Rivals warily eye Perot

Camps try to stall modest resurgence in polls

■ President Bush, Democrat Al Gore urge independent's supporters not to waste their votes.

Associated Press

President Bush said Thursday he has a "pleasant relationship" with Bill Clinton, then freshened his attack on his rival's character and economic proposals. The Democrat said that after 12 years in power, the GOP has "run out of direction and they ought to be run out of town."

With a dozen days left before the election, fresh polls measured Clinton's lead in double digits, but both he and the president shot nervous glances in Ross Perot's direction.

The third man in the race has "some good ideas and he's got some nutty ideas," the president said in an interview on "CBS This Morning." "I don't think people want to waste their vote (on Perot) and that's what it undoubtedly would be."

Clinton didn't mention Perot by name but lumped him with Bush by implication. "Of all the choices you have in this election, only one has never been part of the Washington insider establishment," he said of himself. The Clinton campaign has referred to Perot's previous ties to the Nixon administration and his congressional lobbying.

Three fresh polls agreed that Clinton was ahead, Bush second and Perot third but enjoying a modest boost in the wake of recently concluded campaign

Clock ticks down

WASHINGTON — Darkness will settle over most of America a little earlier starting this weekend, as the nation falls back to standard time. The change, which comes at 2 a.m. Sunday and remains in effect until the first Sunday in April, will have no effect in Hawaii, Arizona and parts of Indiana that don't observe daylight time. Fire officials, meanwhile, are making their annual pitch for Americans to use the time change as a safety reminder. "Change your clock; change your battery," is the slogan being used to urge people to replace the batteries in their smoke detectors.

It's San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO — Bob Hope announced Thursday that San Antonio will be the setting for his Christmas television special this year. Hope will tape the program, titled "Bob Hope's 4-Star Christmas Fiesta from San Antonio," in the Alamo City Dec. 2-6. The hour-long show will feature the San Antonio River Walk, the Alamo, Sea World of Texas, Fiesta Texas and Alamo Stadium. It will air Dec. 20 on NBC. Clint Black, Rita Rudner, Les Brown, Texas Gov. Ann Richards and The Associated Press All-America football team will be the guests, as will Hope's wife, Dolores Hope.

Official touts Hispanics' opportunities

Annual banquet celebrates 500 years of heritage

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Opportunities for Hispanic Americans are out there despite what statistics might say, according to one government official.

"There are 400,000 businesses out there generating $250 billion for the economy and they are small Hispanic businesses," said Stella Guerra, assistant secretary for Territorial and International Affairs for the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Ms. Guerra spoke to about 250 Midlanders gathered for the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce's 8th Anniversary and Installation Banquet at the Midland Hilton Thursday.

"We are experiencing a painful economy right now, but we can overcome any challenge," she said. "Those 400,000 small Hispanic businesses are the promise of our future. Success is the reward of hard work and determination."

She also pointed to the North American Free Trade Agreement with Mexico as an opportunity for the Texas economy to grow.

"This agreement with Mexico is in the best interest of everyone," she said. "Mexico is the main export market for Texas."

She also praised President George Bush for his appointment of Hispanics to government positions.

"President Bush has named more Hispanics to jobs than any other president," she said. "From the surgeon general to numbers of assistant secretaries."

Ms. Guerra, a native Texan, joked about her 5-foot-2 stature as she took the podium and had to stand on a box

Police chief: Officer acted within policy

Officer Phil Partin fired three shots at Francisco Madrid Wednesday morning, striking him in the head, chest and shoulder, as Madrid ran toward him with a knife, said Chief of Police Richard Czech Thursday.

Madrid was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

A Midland Police Department shooting team's preliminary investigation found that Partin and two other officers at the scene performed within departmental regulations, police said.

Czech said officers are trained to fire at least three times when attacked with a deadly weapon.

"And they're told to shoot to kill if they're going to pull their weapon. They're told they better be ready for a fatality," he said. "Otherwise, they could still put themselves at risk."

Partin, a 22-year-old rookie, has been placed on routine administrative leave with pay. He and his wife are receiving counseling in conjunction with the inci-

United Way tries to lasso final $1.2 million

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Jess Parrish, campaign chairman of the United Way of Midland, believes volunteers can raise another $1.2 million in less than three weeks.

"We must. Have you thought about what will happen if we don't?" he asked Thursday afternoon at the third report luncheon at Centennial Plaza. "If we have to cut back on some of these agencies . . . that's no good. Someone remains illiterate, someone is abused, someone goes hungry or homeless. We have to raise every penny of our goal."

Thus far, the 1992-'93 campaign has netted $1,541,280 of the fund-raising goal of $2,755,000. The money will be distributed to 17 community services agencies.

The luncheon, where division chairmen reported how much money they have raised so far, followed this year's theme "How the West was Won . . . The United Way."

'Yogurt slaying' suspects face murder trial in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Two men sought in the brutal slayings of four teen-age girls in Austin have been arrested and will be tried in Mexico, officials said Thursday.

Porfirio Villa Saavedra, 23, and Alber o Cortez, 22, were charged with premeditated murder in the Dec. 6, 1991, slayings in a yogurt store. Officials said the two have confessed to the crime.

If found guilty, the men could be sentenced to a maximum of 30 years in prison. There is no death penalty in Mexico.

They also will be tried on rape charges, based on a Travis County indictment for a sexual assault that took place three weeks before the yogurt store killings, officials said.

The two also have been charged with drug trafficking

Tycoon's rise boosts Lebanon's hopes

By Mohammed Salam
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Billionaire Rafik Hariri was named prime minister Thursday, igniting hopes that his wealth, drive and connections would lead war-shattered Lebanon out of economic distress.

Hundreds of jubilant supporters chanted "Long live our savior!" and fireworks lit the sky in Beirut after news of the appointment of Hariri, whose rise from humble origins to immense wealth has long captivated the public.

Many Lebanese believe that Hariri's business savvy and experience in building a personal fortune can help him get things done in politics — similar to the view some Americans have of presidential candidate Ross Perot.

The Lebanese pound rose to 2,000 to the dollar, 205 pounds higher than its Wednesday close, after Hariri emerged as the likely head of the new government.

The tycoon's links to Saudi Arabia — Lebanon's main bankroller — and other oil-rich Persian Gulf nations, could help bring in investment and resume badly needed aid to shore up the war-shattered nation. Hariri also has the backing of Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon.

'The top priority of the new government will be to seize the reins of Lebanon's destiny and undertake a quantum leap to reshape the future.'

— Rafik Hariri
prime minister

Many average citizens see him as a savior from the worst hardship in Lebanon's 48 years of independence. Hariri has financed scores of reconstruction and development projects since the 16-year civil war ended in October 1990.

President Elias Hrawi, a Maronite Catholic, announced Hariri's appointment after consulting with the 128 members of the nation's Parliament. The businessman had the support from more than 90 of them.

As the news spread, Hariri's estimated 300 security guards fired their submachine guns in the air around his walled stone villa in Beirut. Hundreds of well-wishers converged on the two-story home in motorcades bedecked with life-sized Hariri portraits. They danced in circles and chanted.

"The top priority of the new government will be to seize the reins of Lebanon's destiny and undertake a quantum leap to reshape the future," Hariri told reporters.

He pledged to put together a Cabinet capable of "translating the hopes of the Lebanese for liberating the south and building a future based on restoring confidence and stability." He referred to the 440-square-mile zone in south Lebanon that Israel occupies as a buffer against cross-border guerrilla raids.

Hariri, 49, will begin consulting with parliament blocs this week to form a new half-Christian, half-Muslim Cabinet.

According to a national covenant dating to independence from France in 1943, Maronite Catholics get Lebanon's presidency, Shiites the House speakership and Sunnis the premiership. House speaker Nabih Berri is a Shiite.

Hariri was born in Sidon to a poor Sunni Muslim farming family. He quit school at age 13 to pick fruit and eventually saved enough money to attend Beirut's Arab University, where he received a business degree.

Hariri started out as an accountant in Saudi Arabia in 1965 and built much of his $2.5 billion fortune in construction, real estate and banking in the oil-rich kingdom. He also has Saudi citizenship and is a confidant of Saudi monarch King Fahd.

He now employs 15,000 people, has homes in the United States, Europe, Saudi Arabia and Lebanon, and owns two Boeing 737s, two Learjets and a 230-foot yacht.

In 1989, he paid all the expenses of a Christian-Muslim peace conference in Taif, Saudi Arabia, which yielded the accord that ended Lebanon's war a year later.

The only significant opposition to Hariri came from a group of 12 deputies led by the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, which is Shiite Muslim.

Smoke-filled cafes to 'clear the air'

PARIS (AP) — Smoke-filled bistros and cafes, an inimitable part of the French image, are likely to become battlegrounds in a war of wills when an anti-smoking law takes effect Nov. 1. Confusion and outrage seem certain before the air clears.

Restaurants, hotels and offices are preparing frenetically for the new regime. But in a country where many view smoking as among life's pleasures, where the pungent odor of state-produced black tobacco abounds, not everyone is enthusiastic.

Salesmen peddling ventilation equipment "are descending on companies like a flock of sparrows," said Jacques The, president of the National Hotel Industry Federation.

The law outlaws smoking in many enclosed places, strengthens smoking regulations already in effect in public transport, and demands that those in charge of enclosed public areas "assure the protection of non-smokers."

"It's aberrant, stupid," Germaine Bourel, owner of the Cafe St. Philippe, said of the law. "People go to a cafe to relax, have a cigarette, talk. It's part of life."

She and her husband, Rene, both non-smokers, are dutifully installing ventilation. But, in what may be a bending of the law, they are relegating non-smokers to the cafe's small back room.

"We can't be gendarmes," she said.

France has one of the highest rates of smokers in western Europe — 40 percent of all adults, according to 1991 figures. People aged 18-24 account for the highest proportion of smokers.

The Health Ministry says smoking causes 54,000 deaths annually in France, and cuts heavy smokers' lifespan by eight years.

The law, adopted in January, is part of a progressive crackdown on smokers, including a staggered price increase. A bill headed to Parliament proposes raising cigarette prices 15 percent by late 1993.

The new fines for errant "fumeurs" range up to $260. Employers and others in charge of making their premises fit for non-smokers risk fines of up to $1,200 and prison terms.

"There is a general fear," The said. "Professionals are traumatized and think the police will come down on them Nov. 2."

That remains to be seen.

The police are charged with enforcing the law but only when infractions are reported. The government, clearly fearing an uproar, has begun stressing the need for progressive change.

Dialogue is needed so that a "modus vivendi" can evolve, said Guillaume Pepy, chief aide to Labor Minister Martine Aubry.

The workplace is considered the most likely battleground between smokers and non-smokers.

The National Center of French Employers has expressed fears the law will "create social tensions inside companies." And the General Confederation of Labor, the largest union, has warned against using the law as a "repressive new instrument in the hands of employers."

The rules affecting the workplace are complicated. The decree leaves it up to employers to decide whether to create a non-smoking area where all employees congregate, such as lunch rooms and meeting rooms. It calls for rearranging offices and workshops for those who wish protection from passive smoking.

The state-run regional transport system, which will ban smoking on railway platforms and subway stations, concedes it can do little to enforce the new regulations. There are 200 agents who guard against ticket fraud, and no anti-smoking reinforcements are planned.

Smoking already is banned on subways and suburban trains.

Police seize guns, drugs in hotel raid

MOSCOW (AP) — Police seized guns and drugs during a raid on a big hotel and underground passage near a McDonald's restaurant in central Moscow on Thursday.

It was part of a crackdown on Moscow crime, which rose by one-third in the first half of 1992 compared with the same period last year, according to law enforcement officials.

Police were especially interested in checking documents of people from the Caucasus region.

More than 100 people from Azerbaijan, Georgia and other Caucasus areas were checked during the five-hour raid on the Rossiya hotel and the Pushkin Square area, police said.

The raid was staged three days after a grenade exploded at a police station near the Moscow McDonald's, injuring a 5-year-old girl and seven other people waiting to enter the restaurant.

Clouds to bring rain chance

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 70s and south winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight will have a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the mid-50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday will be cloudy and cooler with 50 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the lower 70s.

After an overnight low of 55, Thursday's high reached 80, compared to the record high for that date of 89 set in 1961. The record low was 33 set in 1936.

STATE

Temperatures continued moderate throughout Texas Thursday as a tropical air mass brought moist air and the chance for rain in much of the state.

North Texas, cloudy on Thursday, could get rain today with the possibility of thunderstorms in the west. Highs were in the low to mid-80s with lows in the upper 50s to low-60s. Winds were out of the southeast at 5-10 mph.

A tropical easterly wave along the coast brought persistent rain to south Texas' lower coast and cloudy, foggy conditions through much of the region Thursday.

Temperatures, ranging from lows in the mid-60s to highs in the 80s, were expected to continue today.

Winds swept the region from 5-10 mph with gusts near 25 mph along the coast. Isolated thunderstorms were predicted today.

A few light showers were reported in west Texas, but skies were otherwise cloudy over the Concho Valley and partly sunny elsewhere Thursday.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled along the Texas Gulf Coast Thursday, but mostly clear and calm weather prevailed elsewhere with temperatures ranging from record lows in the Ohio Valley to record highs in the Midwest.

After a clear morning all over the nation, showers with occasional thunderstorms moved into the Texas Gulf Coast during the afternoon. Afternoon thundershowers and rain also fell over Southern California, the northern Pacific Coast and southern Maine.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

intercom.

"We're awfully close, as far as the money, to the same point we were last year — and last year was a struggle," Parrish said. "It will be tough, but I think we can do it. I'm cautiously optimistic."

Jody Sneed — representing one of those agencies, the Boy Scouts of America — encouraged the volunteers to continue working toward the goal.

He told the story of a school custodian who — following a string of scout meetings with low attendance — asked him when he was going to give up.

"I told him we can never give up as long as there is one boy out there who we can help," he said. "There is a boy out there somewhere who we can't stop looking for. He may find a cure for cancer, he may find a cure for AIDS. I'm pretty sure he's out there somewhere. We need to find him and cultivate his growth."

He said the Boy Scouts teach values and attitudes unmatched by most youth groups. "We wouldn't have these problems that the United Way is here to help if everyone had such teaching early in life," he said.

Later, Gracie Rayos of "Nueva Vista" announced they would donate $308.50 raised last week at a washer tournament, which is "sort of like horseshoes," she said.

The final amount of money raised will be revealed at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 10 at the Midland Center.

Division reports were: special gifts, $406,653; residential, $17,522; retirees, $8,306; retail, $45,604; real estate/finance, $86,467; business/entertainment, $87,148; utilities, transportation and communication, $80,349; independent oil, $43,507; major oil, $337,449; petroleum industry, $268,713; government/services, $70,950; professional, $55,612 and education, $0.

The agencies benefited by the United Way of Midland, in addition to the Boy Scouts, are: American Red Cross; Big Brothers/Big Sisters; Boys and Girls Club of America; Camp Fire Boys and Girls; Casa de Amigos and Citywide Community Services; Community and Senior Services; Family Services and Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program; Freewill and Foster Home; Midland/Lee Youth Centers; Midland Need to Read; Midland Rape Crisis Center; Palmer Drug Abuse Program; Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; Permian Basin Girl Scouts; Salvation Army Corps and Day Care Center and the YMCA.

Last year, the United Way of Midland raised $2,755,143, about $2,000 above the original goal.

An ABC poll showed an 11-point edge for Clinton and a CNN-USA Today survey measured it at 12 points, while NBC said it was 19 points.

The latest polls came as Perot was stepping up his radio and television advertising.

The daily ad and fax wars continued, as well. Among the highlights:

■ The president's campaign distributed a letter from 50 retired admirals and generals calling on Clinton to release all the documents in his possession about his Vietnam-era draft status. On the stump, Clinton reminded his audience that 24 retired admirals and generals have endorsed him.

■ The controversy over the State Department's search into Bill Clinton's files took a new twist Thursday with a report that department officials also looked for records under his mother's name. Clinton, campaigning in Seattle, said, "It would be funny if it weren't so pathetic."

■ Clinton previewed a 30-second television commercial in support of his plan to impose higher taxes on foreign corporations operating in the United States. The ad says Bush "supports tax loopholes" for the firms, "supports them so much that he attacks Bill Clinton for wanting to close them."

■ A survey by the Times Mirror Center for The People & The Press taken last week indicated that voters rated Bush's commercial less favorably than they did Clinton or Perot commercials. Fifty-one percent of those who recalled seeing a Bush commercial said it deserved either a grade of "F" or "D."

Bush campaigned with Joseph Cicippio, a former hostage who was held in Lebanon. "God bless America and God bless the president," said Cicippio. Another former hostage, ex-Associated Press correspondent Terry Anderson, has sided with Clinton.

■ Perot's running mate, James Stockdale, paid a low-key visit to Seattle, dropping by for 10 minutes at the ticket's campaign office to sign autographs for volunteers. "Let's go for victory," he said.

Campaign finance reports indicated that Perot is plowing millions from his own fortune into his race for the White House — including $30 million in the past six weeks.

In a 30-minute ad airing tonight on NBC, he rejects Bush's contention that Perot votes are wasted votes. "You are throwing your vote away unless you vote your conscience," he declares in the commercial.

Campaign and industry sources said that in addition to a string of network television commercials, Perot was paying for local TV ads in 23 states. In addition, the Texas billionaire is spending heavily on radio ads in at least nine states.

Clinton, 45, invoked the name of an earlier young Democrat as he campaigned in Washington and other Western states.

"About this time in the campaign of 1960, John Kennedy said to the American people that at this stage of the election the choice is about more than the candidates: It is about the people themselves. You have to decide what kind of people you are, what kind of values you have and what kind of future you want."

The Democrats, he said, offer hope and improvement.

The Republicans, he said, "have had the White House so long that they've run out of energy, run out of ideas, run out of direction, and they ought to be run out of town."

BARBER: Baseball broadcasting giant dies at 84

ized since Oct. 10 when he underwent emergency surgery for an intestinal blockage. Death resulted from pneumonia and kidney complications, hospital spokesman Warren Jones said.

"We lost a giant in our business," said retired sportscaster Curt Gowdy. "He had a great grasp of the language (and) that Southern accent."

Barber's death was another broken tie to a colorful time when baseball loyalties linked generations and lacked million-dollar players, when the game was played on real grass and brought into your home on the radio.

It was Barber's soft-spoken, down-to-earth eloquence that described a team well ahead as "in the catbird seat" and a rallying team as "tearin' up the peapatch."

To Barber, an argument was a "rhubarb," and sometimes a home run was accompanied by a shouted "Oh, doctor!" He "told it like it was" before that phrase became a cliche.

With only the man in the booth to provide the picture for the fans at home in pre-TV days, a runner wasn't just out at second — he had "the gate shut on him."

Like the game itself, Barber was in control and understated, until suddenly breaking loose with a burst of spontaneous brilliance.

Barber broadcast games for the Cincinnati Reds (1934-'38), Brooklyn Dodgers (1939-'53) and New York Yankees (1954-'66).

While he was with the Dodgers, Barber did play-by-play of the first night baseball game and the first televised game. He was there for such events as Mickey Owen's missed third strike in the 1941 World Series and Jackie Robinson's breaking of baseball's color line. He also was behind the microphone when Roger Maris hit his record-breaking 61st home run for the Yankees in 1961.

When television came along, Barber let the picture tell the story, but radio remained his favorite medium. "Television is like day labor," he said.

In 1978, Barber and Mel Allen became the first broadcasters to be inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame.

"He made everyone's living room a seat behind home plate," said U.S. Sen. Connie Mack, grandson and namesake of the Hall of Fame manager. "After his retirement from baseball, he was America's nostalgic link to the golden days of America's pastime with his many homespun stories about the plays and players of yesteryear."

In January 1981, Barber was reintroduced to millions of listeners through National Public Radio, when he began doing a live segment on topics ranging from baseball to how Florida's azaleas were blooming.

"The biggest complaint we get about the bit is it's too short — Red can't really tell a long story," Bob Edwards, host of NPR's "Morning Edition," said in 1990. "He is the star of the show. The network."

Even non-baseball fans became aware of Barber and his colorful broadcasts through James Thurber's story, "The Catbird Seat."

The story explained the phrase and told of a mild-mannered accountant who is driven to contemplating murder by a fellow employee who constantly uses such expressions as: "Are you tearing up the pea patch?" "Are you lifting the oxcart out of the ditch?" "Are you sitting in the catbird seat?"

Walter Lanier Barber was born Feb. 17, 1908, in Columbus, Miss., and lived there until age 10 when his family moved to Sanford, Fla.

TRIAL: Mexican authorities arrest two suspects and smuggling arms into Mexico.

"They will not be extradited because Mexican law forbids the extradition of Mexican nationals" to foreign countries, deputy attorney general Jose Luis Romero Apis said during a news conference.

Mexicans can be tried in Mexico for crimes committed abroad, Romero Apis said. There has been no extradition request from U.S. law enforcement officials, he said.

Austin police had no comment on the arrests, said police spokeswoman Gail Phillips.

The bodies of Jennifer Harbison, 17; her sister, Sarah Harbison, 15; Eliza Thomas, 17 and Amy Ayers, 13, were found early the morning of Dec. 7 by firefighters at an I Can't Believe It's Yogurt! store.

The girls were tied together and each shot in the back of the head, Austin police have said. The store was then set on fire in an attempt to hide the crime.

"I don't feel good about this. Now someone has confessed to something that is so horrible," said Barbara Suraci, the mother of Jennifer and Sarah Harbison.

She told Austin television station KTBC she feared that the development would turn into a hoax.

"It's too real this time to be a false alarm. If they are just yanking us by our chain, I don't know what I'll do. It's just too hard, it's too devastating," she said.

Saavedra, known as "the Terminator," had been called a former employee of the store by Mexican officials. But Bill Brice, chief executive officer of the I Can't Believe It's Yogurt!, said that neither of the two men arrested were ever employees of the company.

"We heard it reported that he said he was a delivery person that means he may have worked for a supplier. That may be were the confusion occurred," Brice said.

Saavedra will be charged with murder, Romero Apis said. "Cortez was his accomplice," he said.

Cortez was arrested Wednesday in Ciudad Nezahuacoyotl, a sprawling slum area east of Mexico City. Saavedra was arrested early Thursday in the Pacific coast resort city of Puerta Vallarta, he said.

"He forced the young girls to submit, then he raped them, tied them up and shot them," Romero Apis said of Saavedra.

He and Cortez then cut up their bodies before setting fire to the store, he said.

The killings shocked the city, prompted offers of large rewards, and a massive law enforcement effort, including help from the FBI's behavioral science unit and later cooperation from Mexican police.

Mexican police said they are closing in on a third man wanted in the killings. Romero Apis would not give his name, but Austin police said they were looking for Ricardo Hernandez, 26.

Several Austin police officers were in Mexico City last week.

Earlier this year, Austin police released the names of Saavedra, Cortez and Hernandez, saying they were wanted for questioning in the yogurt shop slayings because a man fitting Cortez's description was seen near the store at the time of the crime.

The three also were wanted for fleeing prosecution from the November 1991 sexual assault charge.

by telephone to say that the samples may or may not be connected to the August 1991 disappearance of the Lee High School senior.

A finding of compatability only means that the samples apparently are human in origin, but could be from a number of sources, Johnson explained.

"If there is anything more substantial in the written report, all the law enforcement agencies involved — the FBI, Midland Police, Andrews County Sheriff — will issue a statement, but at this point there is nothing to say."

Miss Henry disappeared on the afternoon of Aug. 19, 1991, after making a 911 call at approximately 2 p.m.

Police and her parents, Ralph and Lynn Henry, could not locate the girl at the residence, but found the garage door open, the back door unlocked, the lights, television and the stereo on.

The next day, the girl's car, a 1987 Ford Bronco II, was found at the Midland International Airport, with her purse.

A nationwide ad campaign conducted in June failed to produce any concrete leads for police nor did two anonymous phone calls made to the police in August that alluded to the missing girl.

Earlier this month, police released a tape of the 911 call Miss Henry made. In it, Miss Henry said her boyfriend tied her up, but the call was cut off when the girl screamed and the phone sounded as though it was dropped.

to reach the microphone.

"I am proof that not everything from Texas is big and tall," she said.

The banquet's theme was centered on the celebration of 500 years of Hispanic Heritage since the voyage of Christopher Columbus.

On hand for the event was Queen Isabella, portrayed by Bea Ramirez Svanbera of La Porte, who enacted the days when Columbus approached her for ships and money for his voyage.

Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth installed the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce 1993 officers and board of directors.

The officers are Tony Valadez, chairman; vice presidents David Diaz, Rick Menchaca, Frank Baldazo and Mary Lopez, vice president; Mike Puente, treasurer; Lydia Torres, secretary; and Adela Quiroz, parliamentarian.

The MHCC president is Elvia Hernandez and the board of directors are Joe Amezcua, Dora Clardy, Alfredo Morales, Sal Gutierrez, Maria Galvan, Ricky Pena Jr. and Jose "Bo" Zertuche.

Author digs out inside story of Buckingham Palace life: bed goers, backstairs pages

By Graham Heathcote
Associated Press writer

LONDON — The Cobweb Cleaner and the Spider Catcher have faded into history, but among the staff of 300 at Buckingham Palace are such curiosities as the Pages of the Backstairs.

The titles of Yeoman Bed Hanger and the Yeoman Bed Goer carry on at Buckingham Palace, though it has been two centuries since those senior members were actually required to search the royal bed each night for signs of intruders and treachery.

"Some of the titles, like those of the pages and the Yeoman of the Glass and China Pantry, seem incongruous in a modern organization," Brian Hoey writes in his new book about the royal household, "All the Queen's Men" (HarperCollins).

"The titles may sound as if they sprang from the pages of a history book, which indeed they have. Many of them originated in medieval times, but the men who hold them today play as vital a role in the organization of the monarch's domestic life as ever in the past."

The most vital, if pay is the measure, is royal chef Lionel Mann. Hoey said his salary is secret to avoid provoking jealousy in the kitchens.

Precision is important. Palace Steward Anthony Jarred, the senior domestic servant, carries a ruler to measure the correct distance between knives, forks and spoons at banquets.

"The only criterion in the kitchens is perfection: the Brussels sprouts at a banquet must all be the same size," Hoey wrote.

The same goes for the footmen.

Some of the elaborate servants' liveries cost $1,600 and may be 100 years old, hence the necessity for same-size footmen for state occasions: 5 feet, 9 inches with a 38-inch chest.

The palace has 361 rooms — including a cinema for the queen and a room for her corgi dogs — and 78 bathrooms and toilets, Hoey said.

Servants bow or bob whenever they meet a member of the royal family, except private secretaries who meet with them several times a day.

By tradition, the 26 housemaids who dust and clean must not be seen by their royal highnesses at all, and are obliged to dodge into alcoves or hide behind curtains if someone comes along.

Running the British monarchy costs the queen and the state about $1.6 million a week.

Hoey, a specialist writer on the court, says he collected his information over the years from members of the royal household, on the understanding that he would not identify his informers.

Running the British monarchy costs the queen and the state about $1.6 million a week.

Among the information dug out by Hoey is that the servants are not allowed on the 45 acres of the palace gardens.

Wages are on the low side. A junior housemaid is paid about $9,600 a year, less than half of what she could earn outside, but she has her own room and full board at the most famous address in Britain.

The royal family and the staff have the same food. Kitchen sinks are wooden to avoid chipping crystal glasses and delicate china.

Hoey says that all the staff work together to ensure the monarchy runs like a well-oiled machine.

"It is possible to live and die in Buckingham Palace without ever really finding out what life is like outside," Hoey wrote.

Oh, and what about the Pages of the Backstairs?

They are the queen's personal pages, senior servants. If you are a member of the staff, they are the person you telephone if you want to see the queen.

There are four Pages of the Backstairs — two for queen and two for Prince Philip.

SHOOTING: Chief reconstructs events

dent, police said.

Officers Kenneth Boone and Robert Lester also were placed on administrative leave but are expected to return to work today, police said.

At 5 a.m. Wednesday, a neighbor, 52-year-old Willie Colwell, called police and reported a disturbance at 807 E. Kentucky Ave. He said Madrid was intoxicated and throwing clothing and furniture into the front yard, police said.

At 5:04 a.m., Partin arrived in front of the house, saw debris — including appliances — strewn about the yard and spoke with Madrid. The two men went into the house where Madrid began threatening Partin, police said.

Boone and Lester then arrived to help, causing Madrid to pull a knife while moving toward the three officers. Partin used his flashlight to avoid being cut, police said.

Madrid chased the officers into the yard, ran past them and jumped into Partin's police car, which was left running. Partin smashed the driver's side window with his flashlight and Madrid rammed the car into another police car, police said.

Meanwhile, Lester fired one shot into the left front tire of the car and Partin fired another into the right rear tire to try to stop Madrid, police said.

Madrid then got out and ran, with knife in hand, toward Partin. Partin warned Madrid several times to drop the weapon, which he failed to do.

Partin fired three shots, police said.

Preliminary autopsy reports from the Southwest Institute of Forensic Technology in Dallas confirmed that all three shots struck Madrid.

Police said Madrid had a history of drinking-related arrests, including an arrest for assault on a police officer in 1981.

The shooting is the first involving a Midland officer killing someone since the late '70s, police said.

U.N. teams search for weapons

By Dilip Ganguly
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.N. inspectors are visiting sugar mills, rummaging through junk piles and walking through underground tunnels in search of weapons that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein may be hiding.

Iraq says it has no more weapons of mass destruction — such as ballistic missiles or chemical bombs — but Western intelligence reports say otherwise. Baghdad's previous claims about its arsenal, such as the denial it was working on nuclear weapons, have been shown false by earlier U.N. inspections.

"We are going everywhere to make sure that weapons of mass destruction are discovered," said Nikita Smidovich, the Russian leader of the latest U.N. team to hunt for Iraqi weapons.

The team is the largest yet to visit Iraq under terms of the Gulf War cease-fire, which requires Iraq to destroy its long-range missiles and chemical weapons and dismantle its nuclear and biological weapons programs.

Tensions were high before the team arrived a week ago. Iraqi officials and news media sharply criticized the visit, contending the inspectors might provoke an incident before the U.S. elections to help President Bush's re-election campaign. But the inspectors have not reported any confrontations.

"The operation is unique, a very delicate task," said Kevin St. Louis, an American who is the chief field officer for the U.N. weapons program. "The world may not see an operation like this again, I hope."

Many of Iraq's surface-to-surface missiles were destroyed by allied bombing during the Gulf War and others have been wrecked under U.N. supervision since. But Iraq is still suspected of having 50 to 200 Scuds hidden away, mainly in camouflaged underground shelters built before the war.

A typical day for the 46 inspectors, 16 from the United States, starts at dawn, when they descend from the 17-story Sheraton Hotel overlooking the Tigris River.

About a dozen German helicopter crew members, wearing battle fatigues and carrying folders of flight charts, precede the inspectors.

The three Arabic linguists on the team give a quick rundown to their colleagues of what the Iraqi newspapers are saying.

Breakfast, mostly omelettes or boiled eggs with bread and butter, is eaten quickly while Iraqi security agents stare. Some inspectors gulp Turkish coffee from tiny cups in the lobby restaurant.

With military combat rations stowed in their backpacks, the team members head off in two Japanese-made buses. An Iraqi secret service jeep trails them, and police block journalists from following.

The team has traveled to some sites by bus, including two sugar factories, a cement plant, a junk yard and a trash heap near a military base west of Baghdad. They also have used U.N. helicopters, flying as low as 150 feet.

During the first week, the team also visited a major Iraqi weapon research site in the north. The facility, completed in 1989 near Mosul, was Iraq's main ballistic missile research and development center.

Allied planes bombed it extensively and damaged the two supersonic wind tunnels and an underground firing range equipped with electronic and chemical laboratories.

The inspectors are paid $280 a day for their work in Baghdad, but they hardly live it up. There is little entertainment, except for a suite on the 17th floor of the hotel that has been turned into a "social area."

Some inspectors play chess, some watch videos and others drink German beer. The truly bored watch Iraqi television, where President Saddam Hussein appears every hour.

A notice at the telephone proclaims "Private calls five minutes only." The inspectors are discouraged from leaving the hotel at night.

Previous team members have been attacked and harassed. They often were cursed in late-night telephone calls.

Nation in brief

■ Few of riot's most serious crimes reach court

LOS ANGELES — Thousands of people were convicted for taking part in rioting last spring but Ted Watkins doubts police caught those most to blame.

"I don't think they're even beginning to scratch the surface on who they were," said Watkins, whose non-profit community services center was looted and burned April 30, causing $3 million in damage.

Although Watkins saw the looting, he has never gone to court to testify against defendants. And the odds are he, and many other victims, never will be summoned.

More than 90 percent of criminal prosecutions involving the riot have been completed. Few of those prosecuted were involved in the most serious crimes committed during the the three-day uprising, and most pleaded guilty and got jail sentences of a few days to a few months.

■ Commission supports bar of women from combat

WASHINGTON — Members of a presidential commission expressed support Thursday for the military policy that bars women from direct combat roles. The commission will make a recommendation to President Bush next month.

"War is not an equal opportunity endeavor," retired Army Gen. Maxwell Reid Thurman, former deputy chief of staff for personnel, told fellow members of the 15-member Presidential Commission on the Assignment of Women in the Armed Forces.

He spoke at the commission's first full-scale public debate. The panel is scheduled to vote Nov. 2 and 3 on a recommendation it will submit to the president on Nov. 15.

The majority sentiment, however was against changing the policy.

"The implications for the potential consequences of integrating women into combat specialties ... are enormous," said William Darryl Henderson, a retired Army colonel and Vietnam veteran.

■ Prosecutors decide not to charge Buttafuoco

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Authorities said Thursday they couldn't find enough evidence to prosecute a man whose wife was shot and wounded by a teen-ager they claimed was his lover.

The investigation of Joseph Buttafuoco is closed, said Nassau County District Attorney Denis Dillon.

Prosecutors had argued that Buttafuoco was having an affair with Amy Fisher, 18, who pleaded guilty to shooting his wife, Mary Jo, on May 19 at the couple's home in Massapequa on Long Island. They say Fisher was jealous because Buttafuoco was ending their alleged affair.

Mrs. Buttafuoco was left with one side of her head paralyzed.

Fisher is to be sentenced Dec. 1 to five to 15 years in prison after pleading guilty to a lesser charge of assault and agreeing to testify against Buttafuoco.

Investigators looked into allegations Buttafuoco had sex with Fisher when she was a minor, that he was involved in his wife's shooting and was involved with the Abba Escort Service, where Fisher allegedly worked as a prostitute.

Investigators couldn't corroborate any of the allegations, Dillon said.

Normal relations aren't near, Bush says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Thursday praised Vietnam's willingness to cooperate in accounting for missing American servicemen but said he doesn't see normal relations with Hanoi in the near future.

Bush left the impression in an interview with CBS that there will be no decision on normalizing relations before his term is finished — meaning a decision may fall to Democrat Bill Clinton if Bush is defeated.

The president reaffirmed that normalizing relations with Vietnam will be linked to Hanoi's cooperation in accounting for the MIAs and hinted that an exchange of ambassadors could depend on whether Hanoi moves toward democracy.

The United States has never had diplomatic relations with the Hanoi government and maintains a trade embargo against Vietnam.

"I must be satisfied as president that all obstacles about POWs and MIAs have been removed," Bush said in explaining his requirements for extending diplomatic recognition.

He described as a "little optimistic" an account in Thursday's editions of the Los Angeles Times that relations could be established within two to three months.

Families of the missing Americans generally have been supportive of the administration's refusal to unconditionally extend diplomatic recognition to Hanoi.

Bush was upbeat for the most part about the fruits of the recent mission to Hanoi by his special envoy to Vietnam, retired Army Gen. John Vessey Jr.

"This is a major breakthrough," the president said of the Vessey mission and the release to U.S. authorities of some 4,000 MIA-related photographs. "But I need to know exactly how major," Bush added.

The photographs, which are in the hands of the Defense Intelligence Agency, could help clear up the fate of more than 1,650 Americans missing from the Vietnam War.

Vessey will brief Bush on his trip today.

The means by which the administration obtained the Vietnamese photos aren't clear. Senate sources said the photographs were made available to an American in Vietnam by a Vietnamese who was troubled by his government's unwillingness to cooperate fully with the United States on the MIA question.

When U.S. officials told Vietnamese authorities that thousands of MIA photos had come into their possession, Hanoi quickly showed a greater desire to cooperate, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

A joint communique issued after the trip said Hanoi had provided additional "important information" on the unresolved cases and promised to allow U.S. officials to search its war archives.

U.S. officials said a team of 63 American specialists began a month-long joint search Thursday with Vietnamese officials of sites in Vietnam where American aircraft are believed to have crashed.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Bob Hall said a limited number of families of missing Americans had been contacted about the photographs. He refused comment beyond that, saying further information must await today's White House meeting.

Administration: Violence study is not racist

By Richard L. Vernaci
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration said Thursday it plans a major research project to examine the causes of violence and angrily denied that it is a racist plot to link homicidal behavior genetically to minorities.

"I will not apologize for doing what I can to reduce the number of young lives that are being tragically destroyed by violence," said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan. "And I will not give credence to those who have been leveling spurious and extremely damaging allegations."

Sullivan did not name his critics in his speech Thursday to the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry. But in an interview later with The Associated Press, he said two of them were Dr. Peter Breggin, a suburban Maryland psychiatrist who has called the government's plans a "holocaust," and Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus and the House Committee on Government Operations.

The department for months has been talking about coordinating and focusing violence research, some of which was already being done by its various agencies.

Sullivan said plans for his department's violence initiative were not yet final, and he did not know when the program would begin or how much it would cost.

Sullivan in his speech accused "one individual" — whom he later identified as Breggin — of making "false and inflammatory accusations against the violence-related research and activities of the National Institute of Mental Health and the Public Health Service."

"And he has accused the Public Health Service of planning a pernicious, race-based social engineering program," Sullivan said.

In the text of his speech, Sullivan called Breggin "an extremist," but the secretary dropped that on delivery.

Breggin later commented: "I feel that he's the extremist.

"I think it is dangerous to define inner-city violence ... as a public health problem because it distracts from its true causes," said Breggin, identifying the cases as racism, poverty and neglect.

The focus of Breggin's attack, though, is Dr. Frederick Goodwin, director of the National Institute of Mental Health. Goodwin was demoted from a higher-ranking job earlier this year after he compared the behavior of violent inner-city youths to that of monkeys in the jungle.

Sullivan reprimanded Goodwin at the time, and the department took pains Thursday to emphasize that Goodwin's role would be minimal and that other officials would be looking over his shoulder.

"His involvement is a very small part of it," said Dr. James Mason, head of the U.S. Public Health Service. Mason said he and National Institutes of Health Director Bernadine Healy would be keeping an eye on Goodwin's work.

Russia's actions should back words

If Russian President Boris Yeltsin really wants to convince Americans that his nation is turning away from its bloody past and not holding to its communist ways, he will work to stop the resale of weapons and technology to Third World countries.

Since the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics began breaking apart, the fate of the weapons systems and technology has been a prime concern for Pentagon officials. In recent days that concern has grown because of Russia's sale of advanced weapons systems and technology to Communist China, a nation with a dismal record on human rights and freedom. As one Pentagon official was quoted recently, "You don't know what the Chinese will do with the stuff once they get the high-tech capabilities."

Yeltsin's main problem is that his nation is suffering enormous monetary problems in trying to change from a communistic society to one based on capitalism. Russia needs money, and the easiest and fastest way of getting it is to sell the weapons systems and technology that countries in the Third World are seeking. Such a transfer of weaponry, however, isn't in the best interests of the United States.

Bush administration officials have faced a difficult situation in attempting to dissuade the sales. That is largely attributable to the fact that the United States has been an arms merchant for much of the Third World. Uncle Sam's reputation also has been tarnished by recent sales of $14.8 billion worth of combat jets to Saudi Arabia and Taiwan. Criticizing the Russian arms sales would be like the pot calling the kettle black.

The one supportable difference is that the United States has long supported regimes working toward freedom and has in recent years declined to assist countries with poor records on human rights. That was not the case in the Soviet Union and is not the case with the current export of Russia's arms and technology. In fact, the Russian sales will only make war a greater likelihood.

President Bush should make it clear to Yeltsin that gaining the approval of Americans for the change now occurring in his nation will take more than assurances that Russia is changing its old ways. It will take actions that underscore Russia's professed commitment to peace and freedom.

Watergate middleman runs for Senate

WASHINGTON — Two decades after serving as a middleman for two convicted Watergate burglars in the days immediately following the infamous break-in, Bob Bennett is running for a Senate seat on a promise to turn "politics as usual" on its head.

Anderson

Ironically, Bennett, the Republican candidate for Utah's open Senate seat, sees his connection with Watergate as an asset instead of a liability.

"Because I went through that 18 years ago and saw how destroying it can be — individually as well as to the country — I am better equipped than any candidate in the state to see that we don't have a repeat," Bennett said recently.

One recent independent poll shows Bennett with a comfortable lead over his Democratic opponent, Rep. Wayne Owens. "It's amazing," said one Democratic strategist involved in the race. "People are searching for someone who's an outsider. Somebody who isn't tied in to politics as usual. And here you have Bennett, who's connected to the most damaging political scandal of the century."

In 1974, we uncovered a secret CIA memorandum, which said that three days before the celebrated break-in at the Watergate, Bennett knew about a separate White House plot to burglarize and bug the campaign headquarters of Sen. George McGovern, but kept quiet. Because Bennett's public relations firm was a front for the CIA, Bennett revealed this information to his contact at the CIA, who then prepared the memo.

Bennett does not dispute the existence of the memo, but contends it was an exaggeration by his CIA contact. What is beyond dispute, however, is the fact that if Bennett had blown the whistle on the burglary plot, the subsequent Watergate caper would have been aborted and the course of history might have been changed.

Bennett, who has never been accused of any wrongdoing in the affair, calls his role in Watergate that of "an innocent bystander that happened to be close to some of the major players."

Three days after the bugging and break-in of the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate Hotel in June 1972, Bennett ducked into a drug store a block from the White House to meet secretly with G. Gordon Liddy. By Bennett's own admission, the scene was reminiscent of a James Bond movie. Liddy was in charge of Richard Nixon's dirty tricks squad, and was later convicted for his central role in the burglary.

Liddy and Bennett knew one another quite well. As the Washington lobbyist for the reclusive billionaire Howard Hughes, Bennett had delivered up to $150,000 from Hughes to Nixon's re-election campaign — including some blank checks. Liddy's secretary filled them in with amounts dictated by Liddy.

But this time, Liddy wanted to find out where his co-conspirator in the burglary, E. Howard Hunt, was hiding out. A former CIA agent, Hunt had been working simultaneously for Bennett's PR firm and the White House's team of tricksters.

Bennett remembers that as he and Liddy stood side by side in front of the store's magazine rack, they each pretended to read a magazine. "Tell Howard that Mr. Pinga has information for him," Liddy whispered out of the side of his mouth. Mr. Pinga, an obscenity in Spanish, was Liddy's code name.

Liddy offers a different version of the encounter. In his memoir, Liddy writes that Bennett requested the clandestine meeting so that Bennett could pass the following message from Hunt to Liddy: "Bring money and a lawyer" to Hunt, who Bennett said was hiding out in Beverly Hills. Bennett disputes that account, but admitted to us that he tracked Hunt down in New York on Liddy's behalf.

Nixon counsel John Dean also mentions Bennett in his memoir: "Bennett, for his part, (amazed) me by turning up as a crucial behind-the-scenes player in most matters that came to plague the Nixon White House." Bennett concedes that his involvement with key Watergate figures has spawned a web of speculation, but contends that he was simply "a bit naive."

"He's been an insider in the worst sense of the word for much longer than I've been an insider in the best sense of the word — as an elected representative," Owens told our associate Ed Henry.

Will Watergate stick to Bennett? In his memoir, John Dean recalls a conversation he had with former Nixon aide Charles Colson as they sat in a jail cell together.

"It's unbelievable to me that Bob Bennett has waltzed through this thing," Colson said. "He's got the answers to a lot of unanswered questions."

Politically correct march on

A jury of Scarsdale, N.Y., seventh-graders, in a classroom court-martial, has tried and convicted Christopher Columbus. He's a villain, a wretch, an exterminator of Native Americans.

Murchison

Handcuffing Columbus at this late date is problematical, but events like the Scarsdale trial speak alarmingly of what is happening here in the New World. The apostles of political correctness (PC), still charged up despite all the indignation they have rightly excited, have launched a frontal assault on our traditions. Frankly, they don't care who gets run over or ground down, just so the end result is that Malcolm X, Sojourner Truth and Sitting Bull emerge as our main national folk heroes. Speaking of bull ...

The 500th anniversary of Columbus' epochal voyage evoked from the PCers the expected brainless caterwauling, not just on college campuses but also, startlingly, in elementary and secondary schools. According to The New York Times, "Students across the nation are learning everything from skepticism to contempt for the explorer's exploits.

An assault on Western civilization goes forth in the classrooms of Western civilization. This paradox can be accounted for only in terms of our own negligence and guilt.

We feel guilty in proportion as we regard — falsely — our tradition as one less of liberty and opportunity than of exploitation and racism. We are negligent insofar as we suffer paid pedagogues to retail these half-baked notions to our children.

A newly issued report by Lynne Cheney, head of the National Endowment for the Humanities, finds that, "The aim of education, as many on our campuses see it, is no longer truth, but political transformation — of students and society." She takes alarmed note even of movies and museum exhibitions that lie about the American past.

A frequent theme is what bad guys our explorers were, starting with Columbus. Why didn't they just leave this wonderful land to its original inhabitants? I don't know. Why is the sky blue instead of green? Why do birds fly rather than hopscotch? A more time-wasting exercise than the repeal of reality I just can't think of. Nor is there a more dishonest enterprise than deliberately low-keying a dominant good (the West's promotion of liberty, moral responsibility and tolerance) so as to play up a tributary evil (the exploitation of the Indians).

What do we do? Cheney accurately sees a need for transformation of the present PC climate in colleges and universities. Among other things, she calls on college trustees to begin actively representing "the concerns of the larger society," making plain that "what happens on our campuses is of importance to all of us."

Hooray for that. Yet parents cannot abdicate to higher-ups their basic responsibility for the shaping of character, the imparting of truth. If you live with a seventh-grader who regards Columbus as one of history's rascals, there's been a patent failure somewhere along the line to communicate the truth to him. This failure should be addressed promptly before he helps convict Moses of complicity in drowning Third World charioteers.

These are extraordinary upside-down times. We're like Columbus: We don't know quite where we are going. Likely to the Davey Jones' Locker, unless the wide-awake among us are ready to reef, tack and steer.

Some think cats are sane, humane choice

Cats being anesthetized and used for practice by future nurses at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center did not interest me as it did Dr. Macferran. It alarmed me. The previous article wanted to discontinue the use of cats in training nurses for real-life infant intubation situations. The important question and issue as "if I had an infant that needed intubation" would I prefer health care professionals learn on cats or my "child." Cats seem like a sane humane choice.

One needs to understand the personal trauma involved working on animals in classes/experimentation. Work is done by many people who are animal lovers. The MHMC students are fine examples. It takes lots of guts. I worked in a physiology lab as an undergraduate using dogs in our NASA experiments on physical training and the effects of smokeless tobacco funded by the US Tobacco Institute. Our work was not esoteric and accomplished humanely. It was difficult to exercise, get to know a dog for six weeks, conduct experiments on him and then sacrifice him. It tears your heart out. No one thinks of the professionals, scientists or animals that go through hours of experimentation and education to provide the public with high life expectancy. Very few think of these sacrifices when they get transplants, surgery, medication or daily eat foods that contain synthetic dyes, preservatives or artificial sweeteners.

It wasn't mentioned in the Reporter-Telegram article that the cats used were "borrowed" after their termination date. Animals cannot be taken from an animal shelter until after their expiration date. The cats used in the class were given an extra few days to be adopted. It's disgraceful that a situation that allows nurses to learn valuable techniques and gives animals a second chance at life, can be looked at as anything but outstanding.

If you feel strongly about the lives of animals being sacrificed for your well-being, then you should live your life accordingly, albeit a short one.

No one has arbitrary right to destroy life

Have you heard the story of the doctor who followed the progress of two babies he delivered on the same day in 1889 at a hospital in Australia? One was a fine, healthy, baby boy with a strong cry. The other was a girl with Down's Syndrome. Had those children been born in the enlightened decade of the 1990's in the progressive country of America, the girl's mother could have been encouraged to have an abortion and been spared the burden of caring for a dependent and handicapped child who would never enjoy a good quality of life.

Instead, the girl grew up and eventually was able to care for her elderly and infirm mother. As for the boy, he grew up and enjoyed a remarkable political career, but died in a bunker in Berlin. His name was Adolf Hitler.

Do the pro-choice supporters believe that by preserving a woman's right to choose to destroy the unwanted, the imperfect or the unlovely, we do our society a favor? Wasn't that Hitler's philosophy, too?

We still cannot look one day into the future and tell for what purpose God creates each unborn child. It's time we took a close and thoughtful look at what's really happening in America and understand that no one has the right to arbitrarily destroy another.

Bush is out of touch with rest of country

The presidential debate in Richmond, Va. made it painfully clear how out of touch George Bush is with the rest of us. When asked by real people how the deficit, relative to the economic recession, affects him personally he could offer no personal testimony and during the course of the debate he continually looked at his watch as though he preferred to be elsewhere.

The following day in the midst of a speech at a New Jersey college he called the students draft dodgers. Bush must be out of touch with reality as well because conscription was abolished many years ago.

Our country is in an economic crisis and Bush does not have the vision or the will to deal with it. It's time for new leadership to revitalize the country — to create jobs and get America moving again.

Children spend time with TV, not books

In the Oct. 9 paper in which she equated Midland public schools to "prisons," Tami Stallings challenged parents to attend school with their children and "see what kind of environment our children are in at our public schools." It is scary indeed, and a good challenge. I, too, wish to see parents' reactions should they decide their child's education serious enough to warrant an investigation. However, I believe they would be less concerned about the atmosphere than at how dumb our students are.

"Dumb" is a strong word, but it is simply appropriate. Ask your child, for example, if they have any idea when the Constitution was written. Ask them if they know what, exactly, the Constitution is. It is crucial that parents realize how dumb these kids are, and how little students seem to care.

Our students are not dumb because they have bad teachers or because the government doesn't spend enough money on education. They are dumb because they don't like to study. And what they don't like to do they don't do.

Parents should inform their children that an education is not conferred on them by virtue of the fact that they sit in a classroom a few hours a day. It cannot be "given" to them by teachers, parents or anyone. Ultimately, they educate themselves by reading and learning to concentrate their attention. It is a lifetime struggle.

Beyond that, television is destroying our minds. "No is isn't," you say. "It isn't as subversive as you radicals pretend it to be! My child doesn't watch anymore TV than I do. And besides, you can learn a lot from TV." Yeah, right. Take for example the news. I believe it is fair to say that news coverage is the most serious problem aired. And how much information can one receive on the day's events in 30 minutes? Subtract 10 or 15 minutes for the "soft" news and advertisements and you are left with a back-handed remark Clinton made at Bush or vice-versa.

This programs our students. They do not possess the attention span for a 50-minute class. The teacher has lost them after five minutes because they are ready for a commercial.

I know this because it is my generation. It's like, there are too many other important things in our lives for us to learn to read and write. You're, like, forcing your views on us anyway, man. Um, and, uh, you can't make us do anything. After all, we have rights. Just don't ask us where we got them!

Researchers tout drug experiments for breast cancer

By Richard L. Vernaci
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Government researchers Thursday said exposing thousands of healthy women to a drug with dangerous side effects is worth the risk if it performs as hoped and prevents 40 percent of breast cancer cases.

"There are things we don't know about tamoxifen — that's the reason for the trial," Dr. Bernadine Healy, director of the National Institutes of Health, testified before a House panel.

There have been indications that tamoxifen can cause cancer of the uterus or liver, blood clots, blindness or birth defects.

NIH and the National Cancer Institute were criticized for the $68 million study that will give the drug to 8,000 women to see if it prevents breast cancer. It has been used for 30 years to treat but not to prevent cancer.

"In the last year, new research has been published about the dangers of tamoxifen, and new concerns about the study have been raised," said Rep. Donald M. Payne, D-N.J., chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee on human resources.

"In fact, Public Health Service experts have long believed the study could expose women to risks that outweigh the likely benefits," Payne said.

But Healy and her colleagues disagreed with that, saying the drug shows promise in preventing 30 percent to 40 percent of breast cancer cases.

"No intervention is totally without risk, and tamoxifen does have some potential side effects," said Dr. Peter Greenwald, the National Cancer Institute's director of cancer prevention and control. "The likely benefits — and the reasons for the trial — are a reduction in breast cancer, in heart disease and maintenance of bone density."

This study is somewhat unusual because it is using people who are not sick, rather than the more usual study in which an experimental therapy is tried on someone whose only alternative may be to die.

Women volunteering for the study are screened to ensure that they are healthy but considered at increased risk for developing breast cancer. Some 30,000 women have already gone through the initial screening process.

"For women long under-represented in many studies on disease prevention and all too often the unwitting subjects of unproved therapies, there is often a fundamental issue of trust," Dr. Helen Rodriguez-Trias, president-elect of the American Public Health Association, said in testimony for the hearing. "This is particularly true in low-income women and women of color."

Although Greenwald testified that women participating in the study were being given complete information, another witness said that wasn't the case with her.

Sybil Fainberg of Chevy Chase, Md., who has had three breast biopsies and whose twin sister recently developed breast cancer, said she was interested in being part of the study and attended a two-hour meeting at Georgetown University.

"One-and-a-half hours were devoted to general information about breast cancer which I and probably many others present already knew; only the last 30 minutes dealt with specific information about tamoxifen," she said in her written testimony. "I went away feeling that I was not provided with enough information to make an informed decision on whether to participate in the study.

The study, begun this year, will track 16,000 women for 10 years. Half of them will be given tamoxifen, and the other 8,000 will get a placebo, an unmedicated preparation used as a control in testing the efficacy of a medicine.

Tamoxifen has long been a breast cancer drug. It was picked for further study as a preventive therapy when it was noticed that women who took it for treating localized cancer in one breast had a 40 percent reduction of new cancers in the opposite breast.

Some 180,000 women in the United States will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year, and 46,000 people will die from it, Greenwald said.

Singer gets blasts from protesters

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Pesci and Madonna blasted her. The Bob Dylan crowd booed her. Angry protesters steamrolled her records — which, by the way, are tumbling down the charts.

It's been a long three weeks for Sinead O'Connor and the hands that ripped up the pope. The Irish singer has been taking hits instead of making them.

"It seems like such an overreaction," said Elaine Schock, O'Connor's publicist. "You have to think about what she really did: She tore up a picture of the pope. Was it the anger on her face? What was it that caused all this?" Mostly, it was Sinead herself.

It all started Oct. 3, when O'Connor capped an appearance on "Saturday Night Live" by tearing up a picture of Pope John Paul II before a national television audience. "Fight the real enemy," she announced before ripping the photo.

The repercussions were instant. Hundreds of phone calls quickly poured into NBC; two weeks later, a generally mellow crowd at the Bob Dylan tribute drove her in tears from the stage with their jeers.

O'Connor, in a statement Thursday in London, reiterated her objections to the church, which she holds responsible for the child abuse she suffered.

The Vatican uses "marriage, divorce and and in particular birth control and abortion to control us through our children and through fear," she said.

Such explanations have done little to appease those incensed by her action.

"I think it was just the irreverence of it. Why is she blaming the pope for her mother abusing her as a child? It's ridiculous," said Bill Fugazy of the National Ethnic Coalition of Organizations.

On Wednesday, the organization used a steamroller to crush more than 200 Sinead albums. The remains were to be shipped to Sinead.

Fugazy isn't the only person ripping O'Connor. Oscar-winner Pesci, appearing a week later on "SNL," produced a reassembled version of the pope's picture during his monologue.

"She was very lucky it wasn't my show, because if it was my show, I would have gave her such a smack," Pesci said to cheers.

Even Madonna — who just released a 128-page book of erotic fantasies — defended the pope: "I think there's a better way to present her ideas rather than ripping up an image that means a lot to other people."

O'Connor's response to Madonna and Pesci: "There's no comment. And there won't be," said Schock, who is hopeful the furor will die down.

A Rolling Stone cover story didn't help, either. O'Connor, in an interview, defended convicted rapist Mike Tyson and labeled his victim, Desiree Washington, "a disgrace to women." She also advocated marijuana use.

Bad press isn't new for O'Connor, although her past flaps fell into the "just say no" category: She refused to appear with Andrew Dice Clay on "SNL," refused to attend the Grammys because they glorified commercialism, and refused to allow "The Star-Spangled Banner" to be played before a New Jersey concert.

Memo sheds more light on Iran-Contra

By David Johnston
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A classified White House memorandum dated Nov. 26, 1985, shows for the first time how national security aides involved George Bush in their plans to use Terry Waite, the Church of England envoy, to win the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

The memorandum was prepared for John M. Poindexter, then the deputy national security adviser, by Oliver L. North, a National Security Council aide. It was written to familiarize then-Vice President Bush with Waite's hostage-release activities in advance of Bush's hastily arranged meeting with the Anglican emissary on the afternoon of Nov. 26.

It is not entirely certain that Bush read the memo, but if he did the contents are not in conflict with his past statements. All along, Bush has said he knew about the efforts to gain the release of American hostages being held in Lebanon. But the memo is significant because it shows that White House aides gave Bush a wealth of details about their secret efforts to free the hostages, raising more questions about Bush's recent assertions that he was "not in the loop" about the Iran-Contra affair.

Although the memorandum did not refer to the arms-for-hostages deal with Iran that was getting under way at that time, through arms sales arranged with Israel, it does ask Bush to discuss with Waite some of the ancillary demands the Iranians had made as part of hostage negotiations.

It also includes a cryptic hint that Bush was told of plans to encourage Waite to persuade the Kuwaiti government to exchange "blood money" for the release of 17 Moslem terrorists they had in prison, one of Iran's demands.If the reference to paying "blood money" was in effect a ransom, that would have been a contravention of the U.S. policy that forbade bargaining with hostage takers.

C. Boyden Gray, the white house counsel, said he would not talk about the contents of the document. "Since it is apparently classified, I should not discuss it," he said.

The memorandum also sheds more light on the puzzling relationship forged between North, the cocksure Marine lieutenant colonel working in the White House, and Waite, the headstrong church official who risked his life traveling to Beirut to meet with the hostages' captors.

Since Waite's release last year, some news accounts have suggested that North manipulated Waite as a kind of false front, crediting him with hostage releases that were obtained through the sales of arms to Iran. But both men have said Waite was just what he appeared to be: a private emissary.

The memo described Waite's harrowing experiences during four meetings with the captors in Beirut. But it focuses primarily on how North and Poindexter planned to use Waite to address one of the Iranians' and the hostage-holders' thorniest demands, the release of the Moslem terrorists held in Kuwaiti jails. That issue proved to be an intractable sticking point as Kuwait refused to release the men who came to be known as the Dawa prisoners.

Bush did meet Waite, although news accounts of their meeting quoted Waite as saying that he provided Bush with only a "general briefing."

The memorandum regarding Bush's meeting with Waite remains "secret" and was among a number of classified papers about the affair that someone sent anonymously to The New York Times. Current and former government officials who were interviewed about the documents said they appeared to be genuine.

Many of the documents have been already released in edited form by the Iran-contra congressional investigating committees, or by prosecutors in the trials of Reagan administration officials charged with wrongdoing. But some have never been disclosed.

On Tuesday, officials at the Justice Department and representatives of the office of Lawrence E. Walsh, the Iran-Contra independent prosecutor, asked The Times to surrender the documents. Lawyers for the newspaper declined.

The government withheld most Iran-Contra documents relating to dealings between Reagan administration officials and Waite, fearing, while he was in captivity, that any confirmation of his association with Reagan administration officials might endanger his life. He was kidnapped in January 1987 and released in November 1991.

The memo indicated that Waite's "principal contact" among the captors was an American-educated Shiite, "who continues to emphasize that their main objective is the release of the 17 Dawa party prisoners held in Kuwait."

The document said that American efforts to intervene with Kuwait to arrange a meeting between Waite and Kuwaiti officials had failed, though Waite had not given up.

The memo advised Bush that North and Poindexter had urged Waite to continue his efforts and, if successful, return to Beirut, where he should "seek a new point of departure for discussions with the captors."

One provocative passage in the memo said that American officials wanted to encourage Waite to explore "alternatives" with the Kuwaitis to allow "the payment of 'blood money' or the release of at least some of the Dawa prisoners as a humanitarian gesture during a religious holiday."

Saul cleared

LUBBOCK — All-America candidate Tracy Saul has been medically cleared to play Saturday in Texas Tech's Southwest Conference football game against SMU.

The senior Red Raider free safety passed a Cybex test Thursday after undergoing arthrosocpic knee surgery to repair torn cartilage on Oct. 11. The test measures strength, endurance and power in the injured area.

Saul went down for the first time in his collegiate career in the second half of the North Carolina State game on Oct. 10. He holds the SWC records for career interceptions (22) and career pass interception return yards (411). Saul has started 36 consecutive games in the Tech secondary and also returns punts and kickoffs.

Rebs host No. 3 Permian

Lee in must-win situation vs. Mojo

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland Lee vs. Odessa Permian has been the District 4-5A football showcase for over a decade now, but few regular season games during that time frame have carried the importance of what will happen at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium.

Of course, this will be another game in a long line of sellouts, but it is sudden death for the Lee Rebels. The old Mojo rival down the road must be beaten tonight or a grid era that has seen nine consecutive playoff berths for Lee comes to an end.

And even Permian, ranked third in the state, ends its season with Lee, Abilene Cooper and San Angelo. The Panthers need a victory to insure a chance of defending their state championship.

This game always has enough hype for overkill, but it's hard to out-hype this one.

"We've got to win," says Lee coach Earl Miller. "We haven't played very well and we're struggling to get into the playoffs. But we do have this chance. We're playing a state-ranked team. It ought to be a lot of fun and we ought to go out and play. We're not supposed to win, so there's not as much pressure on

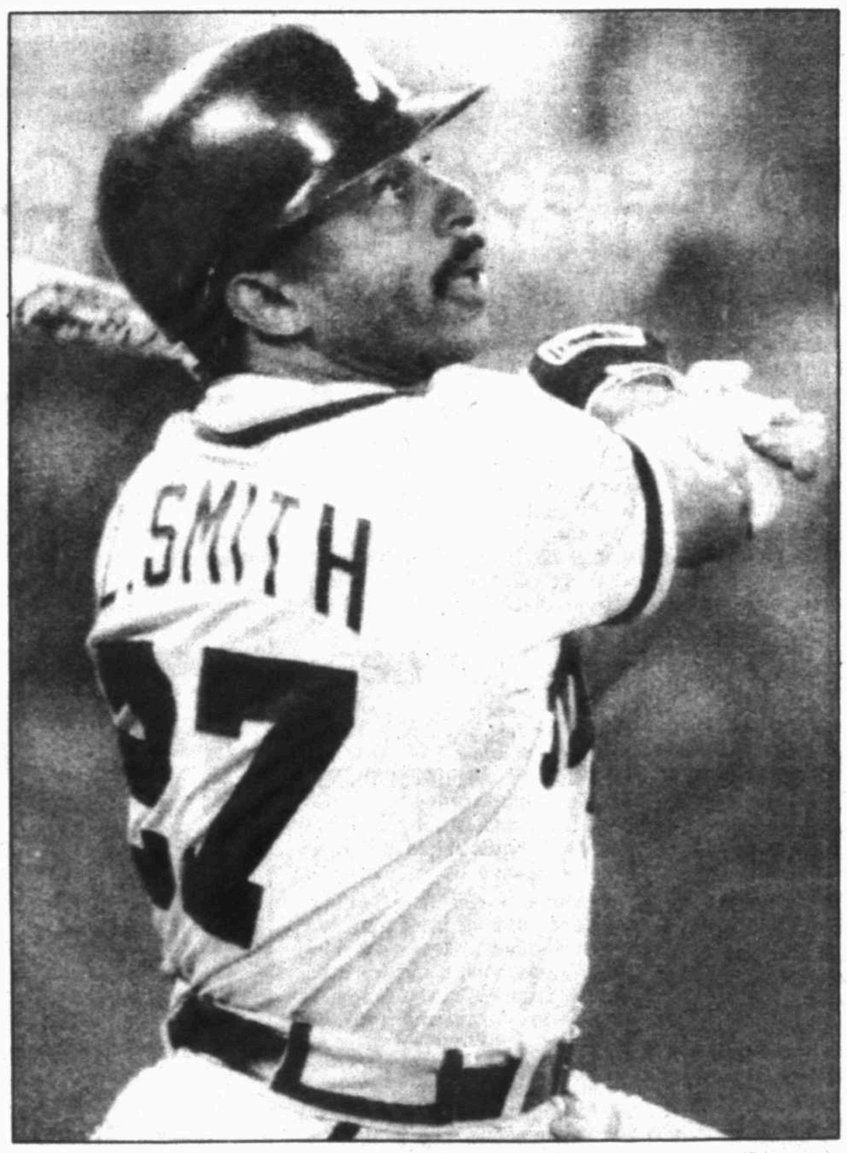
Braves survive Canada

Grand slam pushes Atlanta past Toronto, 7-2



AP Laserphoto

Lonnie Smith blasts a grand slam in the fifth inning off Jack Morris to send the Braves back to Atlanta with a 7-2 World Series victory.

Associated Press

TORONTO — Lonnie Smith ran around the bases just fine this time, got even with Jack Morris and gave the Atlanta Braves another chance in the World Series.

Smith's grand slam capped a five-run fifth inning that finished Morris, and the Braves beat up the Toronto Blue Jays 7-2 Thursday night to close their gap to 3-2 and send the Series back to Atlanta.

"I uttered a few words I don't care to repeat here, but by second base I was happy," Smith said. "I felt I finally did something to contribute."

John Smoltz outpitched Morris in a rematch of last October's Game 7 starters, and prevented the Blue Jays from putting up another flag at the SkyDome, the one calling them World Series champions.

Smith's slam provided perhaps some revenge, and some relief from the burden he has carried around ever since the eighth inning of Game 7 last year. In that one, Smith got lost when rounding the bases and did not score, and Morris and the Minnesota Twins went on to beat the Braves 1-0 in 10 innings.

That triumph earned Morris the MVP award, and saddled Smith, nicknamed "Skates" for his many mishaps on the bases and in the field, with the label of the man who lost the World Series.

"I don't think I will ever get any retribution from that game," Smith said. "People all year brung it up, and some people considered it one of the major blunders in World Series history.

"No, I didn't get retribution tonight," he said. "I've been criticized my whole career. For one thing, I'm a black man, so I'm going to be criticized. For another thing, I've been considered a mediocre player, and I've been criticized for that."

Now, after beating Morris for the second time in six days, Smith and the Braves get another chance to capture what got away from them last year.

MHS, OHS in battle for pride

■ Bulldogs collide with Bronchos at Ratliff Stadium.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

ODESSA — Pride. That's what Midland High and Odessa High will be playing for here at 8 p.m. tonight, when the Bulldogs visit OHS in a District 4-5A football showdown at Ratliff Stadium.

While the focus of the Permian Basin is on 4-5A's feature game of the week — Odessa Permian at Midland Lee — MHS is seeking its first win since the final game of the 1990 season. The Bronchos, defeated 42-10 last week by San Angelo, are now eliminated from any playoff berth and are playing out the string.

"I think it is a game of pride. For Midland (0-7) there's the pride of trying to get into the win column. The challenge for us is to get back on a winning note," said OHS head coach Bill Barron, whose team is 3-5 overall and 1-3 in district.

Though the Bulldogs are winless and in a 16-game losing streak, they are coming off what head coach Ronnie Reeger said is their best game of the season. MHS lost to Abilene Cooper 28-7 last week, but was tied with the Cougars after the first quarter and within one touchdown of Cooper until nearly halftime. Cooper defeated OHS 35-8 and is unbeaten in 4-5A.

"Last week was very positive for us. The kids played hard and if we can just put some of that back-to-back, hopefully we will have something we can build on," Reeger said.

Just two weeks ago things were looking up for the Bronchos, as OHS

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Teska checking out Lee vs. Permian

It's Friday night, so let's take in a high school football game. So, let's see, who's playing?

Well, there is the Odessa Permian-Midland Lee game. That should be good. There is one slight problem. I live in Colby, Wisonsin, and the game is in Texas. What's a couple of thousand miles for a good game?

Williamson

That's what Duane Teska, who really does live in Colby, Wisconsin, figured. He'll be at the game tonight. He just wanted to see what all the talk was about.

"I read the book (Friday Night Lights) and just wanted to see if this game was all it was cracked up to be," Teska said.

Teska hopped a plane, arrived Tuesday and has watched workouts at both Lee and Permian.

Teska coached football at Colby for 28 years and is now in his first year of retirement. Colby has an enrollment of just under 500 students. He ended his career this summer when he was selected to coach in Wisconsin's Shrine All-Star game. Now he is seeing how the rest of the world lives.

"This is great," Teska said. "My wife is younger and is still teaching. So, I left her up there working and I headed to Texas to see for myself what it was all about. I also left three inches of snow on the ground. I don't even need a coat here. The trees haven't even changed colors yet."

Teska ran a little 'T' formation attack before going tothe run and shoot in his latter years at Colby. He says one of his teams threw 56 times in one game. What he sees tonight certainly won't be what he's used to, but he will see some smash-mouth style of play. It should make his trip worthwile.

He had it pretty good at a Lee practice Tuesday. Lee trainer Charles Harrington was running him around in a golf cart.

Retirement doesn't sound half bad, but I'm still left wondering what game Teska's picking next week.

With great trepidation and a 28-8 (.778) record in the District 4-5A picking game, we go again to this week's selections. They told me this job wouldn't be easy.

Odessa Permian 21, Midland Lee 18: Is this the end of Lee's playoff era? This pick says yes, but before crying, remember that this corner has been wrong before. Lee has lost two games in a row to Mojo, but has won four of the last seven. Permian leads the overall series by a 25-9 margin.

Odessa High 14, Midland High 13: Again, lack of guts prevents me from going too far out on a limb, but there is this feeling that the Bronchos are ripe for an upset. This could turn out to be the big news of the night. OHS owns a meager 16-15 advantage in the series since 1961.

San Angelo 42, Abilene High 10: The Bobkitties spin wheels while waiting for two weeks and a meeting with Permian. San Angelo leads the series by a 21-8-2 mark since 1961.

Abilene Cooper 35, Austin High 7: These teams have never met, but this is a mismatch of high order. Cooper has Permian next week.

Chaps lead 'Horns at UNT Invitational

DENTON — The Midland College golf team spent Thursday afternoon adding the day's best round of 289 to its morning-round 297 here to assume a three-stroke lead over the University of Texas after the first 36 holes at the University of North Texas Invitational at the North Texas Course.

The Chaparrals 586 total is three shots better than the Longhorns' 589 and 11 better than third-place North Texas, which ended the day at 597 with just today's final round remaining to be played.

Steve Dundas led the Chaps with 71 and 72 to finish the day at 143, three strokes ahead of teammate Guy Redford's 146.

Team Totals

Midland College, 297-289—586; University of Texas, 295-294—589; University of North Texas, 299-298—597; McClennan JC, 301-299—600; Lon Morris, 309-298—607; Western Texas, 301-306—609; Weatherford, 306-303—609.

Chaparrals

Stephen Dundas, 71-72—143; Guy Redford, 77-69—146; Lance McCullough, 74-75—149; Shawn Savage, 75-77—152; Jason Brooks, 79-73—152.

Lee JV downs Mojo

ODESSA — David Navarro set up one touchdown with a 74-yard run and Jerry Stanford returned a kickoff 83 yards for another as the Midland Lee junior varsity football team edged the Odessa Permian JV, 14-13 here Thursday night.

It was Lee's first JV win over Permian in nine years, and Rebel coach Eddie Bull said it was accomplished by defense.

"We're extremely proud of this team. They played a super game, especially on defense."

Lee recovered three fumbles and intercepted Permian four times.

The Panthers grabbed an early 7-0 lead, but Navarro's long run set up a one-yard TD by Dedrick Adams and the teams were tied 7-7 at the half.

But Stanford, who also recovered a fumble in the game, returned the second half kick 83 yards for the go-ahead points. Justin Little's second extra point put the Rebs up 14-7.

Permian drove back to make it a one-point game, but missed the extra point and didn't get another chance.

Lee Lauderdale had two interceptions and Daniel Hughes and David Thibadeaux each had one for the Rebs, who improved to 4-1 in District 3-4A and 4-4 overall.

Michael Jones was in on four tackles and Chris Villegas helped on six tackles and recovered a fumble to lead the defensive effort. Kenny Harper also had a fumble recovery for Lee, which hosts Abilene Cooper in two weeks in the season finale.

MFHS teams slip

The Midland Freshman High School volleyball teams suffered losses on Monday as the MFHS Purple squad fell 15-8, 15-10 to Odessa Crockett, while the MFHS Gold dropped a 15-8, 15-7 decision to Odessa Nimitz.

Laura Johnston, Cathryn Valada and Melissa Hernandez were the leading servers for the Purple, and Toya Zachary led the Gold in serves.

MFHS will host the postseason Midland-Odessa girls volleyball tournament today and Saturday. Play begins at 3:30 p.m. today. The finals are slated for noon on Saturday.

Ranger frosh rolls

The Greenwood freshman football team improved to 6-0 for the season with a 32-6 victory over the Big Spring freshman team on Thursday

The Ranger frosh returns to action next Thursday when the team travels to face the Wink junior varsity.

LFHS tops Ector

The Lee Freshman Maroon football team pounded Odessa Ector Thursday night as Chriss Wheeler rushed 11 times for 132 yards and four TDs. Wheeler also returned a punt 80 yards for a TD as the Maroon team lifted its record to 5-2.

Cody Lambert had 10 carries for 105 yards and a TD, and B.J. Honeyman scored twice for the Lee Frosh.

Defensive standouts for LFHS were Honeyman, Ken Conkey and Cody Hilburn.

SERIES: Braves force Game 6 in Atlanta

(From 1B)

Steve Avery will start Saturday night against Toronto's David Cone when the Series resumes in Atlanta.

The victory was the first blowout in a week of close games, and marked the first time in 11 Series games that a non-dome team had won indoors.

Of the previous 37 teams to hold 3-1 leads in the World Series, 31 have gone on to win. The Blue Jays hoped to add another winner to that list with Morris, the man they signed during the winter to win big names.

But Morris was booed off the mound after Smith's fourth career slam, and left with his head bowed. He went 21-6 during the regular season, but is a brutal 0-3 with a 7.43 ERA in four postseason starts. He has allowed six home runs and 24 hits in 23 innings.

Morris was tagged for nine hits and all seven runs in 4 2-3 innings. He was the first Series starter to give up seven runs since Danny Cox in 1987.

"Perhaps I left him in too long," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "But like I said earlier this week, he's the kind of guy I leave in there.

"Of course, I feel bad for him. He's made a lot of pitches he'd like to have back," he said. "Let's hope the booing was just for the situation, but it could've been for me and for Jack. Don't forget, people forget fast. He's one of the reasons we're here."

Morris struggled from the start, giving up a double to Otis Nixon on the first pitch of the game, and a solo homer to David Justice in the fourth.

Morris fell behind 3-2 when Deion Sanders lined a two-out, RBI single in the fifth. Terry Pendleton's second double of the game and an intentional walk to Justice set up Smith's opposite-field slam to right on a 1-2 pitch.

The sellout crowd became so silent as Smith rounded the bases that it was possible to hear the Braves cheering and slapping high-fives as they spilled out of the dugout. Smith's slam was the first by a designated hitter in the World Series.

Smith connected for the 16th slam in Series history, and the first since Jose Canseco's in 1988. It was only the third slam by an NL player, along with Ken Boyer in 1964 and Chuck Hiller in 1962.

The big blow made it 7-2 and gave Smoltz enough room to breathe easy.

Smoltz, again pitching on three days' rest as he had in winning the NL playoffs MVP trophy, also was not sharp. At least he kept his team in the game, pitching one batter into the seventh inning and allowing two runs on five hits.

Smoltz began the game with no record in three World Series starts despite a 1.66 ERA. He would have won Game 2 last week, but reliever Jeff Reardon gave up pinch-hitter Ed Sprague's two-run homer in the ninth.

The Braves' bullpen has struggled, but the five-run lead was enough. Mike Stanton relieved Smoltz after a leadoff walk in the seventh and quieted the Blue Jays' bats and their boosters and earned a save for his three innings' work.

The game was the first of the postseason for the Blue Jays without a home run, a record 10 games.

Morris was trying again to become the first pitcher to win World Series games for three different teams. He also could have become just the fourth pitcher to win the deciding game in the World Series in consecutive years, and the first since Allie Reynolds for the Yankees in 1952-53.

The Braves, meanwhile, wanted to avoid becoming the first team to lose the Series in consecutive seasons since the Dodgers in 1977-78.

The anticipation in the air before the game was whipped up by several Blue Jays on the bench holding a sign that proclaimed "Tonight Is The Night." The sight was captured by a camera and shown on the JumboTron scoreboard in center field, working the fans in a frenzy.

The Braves, however, took the crowd out of it right away.

Nixon, as he did in Game 1, got a hit on Morris' first pitch of the game. Nixon cruised into second with a double, stole third without a throw and scored on Pendleton's double past drawn-in first baseman John Olerud.

Toronto tied it in the second on a single by Olerud, a walk and Pat Borders' RBI double, extending his postseason hitting streak to 13 games. The longest hitting string in postseason play ever was Hank Bauer's 17 games from 1956-58 with the Yankees.

Toronto catcher Pat Borders rips an RBI double in the second inning of Game 5, but the Braves bounced back for a 7-2 triumph and trail in the series, 3-2 in games.

Justice homered deep to right in the fourth for a 2-1 lead. Borders tied it again in the fourth with his seventh hit of the Series, a run-scoring single.

With Morris and Smoltz both battling without their best stuff, each team had double-barreled action in their bullpens early.

Morris looked like he was going to enjoy an easy inning in the fifth when he retired the first two batters on a strikeout and a grounder.

But Nixon singled and stole Atlanta's 13th base of the Series and scored standing up on Sanders' single.

Pendleton followed with a double down the right-field line that a fan touched, maybe, and then again maybe not, denying Sanders a chance to score.

Ozzie Smith awarded NL-record 13th Gold Glove

Associated Press

TORONTO — As Ozzie Smith points out, the baseball numbers that catch most people's eyes are offensive ones. Home runs, RBIs and so on.

Still, here's a defensive statistic that anyone can appreciate: On Thursday, Smith was awarded his 13th Rawlings Gold Glove, the most ever in the National League.

Smith, considered the best fielding shortstop in baseball history, had been tied with outfielders Willie Mays and Roberto Clemente for the most NL Gold Gloves. Smith broke their marks by winning for the 13th straight year.

Third baseman Brooks Robinson and pitcher Jim Kaat share the major league mark of 16 Gold Gloves for fielding excellence. The awards began in 1957, meaning Mays did not have a chance to win for his first several seasons.

"I think that in years past, I'd probably tell you that it didn't mean as much as it does now," Smith said. "But now, as each day goes by and I get older, it means more."

The Gold Gloves are voted on by managers and coaches. The rest of the team in each league will be announced Nov. 5, but Rawlings released Smith's honor early because he will be in Japan touring with a major league all-star team at the time.

Smith won the award twice with San Diego and, after being traded for Garry Templeton, has won it for the last 11 years in St. Louis.

Where he'll be next season, however, is in doubt. He plans to file for free agency because the Cardinals have not come forth with a solid contract offer.

"It's a situation that has kind of lingered for a couple of years. I'm kind of forced into the free-agent market," Smith said on a conference call. "When you feel like after 10 or 11 years that you still have to prove yourself, it's tough."

Smith turns 38 years old the day after Christmas. He said he hopes to play at least two more seasons, wherever he is.

"I don't feel that I've tailed off that much. It's hard for me to tell when people say I've lost a step here or there," he said. "As I get older, the thing I notice that changes is your energy level. That's the only thing that's been noticeable for me.

"Not many people my age played shortstop. When you get to be 34 or 35, people start throwing you into the same bag, that you're getting old," he said. "I think I still can play."

Smith enjoyed another fine season in the field and at the plate. He batted .295, stole 43 bases and got his 2,000th career hit.

Smith ranked second among NL shortstops in assists, total chances and double plays. Pittsburgh's Jay Bell led the league in all three categories, but he made 22 errors in 159 games. Smith had 10 errors in 132 games for a .985 fielding percentage.

"I want to be as well-rounded as I can be," he said. "At this point, I think I've proven that I'm more than just a defensive player.

"When people talk about baseball, they talk about Babe Ruth hitting the ball out of the ballpark. The finer points are not going to shine as much," he said.

REBELS: Panthers use two weeks to prepare for Lee

us as you would think."

The importance of the contest isn't lost on Permian coach Tam Hollingshead.

"There are a lot of playoff implications for both teams," Hollingshead said. "This is another district game, and at Permian, we try to treat every district game as a big game. We have to take one game at a time and concentrate on that.

"We knew going into district play that our league was going to have some strong teams, and that has been the case. I'm sure Coach Miller will have his team ready to play. We're expecting another traditional — classic — Lee-Permian game."

Some fans are saying that Lee has a better chance of winning since the game will be played on the Memorial Stadium grass, instead of the carpet at Permian's home field of Ratliff Stadium. Much of that talk comes from last year when state champion Permian almost slipped up in bi-district play against Amarillo Tascosa in a game on a muddy, grass field.

Hollingshead doesn't think it is a major factor.

"Our kids practice every day on the same type of grass that is at Memorial Stadium," Hollingshead. "They have done that since they were in the seventh grade, so it shouldn't be a factor unless they have let the grass grow 17 inches high. Have you checked the field for that?"

Many are also wondering which Lee team will show up. The Lee defense has given opponents quick scores on long distance first possessions the last four weeks. Miller says that must stop.

"It is very important for us not to get off to a bad start," Miller said. "Maybe our young kids now realize how important it is to play the first two minutes of the game to establish a beachhead.

"We can't worry about what has happened in the past. We've still got this chance. We've got to move the ball and have a good offensive game. We've got to throw all our shots at them and not hold back.

"If we play our guts out, we might have a chance. I hope we accept the challenge better than we did last year when they kicked us good two times."

Permian defeated Lee by 33-0 and 35-7 margins last year, but Hollingshead isn't lulled to sleep by those numbers.

"Lee looks good to me," he said. "They spread out their offense last week against Abilene High and gave quarterback Courtney Turner some options and he came through with big plays. Lee has had some injuries at running back, but I can't tell that they have lost a lick."

Permian had an open date last week after beating Midland High 56-0 two weeks ago. The Panthers have had a full two weeks to prepare for the biggest game in West Texas — if not the state.

Lee rolled out almost 600 yards of offense last week with Turner rushing for over 100 yards and throwing for over 150 yards. Marlon Henry also turned in a career best 134 yards rushing and fullback Scott McLeod had almost 100 yards rushing.

Permian's major offensive threat is running back John Williams, who has 1,008 yards rushing in only six games. Quarterback Dennis Graham ranks fourth in the league in passing with 626 yards and eight touchdowns, completing 38 of 65 (.585) passes.

Permian ranks second in total 4-5A offense, averaging 405.2 yards per game while Lee is third at 357.0 yards per contest. Permian is the league's top defensive team, giving up only 186.5 yards per contest and has a streak going of three consecutive shutouts. Lee is the third best defense, yielding 248.6 yards per game.

The stage is set. Now it's up to the marbles to roll to a resting place. Fate awaits the final decision.

BULLDOGS: MHS coming off best game of campaign defeated Lee 21-14 to stay in the running for the postseason. But last week's loss to San Angelo undid all that, as starting Broncho quarterback Erik Hartman ran for 126 yards but threw for just 29 yards and three interceptions.

"I wish we could get more balance. He's been a marvelous leader for us, but I'm sure Erik feels the weight of the world is on his shoulders," Barron said.

So far this season Hartman has rushed for 586 yards and passed for 630. Fullback Roe Hubbard is the second leading Broncho rusher with 276 yards.

"Hartman is an excellent kid. Their fullback and quarterback both can play," Reeger said. "We have to concentrate on stopping them, but a lot of good teams have had a tough time doing that."

For MHS to be successful, Reeger said, it has to be able to run. So far this season, that has not happened. Sophomore Roy Coats is the 'Dogs' leading rusher with 115 yards, while Michael Gilbert has 114. MHS is averaging just over 56 yards a game rushing and 88 passing for a total average of 144.

"We have got to move the ball on the ground and make some yardage there. That will help the passing game some if we can do that consistently, and it will keep our defense from being on the field so much. But we have got to block a lot better," Reeger said.

OHS is battling a consistency problem itself. In district play the Bronchos played well in a 14-0 loss to Permian, were blown out by Cooper, beat Lee then led San Angelo 10-7 at haltime before giving up 35 second-half points. Talk about up and down.

"We need to be more consistent throughout four quarters. We didn't play but two of four last week. We did it against Lee, but in every other game this year it has been a problem," Barron said.

Motivation could be a problem for OHS also. The Broncs downed Lee, a team that beat MHS 57-0, and stayed within two big plays of Permian, which beat the 'Dogs 56-0. Now, with no hope for the playoffs, the question is which Broncho team will show up tonight.

"I don't think it will be a problem, but I can't tell any more. I used to think I could read kids, but now I don't know until about the second quarter if we're ready. But I think we'll play hard because of pride," Barron.

"We better because Midland played well last week. They played much better against Cooper than we did. I know that's got to be a positive in their corner."

Tip of the Week

One of the keys to successful scoring is having just that "right" feel of the bowling ball. One way to accomplish this is to use bowler's tape in the thumb hole. It comes in black, which is slick, and white, which is rough. You would use the black if you tend to stick or hang up in the ball and white if you need a firmer grip on the ball. The tape should be placed in the front of the thumb hole so that the inside of your thumb rests against the tape. Use as many as you need until you get that "just right" feeling.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Fewer work pressures and more romance lie just ahead. A relationship that develops slowly will endure. Economic changes make an employment situation more stable. A promotion could come sooner than you think. Next spring, pay attention to your first impressions; they will be right on target. Telephone calls and good luck go hand-in-hand as summer approaches. Revealing more of yourself to your co-workers helps you gain their cooperation.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: TV host Johnny Carson, singer Dwight Yoakum, golfer Chi-Chi Rodriguez, soccer star Pele.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business partners could change their minds, leaving you in a pickle. Don't worry. You will soon be back on top! A good book holds your attention more than television this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take care of paperwork and other important tasks before you even think about going to lunch. Hidden hopes and desires will not come into being unless you share them with your loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not overlook the obvious. A money matter must be handled by you personally. Do not procrastinate or try to shift the responsibility onto someone else.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be more adventuresome today. You are in good standing with friends and VIPs alike. Your power base and circle of acquaintances continue to grow; extend your reach.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A wonderful new accord could touch your life. Develop even better rapport with your friends and associates; make introductions, too. Launch a special project.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Meeting privately with VIPs should be a highly enlightening experience. Learn as much as you can. Be more assertive on the financial front. Get any promises in writing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not let disappointing news keep you from doing your best work. You are headed for the big time if you please the top brass. Put your best foot forward; dress fashionably.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You reach the crossroads where a business venture is concerned. Push onward with the help of friends and VIPs. Guard your savings from dishonest or incompetent financial advisers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Acting impatient or tactless will draw bad reviews today. Hide your irritation and emphasize the rewards of sharing. Pouring on the charm will make you a big hit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can expect to get a special business deal today. Your mind is keenly tuned to potential profits; a secret pact may result from confidential talks.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stop thinking about the monotony of a task and you will get finished quicker. Shortcuts are favored so long as you don't skip any crucial steps. Confide in loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone may try to persuade you to take a path you know is dangerous. Say "no" as many times as it takes for the message to sink in. Seek seclusion this evening.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: If there is one thing these Scorpios like better than privacy, it is mysterious secrecy. Rarely will they reveal their true agenda! They make up their minds quickly and carry out their plans with determination. True strategists, they leave nothing to chance. Their brilliance of mind is often envied by their peers.

Opening lead: King of ♡

There are rankings for those who watch a bridge game: The Kibitzer, who is allowed to sit next to the table and, at the conclusion of a hand, may enter into the post-mortem with the players; the Dorbitzer, who sits behind the Kibitzer, but is barred from speaking to the players and can discuss the hand only with the Kibitzer; and the Tsitser, who sits wherever there's a place available, but cannot pass any comment, except for saying "ts, ts" whenever he thinks an error has been committed.

Every once in a while a Kibitzer will lose his cool and pass a remark before the play has been completed, affecting the result. Such was the case when this hand was played at the once-renowned Cavendish Club of New York. South had reached a contract of five diamonds via the direct route and West had started the defense by cashing the king and ace of hearts.

A Kibitzer sitting between South and West leaned over to look at West's hand and announced: "You cannot defeat the contract no matter what you play!" Being a trusting soul, West exposed his hand. East exploded: "Another heart will beat the hand. I will ruff with the queen and promote your jack of trumps for the setting trick."

Of course, East's analysis was correct—the Kibitzer had erred. A card committee was hastily summoned, and they arrived at a Solomonic verdict:

They awarded North-South 800 points apiece for making five diamonds and East-West 100 points each for defeating the contract. The total of 1,800 points was charged to the Kibitzer's account!

New York's top court lets stand gag order ruling on Ivana Trump

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York's top court Thursday declined to hear Ivana Trump's appeal seeking to lift a gag order that keeps her from talking about her marriage to Donald Trump.

Trump

The decision by the Court of Appeals lets stand a lower court ruling upholding the confidentiality clause she signed at the time of the couple's March 22 divorce.

In July, The Donald sued Ivana for $25 million, saying she failed to keep mum about his affairs by writing the novel, "For Love Alone." He said it was a thinly veiled account of their 14-year marriage.

"The book is a novel, it is not about Mr. Trump," said Floyd Abrams, a lawyer for Ivana Trump.

Abrams said had the state's high court lifted the gag order, Trump would have had a hard time pursuing his lawsuit, which has yet to go to trial.

DEADWOOD, S.D. — Kevin Costner was in South Dakota this week to "monitor business interests," but he left before the casino he co-owns celebrated its first anniversary.

"I'm at the point in my life that I try to avoid parties," Costner said.

Costner and his brother, Dan, own and run the Midnight Star, a casino, restaurant and sports bar in Deadwood. They also are planning to open a convention center.

Dressed in blue jeans and sheepskin coat and sporting a day's growth of beard, Costner on Wednesday gave a casual business summary: "I think it's going fine."

He said he also found some time to hunt pheasant.

Costner also visited buffalo rancher Roy Houck at a Rapid City hospital. Much of Costner's award-winning film, "Dances With Wolves," was filmed on Houck's Triple U Ranch in Pierre.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Hank Williams Jr. and his wife are the parents of a baby girl.

The girl, named Katherine Diana, weighed 6 pounds, 3 ounces, when she was born Wednesday night, publicist Kathy Gangwisch said. Mother and daughter were doing well, Gangwisch said Thursday.

"Hank said she was born with the Williams' voice: loud and clear. The doctor didn't even have to spank her," Gangwisch said.

The singer, 43, who has three other children by previous marriages, was in the delivery room at Vanderbilt Medical Center.

RED BANK, N.J. — Grammy-winning saxophonist Grover Washington Jr. says radio audiences are cheated by stations that only play rock or pop music.

"You hear one-tenth of the people recording," he said. "Switch the dial and see what you hear, it's mostly the same. Audiences suffer since they miss a lot of good music."

Washington, who won two Grammys for his 1981 album "Winelight," has been on tour since April to celebrate his 20th anniversary as a solo recording artist and his new release, "Next Exit."

He will play Sunday at the Count Basie Theatre in Red Bank.

In a telephone interview from New York, Washington said that although jazz is his specialty, he would like to be known as a general musician.

"That applies to many other musicians, too," he said. "We have families and more than just one dimension."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Fred Graham, managing editor and chief anchor of Courtroom Television Network and Watergate-era newsman for CBS, won the 1992 Vanderbilt University Law School Distinguished Alumnus award.

"Fred Graham's career has been a truly remarkable and innovative one in the military, private practice, government and most especially in the formation of the field of legal journalism," said John J. Costonis, dean of the Vanderbilt law school.

Before joining Court TV, Graham, an attorney, had worked as a legal correspondent for CBS News and The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA — The New Kids On The Block has gone to court to force a company to stop making unauthorized buttons using their pictures.

The pop singing group charged Button Master of Bridgeport with violating trademark law, according to New Kids attorney, M. Kelly Tillery. The lawsuit, which seeks more than $75,000, was filed Wednesday in federal court.

New Kids is joined in the lawsuit by Winterland Productions Co., the San Francisco-based maker of the group's official souvenir items.

Button Master, operated by Phil and Bernadette Ceccola, has been sued previously by other pop acts and by DC Comics for Batman paraphernalia it sold.

No telephone numbers were listed for Button Master or the Ceccolas.

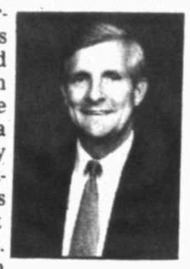
FAMILY MATTERS

Reader disagrees with columnist's advice

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: As a regular reader of your column I am usually in hearty agreement with your sound Christian advice. But your response to the woman who was concerned about her friend being an over-attached and over-protective parent was so far off the mark that I felt compelled to write. I feel your advice reflects an ignorance of the whole concept of the "attachment style" of parenting. This is a growing body of people who are very concerned with their children and devoted to their well-being. Pioneers of this return-to-deeper-parental-involvement came from many different backgrounds. Some of the best known are the seven founders of La Leche League who joined together over 35 years ago to form this volunteer organization promoting breast feeding, the importance of family, the value of children and the naturalness of learning mothering skills from another experienced woman.



May

The La Leche handbook, "The Womanly Art of Breastfeeding," offers help to get off to a great start in parenthood. Then books such as "The Family Bead" by Tine Thevenin and "Mothering" magazine continue to provide excellent guidance to those of us who embrace attached parenting beliefs. Over the last 35 plus years, the very behaviors listed as "emotional incest" have been proven to produce well adjusted, independent, emotionally sound offspring. I find the term very offensive as all the listed (in the column) behaviors are very positive, with the possible exception of "resenting the time a child spends with friends." Even this is very variable depending on the character of the friends, quantity of time spent and activities engaged in while in their company.

Actually the whole movement toward more involvement is not new or radical, but a return to simple, basic, time-proven methods of child rearing and education. It does take a great deal more time, energy and effort than turning those responsibilities over to someone else while the parents pursue their own interests. The child bearing years are brief in the scope of a lifetime and children soon become independent enough for parents to resume many other activities.

It is unfortunate that this couple's marriage may have been suffering from their differences in parenting styles. Perhaps both could broaden their perspective by reading and discussing both sides of these issues. As a parent of a 2½-year-old with another baby on the way, I am fortunate to have a husband who shares my parenting beliefs. After eight happy years of marriage we have found more deeper fulfillment in our "enmeshed" family relationships than in anything else society has to offer. We are both professional people with college educations, including courses in human growth and development, and child psychology. We pray daily for all parent-child relationships to become more and more enmeshed. What an improvement for today's society!

Please be more aware of your column's influence on those of us following the rocky path of parenthood and more careful of what resources you consult and quote! Keep up the good work. CONCERNED MOM

DEAR MOM: First, let me apologize for having to edit your letter to fit in the column space. I hope I have captured the essence of what you wanted to write.

You make a number of good points about the differences in parenting philosophies and possible outcomes. If there was one sure way to raise children so that they would always turn out functioning, productive, spiritual adult members of society, we would all do it.

In the Timberlawn Foundation study of functional and dysfunctional families, the authors state: "We found no single quality that optimally functioning families demonstrated and that less fortunate families somehow missed. On the contrary, optimally functioning or competent families appeared to be so because of the presence and interrelationship of a number of variables. It was this mixture that accounted for the impressive differences in style and patterning among the optimal families."

The idea of "enmeshment" comes from one scholarly attempt, the Circumplex Model, to measure the dimensions of family behavior. Family cohesion, the emotional bonding that family members have toward one another, is measured on a continuum from low extreme (disengaged), to central (separated/connected) in the middle, to high extreme (enmeshed). The hypothesis was that in the central area of the cohesion scale, "individuals are able to experience and balance being independent from and connected to their family." A reasonable support for this hypothesis has been found in a number of research projects concerned with family functioning. But again, this is only one of many possible measures. Thank you for your letter and for sharing your very positive experiences.

DEAR ABBY

Outlook cloudy for woman embarrassed by her height

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My problem is I am too tall. I'm 26 years old, weigh 134 pounds and stand 6 feet tall. I am a woman.

Van Buren

Most people tell me it's an advantage for a woman to be tall. They don't know how many problems tall women have. It's almost impossible to find clothes that fit, and I would love to wear heels, but if I did, I'd be 6 foot 2 inches at least, so I settle for flats, which do not flatter my legs.

When I stand next to someone in a mirror or photograph, I look like a giant!

My boyfriend is two inches shorter than me, and even though it doesn't seem to bother him, it bothers me. Whenever we walk together, or have a picture taken together, I slouch so as not to dwarf him.

Are most men intimidated by tall women? It must be hard for them to feel masculine with women who are bigger than they are. Please answer these questions, Abby. — TALL IN BERGENFIELD, N.J.

DEAR TALL: Tall women will always attract attention, which can be a plus. With the proper wardrobe, makeup, hairdo and attitude, you can look like a fashion model. Throw your shoulders back, keep your chin up and let the expression on your face show that you are proud of your height. If you slouch or stand stoop-shouldered, you will not look shorter, but you WILL look self-conscious and insecure.

Men who are self-confident cannot be "intimidated" by a woman of any size. Masculinity (and femininity, for that matter) has nothing to do with the size of the package.

If you don't already know about it, you might be interested in joining Tall Clubs International. The toll-free number is (800) 521-2512. It offers a wide range of social opportunities to tall people, with 4,000 members in 73 chapters in the United States and Canada.

DEAR ABBY: When our son was born, he weighed 6 pounds, 13 ounces. He was 17½ inches long. Now, 11 months later, he weighs 10 pounds and is 20 inches long. The problem is that almost everyone who sees him asks me why he is so "small."

Abby, I stand 5 feet tall and my husband is 5 foot 7, so I realize I can't expect our children to be any taller than either one of us. But the insensitive comments hurt just the same. Is there a polite response to all unwanted comments? — NOT TOO TALL IN TACOMA

DEAR NOT TOO TALL: The only response to rude comments is a long silence accompanied by the look on your face that says, "I can't believe you asked such a (a) rude, (b) personal, (c) presumptuous, (d) inappropriate, (e) embarrassing. (f) ignorant question."

DEAR ABBY: About eight years ago, "Ted" (my fiance at the time) was a career officer stationed in Germany with the U.S. Army. I went to Germany to be with him for a year.

Ted's mother and I had a good relationship; she treated me like one of the family — in fact, she even kept my 100-pound dog during the year I was overseas.

Things didn't work out as Ted and I had planned, and we didn't marry. It was awkward for me to see his mother when I returned to the states, so we fell out of touch.

For the last few years, I have been feeling very guilty. I never once offered to reimburse her for my dog's food and vet bills, even though I knew that she was in financial straits. Abby, she was so very kind and generous to me.

Can I make it up to her at this late date? Or would it be inappropriate to send her some money now? — BIRDBRAIN IN GEORGIA

DEAR BIRDBRAIN: Inappropriate? Certainly not! Reward her generously for the past favors immediately. It will ease your conscience and she will welcome the windfall. Trust me.

Milk is nutritious food for seniors too

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Since the dawn of Mammalian Era on Earth, there has existed a whitish liquid (blue with the Tibetan yak) produced by the mammary glands of all mature female mammals after they have given birth, and is used for feeding their young until weaned. It is the only substance on Earth brought into existence solely as food, a fact that suggests its usage as such might make good sense.

Page

Goats provide the greatest source of milk worldwide with cows coming in second — and difference in content is moot. Reindeer milk reigns high in protein and fat. Whale milk proves difficult to come by. Human milk is best for human babies. Speaking of babies, it is interesting to note that herenmilch (witch's milk) is secreted in the breasts of some newborn babies.

Cow's milk has undergone so much manipulation that at times it seems unrecognizable, beginning with buttermilk (residue of churning) and ending with cheese (limburger, etc.). Raw, pasteurized, powdered, skim, low-fat, whole, half and half, cream, homogenized, condensed, evaporated, sour, acidophilus, and Schloss (same property of salt and fat as human) constitute only some of the many altered variations. Not withstanding all the above manipulations, it remains almost the complete nutrient except for iron, its one major deficiency.

As Art Linkletter recently expressed, "Milk isn't just for kids!' The geriatric set desperately requires calcium in a form your body can absorb and utilize. Two glassfuls as such or incorporated in the cooking, provide an adequate amount. Milk also supplies protein (casein), essential amino acids, vitamins (principally A and D), sugars and liquid to help avoid dehydration. Nutritional buffs please take note that it contains L-tryptophane, an amino acid that theoretically helps both sleep and the restless leg syndrome.

Milk sugar exists in the form of lactose which requires a specific enzyme, lactase, for its digestion. A diminished quantity of this develops in approximately 17 percent of the senior population, resulting in bloating, flatulence, cramps and explosive diarrhea. This socially unacceptable behavior constitutes the principal objection to milk in the older age group. It can be partially alleviated by the ingestion of lactase, taken separately or added to the milk itself. The often-expressed fears of lipid complications such as coronary heart disease comprise only a small controllable threat and are far outweighed by the multi-beneficial effects of the worlds' greatest food.

Milk also enjoys several societal bonuses, such as (1) No teeth required; (2) No garbage; (3) No culinary skills necessary. The top authority on this subject, "Cold-Hand Luke," (the terror of the dairy farm) allows that milk derived directly from Heaven via Mother Nature and that all doubters exist in udder ignorance!

IT'S YOUR LIFE
Mental changes may signal brain syndromes

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: In the aging process, can you differentiate between acute brain syndrome and chronic brain syndrome?

Edwards

ANSWER: Acute brain syndrome is characterized by mental changes that are of recent (hours or days) onset. They are most often caused by physical disease (examples: heart attacks, infections, strokes, dehydration and malnutrition) or drug toxicity. The symptoms are similar to those of the chronic brain syndrome. They are often mistaken for chronic or written off as expectable in an elderly person. The important thing to remember is that even though this is a type of senile dementia, these acute brain syndromes are often treatable and reversible.

Chronic brain syndrome is characterized by a loss of intellectual functions and memory. The onset is slow and uncertain, but usually has been progressing six months or more. Families may first notice small changes in behavior and thinking, comprehending messages and decisions. Appropriate social behavior will at first cover intellectual decline, but later disturbances in mood, thought, content and behavior will be visible. Most elderly people are able to recognize some of these changes in themselves and they can become severely depressed over their mental decline. Later the anxiety and the awareness may lessen, depending on the severity of the illness.

Degenerative pathological processes are the causes of organic brain syndrome, rather than normal aging. Alzheimer's disease results in the organic brain syndrome. Although a large percentage of Alzheimer's dementias are untreatable, between 15 percent and 40 percent of the instances of this disease can be treated — either cured or halted.

The incident rate of chronic brain syndrome is 10 percent of those over 65; and 20 percent of those over 80. Five percent of these are severely affected. Symptoms of this type of senile dementia include forgetfulness of recent events; confusion; disorientation; loss of reasoning ability; loss of power of independent thought or action; difficulty with constructed tasks; inability to comprehend complex commands; failure to follow gist of conversations; overly suspicions; and depression.

In the late stages there may be loss of remote memory with failure to recognize close relatives, impaired care for self and surroundings and loss of appropriate social judgment.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and consultant for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Alzheimer's drug being tested

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers are testing the effectiveness of a new drug in the hope it can treat symptoms of Alzheimer's disease, an illness that kills about 100,000 Americans each year. Experts believe the drug — cognex — works by inhibiting an enzyme that breaks down acetylcholine, a chemical that helps communication between brain cells.

Since the amount of acetylcholine is decreased in the brains of Alzheimer's patients, researchers hope that preventing or reducing the loss of this neurotransmitter chemical may relieve some memory impairment.

The research has begun to make the drug available to desperately ill patients where no other treatment is available. The drug, tested on some 15,000 patients, is being evaluated by 1,500 physicians and Warner-Lambert Company under a program in which the Food and Drug Administration allows greater access to certain unapproved drugs.

80-year-old pianist can still make them dance

By Jeff Donn

BECKET, Mass. (AP) — Jess Meeker complains about his asthma, puts on reading glasses, and sits heavily at the piano. But when those fingers, knobby with arthritis, touch the keyboard, oh, how they dance!

Few other musicians have made so many dance for so long. The 80-year-old Meeker has played at the Jacob's Pillow dance festival for the better part of 60 years, since its founding.

A modest man with white hair and youthful humor, Meeker has laid to rest his envy of conductor Leonard Bernstein and his dreams of fame as a composer. He is satisfied with life in the background.

"If I were a player in a string trio, I think I'd have to have more finesse," he said. "I'd have to be more accurate."

It takes coaxing to bring Meeker even to acknowledge his considerable talent and reputation as a leading accompanist for dancers. "Not only is it a talent for movement, but being able to get along with people," he finally allows. "You've got to put yourself in their hands."

He spoke shortly after a rehearsal for Jacob's Pillow revival of the all-male troupe, known simply as the Men Dancers, that inaugurated the festival in 1932. The show on July 21-25 underscored the strides of male dancers, the festival's own growth into a prestigious showcase of dance ranging from ballet to experimental, and Meeker's personal journey.

Ted Shawn, the late dance pioneer who founded the summer festival in the Berkshire Mountain town of Becket, discovered Meeker at a concert in his hometown of Arkansas City, Kan.

Meeker, whose father worked in the milling business, had turned to music when his parents bought a piano. They were not musicians and may have considered it an attractive furnishing, but Meeker had other ideas.

"I can remember my mother saying, 'If you don't get away from that piano, I'll kill you!' "

With help from some teachers, Meeker eventually learned enough to play the organ for silent movies in a theater. "It must have been pretty bad," he said. "I sort of improvised."

He still recalls the surprise and thrill when Shawn asked him to come to Becket for the opening of the festival. He was pulling in up to $100 a week — big money in those days — and "didn't even know what dancing was."

But Meeker figured it out quickly. He was asked to return every summer and left only when the original Men Dancers disbanded in 1940. He came back in 1955 and has played piano for various groups at the festival ever since.

At the July revival, Meeker played the music he composed for "Kinetic Molpai," a dance choreographed by Shawn.

Meeker has also worked behind the scenes on several Broadway productions and as music director at a dance school — honing his sense of how to enhance human movement with sound. He even studied music for a year at the high-brow Juilliard School in New York but says he was "a miserable failure" there.

Most of his learning came instead from watching, listening and doing, and it has apparently worked.

"There's a certain kind of propulsion in his playing," said John Sauer, another pianist at the festival. "You can sort of see the note as a little spot on the floor."

"He doesn't put himself first," said Gary Lund, the rehearsal director of the revived Men Dancers. "He sees that the dancers are what he composed the music for."

Barton Mumaw, one of the original troupe, describes Meeker as the ultimate player piano for dancers.

"Shawn said it was like putting a nickel in a slot machine and out comes the music — after explaining what you want," recalled the 79-year-old Mumaw, who was at the festival coaching the new dancers of the revived company.

Man climbs mountain for 81st birthday

PARADISE, Wash. (AP) — A man scaled Mount Rainier one day after his 81st birthday, becoming the oldest person known to have climbed the peak. Jack Borgenicht of Long Valley, N.J., reached the 14,410-foot summit Aug. 30, on his third attempt to scale the peak, said Jennifer Herzig of Rainier Mountaineering Inc.

Borgenicht ran out of energy on his first attempt last summer, and was beaten back by bad weather earlier this summer, Herzig said.

Borgenicht made the climb with RMI guides Alex Van Steen and Ken Kambis. Dee Molenaar, a Mount Rainier historian, said the oldest person to climb the mountain had been Julius Boehm, an Issaquah chocolate maker, who was 80 when he reached the summit in 1978.

Jordan testifies at drug, money laundering trial

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — NBA star Michael Jordan testified in federal court Thursday a $57,000 cashier's check he gave to a suspected drug dealer covered gambling losses from a weekend of golf and poker at an exclusive South Carolina resort.

Jordan, an All Star guard for the Chicago Bulls and a former University of North Carolina player, testified briefly during the money laundering and drug trial of James "Slim" Bouler, 41.

The government claims Bouler used his role as a golfer as a front to his real job as a drug courier for cocaine kingpins Pee Wee Givens, who is dead, and Edward "Ned" Johnson, who is serving a 20-year drug sentence.

When the money was seized last October by the government, Bouler and Jordan claimed it was a loan from Jordan for a golf driving range. Last week, Jordan told a Chicago newspaper it was a gambling debt. Then he said he was misquoted.

On Thursday, when defense attorney James Wyatt asked Jordan what the $57,000 was for, he responded: "For what I lost on gambling and golf and later in poker when he loaned me some money. I didn't have any money."

Wyatt asked Jordan if he was obligated to pay Bouler any money at the end of the weekend at Hilton Head, S.C.

"I was obligated, but I did not," Jordan replied. "I paid him at a later date."

During cross-examination, Assistant U.S. Attorney Frank Whitney asked Jordan why he originally described the money as a loan.

"It was not represented as a loan at all," he said. "It was my immediate reaction to the media after a game to save embarrassment and pain ... and the connection to gambling."

Before the defense rested Thursday afternoon, Bouler also took the stand. He cried while testifying about his ordeal since the government seized the check he claims he won in a golf match with Jordan.

Several convicted drug dealers testified about Bouler's drug business during the three-day trial, but Bouler said Thursday he had never met most of the men who testified against him.

Prosecutors want the jury to force Bouler to forfeit the money if they convict him.

Attorneys will give closing arguments Friday morning before the case goes to the jury.

At the request of prosecutors, U.S. District Judge Robert Potter dismissed three money laundering charges against Bouler, who still faces seven other money laundering charges, one count of conspiracy to possess cocaine with intent to distribute and one firearms count.

Jordan, who was accompanied by his father, James, said he met Bouler through a "third party." The two have played golf together at least eight times, Jordan said.

Bouler said it was his idea to call the $57,000 check from Jordan a loan.

"I told him there probably would be a lot of nosy people asking about it," Bouler said. "I told him if they ask me, I'll tell them it was a loan."

He said he had not spoken with Jordan since the money was seized.

When Wyatt asked Bouler what has happened since the government seized the money, he covered his eyes with his hands and began to cry. After composing himself, he told the jury he won the money from Jordan in the golf match at Hilton Head Island.

"It was from the matches — a payoff for the matches," Bouler said.

He said he was a "scratch" golfer who made a good living from playing in high stakes games with celebrities.

New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor also was known to have played golf with Bouler and was included on the witness list. He was not called to testify.

The government has said Jordan isn't the subject of a criminal investigation.

Jordan, who slipped into the courthouse after reporters chased an empty limousine that drove around the building, was on the stand for nine minutes. He left the building immediately without comment.

Marinovich goes full speed, gets start vs. Dallas

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Todd Marinovich passed a key test for his injured left knee when he was able to practice at full speed Thursday and he'll be the quarterback for the Los Angeles Raiders when they face the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday.

Marinovich had been held out of practice on Wednesday, mostly because of a slick field following a surprise rainstorm. Had he experienced problems Thursday, coach Art Shell said Jay Schroeder would start at home against the Cowboys.

"Todd felt a twinge (Wednesday), so we held him out," said Shell, who added that Thursday's efforts convinced him Marinovich was all right.

Marinovich, who was making his fifth start this season at Seattle last weekend, sprained the knee in the first quarter and sat out the rest of the game.

An MRI test showed no ligament damage, and Marinovich was cleared to practice.

The Raiders added third-string quarterback Vince Evans to the roster this week, pending Marinovich's recovering and ability to move around on the sore knee.

In other injury news, Shell declared backup offensive tackle Steve Wright out of Sunday's game because of a torn calf muscle. Wright has not practiced this week.

Defensive backs Lionel Washington and Torin Dorn, both bothered by injuries the last week, were able to practice at full speed and are expected to play against the Cowboys.

Parents support split in 7th, 8th grade

■ Trustee Michael Dobey proposes plan that would create separate schools for seventh-graders, eighth-graders in each high school district.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Rather than divide up junior high school students in order to satisfy feeder system requirements and fill a new school, some parents would rather have students attend a different school in seventh and eighth grades.

More than 100 parents loudly cheered the plan of making one junior high school for seventh-graders only and one exclusively for eighth-graders in each high school district at Thursday night's community meeting.

Midland school board trustee Michael Dobey presented the plan, which could make Abell and Goddard seventh-grade schools and San Jacinto and Alamo eighth-grade schools.

Parents addressing the board at the evening meeting at Goddard Junior High largely favored the plan.

"When I first heard about the plan, I opposed it," said Lynn Lynch, who has a son attending San Jacinto. "But the (MISD) proposal would have my son change to Goddard. Dobey's plan would have the seventh and eighth grades balanced (according to district criteria), and Alamo would not begin the year overcrowded."

One of the few parents against the plan was Jeanette Dragisic. "I can't believe all you people like it," she said. "The numbers can be balanced other ways. Please do not separate our children any more than they already are."

Ms. Dragisic, a member of the MISD Cluster Advisory Committee, has worked with the committee on a plan to offer controlled choice and have children attend the same school in fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

The seventh- and eighth-grade concept would mean students would attend different schools in seventh, eighth and ninth grades.

One man said the district's proposed junior high boundaries would split neighborhoods and "pit one side of the street against another."

Many parents said sending Parker students to Alamo would lower their property values since some neighbors would be able to send their students to the new school, Abell.

A resident from the county laughed at the concern about property values. "I'm glad you can all worry about property values going down. I couldn't give my house away," he said. "I'm more concerned about my son living next door and traveling on a bus past Greathouse to go to Emerson."

David Sapp, who lives northwest of Midland, agreed. "Greathouse is five miles from my front door. ... My kids get on a bus at 6:30 a.m., get to school at 7:15 and don't start class until 8:15. I know I chose to live in the county ... but there's no reason for kids to be at school that early in the morning."

A Northgate parent said he lived within "rock-throwing distance" to Greathouse but proposed boundaries would have his children attending Scharbauer.

Claudine Traxel said she was concerned with MISD proposals that will begin the 1993-'94 school year with 1,041 students at Alamo and 808 at Abell. "I have several concerns. Property values will decrease ... and MISD tends to underestimate projections. You underestimated almost 300 students this year alone."

School administrators said they want to keep Abell below capacity because of projected population growth in Northwest

Leaders hope park will symbolize unity

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Eight-year-old Betty Baker envisioned a park at the union of three roads as a symbol of unity of American people, she told a crowd at the groundbreaking and naming ceremony for the park.

The one-and-a-half acre Unity Plaza, at Lamesa Road and South and Mineola streets, was officially named Thursday by Stella Guerra, assistant secretary of the U.S. Department of the Interior.

"We are here to honor contributions by the Hispanic community to America," she said.

The name submitted by Miss Baker, a second-grader at Emerson Elementary School, was chosen from about 200 entries in a "name-the-park" contest. She was presented with a $100 savings bond and will be named on a brick.

The park is a joint project between the First Association of Mexican Americans (FAMA), made up of nine Hispanic organizations, and the city's Eastside Economic Development Task Force.

Ms. Guerra also honored the concerted effort that will go into making the park a reality.

"The humble beginnings of this park ... will represent many things for many people," Ms. Guerra said.

Funding of the park will come completely from donations.

A dedication wall will list donors of $5,000 or more, as well as corporate sponsors that give at least $2,500 toward construction. The majority of financing, though, will come from individuals and families who pay for engraved concrete bricks at $25 each.

"You can all be involved in this special project," Elvia Hernandez, president of the Hispanic Chamber, encouraged the crowd.

Ms. Guerra also applauded the efforts of those who will make the park possible and promised to nominate volunteers for President Bush's Thousand Points of Light program.

On hand for the groundbreaking were members of FAMA, which includes the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Eastside Lions, Knights of Columbus, Permian Basin LULAC, Midland LULAC, MABE, Ballet Folklorico, M-Class and the Hispanic Honor Society.

Officials from the city and county of Midland and the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce were also on hand.

First-grade students from DeZavala entertained the crowd with songs from their recent Columbus Day program.

Restaurant owner defends operation

By Michael Kashgarian

The owner of an east-side restaurant — which faces closure because of drug activity — testified Thursday that he doesn't promote drug sales and use.

Solomon Bunton Jr., owner of Red's Drive-In at 1807 E. Front St., testified before Judge John Hyde in the 238th District Court that the restaurant, open between 7 p.m. and 4 a.m., is "not no dope joint."

Law enforcement officials think differently, and County Attorney Mark Dettman wants to close the business because it violates a state public nuisance law.

Testimony earlier this week indicated that two major crack rings previously operated heavily at that location and that about 4 percent of 300 drug cases since 1989 came from Red's.

But attorney Ed Shelby, who represents Bunton, argued that his client does not condone the activity that occurs at a lot next to the restaurant.

Law enforcement officers said drug sales and possession take place on Bunton's property.

Bunton testified that he has no knowledge of people carrying drugs at the business.

There is no argument that the business — without a name sign, called the Hickory Pit by Bunton and commonly referred to as Red's — is a popular place, usually packed between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m., testimony showed.

Law enforcement officers testified that drug dealing is blatant.

But the defense has painted a picture of youngsters taking over an adjacent lot — not owned by

Tucker faces two perjury counts in Midland County

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

MONAHANS — While former freelance investigator Ronald Ray Tucker escaped one perjury indictment in Ward County this week, he is awaiting trial in Midland on two counts of perjury linked to the January 1990 seizure of $449,950 in drug money.

The Midland case is set for trial in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd Texas District Court on Dec. 14.

The Monahans perjury case, which Tucker's lawyer Ted Painter of Monahans called a "Peggy Lee indictment" referring to the 1969 hit "Is That All There Is?," was dismissed on Tuesday by Judge Curt Steib of San Angelo in a pre-trial hearing.

"It's a clothespin indictment," Painter said. "When you come across something that smells bad, you put it (the clothespin) on your nose. This was a frivolous indictment. Judge Steib cut to the heart of the matter."

Tucker, a 45-year-old former narcotics investigator who had worked for Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter in the mid-1980s, had been indicted in Monahans in Ward County last January for lying on the witness stand in the 1990 drug trial of Dallas-Fort Worth-area drug broker Billy Mack "Bubba" Doyle.

Doyle subsequently was convicted of dealing in drugs in West Texas and was sentenced to 50 years in prison and fined $50,000.

The judge had ruled that Tucker's alleged perjury had no bearing on the outcome of the Doyle case and therefore dismissed the indictment. The perjured testimony revolved around whether or not Tucker was working without pay for then-Ward County District Attorney Hal Upchurch when

Texas banking commissioner deposits her philosophy during Midland meeting

■ Catherine Ghiglieri stresses demand for independent, home-owned banks.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

While banks and thrifts fail and larger banks absorb smaller banks, there is still a demand for independent, home-owned banks, Texas Banking Commissioner Catherine A. Ghiglieri said Thursday in Midland.

"I think there is always a place for independent, community-oriented banks because people do like to bank with their local bank," Ms. Ghiglieri said before meeting with Midland bankers to explain her philosophy on banking and to consider their concerns in the financial industry.

And while bankers are out to reap profits, there is the phenomenon of history repeating itself — for bankers to overextend loans, lose money and for banks to fail, she said.

"I think it's human nature," Ms. Ghiglieri said. "Generations forget previous problems. And history tends to repeat itself."

In the early 1980s, Midland-Odessa suffered a series of major bank failures, including the once-stalwart First National Bank of Midland, following a downturn in the petroleum-based economy.

In her visit with Midland bankers in Ranchland Hills Country Club, Ms. Ghiglieri said she would "like for them to understand my philosophy. I'm brand new in the state. I want to talk about communication and consistency of regulation around the state."

And, in her travels to visit bankers across Texas, she wants to hear and understand "what's on their minds."

A lot of bankers "probably had something that they have always wanted to tell the commissioner and never had an opportunity to," Ms. Ghiglieri said, or bankers sidestepped chances to talk with the commissioner during bank examinations because they were afraid to ask.

Since bank failures have become rather commonplace in the past 10 years, the public seems immune to them, Ms. Ghiglieri said.

People are "so used to banks failing, especially in this state, and savings and loans and banks changing their name. I just think that's not what they are interested in. They are more interested in good service. I think they need to be careful how much money they have in the bank. If they have under $100,000, it doesn't really matter where they bank," she said. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation insures a depositor's bank funds up to $100,000.

Ms. Ghiglieri, who spent 18 years with the federal Comptroller of the Currency before she was appointed commissioner of the Texas Department of Banking earlier this year, has observed megabanks buy out smaller banks. And rather than leaving or putting their money into the sprawling larger banks, depositors would established a hometown bank.

"Those people would take their money, turn around and charter another bank," Ms. Ghiglieri said. "They know that people like to bank with a local bank."

Ms. Ghiglieri, who worked in the Comptroller's Atlanta office before being selected by the nine-member Texas Finance Commission, witnessed major buyouts in the Southeast, especially in North Carolina.

While the Texas Department of Banking monitors banks statewide, "We do not have enough people to be in the banks everyday. We can't control what bank-

DEATHS

Perry B. Holley

Services for Perry B. Holley, 69, a prominent Midland wildlife woodcarver, are set for 10 a.m. Saturday at First Christian Church with Tommy Porter officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Holley

Holley died Wednesday at a Temple hospital.

He was born Sept. 10, 1923, in Erath County. He grew up in the state orphanage in Corsicana, where he graduated from school in 1941.

He served in the U.S. Navy as chief commissary steward aboard the USS Mount McKinley during World War II. He settled in Sunnyvale, Calif., where he worked in the construction business following the war.

He married Elizabeth Thornton in Galveston in 1942.

The couple moved to Midland in 1950, and Holley continued to work in construction as a cabinetmaker with Harold B. Shull Construction Co. and others.

Since 1967 he had pursued a successful career as a wildlife woodcarver. His carved birds have been widely acclaimed and collected by prominent Texans, including Ross Perot.

Survivors include his wife, Elizabeth Holley of Midland; one son, Bruce Holley of Dallas; one daughter, Darrell Susan Rock of Midland; two brothers, J.M. Holley of Eldorado and R.B. Holley of Fort Worth; one sister, Zelma Hickman of El Campo; three grandchildren, one great-grandchild and numerous nieces and nephews.

Memorials should be directed to a charity of choice.

Betty Liedtke

HOUSTON — Memorial services for Betty Lyn Dirickson Liedtke of Houston and formerly of Midland will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at the First Presbyterian Church in Houston with the Rev. Victor Pentz officiating. A private burial at Glenwood Cemetery will precede the services. Services are under the direction of Geo. H. Lewis & Sons Funeral Directors in Houston.

Mrs. Liedtke died Wednesday.

She had been a resident of Houston since 1964 and was active in the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, Texas Children's Hospital, the Salvation Army, the Junior League Memorial Fund and the Kinkaid School. She was a member of Pi Beta Phi, the Junior Leagues of Houston and Midland, the Board of Visitors of M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, the Garden Club of Houston and the First Presbyterian Church.

A native of Tulsa, she attended Conneticut College, the University of Arizona and the University of North Carolina. She received her bachelor's degree from Barnard College and pursued graduate studies at Columbia University.

Before moving to Houston, she lived in Midland for 14 years, as well as Calgary, Canada, and Pittsburgh, Pa.

She was preceded in death by three brothers, Richard E. Dirickson, Robert B. Dirickson and J.J. Dirickson.

Survivors include her husband, J. Hugh Liedtke; three daughters, Karen (Mrs. Peter) Mark and Kristy (Mrs. Larry) Strickland, both of Houston, and Katy (Mrs. Craig) Bade of Louisville, Ky.; two sons, Blake Liedtke of Houston and Hugh Liedtke Jr. of Denver; and 14 grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, Development Office, 1515 Holcombe Blvd., Houston, 77030, or to the charity of one's choice.

Geraldine Eckols

ODESSA — Graveside services for Geraldine Alice "Gerry" Eckols of Odessa and mother of a Midland woman will be at 2 p.m. today at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. David Galletly, of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Eckols died Thursday at an Odessa hospital.

She was born on Oct. 8, 1918, in Hornell, N.Y. She was reared and educated in Canisteo, N.Y. In 1939, she received a nursing degree from Rochester General Hospital School of Nursing and continued to work as a registered nurse in New York state.

In 1941, she moved to McCamey to work at the Cooper Hospital. She married H.E. "Gene" Eckols on July 21, 1942, in McCamey.

She moved to Rankin in 1947, where she continued to practice nursing on a part-time basis. In 1973, she moved to Midland, then to San Angelo and then to Odessa in 1990. She was a former member of the Eastern Star of the Rankin Chapter.

Survivors include her husband, H.E. "Gene" Eckols of Odessa; a son, Mike Eckols of Odessa; a daughter, Elaine Dunlap of Midland; two grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Memorials may be made to the American Cancer Society in Midland.

Mary Stringer

Graveside services for Mary Stringer of Midland will be at 3 p.m. today at Fairmont Cemetery in San Angelo. Memorial services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at First United Methodist Church of Midland. Dr. Russell Parchman, pastor of First United Methodist Church, will officiate at both services. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Stringer died Tuesday at her residence.

Honorary pallbearers are the Fellowship Sunday school class at the First United Methodist Church.

Services for Joe Cutshall are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Cutshall died Thursday at a local hospital.

Rains force police to postpone search for bodies at ranch

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — State judicial police on Thursday temporarily suspended their search for as many as four bodies they believe are buried on an isolated ranch east of this border city.

Heavy rains in the area made it too difficult to dig at the site near the Rio Grande, where police unearthed three victims of drug-related slayings earlier this week, said police Commander Sergio Gonzalez.

The search for other victims that may be buried at the ranch will resume as soon as the weather clears, police said. Authorities also will use a scuba diver to search some cars found in the river.

"We have to conduct a good search until we exhaust all our options," said Gonzalez.

Police began digging Sunday after two suspected drug traffickers who were arrested during the weekend admitted to killing several people and disposing of their bodies at the ranch.

The two, identified as Jesus Guajardo Lopez of Matamoros and Victor Gilberto Rivera of Brownsville, were being held on murder charges Thursday in the Matamoros prison, said Gonzalez.

Rivera also is wanted by the Brownsville Police Department in the Aug. 12 slaying of a Brownsville man.

Guajardo and Rivera are believed to be part of a drug-trafficking organization based in Matamoros. Authorities are searching for other men who may have been involved in the slayings.

The first two victims, who were found Monday, have been identified as Neftali Juarez Salinas and Heriberto Ruiz, Matamoros residents who had been missing several months.

Students protest banned float

WEATHERFORD (AP) — Students protesting a school's rejection of their homecoming parade float with a religious theme have taken another route to vent their frustration.

About 50 seniors at Weatherford High School rode another float in Thursday's parade with their mouths taped shut and the word "censored" written on the tape.

Principal Michael O'Shea had forbidden the senior class from sponsoring a float with a theme of "Go Beyond Cool — Obey the Golden Rule" because it would have promoted religion in the school.

But Danielle Swearingin, a senior class member, said the school has been inconsistent on the issue. Students have been allowed to gather at the school flagpole to pray, she said, and prayers are also permitted before football games.

A Bible study group is also permitted to meet at the school, said Ms. Swearingin.

Plans for the banned float had included students wearing white, like angels, and standing near a representation of the Bible. Other students had planned to wear black and stand near a drug syringe and other symbols, said O'Shea.

A version of that float was later approved for the parade after O'Shea said a group other than the student class must sponsor it. A local travel agency agreed to sponsor the religous-theme float.

The protesting seniors followed that float in the parade. They carried signs reading "Freedom of Expression" and "SR 1993 Denied".

PERJURY: Tucker's Midland trial to start Dec. 14

(From 1C)

Doyle was arrested on Nov. 1, 1989.

Assistant Texas Attorney General Shane Phelps had sought the indictment and two others on theft and misapplication of fiduciary funds in a 1989 Sherman reverse-sting operation. The latter indictments against Tucker were dismissed, and Tucker was re-indicted in Dallas for theft by a public servant. That case is pending.

In June 1992, Tucker filed a $6-million federal lawsuit claiming that six federal and state agencies had violated his civil rights. Defendants are the Texas Attorney General, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U.S. Attorney for the Western District of Texas, the Texas Rangers and the 143rd Judicial District Attorney for Ward County. That case is pending in Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court.

Dismissed by Bunton this week was Doyle's $60 million lawsuit against Ward County, Tucker, Clay McKinney, and Ted Painter. Doyle claimed that he had been induced to travel the 300-plus miles from Duncanville to Monahans to participate in a drug deal after undercover agent Clay McKinney of Monahans threatened to "blow his legs off if he did not participate in a marijuana purchase."

Clay McKinney is an investigator in the Ward County District Attorney's Office.

Doyle claimed that he was under duress and was forced out of the threat of bodily injury to buy the marijuana.

In the Midland perjury cases, Tucker is charged with swearing on Feb. 8, 1990, that he, when on an investigation for Upchurch, on Jan. 9, 1990, had "seized" $449,950 in Midland County during a reverse-sting operation.

Court records indicate that the money was seized by Midland County Deputy Sheriff Jose Primera and was carried to Monahans by Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. The sheriff is no relation to Ted Painter, who is the Ward County attorney-elect.

Recently, the Midland County Commissioners' Court filed a counter suit against Gary Painter, his Operations Division Captain Clayton McKinney, Upchurch, Tucker and deputies Ed Krevit and Primera in claiming that the $449,950 in drug money should have been forfeited in Midland County where the money was seized and not in Monahans.

Clayton McKinney, who had engineered the sheriff's reverse-sting operations, is the father of Clay McKinney.

Representing Tucker in the Midland case are defense attorneys Ted Painter of Monahans and Troy Hurley and Bob Odom, both of Belton.

Prosecuting the case is James McEntire, a special prosecutor from Fort Worth. McEntire was assigned to the case since Midland County District Al Schorre is to be among witnesses in the case.

BANK: Commissioner seeks bankers' input

(From 1C)

ers do," Ms. Ghiglieri said.

"People are motivated by profits. A lot of time bankers do get out of hand because they see an opportunity for making large sums of profits."

And what the Department of Banking tries to do is "maintain some sort of balance. We don't want to prevent them (bankers) from making money. But we want them to do it in a safe-and-sound manner," Ms. Ghiglieri said.

"And that's the challenge for us. And that's very difficult."

When times are good and bankers' underwriting standards come under scrutiny, the bankers are prone to say, " 'Hey, I'm making money. What difference does it make?' " she said.

It may be "hard for us to be persuasive and say, 'You need to keep this discipline in your system. You might forgo some profits,' " Ms. Ghiglieri said. "And bankers get into trouble, and I think they will again."

SPLIT: Plan creates schools for each grade

(From 1C)

Midland.

Ms. Traxel said "overcrowding is a serious — if not downright dangerous problem."

Her husband, Dr. Roger Traxel, asked, "Does the board have any objections to Dobey's plan?"

"The staff has no problems with it," said MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "It has a lot of positives and would relieve a lot of these stresses."

Baressi noted that the plan would benefit girls' athletics and boost seventh-grade teams.

"We still have one more community meeting the 29th. I'd like to keep an open mind right now," trustee Jackie Hamilton said.

"I have no problem with the plan," trustee James Fuller said. "But I hope a key priority would be academic equity." His remark was roundly applauded.

"I would like to hear more from the balance of my area in the Midland High School district," trustee George Staley said.

Baressi said the district is "challenged with incorporating new schools into a system so that all schools are equal" in a community that continues to grow in student population.

"The board also voted last spring to have a pure feeder system where a particular junior high school will attend a certain senior high," he said.

He noted that the board voted to eliminate grandfather clauses — which would allow students to continue attending a school after a boundary change.

"As it stands right now, we have no grandfather clauses," he said.

Because the feeder system is scheduled to come on line with Abell's opening in September 1993, Lee High students attending Goddard or San Jacinto will have to switch to Abell or Alamo.

Midland High students attending Alamo will have to attend San Jacinto or Goddard.

Parents at Thursday's meeting said they would rather see students stay together with friends and attend seventh grade at one school and eighth grade at another.

"Whatever you decide," Mrs. Traxel said, addressing the board, "not all will be happy. I suggest you look at everything, including Dobey's plan."

The next MISD community meeting is slated for 7:30 p.m. Oct. 29 at Alamo Junior High. Before the meeting, the school will host an open house for citizens to tour the facility.

Midland mall to host haunted house

Midland Park Mall is hosting a haunted house put on by the Pickwick Players of Midland Community Theater beginning at 5 p.m. this evening. Saturday and Sunday, the haunted house will be open during mall hours.

The haunted house will be open Oct. 30 from 5 to 9 p.m. and Oct. 31 during mall hours.

Proceeds will go to benefit the Pickwicks.

Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — The city of Odessa will get a $37.4 million loan from the state for wastewater treatment system improvements after the Texas Water Development Board approved the action Thursday.

The loan, from the State Water Pollution Control Revolving Fund, will be used to expand and improve the city's East Water Reclamation Plant, abandon the South Dixie WRP and construct an interceptor sewer to transfer wastewater from the South Dixie WRP service area to the East WRP.

The project also includes construction of industrial reuse and irrigation effluent pipeline systems. The reuse of effluent is regarded as good water conservation practice, the water board said.

In January of this year, the board approved $5.4 million for the city to upgrade its East WRP to meet a Texas Water Commission permit requirement.

Feds look into woman's spraying of agent with Mace

EL PASO (AP) — The Justice Department is reviewing a civil rights investigation of a woman's claim that a Border Patrol agent hit her before she sprayed him with Mace.

The woman pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court last week to charges of assaulting a federal officer.

Evangelina Alcocer Rodriguez, 28, was fined $100 and ordered to do community service for the June 30 incident.

FBI spokesman Al Cruz said the agency two weeks ago sent a report on its civil rights investigation to the Justice Department for review.

"They will decide if there is enough evidence in our investigation to pursue the matter further," Cruz said.

He said such reviews usually take six to eight weeks.

Ms. Alcocer Rodriguez has accused Border Patrol Agent Mario Bellamy of striking her several times as she held her 18-month-old son.

Witnesses told investigators at the time that Bellamy struck the woman. They accused Bellamy of striking Ms. Alcocer Rodriguez in the neck as she bent over to pick up a set of keys. At that point, Ms. Alcocer Rodriguez sprayed the Mace, a chemical irritant, in the agent's face, the witnesses said.

Bellamy was treated for irritation to his eyes.

RED'S: Owner defends his business

(From 1C)

Bunton — and hanging out during the early morning hours.

When asked where the suspected drug activity takes place, Bunton replied: "Out there in that lot. They better not be at my door."

Bunton has taken precautions to deter drug use including erecting no loitering/no drugs signs, calling police, and putting up lighting and fencing, defense testimony indicated.

One officer testified that Bunton has been seen signaling people outside Red's when police were coming. Bunton denied that.

In addition to allegedly allowing drug activity, a history of illegal alcohol sales have taken place at Red's, the plaintiff maintained.

Dettman produced several court documents that indicated several violations for illegally selling beer and liquor at the premises.

Testimony is tentatively scheduled to continue today.

If Dettman proves his case, the judge can order Red's shut down for up to one year, although a $10,000 bond can be posted to keep the business open.

If subsequent illegal activity takes place, the bond could be forfeited and the establishment closed up to a year by court order.

UTPB enrollment climbs 8.5 percent

Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Enrollment at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin increased a healthy 8.54 percent for the fall of 1992 compared with the fall of 1991, while enrollment declined slightly at Midland College and was flat at Odessa College and Howard County Junior College.

The Higher Education Coordinating Board reported UTPB gained 180 students, from 2,107 last year to 2,287 this fall.

Midland College enrollment dropped 44 students, from 4,151 to 4,107.

Odessa College showed an increase of 38 students, from 4,847 to 4,885, or 0.78 percent, while Howard County added 19 students, from 2,384 to 2,403, for a 0.80 percent gain.

Enrollment is important to state-supported schools because the state funding formula is based in part on the number of semester hours of instruction being taken by students.

Statewide, enrollment at all state and private universities, community colleges and medical schools was up 2.89 percent, or by 25,999 students, to a total of 409,899.

Richards touts prison drug treatment plan, asks for federal funds

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards in a speech to federal, state and local drug treatment workers Thursday promoted Texas' prison-based treatment program and asked for federal money to help run it.

"We want every single federal cent that we can get for these very successful programs," Richards said. "We're asking politely, and as the old song says, we ain't too proud to beg."

Richards spoke to a meeting hosted by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services aimed at forming partnerships among treatment and education programs.

"Substance abuse is a personal and profoundly important concern to me. I am an alcoholic," Richards said. "I celebrated my 12th birthday (of sobriety) this year."

People addicted to drugs and alcohol must be reached before they become emergency room or prison statistics, she said.

"It's clear that unless we break this horrific cycle of drugs and crime and misery, we're going to be hard pressed to regain control of our streets," she said.

The governor said the state's new prison-based drug and alcohol treatment program is working and could become a model for the nation.

In 1991, as part of a prison construction measure, the Texas Legislature included several thousand prison beds for drug and alcohol treatment. Richards said ultimately 14,000 prison beds will be designated for the program.

Richards said the main challenge is to maintain the quality of the program. That, she said, could be helped with federal dollars, although she did not specify an amount.

She said the program already is showing results. For example, three women in a prison treatment plan who were granted parole last month turned it down so they could finish the program.

And male inmates at another prison unit turned in a guard who was bringing drugs into the facility, Richards said.

"These people are saying to us, 'We want a change, and we are willing to act to make it happen'," she said.

In a question-and-answer session, Richards was asked whether the emphasis on prison rehabilitation might take assistance away from people seeking help outside of prison.

Richards said she used her speech to promote the prison treatment program because of the federal officials who were present.

"It was an audience that was too great to miss," she said, adding that if more federal money is available for drug treatment it could help free up state money for the field.

Rice University president announces resignation

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice University president George Rupp said Thursday he was quitting next year after eight years as head of the Houston school.

"It is not an abrupt decision," Rupp, 50, said. "It has been one I have thought of for a while. I think institutions have rhythm and benefit from infusion of new leadership."

Rupp said he would leave effective June 30, 1993. He became the school's fifth president July 1, 1985, when he arrived from Harvard — where he was dean of the divinity school.

He has a doctorate in religion from Harvard and also studied Buddhist thought and practice at the University of Sri Lanka.

Rupp pointed to tripling of applications, doubling of research support and Rice's higher national visibility as highlights of his tenure.

"Rice has a sense of forward momentum and energy that I'm very proud of and I think distinguishes it from a great many other universities in this country at this time where there are major traumas of various sorts which are not affecting this institution."

Rice is a private school with about 4,200 students, including 2,700 undergraduates. Its endowment of more than $1 billion, however, ranks it the 10th largest university endowment in the nation. The school was the site in 1990 for the annual Economic Summit of Industrialized Nations, hosted by President Bush.

Rupp and Charles Duncan, chairman of the school's Board of Regents, denied suggestions that Rupp's departure was the result of friction between the president and the board.

"There's never a meeting of the board where we don't talk about some aspect of resource needs," Duncan said. "There are differences of opinion, of course."

He insisted, however, that Rupp's resignation was under amicable terms. Duncan said he was surprised a few days ago when he learned of the president's plan to quit, although he noted that when Rupp was hired, Rupp had warned the board he felt a tenure of about 10 years was what they could expect from him.

"I think the time frame for that periodic rejuvenation is about 10 years, give or take two," Rupp said Thursday. "Because I am now in my eighth year here at Rice, I have on the basis of my long-held views felt obliged to consider both my own future and the interests of this university."

Rupp said he was uncertain what he would do, although he said it was possible he would remain at the school and teach.

Duncan said a search committee headed by board member Kent Anderson would begin a hunt for Rupp's successor.

"We think Rice will attract a considerable number of outstanding candidates," Anderson said.

Rice University has its 300-acre campus near the Texas Medical Center south of downtown Houston. Its founder, and namesake, William Marsh Rice, was murdered in his sleep in 1900 by his valet, who was part of a conspiracy to steal the Houston businessman's millions. Rice's attorney, James A. Baker, grandfather of former Secretary of State and White House chief of staff James A. Baker III, helped uncover the plot and save the endowment for the then-new university.

Rape case goes to grand jury again

AUSTIN (AP) — A prosecutor said Thursday that a new grand jury soon would be given the rape complaint of a woman who says her assailant agreed to her request to wear a condom.

"There's no definite schedule. We have to re-present it soon," said Steve McCleery, first assistant Travis County district attorney.

The first grand jury to hear the case last month declined to indict the man.

Joel Rene Valdez told police he had sex with the 25-year-old woman on Sept. 16, but argued that she consented because she asked him to wear a condom.

The woman said she offered the condom because she was worried about contracting sexually transmitted diseases.

McCleery told the Austin American-Statesman this week that officials believe the first grand jury made a mistake earlier this month when it decided not to charge Valdez with rape.

McCleery said prosecutors decided to re-submit the rape charge to a new panel because they believe the evidence is overwhelming.

He said earlier reports that grand jurors would get the case on Thursday were erroneous.

Police have filed a burglary charge against Valdez stemming from his entry into the woman's apartment.

Guerrero airs new ad; Williamson calls it 'trashy'

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Railroad Commission candidates were feuding Thursday over a new television commercial in which Lena Guerrero criticizes Barry Williamson for saying he played an aggressive role in investigating misconduct at a federal agency.

Ms. Guerrero's new commercial, which features film of a scantily-clad dancer, charges that: "For five years employees of the Federal Minerals Management Service hired prostitutes and topless dancers while on trips paid for by taxpayers.

"Barry Williamson, former director of that agency, claimed he initiated an investigation into the scandal. But press reports reveal Williamson lied," the ad charges.

Williamson's campaign called the advertisement "trashy" and said the Democratic candidate had hit "a new low."

"Guerrero's ad is sleazy and offensive. This is tabloid TV, not a political ad, and I can't believe she is running that trash during children's viewing hours," said Jill McCartney, spokeswoman for the Republican candidate.

"Besides being disgusting, it is misleading and factually wrong," Ms. McCartney said. "He made sure it stopped, that it was thoroughly investigated, and that appropriate action was taken to punish those involved."

The commercial refers to news reports that Williamson initially claimed to have instigated an investigation of the misconduct, then later said he "misspoke."

The Dallas Morning News has reported that the investigation began after a whistleblower told the FBI about the parties in March 1989. Williamson said during a debate that "I called — we called — in the FBI and the inspector general and we said we want it stopped, and it stopped."

However, he later said he misspoke. "I never intended to say I was the person who found out about it," Williamson said.

The parties occurred from 1984 to 1989. Williamson ran the agency from April 1989 to June 1991.

Ms. McCartney said the parties occurred before Williamson took over. She said he did work "to see that they stopped, that it was thoroughly investigated, and that the appropriate legal actions were taken about the participants."

The commercial also says that "not only did Williamson lie about his role in the scandal, he actually retaliated against the employee who informed the FBI about the sex parties."

Ms. McCartney said that while an administrative judge found that an agency employee likely threatened the whistleblower with involuntary reassignment, "Williamson was never accused of threatening any employee."

Federal plan would send scrapped nuclear warhead cores to Pantex

AMARILLO (AP) — A federal plan would send cores of scrapped nuclear warheads to the Pantex Plant for storage up to 20 years or until a permanent storage site is picked, Texas officials say.

Pantex, the nation's primary assembly and disassembly plant for nuclear armament, had been designated earlier by federal officials as the destination for plutonium from dismantled weapons.

The proposal, which surfaced during a meeting Tuesday with Pantex officials in Austin, is part of an environmental assessment of plutonium storage expected to be completed before year's end, said Roger Mulder, special projects director for the state's environmental policy division.

The U.S. Energy Department wants to store plutonium weapons cores from scrapped warheads at the Pantex Plant for the interim period.

Plant officials say the environmental assessment, if approved by the Energy Department, would permit the department to store plutonium on-site for up to 20 years, Mulder said Wednesday.

He said the assessment would include a finding that the storage will have no significant impact on the environment.

A toxic, manmade radioactive element, plutonium is used in metal spheres called pits to trigger thermonuclear explosions in nuclear weapons.

Storage of plutonium pits is safer than working on the actual weapons, which has been the plant's primary mission for years, Mulder said.

Students complain about KKK portrayal at party

LUBBOCK (AP) — Black students at Texas Tech University say an apology by a fraternity for a party that reportedly included members dressed in racially offensive costumes won't be enough.

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity party reportedly included two white members posing as blacks kneeling at the feet of another partygoer dressed as a Ku Klux Klan Grand Dragon.

"They (the fraternity) crossed the border and went totally haywire. An apology is not enough this time. We want more," said Sonya Myles, Texas Tech's 1992 homecoming queen and president of black sorority Alpha Kappa Alpha.

Ms. Myles said the fraternity and the Fashion Board, which includes some students studying fashion design, held a party Oct. 9.

Ms. Myles, who said she has seen photographs of the episode, said the group ridiculed blacks by pretending to have large lips, wearing Afro wigs and painting their faces black.

Ms. Myles said she filed a complaint with the Dean of Students office on Oct. 15, the day after she was told of the party.

'They (the fraternity) crossed the border and went totally haywire. An apology is not enough this time. We want more.'

— Sonya Myles

"I went to Party Time Photos and saw pictures of people running around with Afro wigs and having the physical appearance of blacks," she told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. "There also was a photograph that had a picture of a KKK member with two whites who were dressed as blacks at his feet.

"It was totally atrocious."

Ms. Myles said Hispanics portrayed as gang members were also among the photos.

Pi Kappa Alpha president Todd Ross refused comment on the alleged incident, the newspaper reported. No one answered phones at the Pi Kappa Alpha office Thursday.

In a prepared statement, Ross said that two members were thought to be dressed in a manner offensive to minorities and were asked to leave.

The fraternity, the statement said, "does not participate in, promote or condone behavior that discriminates against minorities."

"The Epsilon Gamma chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha has taken measures to ensure the same kind of behavior does not recur," the statement said. "The chapter and its members sincerely regret that the incident occurred and offer their apologies to the Texas Tech University community and the groups affected by the incident."

Community service has been suggested as discipline for the fraternity, but that punishment "is not going to suffice by any means," Ms. Myles said.

"We have a campus of over 24,000 people, and this is 1992," she said. "Anything like this that can go on is atrocious. Something more should be done than just a slap on the hand.

"In my opinion, with people praising the Grand Dragon — that is justification for them being thrown off the campus completely."

Judi Henry, assistant vice president for student affairs and dean of students, said according to the code of student conduct, sanctions could range from a reprimand to probation to suspension. Groups were holding an Open Forum Thursday night to discuss the incident, she said.

Chess catches on with Hays County Jail inmates

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Some of the people most closely following the Bobby Fischer-Boris Spassky chess rematch in Yugoslavia will be found in the Hays County Jail.

Chess-playing inmates have been taking the moves printed in newspapers and replaying the games.

"We like to use the games in the paper as a foundation for our games," said Charley Stewart, 42. "Most of the guys are doing it just to pass the time. Some of us are pretty diehard."

The jail administrator, Capt. Larry Haynes, said chess has caught on with about 10 percent of the inmates.

"There are those that like that kind of challenge. Anything like that can be therapeutic," Haynes said.

Stewart, who used to pass time between San Antonio College classes at the chessboard, said he and a group of about six in his unit spend as many as four to eight hours a day playing the game or studying chess strategy.

A mechanic sentenced for auto theft, Stewart said there is more to the game than just passing time in jail.

"It's taught me a lot of discipline," he said. "Crime on the side was just something that happened. Chess taught me to think before you do something."

Jason Montgomery, an inmate who learned to play the game in the Williamson County Jail, said chess also serves to ease stress and pressures in a tense prison atmosphere.

"Guys here have a lot on their minds. It's important to have something they can sit down and mentally exhaust those energies. Chess takes away a lot of stress," he said.

Because of that, the Hays County Jail makes boards and pieces available to inmates. In the Texas Department of Corrections, chess tournaments are staged periodically at different institutions, said Coleman Porter, the department's recreation supervisor.

"I think it helps inmates think ahead, get from point A to point B," Porter said.

Stewart, who will be spending three years in prison, said he hopes the next time he is free he can use some of the lessons he has learned from chess.

"It's just patience," he said. "I'm learning it now — patience, strategy, discipline, and I really think — I hope — it will help."

Jury: Adoption between jail official, inmate not illegal

AUSTIN (AP) — It's not illegal for a Burnet County Jail administrator to adopt an inmate's baby, says a grand jury that looked into the case.

Jail inmate Stephanie Templet, whose baby is due Nov. 23, says she offered her child to administrator Donna Wilson because she expects to spend 12 to 18 months in prison on a forgery conviction.

Ms. Templet says she wants her baby to have a good home, and Ms. Wilson says she still plans to adopt the child.

The investigation was launched after a grievance letter was sent to the Texas Commission on Jail Standards about the adoption plan and other alleged jail improprieties.

"It's very, very sad that people would use an unborn child as a political football," Ms. Wilson said.

The grand jury ruled Tuesday that acceptance of the baby would not violate a state law against giving an illegal gift to a public servant.

County Attorney Eddie Shell said Wednesday that he will inform county commissioners of his findings on other jail matters on Nov. 9.

He said an investigation into the jail, sought by county commissioners, showed that Ms. Templet's inmate husband has been allowed to leave the jail without supervision.

The husband, Joey Allen, was convicted of two armed robberies and is awaiting transfer to state prison to serve his 15-year sentence, Ms. Wilson said.

The county attorney also said male and female inmates at the jail have been allowed to spend time together without supervision, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

"We haven't violated the law, or jail commission rules so, as far as I know," Burnet County Sheriff Weldon Buck said. "We're not going to change any policies."

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE TAXPAYERS OF MIDLAND COUNTY

HEY, WHAT'S THE DEAL? OR BETTER YET, WHAT'S THE "PLAN"??

Carol Baker, the appointed incumbent candidate for County Treasurer, states she has been "active treasurer since May, 1989". Yet, the voters of Midland County re-elected Dee Thompson to that office in November, 1990. WHAT'S THE DEAL?

Why did taxpayers of Midland County have to pay an elected AND an "active" county treasurer for over three years? Where's the efficiency in that arrangement? If Mrs. Baker was the "active treasurer", shouldn't she be held accountable for the decision to have taxpayer's pay TWO county treasurers? Or was that just part of the "PLAN"?

Carol Baker was hand picked in January, 1989, as the "Chief Deputy Treasurer". Mrs. Baker was given that position over three existing employees in that office. That increased the number of employees in that office from four to five. Now Mrs. Baker claims she has "streamlined" her office expenses by 20%. Did she accomplish this "streamlining" by simply not replacing an employee that was never needed in the first place? Is that an honest, efficient way to run our county government. Or is it simply the result of a "PLAN" between Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Thompson and our County Commissioner's Court to "HAND SELECT" our County Treasurer, rather than let the voters of Midland County decide?

Mrs. Baker says we can't trust this job to "untried, untested, unproven hands." Boy, if that's not typical incumbent rhetoric. Mary Wilson is a professional. Mary has 20 years of solid accounting, bookkeeping and financial experience. Armed with your vote, Mary will be accountable only to the taxpayers of Midland County, not those who formulate the "PLANS".

LET'S STOP THIS NONSENSE. WE'VE HAD ENOUGH UNDER THE TABLE "PLANS".

VOTE FOR A HIGHLY TRAINED AND COMPETENT ALTERNATIVE TO THE "PLAN".

ELECT MARY WILSON -- MIDLAND COUNTY TREASURER

Area farmers experiment with sesame

COYANOSA (AP) — Farmers in this Pecos County community have planted 3,000 acres of sesame hoping its low production costs and seed price may be a new source of profits.

Sesame is a new crop to the Pecos Valley, one well suited for the desert environment and that improves soil conditions for cotton.

Alvin Braden said he planted 80 acres to sesame after being contacted by the Pecos County extension office in Fort Stockton, which is always on the lookout for new crops.

"They heard about it and got the representatives out here and planted some," Braden said. "It needed dry weather and didn't need much moisture, so it looked good for us."

One watering before planting and another later in the season is all most farmers have applied this year, said Elmer Braden, Alvin's brother. The sesame seed sells for 25 cents a pound and Elmer Braden expects about 500 pounds of seed per acre.

The tall, slim stalk is similar to sunflower, with blooms resembling a small orchid. Small, dark green pods closely hug the stalk from about a foot off the ground. The plant's roots penetrate deep in the soil, opening the way for cotton roots the following year.

"Other people say cotton does much better behind it. If it would work for a residue crop, I would see a great future for it," Elvin Braden said in a recent Pecos Enterprise article.

Zan Matthies, Pecos County Extension agent, said trials on eight sesame varieties are being made in Pecos County.

"It certainly looks very, very impressive," Matthies said. "The sesame people are much interested in contracting (with farmers). We are looking at crops yielding 700 to 1,500 pounds if it is real well managed. We will average 800 to 1,200 pounds per acre this year."

Matthies said the crop is one more alternate the extension service has given farmers trying to survive the low price for Upland cotton and high cost of production.

EARNEST KIKER

Goat, sheep raisers to vote on referendum

Absentee voting for the October 29 Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association's (TS&GRA) Sheep and Goat Referendum is under way. All sheep and goat producers who would be required to pay the assessment within the 111 West and Central Texas counties involved in the referendum are eligible to vote.

Kiker

Absentee voting will be done by mail. Ballots must be postmarked prior to midnight Monday. Absentee ballots may be obtained from the local County Extension office or from the TS&GRA office in San Angelo. Ballots are to be mailed in a pre-addressed envelope to TS&GRA, P.O. Box 2290, San Angelo, 76902.

If passed, the referendum would provide a source of funds to supplement ongoing predator control efforts. Providing the referendum passes, producers will also be selecting three directors for the three districts (111 counties) to represent them on a Commodity Producers Board. These nine elected directors will determine how the funds are to be spent.

The fund for the referendum will be obtained through a levy not to exceed $0.20 (20 cents) a head on sheep and goats at their first point of sale. This money, to be paid by the seller, would effect all sheep and goats sold within the referendum area. Though the money is to be collected automatically, producers not wishing to contribute funds to the referendum if it passes, could apply for a full refund.

Those not needing to vote absentee may stop by their County Extension office from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Thursday. Producers may vote in either the county of their residence if it is within the referendum area, or the county in which their ranching interests area headquartered.

For further information contact the TS&GRA office at (915) 655-7388.

Researchers develop vision tests for babies, toddlers

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Eye doctors know more about infant and toddler vision than ever and about the importance of good eyesight to normal development. But how do you get a gurgling baby or a squirming 3-year-old to read an eye chart?

Researchers at the University of Kansas at Parsons, supported by a federal grant, are training physicians, school nurses and teachers about vision screening for children from birth to age 3, particularly those with possible disabilities.

"The object of this is to train a lot of different people to administer the tests so all kids from a very early age have access to good screening," said spokesman Bob Hoyt of the Institute for Life Span Studies, which oversees the three-year project at the southeast Kansas campus.

The U.S. Department of Education is providing $112,000 for the first year of research.

Researchers have developed procedures to elicit conditioned responses from toddlers to determine if what they see is blurry. The methods also are used for people with learning disabilities.

For instance, a child will be asked to match the shape of one object to another. If two objects match, the child gives a signal to the tester, who uses positive, verbal reinforcement.

A newborn's vision should test at 20-400 to 20-1,200, meaning babies see at 20 feet what a person with normal vision can see at 400 feet to 1,200 feet. By age 3, children have reached adult-quality vision.

The project coordinator, Pamela Cress, said it is important to screen the vision of young children for nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism and eye muscle imbalances, such as the so-called wandering eye.

Screening infants and toddlers and identifying vision problems before they become learning barriers can reduce the amount of money schools pay for special education later on, said Mike Bodensteiner, project director for the Southeast Education Service Center in Girard.

"From our perspective, it's an extremely important project," he said.

The techniques developed by the researchers also will go a long way in helping children with learning disabilities, said Barbara Thompson, associate professor of special education at the university's Lawrence campus.

"These techniques are not widely disseminated," she said. "It's just absolutely critical that kids see as well as they can. With kids with disabilities in particular, it's very hard to know what they're seeing."

Recent federal regulations require that all children with developmental disabilities, or those at risk of having such disabilities, receive vision screening from birth on.

Federal regulations also require that children from low-income families receive vision screening.

YOUR FOOD PHARMACY

Live-culture yogurt could ward off colds

By Jean Carper

With cold season coming on, you might try eating more yogurt. So suggests a new study by Georges Halpern, M.D., University of California School of Medicine at Davis. He tested yogurt on about 120 adults, both young and elderly.

Carper

He found that those who ate 6 ounces of yogurt, containing live cultures, every day for a year had about 25 percent fewer colds than those who ate no yogurt or yogurt with dead cultures.

The probable reason: Active cultures, of the type found in ordinary yogurt, stimulate production of gamma interferon, an immune substance that fights off infections.

Moreover, the yogurt eaters tended to have less hay fever and diarrhea and slightly lower bad-type LDL blood cholesterol.

Although the low yogurt doses had an effect, Halpern says eating more yogurt would be better. He advises 12 to 16 ounces a day to ward off colds and hay fever.

And, he says, you should start eating the yogurt at least three months before the cold or hay fever seasons. That gives the gamma interferon time to build up in your system. A previous study by Halpern found that 2-cup-a-day yogurt eaters had five times more gamma interferon in their blood than non-yogurt eaters.

Purslane promise

Why not eat purslane salad as well as spinach salad? That's what Artemis Simopoulos, M.D., president of the Center for Genetics, Nutrition and Health, wants to know. Purslane is a "phenomenal food," she says, and should be grown and eaten in this country.

In case you have never heard of purslane, it's a green, leafy vegetable, commonly eaten in Europe and the Middle East. But, it's rarely sold in the U.S., although it grows wild in 50 states.

For disease-fighting antioxidant power, purslane outdoes even spinach, according to a new study by Simopolous and scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

They found that a cup of raw purslane leaves contains 100 percent of the recommended dietary allowance (RDA) for vitamin E and one-half the RDA for vitamin C. Purslane also contains extraordinarily high amounts of an important antioxidant, glutathione — twice as much as spinach. And purslane is the richest plant source of omega-3 fatty acids, a top health protector of the type found in fish.

Sour on milk

If you breast feed your baby after you have indulged in heavy exercise, the infant may spit it out. The milk tastes sour, according to Janet Wallace, Ph.D., Indiana University.

She and colleagues collected breast milk from mothers both before and after they had exercised strenuously on a treadmill. The babies happily drank the pre-exercise milk, but most of them turned up their noses at the post-exercise milk. They became fussy and made faces, and one baby spat the milk out, says Ms. Wallace.

The reason: The milk tastes sour. The post-exercise breast milk contained four times more lactic acid than the pre-exercise milk. And the infants decidedly had no trouble spotting the sour taste of the lactic acid which was present at high levels in the breast milk for at least an hour and a half after strenuous exercise.

Ms. Wallace said nursing mothers who engage in vigorous jogging, swimming or aerobics could turn off their infants' appetites. She suggests such mothers collect milk before exercising or exercise moderately while nursing.

Jean Carper's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Oil Show edition

This special edition of the Reporter-Telegram's Business & Oil section is an experiment in that it marks the first time a daily section has been published especially for the Oil Show.

Designed to be a daily newspaper for out-of-town exhibitors and visitors as well as Permian Basin participants, this daily publication supplements the comprehensive, 96-page Oil Show special edition which was published this past Sunday.

It contains oil industry news, general business news, and Oil Show news, and will be published all three days fo the show.

Not only will it serve as the daily newspaper for the Oil Show, but it will also serve as the daily business section of the Reporter-Telegram.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell for the fifth straight trading session Thursday amid a rumor that the United Nations might allow Iraq to resume selling crude.

Although U.N. officials later denied the rumor, crude prices were not able to recover. Many analysts have said recently that oil is overvalued.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $21.35 per barrel, down 26 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude has fallen every day since it settled last Thursday at $22.33 per barrel.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Marathon and Navajo Refining lowered their posted price 25 cents to $20.00.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $2.404 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 8.4 cents.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against most major currencies Thursday after receiving a short-lived boost on news of a drop in the number of new claims for jobless benefits.

In New York, the dollar settled at 120.725 Japanese yen, down from 122.60 late Wednesday.

At the close in New York, the pound fetched $1.6260, up from $1.6067 late Wednesday.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — The stock market struggled through a mixed session Thursday as traders studied a piece of unexpectedly strong employment news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 13.78 points to 3,200.88.

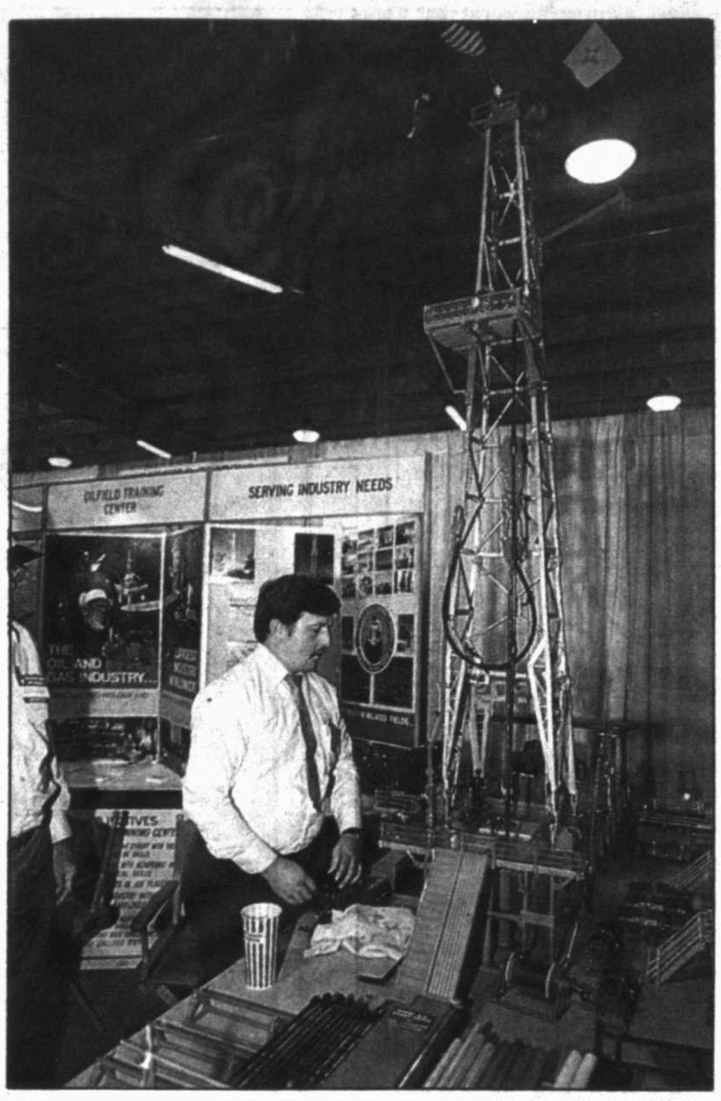
ENMU instructor builds models of equipment seen in oil patch



Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Les Langston, petroleum instructor, poses with the rotary rig model he has been working on for seven years. The rig contains a working drawworks and closed circuit mud system.

■ Les Langston brings two of his models to the Oil Show: a 1918 cable tool rig and a modern-day rotary rig, which are often used as teaching tools.

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff writer

Les Langston has been at his hobby for seven years.

The semi-retired instructor at the Oilfield Training Center at Eastern New Mexico University at Roswell spends about 20 hours a month building scale models of the enormous equipment seen everyday throughout the oil patch.

Langston brought two such models with him to the Permian Basin Oil Show for a crowd that can certainly appreciate his craft — a 1918 cable tool rig, which he's still working on and a modern day rotary rig, which he still tinkers with from time to time.

"I just started building them as something to do as a hobby," said Langston. "We use them in our (classroom) training."

Langston said the Oil Show seemed like an appropriate place to bring to display his models in conjunction with the training center's program — a program that continues to attract bright young students to an industry that's been relatively flat in recent years.

Passersby on Wednesday marveled at his scale model of American rotary rig technology and watching closely as actual working components moved up, down and around.

"When you come to an oil show, a drilling rig, to me, still seems to be what this industry is all about . . . not a production tank battery or a pumping unit, but a drilling rig. That's what people stop and talk about."

Langston said he's been working on his rotary rig for seven years and continues to fine-tune it, adding bits here and pieces there. And there are literally hundreds of pieces.

"I love to work with metal. For a number of years, I used to make ornamental iron and sold it, but I got tired of making things for other people," he said.

In addition to his rotary rig and cable tool model, Langston said he has two other on-going projects — a well servicing unit and a production pumping unit.

Cable tool rig makes hole at Boomtown

■ Working rig is among a collection of oil-field relics at the Oil Show.

By Johnnye Montgomery

Nothing's turning to the right, but they're making hole all the same on the E.E. "Pop" Harrison No. 1 well at the Boomtown exhibit.

The Permian Basin Oil Show's collection of oil-field relics, located at the north end of the showgrounds, includes a working cable tool rig in its original state.

The rig, built in 1926, drilled its first well north of Hobbs — a 3,600-foot hole which blew the tools out of the hole when it came in. The rig, still powered by its original Ajax steam engine, with the same boiler and many of the original tools, is capable of drilling to 12,000 feet. An assortment of bailers of different sizes, a sinker bar, sand line, several fishing tools, an old packer, and a fish-tail bait, all lie freshly painted and ready to use.

Visitors can listen to a tape explaining the mechanics of early-day cable tool drilling, or ask questions of the old-timers on the floor. Old timers are encouraged to reminisce and to help answer questions.

The rig is the center of a collection of antique oilfield equipment, including a Fort Worth spudder, widely used for shallow wells in the McCamey and Big Lake area, which caught the attention of speculators all over the country.

Other attractions include an Advance Rumley steam pulling unit, a Star Drilling Machine, a compressor unit used by El Paso Natural Gas in the early 1930s, a ditching machine, several early-day pumpjacks, and an old power transfer device used to enable one engine to pump several wells at one time.

There's a hand-hewn wooden bullwheel, a four-axle horse-drawn casing wagon, and massive tongs — hand-powered, of course. The time-worn phrase "wooden derricks and steel men" takes on fresh meaning.

The Boomtown exhibit first opened in 1954, with a rig from Big Lake — "Santa Rita Rig No. 1." In 1956, driller L.R. "Paw-pa" Gilbreath and his son Ralph spudded in the first well on the Oil Show grounds for the "Hardly Able Drilling Co."

According to Permian Basin historian Betty Orbeck, the crew of the Hardly Able were the hard-hitting, tobacco-chewing real men of the early oil patch, often hurling epithets at each other and at Oil Show guests.

Oil-service firms use products to prevent flat tires

■ A Tennessee company's TyrLyner and TyrFil may be solution to fleet vehicles' downtime.

By Ellen Hopkins

Oil-service companies, seismic companies and other industry-related companies all have one thing in common. Research shows that 80 percent of their fleet vehicles' downtime can be attributed to flat tires.

A Chattanooga, Tenn., corporation believes the answer lies in two of its products: TyrLyner and TyrFil.

Synair Corp. created a tire-lining product 12 years ago that makes ordinary tires self-healing. TyrLyner is a flexible, tacky rubber liner that seals the inside of a tire along the tread area and half way up the sidewall. Synair guarantees it 99 percent effective in sealing punctures up to ¼-inch indiameter.

Oil-service companies have put TyrLyner to the test, driving vehicles over mesquite-laden terrain and the results are in: TyrLyner withstands rugged abuse.

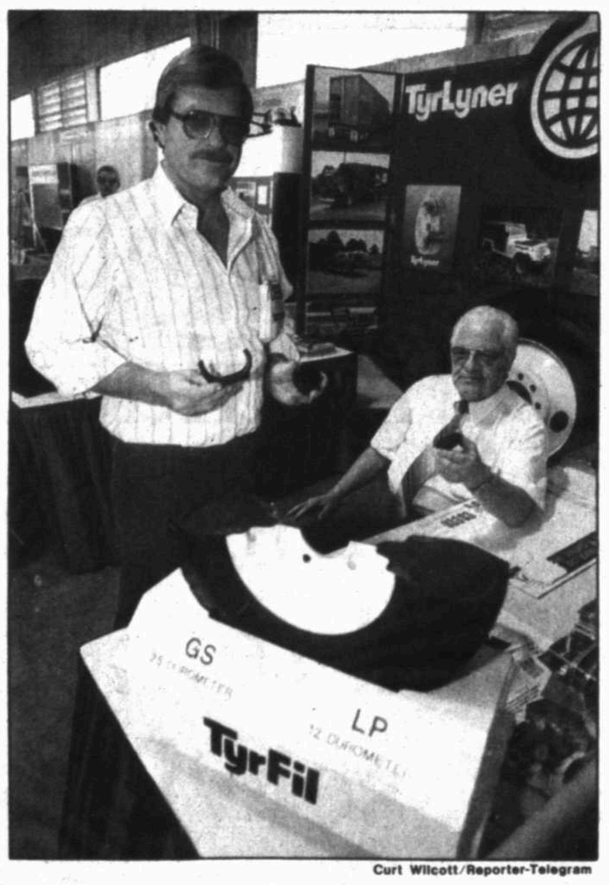
Dick Hicks, Synair's area sales manager for the southwest United States, said oil-field use of TyrLyner is catching on here and abroad.

"We produce several million pounds of TyrLyner each year for use in the U.S., and internationally about 40 million pounds are used each year," Hicks said. "TyrLyner is used in other industries as well, anywhere flat tires mean downtime and affect a company's bottom line."

4-Wheel and Off-Road magazine also tested TyrLyner and published the results in the June 1992 issue. After 4,000 "flat-free" miles with no pressure drop whatsoever, the magazine's research staff drove the tires over a sheet of plywood with six nails rising from it. No air leaked. They then shot the tire with a .22 caliber gun, followed by a .38-caliber and recorded that air loss as minimal.

TyrLyner was used by the U.S. Army in Operation Desert Storm because of its bullet-proof quality. "Even President Bush's tires contain TyrLyner," said Tom Porter of GRC Truck Tire Center, Odessa's distributor of Synair's products.

Porter said Flint Engineering uses the product in all its pipeline equipment vehicles and Geco-Prakla, the geoseismic division of Schlumberger, is looking for different places to use TyrLyner.



Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

"They're based out of Canada and have been here about a year now," Porter said. "Company personnel told me West Texas has the worst terrain they've seen, and the only thing that keeps their tires together is TyrLyner."

"Waco and Amarillo are two cities that use TyrLyner in all their garbage trucks," Hicks said. "Odessa and Midland city departments are using TyrFill, Synair's other product, in landfill loaders. Other local companies like Dixie Electric want these tires on their industrial forklifts."

Secretary insures smooth-running Oil Show

By Johnnye Montgomery

The Oil Show office doesn't attract much attention among the larger-than-life machinery and noise going on around it.

But let an exhibitor have a need or a problem, and that's the place to go. And Oil Show secretary Sandi Chesshir's the woman to see.

When Jay Alvey asked Ms. Chesshir to help out at the Permian Basin Oil Show in 1966, he said it was temporary — about a month or six weeks. She was a young mother working as a temporary with Alvey at the old First National Bank of Odessa.

When her job at the bank ended, Alvey, who had been loaned to the Oil Show by the bank, suggested she work for him there. She did, and they got along so well that he asked her to work for him full time at the bank. However, she continued her temporary job with the Oil Show.

"At that time, we wouldn't even start until the show year, and I would work about a month and a half going into the show."

The job is still temporary, although in the 26-year interim, she has acquired the title of Oil Show secretary, a computer, two or more paid assistants, and responsibilities that keep her busy 18 months out of every two years.

Ms. Chesshir talks about her involvement in the show while pandemonium bursts around her. People line up four deep at the counter, where a host of volunteers and paid assistants work on everything from paperwork to major diplomatic problems, while constantly ringing telephones, and the hum of voices provides a cacophanous background.

Ms. Chesshir's first year on the job, she typed every contract on a typewriter. This year she and her two assistants processed the more than 700 contracts on a computer, managing to control the avalanch of paper and still maintain a friendly presence for both exhibitors and visitors.

"The show has tripled since I started," she said. "It's mostly volunteer work that brings it together — many, many committees. The Desk and Derrick women do a tremendous amount of work.

"Mr. Alvey has been a delight — and so many people in the oil industry. We've always been able to laugh."

Ms. Chesshir attributes her longevity with the Oil Show in large part to that ability to laugh. Because of the stress of the job, her part-time assistants usually don't want to work on more than one Oil Show.

"Most of the time I'm training. We've

Midland firm sells pumps to Russia

By Johnnye Montgomery

While U.S. car manufacturing heads were wringing their hands over Japanese encroachment into U.S. markets and U.S, garment workers' unions were buying TV time to send guilt-laden messages to the American consumer who dared to buy a foreign-made shirt or pair of shoes, oil-industry equipment manufacturers were busy reading the handwriting on the wall. They had seen the problem: activity in the United States had declined and they had gone to Russia, where the action was.

Last summer, Highland Pump Co., a Midland-based manufacturer of oilfield equipment, shipped an order of 1,000 pumps to a Russian Neftegaz ("oil and gas company"), in western Siberia. The pumps, which the company declines to describe for busines reasons, took up to 3,000 cubic feet of cargo space and weighed more than 30 tons.

Warren Bradshaw, Highland vice president and sales manager in the Permian Basin, said the transaction took planning, hard work and a commitment to service once the deal was struck.

"The processes you go through to sell to the Russians are basic — but the operation is complicated. You recognize the potential and the demand for good technology. Then you have to go over there. We've spent a great deal of money, and a great deal of time, getting to know the Russians and their customs, and how they want to do business."

Bradshaw pointed out that the sale could never have taken place without Highland's already-established presence in the region. They have for many years maintained international offices for purposes of handling their ongoing business in 17 different countries.

Highland's Russian ex-patriot employees were able to navigate what could have been very murky seas for someone unfamiliar with oil-field and artificial lift terminology.

Bradshaw said having an interpreter with technical qualifications is a must.

"You really need something more than a tour guide if you're going to try to do business over there. We had to go to the people involved in the oil fields, the different Neftegazs — a term meaning 'oil and gas company' — and we sat down with their engineers, and showed them how our producers might help them.

"Russian people are very hungry to be treated like customers. They are used to dealing with a bureaucracy, where somebody in a central planning committee sits down and decides what you need and how many, and you're lucky if you get what you really need. They were very happy to be doing business on their own."

Bradshaw said that as complex as it is to get together with engineers and to maneuver through the language differences, there were many other difficulties on the way to the conference table. Even getting to the oil fields where they could meet with the engineers was a major undertaking.

"You can't believe how hard it is to get from one place to the next. They don't know how to accommodate the traveling public. I don't recommend western Siberia for tourists."

Once they had met the Neftegaz engineers, however, the language may have been different, but the reason for the meeting was the same.

"We were just doing business," Bradshaw said. "They needed oilfield equipment, and we had equipment to sell. We negotiated the sale just like we would right here at home."

Besides the obvious differences of idiom and geography, oil and gas operators in Russia deal with a whole other set of problems — including a lack of expertise for handling equipment failures.

"One reason we sold them 1,000 pumps is ... when their equipment fails, they replace it. Over there, there is no infrastructure to repair pumps. Over here, we hardly ever junk anything out, but over there, they don't repair anything."

Bradshaw said one of the biggest problems Highland is having with additional Russian business is the customers' lack of hard currency.

"They don't have any money to pay us. But they are correcting that problem as time goes along."

Simple though it may sound, Bradshaw said there are a lot of factors that determine the success of doing business with Russia. Highland service personnel will be in western Siberia for some time to come.

"If you sell them equipment, and get it over there and it doesn't work for them, they won't buy anything else. There are warehouses full of American products all over the world that weren't designed to fit the needs of the people who bought them."

TIRES: Products may be solution to prevent flats

(From 1E)

Synair's TyrFil product is a soft, resilient rubber core that is installed in pneumatic tires instead of air. The result is flat-proofed tires that can operate over broken glass, nails, sharp metal and rock — or in the case of some West Texas oil-service companies — entire mesquite trees.

Tires lined with TyrFil can withstand up to four inch cuts and keep on moving. This product has been extensively used on heavy industrial equipment. In West Texas the product is used by construction, wrecking, lumber, utility and armored car companies.

Although TyrFil is more durable than TyrLyner, and has a proven track record 20 years old, it has a speed limitation. Flat-proofed TyrFil tires can consistently run up to 35 mph, but can only maintain speeds up to 60 mph for four to eight hours. However, the added weight of the product, about the same as filling a tire with water, is useful in increasing stability. These tires are resistant to extreme climatic changes and never blow out.

"A lot of homeowners would like to have a TyrFyl tire on their wheelbarrows," said Hicks. "It seems like people are always complaining about wheelbarrow tires being flat when they want to use them."

Drivers in some cities use blended fuel during winter

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — For the first time, motorists in many parts of the country soon will be filling their gas tanks with fuels de signed to reduce carbon monoxide emissions, a principal source of wintertime air pollution.

The gasoline, which is blended with either methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE) or ethanol, is being delivered in the fall and winter to filling stations in 38 metropolitan areas representing about a third of the nation's gasoline market.

The blended gasoline smells bad and costs a little bit more, but it won't significantly reduce fuel economy, hurt a car's performance or damage its fuel system, said Environmental Protection Agency spokeswoman Martha Casey.

The program marks the first time since the prohibition on leaded gasoline that the federal government has required changes in gasoline on a widespread basis to try to control air pollution, said Blake Early of the Sierra Club's Washington office.

The 1990 amendments to the Clean Air Act will mean more changes in the composition of gasoline. Beginning in 1995, motorists in heavily polluted cities will be required to use "reformulated gasoline," which is designed to reduce pollution emissions.

The new gasoline formulas also include higher percentages of oxygenates such as MTBE and ethanol.

Denver and a handful of other cities have had winter fuels programs for several years, and air already has improved, Casey said. She said Denver's air no longer exceeds the federal maximum for carbon monoxide emissions.

Carbon monoxide is a bigger problem in the winter because temperature inversions are more likely to trap the emissions closer to the ground. In addition, engines

RELICS: Working rig makes hole at show

(From 1E)

She reports that despite Gilbreath's contention that the rig was "hardly able to hit a lick," the well got down to some 140 feet total depth before the show closed in 1956, but was filled up with trash, so that in subsequent years they've had to re-drill.

That rig burned after the 1958 show and was replaced by the present one, which was brought in after drilling its last well between Grandfalls and Imperial in 1958.

Today's crews sit there stroking just off bottom of a 12-foot hole, while greeting visitors and answering questions. Daylight driller Buddy Shivers, 81, said his toolpusher Rad Cagle is rough to work for.

"The only way he can tell when you're straining is when your neck gets as big as your body.

"We're working for bottom-hole pay — we won't get a paycheck until we get down to 3,000 feet. We've made 12 feet in the last 15 years, and we're the third generation."

To the east of the well sits the Old Timers Lounge, the courthouse, and a 6 by 8 foot steel open-air jail furnished with bench and chamber pot, where unwary victims are thrown to languish until their trial, where the only plea is "guilty" and there is one penalty — the price of a barbecue ticket for the Chuck Wagon Gang's Friday "Feed" at the end of the show.

Meanwhile back on the rig floor, there's a new crowd of visitors asking if this is a real rig, and if they're really making hole. Shivers says they are. He tells about the gas.

It's true, folks. In a typical bizarre twist of fate in the oil patch, some time during the last 15 years, the well started making gas from a depth of 3½ to four feet.

"We can't figure out whether it's a leak in the pipeline or if we actually hit something worth looking for," Shivers said. "We can't finish this hole until we get some casing out here to case off this gas."

Three oil companies report mixed quarterly earnings

N.Y. Times News Service

Three oil companies reported mixed quarterly results Thursday.

Occidental Petroleum Corp. said earnings declined 64.3 percent and Ashland Oil Inc. posted a $103 million loss. But Amerada Hess Corp. said it earned $8.7 million, compared with a loss of $7.5 million in the 1991 quarter.

The companies in many ways are atypical of the oil industry, which analysts generally expect to report higher earnings for the third quarter. Wednesday, Texaco Inc., citing costs related to Hurricane Andrew, said its profit slipped 5.9 percent, while Amoco's income rose 61 percent.

Occidental is dominated by its chemicals unit, which suffered from weak demand. Ashland Oil and Amerada Hess are large refiners in the East, where prices and demand have been weak, but Amerada improved because of higher profits in oil-and-gas production.

Paul Mlotok, an oil industry analyst at Morgan Stanley & Co., said rising prices for natural gas and crude oil during the quarter hurt profit margins in chemicals and refining because both fuels are used as feedstocks in chemical and petroleum refining. "That was an industrywide problem," he said.

Following are details from the companies' earnings reports:

Occidental

Net third-quarter income was $61 million, or 20 cents a share, compared with $171 million, or 56 cents a share, in the 1991 quarter. Sales were flat, at $2.3 billion.

Excluding special items, income for the Los Angeles-based company declined 55.3 percent.

"Chemical earnings continue to be adversely affected by worldwide economic conditions," said Ray R. Irani, chairman and chief executive.

Earnings for the chemicals unit fell to $31 million, from $79 million in the year-earlier period before a restructuring charge of $260 million and an $80 million charge for costs to meet environmental standards. Sales for the unit, at $1.08 billion, amounted to 47 percent of the company's total sales.

Occidental's natural-gas pipeline unit posted profits of $97 million, up from $56 million. The gain included the reduction of a legal reserve amounting to $55 million before taxes. Profit in oil-and-gas operations rose to $81 million, from $57 million, excluding a special charge a year earlier.

Occidental's share price fell 12.5 cents Thursday, to $16.875, on the New York Stock Exchange.

Ashland Oil

The fiscal fourth-quarter loss of $103 million compared with a profit of $63 million, or $1.07 a share, in the quarter last year. Sales rose 3.7 percent, to $2.8 billion from $2.7 billion.

The loss for Ashland Oil, one of the nation's largest independent refiners, was mainly related to the adoption of a change in accounting for the cost of retiree healthcare benefits. Ashland restated its results for the four quarters of its 1992 fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30, to reflect equal amounts of the special $291 million charge.

For the year, the company lost $336 million, compared with a profit of $145 million, or $2.66 a share, in the 1991 fiscal year. Revenues rose to $10.2 billion, from $9.9 billion.

"Fiscal 1992 was a difficult year," said John R. Hall, chairman and chief executive. "We believe a refining industry shakeout is inevitable."

Ashland Oil's share price fell 50 cents, to $25.50.

Amerada Hess

Net income was $8.7 million, or 11 cents a share, compared with a loss of $7.5 million a year earlier. Revenue rose 6.8 percent, to $1.42 billion from $1.33 billion.

Profits from exploration and production carried the New York-based company in the quarter. The unit earned $32.2 million, compared with $20.8 million a year earlier. Refining and marketing lost $7.8 million, or more than double the loss of $3.8 million in the period last year.

Capital spending declined to $400 million in the quarter, from $481.5 million in the period a year earlier.

Amerada Hess' share price was unchanged, at $50.25.

been blessed with a few now and then who stay on for another show, but not often. What makes it possible is that it starts off slow and then snowballs. We've got an established routine, and now it's computerized."

Her decision to go to computers was brought on by the inexorable growth.

"As (the Oil Show) grew and grew, it finally became impossible. I had never done computer work, but I could see that we had to convert."

They converted all their databases to computer sometime in the 1980s and that year was "exciting, to say the least," she said.

Another exciting aspect of the job is that she never knows when she's going to be the victim of the Oil Show's peculiar brand of law and order.

"The jail committee deputizes several men to arrest people. They actually issue warrants for your arrest. I've been thrown in jail (in the iron cage in the Pioneer exhibit where the old cable tool derrick stands) several times."

Then there are the foreign visitors.

"We've seen a great increase in foreign interest over the years. We've had calls from Nigeria, Abu Dhabi, France, England, and a Russian delegation is coming this year. Last year we had people from China and Australia. We never knew when the phone rang whether it would be someone from Australia. All the women fought over who would get to the answer the phone because the (Australians) sounded just like "Crocodile Dundee.' "

And there are still those people, Chesshir says, who call in without a clue.

"You would be amazed at the number of people who call wanting to know something about the Oil Show, and when we mention the office, they say 'You mean you people have an office? "

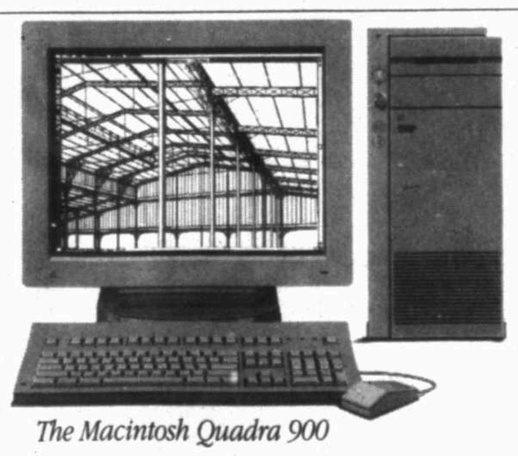
The Macintosh Quadra 700



The Macintosh Quadra 900

Performance for people who can't wait to do more.

Introducing the Apple® Macintosh® Quadra™ 700 and 900 computers. If you've been waiting for computers that can speed through even the most demanding business and technical tasks, the waiting is over.

At the heart of their extraordinary performance is the super-fast 68040 microprocessor. Running at 25 MHz, this chip neatly integrates a math coprocessor, memory controller, and cache memory. You'll appreciate this incredible speed and responsiveness when you scroll through a long document, redraw a complex 3-D graphic, or recalculate a spreadsheet.

Both Macintosh Quadra computers have built-in Ethernet that makes it a snap to network them into multivendor environments. They also have built-in video display support for over 16 million colors that lets you work with photo-quality images—without the expense of adding a video card.

The Macintosh Quadra 700 is perfect if you need maximum performance in a size that fits on your desktop. The Macintosh Quadra 900 is housed in a new floor-standing design with five expansion slots, room for up to four internal disk drives, and a key lock for added security.

Of course, no matter which Macintosh Quadra computer you choose, you'll enjoy Macintosh ease of use, System 7 functionality, and thousands of consistent Macintosh applications—everything you'd expect from a Macintosh.

Visit us today and see the new Macintosh Quadra computers for yourself. We can't wait to show you what they can do for your business.

FUEL: Blended gasoline reduces emissions

(From 3E)

don't burn fuel as efficiently in cold temperatures, particularly when cars are started.

Adding oxygenates allows the fuel to burn more completely, reducing not only carbon monoxide but other compounds as well, she said.

Computer models predict a 17 per cent to 20 percent reduction in carbon monoxide emissions from cars and trucks, which represent two-thirds of such emissions, said Alfonse Mannato, the EPA's winter fuels project director.

"Carbon monoxide makes it harder for people to absorb oxygen into the blood," Early said. "It is bad for people with pre-existing lung problems and heart patients. They feel more fatigued, and it makes them more vulnerable to other health problems."

In most of the affected cities, the winter fuels program begins Nov. 1. In 33 areas, the oxygenated gasoline will be required for four months.

Drivers in New York City started using the gasoline Oct. 1, and will continue to fill their tanks with oxygenated fuels through April 30.

Even in cities where the program officially begins Nov. 1, suppliers already have started delivering gasoline with the additives to service stations so the fuel in the stations' underground tanks will meet the requirement of 2.7 percent oxygen content by then, said Roy Turner of the Colorado Petroleum Marketers Association.

"It takes about three turns of inventory to get the supply up to the government's specifications," he said. Gas pumps will be clearly labeled to show they are pumping oxygenated fuels, Casey said.

No one disputes that oxygenated fuels cost more to produce. Government and private estimates of the added cost range from a low of 2 cents a gallon to as high as 10 cents a gallon.

When the program was first announced, the oil industry predicted shortages of MTBE that would trigger spot shortages of gasoline in some markets.

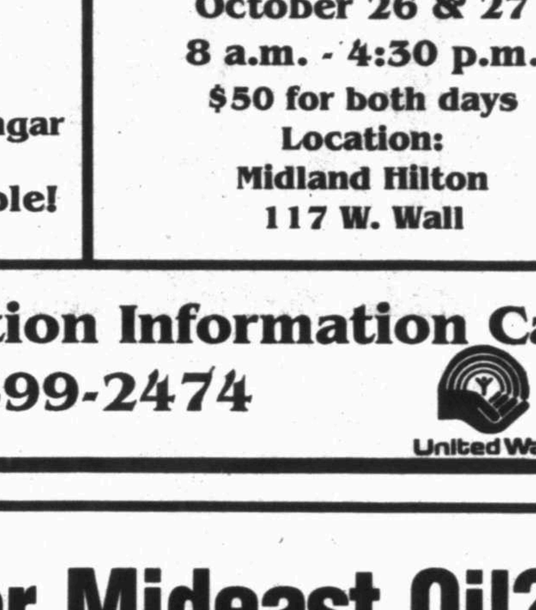
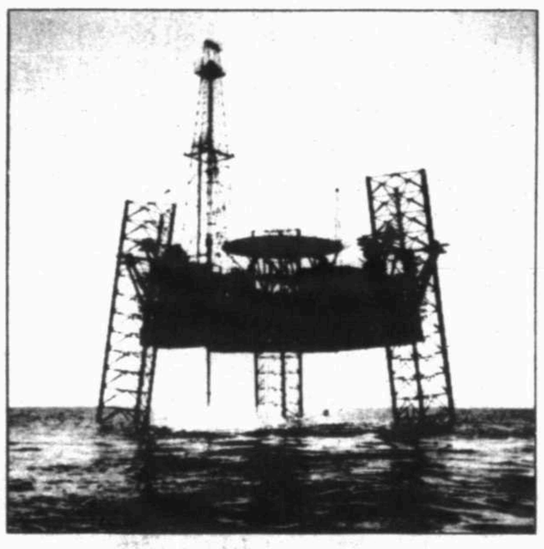
American Blood for Mideast Oil?

Hold on a minute!

Background to Present Crisis

- Federal policies continue to make America hostage to foreign oil. U.S. dependence on imported oil reaches 50 percent, up from only 29 percent at the height of the 1973 energy crisis.
- A ruthless Iraqi dictator named Saddam Hussein unleashes his troops to seize the small, oil-rich kingdom of Kuwait. Oil prices in the United States rise overnight.
- Insisting that Iraq's action can change "our way of life," President Bush launches the largest deployment of U.S. military forces since the Vietnam War.
- A European official at NATO headquarters in Belgium announces delightedly that "only the United States can play the role of a global policeman."
- America's military might is committed to enforce United Nations-imposed sanctions against Iraq.
- Pressure from internationalists grows for placing all authority to deal with Iraq — or with any similar crisis — in a strengthened United Nations.





Put America First!

- American blood should not be used to guarantee oil shipments for anyone, especially Japanese and Western Europeans who are far more dependent on Middle East oil than Americans. There is no authorization in the U.S. Constitution for our nation to be a global policeman.
- American policy regarding this and any other crisis should be formulated and carried out in the interests of a sovereign United States of America. It should not be subjected to the dictates of the United Nations, NATO, any other multinational group, or any other nation.
- President Bush and the Congress should not be allowed to use the current muscle-flexing in the Middle East to deflect attention from massive federal deficits and their plans to increase taxes.

Develop Our Abundant Energy Resources!

- Cancel President Bush's arbitrary ten-year ban on offshore oil and natural gas leasing.
- Permit development of the locked-up Alaska wilderness to obtain its known energy and mineral treasures.
- Remove many of the costly and unnecessary restrictions inhibiting the use of nuclear power to generate electricity.
- Abolish the Department of Energy that spends billions each year encumbering energy production.
- Instead of upgrading the Environmental Protection Agency to cabinet status, abolish it and reestablish sensible concern for the environment at state and local levels.

Tenneco reports third-quarter earnings of $46 million

■ Natural gas pipelines division made $58 million, up from $17 million a year ago; revenues were $526 million, up from $422 million.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Tenneco Inc. on Thursday attributed third-quarter earnings of $46 million to improvements in each of its divisions.

The Houston-based diversified company reported a loss of $693 million for the same period last year.

Earnings per share amounted to 28 cents for the quarter ending Sept. 30, compared with a loss of $5.69 for the third quarter of 1991. The July-September 1991 period included an after-tax restructuring charge of $427 million, or $3.49 per share, and 36 cents per share lost from discontinued operations.

"The earnings . . . show that Tenneco is on track with its aggressive turnaround," Mike Walsh, Tenneco chairman and chief executive officer said. "This third consecutive quarter of dramatic improvement in a weak economy shows that our focus on results and consistent profitability is working."

Revenues in the most recent period were $3.18 billion, up slightly from $3.12 billion a year ago.

For the first nine months of the year, Tenneco income was $257 million, or $1.71 per share, compared with a loss of $706 million, or $5.87 per share in the same period of 1991. The year-ago performance included an after-tax restructuring charge of $472 million, or $3.06 per share. Revenues were $9.82 billion, down from $9.83 billion a year ago.

Among Tenneco divisions, J I Case, a farm and construction manufacturer, lost $68 million. The performance, however, was an improvement from the $169 million loss posted a year ago.

Tenneco said a continued decline in markets for farm and construction equipment will result in additional 4 percent production cuts to keep inventories in line with demand. The company said Case also would post a fourth-quarter loss.

Tenneco's natural gas pipelines division made $58 million, up from $17 million a year ago. Revenues were $526 million, up from $422 million. Higher transportation values and cost control efforts were credited for the improvements.

Tenneco Automotive, which includes Walker exhaust products, made $60 million, up from $49 million a year ago.

Newport News Shipbuilding made $68 million, up from $61 million in the 1991 period. Tenneco said the division has $5 billion worth of work lined up, including seven submarines, two aircraft carriers and the refueling and overhaul of the carrier Enterprise.

Another division, Packaging Corp. of America, which makes boxes and containers, made $49 million, more than double the $23 million of a year ago.

LANGSTON: Instructor builds models of oil-patch equipment

(From 1E)

Langston said about twice a year he unveils his rotary model to students studying petroleum technology at ENMU's Oilfield Training Center, which offers training in a $12 million setting complete with a full-size drilling rig and other oil field equipment.

In addition, the university trains a number of foreign students who visit the campus during the summer months from nations in the Persian Gulf and along the Pacific Rim.

"When you're introducing someone to a rig, having something like this (a model) is quite invaluable . . . it works a lot better than a slide. You can start it, stop it, turn it . . . it's just a good educational tool," Langston said.

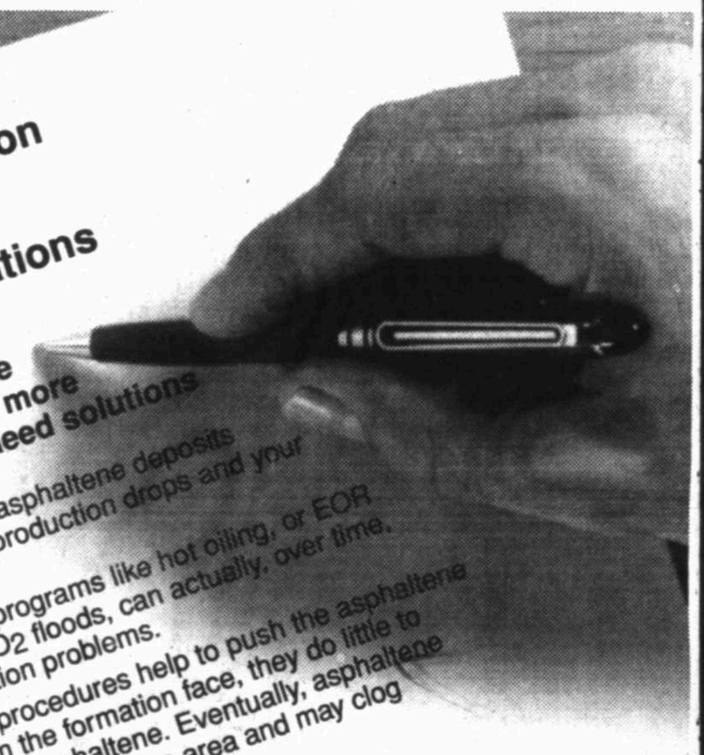
✔ Unstable Production
✔ Plugged Pumps
✔ Damaged Formations

To control production problems and maximize your profits, you need more than promises...you need solutions



It's a simple fact...when asphaltene deposits collect downhole, your production drops and your profits plummet.
And often, treatment programs like hot oiling, or EOR programs such as CO_2 floods, can actually, over time, worsen your deposition problems.
While these costly procedures help to push the asphaltene particles away from the formation face, they do little to actually remove the asphaltene. Eventually, asphaltene will migrate to the near wellbore area and may clog perforations and halt production.
Look to Tretolite for solutions to help control your asphaltene problems. Through careful analysis of your system, Tretolite can develop effective chemical treatment programs to control asphaltene. These programs can increase throughput by eliminating the plugging and deposit build-up that hinders your production.
Plus, Tretolite® chemical stimulation programs are cost-effective, especially in comparison to other treatments such as hot oiling.
