By TIM APPEL

My most memorable Christmas occurred during the tumultuous year of 1974. The country was still reeling from the Watergate episode. As a 13-year-old, I was going through those difficult early-teen times.

And yet that unforgettable Christmas was not spent in the home of my family, but some 500 miles away in Placerville, Calif. The home of my grandfather and grandmother.

However, this would not just be a two-family gathering, but also included my uncle, aunt and two cousins from New Jersey.

It had been a long time since I had last seen my cousins, Mike and Julie. In fact, I cannot remember ever seeing them in person, though my parents have photos of us playing together as toddlers.

But when we got together, it was as if we had been best friends forever. Though my cousin Julie was my age, I hit it off best with Mike, a couple years older than myself.

While the adults were buzzing around the house like swarming bees and my sister and Julie were off playing in a corner, Mike and I were reading a parody of the Six-Million-Dollar Man in Mad magazine in the living room, laughing hysterically.

Through much of the Christmas break, Mike and I would walk around Placerville, doing last minute present-shopping with our vast fortune of three or four dollars.

Finally, Christmas eve was here. It was rare for me to stay up late at night, but on that evening, the families packed into several vehicles and drove to my grandparent's church for midnight service.

The huge church was packed to the max that evening. Despite getting there early, half the clan had to sit in one row, with the other half sitting in the pew behind. And because of the high number of people in the church, there was a shortage of hymnals.

No sweat. The service was pretty self-explanatory, and most of the traditional Christmas hymns were the ones that everybody seems to know.

But late in the service, we all stood up and sang "Hark the herald angels sing." Of course the first verse was easy. Until, the second verse. Second verse? What second verse? And, of course, without a hymnal...

Do we just stand there and wait for the song to end? Of course not. My mom started to hum the tune, and Mike and I soon joined in. And did we hum! We hummed, and we hummed loud.

Strangers sitting around us must have thought our...

Grand jury hands down indictments

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Indictments for murder and aggravated sexual assault of a child are among 69 handed down by a Howard County grand jury this morning. Ricky Scott Fields was indicted in connection with the strangulation-murder of Benenicio Gonzales, 49, originally of Seagraves. Both were mental health patients at the Big Spring State Hospital when Gonzales was choked unconscious and fell into a coma Sept. 20. He died Sept. 25 after treatment at hospitals here and Lubbock.

No motive has been reported, said 118th Assistant District Attorney Dale Dupree. Also, there's no connection to another crime that would make it a capital offense.

"It's just straight murder," he said. It must be shown that Fields was aware of his actions and is mentally competent to stand trial, according to police statements. Fields had been in the hospital about 45 days on a 90-day commitment when the choking occurred.

In an unrelated case, Randy Mark Browning, 37, was indicted in connection with a June 11 rape of a 14-year-old girl at the American Little League Baseball Park on the Howard College Campus. He's also a suspect in a June 12 incident at the Washington Elementary school playground, only a block from the college, in which a 9-year-old girl was molested and a 12-year-old girl was forced to disrobe.

Browning, identified in a police lineup by the victim, says he innocently.

"It's sad," said his attorney Don Richard of Big Spring. "They've got the wrong guy indicted and the real guy's still out there. He doesn't fit the description at all."

"The grand jury has spoken and we're going to have to let a (trial) jury decide whether Browning is the wrong guy," Dupree said.

Both cases are expected to go to trial after the first of the year. Browning could go to trial in January. Convictions on either charge carry sentences between five to 99 years and up to $10,000 fine.

Also indicted: Crecensio Alvarez, Jr., burglary of a vehicle.

Hilbert Anaya, involuntary manslaughter.

Donald Wayne Bennett, driving while intoxicated.

Raul Bernal, DWI.

Benjamin Briones, DWI.

Johnny Cantu, burglary of a habitation.

Victor Castillo, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Ralph Cisneros, burglary of a habitation.

Jessie Chapman Cantu, burglary of a habitation.

Johnny Dean Darden, burglary of a vehicle.

Albert "Sonny" Doss, DWI.

Tommy Duncan, burglary of a building.

Donnie Durst, forgery.

Success-n-School program founder conducts session for local teachers

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Dr. Hillery Motsinger, founder of the Success-n-School program and a family therapist, presented a workshop on "Understanding Yourself and Others" Tuesday for faculty and staff members at Goliad Middle School.

The purpose of bringing Motsinger to the school, said principal Jean Broughton, was for him to analyze personal profiles of the attendees, help them develop a team personality and improve their ability to work together.

Motsinger lectures nationwide, speaking for parenting rallies, conducting staff development seminars similar to the one at Goliad and promoting Success-n-School's EPIC (Effective Parent Involvement Concepts) program.

"Understanding the profiles is a big reason he's here," she said. "The follow-up to this workshop is to figure out the children you are dealing with. The purpose is to understand yourself and your co-workers so you have better teamwork."

Motsinger compared the group of faculty and staff to a family, explaining the methods he uses to help families understand and interact with each other which can help improve teamwork in schools and companies as well.

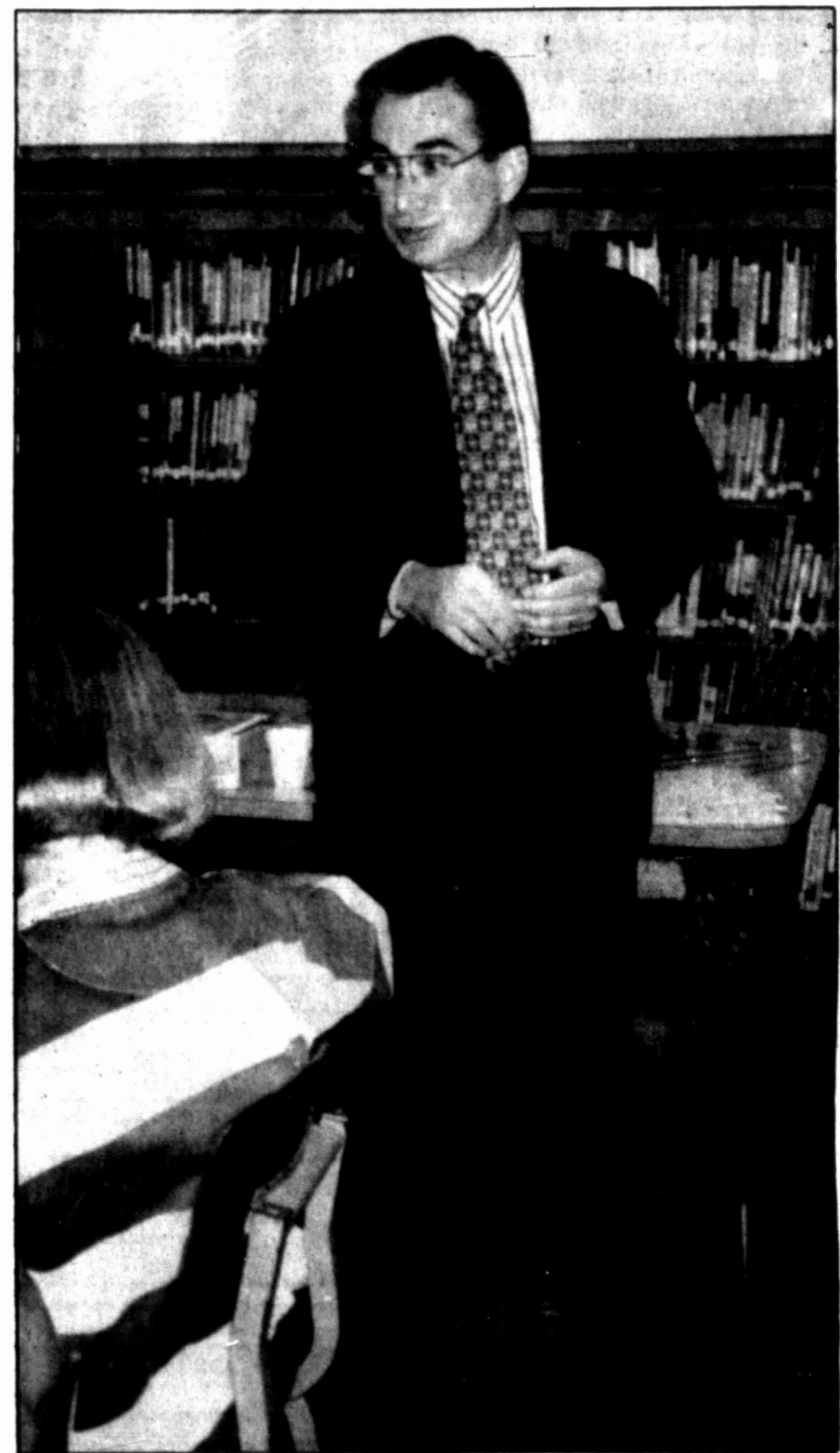

"People who leave families and jobs do so because they feel unappreciated," he said. "Schools need to give students health, security, cohesive relationships and pay them appropriate appreciation."

After the workshop, he said, teachers will have a greater understanding of themselves and how they work with others, giving them the self-confidence to move into achievement-oriented behavior.

Motsinger said most "team" situations can be broken down into four types of behaviors: captains, cheerleaders, workers and quality control individuals.

All four types are equally needed to make a team function, he said, and should be equally valued.

In addition to his lecture, Motsinger had the group divide into teams to analyze how they interact with each other.

Broughton found the workshop beneficial. "I think we came away feeling better about ourselves," she said. "It's good for staff development and good for interaction."

Motsinger may be brought back to Goliad Middle School in the spring to further assist the faculty and staff, Broughton added.

Teen's auto newsletter gains respect

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — As he raises the hood on a sleek, black Lincoln Mark VIII, David Lantz smiles as if he just spotted an old friend.

"That is a 280 horsepower V-8," he says without hesitation. "That blows away the Lexus, I'll tell you that."

Taking a seat inside the car, Lantz works up even more enthusiasm.

"I can't say enough good things about this car," he purrs. "It's amazing."

Mind you, Lantz has no intention of buying this car. And if he did, he couldn't drive it. He's only 15 years old and too young for a license. He is evaluating the Lincoln for Auto Center Monthly, an automotive newsletter he writes, edits and publishes from his suburban Houston home.

Before dismissing Auto Center Monthly as the silly plaything of a ninth-grade auto buff, you should know Lantz has been publishing the newsletter since he was 11 years old. By now, he has a few hundred subscribers living in several states.

Automakers are taking him seriously enough to return his calls and include him on their mailing lists. Ford and Chrysler paid his way to attend new car demonstrations in Michigan, California and Nevada. The president of Ford Motor Co. invited Lantz to his office for a private interview. And the national editor of Motor Trend magazine gave him his first driving lesson.

"David is supernatural. I think he is from another planet," is how the Motor Trend editor, Daniel Charles Ross, evaluates Lantz's abilities. "I thought he was just a kid with a goof-ball newsletter until I met him and read the newsletter. Then I changed my mind. His clarity of thought and focus supersedes anyone I know in this business, at any age."

While Lantz impresses readers with his knowledge of cars, he entertains them by putting ideas into pungent phrases that show no fear.

"Though I have become accustomed to watching marketing strategies that are about as intelligent as an episode of Beavis and Butt-head, I have never seen one as botched as that of the Buick Regal," Lantz wrote in a recent issue.

He also took exception to the Regal's latest design. "I was aghast when Buick restyled the car last year and didn't add an air bag, nor did they improve the dash or seats. The car won't sell any better in 1994, and if Buick wants to drop it now I really wouldn't mind at all."

But Lantz's favorite targets are Japanese cars, which he thinks are vastly overrated.

"Does Toyota build a car that is not 99 percent plastic?" he wrote. Lantz peppers his conversation with praise for the best American autos and scorn for most everything out of Japan. "The Nissan Altima is a joke," he writes.

When Lantz started writing at age 11, his agenda was quite modest. He wanted to write about his collection of automotive brochures, those slick handouts carmakers use to sell their products. He later turned to reviewing cars. He wrote the reviews on a home computer, printed them out and sold them out to a few friends.

"He was passing around business cards in the lunchroom at school," said classmate Michael Zimmerman. "I thought he was putting me on big time. I told my dad, and he said David had a great imagination. He didn't believe an 11-year-old could create his own auto magazine."

Lantz also mailed personal letters, along with complimentary copies of Auto Center Monthly, to Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca. His letter to Ford Chairman Harold "Red" Poling led to his big break a year and a half ago.

Lantz's letter to Poling was sent back down Ford's hierarchical ladder until it reached the company's regional office in Dallas.

"He is very bold," said Jim Bright, a Ford spokesman in Dallas. "I read the letter, and I could tell very quickly he wasn't a typical 14-year-old."

In fact, it was Lantz's strategy to avoid mentioning his age until the end of a letter, angling to keep the reader's attention as long as possible. Bright arranged to meet Lantz a few months later. They talked about cars, school and politics.

"He was one of the most incredible 14-year-olds I had ever met," Bright said. It was Bright who arranged for Lantz to be invited to a Ford auto demonstration in Michigan, which culminated in the meeting with Poling.

"David is incredibly bright, and he is incredibly focused," Bright said. "I decided not to treat him as a kid, but as an auto journalist."

In most ways, David Lantz doesn't act much like an average teen-ager.

All his compact discs are by Frank Sinatra, Nat King Cole or classical composers.

"I don't like rap, heavy metal or hard rock. Most everything that's on the charts, I hate that stuff," he said. "I like Sinatra. The neat thing about Frank Sinatra is no matter how I am feeling, there always is a Sinatra song that speaks to me."

Lantz attends Strake Jesuit College Preparatory, and he is grateful for the exacting discipline demanded by the priests who teach there.

"I would do terrible in a public school. I know that," he said. "I like the seriousness at Strake. I also like the emphasis on God. My faith is very important to me — but I know you can't put that in a newspaper. I understand the media."

Lantz formed his opinions about the media from watching commentator Rush Limbaugh, who shares his conservative views on politics. Lantz likes to tape political cartoons lampooning President Clinton on his school locker. In his bedroom, a large bumper sticker exhorts readers to "BUY AMERICAN."

Williamson County Commissioner David Hays (center) listens as Commissioner Mikje Heiligenstein reads a proposal for a financial incentive package for Apple Computer Tuesday in Georgetown. Hays voted in favor of the proposal. In an earlier vote last week, Hays and two other commissioners voted against giving Apple a tax abatement because of the company's policy to provide health benefits to the domestic partners of its gay and lesbian employees.

Williamson County's commissioners get second bite at Apple

The Associated Press

GEORGETOWN — Williamson County officials Tuesday approved a financial package to lure Apple Computer. The vote came one week after they gained national attention for rejecting the computer giant because of its pro-gay benefits policy.

Apple said it would accept the new incentive plan. Political and business leaders and gay rights advocates hailed the commission's change of policy.

"Jobs prevailed over prejudice," said David Smith of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force.

Apple spokeswoman Lisa Byrne said after the commissioners voted, "As far as we can see, the project will move forward."

But others opposed the decision. "Once again, we see an entity of government that has sold out its moral beliefs for economic growth," said Jeff Fisher, state director of the American Family Association.

Last week, county commissioners voted 3-2 to reject a tax abatement that Apple had sought for its proposed $80 million customer support center.

The three commissioners who voted against the abatement cited Apple's policy of providing health benefits to the domestic partners of its gay and lesbian employees.

That decision exploded in headlines across the country. Dozens of communities urged Apple to relocate to their areas, saying they either supported the company's policy or wouldn't interfere.

But Texas leaders, including Gov. Ann Richards, tried to control the damage and re-negotiate with Apple, whose facility was expected to bring 1,700 jobs to the area by the end of the decade.

The negotiations apparently paid off. On Tuesday, the commissioners voted 3-2 for a modified incentive plan that will reimburse taxes paid by Apple in exchange for giving the county the right of way for roads and other improvements on the Apple site.

Although both plans will affect the tax rolls, Commissioner Mike Heiligenstein, who shepherded the compromise, said the new plan is not a taxpayer-paid subsidy to Apple. "We can track Apple dollars specifically to Apple," he said.

He said the new plan will be worth about the same amount to Apple as the tax abatements would have.

Commissioner David Hays switched his vote. In a prepared statement he read during the commissioners' meeting, Hays said it did not represent a switch in his values.

"Last week I was asked to vote to use taxpayer dollars to subsidize, and therefore, tacitly endorse a benefits policy with which I disagree. Today's vote does nothing of the kind," he said.

"Apple's relocation to our county will mean millions of dollars each year that will be used to educate our children, build roads and bridges, and keep our taxes low," Hays added.

Commissioners on both sides of the issue said the controversy had been one of the toughest of their lives. They said they respected each other's decision and were anxious to move on to other issues.

"On the one hand we pride ourselves in Williamson County on our strong moral and family values. On the other hand we have worked hard to promote economic growth," said Commissioner Jerry Mehevec who voted against Apple both times.

Before the meeting started, The Rev. Jim Chandler of First United Methodist Church in nearby Round Rock, prayed, saying, "The last 7 days have felt like 7 years. Show the rest of the world that we know how to work through this controversy."

Lone Star music on the airwaves

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The image doesn't easily fade. A disc jockey, somewhere Up North, crawled into a coffin with a boa constrictor and a tarantula — all three to be buried alive as part of a radio station promotional gimmick.

Playing music is no longer enough. Talking incessantly is not longer enough. Airing sporting events is no longer enough.

Radio stations must now resort to sending people into graves with reptiles and large furry arachnids.

Or do they?

San Antonio's KENS radio, owned by Harte-Hanks Communications, parent company of the local TV station with the same call letters, is betting that music — local, area and regional music — mixed with simulcast of KENS-TV newscasts will attract loyal listeners.

"You're going to hear music based on the quality and soul of the music and not based on the promotion money behind an artist," said Wayne Coble, KENS-AM production manager.

"We listen to artists based on talent. You'll hear local and Texas music you won't normally hear on any other station."

Since the station signed on Oct. 15, it has regularly aired the sounds of Augie Meyers, Delbert McClinton, Joe Ely, Lucinda Williams, Michael Fracasso, Tish Hinojosa, Flaco Jimenez, Nanci Griffith, Robert Keen, Gary P. Nunn and other Texas artists who, until KENS hit the air, were heard locally almost exclusively on Joe Horn's Sunday evening Texas music program on San Antonio College's KSYM.

Sharing the airwaves at 1160 have been cuts by Marc Cohn, Neil Young, Buckwheat Zydeco, Bonnie Raitt, Mamou and other acts who don't have regular radio homes in the 90s.

Coble, who works on the air from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., is part of an air staff that includes Nancy Gray, Shari St. Clair, Juan Phelan and local radio personalities Ron Houston and Steve Coffman. Coffman is also the station's program operations manager.

"We've got a helluva shot at letting a radio format prove itself," said Coffman, who watched as a similar format evaporated at KFAN when the 101.1 slot on the FM dial was leased to simulcast oldies station KONO. He also lost his job in the move. Coffman, on the air from 3 to 10 p.m., again succumbed to the vagaries of the radio business when his next stop, KRIO, switched to a Tejano format.

"I was off the air and out of work for three years. The reason why a format like KENS' hasn't worked in this town is because radio is not being performed properly."

"Radio is not being programmed from this town. Radio is being programmed in Philadelphia, in Atlanta, on the West Coast, in New York. Consultants herd a few people into a auditorium and play a few songs for them, test their reactions and program stations all over the country based on those test.

"That's the easy way. That's not the way it should be done."

"You have to get out into the streets and see what people are paying to see at the clubs. You have to go out into the streets and find out what people want to hear. No consultant would know how to do that for individual markets. While we were KFAN there was a vicious rumor that we weren't making money. Bull—. We made money. And this station can make money. ...people are calling us begging to advertise," Coffman.

Part of the "we" to whom Coffman refers is morning man Houston, a longtime radio rounder who wears his gray hair in a ponytail and first went on the air when he was a high schooler in Kenedy.

"I got my first radio job in Oct. '56. I came in with Elvis Presley, Fats Domino and Little Richard. They wanted me to play Patti Page and Dean Martin, but I guess I was a rebel even then. I haven't changed. I've gotten older," said Houston.

Houston has worked at KMAC/KISS, KTSA, KEXL, KFAN and KRIO. Few people would recognize his face, but his voice is heard all over South Texas on KENS-TV promotional spots and Team Chevrolet ads. He's also the voice for nationwide Albertson's commercials and for narrations at Southwest Research and USA.

"This format gives listeners the opportunity to hear music they can't hear anywhere else. You can hear the hits — over and over and over — at stations all over the city, but you won't hear Tish, Robert Earl Keen Jr., Delbert, Lucinda Williams, Jimmie Dale Gilmore anywhere else on commercial radio."

Unrest growing along West Bank

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — A Jewish settler was shot in the stomach today by a Palestinian as almost daily unrest in the occupied territories threatened to delay Israel's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho in the West Bank.

Soldiers shut the Bethlehem area after the settler was shot and seriously wounded near the holy site of Rachel's tomb, burial place of a biblical patriarch and about four miles south of the West Bank town of Bethlehem.

The gunman was seen fleeing on foot through the El Aida refugee camp outside Bethlehem, Israel radio said.

A day earlier, Jewish settlers called for a rebellion against the government as thousands of Israel troops headed to the occupied lands to cope with the escalating violence.

Support staff larger than teaching staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — American schools employ fewer teachers than staff such as guidance counselors, bus drivers and cafeteria workers, according to an international study out today that illustrates yet another shortcoming in U.S. education.

Even though it is the world's top spender on education, the United States has a smaller proportion of teachers in the work force than most other industrialized nations, said a report by the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

Calling the study "a timely reminder about the critical need for comprehensive school reform," Education Secretary Richard Riley said it suggests a need for "shifting resources going to school administration into the classroom and into the professional development of teachers so they will be able to teach tougher content in all subjects."

"This report confirms the pressing need for world-class standards for excellence in education and illustrates why the American habit of being comfortable with just being average comes up short in the new global economic environment," Riley said in a statement.

Extent of concealed testing shocks O'Leary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has concealed more than 200 nuclear weapon tests since the 1940s and conducted about 800 radiation tests on humans, some of whom were unaware of the risks, the Energy Department acknowledged Tuesday.

"It left me appalled, shocked and deeply saddened," said Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary about information she learned only recently that 18 civilians had been injected with highly radioactive plutonium in the 1940s to determine what doses workers might be exposed to safely.

"It is apparent that informed consent could not have taken place," she said. All the individuals are dead, although many of them lived for years after the experiment.

Launching a new era of openness about the weapons programs, her department released summaries of previously secret information about nuclear tests in Nevada, the amount of plutonium produced and currently located at weapons factories, and limited information about government tests during the 1940s and '50s on humans to determine the health effects of radiation doses.

Newly elected Blacks take government seats

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Blacks took seats in government for the first time Tuesday to help steer South Africa toward democracy and end 341 years of white domination.

Right-wing whites staged a theatrical bid to stress their opposition to reforms by seizing an abandoned fort hundreds of miles away, but their action was dwarfed by the significance of the Transitional Executive Council's first meeting.

Although the council cannot introduce legislation, it can veto government decisions on security, intelligence-gathering and finances. It will serve as a government watchdog until the country's first multiparty elections, scheduled for April 27.

Don Ameche dies

of cancer at 85

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Don Ameche, the dashing leading man of the 1930s and '40s who won his only Oscar for his portrayal of an elderly swinger in the movie "Cocoon," died of cancer at age 85.

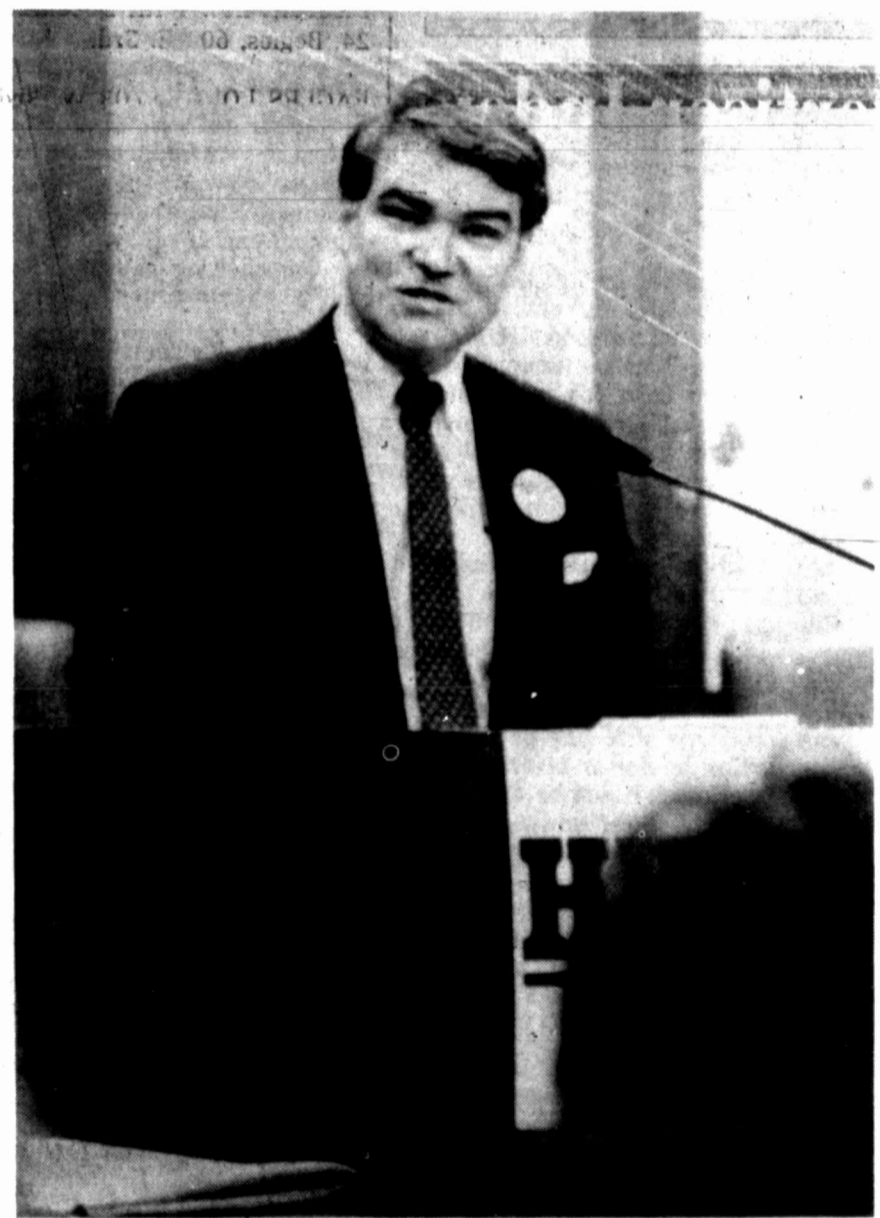

Ameche worked until the end, rushing to finish his work in "Corinna, Corinna," a family drama starring Whoopi Goldberg and Ray Liotta.

"We all knew that his health was not good and that he was really in the last scene of his life," said the movie's producer, Steve Tisch. "In an ironic way he was playing himself."

Ameche died Monday night at the home of his son, Don Jr. He was diagnosed with prostate cancer about 13 months ago, but by then it had spread throughout his body, his son said.

Republican launches bid for treasurer

Hecht says he'll seek re-election to Supreme Court

Texas Supreme Court Justice Nathan Hecht announces his bid for re-election Tuesday in Austin. Hecht is trying to reform campaign contributions to candidates in judge races.

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Republican David Hartman on Tuesday launched his campaign for state treasurer, a job that incumbent Democrat Martha Whitehead wants to eliminate.

Hartman, an Austin banker, said the business of watching over the state's finances is too important to leave to some other state agency.

"We have seen the abuse of excessive power put in one political party in this state, so that if there's one thing that should be very clear it should be this: we do not want to eliminate one single check and balance on these excesses of power," he said.

Mrs. Whitehead, appointed treasurer by Gov. Ann Richards following Kay Bailey Hutchison's June 5 election to the U.S. Senate, is seeking election in 1994.

If elected, Mrs. Whitehead pledged to ask the Legislature and voters to abolish the agency, merge its duties into the comptroller's office and put her out of the $79,247-a-year post.

But Hartman disagreed.

"Why should we abolish the right of the voters to choose who they feel is most qualified to manage and oversee our state's $16 billion in investments and more than $70 billion in expenditures?" he asked.

Hartman, 57, is chairman and chief executive of Austin's Hartland Bank. He holds a master's degree in business administration from Harvard University and is a director of El Paso's Valley Bancorp.

If elected, he said he would follow the lead of former treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, who campaigned against a state income tax. "Eliminating the office of state treasurer would be a shortcut to a state income tax," he said.

Hartman is expected to face Teresa Doggett of Austin in the March 8 GOP primary. Ms. Doggett said she opposes abolishing the Treasury but is willing to study ways to make the agency more efficient. She also said she wants to educate the public about the need for maintaining the Treasury.

Monte Williams, spokesman for Mrs. Whitehead, said turning over Treasury duties to the comptroller would save three out of every four dollars the agency spends. Its current operating budget is $11 million annually.

"It is incredible to me that both Republicans in this race oppose downsizing government, want to deny saving taxpayer dollars and want to keep big government in Austin," Williams said.

Also Tuesday: — GOP Supreme Court Justice Nathan Hecht kicked off his re-election bid, saying he has helped restore integrity to the state's highest court.

"The court has begun to regain its proper stature as a respected institution of law and justice, and to improve its reputation as a fair and impartial tribunal for all who come before it," Hecht said.

First elected in 1988, Hecht joined Chief Justice Tom Phillips in limiting contributions to $5,000 from individuals and political action committees following a series of news reports about large contributions given to some previous judicial candidates by lawyers.

"Though progress has been made, the work is not finished," Hecht said.

Big game is big deal

Panther Creek versus Dell City. Those are names not often heard around Big Spring. But, be in the right place in this town Saturday, and you're liable to hear them...

That's because Panther Creek, the defending state champion, will put its perfect 14-0 record on the line, facing a likewise unbeaten Dell City bunch for the six-man state football championship.

While the coaches decide the site, committees such as the Athletic Committee of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce work hard to push the city's facilities to draw such sporting events.

This one, alone, is expected to draw 4,000 people to Big Spring. Considering they will eat and some may even sleep over, that is a good draw for this city.

Often the work of these committees is overlooked but the work they do is beneficial for our community.

Spotting a White House political offensive is a lot like spotting a tidal wave. All you have to do is look offshore and watch for a big bump. Lewis Grizzard

He up and died and broke my heart

My dog Catfish, the black Lab, died Thanksgiving night. The vet said his heart gave out. Down in the country, they would have said, 'Lewis's dog up and died.'

He would have been 12 had he lived until January.

Catfish had a good life. He slept indoors. Mostly he ate what I ate. We shared our last meal Tuesday evening in our living room in front of the television.

We had a Wendy's double cheese-burger and some chili.

Catfish was a gift from my friends, Barbara and Vince Dooley. Vince is the athletic director at the University of Georgia. Barbara is a noted speaker and author.

I named him driving back to Atlanta from Athens, where I had picked him up at the Dooleys' home. I don't know why I named him what I named him. He was all curled up in a blanket on my back seat. And I looked at him and it just came out. I called him, "Catfish."

I swear he raised up from the blanket and acknowledged. Then, he severely fouled the blanket and my back seat.

He was a most destructive animal the first three years of his life. He chewed things. He chewed books. He chewed shoes.

One day he went to my closet and chewed up my best pair of Guccis.

Catfish chewed television remote control devices. Batteries and all. He chewed my glasses. Five pairs of them.

One day, when he was still a puppy, he got out of the house without my knowledge. The doorbell rang. It was a young man who said, "I hit your dog with my car, but I think he's OK."

He was. He had a small cut on his head and he was frightened, but he was otherwise unharmed.

"I came around the corner," the young man explained, "and he was in the road chewing on something. I hit my brakes the second I saw him."

"Could you tell what he was chewing on?" I asked.

"I know this sounds crazy," the young man answered, "but I think it was a beer bottle."

Catfish stopped chewing while I still had a house. Barely.

He was a celebrity. I spoke recently in Michigan. Afterwards a lady came up to me and said, "I was real disappointed with your speech. You didn't mention Catfish."

Catfish used to get his own mail. Just the other day the manufacturer of a new brand of dog food, with none other than George Jones' picture on the package, sent Catfish a sample of its new product. For the record, he still preferred cheeseburgers and chili.

Catfish was once grand marshal of the Scottsboro, Ala., "Annual Catfish Festival." He was on television and got to ride in the front seat of a police car with its siren on.

He was a patient, good-natured dog, too. Jordan, my friend's daughter, who is 5, has been pulling his ears since she was 2. She even tried to ride him at times. He abided with nary a growl.

Oh, that face and those eyes. What he could do to me with that face and those eyes. He would perch himself next to me on the sofa in the living room and look at me.

And love and loyalty would pour out with that look, and as long as I had that, there was very little the human race could do to harm my self-esteem.

Good dogs don't love bad people. He was smart. He was fun. And he loved to ride in cars. There were times he was all that I had.

And now he has up and died. My own heart, or what is left of it, is breaking.

Taking peek into the future

Let's zip into the future some five, 10, 15 years or so.

Your flight is a half hour out of Midland and you're beginning to wonder what you're going to do when you arrive a couple hours later in Big Spring.

So you take your laptop computer or electronic tablet out, pop it on your lap, tell it you're coming into town to visit and call up the day's edition of the Big Spring Herald.

It's unlike any edition anyone else received because stories on the front page are selected by a computer program, based on what you request and past reading habits. Information on rental car and hotel costs, weekend events and weather are likely to pop up. You may be an avid golfer, shopper or follow local or national stocks, so related stories and information will show up.

First things first. You need to make a hotel reservation. A new hotel was built at Comanche Trail Lake since the last time you've been home. It's old news so it didn't show up as a story but is included in advertising, complete with a picture from lakeside.

Naturally, you're curious, so you click your mouse on the picture and a map shows up with options for a complete or personally selected video tour. You choose to see the lounge, a double-bed room for you and your spouse, a couple other spots and off you go. Looks good for the price so you tell it to make a reservation, by voice or command, which will be done after hooking up your computer modem.

Wondering why such a lavish hotel was built, you click on an icon to read previous reports in the Herald. A summary story tells you about chamber efforts to boost tourism. Wanting to know more details about how business is going, you click on another icon or give another appropriate command.

Back on the front page, you check out a story on tonight's symphony performance. After breezing over a review, you click to hear a special recital of the guest musician to see if you want to make reservations.

You look over restaurants in similar fashion, shop by video for a new outfit you'll pay for with a credit card number and pick up when you arrive in town and even ask for a personalized graph tracking performance of your portfolio of stocks through the past weeks, months or years.

Welcome to the information age. It's been coming on for decades. In 1993 it's not quite here completely and could take yet another decade or two to reach full blast. But budding signs of a fuller fruition are all around. Buzzwords include multimedia, interactive and hypertext. You can be sure it'll increasingly become user-friendly.

Home shopping television programs are a first step. But instead of calling by telephone you'll just punch buttons on your channel changer or talk to your television, made possible with fiber-optic cables that allow two-way communication. Also, you'll choose what you want demonstrated and possibly scan retail and grocery stores to shop via live camera.

Other beginnings include complete text of newspapers transmitted by telephone to computer, electronic mail, computer bulletin boards and telephone news lines to provide sports scores, weather or whatever. All that will evolve with two-way communication too.

With two-way communication, your television, telephone and computer can all be combined into one unit. The major fiber-optic cables are laid but the big chore will be connecting homes to the cables. The scramble is on by newspaper, television and telephone companies to see who will get what, already resulting in major corporate mergers. Laws are being rewritten to pave the way.

Besides consumer adventures and traditional news you get now, it'll allow things like instant polls and electronic town-hall meetings that reach across the nation and provide instant feedback. Videos of whole city council meetings, trials, etc. or selections you make from footage cut from lead news reports as well as complete documents and research on issues could be available.

Even without two-way communication, electronic newspapers and magazines have been a reality for more than a decade and are continually becoming more sophisticated.

The most advanced commercial publication I've heard of is NewWeek's quarterly publication on CD ROM, called NewWeek Interactive. The first edition came out this spring. It goes beyond print presentation to include video clips, series of pictures, sound bites and graphics. The user is given choices about what clips, graphs and other details they want to peruse.

Journalists will still be needed to gather information. But many may carry videocams along with notebooks and cassette recorders. They will need to be adept at various media; writing, splicing video clips, sound bites and graphic information and working with computers to link information together into what's called hypertext.

Jumplines on stories may be replaced by references or icons that can be clicked on to call up other information. Pictures and graphs also may serve as gateways to information highways, perhaps with personal graphs and polls that can be created on demand.

Briefs referring to stories inside, used a long time by the Wall Street Journal and other papers as well as table of contents for magazines, will probably continue to be popular. Short, summary pieces, concluding on one page so readers aren't left hanging when glancing over news but referring to more detailed breakdowns inside, like USA Today does, are also likely to be popular.

There are debates that newspapers and magazines as we know them will survive because people will want something tangible to hold in their hand. That doesn't make sense because laptop computers, or an electronic equivalent that can be carried, are also held.

Printing presses are dead when it becomes cheaper to receive the same or more information electronically and in a format at least as accessible or even easier to plow through. Computer-TV-telephone-radio units in households, or other combinations, will be just as common as ... well, televisions, telephones and radios are now. Just think of all the trees and oaks that'll be saved.

Need for local news and advertising will be just as great, if not more, in the electronic universe. Look to see some type of locally produced information service or several here in Big Spring. It'll just be different but probably better and easier to use than what we have today.

Denny trial, defendant sentenced

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The videotape of Reginald Denny being beaten bloody was played one final time — silently, as if to say it spoke for itself — before a judge handed one of Denny's attackers the maximum: 10 years in prison.

"It's intolerable in this society to attack and maim people because of their race," Superior Court Judge John W. Ouderirk told Damian Williams on Tuesday.

Williams, 20, was sentenced for the attack on Denny and four others at the outset of the 1992 riots that broke out after four policemen were acquitted in the Rodney King beating. Williams is black; the victims are of other races.

Williams was convicted of mayhem and other charges. With time already served and good behavior in prison, he could be out in less than four years.

Denny, a white trucker, was pulled from his rig and bashed in the head with a brick in an attack captured by a TV helicopter.

Williams and another defendant, Antoine Miller, 21, told a reporter that they were unaware of the King verdict that precipitated the riots, but were simply reacting to the frenzy of the moment, with people shooting weapons into the air and looting stores.

"I was just caught up in the rap-ture," Williams told the Wave Newspaper Group in remarks to be published today.

"Maybe other people knew about (the King verdicts), but I wasn't aware of it until later," he said in the jailhouse interview sometime before sentencing. "I only saw the beating on TV. I didn't pay attention to the verdicts."

Miller told the papers that he learned about the Simi Valley verdicts two weeks after the riots.

The videotape of the Denny beating was played in court Tuesday at the judge's request. People watching in the courtroom and via live television saw scenes of white, Hispanic and Asian bodies left crumpled and bloodied at the hands of their attackers.

The judge played it without commentary. The only sound in the courtroom was the occasional cough from a spectator.

Police and volunteers attend to shooting victims at the Long Island Railroad's Merillon Avenue station in Garden City, N.Y., Tuesday evening. A gunman walked through a crowded commuter train, firing at random and pausing to reload as passengers tried to flee.

Gunman kills 4, wounds 21, in crowded commuter train

The Associated Press

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. — Passengers ran screaming for the exits as a stone-faced man wielding an automatic pistol walked down the aisle of a packed rush-hour commuter train, shooting at random and pausing only to reload.

By the time the train pulled into the Long Island town of Garden City on Tuesday evening, four passengers were dead, their bodies slumped across seats and against the windows, and 21 were hurt, four critically.

Three passengers tackled the gunman as the Long Island Rail Road train came to a stop.

"Right now, there doesn't seem to be anything as far as a motive," said Officer Andrew DeSimone, a spokesman for the Nassau County police. "It seems like a random shooting."

Authorities refused to release the suspect's name, saying only that he was a New York City resident who probably boarded the train at New York's Penn Station.

Eighty to 90 passengers were in the third car as the train approached the Merillon Avenue station, 18 miles from New York City. It was then that the gunman opened fire without a word, passengers said.

"After the second look, I ducked down in my seat, for real, knowing this man was going to kill people indiscriminately," said Carl Petersen, 48, of Garden City.

Passengers said the man fired repeatedly, then reloaded and fired again.

Petersen worked his way to the vestibule, where passengers normally wait to get off. He and several others were hoping to escape when the doors opened, but the gunman fired several shots at the waiting passengers.

"We were a little reluctant to run out because we didn't know if we were going to be shot exiting," Petersen said.

It was then that the gunman was tackled. Susanne Blum, of Garden City, told New York Newsday that her husband, Kevin, helped grab him.

She said her husband found her waiting at the station with their children and told her: "It's a mess here, someone has a gun, get the children away."

Ed Marinello, 35, of Garden City South, who sat in the sixth car, watched as "15 or 20 people started running back," he said. "Their faces were scared."

He caught a glimpse of the casually dressed gunman as police led him away. "He just looked like he was in outer space at the time — emotionless, void," Marinello said.

Mel Kenny, first deputy chief of detectives for Nassau County police, said the man wielded a 9 mm pistol, which can hold as many as 15 bullets. It was not clear how many shots were fired, Kenny said.

About 250,000 passengers, mainly commuters, ride Long Island Rail Road trains daily. The shooting caused delays of up to two hours. Trains were running on or close to schedule this morning.

Shuttle crew fits Hubble's glasses

The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The Hubble fix-it team expertly accomplished its high-flying optical work today by fitting the nearsighted space telescope with glasses.

Looking and sounding more like furniture movers than opticians, Endeavour astronauts Kathryn Thornton and Tom Akers installed a refrigerator-size box of mirrors. Her load lightened by the weightlessness of space, Thornton held the 640-pound case and, with Akers' help, gently guided it into place on rails.

"Keep it coming," Akers urged.

"It's in!" Thornton shouted.

It was the final step, at least for the spacewalking Endeavour crew, toward correcting Hubble's fuzzy vision. On Tuesday, the crew installed a camera with corrective optics.

NASA is hoping the results will be a telescope that fulfills its promise of probing the faintest and oldest objects in the cosmos and thus revealing the age and size of the universe.

But astronomers won't know the outcome for nearly two months; that's how long NASA expects it will take to fine-tune and test all the instruments.

The scientists have been in a state of anxiety since NASA launched the $1.6 billion Hubble in 1990 with an improperly ground mirror. The spacewalk was the fourth and next-to-last of the repair mission. No. 5 gets under way tonight.

Thornton and Akers, making their second spacewalk of the mission, had to remove a light meter to make room for the new device. The meter was sacrificed because it contributed little scientifically. It was packed for the trip home.

The mirrors inside the box will correct the light from the flawed main mirror.

The astronauts' mood was light as they toiled on the 43-foot-long Hubble from the end of the shuttle robot arm more than 360 miles above Earth. Akers hummed frequently — "bum-bum-bum-bum, dee-dee-dee-dee" — and Thornton laughed at Mission Control jokes.

After installing the mirrors, the spacewalkers installed a new computer with greater memory. They spent the rest of the six-hour, 50-minute spacewalk cutting insulation from the protective cover of one of the Hubble instruments.

Surgeon General suggests legalizing drugs might lead to reduced criminal activity

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders, no stranger to controversy, was embroiled in a new one today after suggesting that legalizing drugs could help make America's streets safer.

The White House quickly made it clear Tuesday that President Clinton doesn't see eye to eye on that issue with the health crusader who accompanied him from Little Rock, Ark.

Republicans and conservatives who opposed her confirmation expressed outrage; some said the outspoken doctor should resign or be fired.

"If the surgeon general has to have a study to see if drugs are hazardous to your health, we need a new surgeon general," Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., said today.

"Americans must be wondering if the surgeon general is hazardous to our health," cracked Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole.

But Elders also was praised for "her usual courage" by Baltimore Mayor Kurt Schmoke, who felt some of the same wrath five years ago when he suggested the nation consider decriminalizing drugs.

"I think what the surgeon general said was absolutely courageous and correct; there should be a study," said Schmoke, interviewed along with Nickles on NBC.

U.S. District Judge Robert Sweet, a supporter of legalizing drugs, said on ABC the nation should learn the lessons of Prohibition and the crime that ensued when alcohol was illegal. The nation should focus on education. "Look at tobacco, the most addictive drug, and we've reduced (use) by a third," Sweet said.

Elders, responding to questions at a National Press Club luncheon after a speech decrying violence, said 60 percent of violent crimes are drug- or alcohol-related.

"Many times they're robbing, stealing and all of these things to get money to buy drugs," she said. "I do feel that we would markedly reduce our crime rate if drugs were legalized."

She added that she did not know about the ramifications, but felt it was worth studying because some other countries that have taken this route have reduced crime without driving up drug use.

That infuriated critics who felt she was unfit to be surgeon general because of her unabashed support for sex education — including distributing condoms in schools — and abortion rights.

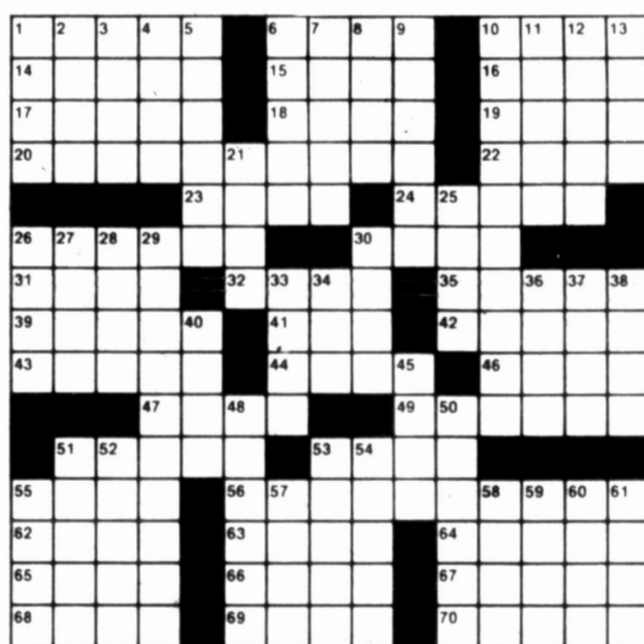

Her views "are so far outside the mainstream they are simply radical," said Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind. "Simply put, Dr. Elders does not speak for the great majority of Americans."

In this instance, at least, she didn't speak for Clinton, who weathered earlier storms over blunt Elders statements when he was governor and she was health commissioner of Arkansas.

"The president is against legalizing drugs and he's not interested in studying the issue," White House Press Secretary Dee Myers said.

American hostage Charles Walton (right) sits with one of his kidnappers while being interviewed in their hideout prior to being released Tuesday in Jolo in the southern Philippines. Walton, a language translator, was kidnapped by Muslim extremists last Nov. 14 and was held captive for 24 days.

American is freed by his kidnappers; Begins trip home

The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — American linguist Charles Walton, smiling but visibly tired, arrived in Manila Wednesday a day after Libyan and Filipino officials arranged his release by Muslim extremists from 24 days in captivity.

Walton, 60, of Philadelphia, made no statement upon arrival at Villamor Air Base. Before leaving the southern island of Jolo, Walton told Philippine television he was treated "acceptably well" and fed the same food as his captors.

He was driven by limousine to Malacanang Palace, the Philippine White House, for a lunch of fish and mixed vegetables with President Fidel Ramos.

He was clean-shaven although he had been growing a beard in captivity. He looked tired and somewhat shaky as he walked from the plane.

Walton was seized Nov. 14 on the southern island of Pangutaran, where he had been translating the Bible into the Samal language for the Texas-based Summer Institute of Linguistics.

"It is now a great relief to all concerned that Walton has returned safe and sound," said Vice President Joseph Estrada, who accompanied Walton back from the southern island of Jolo where he was freed.

Estrada said the government paid no ransom but agreed to two conditions: keeping foreign fishing vessels away from southern waters and restoring Muslim control of the barter trade with Malaysia.

The kidnappers also had demanded the removal of foreign missionaries from largely Muslim areas. Four foreign missionaries — three Spaniards and one American — have been kidnapped in the area since October 1992. All were eventually released.

Bosnian Serbs blocking aid convoys again

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs are again blocking the delivery of clothes and other winter supplies to millions of Bosnians, despite their recent pledge to allow aid convoys to pass, U.N. officials said Tuesday.

The convoys are crucial for the survival of nearly 3 million Bosnians this winter. U.N. workers have warned that many people could die from exposure without the aid.

Bosnian Serbs have refused to allow the delivery of winter materials, such as wood or plastic sheeting, claiming they are not humanitarian aid.

Serbs have blocked deliveries of winter clothes, shoes and office supplies for aid workers in the besieged Muslim town of Gorazde, said Ron Redmond, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, based in Geneva.

Serb soldiers also were refusing to allow a team of Swedish engineers into the city, one of six U.N.-declared "safe areas." The engineers want to rebuild at least 200 shell-damaged houses, Redmond said.

He said about 60,000 people are living in "terrible conditions" in Gorazde, where Serb shells have severely damaged 60 percent of the buildings, and snow is on the ground. Only two UNHCR convoys have reached Gorazde since Nov. 7, and food is short, he said. There is no electricity or running water.

The soldiers at the checkpoint to Gorazde "have indicated they don't care what the Bosnian Serb authorities say about anything," Redmond said, indicating that the soldiers might be acting on their own.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees last month summoned the leaders of Bosnia's three warring factions — Serbs, Croats and the Muslim-led government — to Geneva. They signed a pledge Nov. 18 to allow free passage of convoys and gave the aid agency the right to decide what constituted humanitarian aid.

But Redmond said the Serbs have not kept their promise.

Nikola Koljevic, vice president of the self-proclaimed Bosnian Serb republic, rejected the U.N. criticism, the Tanjug news agency later reported.

Violence on West Bank escalating

The Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank — A Palestinian shot a Jewish settler in the stomach today as almost daily unrest in the occupied territories threatened to delay Israel's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho in the West Bank.

Soldiers shut the Bethlehem area after the settler was shot and seriously wounded while shopping with his wife near the holy site of Rachel's tomb, burial place of a biblical matriarch and about four miles south of Jerusalem.

The violence came on the day that the Muslim fundamentalist group Hamas observes as the start of the intifadeh, or Palestinian uprising, which began in 1987. A general strike is planned Thursday to mark the anniversary.

The cycle of attacks and reprisals has intensified with the approach of the Israeli withdrawal, which is set to begin on Monday, the date set by the Sept. 13 Israel-PLO accord. In response to the violence, the army has reinforced its presence in much of the occupied territories in the last two days.

In other developments: —About 80 Palestinian activists from factions opposed to the accord have been rounded up in house-to-house raids conducted by troops in the past two days, Palestinian sources said. Israeli officials confirmed arrests were made but gave no numbers.

—Secretary of State Warren Christopher flew to Cairo after talking with Israeli and Palestinian leaders. He is focusing on bringing Israel and Syria back to the negotiating table.

—Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Gur, signaling a softening of Israel's position, said Tuesday that some aspects of the autonomy plan could be implemented on schedule Monday even if a detailed agreement is not signed.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has said that while a small delay in implementing the Israel-PLO pact is needed to iron out security arrangements, any substantial change would hand the extremists a victory.

Palestinian negotiators who met Tuesday with Christopher said they stressed that following through with the accord was the only way to stop the violence. Since the signing of the agreement, 37 Palestinians and 14 Israelis have been killed as extremists on both sides wage an increasingly violent campaign to undo the accord.

An Israeli official who demanded anonymity said the army was planning a program of symbolic acts of withdrawal on Monday if Rabin gave the go-ahead. The army has already begun to dismantle some bases and set up a frontier with the Gaza Strip.

Meanwhile, the Yediot Achronot daily said 1,000 to 1,200 of the near 10,500 Palestinian prisoners held in Israeli jails would be set free Sunday and Monday. Israeli officials said the move depended on the progress of Israel-PLO talks in Cairo.

In Bethlehem, soldiers fanned out in search of the attacker who was dressed in black and described as about 25 years old.

Soldiers conducted house-to-house searches and imposed a curfew in the area of the shooting including a nearby refugee camp. Most store owners closed up for the day, fearing retaliatory rampages by Jewish settlers.

On Tuesday, settlers called for a rebellion against the government during a funeral procession for two Jewish settlers.

Christmas in April has money, needs volunteers

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Christmas in April, a local organization that assists the elderly and disabled with house repairs, is ending 1993 with good financial prospects for future repairs.

In its last board meeting of the year on Friday, board member Theresa Hodnett said they had received a charitable donation of $14,403 from the Lions Club. The money was raised by Lions Club bingo nights.

Board president Bob Noyes said a few years ago, the organization was nearly broke. "Now we have the money for supplies, but we still need volunteers," he said.

Noyes said Christmas in April is the biggest assistance project in Big Spring. "You won't find another program that gets 600 volunteers out together at the same time," he said.

Now that the program has found money to operate year-round instead of confining its repairs to the last Saturday in April, finding volunteers has become a priority.

In other business, the board approved a motion to purchase a sign for the office, which is located in the Lions Club building on Third Street. The sign would hang over a side entrance that leads directly to the Christmas in April office.

The organization has had the office since the beginning of November. The phone number is now 263-0147. Hodnett staffs the office five mornings a week and all the paperwork and files are now in this central location.

The board is also investigating the possibility of moving houses scheduled for demolition on the north side of town. "Some of those houses are better than where some people live," said Noyes.

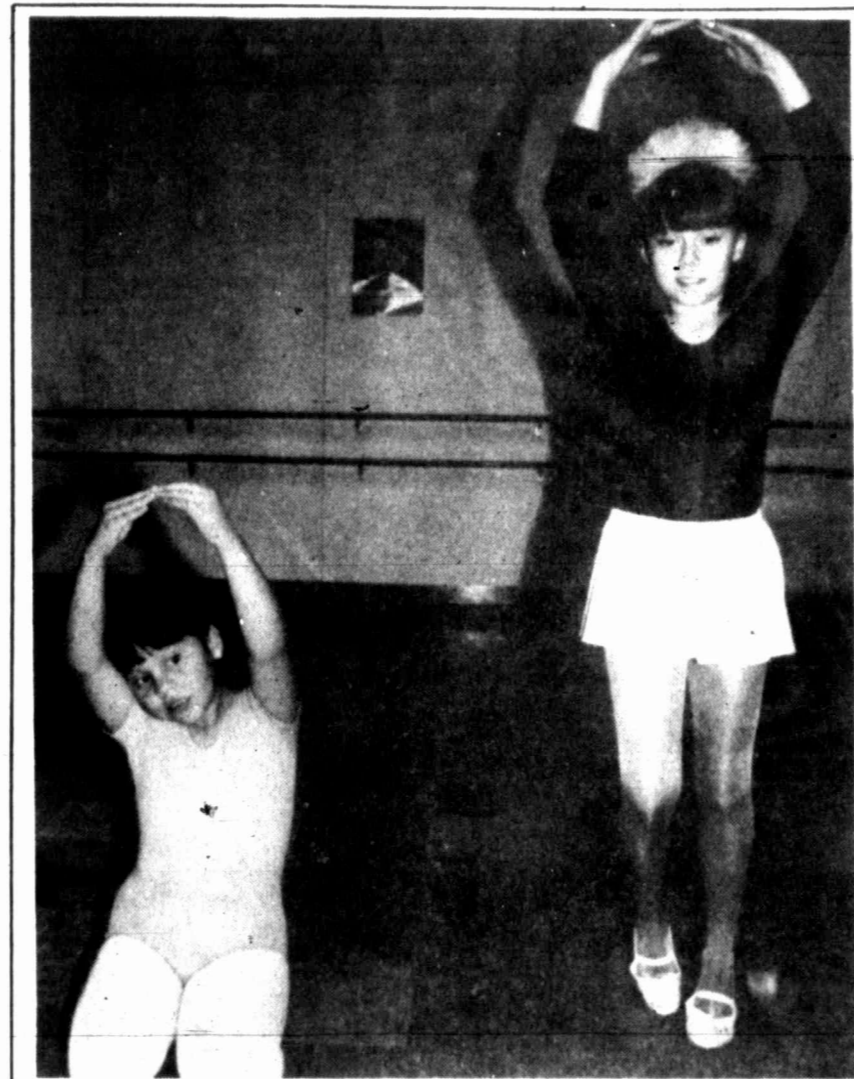

Christmas in April has not yet learned how much it received from Wal-Mart's first three hours of gross receipts the day after Thanksgiving. Hodnett said most charities usually receive approximately $600 to $700 from Wal-Mart.

Memory

row had flipped out. While everyone with hymnals was singing with somber faces, my mother smiled from ear to ear. And Mike and I were on the verge of another laughing spree. We were in the Christmas spirit. We were making joyous sounds unto the Lord.

Afterwards, the usual "Christmas Eve Fiftful Sleep" was nowhere present. I slept soundly that night.

I remember being disappointed with the present I received the next morning. Since we were on the road, my sister and I did not get the usual 27 tons of presents. Instead, I got a game of skill. Oh, it was neat all right, but being one of the most uncoordinated teens around, I quickly lost interest in it.

But looking back at the entire episode, this was what the holiday is all about. Like the Grinch on television, I learned that Christmas is not something that comes in a wrapped box with a bow on it, but comes from the love of the people you are with.

Speaker urges taking time to listen in busy season

Luncheon draws women from many area communities

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

As the holidays get into full swing, many people may forget to reflect on the meaning behind the traditions.

That's a danger of the busy holiday season, especially for women, said Jo Ann Long, moderator of Presbyterian Women of Synod of the Sun. She was the guest speaker at the annual Red Dress Luncheon for Presbyterian women Monday at First Presbyterian Church.

She urged women to stay close to their faith during the holidays.

"Commercially, we've known Christmas was coming since before Halloween," Long said. "But in the church, we've only been preparing for two weeks."

Long referred to the season of Advent, observed now in many churches.

"This celebration is a time to reflect and remember Christ's presence in our everyday life," Long said. "Through joy or frustration, God can still speak to us."

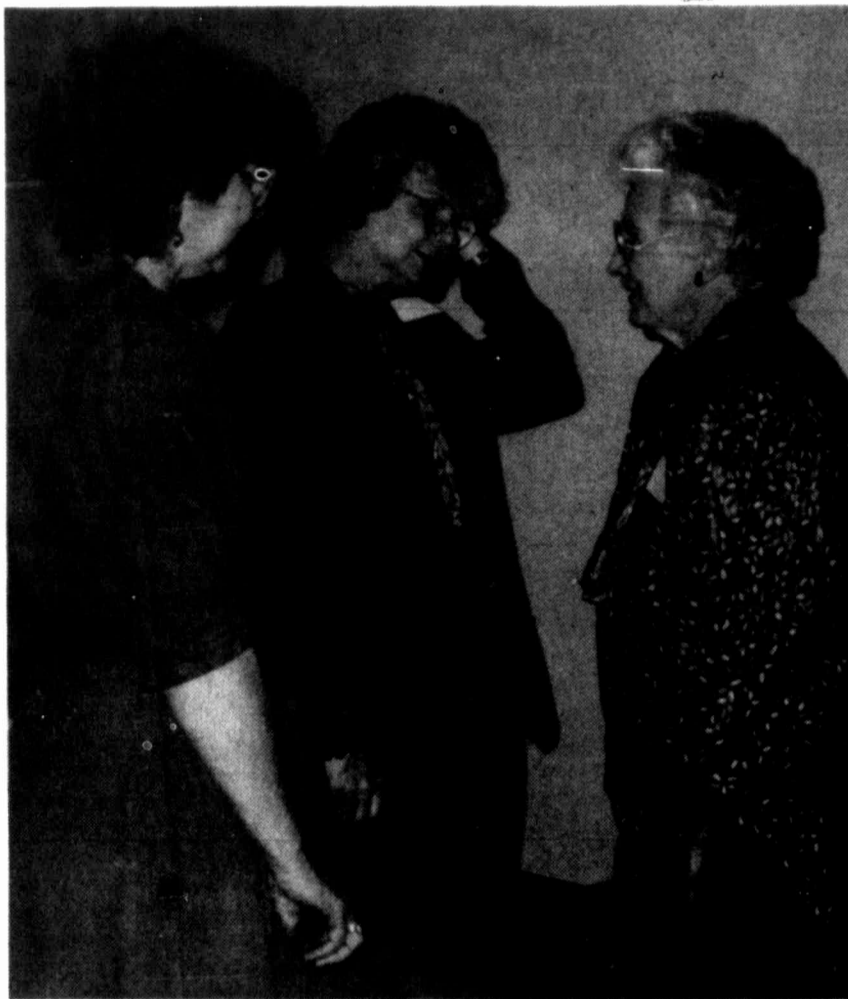

Long described her own Christmastime tragedy 20 years ago, when a rare viral infection caused her to lose her hearing. Her ability to hear and understand fluctuated for months, until she begged God to take her hearing altogether.

Today, she has lost partial hearing and wears hearing aids, but the experience changed her life.

"If someone had told me then that God would lead me to do the things I went on to do, I would have thought they were crazy," she said. "But many times, you don't realize the doors God has opened for you, the times he has called you to say yes."

Each person is "called" to do something, Long said.

"As we prepare ourselves for this Christmas season, I hope you will reflect on that calling," she said. "We're often puzzled by the direction in which our lives are pushed. When God's will is made known to us, it often shifts us off of our course."

Hanukkah observation begins

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

December is a time for Santa Claus, Christmas trees, carols, and the celebration of the birth of Christ.

However, it is also a time for menorahs, feasts, and the celebration of the reconsecration of the Temple of Jerusalem.

Dec. 9 marks the first day of Hanukkah (also spelled Chanukah), the day on which the Temple was recaptured from the Syrian Greeks circa 165 B.C.

According to the Talmud, which is the Jewish holy book, only one day's supply of pure olive oil was found when the Jews reclaimed the temple. Miraculously, the oil burned for eight days, long enough for fresh jars of oil to be brought into the temple.

The menorah, which is an eight-branched candelabra, and the eight days of Hanukkah commemorate this miracle. The celebration of Hanukkah was started by the Maccabees, leaders of the Jews who fought against the Syrian Greeks.

Songs and stories associated with the holiday often refer to the

The eight-branched candelabra, called a menorah, is used to celebrate Hanukkah, also spelled Chanukah. The holiday begins Thursday.

Maccabees. Alternate names for Hanukkah include Feast of the Maccabees, the Festival of Lights, and the Feast of Dedication.

Thomas Kee, a member of the Beth Hashem synagogue in Odessa, said gift giving is a custom for Hanukkah as well as Christmas.

"Families give a gift to each child each day of Hanukkah," he explained. "We try to give mostly clothes, religious items such as prayer books and toys for the children to have fun with."

Kee said he will give his 12-year-old son items to prepare the boy for his bar mitzvah next year. The bar mitzvah celebrates a young man's 13th birthday.

The first night of Hanukkah is usually celebrated at the synagogue, said Kee, and is then celebrated at the home for the following days of the holiday.

"We have special foods for our meals, such as latkes, cheeses, different pastries," said Kee.

The Beth Hashem synagogue also celebrates the holiday with plays about Judas Maccabee and other important figures in Jewish history.

Kee does not feel Jews are slighted by the amount of attention paid to Christmas instead of Hanukkah. "It gets its attention with the people whose attention it needs," said Kee.

"But we don't mind if others wish to celebrate Hanukkah with us."

Supplies for celebrating Hanukkah, such as menorahs and candles, are not difficult to find even in West Texas. Kee said members of the synagogue have been able to find Hanukkah candles in stores such as Albertson's, and most of the members subscribe to catalogs that carry the supplies they need.

Hanukkah, said Kee, is a time to remember the battles fought by the Maccabees to keep Judaism intact.

CHRISTMAS RUM CAKE

Before you start, sample the rum and check for quality. Good isn't it? Now, go ahead. Select a large mixing bowl, measuring cup, etc., and check the rum again for quality. It must be just right. Try it again. With an electric beater, beat one cup butter in a large fluffy bowl. Add one teaspoon sugar and beat again. Meanwhile, make certain the rum is of best quality.

Add two large eggs and two cups dried fruit and beat well - until bery high. If fruit gets stuck in beater, pry it out with screwdriver. Sample rum again, checking for consistency. Next sift in 3 cups baking powder, add a pink of rum, 1 seaspoon toda and 2 cup of pepper - or is it salt? Anyway, don't fret. Just test the rum again. ZOWIE.....

Now, sift in half a pint of lemon juice, fold in chopped buttermilk and add strained nuts. Shampale the rum again.

Now, one bablespoon srown tugar or whatever color is around. Mix well. Greast oven and turn on cake pan to 350 degrees. Now pour the whole mixture into the oven and...oops.... Now, where did I put that mop?

Sue Haugh

On second thought, and also third and fourth, forget the oven, forget the cake, check the rest of the rum and go to bed!

Lady Steers bomb Coronado

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

Kristi Birrell showed last week that she was the point guard the Big Spring Lady Steers were searching for. Tuesday night, she threw scoring into the bargain.

Robbi Hall and Birrell provided an unlikely 1-2 scoring punch for the Lady Steers as they broke open a tight game in the third quarter and cruised to a 63-44 win over Lubbock Coronado in Steer Gym Tuesday night.

Hall scored 16 and Birrell 14 to pace the Lady Steers. Amy Earnst, despite sitting most of the first half with foul trouble, had 14 points and Kerry Gregg 10 for Big Spring, now 7-4 for the season.

April Armacost scored 14 points, and Amanda Hale and Angie Taylor added 10 apiece for Coronado (7-5).

Big Spring, usually dependent on its inside players for most of the scoring load, appeared to be in trouble early when Earnst picked up three fouls in the first five minutes. Complicating matters was cold shooting from Gregg, the Lady Steers' other post player, who was 3-for-12 from the field in the first half.

"I just get aggravated when things aren't going our way, and I just did some stupid stuff, like the fouls," Earnst said. "But the team stepped it up and played really well."

Indeed. Into the picture stepped Hall, a 5-foot-6 junior who took over the scoring load in the first half. Fighting inside against the much taller Lady Mustangs, Hall sizzled, hitting 5 of 8 first-half shots en route to scoring 12 points by intermission.

"I think the whole team did a good job when (Earnst) went out," Hall said. "We just all started playing together. We hustled and didn't quit."

With Hall providing the scoring punch, the Lady Steers stayed even with Coronado and even managed a slim 29-27 lead at halftime. But all this was a prelude to the second half.

when Big Spring blew the game apart.

An Armacost free throw two minutes into the third gave Coronado its last lead of the game at 32-31, but Earnst returned a few seconds later, and the results were immediately evident.

First, Robin Wise fed Earnst inside for a turn-around jumper that gave the lead back to Big Spring. Then Wise nailed a jumper of her own and the Lady Steers were off to the races.

By the time Taylor hit a three-pointer for Coronado at the 3:14 mark of the quarter, Big Spring owned a 41-35 lead, and the Lady Steers used a 20-5 run at the end of the third and start of the fourth quarters to cruise home for the win.

Adding to Coronado's woes was Big Spring's constantly changing defenses, which forced 29 turnovers.

"We kept changing defenses on them about every other time up the floor," BSHS coach Ron Taylor said. "Our half-court press hurt them at times, and then we jumped into our full-court press. It kept them off-balance."

After scoring just two points before sitting down in the first half, Earnst scored 12 in the last 16 minutes. "It felt good (in the second half),"

Earnst said. "I was worried that I wasn't going to get to go back in, because they were doing so well without me."

Birrell also added offense in the second half, scoring 10 of her points in that time. In addition, she dished out eight assists to solidify her hold on the point guard position.

"The deal with Kristi is that every week, she just keeps getting better and better," Taylor said. "To play point guard for me is not easy, because I demand a lot from them, but she's performed. She did a great job tonight."

"In practices, (Taylor) used me and Heather (Anderson)," Birrell said. "They started working me into the games, and started hitting the shots and handling the ball better ... We knew all of us would have to step it up and play a tiny bit better (when Earnst went to the bench) and we did."

The win was the Lady Steers' fifth straight after opening the season 1-4.

"I'm just tickled to death for the kids to see them improving like they have, and the good thing is there's still a lot more room for improvement," Taylor said. "Things started clicking for us at the Coahoma tournament (last weekend). I felt like we played four hard games, and I could see it try to happen there. But tonight was the first time it was really happening."

Coronado took the junior varsity game, 50-34. Molly Smith scored 10 points to lead Big Spring, which fell to 3-3 with the loss.

The Lady Steers return to action this weekend when they participate in the Seminole Tournament.

Forsan boys find touch vs. Stanton

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

FORSAN - Forsan's boys' basketball team is going through a bit of deja vu.

The Buffaloes don't mind.

Forsan (3-5)

beat Stanton

53-49 Tuesday

and turned its start this year

into a copy of last year's beginning.

Last year

was the same situation," said

Forsan coach

Terry

McDonald. "We went over to the Coahoma tournament, played three

3A schools in a row and lost every game. Then we went over to Stanton and won over there, and that kind of turned

us around."

Last year

Forsan

reached the playoffs, so the Buffaloes

will take a similar turnaround.

Forsan fell behind 4-0 and didn't score until Rusty Baker hit a pair of free throws with 5:35 left in the opening quarter. But those innocent foul shots were the start of a 12-point rally that put Forsan in control.

"I think we had the old first-of-the-game jitters. The kids knew we needed this game," McDonald said.

"Once the ice was broken and we were able to get in the flow, well,

we set the flow, really."

Stanton (5-3) stayed close and eventually took a 33-32 lead on

Johnny Titsworth's 10-foot jumper with 4:15 left in the third quarter.

Once again, though, Baker was there to start another Forsan rally. Baker, a 6-foot sophomore who scored 12 points, hit a short bank shot then sank a 15-foot baseline jumper to put Forsan up 36-33.

Forsan led by two, 39-37, when it started pulling away. After a pair of Chad Kemper free throws, Jacoby Hopper drained a trey to put Forsan up 44-37 with 7:06 to go. Kemper's steal and layup at the 5:17 mark put Forsan up nine, 48-39, and Stanton was finished.

The smaller Buffaloes of Forsan managed to outbounced the Buffaloes of Stanton, 45-33.

"We just didn't get after it, we didn't give a good effort," said Stanton coach Doug Gordon. "We've got two kids taller than anyone they have, and that's what we talked about at halftime. I can see them rebounding even with us, but they shouldn't have more rebounds than us."

Chris Evans scored 15, and three other Forsan players were in double figures - Baker 12, Hopper 10, Kemper 10. Forsan's Shane Sims - the Buffaloes' tallest starter at 6-1 - grabbed a game-high 10 rebounds. Evans, a 5-11 guard, had nine boards.

J.J. Ortiz scored 18 for Stanton on 8-for-12 shooting.

Forsan and Stanton play Thursday in the opening round of the Coyote Christmas Tournament in Gail. Forsan plays Post's JV at 5 p.m., and Stanton plays Grady at 8 p.m.

GIRLS' GAME

Stanton's girls had an easy plan Tuesday. If the opponent has one girl covered tightly, just pass the ball to another girl.

Faulk ready to run in NFL

By The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - The audition is over.

"I think I'm ready to play" in the NFL, Marshall Faulk said in announcing he is passing up his senior season at San Diego State to turn pro.

"I think I'm a versatile back," Faulk said. "I could do just about anything a team needs a back to do - run inside, run outside, catch the ball, throw the ball if needed, block. It doesn't matter. I can do it all."

At San Diego State, he did just that, and in the process became the school's first All-American.

He could have gone to Miami or Nebraska and been a defensive back. Instead, he chose San Diego State. Now, three seasons and 4,589 yards later, the star running back has decided to make himself available for the NFL draft.

Faulk's announcement at Jack Murphy Stadium, where he starred for the Aztecs, came a week after athletic director Fred Miller fired coach Al Luginbill and his staff for failing to get San Diego State into a bowl game for the second straight year. Among the fired assistants was receivers coach Curtis Johnson, who recruited Faulk from New Orleans in 1991 and became almost a father figure to the player.

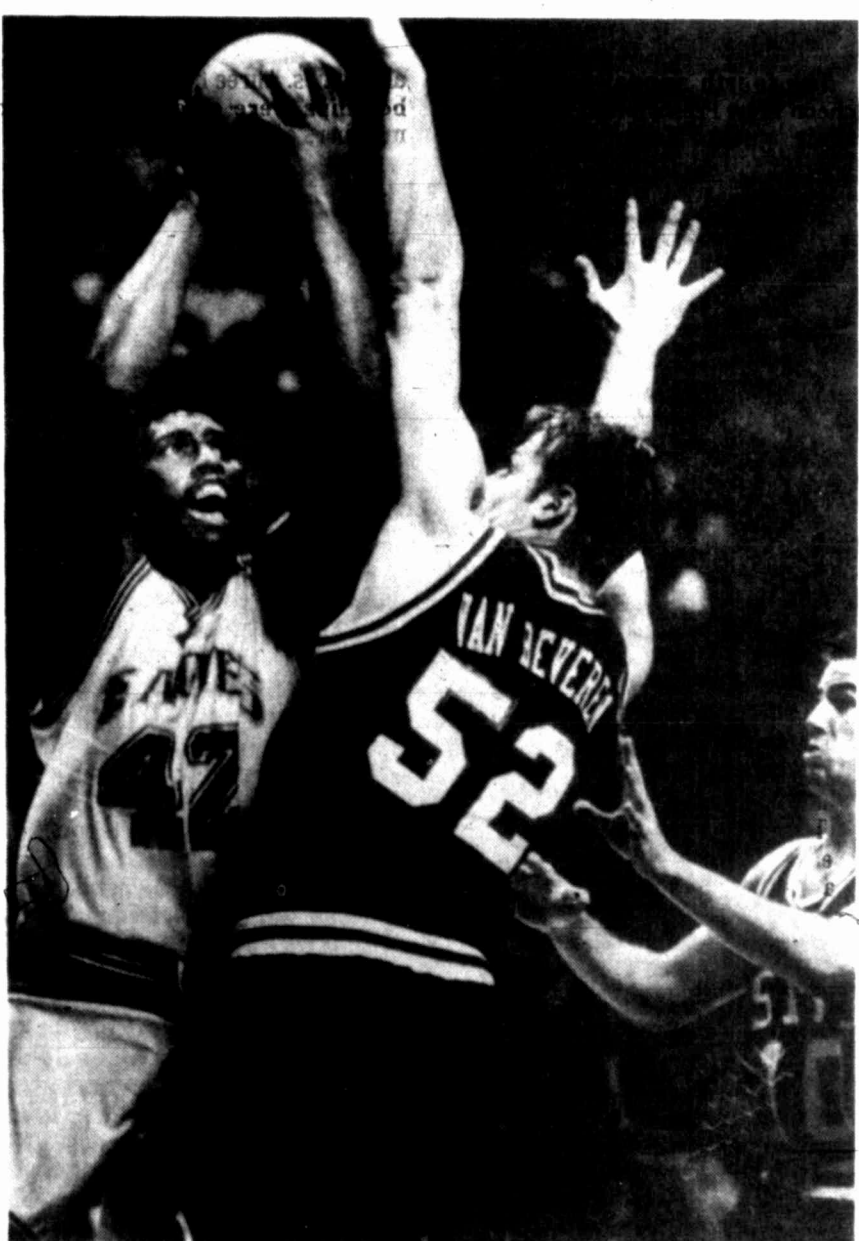

"When Coach Luginbill and the rest of the coaching staff that I came to be friends with had left, I felt like I didn't want to come back," Faulk said.

Faulk thought back to his freshman season of 1991, being "sixth or seventh on the depth chart and just wanting to play running back at San Diego State."

"Being a defensive back at Miami, which won the national title that year, was kind of crazy, and at the time I didn't know what was going through my head. I just went on ahead and did it, went with my gut feeling that, hey, I want to be a running back, and that's that," Faulk said.

Faulk did everything at SDSU but win the Heisman Trophy - he was second to Miami's Gino Torretta last year - and a Western Athletic Conference championship.

San Diego State was 19-15-2 with Faulk, who was national rushing champion and All-American in both his freshman and sophomore years.

North Texas forward Jesse Ratliff (42) shoots over SMU defenders Raymond Van Beveren (52) and Troy Dornier (10) Tuesday in Denton. North Texas won, 71-59.

By The Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Some intentional fouls are a little more intentional than others.

Notre Dame's Monty Williams said he was just trying to prevent an Indiana basket; Alan Henderson's looked like revenge. And before the brief flurry of fouls ended, both the Irish and the Hoosiers appeared ready to settle it with fists.

"There was some bumping going on. Thank goodness neither team got out of hand," Notre Dame coach John MacLeod said after a 101-82 loss to the No. 12 Hoosiers Tuesday night.

In the only other game Tuesday night involving a ranked team, Marquette upset No. 16 Illinois 74-65.

"Both benches showed excellent control, and we didn't get into a melee. It was just a very physical, aggressive game, and those things happen," MacLeod said. "There's a lot of contact, and when you drive the ball to the basket, sometimes there's a collision."

The first collision occurred four minutes into the second half with Indiana in control and leading 61-39. Henderson had a clear path to the basket, drove in and was knocked to the floor by Williams. The officials called a flagrant foul, sent Henderson to the free throw line for two shots - he missed them both - and awarded Indiana possession of the ball.

Henderson took the inbounds pass and, two seconds later, was fouled again by Williams as he drove to the basket. He made one of two free throws this time, but since this one wasn't deemed intentional, the Irish got the ball. On the next trip down the floor, a still angry Henderson returned the favor, sending Williams to the line.

That's when the players from both teams squared off, although no blows were thrown. Five minutes later, Williams picked up his fifth foul and departed with 23 points for the Irish (2-2). Henderson led Indiana (2-1) with 21 points and 13 rebounds.

"He was going to the bucket and I wasn't going to give him an easy lane to go in and dunk," Williams said of the first intentional foul. "They already had the home advantage. I didn't want to get the crowd into it."

"We came down on the next play and he does it so violently, so intentionally, it's like, 'Why?' After I fouled him, I said I'm sorry, I wasn't trying to hurt him, and he comes back and tries to hurt me."

"If I was trying to hurt him, I would have taken him out before he got to the lane," Williams said. "I'm not going to complain about the refs; I'm not going to say they did a good job either." The officials sent Indiana to the foul line an Assembly Hall recording 50 times, and the Hoosiers made 37 of them, including 24 in the first half. The Irish went to the line just 24 times, making 16.

Marquette 74, Illinois 65

At Milwaukee, Robb Logterman hit five 3-pointers and Tony Miller became Marquette's career assist leader as the Warriors pulled away in the second half.

The Warriors (4-2) bounced back from a homecourt loss to Wisconsin-Green Bay and beat the Fighting Illini for the second straight season behind 18 points each from Logterman and Damon Key.

Illinois fell to 2-1 as leading scorer Deon Thomas and Shelly Clark, averaging 25 and 20 points respectively, were held to 14 and 11.

Miller had 14 assists and passed Lloyd Walton on the school's all-time list. Walton had 480 assists from 1974-76. Miller, a junior, also scored all 10 of his points in the second half.

With the game tied at 54, Logterman hit his fifth 3-pointer, backup center Amal McCaskill made two free throws and Miller made his second 3-pointer of the half to give the Warriors a 62-55 lead with just under six minutes left.
