Smith's guilty, jurors rule

Panel rejects lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter

Associated Press

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith knew what she was doing when she strapped her boys into her car and rolled it into a lake, and what she did was murder, a jury found after deliberating for more than 2 1/2 hours Saturday.

Ms. Smith shivered as the two verdicts were read and the jurors polled one by one. Defense lawyer David Bruck put his arm around her.

The sequestered jury will decide after a hearing scheduled for Monday whether she will be sentenced to death by electrocution, or life in prison.

The panel rejected the lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter, which carries a sentence of up to five years in prison.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope said the penalty phase of the trial could last as long as a week. Bruck declined to say what evidence he will produce at the hearing.

"This is a very difficult case, it's a heartbreaking case. It's a terrible tragedy," Bruck said. He added that he wasn't surprised by the verdict.

Good faith isn't enough to go on for MISD to be granted unitary status; plaintiffs want a plan.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

The stunning architecture of Abell Junior High School, above, has come under fire from taxpayers who say the building is extravagant. Virginia Davis, left, and Lois Webb, joined a silent protest against unitary status at a school-board meeting. The words "unitary status" are emblazoned on T-shirts (contained within a red circle and the universal symbol of a red slash mark through the words) worn by protesters.

"You can't just go to court and say trust me. You better have something to back it up."

That's the contention of some Midlanders hesitant to believe that achieving unitary status, and being out from under the supervision of federal courts, won't cause desegregation in Midland to be chipped away, bit by bit.

Other Midlanders however, say it's high time to give the duty to govern the school district back to the MISD board of trustees. They note that some system of desegregation must be maintained in compliance with the U.S. Constitution, and staying under a court decree will prevent MISD from ever trying any new system of desegregation.

At issue, will be whether or not Midland has achieved desegregation "for a reasonable period of time" and whether "vestiges" of discrimination have been eliminated "to the extent practicable" in all facets of school operation — including student assignments, faculty, staff, transportation and facilities. The issue is going to court before a federal judge Aug. 14.

MISD has made a motion to dismiss the consent decree drawn up as a result of the U.S. Justice Department having to intervene in the 1970s to ensure the district would desegregate schools in a timely manner.

Too many longtime Midlanders have said they remember what it was like before busing — and how demoralizing it was to live under a system of segregation — to not voice their concerns about anything that might change the cluster system of desegregation.

Longtime Midlander Alma Marshall, one of the intervenors in the lawsuit that resulted in the consent decree, cannot comment as unitary status comes to trial. However, she said in a previous interview, "Just because I can eat in any restaurant and ride in the front of the bus, it doesn't mean I don't have anything left that I must fight for."

Ms. Marshall moved to Midland as a young teacher in 1958. She taught at the black Carver High School and looked into windows of Midland restaurants with signs declaring "No Coloreds." Over the years, Ms. Marshall refused to continue standing on the outside looking in, and has been a spokesperson for members of the minority community, especially on matters of equal opportunities. She has vowed, on more than one occassion, that "I will let no one else destroy what we have gained."

Other Midlanders, who say they appreciate the ordeals Ms. Marshall has gone through, also say the world has changed and they want to try to get out from a federal court order no longer necessary. They allege that times have changed, and parents all over the country are demanding greater choice in their public schools.

But there is the little matter of trust.

Attorney Gary Bledsoe, representing the intervenors (on the lawsuit orginially filed by the U.S. Justice Department), said at a July 1994 unitary status hearing, "The school board wants to establish trust. You have to look at the future prospects if the district is released from this decree."

The attorney and the intervenors have asked for a long-range plan outlining how desegregation will be maintained when federal courts are no longer looking over the district's shoulder.

At that same past status hearing, MISD attorney Charles Tighe said the school district has followed the court order "in good faith for 18 years and has done away with the vestiges of segregation. There comes a time when ... you have to trust."

'Just because I can eat in any restaurant and ride in the front of the bus, it doesn't mean I don't have anything left I must fight for.'
— Alma Marshall

Former school-board trustee Gary Willis said at a 1993 board meeting that "unitary status should be the goal of the school district. It's a goal where all children go to school in a unitary system." He said a political war was fought because segregation was a dual — not a unitary —system. "The minority community was treated badly (in that dual system). They are protective as a group of people because they don't want to fight it again."

Willis said the problem with seeking unitary status in Midland is that some people stand up at public school district forums and say, "Let my child go to neighborhood schools and leave the other races out."

White parents asking publicly to keep children in their own neighborhoods is the dagger that has pierced the heart of trust in Midland, according to African Americans and Hispanics.

But some parents have said it's not that they don't want desegregation. It's that they want their children to have continuity by staying in their same elementary school as much as possible.

Becky Mims, active in Parent Teacher Education, symphathizes with parents who are dissatisfied with the cluster system of desegregation. "I have two daughters in secondary schools who have had some 70 teachers and 10 principals between them. And students in the GEM (Gifted Education Midland) program go to two different schools twice a week. It's hard to keep up with that."

"Some people I have talked to are not against the cluster system because they don't want their kids to be with minorities," Ms. Mims said. "It's because constantly changing schools takes it toll."

She said she wouldn't mind her kids being bused across town if it meant they would stay in the same school. "Though other parents wouldn't agree with that, especially if they have young children," she said.

Ms. Mims said there may be more people lining up in favor of unitary status than there has been in the past because they will agree to try something new that would allow students to "go to one school and stay put."

Without federal court supervision, MISD would be free to try new plans, but still will have to maintain desegregation.

One bone of contention with many Midlanders however, is that the MISD Board of Education has yet to produce a plan that shows how desegregation would continue if the district were granted unitary status.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said, "There is no plan to change the cluster system." He said no matter what school system the board of trustees decided they wanted, it would have "to be in compliance with the U.S. Constitution."

"The immediate difference of being granted unitary status would be that we would have the ability to get out from under court system supervision," he said. "It would allow us to make changes, but not go back to segregated schools."

Dr. Viola Coleman, one of the intervenors in the orginal lawsuit, said MISD is expecting people just to trust them to do the right thing. She has said, at more than one school-board meeting, "Show us a plan better than the cluster system and we will join you in going to the courts to ask to remove us from the consent decree."

The school board has not responded to that request. However, the intervenors have officially asked for a response to several of their questions and that request was placed on the school board agenda for Tuesday. The agenda states 10 minutes have been allotted for a presentation on the issue.

One indication of the school board's conviction to be granted unitary status is that the district has spent $163,000 (as of Friday afternoon) to prepare for the upcoming trial.

'The immediate difference of being granted unitary status would be that we would have the ability to get out from under court supervision. ... It would allow us to make changes, but not to go back to segregated schools.'
— Joseph Baressi Jr.

Cluster at a glance

From Staff Reports

Midland's 25 public elementary schools are grouped into 8 clusters with three schools in each (except for one of the clusters, which includes only two schools).

Students attend all schools in their cluster over the course of seven years (kindergarten through sixth grade). Pupils attend their neighborhood school in kindergarten through third grade, and one year during busing (fourth, fifth and sixth) grades.

Of the three campuses in each cluster, one campus takes all fourth graders, another all fifth graders, and another all sixth graders.

Even without the cluster system, MISD would need buses because some students live in the county — good distances from some of the schools.

The city of Midland still contains distinct neighborhoods of different ethnicity and income. Without desegregation efforts, the city's residential segregation would produce some white, black and Hispanic campuses.

According to information from Midland Independent School District, only a small part of the district's transportation services budget is spent on desegregation busing. Much money is spent on "convenience" busing. Convenience or regular bus routes are those routes provided for children who live more than two miles from their assigned campus or would have to traverse an identified hazardous crossing (such as crossing Loop 250).

WEATHER WATCH

Temperatures to hit triple digits

Staff Report

Another hot day is in the forecast for today with temperatures expected to rise to 102 under mostly sunny skies with south winds 10-20 mph, according to a forecaster with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 70s. Monday looks to be sunny with a high near 100. Tuesday through Thursday should continue to have highs in the upper 90s up to 103 with mostly sunny days and fair nights with lows in the upper 60s and lower 70s.

After a high of 99, compared to the record high for the date of 103 set in 1981, temperatures only dropped to 72, which was nowhere near the record low for the date of 58 set in 1978.

STATE

The Texas sun is turning up the heat this weekend, with heat advisories posted for much of North Texas.

However, thunderstorms may continue to rumble over the Panhandle.

Saturday dawned quietly over the state. Clear to partly cloudy skies with light, southeasterly winds prevailed over the eastern half of the state, except for low clouds stretching from Alice to San Antonio to Austin.

By contrast, skies over the Panhandle and South Plains were mostly cloudy, with showers and thunderstorms reaching from Midland to Childress and on into the Panhandle. Southerly winds blew at 10 to 20 mph.

Morning temperatures ranged from the 60s to the 80s across the state, but the heat is on.

Clear to partly cloudy skies will let Texas bake under an all-but-naked summer sun. Highs will be 97 to 102. Lows will be 75 to 80.

The Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex and adjoining counties are under heat advisories through today.

NATION

Thunderstorms rattled the Mississippi Valley on Saturday and were scattered over parts of the East and South as well.

Showers and thunderstorms spread from the southern Plains along the Mississippi Valley to the Great Lakes.

Eau Claire, Wis., collected 1.65 inches of rain in 24 hours.

Thunderstorms also spread east across the Ohio and Tennessee valleys, with isolated severe thunderstorms causing light wind damage in Illinois.

Scattered thunderstorms developed across the Gulf Coast states and through the mid-Atlantic region. Stormy weather was expected to spread into New England during the night.

In the West, showers spread across western Montana and scattered showers and thunderstorms developed across parts of Idaho and northern sections of Nevada and Utah.

These storms were expected to push eastward into Wyoming and Colorado today.

A bubble of cool air settled across the high country of northern Arizona, where Flagstaff, at an elevation of 6,900 feet, chilled to a record low of 38. The previous record was 39, set in 1987.

Saturday's temperature extremes around the Lower 48 states ranged from a low of 33 at Truckee, Calif., to an afternoon reading of 96 at Kingsville, Texas. The highest heat index, a rating based on both temperature and humidity, was 113 at Pensacola, Fla.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Desegregation issue a long, bumpy row to hoe

From Staff Reports

Midland public schools and battles over desegregation are nothing new.

When Midland Independent School District announced it is willing to pursue a "motion to dismiss" federal court-ordered desegregation, U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson said legal preparation to do so "would be a longer row to hoe than anticipated."

It was more than a year ago since Furgeson made that statement, and the judge has since recused himself from the case because of a conflict of interest — a Midland relative of his (who was employed with MISD) might be called as a witness.

But for Midlanders involved as parties in the litigation, the row has been a bumpy one to hoe for 27 years, since the late 1950s.

A history of desegration in Midland Independent School District, and national legislation, from previous Reporter-Telegram reports, follows:

■ 1900s: The system of de jure segregation begins to crumble as labor demands during WWI (1914-18) causes blacks to migrate from the south to manufacturing centers of the north.

■ 1954: Brown vs. Board of Education of Topeka. Supreme Court rules against de jure segregation in pubic schools.

■ 1955: Brown II. Supreme Court said school authorities have primary responsibility for solving segregation problems.

■ Aug. 14, 1956: In a marathon session lasting until 1 a.m. Aug. 15, and reconvening at 7:30 a.m., MISD trustees vote to integregate schools. Their plan is to integrate "first grade only," in September. The trustees estimate that approximately nine blacks will attend DeZavala Elementary School. Under this plan, which integrates one grade at a time, it is estimated that it will be September 1968 (12 years) before all grades are completely integrated.

■ Aug. 27, 1956: The first black pupil enrolls in DeZavla. By the end of the school year, four blacks are enrolled.

■ Aug. 30, 1956: A black second-grade pupil is denied admission to DeZavala, since the second grade is not scheduled for integration for the following year.

■ 1960s: De facto segregation is a basic cause of the race riots in the 1960s and early 1970s.

■ 1964: Civil Rights Act provides school integration, equal employment opportunities, voting rights, etc.

■ 1968: Civil Rights Act of 1968 provides protection against discrimination in the sale or rental of housing.

■ 1968: MISD board voluntarily adopts a plan to integrate the secondary schools.

■ 1969: Supreme Court orders public school districts to desegregate "at once."

■ 1970: The U.S. Justice Department files a lawsuit against MISD for operating a "dual system." Specifically mentioned in the complaint are Washington and DeZavala elementary schools.

■ 1971: MISD devises a plan to integrate Washington, but not DeZavala contending that DeZavala was not intentionally segregated. A judge accepts the plan. A group of minority citizens intervene in the suit, challenging MISD's plan by appealing to the Fifth Circuit. Intervenors claim

'Expensive' schools in North, West stir controversy

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

School officials contend that holding an upcoming bond election to fund school renovations will save taxpayers money in the long run. And it's somewhat unlikely a federal judge will grant the district unitary status — indicating all vestiges of segregation are gone, including unequal facilities — when all buildings across the district aren't up to standard. Unequal facilities were once the hallmark of segregated schools. Midland public school officials, however, are banking on passing a bond election to make buildings more equal, an issue that has raised the ire of taxpayers.

"We had ceilings falling down at Lamar Elementary School on the east side of town, and other buildings begging for repairs while extravagant money was spent building Abell Junior High School on the West side of town. How is it the school district finds money to build a school that looks like a shopping mall but can't use that same money to get other schools up to par?" said Midland parent Bessie Smith. "It seems like some of the money spent on Abell could have been spread around."

Other Midlanders on both sides of town have asked the same question. They said the district's practice of "overspending on schools in North and West Midland" has reinforced the concept that "you better live in a wealthy neighborhood to get better schools."

"Without desegregation, many kids wouldn't experience these new schools,' Ms. Smith said.

Some persons from predominately white neighborhoods have said, however, "When you pay higher taxes you should have better school buildings."

"I've heard that said around town," said Ms. Smith, an African American. "It's sounds real racist. But what it is is just plain old economic snobbery. It divides this community into the haves and have nots. These people are saying it's not what color you are that makes you better than somebody else, it's how much money you have. So, if you make more money, live in a nicer house, then your kids deserve a nicer school. I guess we could just shuffle the poorer kids off to some shaky school and perpetuate their poverty."

Some members of a district-appointed bond advisory committee — which included bankers and business professionals — also questioned the logic of building lavish schools when keeping the new buildings simple would provide more money to spread around. They cited Abell as being lavish. The 150,000-square-foot, $9.5 million Abell boasts state-of-the-art amenities including bathroom sinks with motion sensors and a two-story atrium.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said the square footage in Abell is not excessive. He said the motion sensor sinks in the bathrooms will save taxpayers in the long run. "Students cannot stuff paper towels in the sink and let the water run over," Baressi said, noting the sensors automatically shut off water after a few seconds.

"I think too much money was spent on Greathouse Elementary School and Abell Junior High School. What we need is a good, safe concrete cinderblock school, not the Taj Mahal," said Midland parent Jeanette Dragisic. "Why does the district continue to spend like that on some schools and create dissension? Abell has a two-story atrium. Was that being wise about expenses?"

Baressi said Abell's atrium "is an architectural focal point. But it kills two birds with one stone by providing a cafeteria and an auditorium."

"My question is, why did we let some buildings go to hell and come up with a great cost to the taxpayers (in the form of a bond election to renovate schools) to bring them up to par?" said Edna Walger of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse. "There is something wrong with the way taxpayers' buildings are being maintained by taxpaying entities. It also isn't the better part of valor to accept a huge donated building downtown and fill it with administrators. MISD administration is still top-heavy."

Ms. Dragisic, who has been researching MISD's upcoming budget, said, "There are still tons of professional travel listed in the rough budget, consultant fees, personal auto allowances, and other unnecessary things. Travel and auto expenses don't educate kids. MISD has already got more money due to increased property valuations, yet there is probably going to be a tax rate increase to pay for teachers' salary increases and then MISD will be coming back to the public asking for another tax increase for the bond election."

Some citizens have called the Reporter-Telegram asking why only one construction company bid for the job of renovating Lamar Elementary School. "That's the kind of thing that makes you pay top dollar for a job," one man said. "It's taxpayer money. Can't we see some competition with bids? When only one company bids how do we know we are getting the best bang for our buck? And if this practice is acceptable, do we want to vote for a bond election to do even more renovations with maybe only one bidder per school? I, for one, do not."

Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services, said previously that no other company bid on the Lamar renovation because Midland is saturated with construction jobs. Heidelberg did not return calls to the Reporter-Telegram on Thursday and was unavailable Friday.

Ms. Dragisic said MISD's recent winning of a $1 million lawsuit against Campbell Construction has frightened other local contractors away from bidding for jobs.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said there were two lawsuits against Campbell Construction "and there isn't a parent in this town who would consider the lawsuits unnecessary." Baressi said the upsurge in construction projects has decreased the number of companies bidding as well as the fact that the district requires a quick turnaround on projects. MISD renovations begin when school lets out in the summer and must be completed before school starts again in the fall.

When all is said and done, tax-dollar watcher Ms. Walger said, "School buildings don't have anything to do with the quality of education. We are spending tax money in all the wrong places. Money should be spent on stimulating students to learn and getting better test scores."

Parents ask for more choice

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Parents around the country are asking for more choice in the public schools their children attend. The concept of giving parents more choice has spawned magnet schools, vouchers and other innovative programs.

Ector County Independent School District operates a magnet system of desegregation. Each elementary school campus offers special programs intended to "magnetize" or attract students. Special programs offered by schools include everything from performing arts to aerospace engineering. ECISD also offers year-round schools on a volunteer basis.

A number of Midlanders and MISD officials put in a considerable amount of time and effort exploring the controlled choice magnet desegregation plan.

"Controlled Choice" would give parents some choice about where their children would attend school. Some children could have the option of attending their neighborhood school for six years, and desegregation would continue, as racial percentages would be balanced at each campus each school year.

Former MISD volunteer coordinator Martha Manulik said, in a 1992 school-board meeting, "The plan would increase parental involvement. When you stay at a school one year (in grades four through six under the cluster system plan), about the time you get to know the program and the teachers, it's time for your child to change schools."

Members of the minority community, including Alma Marshall, said giving parents an option of keeping their child in their neighborhood school for six years would threaten integration. Ms. Marshall, who recently has declined comment on this issue because it is coming to federal court Aug. 14, said in a previous article, "We have had to adjust all of our lives. It seems to be a major cultural difference that the majority community makes stability a priority while the minority community sees equity as a priority."

Former school-board trustee Gary Willis said the controlled choice plan would balance integration each year at every grade level, "and that would address the equity."

Although the issue of controlled choice died down after some school-board meetings in 1993, because it had some strong community support, it make come back up again if the district is granted unitary status.

GUILTY: Punishment phase of trial to begin Monday

month-old Alex, vanished on Oct. 25. Their 23-year-old mother claimed for nine days that a black carjacker had abducted them. On Nov. 3, she confessed she let her car roll into the lake with the boys strapped in their car seats.

Prosecutors contended she killed them to eliminate an obstacle to a love affair, but defense lawyers called her act a failed suicide attempt by a young woman with a long history of emotional problems.

In closing statements earlier Saturday, both sides stressed Ms. Smith's state of mind.

The prosecution emphasized its claim that she made a conscious decision to drown the boys: "She had her hands over her ears so she could not hear those babies crying out her name," Pope said, his voice rising. "Crying out for their father. Asking for her to come back and save them."

The defense hammered hard at her confusion: "Was it evil? Was it wicked? Or was it reckless?" Judy Clarke asked. "Evilness had nothing to do with this. Mental illness, mental disorder, whatever you want to call it, had everything to do with it."

After about 35 minutes of deliberation, the jury asked to see two TV interviews with Ms. Smith, including one "where she was pleading for help."

In that interview, a day after Ms. Smith let her car roll into the lake, she described the carjacker and shared her hopes and prayers for the boys.

The judge agreed Saturday to the jury to consider the lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Outside, a crowd gathered in the muggy evening air. A former neighbor of Ms. Smith, Dot Frost, left the building in tears as deliberations began.

"I don't want to see Susan get the death penalty," she said. "They should go get the ones that hurt her. And they hurt her like hell. ... She loved those kids."

The defense began its final day of testimony by calling Ms. Smith's 22-year-old cousin, Leigh Harrison, who testified they had been like sisters since girlhood and Ms. Smith was a loving mother.

Harrison said she worried about Ms. Smith's two suicide attempts.

ROW: Midland public schools, battles about desegregation nothing new

MISD's plan places the burden of integration exclusively on minorities. The U.S. Justice Department also voices dissatisfaction with MISD plan because it does not integrate DeZavala.

■ 1975: Fifth Circuit overturns judge's decision and added a list of racially identifiable schools to be desegregated, including Pease, Crockett and Milam. MISD appeals to the Supreme court. MISD claims it should not have to desegregate schools which were segregated as a result of changing neighborhood patterns.

■ June 1976: Court orders MISD to submit a plan to desegregate five schools, Washington, DeZavala, Crockett, Pease and Milam.

■ July 1976: MISD submits several plans.

■ August 1976: Justice Department rejects all MISD plans. Two days later a U.S. district judge orders the immediate desegregation of all schools, grades one through six, for the 1976-77 school year. The cluster concept is developed by a group of citizens in order to avoid putting young children on buses. The cluster plan allows for children in kindergarten through third grade to stay in their neighborhood schools, with busing in grades four through six. Other desegregation plans favor busing children from kindergarten through sixth grade.

■ Sept. 1, 1976: The MISD board negotiates with the Justice Department and obtains what is referred to as a unique exception to keep children in kindergarten through third grade in neighborhood schools. Children also return to their neighborhood school in one of the years during fourth through sixth grade, meaning they are in neighborhood schools five of seven years.

■ Sept. 10, 1976: Trustees adopt the cluster plan and agree to sign a consent decree. The Justice Department and intervenors state they will not agree to any voluntary plan (magnet schools) or any plan that involves less than integrating grades four through six.

■ Sept. 15, 1976: All parties sign consent decree.

■ Aug. 20, 1990: Midlander Dianne Anderson, an unsuccessful school-board candidate (who now is a school-board trustee), heads a group of Midlanders who meet in Polo Park Apartments Clubhouse to dissolve the cluster system. A group of 75 Midlanders, predominately white, meet with attorneys

'The intervenors got into this fight when it was decided that all black children would be bused. We thought if our children had every right to be bused, then so did the children of the majority community.'
— Dr. Viola Coleman

to see if they can restore a system of neighborhood schools. They are told that there must be some type of desegregation. It also was questioned as to whether the group had the financial backing to go forward with a court battle to dissolve the consent decree. Ms. Anderson blames the high dropout rate and low test scores on busing. She says racism is dead, that the problem is busing. She, and other parents at the meeting, form Citizens for Better Education.

■ Jan. 8, 1991: In response to flyers (some with the heading "Citizens for Better Education"), which call to end the cluster system — and a flurry of petitions against busing being circulated — hundreds of Midlanders storm the school-board meeting to show their support for the court-ordered desegregation plan. Some join hands in a circle before the meeting and sing "We Shall Overcome."

"I can't believe on the eve of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, 20 years after the fact, we are still discussing busing," said Midlander Larry Lewis. Board trustees reply that they have no intention of doing away with the cluster system until a better plan comes along.

■ Jan. 16, 1991: It is announced nationally that more than 400 school districts were under some sort of school desegregation decree. The Supreme Court said school desegregation can be ended when a federal judge becomes convinced the orders have been obeyed "for a reasonable period of time" and "vestiges" of discrimination have been eliminated "to the extent practicable" in all facets of school operation — including student assignments, faculty, staff, transportation and facilities.

■ Oct. 3, 1992: The board-appointed Cluster Advisory Committee presents a plan to keep students in the same school in grades four through six but to attempt to balance integregation within the schools. The plan is called Controlled Choice, and it is pointed out that not all parents will have their first choice of school while some parents could keep their students in neighborhood schools for six years. Some citizens say the plan has merit, others don't believe it will be equitable. Some see it as a way to provide continuity for students. Others see it as a threat to desegregation.

■ Feb. 2, 1993: A public meeting to discuss realigning the cluster system results in a debate about busing. Members of the minority committee complain that the new schools are usually built on the majority side of town (in north and west Midland) resulting in inequitable schools and a need for busing. Some members of the majority community say too bad, they want their children to be able to attend the schools in their neighborhood.

■ Feb. 12, 1993: At another public forum on the cluster system, a white parent asks if MISD could return to neighborhood schools. She is told that would be a "separate but equal" system that is illegal. MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said that Midland public school children already attend neighborhood schools five of seven years.

■ April 4, 1994: Dianne Anderson announces her candidacy for Place 6 on the MISD board of trustees. She runs on a platform of seeking unitary status.

— May 8, 1994: Dianne Anderson wins the Place 6 position on the school board. She announces that her first order of business is to "try to get rid of the cluster system. That is what my district wants."

— May 24, 1994: MISD trustees vote 5-2 (with trustees representing the Hispanic and African American communities opposing) to seek unitary status with the court system.

— May 31, 1994: MISD files a motion to dismiss the consent decree and declare the district unitary (meaning the district is desegregated and free of vestiges of segregation). MISD's motion states "Although not perfect, MISD has a school system of which its residents can be proud, and a school system that provides equal eduational opportunities for all students, regardless of their race or background. Because MISD has achieved all of these goals set out in the 1976 consent decree, it has come time for this court to relinquish supervisory jurisdiction over MISD and return control of MISD's elementary schools to its properly elected board." Intervenors allege school facilities are not equal and all vestiges of segregation have not been eliminated.

■ July 29, 1994: U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson holds a status hearing on MISD's motion to dismiss the consent decree. He outlines the legal process of gathering information and expects to have a trial the following year. An attorney for the U.S. Justice Department points out that there are disparities in schools east and west of Big Spring Street.

■ Jan. 29, 1995: On the opinion page of the Reporter-Telegram, Dianne Anderson announces "Unitary status is not an attempt by the board, or anyone on the board, to return to a segregated school system ... segregated schools are illegal, and a segregated school system would quickly mean the return of intervention by the federal courts, which would defeat the entire purpose of seeking unitary status." She said many Midlanders believe MISD should get out from under control of the federal courts and be free to govern itself.

'Unitary status is not an attempt by the board, or anyone on the board, to return to a segretated school system ... MISD should get out from under control of the federal courts and be free to govern itself.'
— Dianne Anderson

■ March 10, 1995: Judge Furgeson recuses himself from presiding over the unitary status process because he is related to former MISD business manager Don Furgeson. Intervenors said they felt there was a "perceived conflict of interest." The judge had advised counsel that his cousin might testify. U.S. District Judge Edward C. Prado of San Antonio is appointed to oversee MISD's motion to dismiss and be declared unitary.

The unitary status case is set to go to court in three weeks, Aug. 14.

Officials question how allies' threat to Serbs would be carried out

■ Military planners, NATO officers are briefed in Brussels on outlines of airstrike proposal.

N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — Despite the warning by the United States, Britain and France that they would bomb Bosnian Serb forces if they attack the Gorazde "safe area" in eastern Bosnia, senior NATO diplomats and military officers said Saturday that there were serious questions about how the threat would be carried out.

"The history of this conflict is that people often agree to threats on the political level, but when it comes down to the military details, all kinds of objections crop up," one NATO diplomat said.

Several European allies are expected to question U.S. assertions that the plans should permit NATO bombing if U.N. military commanders on the ground call for it, even if their civilian superiors at U.N. headquarters in New York did not.

Military planners and NATO officials were briefed in Brussels Saturday on the outlines of the proposal for airstrikes. The alliance's military wing was asked to prepare detailed plans for the broadest campaign yet of sustained bombing of Bosnian Serb air defense and military targets for NATO officials to consider on Monday, one said.

Malcolm Rifkind, the British foreign secretary, said that the threat was intended to deter a concentrated Bosnian Serb attack on Gorazde like the ones this month on Srebrenica, which the Serbs have captured, and Zepa, which is reported close to falling. But Britain hoped, he said, that the threat would never have to be carried out.

"No one wishes to use air power, no one believes that that by itself will conclude the war in Bosnia," Rifkind said Friday night.

"Many people who have in the past been reluctant to contemplate the use of air power recognized that if there was an attack on Gorazde then it would be necessary to respond," he said, but added that the main purpose of the threat was to deter the Serbs from launching one in the first place.

Saturday, Bosnian Serb forces pressed their assault on Zepa, and six rockets were fired into the center of Sarajevo.

NATO military officers pointed out that Britain had often agreed to threaten NATO airstrikes against the Serbs in principle but had balked at launching them for fear of provoking retaliation against British soldiers in the U.N. peacekeeping force in Bosnia.

Canada, whose approval will also be needed for NATO to go ahead with a new plan, has also been cautious in the past, although it did support the threat at the meeting on Friday.

Administration officials in Washington said today they were neither surprised nor unduly concerned by the questions being raised. They said detailed discussions among NATO military planners still had to take place and acknowledged that past threats had sometimes been empty. But they insisted that this time was different.

"Of course there's heavy lifting still to do," one official said. "Of course we'll listen to the Belgians, to the Canadians, to whomever, but I think people are encouraged that we will come out with an agreement" from the 16 NATO members.

NATO planners said that the alliance's military headquarters in Mons, Belgium and its military committee, led by Field Marshal Sir Richard Vincent of Britain, would work on strategy through the weekend.

Among the questions still to be resolved, they said, were these: What would trigger airstrikes? Would they begin only after Bosnian Serbs began attacking Gorazde, or as soon as they began moving troops towards the town? Would they start if the Serbs begin concentrating heavy weapons on the target, or could continuing Bosnian Serb shelling of the enclave be enough to set off attacks? The Clinton administration plan calls for strikes if the Bosnian Serb forces mass for an attack.

"We would have the assumption that the United Nations would give its consent to any bombing that was decided on, but we aren't sure that Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali agreed that his military commanders in Bosnia wouldn't need to get approval from him," a NATO officer in Brussels said.

A NATO military officer who would be involved in carrying out any airstrikes in Bosnia said Saturday: "It sounds to me as if the meeting in London was telling Gen. Rupert Smith, the senior U.N. commander in Bosnia, to ignore his boss. I'm not sure what that means for the integrity of U.N. operations there."

American officials said on Friday that the decision to launch airstrikes would be made by General Smith and Adm. Leighton Smith, the regional NATO commander.

But U.N. officials said Saturday that they understood that Gen. Bernard Janvier, the military chief of the entire U.N. mission in the former Yugoslavia, would be involved in the decision.

Serbs bomb Sarajevo, Zepa; Croatia vows help to Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Rebel Serbs fired rockets into Sarajevo and shelled the eastern enclave of Zepa on Saturday. Croatia said it would help Bosnian soldiers, setting the stage for a wider war encompassing both republics.

Islamic countries signalled they would send weapons to the Muslim-led government forces, saying they regard the U.N. weapons embargo on former Yugoslavia as invalid.

Croatia's President Franjo Tudjman, after meeting with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, promised "urgent military assistance," especially to Bosnian soldiers around northwestern Bihac.

Tudjman's statement apparently meant Tudjman's government felt free to attack rebel Serbs in Croatia, who have been helping Serbs across the border in Bosnia.

That would let Croatia resume an offensive against its rebel Serbs who captured nearly a third of the country's territory in a 1991 war. Croatia retook some of that territory in May, before bowing to world pressure and stopping its blitz.

"The ... Bosnian government has invited Croatia to provide urgent military assistance in the defense from aggression, particularly in the area of Bihac, which the Republic of Croatia accepts," said Tudjman's statement.

It also served notice that the two countries would expel the U.N. force if it didn't end its "inefficiency" in Bosnia and "delay in implementing its mission" in Croatia — references to demands for U.N. troops to stop Serb attacks and restore Croatian government control over rebel-held territory.

Permission for the U.N. troops to operate expires in Croatia in September and in Bosnia in November.

U.N. officials reported a buildup of Croatian troops near a buffer zone separating them from rebel Serbs in central Croatia, across the border from Bihac, Saturday.

Tension was high in Bihac, a "safe area" where days of fighting has killed several people, wounded scores and left thousands homeless, according to U.N. and aid officials. They reported 150 explosions Saturday in Kamanac in the Bihac area.

In Sarajevo, Serbs blasted the capital with 122 mm rocket launchers, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gerard Dubois. Serbs only sporadically have used the weapon, much more powerful than mortars, he said.

One person was killed and two others wounded, the Bosnian Health Ministry reported.

Serbs also shelled the "safe area" of Zepa and exchanged gunfire with government soldiers on the southern edge of the enclave — about 20 hamlets scattered in mountains east of Sarajevo.

A new generation emerges in Russia's free market: young, newly rich

By Steven Erlanger
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — They are from 23 to 26 years old, all of them devotees of capitalism, and all doing just fine in Russia's new free market.

They, too, are the "new rich," at least comparatively, and there isn't a criminal among them.

Instead, the four Russians — Dmitri Blekher, a real-estate agent; Yelena Shalneva, a press officer; Sergei Skatershchikov, a financial analyst, and Leonid Bershidsky, a journalist — are part of an emerging class of young professionals, similar to those in almost any Western country.

They are a nascent middle class, building stable careers in what they are convinced will be a slowly normalizing country.

It is difficult to quantify their number in a country undergoing such a vast and distorting transformation. But they are almost surely a better indication of Russia's future than the image of mafia thugs lounging in nightclubs or speeding a Mercedes through Moscow's pitted streets.

Between these young people and their parents is perhaps Russia's most profound generation gap in this century. It is not only money that separates them, though the new generation has a much better sense of what money is than their parents, who lived in a not very genteel Communist poverty in which influence mattered far more than income and where too much initiative often led to trouble.

These young people grew up without ideology or the dead hand of the Communist state.

"There is a mental gap between us," said Skatershchikov, 23, who started the Skate Press Consulting Agency, a financial information company, at school and now employs 50 people, including his mother.

"I don't say they were sinners and I'm clean," he said. "They committed no sins; neither of my parents even joined the Communist Party. But everyone was so poor, and everyone was just drifting down the river through their lives with no real perspective or activity."

"My mother dedicated herself to raise me in a communal apartment," he continued, "while my father — he looks at me at 23, with my own business, and he started his own — only at 40-something."

'I live a completely free life; this psychological gap between generations is much bigger than even the economic one.'

— Dmitri Blekher, who runs a small real-estate company

Skatershchikov, boyish and tousled, looked out the window. "He's proud of me, we're friends, but he regrets that so many of his years went into the wastebasket. He feels he wasted the best of his life."

These young people were 13 to 16 when Mikhail Gorbachev, the last Soviet president, began the process of glasnost and perestroika 10 years ago. They have grown up free of the dollop of degradation swallowed by every slightly ambitious citizen of the Soviet Union — degradation meted out by a Communist Party that had come to have less and less meaning, making the need to bow before it that much more humiliating.

Blekher, 25, runs a small real-estate company from his apartment telephone and computer, putting landlords together with renters. He is doing well after a series of failed efforts to build other businesses, having left a scientific institute studying highly purified materials when military financing dried up.

His mother is still shocked that he left science to enter business, but he remembers how he could not attend his first choice of institute, even in 1986, because he is listed as a Jew on his passport.

His stepfather, a biologist and an ethnic Tatar, was dismissed from an immunology institute in the early 1960s for challenging a lazy Communist Party secretary who criticized him for a lack of ideological zeal. He accused her of loving the party only for the salary it paid her.

"He suggested she was an ideological prostitute," Blekher said. "It didn't ruin his life forever, but he had lots of problems." Last week, Blekher said, "I live a completely free life; this psychological gap between generations is much bigger than even the economic one."

Yelena Shalneva, 26, runs press relations for the Russian Privatization Center, a government agency with some foreign financing that helps turn state enterprises into private, profitable businesses.

Her father is an Izvestia correspondent, based in London, who had once worked for the official press agency Tass and been posted in New Delhi, Washington and other capitals.

She went to Russian schools but traveled, graduated from Moscow State University in philology, and then got a master's degree in political science at Rutgers University, writing her thesis on American lobbies.

"The system may be different here," she said wryly. "But the concept is still the same."

She and her father have talked very little about what the party required, she said.

"He still has that caution, and he still worries about me," Miss Shalneva said, "that I make sure I have no black spots for life. But now I know that if I lose my job — it will be traumatic, it could be difficult — but I know I can find another."

Saddam grants pardon to thousands in prison

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Saddam Hussein is pardoning thousands of prisoners — including many sentenced to the amputation of an ear or a hand — in an unexpected move that could be an attempt to end U.N. trade sanctions.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported Saturday that Saddam issued the amnesty after a meeting of the Revolutionary Command Council, Iraq's highest legislative body.

The report, monitored in Cyprus, not say why Saddam had decided to issue such a wide-ranging amnesty now. But it could be a gesture toward the U.N. Security Council — or simply a sign that Iraq's prisons are full.

Among those pardoned are people who have been in detention awaiting amputation. Last year, Saddam decreed that army deserters would have an ear cut off, and thieves would lose a hand. Those pardoned will not undergo the operation, the report said.

All army deserters will be pardoned, including those at large who surrender immediately, the report said. Dissidents say tens of thousands of soldiers have deserted in the last two years.

Toughness, rainwater, luck saved survivors of department store collapse

By Sang-Hun Choe
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Park Sung-hyun had a one-sentence answer when she was asked how she survived 16 days in the rubble of a collapsed shopping mall.

"I was very, very lucky," the 19-year-old salesclerk said from her hospital bed, her hands on a Buddhist rosary that her grandmother believes brought her luck when the five-story building fell June 29.

Park was the last survivor to be pulled alive from the wrecked mall, and the rubble has now been almost completely cleared away.

She and two other young people rescued a few days earlier were dubbed "miracle" survivors. But the credit might go more to youth and strength, rainwater seeping through the ruins — and simple luck.

The collapse of the five-story Sampoong Department Store into a heap of smoking rubble was South Korea's worst peacetime disaster. The death toll stands at 458, and 144 are still listed as missing.

On Saturday, searchers packed up their equipment and left the site, saying all the bodies there had been found. Angry relatives of some of the missing fought with riot police, demanding the city resume the search.

Only 27 people were rescued alive from the wreckage, including one group of 24 cleaners who were saved because they were changing clothes after their work shift in a basement room that remained intact. They were pulled out two days after the collapse.

But the tales of the three long-term survivors raised agonizing questions over whether more might have been saved.

Rescue workers privately acknowledged that their tools and know-how were limited. When Park was rescued, authorities had already been using heavy equipment for 12 days — leaving open the grisly possibility that others who survived the collapse might have been crushed by the rubble-clearing effort.

Saving lives depended more on chance than on any modern equipment or rescue techniques, officials and volunteer workers said.

"Our work here was like digging through garbage dumps with hoes," said Lee Byung-hee, a rescue official. "Poking here and there, you had to be very lucky to find a hole large enough to hold a human body."

In the first several days, fire engines poured water to quell black toxic smoke from burning cars in the underground parking garage, fearing the smoke could suffocate survivors.

The water was salvation for some, a killer for others.

Choi Myong-sok, 20, pulled out 9 1/2 days after the cave-in, said the water from fire trucks and monsoon rains drowned some people trapped near him. But Yoo Chi-hwan, 18, said she survived on that water for 12 days.

The decision to bring in heavy equipment after only four days was spurred by the summer heat, which was rapidly decomposing bodies in the ruins and raising fears of an outbreak of disease.

Most rescuers had never encountered a disaster of this magnitude.

"I have seen on TV what buildings looked like in the Oklahoma bombing and Kobe earthquakes. But I have never imagined a building could collapse like this," said Paek Il-sung, another rescue official.

Sophisticated listening devices were quickly brought in to comb the rubble in Oklahoma. In Seoul, the only high-tech device used was a set of U.S. sound detectors flown from Hawaii. But it arrived too late and its use was largely ineffective because of the noise in the area.

One volunteer worker, speaking on condition of anonymity, said city officials seemed more interested in briefing their own higher-ups than in heeding calls for flashlights, drills and other simple tools.

Many citizens, responding to appeals for help by TV stations, rushed to the scene with household tools but were blocked by police on orders not to allow unnecessary personnel into the area, newspapers reported.

The last three survivors were found largely by chance. They were all found hemmed in tiny pockets of air, barely large enough for them to lie down in. Rescuers did not know of their presence until they heard their feeble cries for help.

Park's father calls her "South Korea's luckiest girl."

Former President Carter brings safe water crusade to Sudan

NYAMINI, Sudan (AP) — The water that sustains the people in this tiny farming hamlet in southern Sudan has also brought them sickness and death.

So they lined up outside their thatch-roofed huts to cheer as Jimmy Carter arrived, thanking the former president for a cease-fire he negotiated that opened the way for health care and water treatment they had never before received.

Since the cease-fire began March 28, aid workers backed by the Carter Center in Atlanta have moved into villages like Nyamini to try to eradicate Guinea worm disease and other waterborne illnesses and to vaccinate children.

Carter was on tour not only to promote better health care but to press the Khartoum government and southern rebels, who have fought each other for 12 years, to extend the 3 1/2-month cease-fire and begin peace talks.

He spent Thursday and Friday visiting villages in the bush, and on Saturday and today was meeting with government and rebel leaders in hopes of ensuring that fighting would not again block his campaign against disease.

Ridding the world of Guinea worm — a parasite picked up from unclean water — has been a Carter crusade since the late 1980s. The remote tropical villages in southern Sudan are among its last bastions.

Getting to Nyamini was part of the battle for Carter, his wife Rosalynn and their son, Chip. It took a 3 1/2-hour flight from the capital Khartoum to Juba, 720 miles south, then a bone-jarring hour west on a winding dirt road.

Along the road people walked barefoot, with their belongings balanced on their heads. Electricity and telephones are unknown. Firewood is so precious a family makes do with four small tree branches a day.

In Nyamini, a village of 400, Carter grimaced as he watched a health worker try to pull out a yard-long Guinea worm from the leg of farmer Luka Deng.

"It is very painful," the 24-year-old Deng told Carter. "I cannot stand. I cannot keep my cattle."

To Carter, who has made improving the lot of the Third World his mission since leaving the White House in 1981, the visit symbolized a brighter future.

"Today is a day I will never forget," he told the villagers. "I will ... never forget those who will never again know Guinea worm and never again know river blindness and the children who will never again have polio and measles."

Carter said he was very pleased with what was accomplished during the cease-fire: 2,336 villages identified by health workers as infested with Guinea worm, 150,000 nylon water filters distributed, 40,000 people treated for river blindness, more than 95,000 children vaccinated.

Sudan is rife with disease. Health Minister Galwak Deng estimates that one-quarter of the nation's 27 million people catch malaria every year. One-third of the world's 160,000 annual Guinea worm cases are in Sudan, mainly in the south. Diarrhea is rampant, and often fatal.

Chicago tragedy: Number of deaths from heat wave shocks city

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

CHICAGO — When paramedic Tim Walsh arrived at work the morning of July 13, he already was soaked in sweat. He knew it would be a long day in ambulance No. 29.

He didn't know it would make Chicago history.

Within minutes, the 31-year-old paramedic was on a pulse-pounding, muscle-aching run from one emergency to another, climbing up two, three, four flights of stairs, carrying down the sick and dying, racing against a silent killer — the heat.

By late afternoon, the mercury had seared its way into the record books at 106 degrees. By then, a stunned Tim Walsh realized he was witness to a growing tragedy.

"No matter how hard we worked, how fast we operated, there just weren't enough of us to go around," said Walsh, who worked 19 backbreaking hours before resting.

The true scope of Chicago's catastrophe, however, wasn't clear until two days later when, amid seemingly more tolerable 97 degree weather, the Cook County coroner made it official: The city was suffering a heat disaster, destined to be its deadliest ever.

Hospitals were jammed with the sick and the morgue was overloaded with the dead, with dozens of bodies arriving in a somber procession of blue-and-white police vans. Before it was over, more than 450 people, mostly elderly and sick, would become victims of the summer of '95.

"I've never seen so many dead people in a short period of time," Walsh said. "I've responded to hundreds of accidents and shootings. That's one at a time. To have 400 people die ... it's so disheartening. You wouldn't be human if you didn't think so."

IT WAS A disaster that no one saw, no one heard as it happened. Like the surge of heat from the open door of a giant oven, it rolled over a city of nearly 3 million, turning homes into ghastly infernos with temperatures up to 130 degrees.

"It was happening all around and people were unaware," paramedic Jay Riordan said. "It wasn't just in tenements or high rises. It was all over."

Perhaps the most notorious city tragedy is the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, which claimed 250 lives after Mrs. O'Leary's cow did — or did not — knock over a lantern in a barn.

That pales in comparison to this five-day heat wave: As of Friday, the death toll was 456. That's easily more than double the number of people killed in the Oklahoma City bombing and more than seven times the fatalities in the 1994 Los Angeles earthquake.

But even as the temperature hit 100 on July 14, there was no hint of how bad things would become. The coroner reported just four heat-related deaths that day.

Mayor Richard M. Daley also downplayed the threat.

"It's very hot, but let's not blow it out of proportion," he said at a news conference. "It's like getting heavy snow. It's like getting real cold weather. Yes, we go to extremes in Chicago. And that's why people like Chicago."

BY SATURDAY MORNING, Police Commander Jerry Robinson knew something was wrong.

> 'What we were seeing was people sliding away in front of us. That was the most frustrating.'
> — Jay Riordan, a paramedic

Though the number of calls coming into the 911 emergency communications unit he heads peaked Thursday at 16,727 — an all-time record — the types of requests had changed.

People had stopped complaining about open fire hydrants. They started asking police to pick up the dead. Bodies were decomposing.

"It reached a point where every five or 10 minutes, you'd find another body," Robinson said.

In one eight-hour period, the coroner's office reported 120 bodies brought into the morgue; another 69 were on the way. The youngest were 3; the oldest 103.

Those struggling to save victims were overwhelmed, too, with people often too sick with heat stroke, chest pains, asthma and emphysema, people too sick to walk or talk.

"What we were seeing was people sliding away in front of us," said Riordan, the paramedic. "That was the most frustrating part."

Rescuers were hobbled, too. Over the weekend, 28 of 59 city ambulances broke down at various times. And hospitals, too, started diverting people because of the overload.

State officials said at least 16 of up to 42 hospitals serving Chicago residents were "on bypass" during part of the crisis, meaning their beds were full.

"It's like when you have a disaster drill and you have this flurry of activity for a few minutes," said Cynthia Przislicki, clinical director of the emergency department at Swedish Covenant Hospital, which was on bypass about four hours. "That's what it was like for days and days and days and days."

Several miles away, at the emergency room of St. Francis Hospital in suburban Evanston, Dr. Jeffrey Sterling was haunted by nightmarish visions of hundreds of people sweltering in their apartments.

"People kept coming and coming and coming, and we knew there was nothing they could do to stop it," he said.

One patient who died had a 109-degree temperature. "When you're handed that type of situation, there is so little you can do," Sterling added. "We were fighting a losing battle from the very beginning."

But even in times of crisis, there are miracles, such as Rufus Bingham, a 71-year-old patient at the University of Chicago Hospitals, brought in wearing, inexplicably, long underwear.

"I'm really lucky that someone found me," he said from his hospital bed. "I'm lucky I lasted long enough to make it here. My temperature was 108 degrees, and that's enough to fry an egg."

NOW, CHICAGO IS burying its dead.

The A.A. Rayner & Sons funeral home has services scheduled almost every hour this weekend.

"We're all trying to pull together," funeral director Charles Childs said. "We don't know if this has really ended. They're still finding people out there."

At week's end, Daley gave himself and his staff a pat on the back for a job well done, but also unveiled a new plan to deal with heat emergencies.

Human Services Commissioner Daniel Alvarez said the city did its best, but must find new ways to monitor isolated, elderly people.

"We have to be ready for the next one," he said, then paused and added, "Hopefully, it will never happen again."

Whose witness is it?

Testimony may help prosecution

By Deborah Hastings
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Jurors were riveted. The theory that O.J. Simpson was framed was getting another boost: Defense witness and police photographer Willie Ford never saw any socks, bloody or otherwise, at the foot of Simpson's bed.

Then, however, Ford turned into a witness for the prosecution under questioning by Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden.

"You were only instructed to videotape a room after a search was complete?" Darden asked last week.

"That is correct," Ford replied.

"That's why we don't see socks in the videotape, is that correct, Mr. Ford?"

"That's correct, sir."

Two weeks into Simpson's long-anticipated defense, some of his own witnesses seem to have hurt him more than they have helped, legal experts say.

"This is what the defense has? This is who they're going to call?" asked an incredulous Laurie Levenson, a Loyola Law School professor. "It may hurt them a lot more than if they had not called any witnesses at all."

"Some of these witnesses are pretty darn good. The only question is who are they good for?" said Stan Goldman, also a Loyola professor and a former public defender. "As soon as anyone raises a question on cross, these witnesses fall apart."

Indeed, defense lawyer Harland Braun, whose clients include one of the officers charged in the Rodney King beating case, questioned the wisdom of putting on a defense at all.

"Had they rested after the prosecution's case," he said, "they would, right now, have been arguing about the prosecution witnesses. Now they have to argue about their own witnesses."

Consider Dr. Robert Huizenga, called to bolster defense claims that Simpson was too arthritic to kill anyone. The sports internist ended up conceding under cross-examination that Simpson was physically capable of stabbing to death his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman.

"The defense team did Huizenga no favors by bringing him into the case," Southwestern University School of Law professor Robert Pugsley said. "He saw Simpson only twice in his life, both times after (the murders), and for the sole reason of preparing a criminal defense."

During the first week of the defense case, prosecutors used one of Simpson's own witnesses to show that a white vehicle similar to Simpson's Bronco was seen speeding away from the murder scene.

But the most damaging, Pugsley said, was physical trainer Richard Walsh, called by the defense to detail Simpson's limitations in filming an exercise video less than three weeks before the killings.

Under questioning from prosecutors, Walsh said Simpson was able to complete a grueling, 15-hour day of exercise. Jurors also were shown the video, which showed the defendant joking about hitting "the wife" while doing punching exercises.

"Walsh was the worst of all," Pugsley said. "He not only compounded the doctor's testimony about Simpson's physical capability, he dovetailed over into spousal abuse."

Braun said backfiring testimony is the risk of any defense.

In any event, Simpson's lawyers, a high-priced and experienced bunch, do not have final say in mounting their client's defense. Simpson does. And if he's calling the shots, Braun and others said, the defense witnesses may force Simpson to take the stand.

"With all these witnesses going down the drain, he may want to get up there and try salvage the thing," Braun said.

"In a normal case, you'd say no" to such testimony. "But who knows in this case. I wouldn't bet my house one way or the other."

GOP hurts itself by defending tobacco, doctors tell Gingrich

■ More national news/5C

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-two Republican scientists and doctors have written to House Speaker Newt Gingrich expressing dismay that the party is allying itself with the tobacco industry and ridiculing anti-smoking efforts.

They said such actions as Gingrich's meeting last year in West Palm Beach, Fla. with tobacco industry executives and his press secretary's characterization of zealots in anti-tobacco ranks as "health Nazis" harm the conservative movement.

"We have observed instances where public health efforts to discourage smoking have been ridiculed by a number of your colleagues and we fear the Republican Party is increasingly viewed as a friend of the tobacco industry," the letter said.

Such a "rejectionist attitude" is a formula for defeat, it added. "It guarantees that liberals alone benefit from growing anti-tobacco sentiment."

The letter was signed chiefly by medical school and science professors, who usually eschew involvement in political issues.

It came at a time when tobacco state legislators from both parties are expected to try to keep the Food and Drug Administration from declaring tobacco an addictive drug and starting to regulate it.

Gingrich said several days ago that the FDA had "lost its mind" in contemplating such a move. On Thursday, the House defeated a proposal by Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., to eliminate all funding for the FDA.

By not helping to frame anti-smoking legislation consistent with conservative ideas, the letter said, Republicans cede the field to "well-meaning social engineers and safety alarmists."

The letter was delivered to Gingrich last week. A copy was made available to The Associated Press.

Among those signing it, under the letterhead of an ad hoc group, Concerned Republicans for Science and Public Health, were faculty members from Columbia, Michigan State, Penn State, Emory, Johns Hopkins, Oregon State, Temple, Purdue, the Universities of California at Berkeley and San Francisco and the Universities of Minnesota, Massachusetts, Texas, Nebraska and Arizona, as well as some doctors in private practice.

"There is an increasing number of people who are strong advocates of the tobacco industry in the Republican Party," said Dr. W. Virgil Brown of Emory University, a former president of the American Heart Association who signed the letter. "They are in danger of appearing to be on the very wrong side of an issue here and I think, long term, it is going to bite them very hard. It is a great example of mass denial."

Tom Lauria, spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, declined to comment on the letter. "Speaker Gingrich is more than capable of addressing a publicity stunt like this himself," he said.

Gingrich could not be reached. His press secretary, Tony Blankley, said, "I don't know who these people are or how misinformed they are. But there is a difference between supporting programs which encourage good health — and that would include teaching children not to smoke — and prohibitionists' intrusions into the private lives of others."

NASA discloses O-ring problems after Discovery's morning landing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery and its five astronauts returned to Earth Saturday following a satellite-delivery and science mission prolonged by bad weather.

Discovery glided through a hazy sky and landed shortly after 8 a.m. at the Kennedy Space Center, where the flight began nine days ago.

Less than two hours later, shuttle manager Brewster Shaw found himself defending NASA's decision to launch Discovery so soon after Atlantis landed earlier this month. It wasn't until after Discovery was aloft that engineers discovered hot gas from burning rocket fuel had singed a primary O-ring seal in a nozzle joint of one of Atlantis' two boosters.

Shaw said no gas escaped past this seal, and the Atlantis crew of seven was in no more danger than any other during the June 27 liftoff.

A leak in a different booster joint caused Challenger to explode in 1986, killing all seven astronauts aboard.

"We treat every unusual occurrence, abnormality, unexpected event with these solid motors as very serious," Shaw said, "and everything that happens to us relative to that hardware we look at very closely to make sure that we understand the phenomenon that's occurring."

Shaw said "anything's possible" as to whether the booster problem might delay NASA's next shuttle flight or ground the shuttle fleet. But, he added, "I've not seen data yet that would lead me to believe that that (grounding) is going to be a required course of action."

Discovery lifted off July 13, just six days after Atlantis returned from visiting the Russian Mir space station.

This morning, Discovery almost ended up some 2,000 miles away.

Although the weather was fine at the seaside landing strip early this morning, Mission Control worried that high humidity might result in fog and low clouds similar to what scuttled Friday's landing attempt. Flight directors ordered commander Terence "Tom" Henricks to skip a sunrise touchdown.

As Discovery circled Earth one more time, the weather remained favorable and Mission Control notified the astronauts to come home and end their 3.7 million-mile journey.

Oilers land Air

SAN ANTONIO — The Houston Oilers have finally landed Air McNair. Steve McNair, Alcorn State's record-setting quarterback who was the team's top draft pick, has agreed to terms with the Oilers, coach Jeff Fisher said Saturday after the first day of training camp at Trinity University.
"My understanding is they agreed in principle," Fisher said, adding he expects a deal to be signed and McNair to report to camp in a "couple of days."
"That's certainly very positive information," he said.
Terms of the deal were not disclosed. Oilers general manager Floyd Reese kept details of the contract close to his vest in an interview with Houston radio station KTRH.
"It's a long-term contact that meets everybody's needs," he said.
That's apparently true if an ecstatic McNair is any indication.
"I want to get into the organization and learn the things I need to learn to be the starter in the future," McNair told Houston's KRIV-TV from Mount Olive, Miss. "This is very exciting. It's a dream come true. All of the things they guaranteed is great. I've got to prove to the organization what they are giving me is not just a fluke."

Seahawks move?

KIRKLAND, Wash. — Unhappy with the Kingdome and the prospect of losing more money in Seattle, the Seahawks have talked with a Southern California group about moving into a new stadium in Los Angeles, team president David Behring said Saturday. The Los Angeles Times reported the Seahawks have had discussions with Creative Artists Agency about a potential location for the new stadium.
"My father is a businessman," Behring said, referring to Seahawks majority owner Ken Behring. "If somebody calls him up with an opportunity, he's at least going to listen."

Unknown races into British lead

■ Nearly unknown New Zealander Michael Campbell shoots 65 to climb into the British Open lead by two strokes going into today's final round.

By Ron Sirak
AP Sports Writer

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Michael Campbell pulled off one major miracle at the Old Course. Now he needs to hold off some formibable challengers to win the British Open.

His nearly impossible blast from the Road Bunker on No. 17 put the nearly unknown New Zealander at 9-under-par 207 going into today, two strokes better than Constantino Rocca of Italy and three ahead of Australian Steve Elkington.

And Campbell's incredible 7-under-par 65 — with seven birdies and no bogeys — was three strokes better than anyone else shot on Saturday and nearly nine strokes below the third-round course average of 73.80.

But Sunday could be another story.

John Daly, who won the 1991 PGA Championship, and Corey Pavin and Ernie Els, the last two U.S. Open winners, were in position along with Katsuyoshi Tomori at 211 to put pressure on Campbell in the final round.

"Anybody seven or eight back is still in it because the wind is supposed to blow hard tomorrow," Daly said "This time I'm glad I'm not in the last group."

Among those within seven strokes are five-time British Open champion Tom Watson at 213 and defending champion Nick Price at 214.

"Of course I can," Campbell, a 26-year-old rookie on the European Tour, said when asked if he thought he could win the tournament.

Incredible Hulk meets the Dallas Cowboys

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coaches and players stopped and stared Saturday at the sight of newly signed Darren Benson, a hulking 6-foot-7, 305-pound defensive end who made his first appearance at training camp.

Benson, 20, who played at Trinity Valley Community College last fall, was selected Friday by the Cowboys in the NFL's supplemental draft.

He will cost the team a third-round pick in the 1996 draft. But coaches say even though he is a project, he's worth the gamble.

"I guess everybody noticed the new guy. He fills out the pads pretty good, doesn't he?" coach Barry Switzer said of Benson, who appeared to tower over players like Charles Haley and Tony Tolbert. "We call him The Big Oak Tree."

Benson took part in pass rushing drills and "demonstrated good quickness and a willing-

Moon apologizes for incident, still faces possible jail time

MISSOURI CITY, Texas (AP) — Minnesota Vikings quarterback Warren Moon has publicly apologized for a domestic dispute that escalated into violence, but he now faces possible jail time after being charged with misdemeanor assault.

Moon, who was charged with a Class A misdemeanor Friday night, surrendered to authorities and appeared before a Missouri City municipal judge, where his arraignment was set for Sept. 19, said police spokeswoman Jill Porter.

Moon was released on $1,000 personal recognizance bond, she said.

Hours earlier, Moon addressed more than two dozen reporters at his home.

"I'm a person who has always demonstrated a lot of self control," he said. "But three days ago, because of an argument my wife and I were involved in, I lost control."

Former Midland High and Texas football player Joe Phillips discusses last year's team.

Former Bulldog says Pinkney, Adams split '94 Longhorn team

■ Midland High product Joe Phillips talks about a stretch last season when Texas football players were divided over the treatment of two receivers.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

Midland High product and former University of Texas guard Joe Phillips feels a division between Texas football players contributed to the Longhorns' 1994 mid-season slump. The off-field problems of star receivers Mike Adams and Lovell Pinkney and how they were handled by coach John Mackovic split the team, said Phillips, the Longhorns' starting right guard last year.

"The lineman had pretty much a different opinion than the rest of the team," said Phillips, now working with his father at Phillips Casing and Tubing in Midland. "We felt that we were going to do fine without those guys ... We wanted them to play but we were tired of the problems they were causing. (But) a lot of the rest of the team felt like they were being treated too harshly. I don't know how they got that."

Pinkney and Adams were suspended twice during the '94 season, the second time for breaking curfew before the Rice game, which Texas lost 19-17. The two had a series of off-field problems leading up to and during the '94 season. Pinkney was selected by the St. Louis Rams in the fourth round of this year's NFL draft.

The part of the team that sided with Adams and Pinkney influenced Mackovic's punishment of the two receivers, Phillips said.

"Honestly, that's what kept Mackovic from doing more," Phillips said. "Every time he would punish them, there would be a big uproar from half the team."

The Longhorns finished last season with a win over North Carolina in the Sun Bowl. But Phillips relates some harsh stories about the team that lost to Rice for the first time in 29 seasons and was given its worst beating ever by Texas Tech. Texas lost three out of four games before ending the season with a three-game winning streak.

"There for about three weeks in the middle of the season, we were pretty much split," Phillips said. "But (we) came back together after we lost to Rice and Tech. We were really shocked, and we said if we keep playing like this, we're never going to win a game."

Phillips passed up his final year of Longhorn football eligibility to return to Midland after graduating from Texas this year. The 6-foot-6, 280-pound former Midland High all-state lineman believes the Longhorns hit bottom last season with the Texas Tech loss.

"It was worse on the field than it looked," Phillips said of the Longhorns' 33-9 loss in Lubbock. "Before the game

Western stumbles in sectional opener

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

■ Senior League

Midland Western is probably still suffering from nightmares after the opening round Saturday of the Senior League (14-15 year-olds) Sectional baseball tournament at Christensen Stadium.

The Fort Worth Southwest Lions erupted for four runs in the top of the seventh inning to hand Western a 6-4 opening game win, sending Midland to the loser's bracket off the first tournament bat.

But what hurt most was the fact that Midland seemed to have the game in control, heading into the last inning while leading 4-2.

Southwest tied the game at 4-4 on two Midland infield errors when both Matthew Jones and Todd Humble scored on the Western miscues. Then the Lions won the game when Allen Lemons came through with an RBI single for what proved to be the winning run. Steve Tanner later scored on a fielder's choice grounder to pad the lead.

Western got one hit in the bottom of the inning, but never really threatened a score.

Midland took a big 3-0 lead in the first inning on a two-run double by Kenny Kleier and an RBI single by Cody Marcum. Southwest scored two runs in the third inning, but never led until their last at-bat. Western padded its lead to 4-2 in the bottom of the sixth when Marcum scored on a single by pinch hitter Eric Neatherlin.

Aaron Erdwurm took the loss for Western after 6 2/3 innings of work. Chris Easter got the final out in the seventh. Southwest's Michael Settle went the distance, using mostly a soft curve. Western had seven hits, but Settle allowed only one hit after the first inning until the bottom of the sixth as Midland had trouble scoring extra runs after an explosive first inning on three hits.

Western now will face tour-

De Ferran claims first career pole position at Cleveland GP

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gil de Ferran, driving for Midland-based Hall Racing, overtook Jacques Villeneuve on the last lap of qualifying Saturday, winning the pole for today's Cleveland Grand Prix at a course-record 147.512 mph.

It was the first career pole for the Indy-car rookie, who had been sixth after Friday's qualifying session. He has never finished higher than eighth in 11 previous races, although he qualified second at Elkhart Lake, Wis., two weeks ago.

His speed was the fastest ever for an Indy-car road course, surpassing the mark of 146.215 set by Michael Andretti in Friday's provisional qualifying on the 2.37-mile, 10-turn circuit set up temporarily each year at Burke Lakefront Airport.

Stewart intends to announce retirement from A's, reports say

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Dave Stewart apparently plans announce his retirement from the Oakland Athletics at a news conference today.

The A's would not comment on the retirement after Saturday's 6-4 loss to the Cleveland Indians. And Stewart himself would only say: "It's gotta wait til tomorrow."

But according to broadcast reports citing sources close to the team, the 38-year-old right-hander was expected to formally retire at the news conference.

Stewart, an Oakland native, was 3-7 with a 6.89 ERA this season. On Thursday, he volunteered to take himself out of the starting rotation and go to the bullpen.

"I'm a winner, and if I'm better off down there in middle relief, I want that for this ballclub," Stewart said Thursday. "It might even add four or five years to my career. But that's not why I'm doing it. The bottom line is doing what's right for my team."

Stewart had made 289 career starts since his last relief appearance on July 26, 1986 against Toronto. The four-time 20-game winner has compiled a 168-129 career record.

He was named the American League Championship Series Most Valuable player in both 1990 and 1993. He went 8-0 with a 2.03 ERA in five ALCS games against the Toronto Blue Jays.

He also was named MVP in the 1989 World Series when the A's swept the San Francisco Giants.

HOUSTON (AP) — Deion Sanders didn't report to the San Francisco Giants on Saturday, a day after he was traded by the Cincinnati Reds.

Manager Dusty Baker said he hoped Sanders would join his new team by Monday night, when the Giants begin a two-game series at Florida. Sanders has 72 hours to report.

What decisions does he have to make?

"We didn't get into that," Baker said. "He just said he has some decisions to make and I'm not going to pry into that."

Sanders, a two-sport star, played for the San Francisco 49ers last season and is currently an NFL free agent. He was hitting .240 for the Reds with one homer, 10 RBIs and 16 stolen bases in 19 attempts. He was on the disabled list from May 31 to July 16 with a severely sprained ankle.

Tinney back to defend title

Kaimi Fuller and Christin Sutton, two former Midland Lee players, are also in the field. Sutton just completed her senior season at Lee while Fuller went to state twice with Lee.

Angels edge Captains, up streak

Staff Report

SHREVEPORT — In the second battle between the two first-half champions, the Midland Angels won their fourth straight with a 5-3 win over the Shreveport Captains Saturday in Texas League action.

Midland, 16-13, followed Friday night's 11-3 victory in the first of the teams' six-game series. The Angels did most of their damage in the four-run fifth.

Down 1-0 in the top of the fifth, Midland's Emmitt Cohick and J.D. Ramirez singled to right off Shreveport's Andy Taulbee, 3-1. Jose Monzon, then followed with a double to left, scoring Cohick. Orlando Munoz kept the production going with a two-run single to center, scoring Ramirez and Monzon. Moe Daniels singled for the Angels' fifth-straight hit putting runners at first and second. One Tim Harkrider sacrifice later, George Arias grounded to short, driving in Munoz. The RBI was his 84th and put Midland up 4-1.

That would be enough as John Snyder pitched well to get the victory. Snyder (8-9) did give up a run in the first, but settled down not allowing another hit or run until the bottom of the fifth. Overall, Snyder allowed three runs in six and two-thirds innings. Midland added another run in the ninth.

Midland's Bryan Harris and Mike Schooler were solid in relief to hold the Captains to just two hits in just over two innings. Schooler picked up his 12th save.

Midland will play two today with Williard Brown (6-7) and Steve Renko (3-2) starting for the Halos against Edwin Corps (9-4) and Chad Frontera (3-2). The double header will be carried on KCRS (AM 550) radio at 6 p.m.

Indurain on verge of winning record fifth straight Tour de France

LIMOGES, France (AP) — With unwavering consistency through three weeks of cycling, Miguel Indurain is on the verge of winning his record fifth straight Tour de France.

Even with victory in the sport's premiere event virtually assured, Indurain extended his overall lead by winning the individual time trial in Saturday's 19th stage.

Indurain took the 29-mile stage around Lac de Vassiviere in 57 minutes, 34 seconds, better than Bjarne Riis of Denmark by 48 seconds and Tony Rominger by 1:05.

Overall, Indurain has a lead of 4:35 over Alex Zulle of Switzerland, with Riis at 6:47 behind.

Sunday's stage is a largely ceremonial 96-mile ride from St. Genevieve des Bois to Paris, ending on the Champs Elysees. Barring accident, Indurain should take his fifth title in a row.

Belgian Eddy Merckx, and Frenchmen Jacques Anquetil and Bernard Hinault have also won five Tours but Indurain will be the first to do it in consecutive years.

BENSON: 20-year-old 'Project' to see training camp playing time

ness to compete," Switzer said.

"That's one thing you're concerned about with a 20-year-old player coming out here being awed by veteran Dallas Cowboy players," Switzer said.

Defensive coordinator Dave Campo said Benson will see plenty of playing time in training camp.

"We don't know a heck of a lot about him," Campo said. "He's big, he's fast, pretty strong and raw as this grass on the field. You can't find big, strong, fast guys out there. But your guess is as good as mine as to whether he is going to be a player."

Cowboys scouting director Larry Lacewell had recruited Benson since the new Cowboy was in high school and Lacewell was coaching at Arkansas State.

"We were shocked by the size because out of high school he wasn't but 6-foot-4," Switzer said. "But a kid that big who can run like that, we'll take him."

Benson said: "I can play with these guys. I'm going in with confidence. They have the No. 1 defense, so I am just out here to learn and then hopefully get my time."

The shadow cast by Benson nearly covered Sherman Williams, the team's top draft pick who signed a four-year, $2 million contract on Friday.

Williams carried the ball several times in contact drills against the defense. Twice he sliced through the heart of the defense for good gains and broke one to the outside for a long run.

"Williams looked good today," Switzer said. "He had some nice runs up the middle and showed the ability to break it outside."

Both Williams and Benson were expected to get a lot of action in an intrasquad scrimmage on Sunday.

SENIOR: Western faces double elimination

nament elimination with each outing. The first double elimination survival test comes at noon today at Christensen Stadium when Midland takes on Iowa Park, a 7-4 loser to Pecos Saturday at Simon Field.

Pecos will face Fort Worth in a winner's bracket game at 5:30 p.m. today at Christensen Stadium.

In late games Saturday, M.L. King of Lubbock played Abilene while Fritch met Farmers Branch. The King-Abilene winner will face the Fritch-Farmers Branch winner at 8 p.m. today. The two losers of those games will play at 2:30 p.m.

The tournament runs through Wednesday when the championship round begins at 5:30 p.m. and the "if" game will be at 8 p.m. The tournament winner will go to the Senior League State Tournament in Waco.

SPLIT: Texas Tech loss turned Longhorns around in the locker room we were just dead and the coaches knew we were dead. They were trying to get us picked up but there just was something ... I guess because the team was so divided still. We just weren't ready to play mentally."

It was actually the Texas A&M game, a 34-10 Texas loss, that Phillips said marked the season's turning point.

"Even though we lost, we played hard," Phillips said. "The score didn't reflect how hard we played. But that was a game I don't think we got beat physically."

He feels the team has benefited greatly from the Sun Bowl win.

"I thought it was the biggest thing to happen to us in four years," said Phillips, redshirted as a freshman in '91, a backup in '92 and a starter halfway through the '93 season. "The morale is super high going into this year even though we lost Pinkney and Adams is still questionable ... We pretty much made it through all last year without those guys anyway."

Phillips said he'd be back at UT if not for a right knee still tender from an injury at the end of his junior year. That season, which Phillips says was his best, the former Bulldog made honorable mention all-Southwest Conference in the Houston Chronicle. The Midland High '90 graduate likes what he sees in this year's Longhorns.

"I'm still close to all the guys," Phillips said. "In fact, I was in Austin last week, and from what they've told me and what I know they're doing, they've worked harder this summer than any time in the past four years."

Which might help alleviate some of Phillips' ill feeling about the Tech loss, where Red Raider fans indulged in their new tortilla throwing tradition.

"It was really bad," Phillips said. "I've never been hit with so many tortillas in my life."

MOON: It was 'a tremendous mistake' says quarterback

(From 1B)

Moon, 38, called the Tuesday incident, which resulted in his wife of 14 years being slapped and choked, "a tremendous mistake" for which he took full responsibility.

"I want to ask forgiveness of my wife, which I've already done, but publicly I want to do that," Moon said. "And I want to ask forgiveness of my fans because I've let a lot of people down."

Moon and his wife both spoke of years of marital problems. However, in this setting, where a victim's advocate shielded the couple from most press questions, few details came out about the couple's problems.

"After many hours of prayers, tears and consultation with my husband, I feel very safe in the presence of my husband," said Mrs. Moon, who added that this was the first time a violent episode had come into their lives.

"We will survive this crisis, and we will remain a family in every sense of the word," she said.

On Tuesday, Mrs Moon gave a sworn affidavit to Missouri City police after a 911 call was placed from the couple's home, notifying authorities an assault was taking place.

She said she had been slapped and choked to the point of nearly passing out, but broke free and fled in her car, trailed by her husband, although she was able to elude him and then came back home.

Mrs. Moon told police and repeated Friday she would not press assault charges, but declined to say why.

"From the start I have declined to press charges, and I maintain that position now," she said.

In Texas officials can file criminal charges even though the victim decides against prosecution.

The Class A misdemeanor assault charge carries a $4,000 fine and as much as a year in jail.

"The whole matter is under advisement and wouldn't be appropriate to talk about," said Leigh Steinberg, Moon's agent. "He said he made a mistake, and I think they ought to be allowed to go on with their lives."

While the Moons circumvented all questions about the incident, particularly why Mrs. Moon chose not to prosecute and what Moon's feelings were regarding the possibility of being prosecuted, the tension was visible on the faces of the family.

Three of the couple's older children — Joshua, 14, Blair, 10, Chelsea, 12 — sat stonefaced with their parents, some with welling tears in their eyes, as their parents discussed how they plan to stay together as a family. The youngest Jeffrey, 7, sat quietly in his sister Chelsea's lap.

"I don't sit here saying I want to stay with her because we have four children or because we put that much time into it," Moon said. "I say that because I still love her the same way I did when I first met her back when I was 16 years old."

Moon and his wife occasionally squeezed each other's hand as they talked and described how they both have sought counseling for themselves and their children.

Moon has arranged for additional professional help in Minnesota, where he leaves for training camp this weekend.

"I love my wife, and I love my kids very much, and we're going to make this thing work."

Thompson birdies 'Guaranty' slim lead

The Associated Press

MADISON, Miss. — Dicky Thompson, who flirted with the second-round lead at the Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic before ending with two bogeys, finished with consecutive birdies Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after 54 holes.

■ Golf Roundup

Thompson shot a 4-under-par 68 to get to 13-under 203, one stroke better than Bob Gilder, who had a 69, and second-round co-leader Dicky Pride, who shot a 70 at the 7,157-yard Annandale Golf Club.

A birdie at the par-4, 407-yard 10th got Thompson among the third-round leaders for the first time. After five straight pars, he had birdies at the par-4 17th and par-5 18th.

Tour rookie Johnathan Kaye was the first player off the tee Saturday and played alone. It took him just 2 1/2 hours and 20 putts to shoot an Annandale course record 9-under 63.

Kaye is in a group of three players at 11-under 205. He is also one of 10 players within four strokes of the lead who have never won on the PGA Tour. Thompson started with three pars before a bogey at the par-4 4th when he three-putted from 100 feet. He got the stroke back with a 15-foot birdie on the par-5 7th.

Big Apple Classic

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. — Carin Hjalmarsson of Sweden, looking like anything but a rookie, stormed into the lead at the Big Apple Classic with a 6-under-par 65.

Hjalmarsson, leader of the LPGA rookie standings, had seven birdies and a bogey in surging past faltering Michelle McGann and into a one-stroke lead at 8-under 205. McGann, who held a four-stroke lead through two rounds, skied to a 74 at Wykagl Country Club and slipped to 208, tied for third with Elaine Crosby and Caroline Pierce.

Tracy Kerdyk and Crosby also had sizzling rounds in hot, humid but less-windy conditions. Kerdyk shot her second successive 66 to finish at 206, one behind the leader. Crosby began the day at one over and went three under on both nines for a 65.

Pierce birdied the final hole for a 70.

First of America Classic

ADA, Mich. — Jimmy Powell shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday at the First of America Classic to put himself 18 holes from Senior PGA Tour history.

Powell's 36-hole total of 10-under 134 earned him $15,000 for winning the Super Senior portion — for those golfers 60 and older — of the $700,000 tournament.

It also gave him a two-shot lead over Babe Hiskey with one round to play in the 54-hole regular tournament and since the Super Senior program began eight years ago, no golfer has won both portions.

The winner's purse of the senior tournament is $105,000. Hiskey shot a course-record 65 in the second round. Another stroke back were Larry Laoretti, who had a 69, and Harry Toscano, who had a 70.

U.S. ties France in Fed Cup; Muster, Agassi win

The Associated Press

WILMINGTON, N.C. — Lindsay Davenport recovered from a blown lead to take a 7-6, 7-5 victory over Julie Halard on Saturday, helping the second-seeded United States tie fourth-seeded France in their Fed Cup semifinal match.

■ Tennis Roundup

The split of Saturday's action sets up a best-of-3 showdown today for the chance to meet either Spain or Germany in the championship round. In the opening match, France's Mary Pierce cashed in on a series of missed opportunities by Mary Joe Fernandez to take a 7-6 (7-1), 6-3 victory.

Defending champion Spain and Germany also split their opening matches in Santander, Spain, with Germany's Sabine Hack upsetting Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 6-4, 6-2 and Conchita Martinez beating Anke Huber 6-2, 2-6, 6-0.

France has lost nine straight matches to the United States since 1966.

Mercedes Cup

STUTTGART, Germany — A heavy storm after a heat wave saved French Open champion Thomas Muster from defeat by his predecessor Sergi Bruguera in the semifinals Saturday at the Mercedes Cup tourament.

Muster saved four match points and was at deuce, serving to stay in the match with Bruguera leading 7-6 (7-5), 5-3 when the storm hit.

After waiting nearly four hours in vain for the violent storm to ease up, organizers finally called off play for the day.

Muster and Bruguera will complete their match this morning, with the other semifinal between Jan Apell and Arnaud Boetsch to follow. The final will be contested later today.

Legg Mason Tennis Classic

WASHINGTON — Top-seeded Andre Agassi had his toughest match of the tournament Saturday, holding off No. 4 Todd Martin 6-4, 7-6 (7-5) in the semifinals of the $675,000 Legg Mason Tennis Classic.

Agassi, who has yet to win a tournament since moving up to No. 1 in the computer rankings 14 weeks ago, will meet second-seeded Stefan Edberg in today's final.

Edberg, the defending champion, defeated No. 13 Patrick Rafter of Australia 7-5, 5-7, 6-2 in the semifinals.

Today's match marks the first time since 1989 the top two seeds will meet in the finals of the 26-year-old event. Tim Mayotte and Brad Gilbert, the finalists on that occasion, were in attendance Saturday; Mayotte as an analyst for the Prime Network telecast and Gilbert as Agassi's coach.

61-year-old woman claims John McEnroe terrorized her in elevator dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — There's no love lost between John McEnroe and one of his Manhattan neighbors — a 61-year-old woman who claims the former top-ranked tennis star terrorized her in a dispute over their building's elevator.

Eleanor Weinstein told the Daily News that a raving McEnroe, whose volatile on-court behavior is well-documented, grabbed her from behind and spun her around when she complained he was monopolizing the use of the elevator in their Upper West Side building.

"I was afraid for my life," Weinstein said. "He was wild. He was absolutely out of control. I was so frightened of this raging maniac."

A spokesman for McEnroe, 36, declined to comment Saturday on the charges, but Weinstein told of McEnroe screaming at her.

"Who the hell are you?" she quoted McEnroe as saying. "I know who you are. You're a lousy school teacher!"

Weinstein, a speech therapist at a Manhattan grammar school, said McEnroe was pointing his finger right between her eyes as he ranted.

Police said Weinstein filed a harassment report after the alleged incident Tuesday night, but said she failed to name the suspect and the complaint was closed. However, her lawyer, Stanley Szaro, insisted police were mistaken — that Weinstein did name McEnroe.

On Saturday, a Police Department spokesman, Detective Mark Patterson, said he had no information on the case.

OPEN: Daly impressed with Campbell's play in gusty conditions

(From 1B)

"I can't control what the other guys do," he said. "I'm going to go out there and have fun."

Campbell had fun on Saturday as his run at the top coincided with slides by the second-round leaders.

Daly, Tomori and Brad Faxon started the day as co-leaders at 6-under-par. Both Daly and Tomori shot 73 to fall four behind Campbell, along with Pavin and Els, both of whom shot even-par 72.

"It was pretty damn good," Daly said of Campbell's 65. "The wind blew all day so he didn't get any special breaks."

Sam Torrance and Mark Brooks were five strokes back at 212, while Faxon shot a 75 and was at 213 along with Watson, Vijay Singh, Barry Lane, Bob Estes and Brett Ogle.

"It was a real surprise that the rest of the guys were going backwards instead of forwards," Campbell said.

He needed one brilliant swing and one lucky bounce to keep the lead once he got it.

His approach shot to the 17th green hit the notorious Road Bunker and was tucked in the front left corner just 10 inches from the head-high wall between the sand and the green. His body almost touched the side of the trap as he set himself.

It seemed certain that the Road Bunker would claim yet another British Open victim.

Campbell had trouble getting a stance and it seemed impossible that he'd get the ball up high enough and quick enough to get out of the bunker. In fact, he didn't.

"It hit the wall about 2 feet below the top," Campbell said.

But the ball bounced up instead of back, landed on the lip and trickled to 18 inches from the hole.

Campbell broke into a wide smile, held both hands out to the side, palms up at shoulder length, and tipped his hat to the roaring gallery.

Later, both Nick Faldo and Ben Crenshaw would need two tries to get out of the Road Bunker with similar but easier shots.

"So easily I could have lost three of four shots. There's someone up there smiling on me," said Campbell, a descendant of an 19th Century Scottish immigrant who married a Maori, the indigenous people of New Zealand.

"He became mayor of Auckland and was rather famous in New Zealand," Campbell said. "Now I think I am."

Campbell's putting was simply sensational. He made a 30-footer on No. 5 and 10-footers on Nos. 7 and 9. His three consecutive birdies on the back nine started when he drove the 316-yard 12th hole and two-putted from 40 feet and continued with 10-footers and 13 and 14.

His first birdie of the day came on the third hole, when he hit a lob wedge to within 3 inches of the cup.

Coveted points at stake for Marlin

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Superspeedway ace Sterling Marlin sits on the pole for today's DieHard 500, with coveted championship points and big bonus money at stake.

■ DieHard 500

All nine of Marlin's career poles have come at superspeedways, including three at Talladega. The Chevrolet Monte Carlo driver is on the pole for the first time this season, looking to break a winless streak for pole-sitters that has grown to 16 races. If he can back up his speed with a victory, he'll get a bonus check worth $121,600. The ante has been growing since the last time a polesitter — Jeff Gordon, in the second race of the season at Rockingham — made it to victory lane

"We've come real close, but we feel like we've got the best chance we've ever had to win a race here this weekend," Marlin said after shooting in and out of drafts during a practice session Saturday at the 2.66-mile Talladega Superspeedway.

Marlin, who has victories this season at Darlington, S.C., and in the Daytona 500, said Talladega's gas-slamming brand of racing suits his style.

"It's fun to draft and pass cars," he said. "Here, we've got wide open spaces."

Marlin laughs now when looking back on the May race at Talladega, when he stood helpless behind the wall while his crew worked to repair a broken motor. His sleek, yellow car is always feared at the long, fast tracks, but only if it's running.

A victory in the Winston Select 500 would have handed Marlin a $200,000 bonus, because he would have led the point standings and he also had won the Daytona 500. Instead, Gordon walked away with the cash.

Now, there's a different jockeying for position between the Chevy drivers — the one that will determine the Winston Cup champion. Gordon, the young star who has taken the circuit by storm with four victories and five second-place finishes, leads the point standings, 106 ahead of Marlin.

Both drivers deny being concerned with points.

"We're just going out each race and trying to lead laps," Gordon said. "I know you guys find that hard to believe."

Although Marlin says in one breath that points are not a concern, the conversation invariably turns to the title.

"We've just got to do what we've been doing, what got us here, and maybe we'll win a championship," he said.

Marlin had to wait overnight to find out if his qualifying speed of 194.212 would hold up. A torrential rain storm interrupted the first round Friday, leaving nine drivers still to take their shot Saturday morning.

No one could touch Marlin, or the rest of the top five — all Chevys, driven by Bobby Labonte, Jeff Gordon, Ken Schrader and Dale Earnhardt.

Ricky Rudd, Michael Waltrip, Darrell Waltrip, John Andretti and rookie Robert Pressley rounded out the top 10.

Marlin and Gordon, joked about how the typically frantic chase for drafting buddies would shake out.

"You gonna work with me tomorrow, Sterling?" Gordon asked.

"Oh yeah," Marlin said from behind a wide smile. "We won't hang you out."

HALL: Rookie breaks course record on final day of qualifying

(From 1B)

The airport, with its wide runways and taxiways providing plenty of room for maneuvering, has developed into the fastest road course on the Indy circuit.

Villeneuve got stuck in traffic late in the qualifying session and had to settle for second at 147.484, followed by Bryan Herta at 147.412, Teo Fabi 147.013, Andre Ribeiro 146.996 and Paul Tracy 146.920.

In all, 20 cars beat the course record of 144.139 Tracy established two years ago.

The top three finishers were driving Reynard chassis — de Ferran in a Reynard-Mercedes-Benz, Villeneuve and Herta in Reynard-Fords. The pole was the first for a car powered by the Mercedes.

The 27-year-old de Ferran, a Brazilian who won the British Formula 3 championship in 1992, said he switched to fresh tires with about 7 minutes left in the 30-minute session, then pushed his car as hard as he could on the final lap.

"It's definitely go for broke," he said. "You brake a little later than you did the lap before.

"You also brake a little bit less than you did the lap before, and you put in a little bit more power than you did the lap before — and hope it's going to stick."

Villeneuve, the PPG Cup points leader trying for his fourth consecutive pole, ran his best lap about halfway through the session.

"During the last two laps, while I was on a fast lap, two other competitors were in my way," he said. "So I lost those two laps. On my last lap, the car was faster with less fuel.

"I am upset to lose that lap and that time. You always push hard on the last lap, and that's what Gil did."

Herta qualified in an earlier session with a generally slower group of cars, and his best lap came late in that session.

At Last! How to Buy a New Central Air System for Less than $13 per week with Lower Electric Bills

...and best of all, you don't have to put any cash down. But you must act now while the special circumstances that created this unique offer are still available.

Dear Friend,

Right now I have created a new program that will allow 39 homeowners to buy a new central air system with no money down and less than $13 per week. Actually with this program, homeowners will probably be able to buy a new system without taking any money out of their pocket. I'll explain later.

You may be thinking...

"WHY WOULD HE MAKE THIS INCREDIBLE OFFER?"

The answer is simple: Spring is almost over. At this time of year my calls start to pick up because it is so late in the season. Most people, whether they are having problems with their air conditioner, or it's just an old inefficient unit, are not thinking of replacement. They would rather be miserable now and wait until next year to change out their system. And right now it is still too warm out for them to think about replacement of their furnace. This creates a problem for me and...

MY PROBLEM IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY

Every year I have to guess how many air conditioners and furnaces to buy to meet the "Emergency Demand". Of course I'm never exactly right. I have the most popular sizes used in the Permian Basin.

These 39 systems are brand new 1995 models. They are NOT seconds, or "blems" or standard "builder" models. They are factory fresh premium air conditioner an furnaces and have a full factory warranty.

HERE'S HOW YOU BENEFIT FROM MY PROBLEM

In order to create a demand for these 39 systems, I negotiated a plan to give me a financing program with a low interest rate and low monthly payments that would be irresistible to those who would normally wait until next year to install a new system. Right now, you can buy a new central air conditioner and furnace with NO money down and less than $13 a week.

No other company here in the Permian Basin is willing to gone you such an incredible offer and...

THERE IS ANOTHER REMARKABLE ADVANTAGE.

If your central air system is over 10 years old, the money you save on utility costs could be enough to offset the monthly payment on your new system. Image that..."Buy a new central heating and cooling system without taking any money out of your pocket" It's like having the electric company buy you a new air conditioner and furnace.

Here's the best part.

IRONCLAD GUARANTEE

I'm so confident that you will save at least 25% on your utility bills (I'm projecting more like 30% to 50%) that I will pay you Double The Difference if you don't, the first year.

There is no way you can lose. If these deluxe systems were not among the best on the market, I couldn't afford to make such a promise.

HERE'S HOW

Just call Carol at 561-9440 anytime and he will set up an appointment for your FREE survey. A design engineer will come and measure your home (and determine the availability of the proper size) and explain this new fantastic financing plan that I have created.

Don't forget, I only have 39 matched systems in four sizes. When they are gone this remarkable offer ends also.

NO OBLIGATION

Even after we come out and explain this installation and the finance plan, there is no obligation. If you decide you don't want to take advantage of the spectacular offer - that's okay. I will give you a surprise gift worth $50 because you are kind enough to read this letter and give me a chance to solve my problem. I want you to think good of claire's Inc. even if you don't buy.

Give me a call now at 561-9440. Thank you for reading this rather long letter. I hope you will profit greatly because of it.

For Greater Comfort,

Tim Claire
Owner

P.S.: Six months from now, this will probably be the most appreciated opportunity ever extended to homeowners in the Permian Basin. Every one of the 39 proud owners will have an unfair advantage over the utility company.

P.P.S.: Don't forget, if your air conditioner and furnace is over 10 years old, a rewarding $50 surprise gift awaits you. And there is no obligation.

Goskowicz sets Olympic Festival records with speed skating wins

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — When Tony Goskowicz gets on the ice at the U.S. Olympic Festival, everyone else is skating for second place.

Goskowicz, a 17-year-old from New Berlin, Wis., picked up Saturday where he left off a year ago, setting festival records in winning the 1,500-meter and 500-meter speed skating titles.

Last year, Goskowicz won gold medals in the 500, 1,000, 1,500, 3,000 and the 5,000 relay. His haul Saturday gives him nine career festival gold medals, more than any other speed skater.

His time Saturday in the 1,500 was 2 minutes, 26.03 seconds, nearly six seconds faster than the mark he set in the 1993 festival. He skated the 500 in 44.43, again breaking one of his own records.

"I wanted to repeat last year's feat," Goskowicz said. "I wasn't going out to break my record (in the 1,500). I was just trying to win."

Another skater accustomed to winning is roller skater Dante Muse of West Des Moines, Iowa, the festival's leader in overall medals and gold medals. He won the 1,000 quad race Saturday to raise is career totals to 35 and 23, respectively.

"That's a very good start," said Muse, who had no golds last year and only one in 1993. "It is certainly better than starting with a loss. That race was probably the hardest I'll have after not being real successful the past two years."

There were 20 sports on the schedule during the first full day of festival competition, which saw two U.S. boxing champions get upset.

Middleweight Shane Swartz of Fort Collins, Colo., the two-time festival defending champion, lost a 12-9 decision to Dana Rucker of Baltimore. Rucker had lost in the semifinals of the U.S. Championships earlier this year.

"I kept telling myself he was the weakest of us four (in the festival), but he's here for a reason," Swartz said. "I didn't overlook him, but I didn't think he was the best representative."

In an action-filled super heavyweight fight, 18-year-old Thomas Martin of Miami upset Lawrence Clay-bey of Hartford, Conn., 34-25.

"He caught me with some pretty good shots, but nothing that would have sent me down," said Martin, who had lost his first-round fight at the U.S. Championships. "I felt I could have gotten more punches in toe-to-toe because I knew I was quicker."

At the diving pool in Colorado Springs, veterans Kent Ferguson and Reyne Borup came away with gold medals.

Ferguson, 32, of Miami Beach, Fla., scored 719.52 points on the 3-meter springboard to hold off Mark Bradshaw of Columbus, Ohio who had 709.47. Scott Donie of Miami was third with 677.67.

"All of us were on today," said Ferguson, a 1992 Olympian. "This was a top-notch competiton. It's nice to have judges who are free with their scoring and this is a big step on my road to getting back to the Olympics."

The 28-year-old Borup, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., scored 278.10 to win the 1-meter springboard gold. Vanessa Thelin of Provo, Utah, was second with 272.91 and Dana Kozimor of Ann Arbor, Mich., had 264.09.

On a day when many had a tough time staying upright, 15-year-old Angela Nikodinov moved past the favorites and into the lead of the ladies figure skating competition.

The teen-ager from San Pedro, Calif., skated a clean program to lead after the short program. Only three of the eight competitors got through their routines without falling or stumbling.

"I was pretty confident," said Nikodinov, who was fifth at this year's junior nationals. "I was just hoping to skate well. I didn't know how it would end up."

The two favorites in the ladies figure skating were Sydne Vogel of Anchorage, Alaska, and Brittney McConn of Marietta, Ga.

Vogel, who won the junior national championship this year, stumbled on her first jump and came out of another. She was fifth heading into Sunday's long program.

McConn finished the short program in second place. She was expected to do well after finishing third at junior nationals and then winning the Gardena Spring Trophy, an international competition in Italy.

The first medals of the festival went to two local cyclists. Jennifer Milligan of Lafayette, Colo., and Jamie Kruse of Pueblo, Colo., held hands as they crossed the finish line in the women's road race a minute-and-a-half ahead of the pack.

Alliance offered persuasive case

Members of MOTRAN (Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance) detailed their final case for a proposed extension of Interstate 27 through the Midland-Odessa area at a meeting of the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) and HDR Engineering Inc. in Lubbock on Thursday. Without a doubt their presentation was the strongest made for what could be a major new trade corridor.

It's obvious the individuals serving the alliance, which is chaired by Charles Perry, have done their homework. Their presentation was logical, informative and persuasive for the interstate being extended southward along a course that would go through Lubbock, between Midland and Odessa and eventually connect with Interstate 10 south of McCamey. From there it would proceed to the border with Mexico and into that country on a route that would terminate at Topolobampo on Mexico's Pacific coast.

The course makes sense. State Rep. Tom Craddick, a Midland Republican, noted that the route through Midland and Odessa provides the shortest course into Mexico of the three being studied. Besides that, it would be the least expensive route to build, provide the only access to West Mexico and billions of dollars in trade, as well as access to an international airport and three interstate highways.

The fact that proponents of the other two proposed routes — which would go through either Big Spring or Sweetwater to connect with San Angelo and then continue on southward into Mexico — argued bitterly against the route through Midland and Odessa rather than arguing favorably for their own route is understandable. They have much less to offer than the Midland and Odessa route, so it's easier to be against the most logical route than for their own.

La Entrada al Pacifico, as the Midland-Odessa route is called, truly is the best of the proposed routes for the I-27 extension and if chosen will benefit all of West Texas — including San Angelo, Big Spring and Sweetwater — not just Midland and Odessa.

Cleaning up 'the net' will allow inspiration

Pornography has slithered into various corners of the commercial computer networks, and lawmakers, parents and teachers face a difficult task in keeping it away from youngsters.

The U.S. Senate has weighed in with a bill that would heavily penalize the transmission of sexually explicit words and images to minors. The motive is laudable, but the measure overreaches. By criminalizing the communication of "any indecent comment, request, suggestion, proposal, image, or other communication which is available to any person under 18 years of age," the bill almost surely is so broad and general as to run afoul of constitutional free-speech guarantees.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, an Internet enthusiast, rejects the Senate's approach. His chamber is crafting a bill to allow commercial services like America Online greater leeway to screen out objectionable items in the flow of information reaching customers. That holds promise.

Some software providers are joining in, with programs that allow teachers or parents to block access to material associated with certain key words or phrases, like "porn." A number of schools have found these programs useful.

Methods of getting at this problem will evolve as the public's grasp of the new technology develops. A lot of the best thinking should go on among parents. We hope they are forming user groups and comparing notes on ways to use computers to foster healthy interests in kids. Computers are opening frontiers of communication that may defy governmental policing.

And it shouldn't be forgotten that for every dirty corner on the net, there can be others where constructive, maybe even inspiring, exchanges of thought occur.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, July 23, the 204th day of 1995. There are 161 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on July 23, 1945, French Marshal Henri Petain, who had headed the Vichy government during World War II, went on trial, charged with treason. (He was condemned to death, but his sentence was commuted. On this date in 1951, Petain died in prison.)

On this date:

In 1829, William Austin Burt of Mount Vernon, Mich., received a patent for his "typographer" — a forerunner of the typewriter.

In 1885, Ulysses S. Grant, the 18th president of the United States, died in Mount McGregor, N.Y., at age 63.

In 1886, New York saloonkeeper Steve Brodie claimed to have made a daredevil plunge from the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River.

In 1892, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia was born.

In 1904, by some accounts, the ice cream cone was invented by Charles E. Menches during the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis.

In 1914, Austria-Hungary issued an ultimatum to Serbia following the killing of Archduke Francis Ferdinand by a Serb assassin; the dispute led to World War I.

In 1952, Egyptian military officers led by Gamal Abdel Nasser overthrew King Farouk I.

In 1956, Britain's Queen Elizabeth II named the first four women to peerage in the House of Lords.

Hair could prove MacDonald's innocence

WASHINGTON — New evidence is casting fresh light on a 25-year-old murder case that once held the country's attention like today's trials of O.J. Simpson and Susan Smith.

Anderson

Jeffrey MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor, is serving three consecutive life sentences for the 1970 slayings of his pregnant wife and two young children in North Carolina. He was convicted in 1979 after a multiyear Justice Department probe and a sensational trial featuring allegations of drug abuse and cult activity.

The initial investigation was done by the Army, which spent several months looking into the matter before dropping the charges. At the time, we reported that the Army investigation was riddled with mistakes, as investigators carelessly destroyed clues at the murder scene and ignored other evidence that supported MacDonald's claims of innocence.

Thinking the ordeal was behind him, MacDonald left North Carolina and started a new life for himself as a doctor in California. But the Justice Department pressed on for nine years before winning a new trial, in which MacDonald was finally convicted.

MacDonald still maintains his innocence, claiming the murders were carried out by members of a mysterious North Carolina cult, who broke into his house intending to steal prescription drugs. Now, 16 years after MacDonald was sent to prison, his lawyers believe they have uncovered evidence that proves his case — evidence they claim was deliberately withheld by the Justice Department during his trial.

Last week they pleaded their case in a closed-door meeting with Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. It is not clear yet whether the evidence will result in a new trial or if Congress will take any action in the matter.

We've obtained a copy of the most dramatic piece of new evidence — notes from the Army lab technicians who tested two sets of hair fibers found at the murder scene. The light-brown hair fibers were found under the fingernails of the children, and a similar sample was found in the left hand of MacDonald's wife, Colette. According to the test results, neither of the hair samples match MacDonald's hair.

The hair fibers may belong to Helena Stoeckley, a member of the shadowy cult that MacDonald believes is behind the murders. Stoeckley admitted to us in 1982 that she was involved in the murders, claiming that she was in MacDonald's apartment on the night of the murders along with several other cult members. Stoeckley had light brown hair, and she also fits a description MacDonald gave of the intruders shortly after the murders.

Stoeckley feigned ignorance at the trial, saying that she couldn't remember where she was or what she was doing on the night of the murders. She later told us that she did this out of fear of being prosecuted herself, and because she was physically intimidated by other cult members who told her to "keep her mouth shut."

Stoeckley's confession does MacDonald little good, however. Just a few months after her interview with us, in January 1983, Stoeckley was found dead in a South Carolina apartment where she had been hiding since the trial. Shortly before her death, Stoeckley told us she had been visited by two men, one of whom identified himself as an FBI agent, who told her to stop cooperating with MacDonald's lawyers. The FBI confirmed that the visit took place, but refused to discuss it. While state police dismissed the possibility of foul play in Stoeckley's death, MacDonald's allies suspect that she was murdered by cult members.

"The Army and the government have continually lied about what they knew about in this case," said journalist Jerry Allen Potter, who along with Fred Bost has spent more than a decade combing the details of MacDonald's case.

Under pressure from journalists and Capitol Hill, the Justice Department finally released much of its evidence in the MacDonald case in 1983. More than a decade later, many of those documents make up the basis for a new book, "Fatal Justice," by Potter and Bost.

At the very least, the new evidence shows that MacDonald did not receive a fair trial. However, the courts have repeatedly denied the doctor's appeals for a new trial.

'Shrunk' snuck in, now seems here to stay

"Trivialize had its moment in the vogue-verb sun," I wrote, "until the usage of this older verb shrunk to the very occasional."

Safire

Louis Jay Herman, noted Gotcha! Gangster, objected: "Permit me to join the Uofallpeople Club, to upbraid you for shrunk. All usage manuals consider shrank the preferred or exclusive past tense of shrink, shrunk being the past participle." Kerry Wood of Palo Alto, Calif., adds: "I never thunk you'd have done such a thing."

For the irregular verbs shrink and sink, the simple past tense is "He shrank the material and sank the boat." The past participle is the form of the verb used in the present perfect tense, which shows action completed at the time of speaking: "He has shrunk and has sunk." Thus, the natural progression is shrink-shrank-shrunk, sink-sank-sunk.

At an embarrassing moment for the prosecution in the O.J. Simpson trial, Christopher Darden gulped, "The gloves appear to have shrank somewhat." Incorrect; the past participle is shrunk or shrunken.

Shrink-shrank-shrunk is orderly enough; why, then, did Iofallpeople sink into using shrunk as the past tense? Because Walt Disney got to me, I guess: the 1989 movie "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids" did to shrank what Winston cigarettes did to as: pushed usage in the direction of what people were casually saying rather than what they were carefully writing. Herman dutifully objected to one and all about that Disney title (adding a note of praise for the well-placed comma).

In the past-tense dodge, usage is all. The learner of English, having mastered sink-sank-sunk and begin-began-begun and drink-drank-drunk, would assume fling-flang-flung and swing-swang-swung. But there ain't no such animal as swang or flang, except in some far-out dialect; in those and other cases, the past tense hops over the expected word to the past participle.

"Shrunk is much less common as a past tense than shrank," notes Fred Mish of Merriam-Webster, "but sunk has somewhat greater frequency of occurrence in relation to sank. These occurrences can be unsettling at times. A local sportswriter here likes to say of high-school athletes that they 'shined in the contest' instead of 'shone.' "

In the face of the language's weakness of grammatical discipline, what's a poor usagist to do? Be a stiff. Make the new form work for its acceptance. Stick with shrank in the simple past, at least until the movie and its offspring — like the Heritage Foundation's "Honey, I Shrunk the Tax Base!" — fade from memory, even if it snuck up on us and makes us feel like something the cat dragged (not drug) in.

Snuck up? "How did snuck ever sneak in?" asks Doris Asmundsson, professor emerita of English at Queensborough Community College, in New York. (So that's the feminine of emeritus.) "Words like creak, critique, eke, freak, leak and tweak do not, in the past tense, become cruck, crituck, uck, fruck, luck and twuck. Why then snuck? Eventually a sneaker might turn into a snucker."

Evidently Charles M. Schulz, the cartoonist of "Peanuts," agrees; Rerun says to Charlie Brown, "If you sneaked up behind him, you could hit him with a stick." This is formal English.

On the ABC sitcom "Step by Step," however, a teen-ager tells her parents: "I know I shouldn't have snuck out."

Here's a perfect example of a usage that has crept (informally creeped) up on us. "He grubbed ten dollars from de bums and den snuck home" is the first print use cited in the CD-ROM OED, in an 1887 edition of The New Orleans Lantern. The novelist James T. Farrell used it as the past participle in the first part of his Studs Lonigan trilogy, the 1932 "Young Lonigan": "They had all snuck in and were having a good time, making trouble."

The Random House Webster's notes this in accepting the term as a standard variant: "Snuck occurs frequently in fiction, in journalism and on radio and television, whereas sneaked is more likely in highly formal or belletristic writing."

John Algeo of American Speech goes further: "Snuck is now educated, standard use; sneaked is rare." He notes that sneak has mysterious origins; it first appears in Shakespeare's "Henry IV, Part 1": "A poor unminded outlaw sneaking home." Algeo notes that the Old English verb snican meant "to crawl," but that word would have become snike, not sneak, in Modern English; curiously, the past tense of snican would have become snuck.

Thus, we should hold off a few years before caving in to shrunk as a simple past tense; I'm sorry, it snuck up on me.

Bombs for Bosnia won't bring end to its war

In the name of Heaven, where is the plan for peace? Where is the document that presents the best, calmest, fairest proposals of the West to all sides in Bosnia and promises support only to those who accept it after decent negotiation? There is no document.

Where is the list of goals that President Clinton has presented to the American people to explain why he is now planning to send U.S. bombers to pound Bosnian Serbs? There is no list.

Bombing is war. So where is the declaration that Clinton and Republicans once agreed should precede U.S. involvement in war — on what conditions we will get in, how and when we will get out? No declaration.

Clinton, drawn deeper into trouble by the evasions and bluffs of the latter-day hawks in his administration, raises his head now only to support the heavy bombing he rejected not long ago.

The administration knows bombing will not bring peace.The decision is being taken desperately to avoid what would be worse — the French demand for U.S. helicopters to bring in more troops, known in the Pentagon as Dienbienphu West.

Bombing is supposed to save Clinton's credibility. Of all the reasons for killing people, trying to save a politician's lost credibility is the worst, morally and pragmatically.

Sen. Robert Dole's plan is to arm the Bosnian Muslims so they can fight longer and harder. If he is elected president, even as he campaigns, how long will he be able to say this is all I have to offer — more weapons to keep the war going, with no plan to end it?

Unless Western occupation troops are sent in, one day the bombing will end. Then the Bosnian Serbs will resume the war, exactly as did people who rose from bombardment from the Battle of Britain to the evacuation of Saigon.

The Bosnians themselves have no real peace plans. In 1991 the Muslims and Croats of the area of Yugoslavia known as Bosnia-Herzegovina declared the independence of a Bosnian state, the first in history.

They knew that Bosnian Serbian Christians would fight to the death against being absorbed into a new nation they considered Muslim-ruled. So ever since, the new Bosnian government worked to have the world protect its control of Bosnia.

As for the Serbs, driving Muslim women and children out of their homes is destroying their own substantial case for self-determination.

Bosnia is not the Holocaust, as supporters of the Muslims often say. The Jews of Europe were hardly trying to force the Germans into a new nation under their control, and the Bosnian Serbs are not hunting down and incinerating all Muslims of the world. Ethnic cleansing is vicious enough without the Holocaust analogy. And unlike the specific lines of Bosnian partition, it creates a human horror from which the West should not walk away.

Henry Kissinger spent years beating around the world under the Nixon presidency, trying to negotiate a Vietnam peace — proposals, timetables, offers, emissaries, codes, back channels. For these efforts Kissinger and Nixon received only hatred from some of the same American opponents of the Vietnam War who now support U.S. military intervention in Bosnia. They say nothing of the scandal that the Clinton administration helped kill the workable Vance-Owen peace plan for Bosnia and has come up with nothing of its own.

The ingredients of a feasible plan are not mysterious. Bosnian Serbs would have to agree to the return or indemnification of Muslims driven from their homes. The partition would have to give the Serbs not the 70 percent their conquests won for them but more than they had before the war.

But to have a prayer of acceptance by the Bosnian Serbs the plan would have to be more than a map. It would have to give their piece of Bosnia the right to federate with Serbia — as the Bosnian Muslims and Croats have with Croatia. The Bosnian Serbs might even rejoin Serbia someday.

So the West and Bosnian Muslims would have to admit they were wrong to try to force their new Bosnia down the throats of Bosnian Serb Christians.

If admitting errors to gain peace damages the "credibility" of Western diplomats and politicians, that seems a bearable price for ending a war that should never have started. Can't some brave people in Washington tell that to Clinton? Or Dole?

Vote should have been on front page

It appears the print media is suppressing the "hot" news in the Reporter-Telegram of July 20. The following should have been front-page headlines:

"Legislators vote to block Mexico Bailout — In a striking rebuke of President Clinton and congressional leaders of both parties, the House voted Wednesday to block millions of dollars in further U.S. loans to bail out the ailing Mexican economy.

"By a vote of 245-183, lawmakers approved a provision by Rep. Bernard Sanders of Vermont, Congress' lone independent, which would halt U.S. support for the peso effective Oct. 1. The provision was added to a spending bill for the Treasury, Postal Service and other agencies for the coming fiscal year, which was approved by 216-211.

"Of the $20 billion Clinton put into the exchange stabilization fund in January with support from Congress' bipartisan leaders, $21.5 billion has been dispensed so far. The House measure would not affect the money already distributed."

Instead of bold front-page news, this was half way down "Nation in Brief" on page 5A!

South side must get investors' money

In response to Norita Livergood's letter on June 25, I agree with her. I also would like to see more growth on I-20. But let's be realistic. Unless investors are willing to invest their money on the south side there is nothing the city or county can do. The newer schools are being built in the north part of Midland, and that's where the growth is going. People like to be near a school that the southwest part of Midland is not fortunate enough to have.

As for the county not being able to provide Livergood with a paved road all around her property, she is one of the lucky persons in the county where she can leave her house to go into town and never have to drive on a dirt road. Her house faces a new paved road that was upgraded this year.

The road in front of my business did receive a seal coating this year, but it was a paved road when we built our building more than 20 years ago.

Mrs. Richardson's letter on July 11 complaining about the amount of people fixing a pothole was not correct. What she observed were the men spreading gravel where the spreader did not cover when Midkiff was being resealed.

The patching crew consists of one county employee and two inmates, which I thank Sheriff Gary Painter for allowing the road department the privilege of using to keep our costs down.

Our budget for the road department is funded by the license plate fee, not ad valorem taxes.

I think the court feels that by funding the sheriff with a budget of over $6 million, it should be sufficient for a county our size. We now fund 40 cars, and the cars he wanted funded were 10 cars he either acquired from drug seizures or bought with seizure monies. They were not bought with county funds. Therefore a district judge said the sheriff could operate as long as he had the funds.

In order for Midland County to fund the sheriff with what he wants and not raise taxes, we would have to take funds from other departments. We all just have to live with what we have and not what we want.

Supporters give quality testimony

As a participating member of the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTRAN), I was elated by the positive and professional approach taken by area supporters of MOTRAN who, through close to midnight, provided quality testimony before the Texas Department of Transportation in a July 18 hearing held in Lubbock.

Regretfully, some representatives of both Big Spring and San Angelo elected to take a negative approach in testifying why the freeway project (I-27 extension) should not pass near Midland and Odessa, instead of focusing on those positive features of their respective areas in support of the two other corridors proposed. One elected official from San Angelo went so far as to label both Midland and Odessa as wilting away in the wastelands of West Texas (paraphrase), which are of little value to freeway corridor determination when compared to the water-enriched lands of San Angelo!

It has never been the intent or strategy of the MOTRAN project to engage in negative verbal discourse with our competitors over the "Best Buy" aspects of the I-27 freeway extension. We feel that a positive attitude is the best and smartest approach to providing both truth and sincerity to the merits we believe beneficial for the western corridor to be the acceptable route for a major north-south freeway, hopefully lending a new and modern connection to the industrial cities of Old Mexico.

Perhaps, however, it is timely to remind our Big Spring and San Angelo friends that our so-called wastelands are those same lands that contain the vast amount of mineral resources that many businesses in these two cities thrive upon. Certainly with all of the positive aspects these cities offer for improved highway systems, they should not have to lower themselves to bashing the Midland/Odessa-area MOTRAN effort.

Landscaping is federally funded

H.C. McElyea's letter of July 2 pointed out the expense and future maintenance of the landscaping being installed on the Loop 250 expansion. I also question the safety of the vertical block walls. A head-on collision into those vertical walls would be disastrous.

I called the local Texas Department of Highways and guess where the funding is coming from to pay for the expensive, high maintenance and unsafe landscaping? Well, it should be of no surprise that it is coming from the federal government, and within metro areas the beautification expense is permitted and even encouraged.

The good bureaucrats of the Texas Department of Highways, of course, would not be doing their job unless they maximized what was coming from the federal program. I think the landscaping is nice but should we be borrowing money for expensive, high maintenance and unsafe items?

This program and the many others like it are why federal spending is out of control. All the state and local pigs are at the federal trough. Yes, we do need Loop 250 but it should be funded locally, not from the federal government. How many people were required on the state and local payroll to get the consultant's opinions, the traffic study and whatever else was needed to fill out the forms to get those funds?

Another local example of wasteful spending is the new airport terminal. Because of federal funding and federal permitted user fees the local taxpayer didn't even get to vote on it.

What is needed is the elimination of all federal funds being handed out for local projects.

Anti-terrorist bill could destroy rights

In response to your revisionist, America-First basher in "Speaking Out" (Opinion, July 9), as a claimant to that title, I don't recall having read any discussion on the recently passed Omnibus Anti-Terrorist Bill, supported by both Sens. Gramm and Hutchison. This is a bill even the ACLU vigorously protested as being the vehicle to destroy the liberties we've come to accept as our Bill of Rights.

A brother, killed during World War II, left me these haunting last words, "Are you as a taxpayer any less guilty than I, the pilot, ordered to bomb civilian targets?"

Revisionist historians, with unassailable research, have proved that this type of bombing was done to terrorize civilian populations of both Germany and Japan, even as their governments sued for peace.

Is this also happening to Americans? Were the Ruby Ridge, Waco and Oklahoma holocausts contrived to terrorize Americans into believing they have absolutely no rights to question our government's actions?

Samuel Blumenthal's recent epitaph for deceased Sen. William. J. Fulbright cynically explains our president's worshipful adherence to Fulbright's internationalism as being a constant education, when our president acted as a worshipful assistant and driver for the senator who introduced the legislation establishing the United Nations.

You might be interested in knowing that Bertrand Russell, one of six atheists selected by UNESCO, the propaganda mechanism for the United Nations, to rewrite the history of the world, discusses in his "Impact on Science" (1958) the power and importance of psychological manipulation. He says, ". . . Although this science will be diligently studied, it will be rigidly confined to the governing class ... when the technique has been perfected every government that has been in charge of education for a generation will be able to control its subjects without the need of armies or policemen..."

How interesting! Texas educators have just adopted the Federal Goals 2000. Welcome to the New World Order.

Homosexuality is sinful, Bible says

As a Reformed Presbyterian pastor, I was appalled to see the statement in your paper on July 8, that "Presbyterian philosophy holds that homosexuality is not a sin." While, sad to say, this may be the position of some large Presbyterian bodies who have, for practical purposes, rejected the Bible as God's word, it cannot be characterized as the truth of "Presbyterian philosophy," either historically or in Presbyterian churches today who hold to God's Word. The Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America still holds that the entire Bible is God's word, inerrant and authoritative in all that it says. On the question of homosexuality, the Bible clearly states that this is a sinful action for anyone involved in it.

In Romans 1: 26-27 and 32, God says, "For even their women exchanged the natural use for what is against nature. Likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust for one another, men with men, committing what is shameful, and receiving in themselves the penalty of their error which was due ... who, knowing the righteous judgment of God, that those who practice such things are worthy of death, not only do the same but also approve of those who practice them."

Can the sin of homosexuality be forgiven by God? Certainly! Just as any other sin can and will be forgiven when an individual receives the grace of God by turning from that sin in repentance and to Jesus Christ with true saving faith. But to think homosexuality is just another alternative lifestyle that can be practiced freely and openly without consequences is contrary to the plain teachings of the Scriptures. We, in the Reformed Presbyterian Church, do not believe we are better than others, but we do take God's Word seriously, and we are concerned for the souls of men and women who are in great jeopardy.

Thank you for listening.

UT's Phillips is 'student-athlete'

As a journalist who has written about college football for more than 20 years, I am always impressed when I meet a man who honors the old-fashioned "student-athlete" ideal. The player who excels on the football field AND earns an undergraduate degree in four short years is the exception in the 1990s, not the rule.

Such a player is Midland's own Joe T. Phillips II.

On the field, Phillips overcame a serious knee injury in 1993 and established himself as one of the most versatile offensive linemen on the University of Texas Longhorns football team — starting two seasons, in 1993 and 1994. Academically, Phillips earned a bachelor of science degree in speech communications at UT in 1995. Along the way, he earned a spot on the Southwest Conference Commissioner's Honor Roll and placed on the University of Texas Athletic Director's Honor Roll in the fall semester of 1994.

Although Phillips had the option to play football for a fifth season at UT — he "redshirted" as a freshman in 1991 — he chose instead to return to Midland and now works in sales for Phillips Casing & Tubing.

In the recent issue of Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine, I wrote that the Longhorns will miss Phillips this season. Unfortunately, I also wrote — erroneously — that Phillips had left UT without earning his degree. I apologize to Phillips, his family and his friends for the mistake.

Report contradicts overload claims

The U.S. Department of Justice released a report in April that contradicts claims that tort filings are overloading state courts.

The report, titled "Tort Cases in Large Counties," examines tort cases filed in the nation's 75 most populous counties. These account for half of the tort caseload in the United States. The study found that tort filings in the state courts remained stable for six years between 1986 and 1992, then fell slightly in 1993. In federal courts, the numbers stayed constant between 1984 and 1993.

Among conclusions reached in the recently completed Department of Justice study were the following:

1. Automobile and premises liability suits represented 77 percent (60 percent and 17 percent, respectively) of the 378,000 tort cases completed in the study of the state courts during the fiscal year 1992. Medical malpractice and products liability suits accounted for just 8 percent (5 percent and 3 percent, respectively) of these cases.

2. The average tort case took a little more than 19 months to complete. Half the tort cases were disposed of during 14 months. In approximately 25 percent of these cases, the defendant did not file an answer. Most of these uncontested cases ended in settlement agreements.

3. Trial verdicts accounted for just 3 percent of all tort cases disposed, while settlements accounted for 74 percent.

4. 7 percent of medical negligence claims were concluded by a trial. In these, the defendants won three of four cases. In products liability, only 3 percent reached a trial verdict. Defendants won approximately 50 percent of these cases.

This data corroborates findings by the National Center for State Courts.

So, I ask you, where is the litigation crisis, and who is behind that lie?

Right wing shouldn't support Norwood

I supported Teresa Clingman in the last election for Midland County judge because I felt she was a fiscal conservative.

Jeff Norwood who defeated Clingman now appears to be voting as a fiscal liberal by his actions on the sheriff's budget request.

I would hope that Ernie Angelo and the Midland religious-right groups, who played a major role in the election of Norwood, would withdraw their support of him if he continues to vote in this manner.

ANTHONY LEWIS

Western forces must fight Serbian aggressors

Two days after the fall of Srebrenica, Gen. Philippe Morillon, a member of the French General Staff, said: "We have to declare war on Gen. Mladic or get out." Ratko Mladic is the commander of Bosnian Serb forces, the architect of the assault on Srebrenica and the ethnic cleansing that followed.

Morillon's words pithily summed up one lesson of Bosnia for the Western alliance: To intervene in a conflict and pretend there is no difference between the aggressors and the victims is not only dishonorable but ineffectual.

For three years now Britain, France and the United States — acting through the United Nations — have been doing just that: pretending. The U.N. Protection Force proclaimed its neutrality between the Serbs and their Bosnian victims even while it said it was protecting "safe areas" from Serbian attack.

To carry on the pretense, various UNPROFOR officers and U.N. officials closed their eyes to horrifying brutalities carried out by Mladic's forces. The justification was that Mladic and the political leader of the Bosnian Serbs, Radovan Karadzic, would then be nice and let relief convoys through. They often did promise to do so, but they seldom kept the promises.

The Western officers and envoys who dealt with the Bosnian Serb leaders believed, or at any rate acted on the premise, that they were ultimately rational men open to bargaining. But in fact they are fanatics, committed to killing and raping and torturing other human beings because they are of a different religion.

Only one thing moves Karadzic and Mladic: the credible threat of force. When they thought UNPROFOR might call in meaningful air strikes, they stopped sniping at children in Sarajevo. Now, with UNPROFOR's credibility gone, they have tightened the noose on the capital.

You can't do business with Hitler. So the world learned when Neville Chamberlain boasted that cringing to Adolf Hitler at Munich in 1938 had brought "peace in our time." To Hitler, diplomacy was just an interlude on the way to military victory.

Similarly in Bosnia, the United States and the West Europeans came up with a proposal to settle the conflict by giving the Serbs 49 percent of the country. An international Contact Group pressed the idea. But the Serbs already had 70 percent, and they thought they could keep at least that by force of arms — that and perhaps Sarajevo, too.

Those are some of the illusions that have led the West to humiliation in Bosnia. Or perhaps it would be better to say self-deceptions. No one of ordinary intelligence could have looked at what was happening and believed the premises on which Western capitals and UNPROFOR were operating.

In the last week Mladic and Karadzic have made their policy, and their character, clearer than ever. When decent behavior at Srebrenica might actually have helped them politically, they turned their men loose to rape and kill. But even then British officials said UNPROFOR should stick with its position of neutrality.

The Western failure in Bosnia traces back to the original decision, made by President Bush in 1991, not to resist Serbian aggression in the former Yugoslavia. With Margaret Thatcher gone from Downing Street, the British and others were happy to agree. So that they would not look altogether indifferent to the horror, the allies came up with the idea of neutral humanitarian relief.

More than a year ago Alain Juppe said at a Washington dinner that the humanitarian policy had not worked, that it would have been better for the West to have acted resolutely against Serbian aggression from the start. Juppe was France's foreign minister then; now he is prime minister in the new government of President Jacques Chirac.

Chirac is the only Western leader not tainted by the past failures of courage and wisdom in Bosnia. So he commanded attention when he warned on Bastille Day that the Western democracies were behaving there as Chamberlain and Edouard Daladier of France did at Munich.

The choice, as Morillon said, is for the West to fight the aggressors in Bosnia or pull UNPROFOR out. The West has the means to act effectively, if it stops pretending. NATO's overwhelming air power, for one, has scarcely been used; Mladic's headquarters is a safe area. It is a question of will.

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Stolen loot

UNIVERSAL CITY (AP) — It was enough to shake a thief's faith in human decency.

A trailer filled with $200,000 in stolen stereo equipment was looted behind an Interstate 10 truck stop, police in this San Antonio suburb said.

Investigators said a suspected theft ring stole the trailer, filled with the home stereo systems, from a San Antonio storage lot on May 2.

The thieves concealed the trailer in a brushy area behind the truck stop at Interstate 10 and Farm Road 1518, about 15 miles east of San Antonio.

The thieves took items from the trailer in periodic visits, selling the equipment to pawn shops, on the street or for drugs, said Universal City police Lt. Charles Dewey said.

However, word of the treasure quickly spread until the stash was being discussed even by truckers over their citizens-band radios, Dewey said.

Police were alerted to the situation while investigating an unrelated case, by which time the equipment was gone.

At least one person is being sought in the initial heist, while at least three are being sought in the subsequent looting, said Christine Lawlen, a Universal City detective.

Annual sealcoat project to begin

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midland drivers beware. The city's annual roadway sealcoat project — which involves pouring a layer of asphalt and covering it with gravel — is slated to begin this week in northcentral Midland.

The area of roadways slated for sealcoating is situated north of Golf Course Road between Midkiff Road and A Street. Each year approximately one-sixth of the city — on a rotating basis — is targeted for the work.

In addition to the northcentral area, Midkiff Road from Wall Avenue to Interstate 20, and Grassland Estates — left over from last year's schedule — will be sealcoated this summer.

"It could take five to six weeks, hopefully four weeks but it depends on the weather," said Harvey Hansen, director of engineering for the city.

Sealcoating consists of putting down hot asphalt at a rate of two-fifths of a gallon per square yard followed by a covering of about three-eighths of an inch of aggregate.

■ Jose Chavez refused to let his daughter's murderer go unpunished. He tracked Rogelio Mireles Jr. into Mexico, then followed legal procedure to bring him back to the United States for trial.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Sorrow can do a lot of things to a person. But Jose Chavez has channeled that emotion and is trying to make the best of an awful situation.

On Dec. 13, 1993, Chavez's 18-year-old daughter, Catalina "Cathy" Chavez, was gunned down by her estranged common-law husband.

She was killed in the front room of the Chavez home while her family was in another room.

Her killer fled the country after being released on bond, but Chavez didn't give up on finding him. He spent nine months tracking Rogelio Mireles Jr. and eventually brought the man to justice.

Mireles was convicted in June for the murder of Cathy as well as attempted murder for shooting at Chavez. He received a 99-year sentence for the murder and a 15-year sentence for the attempted murder.

Sitting in the room where his daughter was slain, Chavez recounts the horrible tragedy that changed the lives of his family.

"This is the last time I want to get into this tragedy," Chavez began. "I don't want to keep telling it. It's killing me."

"The story of this tragedy begins with this psychopath," Chavez said describing his daughter's murderer.

Chavez testified at Mireles' trial last month that for a long time he blamed himself for his daughter's death because he encouraged her to talk to her killer.

Chavez said, at the time, he "felt sorry" for his daughter's husband and asked her to talk to him despite her apprehension after she moved out of his home. Cathy left Mireles just five days before he killed her.

"When they started dating I knew something was wrong," Chavez

City roundtable explores juvenile crime solutions

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Boot camps, gang prevention programs, bettering parenting skills and seminars for children and their parents are just some of the ideas a community-wide roundtable is looking at in order to combat increasing juvenile violence and crime.

The Violence Prevention Roundtable was started in the spring as a result of a Midland Introspective needs accessment, according to Margaret Purvis, who helped organize the roundtable.

Midland Introspective was started several years ago by a group of residents from across the community who joined together to find problems in the community that need to be addressed, Ms. Purvis said.

"Juvenile violence was identified during a needs accessment as something that is of concern in this community," Ms. Purvis said.

The roundtable includes members of the Midland Police Department, Midland Independent School District, League of Women Voters, the City of Midland, the Salvation Army and other businesses and organizations.

After meeting once, the roundtable divided into two subcommittees, one to research programs directed at the juveniles and one to research programs directed at the parents.

"We want to find out where the bottom line is with the individuals and parents," Ms. Purvis said. "We want to help the kids and their parents. And, if the parents have done the best they can and the child is still getting into trouble, we want to address that too."

Midland Police Officer Phyllis Spinuzzi, who sits on the committee aimed at juveniles, said the subcommittee is looking at all forms of programs in order to decrease juvenile violence, including boot camps, anger management programs and other preventative programs.

"We are doing research on boot camps right now," Mrs. Spinuzzi said. "I think with the current climate in Midland, residents would be receptive to a boot camp. Residents have pretty much had it with juvenile crime."

Mrs. Spinuzzi said the subcommittee is planning on visiting the juvenile boot camp near Tyler, which was established

American Legion tries to do away with itself, officer says

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Serving in the American Legion by dedicating lives to country, to God and to fellow military veterans is "quite an honor," said J.R. "Hoppy" Hudson, adjutant and service officer of the American Legion's Woods W. Lynch Post 19 in Midland.

The post, chartered in Midland in 1919 — the same year in which the American Legion was founded in Paris, France, and St. Louis, Mo., following World War I — is the second oldest American Legion post in Texas and is celebrating its 76th anniversary this year.

The American Legion is dedicated to God and country, "to preserve the memories and incidents of our associations in the great wars," to bolster its "comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness," and "to promote peace and goodwill on Earth."

A combat plaque in the American Legion Hall depicts soldiers at war and carries this inscription: "Greater love hath no man than this: to lay down his life for his friends."

Veterans who served their country in times of war and other national and international crises are eligible to join the American Legion, which, at 2.7 million members, is the largest veterans organization in the United States.

"What the American Legion is about is to do away with itself," Hudson said. "When there are no more wars, there will be no more veterans and no more American Legion. That would be the ideal situation."

The times and the state of world affairs demonstrate that the ideal is not forthcoming.

The American Legion Post 19, at 490 members, enjoys the fellowship of veterans of World War I, World War II,

Deaths of colleague, relative hurt more than words express

Ott

Up until a week or two ago, I guess you'd have to say I was one of the lucky ones.

Death, at least for the most part, had alluded me.

I am 43 years old, and other than for a couple of grandfathers, one of whom I wasn't particularly close to, and a handful of older friends, most of whom I had gotten to know through my parents, my life has pretty much been free of having to deal with the sadness that invariably surrounds the loss of a loved one.

Now all of that has changed.

Within the past 10 days, I have received two of those dreaded telephone calls: the first informing me that a friend and former newspaper colleague had died and then a few days later, at about 10:30 p.m. on a Tuesday, the other shoe dropped when, upon returning to the house, the message on my answering machine contained the voice of my dad saying, "Gary, I've got bad news. Your Aunt Erline was killed in a car wreck tonight."

That's all it said.

At least that's all I heard. The rest is kind of a blur, though after hitting the "play" button again a few minutes later, I caught some additional details, mainly comments like, "I don't know much, yet," "We'll let you know more tomorrow" and "Funeral arrangements are still being made."

It is now the next morning and I'm still trying to figure out what is going on.

Two deaths, one right after the other. The first one was expected; the second was not.

But both hurt.

Deeply.

I don't say this lightly, but now comes the part I dread almost as much as receiving the bad news in the first place: having to talk to and share my feelings with immediate family members of those who have died.

Some people do that kind of thing quite well. They always seem to know just the right words to use, adding a certain levity to the situation without appearing to be insensitive or disrespectful.

I am not one of those people.

I stammer. I babble. I stutter. And not necessarily in that order.

Maybe it is because I have had so little practice at this sort of thing, but for whatever reason everything I utter inevitably comes across as inadequate, bordering on being downright trite.

Somehow, I feel I should be able to come up with something more meaningful than, "I'm so sorry," or "Please let me know if there is anything at all I can remembers.

He said Cathy moved in with Mireles when she was 15 and Mireles was 16 in August 1990; she had a baby girl by him in September 1991. He said his daughter had left Mireles at least once before, but returned to him. He and other family members testified at the trial that Mireles beat Cathy during their relationship.

He testified that on the night of the murder, Mireles spoke in a "very friendly, calm" manner and pleaded with him to be allowed to talk to Cathy. Chavez said he told him she didn't want to talk to him, but after he continued to plead, Chavez relented and persuaded his daughter to talk to Mireles.

"I guess I felt sorry for him. He was talking to me so friendly ... I convinced her," Chavez said. "I don't know if it's part my fault. I shouldn't have convinced Cathy."

He said he left the two alone at the front door of his home so they could talk privately when he heard gunshots and said, "Oh, my daughter."

He said he wanted to protect his wife and son, who were in other parts of the house, and said when he saw his daughter on the floor he called to his wife to stay where she was and call 911.

"I didn't want my wife to see my daughter like that," he said.

Chavez said he knew his daughter was dead when he saw her laying on the floor with blood everywhere. He said he jumped over her body in an attempt to catch Mireles, but had to dive to the ground when he saw Mireles turn and fire a gun at him.

"I tried to catch this man. He was three to four steps away when he turned and fired. I couldn't catch him because he was going to kill me in my front yard," Chavez said.

He said he watched Mireles flee in his pickup.

"I shouldn't have opened the door for this man," Chavez said.

Cathy had been shot three times, once in the chest with the bullet exiting her arm, another in the back of the head with the bullet lodging in her brain and a third time in the side of the head with the bullet going all the way through it.

Mireles fled the scene, but turned himself in three days later. After a bond-reduction hearing, he was released March 7, 1994, on special conditions, which included wearing an electronic monitoring device.

Mireles removed the device from his leg and fled a few weeks later on March 30.

"The sheriff called me on March 30 and said he took the monitor off. He said to watch out. I knew he was going to escape."

He said the family couldn't sleep that night or the next day wondering if Mireles would return and try to harm them.

Then on Friday, April 1, 1994, Mireles called Chavez.

"He laughed at me and said he would come back after me. But, I told him, 'It don't matter where you are, I'm gonna get you'.

"I was upset at the system," for allowing Mireles to escape, he said.

The distraught father was frustrated and diappointed that law enforcement couldn't find Mireles.

Within six weeks after that phone call, Chavez traced its origin and talked to a woman who had been hiding Mireles.

He said he tracked Mireles' path all across West Texas and was eventually led to where Mireles was located in Mexico.

"I spent nine months investigating and lots of money," Chavez said.

From interviewing people to getting as many legal documents as he could, Chavez said he used his own "strategy and tricks" to get the information he wanted: the information that would lead him to where Mireles was hiding.

Chavez said he has "spies" everywhere who helped him gather his information.

Instead of handling the situation like the Old West, Chavez went through all the legal procedures of bringing Mireles back to the states for a trial.

Mireles eventually was apprehended in January and returned to Midland County.

He said it took three weeks after locating Mireles to go through all of the legal technicalities to get Mireles returned to Midland County.

Chavez spoke appreciatively of the Midland County Sheriff's office, Mexican consul and the FBI, especially Special Agent Tony Henry, in assisting him with negotiating to get Mireles out of Mexico and back into the U.S. legal system.

Chavez said he was inspired to find Mireles when he heard rumors that Mireles shot Cathy in self-defense because Chavez was threatening him with a gun. Mireles told that story during his trial. Chavez said he didn't have a weapon then.

"That made me angry. He is such a big coward. I thought 'I'm going to get this man, he is not going to escape.'

"The first time I went to Mexico in mid-September, I went to the cemetery and promised my daughter that I would get this man. When law enforcement had him, I went to my daughter's tomb and told her the job was done," Chavez said.

Chavez said his belief in God kept him from killing Mireles.

"I don't think taking someone else's life is gonna do it. I decided to let the justice system take care of him," Chavez said. "(The 99-year sentence) was exactly what I wanted."

"I knew I had to be very strong. I kept my family out of the way and stayed with my daughter until the police came" following her shooting. "It's not that easy. I had to be strong."

Chavez, who has been married to his wife, Maria, for about 20 years, has a 13-year-old son and is raising their 3-year-old granddaughter left behind after Cathy's murder.

Although Mireles has been captured and will spend a large portion of his life in prison, the Chavez family will never again be the same.

Each holiday, they won't have their daughter to gather around the Christmas tree with them. Every year, Dec. 13 will come around to mark another anniversary of their daughter's murder.

"It can never be over," Chavez said. "His family can go visit him in jail, but we have to go visit our daughter in her tomb."

"I love my daughter so much. It is so terrible losing a daughter at 18. ... It's not easy but I'm determined to get on with my life. I'm not a quitter and that is just the way my family is."

Every day for months following the shooting, Chavez said he would sit with his son and have him talk about his feelings.

"Even through all this, his grades never dropped. He kept his honors classes up," the proud father said.

"We are a strong family," Chavez said.

Lydia Frescaz, the organizer of the Survivors of Homicide support group and a friend of Chavez, said she has a deep respect for Chavez for not taking matters in his own hands when he located Mireles.

"He is a good man ... when (Mireles) escaped while on bond, he took it upon himself to do it himself ... I admire him because of his ability to hunt that man down," Mrs. Frescaz said.

Francie Murdock, Midland County's Crisis Intervention Unit coordinator, spoke highly of Chavez as well.

"I get goosebumps when I think about (him tracking down Mireles.) It sounds just like a movie," Ms. Murdock said. "What he has done is a perfect example of what one man can do, if it's the right man ... I admire him so much."

She said he spent thousands of dollars in his mission to bring Mireles to justice, but, the "neatest thing of all is when he looked at that guy and told him 'I said I'd get you, you son of a bitch.' He was determined to do it. He could have had that guy killed, but he worked hard to have done what our justice system wanted done."

"We all just adore him and his darling wife," Ms. Murdock said. "He's a good man."

State senator favors end to affirmative action

FORT WORTH (AP) — State education officials have said Texas will not follow California's lead in ousting affirmative action programs from public universities.

However, at least one state senator thinks the time has come to wean the universities off of affirmative action.

"It's time for the state of Texas to treat its citizens as if she were colorblind," said Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco.

Sibley and Rep. Nancy Moffat, R-Southlake, tried unsuccessfully during the last legislative session to discontinue racial preference programs.

"I hope it's something the different (Texas) university systems would consider," Sibley said of the California regents' decision to end using race as a basis for admissions, hiring and contracting.

But the commissioner of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board said racial preferences will not only continue here, but be expanded.

Kenneth Ashworth endorsed a plan to require state-supported schools to boost graduation rates, enrollment and hiring among minorities.

He called the discontinuation of affirmative action programs in higher education "shortsighted" because of the growing black and Hispanic populations in Texas.

"We're going to have to find a way for all of our ethnic groups to participate in the opportunities of our society," Ashworth said.

Earlier this week, Gov. George W. Bush said opportunities for minorities shouldn't come at the expense of fairness for whites.

"My answer on affirmative action is the state ought to do everything in its power to be inclusive but make sure that the compassion to be fair does not entail reverse discrimination," Bush said.

James Duncan, the University of Texas System's executive vice chancellor for academic affairs, said UT schools are committed to diversity.

do."

I'm sincere when I make those statements, of course, but deep inside I'm feeling more, so much more. I just can't express it. The proper words won't spring forth.

So here I am at 11:05 a.m. on Wednesday, almost 13 hours after first getting the news, trying to determine just what exactly I'm going to say to my uncle and three cousins later this evening. They have lost, with absolutely no warning, a loving wife and mother.

One minute their lives were full of happiness and laughter, then out of the clear blue, boom! word arrives that it has all been shattered.

Suddenly, there is a mental picture of screeching tires, an overturning car, an out-of-control body.

A loved one is gone.

Now I need to produce some words that will adequately relate how I feel ... the pain, the agony, the hurt.

It won't be easy.

Indeed, nothing I say can make their sadness disappear, or even subside. But the effort must be made, and not just out of some strange sense of family responsibility, either.

No, I WANT them to know how I feel.

Perhaps the direct approach is best.

So here goes: "I'm so sorry. Please let me know if there is anything at all I can do."

Lord, that seems inadequate.

CRIME: Subcommittees look for solutions to juvenile violence about a year ago.

"We don't want this to just be something we talk about," Mrs. Spinuzzi said. "We want to develop good, workable ideas and put then into practice."

Mrs. Spinuzzi pointed out, however, that the subcommittee is also looking at several preventive programs that would keep juveniles from reaching the point of committing crimes.

The subcommittee focused on parents is looking at such ideas at parent/child counseling, working on bettering parenting skills, mentoring programs and support for parents whose children are committing crimes, said Ms. Purvis.

"We want to help both sides - the parents and the juveniles - in combating this problem," Ms. Purvis said.

David Koresh's mother wants son's vindication in hearings

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press

'They say David brought this holocaust on himself, but David didn't bring it on. The government brought it on.'

— Bonnie Haldeman, mother of Branch Davidian leader David Koresh

WACO — He's been painted a child molester and rapist, a bigamist who fathered numerous children with numerous wives, many just children themselves.

Some call him the sinful messiah, a man who taught his beloved followers the best way to commit suicide then asked them to do so.

In the eyes of government officials who took part in the 1993 raid on the Branch Davidians, sect leader David Koresh was a monster.

It is that image Democrats want to depict during congressional hearings organized by Republicans ready to lay blame on the federal officials in charge of the botched raid.

One woman is hoping the probe results in a new image of Koresh, that of a loving man who dedicated his life to God. That is how Bonnie Haldeman remembers her son.

"David has been so demonized by certain people. He's been associated with Jim Jones and Charlie Manson and called the evil murderer, suicidal murderer," Mrs. Haldeman said. "That's not the type of person David was.

"David was a very strong person, but he put all his trust and belief in God. He stood up for what he believed in, and he waited for God, and God will use this situation for his glory."

Mrs. Haldeman supports the hearings and said she hopes they serve to vindicate her son. She also would like to see the government forced to answer for its actions.

"They say David brought this holocaust on himself, but David didn't bring it on. The government brought it on," she said. "They're the ones that came out here to these people's home ... and violated their civil rights."

Mrs. Haldeman said she feels more confident about the outcome of this investigation because "there's a lot more people asking questions and wanting answers than there were two years ago."

On the first day of the hearings last week, Mrs. Haldeman traveled from her home in Chandler, Texas, to Waco and returned to the site of the Davidian compound.

Toying with her gold Star of David necklace, a gift from a Davidian, Mrs. Haldeman looked bitterly across the 77-acre prairie, remembering what happened there two years ago.

Koresh and his followers "weren't bothering anybody" when agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms stormed the compound on Feb. 28, 1993, Mrs. Haldeman said.

As for the fiery end to the 51-day siege, Mrs. Haldeman blames the government for jumping the gun.

On April 19, 1993, agents rammed the compound with tanks, tossing in tear gas in an effort to drive the Davidians out. Instead, the compound burned to the ground, taking with it Koresh and 80 others, including numerous children.

Mrs. Haldeman contends Koresh would have ended the standoff once he completed his task of interpreting the Seven Seals, which prophesied the end of the world in the Bible.

"He wanted to finish those Seven Seals and come out. He would have been out in two weeks. That's my firm belief."

Even though Koresh and other Davidians were later found to have been shot, Mrs. Haldeman vehemently rejects the notion of a suicide pact.

"It could have been it got so hot bullets can go off. I can't say; I wasn't in here," she said. "I do know that David did not commit suicide. He did not murder anybody. He would have never done that.

"I know David. He wanted to live and love life as well as the rest of us," she said. "I don't believe he really thought the government would actually do what they did."

Mrs. Haldeman also angrily denies that her son was a rapist, referring to testimony at the hearings by 14-year-old Kiri Jewell, a former Davidian.

Miss Jewell testified that Koresh had sex with her when she was 10 and said one of her friends married Koresh and had a baby when she was 14.

"That is a lie. I think she's being coerced," Mrs. Haldeman said. "David was not a child molester. He would not have raped a grown woman let alone a 10-year-old little girl who wasn't even a woman yet."

Mrs. Haldeman said she has not been asked to testify at the hearings. If she were, she would gladly do so. Her message?

"My main thing is to show David as not the human monster that so much of the people have made him out to be," she said. "I'm going to defend him to the end. I don't care what people say, because I knew David."

LEGION: Organization is for all veterans

(From 1C)

the Korean War, the Vietnam War, Desert Storm and veterans who participated in other conflicts, including those in Panama and Granada.

Incoming post commander is Ron Henderson, a Korean War veteran, who is succeeding Vietnam War veteran Jesse Rodriguez, said Hudson, who was post commander in the mid-1970s.

Hudson, who was 17 years old when he joined the U.S. Navy in 1945 after he was graduated from Midland High School, was in boot camp when the war ended in August 1945. He served on naval minesweepers in the Pacific in the post-war years in helping clear the ocean of explosive Japanese marine mines.

"It didn't seem too (dangerous) to us" at the time, Hudson recalled. "Nobody thought anything about it. We just had to do something" — their duty.

Membership in American Legion Post 19 apparently peaked in 1951 at 1,277 members — mostly World War II veterans. Before World War II, membership was fewer than 100 veterans.

American Legion Post 19 was named in honor of a Midland physician, Dr. Woods Walker Lynch, who at age 45 died of noncombat stateside injuries on June 9, 1918 — five months before the end of the first great war on Nov. 11, 1918.

Lynch served in the U.S. Army Medical Corps.

American Legion Post 19 was chartered in 1919 — the same year in which Lt. Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. and other officers and enlisted men of the American Expeditionary Forces in Europe held the American Legion's first organizational meeting, called the Paris Caucus, in France. That was in March. The second organization meeting was in St. Louis, Mo., in May of 1919. The U.S. Congress granted the American Legion its charter in September 1919.

According to records, charter members of American Legion Post 19 are C.B. Ligon, Driff Shepherd, Clyde Barron, G.D. McCormick, Earl J. Moran, Ted Brown, F.J. Middleton, N.W. Ellis, Paul Barron, E.H. Barron, C.P. Luther, Allen Tolbert, R.V. Hyatt, J.H. Epley and Bart Wilkinson.

In addition to serving as a fellowship for its members and auxiliary members, the American Legion works to ensure veterans' benefits and job opportunities, sponsors Boys State in promoting American citizenship and responsibility among youths, and promotes community projects and programs and wholesome activities for youth.

Included among the American Legion's activities in Midland are working in the Christmas-In-April project to repair and rebuild houses of handicapped and older citizens-homeowners, helping veterans in need to "ease the pain," taking programs to veterans in the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Big Spring, serving residents of the Veterans Home in Midland, on Memorial Day honoring American warriors who died in wartime, and serving the community and various other ways.

In striving to build up its membership, the American Legion is "trying to get some of these young fellows" from the more recent conflicts, including Desert Storm, into the fold.

Hudson, a retired draftsman and oil scout, estimated that 16,000 to 20,000 veterans in Midland County are eligible to join the American Legion.

The veterans are "trying to teach them some of what we know and trying to learn something from them."

COAT: Officials urge drivers to use caution

(From 1C)

Officials advise drivers to "use caution and drive slow" in areas recently sealcoated.

Notices of impending sealcoating will be distributed a day or two in advance of work to residents on scheduled roadways, officials said.

Officials said sealcoating is cost-effective maintenance to preserve the pavement. The work combats the deterioration of asphalt which becomes brittle due to exposure to heat, ultraviolet waves and water.

Sealcoating generally prolongs the pavement about six years — hence the city's sealcoating schedule. The life of an asphalt road is estimated at 20 years if sealcoated every five to six years; otherwise, a roadway only lasts about 12 years. Some Midland streets paved 50 years ago remain in good condition due to sealcoating, officials said.

The sealcoating will be performed by Jones Brothers Dirt & Paving of Odessa. The company was awarded the work at a cost of almost $1,080,000. In addition to the contracted work, city crews will sealcoat some of the "catch-up" roadways.

Next year, the area targeted for sealcoating generally covers northeast Midland.

Areas of town covered in past years include: northwest Midland, 1994; southeast Midland, 1993; southcentral Midland, 1992; and southwest Midland, 1991.

No relief: Charities don't match donors' quick outpouring in Oklahoma blast

By Maria Dial
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — When grief and shock struck this city with the blast of a terrorist's bomb, Americans were quick to reach deep into their pockets, sending money to help the victims.

The streams of goodwill — in the shape of 10s, 20s and sizeable checks — inundated the city, often swamping organizations with little manpower to disperse large sums. Large organizations have staff and experience, but must contend with federal red tape involved in their spending.

As a result, cries of physical pain and human loss have given way to complaints that it's too hard for some survivors and relatives of the 168 dead in the federal building bombing to get their hands on the money.

"THIS HAS BEEN total hell that we've had to go through," said LaDonna Madkins, 33, whose parents were killed in the April 19 bombing. "What they have done, we are grateful, but there's still more that needs to be done. I feel like just a few (are) going to be compensated and taken care of."

Many victims, including Ms. Madkins, have had help with immediate needs such as buying food or paying monthly bills and funeral costs. Some of the biggest relief entities have spent more than $11 million on those items, medical expenses and uninsured property damage.

Although such aid is still available, the focus is shifting to long-term concerns such as education for orphaned or injured children — and to worries that relief agencies are slow to spend. In one case, the guardian of three orphaned children is even suing Gov. Frank Keating and Mayor Ron Norick, saying they are too tight with the strings on funds they promote.

Not all victims are unhappy about relief efforts. Jason Smith, 22, lost his mother in the bombing — but he plans to fulfill her hopes for him by going back to college full-time with money from the governor's fund. He also got immediate aid from the Red Cross after the blast.

"Overall, in the way ... everybody's been treating me, and all the help I've been given, I'm very happy and very fortunate to be an Oklahoman," Smith said.

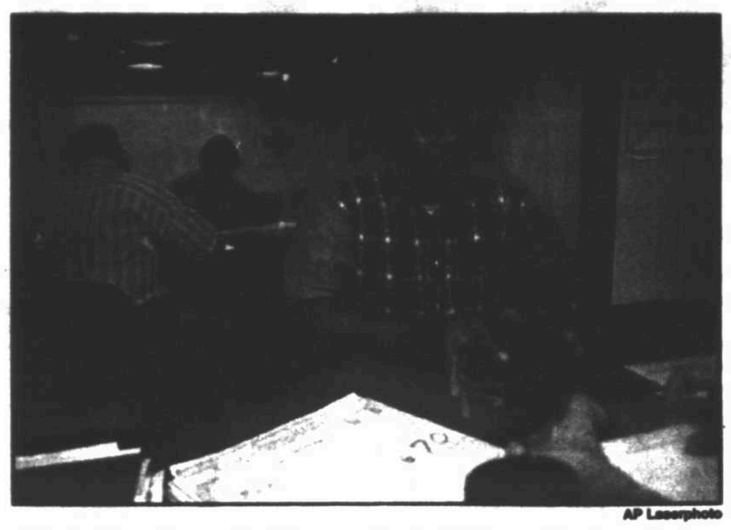
Yet those who complain about service have been heard the loudest, and one relief fund administrator says it's causing problems for all concerned.

"The focus has been too much on the money," said Nancy Anthony, executive director of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation. "Unfortunately, dollars and cents make a story. People's expectations have been raised beyond what is humanly possible."

The Community Foundation administers about 12 charitable funds, but officials estimate at least 50 have been established to assist bombing victims and their families. Some of the largest have millions in their coffers.

KNOWING THAT HAS made some survivors impatient with relief agencies.

"I think it's hard enough dealing with grief, without having to deal with financial problems," said Donna Hawthorne, a teacher who was widowed by the bombing.



AP Laserphoto

Aldo Jenkins talks to a Red Cross worker in Oklahoma City about his family needs last week. His wife was killed in the April 19 blast at the Alfred Murrah Federal Building.

Mrs. Hawthorne said she had housing worries and problems getting her damaged car replaced when she approached the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Parents of her students eventually bought her a new car.

FEMA spokesman Ben Frizzell said confidentiality rules prevented him from discussing specific cases, but he pointed out that FEMA uses government funds and federal programs to help individuals and businesses. Many victims turned to the agency because "it's easy to spell," and were referred to other groups if they didn't qualify for government aid.

Several relief agencies send members to weekly meetings of a resource coordinating board, trying to create a net that will keep victims from falling through the cracks, Frizzell said. The United Way also has set up a database to track aid given to applicants.

YET SOME SURVIVORS say they're confused about where to turn for help in a situation that is rife with exceptions to the rules.

Ms. Madkins' parents used to help pay for her son's education. Now, she fears the boy and his cousins won't benefit from scholarship funds reserved for children who lost legal guardians in the blast.

Ms. Madkins and Mrs. Hawthorne are among a group of survivors who say all donated money should be divided and handed out in lump sum payments.

"Our parents were stolen from us," Ms. Madkins said. "If something's stolen from you, you get compensation."

Charity officials agree that such payments would amount to compensatory damages — which federal rules prevent them from paying.

Under Internal Revenue Service guidelines, charities must spend money on items that victims need and cannot afford themselves. They also must have a clear purpose, criteria and decision-making process. Violation of IRS rules could cost a charity its tax-exempt status.

IN MANY CASES, private funds have turned over their donations to established, tax-exempt agencies such as the Community Foundation. Others, such as the Jewish Federation of Greater Oklahoma City, have chosen to brave the maze themselves — despite the drain on workers' time and energy.

"The Red Cross, Feed the Children, the Salvation Army are set up to do this. We're not. We're trying very hard to make the right decision," said Larry Trachtenberg, chairman of the federation's relief committee.

The organization received $377,000 in unsolicited donations. The group has spent nearly $40,000 so far, including gifts of $10,000 each to three downtown churches.

Sometimes, the manner of spending is limited by an organization's mission. For example, the University Hospitals Foundation received more than $275,000 after the bombing. Because the fund is affiliated with two local hospitals, the money must be used for uninsured medical costs of victims treated at those hospitals, executive director Roy Edwards said.

Edwards plans to write a single check to cover the expenses when bills are finalized late this summer.

Critics say such plans are fine, but they object to the lack of publicity.

"Why don't they let the victims know? Why do the victims have to get dogged out?" asked state Rep. Kevin Cox, D-Oklahoma City.

"Everybody doesn't have vast resources they can draw from in a time of emergency. So many people are one or two paychecks away from being broke, me included. And with millions of dollars coming in in donations from all over the world, you cannot make me believe that we cannot get immediate relief out."

Ms. Anthony of the Community Foundation says that's the kind of media brick relief workers can't dodge.

"WHAT IF THERE was no money, what would we be doing?" she said, noting that donations are generally scant in natural disaster cases. "Does the provision of money change the rules on how you have to deal with people?

"I guess it just seems like money changes everyone's attitude about what we're trying to do."

Congress uses cost-cutting bill to protect, kill local projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Alabama sturgeon will swim peacefully — if it exists — without government sleuths on its tail, and businesses in several large cities will no longer have to worry about prodding employees to use car pools.

These measures are part of a bill to cut $16.3 billion in federal spending. Although he vetoed it once, President Clinton is expected to sign the bill because it also includes billions of dollars to help earthquake victims in California and rebuild the bombed federal building in Oklahoma City.

But beyond the overarching concerns of cutting spending and rebuilding after disasters, the measure passed by Congress last week became a forum for lawmakers maneuvering to save local projects, or rein in the bureaucracy, or accomplish other goals without time-consuming hearings.

The bill also would give a swine research facility being built with federal funds to Iowa State University. And it allows but no longer requires NASA to buy a facility from McDonnell-Douglas Corp. for up to $35 million to train astronauts underwater for future space missions.

Sen. Mike DeWine, R-Ohio, won a provision blocking a 789-acre addition to the Wayne National Forest in his state.

"Some of the people in that area were concerned the Forest Service kept adding (private) land, which took away from the local tax base," DeWine said.

Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., wrote the provision banning the Interior Department from searching for Alabama sturgeon in portions of his state and Mississippi.

"There are a lot of environmental problems which we run into every day, but I don't believe the Alabama sturgeon — which we don't know if it exists — is one of them," he said.

Several environmental proposals were inserted into the bill, including one that prohibits the Environmental Protection Agency from requiring large firms in nine heavily polluted cities to promote car pools and other measures to reduce air pollution. Buffeted by objections from businesses and others, the EPA had already retreated on the regulations. Congress also barred lawsuits from concerned citizens alleging noncompliance.

The right time to refinance

Kay Sutton, Kay Sutton Realtors

With interest rates close to the lowest they have been in years, many homeowners are wondering if the time is right to refinance their high-interest mortgage loans. In Midland, mortgage rates have hovered around 7 1/2 and 8 percent for approximately a month.

So, is the time right for you to refinance? It depends. There are three basic aspects to consider before deciding to refinance: the interest rate, how long you plan to stay in the house, and what you hope to achieve by refinancing.

A standard rule of thumb is to refinance if the current mortgage rate is at least 1 1/2 - 2 1/2 percentage points below your existing mortgage rate because you need a considerable rate reduction to compensate for the expense of refinancing. Costs associated with refinancing can include points charged by the lender and fees for appraisals, title and other related services.

Another major factor tied into the interest rate is how long you plan to live in your house. Figure out how long it would take you to recoup the financing costs through the monthly savings from the lower interest rates. Divide the annual payment savings into the total refinancing costs to determine the break-even point. If this point is at least a few years before you think you will move, you could be in a good position to refinance.

Finally, it is important to determine what your financial goals are. There are several reasons why a homeowner may choose to refinance. Some homeowners, especially those near to retirement age, want to pay off their mortgage earlier and usually choose to refinance.

How to retire your mortgage when you do

Peggy Strong, Chaparral Realtors

Doesn't it sound great to pay off your mortgage when you retire. It's a great plan and simple to calculate and put into action right away. Your mortgage is one of the best ways to save money: here's how.

Firstly, there should not be a penalty for paying the loan off early....so don't worry about that. The calculation procedure requires an amortization schedule of the loan being paid off. If you do not have one, call a realtor: we would be glad to help.

STEP 1: Work out the number of months before your expected retirement.

STEP 2: Calculate the loan balance on the retirement date using the amortization schedule.

STEP 3: Divide the remaining balance by the number of months until retirement.

For example.

A home owner who took out a mortgage of $100,000 for 30-years at nine percent on Jan. 1. 1985 wishes to retire Jan. 1. 2005, thereby needing to reduce the number of years on his mortgage by 10-years (120 months).

The loan balance after the December 2004 payment is approximately $63,513. The calculation looks like this: $63,513/120 = $529.28

So, in order to pay off his mortgage by the time he retires, the home owner needs to increase his payment for the remaining 120 months by $529.28. Considering his Principal and Interest payment is $804.63, this is quite an increase. But lets take a closer look. Each payment of $529.28 is shaving $804.63 off the loan, or a total of $96,555. That represents an interest saving of $33,028 or $275.24 each month.

Bottom line speaking, if the home owner stuck to his guns and found an extra $529.28 per month for the next ten years, each and every payment would bring a 52 percent return on his money. Not to mention ten fewer years of mortgage payments.

Fast facts in real estate.

Norma Pine Chaparral Realtors

What is possession?

You've heard the old saying that "possession is nine-tenths of the law." This idea that, if you lived on the land, you had a right to it, originated in English common law and was reaffirmed in the United States in the early 1800s when the government gave out parcels of land to the farmers who lived on it.

Possession today actually refers to the person or persons who are currently living in a property. When you sell your house, not only do you give up the deed to the buyer, but you also give the buyer 'possession' of your property. This usually takes place when the sale has been closed and funded; that is, when all moneys from the sale have been disbursed. When the buyer actually takes 'physical possession' can be a matter of agreement between buyer and seller.

Sometimes a seller will not be able to move out upon closing and funding, or, a buyer will need to move into the property before that takes place. When either of things take place it is customary to do a 'Seller's temporary residential lease' or a 'Buyer's temporary residential lease'. Either a flat fee or a daily fee- such as pro-rating the months mortgage payment is charged. In addition to the lease, the buyer will also sign a statement that they will accept and close with the property in the condition that it is in when they move in. Both buyer and seller are protected by doing this.

Prequalifying for mortgages

Brian Cooper President, MAR

Before you start your house hunting in earnest, the real estate professional with whom you are working will likely 'prequalify' you to determine a price range you can afford. According to the Midland Association of Realtors (MAR), prequalification is a necessary part of the home buying process that helps save you time and money.

"Don't be shy or withhold information about your income or credit status. Your real estate professional isn't trying to pry, rather he, or she, must know all of the details related to your ability to obtain a mortgage," said Brian Cooper, president of MAR.

By candidly discussing your financial situation, you will give the agent the information necessary to show you homes you can afford. "If you don't open up, you are placing the agent in the role of tour guide, not someone who can help you find a home within your budget. You will end up wasting your time, and that of the seller," he said.

Once you have signed a contract to purchase a home, you must find a lending institution or mortgage company from which to obtain your home loan. Your loan application will request financial data including your place of employment, assets and liabilities (including reoccurring debts such as credit card bills an car payments).

Here are two important tips on loan qualification from MAR.

1) Do not borrow the down payment without disclosing the loan, submit fake letters of credit or gift letters, or make secret financial arrangements.

2) Accurately list your income and assets, all debts and the approximate amount you owe.

You will probably be charged a credit report fee by the lender which will cover the cost of having your credit history examined. Credit reporting agencies compile credit reports on consumers, including bill payment histories as well as whether you have been sued or filed bankruptcy.

Federal credit reporting laws do not give you the right to inspect the actual credit report at the reporting agency or to receive an exact duplicate of the report. But, you are entitled to a summary containing the source of the report's information.

If your ability to obtain a mortgage is affected by the credit report, you have the right to challenge its accuracy and seek corrections.

"The credit report is part of the information the lender uses to determine if you qualify for a loan. It is not a mechanism to prevent you from buying. Remember, lenders want to make loans, not turn them down," said Cooper.

The Midland Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of realtors that comprise The National Association of Realtors. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is 'the voice for real estate,' representing nearly 75,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

These three photos are examples of the custom designs John Murphy has painted on curbs around Midland. The address numbers are painted in reflective paint so they can be easily seen at night.

Art has been created on many surfaces throughout the centuries. It has graced ceilings, walls, canvases, billboards and sidewalks. For Midlander John Murphy, it's curbs.

That's right — curbs.

In almost any Midland neighborhood, his artwork can be seen adorning the curb sides. There are scenes of oil derricks, sunsets, oceans, fish, pink flamingos, state flags, bluebonnets, chili peppers, humming birds, bass, coyotes, golfers, dogs, cats, airplanes, ivy, quail, the state of Texas... The list goes on and on.

Basically, a curb design can be anything a home owner wants it to be.

"One customer had a painting of quail her aunt had painted and she wanted me to use that design on her curb," Murphy said, so he recreated the painting. "Another customer wanted an under-the-ocean scene with seahorses and fish. Once I finished it, he decided he wanted it bigger, so I painted a larger scene. By the time I was finished, it was about six feet long.

"A lot of people use me for gifts, like for a house warming present or special occasion," he added.

Somewhere within the design is the home address as well, therefore being functional as well as attractive.

Murphy said his curb numbers reflect light at night.

"It's really important that emergency units be able to find the house they are looking for, so I make all my curb numbers with reflective paint," he said, adding that it's helpful when others are trying to find a house as well.

Painting curb numbers was a job Murphy started doing in high school to earn extra money.

"They were just the basic curb numbers. One day I just had this idea to make the curb numbers a little more exciting, so I painted an

'Dub' Warden marks 70th year with parties

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Congratulations to G.W. "Dub" Warden, who recently celebrated his 70th birthday.

In honor of the milestone occasion, Dub's wife, Linda, and their daughter, Jennifer Warden of Dallas, hosted two parties on the same day at the Warden's home in Green Tree Country Club Estates — an afternoon open house and a seated dinner for 47 guests that evening.

McKnight-Harrison

Dub, former longtime golf coach at Andrews High School, greeted many of the young people he had coached at the afternoon event.

Highlights included the presentation of a proclamation from the State of Texas House of Representatives, which read: "In recognition of his support of West Texas youth and the love of golf. Coach Warden has been a positive leader to many young men and women, who have gone on to be proud examples of their mentor." It was presented by Bill Gerber of Lamesa, one of Dub's former students.

In addition, Delnor Poss, golf coach at Midland College, presented Dub with a plaque, which signified the dedication of the national junior college golf tourney, in which M.C. placed first, to Dub.

Scotty Niemann, now an assistant pro at Midland Country Club and another former student, remarked: "Everything I ever read in Harvey Pennick's 'Red Book of Golf,' I've heard before. Coach Warden had taught me that."

Other accolades porued in, not only from those able to be present, but in the form of phone calls, letters and cards.

Dub also learned that a golf scholarship has been established in his name at Andrews High School for a college-bound golfer and that the Andrews Ex-Students Association has dedicated its first annual reunion to him. Earlier this year, the Men's Golf Association at Green Tree Country Club dedicated its 1995 tournament to Dub.

Guests included Dub's Texas Tech roommate, Bill Kelley of Arlington and a former team member of the Green Bay Packers who rememberd his friend as "a natural born athlete and teacher," Helen and Judge Ray McKim, Robbie and Raymond Casey, accompanied by their son, Darren of San Antonio, Pat and Jerry McCutchan, Virgie and Gerald Woodward of Tempe, Ariz., who were the Wardens' first neighbors in Andrews almost 40 years ago; Ector County Judge Jim Jordan of Odessa, and Marian Sims.

RUIDOSO, NEW MEXICO, long one of our favorite vacation spots, was our destination over the Fourth of July holidays. Although spouse Harry and I went primarily to relax and to celebrate our 30th wedding anniversary, we were reminded by the hordes of people in town for the weekend that it really has something for everyone.

Nestled in the southern-most part of the Rockies, Ruidoso offers golfing, fishing, horse racing, shopping, nightlife, numerous restaurants and art galleries, and of course, skiing in winter.

Spotted on the highway near Ruidoso Downs Racetrack was a huge billboard sign, which proclaimed: "Dee Hubbard is 60 years old." Dee, now of Fort Worth, is the current track owner, and we can remember him when. Dee came to our hometown in Kansas in the Fifties to play basketball for the local junior college, and from those humble beginnings went on to become an auto glass magnate.

Although most of our time was spent enjoying Ruidoso's attractions, we did take a day trip through the scenic Sacramento Mountains to the village of Cloudcroft, which is home of The Lodge, where generations of Midlanders have stayed. A railway was built around the turn of the century to take travelers to the mountains as an escape from the heat. The Lodge was later constructed as a haven for the visitors.

RETURNING TO MIDLAND by popular demand is jazz vocalist Lillette Jenkins-Wisner. Her appearance at 8 p.m. on Aug. 1 at the Plaza Club is being sponsored by The West Texas Jazz Society.

Those of you who had the pleasure of hearing the charming and dynamic songstress last year won't want to miss her performance, and we urge others to be a part of this evening of great jazz, also.

Plywood is great for do-it-yourselfers

Associated Press

Plywood has become a great standby for the do-it-yourselfer. Here are some tips on using it:

■ Plywood usually comes in sheets measuring 4x8 feet, in thicknesses of one-quarter, one-half or three-quarter inches. Carrying a full sheet alone is awkward. Try this: Put your arm over the center of the sheet and hook the claw of a claw hammer under the bottom edge. The hammer handle becomes a convenient carrying grip.

You can also carry a sheet with an 18-foot-long rope. Knot the rope ends together to create a loop. Slip the loop over the two bottom corners of the plywood sheet. Then put your arm over the sheet and grasp the middle sections of the loop. Use your other hand to steady.

Store plywood panels flat on 2-x-4s to deter warping. Store them off the floor in a cool, dry place for several weeks before using them. If you must store plywood on edge, rest it on 2x4-inch blocks so the bottom edge won't absorb moisture. Brace the blocks in place and rest the sheet against the wall at a slight angle.

■ When sawing, wear a dust mask and safety goggles. Make sure the panel is well supported.

To avoid splintering the plywood surface when sawing by hand or with a table saw, position the finished side of the panel face up. Any splintering will occur at the bottom. If you're using a circular saw or a saber saw, however, you have to place the finished side face down to prevent splintering. Be sure to use a carbide-tipped blade or a special plywood blade on any power saw. Plywood's glue dulls a steel blade quickly. If you use a handsaw, circular saw, or saber saw, clamp a straightedge board to the plywood to serve as a guide for the saw.

■ To saw plywood, first score the face ply along the desired cut lines with a utility knife. Then cut. Any splinters will break off cleanly at the scored line. Make lengthwise cuts first.

To saw plywood, hold the handsaw at a low angle and cut along the scored line. Adjust a table saw so that the blade clears the top of the sheet by one-fourth inch. When using a table saw, use a push stick to advance the panel into the saw's guarded blade.

■ Nails, brads or screws won't hold in the edges of thin plywood. As a general rule, the best way to join pieces of plywood is to put a three-fourths-inch-square block of wood in the corner between the pieces. Then glue and screw (or nail) both pieces to the block.

■ If you plan to paint a piece, fill gaps in the edges of plywood panels with wood putty or spackling compound. Sand smooth before painting. To protect the edges, use wood strips or molding instead. If you plan a clear varnish finish on a piece, the best choice is usually an adhesive-backed veneer tape in a matching wood that you can press on with an iron.

CURB: Art on curb is functional, creative

(From 1E)

American flag on my house. Then someone saw it and liked it and asked if I could do it for them. Then other people started asking (for curb designs)," he said, until his curb painting business — which he did in addition to a full-time job — was doing very well.

Murphy recently left his full-time job to pursue his talent and business of curb painting. Now, most days, his truck — emblazoned with the business name "Custom Curbs" and the clever phone number 520-CURB — can be seen in a local neighborhood, with Murphy close by on the street painting yet another unique piece of curb art.

He usually dons a green shirt with the company name embroidered on the chest and a matching green baseball cap which has the added line "Dare to be Different."

"We can drive around town and know exactly which curbs are ours," said Janice Murphy, his wife. "You can tell his work."

Murphy and wife said they have lost track of how many curbs he has painted around the Midland area, but they have a photo album of all the designs, which they use as a book of memories as well as a sales tool for prospective customers.

"There are at least a thousand different curb designs, and each design is a little different. They are all like little masterpieces. They are all a little different," Mrs. Murphy said.

Murphy said some his designs can take as little 30 minutes to paint, while some of the larger or more detailed designs can take as long as two hours. Consequently, prices are based on the difficulty of the design.

In order to paint curb numbers, Murphy was required to secure a permit from the Midland Police Department. He is required to carry this permit with him at all times while he is working.

"What we (he and his family) do requires us to do some door-to-door work and that makes some people nervous. You have to be careful going door to door. People aren't always sure what you're up to. I understand that, so I always dress as nice as possible (for working outdoors) and I always carry my permit with me," Murphy said.

While his family helps him take orders for curbs, Murphy is the only curb painter in his business, and he guarantees his work.

"If somebody drives their tire up on your design, you just give me a call and I'll come by and touch it up. It's just part of the service I offer," Murphy said. "The people of Midland have been good to me, so I just try to give a little back... I always take care of my customers and I usually get two or three new customers from them."

"We can be going somewhere, and if John sees a design that needs a touch up, he'll stop right there and fix it," Mrs. Murphy said.

Although Murphy said he has had little art training, his curb art shows he must have a natural talent for it.

"I took an airbrush class," he said, and Mrs. Murphy remembered him taking a drawing class with their son, but his creations are mostly done from talent versus learned skill.

"I can't draw something, I have to paint it. It's really strange. I can't explain it, but I can paint just about anything, I just can't draw," Murphy said.

"I do all my own stencils and airbrushing, and I do a lot of brush work. I've been working on my sunset colors and on my ocean colors," he said. "Looking back over the pictures, you can tell I've come a long way since I started this business."

With about 20 years experience in painting addresses on curbs, Murphy said he has watched his business grow from painting basic house numbers to his one-of-a-kind, hand-painted designs. But the Murphys' story doesn't stop there. He now has a patent pending on a new product.

While the curbs he paints now are individually painted by hand, "we are working on a concept where the designs will be put on an acrylic panel and the (house) numbers will be put on by the buyer," Murphy said.

The new product will reproduce his designs on vinyl panels which can be mass produced. The back of the panels will be covered with an adhesive back that the buyer can simply peel a protective paper off and apply the panel to the curb. Then the proper numbers can be attached.

Testing has shown the vinyl to be rated for seven years and that it cleans off easily.

"That's longer than the ones he hand-paints," Mrs. Murphy said. The vinyl version of his designs can be cleaned off with Dawn dishwashing liquid, gasoline or bug and tar remover, depending on the extent of the damage, she said.

"The vinyl molds to the concrete really well. We've been testing glues for about a year and half now and we've found one we believe will be reliable," Murphy said.

While the Murphys hope to expand their market with the designed acrylic address panels, they also hope their patent pending idea will be able to be used by organizations, schools and churches as a fund-raising project.

"We will be able to work with schools or organizations to create a design for them that they can sell for a profit," Murphy said, adding that groups could sell a variety of designs or they could sell a special design created specifically for their group, such as a Lee High School Rebel or a Midland High School Bulldog.

The Murphys even are looking into placing their new product on the QBC channel.

"It's really exciting," Mrs. Murphy said.

"It's been my dream to make this happen. It's something that was my idea and we were afraid someone else was going to take and do it," Murphy said, so he and h... family have jumped in with both feet to create a business of Custom Curbs, and they hope it will go nation-wide with the new acrylic panels.

John Kinzie considered to be first white settler

QUEBEC, Canada (AP) — Pioneer trader John Kinzie was born here of Scottish parents in 1763.

At 10, Kinzie became a silversmith's assistant, before making a lifelong career as an Indian trader. In 1804, he established a post outside Fort Dearborn, on the site of the present Chicago. He was said to be the first white settler there.

Highly successful, Kinzie added trading stations on the Illinois, Kankakee and Rock rivers and made many friends among the Indians.

Recognizing the future potential of Chicago, Kinzie acquired extensive real estate holdings there. He died in 1828.

Extension service experts offer gardening advice

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

At this time of year, the Extension office phone starts ringing and doesn't slow down until late September. Heat, insects, disease, weeds and many other obstacles surface, causing the home gardener grief. Here are a few of the more common ones:

Benge-Frost

Ground cover Vinca major

A beautiful, tough and versatile ground cover commonly and wisely used in area landscapes is Vinca major, also known as periwinkle. Vinca has been a hardy, reliable ground cover until recently. For the last three or so years, it has been infested with a pest that leaves it brown to the ground by fall. If you've watched your vinca go from beautiful to brown, chances are it was this same pest. There's a hungry but shy green worm that pulls the vinca leaves over itself to hide and feed. It's usually not until lots of damage has been done that you notice something is not right.

If you've had this problem, look at your vinca right now. You've got to look hard for this pest, but it can be found under the cover of vinca leaves. If you find it, treat early before things get out of hand. Bt (Bacillus thringiensis) is a natural pesticide that will control only the immature forms of moths and caterpillars — a very safe method of control. Use a Bt product as soon as you see the worms present. Good coverage with repeat applications of Bt is essential.

Grub worms in turf

White grub worms can do lots of damage to fescue, St. Augustine and some hybrid bermudas. The damage becomes most apparent in August and September. The grub is the immature form of the reddish brown June beetles which can be seen flying around lights at night. When you see the adults, you can expect egg-laying to take place afterwards. Mid-July is an excellent time to check your lawn for newly hatched white grub worms. Don't automatically treat for grub worms at this time — check before you treat. Unnecessary insecticidal treatments are a waste of money and time, and can result in environmental consequences.

Check several areas of the lawn by cutting out about a one-square-foot area of grass and looking at the roots and soil for small white grub worms. If you don't find grubs, then don't treat. If you find some, treat with diazinon granules, Oftanor or other recommended insecticides. Get better control by watering heavily, applying insecticide and following with a watering. Heavy pre-watering causes grubs to move to the soil surface, resulting in a better kill.

Black spot fungus on roses

Roses that seem to have no leaves on the lower part of the bush may be suffering from a fungus called black spot, which shows up as a black spot on the lower leaves of the plant. The black spot will vary in size from one-quarter to one-half inch in diameter with a fuzzy margin rather than a distinct line. Infested leaves gradually turn yellow and drop off. If the infection is severe, the plant will barely have any leaves except at the top.

Keeping the leaves dry and sunny will help reduce the disease. If trees and shrubs have grown, creating lots of shade, a little selective trimming can open things for more sunlight and air circulation. As diseased leaves show up, they should be picked and leaves on the ground picked up and destroyed. For severe cases, a fungicide containing triforine, benomyl or sulfur (don't use if temperatures are over 90 degrees F) should be used whenever moist, warm, overcast conditions threaten.

Garden plants turn yellow and wilt

There are actually several things that can cause these symptoms, but one really common one is the root knot nematode. These are microscopic round worms that cause galls or knots to develop on the root system, interfering with water and nutrient uptake. There are certain vegetables that are very susceptible to nematode infestation, including tomatoes, potatoes, beans, peas, beets, okra, cucumber, cantaloupe and carrots.

If you've got some plants that are stunted, yellow and/or wilting, check the roots. You may have nematodes. If you do, good luck. You'll need a to use a combination of control measures to keep them at bay. Try planting trap crops like Elbon cereal rye in the winter and French-type marigolds in the summer. Besides trap crops, always practice crop rotation, adding organic matter to your soil, plant nematode resistant varieties and if it's really bad, try soil solarization and/or summer fallow and tiling.

These are just a few of the pests that can put a damper on your green thumb. To avoid them, use recommended plants and good cultural practices, check the garden frequently for potential problems and take action early if the pest is serious enough.

Deborah Benge-Frost is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector Counties.

Norway is land of sailboats, shellfish, Ibsen

By Jennifer Merin

RISOR, Norway (AP) — Sorlandet, the area along Norway's southern coast, is an idyllic region of charming villages, pristine wilderness, quaint harbors and scenic skerries.

The tourist season, which lasts from May through September, peaks in August with three festivals highlighting a two-week odyssey of sightseeing and merrymaking, beginning in Risor and heading southwest along the coast to Mandal. The entire trip is about 125 miles, with stops 15 to 30 miles apart.

At Risor's Wooden Boat Festival, Aug. 4-6, thousands of boats, magnificent or modest, come from Scandinavia, France and elsewhere for world-class regattas — one for sailboats, one for motor vessels.

Landlubbers, who come to admire the panorama of bobbing masts and colorful flags silhouetted against the white buildings in Risor's harbor, are welcomed aboard for vessel viewing and often invited for a sail.

TOURISTS STROLL along the quay or through Risor's narrow, crooked streets, stopping at shops and galleries; the boat yard; and the Church of the Holy Ghost, built in 1647 with an altar piece attributed to Rembrandt. Or they take a ferry to Standholmen Island for sunbathing and repast at a historic lighthouse turned into a bistro and bar.

On the festival's final night, there are buskers, pop and folk music concerts and fireworks.

From Risor, head down to Gjeving and catch the ferry to Lyngor, a historic hamlet with a well-preserved harbor and a ban on cars. Wander the hilly brick and cobble streets on foot and admire clapboard homes and gardens lovingly tended by the 110 year-round residents.

Stroll to the old schoolhouse and post office, then seek refreshment at Den Bla Lanterne (The Blue Lantern), well-known for seafood and strong brew, before the afternoon ferry returns to the mainland.

Further down the coast is the old shipping town of Arendal, set on seven scenic islands. Visit Klockers House to see how wealthy 19-century Norwegians lived. The Aust-Adger Museum focuses on local geology and history, the Bornsholmen Museum on logging on the Nidelva River. Merdogaard Museum is the residence of an 18th-century sea captain, and Brattekelv Shipyard shows how old sailing vessels were built.

The waterfront at Risor, Norway, is the site of the Wooden Boat Festival Aug. 4-6. It is the first of three festivals in August along the Sorlandet on Norway's southern coast.

AT GRIMSTAD, enjoy performances and exhibits at "Ibseniana," the Henrik Ibsen Festival, Aug. 7-12. Visit the playwright's home and the pharmacy where he apprenticed.

Grimstad's 12th-century stone church, maritime museum and parks and gardens should be seen before traveling on to Lillesand and its landmark buildings from the 1700s: the Sandra Svensen home, Town Hall, the customs house and the Bronsgarden Farm, on an archaeological site dating back 3,800 years.

ON TO ELEGANT Kristiansand to peruse the Renaissance-style square and ancient white wooden buildings of Norway's fifth largest town, planned and built by King Christian IV in 1641. Kristiansand has a wolf reserve, an amusement park, bathing beaches, a harness race track, art and natural history museums, Christiansholm Fort and other historic sites.

Sail or drive to Mandal, Norway's southernmost town. At Mandal's Shellfish Festival, Aug. 11-13, a table stretching a couple of blocks is set amid the town's vintage white wooden houses. Southern Norway's famous fresh mussels are piled high for sampling.

Retreat to Sjosanden Beach, a stretch of golden sand, then fish for dinner on the scenic Mandalselva River, prime for salmon. Local outfitters rent gear, Mandal's chefs will clean and cook your catch. You can even have your salmon smoked and sealed to take home.

IF YOU GO: For information about travel and events in Sorlandet and free maps, contact the Norwegian Tourist Board (NORTRA), 655 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Telephone (212) 949-2333. The festivals are popular, so it's best to book well in advance. — possibly even now for next year. NORTRA can advise boaters about chartering vessels.

Bus and train schedules are available, but auto rental provides greater flexibility.

Rent a car in Oslo, drive to Risor and tour the coast, return the car at Stavanger, fly to Oslo, connecting to your trans-Atlantic flight.

Fly SAS to Oslo from Chicago, non-stop from Newark or from Seattle via Copenhagen.

For best rental rates, book before leaving home, with prices quoted in U.S. currency. At present, Dollar Rent A Car's Eurodollar, (800) 800-4000, quotes best rates at $288 per week, pre-paid, for an economy car with unlimited mileage. An international driver's license is available by presenting your U.S. driver's license at an American Automobile Association office near you.

Experts say all is not lost when your luggage is

By Jennifer Merin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even with a sophisticated tagging and tracing system shared by domestic and international airlines, about one in 200 air travelers experiences luggage delay or loss, according to Transportation Department statistics.

While there is no guarantee a traveler's checked luggage will arrive on the same flight, there are several precautions to help lower the chances of becoming that unlucky one-half of one percent:

■ When possible, select a non-stop or direct flight — no plane change — to your destination. In general, the fewer transfers you make, the less likely your luggage will go astray.

■ Allow enough check-in time to assure that your bags will make it onto your flight. In busy airports, including Los Angeles, New York, Chicago and other major transfer hubs, you should arrive 45 to 60 minutes ahead of departure time. For international flights, make it 90 minutes. If you are late getting to the airport, ask to carry your bags to the departure gate for last-minute placement in the hold of the plane.

■ Learn the destination airport's three-letter code — LAX for Los Angeles, JFK for New York's Kennedy or EWR for Newark, ORD for Chicago's O'Hare International — and make sure the correct tag is put on your luggage at curb-side or counter check-in. See that your bag is loaded onto the conveyor belt.

■ Use sturdy identification tags with secure clasps, and don't be shy about using more than one. List name and home and destination addresses, home and office phone numbers. For further security, use tags with flaps that conceal the information. Write the same information on a piece of paper and tape it to the inside of your bag.

■ Remove old destination tags, even if they have sentimental value.

■ Buy "excess value" insurance when the value of your belongings exceeds the airline's limited liability, currently $1,250 per passenger on domestic flights and about $9 per pound up to $640 on international flights. Airlines, travel agencies and credit card companies offer excess value insurance. It's about $2 per added $100 value, up to $5,000, for domestic and international flights. It provides emergency money for essentials that are lost or damaged and for compensation beyond that reimbursed by the airline.

Before buying such insurance, check your household policy for coverage of off-premises loss or damage. If it is not included and you travel frequently, consider upgrading your policy.

If luggage is delayed, you may request a cash advance for emergency replacement of toiletries and other essentials. Usually the airline requires a 24-hour wait and may deny the request if you have returned home. The amount ranges from $25 to $75 or more, depending on the airline, the circumstances and your ability to negotiate. Airlines claim most lost luggage is found within 24 hours and delivered to its owner as quickly as possible. If your luggage is found and delivered after you receive a cash advance, the money is yours. However, if your bag is never found, the advance will be deducted from your final lost luggage settlement.

■ Keep a detailed list of all items in your checked luggage. You'll need to present it to the airline's insurance company in case your luggage is lost. Keep receipts of recent purchases to help prove the value and age of lost belongings. Purchase date is important because reimbursement is based on depreciated value, not replacement value.

■ Never pack cash or negotiable documents, jewelry, furs, cameras or electronics in checked luggage. These items are excluded from airline liability and you will not be reimbursed if they are lost.

■ Use a carry-on bag for items you'll need immediately upon arrival — plus prescriptions for medications — and other items that airline insurance does not cover in checked luggage.

■ If your luggage fails to arrive with you or is damaged, find an airline baggage service rep and file a claim before you leave the airport. If no agent is available, write immediately to the consumer affairs office at the airline's headquarters.

Once you have made a claim, the agent will issue a tracer to all other airport stations and to a central clearing office where information about your luggage is distributed to other airlines that may have received or transported your bag.

You will receive a claim number and a toll-free telephone number to call for updates. Keep calling that number. While persistence alone won't find your bag, it will encourage agents to give priority to your problem.

If the airline declares your bag lost, you will need to provide a list of contents and receipts or other proof of purchase. Claims should be settled within three to four weeks, but you can hasten the process by using the toll- free number.

Interracial children face numerous challenges

By Annie Nakao
Hearst News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — Katrina La Throp recalls the time a man "stared real hard" at her toddler, Chai, and asked, "What's his father?" "Human," La Throp answered. La Throp is African American. Her husband, Shimon Van Collie, is white.

Such encounters are rare — they live in Berkeley, where, Van Collie said, the "quintessential baby looks exactly like Chai."

But they aren't naive about the challenges their son faces in a racially fractured society.

"He's going to have to be a really strong individual because he will get racism from both sides," La Throp said. "So we have to be conscious about how he's socialized."

The story is familiar to America's 1.2 million interracial couples, whose numbers have tripled since 1970, according to the U.S. Census.

Most dramatic has been the proportional increase in black-white couples, from 65,000 in 1970 to 231,000 in 1990.

While interracial couples remain a fraction of all American marriages, they have been highly visible in multiracial areas like California.

From 15 to 20 percent of couples in California are in mixed marriages. For certain groups, the figure is much higher. Fifty-five percent of Japanese Americans and 40 percent of Chinese Americans marry outside their group.

It was only in 1967 that the U.S. Supreme Court struck down laws banning interracial marriages. Twenty-eight years later, accelerating intermarriage is producing a population of mixed-race Americans who are blurring racial and ethnic lines.

Census figures show the trend. In 1968, 22,000 mixed-race babies were born in the United States. In 1989, 110,500 mixed-race babies were delivered.

"More than anywhere else, the United States is in the midst of a massive cultural and social metamorphosis in its attitudes toward intermarriage," says Bay Area psychologist Joel Crohn in his recent book "Mixed Matches," which delves into creating successful interracial, intercultural and interfaith relationships.

He says the biggest challenge these couples face is raising children.

"Kids are the ultimate test — they point the way for us to grow," said Crohn, whose practice in San Rafael and Kensington specializes in cross-cultural relationships.

Crohn said multiracial kids quickly become aware of the world's curiosity about them.

"They get confronted with, 'What are you?' a lot," said Crohn.

Cultural identity is a major issue for many mixed-race people, said psychologist Jewell Taylor Gibbs of the University of California at Berkeley's School of Social Welfare. "The central issue for racially mixed people is that of identity — how do you define yourself in a society where everybody fits into boxes?" she said. "If you're half white and half black, or half Asian and half Mexican, where do you feel you belong?"

Not that multiracial kids grow up to be unhappy. Mixed-race youngsters grow up no differently than their monoracial counterparts and, in fact, often act as bridges between cultures.

But there is a natural ambivalence many multiracial youngsters feel about their mixture, and parents should respect that, Crohn said. "Some kids play with it," Crohn said. "One day, they're black. One day, they're white. A lot of it has to do with their physical appearance, where they live and how their parents deal with race."

Parents should confront their own cultural confusion before they can help their children deal with their own identities, Crohn said.

"Each partner has to face his or her own mixed feelings about their past," he said.

For most mixed-race kids, questions about identity don't come up until adolescence and young adulthood. For some, it's a process that's still unfolding.

Mikko Jokela, 21, a UC-Berkeley junior, has a Chinese mother and a Finnish father.

With his dark hair and eyes, Jokela said he is "more easily placed as Asian." His biracial roots, however, never provoked much thought.

"I was always, in my eyes and other people's eyes, the half-Chinese, half-Finnish kid," said Jokela, who grew up in the mostly white San Diego County beach town of Del Mar. "I mean, my parents never sat me down and said, 'OK, you're from a mixed race.' So I hadn't really addressed it that much."

Then, while a junior at Cal, Jokela took Ethnic Studies 150, a course titled "People of Mixed-Race Heritage." It opened up a new way of seeing himself.

"When people are always thinking about themselves along racial lines, you start to wonder, how do I fit in that society?" Jokela said. "You see kids who had blond hair when they were three years old. It's weird how you pick up different traits. It's really interesting to see people's parents. It's like taking two colors together to see what you're going to get, like experimenting with your Crayolas."

There is, Jokela noted, a "fascination with the visual, because so many of the issues are based on visual characteristics."

That only reflects society's obsession with physical appearance, said Taylor Gibbs.

"Race is a very unscientific concept — most people are mixed in one way or another," she said. "So race is a social construct. People look at you and define you by certain physical features and by your hair."

For African Americans, the mixed-race issue carries other cultural baggage.

"For African Americans, there is a feeling that being African American has always had a certain stigma attached to it," said Taylor Gibbs.

Taylor Gibbs said biracial people should be able to "live in their own worlds. I don't think people should be forced to accept a racial category they don't themselves want to accept. But society forces people into boxes."

Stores open 'around the clock'

By Glen Creno
N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX — It's 2 in the morning, and the city is sleeping. The neighborhoods are dark and quiet save for the metallic drone of air conditioners that keep the houses cool on this hot summer night.

Street lights illuminate empty intersections. Traffic signals cycle monotonously, regulating nothing. The guy at the all-night gas station sprays the driveway with a hose. Big, lazy arcs of water. No customers, no hurry.

Most of the stores and shopping centers have been closed for hours, with one notable exception. Many of the area's hyper-competitive supermarkets are open and wide awake, screaming with light and promotional zeal.

"Open 24 hours," says a neon sign blazing over the doorway to one store.

A red banner the size of a pickup hangs at the entrance to another. "Triple Coupons," it blares.

Inside, the stores are a surreal combination of overpowering brightness and yawning emptiness. Aisles that are full of chattering, hustling shoppers during the day are littered at night with cardboard boxes for restocking.

Customers? There are a few, but hardly enough to cause a backup at the cash registers.

WHY THEN do supermarkets bother to stay open 24 hours a day? Grocery stores say it's a favor to customers, an acknowledgement that not everyone is a nine-to-fiver.

Researchers say people are finding new ways to use late-night and early morning hours that once were written off as down time. Sociologist Murray Melbin sees America heading toward a 24-hour culture and views night as a frontier where such businesses as 24-hour stores, overnight delivery services and global bond trading offices take advantage of the extra hours.

All-night supermarkets — with their bright lights, banners and neon signs — offer the most glaring evidence of this culture. They seem to be on every corner.

The markets' owners figure they might as well be open at night because employees are there anyway.

Marsha Gilford, spokeswoman for Smith's Food and Drug Co., says that if enough workers are on duty, the stocking will get done on time and the staff still can deal with customers.

People who work in the stores say there's a core of regulars who do their primary shopping for the week late at night, filling carts full of groceries rather than popping in to grab treats to go with the late movie or milk for breakfast.

"The needs of our customers vary," Gilford says. "With so many people being in different shifts and with such busy lives that everyone leads, we find that it offers an additional convenience to be open 24 hours."

THE MAIN mission of a supermarket's night staff is to get the store ready for the next day. Restocking and cleanup are done at night, and stores with bakeries have those workers in early enough to put fresh pastry on shelves in time for breakfast.

Stores that lock up at night reason that night operations will be done faster and with fewer hassles if there are no interruptions from customers. And some customers might be put off by having to navigate around boxes or the person running the floor waxing machine.

Demographic measurements suggest that sleeping patterns of Americans are changing. But whether that bodes well for all-night markets remains unclear.

John Robinson, a sociology professor at the University of Maryland-College Park, says the most striking trend is that more people are going to bed early so they can get an early start on the upcoming day. Robinson, director of the university's Use of Time Project, says early morning, not late evening, is "the true new time frontier" as more people are out of bed and preparing for the day by 5:46 a.m.

HE ACKNOWLEDGES that 24-hour supermarkets fill a need for people with unconventional schedules but says in an interview that he sees supermarkets in Washington, D.C., abandoning the format and closing before midnight.

Supermarket competition has something to do with all the around-the-clock stores in the metropolitan area. The intermittent coupon wars waged by the stores are clear evidence of how closely they watch one another in pricing and marketing.

Some stores don't want to give up a competitive edge by not matching rivals that are open all the time.

Douglas Christopher, a retail analyst at Crowell Weedon & Co. in Los Angeles, calls that a "copycat" strategy. He says most stores wouldn't miss the small volume of revenue they generate between midnight and 5 or 6 a.m.

"Supermarket managements have traditionally been copycat managements," Christopher says. "Their focus has been less on the customer and more on gimmicks and other things."

Schedules may require late shopping

By Glen Creno
N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX — The freshly cleaned floors of the supermarket gleam like polished ice as Melanie Lenz steers her shopping cart through the aisles, picking up eggs, Glad bags, Coca-Cola. Like many people, she shops for groceries on her day off.

Unlike many people, Lenz prefers to shop in the middle of the night. It fits her schedule — her husband is home with their children — and the hours don't bother her because she works at night.

Shopping at night isn't a runaway trend, though supermarkets that stay open 24 hours a day would like it to be.

But there is a dedicated core of people — late-shift workers, night owls and schedule jugglers like Lenz — who shop at night when the big stores are quiet and the only obstacles are workers shining the floors and stocking shelves.

"We have regulars who come in from, like, Intel," says Kriss Bond, a cashier who works 1 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. at an Albertsons in a Phoenix suburb. "They do their main grocery shopping."

Lenz, in fact, works where she shops. She's a night-shift cashier at a Smitty's in Phoenix. She works nights for the same reason she shops late — it fits her schedule for caring for her children.

For Lenz, night time is the right time to get in and out of the store quickly.

"I've been known to spend 3 1/2 to four hours in the store when I have the kids with me. It takes forever. This cuts it about in half," she says.

Lenz recognizes the regulars who come to her Smitty's store at night. They shop late for the same reason she does — children.

"It's easier for them to come out . . . after the children go to sleep," she says. "We get quite a few close to 12 (midnight). These people are buying cartfuls of groceries."

Many of the Phoenix area's supermarkets are open 24 hours a day. Managers say it's a convenience for customers and that the stores might as well be open because the night staff will be there anyway, cleaning, restocking and baking.

Others don't see the demand and lock up so restocking and other night duties aren't interrupted.

Bashas' Markets has only one store in the area open 24 hours.

"We try and reflect the neighborhood," spokeswoman Becca Anderson says. "And if we have a neighborhood that pretty much shuts down at 10 p.m., we'll shut the store, too."

Lenz says she has no trouble finding what she wants at night, that the store is well stocked and easy to get around.

Debbii Tysz, a Phoenix bartender who usually gets off work about 2 a.m., used to shop late at night but was disappointed with the selection of merchandise.

"They tend not to have the freshest fruits or vegetables. Or if they're restocking everything, something is gone off a shelf."

Tysz sometimes runs into a store after work to grab an item or two but does her main grocery shopping around 7 or 8 p.m. That lets her avoid the nine-to-fivers who clog stores after work.

"I love to go grocery shopping, and I want it to be a pleasant experience. That's why I don't go in at those busy, busy times," she says.

Supermarket night workers see a different side of life — teens looking for munchies, sick people buying medicine, partyers and an occasional transient.

Bond is talking about that at 3:45 one morning when a young man with long, sandy-brown hair jogs into the store.

He's wearing a loose T-shirt, faded jeans, an earring and a harried look. "Where's the roses?" he asks, looking over a shoulder as he plunges down an aisle.

Bond points, and in short order he's standing at a cash register holding a red rose. Yes, he nervously admits, there's a crisis in his personal life and he hopes the rose will help patch it up.

Bond smiles.

"I hope it works," she tells the man as he hurries from the bright, empty store into the waning night.

DEAR ABBY

Journalist's legacy is suggestion for living

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Recently I received a letter from Lilian Thorpe of Pinehurst, N.C., advising me that her father, Wilferd Peterson, had passed away at the age of 94. He was a fine journalist whose poem "Slow Me Down, Lord" has appeared in my column over the years, and also appears in "Keepers," my booklet of the most requested poems and essays.

Van Buren

Mr. Peterson was best known as the author of the "Art of Living" books, eight volumes of essays that appeared in 42 Sunday newspaper magazines during the 1960s and '70s. His books sold more than a million copies during that time.

May I share his thoughts on success from "The Art of Living Treasure Chest" (Simon and Schuster, 1977):

"There are no secrets of success. Success is doing the things you know you should do. Success is not doing the things you know you should not do. Success is discovering your best talents, skills and abilities, and applying them where they will make the most effective contribution to your fellow man. Success is not arriving at the summit of a mountain as a final destination. It is a continuing upward spiral of progress. It is perpetual growth."

However, my all-time favorite is "Slow Me Down, Lord," and to honor his memory, here it is again:

SLOW ME DOWN, LORD

Slow me down, Lord!
Ease the pounding of my heart
By the quieting of my mind.
Steady my harried pace
With a vision of the eternal reach of time.
Give me,
Amidst the confusions of my day,
The calmness of the everlasting hills.
Break the tensions of my nerves
With the soothing music of the sighing streams
That live in my memory.
Help me to know
The magical restoring power of sleep.
Teach me the art
Of taking minute vacations of slowing down to look at a flower;
To chat with an old friend or to make a new one;
To pat a stray dog;
To watch a spider build a web;
To smile at a child;
Or to read a few lines from a good book.
Remind me each day
That the race is not always to the swift;
That there is more to life than increasing its speed.
Let me look upward
Into the branches of the towering oak
And know that it grew slowly and well.
Slow me down, Lord,
And inspire me to send my roots deep
Into the soil of life's enduring values
That I may grow toward the stars
Of my greater destiny.

Runway models difficult to find

N.Y. Times News Service

Booking top models for shows has become a last-minute crap shoot for designers as models have become superstars and mini-conglomerates with unprecedented demands on their time.

"It used to be that a week before, you knew what girls were doing the shows and who you were using," said Michael Kors, who has traditionally used modeling's top names, from Christy Turlington to Naomi Campbell. Now, he said, he will be lucky if he has firm information by Friday on which models will do his show the following Wednesday.

Designers were once able to avoid this cliffhanger because top runway models worked primarily on the runway and commercial models were confined to advertising and magazines. Now the top mannequins may be juggling shoots, television shows, movie projects and obligations from cosmetic contracts.

"Runway girls" do not exist anymore, said Gerald Marie, president of Elite Europe, which represents one of the most in-demand names this season, the sloe-eyed brunette Shalome. Shalome was not available for the New York runways last season because she was shooting an ad campaign with Karl Lagerfeld for Chanel.

"These problems really didn't start happening until the designers began to understand that they could multiply their media impact putting the photographic girls on the runway," he said.

Bridget Hall's exclusive contract to advertise Ralph Lauren apparel and fragrance bars her from walking the catwalk for other designers for the first time this season, said Katie Ford, a president of Ford Models. Georgianna Robertson, who starred as a model in Robert Altman's film "Ready-to-Wear," is shooting the new Ace Ventura movie.

Moms have different styles with each child

Often when I'm interviewed, I'm asked what kind of a mother I am. That's a lot like asking me to make up my own test and grade it myself. Who knows? I showed up for it. I worked a lot of overtime. Had a lot of help from Drs. Spock, Denton and Ruth. Not one of my kids is working on a "Mommie" book. (Only one has an agent.)

I suspect that if you talked with each of the three you would get a different answer because I was three different people. No one got the same mother.

Child No. 1 got the Antiseptic Queen, a thin, nervous woman endowed with patience and dedicated to staying at home boiling things all day long, as if she were living through a typhoid epidemic. She boiled pacifiers, toys and diapers, recorded the baby's BMs, and took pictures every four days for the baby album. She hand-smocked little dresses, served homemade baby food in a warmer dish with little ducks floating around the rim, and actually needlepointed a 4-by-6 rug of a sailboat for the nursery.

Child No. 2 got Super Sufferer, who had stretch marks on her face from overeating and dragged around in her husband's shirts. She couldn't get a meal together until 7 and fell asleep during a root canal. With regularity, she flunked the wife/mother quizzes in magazines. She told her children the tooth fairy resorted to checks because the IRS needed proof of the deductions. Apathy reigned. The baby food included a hot dog on a paper plate. The musical potty seat played "The Impossible Dream," and she once rescued the pacifier from the coffee grounds and rinsed it with the garden hose before sticking it in baby's mouth.

Child No. 3 got Mother Mellow, who didn't much care what he did just so long as he had clean hands and his own door key. Birth and graduation pictures were on the same film. The sailboat rug faded when it was washed and was now used for a dog bed. She was a woman with no nervous system even when the baby bit into a tube of paint tint and urinated blue for a week. This mother actually revealed a sense of humor and admitted to mistakes from time to time. She ironed on demand and just the parts that showed. The only items in the baby book were a footprint and congratulations from the insurance agent.

Small wonder kiss-and-tell books are written by the firstborn.

MC faculty and staff set to welcome first-time students

■ "We realize that the transition into college with testing, financial aid and choosing the right classes can be stressful. That's why we have freshman orientation, to help students, answer their questions and assist with testing in a friendly setting," says Ricardo Saldaña about goals for freshman orientation.

TASP, placement testing, financial aid, choosing a major, transferring classes—these are only a few of the issues first-time college students face.

Answering these questions and helping a student become "a better freshman quicker" is the goal of Midland College's freshman orientation, according to Registrar Don Cates.

"Attending freshman orientation at Midland College is a way to get off to the best start in school," he said.

Students may choose from one of four, all-day orientation sessions July 31-August 3 that will include general information about Midland College, how to choose a major, placement testing, scholarship and financial aid information, transferring classes to another school, and how to make out a class schedule.

Each afternoon is set aside for faculty advising and registration. Each one-day session is designed to give new students the help they need to get registered for college and to have a successful freshman year when classes begin.

"I want freshman orientation to make students aware of what they need to do and who they can talk to for further help," Counselor Ricardo Saldaña said. Students attending orientation will get to know all the counselors, he said.

One of the biggest benefits of going to orientation is to get the low-down on testing—including the state-required TASP test and Midland College's placement testing that may be required before students enroll in math and English classes.

Testing to determine skill levels is part of the process of entering college and is designed to work for the benefit of the student, according to both Saldaña and Testing Counselor Claudia Hinds.

"One of the requirements for going to college is to go through placement testing and satisfy the requirements of TASP," Hinds said.

"We realize that the transition into college with testing, financial aid and choosing the right classes can be stressful," Saldaña said. "That's why we have freshman orientation— to help students through the process, answer their questions and help them with testing in a friendly setting."

For students who have not taken the TASP the next test date is Sept. 16. Students may take up to nine semester hours before taking the test. Test booklets and registration forms are available from the Student Services office.

Students may take placement tests Monday, July 24 in Student Services or they may take placement tests during freshman orientation. However, they may not have time to take the test and finish registering on the same day.

Other subjects such as scholarships, financial aid and the honors program will be discussed during the orientation sessions. Transfer guides will be distributed so that those students planning to continue their education at a university will be aware of the course requirements for transferring their credits.

Students unable to attend freshman orientation may early register August 7-10 or they may attend regular registration August 23. Permits to register will be issued August 14-17.

After freshman orientation, participating students will have only one more obligation—to succeed in their first year of higher education.

With these questions about college life answered, the path to college should be an easier one this fall.

For more information about freshman orientation, please call 685-4500.

Early Registration Dates

July 24-27—Returning students may early register by phone or in person.

July 31-August 3—Freshman Orientation and early registration.

August 7-10—Early registration for all students.

August 21—Arena registration. Pick up time permits beginning August 14.

Call 685-4501 for more information.

MC offers "directions" for computer users

Easing on down the information superhighway is easy if you have good directions and Midland College is just the place to learn internet navigation, programs or programming and computer repair.

MC has all the computer courses you need, but like finding information on the information superhighway, you just have to know the right exit.

When you're looking for a computer course at MC, start with the listing "Computer Information Systems." Here you'll find classes that will teach you both computer software and hardware—from programming to computer maintenance and repair.

"Computer Information Systems" is only the beginning. To find other course listings for computer classes try: "Accounting," which teaches microcomputer-based accounting; "Communications" for lab classes in desktop publishing; "Drafting" for computer graphics; "Electronics" for more hardware classes, and "Legal Assistance" for legal research and legal drafting.

Another important source for computer classes is "Office Systems Technology," which teaches several different software classes from desktop publishing to spreadsheet programs.

The Continuing Education department at Midland College offers courses such as "Computer and You," "WordPerfect 6.0 for Windows and "Quickbooks for Small Businesses."

Many other courses offer computer-assisted instruction that train students on the most popular software. For more information about finding the computer class you need, call 685-4506.

ELISE COOMBES

MC's lower tuition rate best source for fall aid

The fall semester is less than six weeks away and most of Midland College's financial aid has already been distributed, but one of the best sources of financial aid is the choice to attend a junior college for the first two years.

Coombes

Because of state funding and local taxing districts, community or junior colleges are able to significantly reduce the cost of a college education.

For instance, the estimated cost of tuition and fees for a full-time student at Midland College for a year is $684. At other area universities the yearly cost of tuition and fees range from $1,400 to more than $1,700. Tuition and fees at a private university can be almost $9,000.

Add in the cost of living expenses, and the cost can be more than $10,000 a year to attend a public college or university.

Students should consider the option of attending locally for the first year or two, and with its lower tuition rate, Midland College may save the student enough money to pay for the next two years of tuition at a four-year school.

For students who still need financial help to attend college, the first step in applying for need-based or performance-based aid is to stop by the Financial Aid Office in the Student Activities Office.

Although applications for financial aid should have been completed in May, a limited amount of financial aid still is available.

Eligibility for need-based scholarships is determined by filling out the Free Financial Aid Application. The results of the application will determine how much aid the student is eligible for. Depending on eligibility, students may receive a limited amount of Pell Grant money this fall although they need to be prepared to pay tuition and fees and be reimbursed later. A few emergency loans also may still be available for eligible students.

The staff is available on a daily basis from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Thursday. Call 685-4693 for more information.

Abell-Hanger Scholarship recipients beginning their community service hours are reminded that hours must be completed with one of the more than 50 agencies approved by Midland College.

Hours completed with organizations not on the list will not count toward the Abell-Hanger requirement. For questions about approved agencies, come by the Financial Aid Office to pick up a booklet or call 685-4528.

Chasing dreams

Stephen Madrid has been collaborating with Stephen Zimmer, producer and director of the newly formed Diatheke Etrone, LTD. With Diatheke Etrone, LTD., Madrid made his film debut starring as Carl Preston in "The Question Why," as shown at right and below with co-stars Tony Carrillo of Abilene and Jennifer Malpus, who also attended Midland High. He made his film directorial debut co-directing and co-producing a second short film, "Talents." Both were released in March for the national home video market. Hardin-Simmons Chapel, pictured above, served as location for "The Question Why."

Former Midlander Stephen Madrid has wondered — "It's an actor's life. Who wants it?" For him, the answer is simple. He does. "I'm finding a career doing what I love," Madrid said. "That was acting and still is acting." At 23, Madrid, who is the son of Midlanders Terry and Rudy Madrid, has already mapped out three "different plans of attack" for his future. All revolve around the world of theater whether it is on film or live.

"This is one of my long-term goals — to have my own theater," said Madrid, who has spent his summer working at three different non-profit theaters in Texas, including Midland Community Theatre, after being awarded the Multicultural Initiatives Internship by the Texas Non-profit Theatres.

"Everything I'm doing now will be put to that effort eventually. And that may not be until later, later, later in life. There's too much to do right now."

First, he hopes to act. He traces his interest in being an actor back to day care at Midland Christian, where he attended school until the ninth grade.

"I'm sitting in day care and one of my favorite toys was this hollowed out television set," Madrid recalled. "We'd get in it and goof around and play inside it. It was a huge TV. And after a while, if we were really goofy, some other kids would sit around and watch us play around. We'd make them laugh. That's where I first started. I don't even remember how old I was."

But, Midland Christian didn't offer a theater program.

"They had no theater program whatsoever," Madrid said. "Nothing. They encouraged creative writing, so I wrote a lot when I was a kid and read a lot.

"I remember some teacher telling us to be a flower. That's it. Be a flower. Really intense stuff. I think, instead, I was a weed. Just to be different."

When he got to Midland High School, Madrid said, "I tried everything. A couple of sports clubs. That sort of thing. I couldn't find my place. Theater was the last thing I tried. That was my home. That was it."

Once he knew the direction he wanted to take in life, he said, "I was hungry to do all I could. I read everything (Bob) Fennell put in front of me. Did everything he asked."

Following his high school graduation, he spent two years at Midland College. "I took everything they offered, and there was nothing else. I knew I wanted to transfer somewhere to continue, and I wanted to get as much experience as possible."

MADRID: Former Midlander has plan of action

He found himself knocking at Midland Community Theatre's door.

"At MCT if you're a volunteer and you want to do theater, you can do every aspect of theater," said Madrid, who served two internships at MCT. "This was great. It was hands on experience. Nothing I could learn out of a book."

While he was at MC, he was seen on the CBS affiliate, KOSA-TV, as co-anchor for Musica Tejana and a reporter for Tiempo Tejano.

"That was fun," Madrid said. "It was all that Tejano music. Talk about alternative music. This was back when Selena was just starting out.

"Everybody at KOSA was so nice and friendly. They really started my interest in film and television. Being in front of a camera was so different than being on stage."

The experience at KOSA was invaluable in preparing Madrid for his life's "third plan of attack" — film.

This year, Madrid has been collaborating with Stephen Zimmer, producer and director of the newly formed Diatheke Eirene (Old Greek for Covenant of Peace), LTD., a multimedia company based in Lexington, Ky.

"He loves film," Madrid said of Zimmer. "That's his passion. He's worked a lot in the Kentucky area. He's directed some industrials for people in that area. He knows, like an actor, you don't just waltz into Los Angeles and boom — magic. So he's created his own opportunity; his own venue. He's an independent film maker. Working with him and his company — I love it."

With Diatheke Eirene, LTD., Madrid has made his film debut starring as Carl Preston in "The Question Why" and film directorial debut co-directing and co-producing two short films, "Talents," released in March for the national home video market.

His television experience also prepared him for the types of auditions currently coming his way.

"I get called on more Spanish auditions than I do English," Madrid said. "I didn't expect that at all. Even working with KOSA wasn't that bilingual. Not on the air. Not in West Texas. Our show was in English.

"But it was a bilingual audience. When they would throw parties for us, and we would go, they were Spanish speaking. It was real supportive. I never knew doing that would help prepare me to do bilingual auditions.

"I'm so comfortable. I'm very confident, and I don't know if I would have that confidence if I hadn't worked with KOSA and gone out and met those people who watched that show."

Although Madrid no longer lives here, he has family that does. His mother, Terry, works at Parker and Parsley, and his father, Rudy, is the manager of the Golden Corral. His 16-year-old brother, Nathan, is a student at Lee High School, and his 13-year-old sister, Adina, is a student at Goddard Junior High. Michael Madrid, his 18-year-old brother, is at Sul Ross University, Alpine.

When Madrid graduated from MC, he had scholarships available to him at Texas Tech University and the University of Texas at Austin. He elected instead to accept a scholarship at Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene, graduating with a bachelor of arts degree in December of 1994.

"I was so used to doing everything I could myself and getting taught on that more or less one-on-one, interactive manner," said Madrid, who now lives in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. "I knew if I would have been at Tech or UT, I'd be an undergraduate in a class ruled by the upper graduates. They do the directing. They get the nice roles.

"In fact, most of my teachers would have been graduate students. I didn't want that. I was looking for school that were smaller where I could continue to get hands on skills and learn every aspect of theater, not just acting."

He received the type of individual training he desired from Dr. James Ivey. "He was wonderful. He had just been a professional actor in Dallas. He quit and got his doctorate from Tech and found his passion in teaching. And he's young."

While an undergraduate student at Hardin-Simmons, Madrid received awards for Best Actor, Best Featured Actor and an Irene Ryan Nomination at the American College Theatre Festival. He was the director of the Moment's Notice Improvisational Troupe and president of the Zeta Theta cast of Alpha Psi Omega, the national honorary theater company.

When Madrid received his bachelor of arts degree, Ivey gave him the same advice he'd heard years before from Bob Fennell at Midland High School.

"He talked to me about the reality of pursuing a career in acting. There's a lot of people that want to be an actor, and everybody was going to tell me I was crazy, and I should have something to fall back on. But, if I would give it my all, if I would do it 100 percent, that it was just like any other job. There's always a lot of people going for it. It's only those that have that passion and are truly talented who will succeed."

Before he left Abilene, he also found the answer to another question he'd asked himself — Who wants to share an actor's life?

"We met in college my senior year," Madrid said, recalling the first time he saw his wife, Tiffany Milmo, who is now a bilingual teacher in Irving. "I never saw her before. I was at the theater, of course, and I met her. She just walked in, and I noticed her. We kept looking each other up and down.

"I didn't tell anybody about it. I thought a lot about her. I didn't even know who she was.

"It's like one of those weird fantasy type things. I'd start thinking about her and imagine I was never going to see her again." Madrid said laughing. "You know, that dramatic actor type thing. I had just gotten out of a relationship. I was already resigned to being single with two cats — Sadie and Indigo."

She called him. Once they began dating and he realized the relationship was getting serious, Madrid said, "I tried to dissuade her from me. I tried everything and she was so persistent. She had made up her mind.

I told her of all the hard times I was going to go through and all the struggles I would have, and she looked at me and said, 'Yeah, but I would be there right beside you always.'

"It finally dawned on me she wanted to be with me and go through all that. I'm finding out now she's a great source of strength for me.

"I don't know if I could be doing the things I'm doing now — or even attempting the things I'm doing now — without her, her support and encouragement. Bruce (Hennie & Co.), my agent, told me that Tiffany is my greatest asset. It wasn't my talent or luck. Tiffany. What can you say? Wow."

Comedy Central makes moves to repackage traditional standup

By Warren Berger
N.Y. Times News Service

Patsy and Edina, the boozy protagonists of the British sitcom "Absolutely Fabulous," tend to wreak havoc wherever they stagger.

So it should come as no surprise that they've turned things upside down this summer in their American home, the Comedy Central cable channel.

First, the fun part: Last month's season premiere of the show set a ratings record for four-year-old Comedy Central, and next week's series finale (July 31 at 8 p.m.; episodes are repeated on Sunday nights at 11) should draw similarly strong numbers on a channel whose typical prime-time ratings of .3 or .4 are only about one-fourth as high as those of cable channels like USA and Lifetime.

Comedy Central has tried to ride the wave of "Ab Fab" (as its fans call it) this summer by introducing a large slate of new shows, some of which have shown promise.

They include another British import, "Drop the Dead Donkey"; a quirky animated show, "Dr. Katz: Professional Therapist," and "Comedy Product," an experimental stand-up show with Janeane Garofalo as host.

With ratings already up in recent weeks, this could turn out to be the channel's most productive summer season to date (Comedy Central opens shows in summer months while the networks are virtually closed down for the season), thanks in large part to "Absolutely Fabulous."

But Patsy and Edina have apparently caused some trouble too. In June, Comedy Central's president, Robert Kreek, was fired by the channel's board (made up of representatives of HBO and MTV, Comedy Central's co-owners), joining Mitchell Semel, the previously dismissed programming chief.

Part of the reason for the firings, insiders say, was that the two had initially rejected "Absolutely Fabulous" when it became available.

The frenzy surrounding the show may also complicate the task of Kreek's successor, the former MTV programmer Doug Herzog, 36, who must now lead a network whose most vital asset is about to run dry.

The creator of "Absolutely Fabulous," Jennifer Saunders, has said she will produce no more new episodes, and the rights to an American version of the series have been sold to Roseanne. (Reruns, however, will continue and are likely to do well.)

Nevertheless, the comedy's high ratings may prompt Herzog to re-evaluate some fundamental programming strategies of Comedy Central, which had been geared primarily to a young male audience with shows featuring stand-up routines, sketch comedy patterned after "Saturday Night Live" and seemingly endless reruns of "The Benny Hill Show."

"I think the success of 'Ab Fab' has shown everyone here that the channel doesn't need to be as narrowly focused as might have been previously thought," Herzog says.

Though he has announced no firm plans yet (he has been on the job only a couple of weeks), Herzog has hinted that the channel may create new shows in the mold of "Absolutely Fabulous" and that it will also increasingly move in the direction of fresher, more topical pro-

Midlander shows sculptures at bank

A showing of bronze sculptures by Midland artist Betty Sue Rose is on display in the lobby of Midland American Bank, 401 W. Texas Ave., through July 31.

The daughter of a ranch foreman, Ms. Rose gained a perspective of the working cowboy and his heritage from her childhood. An accomplished oil painter and watercolorist, she studied with artist sculptor Roland Thomason.

Ms. Rose added bronze to her list of achievements after studying the medium at a Cowboy Artists of America workshop in Kerrville.

The works may be viewed between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JULY 23, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A change of residence or employment will give you a whole new attitude. Others sense your growing self-confidence and show greater respect for your ideas. Spend some time reviewing your finances before the winter holidays arrive. An accountant's advice could save big dollars in 1996. Expand your circle of close friends. A second marriage enjoys favorable infuences next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Wood Harrelson, mystery writer Raymond Chandler, pitcher Don Drysdale, actress Belinda Montgomery.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spend some time getting ready for a busy week ahead, then turn your attention to family affairs. A special birthday or anniversary deserves a celebration.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance takes a temporary back seat to family concerns. A sermon could bring inspiration or new hope. Surrounding yourself with positive people will be easy if you join an organization dedicated to helping others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A close liaison is under considerable pressure. Conforming to the norm may be out of line with your current thinking. A partner may be more conventional than you think.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Guard your health by getting more R and R. That worn-out feeling could be the result of too much running around. Slow down a bit. Quiet pursuits such as reading will help recharge your batteries.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Roll out the welcome mat for visitors. Demonstrate your talents as the perfect host! Too much physical exertion can be almost as harmful as too little exercise. Emphasize moderation in everything you do.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You had better take a relationship seriously. Your partner does! A change of plan is not as upsetting as imagined. Watching a favorite video helps you deal with stress. Choose a really funny movie.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your expectations could be unrealistic now. A feeling of lethargy leads you to postpone a meeting or project. Be hospitable if you receive an unexpected visitor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If troubled about a relationship, try to put some distance between the two of you. Visiting someone in a hospital or nursing home is an excellent way to spread cheer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may not be thrilled by an invitation. Nevertheless, your attendance could lead to new business or financial gains. Be a good sport! Guests from afar liven up the proceedings. Pamper loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Enjoy a "do what you like" day but leave the welcome mat out. A drop-in guest could bring good news from loved ones at a distance. Follow newspaper job leads first thing tomorrow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You really are a softy at heart! Someone appeals to your good nature. Heed your instincts and do what you can to help. Getting in touch with old friends reacquaints you with your cultural heritage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A combination of work and play could get you off the hook with people who want your company. Everyone who is young at heart should have a marvelous time at a well-organized event.

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
2♡	2NT	Pass	3♠
Pass	4♠	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♣

Study the four hands above, then decide whether, after the lead of the two of clubs, you would rather declare or defend four spades.

After West's weak two-heart opening bid and North's two no trump overcall, we approve of South's decision to bid three spades. Should North's heart stopper be the ace rather than the king, it is advantageous to have the opening lead come up to the South hand.

Suppose you elect to declare. Although West's lead is almost surely a singleton, it costs nothing to insert dummy's jack and capture the queen with the king. You cash the ace and king of diamonds, discarding a club, and ruff a diamond. The ace of spades provides the entry for you to ruff dummy's remaining diamond. Now you exit with a trump to West's queen.

Down to nothing but hearts, West must give you two heart tricks whether the defender chooses to lead the ace or a low heart. Now you lead another trump. This time East must win and lead a club away from the ten, giving you two tricks with your combined A 9 tenace. Right?

Wrong. East can overtake partner's queen of spades with the king and return a spade, stranding you with three more losers — two hearts and a club. Try it.

So you want to defend? Sorry. Discard a heart, not a club, on the second diamond. After continuing along the same line, the sacrifice of the trump trick no longer works because you can cash the ace of clubs and exit with a club, setting up the nine of clubs as your fulfilling trick. The only losers are one trump, one heart and one club. And if East doesn't overtake the spade queen, your club loser vanishes.

COMEDY: Channel seeks new packaging

gramming and experimental formats.

Herzog isn't the first Comedy Central executive to come up with these ideas. In fact, his predecessors had already begun to shift the channel away from stand-up routines and reruns, as is evident in this summer's eclectic schedule.

"Dr. Katz," the channel's first animated show, has an understated, sly comic sensibility that has drawn rave reviews from a number of critics. Another new Comedy Central show is "The Clinic," a spoof of medical dramas making its debut on Aug. 13, with Brandon Tartikoff as co-producer.

The channel has also been experimenting with new ways to present stand-up comedy, particularly now that the comedy-club scene has become glutted.

On "Comedy Product," Ms. Garofalo introduces comedians who are as likely to sit down as stand up, as they engage in stream-of-consciousness patter and character-based portrayals.

In some ways, "Dr. Katz," too, represents an attempt to repackage stand-up: the voices belong mostly to comedians, who insert bits of their comedy routines into the story.

Comedy Channel has also tried to become more timely and topical in the last two years, scheduling current-events shows like tongue-in-cheek coverage of presidential speeches. Perhaps its most successful foray into topical humor has been "Politically Incorrect," the nightly talk show whose provocative host, Bill Maher, presides over a motley group of celebrities debating issues of the day.

Along with these programming shifts has come some success on the business side. Comedy Central should be in 40 million households by year end, up about 25 percent from last year. Its advertising was up 50 percent last year and a projected 38 percent this year.

Given that momentum, why the sudden change in leadership? To some extent, the channel has been a tumultuous place since 1991, when it was formed by the merging of HBO's Comedy Channel and MTV's Ha! channel. "After the merger, it was like a war between the two sides," says Mike Klinghoffer, a former programmer at the channel.

Kreek is credited with eventually making peace, but he and his programmers had to answer to two demanding bosses — Tom Freston, MTV's chief executive, and Michael Fuchs, HBO's — both of whom have high expectations for the channel. "We think Comedy Central has tremendous potential," says Fuchs. "It's time now to take it to the next level."

Meanwhile, Freston, who hired Herzog, is hoping he can bring some of the flavor of MTV to Comedy Central. "Our goal is to give Comedy Central that kind of a distinct identity — rather than just having it thought of as the channel that runs 'Absolutely Fabulous.'"

Exhibit hosted

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, is hosting through Aug. 30 the exhibition, "The Soviets: Soviet Photography, 1974-1990."

This exhibition of black and while photographs documents the lives of ordinary people living through extraordinary times. The work includes photos taken in Soviet cities and towns of peasants, city families, "punk rockers" and church-goers from the Cold War years through the beginning of the dissolution of the Soviet Union.

Curated by William Wright, the exhibition is on loan from the Harry ransom Center of the University of Texas, Austin.

In 1988, Abilene photographer Bill Wright traveled to what was them the Soviet Union to explore the state of photography behind the Iron Curtain. He found the work of Soviet photographers to be vibrant and creative.

In studying Soviet photography, Wright also observed the "artistic evolution" which has taken place over a period of 20 years. The photographers worked in a variety of traditions. He met with the Soviet artists' guild and exchanged American photos for Soviet photos as a part of Glasnost.

Sponsorship for this exhibition is provided by Continental Products of Texas. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

Also on display through July 30 is The Water Color Horizon Group Juried Exhibition. The show was juried by Pam Price, chairman of the art department at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

In addition, the Institute is looking for more volunteers. A total of 25 positions are available. Those positions include gallery attendants, museum shop attendants, exhibit preparation crew and docents.

Singer to come home to perform at Museum of the Southwest

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

When baritone Tony Lackland of Dallas performs today at the Museum of the Southwest, the concert will be a homecoming for the former organist and choirmaster of Midland's First Christian Church.

"My life has changed so much since I left Midland," said Lackland, who lived here from 1987-1990. "When I left, and everyone at First Christian sent their wishes with me to do my studies at Southern Methodist University, here I'm coming back to sing. It's a great honor and thrill for me."

The 7:45 p.m. Summer Sundays Lawn Concert performance is Lackland's second at the museum. His first was in 1987 when he moved to Midland. Then, the museum was seeking an accompanist.

Lackland, who was organist and choirmaster at First Christian Church from 1987-90, also served as Dean of the West Texas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Now he is coordinator of Liturgical Music at Prince of Peace Catholic Community, Plano. He also is teaching privately, and one of his students is a former Midlander, Justin MaGee, who recently received a "top" scholarship from SMU.

"The voice faculty said he was by far the best candidate of that day, and it showed in the scholarship that he got," Lackland said. "He (MaGee) was so surprised he called me before he called his mother. I think I was much more excited than he was."

The Lawn Concerts are family entertainment held on the grounds of the Museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. Those attending are invited to bring seating and picnics or snacks. This eighth season of Museum Lawn Concerts is sponsored in part by the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

For the free outdoor concert Lackland will perform "Songs of Romance."

His program will include excerpts from his July recital in Grenoble, France, which featured works by Brahms, Schubert, Strauss and Ravel. Today's program will end with a set of spirituals and works by Gershwin, Webber and Kern. He will be accompanied by Rebecca Sawyer, a member of the music staff at First Presbyterian Church.

Lackland, who started piano study at the age of 14 in his home state of New Jersey, attended Westminster Choir College, Princeton.

After he completed his bachelor of music degree in voice performance at SMU, Lackland received the Rotary Foundation Graduate Fellowship to study for a year in Freiburg, Germany atAlbert Ludwigs Universitat and The Staatliche Hochschule for Musik, where he continued his studies in German and musicology. His vocal debut was in Europe at an International Festival in Tubingen, Germany.

While living in Germany, he studied opera with a well-known voice teacher, Horst Gunter.

"He's an internationally know master teacher," Lackland said. "That year, he had only accepted about nine international students, and I was one of them. It was an honor, especially from this guy. One of his number one opera students is Thomas Hampson. He sings throughout the world."

Studying with Gunter, Lackland said, "Opened many doors for me. I sang in Freiburg, Germany, for audiences there, and in Metz, France, and Naples, Italy. I just came back from singing a concert in Grenoble, France."

He hopes some day to return to Europe to live.

"Right now, I'm living in Dallas. It's a big city. It's a wonderful city, but I miss the intimacy of the European cities," Lackland said. "In America, we live to work, and, in Europe, they pretty much work to live and enjoying life is much more important. That's something that I was introduced to, and I enjoyed so much.

"I remember walking in Freiburg, and young kids, 7 years old, 8 years old, are humming, singing the text to Brahms, Schubert. They know Beethoven symphonies at such young ages. For me, as a musician, that would be the perfect atmosphere of life."

Though climate was in many ways harsher, music of 40s is better, more wholesome than today's pop

By Stephen Holden
N.Y. Times News Service

What term could be more oxymoronic than "wartime nostalgia"? Does anyone really want a return to the days of Hitler, Hiroshima and Auschwitz?

Yet in America, where no bombs fell and no storm troopers landed during World War II, Hollywood and Tin Pan Alley created a seductive wartime dream world of heroics and hearts and flowers that grows more appealing as the decades slip away.

Fifty years after the end of the World War II, the music that wafted through our national dream life in the early 1940s is regarded by many as the country's finest pop moment.

Nostalgia for the 40s dates back to the early 1970s when Bette Midler scored a top 10 single with "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy," a 1941 Andrews Sisters hit.

More recently, cabaret singers like Maureen McGovern, Andrea Marcovicci and Mary Cleere Haran have devoted entire programs to the 1940s, and Barry Manilow has recorded an album of big-band standards. Harry Connick Jr. presents himself as a born-in-New-Orleans reincarnation of Frank Sinatra and Dick Haymes.

Discussing his passion for 40s pop, Connick has used words like "clean" to describe its charm. He doesn't just mean its lack of sexual explicitness but its simplicity, integrity and upbeat attitude.

When America declared war on Japan in 1941, the swing era was already in full flower, with Glenn Miller's band Orchestra, defining the optimum musical balance between the visceral and the romantic.

As America went to war, Irving Berlin's "White Christmas," crooned by Bing Crosby in a voice rich with reassurance and faith, projected a Currier and Ives vision of a pristine, snow-christened America to soldiers abroad and their loved ones at home.

Crosby, who was 40 when Pearl Harbor was bombed, reigned as the vocal embodiment of American benevolence, while Sinatra, who was 13 1/2 years younger, brought a new current of erotic tenderness and vulnerability into pop singing.

Hits like "I Dream of You," "If You Are But a Dream," "Dream" and "Put Your Dreams Away" were sugarcoated valentines counseling patience and delayed gratification to the wives and girlfriends of American soldiers.

Few sounds are more compellingly wistful than the youthful Sinatra's ardent murmurings. Monday, a three-night celebration of the singer's music will begin with Michael Feinstein singing "Night and Day," Sinatra's first hit after leaving the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra.

In that historic recording, Axel Stordahl's exquisite orchestration, which brought the harmonic vocabulary of Puccini and Rachmaninoff into the pop arena, defined Sinatra's war-years sound.

Just as they are today, pop music's sound, structure and technology during the war years were a populist esthetic mirror of their time and place. With the birth of swing in the late 1930s, American pop achieved a blend of sophistication and utopian optimism that prevailed for nearly a decade.

But if the ascendance of swing expressed a remarkable unanimity of spirit in America, that feeling coincided with shared adversity: a Depression followed by a world war.

The music of the early-40s may have been better made and more wholesome than much of today's pop, but the social and economic climate was in many ways harsher. The standard of living was much lower, and individual opportunities for self-fulfillment were relatively limited.

Feminism had subsided after women won the vote in 1920, the civil rights and gay liberation movements were still years away, and there was little in the way of teen-age culture.

In this puritanical climate, the more pop-oriented swing bands like those of Glenn Miller and the Dorsey brothers made music that presented the ensemble as a model community ruled by a strong (often dictatorial) male leader surrounded by deferential henchmen and largely anonymous instrumentalists.

Although technical expertise within one's assigned role was respected, teamwork was valued above everything, and obedience to authority obligatory.

While the voices of leading swing band vocalists like Bob Eberly, Ray Eberle, Tex Beneke, Marion Hutton and Helen O'Connell had their distinctive traits, they were ultimately homogenous with the ensemble. Their rhythmic and timbral inflections and freedom of interpretative expression were limited by rigid, preset musical formats.

The smoothness of the ensemble blend reflected an unquestioned belief in social decorum, in being "nice," at all costs. The band arrangements emphasized neat, orderly patterns and a group harmony that was emotional as well as musical.

Among vocal groups like the Pied Pipers, the Modernaires and the Andrews Sisters, individual styles were subordinated to a scrupulously homogenized sound, accented by synchronized movements and invariably cheery smiles. This team spirit mirrored a society in which it was assumed that every able-bodied man would gladly serve his country or risk social ostracism.

V.J. Day, on Aug. 15, 1945, burst the bubble. Within the next year and a half, eight of the country's most popular swing bands, including those of Benny Goodman and Tommy Dorsey had broken up. (Glenn Miller had died in December 1944 when his plane was lost over the English Channel.)

Led by Sinatra, the era of the model community gave way to the era of the model singer. The reign of the genteel pop crooner ended with the arrival of Elvis Presley and the comeback of Sinatra, who had reinvented himself as the new king of swing.

In the more sophisticated swing revival that Sinatra oversaw, the singer ruled, with the band arrangements custom-made to suit his moods. Although obedience to the leader was still necessary, an aura of "niceness" was no longer a requirement.

Cooperation, teamwork and an enforced civility had brought America out of the Depression and enabled the country to triumph in a world war that almost everyone agreed had been worth fighting. It was time for an explosion of individual voices.

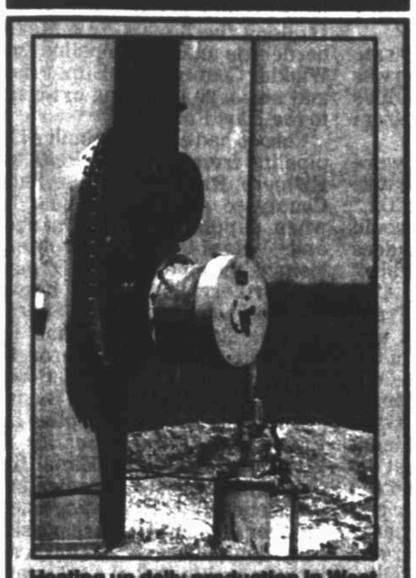
PERMIAN BASIN
OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, JULY 23, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING



Heating up daily production in West Texas.

Rigs improve

Drilling continued to improve in July, with both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts rising for the week ended July 14.

According to Baker Hughes Inc., the Permian Basin rig count rose six to 117 for the week. A year ago the count was 108.

Nationally, the rig count rose six to 720 for the week; the count was 773 a year earlier.

Pipelines bought

DENVER -- Western Gas Resources Inc. has signed a definitive agreement to purchase eight West Texas gathering systems from Transwestern Gathering Co. and Enron Permian Gathering Inc. for an undisclosed sum. Closing is expected to occur by year-end 1995. The closing is subject to FERC abandonment and certain other items including expiration of the Hart-Scott-Rodino ("HSR") Act waiting period.

The acquisition consists of approximately 231 miles of pipeline in the Permian Basin. Current gas throughput on the systems totals approximately 145 MMcf per day from approximately 170 wells. The gathering systems are located near Western's recently acquired Oasis gathering assets.

Busy pumpjacks make no barrels at the Petroleum Museum.

Prices weaken

Crude futures fell to their lowest level since December, weakened by a fall in gasoline prices. Traders on the New York Mercantile Exchange were concerned that ample gasoline supplies and lower profit margins would cause refineries to reduce their crude purchases.

Prices had tried to during the week, rising as high as $17.35 a barrel. But late in the week, West Texas Intermediate for August delivery retreated to $17.01 a barrel. The posted price was $15.25 a barrel.

Araxas moves

HOUSTON - Araxas Energy Corp. has announced relocation of its corporate headquarters to Houston. Previously based in Oklahoma, the company elected to move its base of operations in order to better facilitate management of its expanding oil and gas exploration and production activities in the Gulf Coast region.

Contributing to Araxas' rapid development is the company's recent merger with New West Resources Inc., a subsidiary of Midland-based Cap Rock Electric Cooperative Inc. The new company has a reserve base valued at close to $20 million on an "SEC 10" basis. New West now retains a 25 percent interest in Araxas and will contribute capital to the company's future exploration activities.

Exxon income up 84 percent

■ Earnings report sends positive signal to oil industry.

IRVING (NYT) — Exxon Corp. said its second-quarter earnings increased 84 percent, sending Wall Street a sign that energy companies around the world could reap the benefits of higher oil prices and stronger margins.

Analysts were predicting a sharp rise in Exxon's earnings after the nation's largest oil company moved up the date for releasing its results.

Exxon was one of eight major U.S. oil companies scheduled to report earnings Monday. Earlier in the week the company decided to release them Thursday.

Exxon, based in the Dallas suburb of Irving, Texas, posted its highest-ever profit for the second quarter. All its operations reported earnings increases. The sharpest rise came from Exxon's chemical division, whose earnings almost tripled.

Net income rose to $1.63 billion, or $1.30 a share, from $885 million, or 70 cents, a year ago.

Revenue increased almost 16 percent to $31.67 billion from $27.32 billion.

Wall Street expected Exxon to report earnings of $1.15 a share, according to an average estimate from 19 analysts surveyed by Zacks Investment Research.

Exxon said its worldwide crude production increased to 1.74 million barrels a day, up from 1.69 million barrels.

Basin companies expanding Yegua

By Staff Reports

Two Permian Basin oil companies have help expand the Yegua gas sand of South Texas with significant completions this week.

Parallel Petroleum Corp., Midland, announced completion of the Cox & Perkins Runnells No. 1, in Wharton County, while Patterson Energy of Snyder announced completion of the Richards 2-A also in Wharton County. Both wells utilized 3-D seismic.

The Cox & Perkins well is located approximately 3,000 feet east of the Mollnar No. 1 discovery well, which was completed in early April and is currently producing approximately 5 million cubic feet of natural gas and 150 barrels of condensate per day.

The open flow potential of the well was calculated to be 13 million cubic feet of natural gas and 583 barrels of condensate per day. Flowing tubing pressures ranged from 5,700 to 5,365 pounds per square inch. The production is from perforations made selectively in a 74-foot interval from 9,168 to 9,242 feet in the Downdip Expanded Yegua sand.

Parallel owns a 20.0% working interest and a 15.0% net revenue interest in the Runnells No. 1 well. The operator intends to produce the well at a rate of approximately 5 million cubic feet of natural gas and 225 barrels of condensate per day.

CO2 on the march

Top, operator, working interest owners, engineers and representatives of Amoco and Enron celebrate as the CO2 valve is turned on the East Fort project. Top left, the CO2 sales point for the project, and above a typical producer and tank battery in the field. No special equipment or coatings were used in the installation.

East Ford latest CO2 project

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The East Ford field, in far northern Loving County, is one of the most unusual CO2 floods to ever come on line, yet is very typical of the small, nearly depleted reservoirs that is expected to make up the inventory of independent CO2 projects in the future.

Not only did the operator Orla Petco elect not to go with any special equipment or coatings whatsoever, the company also elected to go straight from primary to secondary. The East Ford has never had any water put to it.

Neither does the project have special alloys, coatings or cement-coated pipe, just straight off the shelf valves and tubulars — a very unusual strategy for corrosive CO2 floods.

But to add a crowning touch of irony, J.M.C. Richie, who discovered the field in 1960 as an eastward extension to the Ford field, says he first thought about a CO2 flood for the field as early as 1968.

Richie said successful recovery operations in the Two Freds field, which involved injection of gas from the Mivida field, had prompted him to think of CO2 in the East Ford. "We knew it would work if we could only get the gas out here."

Now down to 30 barrels per day of production from 15 wells, the field has produced 3.5 million barrels since discovery. With the $2.5 million CO2 flood, production from the Upper Delaware field is expected to peak at over 800 barrels per day and yield at least another 3.5 million barrels.

Richie estimates that it will take 20 billion cubic feet of CO2, injected for 11 years at the rate of 5 million cubic feet per day to sweep the project. The entire gas stream will be reinjected.

Servicing the international oil industry

Odessa rig package heads for Russian oil fields

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Two Odessa firms are playing a major hand in the development of Russia's vast oil reserves.

K&B Trucking and Permian Producers Inc. is supplying all the field equipment, including two workover rigs and one drilling rig, that will be used by Xavier Inc. of Houston in its Russian Black Gold Venture for development of two major fields. The rigs will be used in development of projects in the Stavropol Region of Russia and the Kamennoye field of Western Siberia.

K&B supplied the iron (rigs, carriers and equipment) while Permian Producers is responsible for design, fabrication, modification and crews. The total $8 million "Black Gold" package includes: skid mounted generators for the all-electric rigs, reverse units, drill pipe, spare parts, blow out preventers and living quarters for the crews. Rig up trucks and logging trucks are also included in the package.

"The totally portable workover rigs and the drilling rig will also be totally self-contained," said Keith Kirkland, who has traveled the country putting the rig package together "There is even a contingent supply of spare parts to cover every occasion, because it's a long way from Odessa to Siberia."

Before it's all over, the rigs will be drilling and recompleting 700 to 3,000 wells in the two Russian regions. The arctic drilling rig consists of an OIME rig mounted on a 1982 Ideco carrier, purchased in Brighton, Colorado. While it has been around for several years, the OIME rig, found at Freer, Texas, and rated to 12,000 feet, has never been on a hole, says Kirkland.

Robert Parsons, Chief Financial Officer for Xavier, said if the Russian projects go as planned, 28 more similar rig packages could be going to Russia. Parson said Xavier has a 20 year concession to evaluate 18 fields, and an undefined number of productive sand zones in the fields.

Xavier will have a 50 percent interest in incremental production above a predetermined base production. Parson said the potential in Russia is unbelievable.

"So far we have only looked at one sand in one field; we have 17 more fields to go," said Parsons. "We are looking for a return of 150 to 300 percent on our investment. There's no doubt about it, the 21st Century will belong to Russia."

He compared the country to America following the Civil War, but said the disarray seemed to be getting better. "The shortages have disappeared. There are no more shortages of clothes or food. The Russian people are the most literate people in the world and the country has unbelievable natural resources in oil, natural gas, timber, diamonds, and gold."

Kirkland said that as Russia continues to develop its reserves, Odessa would be the focus of increased fabrication and packaging of oilfield equipment as more and more U.S. firms engage in Russian oil and gas ventures.

"Oil companies look to Odessa, because this is where the expertise is. They can get more done with fewer dollars and fewer people than anywhere else," said Kirkland.

Apache Corp.

HOUSTON – Apache Corp. reported second-quarter net income of $0.5 million or 1 cent per share. A nonrecurring, pretax charge of $10 million associated with the DEKALB Energy Co. merger reduced earnings by 12 cents per share. Excluding this one-time charge, Apache earned $9.2 million or 13 cents per share. Second-quarter 1994 earnings were $12.9 million or 19 cents per share. Also in connection with the merger, as required under a pooling of interests, Apache has restated previously reported financial results to reflect the combination of operations.

Restated, net income for the first six months of 1995 amounted to $6.6 million or 7 cents per share ($13.3 million or 19 cents per share before the one-time charge), versus $21.1 million or 30 cents per share in the prior-year first half.

Cash flow from operations increased during both periods, rising in the second quarter to $97.9 million from $86.4 million a year earlier and in the first half to $175.4 million from $163.7 million at mid-year 1994. Second-quarter cash flows benefited from the filing of a $13.6 million Alternative Minimum Tax refund, which more than offset the impact of the previously mentioned merger charge.

The Philadelphia-based company reported an 89 percent increase in second-quarter profits, rising to $109 million, or $1.02 a share, from $12 million, or 11 cents, a year earlier.

Revenues rose to $5.5 billion, a 21.5 percent increase over the same period a year ago, when revenues were $4.3 billion, the company said.

Sun credited the rise to its chemicals business and international oil production. Chemicals profits rose to $24 million from $2 million and international oil profits rose more than 60 percent to $13 million.

The company also cut losses from its fuels and lubricants operations and realized income from the sale of its remaining interest in Suncor, a Canadian petroleum company.

In the first half of the year, Sun earned $102 million, or 95 cents per share, on revenues of $5.5 billion. A year earlier the profit was $39 million, or 36 cents per share, on revenues of $4.3 billion.

FIELD: East Ford expected to be first of many projects

(From 1G)

Engineer Bill Flanders, president of Transpetco Engineering of Midland and Shreveport, has been involved in a number of CO2 projects with Richie. He says the intent is to repressure the reservoir to missibility using CO2, and predicts it will take about 6 mcf of CO2 gas to recover one barrel of oil.

"We decided to go straight to CO2, because of the very low recovery rate from waterflooding in the Upper Delaware or Ramsey Sand."

He said the initial recovery rate for waterflood in the formation was only eight percent and sometimes water would block the CO2 from contacting with the oil.

"Too many reservoirs were waterflooded, simply because water was cheaper than CO2," said Richie. "We felt water would be minimally effective. Oil does not let go easily in the Delaware."

Flanders, who has done CO2 reservoir work for the Two Freds field, Hansford-Farmington and North Farnsworth projects in the Texas panhandle, and did the initial reservoir work for the Elmar field, characterized the Delaware as a highly uniform, finegrained, clean formation with almost no fractures "It plugs easily and the water that is in the reservoir can scale up quickly," said Flanders.

However, because the reservoir has 30 milidarcies of permeability, Flanders says Richie and working partner Great Western Drilling will be able to install one of the greatest cost-saving measures of all — a wider pattern. There will be eight injectors and 12 producers in the project, and patterns will be widened from the present 20 acres to 35. "We felt it might take longer, but we could recover just as much oil with the wider pattern at far less cost."

The fact that no concessions at all were made in the plumbing of the project was a second great cost saver, says Petroleum Engineer Bob Orr, who installed the project.

"We believe in using up the entire life of all production equipment and then replacing only what is needed," said Orr. No special concessions were made in downhole equipment, flow lines or tank batteries.

The East Ford is expected to be one of the first of many CO2 projects to come in the remote reaches along the Loving-New Mexico border via an Enron pipeline from Winkler County to the Elmar field, and now a 20 mile long extension to the East Ford.

Conoco had originally built a CO2 pipeline from the Pikes Peak and Elsinore Ranch fields in Pecos County to supply the area, but when supplies proved up short and right-of-way problems loomed, the pipeline and CO2 plans for northern Loving and Reeves Counties were put on hold. Sources say the Conoco pipeline has now been dug up, leaving Enron the sole supplier of CO2 to the far-western edge of the Delaware Basin.

Amoco is the CO2 supplier and Enron is the transporter for the East Ford, and like the Elmar field the project was developed under a production payment arrangement.

Other projects that are possible candidates now that CO2 has made its way to this part of the oilpatch are the Tunstill and Ford Geraldine. Bill Flanders says there are at least a dozen Delaware fields in that part of the Delaware Basin are candidates. A secondary target is the Cherry Canyon fields.

"No one has yet put CO2 into the water laden Cherry Canyon," said Richie, who was one of the most active drillers in drilling the formation in the early seventies, "but I think we can do it."

Staff Reports

A San Andres discovery has been recorded in Gaines County, 10.5 miles southwest of Seminole.

UNION OIL CO. OF CALIFORNIA potentialed the No. 1 Caledonia to pump 317 barrels of 24.8 gravity crude and 46 Mcfd from perforations 4,592 to 4,624 ft. No treatment was reported.

Permitted as a 4,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 4,680 ft. and plugged back to 4,674 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,676 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 2,888 ft. and San Andres at 4,432 ft. on ground elevation of 3,424 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 2,173 ft. from east lines of Section 366, Block G, CCSD&RGNG survey, Abst. 813.

Lea discovery gains confirmation well

STEVENS & TULL INC. has confirmed a year-old shallow Yates discovery in Lea County, N.M. with completion of an offset a quarter-mile north and 15 miles west of Eunice. The well offsets 13,000 ft. Morrow gas production in the Gramma Ridge East field as well.

On potential test, the No. 3 New Mexico "DW" State pumped 41 barrels of 34 gravity crude, 60 Mcfd and 84 barrels of water from perforations 3,738 to 3,874 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL and fractured with 62,700 gallons of gel and 141,000 lbs. 16/30 sand.

Total depth was 4,050 ft. and the well was plugged back to 3,971 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,046 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,647 ft., include the Rustler Anhydrite at 500 ft., Salado Salt from 720 to 1,700, Yates at 3,736 and Seven Rivers at 4,008 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and west lines of Section 6, T22s, R33e.

Stevens & Tull completed the No. 2 New Mexico "DW" State in May 1994 as a Yates discovery, flowing 252 barrels of crude, 70 Mcfd and 65 barrels of water.

The well was cleaned out to 4,150 ft. and plugged back to 4,106 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,650 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 2,767 ft., Queen at 3,078 and San Andres at 3,817 ft.

Location is 1,667 ft. from south and 5,341 ft. from west lines of Section 12, Block 119, GC&SF survey.

The well was originally planned as a producer in the USM (Queen) field and plugged and abandoned on September 1987 at total depth of 3,650 ft.

Hallwood adds two to new Reagan field

HALLWOOD PETROLEUM INC. has added two producers to the new SRH (Clearfork) field of Reagan County, eight miles north of Big Lake.

Hallwood reentered the No. 4 Rocker "B," completing it to pump four barrels of 39 gravity crude, 14 Mcfd and three barrels of water. Production was natural from perforations 4,538 to 4,978 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from north and west lines of Section 123, Block 1, T&P survey.

The well was originally drilled by Texam Oil Corp. and copmleted as a producer in the Spraberry (Trend Area) and Hallwood plans to commingle production from the two zones.

Hallwood also reentered the No. 5 Rocker "B" SRH, testing it to pump four barrels of 39 gravity crude, 10 Mcfd and seven barrels of water from perforations 4,607 to 4,781 ft. The interval was treated with 45,000 lbs. sand and 17,850 gallons of gel.

El Paso Natural Gas joins plan to build Latin American pipelines

EL PASO, Texas — El Paso Natural Gas Co. and Empresas ICA Sociedad Controladora, S.A. de C.V. have entered into an agreement for the joint development, construction, operation and ownership of natural gas pipeline systems and other infrastructure projects, in Mexico, Central America, and South America.

EPG is one of the largest natural gas pipeline transmission companies in the United States and currently operates 17,000 miles of pipe. EPG's pipeline system parallels the United States/Mexico border from El Paso, Texas to California. ICA is Mexico's largest engineering and construction company and plays a leading role in the development of civil and infrastructure projects in Mexico and Central America and South America, including hydropower generation facilities. EPG and ICA are partners in the Samalayuca II project, a 700 MW power station to be built in Chihuahua, Mexico about 30 miles south of El Paso, Texas.

"We are very pleased with the agreement and believe it represents a commitment on the part of both companies to play major roles in the emerging opportunities for the development of energy infrastructure in Mexico and Latin America," said William A. Wise, chairman, president and chief executive officer of El Paso Natural Gas Company. "ICA's international engineering and construction experience, combined with El Paso's energy, natural gas marketing and operating experience enables us to offer Mexico the best attributes of a partnership between U.S. and Mexican companies that are uniquely qualified to build the energy infrastructure that Mexico seeks to revitalize its economy."

Bernardo Quintana, president and chief executive officer of Empresas ICA, commented, "For ICA, the association with El Paso is one more step that will allow us to participate in the construction and operation of energy facilities, with the knowledge and support of a leading American company with extensive operating experience. Mexico and other Latin American countries require a huge development of energy infrastructure, and we will work to provide it."

EPG operates one of the nation's largest field and mainline natural gas transmission systems, connecting natural gas supply regions in New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado to markets in California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and Mexico.

Barrett Resources, Plains complete merger of companies

DENVER — Barrett Resources Corp. announced the completion of the previously announced merger of Barrett and Plains Petroleum Co. Stockholders of the two companies voted to approve the transaction in special meetings held July 18, 1995.

"We believe this merger creates one of the premier domestic gas exploration and production companies," stated William J. Barrett, chairman and chief executive officer.

Pursuant to the merger, each Plains stockholder has received 1.3 shares of Barrett common stock in exchange for each remaining share of Plains stock. Barrett has issued an additional 13.4 million shares of common stock, bringing its total shares outstanding to 25.4 million shares.

Barrett is a Denver-based independent natural gas and oil exploration and production company that is also involved in gas gathering, marketing, and trading activities. Barrett's properties are focused primarily in the Rocky Mountain region of Colorado and Wyoming and the Mid-continent area of Kansas and Oklahoma.

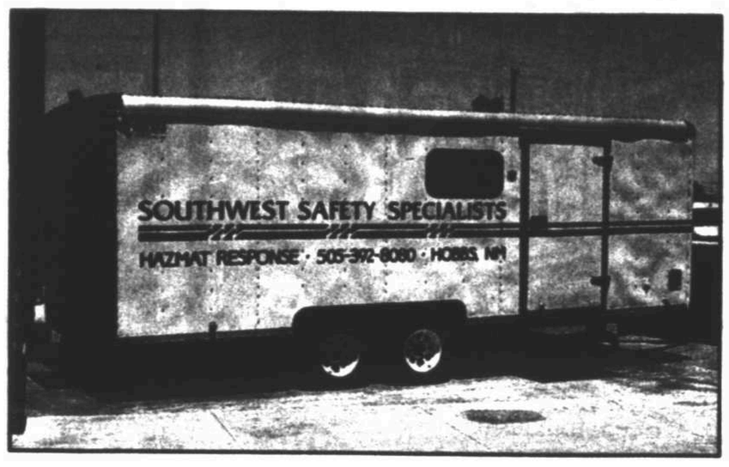
Southwest Safety inks agreement with major environmental firm

Hobbs-based Southwest Safety Specialists has agreed to provide emergency response in this area for Environmental Management, Inc. Southwest President Scott Magness called EMI "one of the three world leaders in Hazardous Materials (HazMat) control."

Southwest Safety will provide emergency HazMat response for EMI in New Mexico, Texas, Colorado and Oklahoma.

"They will also provide us with support personnel and other resources," Magness reported. "This will really be a reciprocal agreement."

Magness defined a HazMat emergency as anything involving the spillage of dangerous chemicals, such as a train derailment, plane crash, truck wreck or the like. "Sometimes we're there when the drug task force raids a PCP lab. Those kinds of drugs and the chemicals needed to process them can be very dangerous."



Southwest Safety will be providing emergency HazMat response in New Mexico, Texas, Colorado and Oklahoma for Environmental Management, Inc.

Hands-on safety training is Southwest's specialty

Your company rocks along for months or years, handling various oilfield or other chemicals with no problems. Then suddenly, the unthinkable happens and there's an accident, a spill or worse.

As a safety-conscious manager, you're glad you sent your employees through training for just this eventuality. Then you discover that the training consisted only of a few videos and maybe a classroom discussion. Your people never actually did any drills nor did they put on a Hazardous Materials (HazMat) suit.

A mostly preventable disaster is now unfolding.

"At Southwest Safety Specialists, we take seriously the fact that injuries and even fatalities can be prevented with proper, thorough training," said Southwest President and founder Scott Magness.

That is why all training, including the HazMat courses, involve trainees in solving real-life scenarios. It's also why all training is site-specific, even if conducted at the company's Hobbs training center.

"We relate all training to the company's plant," Magness said. "Generic training is not nearly as valuable as learning what to do at your own site."

Magness gave an example of the company's hands-on training. "We have a 34 foot tower, used for confined-space rescue training. This tower replicates the tray towers that separate crude oil components at refineries. Trainees get hands-on practice in these towers at such things as rope rescue and high-angle confined-space rescue, as well as learning how to package and evacuate injured people from these incredibly cramped spaces."

"There is no way the viewing of a video, or even a hundred videos, could ever prepare anyone for what this involves. They actually must crawl in that space and bring somebody out. We also have tanks and vessels to simulate virtually any other scenario possible."

Magness said all of his trainers themselves handle HazMat situations regularly. They train based on what they know and do, not on what they have read.

Southwest Safety also carries a huge line of supplies to help complete a client's safety preparation.

Southwest Safety Specialists was founded in 1992 in Hobbs, New Mexico. They offer a wide range of hands-on safety training courses as well as safety supplies. They also provide emergency response services. Training is available at their site or at a client's location. For more information, call 1-505-392-8080.

Weathering the Current Market

Raul Benavides

All West Texas investors should keep the following information and investing guidelines in mind in order to weather the current market.

They say the market "climbs a wall of worry," and that seems to be true. Last year's rising interest rates led some analysts to believe the stock market was headed for a tumble. Since then, the market has climbed more than 900 points and has surpassed the magical 4700 mark, leaving others to believe the market must surely be headed for a correction.

In the bond market, Congress' talk of a flat federal tax has left an uneasy feeling among the municipal bond community. If a flat tax rate were adopted, municipal bonds would lose the advantage they offer over taxable investments and would become less attractive.

Of course, not one knows for sure what will happen in either market. The stock market may take a short breather, and Congress may indeed adopt a flat federal tax rate. On the other hand, the stock market may continue its climb for awhile longer, and Congress' talk of tax reform may prove to be just that—talk.

Seasoned investors know this uncertainty is typical of the markets. It's what makes investing so challenging—and so rewarding. This uncertainty is also why prudent investors heed the following common-sense guidelines.

"The most important thing to remember when investing is to avoid rash decisions based on the current market situation."

Raul Benavides
Edward D. Jones & Co.

1 Invest for the long term.

Regardless of what type of investment you choose, one thing is certain—the market will always rise and fall in the short term. Adopting and maintaining a long-term investment strategy, however, will increase your opportunities for investment success. When choosing between a buy-and-hold strategy and trying to time the market, there is no choice. As one Stanford University study showed, you would have to time the market correctly at least 82 percent of the time to do as well as an investor who buys and holds stock. So remember, it's time in the market, not timing the market that's crucial.

2 Invest Systematically.

Another excellent investment strategy for smoothing the sometimes turbulent effects of the market is to invest a fixed amount at regular intervals. Also called dollar-cost averaging, this strategy allows you to buy more shares when prices fall and fewer shares when prices are high. Over the long term, systematic investing will result in an average cost that's actually lower than the average price of the security.

3 Buy quality.

When selecting your investments, don't seek out the hottest or most popular investment. Instead look for individual stocks and stock mutual funds that have demonstrated consistent growth in earning and dividends over an extended period of time.

4 Diversify.

By investing in a variety of investments, you can reduce risk while potentially increasing your return. One study found that 90 percent of a portfolio's overall performance depends on how well diversified it is. Also, when diversifying your investment dollars, remember to diversify not only by investment type but also by maturities as well as industry and geography.

The most important thing to remember when investing is to avoid rash decisions based on the current market situation. If you've chosen quality, long-term investments and your investment need and objectives haven't changed, you should probably stick with your present investment strategy.

Raul Benavides believes that developing a relationship with an investment advisor and following these guidelines will assist West Texans in making solid investment decisions. His office is located at 2200 West Wadley, Suite 19. The office number is (915) 570-7930. If he can be of any assistance to you, please call or come by the Edward D. Jones office.

Oryx completes sale of North Sea field

DALLAS (AP) — Oryx Energy has completed the sale of its interest in a North Sea field for $270 million.

The sale will help company achieve its goal of reducing debt to about $1.3 billion six months ahead of schedule, officials said.

The Dallas-based independent oil and gas company sold its 15.5 percent interest in the North Sea Alba field to a London subsidiary of Houston-based Union Texas Petroleum Holdings.

"We are pleased to achieve this major milestone in our debt reduction program, and look forward to completing the balance of the program," Robert L. Keiser, Oryx's chairman and CEO, said in a prepared statement.

The sale was part of a new corporate direction announced in January that consisted of four components: a more conservative investment program, restoration of profitability, reduction of debt by $400 million and repositioning for growth in value once the restructuring was complete.

Oryx said it gained $90 million on the transaction, which will be recognized upon closing in the third quarter. The proceeds represented $5.10 per barrel of reserves and a cash flow multiple of six times, the company said.

Transpetco plans to construct CO2 pipeline

SHREVEPORT, La. - Transpetco Transportation Co. announced that it will be constructing and operating a 120-mile, 12.75 inch carbon dioxide transmission pipeline from the Bravo Dome area of Union County, N.M. to a point just north of Guymon, Texas County, in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

This Transpetco Bravo Pipeline, scheduled fro completion by the end of 1995, will have the capacity to transport up to 175 million cubic feet per day of CO2 and will be the first major supply of CO2 for the Oklahoma Panhandle and adjacent oil producing areas in Texas and southwest Kansas.

Mobil Exploration and Producing U.S. Inc. is to be the initial customer, shipping up to 90 million cubic feet per day to its Postle field enhanced oil recovery projects near Guymon. Transpetco Transport is engaged in active discussions with field operators in the Texas-Oklahoma Panhandle and southwestern Kansas to arrange for supply and transport of CO2 and to launch EOR projects.

The Transpetco Bravo Pipeline project is owned by Transpetco Pipeline Co. L.P., a group of private investors active in CO2 transmission and EOR. Transpetco Transport Co. of Shreveport is the operator of the project. Eagleton Engineering Co. of Houston is the project's prime contractor and is handling all phases of construction and completion of the pipeline.

Challenge, discovery and just plain fun are among the world open to children at Wonder World

'Child care at its best' is more than motto at Wonder World

Wonder World is dedicated to Midland's working parents and their children.

At the center, children are offered a clean, loving environment and are taught that learning is fun and exciting. Music, introduction to phonics and number manipulation are a part of the curriculum along with games, crafts and exercises.

Wonder World has adopted the Little People's Curriculum, which is developmentally appropriate for infants through school-aged children. The center also has an animal room, art room, library and game room apart from the regular classrooms, to offer a variety of environments during the day. Preschool program hours are 8:15-11:15 a.m.

The goal of Wonder World, as expressed by owner Becki Bates, is to offer children the very best environment in which to develop. Also the best certified staff to nurture and encourage children to develop their unique and special qualities.

The center provides children with plenty of space. This includes two separate recreation areas indoors with a total of more than 6,500 square feet. There is also a large outdoor play area.

Parents are always welcome at Wonder World and are encouraged to be as involved in their child's day care experience as possible.

Wonder World accepts children from birth to 12 years of age. Drop-ins are welcome when there is space available. The facility is open from 6:45 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. Monday through Friday.

New to Wonder World this year is a program available through West Texas Opportunities called "Self Arranged Child-Care." This program aids eligible families in paying for quality child care. Parents pay NO MONEY up front to get involved in the program and it has been extremely successful.

Call us for more information.

Registration for fall enrollment is open for all ages, including the after-school program

Wonder World is located at 2408 N. Big Spring Street. Call 686-0246 for more information.

St. Luke's has been providing quality child care since 1979.

St. Luke's meets each child's needs

St. Luke's United Methodist Church Child Development Program recognizes that children are one of our most precious resources and that there is a continuing need for quality child care for children of working-parent families in our church family and community. We recognize as a church family, we have resources that can be used to impact this program. Therefore St. Luke's has established a not-for-profit, racially nondiscriminatory program for the purpose of providing quality child care in a Christian education setting. We believe that each child is a valued individual and we are committed to responding to each child's needs by providing high quality care in a Christian atmosphere of love and support.

Children enrolled in the program will receive guidance governed by a curriculum focused on a basic Christian orientation.

St. Luke's CDP is a state licensed facility and also a CCMS Designated Vendor. We offer a full-time program, preschool program and after-school care.

Preschool encourages freedom of expression

Midland Lutheran Palaestra School (MLPS) provides a challenging environment where preschoolers (ages 3 and up) and kindergartners can expand their horizons in many ways: socially, physically, emotionally, spiritually, creatively and intellectually. It also is a place where there is freedom of expression and where children can experience the joy and excitement of learning, all within a loving atmosphere.

Part of MLP's name is Palaestra, meaning the combination of large and small motor skills to coordinate the total development of the child. The school has a full-scale gymnastics program. Not only is it geared to preschool age children and taught by trained gymnastics instructors, but even the equipment is especially built for preschoolers.

Even though academics are teacher directed, there is a lot of freedom within the structure.

MLPS's large playground encourages lots of healthy outdoor play. Field trips are also part of the program. Children are divided into small groups led by loving, caring teachers.

An extended-care program - 7:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday - is available. For both preschoolers and kindergarten age children; the program includes set activities, snacks, playtime and outside play.

Tuition and registration charges are competitive.

MLPS is located at 2705 W. Michigan Ave. Call 694-9322 for more information.

Discovery Zone offers, fun, affordable party alternative

Feel a panic coming on over that party you've promised to throw for your keiki? O.K., you've good reason to be concerned. Look what you're facing - just planning such a shindig could test Wylie Coyote's talents. Then there's the shopping, decorating, game monitoring, food serving, and then (gasp)...the clean up (and possible renovation of your living quarters) after it's all over.

But, wait! You don't have to face it alone. There are a number of establishments around the island that can take most of these troubles off your hands. About all you'll have to do is send out the invitations, maybe snap a few pictures during the proceedings, then stand back and accept compliments from other parents in attendance who haven't been quite as akama'i as you.

Oh, all right, you'll have to pay for the services rendered, but when you compare those charges with the time, effort and other costs of the alternative, you might be surprised at how inexpensively you can get yourself off the hook. And never overlook the impact that a big event at a real "party place" can have on young party-goers.

Discovery Zone

Discovery Zone

This Waikele entertainment center is sure to have kids' eyes (and tummy's bulging) over its offerings. Youngsters will have their very own party room as well as an experienced host or hostess. In addition, each child receives four tokens to spend on the Zone's fantastic game machines.

Package deals include a cake party for $10.99 per child, or a lunch or dinner party with the option of either pizza or hot dogs-and-chips for $12.99 per child. Drinks are included in these prices. Ice cream may be added for an additional 89 cents per child, while another $1.99 per keiki will add special goody bags for all. You can also turn any of these packages into an exciting Power Rangers party for an increase of $2.99 per youngster.

Each birthday child celebrating with a Discovery Zone party receives a gift T-shirt, or a mystery gift if the Power Rangers are invited.

If you'd prefer to have the entire facility to yourselves, special after-hours parties may be arranged. Other popular packages include overnight camp ins and fund-raising events.

A minimum of seven children are required for weekday parties and at least 10 on weekends. It's best to make reservations for your party two to three weeks ahead of time. Call 689-3866 to make reservations or for additional information.

Discovery Zone is unique place for birthday parties.

Bynum provides specialized services

Bynum School, in continuous operation since 1984 and licensed by the Department of Human Services, has provided specialized services for developmentally disabled children in the Permian Basin for eleven years. In August, 1994 we began a program intended to serve students who are at risk of dropping out of school. Bynum School can be utilized as an emergency placement or a short-term intervention strategy as well as a long-term placement for those students who are not yet ready to return to the regular campus classroom. In addition to our student population, approximately 90 to 100 children are provided consultative and evaluative services each year. Bynum School also provides professional staff training to other agencies and school districts, upon request.

Bynum School's mission is to provide unique learning opportunities that create positive changes in the lives of children who need specialized educational programs.

We admit students whose educational and social/emotional needs require intensive educational intervention. Programs are designed to serve students who are experiencing significant educational challenges and who may be at increased risk for dropping out of school, students with learning differences and students who have developmental disabilities.

An individualized differential curriculum that encourages kinesthetic and hands-on learning experiences is utilized in correlation with the Texas Essential Elements. Bynum School's objective is to minimize student stress while providing a flexible educational environment which promotes the development of academics and enhances self-esteem and performance.

Low student-to-teacher ratios enable teachers to formulate individual plans for each student to ensure a balanced and enriched environment. Emphasis is placed on developing and stimulating higher levels of active learning through creative experiences. Bynum School does not encourage passive learning or rote memorization of facts.

Bynum meets specific needs of each student.

Each student served by the school possesses a unique combination of learning abilities and challenges. Individualized and specialized programs are in operation throughout the twelve month school year which enable the student to reach their full potential. Our educational philosophy emphasizes early intervention and focuses on parent training and involvement to maximize effort and benefits. An Individual Program Plan (IPP) is developed for students to guide teachers and parents in their instructional activities. School hours are from 8:30 a.m. -3:30 p.m. After-school care is available until 5:30 p.m. each day.

Bynum School admits students without regard to race, color, sex, religion, ethnic or national origin. For further information, call 520-0075.

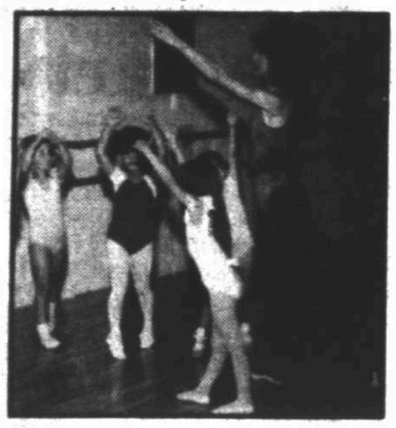
Studio One offers classes for all ages

Studio One of Dance and Gymnastics designs fun classes in a variety of subjects for ages six months to adult. Studio One, owned and operated by Dana White, is conveniently located on Andrews Highway in the Albertsons Shopping Center next to Morris Caffy's Appliances. Mrs. White instructs most of the classes that are very popular such as gymnastics/jazz, tap/jazz and ballet/tap/tumbling.

Starting time this summer and fall, Studio One will be offering several classes that are completely new to the Midland area. These include prenatal/postpartum exercise classes. Also new Studio One offers a Mom/Tot class where the mothers take class with the babies to enhance their motor development skills as well as their social skills and attention span. "Diaper Gym" includes songs and music as the moms work with the tots individually on various equipment.

Studio One also offers a class just for 2- and 3-year-olds. These are 30 minute classes combining tap and tumbling. Classes are designed to be fun while the children are learning rhythm and are using gross motor skills.



Studio One of Dance and Gymnastics is owned and operated by Dana White and located on Andrews Highway in the Albertsons Shopping Center.

For preschool to 7-year-olds, Studio One offers ballet, tap, tumbling combination or ballet, tap, jazz, gymnastics combination classes. These classes, which provide a sampling of a variety of subjects, are very popular with these age groups because of their short attention spans.

Eight-year-old through teen classes include jazz, gymnastics, tap, modeling, and cheerleading. Many of these dancers and gymnasts perform at local events such as Septemberfest, Celebration of the Arts, and the Lighting of the Christmas Tree.

Of special interest this fall is a baton class that will be taught by Gina Martin, eleven times the world champion in twirling! Baton classes are offered for 6 year olds and up.

Studio One School and Dance and Gymnastics now offers a viewing window so parents can watch their child in action.

Dana White also brings gymnastics and/or dance instruction to child-care facilities. Students 2 to 10 years old are accepted into her classes. Mrs. White provides all the necessary equipment and her classes are small, allowing for plenty of individual instruction.

Studio One will be having Open House for registration starting July 31, Monday to Friday from 4:00-6:00 p.m. Early Registration is suggested as fall classes begin August 14 and there is limited class space.

For more information on fall classes, contact Dana White at 699-2190.

Parents: Shop where teachers do their shopping for back-to-school

When little Johnny or Susie come home from their first day of school this year, don't be surprised if their list of classroom supplies is longer and more expensive. With most schools feeling the pain of budget cuts, not only will teachers have to dig into their own pockets a little deeper, but parents too will be asked to provide more and more supplies for their children including scissors, glue, crayons, and even paper.

Before you hunt all over town for the school box, handwriting tablet and pencils take a look through your local school supply store Creative Schoolhouse, a virtual "playground for learning" unmatched by your grocery or drug store. Your local school supply dealer works closely with area teachers to provide your children with the materials they need to learn and grow.

While teachers have known about the school supply store Creative Schoolhouse for years, you may not be aware that as a parent, you too are welcome to shop there as well. You'll benefit from a large selection of top selling educational products designed to catch the attention of today's children.

Your local educational dealer can act as your personal "consultant" in providing the special materials that make learning development fun. The knowledgeable salespeople at these specialty stores can direct you to the age-appropriate materials for all levels of learning. Here you'll find everything from inspirational stickers, finger paints, flashcards, work books, construction paper - everything you need for back to school.

Keep in mind your local school supply store when the holidays come around and you're looking for a present for your child or his or her teacher. Educational toys and games that teach children about the environment, math, language development, science, history, and geography offer a terrific opportunity to learn while having fun. In addition, a gift certificate makes a perfect gift for friends and family members in the teaching profession.

The National School Supply & Equipment Association, the trade association that represents and promotes the interests of the school market, would be delighted to provide you with a list of teacher stores in your area. Please call (800) 395-5550 or write to: NSSEA, 8300 Colesville Road, Suite 250, Silver Spring, MD 20910.

Montessori House is located at 3311 Andrews Highway.

School offers unique learning environment

Montessori House is a unique preschool and kindergarten. Here the children are participating in active learning. The child learns through movement and through meaningful contact with special materials. Attractive learning and discovery activities are neatly positioned on low shelves throughout the school. These activities are the children's "work." There are over two hundred activities from which to choose. The Montessori teacher is called a directress. She is trained to observe the needs and readiness of the child and to introduce him to the learning materials that will stimulate his development. As the child works on activities that are geared to his own level of readiness, he experiences success and builds a positive attitude toward learning.

The school is divided into four basic areas. They are practical life, sensorial, language, and mathematics. In all areas sensory-motor activities refine perceptions. Each learning experience begins with concrete materials and progresses toward the abstract. In the practical life area, children are learning to be independent. They are pouring, spooning, washing dishes, setting a table, or working with the button, snap, and tye frames. In the sensorial area, children are sharpening powers of observation with a wide range of sensory-discrimination activities. Each child works at his own mat. One may be working with weights, another with sound cubes, another may be grading color tablets. There are graduated cubes, cylinders, and rods to manipulate.

In the language area of the school, children are learning the sounds of the alphabet by using sound boxes. Each sound is introduced using a box of miniature objects with the same initial sound. The directress names each object and presents the sand-paper letter for the initial sound. The child repeats the sound as he traces the letter with his fingers. Other children are working on blending exercises using these sand-paper letters. Some children are using a movable alphabet to spell out words. Some are reading books.

The Montessori mathematics materials are remarkable. Small children begin counting spindles. Sandpaper numerals are traced and matched with the proper number of objects. The Golden Bead materials present units, tens, hundreds, and thousands. They are used to develop the child's understanding of the numbers 1 through 9,999. Children learn to add and subtract using these materials.

Montessori House curriculum also includes Spanish, music, science, and art. All activities in the Montessori environment build concentration and develop coordination and self-discipline. At Montessori House, the child is encouraged to work, to experiment, to create, to grow.

Classes are offered Monday through Friday mornings from 8:45 to 11:30 a.m. We are accepting registrations for kindergarten and preschool. Three and four-year-olds may choose between a five morning or three morning a week program. Both Laura Morrow and Debby Scarborough have university degrees in education, and both are certified Montessori directresses. The teacher-student ratio shall not exceed 1:10. Enrollment will be limited.

Go Gym specializes in instruction for children ages three and up.

Go Gym teaches gymnastics to children

GO GYM . . . nastics is a three-year-old company that specializes in quality gymnastic instruction for children ages three and up. We utilize vans to bring gymnastics equipment directly to the day-care center. Equipment includes bars, balance beams, tumbling mats, inclines donuts, rings, mini tramp, parachute and more.

The classes are usually taught in the activity room or classroom. Parents like our service because it gives their child something fun and exciting to look forward to and they do not have to take time out of their busy schedule to take them to evening classes.

We teach a curriculum called "KINDERGYM," a part of the "Fun and Fit" gymnastics program that includes instruction and skill development in tumbling, locomotor movement, bars, rings, vaulting, balance beam and ballet.

One or more trained and qualified instructors teach two forty-five minute classes per week for a nominal monthly fee.

We also can schedule one or two hour field trips to day cares and church schools on a biweekly or monthly basis.

GO GYM classes are fun and motivational for students and would greatly enhance any existing curriculum.

We also own and operate the Go GYM "GYRO RIDE," which we take to day-care centers. It can be ridden by children ages four and up. Teachers like it too! It is available on a per ride or per-hour basis.

For more information please contact Phillip Poor and GO GYM . . . nastics at 580-4843.

Heritage Preschool prepares children for kindergarten in Christian environment

Heritage Preschool has an excellent reputation in the community. Often, when kindergarten teachers are asked which preschools best prepare their students for school, Heritage Preschool is usually at the top of the list. Heritage Preschool has two main goals: 1) to provide a warm, friendly Christian environment for young children to learn and grow, and 2) for the children to be kindergarten ready when they graduate from Heritage. The following are some of the ways that Heritage achieves its goals.

- Make each child's experience a positive one.
- Encourage positive feelings about self, school and the environment.
- Stimulate each child's thought processes to bring greater understanding awareness and curiosity.
- Provide a classroom and program that can meet the needs of each individual child.
- Encourage each child to play and work well independently and in groups.
- Provide many different media for creative expression.
- Provide experiences with books, cassettes and other story-telling materials.

Heritage Preschool utilizes a varied curriculum in order to best meet the needs of the students. The curriculum includes Alphaphonics, theme based units, learning centers, music time, Bible lessons, circle time, outside playtime, field trips and special guest speakers.

Alphaphonics is a pre-kindergarten readiness program that teaches recognition, writing and pronunciation (phonics) of the letters of the alphabet. This is accomplished through worksheets, letter/object association and song. Children learn best when there is a planned curriculum of activities focused on a particular theme. Some of the themes that Heritage teaches include: I am special, Winter, Community Helpers, Underwater Life and Texas. An annual Rodeo Day is held each year at the conclusion of the Texas unit and it is a highlight and favorite of the children. In addition, a unit dealing with each holiday, including Thanksgiving, Christmas, Valentines Day, Easter and Mother's is taught and parties are utilized in the teaching process.

The teachers use various learning centers in the classroom. Included are the block center, home living center, art center, science center and game center. During circle time, the children participate in story time, discussion about the calendar and weather, show-and-tell and the Pledge of Allegiance. A monthly Bible lesson is taught each week and is reinforced through stories, puppets, crafts and acting out the story. The staff at Heritage Preschool consists of certified teachers who genuinely love to work with children. The teachers are trained in CPR and first and attend educational workshops each year. In addition to regular classroom teachers, a music teacher involves the children in fun musical activities each week via the piano, auto harp, children's musical instruments, cassette tapes and records.

The school is very bright and colorful with a warm "home" feeling. The classes have a small teacher/child ratio. In addition to the large, bright classrooms, there is a large cubby room with individual cubbies for each child. The kitchen comes in handy for various cooking activities. The snack prepared each day often relates to the letter-of-the-week. The large well-equipped playground is a favorite with the children at Heritage. The playground is divided into 2 areas: one with grass and the other with sand. This combination provides for a variety of activities. There are sings, tricycles, climbing apparatus, space shuttle, playground balls and digging toys for digging in the sand.

Heritage Preschool helps the children develop physically, emotionally, socially and spiritually in a Christian atmosphere. Each child is helped to experience success and is given many opportunities to learn through new activities. The program begins at 9:00 a.m. and dismisses at 11:30 a.m. The Monday/Wednesday/Friday program and the Tuesday/Thursday programs are available for 3-4 and 4 year-olds. Limited space is available for the fall semester. Please call 683-7343 for more information.

The problem with pasta

For the longest time diet experts have been telling us that pasta and other carbohydrates were the perfect foods, especially if you wanted to lose weight. Now it seems these starchy foods are bad for some people, actually contributing to obesity.

Dr. Richard Heller, professor of pathology at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, who, along with his wife, Dr. Rachael Heller, has just released a new book, Healthy Life (Dutton, 1995), estimates that 25 percent of the population are "insulin resistant."

"Carbohydrates are the worst thing they can eat because it causes them to overproduce insulin, which stimulates appetite, encourages the production of body fat and, over the long term, has serious health implications," says Dr. Heller.

If you are on a low-fat, high-carbohydrate diet, eat a lot, but are still hungry, you may be insulin resistant, suggest the Hellers.

If you suspect you may be insulin resistant, check with your doctor and pass on the pasta for now.

Local group studies effects of natural supplement on cholesterol levels

ODESSA —A cholesterol study is currently being conducted in the Midland/Odessa area of the effects of an all natural product on lowering cholesterol levels and 100 participants are needed for the study.

"Persons who have cholesterol problems or a family history of heart disease will be excellent participants for the study," project coordinator Mack Dalton said. Participants will have cholesterol levels tested before beginning the product, take the product as directed for one month, and then be retested at the end of end of the 30-day period to measure for changes in the cholesterol levels.

The product used in the study is BIOS LIFE 11, an all natural dietary fiber supplement developed by Rexall. Dalton said the one month supply of BIOS LIFE 11 will be provided at no cost to participants.

Dr. John Welch, a physician and surgeon for 30 years, conceived the study after seeing positive results in his patients' cholesterol levels after taking the supplement. The difference in BIOS LIFE 11 and cholesterol lowering drugs is that the Rexall product is not a drug but instead a nutritional product.

Cholesterol lowering drugs can cause liver damage, drug dependency and alter body chemistry. According to Welch, the all natural formula of BIOS LIFE 11 has no side effects and no interaction with other medications.

For the last 10 years, medical science has returned to the "basics" approach emphasizing prevention rather than disease treatment. "The only way we in the United States are going to control the explosion of health-care costs is to practice preventative medicine with proper diet and exercise," Welch said.

The average American diet contains from 10 to 12 grams of fiber, much less than the recommended 30 to 35 grams. Fast foods have become increasingly popular. The fat content of the American diet has increased and the fiber content has decreased.

Welch questions, "Can supplementation with fiber lower cholesterol without other major dietary change?"

The Midland/Odessa study is designed to test the effectiveness of the all natural dietary fiber supplement as a cholesterol lowering agent.

Persons interested in participating in the study can call 1-800-280-6142.

NORMAN EYOLFSON

Contrary to popular belief, "there is no convincing evidence" that yo-yo dieting, the losing and regaining of the same pounds many times over the years, adversely affects health, says a recent report by the National Task Force on the Prevention and Treatment of Obesity.

A recent article in Tufts University's Diet & Nutrition Letter agrees. It says the theory that yo-yo dieting is detrimental to health has become so ingrained that even some standard nutrition textbooks accept it as established fact. It notes one professional journal that suggested "remaining obese may be healthier than repeated failed attempts at permanently shedding excess pounds."

Obesity has long been considered a health hazard. It not only contributes to heart disease, high blood pressure and high cholesterol, but it also increases the tendency toward diabetes.

How difficult the "weight loss battle" is was illustrated in the findings of a study recently reported in the New England Journal of Medicine. The researchers speculate that each of us has a fat-to-muscle ratio that remains fairly stable throughout our lives and that it is for the most part genetically determined and regulated in the brain. Some subjects in the experiment were purposely "yo-yoed," explains Dr. Michael Rosenbaum, one of the study's leaders. These subjects showed no adverse effects, suggesting that it might be "better to yo-down some of the time and be slimmer than be fat all of the time."

Knock on wood

A few years ago, to everyone's surprise, the University of Wisconsin reported that wooden cutting boards were more sanitary than plastic ones. Researchers found the bacteria that causes food poisoning stayed on the surface of plastic boards even after cleaning, but not on the wooden ones. However with the aid of a powerful electron microscope, researchers at the Food and Drug Administration discovered that the bacteria on the wooden boards was getting absorbed into the fibrous core, trapping the germs. The research team concluded that neither wood nor plastic appears to be inherently superior and that either type can be rendered safe if handled properly. They recommend using hot soapy water to clean the board, although a dishwasher is ideal.

Monogamy The hot zone

You love your significant other, but as time goes on, you've hit the sexual doldrums. Well, as you're about to find out, passionate monogamy doesn't have to be a contradiction in terms

BY ALYSE FRAMPTON

Love and marriage go together, the old song has it. Sex and marriage are another story, judging from the runaway success of Hot Monogamy (The Penguin Group, 1995), a best-selling advice book on how committed partners can rekindle sexual passion and live more happily ever after.

Its author, Dr. Patricia Love (yes, that is her real name), understands the problem. You love your significant other, but as time goes on, you've hit the sexual doldrums. If you're a man, chances are you'd like more frequent sex. If you're a woman, you likely long for more romance. But the two of you are constantly busy, juggling the demands of work, family and social life. Somehow sex has gotten to be a bone of contention, a cause for anxiety or just another chore, about as exciting as flossing your teeth.

It's enough to make you envy the humble strawberry. Depending on conditions, this life-form can reproduce sexually or by cloning. Not so the hapless human race. We take credit not only for evolving the most complex, emotionally charged mating behavior of any species — we've also produced a subspecies of experts to give us advice on how to do it. Love and sexuality, it seems, are subjects that make perennial adolescents of us all: uncertain, tongue-tied and above all wondering how our love lives "rate."

As the success of Hot Monogamy attests, the trendiest topic now is sex and long-term relationships. From self-help books to The Sex Show, a frank-talking documentary series imported from Britain, there's advice galore on keeping the connubial flame alive.

Commitment is in the forefront, says Dr. Love, explaining why her book has struck a resounding chord. "A lot of us now have been through divorce and remarriage; we're aware that changing partners is not going to bring us perfect bliss. People are more mature and willing to work on the relationship they've got."

Demographic and social trends bear her out. In the age of AIDS, of course, there are obvious advantages to establishing a stable, exclusive relationship. The boomer population is well past the age of highest divorce risk and mostly settled in couples. Those with kids have an added incentive to stay together. With people living longer, a marriage could well last many decades.

Above all, as anthropologist Helen Fisher writes in her book, Anatomy of Love: The Natural History of Monogamy, Adultery and Divorce (W.W. Norton & Company, 1992), "North Americans tend not to marry for economic, political or family reasons. We marry for love." Having done so, we don't want to settle for a dwindling sex life, adds Dr. Sue Johanson, a Toronto-based sex educator and host of a syndicated radio talk show called Sex with Sue. "We want monogamy and passion."

Cynics might say that passionate monogamy is a contradiction in terms. Yet we can have it, say Drs.. Love and Johanson — with some intelligence and effort.

You may be relieved to learn that there's no such thing as mad, delirious love without end — for any couple. The reasons lie in the way nature wired us for sex and romance. Riding the emotional roller coaster called "falling in love" and settling down as a couple are, as Fisher puts it, badges of human nature. In a survey of 168 cultures, anthropologists found 87 percent of vastly different peoples acknowledged romantic love in all its glory. For most people, that includes a sense of total absorption in the beloved and an intense sexual attraction.

In fact, Fisher suggests, romantic love serves the evolutionary purpose of uniting couples in long-term pair bonds. Monogamy evolved among early humans, she writes, as our primary sexual behavior to care for our helpless young and ensure our species' survival.

Four million years later, we're still falling in love and settling down with our mates. However, science now tells us that the euphoria of romantic love has a biochemical basis.

Psychiatrists such as Dr. Michael Liebowitz, author of The Chemistry of Love (Little, Brown, 1983), think infatuation is associated with natural amphetamines, such as phenylethylamine (PEA), released by our own bodies. Pooling in the emotional centers of the brain, these chemicals cause the "natural high" of being in love.

Unfortunately, the brain isn't built to sustain a romantic high without end. Psychologist Dorothy Tennov measured the duration of romantic love, from the moment infatuation hits to when a "feeling of neutrality" for one's love object begins. Her findings: On average, once you've begun to see your sweetheart regularly, passion lasts from 18 months to three years.

In lasting relationships, Liebowitz is convinced, fading infatuation is replaced by the "attachment" phase of love, aided by another set of brain chemicals called endorphins. Chemically similar to morphine, the endorphins, like PEA, pool in specific areas in the brain. Unlike PEA, they calm the mind, reducing pain and anxiety. Liebowitz theorizes that partners in the attachment phase of love trigger the production of endorphins in each other, giving rise to that comfortable, secure feeling that many couples report.

You may be relieved to learn that there's no such thing as mad, delirious love without end — for any couple

Feeling warm and cozy is not the same as feeling passionate. Unfortunately, there's no biological drive, no euphoric neurochemicals, to help you create lifelong romance, says Dr. Love. Liebowitz is blunter: "If you want a situation where you and your long-term partner can still get very excited about each other, you will have to work on it, because in some ways you are bucking a biological tide."

The time has come to approach your love life differently. Romance and passion now require commitment and conscious effort. The first step, advises Dr. Johanson, is simply finding quality time to be together once a week. "A main problem I see is that both partners are under too much stress. When they're not busy, they're exhausted, and their relationship suffers."

Johanson suggests using this weekly time for some honest talk, and not just about the physical side of things. Sex is woven inextricably into the rest of the relationship, advises Dr. Love, into all the ways you express affection, respect and caring for your partner.

Your mutual goal is to find out what says "I love you" to your partner, in bed and out, Dr. Love adds. "The biggest trap people fall into is believing 'what I need is what you need.' They show love the way they would like to be shown love. But what your partner needs and wants may be quite, quite different. To be a true romantic, you have to see the world through your partner's eyes."

"If you want a situation where you and your long-term partner can still get very excited about each other, you will have to work on it, because in some ways you are bucking a biological tide," says Dr. Michael Liebowitz

"What makes you feel close to me?" is one good question to start with. Pay close attention to the response, rather than just listening for the answer you want to hear. One partner might say: "When we go for a long walk or cook a meal or spend Sunday morning reading the paper together, that's when I feel really close to you."

You also need to ask each other, "What makes you feel loved and cared for?" These sessions will reveal ways to be attentive to each other that might well be new to both of you and will renew your sense of emotional intimacy as a couple. Simply opening up in this way can bring on tender feelings that become a kind of foreplay, says Dr. Johanson.

Save explicit bedroom stuff for when you're feeling close and tuned in to each other. This, for most people, is a tough topic. Even committed couples who have been together for years find it harder to talk about sexuality than anything else. The important thing, Dr. Love says, is to realize that sexual satisfaction in a partnership functions on two levels — personal and mutual. This is the time to tear up any mental sexual frequency score card you may be carrying and stop comparing your sex life with so-called national averages.

Dr. Love's "Hot Monogamy" workshops begin by presenting couples with two basic facts meant to dispel needless shame, blame and pressure. Fact one: Different levels of desire are biologically normal. Testosterone fuels the human sex drive. Men usually (but not always) have more of it.

Fact two, according to Dr. Love: Couples need a repertoire of ways to have sex. Sometimes you want candlelight and romance; sometimes you want quick sex; and sometimes you just want to cuddle and go to sleep. Quickies and languorous sessions both have their place.

This knowledge, says Dr. Love, can come as a great relief. "Often people who have been together for years realize, for the first time, that different levels of desire do not reflect badly on them as a couple." Both partners discover there are many options, many different ways to develop an honest, mutually satisfying sex life.

The next step is to explore what turns each of you on (and off). What would you like to do? To have done to you? What have you always wanted to do together? Maybe you would like to be given a long, caressing massage. You share your fantasies, says Dr. Johanson, and then have fun in ways that both of you will enjoy.

All you need is love, sang The Beatles. "Couples know that's not true," says Dr. Love, "that's why they come to my workshops and why they buy Hot Monogamy. My message to them is really very simple. A marriage, a partnership, is not an appliance with a 20-year warranty. It's an organic bond that grows and changes. It can wither from neglect or thrive when both partners cultivate it in a mindful way."

When caring and commitment are there, says Dr. Johanson, it's never too late for a couple to renew closeness and passion. There is hard work, yes, but the reward may be a richer, more satisfying love life — for the two of you. As actress Susan Sarandon said in a recent interview, "The willingness to really be there for another person: For me, that's what sexuality is."

tips & myths

■ Myth: Sex, love and romance have to be spontaneous. When the magic goes, maybe it means you have the wrong partner.
■ Tip: The sexual and emotional euphoria called "being in love" is delightful, but it won't last with any partner on Earth.

■ Myth: We both should want sex equally.
■ Tip: Desire discrepancy is normal. Men usually, but not always, have a stronger sex drive. Contentment comes from figuring out mutually agreeable ways to satisfy each other — without expecting that you'll always be equally aroused. Rather than a flat "no," say "when?"

■ Myth: Showing love to my partner is easy.
■ Tip: We tend to show love the way we want to be loved. Have an honest heart-to-heart talk with your partner about what truly says "I love you" to each other, in bed and out. Some requests will be easy to respond to, others may need creative, loving compromise.

■ Myth: If my partner really loved me, he or she would know what I need.
■ Tip: Would you really want a partner who can read your mind? Figure out what you want and negotiate for it. In bed, let each other know what pleases and displeases you.

Stepfamily life

There are many rewards to being a stepparent. But with its complex web of loyalities and expectations, stepfamily life is a lot tougher than you think

By Alyse Frampton

Even though she handed the rest of us stepmoms a bum rap, I've reserved judgment on Cinderella's stepmother. True, she treated Cindy like a servant while pampering her own obnoxious daughters. Maybe she was just plain wicked. Or maybe stepfamily life turned out to be a whole lot more complicated than she'd expected and it brought out the worst in her. And where was Cindy's dad in all of this?

Having been a stepmother myself for nine years, I know stepmotherhood can have many rewards. I also know it's tougher than I ever imagined it would be.

What did I envision? In courtship days, it did not fully penetrate my romance-addled brain that I was not simply marrying a nice single fellow, but a father. Being stepmother to his five-year-old daughter would come easily, I thought, picturing myself in the role of jolly aunt or older friend rather than surrogate mom. This little girl did, after all, have a perfectly good mother of her own.

But when you marry a parent, it's never just a party of two. To our relationship my husband brought his pain and guilt at ending his marriage and leaving his daughter. "Other daddies live with their little girls," she often told him wistfully during weekend visits.

It was hard for me: he seemed to feel that his love for me was, in some sense, a betrayal of his baby.

DNA

Unravelling the mystery

The double helix is getting double exposure right now in the "trial of the century," but DNA has a lot more to offer than just courtroom appearances

By Erik Tanner

DNA fingerprinting is a very hot topic these days, thanks to the O.J. Simpson murder trial. Since 1987, more than 24,000 criminal cases have employed DNA testing techniques in the United States. DNA evidence has been used in Canada in more than 1,000 cases since 1991. Recently, in Canada, Guy Paul Morin, a convicted murderer, was exonerated of any wrongdoing thanks to advances in DNA testing. But this growing knowledge of DNA goes far beyond the courts.

"The knowledge gained in the research of DNA in the last five years has revolutionized our understanding of diseases," says Dr. David Goldman, chief of the Laboratory of Neurogenetics at the National Institutes of Health (NIH), who is studying neural transmitter genes in the brain.

DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, is a substance located in the nucleus of every living cell in humans, animals and bacteria. It is made up of a sugar, an acid and pairs of four molecular components, known as bases, with names abbreviated to A, C, G and T. These bases are the alphabet of the genetic code. If you could see DNA up close, it would look like a twisted ladder. The pairs of bases make up the rungs and it goes on for three billion steps. The particular ordering of the steps determines the codes for about 100,000 genes, which make up the blueprint of our bodies. It is part of the ongoing mechanism that keeps us alive. How such an enormously long sequence of only four chemical symbols manages to code for a complete human being is still not fully understood.

"We know quite a bit about how DNA reproduces itself, how it . . . produces protein molecules and how these molecules combine to produce microscopic chains or two-dimensional sheets. Beyond that is a vast sea of ignorance in which there are scattered islands of understanding," write Drs. Randolph M. Nesse and George C. Williams, co-authors of Why We Get Sick (Random House, 1995).

Dr. Goldman at NIH is more interested in looking at the DNA sequences than manipulating them. To observe DNA, he employs a technique known as polymerase chain reaction, or PCR test, which is the same procedure used in DNA fingerprinting. DNA has areas called noncoding regions, where the base sequences repeat themselves over and over, serving as far as anyone can tell no understandable purpose. Except to forensic scientists, that is. The noncoding regions are highly individual and vary in length and this is where forensic scientists try to make or not make a match.

At the University of California at Berkeley, geneticist Dr. Hua Mu is involved in the search for the genes that cause breast cancer.

"There are more than 3,000 known genetic disorders directly attributable to abnormalities in DNA," says Dr. Mu. Through careful analysis of a patient's family and genetic history, he tracks the gene or genes, trying to find the relevant region in the DNA.

Discovering a defective gene does not mean a cure is imminent or even possible. But knowing where a defect may lie means that other tests can be developed to determine who is a carrier. Recently a gene for dyslexia was discovered. So now parents and educators can know early on about a child suffering from this particular disability.

Eventually, DNA may become the crystal ball of the medical world, foretelling life expectancy and other mysteries of the human condition. For now, it seems to have become synonymous with a certain ex-football player, but, as Dr. Goldman points out, that's not all that bad. Now the public has come just that much closer to understanding a complicated and sometimes baffling science.

O.J. Simpson

DNA evidence in the O.J. Simpson murder case may prove to be the prosecution's only evidence that directly links Simpson to the crime scene.

Guy Paul Morin

DNA evidence is most conclusive when used to absolve a suspect, such as in the case of Guy Paul Morin (right), who was finally acquitted of murder earlier this year.

One in every three people will suffer sexual abuse or rape in their lifetime.

The Dirt Cheap Workout

Research proves a backyard may be the place to cultivate fitness

By Alyse Frampton

Contact with nature relieves stress. This ancient belief, widely held by different cultures, may be one reason gardening is the number one leisure activity in the United States and Canada. Science is now catching up with what legions of gardeners know intuitively. A growing body of research shows that your own backyard may be the best place to cultivate mental and physical well-being at any age.

"The fascination factor" is the term coined by University of Michigan environmental psychologist Rachel Kaplan to explain the appeal of gardening. In her landmark 1986 survey of 30,000 members of the American Horticultural Society, Kaplan discovered her subjects found garden tasks so absorbing that they "cut off the background noise in their heads."

There is much evidence that exposure to nature has a measurable calming effect on human beings. A recent study by behavioral scientist Roger S. Ulrich, associate dean of landscape architecture at Texas Agricultural and Mechanical University (Texas A&M), placed subjects under stress by showing them a worker-safety film that depicted serious injuries with simulated blood and mutilation.

Gardening

Half the group then watched videos of natural scenes, including trees, and a stream. The remaining subjects watched videos of commonplace urban scenes, such as commercial streetscapes with traffic and outdoor pedestrian malls. The people who watched the natural scenes showed high levels of physiological stress recovery. Their heart rates and blood pressure and muscle tension levels all went down, while the viewers of urban scenes recovered more slowly or in many cases did not fully recover from the stress caused by the worker-safety film.

In another well-known study, Patrick Mooney, an associate professor of landscape architecture at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, compared the behavior of Alzheimer's patients residing in facilities with and without garden settings. The findings were dramatic. For patients exposed to garden settings, violent incidents declined by 19 percent over the course of a year, while the rate of violent incidents in the institutions without gardens rose 681 percent.

None of this surprises horticulturist Charles Lewis, author of Green Nature, Human Nature (University of Illinois Press, 1995). "Humans innately seek out nature as a refuge because we evolved in nature," he argues. We have built-in responses to landscapes that would have favored the survival of early humans, such as savanna settings with canopied trees that indicate the close proximity of water.

Susan Powter's Food

Having quietly lived a life of obesity and despair for many years, Susan Powter was able to break free from her self-enslaving appetite and become a spokesperson for the virtues of healthy eating and living. In her new book, Food, Powter cuts through the seemingly non-committal and often difficult-to-understand medical explanations on dieting and nutrition to "get down to the nitty-gritty of . . . what the hell we're supposed to be eating." As in her best-selling Stop the Insanity!, Powter holds nothing sacred and questions everything from mainstream cultural perceptions of food to government and scientific pronouncements on nutrition to current popular dieting schemes.

As a "Food P.I.," Powter unmasks the fat that is purposefully or otherwise hidden in food. At times, Food reads like a detective's tale as Powter exposes the great food conspiracy.

The book is filled with nutritional information from salt to sugar to how much fat there is in a Burger King Double Whopper with Cheese. You'll learn how to read labels, what your minimum daily requirements really are and how food can keep you young.

Written in a conversational style — "Here we are at the old beef chart" — Powter speaks in plain language mainly to women, or the "gals." She is irreverent and funny, which helps make the serious matter about which she is writing much easier to swallow. Problem overeaters will find solace and humor in Powter's experiences and advice.

Though the book is geared mostly to educating the reader on the nutritional aspects of food, Powter does provide mealtime suggestions in three of her 18 chapters. There are recipes for everything from Blueberry Pancakes and Very Corny Corn Muffins to Sesame Chicken Nuggets with Oven-Roasted Potatoes. Powter hasn't forgotten the holidays, either, and all the high-fat foods we like to consume then.

Fact of the matter

"It may be no accident that many of the greatest thinkers - da Vinci, Plato, Aristotle, and Einstein - were all avid walkers," said Gary Yanker in his book 'The Complete Book of Exercise Walking'.

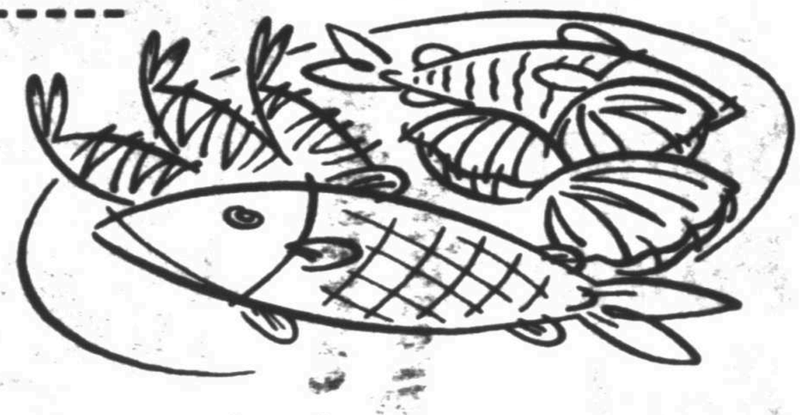
Seafood*savvy*



It can make us smart and sexy. It reduces heart disease and stroke. But we still don't eat enough fish.

What's wrong with us?

By Erik Tanner

Always tender, light in calories and high in protein, fish is the perfect food. But, although it's available almost everywhere, your average North American eats a measly 15 pounds a year of this gift from the sea, preferring to chow-down instead on close to 100 pounds of artery-clogging meat.

Cost may be a reason, but a meal that includes seafood need not be expensive. Because it is so high in protein, three ounces of cooked fish served with ample rice, couscous or potatoes and a salad and/or non-starchy vegetable plus a slice of whole-grain bread will have a tummy satisfied at a reasonable price.

Practically all fish, including shellfish, teem with important nutrients such as B vitamins, iron, calcium and magnesium. But what makes fish so valuable is the artery-saving fat, omega 3 fatty acid.

Dr. Isadore Rosenfeld, in his recently released book, Doctor, What Should I Eat? (Random House, 1995), says it is widely acknowledged that the oil from fish can lower the risk of blood clots that cause heart attacks and most strokes. The New England Journal of Medicine reported in April that a study of 45,000 male health researchers found the subjects who ate fish just once a week had a 25 percent lower risk of heart disease than those who ate none. In fact, the Journal study concluded that you do not have to eat a lot of fish to reap its health benefits.

Always buy your fish from a reputable fish monger. Fresh fish should smell clean and sweet. The flesh should be firm, slightly elastic and moist, with no traces of browning or drying at the edges.

If you (and your stomach) fall in love with fish, pick up Jane Brody's Good Seafood Book (W.W. Norton & Company, 1994). It's the perfect guide to cooking fish.

PRIMARY MEDICAL CLINIC

What's a Family Practice Physician?

The family practice physician is qualified to care for everyone within the family, from the newborn to a grandparent. The family practitioner's focus is on keeping the family healthy.

This approach to medical care is convenient for the family because it often eliminates the need for different doctors. At Primary Medical Clinic we offer each family member a variety of services which include, but are not limited to, physical exams, weight control, treatment of diabetes, minor surgical procedures, help with depression, minor emergency care, diagnostic procedures and referrals to the appropriate specialist when necessary..

If you are ever in doubt about whether a family practice physician is the right one for a particular problem, please check with us first. We can recommend or refer you to a specialist, if needed.

At Primary Medical Clinic we offer a variety of medical services: family practice, minor emergency treatment, industrial medicine and specialty care.

We believe that convenient, quality medical care is essential to busy life-styles, so we are available to handle your care 7 days a week, with extended hours, at multiple locations.
