Hot sauce, germs

NEW ORLEANS — Here's some hot news from the world of science: The habit of jazzing up raw oysters with a splash of spicy cocktail sauce just might make good medical sense. It kills the germs. Most oyster eaters probably indulge in cocktail sauce because they like the zippy taste. The new report raises the possibility it could also be a healthy thing to do.

Denny beating case jury acquits 2 of most counts

Verdicts ease fears of new racial tensions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two blacks were acquitted Monday of most of the felony charges in the beating of white trucker Reginald Denny and other motorists at the start of the 1992 riots, easing fears of renewed racial tensions.

The multiracial jury ended the day still deadlocked on the most serious count — attempted murder against defendant Damian "Football" Williams in the videotaped attack of Denny — and deadlocked on an assault count against Henry Watson.

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk ordered the jury to resume deliberations today, saying he hoped that a "good night's rest" would be helpful.

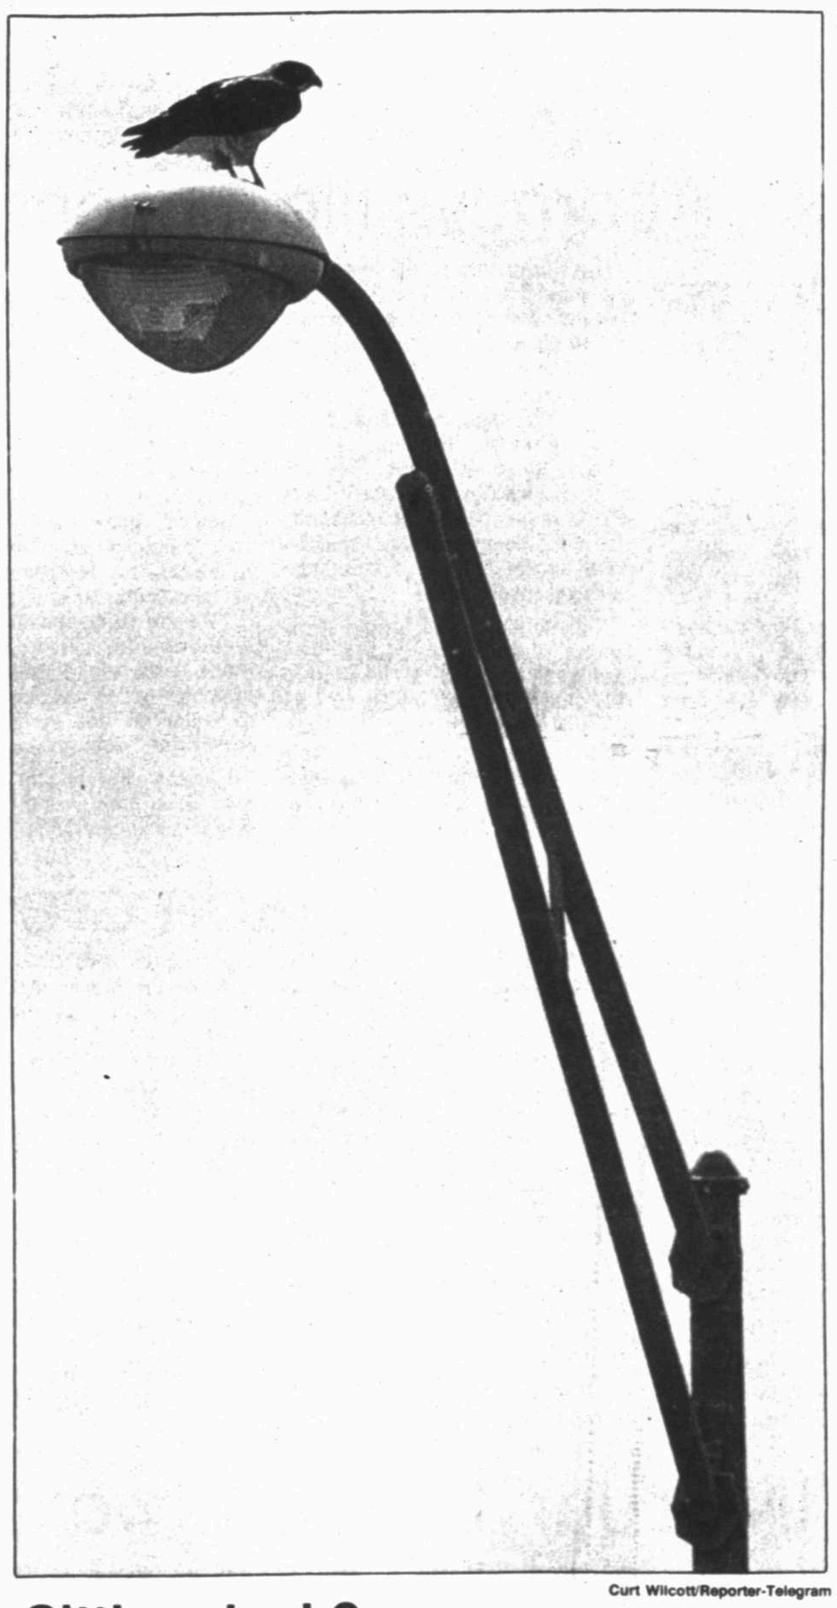

The jury convicted the defendants of lesser counts. It first told Ouderkirk it was deadlocked on three charges. He told jurors to continue deliberating and hours later, it found Williams innocent of a robbery

Clinton rails at bid to cap war powers

■ President vows to 'strenuously oppose' attempts to restrict his foreign policy authority.

By Julia Malone
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Clinton and Congress are headed for a showdown over war powers after intensified calls Monday for limiting troop deployments to trouble spots from Haiti to Bosnia.

Facing a growing determination on Capitol Hill to rein in the use of the armed forces, Clinton countered by announcing he would "strenuously oppose" attempts to restrict his authority and "tie the president's hands" in foreign policy dealings.

But Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., proceeded with his plans to introduce an amendment to require congressional authorization for troop deployments, except in emergencies.

As senators lined up behind Dole's proposals and similar measures, diplomats in Haiti expressed concern that debate in Washington would weaken the message of the sanctions against the current Haitian rulers.

There has long been division on the policy within the ranks of U.S. officials.

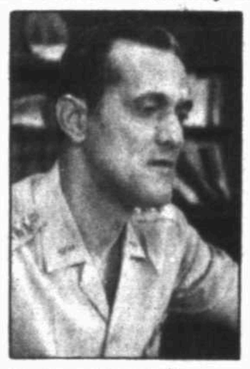

"The Haitian military is well aware of these contradictions and they know how to play them to their advantage," said one United Nations diplomat in

Haitian leaders defiant; armada erects blockade

By Anne-Marie O'Connor
N.Y. Times News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haiti's military leadership remained defiant Monday as a U.S.-led armada of warships, backed by new tough sanctions from President Clinton, erected a naval blockade to force the army to allow a return to democratic rule.

Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the leader of the Haitian army who was supposed to have resigned, suggested new talks but U.S. officials said it was simply a delaying tactic.

Thousands of frightened Haitians fled the capital of Port-au-Prince for the countryside. Wealthy Haitians jammed flights at the international airport.

Some Haitians said they feared a military confrontation with the United States was imminent, and rightist supporters of the military boasted that American troops would go home "in bags."

Clinton refused to "rule in or out" the use of force but indicated he would not order U.S. soldiers to Haiti unless American lives were threatened. However, Clinton stepped up his saber rattling by ordering six U.S. warships to move closer to the Haitian coast and by freezing the assets of Haiti's military and police leaders who are blocking the return of democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Hutchison's attorneys: Juror should have been excluded

AUSTIN (AP) — Two dozen motions filed Monday by attorneys for indicted U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison claim the official misconduct case facing her should be dismissed because of legal mistakes made by prosecutors.

The grand jury that indicted Mrs. Hutchison was improperly empaneled because it contained a juror facing a theft charge and because it was "stacked 100 percent" with voters bent toward the Democratic Party, the motions allege.

Mrs. Hutchison, 50, a Republican, was indicted last month on four felony counts and a misdemeanor charge accusing her of using state employees for person-

Wired: Police seek to log on with computer analyzation system

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

If police calls drop significantly in the wee morning hours, an obvious reaction might be to shift some officers to busier times. But other factors not readily considered may make such a decision unwise.

As a result, Midland police have requested city funds for a computer system to better analyze calls and manpower for more efficient deployment of officers.

"It's going to be a tailor program for the Midland Police Department," Deputy Police Chief John Urby said.

"We just need to interpret the data a little bit better. There's so many things we want to track but we can't right now," he said.

Currently, a police lieutenant spends about six weeks each year trying to make sense of information from the department's computer-aided dispatch (CAD) system for a workload study. Last year, the CAD system logged data from approximately 85,000 requests for police help.

"It winds up being an effort in futility," police Lt. Jim Reynolds recently told City Council members.

Reynolds, who performed the task last year, said findings become outdated by the time a study is completed.

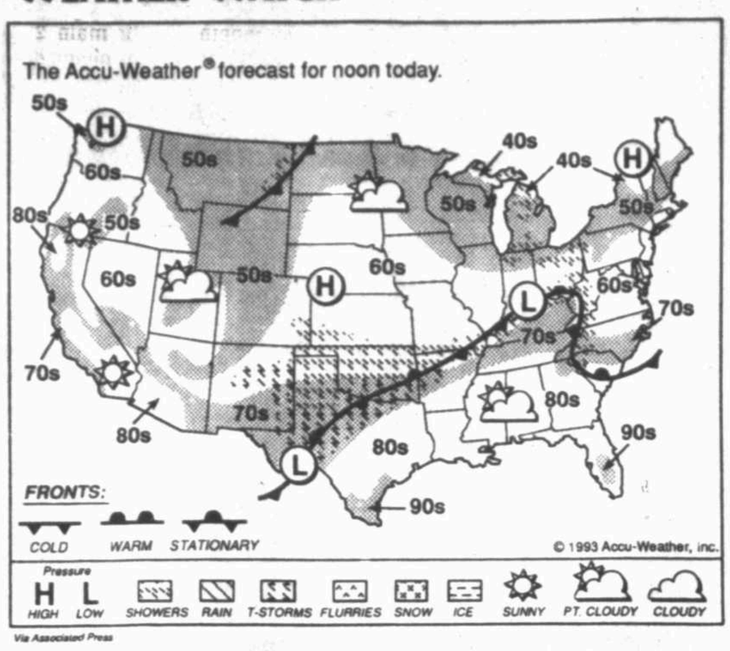

Having a Police Resource Optimization System (PROS) would continually interpret the data on a daily basis.

PROS takes into account all factors in police work such as when calls come in, dispatch and response times, priorities of calls and officers available.

The system can forecast trends and make recommendations on how to react to the workload, Urby said. This will help form work shifts, police-beat

Chance of rain clouds day

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, with a 50 percent chance of rain, a high near 70 and east to northeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 50 percent chance of rain and a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be cloudy with a 40 percent chance of rain and a high in the lower 60s.

After an overnight low of 57, Monday's high reached 85, compared to the record high for that date of 90 set in 1991. The record low was 27 set in 1989.

STATE

One person was killed Monday evening when a tornado and high winds of 50-60 mph swept through Emory, about 75 miles northeast of Dallas, Rains County officials said.

Emory Fire Department officials said that the man, who had not yet been identified Monday evening, had been killed when his trailer home as hit by the tornado.

Other damage included a destroyed barn, as well as the loss of roofs from several residences and businesses.

Television station KETK in Jacksonville, Texas, quoted the Rains County Sheriff's Department as saying there was scattered damage about 10 miles northeast of Alba.

That damage included a boat dealership on Lake Fork, two mobile homes, an outbuilding and the historic Caney Creek Schoolhouse, the station said.

The thunderstorm encompassed the areas south of Dougherty and southern Hopkins county communities of Arbala and Seymour also the northern Wood county community of Yantis.

There also was a tornado reported near Quitman in East Texas. No damage was immediately reported.

Several North Texas counties including Johnson, Ellis and Navarro had severe storms which left behind golf-ball-size hail.

There also was a tornado watch Monday evening that included the Dallas area.

Temperatures varied widely across North Texas Monday afternoon ranging from 68 degrees in Wichita Falls to 87 degrees in Lufkin.

Today's outlook should be cloudy with possible severe thunderstorms in the north central and west areas. Highs will be in the mid-70s west to the 80s southeast with lows in the 50s.

Most areas in West Texas will see clouds and chances of showers and thunderstorms through Wednesday. A cold front will breeze through today moving southward through the region. Tonight's temperatures will be in the 40s and 50s. Highs today in the north to mostly 60s and 70s over the rest of the region.

NATION

Rain and hail pelted Texas Monday, and as much as 2 feet of snow fell at higher elevations of the Rockies.

Southerly wind pushed moist, unstable air into north-central Texas during the afternoon, generating strong thunderstorms. Hail the diameter of dimes was reported at Goldthwaite, Texas, early in the day.

Heavy rain fell across northern and central sections of the state. And about 4 inches of rain had fallen by 7 a.m. CDT at Texarkana, Ark. More than 2 inches fell in the Dallas area.

FILES: Ex-employee sues Midland County

(From 1A)

Her lawsuit, filed by Plainview attorney Anita Burgess, alleges Ms. Lopez was discriminated against because of her gender, national origin and race in addition to being sexually harassed.

She claims the county and its divisions violated her First, 13th and 14th amendment rights as well as violating the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Included in the lawsuit is a "right to sue" letter from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Ms. Lopez, who is an American of Mexican descent, said she began working for the county in June 1981 as a probation officer and worked her way through the ranks to the position as director of the restitution center in August 1991.

It was at that time, Ms. Lopez claims in the lawsuit, that the CSCD Agency Director G.W. Thompson began making ethnic slurs toward her. She also alleges that the assistant director of the CSCD, Chris Davis, made sexual advances and comments toward her as well as making ethnic slurs directed toward her.

Ms. Lopez filed a grievance in July 1992. She alleges that she was told by Davis that she was not doing her job properly and would lose her position. She was later reassigned to the position of auditor, the lawsuit indicated.

She said Thompson did not respond to the grievance and she then went before the Personnel Review Committee, which questioned her on her managment performance and then discussed personal matters including her financial position and home life, according to the lawsuit.

She said the review committee denied her grievance and she appealed to the district court judges, who also denied her grievance. In November 1992 she was demoted to the position of probation officer, with a substantial decrease in pay, the lawsuit claims.

In December she took her current job with Garza County with another pay decrease, she said. Her lawsuit claims she was within six months of vesting her pension with the county, but sought the job "due to the hostile working environment created by the defendants."

Ms. Lopez alleges as a result of the harassment and discrimination she suffered stress and required medical treatment for it, as well as physical problems associated with the stress.

The lawsuit requests a jury trial with exemplary and punitive damages awarded.

Thompson declined to comment, although he said he anticipated this lawsuit would be filed.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said he had not been served with a copy of the lawsuit and could not comment on the litigation.

He said, however, that Ms. Lopez was not a county employee during her tenure because the CSCD is funded by the state with the county's only obligation to provide office space and administrative support.

RAILS: Clinton, Congress head for showdown

(From 1A)

Port-au-Prince, the Haitian capital. "What we need now is firm, undivided support from the Americans."

That sentiment was underscored by Clinton, who dispatched a letter to Dole and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine., warning that the restrictions on U.S. policy toward Haiti "could aggravate that nation's violent conflict and undermine American interests."

Clinton added, "Limiting my ability to act — or even creating the perception of such a limitation — could signal a green light to Haiti's military and police authorities in their brutal efforts to resist a return of democracy."

He said the Dole measure would limit his ability to protect 1,000 American civilians now in Haiti and could "trigger another mass exodus of Haitians."

Dole insisted that his proposal would not limit the president's authority to evacuate American citizens and added that he was willing to "work with the administration."

However, he cited "the clamor coming from the American people" to limit U.S: involvement overseas. "I think I've got the votes," the minority leader said.

Dole pointed out that the Senate last Friday, with approval from Clinton, voted to cut off funding for U.S. troops in Somalia after March 31.

Clinton also vigorously objected to an amendment introduced Monday by Sen. Don Nickles R-Okla. to require congressional authorization any time U.S. troops are put under the command of an international group such as the United Nations.

That "would make it unreasonably difficult for me or any President to operate militarily with other nations when it is in our interest to do so," said the president.

He objected to additional efforts that would restrict U.S. involvement in Bosnia, charging it would "make us unable to fulfill our NATO commitments."

Meanwhile, members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voiced doubts about U.S. military actions, but Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., launched a defense of the administration in its efforts to restore Haiti's elected, but now exiled, President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power.

"It's important for all of us to stand up when democracy is jeopardized," said Dodd, thumping his finger on the table during a hearing.

"For us to sit here and say this makes it hard for the president. We're in an age where we have a better chance to establish democracy than any other time in history."

JUROR: Attorneys file motions for dismissal

al and political jobs during her term as state treasurer.

She also is accused of overseeing the destruction of computer records as part of a coverup. The charges carry a maximum sentence of 61 years in prison and $43,000 in fines.

Mrs. Hutchison's attorney Dick DeGuerin, who hand-delivered the filings to the courthouse Monday, declined to comment on the motions.

"The motions speak for themselves," DeGuerin said. "I don't think it's appropriate for me to be litigating this case in the newspaper."

Some or all of the motions are likely to be ruled on by state District Judge Mike Lynch during an Oct. 28 pre-trial hearing.

The filings attack the investigation conducted by Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, who is a Democrat; the grand jury's selection; and even the laws under which the senator is accused. The motions contend the laws are unconstitutional.

Earle could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press late Monday. His first assistant, Steve McCleery, refused to comment except to say, "There weren't any surprises."

The motions claim grand juror Melvin Wrenn should have been excluded because a November 1988 charge of theft by check was pending against him at the time the panel was selected.

"This grand juror was absolutely mandatorily disqualified under the law," the motion said.

About 525 indictments returned by a Harris County grand jury were dismissed last month because the jury panel's foreman had been indicted on a charge of theft by check.

Wrenn has not been indicted, but it is illegal for accused or convicted felons to serve as grand jurors, according to Texas law.

Several motions seek to have the case dismissed because the indictments are too vague and because of "prosecutorial vindictiveness."

"We are filing this consolidated memorandum to show just how many laws the district attorney (Ronnie Earle) has chopped down in order to get at Kay Bailey Hutchison," the motion said.

Earle earlier had expressed an interest in making a bid for Lloyd Bentsen's vacated Senate seat won June 5 by Mrs. Hutchison in a landslide. He is accused in the filings of using the penal code "to favor his personal and political agenda and his desire to fill the Senate seat vacated by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen."

Earle has said he no longer would be eligible for a Senate race because of his investigation, publicly announced after a raid of the Treasury June 10.

Another motion seeks to have any evidence attained in the "gestapo-like raid" suppressed because of "flagrant ignorance and circumvention of the warrant requirement."

"If there is anything left of these indictments when the judge gets through with them (the motions), we will be ready to go to trial and we will win," DeGuerin said.

DEFY: U.S.-led armada erects blockade

(From 1A)

Clinton also revoked the U.S. visas of the renegade Haitian officials.

"Haiti is very much in our back yard," Clinton said, justifying his policy in the face of congressional efforts led by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., to curb his foreign policy powers. Dole today planned to introduce legislation to restrict the president's authority to commit troops.

"The president must make the ultimate decision" on when to use force, Clinton said.

An army broadcast told Haitians to ignore a United Nations arms and oil embargo that went into effect at midnight Monday. But the ominous presence of six American and two Canadian warships enforcing the sanctions just off the coast gave most people cause for concern. A French frigate and Argentinean vessel were scheduled to join the international interdiction effort.

"I'm not certain that I agree that a military confrontation is imminent," said Stanley Schrager, the U.S. Embassy spokesman in Haiti, in the first of what are to be daily briefings with the foreign press. "But there is always that risk."

Schrager said U.S. Ambassador William Swing had no plans to meet again with Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the leader of the Haitian army who was supposed to have resigned Friday under a U.N.-arranged plan to restore Aristide by Oct. 30. Aristide, ousted in a September 1991 military coup, remained in exile in Washington.

Cedras suggested new talks but U.S. officials said it was simply a delaying tactic.

"Gen. Cedras knows what he has to do and until that point Swing has no intention of meeting with him," Schrager said. "We don't have to meet with Gen. Cedras to make clear our views. We hold the military responsible for these sanctions."

Swing met with U.N. envoy Dante Caputo and Aristide's Prime Minister, Robert Malval, to offer security to the fragile civilian government, aides said. Some government officials have already taken refuge in Western embassies out of fear they will be assassinated, diplomats said.

"We obviously want to do whatever we can to protect the government and its ministers," Schrager said.

Right-wing supporters of the military sent out mixed signals.

A political front group handed out white carnations to foreign journalists at a news conference at which they promised no harm would come to them.

BEATING: Jury acquits two of most counts charge.

Accepting the defense argument that Williams and Watson were caught up in mob violence after the state Rodney King beating trial, the jurors acquitted them of most charges that required specific intent.

Defense psychologists testified that Williams, 20, and his 29-year-old co-defendant acted in the heat of the moment and couldn't have planned their actions.

Their heads newly shaven, Williams and Watson sat calmly as the verdicts were read, except when the clerk announced "Not Guilty" on an aggravated mayhem charge against Williams, which could have brought him life in prison. Williams clapped his hands over his eyes, reared back in his seat and hugged his attorney.

The jury convicted Williams on simple mayhem, with a maximum penalty of up to eight years in prison.

In the charges decided against him, Watson was acquitted of all but simple assault on Denny, a lesser related offense that carries only a year in county jail rather than prison. The jury rejected the charge that Watson, who has been held since shortly after the riots, tried to kill Denny, the count that could have brought him life in prison.

"I am in total agreement (with the jurors)," Denny told the TV tabloid show "Inside Edition." "They should let the guy go. He spent a year-and-a-half in jail and has had time to think about what happened."

He said he wouldn't comment on Williams until the jury finished deliberating.

As the verdicts were read, Watson's mother, Joyce, sat in the courtroom's front row, stifling sobs with a handkerchief after Ouderkirk had warned the audience against outbursts.

Williams, who gained fame when he was personally arrested by former Police Chief Daryl Gates, was acquitted of eight counts.

Gates, now a radio personality, denounced the verdicts as unjust.

"We know they're guilty. But I understand this is our system," Gates said.

The new police chief, Willie Williams, said he was pleased with community response, which remained generally calm.

And in South Central Los Angeles, scene of the worst rioting, the Rev. Leonard Jackson of First AME Church said: "There is a sense of calm and there is a sense of true justice. We saw justice working at its best."

The jury initially was hung up on whether Williams personally used a deadly weapon, a concrete block, to strike Denny in the head — a special allegation. And they disagreed on the key charge of attempted murder of Denny.

The panel also was undecided whether Williams had robbed Takao Hirata and whether Watson committed assault with a deadly weapon against another trucker, Larry Tarvin.

Denny, whose beating was broadcast live on national TV, provided the trial's most dramatic moment — which jurors never saw. He left the stand and threw his arms around the mothers of Watson and Williams who returned his embrace in a scene of reconciliation.

During the early hours of the rioting, Denny was pulled from his gravel-hauling truck at the intersection of Florence and Normandie avenues and beaten bloody.

Prosecutors played that and other tapes for jurors, focusing again and again on the sight of Williams apparently doing a dance over Denny's battered body.

Jury deliberations were tumultuous and seemed headed for mistrial at one point. The judge removed one panelist for lacking the common sense to deliberate; another juror left for personal problems.

design, and determine where such practices as community policing would be beneficial, he said.

The department anticipates better utilization of current manpower that under the current system may fall short.

"I feel we have enough manpower here if we can better allocate them," Urby said.

Improved efficiency could allow officers more time for pro-active, or preventive, policing in addition to the predominately re-active approach used.

PROS, which consists of computer software, hardware and training, would cost about $100,000.

City Council is expected, at their next regular meeting, to consider a resolution for police to negotiate a contract for the system. Council members have expressed an interest in the tool.

If a system is attained, it will take about six months preparation to go on-line.

In Friday's newspaper several lines from the story on teachers receiving Golden Apple Awards were ommitted and some paragraphs were transposed, which changed the meaning of a quote. Lamar Elementary School teacher Mary Louise Parrot's quote should have read: "I teach the students that earning one's way in life is an obligation to themselves and their community that can only be achieved by staying in school and getting an education."

U.S., U.N. troops fire shots in 4 skirmishes

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. soldiers fired at an armed group that approached their base Monday, and U.N. troops fired warning shots in three other skirmishes as a nine-day lull in fighting appeared to fray.

There were no signs the incidents were related. Isolated grenade, mortar and gunfire attacks over the past week or so have been tied to clans fighting in Mogadishu and have not appeared aimed at the multinational peacekeeping force.

This port on the Indian Ocean had been at its quietest in four years since militiamen of warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid shot down two helicopters in a battle that killed 18 American soldiers Oct. 3. Aidid spokesmen said more than 300 Somalis died.

Outrage in the United States over the toll persuaded President Clinton to choose diplomacy over military force. Aidid called a cease-fire last week and released an American pilot and a Nigerian peacekeeper he was holding hostage.

A U.N. spokeswoman, Capt. Dawn Kilpatrick, said no one was injured when American troops opened fire as 10 armed Somalis approached their "Sword Base" in southwestern Mogadishu.

"They fired warning shots, and the Somalis . . . all fled," she said.

But journalists said up to four Somali men who appeared to have been wounded in the incident were being treated at Benadir Hospital.

Kilpatrick said she had no reports of casualties.

Monday morning, Turkish soldiers guarding an entrance to the U.N. compound in southern Mogadishu fired into the air when people started throwing stones at them, she said. The crowd dispersed and there were no casualties.

Earlier in the day, a Somali tried to sneak into the U.N. compound through barbed wire. He fled when peacekeepers fired over his head, Kilpatrick said. Soon after, another Somali tried to sneak in at another part of the compound, with the same result.

Kilpatrick said a mortar round fired from near the southern neighborhood of Medina exploded Sunday night near the national stadium. No U.N. troops were in the area and there was no word on casualties, she said.

The peacekeeping force stopped ground patrols and cordon-and-search exercises to round up weapons after a land mine was discovered last month on the main 21 October Road at the perimeter of the city.

Military convoys in Aidid-controlled southern Mogadishu have been limited to essential missions since Oct. 3.

Instead, the United Nations has stepped up aerial surveillance by U.S. helicopters equipped with radar and night-vision devices.

A group of U.S. reporters based with U.S. military personnel in Mogadishu was dissolved over the weekend. The group, which shared information in a pool-type arrangement, benefited from the security afforded by U.N. forces but was limited by military regulations in its access to American soldiers. Members of the group, which included The Associated Press, are now reporting independently from Mogadishu.

Russia defends radioactive waste dumping at sea

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian navy and environmental officials said Monday they will continue dumping low-level radioactive waste at sea, despite protests from Japan and Moscow's repeated promises to halt the practice.

Japan disputed assertions by Russia that it gave advance warning of the dumping and demanded it be halted immediately.

A Russian ship dumped more than 31,000 cubic feet of liquid waste into the Sea of Japan over the weekend, just days after President Boris Yeltsin agreed with Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa of Japan that such dumping was harmful.

The dispute threatened to undo much of the goodwill generated by Yeltsin's visit to Tokyo, although environmental officials said the Russian president was not informed of the dumping in advance.

Capt. Yevgeny Romanov of the Russian navy said at a news conference Monday that 28,000 more cubic feet of low-level waste would be dumped at sea by Nov. 15. Russia lacks adequate storage facilities for nuclear waste, particularly in its Far Eastern region.

Nikolai Rybalsky, Russia's deputy minister of environmental protection, claimed the dumping was not dangerous. He said that the level of radioactivity in both batches of waste was "only about 100 times the maximum level permitted in drinking water" and that it was quickly diluted to safe levels.

Greenpeace sent a ship to track the Russian ship that dumped the waste. The international environmental group contends the dumping is hazardous, particularly because the Sea of Japan is a major commercial fishing area.

The MV Greenpeace measured radiation in the air around the site Monday at 10 to 70 times normal background levels, Greenpeace spokeswoman Elizabeth Mealey said.

Greenpeace said the dumping site was about 340 miles west of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost major island, and 120 miles southeast of Vladivostok, Russia's main Far East port.

Russian officials said Moscow informed the International Atomic Energy Administration and foreign governments, including Japan, of the dumping plans two weeks ago.

Mikhail Kokeyev, deputy head of the Foreign Ministry's department of scientific and technical cooperation, said that "the implication that ... Greenpeace caught us red-handed" was false. He accused the environmental group of using "guerrilla tactics."

But officials at the Japanese science and technology agency said Japan was not notified of the dumping in advance.

Negotiations deadlock in India; army sets for long siege

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — The army dug in Monday for a long siege of separatists barricaded in Kashmir's holiest Muslim shrine, while state leaders threatened to march on the building if the soldiers didn't leave.

Security forces fired tear gas and live ammunition to break up demonstrations that flared outside the Hazratbal mosque. At neighboring Kashmir University, three people were injured by gunfire when police broke up a protest, witnesses said.

The clashes were the first since hundreds of government soldiers sealed off the Muslim holy site last Friday.

Elsewhere in the northern state of Jammu-Kashmir, at least 23 suspected militants were killed Monday in gun battles with security forces, police said.

The standoff at the mosque is one of the most serious confrontations between Indian security forces, who are mostly Hindus, and the Muslims of Jammu-Kashmir. Many Kashmiris support an armed insurgency for the secession of India's only Muslim majority state.

Since the insurgency began in 1989, about 7,500 people have been killed.

Abdul Ghani Lone, head of the largest political alliance in Kashmir, called the government troops surrounding the mosque an "occupation force," and said their siege of the Muslim shrine was "unprecedented."

"This is the holiest of holy places in all of Asia," he said.

"We are giving 24 hours to the occupation forces to withdraw. If they don't, we will come out and defy the curfew and march toward the holy shrine." The mosque is revered because it houses what is said to be a hair from Mohammed, the founder of Islam. It is also believed to be the center of the separatist movement. Militants have stockpiled weapons there and occupied it for several weeks.

On Friday, police and government troops accused militants of plotting to steal the hair and moved into a building next to the mosque. Separatists countered that the government was trying to discredit them, and dozens of supporters flooded into the complex.

The government has demanded the unconditional surrender of the militants.

Athens air pollution at dangerous levels

a THENS, Greece (AP) — The government banned all cars from the center of the capital Monday as air pollution soared to dangerous levels and hundreds of people were hospitalized with smog-related illnesses.

The Environment Ministry said it might extend the ban into Tuesday.

The ministry also ordered all industries in the Athens area to reduce output by 30 percent and ordered hospitals to shut down their furnaces.

The National Center for Emergency Help said it received dozens of calls from people with breathing problems, but said the number was lower than in past days.

Thousands had called the emergency center late last week.

World in brief

■ U.S. renews warning to Serb leaders

WASHINGTON — The United States warned the Serbian leadership on Monday for the second time in two months of the possibility of air strikes by NATO warplanes if there was a step-up in attacks on Sarajevo.

The warning was contained in a message from Secretary of State Warren Christopher to Slobodan Milosevic, the president of Serbia, reminding him of a statement on Aug. 3 by NATO that it would not tolerate "the strangulation of Sarajevo and other areas," and that it was ready to order retaliatory air strikes against Bosnian Serbs.

Michael McCurry, the State Department spokesman, noted that "there has generally been an improvement" in the situation of Sarajevo since armor and artillery asaults on its defenses in early August, but that there had been "a sharp escalation of shelling" by Bosnian Serb forces in recent days.

■ Cold War era ends for American voice

BERLIN — The Cold War era finally ended for Radio Free Europe on Monday with the announcement that the U.S. broadcasting service will lay off more than half its employees by 1996 and may leave its Munich base.

The headquarters for the radio services that for four decades gave eastern Europeans uncensored news with a decidedly anti-Communist slant may leave its Munich headquarters because of high operating costs and is negotiating a possible move to Prague, said executive president Bill Marsh.

■ Shevardnadze pins hopes on Russia

TBILISI, Georgia — Beleaguered Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze said Monday he was counting on Russia to end rebel fighting in western Georgia that has cut a key rail link between Georgia's capital and the coast.

Meanwhile, peace talks on another rebel movement could start as early as next month, a U.N. mediator said Monday. Shevardnadze's forces have been defeated recently in Abkhazia, also in western Georgia.

Forces backing ousted President Zviad Gamsakhurdia captured a key town Sunday in western Georgia, inflicting heavy losses on troops loyal to Shevardnadze.

The fall of Samtredia, a junction on the main road leading from the capital to the Black Sea port of Poti, severed the interior's last rail link with the coast.

Shevardnadze, a former Soviet foreign minister, said talks were under way in Moscow on setting up a joint Russian-Transcaucusus military force to protect the rail line.

■ Fellini in coma; condition 'very grave'

ROME — Film director Federico Fellini was in a coma and breathing with the help of a respirator Monday after suffering a heart attack, doctors said.

The personal physician of the 73-year-old Oscar winner, Dr. Gianfranco Turchetti, called Fellini's condition "very grave but stable." Fellini suffered a stroke in August.

Police kept hundreds of journalists and groups of well-wishers from the intensive care ward at Rome's Polyclinic Hospital. Only family members and a few visitors were allowed inside.

■ Four die in Cairo gun battle

CAIRO, Egypt — Two suspected Muslim extremists and two police officers were killed on Sunday in a gun battle in the Matariya section of East Cairo that began when the police raided a tenement suspected of harboring drug dealers, Interior Ministry officials said.

Three suspected militants, who were wanted on charges of murder and theft, apparently thought that they were the targets of the raid and opened fire, the officials said. Two were killed and one was arrested, according to an Interior Ministry statement.

■ Saddam destroys ancient way of life

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Saddam Hussein's army is inexorably driving Iraq's Marsh Arabs out of their once impenetrable southern swampland, where they have lived off the land since the dawn of civilization.

Day and night, his artillery pounds the marshes where some 10,000 Shiite Muslim rebels are holed up. He's also draining the wetlands so his armor and big guns can move in ever deeper.

But the Baghdad regime's real objective goes beyond just wiping out armed rebels who can mount attacks against his regime.

It is deliberately eradicating the marshes, saying it is reclaiming it for agriculture, yet dooming a unique way of life that dates back 6,000 years.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be more decisive. Once you take the initiative, you will be able to reduce professional pressures. A longtime relationship can be rejuvenated if you adopt a new approach. Romance sparkles in December; marriage is possible early in 1994. Next spring, keep your career plans to yourself. Otherwise, an envious associate could try to undermine your efforts. Postpone a pleasure trip until summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author John LeCarre, artist Peter Max, columnist Jack Anderson, actor John Lithgow.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Secure your valuables in a safe place. Inspiration comes in mid-morning. Jot down original ideas. A romantic reconciliation could put you in a euphoric mood. Limit spending on entertainment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New skills will help you move up the career ladder. Who you know can affect your professional and social success. Use tact when mediating a family feud. A compromise works better than expected.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Travel is featured. You could land a lucrative contract. Someone you meet for the first time will play a major role in your future happiness. Be more sympathetic to an unlucky relative.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is all right to be tough in business so long as you are thoroughly professional. A consulting job brings extra cash to pay urgent bills. Settle accounts with a family member.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Nobody can propel you ahead like yourself. It is not necessary for success to stop just because you are retiring. A child will learn an important lesson if you step aside for once.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A whole new world awaits you once you get off the fence and make a decision. A computer proves to be a welcome aid. The results are amazing! Keep your energy level high.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Others may try to enlist your help for a political cause. Think carefully before going ahead with this. Spend more time with someone confined indoors. Talk sense to your mate or business partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Show more initiative and finesse. Have confidence in yourself and others will follow suit. You and an older individual enjoy special rapport. The love bug could bite tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good news from afar arouses your enthusiasm. Your efforts to stir up action will bring new profits. Getting in touch with a long-lost friend could lead to romance. Be sentimental.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may have to work harder to prove yourself. Involvement in a community project will give you a higher profile. A move to a new home is a real possibility. Romance sizzles!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your uneasiness regarding a personal matter will evaporate today. Avoid jumping the gun or you could jeopardize an exciting opportunity. Postpone a romantic interlude.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An academic program may hold special appeal. Use your good sense when handling a private matter. Your social life may be interfering with your employment responsibilities.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

Before committing yourself to a line of play, go over the entire campaign. Make sure the method of attack you have selected produces the required number of tricks. If not, look for refinement that will.

North-South were using a 15-17 range for an opening bid of one no trump. Since North quite likely had five diamonds for the immediate raise and, therefore, a source of tricks was available, South selected the aggressive rebid of three no trump. Not that it mattered; North would have raised an invitational two no trump to game.

West led the fourth-best spade and the play was soon over. Declarer won in dummy and immediately led a diamond. East shot up with the ace and reverted to spades. The jack lost to the queen and the ace of spades was forced out. Declarer had only eight tricks and, when the heart finesse failed, the defenders collected five—three spades and one in each red suit.

Had declarer counted tricks before embarking on this plan, the predicament would have been obvious. Just one minor adjustment is all that was needed to ensure success.

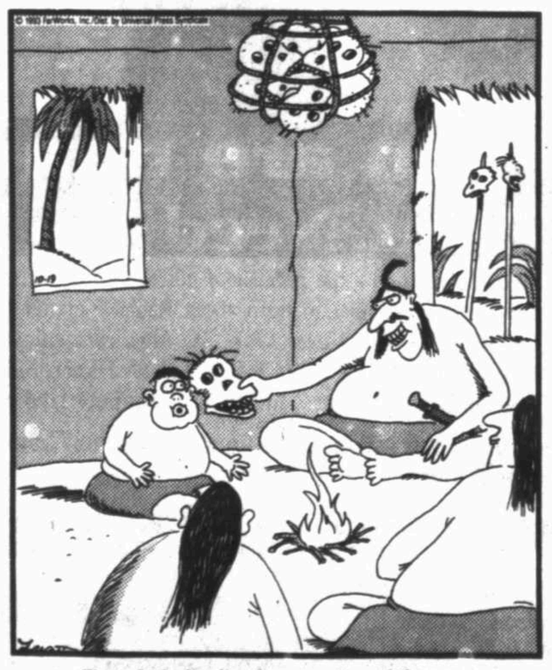

At trick two declarer should have taken the heart finesse. If it wins, declarer can switch to diamonds and only a 4-0 break would threaten the contract. Should it lose, the spade position is safe from attack and a second heart trick has been established. Declarer can win any return, force out the ace of diamonds and come to nine tricks.

Osage nation formally names Schwarzkopf as honorary chief

PAWHUSKA, Okla. — Chief Schwarzkopf? Why not?

That's what Osage Nation leaders asked during the Persian Gulf War, when Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf said on TV that he had been made an honorary Osage chief.

It was news to the Osage, but they liked the idea and made it official in 1991. But it wasn't until Monday that they formally named Schwarzkopf Eagle Chief, meaning "the top man."

At daybreak, Schwarzkopf, draped in an Indian blanket, held out his palms as Ed Red Eagle Sr., head of the Osage Eagle Clan, blessed him with a ceremonial eagle feather.

"I will never disgrace it, I promise you that," the now-retired general said of this latest accolade for his Desert Storm leadership.

"One of the wonderful things is that even though Native Americans suffered greatly at the hands of the military, they still loved this nation enough to serve this country," Schwarzkopf said, accepting the honor for those who served under him in the Gulf War.

The ceremony at the Tallgrass Prairie Preserve was attended by about 300 tribal members and supporters of The Nature Conservancy, which used the occasion to release 300 bison at the preserve.

WATERVILLE, Maine — Spike Lee thinks Whoopi Goldberg is confused in defending boyfriend Ted Danson's blackface routine at a recent Friars Club charity roast.

Danson caused an uproar earlier this month at the private event, when the white actor donned blackface makeup and jested about his sex life with Goldberg, who is black.

"Whoopi's been on the warpath defending this thing; I just think she's confused," Lee, a filmmaker who often focuses on racial tensions, told an audience Sunday at Colby College. "There's just no way she can defend what transpired."

Talk show host Montel Williams quit the New York club over the skit. Mayor David Dinkins decried it as "way, way over the line."

But the actress, whose movies include "Sister Act" and, with Danson, "Made in America," has argued that the humor was supposed to be vulgar. Besides, she said, she wrote much of the skit material, and found the makeup artist.

ST. LOUIS — Maybe it's the suit that turns them off. Defying expectations, fans are staying away in droves from the trial of Axl Rose over a 1991 Gun N' Roses concert that turned into a riot.

On Monday morning, only two fans were in the courtroom — a woman about 20 who asked a photographer if Rose was there yet, and a man about 25 wearing a black T-shirt and jeans.

Rose, 31, showed up clad in a purple suit and matching tie over a black shirt, his light red hair streaming neatly past his shoulders.

Since the trial began Thursday, only a few dozen spectators have shown up at the St. Louis Circuit courtroom.

Rose is being sued by Billy Stephenson, a 28-year-old fan who says he suffered back and ear injuries after Rose allegedly landed on him during the concert. Because a fan had taken unauthorized pictures, Rose dove off the stage, allegedly threw punches and stormed off with his band. A riot erupted, injuring 65 people.

MUNCIE, Ind. — Aging Flower Children can forget drugs. At 73, Timothy Leary says he gets high on senility.

"This great high has been wasted on old people," said the one-time exponent of LSD, turning on, tuning in and dropping out.

Far from dropping out these days, the former Harvard psychologist is hard at work. Since deciding in 1988 to have his brain frozen when he dies, he is now diligently preparing for the possibility he could come back to life.

"The real problem is how to preserve consciousness or preserve your personality or preserve what you might call your soul," Leary said before a speech last week at Ball State University.

Leary later apologized to students for rambling during his talk and slide show.

"I am a very battle-scarred veteran of dissent ..." he said. "I now get high on senility."

Mencken advice remains prudent

The announcement by San Antonio attorney Rolando Rios last week that he will be a Democratic candidate for the 23rd Congressional District seat now held by U.S. Rep. Henry Bonilla, a San Antonio Republican, is another indication that the political scene is beginning to heat up for the 1994 election.

Next year, and the election, will be here before you know it.

Rios, known for his challenges filed under the Voting Rights Act, isn't the only politico making his political intentions known. U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, a Democrat from Dallas who had been considering a race against U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, a Republican from Dallas, has indicated he will not run for the Senate seat but will seek re-election instead. He also indicated that former Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox will likely run against Hutchison.

A number of other possible candidates have announced their intentions, including San Angelo magazine publisher Scott Campbell who has indicated he will attempt to unseat U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith of the 21st Congressional District. Both Campbell and Smith are Republicans.

As 1994 draws nearer, political announcements will no doubt become more frequent. Politics, while seemingly never far away today from the drumbeat of daily activity, will soon be a topic of conversations everywhere.

It's important to keep up with politics today because virtually every aspect of a person's life is influenced — and much of it literally controlled — by government. That means the citizenry needs to be aware of the actions of their elected representatives and of the positions of every candidate seeking political office. A voter needs to know as much as possible about every person seeking public office.

And while at it, be certain to heed the advice of that great writer and critic, H.L. Mencken. Said Mencken:

"There are some politicians who, if their constituents were cannibals, would promise them missionaries for dinner."

CHARLEY REESE

Guess who opposes great NAFTA?

Advocates of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), unable to defend it on the basis of facts, are concentrating on attacking the critics as nativists, racists, and whatever.

Reese

It's kind of a tough job because people opposed to NAFTA include such diverse people as Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, Rep. David Bonior, former California Gov. Jerry Brown, columnist Pat Buchanan, libertarian and Austrian school of economics proponent Murray N. Rothbard; Ralph Nader, Ross Perot, Jesse Jackson, and the Council of Mexican bishops — and the leadership of the AFL-CIO. That's among others.

Here are a few facts to keep in mind:

Mexican government figures show 61 percent of U.S. exports to Mexico are intermediate goods and 24 percent are capital goods. (Intermediate goods are stuff assembled in Mexico and shipped back to the U.S.. Capital goods are factories and machines being sent down there to manufacture goods in Mexico.) Thus, true exports from the U.S. to Mexico are only 15 percent of the figure cited by NAFTA propaganda. Even that figure is inflated because the Mexico peso is overvalued.

A report prepared by the U.S. Commerce Department during the Bush administration but never released to the public — so much for honesty — estimated the U.S. will lose 40 percent of our remaining jobs in autos, steel, textiles, and apparel if NAFTA is ratified. Furthermore between 1979 and 1991, America lost 2.6 million manufacturing jobs to Asia and Mexico. That's why the U.S. standard of living has gone down and will go down even further if NAFTA is ratified.

Apply some common sense. Ask a NAFTA supporter to explain to you why $1 billion invested in Mexico as opposed to being invested in California will create jobs in the U.S.? General Motors has announced it will eliminate 100,000 jobs in the U.S. No surprise. General Motors is the largest employer in Mexico already. It has over 50 plants there.

Apply some more common sense. After NAFTA shifts even more U.S. manufacturing plants to Mexico, why would a Mexican buy a product made in Detroit and shipped to him in Mexico when he can buy it in Mexico? NAFTA will cost us 500,000 jobs, and except for a few lobbyists and Wall Street investors, it won't create anything in the U.S. but unemployment, higher welfare bills, lower government revenues, and more crime.

The maquiladora program, begun more than a decade ago, was a test program for NAFTA.

Proponents of that deal, like proponents of NAFTA, claimed it would reduce illegal immigration. It did not. It increased illegal immigration by drawing people to border towns where they discovered the jobs paid as little as 58 cents an hour. NAFTA will displace most of Mexico's agricultural workers. Guess where they will go to avoid starving?

Bureaucrats stealthfully annihilate choice

Choice, it's wonderful. We hope. Choice — instant and unlimited — is the gift we receive from the merger of Bell Atlantic and Tele-Communications Inc.

A technological revolution, the media inform us, is gathering a head of steam — if that is not too old-fashioned a metaphor. We will be able, supposedly, to acquire with the touch of a button such information and entertainment as we want. On our interactive screens it will flash. We will ooooh and aaaaah and be generally impressed and edified.

Murchison

"You will be able to go anywhere you want when you want," says Bell Atlantic's maximum leader. Tele-Communications' president amplifies the matter: "You shortly will be able to watch any movie, any video, at your convenience. You will be able, with high fidelity, to check in on your grandchildren, or see your children on a screen."

These possibilities are easy to mock. Our children on a screen! We parents of teen-agers cannot so easily make up our minds whether this is a good or bad thing!

The old fogey who writes these lines yawns at the thought of being able to call up anything he wants on TV. He can think of nothing on TV he wants to call up. He has in fact come near tuning television out of his life. There are too many books that remain unread, too many thoughts still unexpressed. The clatter of "time's winged chariot," to quote good old Andrew Marvell, drowns out mercifully the clamor of sitcoms.

But that is just one side of the choice matter. There is danger in snobbish dismissals of "the masses'" right to choose. Pretended omniscience is always dangerous. The omniscient have a way of cutting off debate without hearing both sides of the argument.

The bureaucracy could nonetheless wind up on the losing side, leapfrogged by, among other things, mammoth technological advances — the way Fax machines have leapfrogged the Postal Service monopoly. Here is a vision: One sits before the interactive TV screen, punches a button, calls up 11 versions of the news that school choice has bested the government monopoly in education, and it's freedom all the way. The viewer faces at that point an additional choice — to smile or frown. But it turns out to be not such a big choice after all.

Shut-ins need prayers after season's last game

Remember back in church when they used to ask you to pray for the shut-ins? I was never quite certain what a shut-in was.

Grizzard

I went ahead and prayed for them anyway, but what was a shut-in? Somebody they had to keep boarded up like a dog that was bad to chase cars?

So for all of this time I didn't even know what a shut-in was, and, then, I became one.

For the past two-and-a-half months I have, in fact, been a shut-in.

It took me four months to get over last spring's harrowing heart surgery. My chest healed. My legs stopped hurting and my feet stopped swelling.

I even went back to the golf course. At the beginning, my partners allowed me to play from the ladies' tees. I had to endure a lot of remarks regarding various female problems I might be having as a result of my move to what I learned to refer to as the "forward tees," but, quite comfortable in my masculinity, I ignored them as mere chirpings of sexist pork.

Then, my side started hurting. I thought it might be a yeast infection.

Turned out it was an infection, but of a different kind.

During my heart surgery I had been wired for a pacemaker in case I happened to need one during my recovery period.

Surgeons created a small pouch to the left of my navel for the wires. The wires became infected. The pouch became infected.

I became a shut-in.

I couldn't play golf. I couldn't walk. I couldn't sit up. For two months my doctors attempted to treat the problem with antibiotics.

But the infection wouldn't go away. So, a week ago, I went back to Atlanta's Emory Hospital, and surgeons removed the wires. The infection is gone.

In a couple of more weeks I'm supposed to be completely healed and a seven-month ordeal finally will be over. But what an ordeal. If I had known what the life of a shut-in was all about, I would have prayed a lot harder for them.

You just sit there a lot. You sleep. You work crossword puzzles. In the afternoon, you watch "The Streets of San Francisco" reruns on cable. You talk on the telephone.

"How're you feelin'?"

" 'Bout the same."

"Anything I can do?"

"Yeah, tell Karl Malden to get a nose job."

What saved me was the Atlanta Braves. I watched every inning of every game they played the last two months of the season.

Otis Nixon made that catch over the centerfield wall night after night on the WTBS promos. Sid Bream always scored that run against Pittsburgh and the Braves won, the Braves won, the Braves won, the Braves won.

I saw the press box fire in Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium, and I agreed with announcer Don Sutton that "McRip" would be a better nickname for the Braves Fred McGriff than "Crime Dog." Fred never chased a car in his life.

I supposed what I'm doing here is thanking the Braves for the memories. Without them, what might I have done? Fallen into a deep well of depression? Called radio talk shows? Gone back to the vodka?

Pray for those who remain as shut-ins. Baseball season will soon be over.

Halloween 'holiday' is pagan celebration

Have you looked at our city lately? It is suddenly covered in fall colors. Pumpkins have sprung up on porches, fall leaves are winding their way to the ground. Scarecrows are yard guarding, and spider webs are covering corners of porches. The fall colors? It's not fall foliage, traditional school colors of maroon and white or purple and gold, it is orange and black. It's amazing where many of us are spending our hard-earned money. Halloween has become the second most commercialized "holiday" in our nation. Commercial America has struck again, this time with a celebration of the "witching hour." The stores are having a "hay day" selling spooky paraphernalia.

October brings witches, ghosts, black cats and pumpkins to lurk on school walls that used to contain the 10 Commandments or the words of the Pledge of Allegiance that still contained "One nation under God." Halloween carnivals are school sponsored, we decorate our children, and thus pay tribute to the most evil day of the year, a celebration of a pagan religious festival! What happened to the separation of church and state? We further the tribute by "prettying up" our homes and by paying homage to Halloween, properly defined as All Hallows Eve.

Originally it was a pagan holiday of the Druids, spirits that supposedly lived in the trees of the forests of Europe. At sunset on October 31 gourds and pumpkins with candles inside were placed on doorsteps to ward away evil spirits that were going to be conjured during the midnight hour. Food (treats) was left on the steps to avoid having "spells" cast on their household. Townspeople locked themselves in and wouldn't come out until daybreak. Costumes were worn to hide the identity of those participating in the sacrificial ceremonies performed in the forest.

As we move closer to Halloween this year be aware of what is being mimicked when jack-o-lanterns are placed on porches and costumed children are out to trick or treat.

My deepest concern is that Halloween is touted as being all in "good fun" yet we aren't aware of the facts. Stand firm for your beliefs even when others think you are being ridiculous and spoiling children's fun. Pray for the children that are out on the streets that evening. Hosea 4:6 says, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." I hope this gives some a history lesson of the origin of Halloween.

Some countries not ready for democracy

Somalia: The winter of 1992. America saw the pictures of starving people; men, women, children. Whole families dying agonizing slow deaths. And because we were Americans, we felt their pain, and our hearts were full with the knowledge that we cared deeply about human suffering. When we saw the Somalian children, wasted and frail as twigs in the wind, even the toughest of us felt their sorrow. We came together as a nation, and resolved to do whatever we could to help ease their burden.

We sent our young men and women, and watched with pride, as they handed out food to the impoverished Somali people. Our soldiers knew what they were doing was important. They cared. They understood that no one should ever have to suffer in this inhuman way.

Autumn 1993. Something went wrong. What was it? How did it happen? The American people watched the noble efforts of their soldiers wither and die as the Somali people turned on the very ones who tried to save them.

We are reminded of "the dog that bit the hand that fed it." There is no clear cut answer as to what went wrong. But one thing is certain; there are still many places in this world that are not ready for democracy. There are still many people who do not understand that the loss of even one life is not acceptable, because that life is irreplaceable.

Commissioners force 7employees' retirement

The Texas Department of Transportation (formerly known as the Department of Highways and Public Transportation, and Texas Highway Department) has been raped by Gov. Ann Richards and her appointed Transportation commissioners by forcing out the executive director and his top five (5) administrators of the department.

These engineers and the department have long been recognized nationwide as the leaders in the transportation field. In addition to the six (6) mentioned above, 11 district engineers and many engineers in the early 50's with 30 to 35 years of service are leaving the department.

The commissioners want you to believe that ALL of the employees taking so-called "retirement" are doing so because of the new retirement incentive, an additional 0.25 percent. This is not true!

I am very familiar with the operations of the department as I was a member of the highway family for over 36 years, both in the district and Austin office and served under five (5) state highway engineers. I have known and worked with many of the employees now leaving Texas Department of Transportation and I wish them the best.

Gov. Richards and her commissioners have now completed their first phase of "disbanding" the department. For those now assuming the top positions in T.D.O.T., I wish you the best.

Most husbands, wives are faithful, researcher says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vast majority of married Americans don't cheat on their spouses, a sex researcher says, disputing claims that adultery is rampant.

About 15 percent of married or previously married Americans have cheated on a spouse, estimates Tom W. Smith of the National Opinion Research Center.

Perhaps 3 percent to 4 percent of husbands and wives have a sexual partner outside their marriage in a given year, said Smith, director of the center's General Social Survey.

"There are probably more scientifically worthless 'facts' on extramarital relations than on any other facet of human behavior," Smith said Monday in a report at an American Enterprise Institute seminar.

Smith said TV talk shows and popular magazines commonly report much higher numbers of marital cheaters.

For example, author Shere Hite wrote that 75 percent of women married more than five years reported having affairs in response to her questionnaire. And in a 1990 magazine article, Dr. Joyce Brothers said 50 percent of married women have had affairs.

"The problem has been the lack of good scientific information," Smith said in an interview. "There's been a vacuum. And when you have a vacuum, something fills it up. It may be Phil Donahue, it may be Shere Hite."

Other studies have found affairs to be more common than the General Social Survey did, but still well below estimates often repeated in the popular media.

For example, the Kinsey Institute of Sex Research at Indiana University estimated in 1990 that 37 percent of married men and 29 percent of married women have been unfaithful.

An ABC News-Washington Post national telephone poll in 1987 found that 89 percent of respondents said they never had an affair while married.

The General Social Survey has found the level of extramarital activity basically unchanged in five separate surveys from 1988 to this year, Smith said.

In the 1993 survey of people who were married or previously married, 21 percent of men and 13 percent of women reported having an affair, Smith said.

The studies suggest that extramarital affairs are more common among younger people than among those born before 1940. Fewer people age 50 or older report having had an affair, Smith said.

Smith could not say whether fear of contracting AIDS through sexual contact had reduced marital cheating. But he said several studies have found that relatively few adults report changing their sexual behavior because of AIDS.

For example, a 1987 Gallup Poll found that only 6.8 percent of married people said they had changed their sexual behavior due to AIDS, compared to 19 percent of never married people.

"A lot of married people tell you there was nothing I needed to change," Smith said.

Smith also said infidelity is more common among residents of large central cities, among those who attend church less often, among those who have been divorced, among people unhappy with their marriage, and among blacks compared to whites. The surveys found little difference by socioeconomic status.

About 1,400 people are interviewed in person each year for the national General Social Survey. Questions about sexual behavior are answered on a private, written questionnaire at the end of the interview.

The General Social Survey does not normally report an overall margin of error, because it varies in analysis of each question, said Woody Carter, senior survey director. There was an 82 percent completion rate in 1993.

Shuttle blasts off for medical science mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia and its seven astronauts blasted off on a belated mission Monday, carrying 48 rats that will be poked, prodded and in some cases decapitated by guillotine and dissected in orbit.

All in the name of medical science.

The astronauts quickly got started on their 14 days of space checkups, drawing blood from one another, measuring their blood pressure and noting any symptoms of motion sickness.

The mission — the longest ever planned for a space shuttle — is intended to help scientists develop measures for counteracting the debilitating effects of space travel.

Despite the tests, everyone was flying high.

"As you can well imagine, there are seven very happy people up here," commander John Blaha said.

Astronaut-physician David Wolf was the first one to enter the pressurized laboratory module in the cargo bay, followed by the crew's other medical doctor, M. Rhea Seddon.

NASA needed three countdowns to get Columbia off the ground. Equipment failures halted last week's attempts.

"Guys, the third time's a charm," orbiter test director Brian Monborne assured the crew before liftoff.

Delayed 10 seconds by a stray Navy plane, the 2,000-ton spaceship rose from its seaside pad at 10:53 a.m. and tore through three decks of clouds on its way to a 176-mile-high orbit.

It is only the second mission in 58 shuttle trips focused entirely on medical research.

Scientists say they need more tests before they can draw any conclusions about avoiding such effects of space travel as shriveled muscles, weakened bones and weakened immune systems. And then there's space motion sickness, which strikes two-thirds of all astronauts.

Two crew members had catheters threading through their veins for launch — Martin Fettman, the first U.S. veterinarian in space, and Shannon Lucid, a biochemist who became the first woman to fly in space four times. The catheters were hooked to white backpacks with floating cables, making the astronauts look like a pair of bees.

Fettman is in charge of the rats, the most that's ever flown on a shuttle.

Throughout the mission, Fettman and the others will draw blood from the 2- to 3-month-old male rodents, inject radioactive isotopes and hormones, and collect the animal droppings to measure calcium content, an indicator of bone loss.

On Oct. 30, Fettman will use a guillotine to behead five of the rats, six if there's time. He and another astronaut then will perform the first animal dissections in space, preserving almost everything for postflight analysis: brain, eyes, inner ears, parts of the skull, spleen, heart, liver, kidneys, pancreas, thyroid, lungs, trachea, bones, muscles, blood, glands, testes.

Biologists say the only way to know exactly how weightlessness affects creatures is to dissect them before they're re-exposed to gravity.

Columbia's surviving rats will be killed for dissection after the flight, the same fate encountered by the more than 100 rats on previous shuttle missions in studies of space travel.

As for the nearly 1,000 rats that were on standby in case of further launch delays, NASA planned to kill the animals and donate them to a rehabilitation program for birds of prey.

President promises more breast cancer research

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accusing the health care system of treating women like "second-class citizens," President Clinton on Monday pledged the government's help to provide more breast cancer research and testing.

He signed a proclamation declaring Tuesday as National Mammography Day, then tied the administration's efforts to curb breast cancer with his sweeping health care overhaul plan.

"When it comes to health care research and delivery, women can no longer be treated as second-class citizens," he said.

With boxes of petitions forming a backdrop, Clinton said his administration will work with advocates during a December conference to develop a strategy to treat breast cancer patients and eventually find a cure.

"It is important that that plan be fitted into a larger commitment to the health care of Americans, to put women's health concerns — from research to the development and delivery of health care — on equal footing with men," Clinton said.

In a poignant moment, he thanked his mother, Virginia Kelley of Hot Springs, Ark., who lost a breast to cancer.

"I appreciate the efforts of my brave mother who struggles on with her breast cancer condition and who has resumed her remarkable life, but who also knows how much more can be done," he said. She was not in the East Room audience.

An advocacy group collected 2.6 million signatures — representing one signature for every woman in the United States with breast cancer — and presented them to Clinton. The group also paraded near the White House.

Appearing with first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, the president said spending on breast cancer research will increase by 44 percent, from $208 million to almost $300 million, at the National Institute of Health under his budget. Several other agencies are spending more money on research programs, he said.

Under his health care plan, women would be covered for breast exams every three years from ages 20 to 39, and every two years from ages 40 to 64. They would get mammograms every two years after age 50.

Some advocates had pushed for more frequent mammograms, but the president said his guidelines "are based on actual scientific evidence." Policy aide Bob Boorstin said the mammograms may be more frequent if studies show that more are needed.

"Obviously, if a study came out that said we need them every year and it was a good study ... we probably would reconsider," he said.

Dr. Susan Love, founder of the National Breast Cancer Coalition, said Clinton's plan would provide free mammograms to women over 50 "and that's more than we have now."

Elderly pot grower to serve four-month jail sentence

GEORGETOWN, Calif. (NYT) — A 74-year-old man who admitted growing marijuana to ease his girlfriend's chronic back pain was sentenced Monday to four months in jail and two months of house arrest, with possible random drug tests and searches of his home.

Byron Stamate, who said he believed that he was eligible for a drug diversion program when he pleaded guilty last month to cultivation of marijuana, said he will appeal the sentence by El Dorado County Superior Court Judge Eddie Keller.

He also is appealing the loss of his home and life's savings — $177,000 — seized by the Sheriff's Department and held since 1990 under the state's drug asset forfeiture laws.

Stamate, a wiry, retired Federal Aviation Administration electronics worker, has become a cause celebre in the foothills of El Dorado County, where Libertarian-style independence from government is pitted against anti-drug, law-and-order conservatism.

Stamate, raised in the Ozarks when marijuana was grown as a cash crop for making rope, said he learned early that the plant could be used as an herbal pain reliever. He grew pot to ease the pain of his wife's cancer before she died in 1980 and again when his girlfriend, artist Shirley Dorsey, was suffering from severe back pain.

Dorsey committed suicide after Stamate's arrest, saying she did not want to be forced to testify against him.

School finance trial ends

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge Monday asked property-rich school districts challenging the new education finance law whether they would instead prefer massive school consolidation or a huge state tax increase.

He asked poor districts that oppose it when they might be willing to say they've got enough equity.

And state District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin — who will rule on whether the law is constitutional — questioned what alternative lawmakers might develop if he throws out the system requiring the richest districts to share some local property tax wealth.

"If we can't do it this way, then I think we're in real trouble. I don't see any other way to do it," he said.

But McCown also cautioned observers not to assume he's going to uphold the law, which is meant to meet a 1989 Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts of differing property wealth.

"These are complicated and difficult arguments, and whatever I do has to be something that can be written and justified," McCown said. "I often find that I am unable to write and justify what I want to do."

McCown said he would try to have a decision before the Christmas holidays on whether lawmakers must try again at reform. Any decision is expected to be appealed to the Supreme Court.

The new law gives the 98 school districts with more than $280,000 in property wealth per student several options for sharing. There are 1,048 school districts in the system, which is built on a combination of state aid and local property taxes.

Three previous school funding laws have been found unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court, a fact cited by McCown.

He said the Legislature and governor "are saying, 'Look, this is the best we can do,'" and noted that one expert said the law would give Texas among the nation's most equitable school finance systems.

"Is it appropriate for a court then to say that's unconstitutional, and you have to do something else?" McCown asked.

Lawyer Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, representing poor districts, said that's just what the judge should do.

"I think the state can do better," Kauffman said.

Property-poor school districts say the law would leave at least a $600 funding gap per student.

"Where's the point at which you're going to say this is as good as it needs to be?" McCown asked. Lawyer Rick Gray, representing poor school districts, suggested a gap of up to $200 per student could be acceptable.

Poor school districts also have complained that the law doesn't address school districts' cost of building classrooms. McCown indicated that could be handled separately.

"How do your clients suggest that equity be achieved?" the judge asked one lawyer for richer districts.

"Do they want . . . legislative consolidation of districts? Or do they want a massive, billion-dollar-plus state income tax? Or the third alternative, are you saying that it just can't be done and the State of Texas has to live with the inequity?" McCown asked.

The lawyer, Steve Bickerstaff, said he would support an income tax "as long as we impose it on judges and lawyers."

The judge also wondered whether enough school districts are now in the same boat of wanting changes that they could successfully work through the Legislature.

"It looks to me like the boat's pretty full, and that the people in the boat are pretty angry," he said, as though thinking aloud. "Sail it over to the Legislature . . . Come back (to court) in a few (legislative) sessions if you don't have any luck."

Corpus Christi judge announces run for court

AUSTIN (AP) — A Democratic judge from Corpus Christi announced Monday that he will seek the Texas Supreme Court seat held by Republican Justice Nathan Hecht.

State District Court Judge Mike Westergren said he has signed a pledge to abide by campaign finance reforms recommended by several public watchdog groups, while Hecht has not.

Hecht, 44, supported some campaign finance reforms recently pushed by the League of Women Voters, Public Citizen, the Texas Consumer Rights Action League, and Common Cause. But he did not agree with all of them and pledged to his own set of voluntary limits, his campaign spokesman Karl Rove said.

Rove said Hecht's campaign finance pledge was tougher. But Westergren, 47, said it "has more gaping holes than a used shotgun target."

Both candidates have agreed to spend no more than $2 million in the 1994 primary and general elections. But major differences exist between their campaign finance pledges.

■ Westergren said he will limit political action committee contributions to $50,000. Hecht said he will hold PAC contributions to 10 percent of total contributions.

■ Westergren set a limit on total contributions from a family at $5,000. Hecht has no such limit.

■ Hecht said he will limit attorneys' contributions to 50 percent of his total. Westergren has no such limit.

■ Hecht says he will limit the Republican Party to spending $5,000 on his behalf. Westergren would not limit Democratic Party spending on campaign efforts that help his candidacy.

Westergren said Hecht's refusal to set a $50,000 PAC limit is "an open fund-raising invitation" to special interests. But Rove said a 10 percent limit makes more sense because it would be proportional to what a candidate spends.

Westergren also criticized Hecht for refusing to limit contributions from families. And he said Hecht's pledge to limit attorney's contributions to 50 percent was a smokescreen. "Hecht wants you to believe it is ethically superior to take money from the lawyers' corporate clients than from the attorneys themselves," he said.

But Rove said Westergren was misleading voters.

"The majority of our donors will have no connections with the legal process," Rove said.

And, he added, Hecht's 50 percent cap on attorneys' contributions represented true reform.

Religious freedom is subject of many prison lawsuits

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Dozens of Texas inmates file lawsuits each year in the name of religious freedom, but a former prison chaplain says hate — not religion — is the real motive behind many of them.

"A lot of these old religions prior to Christianity are being picked up by racists to use as a vehicle," Rev. Emmett Solomon, former chief chaplain for the Texas prison system, said in Sunday's editions of the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Solomon said he fielded hundreds of religious freedom complaints as prison chaplain, ranging from those of irate convicts who had been kicked out of prison church choirs to those of Indian inmates who wanted sweat lodges.

Solomon, who retired earlier this month, said racial motives are behind requests by black inmates who want Nation of Islam meetings and white inmates who want to start an Odinist church.

"There is currently a good deal of interest in the Nation of Islam," Solomon said. "But we have a Muslim program going. They claim they are a separate religion from Islam, but if they don't want to be a part of it, they don't have to be."

Odinists, whose beliefs are based on an old Norse religion, revere European ancestry.

Incarcerated gang members also try to use the religious freedom issue to hide the real purpose of meetings they hold within state prisons, officials say. A prison gang known as the Mexican Mafia, which officials say runs drugs and orders murders, has asked to hold religious meetings.

Another prison gang, the Self Defense Family, has asked to organize a Moorish Science Temple of America.

"Some of these may be legitimate religions," said Assistant Attorney General Adrian Young. "But they really just want to congregate and conduct gang activity."

An average of about 90 prison lawsuits are filed each month, according to the state attorney general's office.

Young said inmate lawsuits are not broken down into categories, but he estimated that 10 percent of the 2,000 pending cases are filed on First Amendment grounds.

State attorneys said one lawsuit filed by a group of female inmates sought to form a religious organization for witches — the Church of Wicca. But the inmates had asked to keep paraphernalia in their cells that could be considered contraband, including literature that told them how to brew alcoholic beverages, attorneys said.

"Another thing they wanted to do was practice a ceremony in a closed room, with no observation from security, that involved the use of knives," said Sharon Felfe, an assistant attorney general who handled the lawsuit.

Customs agents seize passports from travelers to Cuba

HOUSTON (AP) — Some travelers arriving at Houston Intercontinental Airport from Cuba now are without passports after their travel documents were seized by Customs agents for defying a ban on trips to the island.

Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said 33 passports were confiscated Monday as evidence because they were stamped "travel accomplished to Cuba."

Monday's seizures came a day after 18 people lost their passports under similar circumstances.

It was not immediately certain if those who had passports confiscated would face charges.

"We have to gather information and present it to the U.S. attorney's office to see if anything else needs to be pursued," Ms. Turner said.

The travelers were part of a group called Freedom to Travel Campaign and arrived in Houston from Cancun, Mexico.

"I went there to challenge the law," Milton Wolff, 78, of California, said after Customs agents questioned him. "Don't we have the right as American citizens to travel where we want?"

Pam Montanero, a mother of six from Alabama who also lost her passport, said agents told the travelers the government would hold the passports until it decides whether to prosecute.

The campaign, involving a coalition of groups, began in hopes that the government would revoke the travel ban if enough people ignore it.

The U.S. trade embargo and travel ban, which does allow journalists, academic researchers and others to travel to Cuba, has been in place since Fidel Castro assumed power.

The group said they met with Castro for five hours at their Saturday farewell dinner in Havana.

During their week in Cuba, group members helped a neighborhood beautify a park, and visited a clinic treating children injured in the Chernobyl nuclear plant leak in the Soviet Union in 1986. They also donated medication.

Leaders discuss amendments

■ At a discussion hosted by the League of Women Voters, panelists were given opportunities to discuss their group's position on amendments.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Local party leaders had the chance to express their views on 16 amendments to the Texas Constitution at a panel discussion conducted by the League of Women Voters of Midland on Monday.

The discussion included a question-and-answer session on the amendments, which will be voted on Nov. 2. Pat Stanley, of the League of Women Voters, moderated the discussion. Panelists included Karen Nicholson, also of the League of Women Voters; Republican Rick Strange; Democrat David Weaver; and Libertarian Dave Roberts.

Each panelist was given about 15 minutes to discuss their group's position on a specific amendment or all the amendments.

Ms. Nicholson said that although the League of Women Voters does not endorse particular parties or their views, the state level of the league had taken an opposing stand against Amendment 4. The amendment would require prior voter approval in a statewide referendum before the state could impose an income tax and specify the rate of tax that would be imposed on personal incomes.

"This is simply bad public policy," she said. "The Legislature is supposed to vote on things like this, not the people. Our representatives are elected to vote on bills with the common good of the people as the basis for the vote."

Ms. Nicholson said the League of Women Voters is calling for a new state constitution.

"The United States Constitution has approximately 8,700 words and 26 amendments," she said. "The Texas Constitution, which was written 100 years later, has 65,000 words, 5,000 proposed amendments and 300 passed amendments. It is too long, too inflexible and archaic."

Strange said the only amendment the Republican Party had taken stand on was Amendment 16, which would increase the amount of general bonds and notes — commercial paper — the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority could issue to $100 million.

He added that the Republican Party stood behind conservative business interests and those interests were in favor of Amendments 2, 7, 11 and 14, and opposed to Amendment 1.

"There are enough federal funds for just this purpose," he said of Amendment 1. "There are programs and financial incentives. This kind of proposition is extremely high risk."

The first amendment would add a new section to Article 16 of the Constitution to authorize the Legislature to

Educator pens new textbook

Staff report

Quinn B. Carroll, director of the Midland College Radiography Program, is the author of a new textbook, "Evaluating Radiographs," which was published recently. It is the second textbook written by Carroll.

Carroll's latest book is the first textbook to comprehensively treat the assessment of poor radiographs (X-rays) both for improper positioning and for improper exposure factors. The goal of the text is to help ensure that when an X-ray exposure has to be repeated, all needed corrections can be precisely made so that additional repeats will be avoided. This should ultimately reduce the amount of radiation delivered to the patient/consumer, while enhancing the general quality of radiographs so that a more reliable diagnosis can be made by the radiologist, orthopedic surgeon or other physician.

The 357-page textbook includes more than 250 illustrations and radiographs.

William S. Heathman, Radiographer and clinical director of the Midland College program, did the photography for the text. Midland College photography students, under the direction of instructor Kent Moss, hand-developed all of the photographic illustrations to custom specifications for the book.

Carroll earlier wrote the third, fourth, and fifth editions of Fuchs's "Radiographic Exposure Processing and Quality Control," a textbook of more than 500 pages which is currently used by more than 150 radiography programs during their courses on radiographic technique.

He also wrote the accompanying instructor's manual. Carroll also has contributed to other textbooks and is the author of nine articles published in professional journals. Carroll earned his B.S. degree from the University of Utah, his M.Ed. from the University of Wyoming, and received his Registered Radiographer certification through the University of Utah Medical Center. He joined the Midland College faculty in 1985.

Karen Swisher, reading coordinator for Midland Independent School District, believes there is more than one way for a child to learn to read.

Administrator hopes to create lifelong readers

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Every child can learn to read. It's just a question of how to teach children to become independent readers, Karen Swisher said.

"There is no one way to learn to read. We have to keep working to find out what works for a child. If there was any one way to read, we would have solved all these problems," said Ms. Swisher, reading coordinator for Midland Independent School District.

Hired in May to fill the position that is acknowledged to be one of the toughest in the district, Ms. Swisher said the challenge of turning out lifelong readers is what attracted her to Midland.

"The big challenge is helping teachers with the paradigm shift — teaching to the child instead of teaching the curriculum or content," she said.

A graduate of Ohio State University, Ms. Swisher earned a bachelor's of arts degree in Russian, a master's degree in reading, and a Ph.D. in learning disabilities with an emphasis on clinical intermediate remedial reading.

She came to the Tall City after teaching at the State University of New York at Geneseo where she was assistant professor of language arts.

With an office view of downtown Midland, Ms. Swisher said the view "could use a few more trees," but she won't miss five feet of snow in her backyard in winter.

"I like the dry climate and friendly people in Midland ... and the fact that 99.9 percent of teachers and administrators are behind reading," she said.

Former employee files lawsuit against Ector school district

Staff report

A former Ector County Independent School District employee filed a lawsuit against the school district in federal court alleging he was fired as retaliation for grievances he filed against a supervisor.

Joe C. Araiza is suing ECISD for violating his civil rights by discriminating against him and discharging him in retaliation.

Included in the lawsuit is a "right to sue" letter from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Araiza indicated he was employed with the school district from February 1989 through his termination on Sept. 8, 1992.

The lawsuit charges he was subjected to ethnic slurs and harassed by a white supervisor. Araiza is Hispanic.

The plaintiff said he reported the incidents several times; on one occasion, one of his supervisors was reprimanded, he said.

He also claimed that following each report made he suffered vandalism to his property as well as having personal items stolen.

Araiza said he was fired for stealing two tires from the school district, the lawsuit claims. He said he borrowed the tires with the permission of the man in charge of that department, with the agreement that he would return the tires on his next payday.

He claims he was fired as retaliation and that other employees conducted the same practices on a regular basis without getting in trouble.

Araiza's lawsuit states he was and is being deprived of income and benefits and is requesting he be reinstated and receive back pay and benefits.

ECISD officials were unavailable for comment Monday afternoon.

Organization to offer relief to India's earthquake victims

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

The Indo-American community of the Permian Basin is waging a drive to raise money to help rebuild the homes of 130,000 Indians who were rendered homeless by the Sept. 30 earthquake in the Indian state of Maharashtra.

"We are painfully aware of the disaster caused by (this) devastating earthquake that has produced massive damage and loss of life in South-Central India," said Dr. Urmila Gupta, a Midland pediatrician.

Members of the Indo-American community are asking others to join them in donating funds "to rebuild homes for the people" of India, said Dr. Sudhir P. Srivastava, a Midland cardiovascular and thoracic surgeon. "The damage was tremendous."

Most of the survivors "lost everything they owned," Dr. Gupta said. "It is a human tragedy."

An estimated 30,000 to 50,000 people were killed in the earthquake that struck 35 villages in a region that is "not an earthquake belt," Dr. Gupta said.

Various relief organizations in India and around the world already are providing medicines and other health-care services and food and clothing for the earthquake victims.

Of the money donated toward rebuilding the houses of the victims, "100 percent of the funds, every cent, will go to the affected areas," Dr. Srivastava said. "There will be no administrative costs."

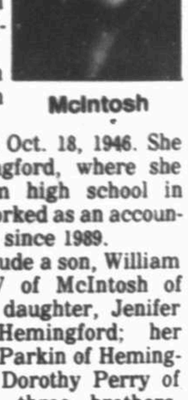

Drs. Gupta and Srivastava are help-

Steven R. Bolding

SEMINOLE — Services for Steven Ray Bolding, 21, of Seminole, grandson of Regie and Myrna Bolding of Midland, are to be at 2 p.m. today at Community Chapel in Seminole with the Rev. Bob Lewis, former pastor of Presbyterian Church in Seminole, officiating. Burial will follow in Gaines County Cemetery under the direction of Roger Pool Funeral Home in Seminole.

Bolding died Sunday near Grandfalls due to injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

He was born Jan. 8, 1972, in Del Rio and moved to Seminole when he was 6 years old.

He graduated from Seminole High School in 1990 and was active in the FFA program.

He was a private on active duty with the U.S. Army at Fort Hood and worked as a heavy-wheel mechanic.

Other survivors include his parents, Larry and Patricia Bolding and Sandy and Don Owens, all of Seminole; his other grandparents, John and Billie Duckworth of Whitesboro; his great-grandmother, Mary Moss of Glenrose; three stepbrothers, Kenny Ligon of Midland and Bradley Owens and Steve Owens, both of Amarillo; and a stepsister, Leesha Ligon of San Angelo.

Gilbert C. Brunson

Services for Gilbert Carroll Brunson are to at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Burial is to follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Sunday in Levelland.

Visitation is today at Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers are to be his grandsons.

Curtis R. Hopper

Curtis R. Hopper of Midland died Monday at a local hospital.

Private family services under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home are to be held at a later date.

Hopper was born Sept. 9, 1929, in Wellington. He moved to Lubbock with his family in the early 1930s. He graduated from Lubbock High School.

Hopper joined Graham Paper Co. in Lubbock as a salesman in 1949. He moved to Midland in 1954. Because of health reasons, he retired in 1975.

He was a member of the Order of Eagles and Crestview Baptist Church.

Hopper was preceded in death by a son, Gary Hopper.

Survivors include a son, Robert Hopper of Austin and seven grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be made to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, 79702.

Jerry Walker

Services for Jerry Walker of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Monday at a local hospital.

LEAGUE: Leaders discuss proposals issue up to $50 million in general obligation bonds to aid in start-up costs of historically under-utilized businesses.

Weaver said the Democratic party would not announce its stands on the amendments until Saturday, but he mentioned how he thought the party would position itself on each amendment.

Although he said he was in favor of Amendment 3, he said he thought it was "bad legislation to have a statewide vote to decide a title dispute in a county I have never even heard of."

The amendment would require the state to surrender its claim to property owned by landowners in the Shelby-Frazier-McCormick League in Fort Bend and Austin counties and grant a clear title to the owners.

He also agreed with Amendment 5, which would allow the Legislature to prescibe the qualifications for sheriffs.

"There are certain rural counties where the sheriff is determined by which unemployed person has the most relatives living in the county," he said. "And, there are trained deputies who must work under these people who have no qualifications or experience."

Roberts described strong Libertarian party opposition to Amendments 1 and 16.

"We need to get the government off of these people's backs and get rid of government expense," he said. "The government needs to move out of regulating free enterprise."

He also stated opposition to Amendment 12, which would add to the list of those for whom bail may be denied to include those accused of certain violent or sexual offenses while under the supervision of a state or local criminal justice agency for prior felony.

"This just perpetuates the guilty-before-proven-innocent mentality in our justice system," he said. "It will only result in an abuse of power."

The only solidly divisive discussion came after a question concerning why the state spends more money on housing criminals than it does on drug and alcohol education.

Strange defended the state's current stance of trying to build more facilities for criminals.

"Until the laws we have are changed, we have to abide by them," he said. "There are people who belong in county jails and state prisons who have been sent there by a jury who believe they should be there. There is a real need for education, but that and more jails are not mutually exclusive."

Roberts said too many people were jailed for "political crimes," rather than for actual crimes against property or someone else.

"The fact that we incarcerate someone because they entertain themselves a little differently than most is stupid," he said. "Let's put people in jail who commit a crime that infringes on or hurts someone else and let everyone be able to live their own lives."

Weaver said the real problem began during the blossoming drug culture of the 1970s, when few drug uses were punished and there was no education on drug abuse.

"We have created a subculture of drug dependents that we will never be able to reach," he said. "I believe in drug education for our kids, but I also believe there are some people you simply cannot change and they must be taken off the streets."

Investigation into shooting continues

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Authorities on Monday were continuing to investigate the shootings of two stepbrothers who had been fishing under a bridge when they were shot several times by men claiming to have car trouble.

Williamson County sheriff's deputies were searching for a woman and two men, all in their late teens or early 20s, in connection with the 12:30 p.m. Sunday shooting under a bridge near Jonah, Sheriff Ed Richards said.

Mark King of Travis County and Michael Brinkley of Williamson County, both 21, were in serious condition at Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, a spokesman said.

Brinkley's car, stolen after the shooting, was found later about a mile north of Hutto, Richards said.

Michael Brinkley was shot in the jaw and back, and the bullet "cut through his spine," his brother said.

College schedules nursing program orientation

Staff report

An orientation session for persons interested in applying for the Midland College Associate Degree Nursing program is being held Tuesday, Oct. 26, from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Roadrunner Room at the Student Center.

"Due to the competitive nature of our program, it is important that applicants understand our pre-requisites, our selection criteria, and the educational and physical demands which are made upon ADN students and upon registered nurses," said Nancy Shaw, Health Sciences division chair. "We also want to acquaint potential students with the rewards and satisfaction which accompany the nursing profession."

The Associate Degree Nursing program accepts 24 students each fall semester and 24 more in the spring semester. The ADN program lasts five semesters; those who successfully complete the program are eligible to sit for the national licensure examinations, which allow them to become registered nurses.

Those attending also will be informed as to resources that are available, such as scholarships, financial aid, child-care assistance, and job opportunities. Personal counseling will be scheduled in coming weeks for those who attend the orientation session.

POLICE REPORTS

Police make drug arrests

ODESSA — Six Odessa residents were arrested over the weekend during four separate drug arrests.

The first arrest occurred at 7:15 p.m. Friday at the 7-Eleven located at 600 N. Grandview St., according to an Odessa police report.

Daniel Joe Valenzuela, 32, was arrested after officers searched his vehicle and found 14 grams of cocaine with an estimated street value of $1,680, according to the report. He was charged with possession of cocaine and his bond was set at $5,000, officials said.

Two arrests were made by Permian Basin Drug Task Force officials at about 9:15 p.m. Friday during a buy-bust in the parking lot of 8th and Dixie streets, according to a report.

Officials seized about nine ounces of cocaine with an estimated street value of $10,000 and arrested Steven Barragan Galindo, 17, and Edward Lee Gonzales, 19, according to a task force report. Galindo was charged with aggravated delivery of cocaine and bond was set at $20,000, according to the report. Gonzales had bonded out of jail, officials said.

The third incident occurred at 1:50 p.m. Saturday after Odessa police officers stopped a vehicle at 2105 W. Interstate 20, according to a police report.

Officers found about one pound of cocaine with an estimated street value of $27,000 and arrested Ovidio Rodriguez, 28, and Socorro Garcia Armendariz, 26, according to the report. Both were charged with possession of cocaine and bond was set at $5,000 each, officials said.

Robert S. Hernandez, 34, was in jail for a charge of possession of cocaine, according to an Odessa police report. His bond was set at $5,000, officials said.

Hernandez was arrested at Bahama Bob's, 2607 N. Grandview St., at 1:35 a.m. by police, according to the report. The arrest occurred after detectives received information that he was in possession of cocaine. During the investigation, detectives saw Hernandez throw a quantity of cocaine on the ground and an additional quantity was found in his vehicle, according to the report. The cocaine had an approximate street value of $630, according to the report.

TEACH: Administrator hopes to create readers

(From 1B)

Admittedly not an avid reader as a youngster, Ms. Swisher said she was drawn to participate in tennis, softball and other sports. "Reading just wasn't enough of a challenge. It wasn't until I began earning my Ph.D. that reading became a self-fulfilling activity for me."

While not a bookworm growing up, the school administrator said the importance of the written word was enforced by watching her parents engage in reading and writing activities, such as writing letters or solving crossword puzzles.

"Children need to see their parents reading and writing," she said, noting such activities abound from reading everything from novels to road maps.

While the district and various city organizations share a common goal of having Midland pupils reading on grade level when they complete the third grade, Ms. Swisher said that may not be an attainable goal for every child.

"Some children may not be able to crack the code or put all of the pieces together by the end of the third grade," she said. "Some are late bloomers. For those children it is important that we find out what they can do so they can realize successes rather than failures year after year."

The secret to building self-esteem in youngsters, she said, is to "build on strengths and overcome weaknesses."

Unless another activity is coupled with reading, such as writing a report of a poem based on what was read, the reading coordinator said "only 10 percent" of what was read will be retained over time.

She applauded the district's change to a literature-based approach in reading, especially with reading works where the characters are the same age as the readers.

"Children can read much more difficult literature if they have an interest in it. They may not be able to read every word in the text, but interest can overcome lack of knowledge. Kids love words like Tyrannosaurus Rex," she said, noting writing activities complement reading.

"Reading and writing are so interrelated. One draws the other. The same skills and strategies are used when studying math or science," she said.

As for testing, students often have to read entire selections before answering questions. "Skills are much more inference-oriented than correlated," she said.

"The emphasis is on comprehension. Students have to think about what they are doing and extract information, not just plug in the answers," Ms. Swisher said, "... it used to be teachers knew all of the answers and it was their job to impart them."

Now the answers keep changing as "information turns over and knowledge needs upgrading."

The solution is to teach students how to teach themselves "to become lifelong readers, writers, critical thinkers and problem solvers."

Ms. Swisher allows it's a tall order.

"It's a challenge, which is one of the reasons I came to Midland," she said.

Minnesota, Texas judges rule differently on custody of twins

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Rob Schlaepfer knew he was dying and wanted close friends to raise his 5-year-old twin daughters, who had lost their mother three years earlier.

But more than a month after Schlaepfer's death, the girls are at the center of a legal tug-of-war between his friends and his mother, who believes family should take care of family.

A judge in Texas has granted Schlaepfer's mother, Phyllis Durichek, permanent, legal custody of the girls. But a judge in Duluth heard arguments Monday on the status of temporary custody already granted to Kandi Geary and her husband, Lance Rhicard.

At Schlaepfer's request, Geary and Rhicard of Duluth became licensed foster parents. They cared for Schlaepfer as he grew weaker from AIDS. The girls came to think of the Geary-Rhicard house as their other home.

Although Schlaepfer had drawn up a will shortly after the twins were born stipulating that his mother would raise Natasha and Felicia if he and his wife should die, friends said he never was satisfied with that plan.

On March 5, 1993, Schlaepfer drew up a new will, entrusting his daughters' care to Geary. He also filed a declaration of intent with his lawyer stating the same thing.

Filed along with the declaration is an undated, handwritten statement from Schlaepfer that reads in part as follows:

"Kandi and Lance are a perfect choice. ... There are so many reasons for my choice it is difficult to put them on paper, but not difficult to know who is right to raise my children."

About seven weeks later, Mrs. Durichek came to Duluth from her home in Houston and moved in with her son to care for him. The day before Schlaepfer died, she put him in his station wagon, packed up the girls and headed south.

Before they got to Minneapolis, Schlaepfer began having breathing problems. Mrs. Durichek took him to the emergency room of The University of Minnesota Hospital and Clinic, where he died a few hours later, early Sept. 2. Mrs. Durichek continued on to Houston with the girls.

When Geary and Rhicard realized the next day that the girls were missing, they went to court in Duluth and were granted temporary custody. A nationwide police bulletin was issued for the girls.

On Sept. 15, a judge in Houston granted permanent, legal custody of the girls to Mrs. Durichek, who had not told the judge that a Minnesota judge already had granted custody to someone else.

The Texas judge has since upheld his earlier ruling. The Duluth judge who heard arguments Monday said he would rule soon on Geary and Rhicard's temporary custody.

Mrs. Durichek refused to comment about the case. Her husband Peter said he and his wife were aware of the living will but disagreed with it.

"That will was done without working with us," Peter said from their home in Houston. "We feel that the second will should not be valid because it was made in the last few months of his life, and he was probably not able to understand what he was doing."

Officials consider new laws for ice cream trucks

DALLAS (AP) — The familiar jingle of ice cream trucks has sent children racing for the luscious deserts for decades. But in Dallas, that lure has turned dangerous, drawing five children to their deaths in the last three years when they darted into streets for the treats.

On Monday, the city's Health Services Commission heard different ideas on how to tighten vending regulations on the ice cream trucks in hopes of increasing safety.

One proposal suggested treating the vehicles like school buses, forcing the treat trucks to flash their brake lights and forcing traffic to stop.

Another idea was to lower the decibel-level of the trucks' blaring stereos.

Among those asking for rule changes at the hearing was the family of Victor Alfonso Garcia, a 7-year-old killed two weeks ago when he ran through traffic to get to an ice cream truck.

The idea of a policy change worries Hoss Rafaty, owner of the Yumi Ice Cream Co., one of the area's largest frozen-treat distributors and chair of the International Association of Ice Cream Vendors' safety committee.

He's spent four months working with city officials to tighten rules governing mobile vendors.

"Do we get rid of all the cars?" he asked "It's very easy to take on some guys who are trying to make an honest living."

Rafaty, a father of two, said he sympathizes with the Garcias.

"This accident is a very tragic thing, but the drivers cannot do everything," he said.

The Garcias plan to move from their neighborhood, where the trucks no longer seek customers. The driver of the car that killed Victor is not expected to face charges.

The ice cream trucks also have come under scrutiny recently for ordinances related to mobile food service and noise.

The sound became an issue when the Environmental Health Services Commission held a public hearing on the subject, which led to stricter licensing requirements.

Trucks now must have signs with 5-inch letter saying "Watch for children" or "Stop for children" in the front and back of the vehicle.

Houston ballroom gets named for George Bush

HOUSTON (AP) — George Bush was vice president when he helped city officials break ground for a new convention center in downtown Houston. Now the former president is getting his name on the center's 31,500-square-foot ballroom, the largest ballroom in Texas.

"We believe the designation of the Grand Ballroom of the George R. Brown Convention Center as 'The George Bush Grand Ballroom' is an appropriate honor to bestow upon a leader who had given so selflessly to his country and his community," Mayor Bob Lanier said of Monday's ceremonies.

Houston city council voted earlier this year to dedicate the ballroom to Bush, who moved to Texas in the late 1940s and settled eventually in Houston. He maintained a legal residence in Houston during his Washington years and moved back to Houston after leaving the White House in January.

The Brown Convention Center was site in 1987 for a debate involving Republican presidential hopefuls, which at that time included Bush. He delivered his presidential acceptance speech at the center in 1988 and some of the sessions of the 1990 Economic Summit and 1992 Republican National Convention were held there.

The 1.17 million-square-foot center, named for the late energy conglomerate founder George Brown, opened in 1987 at a cost of $105 million.

Also Monday, officials at Texas A&M University announced they had passed the $10 million mark in a $42 million fundraising goal to build the Bush Presidential Library at the school in College Station.

Texas A&M, about 100 miles northwest of Houston, has pledged another $40 million for affiliated academic and conference facilities at the library.

Architectural plans are being completed and construction is expected to begin next year. The library is expected to open in 1997.

Bomb injures postal worker

HOUSTON (AP) — A postal worker was injured Monday when an apparent pipe bomb exploded in a package that had been left for pickup from a street mailbox.

"It was some kind of a box to be mailed," Franceska Perot, a spokeswoman with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said. "The postman was emptying (the mailbox) and it detonated in his hand."

The postal worker was taken to a nearby hospital where he was being treated for cuts to his hand. Ms. Perot said the injuries were not believed to be life-threatening.

A second package, also believed to contain explosives, was detonated later by members of an ATF bomb disposal team.

DEAR ABBY

Cheating on girlfriend comes easy to man cheating on wife

DEAR ABBY: I had an affair with a co-worker I'll call Pete. I was single, but Pete was married. I didn't see anything wrong with it because he told me his wife was a cold fish, and he was going to divorce her and marry me.

Van Buren

After waiting for four years, it seemed like it was taking him an awfully long time to divorce his wife, so I decided to speed things up a little. I called Pete's wife and told her about Pete and me. Guess what? She said she knew all about it — and all the others. That's right, I wasn't the only one.

I dumped the jerk immediately, and the worst of it was, he didn't care.

You have said it before, but say it again: "A guy who cheats on his wife will cheat on his girlfriend." — SADDER BUT WISER

DEAR SADDER: "Guys" don't have the exclusive on cheating. A woman who cheats on her husband will probably cheat on her lover.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter signed "McFrustrated," who fell for the waitress at a fast-food place, I had to write and tell you my story.

When I graduated from high school, I worked for the summer at a local McDonald's. Almost every night, three guys from the nearby air base would come in for their snack. One night only two came in, so I jokingly asked where the third musketeer was, and a minute later, he came in. When he placed his order, it was for a Big Mac, large fries, large Coke, and a date for tomorrow night! I liked his looks and his manner, so I said OK.

That was in June; by February we were engaged, and got married the following May — 18 years ago!

I would like to suggest to "McFrustrated" to go ahead and ask the waitress for a date. If she's seeing someone, she will tell him so, and if she isn't . . . well, who knows, in another 18 years, he may be writing to thank you for the advice. — CAROLE LANGUI, MAGNOLIA, DEL.

DEAR CAROLE: Not all waitresses were as lucky as you. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This letter concerns the one you printed signed "McFrustrated."

I am a fast-food waitress who had the unfortunate experience of encountering a "McFrustrated."

While I was working behind the counter, a man nearly twice my age came into the restaurant. After ordering his meal, he proceeded to ask me for a date. I told him I was only 15 years old, but he insisted that didn't make any difference and tried to talk me into it. He didn't get very far because I had the feeling that he wanted to take advantage of me.

After that episode, the man (like "McFrustrated") returned several times. The way he looked me up and down made me feel very uncomfortable.

My advice to "McFrustrated," after reading your column, is that "his waitress" either already has a man in her life or she is just not interested. His waitress is not the only fish in the sea, and it is obviously time to rebait his hook! — OFF LIMITS IN DEKALB, ILL.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. AT WIT'S END

'Good nude day' disappears under the flab

The Sylvester Stallone movie "Demolition Man" is teasing the public to death with the promise that when he awakes from his cryonic state, he is naked as a newborn.

When asked about his willingness to appear on the screen in the buff, the star is quoted as saying: "I must admit that I performed well. It was not a bad nude day, like a bad hair day. It was a good nude day."

This statement brings two questions to mind. What IS a good nude day? And have I ever had one?

The only thing worse than not having a good nude day is to have one and not know you're having it.

Is it a day when you haven't eaten in a week and you feel empty, flat and lean — like when you return from a spa after a diet of designer water and 15-grain bread?

I'm not an authority on nudes, but I'm willing to bet the female models who showed up for Rubens and Michelangelo were having bad nude days. They should never have been transferred to canvas to be viewed by future generations. They all look like they ate their way into a pasta coma.

When I was gazing up at the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, I could tell in a glance which one had water retention and which one had given up sucking it in.

On a recent episode of "Evening Shade," Burt Reynolds and his two friends were left in the woods without clothes and returned to town wearing a few well-placed tree branches. I am willing to testify under oath they were all having a bad nude day.

The country is divided on this one, but the picture of a pregnant Demi Moore wearing only a wedding ring on the cover of Vanity Fair was not her finest hour. I consider any woman without a waistline in the danger zone. I don't care what they say about a woman with child being beautiful. When the dog laughs out loud when you come out of the shower, you have to take that as an opinion.

As for the Calvin Klein ads, who can make out the parts, let alone grade them?

Those of us who are shaped like avocados have a problem relating to the Stallone appraisal of his physique. We belong to a segment of the population who are not happy with their bodies, have never been happy with their bodies, and will never be happy with their bodies. No matter how many sit-ups we do, our stomachs will never be flat enough. We can suck the fat out of our thighs and add it to our lips, but it won't help. We would never enter a fitting room that didn't have a lock on the door.

The idea of freezing our bodies to be thawed at a future date —puleeese.

Delta Electronics:

Protecting your holiday memories

As we are fast approaching the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year holiday season every one is looking forward to spending time with family and friends.

These great holidays create many wonderful memories that you want to keep, and it is just this time of year that the camcorder gets a work-out.

But, in many cases, the family camcorder hasn't been used since this time last year and you run the risk of pulling out the camcorder to record a precious memory, only to find that the batteries are dead, the charger won't work and the picture is out of focus or snowing.

Phil Cote is one of the highly trained technicians at Delta Electronics who can ensure that your camcorder is working at its best for the holiday season. For more information about camcorder servicing call 683-3582.

This kind of experience can really ruin the holiday atmosphere very quickly indeed, so in order to protect your memories this winter, let Delta Electronics go through your camcorder system and make sure that it running smoothly.

Delta Electronics has a number of experienced and qualified technicians on staff who are experts in dealing with a multitude of camcorders, such as Magnavox, Philco, Sylvania, Sharp, Panasonic and Quasar, so bring your camcorder in soon and Delta will check the focusing systems, (back and auto) and the charger/ batteries as well as clean the camcorder for only $28.50 (with the coupon below).

Because Delta Electronics is not a retail store, but a maintenance company, customers can be assured that every effort will be made to repair their existing equipment. Technicians such as Phil Cote, (pictured above) are specialists in high-tech electronic equipment and they offer a specialized service that is emphasized by high standards of customer service.

Delta has ensured continued customer satisfaction by making sure that accuracy and efficiency are the company's bywords. To this end they use an on-line computer system to provide individual customer files as well as accurate accounting. They are linked to all the major companies by fax so that they can access up-to-date information on parts and warranties.

Delta Electronics is located at the Midkiff Business Center, 1308 South Midkiff Road, Suite 303. Their hours are from 10a.m. until 6p.m. Monday through Friday. Call 683-3582 for more information that could save your holiday memories.

Edward D. Jones & Co.-- Understanding Retirement Withdrawal Options

"Van Pearcy with Edward D. Jones & Co. suggests West Texans consult with a professional before withdrawing any retirement funds. A little caution can save you thousands of dollars in taxes and penalties."

"Any West Texas employee who plans to take a lump-sum distribution from an employer-sponsored retirement plan may be in for a costly surprise unless he or she knows about the 20 Percent Withholding Rule, which became effective Jan. 1. 1993", summarized Van Pearcy, registered investment counselor with Edward D. Jones & Co. here in Midland.

Van Pearcy established the first Edward D. Jones & Co. office in the Midland/Odessa area over 6-years ago. Now, he has one of the most successful offices in the nation with Jones & Co. Van was raised in Andrews and received his BA and MBA from the University of Notre Dame. Pearcy is committed to eventually retiring n the Midland community and looks forward to helping all hi clients reach their financial goals through good, conservative investment practices.

"The new law states that if you take possession of a lump-sum distribution from your employer's retirement plan: (1) your employer is required to withhold 20 percent of the distribution for taxes; (2) any amount not rolled into an IRA or another qualified retirement plan within 60 days is taxed as ordinary income; and (3) if you are under the age of 591/2, an additional 10 percent penalty applies to any portion of the distribution not rolled over", Pearcy said. "There is the one exception: if you are between 55 and 591/2, and are no longer employed, the 10 percent penalty will not apply to the qualified plan distribution."

Pearcy lists the following three examples of the effects of the 20 percent Withholding Rule:

Example #1, No Rollover: Jane Doe, age 45, decides to change jobs after 10-years with her employer. She has accumulated $50,000 in her employer's qualified retirement plan. Jane decides to take her $50,000 in a lump-sum distribution to help launch a new career. Because she does not roll the distribution into an IRA or other qualified retirement plan, her employer will withhold 20 percent, or 10,000 immediately, and she must pay income taxes on the entire amount.

Assuming a 28-percent income tax bracket, Jane will owe the Internal Revenue Service an additional 8 percent, or $4,000, in taxes, for a total of $14,000. Because she is not yet 55, the total distribution is subject to an additional 10 percent penalty, or $5,000, for early withdrawal. After taxes and penalties, Jane has only $31,000 left from her original $50,000 nest egg. What is left also has lost its tax-sheltered status, so any future earnings are subject to income tax.

Example #2, Rollover: What happens if Jane takes possession of her $50,000 retirement fund in a lump-sum distribution and rolls it over into an IRA? Because she took possession of her funds, her employer must withhold 20 percent, or $10,00. Jane now has only $40,000 to roll over into her IRA. Since $10,000 was not rolled over, Jane also owes a 10 percent early withdrawal penalty and income taxes on the $10,000 withheld. The only way for Jane to avoid this tax and penalty is to come up with $10,000 from another source to make a total rollover of $50,000. She can recoup the $10,000 her employer withheld only when she files her tax return for that year.

Example #3, Direct Rollover: Jane decides that rather than taking possession of the funds, she will instruct her employer to make a direct rollover to her IRA. Jane's employer makes the $50,000 check payable to "XYZ Trustee for the IRA of Jane Doe." The funds go from the former employer directly into the IRA--Jane never takes possession of the funds. There is no 20 percent withholding or penalties, and the entire $50,000 continues to grow tax-sheltered.

"These example illustrate the importance of understanding your retirement withdrawal options under the new 20 Percent Withholding Rule," Pearcy stated. "Consult a professional before you withdraw any retirement funds. A little caution may save you thousands of dollars in taxes and penalties."

Van Pearcy's office is located across the street from the high school football stadium at 2020 West Cuthbert. You may call him at 683-1516 to arrange an appointment concerning your investment questions. There is no fee for consultation.

Standing up for the consumer and the environment

There is more to running a dry cleaning business than buying property and equipment and then opening for business. In today's market place small businesses, such as dry-cleaners, are having to face a number of very serious questions about subjects such as the environment.

Billie Jo Corbelle, the owner of the Midland's three Comet Cleaners went to Washington DC earlier this month to attend a conference entitled, 'Face to Face with Congress'.

This conference was organized by the International Fabricare Institute (IFI) in order to bring the concerns of professional dry cleaners and launderers to the attention of Congress.

These concerns dealt primarily with new proposed legislation which could, according to Corbelle, "could put dry cleaners out of business."

The proposed legislation deals primarily with lowering the emissions of potentially toxic waste generated by the dry cleaning industry.

Unfortunately for the dry-cleaning industry and for the consumer, there is considerable dispute about what acceptable limits of emissions are.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) suggests that emissions of perchloroethylene, (the usual agent used by dry-cleaners) should have a limit of 25ppm.

However, the ramifications of reaching these limits would be that many small dry-cleaners would not be able to purchase the expensive equipment required to reach these limits and they would go out of business.

This would decrease the number of dry-cleaners and increase the prices of the survivors.

The IFI disagrees with the EPA's figures and has suggested that realistic figures be used.

Billie Jo Corbelle and her colleagues in the IFI are trying to find a middle path so that they can help to protect the environment, stay in business and provide a much needed service.

For more information about Comet Cleaners environmentally responsible dry-cleaning services call 689-9723 or stop by their locations at: 2606 Midland Drive, 3108 West Cuthbert and 2106 North A Street.

Billie Jo Corbelle, the owner of Comet Cleaners recently went to Washington DC to meet with Members of Congress to discuss the dry-cleaning industry and the role it plays in the environment.

Workshops focus on future of America's radioactive wastes

By Philip M. Klasky
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — How will we communicate 1,000, 10,000 or 100,000 years into the future to identify the tombs containing the hideous legacy of nuclear poisons?

A historic event, rare in this country's difficult relationship with nuclear power, quietly took place recently in San Francisco when the Nuclear Regulatory Commission invited the public to take part in answering that question and others. Participants were invited to workshops and hearings to help develop government policy.

The commission wants to determine just how "clean" nuclear reactor sites would have to be after decommissioning before they could be released for public use.

The commission sought comments from anti-nuclear groups for the "Enhanced Participatory Rulemaking Radiological Criteria for Decommissioning" hearings which were conducted in an unusually unrestricted manner.

Despite the appearance of openness, environmentalists remain cautious, given the commission's history of support for the nuclear power industry.

The hearings focused on radiological impacts on workers, the public and the environment and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's preparation of a "Generic Environmental Impact Statement" on decommissioning criteria due sometime in 1994. Problems in cleaning sites contaminated with some of the most dangerous substances known are mind boggling.

Pools of spent fuel, containing cesium, strontium and plutonium, linger at nuclear reactor sites across the nation. It takes equal parts science and imagination to comprehend the implications of attempting to safely contain nuclear poisons which will remain deadly for the next 12,000 generations.

In the next three decades, the nation's 112 commercial nuclear reactors will become too radioactive to operate. In addition, 74 research reactors, 14 fuel fabrication plants, two uranium hexafloride production plants, 49 uranium mills and nine spent-fuel storage installations will be decommissioned. These sites may become "nuclear sacrifice areas," off-limits essentially forever.

While the nuclear power industry is pressuring the commission for a quick compromise in cleanup standards so the utilities can sell off their problematic real estate, the agency is trying to minimize government liability for failure to properly regulate the nuclear polluters.

The NRC plans to develop regulations that would set a level of radiation with an "acceptable risk" to the population using the "best available technology" to reduce "residual radioactivity" before the site can be released for "restricted or unrestricted use."

Those familiar with the tragic consequences of radioactive contamination reject the idea of an "acceptable" dose of radioactivity. They insist that the nuclear facilities be returned to background levels of radiation, or the same conditions that existed prior to licensing.

Burial and incineration of radioactive wastes spread contamination throughout the environment. Nuclear wastes must be stored in highly engineered, above-ground, monitored, retrievable storage facilities with the goal of 100 percent containment.

The commission should conduct epidemiological studies of the resident populations around nuclear facilities in order to determine the long-range effects of radiation. For example, studies show that birth defects for Navajo children living near uranium mines are significantly higher than the national average.

The government has consistently disputed connections between exposure and increased cancer deaths experienced by those "downwind" from nuclear facilities.

The same corporations that have profited from the unbridled production of nuclear wastes should retain liability for the cleanup, which could cost taxpayers billions of dollars.

The Lawrence Livermore, Los Alamos and Sandia national laboratories, currently engaged in nuclear weapons production, should completely shift their focus to research and development of waste containment technologies.

Who will pay the price of guarding the "poison fire" through millennia of social and geological upheaval?

Data: Recession hits men harder than women

N.Y. Times News Service

American women have endured the recession better than men and posted gains in both pay and jobs, according to new government data.

Since 1989, when the economy started its long slowdown and decline, real median wages of women have grown 2 percent, while men's wages have dropped 5 percent after adjusting for inflation, according to a forthcoming study of wage trends by the Economic Policy Institute, a liberal research center in Washington.

As a result, in the first half of 1993, women's hourly wages reached 78 percent of men's, a historic high. Only two decades ago, the ratio was 64 percent.

Labor Department statistics also show that women boosted their numbers in the workplace. From July 1989 to July 1993, the share of adult women with jobs grew a tenth of a point to 54.9 percent, while that of men sank 2.7 points to 71.9 percent.

From July 1990, when the recession began, to February 1992, when employment hit bottom, women actually gained 50,000 payroll jobs while men lost 1.7 million.

"Women do much better in recessions," said Laura Freeman, an economist at the Bureau of Labor Statistics and co-author of a new study of women and jobs in past downturns. "Men work disproportionately in cyclical industries like construction and mining, while women work in more stable service jobs and in government."

As women continue to enter professions traditionally dominated by men and command higher pay within occupations, they have made significant gains in otherwise rough economic times.

Women financial managers last year made 75 percent as much as men, up from 60 percent only three years before, according to Labor Department surveys. Women editors and reporters saw their relative pay climb to 82 percent in 1992, up from 75 percent in 1989. And female butchers gained on men, rising from 61 percent to 69 percent of male pay.

In every broad occupational category — executive and managerial, professional, technical, sales, administrative and clerical, services and blue-collar — women's pay outpaced that of men during the same period, the forthcoming Economic Policy Institute study shows. Among women in service occupations, for instance, real hourly pay rose 4.3 percent from 1989 to 1993, while that of men fell 1.0 percent.

Judge: Drunken wheelchair operator's not guilty of DWI

PEMBERTON, N.J. (AP) — A man who crossed a street in a wheelchair while drunk wasn't driving. He was jaywalking, a judge said.

Over the weekend, surior Court Judge Harold B. Wells overturned the drunken-driving conviction of Paul Wagoner, 37.

Although the conviction followed the letter of the law, Wells ruled, common sense suggests the state's drunken-driving statute doesn't apply to wheelchairs.

"I simply cannot find that the purpose of stopping senseless slaughter on the highways . . . is in any way, shape or form furthered by a ruling that a handicapped person driving or operating a wheelchair falls within that definition," Wells said.

Wagoner pleaded guilty to jaywalking by crossing against a red light and agreed to pay a $50 fine.

New scanner protects airports from explosives

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — A Salvadoran man who allegedly tried to smuggle guns aboard a flight to Costa Rica was arrested and arraigned on federal weapons charges after a prototype explosives scanner found the cache in his boom box.

Miguel Gallegos, 40, was arrested by San Francisco airport police after the oversized radio set off sensors as his luggage passed through a Thermal Neutron Analysis machine, airport spokesman Ron Wilson said.

The $1 million machine, one of two prototypes being tested at San Francisco International Airport, sounded as luggage for TACA flight 611 to Costa Rica was being examined, Wilson said.

Gallegos was taken into custody after police opened the radio and found four handguns, each wrapped in duct tape and aluminum foil to help defeat more conventional X-ray detectors, and about 100 rounds of ammunition.

Airport police turned Gallegos over to U.S. Customs authorities. He was arraigned on weapons charges, Wilson said.

Wilson said the TNA sensors currently in use at the San Francisco airport are the only two in use anywhere in the world and represent "the latest in explosive detection technology."

Each unit, built by Science Application International Corp. in Santa Clara, Calif., at a cost of $1 million each, detects nitrogen emissions given off when luggage containing an explosive device is passed through a cloud of neutrons.

Report: Pacific warming's factor behind '93 floods

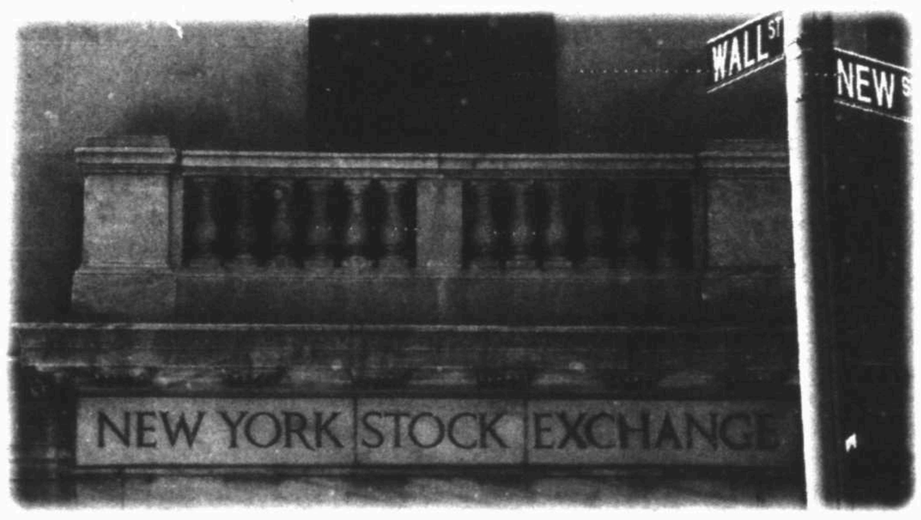

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warming of the Pacific Ocean was a major contributor to this year's Midwestern floods, but other factors also added to the disaster, a government analysis says.

A phenomenon, known as ENSO, which causes the water in the central Pacific Ocean to warm up every three to seven years, was cited in a special climate summary released September 16 by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The ultimate fault in the flooding may lie with a combination of factors. But, the report says, other causes "seem less likely than a direct influence of the sea-surface temperature anomaly in the tropical Pacific associated with the ENSO."

ENSO stands for El Nino-Southern Oscillation. El Nino is the warming of the Pacific waters, while Southern Oscillation refers to changes in air pressure over the Pacific Ocean that occur at the same time.

Damage totaled more than $10 billion and 48 people lost their lives in flooding on the Upper Mississippi and related rivers this summer as persistent heavy rains deluged a region already soaked from winter snow melt.

Corner The Market With Our New CD.

Now You Can Earn Market Returns With The NationsBank Stock Market CD.

You know that investing in the stock market for the long term is the smart thing to do. After all, the stock market has historically achieved superior returns. You'd like to take advantage of higher market returns, but you don't want to risk your principal.

The NationsBank Stock Market CD gives you a chance to realize market returns, without risking a penny of your principal. The CD's interest rate is tied to the Standard & Poor's 500 Composite Stock Price Index, while your principal is an FDIC-insured deposit with NationsBank.

Your Interest Rate Is Based On The S&P 500 Index.

The Stock Market CD offers you instant diversification because your interest rate is based on the S&P 500 Index, which represents 500 of the nation's leading companies. When you open your five-year CD, you'll have a beginning S&P 500 Index value. During the next 12 months, the Index's value at each month end is taken. The month-end values are then averaged for the year. You'll receive an interest payment each year the 12-month average is higher than your beginning Index value.

Your beginning Index value is reset each year. That means your annual interest rate reflects each year's market performance. So unlike stock investments, if the market declines one year, you'll have a new chance to earn a return in later years—without having to recoup a prior decline first.

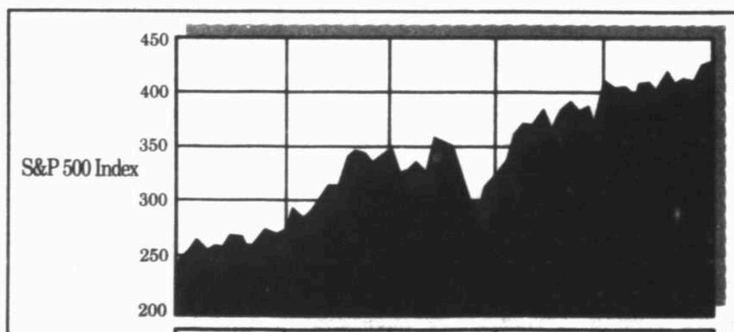

There Is No Risk To Your Principal.

The Stock Market CD is similar to a traditional CD, offering you complete safety of principal. The CD is issued by NationsBank, one of the largest and most stable financial institutions in the nation. So you have the security of knowing that your principal will be returned to you in full at maturity.

You can invest in the Stock Market CD with a minimum deposit of $10,000, for a single term of five years. And like any other CD, your principal is insured by the FDIC. But unlike a typical fixed-rate CD, the Stock Market CD gives you the chance to earn a higher rate of return.

NationsBank Stock Market CD Example.*

The chart below illustrates that even with a market decline in 1990, when no interest would have been paid, a $10,000 investment made at the beginning of the five-year period from 1988 through 1992 would have earned an annual percentage yield of 7.19%.

	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5
	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992

Annual Percentage Yield 7.19%

*This chart describes actual S&P 500 Index performance for the period from 1988 to 1992 as it would have applied to the Stock Market CD if the CD had been offered during that period.
Rounding has occurred. The Annual Percentage Yield (APY) shown represents the APY that would have been earned on the Stock Market CD for that period. If you purchase a Stock Market CD, you will earn a variable rate of interest. Your interest rate and APY may change at the end of each 12-month period during the term of your CD, as set forth in the documents governing your Stock Market CD.

It's Easy To Corner The Market.

Series moves to Philly

■ Lenny Dykstra still scaling fences while memory of car wreck still lingers.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The memory of the car wreck that nearly killed Lenny Dykstra is inescapable while watching him scale fences in the World Series, spark rallies, slide headfirst, slug a homer with those massive, vein-popping arms.

It made him more daring in some ways, more cautious in others, more appreciative of every minute on and off the baseball field.

There's time to think in the hospital when your ribs and collarbone and cheekbone are all busted up, when you realize that you could be blowing the thing you care about most besides life itself — baseball.

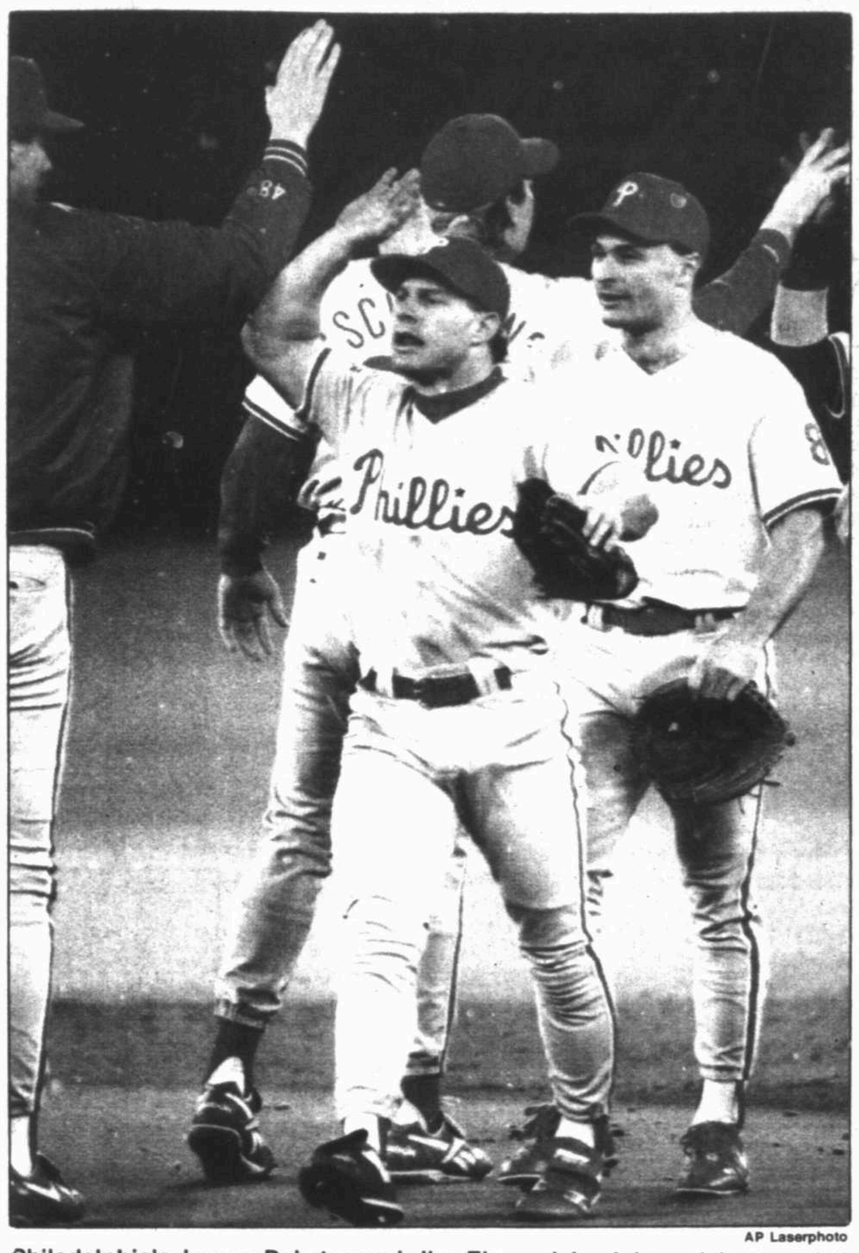

And Dykstra nearly blew it all in one drunken moment 2½ years ago when he crashed his car into a tree driving away with Philadelphia Phillies teammate Darren Daulton after John Kruk's bachelor party.

Dykstra, 28 at the time, was coming off his finest season at that point, a .325 hitting year in 1990. He was among the leaders in runs, hits, doubles steals, walks and on-base percentage when that tree came out of nowhere and he became a mangled mess.

Suddenly, he was out of the game and the Phillies were going nowhere. He came back after just 10 weeks, ready to pick up where he left off. Then, boom, he broke his collarbone again a month later running into an outfield wall. End of season. Time for further contemplation.

As the injuries mounted — a broken left arm from a pitch on opening day in 1992, a strained hamstring after that and then a fractured hand sliding into ■ Toronto manager Cito Gaston reaches decision on how to use designated hitter Paul Molitor, but he isn't telling.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

PHILADELPHIA — After a week of debate about what to do with designated hitter Paul Molitor, Toronto manager Cito Gaston has made up his mind.

Only he's not telling.

"I know what I'm going to do," Gaston said Monday, a day before the Blue Jays played the Philadelphia Phillies in Game 3 of the World Series. "I'll announce it tomorrow."

Gaston, however, did say Todd Stottlemyre will start Game 4 Wednesday night against Tommy Greene.

"So I've made one decision, so far," he said.

But with his other decision under wraps, speculation about Molitor continues.

Will he play first base while lefty John Olerud, the AL batting champion, sits against left-hander Danny Jackson? Will he play third base instead of Ed Sprague? Will he be benched? Or will Gaston go game-by-game?

"It'd be nice to know what's going on," Olerud said after Toronto's workout at Veterans Stadium. "If we decide to go one way, I'll be pinch-hitting. That could happen. It would be understandable if it did."

Olerud began two World Series games on the bench last year in Atlanta when Gaston juggled his lineup to make room for DH Dave Winfield. Last year, though, Olerud had not hit .363 in the regular season and .348 in the playoffs, as he did this season.

Molitor played 23 games at first base this year. He was a third baseman with Milwaukee in the 1980s, but his last appearance there was two games in 1990.

Cowboys back on track

■ Jimmy Johnson not happy to see an open date after Dallas wins four games in a row.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys gets a week off but don't need it. Their 26-17 victory over the San Francisco 49ers shows they are back on the Super Bowl track.

"We've won four in a row, but we're still one behind the New York Giants and they are playing extremely well," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Monday.

"We have a very important stretch coming up against three division teams — Philadelphia, New York, and Phoenix," he said. "After we play those three games, we'll see how we stand. We have one of the better teams in the NFC but we're not on top yet."

Johnson added, "We're playing better right now after six games then we did a year ago, even if we're one game down on our record."

Johnson wasn't overjoyed to get a bye week after the Cowboys have won four in a row.

"We just play 'em the way the NFL schedules 'em," Johnson said. "We'll have to make the best of it."

Johnson will give the Cowboys the weekend off after they spend the week preparing for the Eagles.

"We have to keep working because we're getting better every week," said Johnson, whose club started with two losses with run-

Permian No. 1, Lee unranked

Staff report

DALLAS — Odessa Permian maintained its No. 1 standing in The Associated Press high school football poll released Monday, but the Panthers' game with rival Midland Lee Friday will not be against a ranked team.

Lee, which climbed to as high as fifth place in Class 5A two weeks ago, fell out of the Top 10 in a loss to Odessa High. The Rebels did not return to the Top 10 list after a huge 51-0 victory over Abilene High this past Friday, however.

It looked for a time like Lee and Permian would meet in a key ranking showdown earlier this season, but now Lee is just fighting for its playoff life for the second year in a row.

Rankin's Red Devils, once the top Class A team in the state, fell out of the Top 10 for the first time this year after consecutive losses to Eldorado and Wink.

Most of the poll remained intact following a weekend with only two losses by ranked teams and one tie. El Campo joined the Class 4A list at No. 10 and Iola has the same spot in 1A.

Controversy still reigns despite Oilers' victory

■ A newborn son, a screaming wide receiver and a quarterback feud keep sniping alive in Houston.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers finally won a game, but they can't escape controversy.

Starting tackle David Williams skipped Sunday's 28-14 victory over New England to be with his wife and newborn son. Haywood Jeffires screamed at a coach, and the Warren Moon-Cody Carlson quarterback feud is warming up.

Beating the Patriots snapped a three-game losing streak but didn't stop the flow of disrupting incidents that has dogged the Oilers (2-4) since the start of training camp.

Williams told line coach Bob Young Saturday morning that he was remaining in Houston to be with his wife Debi, who was in labor. Scot Cooper Williams was born at 6:25 p.m. Saturday.

Williams said he decided to stay with his wife, who had a miscarriage last year, and his son, rather than try to take a later flight to Boston for Sunday's noon kickoff.

"We lost one last year, I didn't want anything to happen," Williams said. "Whatever they do, it was money well spent. I had to do what I had to do and I'm sure the Oilers will do what they have to do."

Oilers spokesman Chip Namias said the Oilers gave Williams permission to

DYKSTRA: Having fun in Pete Rose fashion

first base to top off the year — Dykstra had more time than he wanted to think about it all.

He mellowed, matured, the wild look in his eyes softening into a more thoughtful gaze. He still chewed tobacco and smoked cigarettes and took chances in the field, but he didn't pop so many beers and he worked out more in the gym to turn his body into a chunk of granite.

"Since the accident," Phillies general manager Lee Thomas said about Dykstra as the World Series began, "I feel that he is alerted to what could happen to him. Lenny has more thoughts about the value of life. He's a touch more cautious in certain areas. Y'know, Lenny's a pretty smart guy. Don't ever underestimate him."

Manager Jim Fregosi has watched Dykstra mature in the last few years.

"It's very evident in all aspects," said Fregosi, impressed with Dykstra's leadership in the clubhouse and his achievement of scoring 143 runs this year, tops in the NL since 1932.

Nick Leyva, former Phillies manager and now third-base coach for Toronto, lives a few minutes from Dykstra and plays golf with him during the offseason.

"I think the accident woke him up," Leyva said, "as far as like saying, 'Hey, I better go out there and play because this might be my last day.' That might happen to anybody in an accident like that."

Dykstra practically breathes baseball, working endlessly on his game, thinking about what he wants to do in every situation. If he's not on the field, he's watching videotapes of pitchers and himself.

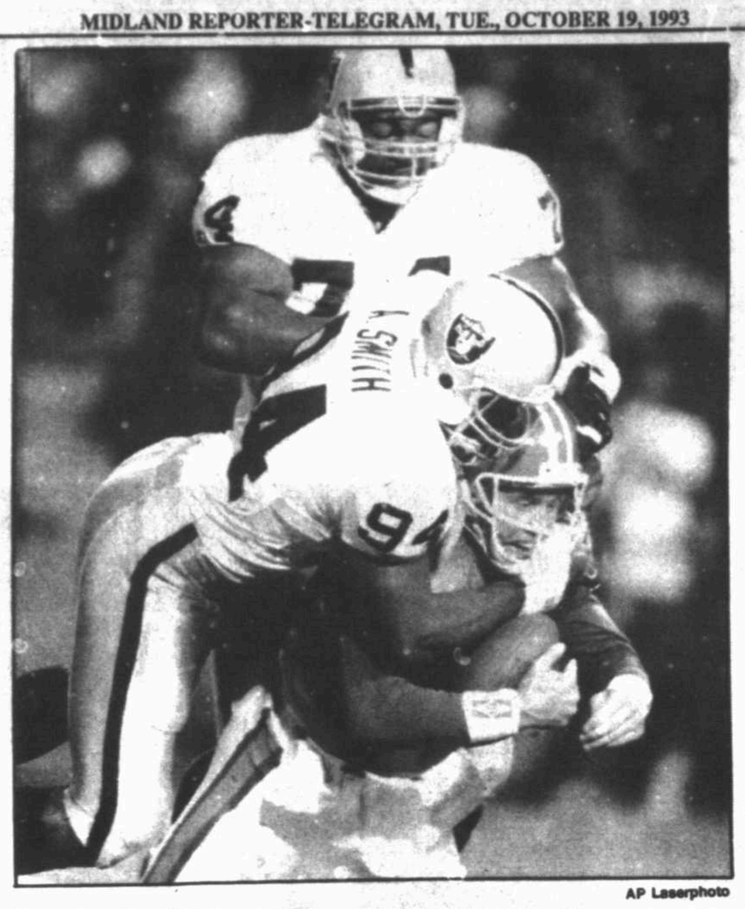

"He's probably one of the toughest outs in baseball," Leyva said. "He's got great plate coverage. He's a very intelligent hitter, and I think that's one of the key things that helps him there."

Dykstra brings to the park more than knowledge and talent. He brings an infectious enthusiasm that carries over to his teammates — the way Pete Rose once did.

"One thing about Dykstra," Thomas said, "he and Pete Rose are the only guys who can put aside their off-field problems and go out and play as if there never was a problem."

Rose and Dykstra shared something else — gambling investigations by the commissioner's office. Rose drew a ban from baseball for his alleged bets on the game while managing Cincinnati. Dykstra got a one-year probation for his alleged participation in high-stakes poker games. They were hardly comparable offenses and punishments, but the gambling link made comparisons even more inevitable.

"There are a lot of similarities between Lenny and Pete," Leyva said, "because they're top guys who are always giving you their best. They're always sliding headfirst into bases. They're always diving after balls defensively. They always play the game hard. I think they have fun playing the game. There's a lot to be said for that."

Los Angeles Raiders' Anthony Smith (94) rides Denver quarterback John Elway to the ground during Monday night action.

Jaeger kicks Broncos

DENVER (AP) — Jeff Jaeger's 53-yard field goal with 16 seconds remaining capped a frantic fourth quarter and gave the Los Angeles Raiders a 23-20 victory over the Denver Broncos on Monday night.

It was the second straight last-minute win for the Raiders (4-2), who dominated the game for three quarters, then had to survive two touchdown passes by John Elway in a 59-second span early in the fourth quarter that gave the Broncos a 17-13 lead.

That was typical of the fourth quarter, in which the teams combined for 27 points. Two plays after the second touchdown, Jeff Hostetler combined with James Jett on a 74-yard scoring play that put the Raiders back in front. Jason Elam's 37-yard field goal tied it for Denver.

But Elway couldn't move the Broncos (3-3) again against a pass rush that sacked him seven times.

When the Raiders got the ball back, there was 2:38 remaining and when Hostetler hit Tim Brown, who caught six passes for 116 yards, the Raiders were in field goal range. They couldn't move past the 35, but Jaeger drilled one down the middle for the victory.

It was the 15th game in the last 19 between the two teams that was decided by less than a touchdown.

And for all practical purposes, the game didn't start until the fourth quarter, with the Raiders holding a 13-3 lead and dominating, particularly on defense.

Then the Broncos scored twice in 59 seconds, first on a 27-yard pass from Elway to Arthur Marshall on one of the few plays all night on which he had time to throw, then on a 2-yard pass from Elway to Reggie Johnson. That followed a fumbled snap by Hostetler on the first play after the kickoff was recovered at the 5 by Greg Kragen.

But it was too early to bury the Raiders.

On the second play after the kickoff, Hostetler found Jett in the middle of the Broncos' defense. The former Olympic sprinter ran away from three Broncos to complete a 74-yard play that gave the Raiders a 20-17 lead.

So back came Elway and the Broncos, 66 yards to the Los Angeles 20 that set up Elam's second field goal. That tied it with 5:33 to play in the game.

Aggies, NCAA face quick confrontation

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M received a letter of official inquiry from the NCAA on Monday concerning allegations that at least seven varsity football players were paid by Dallas booster Warren Gilbert for work not performed.

Interim president Dean Gage said the school will respond in time for the NCAA infractions committee to deal with the issue at its next regular meeting Nov. 12-14.

That gives A&M only days to respond. David Berst, the NCAA's assistant executive director for enforcement and eligibility appeals, said A&M's response should be in the NCAA's hands by Friday if it wants it on the November agenda.

Several athletes, including 1992's top rusher, Greg Hill, served suspensions as a result of the allegations. Hill played his first game last weekend after sitting out five games. Another player was suspended for the year, and three other players were suspended for shorter periods.

The official inquiry concerns, in addition to the improper payments to athletes, allegations that Texas A&M from January 1990 to August 1992 "demonstrated a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring" in the administration of the football program.

A&M is accused of failing to monitor the university's employment program for varsity football players and to take appropriate action when it learned of possible violations of NCAA regulations regarding athletes being employed at more than one location during university vacation periods.

A&M refused to renew the scholarships of two other players involved in the work at a Dallas apartment complex owned by Gilbert.

The allegations first surfaced publicly in a story in The Dallas Morning News last December, shortly before Texas A&M's Cotton Bowl game with Notre Dame.

The letter from Berst said the allegations concerning the Aggie football program "appear to be of sufficient substance and reliability" to warrant an official inquiry.

Berst requested the presence at the November meeting of head football coach R.C. Slocum, athletic director Wally Groff, recruiting director Tim Cassidy, vice president for finance and administration Robert Smith and director of intercollegiate athletic compliance Tedi Zalesky.

A&M "should have placed more emphasis on the control and monitoring of student-athlete employment" by boosters, the official inquiry said, in light of sanctions the NCAA announced against the school in 1988 concerning payments to athletes for work not performed.

SERIES: Jays' hurlers must step to the plate

(From 1C)

Since then, shoulder and arm problems have limited his throwing.

Molitor, for the first time in a week, fielded grounders at third base and threw to first. He bounced several throws, and said it was by design. He also spent a little time taking ground balls at first.

"I don't think my shoulder is a big problem in getting the throws there," Molitor said. "I know I can get it there. You can use the turf to help you."

Molitor, like Olerud and Sprague, said Gaston had not told him what he intended to do.

"Maybe he doesn't want us to know. Maybe he doesn't want to give us too much to think about," Molitor said. "He guards against hurting players' prides, feelings, egos, whatever. I think he's overreacting. I know Eddie, John or myself will handle it professionally."

"I do think with Jackson pitching tomorrow, I'd like to think there's a better than 50-50 chance that I'll be in there somewhere of the other," he said. "I'll have to wait until tomorrow to find out."

Molitor batted .332 with 22 home runs and 111 RBIs, and stole 22 bases. He hit .363 against lefties. Olerud hit .291 against lefthanders.

Molitor is 3-for-7 in the series, Olerud is 2-for-6 with a home run and Sprague is 1-for-8.

"Whatever happens, I'll deal with it," said Sprague, the AL's third-best fielding third baseman this season. "Whoever has to take a seat, it won't be any problem. We've discussed it among ourselves."

While many waited for Gaston's decision, Blue Jays general manager Pat Gillick said it was "absolutely ridiculous" to not use the DH in the NL park during the World Series.

"Someone is going to get hurt," he said.

The DH was used in the series in alternating years from 1976 to 1985. The rule was changed in 1986 to allow it each year in the AL park.

Winfield, Dave Parker, Chili Davis and Don Baylor are among the recent designated hitters who have had to either play a position or sit on the bench in the series.

Ricky Jordan of the Phillies got to play twice in Toronto as the DH. He went 2-for-9.

"I'm having fun with it," he said.

Pat Hentgen, who will pitch Game 3 for the Blue Jays, is trying to have fun with the idea of hitting, too. He said he's batted only three times since high school, striking out twice and grounding out once in spring training games.

"It is a little scary," he said. "You haven't seen live pitching. Hopefully, I can bunt a man over. If there are two outs and I can make contact, I'll be happy."

At least Hentgen will have his own bats, specially ordered with his name on them.

"I asked the Louisville guy, 'What's the lightest bat you've got?'" he said. "I think it's 31 ounces."

Jackson isn't much of a hitter, either, batting just .077 this year. Even so, he should do a little better than Hentgen.

"I'm sure he's going to come right at me," Hentgen said. "If he gets two strikes on me, which he probably will, here comes the curveball and I'll probably need a tennis racket to hit it."

Savage's 69 heads torrid Chaparral effort

Staff report

PFLUEGERVILLE, Tex. — Midland College's Shawn Savage is on a golf low, and that's good news for the Chaparrals.

Savage, a second team junior college All-America pick last spring, shot a three-under par 69 Monday to lead the Chaps' charge into first place in the Central Texas Intercollegiate Invitational here at the Blackhawk golf course.

It was the first time this season that Savage has crashed the 70-barrier and the three-under score is also his best of the season.

In addition, Andrews native Chad Campbell fired a one-under 71 as the Chaps posted a team score of 287, which is also one-under as a team. The Chaps lead Odessa College by eight strokes with the final 18 holes being played today.

MC's Lance McCullough had an even-par 72 and was followed by a 75 from Monahans freshman Jason Garduno and an 80 from Luke Mongrain.

Weatherford College is one stroke behind Odessa College at 296 and is followed by McLennan, 301; Western Texas, 305; University of Texas JV, 309; and Baylor JV, 311.

DALLAS: Eagles next

(From 1C)

ning back Emmitt Smith missing from the lineup in a contract dispute.

Troy Aikman and Michael Irvin blistered the 49ers Sunday in what Irvin called "pitch 'n catch."

Irvin caught 12 passes for 168 yards and one touchdown in his best day as a Cowboy.

"Some guys at the point of the catch shrink up. Their strike zone gets a little smaller," said Aikman. "Michael's gets bigger at the point of the catch. He's just phenomenal."

The Cowboys beat the 49ers 30-20 in their NFC title game, but the rematch was a rerun as Dallas dominated in the second half again. The Cowboys increased their record to 4-1, a game behind the New York Giants in the NFC East.

"The 49ers were the team of the 1980s but we took it away from them in January and we want to keep it," said Dallas owner Jerry Jones. "We had a fire in the stadium on Wednesday but it wasn't anything like the fire we had on the field Sunday."

Irvin said: "I think we're the best team in the NFL. We beat the 49ers in January and we beat them in October. That makes us the best."

But Johnson disagrees.

"It's too early in the year to say we're the best," Johnson said. "It's a long season and injuries come into play. I did say I thought we would win our division and I still believe that."

Dallas plays at Philadelphia at 3 p.m. in two weeks. The Eagles are 4-2.

OILERS: Moon shines

(From 1C)

miss team practice and meetings on Saturday to be with his family. He then was given permission to miss the team charter to Boston.

Namias said the Oilers were sensitive to the Williams' situation but that they expected Williams to take a later flight as soon as he felt comfortable that all was well with his wife and child.

Williams faces the loss of his weekly check of $125,000 plus a possible fine and suspension for missing the game.

Williams' absence forced Young to make further adjustments in his already patched-up line. Kevin Donnalley, who has started at left tackle and left guard this season, moved to Williams' right tackle spot.

Rookie Brad Hopkins, the team's No. 1 draft pick, made his first start at left tackle, and guard Mike Munchak, plagued by a knee injury all season, donned a new brace. The offensive line played its best game of the year.

But Young was not soothed.

"Shoot, I had a baby when I was playing," Young said. "Ninety percent of the guys have babies when they are playing, but you never miss games. My wife told me she was having a baby and I said, 'Honey, I've got to go play a football game.' David just blanked out."

Offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride confronted Jeffires as he left the field in the second quarter Sunday for failing to block on a play. Jeffires screamed back and Gilbride removed him from game for the rest of the half.

Jeffires said the two men shook hands at the half, but on Monday he was talking as though he could become trade fodder after his streak of catching a pass in 54 games was snapped against the Patriots.

"If it's the best for the team that it happen, then let it be," Jeffires said. "I'd love to finish my career here but I hate to stand by and let myself just wash away when I could do so much more."

Moon was demoted last week after the slowest start of his 10-year Oiler career. But Carlson suffered a groin injury in the second quarter and watched as Moon returned to the game and saved the day.

Although Gilbride says Carlson did nothing to lose his starting job, coach Jack Pardee says it's probably a moot point since Carlson may not be ready to play in Sunday's game against Cincinnati.

"I'm concerned about Cody being ready to play so I'm pretty sure he (Moon) will be the starter," Pardee said. "Warren responded the way we thought he would."

POLL: Few changes

ory is everywhere.

There's the Mack-like black socks some players wear. And the black circle with "Dion" in the center plastered on the back of every helmet. Mack's No. 89 also is emblazoned in the middle of a football on the coaches' shirts.

Sweeny's players and coaches have dedicated this season to their friend who died in a June car accident. They have done him proud.

The Bulldogs are ranked No. 2 in the poll, mired behind Class 3A juggernaut Southlake Carroll.

Sweeny (7-0), which began the season ranked third, has been at No. 2 since winning its fourth game. The Bulldogs have solidified their ranking with victories of 45-13 over Anahuac, 79-0 over Palacios and 33-6 over Edna.

It's hard to imagine how much better the Bulldogs would be with Mack, whom coach Tommy Zajicek called "our Division I football prospect," but it's obvious they're serious about living up to the standards he set.

"He was a very intense young man ... the kind the kids looked up to," Zajicek said. "It took us a while to fill that void. We've had to compensate for his loss emotionally and physically."

Mack excelled at outside linebacker and also played tight end. He died June 7 while driving to Oklahoma with his older brother, Abe. The pair were going to work out together for a few weeks to prepare for the season.

Abe Mack has since spoken to the team and "really helped put them at ease," Zajicek said.

The hardest hit players were Mack's fellow seniors, his teammates since seventh grade.

"They don't say it, but they do little things to commemorate him like the way they dress for games," Zajicek said. "They have a T-shirt they made up and bought themselves that says they're dedicating the season to him. They wear it every Thursday before a game."

This weekend's game against Needville is the most pivotal of the season, Zajicek said, adding that the Bulldogs must go at least 2-1 the rest of the way to return to the playoffs.

The Bulldogs lost last season's battle but went 9-4 and reached the regional finals.

Zajicek's goal is just to return to the playoffs and see what happens.

Who knows, they could even get a chance to play Southlake Carroll — a No. 1 vs. No. 2 winner-take-all championship.

"I think that's something in the back of our minds ... and in our townspeoples, but that's quite a ways off. We've got nine more ball games until we can get there."

'Horns begin 'second season' against SMU

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas coach John Mackovic said Monday the Longhorns are beginning a "second season" when they meet Southern Methodist Saturday in the Alamodome in San Antonio.

The Longhorns are off to a 1-3-1 start overall, their worst since 1938. But they are 1-0 in the Southwest Conference, and Mackovic says bowl hopes are very much alive.

"Everything we set out to achieve is still ahead of us," Mackovic said Monday. "This is the first game of a six-game schedule and we have to win five games."

The NCAA requires that a team win six games against Division I opponents to qualify for a bowl. Texas, which defeated Rice, faces SMU, Texas Tech, Houston, TCU, Baylor and Texas A&M over the next six weeks.

"Right now, we are just thinking about SMU," Mackovic said.

The second-year Texas coach praised the Mustangs (1-3-2, 1-1-1) who have battled back from the NCAA's "death penalty" four years ago. This season, the Ponies have held the lead going into the fourth quarter of four games.

"They have taken an offense (the run-and-shoot) and made it work for them," Mackovic said. "They attack the football and hang in there and scramble all over the field. That's a tribute to their coach that they never give up."

Mackovic said he voted for SMU coach Tom Rossley as the Southwest Conference coach of the year last season, when the Mustangs finished 5-6.

"I have a lot of respect for Tom Rossley, the way he has been able to keep the program moving forward," Mackovic said.

SMU threw for 399 yards in a 28-28 tie with Houston last week, prompting Mackovic to say, "You don't throw for 399 yards and miss receivers. That offense is designed to find single coverage and take advantage of it. And it appears that their two quarterbacks are pretty well trained."

The Mustang signal callers, Ramon Flanigan and Mark Eldred, drew equal praise from Mackovic.

"Mark and Ramon have shown they can make that offense work. We will have to play a great game defensively."

While SMU is known for its run-and-shoot, which utilizes four wide receivers zigzagging all over the field, it's the Mustangs running game Mackovic is worried about.

"They run the ball very well for a run-and-shoot team, and we have had some trouble stopping the run," Mackovic said. "If I were Tom Rossley, I would make sure the running game is ready to go."

Texas, which was idle last week after being run over by Oklahoma (38-17), is giving up 248 yards per game on the ground after yielding only 145 yards a game rushing last season.

Mackovic said the Longhorns revamped their offense last year to go away from SMU defensive end Chad Patton in a 35-14 Texas victory.

But he said the Longhorns this year have to worry about Patton as well as Adam Voyles, who plays the other defensive end position.

"Voyles is playing just as well," Mackovic said. "Voyles has five sacks, and Patton has four sacks."

SMU, which is the home team and an early 11-point underdog, opted to move the game to San Antonio. The game, which is scheduled to kick off at noon, will be the first collegiate game played in the new Alamodome.

Steel 'D' arrives

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The towel-waving crowd gave them numerous standing ovations and cheered "d-e-e-e-fense, d-e-e-e-fense." The opposing coach said it's the best defense he's seen. Some of the opposing players said they'd rather not see them again.

Welcome to Pittsburgh Steelers defense, 1993. Kind of reminiscent of Pittsburgh Steelers defense, circa 1976, isn't it?

There's still a Greene, only it's Kevin, not Mean Joe. There's still a dominating linebacker, but it's Greg Lloyd instead of Jack Ham. And the secondary still is anchored by the NFL's premier cornerback, only it's Rod Woodson playing Mel Blount's old position.

"I remember watching those great Steeler teams on TV when I was growing up," New Orleans Saints running back Derek Brown said. "These guys are good, too. And we had to play against them."

The Saints, who were the NFL's lone remaining unbeaten team, didn't play with — or stay with — the Steelers for long Sunday.

Woodson returned an interception 63 yards for a touchdown with just 1:39 gone, then picked off another Wade Wilson pass less than five minutes later to set up another score.

That quickly pushed it to 14-0, and it became a 37-point lead before coach Bill Cowher yanked his first-team defense and Saints backup quarterback Mike Buck threw two touchdown passes in the fourth quarter to make it 37-14.

The Saints couldn't run — they managed 49 yards, 110 below their average — or pass. Brown, averaging 81 yards a game, got only 7 on 10 carries. Wilson missed his first eight passes and 10 of his first 11, and finished a brutal 6 of 23 for 85 yards.

"I don't know what else was left for us to try," Wilson said.

The Steelers' defense had nearly as many sacks (five) as Wilson did completions. The Saints didn't get a first down until the final play of the first half and had only two first downs through three quarters.

"We got our butts kicked big time," Saints coach Jim Mora said. "They may be the best defense we'll see all year."

And what has caught the attention of NFL players and coaches is this wasn't a one-game anomaly.

The Steelers might have held a third straight opponent without an offensive touchdown if Cowher hadn't called off his defense. Their league-leading rush defense hasn't allowed an opponent to run for 100 yards yet, and throwing against them is a big gamble, too.

New Golden State Warrior Chris Webber and Warriors' coach Don Nelson field questions after the signing of Webber's $74.4 million, 15-year contract on Monday.

Webber inks for $74.4 million

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Chris Webber, intent on proving he's worth every dollar, signed a 15-year, $74.4 million contract Monday with the Golden State Warriors.

"I know a lot of guys who play basketball and are overpaid and really can't play," said Webber, the NBA's No. 1 draft choice. "I'd rather have a reputation of earning what I get. Right now, I have to prove that I deserve it. I have to prove it to the team, to the owners, to the coaches and most importantly to myself."

Webber, who as a 6-foot-10 power forward twice led Michigan to the NCAA title game, signed a copy of his contract — the most ever offered a rookie — during a news conference at the Oakland Coliseum Arena.

"That's the price in the marketplace," Warriors president Dan Finnane said. "And I hope I can see the day when everybody says Chris is ridiculously underpaid."

No. 2 draft pick Shawn Bradley, a 7-foot-6 center out of Brigham Young, signed for $44.2 million with Philadelphia over eight years. No. 3 pick Anfernee Hardaway, whose rights were dealt to Orlando by the Warriors to obtain Webber, will receive $45.2 million over 13 years from the Magic along with a $20 million line of credit.

Finnane spent three days a week in Detroit for the past five weeks negotiating the deal with Webber's agent, Bill Strickland, and his adviser, Fallasha Erwin.

The contract has an average annual worth of $4.96 million, although Webber is to receive $1.6 million in the first year. That was done so Webber could fit into the salary-cap slot left open by Tyrone Hill's trade to Cleveland in July.

Under NBA rules, Webber's salary can be increased 30 percent a year, allowing his pay to increase in annual increments of $480,000 for the next 14 years to a maximum of $8.32 million in its final year.

The contract also includes a termination clause after one year under which Webber could become a restricted free agent next season. The two sides also could renegotiate the pact, making it a shorter term and increasing the annual salary.

Webber, the first sophomore to be selected with the top overall pick since Magic Johnson in 1979, is recovering from an appendectomy oftwo weeks ago and won't join the Warriors for training camp until Wednesday.

"As far as my wind, it's taken away a little bit but I'll get that back in couple of days," he said. "I don't think it has set me back that far.'

Webber will take part in light workouts for a few days and then be eased into team practices starting Sunday.

"He's coming to a team that really needs him desperately," said Warriors coach Don Nelson, who is counting on Webber to become the dominating inside presence.

Jordan keeps even with Energizer bunny

CHICAGO (AP) — OK, so he's retired. But like that Energizer bunny, Michael Jordan's popularity keeps going and going and going.

Jordan's retirement from basketball has set into motion a stampede of enterprises aimed at cashing in on the superstar cashing out. And everything from commemorative edition cars to smelly sneakers is fair game.

After Jordan said goodbye, Chicago-area and northwest Indiana Chevrolet dealers quickly announced, allegedly for the last time, that commemorative editions of the Blazer bearing his name soon would be on sale.

And, as the Chicago Bulls suffered the agony of defeat Friday, without Jordan in their first preseason game, a California-based company savored the irony of da feet. Green for Jeans buys used Air Jordan sneakers from Americans for $15 and sells them to Japanese youths for $50 to $75.

"This trend in Japan has been going on for three months," said Max Shapiro, vice president of Green for Jeans.

"Young people want to wear used Air Jordans," Shapiro said. "Anybody can walk into a store and buy new ones" for a hefty $140 a pair in Japan.

Buying old Air Jordans can still mean paying through the nose.

"They really do smell," Shapiro admits. "If they're really dirty, we just return them at our expense."

Jordan's agent, David Falk, last week summed up the craze with an understatement: "I think Michael's going to have a continuing impact."

Other ideas being pitched include 26 half-hour television episodes called "Showtime at Michael Jordan's Restaurant," where the viewer can get an "inside look" at the superstar as well as "a fun, fast-paced and fresh look at the magic, memorabilia and mystique inside the restaurant."

For those who've seen enough mystique and just want a T-shirt, prepare to shell out a bit more.

A Jordan-signed jersey that went for $495 in pre-retirement days sold for $895 post-retirement. Jordan cards, even unsigned, now sell as much as 50 percent higher, dealers say.

Morgan Guaranty lowers prime rate

■ Bank says it acted after considering loan demand, its cheap cost of funds, outlook for continued low inflation.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — One of the nation's largest banks lowered its prime lending rate a half-percentage point to 5.5 percent Monday, bringing the widely watched rate to its lowest level in more than two decades.

Other major U.S. banks didn't immediately follow Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.'s lead, but analysts expected they would. However, many analysts said they doubted the rate cut would nudge debt-weary consumers and businesses to take out more loans, and in turn spur the economy.

The prime rate is used to calculate the interest on loans to small- and medium-sized businesses. It also affects some consumer loans, especially home-equity loans and credit cards.

"People have been interested in paying down debt" rather than increasing it, said Raphael Soifer, a banking analyst at Brown Brothers, Harriman & Co.

The rate cut could actually hurt some consumers, if it prompts banks to lower the interest paid on deposits. Bob Heady, publisher of the Bank Rate Monitor newsletter, said he expected rates on short-term deposits to drop by .15 to .20 percentage points in coming weeks.

While other interest rates have fallen dramatically, banks had been slow to drop the prime. They reasoned that due to the slow economy, they wouldn't be able to make enough new loans to compensate for their decreased profit on each loan.

In addition, banks worried until recently that inflation could pick up and prompt the Federal Reserve to raise short-term interest rates.

Morgan Guaranty said in a statement Monday that it acted after considering loan demand, the banks' cheap cost of funds and the outlook for continued low inflation.

Harris Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago, a medium-sized regional institution, and the Bank of Montreal's U.S. office copied Morgan's step, but no other big banks took immediate action.

"What it tells you is something extremely important ... and that is business loans and loan demand remain extremely soft," said Hugh Johnson, senior vice president at First Albany Corp., an investment firm in Albany, N.Y.

Ed Yardeni, chief economist at C.J. Lawrence Inc., saw it differently: "Maybe they're kind of embarrassed about the high spread they've been enjoying all this time."

Despite the cut, analysts said business owners remained reluctant to take out loans because of uncertainty about the economic recovery.

Jimmy Lewis, president of Cross Equipment Co. Inc. in Albany, Ga., who employs 40 people making agricultural equipment, said he and others are scared to take on further debt because other issues are so ominous.

"The truth of the matter is, you've got two things staring you in the face that scare you to death," Lewis said. "One is health care, the other is workers compensation" insurance.

Prices fall

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices fell Monday, led downward by unleaded gasoline, as the market reacted to continued oversupply concerns and worries that prices have been bid too high.

The energy market has been feeling the renewed weight of Iraq's possible resumption of oil exports. Prices fell Friday after the United Nations reported substantial progress with Iraq lifting a ban on oil sales and other economic sanctions.

The U.N. report brought to the surface concerns that petroleum prices were driven too high following the agreement by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to hold production steady between October and March.

November delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled at $18.13 per barrel, down 14 cents, at the Nymex Monday.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.50 a barrel.

Although there was no specific news to affect trading Monday, the market has been thrown into a mood of lower prices since the report and indications of heavy exports next month from the North Sea of relatively cheap Brent Blend crude.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $2.131 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 4.1 cents.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK — The dollar advanced against most major currencies Monday as investors expected Germany and other countries to lower their interest rates.

Gold prices also rose. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $368.30 a troy ounce, up $3.40 from Friday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 107.40 yen, up from 107.15 yen Friday.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — Most major stock market indicators fell Monday, depressed by rising interest rates and selling in bank issues, but the Dow Jones industrial average ended higher, propelled by economy sensitive stocks.

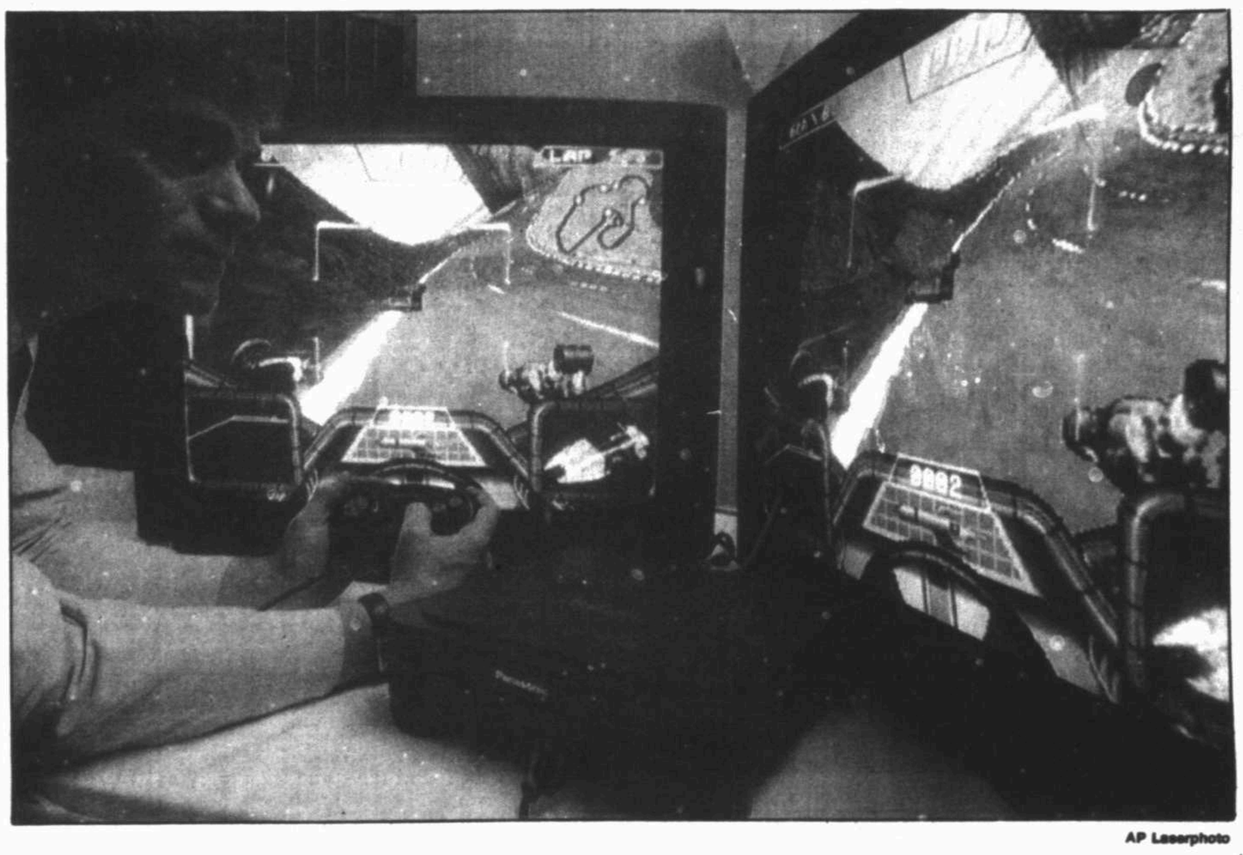

The Dow rose 12.58 points to 3,642.31, about ten points shy of its all-time high.

Declining issues narrowly outnumbered advances on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to a hefty 329.42 million shares, but down from 358.84 million in the previous session.

Arbitron drops from television ratings market

NEW YORK (NYT) — With yet another pebble in its pouch proving a dud, Arbitron Co. left the battlefield of television ratings Monday, unable to trip up the industry Goliath, A.C. Nielsen Co.

Arbitron said that by the end of the year it would lay off 700 employees nationwide — 58 percent of its staff of 1,200 — and discontinue its ratings of syndicated programs and cable television in local markets.

More than 400 of those layoffs will be in Laurel, Md., where the company's television ratings operations are based.

Arbitron has dominated the radio ratings business since the 1970s, but its various attempts to breach the Nielsen stronghold have made little progress.

Many broadcast executives and some advertisers are frequently critical of the accuracy of Nielsen ratings, particularly when their own programs lag, but few have been willing to support a competing service.

So the ratings compiled by Nielsen, a division of Dun & Bradstreet Corp., remain the basis of more than $15 billion in advertising decisions a year.

"Much to CBS' frustration, the industry has not supported any innovation in this field," said David F. Poltrack, CBS' senior vice president of planning and research. "I can't believe there's anybody out there foolhardy enough to venture into this area."

Paul Schulman, president of media buying company that bears his name, commented: "This is unfortunate for the industry, because we'll have only one measure. And without competition, the cost may well escalate. Everybody wants Arbitron to challenge Nielsen, but nobody wants to pay for it."

Announcing the changes, Lawrence Perlman, chairman and chief executive of Ceridian Corp., which owns Arbitron, said: "Arbitron has not been achieving acceptable financial results from the service and had no near-term prospects for getting it back on a profitable track. Competition in the local television and cable ratings market has been intense."

Stephen B. Morris, the president of Arbitron, said in a telephone interview: "We did well in TV in the 80s. But as the business got squeezed, they went down the path of one service only."

Ex-Apple chief Sculley is Spectrum's new CEO

(NYT) — Speculation over John Sculley's future ended abruptly on Monday as the former head of Apple Computer was named chairman and chief executive of a small company outside New York City that hopes to play a key role in wireless communications.

The announcement that Sculley is joining Spectrum Information Technologies Inc., of Manhasset, came just three days after he formally dissolved his 10-year association with Apple. Sculley resigned as chairman of the giant computer company on Friday, after having given up the CEO position in June.

During his 10 years in Cupertino, Sculley built Apple into the world's No. 2 personal computer company, transforming the Macintosh personal computer from a novelty into a marketing triumph. Spectrum hopes to call upon that talent.

"We feel that John Sculley is the perfect person to lead Spectrum," said Peter Caserta, who will step aside as CEO to make way for Sculley. "John's management record and background in the computer industry are unsurpassed, and he will open opportunities for Spectrum to expand its products and market penetration."

Caserta will remain at Spectrum as vice chairman and president.

In a statement, Sculley called Spectrum "a gem and well positioned with unique technologies. I am very excited and look forward to Peter and I working together as a team to build Spectrum into a major global leader in the future."

Sculley told the CNBC television network that "the draw for Spectrum to me is to be able to help shape a company much as I did when I went to Apple."

During the interview, Sculley tacitly acknowledged that he will make more in salary and stock options at Spectrum than he did at Apple, where his salary was $1.52 million.

Spectrum claims to have developed the first cellular modem, saying its products will allow laptop computers total mobility, since they could link into cellular telephone networks no matter where they are.

Federal regulations support credit unions

By Bill Doyle

Q: In a recent column you explained that a provision of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989, better known as the S&L bailout bill, put the full faith and credit of the U.S. government behind Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage of bank and savings and loan association deposits.

Does it also protect deposits at credit unions?

Doyle

A: That particular piece of federal legislation does not. But not to worry. The Competitive Equality Banking Act of 1987 does, by putting the full faith and credit of our federal government behind the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund (NCUSIF), which is an arm of the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA).

All federally chartered credit unions automatically have that insurance coverage. And the vast majority of state-chartered credit unions also have it by being affiliated with NCUSIF.

If you have any doubts about insurance coverage at a particular credit union, simply ask the people running it. Depositors at some credit unions without that coverage have taken financial beatings.

NCUA's insurance fund is in exceptionally sound shape. It has never had to tap the U.S. Treasury — and taxpayers. Would that the same could be said for the FDIC and the defunct Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

Q: I have a $50,000 certificate of deposit at a local bank. My wife has a $50,000 CD at the same bank. I have a $30,000 CD at a larger bank, into which the local bank will soon be merged. My wife has a $25,000 CD at that larger bank.

After the merger, we will have a total of $155,000 in the merged bank. Will all of that money have FDIC coverage?

A: It will, because of the way the CDs are registered. You will have $100,000 FDIC coverage at the merged bank. So will your wife. That will provide $200,000 total insurance coverage. Because you will have $80,000 of CDs at the merged bank and your wife will have $75,000 of CDs there, your family will have complete coverage.

If the CDs were in both your names, the story would be different. In that case, the insurance on your joint accounts would be only $100,000, and $55,000 of your money would not be insured.

Q: Always on the lookout for a good deal, I felt I spotted one at a bank offering much higher interest on CDs than anywhere else in town. And I do mean "much higher" — almost double what my present bank is paying.

When I mentioned this at my bank, an officer there told me to "be careful." He said the high-interest bank is in bad financial shape and probably will be forced into a "shotgun wedding." He said, when that happens, the CD interest rate could be drastically reduced.

Is there any truth to what he says? Or is he just trying to keep my money in his bank?

A: Even though that banker undoubtedly would prefer your money to stay put, you better believe him.

When regulatory authorities arrange for a failing bank or S&L to be merged into another institution, the successor bank or S&L is allowed to slash the interest rates it pays on CDs and other deposits acquired from the busted bank or S&L.

Depositors affected by such a move are given two weeks in which to get their money back, without any early withdrawal penalty.

Q: When I closed out a CD before its maturity date, my bank hit me with an early-withdrawal penalty equal to six months' interest. A golfing buddy tells me his bank has no such penalty. How can my bank get away with this?

A: Because banks and S&Ls are allowed to charge any early-withdrawal penalty they please — on none at all — on CDs, as long as the penalties are spelled out when the CD is opened or renewed.

Jays make bottom-line work

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Bottom-line baseball forced a financial face lift for the Toronto Blue Jays after last season's World Series victory, and the chances are the same thing will happen this winter.

General manager Pat Gillick, once derided as "Stand Pat" for his conservative player moves, acted decisively to reconstruct the Jays. The team facing Philadelphia in this World Series has 12 new players.

Gillick is quick to point out that there was no grand design for his moves after the Blue Jays beat the Atlanta Braves last October, just a response to the constraints of free agency.

When the Jays won the World Series a year ago, they had a $49.4 million payroll and a fistful of free agents. Gillick considered what it would take to sign each of them and made some tough decisions.

Among those subtracted from the payroll through free agency were Dave Winfield, Jimmy Key, Tom Henke and David Cone. When Gillick was finished, the payroll was down to $46.1 million.

Despite that, the Jays are back in the World Series.

Winfield, who had the winning hit in last year's Series, wanted a three-year contract at age 40. Gillick decided against that and offere one year.

"We had every intention of bringing Winfield back," he said. "The decision came down to years."

When Winfield left for a two-year deal in Minnesota, Gillick imported Paul Molitor, 36, as the designated hitter replacement, giving him $13 million for three years. Molitor batted 42 points more than Winfield had and his home run and RBI totals were comparable.

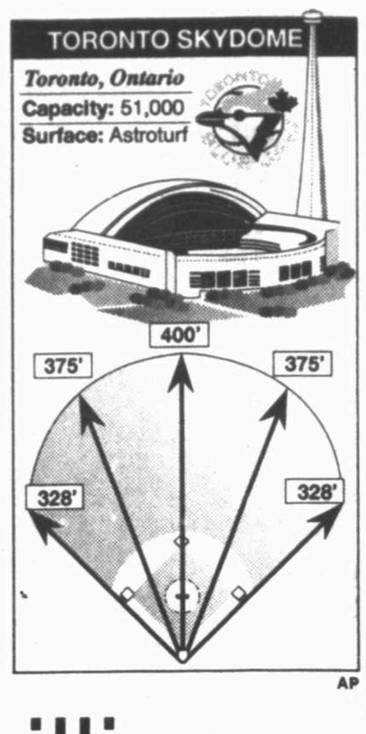

Key wanted a four-year contract and got one from the New York Yankees. The Blue Jays' policy is no more than three years for a pitcher, and Gillick replaced Key by signing Dave Stewart for two years and $8.5 million. Stewart won 12 games during the season and was the playoff MVP.

Henke was allowed to get away to Texas because the Jays decided Duane Ward could step up from setup man to closer. Again, the judgment was on target. Ward saved 45 games.

Cone, rented for the final month of last season, was too expensive at three years and $18 million, especially with Pat Hentgen ready to step up. Again, the decision turned out positively, with Hentgen winning 19 games.

One free agent Gillick refused to let get away was Joe Carter. It cost $19.5 million for three years to keep Carter, but the GM decided he could not afford to allow the centerpiece of his lineup to leave.

"You pick and choose and hope you make the right decisions," he said. "We had to replace the ones who left. We got lucky with a couple of youngsters."

Lee Thomas builds Phillies

By Ralph Bernstein
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Lee Thomas was in a difficult position when he took over as general manager of the Philadelphia Phillies more than five years ago.

The Phillies were a sorry, last-place team with a non-producing farm system and a policy of not spending money on high-price free agents.

"After I first got here I did sometimes wonder why I took the job," Thomas admits now. "I had some better opportunities.

"But it was a challenge to show people what I could do," he explains.

What he has wrought since June of 1988 through shrewd trades and low-price free-agent signings is the team in the 1993 World Series against the Toronto Blue Jays.

"The best move I ever made in baseball was hiring Lee Thomas and leaving him alone," Phillies' president Bill Giles says.

Thomas did the job by gambling on low-budget free agents hardly in demand. It is interesting to note that only four members of the 25-man roster were developed in the farm system.

The first major move Thomas made was the acquisition of John Kruk on June 2, 1989. Thomas, who got Kruk and Randy Ready for outfielder Chris James, remembers the deal.

"Getting John Kruk from San Diego, I knew they wanted Chris James very bad and I think San Diego felt Kruk could never be an every-day player, couldn't hit left-handers and were afraid of his anatomy," Thomas said.

On that same day, Thomas sent reliever Steve Bedrosian to the San Francisco Giants for three players, including left-handed pitcher Terry Mulholland, who became the core of the Phillies' staff.

"San Francisco general manager Al Rosen needed a closer, needed somebody like Bedrosian to win a pennant and he did, but we got what we wanted in Terry Mulholland," Thomas explained.

Several weeks later came the most important deal of the Thomas regime. He acquired Lenny Dykstra from the New York Mets for second baseman Juan Samuel.

"When I first came here the two things that we needed most were pitching and a leadoff hitter and center fielder," Thomas said. "With Lenny, we got both wrapped into one.

"And I think the main reason we got Lenny was because they didn't think he could play every day. And I think there was a time when Lenny tried to jerk everything out of the ballpark.

"We felt that eventually this guy would be a great player for us."

In December, 1989, Thomas got third baseman Dave Hollins from the San Diego system in the major league draft for $25,000. Thomas said that move was prompted by excellent reports on Hollins by Philadelphia scouts. And at the time San Diego didn't have a spot for Hollins.

Then came one of Thomas' biggest "steals," outfielder Wes Chamberlain, in 1990.

"We got him on a mistake (by Pittsburgh) on the waiver wire," Thomas said.

He added four-fifths of his starting rotation — Curt Schilling, Tommy Greene, Ben Rivera and Danny Jackson — for fringe players.

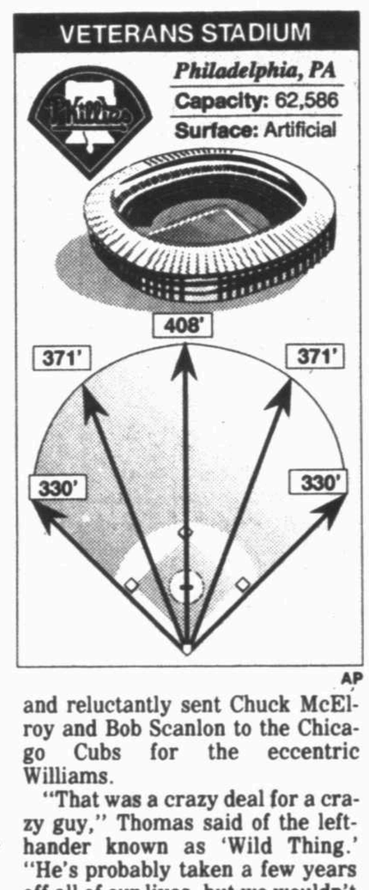

Greene was a throw-in in a 1990 trade with Atlanta that brought a rapidly declining Dale Murphy to Philadelphia.

Schilling kicked around in three organizations before Thomas finally got him from Houston for pitcher Jason Grimsley, on April 2, 1992.

A month later, Rivera, a Double-A player who ran out of options with the pitching-rich Braves, was acquired for a minor leaguer.

One of the few times Thomas gave more players than he acquired in a trade was the one for reliever Mitch Williams, in April 1991. The Phillies needed a closer and reluctantly sent Chuck McElroy and Bob Scanlon to the Chicago Cubs for the eccentric Williams.

"That was a crazy deal for a crazy guy," Thomas said of the left-hander known as 'Wild Thing.' "He's probably taken a few years off all of our lives, but we wouldn't be here without him."

Whoever pulled the plug on Tim McCarver, buy that man a beer. No. Make that a case of beer. No. Make that an evening out with John Kruk. Well. Maybe, let's not go overboard.

After four years and with time running out, CBS has found just about the right mix of replays, analysis, camera angles and commentary for the World Series. Next year, ABC and NBC take over baseball, just when CBS was getting the hang of it.

Even McCarver seems to have discovered that imaginary "chat line" on which he used to trample with verbose glee in years gone by.

A few examples from Game 2 Sunday night:

— On an RBI single by Lenny Dykstra off reliever Mike Timlin in the eighth inning: "Most high sinkers, catchers don't catch." And not another word on the subject. Way to go, Tim.

— On the Philadelphia Phillies middle infielders after they allowed Paul Molitor to steal third uncontested: "Instead of indifferent, they were just careless." That about says it all, Tim, and for once he knew it.

— And on Roberto Alomar getting thrown out stealing third base for the last out of the eighth inning: "And that's a terrible play."

On that last one, McCarver was tempted to belabor a point that is firmly grasped by those baseball fans — at least any of the ones left up at that hour of the night. But he didn't — at least not too much.

And when he was just about to cross the chat line, CBS showed a shut-my-mouth closeup of Alomar being tagged out, the look on his face seeming to say: "What a dummy I am." Or was that, "C'mon, Tim, enough already."

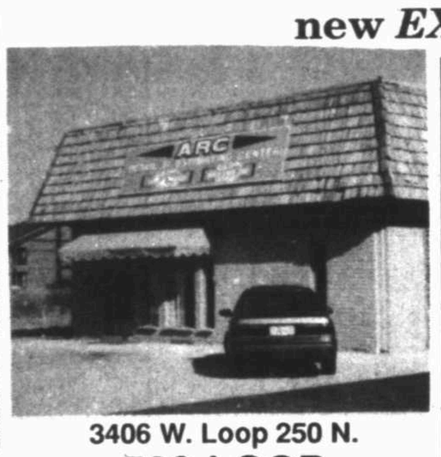

Just a couple of gripes.

First, CBS' cameramen still can't guess which outfielder is going to catch the ball. If the camera's on Joe Carter in right field, you can bet Devon White is going to catch it in center.

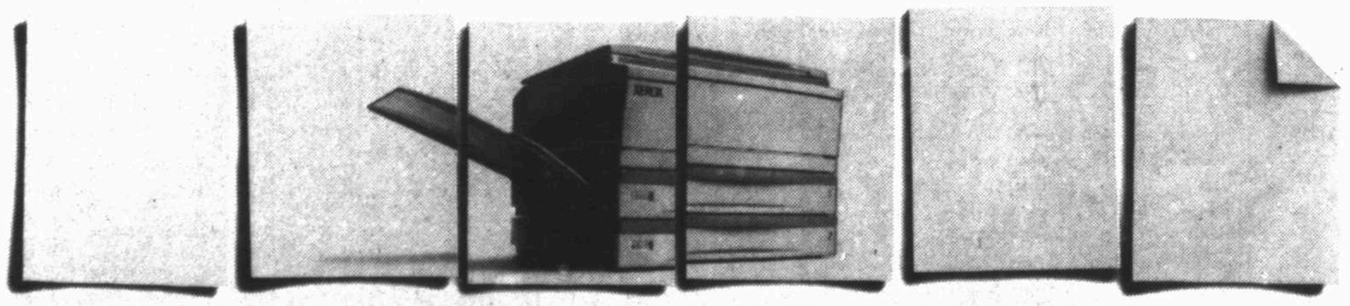

And second, let's not get carried away with these graphics showing misleading postseason records.

Dave Stewart and Whitey Ford tied with 10 postseason pitching victories? So what! All 10 of Ford's were in the World Series. Two of Stewart's were. Yes, kids, that's right. There were no playoffs in baseball until 1969.

Believe it, or not.

Palestinian planners dream, wrestle with future responsibilities

By Neil MacFarquhar
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — Walid Dajani snaps open a glossy brochure displaying condominiums stacked like wedding cakes over a marina crammed with yachts.

The brochure is of Spain. But it's his vision of the Gaza Strip, with its poverty erased, swaddled in new affluence.

"Gaza is going to be the pearl of the whole area," he promises.

Dajani and some 300 other Palestinian technocrats, from offices scattered across east Jerusalem, have labored for two years on an outline for an autonomy government.

They did not anticipate, however, the recent historic accord between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization on the principles of self-rule for Gaza and the West Bank.

Suddenly, the pact transformed their intellectual "what-if" exercise into a deadline for running Palestinian affairs.

Sari Nusseibeh, a Bir Zeit University philosophy professor, organized the technical committees in almost 40 subjects after the peace talks opened in Madrid in 1991.

Critics accuse the technical committees of still dreaming, of being too diffuse, too slow. They may be in for a rude shock when the PLO's administrative juggernaut arrives from its current headquarters in Tunis, ready to issue orders after decades in wandering exile.

PLO leader Yasser Arafat has declared he would like to be in Jericho within six weeks, to start planning for autonomy in the occupied West Bank town and Gaza. Palestinian self-rule is to spread gradually throughout the occupied territories, with their final status determined within five years.

Education, taxation, tourism, health and — toughest of all — security will become the responsibility of Palestinians.

Now the committee's academic position papers have to be translated into work orders for massive projects like roads, schools, sewage, etc. Faxes whir to PLO headquarters in Tunis and back around the clock.

"It is the most historic, difficult, frustrating and ambitious period I have ever experienced," said Hassan Abu Libda, deputy director of the committees.

Dajani admitted that building hotels before the refugees have decent housing was unlikely. He doesn't want tourists "taking pictures of the camps like they were the jungle."

Israeli security forces and PLO fighters are supposed to set aside decades of warfare and cooperate on everything from traffic infractions to suicide bombers.

Israel's army chief of staff Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak said this week that joint patrols were possible.

Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah faction also said it reached agreement with the Muslim fundamentalist Hamas in Gaza to avoid violence over their opposing stands on the peace pact.

Tourists, settlers eye Galapagos Islands

By James Brooke
N.Y. Times News Service

PUERTO AYORA, Ecuador — An afternoon stroll down Charles Darwin Avenue captures the rapid evolution of Homo sapiens in the Galapagos.

Ecuadorean rap music blares from the Blowout Bar; an Otavalo Indian peddles Andean wool ponchos outside a new pizzeria, and at a souvenir kiosk tourists pick through T-shirts, including one praising an endemic bird species: "I Love Boobies."

"This town is filling up with bureaucracy and burglars," grumbled Jack Nelson, a California native who owns the Hotel Galapagos. "When I first came here in the 1960s, it was just a wooden schoolhouse on a street of sand."

The human population of the Galapagos has grown from fewer than 3,000 in the early 1960s to about 14,000 today. Two decades ago this isolated archipelago 600 miles west of South America's mainland was declared a national province of Ecuador, a move that threw open doors to unrestricted immigration from the continent.

Providing economic sustenance to colonization, tourism started with a handful of annual visitors in the 1960s, swept past a government target of 25,000 visitors in 1982, and, in 1990, reached the current plateau of 40,000.

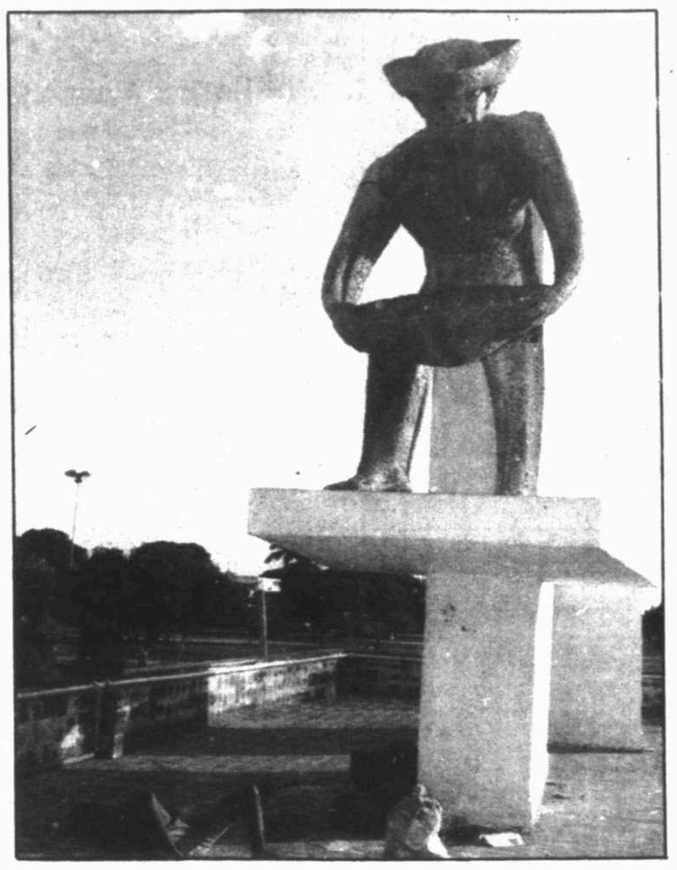

Boosters of more growth — and they are increasingly hard to find — would argue that there is room for more people here. After all, Hawaii, another Pacific Ocean archipelago, has one million people living in an area twice the size of the Galapagos.

"Before, we used to get two hours of water a day — now we get half an hour of water every two days," Jorge Sotomayor, a resident of a neighboring island, San Cristobal, said of water faucets that stand dry in his house.

But more than physical limits to growth protect this arid chain of 19 volcanic islands. The Galapagos National Park blocks human settlement from 97 percent of a wilderness archipelago once known as the Enchanted Isles.

The Galapagos, a laboratory for studying biological evolution, has occupied a special place in the hearts of scientists since 1835, when Darwin arrived here aboard the Beagle. After years of pondering what he observed on the islands, the naturalist wrote "Origin of Species."

In 1535, when an expedition led by Tomas de Berlanga, bishop of Panama, made the first known human visit here, he found a strange world where birds and animals had evolved completely without fear of man. Today, 90 percent of the reptiles, 50 percent of the land birds and 45 percent of the higher plants can be found only on these islands.

Gold didn't pan out

Out-of-work miners sprawl drunk in Boa Vista, Brazil recently under a monument of a man panning for gold. This boomtown on the edge of one of the world's richest gold fields has gone bust, its fortunes destroyed when the government closed the area to preserve the rain forest and the primitive Yanomami Indians.

Muslims enter besieged Sarajevo through tunnel

By Chuck Sudetic
N.Y. Times News Service

BUTMIR, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Day and night for months, soldiers and civilians lugging rucksacks, infantry weapons, stretchers and tattered luggage have gone subterranean to break the Serbian siege of Sarajevo, streaming like worker ants through the Bosnian capital's semi-secret lifeline, a tunnel beneath its airport.

"This is the ceremonial entranceway into our capital," a Muslim journalist said as he began his journey home to the war-ravaged city of Mostar after a 10-day stay in Sarajevo. "It's fantastic."

The half-mile-long tunnel and neatly maintained trenches at each end stretch from a Muslim-held neighborhood in the western Sarajevo suburb of Dobrinja here to Butmir, another Muslim-held suburb outside the Serbian siege line.

The underground passage provides the only secure, unhindered route between the Bosnian capital and the country's government-controlled heartland for political leaders, soldiers, and workers involved in keeping the city supplied with war materiel.

Well-connected civilian travelers also use the tunnel, but at least in part because of its limited capacity and the high traffic volume, common folk who want to enter or leave the city must still risk a nighttime dash across the U.N.-controlled airport grounds, a barbed-wire-snarled no man's land that is wide open to Serbian sniper fire. Dozens of people have lost their lives making the run across the airport.

Although the tunnel may be safer, it is no lark. The passageway is so narrow that guards on either end alternately block incoming traffic, keeping the traffic one way.

The 20-minute journey draws a sweat from even the fittest young Bosnian army recruits, because in some sections it must be negotiated in a crouching position.

This reporter, the first foreign journalist to be given official permission to transit the tunnel, arrived at the Dobrinja entrance early in the morning recently, as pink tracer fire streaked out of Bosnian Serb positions to the south, just off the eastern end of the airport's runway, and occasional mortar shells exploded a few hundred yards away.

A guard took the names of everyone with a Bosnian army tunnel pass and barked them into a field-phone to the other end of the tunnel. Then it was time to wait, in a graffiti-covered room crowded with about 50 people, men in camouflage uniforms and casually dressed women.

Shipping crate mall pops up in S. Africa

By Bill Keller
N.Y. Times News Service

LAWAAIKAMP, South Africa — The Masakhane Mall, opening this month on a dusty lot at the edge of this black settlement, is at first glance just an African roadside curiosity: a shopping center and motel complex in a shantytown.

Ingeniously, Vuyasile Pottie's self-service supermarket, Ben Bosakwe's bakery, Max Gcuwa's dry cleaners, Eunice Luke's pool hall, the liquor store and shoe repair and photo studio and hair salon and all the other shops will be housed in converted shipping containers.

Odd it may be, but the shopping center is just a variation on a constant surprise of South African life: the robust entrepreneurial spirit percolating in communities that whites tend to regard as nothing more than sinks of riot and neglect.

What economists call the "informal economy" — a category that ranges from herbalists and street-corner barbers to taxi fleets and township savings associations — is estimated to employ 3.5 million blacks, a quarter of the work force, and to generate 5 percent of the gross national product.

The idea of the Masakhane Mall, the sponsors of the project say, is to show that by removing the stifling constraints of apartheid and applying only modest assistance, this improvised economy can be made a catalyst for the revival of black communities.

Lawaaikamp, which means Noisy Camp in Afrikaans, is a settlement of about 4,000 blacks just outside George, a city of 26,000 whites and two golf courses overlooking the Cape tourist highway called the Garden Route.

Blacks have lived in Lawaaikamp for half a century, initially as tenants on a white farm, then, after the white municipality bought the land, as illegal squatters.

For years the George city fathers tried to drive the squatters across the highway to the bigger black settlement of Thembaletu. The city refused to collect garbage.

It sent police with bulldozers to raze shacks while the occupants were at work. The residents resisted, quietly at first and then with riots, until the city relented and, two years ago, agreed to let the dwellers buy their plots.

With ownership and the introduction of electricity and flush toilets, Lawaaikamp is an upwardly mobile shantytown, with neat shacks, no violence, and aspirations.

And location. The settlement is on the paved road that runs from George's big employers, the frozen vegetable plant and steel mill, into a cluster of apartheid communities for black and mixed-race residents.

Lacking the money to build a permanent mall, the organizers — a nonprofit development agency called the Masakhane Project — hit upon the idea of acquiring the 8-by-20-foot containers used to ship oceangoing cargo.

"It's a first-world concept, the shopping mall, merged with a third-world facility, the container," said Richard Webster, a consultant who is on loan to Lawaaikamp from the electrical utility, Eskom.

Maoist rebels enslave Amazonian Indians

By Monte Hayes
Associated Press writer

CUTIVIRENI, Peru — The young Maoist rebels nailed Indian leader Mario Zumaeta naked to a cross, gouged out his eyes, cut out his tongue and castrated him. Finally, they disemboweled him, jeering, "Where is your God now?"

The atrocity by Sendero Luminoso — the Shining Path — came during an attack on Cutivireni, an isolated Franciscan mission on the Ene River in Peru's eastern Amazon jungle, in November 1989.

The mission's destruction marked the beginning of a savage war on the Ashaninka Indian nation, whose 50,000 members make it one of the largest Indian groups in South America's tropical forests.

Today Cutivireni is a lonely outpost for about 80 soldiers and a camp for 900 Ashaninka who have sought refuge from the guerrillas.

The Shining Path has managed what Spanish conquistadors, rubber barons and waves of land-hungry settlers from the Andean highlands were unable to do — enslave thousands of Ashaninka, who have lived free as the wind for centuries in their remote rain forest.

"They are innocent in the truly biblical sense," said the Rev. Mariano Gagnon, a Roman Catholic missionary from New England who worked at Cutivireni for 22 years until he was forced out.

The rebels convinced many Ashaninka that armed revolution would halt centuries of white exploitation.

"They promised the most beautiful things," said Jaime Velasquez, 34, a teacher at Cutivireni and a spokesman for the refugees. In 1989, rebel leaders decided the time had come to force the Ashaninka to join the armed struggle.

UNITED WAY AND AMERICAN RED CROSS... WORKING TOGETHER TO SAVE LIVES.

Lonnie Hamil, and his son, Reed.

The Problem? Last year, just in the state of Texas, 145 people died from choking accidents. Some of those deaths might have been prevented by timely, trained assistance. Lonnie Hamil's son was almost the 146th victim of such an accident.

The Solution? Well-trained instructors, teaching lifesaving skills, can make a difference. Lonnie learned these skills at the American Red Cross. One month later, he used them to save his son's life.

Through the United Way, your contributions to local Red Cross chapters will teach thousands of West Texans to become lifesavers this year.

DISTRIBUTORS
Times have changed. Gone are the days of children delivering their newspaper routes on bicycles. Today Midland Reporter-Telegram distributors are handled through adults from automobiles and during early morning hours. People earning $400-$700 monthly to supplement their income.
WE NOW HAVE ROUTES AVAILABLE FOR IMMEDIATE ASSIGNMENT. A $100 refundable deposit required. Call 688-2700 to apply.

WEEKLY & MONTHLY INCOME

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Midland Freshman area.

As with all newspaper distributorships this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for housewives/mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just wa t to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
