Gloomy money issue faces session

Balloons launch Head Start Awareness

Students in the Head Start program at the Texas Migrant Council offices at Wesley Methodist Church held a balloon launch on Monday. It was the first day of Head Start Awareness Week in Hereford. Other events include a talent contest and success stories from former Head Start students.

State income tax could be imposed this year

AUSTIN (AP) - Gloomy financial pronouncements and a prediction that a state income tax soon might be imposed greeted lawmakers who began a special session to deal with public school finance reform and judicial selection.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, at the Tuesday start of the session, said the state's financial situation is so tight that an income tax might be needed before the year ends.

"It's not going to happen this (30-day) session. I understand that. But I wouldn't be at all surprised if it didn't happen before this year is out," said Hobby, who emphasized that such a tax would be coupled with a reduction in property taxes and other levies.

Lawmakers were called back to Austin to deal with a Texas Supreme Court order that the school funding system is unconstitutional and a federal judge's ruling that some state judicial elections discriminate against minority voters.

The session opened just two weeks before the March 13 primaries.

"Either cut or tax. Nothing in between," said Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, head of the budget-writing House Appropriations Committee.

"We need a miracle. I'm going to pray a lot," Rudd added.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said lawmakers would have to consider a tax increase by 1991 at the latest.

"It's really a very dismal picture," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth, citing deficits in such agencies as the Texas Department of Health and an increasing demand for state services.

"I'd say eventually, if we don't pass a tax bill in this special session, it would certainly be something we will have to seriously consider in the regular session" in 1991, he said.

Gov. Bill Clements opposes any new taxes in the 30-day special session.

Clements called the session after the Texas Supreme Court gave lawmakers a May 1 deadline for changing the school finance system and a federal judge ruled the countywide system of electing judges in nine urban counties is illegal.

Unless the governor's stand changes, lawmakers are unlikely to pass a tax increase this session, Lewis said. The speaker emphasized he isn't pushing new taxes at this point.

"I have not endorsed a tax bill and will not until its proven to me we have to have one," he said. Lewis said among options expected to be discussed are expanding the sales tax to food and medicine, and creation of a state personal income tax.

Legislation is being written to follow a recommendation by the Governor's Task Force on Public Education that would include a $234.6 million infusion of new funds next school year, Lewis said.

Although some educators have called that figure inadequate and want increases of up to $1.1 billion in 1990-91, Lewis said he doesn't know where even the smaller figure would come from.

"You'll see us try to move money around, and play the old ... 'smoke and mirror theory,'" he said. But shifting money from other parts of the state budget would be "very painful," he said.

Comptroller Bob Bullock has said lawmakers must find new revenue sources if they want to put more money into schools. The state could shift about $150 million from such long-term projects as Capitol restoration, he said.

The Supreme Court last year found glaring disparities between property-rich and poor school districts in the $13.5 billion-a-year public education finance system, which relies on a combination state and federal aid and local property taxes.

Also last year, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton declared the current method of electing state judges in nine urban counties violated the federal Voting Rights Act by watering down the effect of minority votes.

Bunton ordered special elections for 115 judges this year, but the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans halted that order to give state lawmakers a chance to act.

Representatives of black and Hispanic lawyers' groups Tuesday urged the Legislature to adopt election of state judges from single-member districts, although they were divided on whether candidates should run on a partisan basis.

"Single-member districts will ensure that blacks, Hispanics and other ethnic minority groups of Texas have an opportunity to elect district judges of their choice," said Austin municipal Judge Jim Coronado of the Mexican-American Bar Association.

In Republican gubernatorial race

Hance, Williams continue feud

AUSTIN (AP) - If elected governor, Republican Clayton Williams said he doesn't see much future for opponent Kent Hance.

Hance's political furtunes in a Williams administration would "be very minimal," Williams said Tuesday.

Hance and Williams have been feuding over a $1,000 donation made by Williams to Democratic Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Hance charged that a Mattox investigation into a state contract awarded to a competitor of ClayDesta, Williams' former long-distance telephone company, followed the campaign contribution.

Mattox, a Democratic contender for governor, has denied the charge. Mattox never challenged the contract.

Williams, of Midland, said that he gave Mattox the money to ensure fairness.

"When you give money, you hope to have a fair game," Williams said. But, he added, that he didn't believe his donation was necessary to ensure an objective consideration of the contract.

"Why does anybody give money? You hope for good government," Williams said.

Hance's campaign has requested, under the Texas Open Records Act, all information regarding Mattox's investigation of the state phone contract.

"Mr. Mattox's anti-trust division did conduct an investigation early in the year and we believe took additional steps following the August 25, 1988, contribution," Hance spokesman Mark Sanders said.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Mattox, said the Open Records request was being processed, but that such investigative records are confidential and not subject to public disclosure.

"If we could release it, we could expose Kent Hance for the dishonest and lying candidate that he is," Dusek said.

Hance has aired a campaign commercial focusing on the contribution and released a mailing to 100,000 GOP households that rips numerous Williams contributions to "liberal" Democrats, including gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards and U.S. Senate hopeful Hugh Parmer.

The Hance assault comes two weeks before the March 13 primary and follows an opinion poll showing Williams with support of 45 percent of likely GOP voters and Hance with 22 percent. Two other candidates, Jack Rains and Tom Luce, received single-digit support.

Williams took a swipe at Hance, who is chairman of the Railroad Commission, saying the commissioners' campaigns are bankrolled by oil and gas interests, the same industry it regulates.

"That's a fact of life," Williams said.

Williams said he doesn't believe the controversy has hurt his campaign.

"At some point I will defend myself if he becomes a threat," Williams said of Hance. "I don't see him as a threat yet," he said.

He said that if elected governor, Hance would not be a part of his administration.

"I'll look for someone whose more qualified, and there are many," he said.

Heavy absentee turnout here

The no-excuse absentee balloting is helping draw a heavy turnout of voters, County Clerk David Ruland reported this morning.

Voters do not have to provide a reason for voting absentee in the March 13 primary elections. Absentee voting continues through Friday, March 9. Ruland announced that his office will be open from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. this Saturday for absentee voting.

Sample ballots for the two primary elections will be published by The Brand. The Democratic primary sample ballot can be found on Page 11 of this issue. The Republican sample ballot will follow in Thursday's paper.

Richards says 'poll slump' will prove to be boost in campaign

AUSTIN (AP) - Her slight drop in the latest opinion poll on the Democratic governor's race will prove to be a boost, state Treasurer Ann Richards says.

"This new poll helps me in the sense that it tells people just exactly what I've been saying ... This is going to be a close and narrow race and we need them out there working," Ms. Richards said Tuesday.

The state treasurer, who for months led in surveys on the March 13 Democratic primary, dropped into a statistical tie with former Gov. Mark White in a Dallas Morning News-Houston Chronicle survey published Sunday.

Ms. Richards fell from 36 percent support in January to 31 percent, while White rose from 29 percent to 34 percent. Attorney General Jim Mattox ran third at 17 percent in the new survey, which had a margin of error of 5.5 points.

Ms. Richards said she believes the poll is accurate.

"That reflection is exactly what I've been telling supporters for a long time: that this race is very tight. It's going to be tight right down to the wire," she said.

"I have been really kind of bothered that my supporters were rather complacent in thinking we had this race won, that the polls all reflected we were very far ahead," she added.

White has said the poll shows his momentum, while Mattox said it was wrong and that his own campaign surveys show him leading.

Ms. Richards said she didn't know whether the newspapers' poll reflected effects of two incidents which have put her on the defensive over the past two weeks.

First, Mattox and White criticized her over a comment made during a televised debate when she appeared to say politicians had no business telling a "white woman" whether to have an abortion.

Ms. Richards insists she meant to say "whether or why a woman" - and that her heavy drawl confused listeners.

Then, she said she might have written the word "wetback" in a 1976 speech text but denied ever actually saying the word. She also accused Mattox of planting an article about the speech in a Hispanic-oriented newspaper last week.

Mattox denied her assertion.

Ms. Richards said Tuesday that her long record as a civil rights activist was widely known, and she noted receiving endorsements from such minority leaders as former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan and former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

"I started with the farm workers 22 years ago, their first march from the (Rio Grande) Valley (to Austin). The first campaign I was ever involved in was Henry B. Gonzalez for governor and we worked out of the NAACP headquarters," she said.

In other political developments:

- Mattox apologized for a remark he made about a poll that angered advocates for mentally ill people.

Responding earlier to the poll that showed former White leading the Democratic field, Mattox said, "Anybody that believes Mark White is in the lead needs to be carted off to an institution 'cause they are dangerous to themselves."

Atlantis launch 'A-Okay'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Atlantis rocketed into the nighttime sky after five postponements and carried a spy satellite into orbit today, riding a dazzling, 700-foot tail of fire seen for hundreds of miles.

After waiting out clouds and rain, the craft thundered from the pad at 2:51 a.m. EST, sending dazzling light and a shock wave of sound across the darkened seaside space center.

It disappeared into clouds in just 38 seconds, leaving briefly a glow like a shrouded full moon.

Observers as far north as Washington, D.C., reported seeing the brilliant light of Atlantis' rockets as the craft followed a route never before taken by a shuttle.

Police arrest three

Hereford police arrested three on Tuesday, including a man, 23, in the 200 block of Harrah for attacking his 24 year old wife and 8 month old baby with his fists. Officers responding to a domestic violence call witnessed the wife being dragged away from the front door as she called out for help. Officers ran into the house and arrested the man, who had beaten both his wife and baby with his fists. The wife told police the baby took a hard blow to the head with a closed fist when the husband tried to hit the woman and missed, striking the baby instead. Both mother and child were taken to Deaf Smith County General Hospital, where they were treated and released. Two women, ages 35 and 40, were arrested for shoplifting at Moore's Grocery Store.

Reports included a radar detector and a police scanner valued at $370 taken from a vehicle in the 500 block of Westhaven; a woman reported losing her purse somewhere in Hereford while shopping; a 16 year old boy filed charges against a 17 year old boy for threatening him in front of his house; Western Union employees took a cussing from a customer who wanted to collect some money sent, but could not produce any identification.

Fire fighters put out a vehicle fire south of town at Coronado Acres Tuesday afternoon. The vehicle was completely destroyed.

Hereford police issued nine citations and responded to two minor injuries on Tuesday.

Snow chance continues

Tonight will be cloudy with a 50 percent chance of snow. The low will be 22, with northeast winds 10-20 mph.

Thursday will see a 30 pecent chance of morning snow, with decreasing cloudiness during the afternoon. The high will be 42, with north winds of 5-15 mph becoming southeast during the afternoon.

This morning's low at KPAN was 29 after a high Tuesday of 38. KPAN recorded .21 inch of moisture as of 7 a.m. today.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 28, the 59th day of 1990. There are 306 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 28, 1854, some 50 opponents of slavery met at a schoolhouse in Ripon, Wis., to call for a new political group. The organization would later become known as the Republican Party.

On this date:

In 1827, the first U.S. railroad chartered to carry passengers and freight, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, was incorporated.

In 1844, Secretary of State Abel P. Upshur, Navy Secretary Thomas W. Gilmer and several other people were killed when a 12-inch gun aboard the U.S.S. Princeton exploded.

In 1849, the ship California arrived at San Francisco, carrying the first of the gold-seekers.

In 1861, the Territory of Colorado was organized.

In 1917, The Associated Press reported the U.S. had intercepted a German communication. The "Zimmerman note" proposed a German alliance with Mexico and Japan should the U.S. enter World War I.

In 1951, the Senate crime investigating committee headed by Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., issued a preliminary report which said at least two major crime syndicates were operating in the U.S.

Ten years ago: Leftist guerrillas occupying the Dominican Republic's embassy in Bogota, Colombia, released 14 of their hostages.

Five years ago: Ailing Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko made his second television appearance in four days as he was shown receiving his credentials to the Russian Republic's parliament.

Babbling Brooks

BY JOHN BROOKS

I had a first the other day.

It's the first time it's ever happened to me. It may be the first time it's happened in the History Of The World.

The amount of cents on the check I wrote matched exactly with the amount of cents in the checking account.

At best, that is extremely rare. More rare than, say, finding a snipe when you go out on a snipe hunt. It's even more improbable than Miss America inviting me over for a slumber party.

It is rare enough when you don't have to carry a bunch of numbers. You know, you have 47 cents on the cents side of the ledger and your check is for x dollars and 47 cents (or less). Usually, if you have 47 cents on the cents side, the check is for x dollars and 48 or more cents.

I went into a period of mass exhilaration when the cents matched on both the other day. I went around showing my good fortune. No one else down here at the Brand had ever had that happen to them, either. Call Ripley's! Call Guiness! Break out the champagne!

Then I got home and checked the mail.

I knew what it was when I saw the envelope.

I was overdrawn $7.47.

At least I had the 47 cents right.

Well, we finally won a war.

We may not have won in Korea, we may not have won in Vietnam, but somebody won in Nicaragua over the weekend.

That somebody was not Daniel Ortega and his communist-marxist Sandanista movement.

Jim Wright and the rest of the liberal left, so dead-set against trying to beat down the Sandanistas in Nicaragua, are likely to be in hiding for a while.

It seems the left was wrong and the right was right about Nicaragua. The Nicaraguan people got a chance to decide their own fate. Daniel Ortega is out looking for a job, just like Jim Wright and Mike Dukakis and the other Liberal Losers.

Maybe he can hit the campaign trail like his counterpart, Oliver North, has done for conservatives. Daniel Ortega can go out and hit the campaign trail. Maybe Mike Dukakis will run for office again. Maybe Jim Wright will make a comeback. Ortega can campaign for them.

From Mrs. E.C. Hudson, the best treasure of Earth, Texas, a congratulatory message on the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame board's decision on keeping the CHOF in Hereford.

"As we in this part of the country know, we'd better hang on to what we've got 'cause we know how we got it," Mrs. Hudson wrote us. "I was excited to hear you are keeping the Cowgirl Hall of Fame. In fact, maybe almost losing it may be the shot in the arm it needed."

Earlier, in her "From the Scrapbook" column in the Earth Weekly News, she said:

"I have my soap box all dusted off, ready to mount. I read where "Big Down State" is making a bid for a first in west and north Texas. I do hop our vicinity refuses to let Cowgirl Hall of Fame be snookered away.

"If something is outstanding in our part of the country, Down State is miserable until they acquire it. In the past, we sate complacently by, or handed the desired object over on a silver platter. In fact, one person was handed over on his own silver platter. Let's support Hereford's own brainchild."

Northrup pleads guilty to faking stealth tests

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Northrop Corp., under investigation for fraud in its stealth bomber program, admitted falsifying test data on parts for two other projects - the cruise missile and Harrier jet - and agreed to a $17 million fine.

The defense contractor Tuesday pleaded guilty to 34 counts of making false statements to the government. In exchange, the government agreed to drop 139 other counts of making false statements and two counts of conspiracy.

"This is a very significant victory in our efforts to combat defense contracting fraud and misconduct," Assistant U.S. Attorney William F. Fahey said.

The fine will be "a tremendous deterrent to corporations who choose to cut corners on certifications of tests on significant military programs," he said.

In its defense, Northrop said the military services using the AV-8B Harrier attack jet and the cruise missile had reported that "both systems have performed satisfactorily in flight operations."

Exxon faces criminal charges, possible fines for Valdez oil spill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Exxon Corp. faces criminal charges and $700 million or more in possible penalties from last year's tanker spill that left hundreds of miles of Alaska shoreline polluted with oil.

A federal grand jury in Alaska brought a five-count indictment against the giant oil company and its shipping subsidiary on Tuesday, charging it violated a number of federal laws in connection with the Exxon Valdez oil spill.

"The indictment ... represents our best shot at prosecuting this incident," Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in announcing the indictment.

The massive spill occurred when the huge tanker veered off course in Prince William Sound and struck a reef on March 24, 1989, spilling 11 million gallons of crude. It was the worst oil catastrophe in U.S. history and caused widespread damage to wildlife and Alaska's ecology.

In New York, Exxon chairman Lawrence G. Rawl in a statement called the grounding "a tragic accident" for which Exxon and its shipping subsidiary "have apologized to the American people, especially the people of Alaska."

"Nobody willfully grounded the ship or caused the spill," said Rawl.

Exxon has spent more than $2 billion in cleanup efforts, but environmentalists argue that the job is far from completed and the total damages to natural resources may not be known for years.

The indictment included three felony and two misdemeanor charges that could lead to a total $1.6 million in criminal fines. In addition, the government said it would seek at least $700 million - perhaps substantially more - in penalties under a separate law that allows recovery of twice the amount of proven losses.

Thornburgh said the eventual penalties against Exxon could be substantially higher, depending on the amount of losses determined at the time of a court verdict.

Thornburgh told a news conference the indictment was presented to the grand jury after a proposed plea deal fell through. He said the plea talks fell apart because of the unwillingness of Exxon to meet the government's terms; in addition, state officials objected to part of the proposed agreement.

The indictment charged that Exxon employees aboard the tanker acted inappropriately and that the corporation "willfully and knowingly" allowed individuals who either lacked the required license or were "known" to be physically or mentally incapable" to operate the vessel.

The charges stemmed from reports that Exxon officials were aware that Valdez captain Joseph Hazelwood had a history of drunken driving convictions in New York state, but was allowed to remain in command of the huge tanker.

Hazelwood is on trial in a state court in Alaska on charges including reckless endangerment, criminal mischief and operating a vessel while intoxicated. He has denied being drunk at the time of the accident.

The charges against Exxon under the indictment were:

-Violation of the Port and Waterways Safety Act, a felony.

-Violation of the Dangerous Cargo Act, also a felony.

-Violation of the Clean Water Act by illegally discharging pollutants into Prince William Sound, a misdemeanor.

-Unlawfully discharging refuse, the oil, also a misdemeanor.

-Violating the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, stemming from the deaths of more than 36,000 birds as a result of oil pollution, also a misdemeanor.

Each of the felony charges carries a maximum fine of $500,000, while each misdemeanor counts carries a maximum penalty of $200,000, the Justice officials said.

Can Chamorro lead?

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) - Entering tense transition talks, President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro called on the Contra rebels to immediately disband and the defeated Sandinistas promised never to allow their revolution to die.

Working sessions on transferring power were to begin today, but indications were that the process would be troubled as passions ran strong about what Nicaragua's future should hold.

The victorious opposition coalition favors a free market economy but the leftist Sandinistas insisted Tuesday that banks and industries stay in the hands of the state and land seized by the government remain in peasant hands.

"A change of government does not mean the end of the revolution," President Daniel Ortega told a cheering crowd of thousands after a meeting of Sandinista party leaders.

Despite being trounced at the polls Sunday by Mrs. Chamorro's loose coalition, the Sandinistas remain the country's largest and most cohesive political force. They control the military and police and have the allegiance of a large bureaucracy.

Late Tuesday, Mrs. Chamorro called on the Contras to lay down their arms. Rafael Solis, a high-ranking military commander, said earlier that the Sandinistas would not cede control of the police or Central America's largest army until the Contras disband.

The top Contra leader, Israel Galeano, said from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Tuesday that the rebels would not disband until after Mrs. Chamorro is inaugurated April 25 for a six-year term.

Officials in Honduras estimate 10,000 rebels and some 42,000 dependents are living in makeshift camps near the Nicaraguan border. President Rafael Leonardo Callejas of Honduras said Tuesday that they must leave as soon as possible.

Pictionary program presented at meeting

The membership committee of the Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority presented a pictionary program on "All That Jazz" as the theme of Mardi Gras was carried out. Fifteen members met recently in the home of Ruby Sanders.

President Marge Bell called the meeting to order and members repeated the opening ritual.

Operation Good Sheperd expressed appreciation for the donated baby food and President Bell read a "happy new year" message from international.

Bell thanked the Rosebud Committee for the card and secret sisters were thanked by: Denise Hafliger, Bell, Ronna Dicus, Connie Matthews and Holly Bixler. Melinda Henson expressed gratitude to the committee for the sympathy card. Others thanked were Susan Shaw, Peggy Hyer, and Sharon Bodner, and Susan Cardinal.

In the report of City Council, minutes were read of the group's last meeting. It was noted a committee would be set-up to write guidelines for future city council committees to follow. Matthews, Bodner, and Hafliger volunteered for the committee.

It was announced that the recent Valentine's Dance had 37 couples in attendance.

During the program and yearbook committee report, given by Williams, it was decided that the next meeting, March 6, and the final May meeting would have the programs switched. Gaye Reily will have the March 6 meeting while Sharon Bodner will have the May 15 meeting, "Images You Project". It was decided T-shirts will be sponge-painted at the March 6 meeting and will serve as the chapter's doorprizes for the upcoming June state sorority convention.

The meeting adjourned with the closing ritual and Mitzpah. A pledge meeting preceded the meeting.

Members present were Bell, Bixler, Bodner, Cardinal, Hyer, Matthews, Reily, Sanders, Shaw, Williams, Dicus, Henson, Todd, Kathy Hafliger, and Denise Hafliger.

World Day of Prayer

The public is invited to attend a special service for the World Day of Prayer observance at 9:30 a.m. Friday, March 2, at the Community Church. Those planning to attend are asked to bring canned goods to be donated to Operation Good Shepherd. The annual observance, which began in 1941, unites Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and other Christian women and men in 170 countries and regions of the world in informed prayer. Discussing the event are, from left, Gracie Shaw and Carol Sue LeGate.

Of the five great lakes, only Lake Michigan is wholly in the U.S. The others are partly in Canada.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR READERS:

In September I told you about a booklet for latchkey children called "What If I'm Home Alone" that was available from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Due to changes in the project, requests for the booklets can no longer be fulfilled.

Many of you have written asking how you can receive a copy. If you placed an order with the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and your check has been cashed but you have not received the booklet, you should write to them at: Corporation for Public Broadcasting, 1111 16th Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20036, Attn.: "What If I'm Home Alone." Do not write to them at the original post office box, as that will only delay your correspondence.

Bulk orders of the original pamphlet can still be placed with the printer, but must be in multiples of 100. The booklets cost 50 cents each for orders of 100 or more, plus shipping and handling charges. Contact the printers at Custom Print, Inc., 2611 Shirlington Rd., Arlington, VA 22206; call (703) 979-6670 for exact charges and ordering instructions.

I'm very sorry for this confusion. I personally feel the booklet is worthwhile and am saddened by the fact that there was a project change. I hope my readers haven't been too inconvenienced. — Heloise

CAR PILLOW

Dear Heloise: I keep cleaned, empty plastic bags from inside large wine and apple-juice boxes to use as pillows in the car. They are just right to keep in the glove compartment, inflate whenever you need a pillow, then deflate and put back for the next time. — Jeanne Moreland, Elma, N.Y.

Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR
Better Than You Think

Most of us are doing better than we think we are. Of course, we will continue our reasonable self-improvement efforts. There seems to be a general inclination to magnify our weakness and failures and mistakes, and minimize our strengths, our successes, and capabilities. This is unfair.

We must not think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think, but we must not think less highly of ourselves that we ought to think. Everything is going to be "better" for us, when we fully realize and accept the fact that "we are doing better than we think we are."

Some folk who think of themselves as failures are not failures. Their accomplishments may not measure up to some of the artificial material standards, but this is not failure. All of us may have some failure in some things, and we may have some shortcomings, but these must never be dominate in our personal evaluation.

How do you measure success? What really constitutes successful living? It may be, and sometimes it seems to be, that each person has a very personal and private way of deciding. Of course, there is nothing wrong with this. Be this as it may, we must always explore the possibility that we may be doing better than we think we are.

If you think that you are successful in the living experience, and you probably are reasonably successful, it doesn't matter what others think, or what they are doing or not doing. These other people are not the standard success, and you must never try to measure yourself by them. Just be sure that you are honestly doing your best, and that you are happy with this.

The next time you are feeling a little down, take another look. It may be that you are doing better than you think you are.

CCA to sponsor concert

The Hereford Community Concert Association is sponsoring a concert at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 4, in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Lincolyn Mayorga, famed pianist, will be performing a diverse program of classical and popular music.

The Los Angeles Times said of his performances, "Impeccable pianism. Unusual sensitivity to sound, structure and detail."

Today's children don't give up on Santa Claus until the age of 5 and many still believe in him at age 7{, according to John Condry, professor of human development and family studies at Cornell, and Cynthia Scheibe, professor of psychology at Ithaca.

Thank You

Thanks for all the prayers, food, flowers, and visits from our friends, the R.E.C., Wesley Methodist Church and Masons.

Herd places pair on All-District team

Russell Backus and Jason Walterscheid of the Hereford Whitefaces have been named to the All-District 1-4A boys basketball team announced today.

Backus, the Herd's leading scorer with a 16.6 points-per-game average, was named to the first team while Walterscheid, the second-leading scorer at 11.4 ppg, was selected for the third team.

Backus posted three 30-point games during the district season to finish with the league's second-highest scoring average at 19.7.

"I'm really proud of these guys," Herd coach Jimmy Thomas said. "It's quite an honor for them and for the team.

"I just wish I could have them back again next year," Thomas said of the two seniors. "They really fit well into our system. On the nights Russell was a little off in his shooting, Jason would pick up the slack."

ALL-DISTRICT 1-4A BOYS BASKETBALL TEAM

Most Valuable Player: Darren Waters, Levelland, 6-0, senior, 18.2 ppg, 6.0 rpg.

Defensive Player of the Year: Ryan Teague, Pampa, 6-0, senior, 10.3 ppg, 3.4 rpg.

Sophomore of the Year: Jeff Young, Pampa, 6-1, 10.5 ppg, 6.6 rpg.

Coach of the Year: Robert Hale, Pampa

First Team: Mark Wood, Pampa, 6-3, senior, 17.5 ppg, 3.8 rpg; Andre Brooks, Estacado, 6-5, senior, 17.2 ppg, 7.4 rpg; Brad Summersell, Dumas, 6-2, senior, 23.0 ppg, 9.2 rpg; Russell, Backus, Hereford, 5-11, senior, 19.7 ppg, 4.2 rpg; Chris Boudy, Frenship, 6-6, junior, 15.0 ppg, 7.0 rpg.

All scoring and rebounding averages are for district games only.

Second Team: Michael Tyus, Dunbar; Jeff Isom, Borger; Olando Coursey, Levelland; Jason Weese, Frenship; Michael Irvin, Estacado.

Third Team: Jayson Williams, Pampa; Ricky Smith, Estacado; Chris Northcutt, Dumas; Ovidio Olivencia, Frenship; Jason Walterscheid, Hereford.

Herd opens Abilene tourney

The Hereford Whitefaces officially open the 1990 baseball season at 11 a.m. Thursday when they face District 1-4A rival Estacado in the first round of the Abilene Invitational Tournament.

Hereford will play at least three games over the weekend with the second-round contest being played Thursday afternoon.

Her coach T.R. Sartor said the team will face an uphill battle in the tourney with only one scrimmage and six outdoor workouts in the last two weeks.

"The weather has hurt," he said, "but we've done what we can in the gym."

ABILENE INVITATIONAL TOURNAMENT

Thursday's Games

Game 1: Hereford vs. Estacado, 11 a.m., Abilene High Field.

Game 2: Lubbock High vs. Snyder.

Game 3: San Angelo Central vs. Plainview.

Game 4: Abilene High vs. Dunbar.

Game 5: Abilene Cooper vs. Andrews.

Game 6: Winner 3 vs. Amarillo High.

Game 7: Winner 1 vs. Winner 2, 4 p.m., Abilene High Field.

Sartor added that several team members who played basketball just need time to adjust to baseball.

"The kids coming out of basketball are in excellent shape," he said. "It's not going to take very long to get their arms in shape. Now, they're going to have to just see the ball at the plate. But the ones out of basketball are doing real well."

With three games in two days guaranteed and four in three days likely, the Herd mound staff will have plenty of opportunity.

"We don't have the type of pitcher this year that can go out and strike out 11 or 12 batters for us," Sartor said. "But what we do have is probably more depth in our pitching than we've ever had.

"We've got six that I'm not afraid to put out there," he added. "What we'll do is try one, and, if he's going well, leave him out there until he gets tired. When he gets tired, we'll put another one in, and if that one goes well we'll leave him in until the game's over or whatever. We'll use them all."

Sartor said the tourney will provide the Herd with some much-needed playing time in preparation for the district season.

"The thing that we need more than anything else right now is competition," he said. "We hurt ourselves in the Plainview scrimmage with base running mistakes and swinging at bad pitches. You solve those types of problems with competition -- getting into it and experiencing it and learning from it. This tournament will help us a lot.

"The season's young and we're pretty young," Sartor added. "We're hoping to use this as a growing-up experience. That's going to be the key to our success -- just how fast we can grow up."

The tournament schedule, with game time and site of all possible Herd games, is listed below.

Game 8: Loser 1 vs. Loser 2, 4 p.m., Rose Park.

Game 9: Loser 4 vs. Loser 5.

Friday's Games

Game 10: Loser 6 vs. Loser 7, 10 a.m., Rose Park.

Game 11: Winner 4 vs. Winner 7, 10 a.m., Abilene High Field.

Game 12: Winner 5 vs. Winner 6.

Game 13: Winner 8 vs. Winner 9, 12:30 p.m., Abilene High Field.

Game 14: Loser 11 vs. Loser 12, 12:30 p.m., Cooper High Field.

Game 15: Loser 3 vs. Loser 10.

Game 16: Loser 8 vs. Loser 9, 3 p.m., Cooper High Field.

Game 17: Winner 11 vs. Winner 12, 3 p.m., Abilene High Field.

Saturday's Games

Game 18: Winner 10 vs. Winner 14, 10 a.m., Abilene High Field.

Game 19: Winner 13 vs. Winner 15, 10 a.m., Cooper High Field.

Game 20: Loser 13 vs. Loser 15, 10 a.m., Rose Park.

Game 21: Winner 16 vs. Loser 19, 12:30 p.m., Abilene High Field.

Game 22: Loser 14 vs. Loser 18, 12:30 p.m., Cooper High Field.

Game 23 (loser is third-place team): Winner 18 vs. Loser 17, 12:30 p.m., Rose Park.

Game 24 (Championship Game): Winner 17 vs. Winner 23, 3 p.m., Abilene High Field.

Players' union willing to wait

PHOENIX (AP) - Baseball has become a waiting game.

The players' union is waiting for the owners to budge off some of their thus far intractable positions.

The owners apparently are waiting for the union to back off its demands, and hoping player unrest during the lockout will pressure union chief Donald Fehr into compromising.

The owners will have to keep waiting, Fehr said Tuesday after meeting with a group of 100 players.

"It's safe to say there's no sentiment among any of the players here that they should roll over and concede to the owners," Fehr said after a spending some four hours talking - and listening - to the union's executive board and other players on hand for the meeting.

"We will let them know (that) if they were waiting for a change in our position because of this meeting, they're not going to get it."

Although a few players around the country have questioned whether the union's demand that eligibility for arbitration be rolled back from three years to two is worth jeopardizing the start of the season, the players who met with Fehr on Tuesday emphasized solidarity.

"I didn't feel any disharmony whatsoever," New York Yankees player representative Don Mattingly said. "I felt a huge vote of confidence for Donald Fehr and the negotiating committee."

Fehr and the players also said that it was incorrect to consider the negotiations stalemated because of the single issue of arbitration.

"People are trying to make it all one issue and it's much more than that," infielder Steve Lyons of the Chicago White Sox said. "We have been having these things jammed down our throats for eight months now.

"They (the owners) think they've made it look like our turn to make some movement, that they've pulled stuff (demands) off the table. All those things, though, like revenue sharing, didn't make any sense to anybody. They've really made no concessions at all."

Outfielder Pete Incaviglia of the Texas Rangers had been quoted as saying he didn't think the arbitration hangup "was that big a deal" and wondering whether the players should drop their demand and settle with the owners.

Incaviglia backed off that statement after meeting with Fehr and the other players, saying, "I said I didn't know the issues at hand. There are other things, like pension and starting salary. I think everybody's pretty firm now with what we're doing."

Still, on the 13th day of the spring training lockout, some other players who hadn't attended a status briefing had different views.

"It sounds silly that one year is going to make a big deal," infielder Randy Velarde of the Yankees said. "I don't see why we can't leave it the way it is. I really wish they'd resolve this and let us get going."

"I think we should leave it there and go play ball," pitcher Juan Berenguer of the Minnesota Twins said. "It doesn't affect many players, especially us older guys. Heck with this. I want to play. This issue is not the big deal."

Fehr planned to meet with more players Thursday in Los Angeles, then fly to Florida on Friday to brief still more players there.

He emphasized that, while he's not at the table with the owners' negotiating team, communication can certainly continue this week by telephone and fax.

Meanwhile, American League president Bobby Brown and National League president Bill White sent a directive to clubs, saying no exhibition games would be played until players had been in camp for 10 days.

The leagues canceled more than a hundred exhibition games. The spring training schedule was to have started Thursday with four games, including a World Series rematch between San Francisco and Oakland that was to benefit victims of the Oct. 17 Bay area earthquake.

Astros cancel exhibitions

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Astros announced Tuesday they have cancelled their first four home exhibition games and two B games as a result of the major league baseball lockout.

The cancelled games at Osceola County Stadium in Kissimmee, Fla., are: March 3, Minnesota; March 6, Kansas City; March 9, Boston and March 10, Philadelphia.

B games against Kansas City March 6 and Minnesota March 9 also were cancelled.

Fans who already have purchased tickets for the affected games were advised to hold the tickets until the end of the labor dispute when the Astros will announce a refund or exchange policy.

Guards power Pistons past Houston

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Detroit Pistons have played well this season whenever Coach Chuck Daly has put a new starter on the front line.

On Tuesday night, however, it was veteran guards Isiah Thomas and Joe Dumars who pulled the Pistons out of trouble.

Thomas had a season-high 37 points and 10 assists and Dumars scored 27 points while Detroit's revamped frontcourt struggled in a 106-102 overtime victory over the Houston Rockets.

"It was a game that we were going to have to go out and win," Thomas said of fellow guards Dumars and Vinnie Johnson.

Frontliners Dennis Rodman, James Edwards and Bill Laimbeer combined for only 26 points on 9-for-29 shooting and 27 rebounds. Akeem Olajuwon alone had 37 points and 25 rebounds for Houston.

"It looked like for a long time, it was one you couldn't win," Daly said. "We struggled with our shot. ... We missed a lot of easy shots."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Orlando 115, Charlotte 109; Indiana 118, New Jersey 113; New York 110, Dallas 87; Minnesota 104, Washington 88; Chicago 106, Milwaukee 96; Phoenix 120, Denver 101; Los Angeles Clippers 103, Seattle 99 and Portland 118, Cleveland 105.

Thomas decided before halftime who would have to win the game for Detroit.

"I told Joe and Vinnie it was going to have to be a guards' night because the big guys were struggling a little bit," Thomas said.

Thomas had 11 points in the fourth quarter when Detroit erased a 13-point Houston lead, and scored eight of the Pistons' 12 points in overtime.

Suns 120, Nuggets 101

Phoenix tied a 12-year-old club record with its 16th consecutive home victory, getting 28 points and 14 assists from Kevin Johnson and 27 points from Tom Chambers.

Denver got 19 points from Alex English and 18 from Fat Lever.

Knicks 110, Mavericks 87

Patrick Ewing scored 21 points and Trent Tucker had nine straight for New York during a 30-7 second-half surge that carried the Knicks to their ninth victory in 12 games.

Roy Tarpley had 22 points for Dallas.

Bulls 106, Bucks 96

Michael Jordan scored 43 points, 17 on free throws.

Ricky Pierce led the Bucks with 38 points, but starting center Jack Sikma, with a 15-point average, went scoreless. Greg Anderson added 20 points for Milwaukee.

Timberwolves 104, Bullets 88

Rookie Pooh Richardson scored 12 of his 22 points in the third quarter, including eight straight during a 10-2 spurt that put Minnesota ahead to stay.

Bernard King scored 25 points for Washington.

Magic 115, Hornets 109

Reggie Theus scored 31 points as Orlando broke a seven-game losing streak and handed Charlotte its 17th loss in 18 games.

The Magic outscored the Hornets 12-6 in the final 1:22.

J.R. Reid led Charlotte with 23 points.

Pacers 118, Nets 113

Reggie Miller and Chuck Person scored 25 points apiece.

Reserve Derrick Gervin scored 11 of his 25 points in the final 7 1/2 minutes as the Nets closed within four points on three occasions. Sam Bowie had 22 points and 13 rebounds for New Jersey.

Trail Blazers 118, Cavaliers 105

Kevin Duckworth had 21 points and 10 rebounds.

Clyde Drexler, back from an ankle injury, added 20 points.

Larry Nance and Brad Daugherty scored 20 points apiece for Cleveland.

Clippers 103, SuperSonics 99

Charles Smith scored 23 points, and Los Angeles overcame a 16-point second-quarter deficit.

Rookie Dana Barros scored a career-high 28 points and ex-Clipper Quintin Dailey added 21 off the bench for Seattle.

UF stops skid; OU tops No. 1 again

By The Associated Press

Don DeVoe had seen enough. The Florida Gators had had enough.

Both did something about it Tuesday night. And the Georgia Bulldogs, who had waited long enough, got their first Southeastern Conference title.

DeVoe announced on national television before the game that he would not be returning to coach the Gators. His players responded by breaking a 14-game losing streak with a 76-63 upset of 15th-ranked Louisiana State.

The biggest winners, however, were the Bulldogs, who clinched a share of the conference title for the first time since the SEC began playing basketball in 1933. Georgia, which will be seeded first in the postseason SEC tournament, is two games ahead of LSU in the loss column with two to play. The Bulldogs swept the Tigers this season.

Stacey Poole scored 22 points and Renaldo Garcia added 17 for the defending conference champions, who snapped the longest slide in school history. Florida is 7-19 overall, 3-14 in the conference.

"This was a game where very few people gave us much of a chance, considering the things that have happened to us the last eight weeks," DeVoe said.

Those things included losing two star players, Livingston Chatman and Dwayne Schintzius, who quit the team. Worse, they included threats to DeVoe and his family.

"I would say this is my saturation point. I've had it with the abusive things that have happened to me and my family," said DeVoe, who was named interim coach on Oct. 31 after Norm Sloan resigned under pressure. "I've had it up to here with the things that have happened."

The Gators had had it up to there with losing, and took it out on LSU, at one point building a 21-point margin.

The biggest beneficiary was Georgia, which won the SEC tournament in 1983, when it made the Final Four, but had never won the regular-season title.

"Everybody figured Florida was not going to be a competitor," Georgia coach Hugh Durham said. "This is something we totally didn't expect. It's a super feeling."

Oklahoma also has a super feeling after its second straight victory over a top-ranked team. The fifth-rated Sooners routed Kansas 100-78 for their 45th straight home win.

Also, it was No. 13 La Salle over Army 106-73; No. 19 Xavier, Ohio, taking Arkansas-Little Rock 84-73 and No. 21 Louisville 99, Tulane 85.

No. 5 Oklahoma 100, No. 1 Kansas 78

The Sooners beat then-No. 1 Missouri 107-90 on Sunday. They were even more convincing against the Jayhawks before a record crowd of 12,166. Oklahoma forced Kansas into a season-high 26 turnovers in handing the Jayhawks their first loss to any team other than Missouri.

Skeeter Henry, playing his final home game, led the Sooners with 23 points. William Davis and reserve guard Terry Evans had 22 each.

No. 19 Xavier 84, Ark.-Little Rock 73

Maurice Brantley, averaging just 2.5 points a game, came off the bench and scored 14 for the Musketeers, who survived serious foul trouble in the second half. Brantley, who usually plays 10 minutes a game, played 20 minutes. A 36 percent shooter from the field this season, he made five of six against UALR.

No. 13 La Salle 106, Army 73

In his final home appearance, Lionel Simmons moved into third place on the NCAA Division I career scoring list and had his number 22 retired.

Simmons scored 29 points and grabbed 20 rebounds. He now has 3,071 points, passing Harry Kelly of Texas Southern, who had 3,066.

Pete Maravich of Louisiana State is the career with 3,667 in three seasons. Freeman Williams of Portland State is second with 3,249 points achieved, like Simmons, in four seasons.

"I had no idea how many points I needed to move into third place. Once I got 3,000, I stopped thinking about point totals, but I feel very proud about it," Simmons said.

No. 21 Louisville 99, Tulane 85

Louisville clinched at least a tie for the Metro regular-season title by making 34 of 52 shots, 65 percent. Felton Spencer was the real sharpshooter with a career-high 32 points in his final home game. Spencer had no trouble dominating inside, making 11 of 13 field-goal attempts and 10 of 14 free throws.

NC State hoops faces point-shaving charge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - It was supposed to have been an easy game for North Carolina State, but it instead was an uncharacteristic loss. Three years later, it might also be the focus of an investigation by state agents.

Today's Greensboro News and Record says the State Bureau of Investigation's probe into the Wolfpack basketball program is focusing on the Dec. 27, 1986 game between then 12th-ranked N.C. State and Division II member Tampa. The newspaper has reported that the SBI probe is looking into allegations of point-shaving, but the chief investigator has refused comment on the report.

"I wish I could help you, but I just can't comment on what we're looking at," chief investigator Bill Dowdy said.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano says he never suspected anyone on his team would be involved in point shaving.

"If I had, I would have reported it," Valvano said in a telephone interview from Maryland, where his team was preparing for tonight's game. "But I never reported it because I never had a reason to."

Valvano said no one ever came to him with a suspicion that anyone on his teams were involved in point-shaving. "Of course not, never."

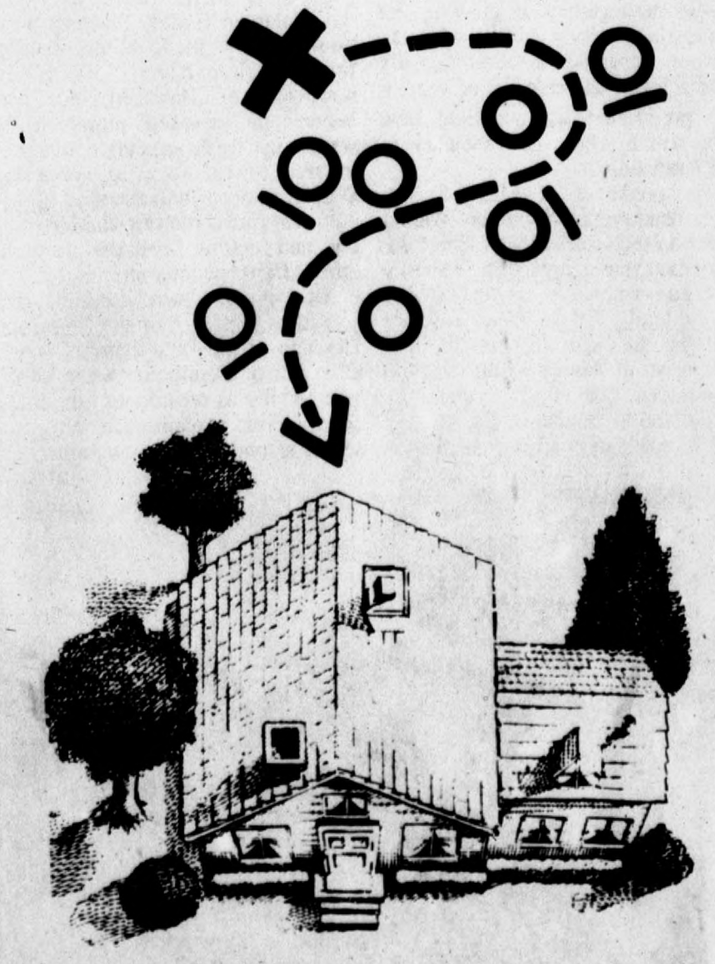

This latest allegation follows by just days an admission by former N.C. State player Charles Shackleford that he accepted about $65,000 from two men while playing at the school. The new allegations only prolong a storm of controversy that began 14 months ago.

Malamen runs tight ship in risky business

M.W. Carrot planning vegetable freezer plant

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

At 25, Larry Malamen was lying in a Minnesota hospital bed worrying about the future.

At 39, Larry Malamen is president of the largest carrot processing company between the Rio Grande Valley of Texas and the Arkansas River Valley of Colorado.

Malamen still worries about the future, but today, it's not which way to go but how far and how fast.

His plans for the 1990s call for a vegetable freezer plant which would turn seasonal fresh-vegetable marketing into a year-around business--"With the proposed freezer plan, we could be marketing our Hereford-grown vegetables 50 weeks a year. "As it is, we've got to move like the dickens, almost 24 hours a day, in season in order to get the highly perishable food to market."

He pointed out that his present on-site cold storage in Hereford will hold field-fresh vegetables in excellent condition for 30 to 45 days, "But after that, deterioration can be expected of most produce. Exact hold-time in a cold room depends on the vegetable, quality of the vegetable and how the vegetable is marketed--bagged, boxed or delivered in the bulk."

With high-quality foodstuff billed as the marketing trend of the 1990s, Malamen's freezer plant plans are right on target with consumer demands since frozen vegetables retain a higher food value than the old tin-can concept of another time.

He hesitated to reveal the exact time or place of construction of the proposed freezer plant, but confirmed that drawing board plans were in the final stages. He said the plant would have freezer capacity to handle all of the Texas Panhandle commercial vegetable production that is either not directed to the fresh-vegetable counters or where there is not enough time to market the perishables at harvest.

"I don't have the exact waste percentages on each individual vegetable crop, such as carrots or asparagus, but all too frequently we must leave some high-quality produce in the fields due to a glut at the marketplace or adverse weather conditions," said Malamen. "With proper management in planting and harvesting, along with adequate freezer capacity, we could really take a lot of the risk out of vegetable production while adding new jobs and a whole new industry to the Panhandle."

As president of M.W. Carrot, Inc., headquartered out on Walnut Road on the south edge of Hereford, Malamen runs a tight ship in a risky business--vegetable production--but he evidently thrives in an industry that is the last frontier of free enterprise in American farming--no guaranteed marketing payments or subsidized layout acres. If you can't sell it, eat it or feed it, you plow it under for fertilizer for next year's crop.

And vegetable production means big bucks in big business--frequently, quality hybrid carrot seed alone runs $40 to $50 per pound or more, and then there's tilling, irrigation, fertilizer and harvesting costs. Nearly all types of vegetable production at one point in time required much hand-labor, but in recent years vegetable growers have moved more and more toward mechanized harvesting--"If I can't harvest it with a machine, I won't plant it," said one leading Hereford vegetable grower and processor, while commenting on current farm labor regulations.

But Malamen is one of the few Panhandle vegetable processors who still dabbles in hand-harvested vegetables..asparagus, pumpkins, squash and once in a great while, a little cabbage and lettuce. He built his own carrot digger eight years ago, and with two rigs now in operation, he sometimes sends one to the Texas Winter Garden regions during off-season production on the High Plains. he also plants considerable acreage of turnips which are machine-harvested similar to carrots, and as carrots make excellent cattle feed if markets dip below production costs..."But it's kinda hard to make ends meet if you have to market vegetables by the acre or ton instead of by the pound."

Having about 1,000 acres of carrots under growing contracts with Hereford-area farmers, Malamen maintains a low industry-profile despite the fact that his multimillion-dollar company stands as the second largest carrot producer in Texas and Number One on the High Plains. With annual gross vegetable sales now running between $1-$2 million, his payroll takes the big end of the annual haul--just under $400,000.

"We're really fortunate to have a great workforce," said Malamen, as he gave much credit of his success to his plant management and day-to-day employees. "If you can't get good help, then you might as well close up shop and go home." His sister, Jody, is office manager.

The veteran vegetable grower and processor also gives much praise to his wife, Sue, in the building of M.W. Carrot, Inc., and the Malamen Farms. She not only knows every inch of the family farm headquartered 10 miles northwest of Hereford, but has become a seasoned merchant in setting up fresh vegetable markets in area towns, such as Amarillo. During a recent harvest, Sue Malamen was found running fall harvesting and getting loadouts at their family farm headquarters.

During that same season, she served as president of the Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce while Larry was serving as president of the city-county civic organization. He also serves as one of the key members of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission headquartered in Amarillo.

With carrots being his main crop, Malamen pointed out that some 40 percent of production is shipped out of Hereford for distant markets in New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma, in addition to the fresh-vegetable bagged markets in the Amarillo-Lubbock area.

"With improved hybrid varieties and planting techniques, we can start harvesting here in hot weather, say in early August, and then run straight into December," said Malamen. "We now think of carrots as being a 4 1/2-month run instead of just a late fall production. We shoot for a carrot having good appearance, high quality in food value and excellent taste qualities...7 to 9 inches long."

Having been incorporated in 1982, M.W. Carrot is now totally a fresh-vegetable company, with nothing going to the canneries. And the proposed freezer plant would not alter this present image or concept since frozen foods are regarded as a branch of the fresh-vegetable industry and not the canneries."

"There's nothing wrong with the canneries, but that is not our marketing concept here at Hereford--we're staying with fresh-vegetable marketing," Malamen added.

There were five carrot packing plants in the Panhandle when Malamen opened for business here in 1982, and by 1987, M.W. Carrot was the only carrot company on the High Plains. Recently, however, a new plant opened at Muleshoe. Bob Wagoner was partner in M.W. Carrot in 1980, but after two years in the business, he threw in the towel and went to Arkansas. Other than a couple of shareholdeers in the company, Malamen is sole owner of M.W. Carrot, Inc.

Born and reared on a vegetable farm near Anoka, Minn., Malamen is the grandson of a Bulgarian immigrant, and frequently speaks of his heritage in the North Country while relating to his Texas venture.

At the age of 25, Malamen wound up in a Minnesota hospital wondering what the future held for he and his young family. Unexpected chest seizures had put him in the middle of a team of diagnostic doctors--too much stress under long working hours in the vegetable business. At this point in time, Malamen, his brother, Mike, and mother, Lorraine, were running a family vegetable business that include around 400 acres of radishes, perishables that were shipped out day and night to such distant points as Florida and Texas.

"A lot of times when we'd make a run of radishes into Dallas, we'd pick up a back-haul of something out of Hereford and our truck drivers frequently talked of Hereford," recalled Malamen. "We back--hauled all sorts of grain commodities and vegetables into the Minneapolis markets."

Malamen said he had made up his mind to make a move from the family farm while recuperating in the hospital and one day while reading newspaper classifieds in the hospital, he saw a few words telling of a Deaf Smith County farm for sale. That was in the fall of 1976, and after making contact with the Hereford real estate agent and making a trip to Hereford, Malamen and his family left his native state of Minnesota for an irrigation farm in the Texas Panhandle in January of 1977: "I remember I flew to Hereford the day after the Minnesota Vikings got clobbered in the Super Bowl in 1977."

But Malamen was not coming to Texas to farm vegetables--he was coming to farm wheat and grain and become a part of a more slower pace of life. But after a couple of growing seasons, Malamen was not getting the net returns he had anticipated from the Minnesota hospital bed. So, he moved back into an industry he had known from childhood--vegetables, But as far as stress and long working hours was concerned, it was like jumping from the frying pan into the fire...one crop led to another and by 1982, Malamen and a partner had acquired an old packing shed to put their carrot processing plant in operation. Malamen had built his first vegetable shed at the family farm in 1980, and after seeing the marketing possibilities, moved headlong into a total carrot operation.

One of the many innovations which Malamen introduced to the Panhandle carrot processing business was the water conveyors rather than belt conveyors from dumping pits to sorting tables..he floated his carrots to the tables rather moving them by belt: "Since they have to be thoroughly washed in the first place, why not use water energy to float them to the processing points...it has worked very well for us."

"I thought that first year (1980) we would pack a few turnips and squash and the next year put in some carrot equipment," recalled Malamen, as detailed his first shed at the family farm which contained an office and a cold room. "But then, as you can see, the business mushroomed. During this time, we kept raising enough grain to keep us humble."

His first move into the professional packing business was to lease a building and buy about a $10,000 worth of vegetable handling equipment, with a local Credit Union being his main financial backing back in those early days.

"Other than the farm, we started the vegetable packing business basically on a wing and prayer," he added, with a grin, as he recalled how the 1982 season almost took him under, financially, but after regrouping his losses and projections, he moved forward with even greater marketing horizons.

By 1985, Malamen had bought out his partner and had attained a much larger and better location just off U.S. 385, with greater space for the refrigerator semitrailer trucks used for long-distance hauling.

Malamen pointed out that in order to have an orderly marketing schedule under controlled harvesting, carrot production begins at planting time which begins about April 1, planting only 20 to 30 acres for the first couple of weeks, then gradually increase plantings to about 40 acres per week until around June 1. During the first week of June, carrot plantings are hiked to around 100 acres per week and continued as such into July.

"Any carrots planted by July will basically be ready by Nov. 1," said Malamen. "The carrots that are planted later in the summer will come off in late November or early December."

The Hereford vegetable grower-shipper said all contract vegetable production is grown under certain specifications, with little or no room for novices in the vegetable business. Malamen carrots are planted in dry seedbeds to allow a more uniform system of planting--"We have planters that will place the seed exactly like we want the crop to grow...there's no thinning required in our carrot fields. We have a planter manufactured out of Sweden which does an excellent job of monitoring seed..some of the hybrid seed will run cost $140 per acre." Most carrot seed is produced in Idaho and Washington.

Malamen's harvesting equipment is all shop-built in Hereford, two-row rigs that are classed among the finest in the business, self-propelled units fully hydraulically controlled.

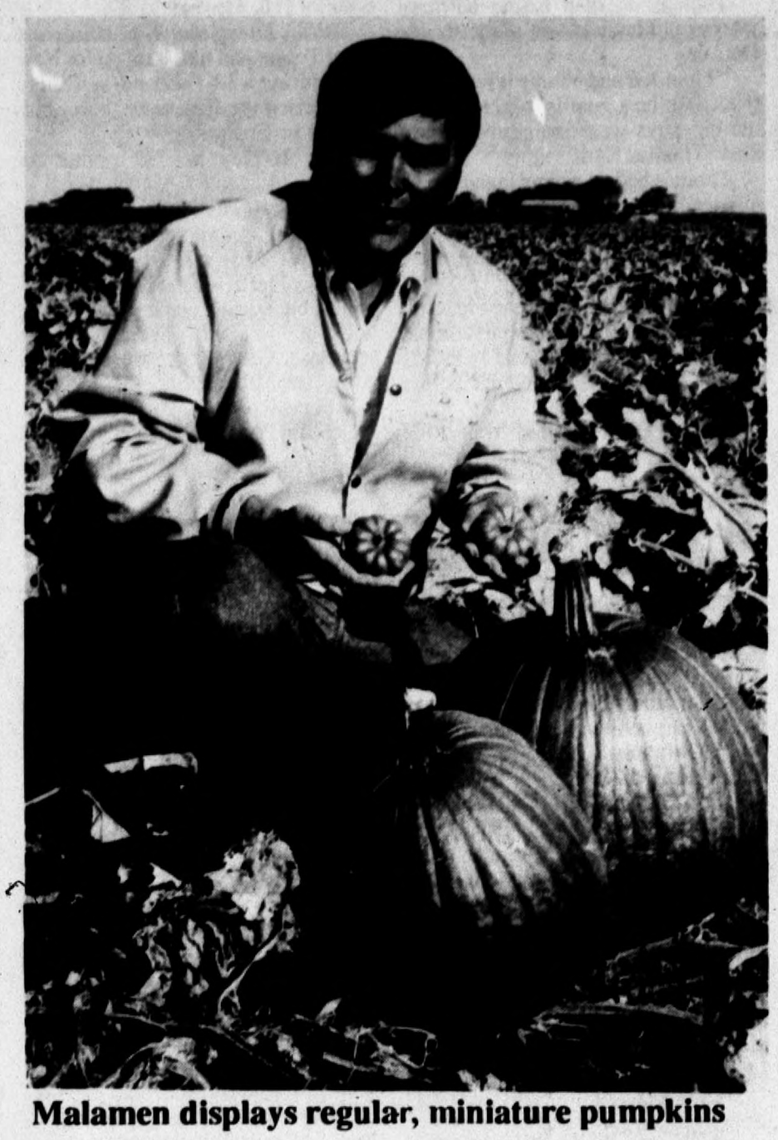

The Malamens grow three varieties of squash--Acorn, butternut and spaghetti, all of which are sold on fresh-vegetable markets. Most of the pumpkins are marketed during the Halloween season, with some of the miniature varieties marketed as novelties the year-around. Turnips blend with carrot production, but an early-fall freeze this past season turned a high-dollar crop into cattle feed: "Abnormal weather conditions go with the territory in the vegetable business...when it's really right and when it's wrong it's really wrong."

Malamen harvested his first asparagus crop in 1988, pointing out that this highly-perishable crop is an exacting plant when it comes to harvesting--"We've learned a lot during the past two years, but asparagus is going to be a good crop for the Hereford area. There's an excellent market and it grows well here but we had a lot to learn since I had never grown a stalk of asparagus in my life."

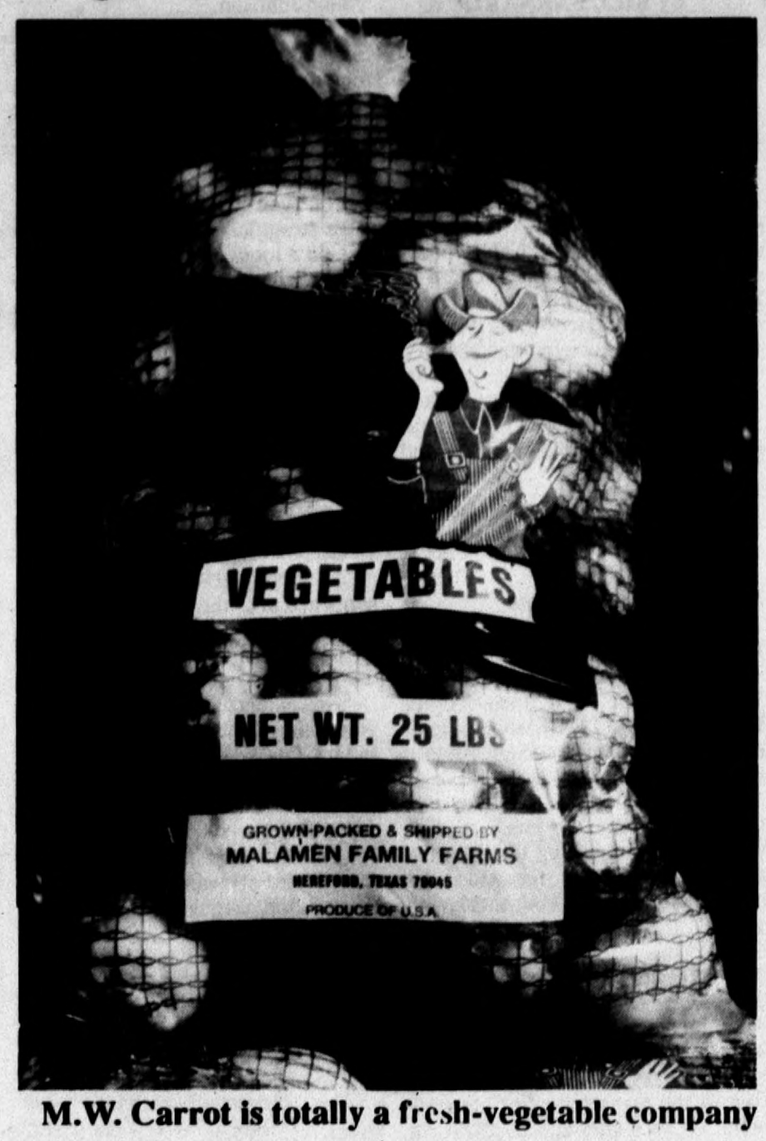

Asparagus plants, when properly maintained, will continue production for 20 to 25 years without replanting, but harvesting is an intensive hand-labor situation.

"We have asparagus in ice water in less than two hours after being snapped," said Malamen. "As a matter of fact, it was our hydro-cooler and ice--making facilities that brought the idea of going to asparagus--we already had the ice-making capabilities and that is one of the big requirements in asparagus marketing. Asparagus harvesting begins about the first of April and runs for about five weeks."

At the present time, Malamen is marketing his entire production in the High Plains-Albuquerque areas, but this marketing area will expand as production expands.

Carrot marketing, however, has almost become a national business for the Hereford-based firm, with sales in the Gulf Coast and Southeastern states, and into the Chicago-Detroit areas during off-seasons of Midwest production. Pumpkins are also shipped on a national level, from San Antonio to Florida.

Malamen also has a year-around sprout production business that caters to the health-food markets. His main lines here are alfalfa and bean sprouts which are marketed as fresh-vegetable specialties.

Between Malamen Farms and M.W. Carrot, the labor count will run around 100 during harvesting seasons, with a minimum staff maintained for off-season work.

"It's not unusual for our payroll to run $20,000 a week during peak season," said Malamen. "I don't like to see it this high because it means you're putting in a lot of over-time, but it also means you're moving a lot of products."

The packing sheds are operated six days a week during harvest seasons, with many of the work-days running from 6-to-6. The work force sometimes returns at night for another three-hour shift..."We pay over-time for anything over 40 hours a week." We never work on Sundays."

Even during harvests, Malamen tries to sell out of inventory rather than direct from processing lines. This is made possible with extensive cold storage which now can handle around five semitrailer loads at the main plant and cold storage at the farm that can handle another couple loads..45,000 pounds to the load. The coolers are held between 36 and 38 degrees on all fresh-market vegetables, with 95 to 99 percent humidity.

On the Malamen Family farm, the vegetables are rotated with wheat and some grain, but mostly wheat, allowing diversified marketing system.

Malamen's grandfather, George Malamen, arrived at Ellis Island in 1918, seeking a new way of life in the U.S. A native of Bulgaria, he migrated west to the Ohio valley country and the land kept getting better so he moved further west to the Mississippi Valley and eventually wound up in North Dakota. Here, he homesteaded, but he lost the Dakota farm during the Great Depression and decided to return to Bulgaria, but got only as far as Minneapolis where he started a truck garden out on the north edge of town in the small community of Anoka. In addition to vegetable production, this area of the U.S. is also known for its production of peat soils, having an annual rainfall of around 36 inches.

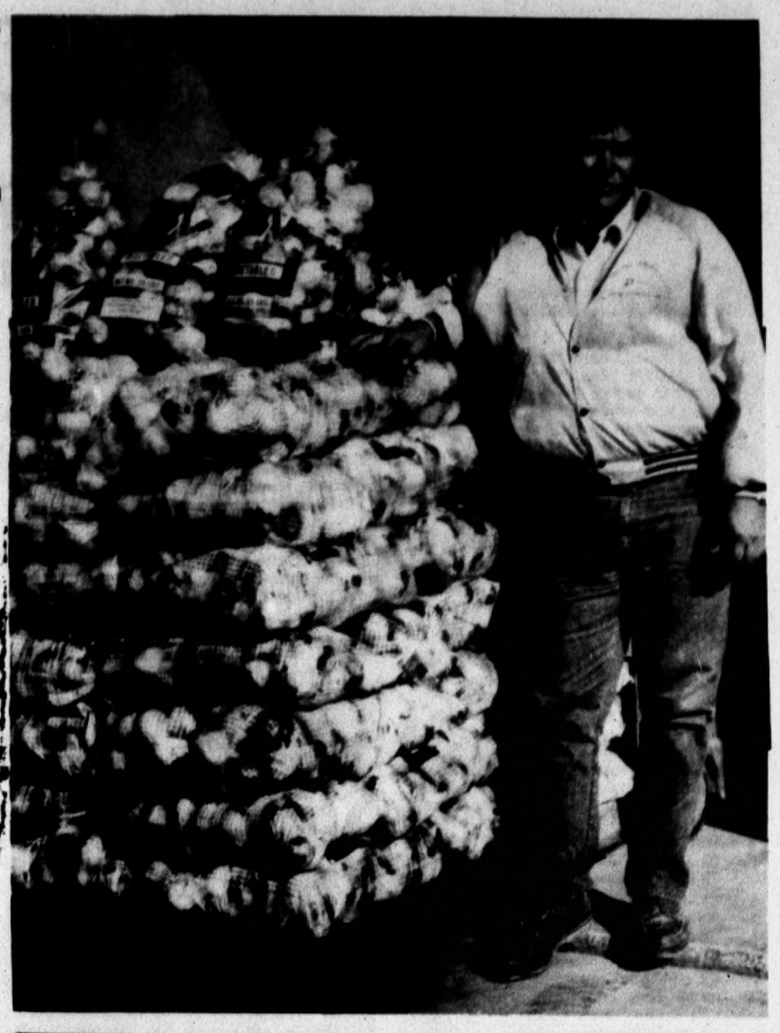

Malamen's father, James, was one in a family of eight and after marrying in 1948, developed a sizable vegetable production which at one point in time included nearly 600 acres of vegetables. However, he died at the early age of 40 of a brain tumor, leaving a wife and young family in charge of a nation-wide vegetable business. Larry Malamen continued to carry his load of the family business until his move to hereford in 1977.

The Larry Malamens three children--Joey, Kari and Brianne--were all pre-school age when the family moved to Texas, thus their lifestyles have been developed with a Texas flare. Joey will graduate form Hereford High School this spring.

The Malamens believe the Hereford region is the finest farming country in the U.S., with the city of Hereford having the leadership needed to keep rural communities on an upbeat.

Malamen believes the decade of the 1990s will see Hereford moving on a more positive note: "I believe the whole town is now moving with more enthusiasm than it was during the 1980s...kinda like it was back in the 1970s when we arrived from Minnesota...we've got it all if we'll just use it."

The Scots did not invent the bagpipe. It is actually a very ancient instrument, which was introduced into the British Isles by the Romans.

Lack of worker's comp can subject employers to liability

COMMISSIONER
Mary Scott Nabers

TEXAS BUSINESS TODAY

Dear Commissioner Nabers, I am starting a small business and want to know if I have to carry Workers' Compensation insurance. I did not think I had to, but a friend of mine said I did. Also, assuming I am not required to carry Workers' Compensation, can you tell me what my liabilities are without it?

T.P.
San Antonio, Tx.

Dear T.P., Under Texas law, you are NOT required to carry Workers' Compensation insurance.

Employers who choose not to carry this coverage have UNLIMITED liability for an accident. They also LOSE the right to use certain common law defenses in a law suit. For example, the employer cannot defend himself by saying that the accident was caused by the negligence of other employees, or that the injured employee was partly or wholly responsible because of his own negligence. Neither can the employer plead "assumption of risk" - that is, the worker knew of the danger but voluntarily accepted it.

Dear Commissioner Nabers, If I hire a temporary employee through a temporary services company, can that employee file a claim for unemployment insurance benefits naming my company as their employer?

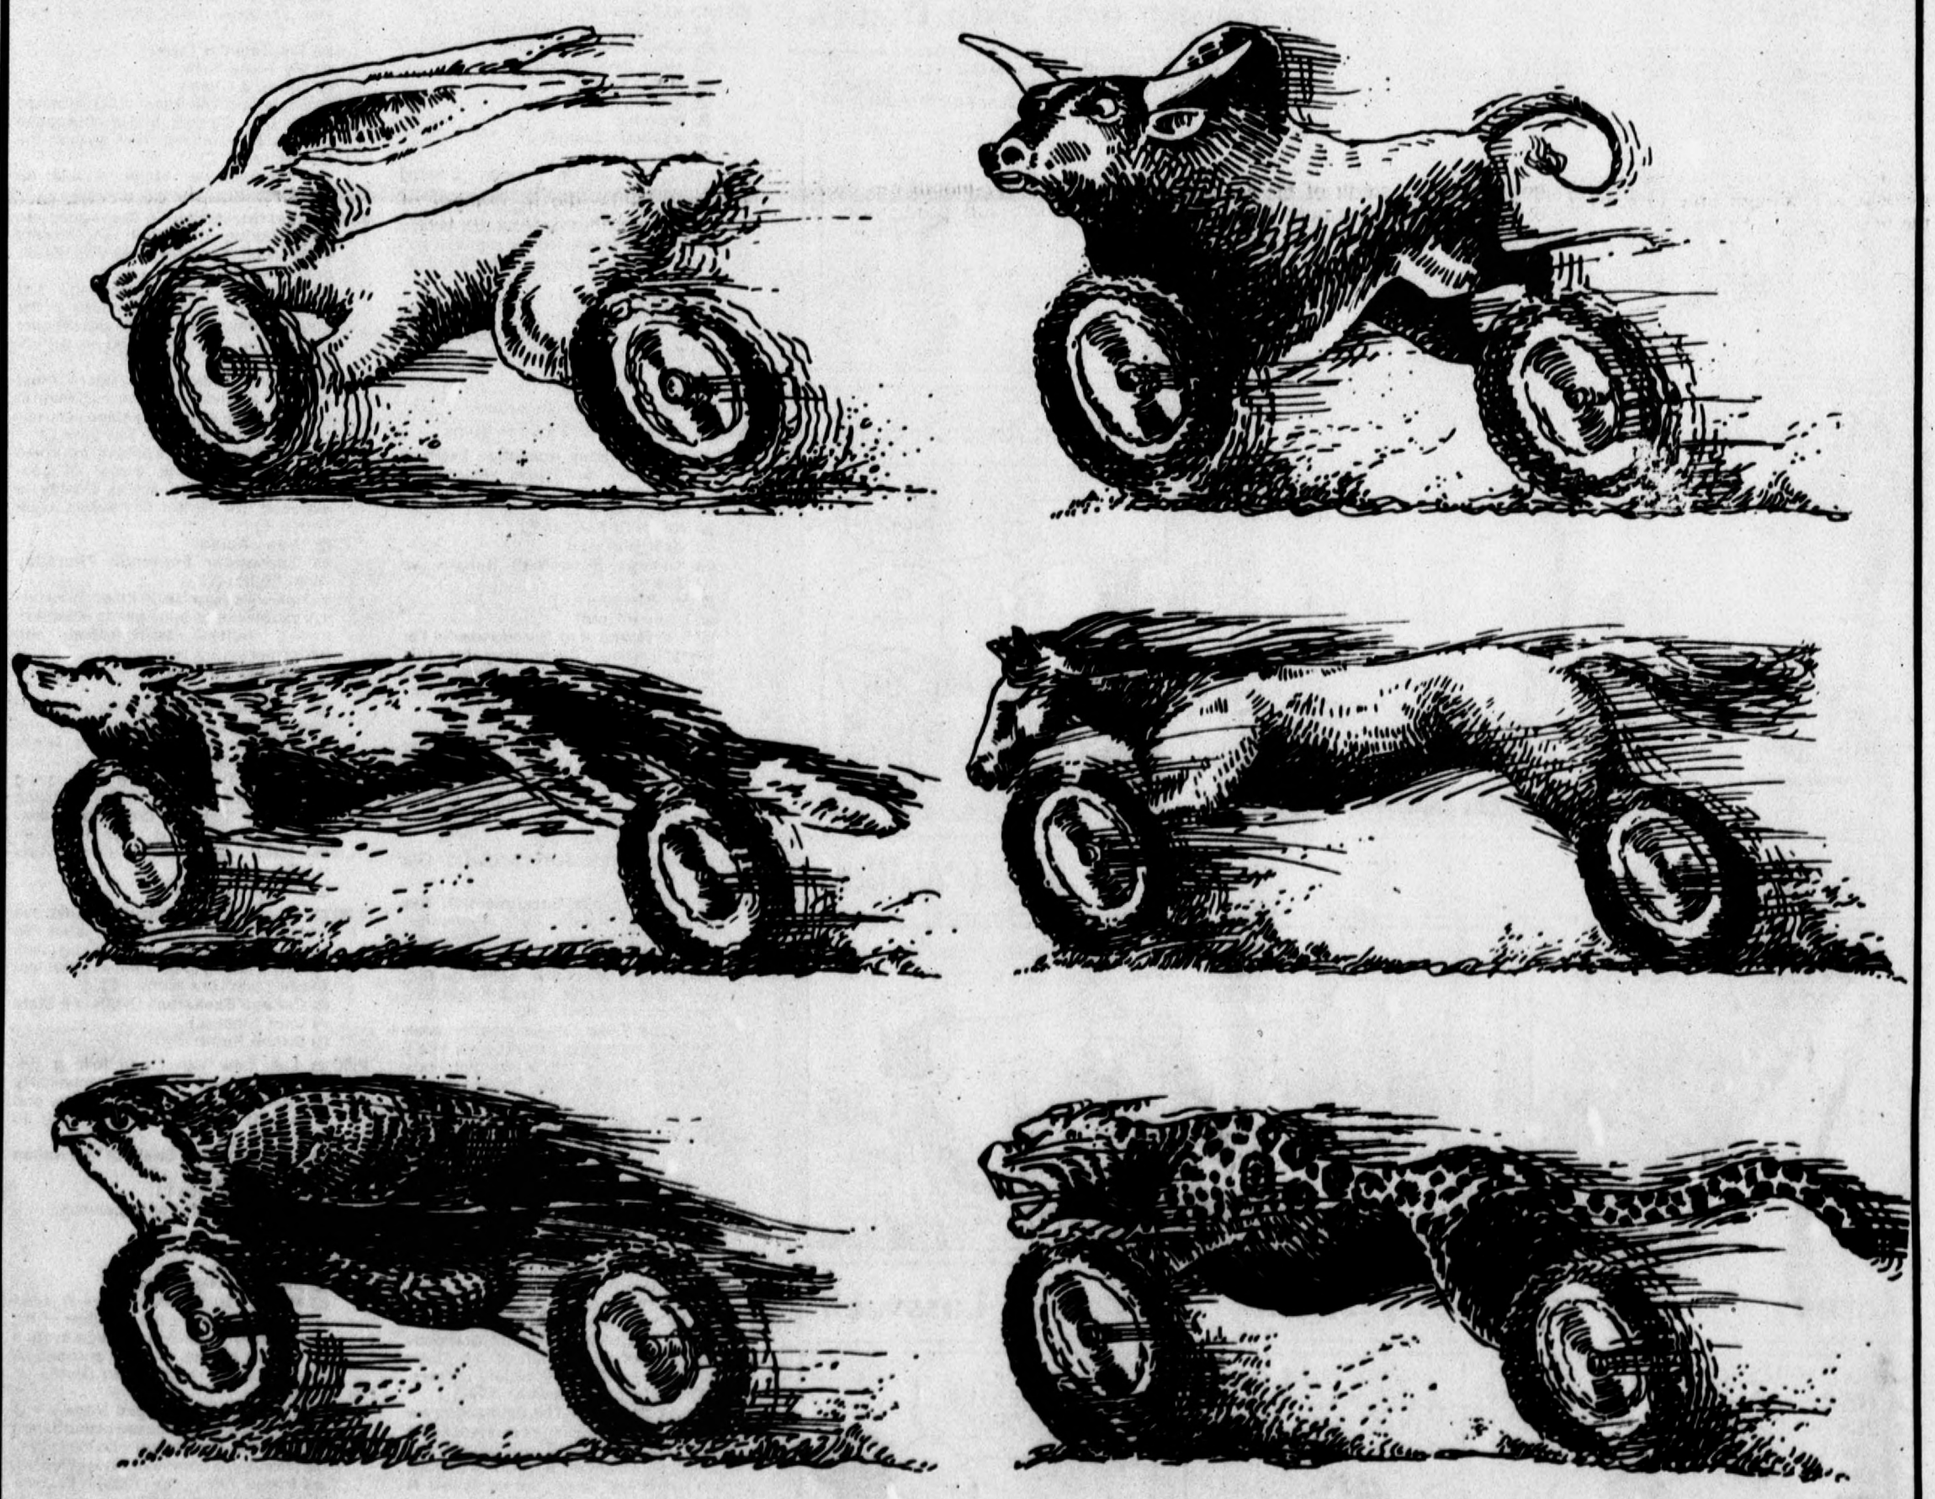

K.G.
Galena Park, Tx.

Dear K.G., Most temporary service companies qualify as the employer of the workers that they send to clients. If your company is named on a claim from such a temporary worker, you should respond on the claim form, telling the local TEC the name of the temporary service which provided you with the worker. Under no circumstances should you ignore the claim notice.

You should also contact the temporary service and let them know what has happened. Ideally, temporary service companies should inform all of their workers of the proper way to file unemployment claims because part of the service you, the client, are paying for is to be relieved of unemployment insurance concerns.

Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers represents all Texas employers. If you have any questions you want answered, please write Commissioner Nabers at: TEXAS BUSINESS TODAY, 614 TEC Building, 15th and Congress, Austin, Tx., 78778.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I must take issue with "Other Side of Story." I don't mean to belittle the problems faced by today's youth, but I'm one of the '30s kids who grew up on the plains of the West during the Great Depression.

"Other Side" should ask his grandparents what it was like to see a friend die in an iron lung or crippled for life from polio. Has he witnessed a brother or sister delirious from scarlet fever or measles or racked by whooping cough? Does he know of a neighbor or relative who suffered the agony of tuberculosis and a life in a sanitarium? No, we didn't worry about AIDS, but we had other scourges.

Most people were poor in the 30's -- some were just poorer than others. There was very little welfare back then and no food stamps. My mother raised three children, competing in a man's world when women were not supposed to work. She was left a single parent when my father died in 1932, because there was no miracle drug to cure his pneumonia.

In spite of this, we didn't sit around feeling sorry for ourselves. We made do with what we had. We respected each other, and we dreamed, we worked and we fought for a brighter future. And now it's here. --Proud We Won in Ohio.

DEAR OHIO: You've written a fine letter that will jar loose a lot of memories, but anyone born after 1940 won't have the faintest notion of what you are talking about.

This is off the point, but I can't help but notice that all the illnesses you mentioned -- polio, measles, whooping cough, TB and pneumonia -- are no longer the hideous killers they once were because of the progress made through animal experimentation. And now, researchers in laboratories all over the world are working furiously on a cure or a vaccine for AIDS, and the animal essential to this research is the monkey. Yet millions of people are violently opposed to using animals for medical research. Does this make any sense? I leave it to you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing about a personal and confidential matter that has bothered me for years. I'm becoming frightened and don't know what to do.

My husband and I have not paid any federal income tax since we have been married, which is going on seven years. We are struggling to pay our bills and can't afford to hire a tax attorney.

Could you check your resources and see what would happen if we contacted the Internal Revenue Service? We know the amount will be staggering, but we desperately want to get this matter cleared up, so we can sleep at night.

Can you help? -- Worried in Madison, Wis.

DEAR WORRIED: Every February, I get about 100 letters like yours. I consulted with my own tax accountant, Edward Simpkin of Northbrook, Ill., and this is his response:

"It is uncertain what would happen if you contacted an IRS office on your own, but I recommend that you be represented by an experienced tax expert. (This is not a do-it-yourself project.) Contact the Wisconsin Institute of CPAs (Brookfield, Wis.) or the State Bar of Wisconsin in Madison for recommendations. You may be able to find a professional willing to work with you for a reduced fee and an extended payment plan. Good luck."

P.S. This is Ann talking: Go ahead and do it. I've heard from folks who have, and it wasn't nearly as grim as they feared. A clear conscience is the world's best sleeping pill.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.45.)

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ronald Reagan received an honorary degree from Israel's largest institute of higher learning, Tel Aviv University, one of several Jewish honors given the former president so far this year.

The presentation Sunday at a star-studded dinner at the Century Plaza Hotel cited Reagan's "steadfast friendship for the Jewish people and vehement rejection of anti-Semitism."

In recent weeks, Reagan has been honored by the American Jewish Committee and Hebrew University. In a few weeks, he will be feted by the United Jewish Appeal Drive.

Reagan joked to the appreciative black-tie audience that his receipt of the honorary doctor of philosophy degree "cannot be based on any academic achievements."

He went on to explain that his alma mater, Eureka College in Illinois, once gave him an honorary degree 25 years after his graduation.

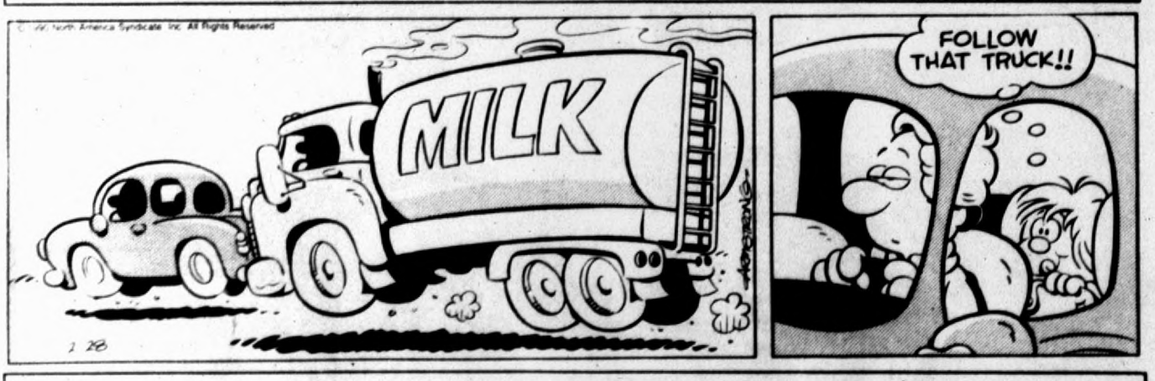

"That only aggravated a sense of guilt that I nursed for 25 years," Reagan said.

Get drugs off streets

America's bankers have declared war! In full cooperation with government authorities, America's commercial, Full Service Banks, have pledged to make it tough for drug dealers to "launder" the incredible amounts of cash that are generated by this despicable trade.

In the past, law enforcement agencies have focused on the distribution of drugs and the people who sell them. Now, they are adding another line of defense. They are going after the money.

It's a fact that as much as $110 billion from crime might be funneled through reputable financial institutions each year, disguised as legitimate business cash flow. With the alert involvement of commercial, Full Service Banks, the drug traffickers can be dealt a serious blow. That's why we now have Bankers Against Drug Dealers. And your own banker is going to play a major part in this national effort.

The theory of this onging drive is quite simple. If the drug trade can't use banks to move the money, they will have to try other avenues that will make them more vulnerable to capture. This strike at drugs will work three ways:

1. It will make the lure of dealing in large volumes of cash plenty risky, with long prison sentence the ultimate reward.

2. It will prevent drug dealers from readily parking U.S. dollars in overseas hidden accounts.

3. It will make it very difficult for drug dealers to pay off associates and growers.

To accomplish this goal, bankers must have help and understanding from all of their valued customers. Early in 1990, America's commercial, Full Service Banks may begin asking any customers who make larger transactions for positive identification. Even costumers they have known for years. In addition, bank employees will need to take a few extra moments to record such transactions. At all times they will be on the lookout for suspicious behavior or deposit patterns.

Juniors, seniors to preview WT

High school students will be on the West Texas State University campus Friday and Saturday for Junior/Senior Preview, a special visitation weekend designed to give high school juniors and seniors a taste of college life.

Although it will probably be the "murder mystery" contest, student dance, University Sing or lunch with the faculty that Preview participants remember most, they will also leave with some knowledge of student organizations, campus living, admission requirements, new student programs and financial aid.

"We hope they get a feeling for what it's really like to be a WTSU student, including staying in a residence hall and eating at the dining hall," Tana Miller, assistant director of admissions, said. "We will provide them with information that will be important should they decide to come to WTSU, but mostly we want them to have fun and to leave with good memories."

Preview weekend starts at 4:30 p.m. Friday and continues through lunch Saturday. Cost is $5 for Friday night's activities.

High school juniors and seniors interested in participating should call the WTSU office at admissions at 806-656-2020.

Fellowship meeting set Thursday

Guest Speaker for the Flame Fellowship meeting will be Joyce Johnson, associate pastor of Evangel Temple, of Plainview.

Johnson has ministered in Canada and the United States and for many women's conferences. She has a radio program over KKYN called "Word of Wisdom".

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Hereford Community Center, March 1. The public is invited.

In medieval France, King Philip decreed that the points on his subject's shoes should be between six and twelve inches—the longer the point, the higher the rank.

A 1979 airliner crash at Chicago's O'Hare Airport claimed 275 lives.

Let us show you a Texas you've never seen before.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.
This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Wear it right!

Shoulder belts should be snug. Don't allow more than 1 inch of slack. Never wear the belt behind your back or under your arm. The correct position is over the shoulder, snug across the chest, and low on the lap.

The legislature and the supreme court should not limit the right of citizens to demand a trial by jury of their peers in either civil or criminal cases.

La legislatura y la corte suprema no deberan limitar el derecho de cualquier ciudadano a exigir un juicio por jurado, sea en caso civil o criminal.

- FOR (A FAVOR DE)
- AGAINST (EN CONTRA DE)

The elected legislature, not an appointed federal judge, should act to maintain Texans' right to nominate and elect judges instead of creating an appointed judiciary. The legislative plan should include the nomination and election of urban district judges from districts with smaller populations (similar to the population of existing judicial districts in rural areas).

La legislatura elegida, y no un juez federal nombrado, debera mantener el derecho de todos los Tejanos de designar y elegir jueces, en vez de crear una judicial nombrado. El plan legislativo debera incluir el nombramiento y eleccion de jueces de distritos urbanos que tienen poblaciones pequenas (parecidas a las poblaciones de existentes distritos judiciales rurales).

- FOR (A FAVOR DE)
- AGAINST (EN CONTRA DE)

The legislature should adopt comprehensive insurance reform legislation to eliminate price fixing, cause an immediate rollback of insurance rates, and require insurance companies to engage in good faith and fair dealing with policyholders.

La legislatura debera aceptar un comprensivo programa legislativo de reformacion de seguros a proposito de eliminar la fijacion de precios, devolver a un limite previo los precios que se pagan pro un seguro, y requirir que las empresas de seguros actuen de buena fe y que sean imparciales cuando traten con sus clientes.

Here's some diet myths

Almost everyone has a can't fail method for losing weight. But if we know so much about dieting, why are 64 percent of Americans overweight?

"There are many myths about dieting that people accept without question," says registered dietitian Audrey Blumenfeld, "and following these myths may actually sabotage weight loss efforts."

What's your "diet IQ?" Mark each question TRUE or FALSE, to see if you can separate diet fact from fiction:

1. The best diets allow you to lose weight quickly.

2. As long as you stick to a certain calorie total, it doesn't matter if the calories come from fat, carbohydrates or protein.

3. Starchy foods (pasta, potatoes) are fattening.

4. If you lose weight and gain it back, you'll gain mostly water and it will be easier to lose.

5. Fasting is a good way to lose weight.

ANSWERS:

1. FALSE. "Many people who lose weight quickly gain it back nearly as fast," says Blumenfeld. "As soon as they stop dieting, they go back to their old eating habits and regain the weight. Slow but steady weight loss is more likely to be permanent." Her tips for dieting: aim to lose one or two pounds a week; eat your favorite foods, but less often and in smaller amounts; exercise daily, and change your behavior. (If you always snack while preparing dinner, chew diet gum, instead. It curbs your appetite while it satisfies your urge to chew.)

2. FALSE. One gram of fat has nine calories, while protein and carbohydrates have only four calories per gram. So given the same amount of calories to "spend," you would actually get to eat more food if you choose protein and carbohydrates.

"Fats are found in gravy, salad dressing, butter, margarine and mayonnaise," says Blumenfeld. "They add flavor and texture, but they can't be chewed. Eating carbohydrates will give you greater oral satisfaction."

3. FALSE. The best way to lose weight is to eat more carbohydrates, such as breads, pasta, cereals and potatoes. Just avoid toppings such as butter and sour cream. A healthy diet should be 50 to 60 percent carbohydrates, 12 to 20 percent protein and 30 percent fat.

4. FALSE. If you lose weight and gain it back, the extra weight is added as overall body fat (not water), and proportionately less lean body mass (muscle). So the weight you gain back will be even harder to lose.

5. FALSE. When you fast, your body interprets it as starvation and lowers its metabolism to conserve energy. So you may eat less food and still be unable to lose weight.

The truth of the matter, according to Blumenfeld: If you're serious about losing weight, eat healthier foods, consume less calories and exercise more.

Tips for travelers

If you are traveling by plane with small children, tell the airline in advance. Special services can be made available, such as priority seating, early boarding and bassinets

Try to familiarize yourself with the metric system if you're planning to spend time in another country. If you rent a car abroad, for example, it's necessary to know that the measure of distance used in many places, the kilometer, equals five-eighths of a mile.

Many airlines are engaged in a heated competition to offer the best vacation deals to sunny spots. The result: lower prices and increased service to warm and sunny vacation destinations, travel experts report. In fact, some carrier's serves 92 "sun destinations."

The air service is supplemented by the carrier's own brand of vacation packages. Grand Destinations, which carry an exclusive double-your-money back guarantee. Travelers save money by using this service to book hotel, transfers and other destination services at the same time as the airline reservations.

Pack with practicality in mind. Take a few useful items that will get you through an emergency: a sewing kit, a first-aid kit, an umbrella, an extra pair of glasses.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Producer Saul Zaentz owes his ex-wife a $300,000 share of the proceeds from the Oscar-winning movie "Amadeus," a state appeals court ruled.

The decision, released Monday, upheld a ruling by the judge at the couple's divorce trial that Zaentz made $600,000 in unstated income from the 1984 film, which won an Academy Award as best picture.

Half that amount belongs to his former wife, Lynda, under California's community property law.
