MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

When a city gets the opportunity to put over a big deal, something that will bring in some good clean shekels, that opportunity should not be missed. For a time yesterday it looked like as if Wichita Falls was going to miss one. William B. Naylor, general representative of the popular Sells Floto circus, came here last night undecided whether the show would close in Fort Worth on Saturday, Nov. 26, or whether they would play here on the Monday en route to Denver winter quarters. Secretary Hubert Harrison of the Chamber of Commerce got busy. Offering an inducement in the city license proposition, Mr. Harrison got the circus man considering whether this was not the logical point for nine hundred people to receive their last wages. Then other interests got to work, and a hurried meeting was called. "Why not make the coming of Sells-Floto the medium to bring your friends into town from the whole of the surrounding districts?" was asked by Mr. Naylor. "If you will try and stir up some interest in our coming we will do all we can to induce the folks to come along. Sunday afternoon at three o'clock the Sells-Floto band of thirty-eight pieces, under the leadership of Mr. Don Montgomery, will give you a free concert, not on the circus lot, but down town, on the court house square or any old place," said Naylor. "And music lovers will hear a band of more than average concert playing ability. That will look after Sunday" said the circus official. "Then on Monday morning the visitors can go to the circus grounds, take in all the sights, and examine some of the finest specimens of horseflesh which it is possible to find anywhere. At eleven o'clock the two-mile street parade will pass along all the principal downtown streets. And at two o'clock the matinee will start. At Long Beach, California, a few weeks ago, the Chamber of Commerce there and the tradesmen in general got together and made the Sells-Floto circus day a 'Home Trade' day. All the windows were used for displaying the best goods in stock. Floats were used in the circus parade and the mayor and council of the city took part. The result was just as they expected. Thousands of visitors came to Long Beach that day, saw the circus, patronized the stores and eating places and in fact as the mayor said 'It was a red letter for the aggressive members of the Chamber of Commerce and Long Beach. Over forty-seven thousand dollars will be paid to the people of the circus on Tuesday. Hundreds of them will leave here for their homes. They will have money to spend upon themselves. Why not go out and show them that it can be spent well and wisely right here in our city? Let's go folks." The Record News thinks Mr. Naylor is right.

William Jennings Bryan is an optimist. He is more than optimistic He is hopeful. He declares that a spirit of hope pervades the national capital. He defiantly says that the foreign delegates dare not reject the offer of Secretary Hughes and predicts that the nation spurning the naval plan submitted faces overthrow. Through the Bryanic glasses he finds the people the world over war weary and tax burdened and his prophecy is that they will rise up in protest if the American proposal is not accepted. William Jennings Bryan has ever had the spirit of prophesy. He has ever marched in advance of the age and he has ever placed his faith in the infallibility of God and the sanity of men. A dreamer he is; a Peter the Hermit evangelist he has been and will ever continue to be but as an apostle of the gospel of the advancement and the uplift of the race he has never been a failure. He has survived three political Waterloos but it may be said of him as has been said before, "he led the democratic party to defeat but never to dishonor."

Speaking of the Panhandle country, R. F. Morris of Donley county is a farmer and a boomer. He is not a native Texan. He was born and reared in the Palmetto state away over on the southern Atlantic coast. "I have known the Panhandle section for fourteen years and have owned land all the time," said this adopted son of Texas. "I have been in this section during the growing season every year and during all of these years have never seen a crop failure in Donley county. This section will grow any kind of crops adapted to the temperate zone ... to perfection. Cotton will make from one-half bale to a bale to the acre. This section is free from the boll weevil. Cotton lands are almost invaluable. We do not properly appreciate their value. With practically 80 per cent of the cotton land ruined by boll weevil, the man who owns a good cotton farm is riding easy. It is impossible to grow cotton in the East under such conditions and that alone spells prosperity for this section. Until some method is found to destroy the weevil, cotton will continue to bring a high price. But cotton is not the only blessing for us. A farmer can grow more of everything as adapted to this section than he can possibly gather. This is a fine stock country, with high helpful altitude, especially adapted to growing stock to be fattened for the market. Here the human family seems to thrive amazingly, judging by the happy and healthy children we see. People here are kind and give help to everyone who comes to develop this wonderful country and its greatest need is more houses to take care of the people who wish to come. The Panhandle country is the country for general diversification, a country that will grow all crops, a cattle country both dairy and beef, the finest hog country known and now if we will add and make this a big poultry

EXPECT CONTRACT ON IRRIGATION WILL BE LET ON WEDNESDAY

Contract will probably be let early today for the construction of the big Wichita irrigation project, with the W. E. Callahan Construction company of Dallas indicated as probably the successful bidders—their bid apparently being considerably lower than the next one.

As indicated in the Record News of Tuesday morning, there were a number of bids submitted—five—and the figures given were such as to permit the immediate letting of a contract and well within the amount available for the work. Action of the directors in promptly ratifying the trade made by Frank Kell and Judge J. T. Montgomery for the Waggoner lands which will be submerged by the building of the two dams, as indicated in Tuesday morning's Record News, removed this possible obstacle to the early building of the project. With the recent sale of bonds and the probable letting of a contract today it is expected that the preparations for the work will begin immediately.

A large number of engineers, material men, contractors and sub-contractors, bonding house representatives, as well as members of the irrigation board and their technical advisers, crowded the city council meeting room when the five bids were opened and read.

The bids were submitted on the unit basis, and some little calculation was necessary in determining the lowest, but those with the pencils indicated that the Callahan bid was by far the lowest submitted, and congratulations were at once extended by others to that company's representative.

Of the other bids, that of Smith Bros. and Healy, of Wichita Falls, is being considered with that of the Callahan company. These were the only companies submitting bids which included the building of the two dams, the other bids being for canal work. The other three bidders were: Womach Construction Co., Winston Bros. company and Scarbrough, Smith and McKinlow.

R. A. Thompson, chief engineer for the board, is figuring up the bids and will make a recommendation to the board this morning.

BOSTON GRAND JURY INDICTS HIGH OFFICERS

Massachusetts Attorney General and Supreme Court Justice Named in Indictments.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Justice Edward B. Pierce, of the Massachusetts supreme court, was indicted by the Suffolk county grand jury today on charges of conspiracy with E. Edwin Ulmer, an attorney, to deprive certain persons of property rights in stock and obstruct justice.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Attorney General J. Weston Allen, a justice of the state supreme court whose name has not been officially announced, and W. Edwin Ulmer, an attorney of this city, were named in secret indictments returned today by the Suffolk county grand jury.

The charge against the attorney general is larceny of $154 and is said to be based on a case in which he acted as counsel several years ago.

The other indictments were on evidence distinct from that against the attorney general. They resulted from a grand jury investigation of charges of bribery and graft in connection with the affairs of the Waban Rose conservatories and the Henry Woods Sons Company, paint manufacturers in Wellesley.

The cases were presented to the grand jury through the office of District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, who was himself in court today as a defendant in disharment proceeding brought by the attorney general. The disbarment action and a petition also filed by Attorney General Allen for Pelletier's removal for alleged improper use of his official position, are now pending before the supreme court. The district attorney asked for postponement of both actions until after the municipal elections on December 13, on the ground that he would be greatly occupied until that time by his activities as a candidate for mayor of Boston.

The indictment warrant was served on the attorney general at his office in the state house and he announced that he would appear in court later to answer to the charge of larceny.

EVIDENCE IN SCOTT CASE IS FINISHED

Fate Second Man Charged With Robbery of Aged Dean Couple Rests With Jury; Case Quickly Tried.

Special to the Record News

HENRIETTA, Nov. 15.—Closing the taking of evidences without placing the defendant on the stand and with the introduction of practically no testimony either by the state or defense other than that used in the trial of Sewell Fields last week, the fate of H. T. "Scotty" Scott of Wichita Falls, charged with robbery with firearms was placed in the hands of the jury here tonight at 8:30 o'clock. The jury retired to consider their verdict at that time. A verdict is expected before midnight.

Clad in his usual attire of leather coat with the front of his shirt turned back, smoking a cigar, the well known Wichita Falls character who has kept the officers and officials of two counties busy since his arrest on October 10 in connection with the alleged robbery of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Givens at Dean, maintained his usual cheerful attitude. With his wife, who sat beside him throughout most of the day, he paid close attention to the day's proceedings upon which his fate depends.

Don't Offer Alibi.

The defense failed to establish the alibi defense that had been expected by state attorneys. After the state had closed its direct evidence with the testimony of J. B. Givens the defense pulled a surprise by closing with the testimony of three men who testified substantially the same as they had in the Sewell Fields trial.

The move was an apparent surprise to the state attorneys who asked for an adjournment until after lunch to decide whether they would let the case go to the jury without additional evidence or use the testimony of several rebuttal witnesses which they had subpoenaed. The latter plan was decided upon when court convened after lunch, the state placing four witnesses on the stand, all of whom testified in the Fields trial.

The defense pulled their second surprise when they closed their rebuttal after reading the testimony of J. A. Wray, newspaper man of Wichita Falls as given in the trial of Fields. The taking of testimony closed at 3:30 p. m., state and defense presenting all their evidence in less than six hours.

After the charge by Judge H. F. Weldon of the 30th district court, J. S. Dickey, special attorney for the state of this city and Shields Heyser of Wichita Falls for the defense spoke before the afternoon adjournment. R. E. Taylor, local attorney, for the defense and District Attorney H. R. Wilson concluded the arguments at the night session.

Aged Couple Testifies.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Givens, the former 68 and the latter 70 years old, again told the story of the manner they are alleged to have been held up and robbed at their grocery store at Dean on the night of October 10 by Fields and Scott. Mr. Givens was the only witness placed on the stand by the state in direct evidence and Mrs. Givens the first rebuttal witness for the state.

Cross examined at length by the defense the aged couple showed some disagreements in their testimony as to the details of the night's happenings but could not be shaken from their positive identification of Scott and Fields as the two men who they said entered their store and home and with firearms robbed them of a small amount of money.

They told of the two men coming to their tore around 11 p. m. on the night alleged and started a search of the house and store saying that they were Officers Belcher and Morgan of Wichita Falls. They said the two men searched the building.

They both declared that Fields, resenting a remark of the old man who had become suspicious that they were not officers, struck Mr. Givens with his fist.

It was at this point that Scott told Fields, "Don't touch him he is an old man," according to the testimony. The couple disagreed as to which one

HARDING MARCHES IN SIMPLE REVERENCE BEHIND BODY OF UNKNOWN SOLDIER AS IT IS BORNE TO CEMETERY

Upper photo shows casket bearing body of America's "unknown soldier" on gun caisson, being escorted in procession along Pennsylvania avenue by medal men of service. Lower photo shows President Harding and General Pershing marching immediately behind the body.

Typifying the spirit of reverence in which America paid tribute to its war dead in the burial of the "unknown soldier" on Armistice day, President Harding walked behind the body of the hero as it was borne from the capitol to the national cemetery at Arlington in the Virginia hills. Beside the president marched General Pershing, the man who led America's youth in the World war. Behind the commander-in-chief and the general came supreme court members, senators, and other notables.

QUARANTINE IS PROCLAIMED ON ENNIS COTTON

Pink Boll Worm Found to Exist in Portion of Ellis County, Says Neff in Proclamation.

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 15.—When the pink boll worm law of the first called session of the legislature became effective at midnight last night a proclamation by Governor Neff proclaiming a special emergency quarantine in that portion of Ellis county surrounding the city of Ennis also became effective.

The proclamation says that since the pink boll worm has been found to exist in that territory that it shall be unlawful for any person to ship any cotton or cotton products of any kind from the quarantined area or any car or vehicle of transportation liable to carry the worm from the restricted district except under rules and regulations of the commissioner of agriculture. It further says that the law shall be in effect until a hearing can be held by the pink boll worm commission created in the recent act, and the report of this commission acted upon.

Governor Neff wrote the proclamation before leaving Austin last Saturday to take effect when the bill became a law.

Agricultural Commissioner George B. Terrell also issued a proclamation prescribing rules under which cotton products can enter and leave the restricted area. The proclamations were made public late today.

Prominent Forester Dies

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Dr. Thomas Millman, supreme physician of the independent order of foresters, and one of the original members of the society, died suddenly today. He was 72 years old. He had been an officer of the supreme council of the foresters 43 years.

Shepherd Bill Requests Data On Irrigation

Special to The Record News.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Senator Sheppard introduced a bill in the senate today, directing the secretary of agriculture to investigate the feasibility and economy of irrigation by the reservoir system.

The investigation would cover, in addition, the feasibility and economy of pumping from the under ground waters, the quantity of water which can be withdrawn without lowering the ground water level, the depths and lifts required, the source and quantity of the underground supplies, the best method of utilizing them for irrigation purposes, the extent to which the underground supplies would be replenished by storing the precipitation where it falls, the practicability of collecting and impounding flood waters and the best method of conserving them for irrigation.

The secretary is directed by the bill to report an estimate of the cost of constructing reservoirs and lakes for the purpose of impounding flood waters at points found to be most suitable and desirable. He is also asked to investigate the practicability of prevention by farmers of the surface run-off of precipitation, the attendant waste of soil, moisture and fertility and to report the best methods for prevention, together with the approximate cost to the landowners.

MARCUS ADDRESSES EL PASO MEET OF ICE MANUFACTURERS

EL PASO, Nov. 15.—The ice business of the nation is menaced by paternalistic laws and the remedy is publicity, according to speakers at the opening session here today of the convention of the Southwestern Ice Manufacturers' association. It was voted to raise a fund for publicity, in which speakers declared ice men have nothing to conceal, and $54,000 was subscribed. Today's speakers included President M. A. Marcus, Wichita Falls; J. A. Greene, Waco, and Wakefield, Dallas.

FREIGHT RATE ADVANCE HURT PACIFIC PORTS

Cotton Shipments Were Largely Diverted to Gulf Coast, Witnesses Testify at Rate Hearing.

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—Increases in freight rates on cotton from southern states to the Pacific coast ports for export several years ago, diverted most of the shipments to Gulf of Mexico ports, particularly Galveston, witnesses declared here today before an interstate commerce commission examiner who is hearing a petition of Pacific coast shipping men for an equalized rate.

R. K. Pretty, Chicago, assistant general freight agent of the Great Northern railway, said that when rates on cotton to Pacific northwest ports were low his line handled a great deal of the product. In 1916 and 1917 when the rate was 95 cents a hundred pounds, the Great Northern handled 250,000 bales, but when the rates went up the business fell of so greatly that in 1920 and 1921 when the rate reached $1.66 1-2 only 25,000 bales were handled. He said he thought the rate to the Pacific coast was unduly high and hoped it could be brought back to a 40 cent differentiate over Galveston rate.

E. W. Thomas, Dallas, Texas, representing the Japan cotton trading company, which exports cotton to the Orient, declared the southern shippers preferred to ship through Galveston.

Jay McCune, representing the Port of Tacoma, testified that there were many cancellations of cotton shipping contracts when the rate to the Pacific was made higher than the rate to Galveston.

E. H. Thornton, of the Galveston Commercial association, on cross examination, declared that while rates to the Pacific coast ports had gone up 58 per cent in the last few years, rates to Galveston from the cotton districts had increased 84 per cent.

HARDING EXPECTED TO APPOINT GERMAN AMBASSADOR SOON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—An ambassador to Germany probably will be nominated by President Harding before the end of the week, it was indicated today in official circles.

While the name of the prospective appointee was not disclosed it was intimated that his name had been or would within a very short time be presented to the German government by government for its consideration in accordance with diplomatic usage. The speculation as to the probable appointee, however, narrowed down some time ago to David Jayne Hill, former ambassador to Berlin and Representative Alanson B. Houghton of New York, with the latter said to be first in the president's mind.

Seventeen Months Old Child Is Waging Grim Fight Against Slow Starvation; Family in Great Want

With its frail body covered with wrinkled skin hanging loosely over an emaciated frame that gives its skeletonized features an almost ghostly appearance than can not help but haunt for hours any one who sees her, an under nurtured 17-months-old baby in Wichita Falls is unknowingly making a fight against the gaunt spectre of poverty and want that beggars description. The child is the fourth to be born in the family and a fifth is expected in a few months.

The home, if such may be justly be called a home, consists of a tiny ten by fourteen foot hovel in which only the barest furnishings are installed.

The child has been under the watchful eye of Mrs. C. E. Ousley, secretary for the Welfare Council for some months and when found was on the brink of death, solely through lack of nourishing foods such as milk and other wholesome and comparatively cheap commodities. The trouble was brought on when the child began teething and quickly dragged a formerly healthy girl to the emaciated appearance she now has.

She has large intelligent eyes and a well shaped head and is reported but very little trouble.

When visited last Monday by Mrs. Ousley, it is reported that the parents were found without food in the house and without having had a meal for 6 hours. Groceries were promptly provided by Mrs. Ousley.

A baby carriage is being sought by Mrs. Ousley to give the woman so she can transport the child to and from a physician's office to obtain proper medical attention and continue the fight which it is believed will save the life of the child.

The father of the child is unemployed and declares that he has been unable to find any work of any kind and is anxious to find work that he may be able to earn necessities for his wife and children.

U. S. PROPOSAL IS ADOPTED BY ARMS MEETING

Great Powers Unanimously Accept Plan Presented by Hughes for Limitation of Armaments, With Reservation of Right to Suggest Modifications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The sweeping American proposal for reduction of naval armament became the accepted fundamental policy of the armament conference today by the unanimous assent of the five great powers.

Seconding the bold lead of the United States, the accredited spokesmen of Great Britain, Japan and France rose in their places at today's plenary session of the conference, and one after another declared the readiness of their governments to accept the American proposal in spirit and in principle, but with the reservation of a right to suggest modifications of detail.

SUB IS TOPIC OF IMPORT AT ARMS PARLEY

Japan and England, With Short Coast Lines, Favor Sharp Limitation of Underwater Craft.

U. S. Not Prepared to Reduce Submarine Tonnage Below Limit of Plan Presented by Hughes.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—British desire to discuss the figures in the American naval replacement program as to submarines does not suprise American naval officers. It is fully expected that the Japanese also will have something to say on this point.

At the same time, it may be said quite definitely that the United States is not prepared to reduce below 90,000 tons the proportion of submarines she would be allowed to maintain in the proposed restriction of fleets. Submarines enter vitally into American schemes of naval defense of her own great coast line.

As insular powers, both Great Britain and Japan are exposed to submarine operations to a degree not true to the United States, officers say. There is little doubt among the naval folk here that Great Britain, in particular, would welcome absolute prohibition of submarine warfare, or, failing that, sharp limitation on the use to be made of underwater craft. That phase of the question, the writing of rules to govern employment of submarines in war, will come before the conference later.

As to the proportion of submarines to the capital ship strength of limited fleets, proposed by the United States, it may be said that hte existing flotilla of submarines in the American navy is almost wholly composed of purely coast defense types.

They would not be available, officers say, in keeping enemy craft at a distance from important points on the coast in the event of war. And they further offer the readiest means of keeping an enemy from setting up a floating fleet base in nearby sheltered waters. To what extent existing American submarines could be used, overseas as an offensive weapon is doubtful.

New craft of about 2,000 tons and classed as fleet submarines, are under construction. Some projected vessels of this class, however, have not been laid down and would be abandoned under the proposal. For ten years, also plans for new submersibles of several classes, based on a careful and comprehensive study of captured German craft and of all war experience with submarines, could not be executed. There have been indications that the navy department was preparing for a long step forward in these new plans, but details have never been disclosed.

In any case, the navy list shows some 94 first line submarines built, building or on order, 46 second line craft and twelve fleet submarines. Acceptance of the American proposal for reductions would not affect more than twenty or so of the new ships and for ten years the American navy would have a heavy preponderance in underwater craft, even if Great Britain immediately took advantage of her full 90,000 tons allowance and built up to that figure.

Japan would be allowed to build even during the ten-year holiday up to 5,400 tons total. This would represent a considerable new tonnage for her, it is said.

Oil Workers Strike.

BAYONNE, N. J., Nov. 15.—Several hundred employes of the Tidewater Oil company's plant here struck today in protest against a recent wage cut of approximately 25 per cent. Estimates of the number of men who walked out ranged from 400 to 1,000.

Then the problem of these details, which every one realizes may yet occupy the prolonged attention of the conference and involve the success or the failure of the whole plan, was referred for preliminary examination to a committee of five technical naval advisers, one from each of the big five powers.

Within this committee, first of all, Great Britain will ask for a further reduction of the limit proposed on submarine tonnage, Japan will endeavor to prove her right to a greater ratio of naval strength than has been suggested for her and France and Italy will request that their naval questions be considered along with those of the stronger naval powers embraced in the American plan.

Thus the diplomacy of the American delegation has won its first victory in the conference, but still finds itself confronted with questions admitted importance delicacy whose solution is requisite to attainment of the purpose for which the nations were called into consultation.

While the technical advisers wrestle with the armanents problem and the delegates themselves continue in formal conversations on the American Plan, the other big subject of the conference, the Far Eastern situation will be given its first formal consideration at an executive meeting tomorrow of the delegations of all the nine interested nations. Tonight every one of the delegations was in a waiting attitude toward the Far Eastern questions and if any nation had a comprehensive plan of settlement to present at the outset it was carefully concealed.

England Took Lead.

The lead in accepting the principle of the American naval proposal was taken in today's meeting of the conference by Great Britain, whose historic naval supremacy would eventually give way to an equality of strength with the United States, if the plan became an actuality. Arthur J. Balfour, head of the British delegation, announced the British acceptance in a speech that stirred the emotions of delegates and spectators and started a discussion in which diplomatic cards were laid on the table in a manner unprecedented in international conferences.

While the ball still echoed with applause for the speech of the British statesman, the chief delegate of Japan, Admiral Baron Kato, was on his feet to pledge the readiness of the island empire of the east to proceed with "sweeping reductions" in her fleet. Senator Schanzer, for Italy and Premier Briand for France, added in their return a pledge of cooperation in the program laid down by the United States.

Mr. Balfour alone made specific mention of some of the modifications that would be suggested as the negotiations progress. Reduction of the figure set as a miximum of submarine tonnage was the object on which he indicated his government would be most insistent.

Jap Position.

So far as could be learned tonight, the Japanese modifications to be urged will be in connection mainly with the fixing of Japan on the basis of 60 per cent of the naval strength of either other powers. Her spokesmen, it was learned, will later endeavor to show that some increase of tonnage should be offered her. The suggested increase will probably relate to all classes of ships, including submarines.

A strong impression prevails that the British proposals for limitation of the size of submarines will not prove acceptable to American naval officers. It is well known that American naval opinion regards the submarines as a potential war weapon of greatest value to the United States and not to be surrendered on any argument thus far presented. To reach its full efficiency, American officers argue, the submarine must be a sea keeping vessel of great size so as to be habitable for her crew.

BRITISH PRESS SCORES BALFOUR MODIFICATIONS

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Mr. Balfour's proposed modifications of the American proposals are received very unfavorably by the liberal press. The Westminster Gazette says that his statement gives cause for "the very

FIND MISSING WITNESS FOR 'FATTY'S' CASE

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Miss Betty Campbell, long sought as an important witness in the "Fatty" Arbuckle case, was found today in her home here.

Miss Campbell, 20 years old, was a member of the party at which Virginia Rappe met her death. She denied she had attempted to hide from the San Francisco authorities.

"I do not believe that Virginia Rappe was killed by Fatty or that he had anything to do with her death," the girl said. "Here's why: I joined the party at 4 o'clock that afternoon. Virginia, according to the prosecution now, was supposed to have been fatally injured by Fatty two or three hours earlier. She was at that time lying in an adjoining room.

"I remained at the party until 8 o'clock that evening.

"Now, we drank, danced and played the phonograph all that time, and the party included the same people who had been there with Virginia—there was Fatty, Al Semnacher, Virginia's manager; Fred Fishback, Mrs. Delmont, Zeh Prevost, Lowell Sherman and two others besides myself.

"My point is this: It doesn't seem possible, if Arbuckle had committed the terrible crime with which he is now charged, that the party would have continued thus, and that the same people who are now testifying against him should have remained in it.

"During the entire time I was present, I heard not a single word from anybody to indicate that there had been any trouble of any kind, except two statements from Arbuckle himself.

"Once he explained that he had sent Virginia out of the party because she had become too wild and noisy.

"And later, at dinner, he said to Semnacher: 'I think you should take her out of here. I don't want to be responsible for her.'

"Mrs. Belmont came back into the suite after Sherman left," Miss Campbell said, "and had several drinks. I heard her say nothing about Virginia."

of the two men kept a pistol in his hand, Mr. Givens saying that it was Scott and Mrs. Givens declaring that it was Fields. They both said that the men were armed, one man keeping his pistol in his scabbard. They said that Fields went through the old man's pockets just before leaving the store, obtaining between $20 and $25 in money.

Hunters Say Fired At

Virgil Johnson and Ott Botenheimer, who were members of a rabbit hunt party near Dean on the night of the robbery, said that they saw Fields and Scott in a machine with a woman on two different occasions. Johnson positively identified Scott as being one of the two men while Botenheimer testified that Fileds was in the machine. Both testifield that shots had been fired at them when the machine passed them, Johnson stating that one of the shots fired by Scott was so close to him that his hand was singed.

J. O. Forbion living in the Southland addition of Wichita Falls testified that Scott and Fields had been out to his home about 9:30 p. m. on the night of the robbery and searched his home after they had represented themselves to be officers. This testimony was rebuttal to defense evidence as to the whereabouts of the two men at that time. Louie Taylor, negro porter at the Hearn hotel of Wichita Falls testified that Fields drove up to the hotel between 12 and 1 a. m. the next morning and had him to go out to his machine and get a pistol and searchlight.

George Hawkins, former city detective of Wichita Falls, told of conducting the investigation after the report of the robbery which resulted in the arrest of Scott and Fields a few hours after the time it is alleged to have occurred.

Building Contractor Testifies.

A. L. Whisnant, building contractor of Wichita Falls was the only witness placed on the stand by the defense who testified regarding the whereabouts of Scott on the night of the robbery up to the time of his arrest. He said that he saw Scott on Seventh street about 9 p. m. and after talking to him a short time took him home. The state in rebuttal showed that the witness was one of the signers of both Scott's and Fields' bond.

The defense also placed J. B. Fields father of Sewell Fields, E. F. Temple and L. L. Moody on the stand. As in the Fields trial they all gave testimony tending to prove that Sewell Fields was at the home of his father 15 miles northwest of this city at the time he was alleged to have been aiding in the robbery.

Russian Refugee Studies English, With Tny Tots

An 18-year-old student, who is well versed in language of her native Russia, but knows very little of the language of her adopted country, was enrolled Tuesday morning in the primer class at the Alamo school.

The student, who is Miss Meni Mogill, with her brother H. Mogill and young neice Clarice Mogill are German refugees from Russia, coming to this country only a few weeks ago.

The teachers declare Miss Mogill showed herself on the first day to be no apt pupil and forecast a rapid rise through the grades for her. She had very little difficulty in reading through simple sentences in her primer, but had difficulty in understanding the meaning of the words she had pronounced, teachers reported.

They spent millions of dollars in advertising their chief staple the country over. If Texas would advertise its resources, its possibilities, its attractions, its cheap land and its climate as the people of Southern California advertised their sole asset, Texas would have a population of 15,000,000 souls in the year 1930. Dabney White is on the road again. Dabney is as restless as a jungle tiger cat, as inquisitive as a society queen, as versatile as Gene Lewis and as roving as an old time tramp printer. Dabney has eyes and he uses them. He landed at Nacogdoches the other day and made [illegible] discovery. Petroleum was not discovered first at Corsicana or in Navarro county. Dabney says that the first oil discovery made in Texas was in Nacogdoches county. This was in 1857. Daniel Tripp, a famous geologist, made the discovery. John F. Carl, a citizen of Pennsylvania, attempted drill the first well. This was completed in 1889 and Carl became interested in 1868. Another company was organized in 1889 and this company drilled the first successful oil well in Texas, sixteen miles east of Nacogdoches at a depth of 290 feet. Daniel Tripp, the pioneer geologist, was more than a dreamer. His survey became a reality. Dabney says the first well flowed 300 barrels a day without pumping, that Oil Springs was the first oil city in Texas, that the first tank in Texas was built at Nacogdoches and the original Corsicana find was made six years after the Nacogdoches drillers brought in a producer. Dabney has made an important contribution to the petroleum literature of Texas. He has straightened the petroleum record and now it should be kept straight. By the way the old scout of East Texas promised to light at Wichita Falls before the coming of the yuletide glow. He hasn't "lit," yet.

California University professors, after a sharp survey of the field and close observation, say that the young men of today are lacking in courtesy. Then these California highbrows should come to Texas. They should survey the field; they should keep their eyes open. If in doubt they should go to Iowa Park and hunt up Joe Conway. Joe may not be a highbrow. He is not be a polished product of university or college. He may not be of royal ancestry. He may not lay claim to forbears who came over in or on the Mayflower, or who founded the Maryland colony guided and commanded by Lord Baltimore, or among the first cavaliers who settled Virginia, but Joe Conway is as courteous as Lord Chesterfield, as accommodating as old Ben Franklin and as sunny tempered as any sister of charity or Salvation Army lassie. Joe Conway just exudes it. He was born that way. Joe Conway operates a gasoline supply station at Iowa Park. He should be employed by these California professors to teach courtesy to the students of the university, those who are so thoroughly lacking in that most admirable of all traits of character if the professors have taken the correct bearing and know whereof they speak. This is the unanimous verdict of a coterie of Wichita Falls ladies who motored to the town where Joe Conway makes his habitat on a peaceful Sabbath eve. They were strangers to Joe, Joe was a stranger to the motorists but he was there with a large stock of courtesy, a most accommodating spirit, a cheery word and an all-American smile when the gas would not splutter and the machine refused to go. Flowers are never out of season. This bunch for Joe Conway of Iowa Park. Maybe this will serve to introduce him to the California professors who mourn the lack of courtesy on the part of the students of their highbrow institution.

LABOR FEDERATION OFFICIALS MAY ACT ON KANSAS STRIKE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The executive council of the American federation of labor at a session which is expected to continue the rest of the week, today discussed the preliminary report of its committee on wage and wage theories. The committee's investigation was ordered continued.

"The law of supply and demand has long since ceased to function in wage fixing, except under exceptional conditions," the report said in part, "and the most acute suffering from arbitrary imposition of unscientific wage theories is found in industries where there is no organization of the workers and where the voice of the employers constitute final authority from which there is no appeal."

Reports were current at the session that Kansas mine workers who have had differences with their parent organization, the United Mine Workers of America, would present a protest to the council against the unseating of Alexander Howat and other state officers, and that a hearing might be sought Thursday. What method would be adopted to present the complaint did not appear and participants in the council session intimated that it was unlikely that the federation would be induced to take up differences peculiar solely to a single constituent union.

The mine workers' representative on the council is William Green, secretary-treasurer of the national union and it was not expected that the appeal would be made through him.

HEADS TWO OIL COMPANIES WITH SPECIAL TRAIN OF BANKERS AND INVESTORS INSPECT OIL FIELDS

Headed by C. J. Webster, president of the Noco Oil Corporation, and Charles F. Colcord, president of the North American Oil & Refining company, a special train of one hunred and twenty-five prominent eastern bankers, brokers and capitalists, interested in the two oil companies will arrive in Wichita Falls this morning at 6:15, over the Katy from Ringgold. After an hour's stay they will go to Burkburnett, for an inspection of the various fields in that section, and will return to Wichita Falls shortly after two o'clock for another short stay. The train will then transfer to the Wichita Southern and go to South Bend, the principle objective of the trip, arriving there Wednesday evening.

The itinerary of the special train, which left New York City Monday morning follows: Frisco from Saint Louis to Oklahoma City, arriving at latter point noon Tuesday; Duncan Tuesday evening short stay for inspection of the Duncan field; Duncan to Ringgold, Tuesday night, and over the Katy from Ringgold to Wichita Falls arriving here Wednesday morning at 6:15.

South Bend, where the North American has the bulk of it's holdings, is the objective of this trip of inspection, but the members of the party are all much interested in seeing Wichita Falls, and the adjacent oil fields. The two stops today will be of sufficient length to permit a visit over the city.

Representatives of the Chamber of Commerce will visit the party this afternoon, Hubert M. Harrison, general manager, stated Tuesday afternoon.

Charles F. Colcord, the president of the North American, was one of the first operators to start leasing, and actual developments in the now highly important South Bend field, and the North American, through it's new affiliation with the heavily capitalized Noco company is now able to more thoroughly develop it's immense acreage in the South Bend field, it is stated. The Roxana has been interested with the North American in development of some of the leases, up to the present, and is continuing it's operation.

This present visit is expected to be followed by extensive developments in Young county. The North American's most recent sensation was the striking of a true oil sand at 4,000 feet in it's No. 1 B. F. Scott, Ruidoso survey, just south of the town of South Bend, the well having flowed since the sand was shot, about three weeks ago, through mud and casings, and with a string of tools hung in the hole.

Important announcements will probably follow this visit, is indicated by officials of the company.

NAME CHOSEN FOR SUCCESSOR TO BOYS' CLUB

At the regular meeting Tuesday evening, "Avoleh Club" was chosen as the name for the newly organized successor to the Boys' Club of Senior high school which now meets weekly evenings at the Episcopal Parish House.

A short address by Fred Datson, rector of the Episcopal church and a debate on the question "Resolved That Common Sense Is Required in Good School Teachers" were reported as the high lights of an entertaining program.

The decision in the debate, which was declared more humorous than serious, was awarded to the negative, which was debated by Wallace Bright and Ridley Maples. The affirmative was debated by Frank Woods and John Barnard.

By almost unanimous vote it was decided to hold a dance on the evening of Friday, following Thanksgiving day.

Officers of the club announced that the new club already boasts of a membership of 90 with prospects of running far past the hundred mark.

CONFLICTING VIEWS PRESENTED ON U. S. HAITI OCCUPATION

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Differing views as to the results of American occupation in Haiti were presented today to the special senate investigating committee by a trio of witnesses.

Richard E. Forest, of Rye, N. Y., the first of the three, said that the work done by the American forces toward restoration of law and order was "truly remarkable" and that disappointment which he said was felt by the Haitians was due to failure in their expectations of being quickly raised to a state of prosperity.

The second witness, Max Zuckerman of Boston, who enlisted in the marine corps as Joseph Rosenthal, New York city and served in Haiti from November, 1915, until October, 1918, testified that third degree practices were inflicted upon native prisoners, who he said, were pelted with sand bags and lifted until their toes only touched the ground in order to bring from them information concerning bandits.

Fines imposed by provost court upon natives was used to purchase furniture, stationery and other supplies and to pay marines, serving with the court, additional wages, Zuckerman declared.

"The marines as a unit, did very good work, but there was some individual feeling among the men against the natives," he added.

LEGION MEMBERS SHOW INCREASED INTEREST: AMERICANIZATION WORK DISCUSSED AND MINSTREL SHOW PROPOSED TUESDAY EVENING

Discussion of everything except the announced topic of the "K. K. K." including plans for an American Legion minstrel and general matters affecting the welfare of the organization and a talk by Mrs. W. T. Woodfill on "Americanization and Education," took up the greatest portion of the time at the regular meeting of the Pat Carrigan Post Tuesday night at the legion hall. A gratifying increase in the number of members present was noted and this was taken as a hopeful sign that interest is growing in the local post.

The campaign of the legion for the Americanization and education of the people will find ready supporters among all of the city officials, schools, lodges and various clubs. Mrs. Woodfill assured members of the legion, and the women stand ready to do all they can to further this good work.

George Hodgins, local black-face comedian and promoter of many home talent minstels, appeared before the legion in connection with the proposed minstrel show and offered to take the leadership in getting up the affair. A special meeting of the post will be held next Monday evening at 8 o'clock for the purpose of further discussing the minstrel plans. Drs. Strong and Wilson were appointed to work with Mr. Hodgins in the matter.

A vote of thanks to all of the individuals and organizatinns who donated flowers to be used in decorating the local graves of the fallen soldiers was given. It was also voted that the adjutant should write a letter of thanks to the four men's Bible classes who donated their offering to the legion at the Armistice Day union meetnig last Sunday.

Discussion of the $30,000 deficit and fund which will be needed to put the legion on its feet in the state after the alleged disastrous administration of the late ex-state commander was taken up and Joe Hatchett told of the bond plan whereby each legionnaire would have an opportunity of helping out. The matter was passed to the next regular meeting for action.

Scout Executive H. E. Taylor made a short talk in which he asked for volunteers among the legion members for the position of scoutmasters for the boys of Wichita Falls. A number of real men are needed at the present time in this worthy work, he said, and asked that legion men take this work seriously and help out the boys of this city.

TROOPS SENT TO SCENE OF IOWA STRIKE

By Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 15.—Four companies of the Iowa National Guard were ordered by Governor N. E. Kendall to report for duty in Ottumwa, where a strike of employes of the John Morrell packing company has been in progress nearly a month. The troops were ordered following word from the county sheriff, county attorney and the mayor of Ottumwa that the situation was beyond their control.

Fifty deputy sheriffs, sworn in this afternoon by Sheriff George H. Giltner, were on duty in the vicinity of the Morrell plant in Ottumwa tonight, according to information" received here. Many of these deputies, it was reported, are Ottumwa business men.

According to reports received tonight by Governor Kendall, from Adjutant General L. G. Lasher, who was in Ottumwa, no disturbances took place today except an outbreak early this morning. Between six thirty and seven a. m. groups of workers and pickets clashed and a number of men, including several officials of the company, sustained minor injuries. There had been a number of previous outbreaks with minor casualties since the strike started October 10.

Workers at the Morrell plant numbering approximately 1,300 walked out on strike following differences over working conditions and a reduction in the number of guaranteed working hours per week.

Company officials yesterday reported that it was operating with about six hundred workers.

Mayor Charles Chilton and County Attorney Newton W. Roberts joined Sheriff Giltner in the appeal to Governor Kendall for troops. All three officials stated that the situation was beyond local control.

WILL HAYS TAKES RAP AT TAXATION PENALIZING THRIFT

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Future revenues must be provided in some way other than by taxation which "penalizes thrift" and "destroys the incentive to save," Postmaster General Will H. Hays declared tonight in an address before the Fifth Avenue association.

Mr. Hays told his hearers that the United States should adopt a system of taxation that would combine the virtues of being an encouragement rather than a deterrent to initiative, while safeguarding the earning power of labor and insuring a citizens' right to the enjoyment of wealth.

"This country cannot go on, and must not go on indefinitely during peace time with either the forms or degree of taxation devised to meet the mergency of war," he said.

"Between the man who consumes the product of his day's work as fast as he creates it, and the man who practices self-denial—saves part of his day's earnings and puts it in the savings bank or in other forms of investment—between these two, it is the business of wise government to tax the former rather than the latter, our present system of taxation destroys the incentive to save."

LODGING HOUSES NOW SHELTER THE WORKING GIRLS

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The old-fashioned lodging house again is coming into its own because unemployment and lower wages are forcing girl workers out of the kitchenette apartments they once so proudly occupied.

U. S. PROPOSAL ACCEPTED BY ARMS PARLEY

gravest misgivings and disappointment."

"The reservation that a restricted program of battleship replacement be carried on from year to year in order to save the armament works from going to rot would be a direct attack upon the essential principle of the American scheme," says the paper. "The best hope for the world is that this specialized plant will go to rot and that at the end of a decade it may seem worth nobody's while to put it in order again. In any case, even if we should have to put it in order, Great Britain would be at no disadvantage as compared with either America or Japan.

"The suggested reservation amounts to a proposal that we deliberately keep alive not only the vested interests of the war, but the whole spirit and tradition of international naval competition as a sacred flame, ready to burst into full blaze the moment the holiday is over. We are convinced that if the real issue is grasped, public opinion in Great Britain will never consent to pressing this reservation which so patently knocks the bottom out of Secretary Hughes' plan."

The Daily News says regarding the suggestion that replacement be permitted continuously on a fixed scale:

"This seems a very dangerous breach in the whole conception of a naval holiday, which might well prove fatal to the American proposals. Surely, one of the prime objects of the holiday is to bring in question at the end of it, the wisdom or necessity of any replacements. It would not be surprising were America to regard any such amendment as defeating the whole object with which her princely offer to destroy her present enormous advantage in new ship building is made."

The News thinks that the British public would support an absolute embargo on submarines, the only argument against it being skepticism regarding the possibility of its enforcement.

Almost all the other morning papers again gave fullest editorial discussion to the proposals. The most antagonistic among the leading papers is the Morning Post, which dilates on Great Britain's exceptional position, in the need to protect all lines of communication. It argues that ships can always be built upon occasion and that what is required to remove the occasion for war and that in the solution of that difficulty resides the main purpose of the Washington conference.

The Telegraph admits that a decade naval holiday involves certain risks, but thinks that England should accept those risks as she accepted greater risks in the great war. For the sake of the world peace, such risks might be regarded as negligible.

"We could not reject the offer," says the Telegraph, "accompanied as it is by an act of self-denial on the part of America which has no parallel."

Resolution in Senate to Stop Work on Ships

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—A resolution directing the secretary of the navy to stop all work and expenditures on nine battleships and six battle cruisers now in various states of construction at private and government ship yards was introduced today by Representative Britten, Illinois, ranking republican on the house naval committee.

UNIONS READY TO MEET WITH ROAD DEMANDS

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Plans of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen to meet demands of the railroads for revision of rules and working condition agreements and for further wage cuts were completed today at the close of a two-day session of 650 general chairmen and officials.

Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the engineers and Wm. S. Carter, president of the fireman and enginemen, explained the settlement under which the recent general strike order was cancelled and received their followers' indorsement of their action.

Requests from 98 railroads for revision of rules and working conditions were considered and the counter demands of the unions formulated. Mr. Stone announced tonight the unions were agreed on a concerted program in the rules cases. The majority of the general chairmen departed for their homes early tonight to explain this program to their men.

Announcement was made today that the four big brotherhoods have signed agreements with roads in the eastern, western and southeastern districts for setting up adjustment boards, provided for in the Esch-Cummins transportation act. Two assistant grand chiefs will represent the engineers on the board—W. A. Burgess on the eastern and southeastern aid H. P. Daugherty on the western. Representatives of the other unions have not yet been selected.

Creation of the boards is expected to speed up the work of the United States railroad labor board by relieving its docket of the hundreds of petty cases of individual grievances.

"REVOLUTIONS NEVER TURN BACKWARD."

Frank H. Simonds is a serious and takes himself as seriously as the New England Puritan of the vintage of 1660. This is his latest: "For seven years we have been on the brink of a general catastrophe. The danger is not over, but it may be if the Washington conference is a success." Frank H. Simonds is a historian as well as a reader of history. If he knows anything, he should know that the world has been on the onward march since its early beginning. It's not going to take a back step or retrograde in order to vindicate the prophecies of a mere man. Man at his best is an insect. He comes and he goes. He makes footprints in the sand of time and the footprints disappear as fast as they are made by the human atom with a conceit that is appalling.

William Gibbs McAdoo is an advocate of the abolition of navies. He would lift a collossal load of taxes from the backs of suffering humanity and release for benevolent purposes all the wasted energies and wealth involved in the maintenance of huge naval establishments. There is a practical dreamer. Some day his dream will come true.

It takes all the grace and charity the peoples of Europe can muster to feel right toward Americans since the politicians of this country rejected the peace agreement which was born in the pure mind of the greatest leader our nations has ever known.—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth.

Mr. John Bull, speaking through his delegates to the arms conference, has accepted the Hughes principle but sidestepped the Hughes plan. To be exact, the shadow is beautiful, but the substance is a bit distasteful. Old school diplomats are the sharks of civilization.

There are fifty leading crop counties in the forty-eight states of the Federal Union. Texas has four—Ellis, Fannin, Lamar and Williamson, with Williamson given first place. This will do to start it.

Lawton is facing a gas shortage. Send for former Mayor "Bill" Davis, of Fort Worth. He will fix it.

A Kansas idealist calls for the Golden Rule for nations. A striking evidence of a faith that is sublime.

All thoughtful people want limitation of armaments and war outlawed.—President Harding.

Albany is one of the republican strongholds of America. Publisher William Barnes is a republican boss. He held the reins for twenty-two years. Theodore Roosevelt many times denounced Barnes as an unfit and when Roosevelt denounced a man he meant it. New York democrats captured Albany the other day and with it every municipal office in sight. They increased their legislature representation by twenty-three. Boss Barnes got his. There is a Waterloo in the life of every man but it was a long time coming to Boss Barnes. There will be a Waterloo in the life of Mayor John F. Hylan. He will get a gubernatorial or a presidential bee later along and then his feet will hit the ceiling.

Theodore H. Price, of New York, says disappointment over the new Republican tax bill was chief among the causes for the Republican setback in the November elections. His verdict is that the effect will be salutary if the house shall be made more considerate of business when it comes to deal with the senate proposals. It is up to congress to do something. Congressional elections are coming in 1922 and there are more independents in America today than ever before in the history of politics.

Wealthy members of the Methodist church who persist in living lives contrary to the discipline of the church, were invited to get right or get out, when the report of the committee on the spiritual state of the church was adopted by the Central Texas Conference at Cisco. In addition to dancing and card playing, the report of the committee condemned mixed bathing at Lake Worth, Galveston and other pleasure resorts in the state. There is always something to doing.

Federal Judge James C. Wilson opened court in the city of Fort Worth Monday. He had before him 250 violations of the Volstead act, 85 violations of anti-narcotic law and several Mann act violations. When Democratic senators joined hand with Republican senators to put away the last vestige of the rights of the states they reduced federal judges to police court recorders. Regardless of this, there should be law enforcement all along the line.

Normal peace between the United States and Germany has at last been established and the politicians of the senate required three years time after the signing of the armistice to establish it. A commission of business men would have established peace in less time than three weeks. There is a vast difference between the movements of practical business men and professional politicians.

Georgia has 206,875 tenant farmers; Texas has 232,308 tenant farmers. There are 6,500,000 from operators in America and 2,500,000, or 38.5 per cent, are landless. Farm tenancy is on the increase in America and census figures show that it has increased 61 per cent since 1881. What was it that Henry George said, "The man who owns the land owns the people."

"The Tribune believes that the time has come for Senator Culberson to retire," says the editor of the Amarillo publication. The Tribune believes that the time has arrived to elect a western man to the senate and Congressman Lucian W. Parrish is the man. This is the Amarillo contention: "The growing importance of the western half of Texas demands that we have at least one man in the senate who knows and understands the problems and needs of this section." There is going to be a merry political row the coming year.

According to the state labor department of Oklahoma, there are ten thousand less oil field workers than in 1920. Does this carry with it greater efficiency on the part of those who are working?

An Opportunity for the Millionaire
By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

It seems to be the working out of destiny that the surplus of wealth accumulated should be disposed of by millionaires.

Every generation amasses more wealth than it needs. The idea of this surplus being handled by the government as the representative of the collective people is as yet a socialistic dream. At present the sustenance of our institutions and the wherewithal for propagandas of progress must come from individuals.

Millionaires are not very imaginative. They are creatures of custom. They bestow their gifts, therefore, almost entirely upon existing institutions.

When a man dies and leaves $50,000,000 he usually, if he is benevolently inclined, donates it to universities, missionary societies, libraries, churches, and the like.

This is good. There is no question but what it is better than the old plan of using one's fortune to endow a family of noble idlers.

But the trouble is that institutions grow old. Very many of them are senile. And instead of helping along the welfare of mankind, they distinctly impede it.

There is one direction which is hereby recommended to all millionaires who may be looking about for some way to use their money for the best interests of the human race.

And that is, to endow The School Republic. The School Republic is simply a movement to begin the improvement of the human race at the place where it ought to be begun, that is, with the child.

We have an institution now called the Public School, which is vaster and more potential in its possibilities than any other institution in the world.

The Public Schools have more to do with determining the future of the nations and of mankind than any other organization.

And it is very largely in the grip of the worn-out idea of autocracy.

Schoolrooms are little Prussias and school teachers are little Kaisers.

What children ought to learn and to be drilled in from the kindergarten to the last year in the university is above all things Self Government.

The School Republic is a movement to teach Self Government to children.

It is supported and favored by those who believe in Democracy, not only with their mouth but clear down to the soles of their feet.

It is the only movement that is utterly and 100 per cent Democratic.

The School Republic proposes to make every school a little replica of the United States, to show the children how to elect their own officers, how to make their own laws and how to obey them.

It proposes to drill the children in Democracy and in Citizenship so that when they come out of school they will not despise politics; but will be trained and enthusiastic politicians, equipped to govern themselves, to take an interest in public affairs, and by means of the education that they have received to make this nation not a collection of poor boobs, managed by shrewd office-seekers, but in all reality a government "of the people, by the people and for the people."

Watching the Parade
By JOHN PILGRIM

By JOHN PILGRIM
Pop Barrett has begun to smile again. Those unpleasant up-and-down grooves have come out of his cheeks. He has fattened up—not much, because fat on Pop Barrett would produce the effect of a knot in a fishline—but somewhat. He looks acts, and talks happy.

"And what is the budding thought?" I asked him. "Second childhood or young love?"

"Neither," said Pop Barrett. "I've sunk the works in an annuity. Nowadays nobody is wishing for me to die."

I think that Pop had grown morbid. Maybe his liver had been cutting up rusty. It is my conviction that more ills are occasioned in this world by livers that mis-fire than by drink, matrimony or heavy navies. Anyhow, Pop thought that his children were just standing around waiting for the old gentleman to cash in.

"They make all their plans," Pop used to groan, "with reference to their Dad's last will and testament."

Well, they're perfectly human, of course, those children are. Knowing that Pop was fairly warm, and that he must die sooner or later, and that he could by no possibility hide his cash in his coffin, it is only to be expected that they more or less candidly took these facts into consideration. Pop did himself when he was a youngster and his father owned those big farms down on the river. When I first went into the business I realized that if—I was decent enough to say "if" to myself—my father were to die I'd have more capital to work on. All of us who have or have had a chance to inherit have speculated on that chance. No use lying about it. We can't fool ourselves.

"But I got unhappy about it," said Pop. "My kids didn't want me to die. They hoped I'd live forever. But I had got warped and ornery, and I thought I saw the ghoul-look in their eyes every time I wheezed in the morning. So I sunk the works in an annuity, and we're all happy."

The funny thing is that the kids were as well pleased as Pop Barrett. Most of us are pretty decent after all.

Do Not Despair
By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

In these times it is difficult to be an optimist. Looking about, one finds on every side abundant reason for pessimism.

The high hopes raised by the victory of the allies in the world war seem as far from realization as ever. Peace has not brought with it the longed-for international concord.

To the world war have succeeded minor wars in many parts of the earth. Elsewhere hates and animosities between nations give threat of war to come.

The ennobling spirituality and the self-sacrificing patriotism gloriously in evidence during the heat of combat are by no means so perceptible today. Instead one discerns all too plainly an insistent materialism, a rampant selfishness, a sordidness that is appalling.

Getting rather than giving is the present-day watchword. Profiteering, by wage-payers and wage-receivers alike, raises its ugly head more boldly.

Pleasure is sought at any cost. Not "How can I serve?" but "How can I amuse myself?" is the demand of multitudes. While millions of people starve, millions of others dance.

Yet do not give way to despair.

In the eternal scheme of things this after-the-war welter of greed and callousness may be a necessary prelude to world betterment. Assuredly it would seem well designed to force in upon men a poignant conviction of the need of abolishing its creator, war. And the abolition of war is in truth a first step indispensable to real progress.

Nor have greed and callousness completely destroyed all sense of spiritual values.

Service of the noblest sort still is rendered by many. There are generous givers as well as grasping getters. Real patriots yet are to be found, leaders with vision.

Soon or late the people, purged of their follies, cured of the materialism which brings its own bitter disillusionment, will rally about the standard-bearers of true prosperity. Of this we may feel confident, else must the world go mad.

And world madness is a thing inconceivable. Why was mankind at all, if not to grow in spirituality and good sense? Is evolution to have chaos as its culminate?

Despite all seeming, hold fast to most of to-day is but an incident. Tomorrow will be brighter.

The Once Over
By H. I. PHILLIPS

WHEN GEORGE COHAN RUNS A BASEBALL CLUB

Opening Overture: "It's a Grand Old Rag."
Encore: Medley from "The Governor's Son," "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," and "Broadway Jones."
Opening Ensemble: By entire club.
Uniforms (red, white and blue) by the Uncle Sam Costuming Co., Inc.; shoes by Columbia Bootery; socks by Stars & Stripes Outfitting Co.; baseballs by Liberty Sporting Goods Co.; bats by American Woodturning Corp.
Book, music and lyrics by George Cohan.
Plot, ground rules, signals etc., by George Cohan.
Strategy by George Cohan.
Dialogue between umpires and players, by George Cohan.
Additional dialogue by George Cohan.
Entire production under personal direction of George Cohan by arrangement with George Cohan.
Game starts promptly at 2:15. No persons coming after this hour will be seated until the end of the first inning.
Carriage calls may be left with the groundkeeper.
Upon arriving within the ball park fans will kindly look around and observe the exits.
In case of fire, riot, rain, or a very bad ball game, walk (do not run) to the nearest exit. (Per order of the fire commissioner by arrangement with Mr. Cohan.)
The management requests that any incivility on the part of usherettes, box office attendants, or doormen, be reported to the management.
Attention of fans is called to a smoking room under the grandstand.
Kindly refrain from applauding the players in tense moments, as it diverts their minds from the work.
Players will acknowledge applause by bowing only; under no circumstance shall a player step out of his part to make a speech (except to the umpire.)
The management desires to call the attention of fans to radical improvements inaugurated for the new season as follows:
A handsome proscenium arch has been erected over the pitcher's box at great expense, and after a careful inspection of drawings by the world's greatest architects and artists.
The electric light in front of the home plate are a new idea and will aid the umpire to see it more clearly and without resorting to a whiskbroom.
A powerful spotlight has been erected directly behind the pitcher's box and will be thrown upon any player deserving it.
Attention is also called to the fact that bags have been abandoned on the bases and baby-grand pianos put there instead. They give tone to the diamond and will be played by the Three (Count 'Em) Mayonnaise Sisters while the teams shift from field to bat and vice versa in each inning.
Patrons are requested not to leave the game until after the final curtain. The last inning is frequently the best one.
Immediately after the big show there will be a gr-r-r-r-r-rand concert. The winning pitcher will appear in person in checked suit, spats, and pearl derby. He will sing through his nose, dance, and tell seven funny stories fresh from the Traveling Men's Club.
(Note—Mr. Cohan guarantees an all-star cast for each and every game. On Wednesdays and Saturdays he will appear himself, playing third base and catch at one and the same game.)

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS
By M. JESSIE LEITCH

GETTING READY FOR SLEEP

"I think you should sleep tonight, dear," said the woman who was caring for her sick mother.

"The bed is smooth, and if you should need an extra blanket you can reach this one and pull it up. I'll spread it over the foot of the bed. You've had your medicine, and your nourishment, and the window is down from the top. There is a bell on the table beside you. Ring if you want anything."

And dropping a dutiful kiss somewhere in the region of her mother's cheek, Mrs. Green went off to bed. She did not believe in "fussing" over the sick, and she had done what the doctor had ordered. Moreover, she did not consider that her mother was seriously ill.

Nor was she. But the elderly woman lay silent for some time after her daughter had closed the door.

Little Annoyances Irritating

She wanted to read her Bible. True, it lay on the table beside her, but her glasses were across the room, on the dresser.

The old lady always washed her face and hands and brushed her teeth before she went to sleep at night. Perhaps her daughter had forgotten. She looked wistfully at the washstand.

Then the door opened gently and Olive, her half-grown granddaughter, entered.

"I thought I might get some wash water for you, dear," said the young girl. "I remember how I loved being prepared for sleep when I was ill in the hospital last year! My nurse used to call it 'putting me to bed,' in spite of the fact that I was already in bed."

Moving swiftly, with soft steps, the girl brought to the bedside a basin of warm water, soap, tooth paste and tooth brush, and a hand towel, as well as a bath towel.

She placed a chair at the foot of the bed, drew her patient to the side of the bed and loosened her nightgown at the neck.

Taking Care of Grandmother

Placing a towel under the old lady's chin, she washed and dried her face, neck, and ears.

Then she washed her hands, placing them in the basin.

Next, she put paste on the moistened tooth brush, held a small receiving basin under her grandmother's chin while she herself, manipulated the tooth brush, rinsed and gargled her throat, and lay back refreshed upon the pillow.

Then, turning the bedspread and blankets over the foot of the bed and the chair she had placed there, the girl rubbed her grandmother's back with cool, fragrant powder, braided her hair, turned her pillows and remade the bed.

And sleep for the weary patient was very near when, her task completed, the little home nurse placed a pair of glasses on the Bible and turned the night lamp low.

CHATTERER AND SAMMY JAY MAKE UP

When Chatterer the Red Squirrel heard Sammy Jay say that he was going straight to the Green Forest to tell Shadow the Weasel that Chatterer was living in the Old Orchard a great fear filled his heart. He forgot his quarrel with Sammy. He forgot his greed for all the corn in Farmer Brown's corn-crib. He forgot everything but his terrible fear of Shadow the Weasel. It was because of Shadow that Chatterer had left the Green Forest to live in the Old Orchard. If Shadow should find him there he didn't know what he could do or where he could go. He knew that Sammy Jay meant just what he said, for though it would be a dreadful thing to do people do dreadful things when they are angry, and Sammy Jay was very, very angry, indeed. He had already spread his wings when Chatterer spoke.

"Please don't do that, Sammy Jay," he begged, "I—I—I didn't mean all the bad things I have said."

Sammy Jay's eyes snapped. He saw right away that Chatterer was very much frightened, and he knew that in the future so long as Shadow the Weasel was anywhere around Chatterer would be so afraid that he would do anything Sammy might want him to. You see Sammy Jay is very sharp.

"Am I any more of a thief than you are?" he demanded.

"No—o—o," replied Chatterer slowly as if it were the hardest work to say it.

"Will you play any more tricks on me?" asked Sammy.

"No," replied Chatterer more promptly this time.

"Wel, I'll think it over and make up my mind in the morning," said Sammy. "Perhaps I will and perhaps I won't tell Shadow where you are living. I'll think it over."

Now, Sammy knew perfectly well that Chatterer wouldn't sleep a wink that night for worrying. Already he had made up his mind not to tell Shadow, for like all the other little meadow and forest people he hated Shadow. But, of course, Chatterer couldn't know that. He had so made up his mind, and a great fear that Sammy might tell clutched his heart.

"If you'll promise not to tell Shadow where I am you—you are welcome to all the corn you want at Farmer Brown's corn crib," said Chatterer in a very meek voice.

"Indeed!" replied Sammy. "How very generous of you, seeing that it doesn't belong to you, anyway, and I have just as much right to it as you have."

"And—and—well, I'll help you get it," continued Chatterer, his sharp wits working their hardest to think of some way to get Sammy to make that promise.

"How?" asked Sammy suspiciously.

"Why, when you can't get it between the cracks I'll bring some out for you and hide it in the stone wall where you can find it," replied Chatterer. But in his heart he said that he would hide it so that Sammy would have to hunt a long time to find it. It seemed almost as if Sammy read that thought, for, cocking his head on one side, he said:

"I'll promise not to tell Shadow if you'll promise to get me corn whenever I want it and put it just where I tell you to."

Chatterer didn't like that idea at all, but what could he do? He thought it over so long that Sammy Jay spread his wings as if he was going to start that very instant for the Green Forest.

"I promise!" cried Chatterer hastily.

And so these two scamps of the Green Forest made up and planned how they would live all winter on Farmer Brown's corn.

NEXT STORY: CHATTERER HAS TO KEEP HIS PROMISE.

The Daily Story
IN-LAWS
Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

Hope's brows knitted as she watched her husband read his letter "It's from Letty, isn't it?" she asked

"Yes, she's coming to visit us, with Maggie They want to do a lot of shopping, and——"

"Oh, dear, just as I counted on having things easy, after housekeeping." Hope almost groaned.

Fred colored "I should think my sisters would be free to visit our house," he began stiffly.

"Our two-room fold-up flat, you mean," retorted Hope "We haven't room for company."

"Well, they'll be here at 3 o'clock," he returned, folding the letter, instead of, as usual, tossing it over for her to read. "It is too late to head them off, even if I wanted to do so."

Hope finished her brakfast in a miserable silence. She knew that she had acted badly, but she also knew that the period of their visit would be a nightmare. Letty disapproved intensely of her sister-in-law, and made no secret of the fact. Maggie, the younger, admired Hope's smart clothes, but felt that she ought to buy similar ones.

"Shall you meet them or must I leave my work?"

Hope crimsoned. "Of course, I'll meet them, Fred. I'm sorry I spoke as I did, but——"

"The truth is you dislike my people. I can only hope that they will not stay long." And Fred went out, closing the door with an extreme gentleness that upset her more than a spirited bang would have done. Then she would have felt she had a right to be angry, whereas now she was ashamed.

Repentantly Hope set to work and baked and cooked all through the day, so that she would be free the following morning to pilot her guests about downtown. At 2 o'clock she set out, looking very trim in a blue serge suit.

"Oh, so you did meet us. I thought Fred would make an effort to come to the train." Letty's manner was injured, but Hope had determined to be cheery.

"Fred is very busy now. He would have loved to have come, but I thought if you were not too tired we could go in and have a chocolate and then look about through the stores," she said easily. "Would you like that?"

"Well, I am tired, but as we can only stay two weeks I suppose we might as well begin to do for the Dorcas society, and Maggie has been teasing for some new clothes. All right. You can take this suitcase and I'll carry the umbrella."

Hope's heart sank at the mention of the length of the visit and she detested carrying things, but she held out her hand for the bulgy suitcase. "There we can check the suitcase and umbrellas here," she said as they entered a large store, "then we will be free to run about."

"No, indeed. I don't trust my suitcase to those careless-looking boys. They might get things mixed." Letty glared at Hope.

They shopped a bit and Hope suggested going home.

"It's only 5 o'clock." Letty seemed tired out, although she carried nothing but the umbrella.

"It will take us forty minutes to get home and I want to have dinner ready when Fred gets in." Hope was red-faced from carrying the suitcase and could scarcely keep her voice civil.

"All right, I suppose we can go then," returned Letty ungraciously, while Maggie looked mutinously at Hope's blue serge suit.

A week dragged away and Hope began to wonder if she could stand the strain. Fred had become snappish through fatigue. He was obliged to sleep on two chairs pushed and heaped with cushions. Maggie and Letty occupied the In-a-Dor bed, while Hope slept, or rather stayed awake, on a narrow couch with a rising head piece that gave her a stiff neck.

"Hope, you've been a brick. I'll try and make it up to you later on," Fred's whispered words, as he stood beside his wife on the porch one night just after their guests had gone to bed, were a revelation to her.

Hope made no answer beyond squeezing his hand reassuringly. She had never before realized that her impatience with the two sisters had been chiefly because of her jealousy of them. Letty was old and harsh and Maggie was a silly girl, but they were only episodes in life. Fred was her man, and it was up to her to see that he was happy. That was her job just as much as it was to see that he went to work well-fed and with his clothes mended. "I guess he doesn't care about having them descend on us any more than I do, but he wouldn't be disloyal enough to mention such a thing even to me. I might have guessed it and made things easier for him," she thought, with poignant self-reproach. "He would not be such a good husband if he were capable of being unkind to his nearest relatives."

The next morning she remarked to Maggie: "You like my blue serge suit so well that I don't see why you don't make one."

Maggie regarded her petulantly. "You know perfectly well that I can't sew anything with any style to it."

"I was going to suggest," went on Hope smoothly, "that I would cut it out and help you with it, if you like. Then you could wear it going home. It would be so much more becoming than that black frock you wear."

"Why, Hope"—the wife had never before seen the rather dull girl look really interested or pleased; she always drew unfavorable comparisons between what she saw in the city and her own town, fearing that Hope would think she was dazzled by the city life; now her blue eyes sparkled—"will you show me how to make it look like yours? I'd do anything for you if you'd make me look a little better."

"Hope is not trying to make any exchange with you, Maggie." Letty spoke with her usual gruffness, but there was a speculative look in her eyes as she stared at Hope. "Betsides, what does it matter how you look?"

"It matters a good deal to me," returned Maggie.

"The next few days passed almost pleasantly. Maggie insisted upon doing the cooking and dishwashing, so Hope could get along with the suit. The change of work rested Hope's nerves. Letty, too, seemed more satisfied and went out for little walks in the vicinity while the young hostess and her guest sewed and chatted.

"Hope," remarked Letty as they stood in the station waiting for the train to take them back, "I never liked you before; I always felt that you were too dressy and citified. You've been real good to us, and"—here her gruff voice softened—"you've made a different looking child out of Maggie. I almost believe," she twinkled, "that if you'd taken me in hand young enough you might have made me look like something. I want you and Fred to come home next summer for his vacation, and I believe I can promise you a real good time."

Fred has listened to the speech with no less astonishment than his wife. "Hope," he said when they had waved a last good-bye to the gaunt old lady and the eager-faced Maggie, wearing her blue suit, "I didn't think you could possibly give Letty such a pleasant time that she would speak like that. How do you do it?"

Hope looked rather taken aback at his frank words. "I used to be jealous of your relatives, I guess; at first we always resent "in-laws," but one night I realized that they must be made the best of, just as we do with many other facts of life. You were the only one who mattered to me and I determined to make them happy, so that you would be pleased. The queer part of it is"—Hope stared speculatively into her husband's interested face—"that just as soon as I tried to honestly give them a good time I began to like them. I'm anxious now to go and visit them and see the places where you played as a boy. Other people are only episodes to me, at least, but my husband's happiness is important."

"You're a wiz, Hope. Maggie looked like a regular girl, when you got through fixing her hair and showing her how to dress. Why don't you try your hand on Letty next summer?"

Hope sensed the amazed relief that lay under her husband's bantering rejoinder, but all she said was: "I feel capable of getting Letty to wave her hair and wear a white frock. Do you dare me?"

OLD FRIENDS.

As down the slope a pilgrim wends, where every bramble scores him, he rather dreads to meet old friends—their conversation bores him. Few gaze upon him and exclaim: "You're looking hunkydory! You have the same old stalwart frame, your locks are far from hoary! Your step is bold, your back uncurved, you still are spry and handy; you certainly are well preserved, you surely are a dandy!" Few talk in such a pleasant strain when on the pike they meet you; your aspect seems to cause them pain, and with a sigh they greet you. "And so you're bald," they grimly say, "who once had raven tresses; and your complexion, sallow-gray, your breaking-up confesses. And you are bent, oh Gaffer Jones, you're doped with pills and lotion; we hear the creaking of your bones when they are set in motion. When last we saw you, years ago, you were the living wonder, and you could lay the fighters low, and pin the wrestlers under. You hobble o'er the paving stones, your face is most forbidding; your knees are spavined, Gaffer Jones, your feet are always skidding." The pilgrim, in his weary walk, would have no old friends present, for that's the way old comrades talk, and it's a way unpleasant. — Copyright by George Matthew Adams.

Fashions for Americans

Chiffon velvet and printed chiffon are combined in this frock.

Black or navy chiffon velvet would be smart for the frock shown in the sketch, the sash and lower part of the sleeves to be made of printed chiffon in contrasting color. A frock of this type is sufficiently "dressy" to be suitable for any afternoon affair, and yet simple enough so that it may be made at home and not be a very costly garment. Chiffon velvet in any of the popular rust or brown shades would be lovely for such a dress, and the sash and transparent sleeve sections may be of plain or printed chiffon or of lace.

These straight line dresses hold their own regardless of the many flared effects that have been introduced, and unquestionably they are becoming to the majority of figures.

A great many of the straight silhouette dress both of wool fabric and of silk or velvet have matching capes, some reaching little more than hip length, others being three-quarter length, and some long enough to cover almost entirely the dress they accompany. The fabric used in an exceptionally smart tailored outfit of this type recently seen was a dark wine-colored duvetyn. The dress was as simple and as straight lined as the one shown in the sketch, had a colarless round neck and full length sleeves that flared a trifle. A string belt held the frock at the waist line and the cape was full length and circular, with a scarf collar of self fabric.

With furs so much cheaper this season than they have been for years, a dress with matching crepe assumes particular importance. The cape may be worn on mild days and discarded in favor of a fur coat or wrap when the weather demands a warmer garment, and the price of an extra cloth coat may be saved.

MOTHER!

Your Child's Bowels Need "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even a cross, feverish, constipated child loves its "fruity" taste, and mothers can rest easy because it never fails to work all the sour bile and poisons right out of the stomach and bowels without griping or upsetting the child.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation. (Adv.)

CALOMEL IS A DANGEROUS DRUG

Next Dose May Salivate You, Loosen Teeth or Start Rheumatism.

Calomel is mercury; quicksilver. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate. (Adv.)

"REVOLUTIONS NEVER TURN BACKWARD."

Frank H. Simonds is a serious and takes himself as seriously as the New England Puritan of the vintage of 1660. This is his latest: "For seven years we have been on the brink of a general catastrophe. The danger is not over, but it may be if the Washington conference is a success." Frank H. Simonds is a historian as well as a reader of history. If he knows anything, he should know that the world has been on the onward march since its early beginning. It's not going to take a back step or retrograde in order to vindicate the prophecies of a mere man. Man at his best is an insect. He comes and he goes. He makes footprints in the sand of time and the footprints disappear as fast as they are made by the human atom with a conceit that is appalling.

William Gibbs McAdoo is an advocate of the abolition of navies. He would lift a collossal load of taxes from the backs of suffering humanity and release for benevolent purposes all the wasted energies and wealth involved in the maintenance of huge naval establishments. There is a practical dreamer. Some day his dream will come true.

It takes all the grace and charity the peoples of Europe can muster to feel right toward Americans since the politicians of this country rejected the peace agreement which was born in the pure mind of the greatest leader our nations has ever known.—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth.

Mr. John Bull, speaking through his delegates to the arms conference, has accepted the Hughes principle but sidestepped the Hughes plan. To be exact, the shadow is beautiful, but the substance is a bit distasteful. Old school diplomats are the sharks of civilization.

There are fifty leading crop counties in the forty-eight states of the Federal Union. Texas has four—Ellis, Fannin, Lamar and Williamson, with Williamson given first place. This will do to start it.

Lawton is facing a gas shortage. Send for former Mayor "Bill" Davis, of Fort Worth. He will fix it.

A Kansas idealist calls for the Golden Rule for nations. A striking evidence of a faith that is sublime.

All thoughtful people want limitation of armaments and war outlawed.—President Harding.

Albany is one of the republican strongholds of America. Publisher William Barnes is a republican boss. He held the reins for twenty-two years. Theodore Roosevelt many times denounced Barnes as an unfit and when Roosevelt denounced a man he meant it. New York democrats captured Albany the other day and with it every municipal office in sight. They increased their legislature representation by twenty-three. Boss Barnes got his. There is a Waterloo in the life of every man but it was a long time coming to Boss Barnes. There will be a Waterloo in the life of Mayor John F. Hylan. He will get a gubernatorial or a presidential bee later along and then his feet will hit the ceiling.

Theodore H. Price, of New York, says disappointment over the new Republican tax bill was chief among the causes for the Republican setback in the November elections. His verdict is that the effect will be salutary if the house shall be made more considerate of business when it comes to deal with the senate proposals, It is up to congress to do something. Congressional elections are coming in 1922 and there are more independents in America today than ever before in the history of politics.

Wealthy members of the Methodist church who persist in living lives contrary to the discipline of the church, were invited to get right or get out, when the report of the committee on the spiritual state of the church was adopted by the Central Texas Conference at Cisco. In addition to dancing and card playing, the report of the committee condemned mixed bathing at Lake Worth, Galveston and other pleasure resorts in the state. There is always something to doing.

Federal Judge James C. Wilson opened court in the city of Fort Worth Monday. He had before him 250 violations of the Volstead act, 85 violations of anti-narcotic law and several Mann act violations. When Democratic senators joined hand with Republican senators to put away the last vestige of the rights of the states they reduced federal judges to police court recorders. Regardless of this, there should be law enforcement all along the line.

Normal peace between the United States and Germany has at last been established and the politicians of the senate required three years time after the signing of the armistice to establish it. A commission of business men would have established peace in less time than three weeks. There is a vast difference between the movements of practical business men and professional politicians.

Georgia has 206,875 tenant farmers; Texas has 232,308 tenant farmers. There are 6,500,000 from operators in America and 2,500,000, or 38.5 per cent, are landless. Farm tenancy is on the increase in America and census figures show that it has increased 61 per cent since 1881. What was it that Henry George said, "The man who owns the land owns the people."

"The Tribune believes that the time has come for Senator Culberson to retire," says the editor of the Amarillo publication. The Tribune believes that the time has arrived to elect a western man to the senate and Congressman Lucian W. Parrish is the man. This is the Amarillo contention: "The growing importance of the western half of Texas demands that we have at least one man in the senate who knows and understands the problems and needs of this section." There is going to be a merry political row the coming year.

According to the state labor department of Oklahoma, there are ten thousand less oil field workers than in 1920. Does this carry with it greater efficiency on the part of those who are working?

Some people live to a ripe old age, and some have brakes that won't hold.

Some of the old boys however can cut monkey-shines without mon..' glands.

The land is safe so long as the majority of husbands call their wives "Mother."

The chief fault in the complexions you see is that they are too good to be true.

All these spirits who talk to mediums say they are happy, and it may be that hell isn't as black as it has been painted.

An Opportunity for the Millionaire
By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

It seems to be the working out of destiny that the surplus of wealth accumulated should be disposed of by millionaires.

Every generation amasses more wealth than it needs. The idea of this surplus being handled by the government as the representative of the collective people is as yet a socialistic dream. At present the sustenance of our institutions and the wherewithal for propagandas of progress must come from individuals.

Millionaires are not very imaginative. They are creatures of custom. They bestow their gifts, therefore, almost entirely upon existing institutions.

When a man dies and leaves $50,000,000 he usually, if he is benevolently inclined, donates it to universities, missionary societies, libraries, churches, and the like.

This is good. There is no question but what it is better than the old plan of using one's fortune to endow a family of noble idlers.

But the trouble is that institutions grow old. Very many of them are senile. And instead of helping along the welfare of mankind, they distinctly impede it.

There is one direction which is hereby recommended to all millionaires who may be looking about for some way to use their money for the best interests of the human race.

And that is, to endow The School Republic. The School Republic is simply a movement to begin the improvement of the human race at the place where it ought to be begun, that is, with the child.

We have an institution now called the Public School, which is vaster and more potential in its possibilities than any other institution in the world.

The Public Schools have more to do with determining the future of the nations and of mankind than any other organization.

And it is very largely in the grip of the worn-out idea of autocracy.

Schoolrooms are little Prussias and school teachers are little Kaisers.

What children ought to learn and to be drilled in from the kindergarten to the last year in the university is above all things Self Government.

The School Republic is a movement to teach Self Government to children.

It is supported and favored by those who believe in Democracy, not only with their mouth but clear down to the soles of their feet.

It is the only movement that is utterly and 100 per cent Democratic.

The School Republic proposes to make every school a little replica of the United States, to show the children how to elect their own officers, how to make their own laws and how to obey them.

It proposes to drill the children in Democracy and in Citizenship so that when they come out of school they will not despise politics; but will be trained and enthusiastic politicians, equipped to govern themselves, to take an interest in public affairs, and by means of the education that they have received to make this nation not a collection of poor boobs, managed by shrewd office-seekers, but in all reality a government "of the people, by the people and for the people."

Do Not Despair
By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

In these times it is difficult to be an optimist. Looking about, one finds on every side abundant reason for pessimism.

The high hopes raised by the victory of the allies in the world war seem as far from realization as ever. Peace has not brought with it the longed-for international concord.

To the world war have succeeded minor wars in many parts of the earth. Elsewhere hates and animosities between nations give threat of war to come.

The ennobling spirituality and the self-sacrificing patriotism gloriously in evidence during the heat of combat are by no means so perceptible today. Instead one discerns all too plainly an insistent materialism, a rampant selfishness, a sordidness that is appalling.

Getting rather than giving is the present-day watchword. Profiteering, by wage-payers and wage-receivers alike, raises its ugly head more boldly.

Pleasure is sought at any cost. Not "How can I serve?" but "How can I amuse myself?" is the demand of multitudes. While millions of people starve, millions of others dance.

Yet do not give way to despair.

In the eternal scheme of things the after-the-war welter of greed and callousness may be a necessary prelude to world betterment. Assuredly it would seem well designed to force in upon men a poignant conviction of the need of abolishing its creator, war. And the abolition of war is in truth a first step indispensable to real progress.

Nor have greed and callousness completely destroyed all sense of spiritual values.

Service of the noblest sort still is rendered by many. There are generous givers as well as grasping getters. Real patriots yet are to be found, leaders with vision.

Soon or late the people, purged of their follies, cured of the materialism which brings its own bitter disillusionment, will rally about the standard-bearers of true prosperity. Of this we may feel confident, else must the world go mad.

And world madness is a thing inconceivable. Why was mankind at all, if not to grow in spirituality and good sense? Is evolution to have chaos as its culminate?

Despite all seeming, hold fast to moil of to-day is but an incident. Tomorrow will be brighter.

Watching the Parade
By JOHN PILGRIM

By JOHN PILGRIM

Pop Barrett has begun to smile aga'. Those unpleasant up-and-down grooves have come out of his cheeks. He has fattened up—not much, because fat on Pop Barrett would produce the effect of a knot in a fishline—but somewhat. He looks acts, and talks happy.

"And what is the budding thought?" I asked him. "Second childhood or young love?"

"Neither," said Pop Barrett. "I've sunk the works in an annuity. Nowadays nobody is wishing for me to die."

I think that Pop had grown morbid. Maybe his liver had been cutting up rusty. It is my conviction that more ill's are occasioned in this world by livers that mis-fire than by drink, matrimony or heavy navies. Anyhow, Pop thought that his children were just standing around waiting for the old gentleman to cash in.

"They make all their plans," Pop used to groan, "with reference to their Dad's last will and testament."

Well, they're perfectly human, of course, those children are. Knowing that Pop was fairly warm, and that he must die sooner or later, and that he could by no possibility hide his cash in his coffin, it is only to be expected that they more or less candidly took these facts into consideration. Pop did himself when he was a youngster and his father owned those big farms down on the river. When I first went into the business I realized that if—I was decent enough to say "if" to myself—my father were to die I'd have more capital to work on. All of us who have or have had a chance to inherit have speculated on that chance. No use lying about it. We can't fool ourselves.

"But I got unhappy about it," said Pop. "My kids didn't want me to die. They hoped I'd live forever. But I had got warped and ornery, and I thought I saw the ghoul-look in their eyes every time I wheezed in the morning. So I sunk the works in an annuity, and we're all happy."

The funny thing is that the kids were as well pleased as Pop Barrett. Most of us are pretty decent after all.

Strategy by George Cohan.

Dialogue between umpires and players, by George Cohan.

Additional dialogue by George Cohan.

Entire production under personal direction of George Cohan by arrangement with George Cohan.

Game starts promptly at 2:15. No persons coming after this hour will be seated until the end of the first inning.

Carriage calls may be left with the groundkeeper.

Upon arriving within the ball park fans will kindly look around and observe the exits.

In case of fire, riot, rain, or a very bad ball game, walk (do not run) to the nearest exit. (Per order of the fire commissioner by arrangement with Mr. Cohan.)

The management requests that any incivility on the part of usherettes, box office attendants, or doormen, be reported to the management.

Attention of fans is called to a smoking room under the grandstand.

Kindly refrain from applauding the players in tense moments, as it diverts their minds from the work.

Players will acknowledge applause by bowing only; under no circumstance shall a player step out of his part to make a speech (except to the umpire.)

The management desires to call the attention of fans to radical improvements inaugurated for the new season as follows:

A handsome proscenium arch has been erected over the pitcher's box at great expense, and after a careful inspection of drawings by the world's greatest architects and artists.

The electric light in front of the home plate are of new idea and will aid the umpire to see it more clearly and without resorting to a whiskbroom.

A powerful spotlight has been erected directly behind the pitcher's box and will be thrown upon any player deserving it.

Attention is also called to the fact that bags have been abandoned on the bases and baby-grand pianos put there instead. They give tone to the diamond and will be played by the Three (Count 'Em) Mayonnaise Sisters while the teams shift from field to bat and vice versa in each inning.

Patrons are requested not to leave the game until after the final curtain. The last inning is frequently the best one.

Immediately after the big show there will be a gr-r-r-r-rand concert. The winning pitcher will appear in person in checked suit, spats, and pearl derby. He will sing through his nose, dance, and tell seven funny stories fresh from the Traveling Men's Club.

(Note—Mr. Cohan guarantees an all-star cast for each and every game. On Wednesdays and Saturdays he will appear himself, playing third base and catch at one and the same game.)

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS
By M. JESSIE LEITCH

GETTING READY FOR SLEEP

"I think you should sleep tonight, dear," said the woman who was caring for her sick mother.

"The bed is smooth, and if you should need an extra blanket you can reach this one and pull it up. I'll spread it over the foot of the bed. You've had your medicine, and your nourishment, and the window is down from the top. There is a bell on the table beside you. Ring if you want anything."

And dropping a dutiful kiss somewhere in the region of her mother's cheek, Mrs. Green went off to bed. She did not believe in "fussing" over the sick, and she had done what the doctor had ordered. Moreover, she did not consider that her mother was seriously ill.

Nor was she. But the elderly woman lay silent for some time after her daughter had closed the door.

Little Annoyances Irritating

She wanted to read her Bible. True, it lay on the table beside her, but her glasses were across the room, on the dresser.

The old lady always washed her face and hands and brushed her teeth before she went to sleep at night. Perhaps her daughter had forgotten. She looked wistfully at the washstand.

Then the door opened gently and Olive, her half-grown granddaughter, entered.

"I thought I might get some wash water for you, dear," said the young girl. "I remember how I loved being prepared for sleep when I was ill in the hospital last year! My nurse used to call it 'putting me to bed,' in spite of the fact that I was already in bed."

Moving swiftly, with soft steps, the girl brought to the bedside a basin of warm water, soap, tooth paste and tooth brush, and a hand towel, as well as a bath towel.

She placed a chair at the foot of the bed, drew her patient to the side of the bed and loosened her nightgown at the neck.

Taking Care of Grandmother

Placing a towel under the old lady's chin, she washed and dried her face, neck, and ears.

Then she washed her hands, placing them in the basin.

Next, she put paste on the moistened tooth brush, held a small receiving basin under her grandmother's chin while she herself, manipulated the tooth brush, rinsed and gargled her throat, and lay back refreshed upon the pillow.

Then, turning the bedspread and blankets over the foot of the bed and the chair she had placed there, the girl rubbed her grandmother's back with cool, fragrant powder, braided her hair, turned her pillows and remade the bed.

And sleep for the weary patient was very near when, her task completed, the little home nurse placed a pair of glasses on the Bible and turned the night lamp low.

CHATTERER AND SAMMY JAY MAKE UP

When Chatterer the Red Squirrel heard Sammy Jay say that he was going straight to the Green Forest to tell Shadow the Weasel that Chatterer was living in the Old Orchard a great fear filled his heart. He forgot his quarrel with Sammy. He forgot his greed for all the corn in Farmer Brown's corn-crib. He forgot everything but his terrible fear of Shadow the Weasel. It was because of Shadow that Chatterer had left the Green Forest to live in the Old Orchard. If Shadow should find him there he didn't know what he could do or where he could go. He knew that Sammy Jay meant just what he said, for though it would be a dreadful thing to do people do dreadful things when they are angry, and Sammy Jay was very, very angry, indeed. He had already spread his wings when Chatterer spoke.

"Please don't do that, Sammy Jay," he begged, "I—I—I didn't mean all the bad things I have said."

Sammy Jay's eyes snapped. He saw right away that Chatterer was very much frightened, and he knew that in the future so long as Shadow the Weasel was anywhere around Chatterer would be so afraid that he would do anything Sammy might want him to. You see Sammy Jay is very sharp.

"Am I any more of a thief than you are?" he demanded.

"No—o—o," replied Chatterer slowly as if it were the hardest work to say it.

"Will you play any more tricks on me?" asked Sammy.

"No," replied Chatterer more promptly this time.

"Wel, I'll think it over and make up my mind in the morning," said Sammy. "Perhaps I will and perhaps I won't tell Shadow where you are living. I'll think it over."

Now, Sammy knew perfectly well that Chatterer wouldn't sleep a wink that night for worrying. Already he had made up his mind not to tell Shadow, for like all the other little meadow and forest people he hated Shadow. But, of course, Chatterer couldn't know that. He had so made up his mind, and a great fear that Sammy might tell clutched his heart.

"If you'll promise not to tell Shadow where I am you—you are welcome to all the corn you want at Farmer Brown's corn crib," said Chatterer in a very meek voice.

"Indeed!" replied Sammy. "How very generous of you, seeing that it doesn't belong to you, anyway, and I have just as much right to it as you have."

"And—and—well, I'll help you get it," continued Chatterer, his sharp wits working their hardest to think of some way to get Sammy to make that promise.

"How?" asked Sammy suspiciously.

"Why, when you can't get it between the cracks I'll bring some out for you and hide it in the stone wall where you can find it," replied Chatterer. But in his heart he said that he would hide it so that Sammy would have to hunt a long time to find it. It seemed almost as if Sammy read that thought, for, cocking his head on one side, he said:

"I'll promise not to tell Shadow if you'll promise to get me corn whenever I want it and put it just where I tell you to."

Chatterer didn't like that idea at all, but what could he do? He thought it over so long that Sammy Jay spread his wings as if he was going to start that very instant for the Green Forest.

"I promise!" cried Chatterer hastily.

And so these two scamps of the Green Forest made up and planned how they would live all winter on Farmer Brown's corn.

NEXT STORY: CHATTERER HAS TO KEEP HIS PROMISE.

The Daily Story
IN-LAWS

Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

Hope's brows knitted as she watched her husband read his letter "It's from Letty, isn't it?" she asked

"Yes, she's coming to visit us, with Maggie They want to do a lot of shopping, and——"

"Oh, dear, just as I counted on having things easy, after housekeeping." Hope almost groaned.

Fred colored "I should think my sisters would be free to visit our house," he began stiffly.

"Our two-room fold-up flat, you mean," retorted Hope "We haven't room for company."

"Well, they'll be here at 3 o'clock," he returned, folding the letter, instead of, as usual, tossing it over for her to read. "It is too late to head them off, even if I wanted to do so."

Hope finished her brakfast in a miserable silence. She knew that she had acted badly, but she also knew that the period of their visit would be a nightmare. Letty disapproved intensely of her sister-in-law, and made no secret of the fact. Maggie, the younger, admired Hope's smart clothes, but felt that she ought to buy similar ones.

"Shall you meet them or must I leave my work?"

Hope crimsoned. "Of course, I'll meet them, Fred. I'm sorry I spoke as I did, but——"

"The truth is you dislike my people. I can only hope that they will not stay long." And Fred went out, closing the door with an extreme gentleness that upset her more than a spirited bang would have done. Then she would have felt she had a right to be angry, whereas now she was ashamed.

Repentantly Hope set to work and baked and cooked all through the day, so that she would be free the following morning to pilot her guests about downtown. At 2 o'clock she set out, looking very trim in a blue serge suit.

"Oh, so you did meet us, I thought Fred would make an effort to come to the train," Letty's manner was injured, but Hope had determined to be cheery.

"Fred is very busy now. He would have loved to have come, but I thought if you were not too tired we could go in and have a chocolate and then look about through the stores," she said easily. "Would you like that?"

"Well, I am tired, but as we can only stay two weeks I suppose we might as well begin to do for the Dorcas society, and Maggie has been teasing for some new clothes. All right. You can take this suitcase and I'll carry the umbrella."

Hope's heart sank at the mention of the length of the visit and she detested carrying things, but she held out her hand for the bulgy suitcase. "There we can check the suitcase and umbrellas here," she said as they entered a large store, "then we will be free to run about."

"No, indeed. I don't trust my suitcase to those careless-looking boys. They might get things mixed." Letty glared at Hope.

They shopped a bit and Hope suggested going home.

"It's only 5 o'clock." Letty seemed tired out, although she carried nothing but the umbrella.

"It will take us forty minutes to get home and I want to have dinner ready when Fred gets in." Hope was red-faced from carrying the suitcase and could scarcely keep her voice civil.

"All right, I suppose we can go then," returned Letty ungraciously, while Maggie looked mutinously at Hope's blue serge suit.

A week dragged away and Hope began to wonder if she could stand the strain. Fred had become snappish through fatigue. He was obliged to sleep on two chairs pushed and heaped with cushions. Maggie and Letty occupied the In-a-Dor bed, while Hope slept, or rather stayed awake, on a narrow couch with a rising head piece that gave her a stiff neck.

"Hone, you've been a brick. I'll try and make it up to you later on," Fred's whispered words, as he stood beside his wife on the porch one night just after their guests had gone to bed, were a revelation to her.

Hope made no answer beyond squeezing his hand reassuringly. She had never before realized that her impatience with the two sisters had been chiefly because of her jealousy of them. Letty was old and harsh and Maggie was a silly girl, but they were only episodes in life. Fred was her man, and it was up to her to see that he was happy. That was her job just as much as it was to see that he went to work well-fed and with his clothes mended. "I guess he doesn't care about having them descend on us any more than I do, but he wouldn't be disloyal enough to mention such a thing even to me. I might have guessed it and made things easier for him," she thought, with poignant self-reproach. "He would not be such a good husband if he were capable of being unkind to his nearest relatives."

The next morning she remarked to Maggie: "You like my blue serge suit so well that I don't see why you don't make one."

Maggie regarded her petulantly. "You know perfectly well that I can't sew anything with any style to it."

"I was going to suggest," went on Hope smoothly, "that I would cut it out and help you with it, if you like. Then you could wear it going home. It would be so much more becoming than that black frock you wear."

"Why, Hope"—the wife had never before seen the rather dull girl look really interested or pleased; she always drew unfavorable comparisons between what she saw in the city and her own town, fearing that Hope would think she was dazzled by the city life; now her blue eyes sparkled —"will you show me how to make it look like yours? I'd do anything for you if you'd make me look a little better."

"Hope is not trying to make any exchange with you, Maggie," Letty spoke with her usual gruffness, but there was a speculative look in her eyes as she stared at Hope. "Besides, what does it matter how you look?"

"It matters a good deal to me," returned Maggie.

"The next few days passed almost pleasantly. Maggie insisted upon doing the cooking and dishwashing, so Hope could get along with the suit. The change of work rested Hope's nerves. Letty, too, seemed more satisfied and went out for little walks in the vicinity while the young hostess and her guest sewed and chatted.

"Hope," remarked Letty as they stood in the station waiting for the train to take them back, "I never liked you before; I always felt that you were too dressy and citified. You've been real good to us, and"—here her gruff voice softened—"you've made a different looking child out of Maggie. I almost believe," she twinkled, "that if you'd taken me in hand young enough you might have made me look like something. I want you and Fred to come home next summer for his vacation, and I believe I can promise you a real good time."

Fred has listened to the speech with no less astonishment than his wife. "Hope," he said when they had waved a last good-bye to the gaunt old lady and the eager-faced Maggie, wearing her blue suit, "I didn't think you could possibly give Letty such a pleasant time that she would speak like that. How do you do it?"

Hope looked rather taken aback at his frank words. "I used to be jealous of your relatives, I guess; at first we always resent "in-laws," but one night I realized that they must be made the best of, just as we do with many other facts of life. You were the only one who mattered to me and I determined to make them happy, so that you would be pleased. The queer part of it is"—Hope stared speculatively into her husband's interested face—"that just as soon as I tried to honestly give them a good time I began to like them. I'm anxious now to go and visit them and see the places where you played as a boy. Other people are only episodes to me, at least, but my husband's happiness is important."

"You're a wiz, Hope. Maggie looked like a regular girl, when you got through fixing her hair and showing her how to dress. Why don't you try your hand on Letty next summer?"

Hope sensed the amazed relief that lay under her husband's bantering rejoinder, but all she said was: "I feel capable of getting Letty to wave her hair and wear a white frock. Do you dare me?"

OLD FRIENDS.

As down the slope a pilgrim wends, where every bramble scores him, he rather dreads to meet old friends—their conversation bores him. Few gaze upon him and exclaim: "You're looking hunkydory! You have the same old stalwart frame, your locks are far from hoary! Your step is bold, your back uncurved, you still are spry and handy; you certainly are well preserved, you surely are a dandy!" Few talk in such a pleasant strain when on the pike they meet you; your aspect seems to cause them pain, and with a sigh they greet you. "And so you're bald," they grimly say, "who once had raven tresses; and your complexion, sallow-gray, your breaking-up confesses. And you are bent, oh Gaffer Jones, you're doped with pills and lotion; we hear the creaking of your bones when they are set in motion. When last we saw you, years ago, you were the living wonder, and you could lay the fighters low, and pin the wrestlers under. You hobble o'er the paving stones, your face is most forbidding; your knees are spavined, Gaffer Jones, your feet are always skidding." The pilgrim, in his weary walk, would have no old friends present, for that's the way old comrades talk, and it's a way unpleasant. — Copyright by George Matthew Adams.

Fashions for Americans

Chiffon velvet and printed chiffon are combined in this frock.

Black or navy chiffon velvet would be smart for the frock shown in the sketch, the sash and lower part of the sleeves to be made of printed chiffon in contrasting color. A frock of this type is sufficiently "dressy" to be suitable for any afternoon affair, and yet simple enough so that it may be made at home and not be a very costly garment. Chiffon velvet in any of the popular rust or brown shades would be lovely for such a dress, and the sash and transparent sleeve sections may be of plain or printed chiffon or of lace.

These straight line dresses hold their own regardless of the many flared effects that have been introduced, and unquestionably they are becoming to the majority of figures.

A great many of the straight silhouette dress both of wool fabric and of silk or velvet have matching capes, some reaching little more than hip length, others being three-quarter length, and some long enough to cover almost entirely the dress they accompany. The fabric used in an exceptionally smart tailored outfit of this type recently seen was a dark wine-colored duvetyn. The dress was as simple and as straight lined as the one shown in the sketch, had a colarless round neck and full length sleeves that flared a trifle. A string belt held the frock at the waist line and the cape was full length and circular, with a scarf collar of self fabric.

With furs so much cheaper this season than they have been for years, a dress with matching crepe assumes particular importance. The cape may be worn on mild days and discarded in favor of a fur coat or wrap when the weather demands a warmer garment, and the price of an extra cloth coat may be saved.

CALOMEL IS A DANGEROUS DRUG

Next Dose May Salivate You, Loosen Teeth or Start Rheumatism.

Calomel is mercury; quicksilver. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

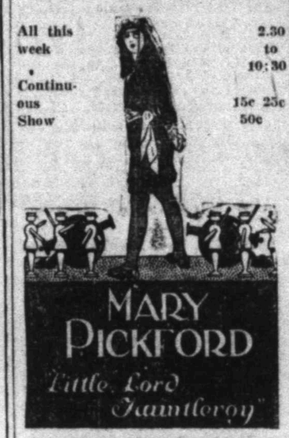

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate. (Adv.)

PESEK BARRED FOR ALL TIME FROM MAT GAME IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Local promoters of last night's wrestling bout between John Pesek of Nebraska and Marin Plestina, Serbian, have been ordered by the state athletic commission to hold the Nebraskan's share of the purse. Pesek was disqualified for rough tactics and forever barred from wrestling activity in this state.

Plestina was awarded the first fall on a foul after 11 minutes and 10 seconds of wrestling when Pesek ignored the referee's warnings to desist from his savage attack. The Nebraskan continued to gouge and butt Plestina and at the end of 24 minutes and 4 seconds Plestina was awarded another fall.

Members of the athletic committee then overruled the referee and ordered the match resumed until a legitimate fall was gained. Pesek again resorted to gouging, the bout was stopped and the decision awarded to Plestina.

"SWIM AND GROW BEAUTIFUL." ADVICE GIVEN TO GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN BY FAMOUS UNIVERSITY COACH

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Swim and grow beautiful is the advice of Coach Tom Robinson, for eleven years aquatic instructor at Northwestern University, to his co-ed pupils. If, when a woman passes the prime of youth, she would indulge in swimming as an exercise, less cosmetics would be necessary to retain her beauty.

To support his theory, Coach Robinson today cited a long list of famous women from Venus down to Mary Garden and Annette Kellerman. Natural beauty of features goes with a well rounded, perfectly developed body, he said. The average so-called beautiful face seen on the streets will not stand the test of swimming, water being fatal to Milady's make-up.

A well developed, slender waist line is a requisite in beauty, Robinson said, and swimming will bring about this without the aid of any boresome setting up exercises or other gymnasium work.

If girls wish to obtain gracefulness and conqueror being awkward, diving is the thing, Robinson said.

"If you wish to become beautiful, swim and swim systematically," said Coach Robinson, who has been swimming coach at Northwestern for several years. He has been successful in developing championship swimming teams. Under his guidance, Northwestern has won thirty-five out of forty-one dual meets and six conference championships in eleven years. He has had hundreds of women and children in his classes and watched them develop physical and facial beauty.

"When we speak of the wonderful beauty of Venus, we are admiring the perfect physical lines as well as the facial features," Robinson said. "In a beauty contest the judges take into consideration height, weight, correct posture, and well-shaped hands and feet and good general development. A beautiful face is usually the result of a beautiful, well-rounded body. Mere facial beauty so often seen on the street is the result of much painstaking camouflaging with powder and paint. This worldly beauty is very easily erased by a dip in the pool or surf.

"A hollow chest is a very good sign of under-development and tends to mar the physical charm of a girl no matter how attractive and beautiful she may otherwise be. To correct this failing, then, I advise the breast stroke, because the outward movements used are excellent for developing a full chest, erect shoulders and a straight back. As respiration is required with each stroke one develops a regular breathing which can be forgotten immediately after the swimming exercise is concluded.

Swimming is a good weight reducer as well as a weight developer. A slender waistline is a requisite in beauty, and swimming will bring about this result without the aid of any boresome setting up exercises as one must perform in a gynasium. In other words, we have but to perform the act of swimming correctly which is a good amusement and a pleasure, and physical perfection is brought about incidentally. Swimming has the advantage over other athletics in that one is being water cooled and does not have to be bothered with the intense heat which accompanies other forms of athletics.

"To attain the best results, swimming should begin in childhood. The child who learns to swim when but a few years of age is sure to develop all parts of the body equally. Annette Kellerman called one of the most perfectly formed women in the world, has been a swimmer most of her life, and attributes her form partly to regular swimming. She still swims systematically in order to retain her attractiveness. Mary Garden, director of the Chicago Opera company recently made the statement that she swam a mile a day during the past summer at Monte Carlo. This was done to keep in a healthful condition. Our leading stars in movieland take daily dip and the result is that they are healthy, beautiful and have well-rounded muscles in every part of the body.

"The position of the body in the water is one of the most difficult parts to learn in swimming. All swimming is done in a suspended position with the water acting as the sole support, and as this position is different from that used in other athletic activties, it is hard for the beginner to become adjusted to it. In swimming for speed, it is necessary to obtain the co-ordination of the arms and legs and as the swimmer is taught this in the beginning, it becomes natural to adjust one's breathing to the movements of the limbs.

"Fancy diving is a very good way in which to develop agility. In fact, it requires more quick movements than almost any other sport. If you wish to conquer the habit of being awkward, girls, get in the swimming pool and learn to dive. Three sessions weekly of from thirty to forty-five minutes. Each are sufficient to give one a necessary amount of exercise. Staying in the water too long must be guarded against for the strength of the body and the heat units will be drained. Swimming should not be indulged in when water is colder than sixty-five degrees. Before entering the pool, one should take a shower and finish off at about seventy degrees. Take several deep breaths before entering the water and in this manner the circulation will be stimulated.

Jimmy Zinn, Former Spud, One of Five Pirates Reported in Trade Market

The open season for baseball trading, now with us, finds Farmer Barney Dreyfuss with his good old three-spring loaded full of ball players he'll like to swap for better, but not for worse.

From the Smoky metropolis we get the rumor that Dreyfuss has already decided on five players he will dispose of in trades if he can make satisfactory deals. Two of the five players are vets. Three are youngsters. The vets are Walter Schmidt, catcher and George Whitted, outfielder. The youngsters are Pitcher Jim Zinn, Third Baseman Clyde Barnhart and Second Baseman Cotton Tierney.

Barney's reason for getting rid of the two old boys is to decrease the amount of temperament and "back talk" on the club roster. Barney apparently feels that he can gather new material that will do him more good than the three young players, too, although the work of all three last year drew comment all over the league.

Whether Dreyfuss will find much interest in Schmidt and Whitted isn't known. Both are old, whatever else may be said of them. There are no clubs now looking for veterans. The general cry, for once, is for new material. But the Pittsburgh chief ought to hear from several owners regarding the three others.

Zinn is credited with winning seven and losing six games for the Pirates last season, a percentage of .538. Tierney broke into 117 games and batted at a .301 clip while fielding in brilliant style. Barnhart played in 124 games and while his batting didn't come up to that of Tierney he hit consistently and fielded well.

Schmidt caught the majority of the Pirates' games and Whitted cavorted in the outfield in 108 contests. Both batted around .280, which wasn't much in the batting rampage of 1921.

Dreyfuss, it is known, is trying hard to tear Milton Stock away from the Cardinals, and the wise ones figure he has better than an even chance to make a trade.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

Again Electra faces the big test, and again Edens' battlers will fight for the gridiron reputation of Wichita county—and again Wichita Falls has been selected as neutral territory on which to settle a championship. What kind of a team will the Panhandle send here to face Electra's eleven? You know as much about it as I do, brother, perhaps more; all I know is that Childress has defeated every opponent in her state section in decisive fashion; that in A. S. Douglas she has a hustling, brainy, aggressive coach. I talked a bit with Bill Coffey, the Childress quarterback, Monday night, but the little field general of the Panhandle boys is not a communicative youngster. He LOOKS like a player, I'll say that for him; one of those well-built little fellows, with a firm jaw and a clear eye—quiet and modest—the type that becomes a slippery little cyclone when you turn him loose on the gridiron.

Although the few reports that have reached here concerning the Childress team have referred to it usually as "light and fast," Superintendent Dinsmore of Electra told me that the Panhandle squad will outweigh Electra about three pounds to the man—but that tiny difference in weight means nothing. Amarillo, for instance, has a high school eleven this season averaging 170 pounds, but Amarillo was no match for Childress.

It is my opinion that the North Side high school eleven of Fort Worth showed a greater power than Electra in the recent clash here which the Wichita county lads won by a 14-13 score—but Electra earned the honors and ranks as a better team because of eleven quicker working "think tanks"; because Edens has taught his players to follow a football like a hound on the trail and to use their heads as well as their bodies. This knowledge of the game is a big asset, and it may play a big part for Electra again in the battle Saturday against Childress.

Generalship and team play is also going to count heavily in another football game soon, or I am very wide of the mark. I refer to the impending struggle on Thanksgiving day between the Texas University Longhorns and the Aggies. The Longhorns are overwhelmingly the favorites, rightly so—and yet some of you old grads may remember the 13 to 0 lacing the Farmers handed to Texas U. in 1915 when the Longhorns were favorites by odds that ran as high as 4 to 1. Man for man there is no question of the superiority of the Texas University eleven; it is a team of brilliant individual players. The Aggies have, perhaps, three men who will compare favorably with their opponents as individual players—Wilson, end; Sanders, halfback, and Murrah, guard. Their playing thus far this year stamps these three as all-Southwestern timber, but three men cannot beat eleven, all of whom are mighty good. The Farmers have a steady, hard-working eleven, however, and they realize that their one hope lies in team play and head work.

Many sport writers have been calling attention of late to the fact, which is not a fact, that the Big Ten conference championship this year will probably result in a tie, granting that Ohio State and Iowa finish their schedules without defeat. They are wrong, for Ohio State, champions of 1920, will also annex this season's title if she continues victorious; until O. S. U. is licked, the title will remain with the Buckeyes.

There is precedent for my assertion, for in 1915 Illinois was conceded conference honors as undefeated champions. In that year Illinois, champion of 1914 was held to a 3-3 tie by Ohio State; while Minnesota won all her games—and yet the title remained with the Illini because they had not been defeated since walking away with the championship the preceding year.

I guess the good old days of "normalcy" (that's a rotten word) must be coming back, at that. Normal folks like athletics, and surely there was never a keener interest in athletics in Wichita county than 1921 has shown. Baseball, professional, semi-professional and amateur, had a big year; the football season has been a ripsnortin' success—and now even the business women of the city are playing basketball; not talking about it, but actually turning out two evenings a week to play the game. Just wait until that big irrigation project is completed, brother—you'll see a big, green paradise around Wichita Falls; everybody with some kind of a tiny, comfortable, little bank account; good times, and always a steadily growing interest in clean, healthful sports.

AS HORSESHOE TOSSER, OLD BOY POURS IT ON 'EM

KELLERTON, Iowa, Nov. 15.—Frank E. Jackson, national champion horseshoe pitcher of the world, has been ringing pegs for more than 40 years.

The game of horseshoes, he says, is like everything else—there being at least two ways in which it can be played, a right way and wrong way. For 28 years, Jackson played the game wrong and then he discovered that there was a scientific way to ring the iron pegs with greater accuracy. So, since 1909, Jackson has been pitching a scientific game of horseshoes.

One of the first things Jackson discovered when he learned the science of the game was his control over the "open shoe." He says he believes he is the first man to learn the value of the "open shoe."

Jackson has held the national championship since 1914, winning it the last time at the Minneapolis tournament.

In practicing or training for a tournament, Jackson usually plays several games every day for a period of several weeks on a good standard court.

Jackson is as enthusiastic over his horseshoe as many golfers are over their game on the green. He says the most exciting game of the Minneapolis tournament was played between himself and a 13-year-old Twin City youth, Freddie Hay. The score ended 40 to 50, Jackson pitching 40 ringers and 15 double ringers, while the youngster pitched 40 ringers and 7 doubles in the 50-point game. Jackson, in winning the tournament and the title, played fifteen final games, winning every one. He scored 391 ringers and 110 doubles ringers.

"Old Man Jackson," as he is known in Kellerton, is the father of two sons, Corrol and Hansford, who are nearly as good at horseshoe pitching as their father. The sons are doubles champions of Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

He issued a standing challenge, expressing a willingness to play anyone.

The local country club today has the finest putting greens in Texas. I haven't seen the greens on any other course in Texas, but that makes no difference—Bermuda grass greens could not be in finer condition than the local greens are right now; if a player "blows" a putt, he has himself to blame not the green. I don't know who should receive the credit, the greens committee, the workmen on the course or Pro Kendall; or all three—but the players certainly appreciate the splendid putting greens.

Members of the Women's Golf association of the club have started turning in their nine-hole scores on which their handicaps will be based for the big December tournament. Each entrant is required to turn in five scores of nine holes each, and the club professional will then arrange the handicaps.

Lost—"Doc" Hampshire's golf clubs.

Also Lost—John O'Donohoe and his first round match in the Burns-Staniforth tournament.

Found—An unpayable lie just to the left of the tee on No. 11.

Wanted—Another "praying caddy" like Mr. Miller's. He prayed on No. 18 and Miller made a birdie.

Major George B. Fuller says there's a conspiracy among the caddies never to have any change, and that five of 'em altogether during the past week owe him $1.80.

The luckiest thing that ever happened to one golfer was the annihilation of his favorite driver. It shattered to bits; he HAD to buy a new one—and the new driver, contrary to all the established rules of golf, saved him a hard-fought tournament match. If he ever gets to the finals, he says he's going to let a steam roller run over his whole bag full the night before the match!

Advice to Golfers: Whenever possible in leaving Tee No. 7, try to walk through the woods directly toward the green. It's No Man's Land in there, and the dead golfs lie around on the leaves right plentiful—last man through that neck o' woods reported finding six dead Silver Kings, and only three of 'em bore the tombstone stamp of identification.

Leo Haney a few days ago shot the second nine in—well, never mind. I'm not going to tell. You keep that handicap just as long as you can, Leo, ol' hawss!

MICHIGAN HAS GREAT POINT SCORING TEAM

ANN ARDBOR, Mich., Nov. 15—As a point winning machine, the University of Michigan varsity this year is the greatest since 1917, a comparison of football records shows. In the five games played by Michigan so far this season a total of 131 points have been scored by the Wolverines. This exceeds the season total for either 1918, 1919 or 1920. The total in 1918 was 96, in 1919 it fell to 93, while in 1920 it stood at 121.

Michigan's present team made its greatest number of points in any one game in the tilt with Case, when 64 were obtained. Thirty-four points were run up against Mt. Union, thirty against the Aggies and three against Illinois. The blanking given Michigan by Ohio State this year was the first administered to the Wolverines since 1919, when Chicago was on the long end of a 13 to 0 score. Points scored against Michigan this year total 14, all of them being obtained by Ohio State.

Yost's greatest point winning team, that of 1902, when 644 counters were scored. But twelve points were scored by opponents in the eleven games played. Other heavy scoring teams were those of 1901, when 550 were run up, the 1903 eleven that counted a total of 565, and the 1904 aggregation, whose points totaled 567. The 1917 squad was the heaviest point makers in recent years, 304 being scored during the season.

Record News Readers: Laugh With Us

Some Chest-Nuts

A Yorkshire costermonger met his friend. The friend was convulsed with laughter, and it was some time before anything could be drawn from him.

At last he explained the cause of his merriment:

"You would 'ave larfed, I've just been round to see old Bill 'Iggins. W'en I got there 'is 'ouse was all alight. 'E lives in a pretty tall 'ouse. 'E's on the third floor. There 'e was, a-dancing about on the window sill in 'is nightshirt. We 'ollers up to 'im, 'Jump, Bill, we've got a tarpaulin to catch yer!'

"But 'e 'adn't got the pluck to jump. 'E runs to the next floor. We shouts to 'im to jump again. But no! Up 'e goes, as the flames mount 'igher, until 'e gets on the roof. 'Jump, Bill, we've got a tarpaulin to catch yer!' we calls again. And he jumps."

Here the storyteller was overcome with laughter for some minutes, but at last he managed to gurgle:

"And the funny part about it was—we 'adn't got no tarpaulin!"

Hamilton Footlites was an actor who was quickwitted and resourceful. At a certain performance he leaned on the rail of his seagoing yacht soliloquizing about love, while the blue waves rolled and heaved splendidly, each blue wave being a super under a roll of canvas.

But the waves were threadbare here and there, and suddenly one of them ripped. A head bobbed up in the midst of the heaving sea and stared around in bewildered fashion.

Ham Footlites silenced the audience's titters with one stern glance.

"Man overboard!" he yelled in stentorian tones.

Then the super, managing to withdraw his head through the hole in the waves, disappeared. Ham Footlites heaved a stormy sigh.

"Another victim seized by the relentless sea, alas!" he said.

A professor who likes to delve into the history of Assyria, Babylonia and Rome, was served with a soft-boiled egg for breakfast.

He cracked it open with a knife, sniffed suspiciously, and then fell into a deep fit of meditation.

"A penny for your thoughts, dear," said his wife.

"I was thinking, my dear," replied the professor, putting the egg cup a little farther away, "that a few months, or even a few years, a few months, or even a few years, velopment of an empire—but an egg—"

A negro employed at one of the Hollywood movie studios was drafted by a director to do a novel comedy scene with a lion.

"You get into this bed," ordered the director, "and we'll bring the lion in and put him in bed with you. It will be a scream."

"Put a lion in bed with me!" yelled the darky. "No, sah! Not a-tall. I quits right here and now."

"But," protested the director, "this lion won't hurt you. This lion was brought up on milk."

"So was I brung up on milk," wailed the darky, "but I eats meat now."

A dandy entered an optician's shop and asked to be shown some eye-glasses. He was given a pair, but finding them unsuitable, he remarked: "What'll you do, as these don't suit?"

"Well, I'll give you a stronger pair."

"Well—er—er—and if they don't suit?"

"Then I'll give you a stronger pair still."

"And if they fail?" inquired Bertie, "what would you advise me to do?"

"Oh!" snapped the irate salesman, "get an intelligent dog and a yard of string."

Precaution.

"Look here, Sancho Panza," exclaimed Don Quixote, "you have a most irritating way of giving my finest idealisms to a flat, unpoetical interpretation."

"I have tried to serve you faithfully."

"That's all right. But there's one thing you must promise me. Don't you ever attempt to write my biography."—Washington Star.

The opening was 7 points lower to 2 points higher, near months being relatively easy but there was a demand for December on the decline to 8.30 or about 45 points from the recent high record, and the general market soon did better. December sold up to 8.45, while March advanced from 7.94 to 8.10 and the close was within a few points of the best showing net advances of 5 to 10 points. Sales were estimated at about 28,000 bags. Stocks

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Stock market prices reflected fresh unsettlement today although the disturbances of the previous session, which were attributed to the disarmament proposals seemed to exert less influence.

Spares of companies which are likely to suffer reduction of operation from a naval holiday made partial recoveries.

Foreign oils were under constant attack beginning with the European group and later extending to Mexicans, the latter being affected by rumors that the Mexican government intends to add a heavy impost to its present export tax. More than a half score of high grade rail issues made gross gains of one to four points. Sales amounted to 700,000 shares.

The release of large sums in connection wtih the November 15 liberty bond interest payments caused call rates to drop from five to four per cent on the exchange at midday and the minimum figure was shaded on prime collateral in private transactions.

In foreign exchanges sterling rose to its highest level in several months.

Strong investment conditions were denoted by the enormous oversubscriptions to the $50,000,000 New York telephone six per cent bonds and the $10,000,000 Rio Grande issue. Total sales of bonds (par value) $17,275,000.

Cotton

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—An opening advance in the cotton market was followed by a break which carried January contracts off from 16.85 to 16.18 or within 10 points of the low level touched at the close of last week. The market steadied on renewed covering and rallied pretty sharply in the last half hour with January closing at 16.44 and with the general market closing steady at a net advance of 3 to 10 points.

The market opened firm at an advance of 24 to 37 points on buying promoted by the firmer ruling of Liverpool and continued optimism over the prospects for limitation of armaments. This carried prices back to nearly the best figures touched on the rally of yesterday morning but there was some disappointment over the showing of the census report on consumption and the advance seemed to meet scattered southern selling. The market soon eased in consequence, and while trading became comparatively quiet, prices sagged off during the middle of the day under scattering liquidation accompanied by complaints of a poor trade demand and apprehensions that the scattered southern selling here might be the forerunner of spot liquidation.

December broke from 16.90, the early high point to 16.35 and March sold off from 16.85 to 16.23, or 20 to 23 points below last night's closing figures, after which there was a spurt of covering accompanied by talk of a better feeling in the stock market. Last prices showed rallies of 20 to 25 points from the lowest on most positions, the census report showing domestic consumption of 494,745 bales for October, was under the forecast recently published but compared bullishly with September's report of 484,647 and last year's consumption of 401,325 bales.

Port receipts today 33,566. Import stocks 1,588,385. Exports 22,382, making 1,975,207 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

By Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 15.—Fairly wide advances were made in the prices of cotton in the early trading today but in the latter trading the gains were lost and replaced by net decines. From advances 35 to 42 points over the close of yesterday, the market fell to declines of 18 to 41 points below. The close was two points up to 18 points down, net on the session. December traded as high as 16.25 as low as 15.42 and closed at 15.65.

The early gains were due to a much better Liverpool than expected and to the bullish figures on American mills for October from the census bureau. Consumption of 494,745 bales, however, was disappointing to some traders who had in mind the forecast of 533,000 bales issued by a private bureau several days ago, finally the comparisons of 484,647 bales consumed in September and 401,325 in October of last year were lost sight of and enough selling came on the market to check the upward trend.

Reports that Lancashire spinners were voting on a proposition to reduce their running time to 24 hours a week increased the selling and further weakness developed following the report that Germany had announced that it would be unable to meet reparation payments early next year. The near months were weaker than the distant and this was said to be due to hedge selling of both December and January.

Registered ships on the oceans and seas of the world number 33,206, with a tonnage of nearly 62,000,000.

Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Reported sales of new Argentine wheat at 6 cents a bushel under the cost of United States wheat had a depressing influence today on the wheat market here. Prices closed unsettled 1-2c net lower, with December 1.04 to 1.04 1-8 and May at 1.07 1-8 to 1.07 1-4. Corn finished unchanged to 3-8c higher, oats down 3-8@1-2c and provisions varying from 2 1-2c decline to 50c advance.

Right after the start, the wheat market showed a decided leaning to the bear side. Covering by shorts here, however, led to something of a rally at the last. Brisk export calls for corn with sales totaling 1,500,000 bushels for today and yesterday helped to give firmness to corn. Oats though reflected the weakness of wheat.

Provisions fluctuated in line with hog values. All deliveries of lard and ribs touched the lowest prices yet this season, but subsequently rallied.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK.

UNIVERSITY CLUB TO BACK HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETICS; URGE LARGER ATTENDANCE

Recognition of the fact that Wichita Falls has an exceptionally strong high school football team, which demonstration made up in enthusiasm whatever shortcomings the reception may indicate in tardiness, was the feature of a rousing program at the weekly luncheon of the University club Tuesday noon at the Kemp hotel. The entire high school team was present and the individual members were introduced by Captain Leo Haney.

High school football and theletics were the only things discussed at this meeting and following talks by Coach Harry Viner and C. E. Danheim, athletic director of the high school, a movement was started to get behind the locals with larger crowds at the remaining game and to buy sweaters for the letter men of the team when the season is over.

E. H. Gipson, started a "buy a sweater" movement to give the letter men some reward for the hard work during the season, with an offer to buy one sweater, was joined by other members and later a committee was appointed to canvass the members for the remaining sweaters.

A tentative date with Polytechnic High of Fort Worth has been arranged for Thanksgiving Coach Viner said in his talk, and if this date is filled he urged the club members to do everything in their power to secure a record attendance at Spudder park. "The boys deserve a world of credit for fighting against the handicaps and building up a strong team" Viner said. "They have gone out every afternoon to practise on the rocky ground and have stuck to their purpose of having a winning team," he said.

C. E. Danheim, athletic director of the high school, spoke on general athletics, with emphasis on the handicap under which the local "Hi" athletes work on account of lack of funds and luke warm public support. He stressed athletics as being important for the all around development of the man and said that good clean athletics promote clean living, self reliance and mental ability.

Mr. Danheim closed with an appeal to club members, who he said had always showed a keen interest in high school athletics and affairs, to support and urge other citizens to support all coming athletic events.

Musical entertainment was furnished by two vocal solos by Mrs. T. C. Brownell, accompanied by Mrs. O. E. Nichols.

Albert Ellis, chairman of the day, made a short talk at the conclusion of the program on the good that results from athletic competition and urged every one to give the high school athletes more support than they have hitherto done.

Next week's program committee was announced by President Ewing to consist of Judge Townsend, Raymond Myers and Paul W. Larkin.

Missouri Solon Implicated in Alleged Graft

By Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 15.—Attorney General Barrett this afternoon announced a recent investigation revealed that two deputy beverage inspectors had been defrauding the state and that a state representative was involved in the matter. The three are from St. Louis.

The inspectors, J. P. Reeds and L. G. Adams, have made affidavits admitting their alleged wrongful practices, Mr. Barrett stated. Reeds admitted, according to the attorney general, that he had been dividing his salary of $150 a month with Representative Edward G. Davidson.

Adams, the attorney general continued, stated he would sign a blank expense account form and give it to Davidson at the same time giving him another piece of paper, a record of expenses actually incurred by him and that Davidson paid him the latter sum.

Reeds, Mr. Barrett declared, is employed by a shoe company in St. Louis 48 hours a week, although his expense accounts would indicate "he traveled to all manner of places."

Although Adams' expense account showed he used at least $160 monthly traveling for the state, Adams admitted his traveling expenses never exceeded $30 except during one month, Mr. Barrett said.

Davidson, the attorney general asserted, explained the two owed him money and had been paying it, but denied knowledge of their alleged wrongful acts.

FRENCH "BLUEBEARD" ASSUMES ROLE OF "GOOD SAMARITAN"

By Associated Press.

VERSAILLES, Nov. 15.—Henry Landru, alleged "Bluebeard of Gambais," on trial in the Assizes court here charged with eleven murders, today assumed the role of Good Samaritan in his answer to the charge of murdering Mlle. Andree Bateley, his seventh alleged victim. The others include nine elderly or middle aged women and one boy.

In regard to Mlle. Bateley, Landru said he merely had befriended the comely girl whom he found weeping and out of work, with two francs left. He told the court he, therefore, could not have murdered her for her money.

"SCANDAL," COMEDY, MAKES BIG HIT AT WICHITA THEATER

Clever acting on the part of Gene Lewis and Miss Olga Worth coupled with perfect support from other members of the company makes "Scandal" the offering this week at the Wichita theater a success.

The three-act comedy of Cosmo Hamilton, playing this week, is put over with snap and a punch. "Scandal" is a play that presents an opportunity for real acting and the premier roles are well taken care of by Mr. Lewis and Miss Worth. "Scandal" is not only well played but well staged. The studio scene in the first act in an exceptionally fine setting, while the bed room scene in the second act and the lodge in the third act deserves considerable credit. "Scandal" will be presented the balance of the week with a bargain matinee on Wednesday and Saturday.

"Madame X" Next Offering of the Stock Company

Next week Miss Olga Worth will have one of her favorite parts when she appears in the title roll on "Madame X." This is without a doubt the strongest play ever written and Miss Worth will be seen at her very best. Gene Lewis also has an excellent part. In fact, you will see the entire company at their best. The scene investitue of "Madame X" will be adequate and up to the high standard, always provided by the Lewis-Worth players.

Crow, widow of Louis Crow who died from the effects of a knife wound inflicted at Lorena October 1, during a Ku Klux Klan parade, would affect the bond of Sheriff Bob Buchanan, the suit being against the sheriff and his bondsmen.

Head Delegate Italy Praises U. S. Proposal

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Senator Schanzer, head of Italy's armament delegation, speaking at today's session of the conference with respect to the American proposals, said.

"The time has come and this conference has been called not for general reasons and for mutual advice, but for action.

"You (Secretary Hughes) proved at once that you mean to carry out your suggestion into practical execution.

"The first impression made by your statement concerning the limitation of naval armament is one of great sincerity, great force, great courage. You stated clearly and unhesitatingly to the conference and to the public opinion of the entire world the question of the limitation of naval armament as concerns especially the great naval powers, and you did it with precision of facts and figures, thus affording a solid basis for discussion.

"We shall not consider the technical side of the question which concerns especially the great naval powers. We only wish to express in the name of the Italian delegation our great satisfaction in the proposals for general order.

"We think that your proposal is the first effective step toward giving the world a release of such nature as to enable it to start the work of its economic reconstruction.

"In respect to Mr. Balfour's reference to the question of French and Italian naval forces, may I be allowed to say a few words.

"I think it rather difficult to separate the question of Italian and French naval armament limitation from the general question of the limitation of naval armaments of the world. Certainly as you have stated, Mr. Chairman, in your address, the question concerning the great naval powers must be considered in the first place, and you have stated that the United States proposes that this matter be left for the latter consideration of the conference. So we wish and feel sure in accordance with your statement that the French and Italian naval question will be considered by the conference before concluding the question involved in your proposal.

"In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I express in the name of the Italian delegation the most fervent wish that the conference, taking your proposal as the working basis, may lead to a result which would be extremely happy not only for the powers directly interested but for the entire world."

ELEVEN TEMPORARY JURORS ARE CHOSEN IN ARBUCKLE TRIAL

By Associated Press.
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—The end of the second day in the manslaughter trial of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle saw eleven temporary jurors in the box and the general interest in the jury selection dwindling. Five of those selected were women. There was nothing in the session to give them more interest than the ordinary criminal action.

Arbuckle's attitude was of such deep apparent dejection that he remained almost aloof. He did not consult with counsel and at the recess periods remained by himself.

Senator Smith Predicts World Cotton Shortage

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—Prediction of a world shortage of cotton next summer was made in the senate today by Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina in a speech analyzing the statistics on cotton consumption for October, made public by the census bureau. Should the rate of consumption for the ensuing months equal or exceed that of October, he said, there would not be a bale of American cotton in existence by next August 1.

In the course of his speech, Mr. Smith disgressed to discuss what he said was the failure of congressional action intended to aid the farmers, asserting that it seemed the only hope for the agricultural interests, lay in the formation of their own cooperative selling agencies and the establishment of their own banks. He added that relief legislation thus far had been converted each time into "breastworks behind which the interests opposed to the farmers entrenched themselves to destroy the farmers' profits.

Exports and domestic consumption of cotton for October aggregated 1,366,000 bales which, according to the senator, constitutes a record for monthly deposition of the product.

"At that rate," he continued, "the exports and consumption between last August 1, and next August 1, will be more than 6,000,000 bales and the best estimate of the visible supply that can be obtained, shows only about twelve and a half, or 13,000,000 bales."

A carry-over of about five million bales was estimated by Mr. Smith while this year's crop he believed would not exceed seven million bales. He made his figures liberal, he added, but found no way to bring the two totals anyway near together.

Mr. Smith reviewed the many "cries" which he said had forced cotton prices down and told the senate that all of the "menacing things foreseen by the trade, including the rail strike" had been put out of the way, yet the price remained low. He declared, however, that the country never would see cotton sell as low again.

NEW YORKERS SOON TIRE OF "ROMANTIC" LIFE IN MOROCCO

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Disillusioned as to the vaunted romantic life of soldiers of fortune, 83 men, all Latin-Americans except three who were American war veterans, returned today from Spain where they went several months ago seeking adventure as members of Spanish foreign legion.

The men said the reality of life in the Spanish army opposing the Moors in Morocco did not fulfill hopes raised by reading the prospectus. None of the party joined the Spanish army and all except three returned in the steerage quarters of the Spanish royal mail steamer Monte Video.

BULLINGTON AND SILK TO DRILL IN PANHANDLE

SOAKING RAIN ENDS DROUTH OF 4 MONTHS

A soaking rain, ranging from one and one-half to two inches, accompanied by a brilliant electrical display, fell over Wichita county, and the section between Seymour and Wichita Falls and this city and Burkburnett late last night, breaking a drouth which especially west of here was becomming serious. The downpour, starting about 9 o'clock in Seymour, reached this city at 11 o'clock and lasted for an hour, according to reports from the local railroad dispatchers.

No rain was reported north of Wichita Falls on the Fort Worth & Denver, nor on the Northwestern north of Burkburnett, by local railroad stations, although a general cloudy condition and indications of rain were prevelant.

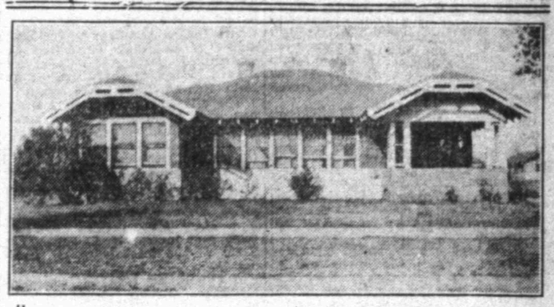

This welcome breaking of a long dry spell is expected to relieve conditions in West Texas, especially on the cattle ranges, which were suffering for lack of water. No news was received by the local railroad offices late last night of any rain west of Seymour, although the cloud came from the west and it is considered likely that the rain was general in that section.

In Wichita Falls the sudden downpour caught many people unprepared and drenchings were common. The rain here was accompanied by some hail, but no damage was reported.

Letter follows," his message read.

Friends here are particularly interested in the changed decision in connection with the recent gathering of rather influential politicians in Dallas almost coincident with the time that Ousley expected to make his formal announcement of intention.

COMMITTEES PLAN DETAILS FOR CAMPAIGN

Final preparations for the organization of committees, selection of team captains and other features of the Wichita Falls united charities, drive which is to be launched November 28, featured meetings of the general committee Tuesday at the Chamber of Commerce.

The selection of speakers for the campaign and the arrangements for their speaking dates are expected to be completed late Monday or early Tuesday. The organization committee is headed by B. F. Johnson and the speakers' committee by R. E. Shepherd.

The various details of the campaign are being looked after by J. W. Boles, of the Salvation Army.

A total of $28,500 is sought for all charities of the city and committee officials are confident that the quota will be oversubscribed in the three days time allotted for the workers.

The finance committee of which C. W. Snider is chairman is scheduled to meet Thursday.

OPEN SCHOOL FOR MEXICANS

Following considerable investigation and at the request of a number of local Mexicans, a special school for Mexican children was opened Tuesday morning in a frame building near the baseball park. A total of 45 students were enrolled on the first day and, according to the announcements of school officials, it is expected that 60 to 75 will be in attendance within a few weeks.

The instruction is in charge o. Mrs. P. M. Ferguson, who has had considerable experience as a teacher of Mexican children. She has this year been assisting some at the senior high school in teaching the Spanish classes.

The building in which the Mexican children have been installed was formerly built as a dance hall by local Mexicans. It was leased by the school board on the recommendation of Superintendent Lee Clark and W. W. Brown, business manager of schools.

It was reported that a number of the Mexican children with excellent minds were being handicapped in their efforts to keep abreast of other children in the local schools, because of their unfamiliarity with the English language.

The classes at the new school are to run only through the fourth grade, after which it is believed that they will find no difficulty in keeping pace with their fellows, who have never heard any language save the English. Teachers also reported that they had found that a good many Mexican children were being kept from school, because of their difficulty in handling the English text books.

Joy for Kiddies and Business for Business Men When Circus Ends Its Season in This City November 28

Here's joy unlimited for the kiddies. The Sells-Floto and Buffalo Bill circus is to end its 1921 season in Wichita Falls on Monday 28 and then spend another day or possibly two here winding up the season's business and shipping the animals and property to Denver to be quartered for the winter.

According to William B. Naylor, general representative of the circus, there is also good news in this announcement for the business men of the city as a total of $43,075 is to be paid out to employes who are to leave the show here and it will also be necessary to purchase some two or three days provisions for the animals as well. In addition most of the employes will purchase winter clothing.

What the disbanding of the circus here already will mean to the business men of the city is pointed out by Mr. Naylor from the facts that some 900 people, 500 horses and a 30-cage menagerie will be maintained here during the time the circus is here.

The management had originally intended to disband the show in Fort Worth, where they appear on November 26, but consented to come here at the invitation of the local Chamber of Commerce. They will arrive on Sunday, November 27 and in all spend at least three days here.

Among the animals which are to be shipped out of the city and which will be provisioned here are announced to include, 500 horses, 9 elephants, 10 lions, 7 tigers, 6 camels, 7 leopards, 14 seals, 90 monkeys and a 6,000-pound hippopotamus.

THIRTY ENROLL IN CHEMISTRY CLASS OF TRADE SCHOOL

Increasing interest is reported in the chemistry classes being started here by Charles Martin of the vocational training board, who is organizing and putting under way the night school for training men and women in various trades and occupations. Fifteen men and women from various oil companies and refineries asked for the formation of the class at the first meeting of the school last week and when the class was called this week, Mr. Martin found thirty ready to enroll. The class is to be instructed by G. A. Harbaugh, science instructor at Senior high school.

Increases are also reported to be coming in regularly in the auto mechanics and other classes, including sign painting and building trades.

Mr. Martin left Tuesday for Austin, but plans to return during the year to give the work some further supervision.

Business Women Entertain for Those Who Aided in Staging "Springtime;" Hear Four Talks

With local business men and members of the caste who took part in the Business Women's club, "Springtime" as special guests, more than 125 were served with a turkey dinner with all the trimmings at the Y. W. C. A. Tuesday evening. Decorations suggestive of Thanksgiving, and chrysanthemums were used.

The social committee of the club including Misses Irma Durnal, Mrs. Ramey Mathis, and Misses Seipelmyer, Ethel McDowell, May Bennett, Frances Brooks, Rheba Gardner, Edna Vogt, Bessie Coger, Bruce Dickson, Ethel Anderson, Eunice Payne, Arnie Smith, Bonnie Marie Morse, Eldora Bunnenberg and Mesdames Grace Higgins, Mildred Parker, Mary Gross and Mason were hostesses for the occasion, and the delicious menu was served by the members of the Girls Reserve club, who volunteered their assistance.

Between courses, B. F. Johnson led several songs from the Rotary club "hymn book," and some of the songs were demonstrated by stunts by the men guests.

Informal talks by Mayor W. D. Cline, B. F. Johnson, W. S. Curlee and Judge B. Y. Cummings followed the dinner, and were features of the entertainment.

B. F. Johnson impressed upon the Business Women the importance of paying their poll taxes, and exercising their right to vote, which he declared would cause them to be better citizens by helping to put the right kind of men in charge of state and national affairs.

Messrs. Cline, Curlee and Cummings gave inspiring talks on the importance of the Business Woman's club in the city, pointing out what it has done for the business girls in helping them to be more efficient in their work, and the general good influence of the association.

After the talks, the regular weekly contest was held, those eligible being members who did not have a vocation this summer, and the prize going to the one who could write the best essay in ten minutes on, "Where I could spend the best two weeks vacation on $50."

The prize, a five ounce bottle of Cody's perfume, donated by Tipton's Drug Store, was won by Mrs. J. T. Carter; W. D. Cline, W. W. Anderson and W. S. Curlee acting as judges. Prize givers for the contests next week will be McClurkan's and the Miller Shoe Store, it was announced.

Another feature which proved unusually entertaining was a short talk by each of the various members of the club who have won prizes during the fall season, in which they told how they won them and the name of the firm making the donation.

The next social affair was announced for December at the Golf and Country club, with Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kendall, hosts.

Miss Durham, director of the cafeteria, was in charge of the dinner. Among the courtesies extended the club were the services of the Chisbee automobile company in helping to transport needed articles to the club rooms.

Among the guests noted were: Mesdames C. R. Hartsook, Joza Dickson, W. W. Silk, Misses Ruth Chandler, Byrl Knickerbocker, Smith, and Mayor W. D. Cline, Messrs. W. W. Anderson, Buchanan, Newton J. Huff, T. H. Friedly, Burton A. Stayton, E. R. Archambeau, W. M. McGregor, K. O. Williams, J. H. Martin, Saul Lebenson, C. Miller, W. S. Curlee, B. F. Johnson, J. J. Kelley, N. M. Clifford, F. C. McConnell, F. F. Riley, W. O. Winston, B. C. Workman, Harold White, Norris Taylor, Carter McGregor and C. F. Carter.

Ferris Hopes Arms Meet Is Successful

Approval of the American attitude on disarmament, as shown by the proposals advanced by Secretary Hughes, and a hope that the real end of the conference, commitment of the powers to a safe and sane naval program with the competitive building feature eliminated, was expressed by Scott Ferris of Lawton, Oklahoma, former congressman, democratic nominee for the senate and at one time chairman of the Democratic national committee.

"Yes, I am in favor of disarmament, just as I was in favor of the League of Nations principle out of which this disarmament question grew," said Mr. Ferris.

Mr. Ferris declined to commit himself on the question of whether or not the terms offered by the United States went too far in meeting the other powers half way, saying that he had lost touch with that nature of naval matters since leaving congress.

Mr. Ferris was here in connection with the Haskell-Hobbs oil interests, of which he is one of the principal directors. He had just returned from Mexia, where the interests he represented have acquired some holdings, and where they are witnessing developments with interest.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE" BY FRED GOSS

—If the letters on a printed page blur or seem to run into each other, an eye examination at the hands of a skilled optometrist is imperative. We will give your vison a thorough test and tell you whether you are near or far sighted or both or if because of an imperfection of the eye an excessive eye strain results. Our service is eminently satisfactory.
