

Court upholds windfall profits tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today upheld the constitutionality of the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil which produces billions of dollars in annual revenue.

The 9-0 ruling removed a cloud of uncertainty from the tax, which had been declared unconstitutional by a lower court.

The government was allowed to collect the tax despite the lower court ruling, pending the outcome of today's case.

The levy produced an estimated $26 billion in revenue as of last Oct. 1 and is expected to yield over $40 billion more in the next five years. By 1990, government officials expect the tax to bring in a total of $225 billion.

The decision was particularly significant coming in a period of record federal deficits.

In another case the court ruled today that waste disposal risks do not have to be considered every time the federal government considers approving a nuclear power plant license.

By a 8-0 vote, the justices reversed a lower court victory won by environmentalists. The court said the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission does not have to weigh the issue of waste disposal risks in each individual licensing proceeding.

In the windfall profits case, U.S. District Judge Eugene T. Kerr ruled last Nov. 4 in Cheyenne, Wyo., that the three-year-old tax was unconstitutional. He said it exempts new oil produced above the Arctic Circle, with the exception of the giant Prudhoe Bay field on

BIG SPRING NATIVE — Betty Lynn Buckley, a Big Spring native, won the Tony award Sunday as best supporting actress in a musical for her performance in "Cats." Miss Buckley was born in Big Spring and grew up in Fort Worth. She is the daughter of the former Betty Bob Dietz, a long-time Big Springer.

Big Spring native Betty Buckley wins Tony for 'Cats'

Betty Lynn Buckley, named best-supporting actress during the Tony awards ceremony Sunday for her role in the musical "Cats," is a Big Spring native. She was born in 1947 at Hall-Bennett Hospital and was delivered by Dr. Clyde Thomas.

Miss Buckley starred as Dick Van Patten's wife Abby in ABC's "Eight is Enough" for several years. She's also had roles in several other movies, including the gym teacher in "Carrie." She worked on Broadway several years ago in the musical "1776."

The role which won her the Tony was that of a cat in the musical based on poetry by T.S. Eliot. "Cats" won seven awards, including best musical.

Miss Buckley's mother, the former Betty Bob Dietz, was a longtime Big Spring resident and was employed for several years by the Big Spring Herald. She was a member of the High Heel Society, a social group in Big Spring.

She married Ernest Buckley, who was stationed at the Big Spring army bombardier school. Buckley is now a professor of civil engineering at Texas Christian University.

Shortly after Miss Buckley was born, her family moved to Fort Worth, where she attended Texas Christian University, majoring in journalism. She was named Miss Fort Worth and was a contestant in the Miss Texas pageant several years ago.

Her mother is currently manager of public relations at the Casa Manana theater in Fort Worth.

Last week, a group of Big Springers traveled to New York to view "Cats" on an invitation from the Buckleys. Attending were Jane Thomas, Delores Hull, Katie Grimes, Kristi Grimes and Laura May Pollard. The group reported that they ate lunch with Miss Buckley and her mother at Luchows and also viewed the Broadway productions of Dream Girls and Private Lives.

Rainstorms across state leave little rain locally

From staff and wire reports

Heavy rainstorms which brought flash flood watches to other parts of the state left only a trace of rain in the Big Spring area by noon Monday.

The U.S. Agriculture Experiment Station here said Monday morning it had measured .10 of an inch of rain in the last 24 hours.

Unseasonably cold temperatures accompanied the storm system as the mercury dropped into the 50s at midmorning today.

The area was under a severe thunderstorm and tornado alert last night for several hours as violent weather spawned in New Mexico moved eastward across the border.

Flash flood watches and warnings were posted today for parts of North and South Texas following a night of showers and thundershowers that dumped heavy downpours on wide areas of the state.

Rain covered much of the northern two-thirds of Texas before dawn.

Nearly six inches of rain fell overnight Brownwood, where a tornado or high winds tore off a church roof and street flooding seeped into some businesses and homes, police said.

The winds also overturned several mobile homes and shattered windows Sunday night, said Brownwood firefighter Bobby Jones. There were no reports of injuries.

Two inches of rain fell in about 45 minutes early today at the Lufkin airport, the Department of Public Safety.

Street flooding was reported before dawn in Nacogdoches, according to the Nacogdoches County sheriff's office.

There were no reports of injuries or damage from tornadoes and funnel clouds sighted north, east and south of Abilene. But a Jones County sheriff's dispatcher said baseball-sized hail caused some damage near where a tornado was sighted at Hodges.

Hail damage to windows and windshields was noted at Stamford, authorities said.

The shower activity was triggered by a slow-moving cold front, the National Weather Service said.

Temperatures were in the 50s in the Panhandle and South Plains, while readings in the 60s and 70s were reported across the rest of the state. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 51 at Amarillo to 79 at Brownsville and McAllen.

The forecast called for the shower activity to end from the west tonight.

Society's stepchildren: the burden of neglect

In this second article in a three-part series, Herald Staff Writer Mike Downey looks at the ways a troubled family life can lead to juvenile crime in Howard County.

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Children in problem homes may fall into a "never-never land" between juvenile social services, according to Lee Henry of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

"The rapidly-escalating problem" finds children between the spheres of authority of child welfare and juvenile probation," Henry said at his 3rd Street office.

"The problem is a growing tendency in parents to shun responsibility as parents," Henry said. "They're telling us to take and do something with their kids."

As child welfare officer, he investigates all cases of child neglect and abuse in Howard and six other counties in his district. Henry then determines if it is necessary to intervene and remove the child such as in cases of sexual abuse or beatings.

"There's no reason why any child should have to remain in a home where there are problems," Henry said. "Even then, we prefer to work with the parents."

But working with the parents is sometimes the biggest problem. Although the DHR tries to get families to stay together and work out their problems, the parent does not always cooperate.

"Most love their kids, but they don't have the dedication or the commitment to do something about their problems," Henry said. "The breakdown of the family unit is the major cause of juvenile and family problems."

This lack of attention to basic values leads to more problems for the family, Henry says. Without proper role models, children never mature enough to become responsible parents themselves, he said. The problem is particularly acute in abuse cases.

"We see abuse that goes back four generations — it's a way of life," Henry said. "Abuse is higher in those non-traditional families. We're just now seeing the long-term effects of child abuse — 10, 20 years later."

Society pays for these children through their illegitimate children, through care in institutions and through juvenile crime, Henry said. They continue to be a burden throughout their lives.

This uncomfortable scenario of generations of irresponsible parents foisting equally-amoral delinquents on society can be avoided however, Henry points to child welfare as a way to assist families in resolving internal difficulties.

"I would much prefer a parent come to me and say 'I can't deal with my children' than let the situation get too bad so I have to intervene," Henry said.

Although Henry acknowledges his office is often seen as "the bad guy," he asserts his department is there to help people.

One example of aid is the foster home program. Foster home developer Toni Rash of DHR says the program has a high degree of success if the child is placed in a home early enough.

"With the right attention, incredible progress can be made physically, mentally and emotionally," Mrs. Rash said.

However, a shortage of foster homes currently exists in Howard and the surrounding counties, according to Mrs. Rash. The need is here in Big Spring for those homes, she said.

With the public afraid of the system, the DHR cannot help, Henry says. Child welfare would rather work with the parent and child, whether to seek counseling or placement in an institution or foster home.

"We cannot force anyone to be responsible," Henry said. "So much heartache ... could be avoided. It's not going to get better."

Altercation outside nightspot escalates into several fights

An altercation early Sunday morning outside of Mary's Disco in the 200 block of South Rannels escalated into several fights as five police units, the Department of Public Safety and Howard County sheriff's deputies were called to the scene.

Police report four persons were arrested at 2:18 a.m. Sunday as police attempted to quiet a crowd that gathered outside the South Rannels club.

DPS Trooper Jim Lasater said four or five fights were occurring at the same time when he arrived on the scene. He estimated 50 persons had collected outside the club screaming obscenities and fighting.

However, Police Chief Rick Turner said the situation was not as "out of hand" as it could have been. When arrests are made in a crowd, problems sometimes develop, Turner said.

According to arrest reports, two persons were placed in custody for shouting obscenities as officers attempted to calm the crowd. Another struck an officer with his fists as he tried to arrest him, Turner said.

Arrested were Albert Ybarra, 23, of 1203 Madison for resisting arrest; Johnny M. Ybarra of 1315 Mesa for disorderly conduct; Christoval Moreno Limon, 23, of 1105 N. Nolan for resisting arrest; and Raul Lara Paredes, 23, of 1301 Sycamore for disorderly conduct.

Albert Ybarra was released Sunday after posting $2,000 bond following arraignment before Justice of the Peace Bobby West. Limon posted $1,500 bond to be released after appearing before John Stanley, acting municipal judge.

The others remain in police custody, according to reports.

Dallas sheriff indicted

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury today indicted Sheriff Don Byrd on a misdemeanor drunken driving charge.

The indictment accuses Byrd of driving while intoxicated the night of April 17, when he was involved in a one-car traffic accident in the suburb of University Park.

Byrd suffered minor injuries in the accident and was treated at Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas, which administered a blood test. Radio station KRLD said the test revealed Byrd was legally intoxicated at the time.

Sheriff's department spokesman James Ewell said Byrd would have a statement later in the day.

White signs PUC bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White today signed into law a measure that keeps the Public Utility Commission in business and adds provisions aimed at guaranteeing Texans they are paying fair utility rates.

Rep. Jim Turner, D-Crockett and House co-sponsor of the PUC bill, said the measure does not guarantee lower rates but should ensure the "lowest utility rates possible."

Turner said there are "many factors involved in which we have no control."

PUC Chairman Al Erwin, who helped draft the bill, said it would be his fault if the new law does not lead to a restoration of public confidence in the three-member commission.

"This will work. I'm going to make it work," he said at the bill-signing ceremony.

The measure abolishes the automatic pass-through of fuel costs to customers, establishes a public counsel to represent consumers in PUC rate cases and limits the amount of construction costs that can be passed to ratepayers.

White did not win legislative approval for his call for an elected commission.

Oil wildcatter found dead

HOUSTON (AP) — Funeral services were scheduled today for Pat R. Rutherford, one of the original All American Wildcatters and a founder of St. Luke's Hospital.

Rutherford, 79, died Saturday at his home after a long illness.

A native of Denton, Rutherford began exploring for oil and gas in 1928 near Laredo and later moved to San Antonio to organize several oil and gas companies.

In 1931, he moved to Houston and again organized wildcatting operations, including Rutherford Oil Co., which now has oil and gas operations in several states and in the Gulf of Mexico.

In 1970, Rutherford was named one of the original All American Wildcatters. The organization was founded in 1968 by M.B. Redman of Dallas to honor leaders of the nation's petroleum industry.

He also was a director of Texas Commerce Bank.

Poisoned pot pointed out

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws said today it is asking U.S. agencies if they had any part in spraying the herbicide paraquat on marijuana in the Central American country of Belize.

"We want to be able to warn Texas users of marijuana that it may be poisoned," said Scott Miller, state coordinator.

He said the Texas chapter contains about 400 members who pay $15 annual dues.

Paraquat is widely used agriculturally to control weeds. Miller said tests have shown that continued smoking of contaminated marijuana can cause irreversible lung damage and even death.

Miller said U.S. agencies, including the Drug Enforcement Administration and the CIA, have said the paraquat spraying in the Central American country was strictly a joint Mexican-Belizean affair.

Despondent dad hangs self

DALLAS (AP) — A 43-year-old man distraught over his daughter's death in a hit-and-run accident hanged himself in the old Dallas County Jail, authorities said.

Theodore Joseph Bristow was found dead in his cell at 3:45 a.m. Sunday, according to sheriff's Detective W.L. Mayes.

Bristow's daughter, 17-year-old Gwendolyn Cook of Dallas, was struck by a car late Friday while walking along a Dallas-area road with her husband, investigators said. She died of head injuries and multiple internal injuries less than an hour later.

An inmate who talked with Bristow before his death said Bristow "became very despondent" when he learned of his daughter's death, according to Mayes.

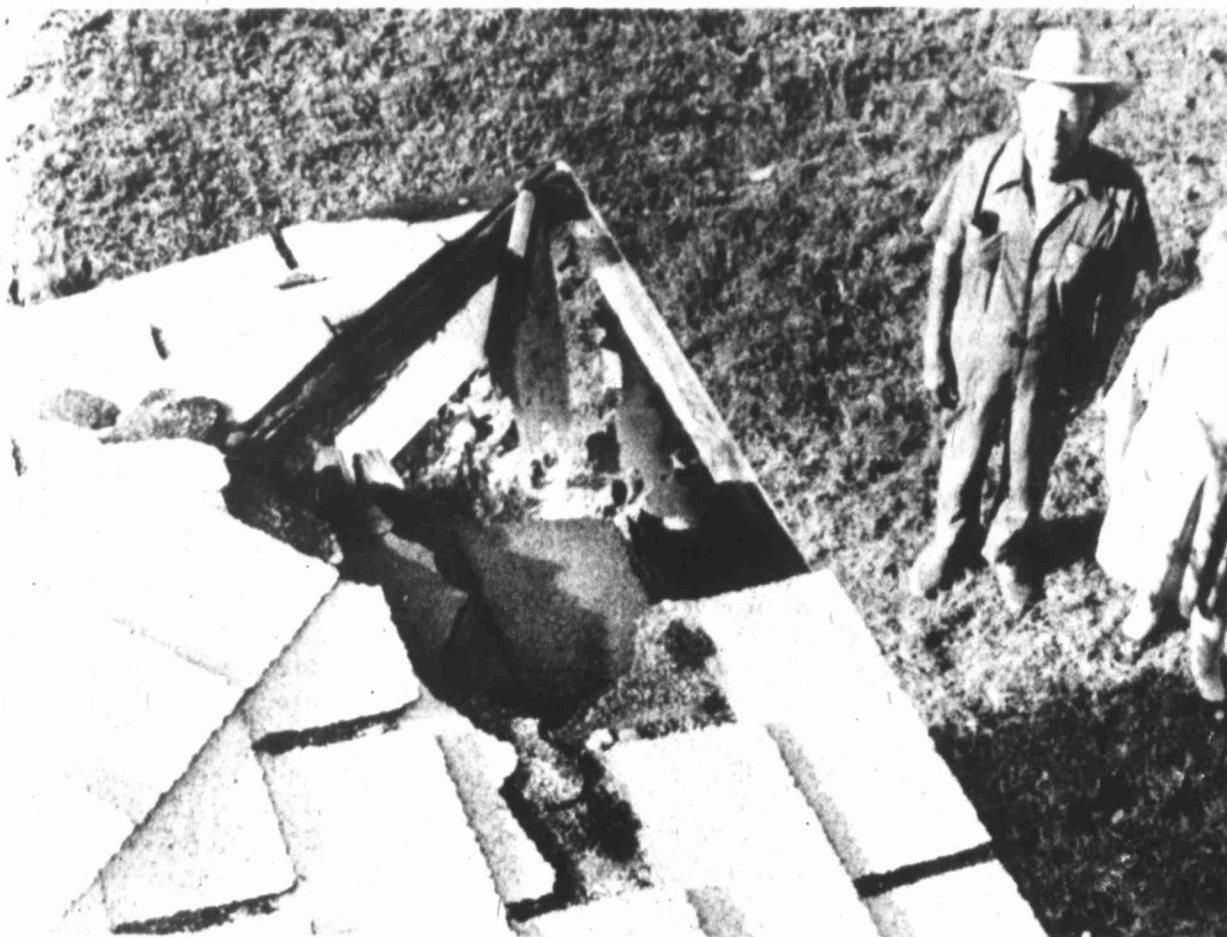

Bristow used his socks and a strip of material from a mattress cover to fashion a noose, which he attached to the bars at the top of his cell door, Mayes said.

The inmate, who was awaiting trial on charges of aggravated robbery and burglary of a house with intent to commit arson, was pronounced dead at the scene, said Mayes.

the North Slope of Alaska.

Kerr said the Constitution requires all federal taxes to be uniform throughout the nation.

But Justice Lewis F. Powell, in his opinion for the Supreme Court today, said, "Congress may take geographic considerations into account in deciding what oil to tax."

Powell continued that the Constitution does not prevent Congress "from considering geographically isolated problems."

He said, "Congress clearly viewed 'exempt Alaskan oil' as a unique class of oil that...merited favorable treatment. It had before it ample evidence of the disproportionate costs and difficulties — the fragile ecology, the harsh environment, and the remote location — associated with extracting oil from this region."

The government said that the exemption for Alaska was necessary to encourage exploration in a remote area.

Government lawyers argued that discovering and producing North Slope oil entailed risks that were far greater than those involved with developing domestic oil properties elsewhere.

The original lawsuit against the tax was filed by a small oil company, Calvin Petroleum Corp. of Fort Lupton, Colo., and three Wyoming royalty owners.

More than 30 other parties joined the challenge, including the major oil-producing states of Louisiana and Texas, which contend the law violates states' rights.

The 1980 tax was imposed on oil when decontrol on prices was accelerated. The tax is actually applied to sales prices rather than to oil industry profits. The oil tax takes as much as 60 percent of each price increase above 1979 levels.

In other actions the court:

- Upheld the Kodak Co. in its refusal to develop and return photographs of a sexually explicit nature.

- Agreed to decide whether federal inspectors need to get a court's approval before they can force a business to surrender records.

- Said it will consider whether employers can be barred from laying off any black workers under "affirmative action" rules, if the result would be lost jobs for whites with more seniority.

- Left intact a 1980 government order that helps boost freight rates for the financially ailing railroad industry.

- Ruled 3-4 to allow the government to prohibit removal of gravel from 33 million acres of privately held western land because the government has authority over "minerals" on land given to homesteaders.

Nurse fired; needle marks found

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A nurse accused of killing a infant was fired by a Kerrville physician two days after the doctor found needle marks in a vial of muscle relaxant, the San Antonio Light reported.

The newspaper, in a copyright story Sunday, said Dr. Kathleen Holland said in a deposition that she fired vocational nurse Genene Jones after finding the needle marks in the vial of Succinylcholine.

Ms. Jones, 32, was indicted in Kerr County for murder in the death of Chelsea Ann McClellan and for the injury of six other children. She pleaded innocent to the charges and her bond was set at $50,000 on the murder count and $25,000 on each injury count.

The newspaper said the doctor gave the deposition last month at the request of Houston lawyer James Perdue, who represents the parents of the 15-month-old girl that died en route to a hospital from Dr. Holland's office.

The parents, William and Petti McClellan, have filed a $7 million wrongful death suit against Dr. Holland and Ms. Jones.

Texas illiteracy figured at 21%

DALLAS (AP) — About one in five adult Texans do not read or write well enough to perform everyday tasks and an even larger number cannot determine the change they are due when they pay for merchandise with a $20 bill, a University of Texas study concluded.

THE STUDY FOUND about 2 million Texans — or 21 percent of the adult population — lack the basic reading, writing and computation skills necessary for everyday tasks. Another 30 percent are "marginally literate" and 2.7 million cannot figure their change from a $20 bill.

"It is surprising, perhaps even shocking, to suggest that approximately one of five Texans ... are functionally incompetent or function with difficulty and that about an additional one-third of the adult population in Texas is ... not proficient in coping with everyday tasks of skills and knowledge," the UT report states.

THE TEXAS ILLITERACY rate, the study found, is higher than the national average of 19.7 percent.

Dr. Lois DeBakey, a literacy expert and professor of scientific communication at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, said low teacher salaries, undisciplined students, drug abuse, deterioration of the family and even country and western music lyrics have contributed to the decline of literacy in Texas.

Many Texas classrooms are "war zones or holding tanks for undisciplined students and drug abusers" who are not interested in literacy, she said.

She also said illiteracy will flourish until writers are regarded on a level equal to athletes.

"Can you give me one incentive for students to learn to read and write? The media focus on the superstars; they are lionized and fawned over," she told The Dallas Morning News. "They are entertained in the White House and even given honorary degrees, and many of them are dropouts from grammar school. They are semi-literate, and these are the people who are honored as our heroes."

MS. DEBAKEY ALSO claimed there was "flagrant, flagrant open cheating" by some of 3,200 Houston teachers during a recent competency test.

"Now, if teachers can't pass a minimal competency test, how do you expect students to learn anything from those teachers?" she asked.

The state's literacy problem also is reflected by the number of students in adult education or developmental English classes, education experts said.

About 133,000 Texans attend adult education classes, and many are struggling just to learn to read, said Deborah Stedman of the Texas Education Agency.

"The state of illiteracy in Texas and the United States is a whole lot larger than we assume it is," she said.

FORTY-ONE PERCENT, of about 600 of the entering freshmen, enrolled in the University of Houston's developmental English program last fall, with most of them reading at the fourth- to sixth-grade level, Ms. Stedman said. More could have been enrolled if there had been additional space and teachers, she added.

About 9 percent of the freshman class at Texas A&M University and about 8 percent of Southern Methodist University's freshman class last year had to attend remedial English classes, educators said.

DESPITE THEIR NUMBERS, illiterate Texans take great pains to hide the fact that they can't read.

"People would rather admit to killing their mother than to admit that they can't read because of the stigma associated with illiteracy," said Carolyn Cribbs, who teaches an Operation LIFT reading class at First Presbyterian Church of Dallas.

Cyclist, 12, injured in collision with car

A 12-year-old Big Spring boy suffered head and possible spinal injuries yesterday afternoon when he pedaled his bicycle onto 11th Place in front of an oncoming car, police and ambulance personnel say.

Ronnie D. Sumruld, son of A.E. Sumruld of Gail Route, is listed in satisfactory condition today in a private room at Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

Police reports say the boy was riding his bicycle in a field on the 3200 block of 11th Place and rode out onto the street about 2:29 p.m. A Ford pickup driven east by Mark W. Garrett, 23, of Gail Route collided with the bicycle.

A skid mark test indicated the pickup was traveling about 37 mph at the time of the accident.

Shaffer Ambulance Service took Ronnie to Malone-Hogan Hospital and then transferred him to the Odessa hospital, hospital spokesman said.

Furnace fire at Cosden controlled by employees

A furnace fire which "looked a lot worse than it was" was brought under control Saturday by Cosden Oil & Chemical Co. employees minutes after a heater tube ruptured.

Ross Westbrook, director of public relations at Cosden, said the ruptured tube allowed an abnormally high amount of gas into the furnace to be burned off. The gas flow was brought under control "about three minutes after the rupture," Westbrook said.

"It caused a little excitement, but it looked a lot worse than it was," Westbrook said. "There was a lot of smoke and a big fire came out of the heater stack. It was just one of those things that happen occasionally."

Westbrook said 10 off-duty employees were erroneously called to the plant to help control the fire.

MURDER SCENE — Four people were murdered in this house and a fifth seriously wounded Sunday in what was described by authorities as a "very brutal" and "Manson style" killing. A father, mother, their 10-year-old daughter and a neighbor boy were slain and the couple's eight-year-old son left in critical condition in the attack. The victims were found by the neighbor boy's father.

Inmates sought following murder of California family

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — Investigators searched today for three men in a car stolen from a blood-spattered home where a couple, their daughter and a neighbor boy were slain and their 8-year-old son was injured.

As part of their investigation, sheriff's deputies said they were also looking for two inmates who had escaped from a nearby prison in the past few days, but Dispatcher Gwen Culbreth said it wasn't known if the escapees were among the three men who were seen at the home Saturday evening.

A "cutting instrument" was recovered from the rural house where deputies Sunday found the bodies of F. Douglas Ryen, 41, wife Peggy Ann, 41, daughter Jessica, 10, and Christopher Hughes, 12, a neighbor who was spending the night at the Ryens' house, San Bernardino County Sheriff Floyd Tidwell said. He declined to describe the weapon.

The family station wagon, a white Buick, was stolen as was a license plate from another vehicle reading "RYEN 4," deputies said. Witnesses told investigators that three men were at the Ryens' on Saturday evening, Tidwell said.

The isolated Ryen home is located in rolling hills at the end of a dead-end street where the dozen or so neighbor families are horse breeders. The house is "out of earshot" of any neighbors, said neighbor Al Warren.

The area is about five miles from the California Institution for Men at Chino where one inmate escaped Thursday and another Saturday, said sheriff's Deputy Chief Gene Majors. He declined to release their names but said investigators were checking out any possible connection to the slayings.

Sheriff's Deputy Jack Watkins described the murders as "Manson-style," referring to the 1969 cult murders of pregnant actress Sharon Tate and four others by Charles Manson followers at a Laurel Canyon house.

But Tidwell said: "It was not ritualistic at all, just very brutal." He said it appeared there had been a struggle.

"There was blood all over," he said.

Eight-year-old Joshua Ryen was listed in stable condition today at Loma Linda University Hospital where he was flown from the affluent Chino Hills area, 35 miles east of Los Angeles, investigators at the scene of the stabbing said.

"The boy in the hospital is doing well, although at one point they feared they would lose him," Tidwell said at a news conference late Sunday, adding that the child was being heavily guarded.

"We have talked to him a little bit. I'm not sure how much we're going to get from him," Tidwell said.

The sheriff said authorities believe the killings occurred between midnight and 2 a.m. Sunday and that more than one assailant and weapon were involved.

Tidwell said the killers attacked Ryen in the living room, while his wife ran into a bedroom to protect the children. Sheriff's investigators were able to piece together the path the assailants took from information given them by the Ryen boy and from the placement of the bodies in the hall, bedroom and bathroom, Tidwell said.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryen were found nude in their bedroom, along with one of the children, authorities said.

The surviving boy was found in a bathroom while the other child was in a hallway, deputies said.

An autopsy was scheduled to determine whether they had been sexually abused, officials said.

Neighbor Bill Hughes, father of Chris Hughes, discovered the bloodbath when he arrived to take his son to church about noon Sunday, said Larry Lease, whose property is next to the Ryens'.

Congress may not pass budget bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will veto a series of spending bills if Congress doesn't resolve vast differences in House and Senate proposals for a 1984 budget resolution, the Senate's majority leader says.

Negotiators will begin trying this week to forge a compromise spending resolution — used as a guide for subsequent bills to actually appropriate the money. But Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., predicted Sunday that the odds were "no better than 50-50" for passage of a budget blueprint.

Without a budget resolution, Baker said there wasn't "any doubt" Reagan would veto spending bills that exceeded the administration's budget projections.

"There is such a gap between the Senate version... and the House version that that alone argues against the possibility of compromise on a satisfactory basis," Baker said on the CBS television program "Face the Nation."

"And add to that the fact the president doesn't like either one of them — and I think that sharply diminishes the chance you'll get a budget," Baker said.

"And if indeed we don't get a budget resolution... the president's clear recourse is to veto several appropriation bills as they reach his desk if they exceed his budget — not the congressional budget — but his budget," Baker said. "So we may be in for a series — a siege of presidential vetoes of spending bills."

A compromise between the $863.6 billion spending blueprint passed by the Democratic House and the Republican Senate's $849.7 billion plan would probably involve more domestic spending and less funding for defense than Reagan had sought. It might also involve a tax increase, which the president has threatened to veto.

The House version adds $30 billion in domestic spending to Reagan's proposal and seeks to cut more than half of the administration's requested 10 percent defense buildup. It also contains tax increases totaling more than $120 billion to cut deficits from $174.4 billion next year to $136 billion in 1986.

The Senate version would cut Reagan's defense buildup request from 10 percent to 6 percent and contains $11.4 billion more for domestic programs than the administration had proposed. Tax increases would reduce deficits to $178.6 billion and $130.1 billion in 1986.

"Government doesn't stop" if Congress fails to adopt a budget resolution, Baker said. But that failure "would call into question the efficacy of the budget process and our will and determination to get the budget under control."

House Democrats, meanwhile, will be asked this week to give their suggestions on the size and form of tax increases for next year.

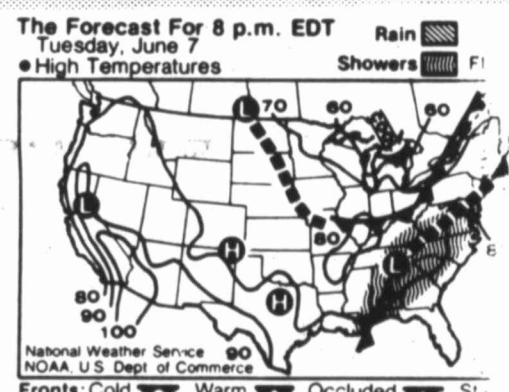

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who chairs the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, predicts the House won't pass more than an $8 billion tax increase for 1984 even though the spending resolution passed earlier calls for a $30 billion hike.

An impasse in negotiations with the Reagan administration over limitations on covert military aid to Nicaraguan rebels may prompt the House Foreign Affairs Committee to ban the undercover operations altogether.

A tornado tore the roof of a church in Brownwood, overturned several mobile homes and shattered windows Sunday night, but there were no reports of injuries, authorities said.

The twister was one of several spawned by widely scattered thunderstorms that drifted across Texas, dumping heavy rain that prompted flash flood warnings in two far East Texas counties.

Brownwood firefighter Bobby Jones said Sunday night that the tornado in Brownwood took the roof off a church and overturned some mobile homes near Lake Brownwood, but he said there were no reports of injuries.

A tornado was sighted near Hawley, another twister was seen between Wylie and Buffalo Gap south of Abilene and a funnel cloud was spotted near Clyde, east of Abilene.

Reagan planning talks with Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, believing he has strengthened his economic and military bargaining power, is preparing for "some serious negotiations with the Soviets," administration officials say.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be named, said Reagan's recent decisions to add Soviet specialist Jack F. Matlock Jr. and arms control specialist Ronald F. Lehman to the National Security Council staff "point to more White House involvement in the U.S.-Soviet relations area."

The president, one official said, is anxious to build on the new strength he perceives in the wake of his recent congressional victory that won money for the MX missile, the growing signs of economic recovery and statements of unity from the Western allies at the Williamsburg summit.

"He believes we now have the economic and military strength for some serious negotiations with the Soviets across the board," the official said.

Leftist charged with shooting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police have arrested a 21-year-old Lebanese leftist and charged him with shooting Libya's top diplomat in Lebanon seven times in an assassination attempt, state and privately owned radio stations reported today.

The radios quoted unidentified police officials as saying Khaled Osman Alwan confessed he shot Libyan charge d'affaires Abdel-Khader Ghoka on Sunday night.

After the shooting in his hotel lobby, the diplomat underwent six hours of surgery and was in critical condition today at the American University Hospital, the radio stations said.

The police sources were quoted as saying Alwan, a Sunni Moslem, told police interrogators he was a member of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party, a leftist Lebanese group that advocates the incorporation of Lebanon into a "Greater Syria."

The party is staunch ally of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Party spokesmen were not available for comment on the report.

The Beirut office of the French news agency Agence France Presse said it received two telephone calls claiming responsibility for Ghoka's shooting.

One claim was made on behalf of the Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners, a shadowy rightist group that had claimed responsibility for several bombing attacks against leftist and PLO targets in Lebanon in the last two years, AFP said.

The second call came in behalf of Al-Jihad Al-Islami, an underground Shiite Moslem group loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini which had claimed responsibility for attacks recently on the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut, the agency said.

But all Lebanese radio stations ignored these claims and concentrated on reports attributed to police that Alwan was a member of the Syrian group. The stations did not explain why a leftist would shoot a Libyan diplomat. They said the suspect was being interrogated in "utmost secrecy."

Earlier, the Voice of Free Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party's "Lebanese Forces" militia identified Alwan as the man in police custody. The radio claimed Alwan was working for Fatah, the PLO's main guerrilla group.

There was no confirmation of the reports about Alwan from police. The Phalange Party is a bitter foe of the PLO and Fatah, which have been at odds recently with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy. Khadafy last month accused Arafat of plotting with the CIA to assassinate him and declared Libya's support for a dissident faction within Fatah.

The state radio quoted police sources as saying the assailant walked into the Napoleon Hotel, in mostly Moslem west Beirut, where he asked to reserve several rooms. He then walked out, returning a short time later as Ghoka entered the hotel.

While Ghoka was at the desk asking for his key, the man pulled out a pistol and shot him seven times

A place where truth is treason

Something very strange has been happening at Radio Moscow. An announcer there, one Vladimir Danchev, referred to the Soviet presence in Afghanistan as an "invasion" on five separate occasions between May 18 and May 23. On May 24, Mr. Danchev disappeared and has not been seen since.

Radio Moscow, of course, is owned and operated by the Soviet government. And the official Soviet line on the presence of 105,000 Russian troops fighting in Afghanistan is that they were invited there by the legitimate Afghan government to help suppress "bandits and foreign-supported counter-revolutionaries."

For any Soviet citizen, much less an announcer on Radio Moscow, to suggest that the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, installed a puppet government, and now face popular opposition from the Afghan people constitutes the kind of ideological heresy the Kremlin views as treason. All the more so if the offending statements were made in English language broadcasts beamed around the world.

We do not know, and probably will never know, whether Mr. Danchev was acting on his own or simply reading what had been handed to him when he broadcast the only truth Radio Moscow has ever put out about what is really happening in Afghanistan.

But either way, it is obvious that someone in the very citadel of Soviet disinformation sacrificed his career and perhaps even his life for the sake of a courageous dissent from the Kremlin's bloody war of conquest in Afghanistan. Incarceration in a labor camp or a mental hospital is the very least that Mr. Danchev or his scriptwriter can expect.

And the very least that those of us in the free world can do is to salute this act of courage by someone willing to sacrifice everything for the right, just once, to speak the truth.

Pavement pounders

An article in Time magazine recently reported that college graduates of the class of 1983 face the worst job prospects since World War II. The piece contained reasons why grads were going to have a tough time. It also included a lot of moaning by students about the job market.

Although I sympathize with anyone looking for work, I couldn't help but get upset at the students and colleges for complaining about the apparent lack of jobs.

According to the article, the grads seem to believe a college education automatically guarantees them a job once they step out from behind ivy-covered walls. Victims of propaganda, the students believe the American Dream, fostered by colleges and society, that a diploma is a free ticket on the gravy train.

I got the impression that students actually felt employers would be coming to them with job offers in hand, and at a healthy salary. A few on-campus interviews and mailing out some resumes would land them a "position." No real work would be required on the part of the grad. There was no mention of the hard, sometimes disappointing work that job hunting often is.

I think in many ways we've painted an unreal picture for young people who think success is easy and hard work a thing of the past.

We all like to think we're special, but the new grads should realize that almost 1 million of them entered the job market this year looking for work. With that kind of competition, plus those already looking for work and the ailing economy, it takes perseverance to find a job suited to one's talents. Many times an alternate route must be taken.

College specializes one so much that many grads are confused if they cannot find a job right away. If they can't find what they consider to be a position and salary suitable to their degree, they feel there is no work to be had.

I KNOW the grads' dreams of the position with good benefits and salary were primarily caused by colleges and those in society who remember the degree being a key to success. Professors and placement offices have a tendency to inflate salaries and the college grad's worth in job market.

I had one business professor who used to tell us of these great jobs and salaries for business majors. My classmates used to sit around and drool over the possibilities. However, when I got out in the job market, I wondered where the professor had gotten his figures because opportunities and salaries weren't quite up to the standard the professor had promised. I'm would guess my friends thought the same thing.

Of course, I realized the professor hadn't looked for work in 20 years and probably had no idea what the job market was like in the real world except for what he had read in business journals.

Colleges must do a better job of preparing students for the real world. Career guidance and counseling that isn't superficial would be nice. It's time to quite promising rose gardens.

MANY GRADS don't realize that looking for work is a full-time job and one of the hardest jobs around. Finding the right job, or even a job, takes a lot of door knocking and street beating. Maybe sending out fluffy resumes and waiting for cushy offers to come rolling in used to get work, but it won't get it anymore.

One of the grads in the Time article moaned, "I always thought an education would mean something." It does, but a degree doesn't guarantee a job or a future. Education is simply a tool; the work is left up to the individual.

An opium for intellectuals

In the photographs left of him, he has the look of an Old Testament prophet — shaggy, zealous and forbidding. Much as he would despise the analogy, that is as it should be. For Karl Marx, who died 100 years ago this week, was the founder of a mass religion, and perhaps the single most important intellectual influence on the course of the 20th century.

It is as hard to imagine the last century without Marx's thought as it would be to imagine the Reformation without Luther. What other set of modern ideas has given rise to so many political movements, helped to topple so many governments, generated so much conflict and bloodshed? Marxism has also become, in one brief century, the state religion of one-third of the human race. Its founder was great in the sense that hurricanes are great: powerful, but usually destructive.

No one ever understood more clearly the revolutionary character of capitalism. "The bourgeoisie, during its rule of a scarce hundred years, has created more massive and more colossal productive forces than have all preceding generations put together," he wrote. "It has accomplished wonders far surpassing Egyptian pyramids, Roman aqueducts and Gothic cathedrals; it has conducted expeditions that put in the shade all former Exoduses of nations and crusades."

BUT NO ONE ever understood more profoundly the nature of a free capitalist society. Most obvious is his equation of its "classes" with the castes of a feudal society. But past ruling classes prospered by conquest and plunder, while the capitalist class does so only by serving the boundless consuming demands of its social inferiors.

The legacy of Marx is found in revolutionary movements and communist governments around the globe. (He has been disavowed by most Western socialist parties, which understand as he did that parliamentary reformism is incompatible with working-class revolution.) Many of his disciples' creations stand among history's most disastrous failures — reflecting a dream of liberation that spawned monumental repression. So, why does his vision still have the power to move so many people?

No doubt it is precisely because of its religious character, wedded to a claim to science. Marx's tapestry, wrote Joseph Schumpeter, wove together the religious cravings that the collapse of faith had left unsatisfied and "the rationalistic and materialistic tendencies of the time ... which would not tolerate any creed that had no scientific or pseudo-scientific connotation."

Marxism, in many respects, is Christianity without God. It embraces the same communitarian ideal, the same memory of a prehistoric Eden, the same picture of a fallen world, the same certainty of apocalypse, the same vision of earthly paradise.

But its ideals are to be achieved by force — either revolutionary violence or state coercion — rather than love. And the object of worship is man himself. It is a religion for atheists, an opium for the intellectuals.

Never mind that Marx's ideas about economics and history were riddled with errors, or that his prophecies have been disappointed time and again. Marx's followers resemble the visitors who was so appalled at the corruption of medieval Rome that he converted to Catholicism — feeling that any religion which flourished in spite of all this human depravity must indeed be from God.

THIS SORT of belief is not easily shaken. "A faith is not acquired by reasoning," wrote the late Arthur Koestler, explaining his youthful conversion to communism. "One does not fall in love with a woman, or enter the womb of a church, as a result of logical persuasion."

In the case of Marxism, that faith often justifies anything to achieve its goal. When a man rejects God, said Dostoevsky, he does not believe nothing — he believes anything. That credulity has made it possible for Western intellectuals to excuse the most monstrous barbarities in the name of revolution.

There are many who would excuse Marx for the crimes of his descendants. Life in today's Soviet Union or China, granted, is probably not quite what he had in mind. But it was his own blindness to the true character of capitalism and his willingness to sanction any means of overthrowing it that helped to produce those vast totalitarian deserts.

From "Das Kapital" to the gulag is a long journey, but not a circuitous one. Ideas have consequences, and even 100 years cannot separate Marx from the consequences of his.

How to out-Nixon Nixon

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most bizarre episode of the Nixon era was a campaign to discredit and, if possible, destroy an investigative reporter. I had the honor of being the victim.

The story has been pieced together by Seymour Hersh, himself an investigative reporter who has raised his share of hackles on the backs of official necks. The disconcerting details can be found in his new book, "The Price of Power," which uncovers the sweepings under Henry Kissinger's rug.

Hersh portrays Richard Nixon as a man haunted by dark secrets which he feared might leak out and drive him from public office. Kissinger tended, in the ways of an ambitious subordinate, to out-Nixon Nixon.

They used the classification system not so much to protect the nation's security as to censor the news. As an example of their carelessness with legitimate secrets, Nixon once boasted to reporters that the United States was able to re-create Soviet radar signals and see "what the Russian radar showed..."

"The Nixon statement created near-pandemonium" at the National Security Agency, Hersh reports. He quotes one official as exclaiming, "I died when I heard it... I just fell out of my chair. I literally did."

Nixon's statement caused the Soviets "to change every frequency, every crypt system, every net structure," and the United States lost "the incalculable advantage of knowing what the other side was seeing," Hersh states.

But when I exposed the secret manipulations of Nixon and Kissinger in Vietnam, it "threw the White House ... into a panic," and then Attorney General John Mitchell "ordered an extensive investigation."

Recounts Hersh: "In all, Anderson wrote 13 columns between March 18 and May 6, 1971 ... and all were ignored by the rest of the press. In some cases, Anderson's information was recycled by other reporters in stories years later, and invariably each was treated as major news."

Later in the year, I published secret documents proving that Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger had lied about the U.S. policy toward Pakistan. Investigators zeroed in on Navy Yeoman Charles Radford, whom they suspected of slipping me the documents.

They bullied and brow beat him for three weeks. They put him through four lie detector tests. They screamed obscenities at him. They tapped his telephone. They finally got their confession — not that he had passed on Kissinger's secrets to me but that he had spied on Kissinger for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Hersh reports that Donald Stewart, the chief Pentagon investigator, was urgently summoned to David Young's White House office on December 23, 1971. "Young shocked Stewart by ordering him to 'establish a homosexual relationship between Anderson and Yeoman Radford; it was clear from Young's tone that Stewart was not merely to investigate such a relationship but find one."

"Stewart, a former FBI agent who was nearly 15 years older than Young, objected emphatically. As Stewart protested, Young jumped up and shouted ... 'Goddam, the President wants this, and every time we tell him we can't do something!'"

Here is the rest of Hersh's account: "Nixon's fear of Anderson, of what he knew or could learn, about the workings of the White House, was acute by the end of 1971, and yet (John) Ehrlichman recalls, the President refused to grant John Mitchell permission to wiretap Anderson's telephone at the time the taps were placed on Radford's. Nixon apparently feared that Anderson's contacts inside the FBI were so extensive that he would be tipped off about a legally authorized wiretap. Perhaps Anderson would also be told of other wiretaps that had not been legally authorized. "Given the fear and anger in the

We're buried in debt

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I don't know how it has happened to us, but we just seem to be buried in debt. We both have good jobs, but somehow we always end up spending more than we have, and now it is about to overwhelm us. Do you think God is concerned about such things? — Mrs. D.C.O.

DEAR LMRS. D.C.O.: Our society makes it very easy for someone to get in this position. One reason is because we are constantly being bombarded with advertisements urging us to buy things — and even suggesting that we are missing out on true happiness if we do not have them. Another reason is that it is easy to purchase things with borrowed money — through loans, credit cards, and so forth — that was often not available to previous generations.

Yes, God is concerned about your situation. That does not mean however that suddenly God will intervene and all your debts will magically disappear. But God can help you by giving you the strength and wisdom you need for this difficult time. He also wants to teach you some basic principles of living which will keep you from getting into this kind of problem again.

First of all, you need to develop some type of short-term strategy to cut your spending patterns and tackle your debt. Since I don't know your full situation I can't tell you exactly what you need to do — you may need to get someone who is skilled in financial matters to help you. But in addition you need to think through some deeper issues for the long term — such as what your goals are, and the place material possessions should have in your lives.

Jesus said, "Watch out! Be on your guard against all kinds of greed; a man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions" (Luke 12:15). I want you to think about that seriously. We all could get by on a lot less than we have — and in fact most of the world does. But it is easy to talk ourselves into thinking we need every latest gadget or fashion that comes on the market — often because we want to impress others. But that is wrong. Our goal instead should be to "seek first his kingdom and his righteousness" (Matthew 6:33). Commit not only this problem but your whole lives to Christ. Let him be Lord of every area of life — including your finances.

Dr. Donohue

Eye disease

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 32 years old and have been told I have cataracts. I am told this is unusually young for this to happen, also that the condition can occur in people if they have diabetes or a thyroid-gland problem. I have been tested for both conditions and have neither.

Is there anything else that could cause cataracts in a person my age? I was told that only surgery can help. I understand there are two types of cataract surgery. My knowledge of the kinds of surgery is rather dim. Can you discuss this problem? — Mrs. R.G.

It is unusual for cataracts to form in someone your age. The most common form of cataract is the one that occurs as we get older.

However, the eye lens can become clouded (cataract) even from birth or in early adulthood. When that happens various diseases have to be considered — diabetes, hypoparathyroidism, for example. Wilson's disease, a copper storage problem leading to liver disturbance, is another. Doctors frequently have to abandon hope of finding a specific cause and move on to treatment.

Once a cataract has formed, for whatever reason, and when vision has become affected, then surgery is the only way to restore lost eyesight. The clouded lens is taken out and an artificial one substituted, either as a contact lens, spectacles, or by implanting a lens in place of the old one.

I don't know if this was your question, but there are two basic ways to actually remove the clouded lens. One is called an intracapsular extraction and the other, extracapsular. It depends on whether or not a thin membrane at the back of the lens holding it in place is removed. That membrane is called the lens capsule.

With an intracapsular extraction, both the lens and its capsule are taken out. It an extracapsular extraction the capsule is left in place. Leaving the capsule behind makes it easier to insert an artificial lens inside the eye, if that is desired. There are many procedures for the actual removal of the lens — use of enzymes to soften it to a liquified state, sound-wave use, etc. Your ophthalmologist will guide you to the best procedure.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Why is measles vaccination required for children when the public health officials are always saying it is all but wiped out? Isn't it an added waste of health care dollar, which is already being stretched thin as it is? — J.A.

Now would be the absolutely wrong time to discontinue a program of immunization that has had such remarkable success. Recent figures I've seen indicate that the number of measles cases in the U.S. this year might dip below 2,000. Compare that with the 500,000-plus yearly cases in the U.S. just two decades ago and you must call the vaccination program an unqualified success.

Public health officials are justly proud of these figures, but they're not suggesting the program be scrapped. Discontinuing it would be costly, not only in suffering but in terms of dollars and cents cost for treatment of the illness and its consequences.

Unless properly treated, both glaucoma and cataracts can lead to blindness. If you are afflicted with either of these ailments, or know someone who is, write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for his booklet, "Cataracts and Glaucoma." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Abby

Disease baffles family

DEAR ABBY: About two years ago, my father, who was only 55, started to forget the simplest things — such as his own telephone number. "I must be getting senile," he joked.

He grew increasingly confused and forgetful, which frustrated and depressed him. When he couldn't find his way home from work one evening, we knew something was terribly wrong.

We took him to a psychiatrist who immediately referred him to a neurologist. The diagnosis: Alzheimer's disease, for which there is no known cure! We had never heard of this disease and were surprised to learn that approximately 2 million Americans presently suffer from it.

Our father can no longer drive and, of course, he had to quit his job. He just stays home doing nothing. He has become childish and completely dependent on Mother. His physical health is fine, but he has the mentality of a 2-year-old. Mother must watch him day and night. She even has to diaper him, and she's about to crack under the strain.

We feel so helpless. Abby, I can't describe the heartbreak we're enduring. How do other families cope with this? Can you send some information about Alzheimer's disease? What is it, and what can be done about it?

DESPERATE IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR DESPERATE: Alzheimer's disease (pronounced ALTZ-himers) is a disorder of the brain that causes loss of memory or serious mental deterioration.

Within the last few years, concerned friends and families of Alzheimer's disease victims have banded together to form a national support group. The prevention or cure of the disease is still unknown. However, medical care can relieve many of the symptoms, and proper guidance can help the patient and family cope with the illness.

Do you remember Rita Hayworth, the beautiful actress who married Prince Aly Khan? She is a victim of Alzheimer's. Today she can no longer recognize her own name. Her daughter, Princess Yasmin, is a hard-working member of this organization, which provides help to families through education, research and a quarterly newsletter that contains valuable information. The organization wants to hear from the families of Alzheimer's disease victims in order to help them.

For a free packet of helpful information, write to: Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association, 360 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

It is a non-profit organization, so please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (54 cents) envelope.

Complainants not named

Q. If I complain on my neighbor because of a loud party or disturbance, does the officer give my name to my neighbor?

A. Usually the officer dispatched is not given the complainant's name. The officer will in most cases simply advise the person or persons causing the problem that one of his neighbors called to complain about a disturbance. In almost all cases this is all that is needed. If, however, the complainant wishes to press criminal charges, then he will be identified in the report the officer makes. Then, according to the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure, Chapter 1, Article 1.25, "The defendant, upon a trial, shall be confronted with the witness, except in certain cases provided for in this Code where depositions have been taken (Texas Constitution, Article 1, Section 10, U.S. Constitution Amendment VI)".

Q. What are the requirements to be a police officer for the Big Spring Police Department and what does it pay?

A. To be a police officer for the Big Spring Police Department a person must first meet the State requirements and secondly the city requirement. These are as follows:

1. Be a U.S. citizen.
2. Be 21 years of age.
3. Fingerprinted and a search by fingerprints made in local, state and national fingerprint files for a criminal record.

4. Have not been convicted of DWI or DUID within the last 10 years nor have been convicted of a felony, nor have ever been placed on probation for a felony.
5. Be of good, moral character, as determined through a background investigation.
6. High School graduate or equivalent.
7. Be examined by a licensed physician for sound physical condition, and normal hearing, color vision and visual functions.
8. Screening by a licensed physician or psychologist for emotional instability.
9. Interviewed personally prior to appointment by representatives for the police department.
10. Submit to and pass a polygraph examination as given by a licensed examiner.
11. Honorable discharge from the military if applicable.
12. Run and pass a physical agility test within the time standards.
13. Pass a written test devised by the Texas Commission for Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education.

A person after he is hired will attend a 10-week basic police academy and undergo sixteen weeks of intense on-the-job training before he is considered a police officer.

The starting pay for police officers is $1,210 per month. A patrol officer can make as much as $1,263 per month.

Some Galveston residents want to relive 'glory days'

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Until 1957, people flocked to this coastal resort community to drink, play cards, roll dice or bet on the horses.

This was the place for high rollers. Thousands paid a quarter to ride the Interurban train from Houston, hoping to turn their dimes into dollars.

Governors, mayors, police chiefs and sheriffs looked the other way.

But the jackpot didn't last forever. The big bust came when Texas Attorney General Will Wilson got the winning hand. Obtaining dozens of civil court injunctions, Wilson closed gambling establishments all over the county.

The gamblers came back for a while, but old-timers say the end finally came in 1961 when Hurricane Carla devastated the city. Galveston had to rebuild and its beaches and historical buildings became bigger drawing cards than the gambling tables.

Now, some residents want to bring back the "glory days" — legally.

The City Council last week agreed to hold a non-binding straw vote to see what citizens want. State Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, also said he would introduce a bill to authorize local-option gambling elections — if he is convinced the community supports it. But no one's taking any bets.

Mother denied leave

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Delighted with her new baby girl, Carole Fazar had hoped to take some time off from work to enjoy her new role as a full-time mother.

But the dream disappeared after her employers denied a request for maternity leave because her 4-month-old daughter, Kristin Marie, is adopted.

"I don't feel I'm less of a parent. I feel I'm more of a parent. It's an honor to be able to adopt a child. We're not second-class citizens," Mrs. Fazar said Sunday night.

"In a way, we're hurt. It's just unreal," said her husband, Michael.

The Fazars got Kristin Marie, their first child, early last month after waiting several years on an adoption list.

Mrs. Fazar, 39, a clerk at the tax office in the nearby borough of Ambridge, said she contacted her supervisor about receiving an unpaid maternity leave.

Mrs. Fazar, a borough employee for 18 years, said she expected no problems.

But at a borough council meeting Tuesday, her first full day at home, Mrs. Fazar's bid for maternity leave was denied by a 4-2 vote.

Mrs. Fazar, a member of Local 1015 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, filed a grievance against the decision two days later.

"I just want a guarantee of my job in case something unforeseeable should happen to my husband," she said.

Her contract provides for a six-month maternity leave which is renewable for another six months, she said.

"My present supervisor for the past 10 years said in a letter of recommendation (for adoption) many good things about me, including that I was a hard worker."

Soviet hydrofoil to be displayed

OGALLALA, Neb. (AP) — The Soviet hydrofoil Viktoria, built as a gift for President Nixon, will skim the waters of a Nebraska reservoir this summer as officials try turning the government surplus oddity into a tourist attraction.

The late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev gave the craft, capable of speeds up to 50 mph, to Nixon in 1972. After its presidential tour, the Viktoria — named for Brezhnev's wife — was used by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to chase poachers and was up for grabs after being declared surplus in 1981. Nebraska won it.

The boat now is docked at Lake McConaughy, a 25-mile-long, 4-mile-wide oasis on the Nebraska plain. Ogallala officials are determined to turn the vessel into a promotional treasure.

"We don't have anything in western Nebraska that has anything to do with the history of the president of the United States, so we hope this will be an attention-getter," said Bill England, executive vice president of the Ogallala Chamber of Commerce.

France's Noah brings French Open title home

PARIS (AP) — The importance of the French Open title match in this nation of tennis addicts was summed up in a Paris headline with these patriotic lines from the national anthem La Marseillaise: Le Jour de Gloire.

The day of glory arrived in France Sunday when Yannick Noah became the first Frenchman in 37 years to win the world's No. 1 clay court tournament by defeating 18-year-old Mats Wilander of Sweden, the defending champion, 6-2, 7-5, 7-6.

It was the first Grand Slam title for Noah, a 23-year-old who is ranked sixth in the world and is the best-known athlete in France.

When the 6-foot-4, 180-pound Noah won the third-set tiebreaker 7-3 to wrap up the title, the 16,500 fans at Roland Garros Stadium broke into chants of "No-ah, No-ah, No-ah" as they waved flags and wore sun hats bearing Noah's name.

Overcome with emotion, Noah jumped over the net and ran into the arms of his father, who had traveled from his home in the west African nation of Cameroon to watch his son play.

"In the past, everytime he's come here to watch me play, he's gone back to Cameroon with more gray hair," Noah joked. "Maybe he won't get so many this time because I won."

Playing aggressively at the net against Wilander's baseline strategy, Noah overpowered his younger opponent in two hours, 24 minutes. The fans became so excited in the tense third set that the umpire frequently had to ask for quiet.

"I thought the crowd was going to be like it was," Wilander said after his defeat. "A crowd like that doesn't really help me win a match. Maybe it helped Yannick a little."

The defeat marked the first time Wilander has ever lost a match on the slow Garros courts. Last year, the Swede made tennis history in Paris when he became the youngest man to win a Grand Slam title. In 1981, Wilander won the French Open junior crown.

"I think he is one of the top players in the world," Wilander said of Noah. "I think he can win on any surface."

But there is one surface the French champion will not try this year. Noah, who dislikes playing on grass, says he will skip Wimbledon, which begins June 20.

His hair plaited in scores of braids, Noah says one of his goals this year will be to do well on the hard courts at the U.S. Open in New York. His victory in Paris proved that an aggressive serve-and-volley game can triumph on these slow courts where baseline players like Sweden's Bjorn Borg have long dominated the title matches. Borg, a six-time French open champion who retired from tennis in April, was here as a television commentator.

Noah was "discovered" by Arthur Ashe when the American tennis star was on a goodwill tour of Africa a decade ago. The young Noah, who was born in France and whose mother is French, then returned to France to further his training.

"My family has helped me a lot," Noah said. "It was very hard for me to leave them when I was so young. I always wanted to be a tennis player. I am very happy to show them that all we did together paid off in the end. When I won today, it was for my dad, my mother and my coach."

It was Noah's third victory over Wilander in five encounters. The Frenchman last beat the Swede three weeks ago in Hamburg, West Germany, to end Wilander's 43-match winning streak on European clay.

And last year, it was Noah who snapped Czechoslovakian Ivan Lendl's 44-match winning streak in the final at Palm Springs, Calif.

In Sunday's title match, Noah dominated throughout. He had five aces to Wilander's two, six service breaks to the Swede's two and only double faulted once while Wilander failed to get his serves in twice.

Noah was the first Frenchman to win the French Open since Marcel Bernard took the title 37 years ago in 1946. The last time a Frenchman reached the final at Roland Garros was in 1972, when Spain's Andres Gimeno defeated Patrick Proisy, now Noah's brother-in-law.

Astros drop Reds into cellar

By the Associated Press

Houston scored four runs in the seventh inning to erase a 3-0 Cincinnati lead and drop the Reds into last place in the NL West with a 6-3 victory yesterday.

Kevin Bass, pinch hitting for winning pitcher Vern Riffe, drove in the first two runs of the inning with a double and later scored the go-ahead run on Tim Tolman's sacrifice fly.

Reds right-hander Charlie Puleo had allowed only a bunt single by Terry Puhl before walking the bases full in the seventh.

The Astros overcame a 3-0 deficit by loading the bases in the seventh on three walks and going on to score four runs. Dawley, traded by the Reds to Houston earlier this year, struck out three as he recorded his fourth save.

National League

"The Astros put me up here (in the major leagues), and the Reds never did," said Dawley, who was frustrated about his minor-league status in the Cincinnati organization. "Seven years and I was still at the Triple-A level. I'm happy the Reds traded me away."

"I asked them last year (for a trade), but I didn't hold the cards, they did. It's an extra incentive to do well here in Cincinnati in front of your teammates and your friends."

Cards 8, Braves 3

By pitching seven solid innings, and getting 16 hits in support, John Stuper not only raised his record to 7-2, but he also gave the St. Louis Cardinals their first victory over Atlanta in seven games this season. Sunday's winning score was 8-3.

In fact, it was the first victory over the Braves for the World Series champion Cardinals since they swept Atlanta in the National League Championship Series.

Expos 12, Giants 9

Andre Dawson went 5-for-5 for the second time this season, Al Oliver added, four hits and Tim Wallach drove in three runs as Montreal put together 20 hits to beat San Francisco.

Dawson homered and had two doubles and two singles.

San Francisco hit five home runs in the game, two apiece by Jack Clark and Chili Davis and one by Joel Youngblood, but four of them came after they trailed 9-1.

Chicago 3, Bucs 1

Jay Johnstone homered to lead off Chicago's fifth inning, sparking a three-run rally that helped the Cubs to their fifth straight victory. The loss was the sixth in a row for the Pirates.

The homer was Johnstone's third of the year and 99th of his career. It was followed by a single by Steve Lake. Lake scored when Pirates center fielder Lee Mazzilli misplayed Larry Bowa's single for an error, and Bowa, who had gone to second on the miscue, scored on a single by Mel Hall.

Mets 4, LA 2

Mookie Wilson's eighth-inning single snapped a 2-2 tie, and the Mets center fielder robbed Pedro Guerrero of a three-run homer in the second inning to lead New York over Los Angeles.

After Wilson singled home pinch runner Daryl Strawberry, he stole second, continued to third on catcher Steve Yeager's wild throw and came home on Bob Bailor's infield hit.

With runners on first and third in the second inning, Wilson leaped high above the center field fence, turning Guerrero's sure homer into a long sacrifice fly. Wilson also made a diving catch of Yeager's sinking liner to the gap in left-center in the ninth.

Phillies 2, Padres 1

Philadelphia ended a six-game losing streak with the help of home runs from Garry Maddox and Joe Morgan and three innings of one-hit relief by Al Holland.

Holland was working in relief of starter Charlie Hudson, who yielded a fourth-inning run on Steve Garvey's RBI single.

Rangers edged by Tiger bats

By the Associated Press

Detroit's Kirk Gibson, battling a season-long slump, showed what can happen when he finds his batting stroke.

Gibson knocked in three runs with three hits Sunday night, but it was his towering 450-foot, 10th-inning shot into the right centerfield stands that sent the Texas Rangers' fans home buzzing after a 5-4 loss.

Buddy Bell of Texas kept the Rangers' hopes alive with a game-tying, two-out, two-strike home run in the bottom of the ninth inning — but Gibson's homer provided the margin of victory.

Gibson also doubled for one run, hit an RBI grounder and scored once.

American League

Brewers 5, Angels 4

Ted Simmons cheats. He admits it. He also admits he got caught at it. But he made up for it in a most unusual way — with his bat.

His baserunning in the seventh inning cost Milwaukee a run, but he got that one back — and the game-winner as well — with a homer in the bottom of the ninth that boosted the Brewers to a 5-4 victory Sunday over the California Angels.

In the seventh inning, Simmons' double cut California's lead to 4-3 and reached third on a grounder to short when Tim Lincecum's throw, which had him beat by a good 20 feet, sailed over Doug DeCinces' head.

But when Ben Oglivie fled out to Reggie Jackson in right field, Simmons took off an instant before the catch. The Angels appealed and Simmons was called out.

Mariners 8, NY 7

Al Cowens, playing so poorly earlier this season that the Mariners gave rookie Ricky Nelson a shot at right field, responded to the platooning by hitting a home run and a triple and driving in three runs against the Yankees.

Cowens hit a two-run homer in the second inning to give Seattle a 4-0 lead. The Yanks went ahead 5-4 on homers by Ken Griffey and Dave Winfield, but the Mariners went ahead to stay with a four-run fifth.

Twins 10, Red Sox 4

Gary Ward found his new position in the batting order very much to his liking. "I needed to switch things around to get some offense going," Manager Billy Gardner explained after he dropped Ward from third to fifth. Ward responded with a triple and a two-run homer and drove in three runs.

"They can put me 10th, 11th, 12th or 13th — it doesn't bother me," Ward said.

Toronto 5, Orioles 2

The Blue Jays walked past Baltimore, leaving Toronto, Boston and the Orioles in a virtual three-way tie for first place in the East.

POPPED LOOSE — Detroit Tigers' Tom Brookens loses control of the ball as Bucky Dent (7) of the Texas Rangers slides into third in the eighth inning in Arlington Sunday night. Dent went from first to third on a single to right. Detroit won the game, 5-4.

Four of the runs scored on Buck Martinez' grand-slam homer. "The last one I hit was in 1967 in Sacramento, in an amateur game," he said.

A's 8, Indians 3

Oakland's batters pounded Cleveland's pitchers for 23 hits in their sweep, striking for all eight first-game runs in the ninth inning, then getting homers from Wayne Gross and Rickey Henderson in the finale.

Mike Heath hit a two-run double and Garry Hancock, in his second at-bat in the inning, added a two-run single in the opening-game explosion. Gross hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning, Mike Davis had a two-run single in the fifth and Henderson hit his three-run homer in a fourth-run sixth to blow away the Indians in the second game.

Royals 7, Chicago 5

Four-run eighth innings were pivotal in both the Royals' opening-game victory and Chicago's nightcap triumph.

In the first game, U. L. Washington hit a three-run homer for Kansas City, then Tom Paciorek hit a three-run double for the White Sox in the second game. Floyd Bannister of the White Sox pitched six perfect innings in the opener before Willie Wilson's leadoff single triggered a two-run seventh.

SMU wins NCAA title

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Methodist got into position to win the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field team title by doing the expected.

But it won it with a flare by doing the unexpected.

The expected came when Michael Carter won his sixth NCAA shot put title. Robert Weir led three Mustang scorers in the hammer throw and Keith Connor easily defended his triple jump championship.

NCAA

But for all its muscle, SMU's title came because: freshman Sven Nylander, expected to finish fourth or fifth in the 400 meter hurdles, won the event; Henry Andrade lunged at the tape to finish fifth in the 110-meter hurdles for an extra precious point and the 1,600-meter relay team made a thrilling charge that gave the Pony's the title on the final event of the meet.

UCLA won the women's title for the second straight year, also on the last event — the long jump — when Jackie Joyner placed third, allowing the Bruins to edge Florida State, which had no long jumper in the finals.

SMU's title hopes came to rest on freshman Rod Jones' shoulders as he took the baton to run the anchor leg of the 1,600 meter relay. He was in sixth place and needing to finish fifth for the Mustangs to have enough points to win the meet.

Jones finished fourth.

"I like running from behind anyway," said Jones, who had a 44.3 split that allowed SMU to capture a 104-102 victory margin over runnerup Tennessee. Alabama finished third with 88 points and Texas-El Paso was fourth with 84.

SMU trailed the Vols by seven points, 102-95, going into the final event. A fifth place finish was worth eight points and fourth earned the Mustangs nine points for their final total.

UCLA, which won its fourth NCAA women's title since 1975, finished with 116 12 points, followed by Florida State with 108 and Nebraska, led by sprinter Merlene Ottey's 40-point performance, was third with 106 23.

Joyner spearheaded UCLA's title run from start to finish, competing in five events and earning 30 individual points.

Joyner started the week by defending her heptathlon title. She helped the Bruins to a fifth place finish in the 400 meter relay, a sixth place in the 1,600 meter relay and placed eighth in the 100 meter hurdles and third in the long jump.

Ottey completed an exhausting week with victories in the women's 100 and 200 meters, a third place in the 400 meters and led the 400 meter relay team to a second place finish.

Ottey charged in the final yards to beat UCLA's Florence Griffith with a 22.39 clocking in the 200 meters.

Other double winners in the week-long meet were North Carolina State's Betty Jo Springs and Texas-El Paso's Gadamsi Shahanga, who won the men's and women's 5,000 and 10,000 meter races and Florida State, which established collegiate records in the 400 and 1,600 meter relays.

Texas-El Paso's Bert Cameron, trailing by five yards going into the final turn, sprinted to his third NCAA victory in the men's 400 meter dash.

Cameron won the event in 1980 and 1981 and was second in 1982. Chris Whitlock of Washington State held the lead until Cameron made his move.

Carter, returning to top form in the shot put after missing a year because of a football injury, reclaimed his title from Oregon's Dean Crouser.

Crouser won the discus but finished third in the shot to Carter and UCLA's John Brenner in the shot.

Connor repeated as the triple jump champion with a leap of 56-7 1/2 but missed out on a record try.

Miller captures W. Virginia tourney

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP) — What the West Virginia LPGA Classic may be lacking in some areas, it is more than making up for it in dramatic finishes.

For five straight years the champion of the tournament, played on the hilly, grueling, 6,100-yard Speidel course, has been decided in a sudden-death playoff, an LPGA record.

Alice Miller, a five-year pro from Marysville, Calif., joined the winner's circle Sunday by rolling in a 10-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole of sudden death to win a three-way playoff with Debbie Massey and Lori Garbacz.

"The way I look at it, I've already had a successful year," Miller said after her first tour victory, worth $22,500. "I didn't know how my nerves would hold up. I went to the locker room before the playoff to settle down and go for pars."

The three golfers, tied after regulation with even-par 216s, parred the first two holes of the playoff before Massey was eliminated when she shot a par-5 while Miller and Garbacz birdied.

On the final hole, Miller hit her tee shot to the left, then used a wedge to get within 10 feet of the pin. Garbacz, who shot a final-round 69 to move into contention, three-putted the green for a bogey.

"From regulation I knew the putt would break and it went right in the hole," Miller said.

The final-round drama heightened when five golfers moved to within two shots with three holes remaining, including two-time defending champion Hollis Stacy.

Stacy shot a 2-under 70 on the final round to finish at 1-over 217, one shot behind the leaders.

First-round leader LeAnn Cassidy was 2-over for the tournament, as was Anne-Marie Palli.

Patty Sheehan, seeking to win the tournament and a $450,000 bonus after a victory in the Corning Classic the previous week, finished three shots behind the leaders.

Couples takes Kemper Open

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Deborah Morgan-Couples was playing in a tennis tournament in California when she learned that her husband, Fred, had a chance to win 1983 Kemper Open golf tournament. She took the "red-eye" all night flight east to be next to him.

Debbie, a tennis teaching pro, didn't realize, however, it was going to take Fred until the second hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday to beat four others in the extra action and pocket the $72,000 first prize.

"When I saw him on television, I could see the confidence," she said after Couples had scored his first Tour victory. "He had the eye of a tiger."

Couples, a 23-year-old three-year pro who plays out of LaQuinta, Calif., nearly lost the championship in regulation to Scott Simpson, who missed a four-foot putt on No. 18 that sent the outcome into extra holes.

"I misread it," said Simpson as he hurried out of the dressing room. "I read it straight and it broke a lot." Simpson had a 77 in the final round.

Simpson, Couples and T.C. Chen, a rookie from Taiwan who closed with a 76, made up the final threesome, and it took them more than five hours to complete the round — finishing an hour after group ahead of them.

After Simpson missed the putt, he and Couples, along with Barry Jaeckel, Gil Morgan and Chen, all of whom finished the four rounds with 1-under-par 287s, began the sudden death on the 554-yard, par-5 15th hole at the Congressional Country Club Course.

All but Jaeckel, who, with Morgan, had finished regulation play two hours earlier with 70s, parred the hole.

On the 211-yard, par-3 No. 16, Couples hit his 5-iron within 18 inches and the tournament was all but over. "All it take is one good shot and that's what I did on No. 16," said Couples, who shot a 5-over-par 77 Sunday after earlier rounds of 71-71-68.

"I would have loved to have shot 72 or 73 and won by five or six, but that's not the way it is," he said. "We definitely backed up the field."

His wife Debbie, however, was positive her husband, who she met at a football game at the University of Houston was going to win the Kemper.

"I saw him walking with a different attitude, a calmness," said Debbie, who followed her husband around the course after a 3,000-mile, all night flight. "I had seen him on television before and he always looked loose and carefree. He was more serious this time. So I hopped on a plane and flew all night to be here."

Despite his sudden-death victory, Couples wasn't resting on his laurels. He was up early this morning to try and qualify for the U.S. Open later this month.

"We're going to celebrate first," said Debbie, flashing a big smile.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning finds some new ideas which can be considered for long-term implications. You need to watch yourself where details are concerned. Be practical about business.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You understand where new ideas are leading you and make them operate nicely for you. Be objective in self-analysis.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get your new campaign started early in order to be able to iron out errors. Listen to the advice of a confidante.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use practical methods in the latter part of your day. The evening is best spent at home with friends and family.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A different focus on your vocation brings more success. Make a decision about an outside affair.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Being understanding with a new contact can be advantageous to you. Avoid one who has a definite eye on your assets.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how to handle your material affairs more intelligently. Work harder on bringing greater happiness to your loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what allies expect of you even though it is difficult to get to the heart of the matter. Be aware of current events.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get that new system working at your job, but don't have an argument with your partner. Stress health matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are in the public eye today so be careful. Tonight, have a good time at what pleases you most.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't forge ahead without the approval of family to avoid arguments. Be tactful and more harmony is achieved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You see the way clear for greater production in your daily endeavors. Gain the cooperation of regular associates.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) It will be easy to find better ways of adding to your revenue. Carry through by yourself and solve problems wisely.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be highly inspired early in life so provide a fine education. Business is favored and a great fortune can be obtained. Teach to be more patient through religious training. Provide musical training for self-expression.

LA squeezes by Wranglers in USFL action
By The Associated Press
Jojo Townsell may be brand new to the United States Football League. But he's no stranger to Los Angeles Express quarterback Tom Ramsey.
Townsell, who joined the Express just last week, caught a 26-yard touchdown pass from Ramsey with 2:38 to play Sunday to give Los Angeles a 17-13 win over the Arizona Wranglers and a tie for the lead with Oakland in the USFL's Pacific Division. The touchdown came on a play the two had practiced often as teammates at UCLA.
"Tom Ramsey and I have thrown this pattern before," said Townsell, who signed with the Express last week after spurning the National Football League New York Jets, who made him their third-round draft choice.
"The play was called and I just beat my man and the coverage was wide open."
In other USFL games Sunday, the Philadelphia Stars moved closer to becoming the first team to clinch a playoff berth, topping the Michigan Panthers 29-20, and the Tampa Bay Bandits swamped the Birmingham Stallions 45-17.
On Saturday night, the Oakland Invaders topped the New Jersey Generals and on Friday, the Denver Gold beat the Washington Redskins 24-12.
Tonight, the Chicago Blitz, 9-4, will visit the 8-5 Boston Breakers.
Los Angeles' win, before a crowd of only 13,826 in the Los Angeles Coliseum, was keyed by its defense, which had nine sacks. Arizona quarterback Alan Risher was knocked out of the game with a rib injury in the first half after completing 12 of 15 passes for 154 yards.
But Arizona still led when Ramsey, who replaced Mike Rae in the second half and completed 11 of 13 for 101 yards, engineered the 61-yard, 7-play drive that culminated with the touchdown pass to Townsell. Cornerback Bobby Hosea's interception sealed the victory, which evened the Express' record at 7-7.
In Philadelphia, only 19,088 people showed up in 76,000-seat Veterans Stadium to watch Chuck Fusina complete 24 of 32 passes for three touchdowns in an opened-up Stars' offense. Philadelphia ran its record to 12-2 and will clinch the Atlantic Division title if Boston loses to Chicago tonight.

'Cats' nabs seven Tony awards

NEW YORK (AP) — "Cats," a $5 million Broadway extravaganza based on poems by T.S. Eliot, garnered best musical among its seven Tony Awards, while the surprising "Torch Song Trilogy" took home two awards, including best play.

Forty-nine Broadway shows were eligible for awards for the season that ended May 15. The Tony Awards, equivalent to Hollywood's Oscars, honor the choices of nearly 700 theater professionals.

"Cats," a British import and the most costly Broadway show ever, also won best book of a musical. The award was accepted by Valerie Eliot, whose late husband's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats" poems provided its lyrics.

"Tonight's honor would have given my husband particular pleasure," Mrs. Eliot said during Sunday night's show, which was televised live on CBS from the Uris Theater, renamed the Gershwin Theater during the evening.

Eliot was born in St. Louis, became a British citizen in 1927, and died in 1965. His widow lives in London.

Eliot and composer Andrew Lloyd Webber shared a Tony for best score of a musical. "Cats" director Trevor Nunn won as best director of a musical. Webber also wrote the music for "Evita" and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" also now on Broadway.

Betty Buckley, who sings "Memory" in "Cats," won as featured actress in a musical. John Napier and David Hersey won for "Cats" costume and lighting design, respectively.

Harvey Fierstein won twice for "Torch Song Trilogy," for writing the best play and as best actor in it. The play also is somewhat autobiographical. Its leading character is an entertainer who, dressed as a woman, works in a homosexual nightclub. Fierstein did that at age 16. He turns 29 today.

Fierstein, holding his two Tony Awards, said, "It is just the most marvelous thing in the world. We're like off-off-Broadway, doing theater out of our hearts, minds and lives. To get this kind of response from Broadway professionals is wonderful." Fierstein leaves his acting role June 11, to work on adapting the movie, "La Cage aux Folles," for stage.

John Glines, one of the show's six producers, said on TV, "I want to thank my producing partner and lover, Lawrence Lane, who never said it can't be done." Asked later whether he meant to shock the viewing public, Glines said, "Broadway producers get accused of not being daring."

Jessica Tandy, who turns 74 on Tuesday, was named best actress in a play as the Appalachian woman in the now-closed "Foxfire." She said her husband, Hume Cronyn, who co-wrote the play, "gave me a bit of an edge by writing such a wonderful part for me."

Another senior performer, 72-year-old Charles "Honi" Coles, who has been tap dancing professionally for 52 years, won for best featured actor in a musical, "My One and Only."

Tommy Tune and Thelma Houston won the choreography Tony for "My One and Only" and Tune won a Tony for best performance by an actor in a musical.

Natalia Makarova, the Kirov Ballet ballerina who defected to the West 13 years ago and now plays a Russian ballerina in "On Your Toes," won as best actress in a musical. She included thanks to "my husband, who didn't help much but stayed out of the way."

"On Your Toes," with music by Rodgers and Hart, won as outstanding reproduction of a play or musical.

Dad recalls son's last battle in book

ABILENE (AP) — It's the story Terry Pringle couldn't stop telling.

He first told it to Dr. Dan Pope, a couple of minutes after feeling the last few beats of the little heart.

Pope, who became much more than doctor to the Pringles during the 20 months since Eric was diagnosed at age 4 as having leukemia, was not surprised. He had been with the family earlier in the day.

"Did he die in his sleep?" he asked.

"You've got to be kidding," Pringle answered. "For the past two hours I've been watching the fight of the century."

In his book, "This Is the Child," Pringle recalled his 5-year-old son's last moments, in which Eric said God was telling him to hold his breath, but that he couldn't.

"What impressed me so much was not that God was talking to him," Pringle said in an interview, "but that he wasn't going to just stop breathing. He could go out easy, or he could fight. After that I was no longer afraid."

"That's what I've always considered Eric's gift to me. He removed any fear I had."

It's also the story Terry Pringle couldn't stop writing, once he began. "This Is the Child" was published in May by Alfred A. Knopf in New York.

"I started writing primarily because I wanted to tell the story of Eric," he said. "But in writing the book I found myself telling how a parent feels in this situation, of watching a child die.

"But I've never seen it as another book about a dying child. I do see it as essentially the story of Eric, a child who knew how to live his life."

The book was easy to write, he insisted.

"I wrote it myself. I had to tell about Eric. I can remember thinking within a couple of days after he died, I've been practicing writing for about 12 years, and I finally have a story."

Writing was not therapy for working through his grief, he said.

"I never started dealing with the loss of Eric until I stopped writing the book. As long as I was writing, I still had him."

Written throughout in the present tense, the book would not have been possible without the careful notes of his wife, Brenda, who recorded the 21 trips to Houston, the spinal taps, bone marrow aspirations, the many forms of leukemia therapy — experimental and otherwise — and the dates Eric's hair fell out and grew back.

The book is the story of family coping, admirably at times, not well at all at others; of a brother, Michael, just a year older than Eric, who sometimes felt neglected.

It was Michael, a little boy who had trouble with his "r's," who tagged his brother E. It was a name everybody, including his doctor, picked up.

When Eric tired easily and bruises appeared on his body after Christmas 1979, his mother took him to the family doctor. The leukemia was diagnosed on Jan. 29, 1980, and life was never to be the same.

There are the frustrations of dealing with the traumas in a huge medical center in Houston, of not being able to protect Eric from the pain he must endure, the total despair of a "bad" report, the elation on learning the leukemia is in remission. There is Pringle's absolute refusal to believe the first report that Eric's disease is no longer in remission.

Eventually the Pringles decided against continuing the leukemia treatments with their devastating side effects and elected to keep their little boy at home for what they know to be the inevitable.

It is then that their friends and family came to mean even more to them. Does Pringle believe he instilled in his son that fighting spirit that lasted to the end?

"I don't guess I did," he said. "I guess it was there all along."

"We talked about our attitudes — the whole family — and we knew we had to gear up. After that first relapse in February of 1981 we decided we had not had good attitudes and we needed to change them, especially toward the treatment. Chemotherapy is hard on everybody."

"But it was Eric who guided us through the whole thing."

Pringle is not sure he adequately expressed in his book his gratitude to

Pope, and he admits that even now it is difficult to do so.

"He helped us more than anybody," he said.

He has no desire to see his book made into a movie, Pringle said.
