HOUSTON (AP) — Two women have been sentenced to prison for collaborating to steal $175,000 from their employer.

Yvonne Barker, 40, pleaded guilty Thursday to felony theft and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Verona Green, 31, was convicted in May of two counts of felony theft — involving two employers — and was sentenced Thursday to a pair of 13-year prison sentences that will be served concurrently.

They stole the money between August 1997 and April 1998 from Applied Vision, a Houston business that provides temporary employees for the medical community, prosecutor Lynne Parsons said. They made out bogus payroll checks and cashed them.

Ms. Green's second conviction was for stealing from a second employer, Strategic Materials, a recycling business.

PISD predicts enrollment dip of 78 students

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Business Manager Mark McVay told Pampa Independent School District Thursday night trustees the school district is predicting a decline of 78 students during the upcoming school year over last year. He said the district has been experiencing a decline in students the past several years.

Preliminary property values received from the Gray County Appraisal District in June was $709 million, according to McVay. The district will have more certainty about property values when the district receives the certified values on July 25. He explained there can be some fluctuation between the preliminary values and certified values.

The preliminary budget given to the trustees during last night's meeting included a $1.475 tax rate which McVay said was basically the same as last year. He said the predicted collection rate for the taxes is 97.1 percent, which is similar to the past several years.

"The tax levy is down because the property value is down. That's the main reason for the local sources dropping," said McVay. He said there will be a reduction of approximately eight and one-half teaching units during the upcoming year.

Man seriously hurt in attempt to foil burglary

A scuffle over a gun and a knife early today when police say a burglar surprised a homeowner left the suspect slightly injured and seriously hurt the man who lived there.

As a result, Antonio Garcia Galaviz, 36, whose address is listed as 218 W. Craven, is in jail on probation violation and pending charges and Esteban Barrella, 69, 605 E. Campbell, is in an Amarillo hospital. The burglary incident on East Campbell came to light when Pampa police got a call at 1:36 a.m. reporting a gunshot nearby at 540 South Reid. It was there officers found Galaviz sitting on a porch with his head in his hands and a handgun under him.

Officer Don Rowell ordered Galaviz to surrender the weapon, which he did and officers discovered it held three empty shell casings.

Police said the gunfire on South Reid did not strike anything and was the result of Galaviz "examining" the weapon.

After the scene was secured, Rowell called Rural/Metro due to a laceration on Galaviz's scalp.

It was while at that scene, officers got word of an altercation at 605 E. Campbell. Officer Donny Brown and Sgt. Alvin Johnson responded and found Barrella with severe injuries to his head and neck.

According to Rowell, Barrella told officers he had discovered

Wet year pumps up reservoir level Lake Meredith highest since '83

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

SANFORD — A wet year has pumped plenty of water into Lake Meredith, the reservoir here that supplies drinking water to 11 communities, including Pampa, across the Texas Panhandle and South Plains.

According to John C. Williams, general manager of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, more than 125,000 acre feet of water have flowed into the lake in the last three months.

An acre-foot of water is about the amount of water needed to cover a football field to a depth of one foot.

The water level at the lake this week stood at 94.8 feet, an increase of nine feet over three months ago.

"So far this year," Williams said, "we have received nearly 145,000 acre-feet of inflow." The lake is at its highest level since 1983 when a record level of more than 101 feet was reached. It contains over 414,000 acre-feet of water, about 340,000 acre-feet of which could be withdrawn for use by the member municipalities.

Pampa has drawn only 1,490.043 acre-feet of the 6,640.101 allocated this year, about 22.44 percent of its allocated water.

Both Conchas Reservoir and Ute Lake were releasing water during the last three months. Ute Lake is to be lowered by about seven feet which should raise Lake Meredith another five feet.

Williams said deliveries to member cities so far this year are less than the amounts of last year, but still relatively high. About 47 percent of the annual allocation has been delivered during the first six months of the year.

Pampa has drawn only 1,490,043 acre-feet of the 6,540,101 allocated this year, about 22.44 percent of its allocated water.

"It appears that the amount allocated for the year will probably be adequate," Williams said, "unless extremely dry weather is encountered in the last part of the summer."

Water leaves the lake generally in one of two ways, CRMWA officials said, either through pumping water to member communities for their use or through evaporation. While evaporation rates early in the summer were low, they have increased in recent days with clear skies and soaring temperatures. Officials said 266 acre feet of water evaporated from the 11,000 acre lake on Tuesday alone when temperatures pushed the 90 degree mark.

Williams said the quality of water stored in the lake has probably improved during the past three months. Chloride concentrations in June, before the largest inflows of summer rains were recorded, indicated 340 milligrams per liter, down from 380 milligrams per liter last spring.

The upcoming budget provides for the teacher salary increases and new program changes in curriculum. He said the vast changes in the budget are related to salary increases.

Superintendent Dawson Orr said whatever salary schedule was in place at the time of the recent legislation change was increased by $3,000 plus a step up the ladder. Average annual increase is to be $3,500. Teachers, nurses, librarians, counselors and diagnosticians were given the increase.

Non-teaching personnel will receive a seven percent increase in pay according to the projected budget.

McVay told the board that tax values can change from the preliminary submissions. He said he was not certain what the effective tax rate will be. It will be decided Aug. 5.

The new pay schedule will need to be adopted at the Aug. 5 meeting, said McVay.

BURGLARY

Galaviz burglarizing his home. Galaviz had a gun that Barrelle said was stolen from the house. The two struggled and the gun went off, but no one was hit. During the struggle Barrelle grabbed a knife and attempted to stab Galaviz in order to get away. Barrelle told officers he remembered nothing else until officers found him.

In the meantime, Galaviz had been transported to Gray County Jail after EMS personnel treated the head wound but during a search in jail a knife wound to his chest was discovered. Galaviz was taken to Pampa Regional Medical Center where the wound was dressed and he was released into police custody. Barrelle was taken to Pampa Regional Medical Center with lacerations to his head, an injury to his right eye, a cracked skull and vertebrae damage. He was airlifted to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo about 6 this morning where he was listed in serious condition.

Currently, Galaviz is being held on a "blue warrant" (felony) for parole violation on a DWI conviction but Rowell said charges will be filed for attempted murder, aggravated assault on an elderly person, burglary of a habitation, being a felon in possession of a firearm and possession of stolen property.

Minister's musings ...

In Nehemiah 1:2, it is written that Nehemiah "asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem." The Jewish people had been taken into captivity by Nebuchadnezzar — the instrument through which judgment had come (2 Chr. 36:17-21). Upon asking the condition of the people, their place of habitation and worship, Nehemiah learned that (v. 3) "The remnant ... are in great affliction (spoilage, wretchedness, sorrow) and reproach (disgrace, to be exposed as if by stripping, to pull off); the wall (a symbol of protection) is broken down, and the gates are burned with fire."

There was affliction from decay of the city and discouragement of heart from the reproach from the enemies without and the pessimists within. All of these things were the consequences; the result of some action. Why were they in such a "state?" The answer is in 2 Chr. 36:14-16.

Nehemiah's response to this? In v. 4, it's written that "when I heard these words ... I

By Rev. Ralph E. Denton

Pampa Chapel of the Apostolic Faith

sat down and wept, and mourned ... and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven."

What are the lessons that can be learned from this? When considering the conditions of today, especially within the family, the Church, and our individual lives, the afflictions can easily be seen. What are these afflictions, these things that bring reproach? Are not many families, churches, and lives sorrowed by idleness, neglect and lack of commitment? Is not the Church held in reproach by many simply because the Church seems to be more shadow than substance; more hypocritical than holy? Are there not dissensions within the Church that slows its progress?

What about the walls that are to be for protection and the gates that allow entry? Have some of the Church's defenses been weakened through lack of prayer and the Word? Have we, as Christians, let down our guard because it's been an effort to keep it up?

Let's apply the same questions to the individual and the family. Are the same afflictions in our own life? Are we causing any disgrace to come upon our family, church, or the name of Christ? Are we standing against the wiles of the devil or have we sat down, allowing the things which are not convenient to enter our lives? What has been our response to the inconsistencies in our life and in our church? Should not it be the same as Nehemiah's over the conditions that surrounded him. When's the last time you wept and mourned, fasted over the decay and decline that you see? How long has it been ... really?

Planning a party for Miss Lettie ...

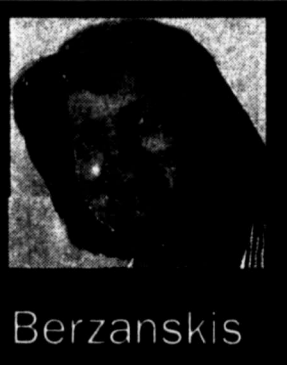

EUHARLEE, Ga. - Miss Lettie Rogers floats among the ruined headstones of a north Georgia cemetery. The marker on her ostensible resting place says she died in 1855, just a few months short of her 42nd birthday. Those who follow Miss Lettie's appearances believe she must have succumbed during a yellow fever outbreak. No one knows for sure.

Miss Lettie's grave is one of the few marked among the 40 or so which fill the cemetery. The church which stood nearby burned so long ago no one remembers more than its name, Mt. Zion.

My cousin bought a batch of acreage which includes the site where our parents and grandparents lived in the early part of the century. His property fronts Euharlee Creek and includes the ruins of an old grist mill. He is mighty proud to have acquired this parcel of family history. The deal included Miss Lettie's cemetery.

After his purchase was complete, people began to tell my cousin tales about how they or their grandmother or aunt or friend saw Miss Lettie through the trees or felt her coolness nearby. My cousin believes she twice used her lace hanky to wipe the sweat from his brow on a sweltering summer day.

As he recounted Miss Lettie's ethereal adventures to another cousin and me, we wondered if we, too, might see Miss Lettie. We wondered if she hovered near us in the knee-high grass on the land which means so much to our family and listened to our gossip about her. We shivered a bit as the sun set behind trees so thick we could only hear, not see the creek, which ran among them.

The South pulses with such fecund vitality one can imagine it supports more than the life one sees, touches, smells, tastes and hears. It is easy to believe Miss Lettie lives a corner turn away in a dimensional past from which she occasional-ly vacations to the present.

My cousin is planning a birthday party for Miss Lettie in November. Perhaps she will come and invite her friends.

Several members of Faith Advent Christian Fellowship Church recently traveled to Lubbock to attend a Gaither Vocal Band Concert at the Colliseum. Featured with the Vocal Band were Candy Hemphill Christmas, The Martins, Ben Speer, Jake Hess, The Happy Goodmans, Rex Nelson and Bob Cain. West Texas minister has cowboy poet as alter ego

By LORETTA FULTON
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas — "I'll try with all my might to do the very best I can, to be good and not backslide Lord, if you could help me out, I sure would be much obliged."

Those are words you'd expect from the crusty Biscuits O'Bryan, but certainly not from the Rev. Monte Jones, a retired Episcopal priest who lives in Colorado City.

But if you get Biscuits, you get the parson, too. They're one and the same and have been since Jones reinvented himself into the cowboy poet Biscuits O'Bryan 12 years ago.

Jones served the Episcopal churches in Snyder and Colorado City from 1977-84 before moving to Sonora to be rector of the church there. Since his retirement in February 1998, Jones and his wife, Virginia, have made their home in Colorado City.

Jones served as the supply priest for All Saints Episcopal Church in Colorado City and St. Stephen's in Sweetwater for a year after his retirement until a permanent priest was hired. Although Jones can frequently be found in a church, you need to find a place where cowboy poets hang out to chat with Biscuits.

He was a headliner at the poetry reading recently during the annual Texas Cowboy Reunion in Stamford. Although Biscuits turns up often for cowboy poetry reading events, don't expect him at any competitions, where the pay is strictly in the form of plaques and congratulations.

"I just do this for money," he joked.

But anyone who has heard Biscuits recite his poetry knows better. He does it for love as well as money.

Although Jones created Biscuits in 1987 and wrote his first original cowboy poem in 1989, he has been spinning some pretty good yarns since he was 2 years old, according to his grandmother.

"Some of them were even true," Jones said his grandmother was fond of saying.

Jones first turned his speaking gift into a vocation as an Episcopal priest. He grew up in San Angelo but graduated from high school at St. Stephen's Episcopal School in Austin. After earning two degrees in drama from Sul Ross State University, he attended an Episcopal seminary in Sewanee, Tenn.

Biscuits was born in Sonora when the Covered Wagon Dinner Theater was created as a tourism attraction. Jones wanted to put his drama degrees to good use, so he created the cowboy poet Biscuits O'Bryan.

"I didn't want to scare anybody by singing," Jones said, so he opted for poetry recitation.

He chose his character's name from his penchant for cooking pretty good chuckwagon vittles.

"I make good biscuits, and 'O'Bryan' just kind of followed along there," he said.

While in Colorado City, Jones put his cooking skills to work when members of his church, under the leadership of Joy Dockrey, created the Cactus Cafe, which specialized in chicken fried steak and cream gravy. The grub was so good that the flock took its show on the road and was a regular at the Texas Folklife Festival in San Antonio for 19 years.

"It just kind of fizzled out," Jones said.

But Biscuits O'Bryan isn't showing any signs of fizzling. He has two books and two tapes to his credit and will have a new CD in August. With a getup straight-out of a dime novel, Biscuits looks like he'll be around for a long time, until it's time for that big roundup in the sky.

In a poem of his own creation called "Heavenly Dream," Biscuits prays, "Lord, I hope you'll save a place for a crusty old coozy like me, cause I sure would like to look for you up in heaven eventually."

One thing's for sure. Biscuits enjoys what he does too much to think about sitting in the shade with his boots propped up for too long. "I'm going to do this until I'm a 110, and then if I'm tired I'll retire," he said.

Probation violation returns man to jail

A Pampa man was placed back on probation after a short stay in a Texas Department of Criminal Justice boot camp for violating his original probation.

Probation officials say Thalamus Pshard Malone, 22, assaulted a woman and did not pay his fines and fees on time.

Malone was brought into Judge Lee Waters 223rd District Court last week after having served nearly three months in the Childress Boot Camp. He had been sentenced to the boot camp for violating his parole on charges of possession of a cocaine with intent to deliver.

Malone's original conviction was in June 1997. He was placed on seven years probation.

In April of this year he was arrested for probation violation and sentenced to 75-90 days in the boot camp before being evaluated. According to court records Malone completed his sentence in the boot camp satisfactorily and was placed back on probation.

Conditions of the probation include no alcohol or drugs, not leaving the county without the courts permission, completing a GED by July 2001, and performing 160 hours of community service.

Welfare applicants to be fingerprinted at Texas DHS offices

DALLAS (AP) — After three years of tests, state officials will begin next month to scan fingerprints of applicants for welfare.

First-time welfare applicants will be affected, as well as those who already receive food stamps.

The index-finger scans will begin Aug. 23 at local Texas Department of Human Services offices.

"Our goal is to reduce fraud while preserving the integrity of these important programs," agency commissioner Eric M. Bost said Thursday. "As stewards of taxpayer funds, it is our responsibility to ensure that dollars only go to the truly needy."

A pilot project of finger imaging — conducted in the San Antonio area over the past three years and in Houston the past year — is aimed at eliminating some welfare fraud schemes that have worked in Texas.

A welfare recipient gets thrown in jail and his cousin wants to collect his benefits while he's incarcerated.

The cousin claims to be the inmate, shows some fake identification and receives the benefits.

Or someone collects welfare benefits in one county and then tries to go collect them in another county as well.

The program requires adult and minor parents who receive welfare benefits to undergo "finger imaging." Welfare recipients are asked to provide a finger print from each index finger as well as a photograph of their face.

Officials say the finger imaging works because each time a recipient renews benefits — every three months — he or she must place a finger on the electronic imaging scanner. It's all done on computer. There is no ink.

If the fingerprint doesn't match the image, no benefits are given. Anyone failing to show or refusing to be fingerprinted will be taken off the welfare rolls, officials said.

40,000 Mary Kay meeting delegates descend on Dallas

By MEGAN K. STACK
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — When Mary Kay cosmetics disciples mention the company's founder, they may get a little misty.

"She's just an incredible woman," said Karen Irwin of St. Louis. "Unfortunately, I haven't met her. I mean, I feel like I have. From a distance."

More than 40,000 Mary Kay makeup sellers have converged on Dallas from all around the country for this summer's two-week, 14-hotel convention.

Mary Kay Ash herself doesn't make it to the national meetings these days. A plucky Texan who built the direct-sales company 30 years ago, the 81-year-old Ms. Ash is recovering from a stroke and a broken leg. Her framed photos cast serene gazes over the Dallas Convention Center.

The manicured fingers of Mary Kay reach far. The company has representatives in 29 countries, including Russia and China. Last year, 500,000 Mary Kay vendors sold more than $1 billion worth of merchandise worldwide, according to spokeswoman Shelley Whiddon.

fee to join the Mary Kay sales force are handed a mantra, a set of priorities and a prescribed mental outlook along with the standard case of creams and powders. They must wear skirts or dresses. They must not drink or smoke. They must tell themselves, over and over, "I am making other people's lives better."

Big sales bring lavish rewards — diamond bar pins, diamond rings, cars and the ultimate prize: the pink Cadillac.

"People have this image of big, blond hair," said Ms. Irwin, a former corporate executive whose brown hair is cropped short. "But we're teachers, CPAs, financial directors."

After two marriages, a stint running a metaphysics bookstore and a few years driving a Federal Express truck, Sally Fairbanks of Orlando, Fla., joined the Mary Kay sales force. She liked the idea of setting her own hours, pulling down high pay and working outside the office.

"Women have come full circle," Ms. Fairbanks said, speedwalking into the convention center in a crush of perfumed women. "We've got it all. Now we want to give some of it back."

Texas round up ...

Shrimp season opens again in Texas

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Shrimpers are trawling along the Texas coast again.

The new shrimp season opened 30 minutes after sundown Thursday. Fishermen can drag their nets in both federal and state waters up to 200 miles offshore.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has assigned 65 game wardens to enforce a law that requires shrimpers to use turtle excluder devices in their trawls. Nine agents from the National Marine Fisheries Service also will be on duty.

The state wardens have been commissioned as federal officers this year to give them authority not only in state waters stretching up to nine miles offshore but in federal waters from nine to 200 miles offshore.

In addition, the crews of U.S. Coast Guard vessels will be boarding shrimp boats to inspect nets for properly installed TEDs. The devices are designed to allow sea turtles protected by the federal Endangered Species Act to escape from shrimp trawls if they are swept up in the nets.

Texans giving nearly one-third of total donations

AUSTIN (AP) — As Gov. George W. Bush announced a record campaign war chest topping $37 million, Tom Abraham of the Texas Panhandle town of Canadian says there's one question to ask about the Republican's presidential bid.

"Everybody likes him. Why don't we elect him and get it over with?" said Abraham, 88, who did his part by contributing $1,000. Of Bush's contribution total, $11.6 million came from Texas, according to his campaign. That's about 31 percent.

"There's enough Texas money there to demonstrate power here. The breadth beyond it ... demonstrates his viability nationally," said Bruce Buchanan, political scientist at the University of Texas at Austin.

Contributor Daniel Castagnola, vice president of finance at Enron International in Houston, said Bush has done "an excellent job" as governor and has a good business background.

Bush warns Farm Belt 'a disaster'

DES MOINES — Texas Gov. George W. Bush said the Farm Belt is "a disaster" as he took a confident-sounding campaign to the diners and storefronts of Iowa.

Bush bashed President Clinton for not doing more to pry open the giant Chinese market and said Congress should quickly approve direct payments to farmers who are suffering with historically low commodity prices.

"We must recognize in the halls of Congress that we're in a disaster," Bush said. "I understand how Waterloo is affected when the farm economy suffers."

While Congress should provide disaster relief, Clinton damages the cause by not bringing China into the world trading community, Bush said.

Opening a two-day campaign Thursday, Bush took care to hammer at troubles facing the farm economy, a big issue in Iowa where precinct caucuses launch the nominating process.

He was also seeking to deflect critics who say he doesn't talk about issues, sounding his farm theme in stop after stop.

Ranger who corralled suspect just 'a cowboy'

DALLAS (AP) — Drew Carter, who dreamed for years of becoming a Texas Ranger, has made his own mark in the legendary crime-fighting force that killed outlaws Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow.

Carter is the Ranger who orchestrated the surrender of Angel Maturino Resendez, a suspected serial killer who was the subject of a nationwide manhunt until Carter slipped the cuffs on him Tuesday.

The surrender at the Ysleta international bridge in El Paso came after 1 1/2 days of negotiations in Albuquerque, N.M., with Maturino Resendez's sister. Officials credit Carter's relationship with Manuela Maturino as the break that led to the fugitive's capture.

"It was obtaining information about him and in setting up the interviews, and in talking with them and setting up things, they understood that I could be trusted, and I could trust them," Carter said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"That's what I love about this job," the 32-year-old lawman said. "You don't know what the next day is going to hold. It's a real neat adventure."

East Texas town tries to recover after killing

HUGHES SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Gail Rowe only has to glance out her front window to be reminded of the beating death of her elderly next-door neighbor.

What she sees across the street from her tiny wooden home is the train station along the Kansas City-Southern rail line. It makes her think of 87-year-old Leafie Mason, whom prosecutors say was bludgeoned by rail-riding drifter Angel Maturino Resendez.

"We're all relieved, but we're not satisfied yet," said Mrs. Rowe, who knew Ms. Mason for more than 20 years. "We want justice. I think the death penalty's too easy. I think he should suffer."

The 2,500 people in this old railroad town have yet to recover from last fall's killing, one of four Maturino Resendez is charged with in Texas, Illinois and Kentucky. He is suspected in five other Texas slayings.

Mrs. Rowe's strong feelings are typical among residents here. Hughes Springs, nestled in the rolling hills about 30 miles west of Arkansas, has never witnessed such a gruesome attack.

Bob Andersen is one of the driving forces behind the successful prison ministry program in the Rufe Jordan and Baten Units. He gives special thanks to those who are helping him especially in light of some recent health problems.

Going behind bars to carry God's Word

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Bob Andersen is a person who always manages to keep busy.

Involved in the prison ministry for the past five years, he retired several years ago after 34 years in the insurance business. He is coordinator of the local prison ministry in Pampa which has numerous volunteers.

As he speaks of his volunteers, he says, "They are all good people," said Andersen, 75. "I wish I could do more in the ministry."

The 'yankee', as he calls himself, has been limited in his ministry activity due to health problems the past couple of years.

Reared in Connecticut, he moved to Idaho where he was employed in atomic energy. After experiencing a heart attack while in Idaho, he was no longer able to work around radioactive components. It became necessary for him to change his type of employment. He moved to Amarillo to establish himself in the insurance business. He was covering several towns in the area which included Perryton, Pampa, Waka, Borger, Stinnett, and Turpin, Okla. He decided he wanted to be more centrally located in his work territory so he settled in Pampa.

Andersen, 75, met his wife, Edie, in

Bob Andersen said he had never thought about getting involved with the ministry prior to the conversation, but after visiting at the prison with people who were involved in the prison ministry he decided he liked it.

"It's an eerie feeling when that gate closes behind you," he said. "It goes click and that is it."

Pampa. She died several years ago.

After retirement from the insurance business he was at the local First Baptist Church visiting with a man one day when a member of the staff inquired of him whether he had ever considered working with the prison ministry. He said he had never thought about getting involved with the ministry prior to the conversation, but after visiting at the prison with people who were involved in the prison ministry he decided he liked it.

"It's an eerie feeling when that gate closes behind you," he said. "It goes click and that is it."

Andersen said the program has been a blessing to him. "I have a bunch of people who work with me," He said J. B. and Bethel Walker have been taking care of the inside of the Jordan Unit for him the past two years due to his health problems. He had surgery about a year ago for thoracic cancer.

He said that Michael Watson is now taking care of the Baten Unit. He said Watson, Walker, and Errin Ferraro join Andersen each Wednesday night on the two mile trip to the Jordan Unit. Andersen also goes to the Baten Unit once a week.

Andersen said the inmates frequently tell him that if they hadn't gotten into trouble they wouldn't be experiencing the Lord. He is very grateful the men have chosen to be a part of the program.

While he would like all the prisoners to participate in the prison ministry, Andersen said if a prisoner tells him he's not interested he doesn't keep pushing him.

The prison ministry program is non-denominational. Andersen said the volunteers just "teach from the Bible". Andersen's goal is to keep just one of the inmates from going back to prison again. He said he has met several people who are former inmates who said they found the Lord in prison, and have continued to live their life in a Christian manner after leaving prison.

He feels the program is a very successful ministry. Begun by Charles "Chuck" Colson after he served prison time following his involvement in the Watergate scandal in the 1970s, the program has spread throughout the country.

"We give praises to God and sing," said Andersen, during the ministry at the prison units. One of the prisoners asked Andersen why he keeps going out to the prisons to visit the prisoners. He said he told the man he was not an angel when he was younger. "I didn't always know the Lord," said Andersen.

He said during the 1998 Christmas season inmates hung Christmas lights in Pampa. He said a law enforcement officer related to him at that time that they didn't have to worry about the prisoners attempting to escape because these men were just happy to be outside to work a day.

He also related that the prisoners were very grateful for home-cooked meals which were served to them by several local churches while they were out working during the day. He said the men were very appreciative of the food.

Study gives new directions for research into insomnia

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most theories about why millions of elderly suffer insomnia are wrong, according to a new study that says the brain clock regulating sleep ticks as accurately for the old as for the young. Experts say the groundbreaking study could help researchers find new treatments for sleeplessness.

Among its major findings, the study revealed that the brain clock regulating sleep is on a 24-hour schedule, not a 25-hour cycle that researchers long believed.

"We are going to have to rethink all of the explanations we have been giving for insomnia," said Dr. Charles A. Czeisler of Harvard Medical School and Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. "All of the textbooks indicate that humans have a 25-hour day instead of a 24-hour day. We now know that is wrong."

Czeisler is lead author of the study appearing Friday in the journal Science.

Andrew A. Monjan, chief of neurobiology at the National Institute of Aging, said the new study changes fundamental assumptions about the causes of sleeplessness among the elderly and will prompt researchers to find new solutions for a sleep disorder that affects more than 10 million elderly Americans.

"We know now that poor sleep is not a function of being old by itself," said Monjan. "We also know now that you don't treat insomnia by just taking a sleeping pill."

Researchers need to look at such things as exposure to room light, illness and genetics to explain why insomnia has become a troublesome part of the lives of millions of people, particularly the elderly, Monjan said.

Richard E. Kronauer of Harvard University, a senior author of the study, said the research emphasized how exposure to artificial light during nighttime hours can reset the body's sleep clock, making it difficult to get up on time in the morning.

"We have been finding that people young and old are more sensitive to light than we suspected," said Kronauer. "Light in the evening is a strong influence on shifting the clock toward a later time."

The tendency of many sleepless people to push bedtime later and later, particularly on the weekends, has been blamed on what researchers thought was a natural adjustment to the cumulative effect of a 25-hour brain clock.

Since the new study shows the clock is actually 24 hours, researchers now think that exposure to light is a much more important factor than previously believed in resetting the clock and disrupting sleep.

In the study, two dozen men and women endured a month of living in subdued light, with no clues to the passage of time, while researchers monitored body chemistry and temperature that mark the action of body clock. Eleven of the subjects were young men, with an average age of 23.7 years, and 13 (nine men and four women) subjects were older, with an average age of 67.4 years.

The subjects were placed on a 28-hour cycle, so their wake-sleep cycle was four hours longer than the rest of the world's.

Czeisler said this elongated cycle disconnected the patients' natural clock from outside influences that usually control a person's day, such as work or school schedules.

The researchers then measured changes in temperature and chemistry to detect when the body clock, or circadian pacemaker, turned on. Earlier studies had shown that the clock is centered in the brain's hypothalamus. For most people, the impulse to sleep peaks around 10 p.m. when the body temperature starts dropping. The temperature rises about 4 a.m., increasing the chances of awakening, but two hormones, melatonin and cortisol, help the body remain asleep for the rest of the night.

Czeisler said the measurements showed that the human sleep clock operates on a schedule of 24 hours, 11 minutes, not the 25 hours that earlier studies had shown. It also showed that for people over 65, the clock ticked at almost exactly the pace of people in their 20s.

Studies that concluded humans were on a 25-hour cycle may have been affected by light exposure, Czeisler said. Even though earlier researchers used elaborate precautions to avoid outside influences — such as putting subjects in caves or wrapping rooms with copper wire to block any influence from the rotation of the Earth — Czeisler said there was no control for light. Test subjects in those studies routinely used strong artificial lights, he said.

"Light is the most powerful synchronizer of the biological clock," said Czeisler. When test subjects in the earlier studies switched on lights, it was "giving them the equivalent of a drug that reset the clock. That's what resulted in the apparent 25-hour period that is published in textbooks."

Exposure to light pushes forward the body's schedule for releasing melatonin and cortisol, said Kronauer. When these hormones are released at the wrong time, it can arouse a person in the middle of the night or cause drowsiness during the day.

"If you stay up four or five hours, with artificial light, then you have shifted the cycle by 40 to 50 minutes," he said. "You pay the price because when you get up on the real clock your circadian rhythm is saying, 'No, you've got to sleep more.'" prison ministry programs at the prisons as well as the current prisoners. However, the prisoners are not given the prison ministry workers' addresses. Instead, the letters are sent to a neutral address.

The ministry program works closely with the prison chaplains, and Andersen is quite complimentary of the chaplains at the Pampa-area prisons.

Additional volunteers are being sought for the program. He said the prison ministry screens applicants extensively for the program and explained the prison ministry fellowship has been successful for those prisoners who want it. He said it is the aim of the ministry providers to have the program available for any other incarcerated prisoners who might want it in the future.

Wood working is another interest Andersen has enjoyed for several years. He has been unable to do the work recently because of health problems but he proudly displays his wood working accomplishments in his home.

A resident of Pampa since Feb., 1965, Andersen has been proud to call Pampa home. "The Lord has been good to me," he said. "I've been brought back to life on two occasions. When you have the Lord on your side, he'll take care of you."

The 75-year old man lives what he believes, and keeps giving of himself to other people.

Hearings suggest how seniors can fend off telephone scam artists

DALLAS (AP) — Because senior citizens frequently have accumulated a sizeable nest egg for retirement, they are targets of many telemarketers who would like to separate them from their money.

That was one of the messages at four hearings last week in Houston to teach them how to avoid being ripped off by scam artists.

Rep. Ken Bentsen, D-Houston, was among the officials who organized the hearings. He's a co-sponsor of the Seniors Safety Act of 1999, which is designed to prevent the elderly from becoming victims of crimes such as health care fraud, pension fraud and nursing home neglect.

The elderly can easily fall prey to myriad schemes, speakers at the hearing said.

Senior citizens should be wary of illegitimate "tefundlers" — people who campaign for charity donations — and telemarketers who offer prizes to those who make a purchase.

Andrea Foster, director of the Atlanta regional office of the Federal Trade Commission, said prizes are free, by definition, but often are also worthless.

Senior citizens should look out for people posing as bank examiners or bank employees on the phone, said Craig Stone of the Houston office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

These people ask for a person's bank account number, telling them they will use the personal information to issue a "Y2K-safe" automated teller machine card, Stone said.

"Never give your Social Security number, bank account numbers or credit card numbers unless you've initiated the transaction," he said, adding that banks already have that information on file.

Seniors also need to be wary of stockbrokers who are looking to make money at the expense of an elderly person's savings, often pushing risky stocks or bogus investments.

"If a broker gets too friendly or gives you gifts, then your investment is in trouble," said Robert E. Karoly, who founded a Florida-based firm that works to recover investor securities losses.

"They have to get you to sell something or buy something, or they don't eat," he said.

Medicare fraud is also common, said Jeannine Morgan, a Houston-based special agent with the Office of the Inspector General.

"They tell you, 'We know how to get Medicare to pay for it,'" she said, adding that businesses may try to get senior citizens to make unnecessary medical purchases with the lure that their insurance will reimburse them.

Prosecutors want to hold man, 94

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — Prosecutors say a 94-year-old man — the oldest inmate in Wisconsin's prison system — should remain confined when his prison term ends this month because he is still a dangerous sexual predator.

Convicted child molester Ellef Ellefson is an "untreated pedophile," prosecutor William Hanrahan said at a hearing Tuesday.

"He has a lifelong pattern of offending, from 1937 when he was a Boy Scout leader to the time he was an octogenarian," Hanrahan said.

Judge Ramona Gonzalez ordered Ellefson transferred to a mental health institute for evaluation. The judge scheduled another hearing for Oct. 25.

If a jury finds he is still sexually dangerous, the judge could commit him to a mental hospital for sexual offender treatment. If not, he will be paroled.

Ellefson's attorney declined to comment.

"That's called lying, cheating and stealing," Ms. Morgan said.

She encouraged senior citizens to closely examine their Medicare paperwork for unauthorized charges. One optometrist billed Medicare for trifocal lenses when the customers received only bifocals, she said.

Speakers also warned seniors about the threat of "slamming," or illegally changing long-distance phone companies, as well as home repair scams, where businesses ask for payment up front and never finish jobs.

Ellefson is due to be released July 27 after being imprisoned for first-degree sexual assault, but state predator laws permit judges to continue an inmates' confinement.

Hanrahan said further commitment is the only way to protect the public from Ellefson, whose last offense was in La Crosse in 1990 when he molested three boys.

"Older people are subject to stereotypes," Hanrahan said. "They're presumed not to experience human emotions like happiness, rage or sexual urges."

Judge Ramona Gonzalez ordered Ellefson transferred to a mental health institute for evaluation. The judge scheduled another hearing for Oct. 25.

If a jury finds he is still sexually dangerous, the judge could commit him to a mental hospital for sexual offender treatment. If not, he will be paroled.

Ellefson's attorney declined to comment.

Healthy vision ...

By Dr. John Klein

Herpes is a very common virus to which the vast majority of us become exposed in our early years. There are two main types of Herpes Simplex viruses, Type 1 and Type 2. Over 90 percent of Americans have circulating antibodies to Type 1 Herpes by age 15. Type 1 generally causes disease above the belt; Type 2 below the belt. The type we are concerned with in ophthalmology is Type 1.

Following primary infection, the Herpes virus remains dormant in our systems in nerve clusters behind the eyes and elsewhere in the body. From these reservoirs, the virus can make several trips to the surface as evidenced by recurrent infection on the lips in the form of cold sores and in the eye as recurrent corneal ulcers and intraocular inflammation.

The most common manifestations of the primary disease are fever, feeling awful, enlarged lymph nodes, conjunctivitis and keratitis (infection of the cornea). It may be confused with the common cold or flu. It usually occurs in childhood and goes undiagnosed.

Recurrent ocular herpes is the form of the disease with which we are most concerned. This causes true corneal ulceration, lid blisters and intraocular inflammation. It almost always involves only one eye. Once a patient has had this, the chances of recurrence are about 40 percent, despite appropriate therapy. Some patients can identify trigger mechanisms which tend to precede such recurrences. These include fever, fatigue, becoming run-down, emotional upsets and exposure to ultraviolet light as in high altitudes.

Symptoms include tearing, light sensitivity and scratchy sensation, as if something were in the eye. Pain may also be a prominent complaint. After several bouts, patients learn to detect the earliest signs and symptoms of the disease.

Treatment has improved greatly over the past 10 years. We now have excellent drugs which will destroy the virus' ability to replicate itself thereby curing the infection. It is most important to treat early in the course of the recurrence. If left untreated, scars may form and significantly impair vision. Drops alone are very effective. Sometimes we will literally scrape the Herpes virus and ulcer from the eye and allow the eye to heal with the assistance of drops or ointments.

Our immune system makes antibodies to the Herpes virus and sometimes these antibodies create a "battlefield" on the surface of the eye leaving scars and reducing vision. This problem can and should be treated vigorously, yet cautiously.

Rarely is corneal transplantation needed to eliminate the scars of this infection, but it remains an alternative in severe cases.

(Dr. Klein is a practicing ophthalmologist in Pampa and Amarillo)

Not by choice ... Grandparents rearing grandchildren

By LAURA MECKLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP). — Nearly 5.5 million American children live with their grandparents, the Census Bureau reports.

In some cases, grandma and grandpa move into their children's homes and the families do fine financially. But in most, the grandchildren go off to live with their grandparents — often because the youngsters' mom and dad cannot support them.

"It's not like grandparents are going, 'Oh, God, I want to raise another family — let me go out and grab some kids.' It's definitely in response to a need," said Margaret Hollidge, who runs the American Association of Retired Persons' Grandparent Information Center.

The Census' report, being released Thursday, is the first on homes with grandparents and grandchildren living together. Among its findings:

—About 5,435,000 children, 7.7 percent of America's total, lived with a grandparent in 1997.

—Three-quarters of these kids were living in homes owned or rented by the grandparent; the rest lived in homes maintained by their parents.

—Children living with their grandparents were more likely to have a series of disadvantages: More than one in four was poor, one in three lacked health insurance and more than half were on some type of public assistance.

—Without a parent living with grandparents, too, it was worse: two-thirds of the kids were poor.

The number of children living in their grandparents' homes has risen from 2.2 million in 1970 to 3.9 million in 1997. Accounting for much of the increase is the jump in the number of homes where grandchildren live with their grandparents but without their parents.

In most cases, these are families where parents no longer can care for their children.

The reason can range from death, illness, substance abuse or imprisonment, Hollidge said. In rare cases, a parent has to take a job out of town and cannot bring the entire family.

"For some reason, the parent is unable to function as a parent," said Hollidge, who took in her own daughter and grandson for five years while her daughter went to school and found a job. "The grandparent steps into the gap."

These grandparent-maintained families are more likely to be poor, to live in central cities, to be black and to live in the South, the Census report found.

But these grandparents are in better shape — younger, healthier, more educated and more likely to have a job — to raise another generation of children compared with those grandparents who move in with their own kids.

Since 1970, the Census Bureau has tracked homes maintained by grandparents. The new report is the first to look at families where a grandparent moves in with his or her children and grandchildren. Some 4.7 million grandparents were living in these situations in 1997.

In some cases, grandmothers move in after their husbands die. They may need help financially, with personal care — or they may be lonely, said Lynne Casper, co-author of the report.

Still, she notes, these "sandwich families," where the parents have to care for their parents and their children at the same time, are not as bad off as stereotypes suggest.

"Many of these grandparents," the report concludes, "are capable of playing an active role in the family, contributing to the family income, and perhaps providing child care for their grandchildren while the parents work."

"It's not like grandparents are going, 'Oh, God, I want to raise another family — let me go out and grab some kids.' It's definitely in response to a need," said Margaret Hollidge, who runs the American Association of Retired Persons' Grandparent Information Center.

Grief-Stricken Widower Has Trouble Getting On With Life

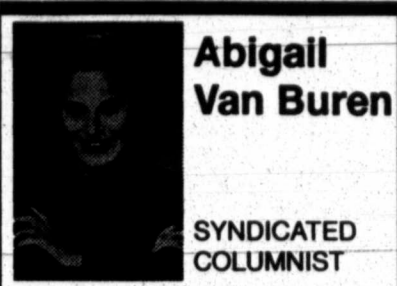

DEAR ABBY: Like so many of those who write to you, I have been involved for quite a while with a married man who keeps making promises about our future together, but those promises are never kept.

The difference is, this one is married — to a corpse. She's been dead for 2 1/2 years, and he still can't let go and get on with his life.

For almost a year, he promised we'd spend a weekend together; however, by Thursday, he always had a reason to cancel. When we finally did get together for a weekend, he walked out and got another motel room where he and the ghost could spend the night together, while I cried my eyes out alone in the king-size bed in my room. Do you have any idea how much rejection there is in learning that the man you love would rather sleep with his memories than with you?

I finally persuaded him to get counseling, but he's still doing the same things: promising we have a future together, then squelching any plans for physically consummating our relationship. He insists he doesn't need Viagra, that he's capable of doing it, but then he comes up with another hokey excuse why he can't make time for a weekend together.

He's really a nice man, Abby. He treats me well and has a delightful sense of humor. He'd be the perfect companion if he could just accept that his wife is dead, she's not coming back, and he's not cheating on her if he sleeps with another woman. What should I do?

SEXLESS IN SEATTLE

DEAR SEXLESS: If you love him, give him a little more time. My experts tell me that he could be suffering from pathological grief. In most people, the grieving process lasts about one year — but if it lasts longer than that it requires professional help.

I don't know how long this man has been in counseling, but if it has been any length of time and he still has not progressed in mourning (mourning is the reparative process associated with grief) — then he should consult another professional counselor. His inability to be intimate with you sexually may have nothing to do with sexuality, but rather overwhelming mourning and overwhelming guilt.

If he's as terrific as you say he is, he's worth waiting for a little longer.

DEAR ABBY: When I was about 21, I was date-raped, and it took me several years to get myself sorted out. This was my first time, and it is only now that I'm finally at a point where I can trust a man again and want to have sex.

My problem is, I don't know if I should tell my boyfriend about what happened to me years ago, and that he will be the first person I have ever really made love with. What do you think?

ANONY-MISS

DEAR ANONY-MISS: I think it's very important that you tell him exactly what you have told me — and the sooner the better.

FOOTBALL

PAMPA — There will be a Harvester Football Booster Club meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the Ready Room at the high school athletic building.

The meeting will be about the upcoming season. The general public is invited to attend.

The Harvesters open the 1999 season Sept. 3 at home against Lubbock Estacado. Scrimmages are scheduled Aug. 19 against Borger (home) and Aug. 26 against Frenship (away).

GOLF

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Following round three of the 29th Liberty Mutual Texas State Open, overnight leader Stuart Wallace of Houston stretched his one-shot lead into four going into the final round of the championship on Friday.

Wallace fired a third round of 70 for a 54-hole total of 203, 13 under par. With three holes to play he had a lead of six strokes but let his stranglehold on first place slip slightly by bogeying two of his final three holes.

Wesley Short of Austin was only one shot back heading into the third round but faulted after firing a round of 74 that included a triple bogey 6 on the 186-yard, par-3 eighth hole. Short is in third place with a 54-hole total of 208, 8 under par.

Bobby Pritchard of Houston made the biggest jump of the day. After 36 holes, he was tied for 18th at 3 under par. Today, Pritchard fired a third round of 66, the low round of the day, to jump 16 places into second place. He has a 54-hole total of 207, 9 under par, and is Wallace's closest competitor.

The final group of the day will consist of two Houston residents — Wallace and Pritchard — and Short.

BASEBALL

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Count Texas Rangers fans among those who won't miss umpires if they make good on their threat to resign.

The crowd at The Ballpark in Arlington gave a very clear boo to the umpires as they walked to the plate before Thursday night's game against the Arizona Diamondbacks. The umpires did not react.

Texas fans have a history of not being very sympathetic to labor complaints in baseball. Attendance dipped significantly following the 1994-95 players' strike.

Before the game, umpire crew chief Dale Ford said all umpires want "is fair treatment."

"I think we make a great contribution to baseball," said Ford, who already was planning to retire after this season, his 26th.

Pampa players participate in basketball camp

PORTALES, N. M. — Pampa basketball players from the 9th through 11th grades took part in the Eastern New Mexico University team camps last month.

Former NBA player Terry Tyler, now the ENMU head coach, was in charge of the camps.

The object of the camps was to play as many games as possible in a four-day period so that in coach Tyler's words, "We can get better." Games started at 8 a.m. and ran as late as 10:30 p.m. and even later in tournament play.

Each of the 24 teams entered were guaranteed 16 games, each one consisting of two 15-minute halves.

The clock continues to run until the final two minutes of each half when it is stopped for free throws.

At the end of 13 games, the 24 teams are divided into three "seeds." Pampa went undefeated in the "regular season" at 13-0, then swept the playoffs with a 3-0 record to capture first place.

Tyler, who played 11 years in the NBA, presented the 16-0 Harvesters with an ENMU basketball.

Pampa players competed in the camps were Jesse Francis, Matt Robben, Jon East, Dustin Johnson, Russell Robben, Kurt George, Colby Hale, Chad Platt, Kyle Francis and Adam Rodgers. Jerry Heasley coached the Harvesters.

The camps are an annual event held on the ENMU campus.

Area athletes to compete in six-man all-star contests

LUBBOCK — Several Pampa area athletes will join others from around the state for the 1999 Six-Man Coaches Association All-Star Series this weekend in Lubbock.

The series and clinic, featuring four basketball games along with an all-star football game, highlights some of Texas' best six-man talent.

Approximately 140 athletes will participate in the five all-star games. Teams will represent the North, South, East and West in basketball, with football featuring teams from the East and West.

Groom's Josh Evenson and Matt Weinheimer will be competing for the West football team, which meets the East at 7:30 Saturday night at Lowrey Field.

Samnorwood's Kenneth Shields will coach the West team. Trinidad's Kelvin Ray will coach the East.

In basketball, Fort Elliott's Tanner Smith and Miami's Chester Hutchinson are on the North boys' squad. The North plays the South tonight at Monterey High.

The North and South girls also play tonight at Monterey High.

McLean's Rachel Gailley, Miami's Natalie Glenn, and Groom's Jessica Stapp are on the North roster.

The East and West girls play at 1 p.m. Saturday, followed by the East-West boys' game at 2:30 p.m.

Rangers trim Arizona

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Once again, the Texas Rangers proved that they couldn't beat Randy Johnson. Matt Mantei was a different story.

Mark McLemore hit a three-run double off the newly acquired Arizona reliever with two outs in the ninth inning Thursday night, stealing a 3-2 victory over the Diamondbacks and spoiling yet another solid performance by Johnson.

Johnson, who has a 14-5 career record against Texas, struck out eight and allowed only six hits in eight shutout innings.

Mantei relieved him in the ninth, and appeared ready to post his 12th save of the year when he retired the first two batters he faced.

But Mantei (1-3) then walked three consecutive pinch-hitters, a feat that has only happened twice this century. With the bases loaded, McLemore doubled to right-center.

"The emotions started going and we all felt that something good was going to happen," said Rick Helling, who pitched eight strong innings for the Rangers, but didn't get a decision. "It was a great way to end it."

After striking out Todd Zeile and forcing Ruben Mateo to ground out, Mantei faced three left-handers who were available to pinch-hit because Texas manager Johnny Oates didn't want to start them against Johnson.

Rusty Greer, Rafael Palmeiro and Lee Stevens all had great at-bats to draw walks against Mantei. When McLemore doubled to win it, it was the third time in four batters that Mantei was one strike away from an Arizona win.

"I turned an easy save situation into a loss," Mantei said. "Randy pitched his butt off and I couldn't finish it."

France's De Velde takes over British Open lead

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — On a day when Tiger Woods and Greg Norman made their move only to falter in the blustery wind, a pair of European Tour players with one win between them found their way to the top of the British Open.

The big names drew the attention, but it was France's Jean Van De Velde who held the clubhouse lead after a tournament best 3-under 68. Argentina's Angel Cabrera was one stroke back after a 69 of his own.

Van De Velde, whose only European Tour win came in the 1993 Roma Masters, birdied two of the last three holes, making a short putt on the 18th to finish two rounds at 1-over 143.

That was a shot ahead of Cabrera and two ahead of Woods and Norman, who both flirted with the lead before finishing poorly as the wind began howling once again on the Carnoustie Golf Links.

Woods and Norman both took advantage of gentle early conditions with a rash of birdies that brought them near the top of the leaderboard.

The wind began blowing hard before they could get off the course, though, and Norman made a triple bogey on the 17th hole while Woods gave back a few shots of his own on the back nine. Norman shot a 1-under 70 while Woods had 72.

They were in the clubhouse at 4-over 146 along with Sweden's Patrik Sjoland, in good position as the wind and rough wreaked havoc on the players still on the seaside course.

"I played solid today. I just didn't get into the clubhouse as early as I would have liked," Woods said.

First round leader Rodney Pampling didn't fare as well, shooting an 8-over 44 on the front nine.

Norman, a two-time Open champion, opened with a 76 Thursday, but made a charge early today. He was 1-under on the front nine, then made three straight birdies beginning on No. 12 to move to 1-over for the tournament.

He crashed on the 17th, pushing his drive into the deep rough, whiffing his next shot and hit his third into the left rough. By the time he got up and down from off the green, he had made a triple bogey seven.

Norman finished at 4-over through two rounds.

"If they want to make us look like fools let's have the wind blow at 40 mph," Norman said.

"Let us all look like real idiots," Woods had problems of his own after playing the first 10 holes 2-under and never had anything in his hand other than putter from around and on the greens.

After making a bogey on 11, he hit it long on 12, into grass so thick that it looked like he was chopping down a tree during his three practice swings. Woods made bogey there and two more coming in for his 1-over 72.

Square House to commemorate Red River War with lecture this month

PANHANDLE — The Square House Museum will commemorate the Red River War of 1874 at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, July 31 with a public lecture by Dr. Doug Scott in the Hazlewood Arts and Education Building auditorium. Scott will discuss the bullets and cartridges recovered last summer by archaeologists at several Red River War battle-sites.

Dr. Scott is a team leader at the National Park Service's Midwest Archeological Center in Lincoln, Neb. He has worked throughout the Great Plains and Rocky Mountain West on a variety of archaeological projects. He specializes in 19th century military sites archaeology and forensic archaeology. He is particularly noted for his expertise in battlefield archaeology and firearms identification. He was awarded the Department of Interior's Meritorious Service Award in 1992 for his innovative research in battlefield archaeology that started with his work at the Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument.

Before the lecture, at 1 p.m., Walter Warner of Clarendon, will be demonstrating and firing the same types of firearms used in the 1874 conflict behind the Conway Church, immediately south next to the Hazlewood Arts and Education Building where the Scott lecture will be given. Paintings and drawings by artists affiliated with the tribes that participated in the Red River War, and additional paintings of the Battle of the Little Bighorn done by a Sioux artist who was on the scene, will be on exhibit. In addition, there will be Red River era buffalo rifles and military weapons on display in the auditorium before and after the lecture.

On July 31, 1874, 125 years ago to the day, the War Department was authorized to mobilize troops to fight the Plains tribes in the Texas Panhandle. Guns have played a large role in various conflicts between Native Americans and Anglo-American settlement in the West. The Red River Campaign of 1874 was no exception.

Cartridges and bullets fired in the Lyman and Miles fights were analyzed using firearms identification criminal investigation procedures. Bullets and cartridges tell us what types of guns were used in the battles and how many guns were employed. Combined with detailed mapping of artifact locations, this information can shed light on the movements of warriors and soldiers. Taken all together, these analyses show us elements of the battles not often found in the historical record.

The Square House Museum is located in Panhandle at the intersection of TX Hwy. 207 and 5th St. Admission to the Museum and to the lecture is free. For more information, call (806) 537-3524.
