitchen, bathroom or the family car, for example, that use no outside energy source and sell for under $5. (The company also offers a more expensive electric unit for the home, in addition to the disposable canisters which may last for up to six months.)

Development began in 1972 when Bryson received a visit from Dr. J.F.T. Berliner and Dr. Denny Watkins. The two men — an engineer and a chemist — had formulated a liquid capable of neutralizing odors.

Bryson, whose field was hospital supplies, saw the advantage of such a product. A significant public health and amenity problem for hospitals has been the odors produced by some patients with serious diseases.

These unpleasant smells have made it difficult for health-care professionals and family members and friends to care for and spend time with such patients.

After several years of development by his firm — G.D. Searle Co. — the company disbanded this part of its business. Bryson bought the division and renamed it Vaportek. At present, he said, Vaportek equipment is found in most of the cancer hospitals in the country and at other health facilities, as well.

Although the product has caught on in commercial and hospital markets consumer interest has been relatively sparse in the United States. As a group, Americans are not very odor-conscious, according to Bryson.

On the other hand, in Japan, where about 150,000 disposable units a month are sold, the message has gotten through perhaps because of a series of fortuitous events.

For one thing, the Vaportek liquid formula is made from natural oils derived from trees and plants that happen to be found freely in the forests of Japan.

The Japanese are said to believe that the forest is especially efficacious as a health builder. Many Japanese make regular visits to breathe in forest air in a belief that they are promoting good health.

Furthermore, as a society the Japanese put great store in what authorities say. So when Dr. K. Kamiyama, an environmental authority, said the liquid did contain the right forest oils, sales took a leap.

"It wasn't a product endorsement, but it certainly didn't hurt," Bryson said.

COMPANY DINNER
Chicken & Sausage
Broccoli & Salad
Fruit & Macaroons

CHICKEN & SAUSAGE

4-pound chicken, cut up
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
1 large (6 ounces) onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
1 large (6 ounces) green pepper, seeded and cut into rings
16-ounce can whole tomatoes in juice, undrained but broken up
1 pound sweet Italian sausage

Wash and dry chicken with paper towels. Mix salt and paprika and rub over skin sides of chicken. In a 13 ½ by 8 ¾ by 1 ¾-inch baking dish, stir together onion, green pepper and tomatoes. Add chicken, skin side up, in a single layer. Bake, uncovered, in a 400-degree oven until browned and tender — 1 hour. Remove chicken; strain vegetables and add to chicken; chill. Chill liquid (left after straining vegetables) separately in a bowl. Remove hardened fat from liquid and thicken with arrowroot, cornstarch or flour. Pour over chicken and vegetables and reheat. Meanwhile panfry sausage and garnish chicken with it. Makes 6 servings.

Hormones cause male baldness

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in your column about the 36-year-old male who was going bald. I wish I could be so lucky. I'm not even 21 and my hair has been falling out so badly that I'm almost afraid to wash it every day. It started to fall out during my freshman year in college, and it is getting quite thin.

Can you tell me how to get some Loniten tablets? I was afraid that my doctor wouldn't give me a prescription for them, or is that type of drug prescribed all of the time?

DEAR READER — Male pattern baldness often begins early in life. Your case is not unique, no matter how distressing it is, and washing your hair every day has nothing to do with it. Male pattern baldness is caused by male hormones within the hair follicles.

See a dermatologist so you can find out what the real cause of your hair loss is. You can ask the dermatologist about minoxidil (Loniten), which has been used as a lotion in studies to test its effectiveness to control baldness. The lotion helps to prevent the effects that a minoxidil pill would cause. The pill is used to lower high blood pressure. This lotion is not for women, since it may cause increased hair growth on the face.

Finally, if your condition warrants it, you may want a hair transplant if nothing else works. I have dicussed this and other aspects of baldness in The Health Letter 12-6, Hair Care, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 11-year-old son was born with a hole between the lower chambers (ventricles) in his heart. He has been seen by several pediatric cardiologists and, until now, all have said that he needs open-heart surgery. When he was 4, a heart catheterization showed that the hole was between 1.5 and 2.0. His father, now my ex, would not sign for the surgery.

Recently my son was seen at a university center and the doctor took a very blase attitude saying that they never operate on a 1.5 hole. I would rather he not have surgery, but I don't want it neglected if he does.

He is still very healthy and growing very fast. Last year he grew 6 inches and gained 5 pounds.

DEAR READER — Many pediatric cardiologists believe that small ventricular septal defects, which your son has, do not need to be operated on. Many close in the first few years of birth, and some even close much later. As the heart enlarges, the hole gets smaller until it closes completely or becomes so small that it is not important.

Your son's rapid growth suggests that the hole does not seriously compromise his circulation. That is a good sign.

I cannot determine whether he needs surgery or not on the information you sent. The size of the hole and how much blood is shunted from the left side of the heart to the right through the hole are important, as are the other clinical findings.

I can assure you that the medical center you visited is a good one. Large centers usually have more information and experience with such problems. I think that you can trust them, and if you are concerned, you could have him seen there again. He can have an operation later if he needs it.

Simple ways to cut tax bills

EDITOR'S NOTE: This second article in a series of five on preparing 1984 income tax returns deals with charitable contributions and IRAs.

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 23 million couples and individuals found a simple way to cut their tax bills when they filed returns last year and they didn't have to itemize deductions to do it. The saving this year can be even greater.

If you are among the 64 percent of taxpayers who do not itemize, you still may write off part of what you give to charity. A couple filing a joint return or a single person may deduct 25 percent of the first $300 contributed, or $75. For a married person filing a separate return, the limit is 25 percent of the first $150, or a maximum write-off of $37.50.

The deduction may be claimed on either the long Form 1040, Form 1040A or 1040EZ.

You will have to file the long form and use Schedule A if you made a larger contribution to a charitable organization in 1984 and want to deduct it. Contributions may be in cash or property; you may also deduct some of the expenses of doing volunteer work.

If, for example, you work four hours a week for the Red Cross, you may deduct unreimbursed expenses of getting to and from the work but not the value of your time. If you drive to your charity work, you may deduct 9 cents a mile or the actual cost of gas and oil. In either case, you may add the costs of tolls and parking.

The Internal Revenue Service will not allow a deduction for the portion of a contribution that benefited you. If you pay $3 for a box of Girl Scout Cookies and the cookies are valued at $2, you may deduct only the $1 that is an actual contribution. No charitable deduction is allowed for political contributions (although you may claim a credit for some of those), or for raffle tickets.

You must include a statement describing how you valued property donated to charity. IRS Publication 526 is free and probably will answer any question you have about contributions.

There's also a big tax benefit for giving something to yourself — setting aside part of your current earnings in an Individual Retirement Account. The rules on this year's returns are basically the same with one exception: You must make your 1984 IRA contribution by April 15, 1985, regardless of when you file your tax return. The IRA benefit may be claimed by filing Form 1040 or 1040A but not 1040EZ.

A worker may contribute up to $2,000 of 1984 earnings to an IRA and avoid paying tax on that money or the interest it earns until it is withdrawn at age 59½ or later. If a worker has a spouse with no job outside the home, the couple may contribute a total of $2,250 divided between two separate accounts any way they see fit so long as neither claims more than $2,000. They must file a joint return. A two-earner couple may set aside up to $2,000 per spouse if each earned at least that much.

You risk stiff penalties from the IRS and bank or other institution that holds your IRA if you withdraw it prematurely. For example, if your IRA is in a 36-month account and you withdraw the money before that time is up, the bank might penalize you several months' interest. The IRS would tax the full amount withdrawn and add a 10-percent penalty.

However, there is no IRS penalty for a "rollover" from one IRA account to another. Thus, if your IRA in a 36-month certificate of deposit is maturing and you discover a more lucrative investment, you have 60 days from the time you withdraw it to put it into a new IRA. You may use the money any way you see fit during that 60 days but you may make such a rollover only once a year.

Whatever form your IRA takes, you may not use it as collateral for a loan. And the money may not be invested in such collectibles as stamps, coins or art works.

NEXT: Deductions.

Some capitalize on missing children

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A half-naked, bruised child, her ankles in chains, stares sadly from the pages of the brochure. "Imagine a system that would help increase the odds of finding a missing child," says the cover.

The brochure tells parents that by paying $29.95 this year to register their youngsters with Missing Children Information Services Inc., the company can "significantly enhance the probability of an early recovery" should they ever run away or be kidnapped.

Child advocates say the Lexington firm — which promises information and photographs for police, plus wanted posters, handbills and other search services — is one of a growing line of private companies specializing in missing children.

"It seems like everybody wants to make money off the problem," said Kathy Rosendahl, director of the Florida-based Children's Rights of America. "It's going on all over."

It's estimated that 4,000 to 20,000 children are abducted by strangers every year, and the problem has attracted growing attention.

Leaders of non-profit groups devoted to the problem of missing children don't know what to make of Missing Children Information Services, a new company operated by Richard Drew.

Capt. John McClure said Lexington police are reserving judgment.

The wide-eyed little girl in the brochure, wearing underpants and chains and posing on a dirty mattress, is Drew's daughter. The bruise around her eye, he says, is makeup.

Drew's main selling point is time. He tells parents police won't investigate a missing child for 24 hours — a delay that Kentucky and other states have eliminated — but that his company will notify law enforcement agencies within 500 miles of the youngster's home town and get the search started.

"We make time our ally with very rapid information dissemination," Drew said. "We think parents should provide their child with the best available. ...

"This is an ideal way for parents to inform police of all pertinent information about their child."

His company, which he said registered nine children in its first week and has 12 sales representatives in nine states, advertises that it will keep detailed microfilmed records of a child's schedule and activities, friends, teachers — even the leader of his Boy Scout troup. All of that — plus size, weight, eye and hair color and a recent photograph — would be printed on a card for parents to hand over to police, according to Drew.

For another $16 a year, he says, the company will offer a $10,000 reward. He contends that only a for-profit concern can offer such services, but police and leaders of the advocate groups say most parents find the community eager to help when a child disappears.

"What are people buying? Services that most non-profit groups offer at no charge or a low charge," Ms. Rosendahl said by telephone from Largo, Fla. "It's just as though someone tries to profit from scare tactics. ...

"People who have birth certificates, shot records and savings bonds are able to store them themselves. Why people think they need a fingerprint bank or a registry to store this information is beyond me," she said. Parents who store their own records, she added, don't have to worry about who has access to them.

"I'd rather have a law enforcement official or an organization that has a track record ... doing this for me," said Jeannette Demenkoff of Child Find in New Paltz, N.Y.

The advocate groups say Drew's company is one of many for-profit offshoots of the various systems — fingerprinting, photographing, making ID cards, keeping good records — they have offered parents. The non-profit agencies also do manuals.

"One day this guy came by with a book he was going to sell for $5 and wanted to know what I thought about it," Ms. Rosendahl said. "Why sell it? It's the same things we provide parents in our safety programs, and we just hand it out."

There are private fingerprint banks, registry services, firms selling coded plates for a youngster's shoes, homing devices to implant in a child's teeth and clothing labels printed in invisible ink, according to Ms. Rosendahl and Jay Howell of the Washington-based National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

"We get a lot of phone calls here," Howell said. "Wackos call up and say they've got a device, they can't talk about it, but it'd be instrumental in recovering lost children. ...

"Some things are a worthwhile investment for a family that's concerned," he said, such as guide books or a private detective if a child is missing. "But some are so far-fetched. They're really exploiting fear."

The non-profit groups are most incensed by new organizations that set up telephone solicitation banks in a town, raise money and then move on. It isn't always certain where the money goes, but law enforcement officials are rarely able to stop such groups, according to Ms. Rosendahl and Anne Kahane of Find The Children in Los Angeles.

Brother, sister reunited again

STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Carrie Williams and Tom Laney are brother and sister, but when she was 5 and he was 3, they went their separate ways. It was 15 years before they found each other again.

Their parents gave them up, and the children were adopted by different families — Carrie by Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Allen of Abilene, and Tom by Mr. and Mrs. Jim Laney of Wichita, Kansas.

Brother and sister met again last month at a Stephenville motel after Tom and his adopted parents drove to Stephenville from Oklahoma.

It wasn't easy to find each other again.

"We don't know where our natural parents are," Carrie said. She and Tom did know they were born in Temple, and were adopted through Christian Homes in Abilene.

"I'm glad that I found her," said Tom. "I've been looking for her for a long time. I first started asking questions about her two years ago."

According to Carrie, the rules of the adoption agency required both Tom and Carrie to request information about each other before the information could be released. Tom asked about his sister two years ago, but couldn't be told anything about Carrie until she asked the agency about him.

"We had no contact or anything since we were parted," said Carrie. "His dad was the one who put him up (looking for her), so he wrote Mrs. Miller (at the adoption agency) and asked about me."

Ironically, Carrie got in touch with Tom first, although Tom requested the information first. "I called the operator and got listings for Laney," said Carrie.

"It took me about eighth different numbers, and I finally got ahold of him close to the last one," she said. "His mother answered the phone, and he came to the phone playing his saxaphone. I could hear him in the background."

"I was sort of shocked when she called," said Tom. "When she said she was Carrie Williams, I thought it was some girl from school, but I didn't know a girl named Carrie Williams. Then she said 'Your sister' and I said 'Oh, that one.'"

"For a long time I didn't even think I had a brother," said Carrie. "Then the other day I had a dream. I dreamed of a little boy with a short haircut about the age of 3. I just remember how he was when we split apart."

Carrie has been married to Paul Williams for a little over a year. The couple live in Stephenville where they are both students at Tarleton State University.

Paul "...thinks it's strange," said Carrie. "He said he's glad we found each other though."

Tom said he wasn't thinking of only his sister, though. "The only thing that was on my mind was worrying about Mom and Dad, mostly why they gave us up.

"It is sort of a disapointment (that we were separated.) I was confused and angered," said Tom.

"It's all better now," he said.

Senior citizens learn computers

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — For a few minutes, 77-year-old Bettie Nash was a rich woman.

"Did I strike oil? It says, 'Eureka — we struck oil!' " she said as she sat before the green glow of an oil derrick.

Sure enough, the senior citizen had hit black gold. For the next 20 minutes, she wheeled and dealed her find into a multimillion-dollar enterprise.

But at 3 p.m., her entire fortune was gone with the flick of a switch.

Ms. Nash had no intention of becoming Texas' newest oil tycoon. She had just wanted to learn how to organize her family's genealogy without having to "travel all around the country and back."

Ms. Nash was one of 11 senior citizens from the Bob Gilmore Center who invested two hours recently learning a few basics of microcomputers during a class at the Central Texas College Killeen Mall Center.

The students spent the first hour of the free class learning about the personal computer, its language and computer terminology from Terry Enyeart, CTC computer instructor.

Not a single one of the elderly students had used a microcomputer before, and the questions flew. Ms. Enyeart quickly dispelled any fears her pupils might have had about computers.

"We all think computers are intelligent," she said, "But a computer has no more intelligence than a light switch. It's all in the programming."

Once Ms. Enyeart had explained the difference between hardware and software, bits and bytes and the various computer languages the students turned to the keyboard for an hour of hands-on experience with the college's IBM peronal computers.

Some of the senior students bridged the generation gap with lively games of "Sea Battle."

A phrase from an old nautical tune tolled from James Messer's computer. Ms. Enyeart laughed. "Did you get sunk?" she asked.

"Boy, I'll tell you — I'm going to be court-martialed!" Messer replied.

Others plotted their biorhythms, while still others took chances drilling for oil or playing "Blackjack."

"Now I have $2,000" said Ruby Miller, as the green glow of playing cards danced in the corner of her screen. "What am I supposed to do, take it and run?"

Ms. Miller did't run. She placed a $1,000 bet instead. The IBM video display terminal dealt her a nine and a two. She pressed the H key — for hit. Another nine. She touched the S — for stand.

The house had 15. Miller had 20. Her profits rose to $3,000.

"This is neat!" she said.

As the class ended and the students began to leave, one of them walked up to Ms. Nash.

"You ended up with a lot of oil, I hear," she said.

"Oh, yes!" Ms. Nash replied. Then she added, "I expect J.R. Ewing to be after me some day soon."

Dioxin cleanup to cost several million dollars

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The surfaces and medians of about seven streets will be ripped up and replaced in a $4 million cleanup of dioxin from a neighborhood contaminated by the toxic substance during operation of a herbicide plant.

Up to 50,000 parts per billion of dioxin were discovered in June 1983 at the plant, owned by Diamond Shamrock Chemicals Co. of Dallas. The federal Environmental Protection Agency has said that more than 1 part per billion may be hazardous.

Areas within several blocks of the plant, where the cleanup began Monday, were also contaminated, probably when materials were trucked off the site, officials said.

Veteran wants to prevent another Vietnam

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A member of a Veterans of Foreign Wars chapter that criticized U.S. policy in Central America said he hoped the resolution would help prevent another Vietnam.

The statement by Bill Motto Post 5888 in Santa Cruz accusing President Reagan of increasing tensions in Central America was the first break by a post with the national organization on foreign policy, VFW spokesman Wayne LaDue said in Kansas City, Mo.

Dean Metcalf, one of 50 Vietnam veterans in the post, said, "I want the lesson that we paid for in blood to be learned."

Defense Dept. to sell 779 guided missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department plans to sell 779 Patriot guided missiles to West Germany for $1.1 billion, if Congress does not object and West Germany accepts the terms.

The Pentagon, advising Congress of its plans Monday, said the sale would improve Germany's military capabilities while "enhancing the defense of the Western Alliance." It also said "the basic military balance in the region" would not be affected.

In addition to the 779 missiles, the deal also calls for the sale of 12 complete "fire units," or control stations; one training fire unit; 14 radars; 100 launcher stations, and associated maintenance equipment and repair parts. The prime U.S. contractor is the Raytheon Co. of Lexington, Mass.

Four Frenchmen given jail terms

PARIS (AP) — Four Frenchmen convicted of trying to export banned equipment from the United States to the Soviet Union have been sentenced to prison terms.

The attempt to export equipment of possible use in missile guidance was foiled by U.S. Customs officials at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport in December 1981. The equipment was said to be worth more than $2 million.

Robert Almori was sentenced to three years in prison, while Marcel Goldfarb, Jean-Michel Didat and Maurice Bocquet each received two years. All were charged with forgery or complicity in forgery, and all were fined the equivalent of $11,000 in addition to the prison terms.

Couple drives 14,000 miles

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Brian and Margaret Wilson arrived here five months after they set out from Philadelphia in their secondhand camper with the idea of driving all the way to La Paz, Bolivia.

They didn't quite make it to their ultimate destination, but in their 14,000-mile odyssey from Philadelphia to Panama City, the Wilsons of Essex, England, saw more of America than most people will see in a lifetime.

"The strange idea of wanting to drive through Central and South America was something that had been on my mind a long time," Wilson, a 57-yearold headmaster of Chigweel School in Essex, said of the trip.

Though suffering from dental problems and cramped from "living in a box 10 feet by 6 feet," Wilson said he and his wife would have continued their trip to South America if they hadn't "run out of time and money."

They were also running out of roadway. The Pan-American Highway they followed most of their way ends here abruptly before reaching Panama's border with Colombia and the South American continent.

The Wilsons spoke in an interview about their trip and the joys and sorrows of life on the road.

Their memories include haunting images that stayed with them throughout their journey like dead horses lying abandoned along the roadside and the sad brown eyes of children who always scurried to beg from them in small towns and cities across Mexico and Central America.

Other images include what Mrs. Wilson described as the "magic" of Palenque and Tikal, the pre-Columbian ruins tucked away in isolated, jungle areas of southern Mexico and northern Guatemala where visitors are reminded of the fact that America was civilized long before it was "discovered" by Christopher Columbus.

Above all, however, the Wilsons say the variety of people they met during their long trip is what they'll remember most.

Mrs. Wilson, 44, said she kept busy throughout the trip by working on the 15,000-word thesis on pre-Columbian art and culture she'll present soon after her return to London's Central School of Art and Design.

Wilson said he read a lot during the trip. Apart from a wellworn copy of the "South American Handbook," he said his reading material included one book that he found it easy to relate to: John Steinbeck's "Travels with Charley."

Toll-free road telephone line nixed

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The Oregon State Police's toll-free road report telephone line was so successful it put itself out of business.

Instituted last October as a convenience to travelers, the comprehensive rundown listed road conditions on major highways across the state.

But as of Friday night, callers heard, "Due to excessive cost, this service has been discontinued."

"It worked too well," said state police Sgt. Melvin McGill. "The people of the state of Oregon can't afford it."

OSP still owes AT&T $102,729 for calls to the line in November and December. During those two months, 388,688 people called the line and 213,504 got busy signals, officials said.

Man always scrambling for parking space

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Don't talk to Harry Guyton about the problems of finding parking in the city. He went through his entire career scrambling for a space.

The year was 1966. He owned a Studebaker. The San Francisco 49ers were playing at Kezar Stadium, 19 years away from their second Super Bowl appearance.

Guyton had signed up for a personal parking space at the Hall of Justice, where he was a rookie investigator for the Public Defender's office.

He figured he might have to wait a few months. But those months turned into years. Guyton sold his Studebaker, bought a Plymouth. He moved from Santa Clara to Daly City, then on to San Francisco.

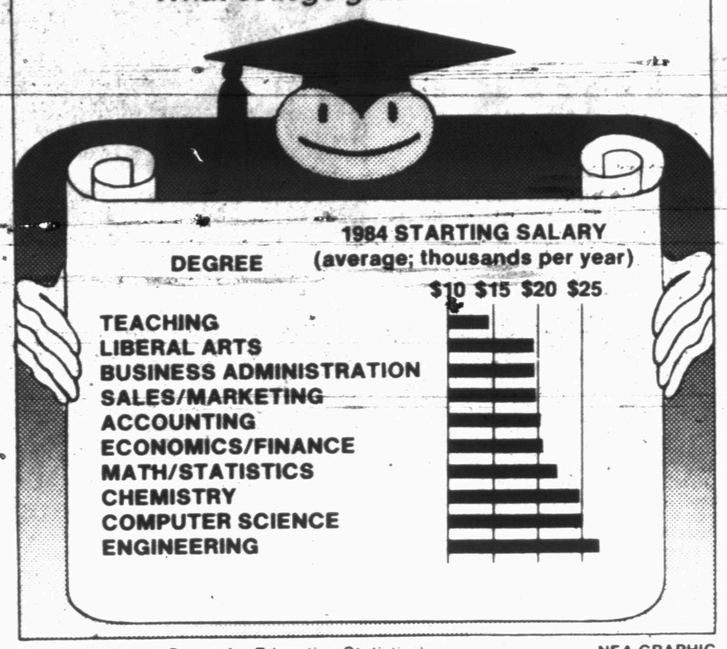

More time passed. He sold the Plymouth and bought a Ford, then a Volkswagen, Lincoln and a Mazda.

A few months ago, it finally happened. Harry Guyton got his parking space. But when a city official called to tell him the good news, somebody else answered Harry's phone.

Guyton had retired and moved to San Jose. "I still don't know why it took so long," he said of his career-long struggle for personal parking.

What college graduates earn

In today's business world, people who graduate from four-year colleges with science or math degrees receive the highest starting salaries. At the other end of the scale, graduates who majored in liberal arts or teaching make much less money.

Henry VIII died in 1547, and his 9-year-old son was named Edward VI.

English admiral Sir Francis Drake died in 1596 aboard his ship off the coast of Panama.

King Charles I of England surrendered to Parliament in 1647 and was beheaded two years later.

Yerba Buena officially became San Francisco in 1847.

School researches site of old village

WICKLIFFE, Ky. (AP) — Kit Wesler, an anthropology professor and archaeologist who directs the study of a prehistoric Indian village here, has some popular misconceptions to contend with these days.

One is the romantic view of his profession presented in the hugely popular movies "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom."

"People expect me to carry a whip and be a lot more interesting than I am," he said.

Another misconception is about what kind of place it is he runs.

For years it was Ancient Buried City, a combination tourist attraction and museum whose main draw was an unearthed burial ground strewn with about 150 skeletons.

It became the Wickliffe Mounds Research Center last year after the site was donated to Murray State University.

Visitors are still charged admission to look at the skeletons, but Wesler hopes to develop the site into a more serious museum and the center of an anthropology program for the university.

"This will give us probably the best facility for an ongoing field school in the state," he said in a recent interview.

The village, which housed 500 to 1,000 people for about 300 years before being abandoned around the year 1250, is one of the best-preserved examples of mound-building Indian culture in America.

While the school's administrators prepare the required state applications for a new degree program, Wesler is taking stock of just what has been dug from the site since a geographer discovered it 100 years ago.

The mounds were undisturbed until around 1930, Wesler said, when workers putting a highway through the area began digging up a lot of artifacts.

"That got everybody pretty excited," he said.

Particularly excited was Colonel Fain White King, a Paducah lumberman who bought the surrounding land with the idea of developing Ancient Buried City.

Though ignorant of archaeology, King got some training from a University of Alabama team and did what Wesler called "a fairly respectable job" of excavating enough of the site to offer a good tour.

The first troop of Boy Scouts was organized in England in 1908 by Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

Ethiopian livestock pact 'agreement in principle'

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopia says a pact to sell livestock to Egypt was an "agreement in principle" and it has not contracted to export food at a time when 7.75 million of its people are suffering from hunger.

Ethiopian state radio reported Sunday that a one-year trade agreement was signed Sunday under which Ethiopia would send Egypt livestock, meat and farm products in return for metals, fertilizers, medicine and construction materials.

But a government relief official, reached by telephone Monday in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, said the bilateral pact is "more political than economic."

"There are no immediate plans to export cattle or foodstuffs," said the official. "It was an intergovernmental agreement in the making for several years. And when you say food, it refers to food not utilized by our people."

The Ethiopian highland people hit hardest by drought and famine are used to a diet of goat meat and bread.

Dusters rocket past Clarendon Bulldogs

If Coach Joe Cushing found fault with his Western Texas College Dusters last night, it was only that they eased off the throttle late in the game.

"It's kind of hard to keep it going in that circumstance," admitted Cushing, whose Dusters dropped 12 points off of an 25-point lead before rallying to burn Clarendon 83-62. "We won't be able to let up against teams like (No. 1 ranked) Odessa, though. But I was pleased with the way we played. We had a good defensive effort and our offense worked well."

The win gives Western a sparkling 20-4 season record, 3-1 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play.

Clarendon fell to 10-4 and 1-3.

The Dusters went inside to 6-2 post Clara Campbell for 25 of their 83 points. That, and a strong defensive effort proved to be the difference.

Campbell knocked down 8 of her points in the first eight minutes as Western rolled to a 14-7 advantage. Renvy Evans popped for a three-point play and Renee Ramaekers came off the bench for a 15-foot jumper as Western led 19-7 before the midpoint of the first half.

Western took a 39-23 lead into intermission.

The second half opened as a carbon copy of the first. Campbell quickly stuck up 9 points as Western outscored the visitors 13-4. Patti Hayes' accurate freethrow shooting left WTC up by 25 points, 52-27 with 15:27 still to play in the contest.

Pam Walker, a 5-11 sophomore from Lake Charles, kept Clarendon from getting totally blown out. She chalked up 29 for the night, including 22 of the Bulldogs' 39 second-half points.

The Dusters kept the rest of the 'Dogs under control, however. Linda Weatherton had 9, Sharon Birkenfeld 8 and Tia Stewart only 6.

In contrast, Western got 19 from Evans and 16 from Hayes. Leslie Rose and Rhonda Hoelting scored 6 each as nine WTC players put points on the scoreboard.

Hayes got six of her points in leading the Dusters to a rally late in the game. Clarendon had gone to the charity stripe to cut the lead to 13, 73-60, with 1:58 to play. WTC's 6-1 sophomore then led the hosts to a 10-2 spurt to give the game its final 83-62 margin.

Campbell pulled down 12 rebounds, Evans 11 and Hayes 8 as WTC outrebounded the 'Dogs 54 to 31. Evans also had three steals while Lyndy French led in assists with 8.

The Dusters' next outing will be Thursday when they take the road against New Mexico Junior College in Hobbs, N.M.

Westerners nip Clarendon

It wasn't beautiful, but Coach Phil Spradling hopes Monday's 69-67 victory over Clarendon will break Western Texas College's Westerners out of the doldrums.

"Maybe that's what we needed," said Spradling, whose Westerners came into the contest riding a three-game losing streak. "We snapped that and maybe that will bring us victories. We haven't played well in four or five games."

The down-to-the-wire victory leaves Western with a 13-5 season record, 3-2 in WJCAC play. The Westeners will play New Mexico Junior College in Hobbs, N.M., on Thursday.

For Clarendon, the loss brings the Bulldogs to 5-11 and 0-5.

"I thought we played well enough to win the ballgame," said a dejected Coach Carlile Dean. "We've lost so many one and two-point ballgames this year. I think we're playing better, but this is tough to take."

There were 22 lead changes in the 40-minute contest - 15 of them in the second half. Western finally took the lead for good when Alvin Hicks and Victor Spencer put up back-to-back points with just over three minutes to play. The shaky two-point advantage fell to one when Shawn Read hit a freethrow with 2:58 left to make it 64-63.

With 2:29 left, WTC's Billy Chambers was flagged with a technical for shooting a dead ball. Keith Kubicek went to the line for Clarendon, but couldn't hit.

Moments later, Hicks put WTC ahead by three points when he stuck a rebound back up and in, 66-63.

Just 27 seconds after the first "T", Clarendon's Adam Richards got a technical foul for vocalizing his displeasure with an official's call. WTC made good on the play as Hicks aced the single-shot freethrow a 67-63 advantage.

The contest continued to keep fans on the edge of their seats as R. J. Greathouse and Spencer both nailed down freethrows - Spencer's coming with 47 seconds left. Vincent Mason then added two more for Clarendon, 69-67, as the clock indicated 0:28.

Western had several chances to ice the game but missed a layup underneath and the front end of two bonus freethrow situations. Fortune stayed with the home team, however, as Read's desperation shot at the buzzer bounded off the front of the rim.

"I'm happy we won, but I think we've got to play better than this when we go on the road. We did our same old thing. They outrebounded us and they shot 59 percent (from the field). You can't take anything away from Clarendon," said Spradling.

"Some of our guys played hard and some of them just showed up and it takes everybody going at one time in this league," he added.

James Dawn led Western with 24 points - 17 in the second half. Hicks had 16, including an 8-for-10 performance from the line, while Gibson added 8 and Floyd Singleton had 6.

Andre Harris scored 16 for the Bulldogs. Read notched 13, Carl Curry 12 and Mason 10.

Tigers battle 'Stangs in key 2-4A contests

There are several key games in District 2-4A play this evening but none loom larger than the ones involving Snyder and Sweetwater.

In games that almost certainly will have an influence on the final district standings, Snyder's girls play in Sweetwater, while its boys entertain the Mustangs in Scurry County Coliseum. Tipoff time for both is 8 o'clock.

The games are preceded by junior varsity tilts; the boys at 6:15, the girls at 6:30.

In other boy's varsity games, Lake View (0-4) is at Lamesa (4-0); Andrews (3-1) is at Fort Stockton (0-3); and Pecos (2-2) is at Monahans (1-2).

The sites are reversed for the girls as Lamesa (1-5) is at Lake View (1-5); Fort Stockton (0-5) is at Andrews (6-0) and Monahans (3-2) is at Pecos (3-3).

Lady Tigers at Sweetwater

Snyder and Sweetwater girls are both 4-1 and tied for the runnerup position in district. Each team suffered its loss from No. 6 ranked Andrews. Sweetwater is ranked seventh in the state. Snyder is unranked.

Coach Ken Housden's Lady Tigers go into the contest with a 15-4 record. Sweetwater is 17-2.

Both are veteran teams. Carie Housden, a 5-9 senior, Karlene Thompson, a 5-8 junior, and Wendy Lunsford, a 5-7 senior, are all returning starters for the Tigers, who boast several other lettermen. Also playing a starting role are freshman Stephanie McKnight and junior Donna Anderson.

The Lady Mustangs will line up with the McCain sisters, Sandra and Deborah, and Johnna Puckett, all seniors. Other top players are juniors Shannon Wilbarn and Stephanie Upshaw.

Tigers host Sweetwater

Snyder boys are 7-12 for the season while Sweetwater is 2-2. The Mustangs got a late start from an extended football season.

Tiger Coach Larry Scott has used nine players in almost every contest this season. Typically starting for the Tigers are 6-4 freshman Trey Tippens, 6-4 sophomore Chris Garrett, 6-1 senior Jackie Anderson; 6-0 senior Bobby Scott and 5-11 junior Mike McWilliams.

A young squad, McWilliams is the only returning player from last season's team.

In contrast, Sweetwater boasts a more veteran unit, although the Mustangs were able to play only one non-district game because of the elongated football season.

Starters for the 'Stangs include returning personnel Mike Welch, John Layfield and Thomas Goodman.

Frosh win

LAMESA – Snyder freshman girls defeated Lamesa here Monday, 39-32.

Scoring for the Cats, now 5-3, were Yolanda Anderson with 20, Diana Alaniz and Denise Overton 6, Lafon Williams 4, Patricia Casias 2 and Michelle Candanoza 1.

In other action, Lamesa girls defeated Snyder 8th graders 29-20 here Monday.

Scoring for Snyder were Lena Hodges 7, Melody Pickering 5, Rhonda Echols 4, Melissa Williams 3 and Jody Dunk 1.

The Gold team is 4-2.

Snyder 7th grade Gold, 4-1, won here Monday, 30-19.

All 7th and 8th grade girls teams will participate in the Big Spring Tournament on Friday and Saturday.

Tourist site built around dormant volcano

GRANTS, N.M. (AP) — Less than 1,000 years ago, a river of fiery lava destroyed the livelihood of Indians in western New Mexico. For the past 38 years, one couple has eked out a living from what was left behind.

David and Reddy Candelaria run a tourist attraction and trading post in the shadow of Bandera Crater, a dormant volcano that once buried the land in lava and cinder. What they sell to tourists are the wonders the volcano produced — a cave filled with pale green ice yearround, craggy lava formations and the crater itself.

"I call myself the man who owns a volcano," Candelaria says. "There aren't many people who can say that."

At the age when many are planning retirement, the Candelarias are finally reaping the rewards of nearly four decades of hardship and isolation.

In the past few years, Candelaria, 62, has begun attending tourism trade shows armed with blown-up photos of his attractions and brochures glowingly describing what he has to offer.

The site straddles the Continental Divide about 25 miles southwest of Grants on the edge of El Malpais, a vast area of chaotically jumbled lava rock dotted by craters and cinder cones.

El Malpais, which is Spanish for the badlands, was formed in the last 3,000 years by four lava flows that poured across a large valley.

A federal Interior Department brochure about the area says, "Based upon archaelogical evidence, the most recent flows have been dated as less than 1,000 years in age and Indian legends talk about a river of fire covering fields their ancestors tilled."

In many places in the region, tubes formed when lava hardened above streams of stillflowing lava.

The ice cave at the Candelarias' attraction is such a formation. Its floor is covered by a solid slab of ice and the shadowy back of the hole is covered by an ice wall.

Visitors descend about 70 wooden steps into the cave. Toward the bottom, the steps are paralleled by a flow that resembles a frozen wave. The ice is pale green because of an algae that survives in subfreezing temperatures.

Candelaria says the temperature in the cave never rises above freezing, even when summer temperatures reach the 80s.

The ice was formed, he says, as water seeped through the porous lava rock above. The temperatures never warm because colder air also seeps downward through the rock.

"It's a natural ice box," Candelaria says. "Indians used it for a water supply. The old homesteaders used to come up in wagons and make ice cream and have picnics."

The log building that houses the Candelarias' home and trading post was built near the ice cave as a dance hall.

"All the old homesteaders used to come out here and whoop it up," Candelaria says.

The building was constructed by Cecil Moore, who leased the land from Candelaria's grandmother. Candelaria moved to the site after World War II.

"I found this place and I just quit college," he says. "I didn't know anything about it. There were no roads, no electricity, no water. We had to haul water for years ... It's been rough."

Candelaria estimates that now 15,000 to 25,000 people a year visit the attraction, although he doesn't keep an exact count.

Candelaria says he fought attempts in the 1960s to make the area part of National Park Service lands "because it was our heritage. Now, who knows? If they could come up with a decent price, I might want to talk about it."

5 accused linked to other crimes

DALLAS (AP) — Five people accused of kidnapping a 13-year-old and fighting a bloody shootout with police may also have been behind a crime spree that included car thefts and armed robberies, authorities say.

The five were arrested Sunday morning after leading police on a three-county chase through East Texas, carrying with them a girl who had been snatched from her brother's Jeep last Friday and held for $100,000 ransom.

A sawed-off shotgun found in the car had been stolen last Monday during an armed robbery from a house "right around the corner" from where Amy McNiel was kidnapped days later, Johnson County Sheriff Eddy Boggs said Monday night.

The robbery victims were tied up, kicked and pistol-whipped before the robbers made off with the shotgun and other assorted booty, Boggs said.

He said that although no charges other than aggravated kidnapping have yet been filed against the five, they are suspected in other armed robberies and auto thefts in the Dallas area.

Boggs declined to say how many incidents were involved.

The five were identified as Lisa Anne Bouvier, 18, of Balch Springs; George Thomas Barnes, 21, of Dallas; Daniel Walter Necker Jr., 21, of Mesquite; Michael Lynn Mills, 27, of Pleasant Grove; and James Wesley Foote, 34, of Alvarado.

Interest rates hike helps sagging British pound

LONDON (AP) — The sagging British pound rose slightly today following Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's decision to raise interest rates, but friends and foes of her government said the move was "too little, too late."

Alarmed when the pound hit an all-time low of $1.10 in Hong Kong on Monday, Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative government decided to reactivate the minimum lending rate it had suspended in August 1981 as part of its free market doctrine.

The British currency briefly rebounded to $1.13, then dropped to $1.1125 in New York on Monday afternoon.

This morning, it opened in Hong Kong at $1.1187, up slightly from Monday's close of $1.1135. When trading opened in London, the pound advanced to about $1.12.

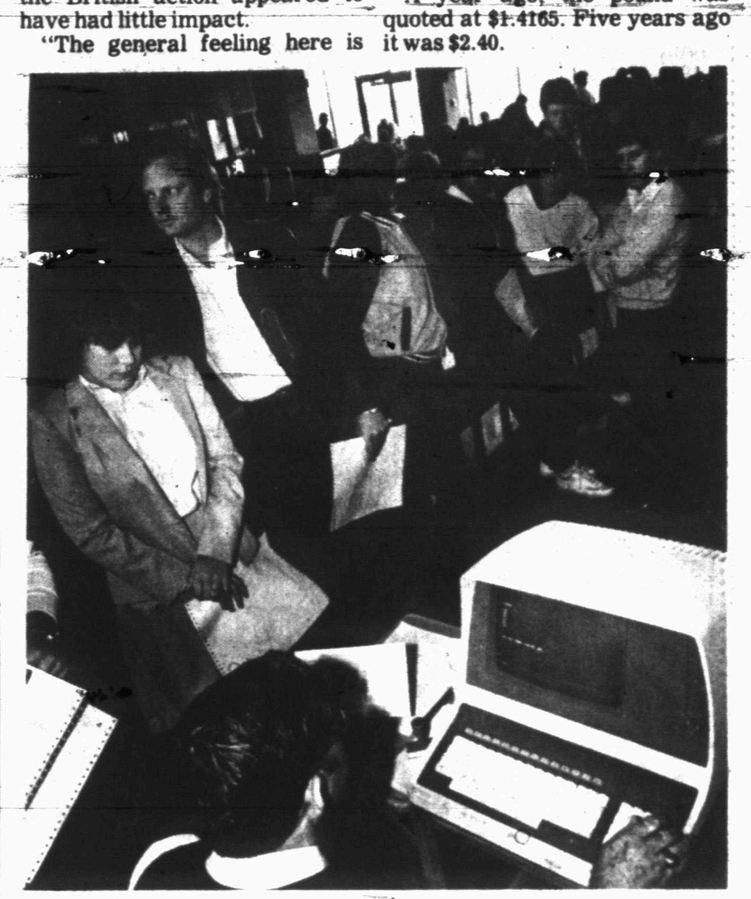

"We are gaining ground gradually, not only against the dollar but against other currencies as well," said Owen Mitchell, chief currency trader at London's National Westminster Bank.

Said another trader: "So far today, sterling is looking fairly comfortable."

But traders in Hong Kong said the British action appeared to have had little impact.

"The general feeling here is that the British action was too little, and too late," said Michael Phua, a vice president of the Bank of America in Hong Kong.

A year ago, the pound was quoted at $1.4165. Five years ago it was $2.40.

REGISTRATION BACKLOG — Western Texas College appeared headed for another term of record or near record enrollment Tuesday morning with final check out lines running the length of the Student Center. Over 700 students had completed registration at the close of evening sign-up Monday and registration was to continue through 5 p.m. Tuesday with late registration available for the remainder of the week. sided-double density disk drives for $5,315 from CompuAdd Corp. of Austin.

Other bids were submitted by Entre Computer Center of Lubbock, $5,735; IBM of Lubbock, $7,348, and Agriplex of Lubbock, $5,590.

The final bid was for seven electrical meters. The only bid meeting specifications was from M&M Meter Service in Stanton in the amount of $3,992. Westinghouse of Lubbock submitted a bid of $3,433 and an alternate bid of 3,770, but the meters did not meet the specifications.

The meters will be used to assess energy usage at the college and will be installed at the dormitory, the dormitory hot water heater, the swimming pool, the entire kitchen area, the chill water pump and the condenser-water pump. The meters are part of the current energy plan being implemented by the college.

Plans for final implementation of the energy project will be readied by Fanning, Fanning and Agnew of Lubbock--engineers for the project--by the end of this month and at this time the three members of the original Energy Committee--Bill Wilson, R.C. Patton and Baze--will set a breakfast meeting to issue final approval of the work.

Trustees also approved a revision to Policy 8251 which pertains to trustees and conflict of interest. For instance, companies with which a trustee is associated may now submit bids as long as the trustee refrains from voting on that particular agenda item.

During the session, trustees also officially approved Dr. James Tully, dean of learning resources at WTC, as the new WTC financial aid director, and Shirley Leftwich as the new director of the Scurry County Museum. Leftwich had been serving as interim director.

During the president's report, Newbury said that the recently completed mid-winter session had 80 students registered for five classes--the largest yet. Each course was for three hours credit.

Newbury also commented that he was looking forward to a "strong spring semester at the college." Registration was held Monday and Tuesday.

The next regular meeting will be February 11.

Trustees attending were Edwin Parks, Patton, Wilson, Jones, and Bob Hargrove.

Holiday schedule approved here

Teachers will be back early, however, reporting for in-service Jan. 3 — a Friday.

The annual spring break during 1986 will be in late March, with school letting out Friday, March 21, and resuming on Monday, March 31.

Other holidays during the Snyder school year include a Labor Day holiday Sept. 2 (for teachers); Thanksgiving holiday Nov. 28-29; and a staff work day (student holiday) Jan. 17.

Minor accidents worked Monday

Two minor traffic accidents were reported in Snyder Monday.

Involved in the day's first mishap in the 1700 Block of 37th St. at 12:01 p.m. were a 1977 Ford pickup and trailer driven by Arnuflo O. Orozco of Sweetwater and 1979 Oldsmobile driven by Clemey Smith Andress of Snyder.

Andress reportedly suffered minor injuries but refused medical treatment.

Monday's second accident was recorded at 2:17 p.m. at the intersection of 30th St. and College Ave.

Involved in it were a 1975 Oldsmobile driven by Bertha Violett McQueen of 2700 21st St. and a 1981 Buick driven by Bessie Callaway of 2311 42nd St.

The accident was termed minor.

Single arrest

Snyder police arrested a 24-year-old local man Monday afternoon on warrants issued for failure to pay fines assessed for four misdemeanor offenses.

Three of the charges against the subject were for public intoxication and the fourth for disorderly conduct.
