Sri Lankan refugees taken from lifeboats

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — One of the 152 refugees found adrift in two lifeboats off the southeastern coast of Newfoundland said today they each paid about $2,200 to be taken from Sri Lanka to a new home in Canada or the United States.

AP Laserphoto Map

The unidentified Sri Lankan man, who appeared to be in his late 20s, told a volunteer interpreter the refugees each paid an Indian agency the equivalent of about $2,200 each in U.S. dollars

He was quoted as telling the Sri Lankan interpreter that after a 30-day voyage from Sri Lanka, the refugees were put into two lifeboats and left about 11.5 miles off the Canadian coast six days ago.

The castaways — cold, hungry, thirsty and soaking wet — were found floating in fog-shrouded waters six miles off the coast Monday afternoon by three fishing vessels, and arrived this morning aboard the fisheries patrol vessel Leonard J. Cowley.

The name of the mother ship had been scratched off the lifeboats and none of the refugees knew its identity.

Eight of them were taken to hospital after being seen by medical officials and immigration authorities. None appeared to be in serious condition.

The remaining 144 people, including three women and five children, were to be taken to Royal Canadian Mounted Police headquarters for questioning and would be housed at a university dormitory overnight.

Jarrett Letto, manager of Immigration Canada in St. John's, said the refugees indicated they wanted to stay in Canada, but they have not asked for political asylum.

Felix Dobbin, captain of the Beckford, one of three fishing vessels that found the lifeboats, said the refugees told him they were "escaping for their lives."

He said some of the refugees spoke English and told him they didn't have "much choice" but to leave the unidentified mother ship, but he did not know why.

"The lifeboats were packed. I don't know how they stood it for five days. Some were dressed fairly well but not real warm," he said.

He said they told him they were headed for Canada when they were "left to the mercy of the waves," and that they had been adrift in the poorly provisioned lifeboats for five days.

Coast guard spokesman Bruce Reid said he did not know whether the people had been abandoned, or had some other reason for setting out in the lifeboats. "They are in good condition other than the fact they are a bit hungry," he said.

Capt. Gus Dalton, skipper of one of the other fishing vessels — the Atlantic Reaper — said the refugees told him they wanted to go "to Montreal. The didn't know anything about Newfoundland."

He said the youngest refugee appeared to be less than 2 years old while the oldest was a man he estimated to be about 70. Most were wearing lifejackets.

Sri Lanka, an island off India's southern tip, has been torn by a separatist revolt, and tens of thousands of its citizens have sought refuge abroad.

Jack Hanlon, a fish buyer in O'Donnells, said one of the fishing vessel captains told him by radio the open lifeboats were about 30 feet long, had a capacity of 30 to 40 passengers, and that those aboard were soaked to the skin.

One lifeboat had an outboard motor and was towing the other.

Dobbin said three or four of the people were so weak that they had trouble getting into the fisheries vessel.

A spokesman for the Sri Lanka Consulate in Ottawa said Monday he had no information on the incident, but added, "We are very skeptical as to whether they are Sri Lankans."

Dickman de Alwis, assistant secretary of Sri Lanka's Foreign Ministry, said in Colombo today that initial reports from Sri Lankan diplomats in Canada said the refugees were "Sri Lankan Chinese."

County votes to separate sewer lines

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Fed up with overflowing sewage lines caused by prisoners flushing objects down toilets, the Midland County Commissioners Court voted unanimously Monday to separate the prison sewage line from the courthouse sewage line.

The line separation could probably be completed in three weeks, said architect Walter Pate, whose company, Pate & Associates, is overseeing county jail remodeling.

On Aug. 4, the sewer system flooded the County Clerk's office on the first floor and the basement office of Justice of Peace Bob Pine.

The four-day cleanup cost the county about $1,300 and included pulling up carpets to dry them out and fumigating them, said Mel Free, with Unflood Services.

County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry told the commissioners Monday, "I can't tell you what the stress was for the 15 people in my office. We're just now presentable again. But there's no assurance it won't happen again. Something has to be done."

The system overflows when prisoners on the fifth floor flush objects and clothing down the toilets. The line will be disconnected from the courthouse system and pumped directly into a main sewage line.

The courthouse sewage line has overflowed many times, but this was the worst incident, Ms. Cherry said.

"I've been flooded many times, but nothing like last week," she said.

While most records are on microfilm, some still on paper could be damaged by another incident, Ms. Cherry said.

"The quicker you do it the better, your going to save your permanent records," she said.

Commissioner Win Brown agreed, saying, "These records have to be protected. That's one of the main functions of the courthouse."

Pate said he did not know how much it would cost to divert the prison sewage line from the courthouse system.

However, he said the separation could start before other prison construction scheduled to begin in December.

In other action, the commission voted to hire a "housekeeper" to supervise cleaning at the courthouse.

"I go to courthouses all over the state of Texas and this place is a damn disgrace. We can't even get the restroom in my office cleaned," constable Tom McGinnis told the commissioners Monday.

Brown said, "We have contracted with cleaning services and they are not really doing their job. Nothing has been cleaned in literally years."

The cleaning is not getting done, because maintenance people are not supervised at night, Commissioner Durward Wright said.

"We should hire a head cleaning housekeeper and insist that these people do their job or they be replaced," Wright said.

Midkiff EMTs request funding for used ambulance

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Having an accident in Midkiff, can mean up to an hour-and-a-half ride to a Midland hospital.

However, eight Midkiff emergency medical technicians are attempting to cut that time in half with their own volunteer ambulance service.

All they are lacking is an ambulance.

Midkiff EMT Jackie Braden requested Monday from the Midland County Commissioners Court between $4,500 to $9,000 to buy a $24,000 used ambulance.

Midkiff's 700 or so residents currently rely on the volunteer ambulance services in St. Lawerence, Big Lake, Garden City and Rankin, Ms. Braden said.

It takes an ambulance from the closest community 20 miles east — St. Lawerence — up to 45 minutes to reach Midkiff, Ms. Braden said.

Rather than wait for an ambulance, many Midkiff residents take victims to the hospital in a private car.

But this is dangerous if spinal injuries are involved, she said.

"With any kind of spinal injury you need a spinal board. You just cannot shove anybody in a car like that. They may die before you get them to a hospital."

If Midkiff has its own volunteer service, lives could be saved, Ms. Braden says.

Several years ago a Midkiff man had an asthma attack and was transported to a Midland hospital, but died two weeks later from a lack of oxygen, she said.

A local ambulance service, may have saved the man's life by getting oxygen to him faster, she contends.

Upton County Commissioners gave the group about $15,000 and Reagan County Commissioners said they may contribute some money if Midland County does, Ms. Braden said.

Midkiff, about 35 miles southeast of Midland, is located in Upton County near Midland and Reagan counties.

Tests planned for redesigned space shuttle rockets

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Engineers have taken a big step toward resumption of space shuttle flights by developing a rocket engine that should prevent failures like the one that destroyed Challenger, a NASA source says.

The source, a space agency engineer who spoke on condition of anonymity, said tests are planned on a fundamentally redesigned solid rocket engine.

If the engine passes, builder Morton Thiokol Inc. could deliver new engines by December 1987, and shuttle flights could resume as early as spring 1988, the source said.

A presidential commission blamed failure of a solid rocket booster joint for the Jan. 28 disaster that killed seven Challenger crewmembers. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration grounded the shuttle fleet until the design flaw could be corrected.

The source said the engine was redesigned by an engineering team at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., where a news conference on the solid rocket booster was to be held today.

Engineers at NASA and Morton Thiokol will use the new design in a series of rocket model tests. If the design passes those tests, there will be full-scale test firings next year, the source said.

The commission said Challenger exploded because two O-rings became unsealed and permitted superheated gases to burn through the wall of a propellant tank. Fuel and oxidizer from the tank erupted in a fireball.

The NASA engineer said the new design will include a third O-ring and a metal lip that will force the engine joint to remain sealed. He said it also has interlocking insulation to prevent hot gases from touching the rubberized O-ring seals.

Another change, he said, would add a bolt assembly attaching the rocket nozzle to the engine, providing an additional seal for the rocket nozzle joint.

The commission, headed by former Secretary of State William Rogers, determined that Challenger's solid rocket engine failed when pressure within the engine forced a joint to open slightly. This permitted the heated gas to escape the two seals.

By installing a metal lip, the source said, the joint will be held rigid under pressure. If the joint moves, he said, the additional O-ring will cause the joint to seal more tightly.

On Challenger, the rocket engine seals were designed to be activated when pressure surged against them at rocket ignition. Under the new design, said the engineer, the joint is sealed even without the pressure surge.

The Rogers commission also concluded that below-freezing temperatures on the morning of Challenger's launch may have caused the O-rings to lose flexibility, which may have contributed to the rocket failure.

The engineer said the NASA design team has developed heaters for the rocket joint to maintain the temperature even in frigid conditions.

Design teams continue to study four other rocket engine concepts that could be used should tests prove that the primary design does not work.

The engineer said NASA has not decided if the full-scale firings will be in a horizontal position, the way in which the old designs were tested, or in a vertical position, which would closely approximate launch conditions.

U.S., Soviet negotiators close special arms talks

KOTLIKOVO, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Top American and Kremlin negotiators ended two days of special arms talks today with no word from either side on what, if anything, was accomplished.

The U.S. Embassy spokesman, Jaroslav Verner, said the American delegation headed by Paul Nitze, President Reagan's chief arms adviser, went directly to the airport to depart Moscow.

Verner said it was his understanding the delegation did not plan to issue any statement in Moscow on the talks.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said at a news conference in Moscow that the Soviets would not violate the confidential nature of the talks.

"I can say only that we hope this meeting will not end without results," he said. "Let us hope it will give impulse in the fields being discussed — reduction of nuclear armaments."

Both sides have maintained a news blackout on the substance of the two-day discussions, which were held in a government dacha tucked into a large estate about a half-hour's drive south of Moscow.

Asked to characterize the eight hours of talks held Monday, Nitze replied: "They were serious talks. That's all I can say."

Five-year-old hero honored

'The Bright Side'

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — Five-year-old Brent Meldrum, who rescued his 6-year-old playmate from choking to death, was honored for his heroism Monday and received congratulations from the doctor who developed the Heimlich maneuver.

"Thank you," was all Brent said when he grabbed the microphone after receiving the gifts, including a computer from the City Council.

Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, who developed the anti-choking technique, said he was heartened rather than surprised that the young hero learned it from a TV show.

The Heimlich maneuver is so simple to learn that schools should teach it to all children from first grade on and send brochures home to educate parents, said Heimlich, who joined city officials in honoring the boy.

Brent became famous last week after he grabbed Tanya Branden in a bear hug and lifted the 41-pound girl off the floor, dislodging a piece of hard candy caught in her throat.

"This incident points out better than any words can express that it is possible to learn it instantaneously from watching it on TV or seeing a photograph," Heimlich said. "I think it says to us that everyone in the country should know it or we are failing to perform our duties."

The Heimlich maneuver is estimated to have saved more than 10,000 lives in the 12 year since its invention. Choking, the sixth leading cause of accidental deaths in the United States, kills about 4,000 people a year.

Heimlich said the emergency procedure, which involves grabbing a choking victim from behind in a bear hug below the rib cage, differs from other emergency techniques such as cardio-pulmonary resuscitation because it isn't complicated and doesn't require thorough formal training.

When asked whether he saw any sign to support an earlier comment by the chief Kremlin negotiator Viktor Karpov that the Soviets "would do anything" for an agreement on a new superpower summit, Nitze said: "No."

The Kremlin has said it wants some assurance of progress toward an arms control accord before it agrees to schedule another meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Reagan and Gorbachev met in Geneva Nov. 19-21, and agreed to hold a second summit in the United States this year. But no date has been set.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze are to meet in the United States on Sept. 19-20 in what is being billed as an effort to set an agenda for a summit.

That meeting was originally set for May, but the Soviets canceled it after the U.S. bombing attack on Libya on April 15.

The special Moscow talks were getting low-key treatment from the Soviets.

English-language broadcasts of Radio Moscow's World Service reported the Sunday arrival of the U.S. delegation for the sessions. But no mention of the meetings was made in morning editions of Soviet national newspapers Monday or today.

On Monday, Karpov told an ABC-TV crew before the meetings began that the Soviets "would do anything" for an agreement on a summit, then added, "So it depends on our partners."

Karpov stressed the issue of nuclear testing, which has become a centerpiece of Soviet arms control policy and a focus of Kremlin pronouncements on the possibility of holding a summit this year.

"A nuclear test ban is a problem that I think is very important to be solved," he said, speaking in English. "We are for that, so we are asking the Americans to join in non-testing."

The Soviet Union's yearlong unilateral moratorium on tests was due to expire last Wednesday, but the Kremlin hasn't said whether it will continue. The United States has refused to join in the moratorium.

Karpov said the Soviet proposal for a test ban was aimed at speeding disarmament talks and that "the Americans (have) some other attitude to that."

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported Gorbachev as indirectly criticizing the United States in a Monday meeting in Moscow with Tetsuzo Fuwa, the head of Japan's Communist Party.

Gorbachev criticized those who support "power methods of resolving world problems," specifically citing "the unlimited buildup of the arms race" and its spread into outer space, according to Tass.

The remark was an apparent reference to the U.S. Space Defense Initiative, a research project commonly known as "Star Wars" that is studying a space-based missile defense system.

Moscow maintains the program violates the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

Remodeling cost set at $1.9 million

From Staff Reports

Remodeling the Midland County Jail will cost about $1.9 million dollars, architect Walter Pate told County Commissioners Monday.

The costs include $151,000 for demolition, $686,000 for general construction, $330,000 for mechanical, $166,000 for plumbing and $169,000 for electrical

A contractor's mark-up of $375,500 and a contingency fund of $93,500 would bring the total cost of construction to $1.971 million, Pate said.

The county jail must be remodeled to meet Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

The remodeling will increase the jail's bunks from 85 to 104 commission approved bunks. The jail has 101 bunks now, but only 85 have been approved to be used by the state jail commission, said James Riggen, an architect with Pate & Associates.

The firm will submit the jail's design development plans to the commission this week and expect approval within four weeks, Riggen said.

Construction documents should be completed in a month and after they are approved bids will probably go out by the middle of October, he said.

Construction, that may take up to nine months, should begin in the middle of December, Riggen said.

FUNDS

Remaining costs of insuring and maintaining the vehicle would be raised through fundraisers.

Fees may be charged, but just to cover insurance and vehicle maintenance, Ms. Braden said.

Despite the budget slashing going on in Midland county, Ms. Braden says she is confident the commissioners will find some money.

"I do think they can come up with something for something that is this important.

"There are people that have been hurt and they need an ambulance. If one life is saved, then it's worth the amount."

Lynn Mayor Albert V. DiVirgilio presented Brent with a medal of honor from the city. He also received plaques, T-shirts and certificates commemorating his feat, including honors from the Legislature.

Earlier, Brent, who called the emergency technique the "time-life remover," said he saw the maneuver performed on a television rerun of the series "Benson." On Tuesday he is scheduled to fly to California to visit actor Robert Guillaume, who played the TV character, his mother said.

Sue Meldrum said she originally tried to stop Brent from using the technique on his playmate because she was afraid he would hurt the little girl.

Rare congress called to discuss anti-apartheid sanctions, pressure

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The governing National Party called a rare national congress today in an effort to seek unanimity on how to counter anti-apartheid sanctions from abroad and pressure from critics at home.

Party officials doubt the two-day meeting in Durban of about 1,600 delegates will produce new political initiatives, but President P.W. Botha and his Cabinet are certain to outline the government's response to the international campaign for economic sanctions.

The call for sanctions against South Africa has been sparked by apartheid, which by law and custom establishes a racially segregated society in which the country's 24-million black majority has no vote in national affairs.

Under apartheid, the 5-million white minority controls South Africa's economy and maintains separate districts, schools and health services.

Chris Rencken, chief National Party spokesman, said this congress "is necessary to consolidate support, to prevent erosion of support. If expectations are raised overseas of dramatic announcements, that will be misplaced."

Botha, scheduled to speak to the congress today, is expected to seek endorsement for his program of cautious reforms in apartheid, which the far right views as a betrayal of white supremacy and the anti-apartheid movement considers inadequate.

The national congress comes a day after a provincial court stuck down two provisions that permit detentions under the state of emergency imposed by Botha on June 12. The court action raised the possibility that thousands of people could be freed.

Government officials will not say how many people have been jailed under the emergency, but independent estimates range from at least 4,000 to about 10,000.

The news media are barred from reporting names of people held under the emergency decree, as well as from publishing details of security force activities without official permission or reporting statements deemed subversive by the government.

Botha's government reserves the right to appeal the judicial ruling, issued in Durban by a three-member panel of the Natal province supreme court. Anti-apartheid leaders fear the government will try to reverse the decision through executive action.

The National Party congress is only the second since Botha came to power in 1978. The previous session, in 1982, endorsed creation of two new Parliament chambers that brought Indians and people of mixed race into the government along with whites.

Some South African journalists have speculated that Botha would announce plans at this congress to move up the date of national elections, which need not be held until 1989.

Commentators see little prospect of other surprises, however, in part because they doubt Botha would want to risk the impression of making concessions to the anti-apartheid sanctions campaign.

Also, two of the Botha's major reform proposals still are under preliminary review, and he is not expected to disturb those reviews with specific announcements.

One proposal would establish a national advisory council made up of the president and black leaders, to prepare for the drafting of a new constitution that would bring the black majority into the national political system.

Even moderate black leaders have said they will serve on the council only if it has real power and if African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, who has been in prison since 1962, is released and invited to take part.

The other main area of possible reform involves the Group Areas Act, which segregates residential neighborhoods by race.

There has been speculation that individual communities might be allowed to integrate if they choose, but the entire issue now is before the advisory President's Council. Botha is expected to await its report before acting.

Colin Eglin, leader of the opposition Progressive Federal Party, said: "People will be looking to the congress to break the present political deadlock, but we have been disappointed too often to believe that the NP will act boldly. The congress will probably be a domestic housekeeping exercise in which current policies will be put in one tidy basket."

Captain describes castaways' ordeal

O'DONNELLS, Newfoundland (AP) — More than 150 people plucked from two packed lifeboats in the Atlantic off Newfoundland had been set adrift and "left to the mercy of the waves," said a captain involved in their rescue.

Felix Dobbin, captain of the Beckford, one of three fishing boats that picked up the 152 men, women and children on Monday, said a few English speakers among those rescued told him the group was put off a ship after a 30-day voyage from Sri Lanka, an island nation south of India.

He said the people told him they were trying to get to Canada when they were "left to the mercy of the waves" six days ago, and that they didn't have "much choice" but to leave the unidentified ship for the poorly provisioned lifeboats.

Dobbin said another fishing boat, the Atlantic Reaper, called him by radio after spotting the lifeboats by radar about six miles off St. Shott's, a tiny port on Newfoundland's southeastern coast.

Another Canadian fishing vessel, the Mary Theresa, also picked up people from the lifeboats. The 152 people rescued were later put aboard a Canadian fisheries patrol boat, which was headed for St. John's today.

The Atlantic Reaper already had some of the people aboard when the Beckford arrived alongside and picked up 44 more people from one of the unprotected lifeboats in heavy, cold fog, Dobbin said.

"The lifeboats were packed," the captain said after docking in O'Donnells, a village about 18 miles north of St. Shott's.

"A couple could speak English — they told me they left Sri Lanka," said Dobbin.

Thousands of people have fled Sri Lanka because of the civil war there between minority Hindu Tamils and the Buddhist Sinhalese majority.

"They say they were escaping for their lives. They were put off of the ship," Dobbin said. "It was 35 days from the time they left. They were five days in the lifeboats."

Dobbin said the people "were trying to get to Canada, but they didn't know where they were when we picked them up. They hadn't even heard of Newfoundland — only Canada and Montreal."

Normally, a ship's name is painted on its lifeboats, but Dobbin said even that clue was missing.

"The names on the two lifeboats were scrubbed off," he said, adding that he felt the people he spoke to were sincere when they said they didn't know the ship's name.

New Zealand effectively withdraws

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — U.S. and Australian officials said New Zealand has effectively withdrawn from the trilateral ANZUS alliance, but Secretary of State George Shultz said the treaty remained "strong and vigorous."

The Australian delegation on Monday strongly endorsed the alliance in a four-page communique issued jointly with the Americans and indicated unqualified support for the U.S. in its rift with New Zealand.

The joint statement said New Zealand's policies "detract from individual and collective capacity to resist armed attack."

New Zealand, which was not invited to this year's ANZUS talks, has been inactive in the alliance since February 1985 when Prime Minister David Lange announced that U.S. nuclear-armed and nuclear-powered ships would not be allowed to dock at New Zealand ports.

Shultz said the 35-year-old alliance is "as strong and vigorous as ever, if not more so." He characterized the five hours of formal meetings Monday as "a very good and productive day."

"I miss New Zealand," said Shultz. "We part as friends, but we part — on security matters."

Australian officials said they were satisfied there was nothing they could do to reverse the Reagan administration's recent decision to subsidize wheat exports to the Soviet Union and China, both grain customers of Australia.

Australian Foreign Affairs Minister Bill Hayden, in strongly worded remarks earlier Monday, expressed the "genuine outrage" of Australians over the $13-a-ton U.S. subsidy.

"Is this the way the Congress of the United States treats old and firm allies?" Hayden asked. "Does the Congress realize that the tidal wave of protectionism it has unleashed has consequences for regional stability in which both Australia and the United States have vital interests?"

In a news conference after the talks, Hayden said he hoped Australia's protests to the U.S. would "head off any further developments in this direction."

On Aug. 1, the administration announced it was permitting the Soviet Union to buy up to 4 million metric tons of American wheat over the next two months.

The two allies agreed to stand firm against New Zealand, saying its policies on port and air access are harmful to the defense of the South Pacific.

Shultz said U.S. officials had made substantial efforts to persuade New Zealand to change its policies. He said that "in the end New Zealand chose, as it has a right to do, basically to withdraw itself from the alliance by denying port access, and we're sorry about that. I miss New Zealand."

Hayden echoed Shultz's statements, saying his country believes New Zealand's actions are detrimental to defense interests.

The American delegation reaffirmed that it is suspending its security obligations to New Zealand "pending adequate corrective measures." Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said New Zealand requests for military equipment aid will be reviewed more carefully.

The joint statement also said the U.S. and Australia were leaving the door open for New Zealand to return to an active partnership if it ended the ban on nuclear weaponry.

Chilean security finds large Soviet-supplied guerrilla arsenal

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet announced Monday that security agents had found a Soviet-supplied guerrilla arsenal in a Pacific fishing cove with enough explosives "to blow away half of Santiago."

National information Central, the army-led secret police agency, displayed the arms cache and called it the biggest discovered since the 1973 military coup, led by Gen. Pinochet, ousted the elected government of Marxist President Salvador Allende.

The police agency said the arsenal was in a building disguised as a fishing warehouse at Carrizal Cove, 409 miles north of Santiago. It said the cache contained 210,000 rounds of ammunition, a large quantity of U.S.-designed M-16 automatic rifles, some rocket launchers and 30 tons of explosives, including more than a ton of TNT.

Pinochet inspected the arms at the police agency headquarters in Santiago and told reporters, "There are enough arms here to equip a division, that is 20,000 men."

"This shows that I'm telling you the truth, that we are fighting a war," he said. "It's not a shooting war, but there are (guerrilla) actions. Many victims would have fallen. There are 1,300 kilos (2,860 pounds) of TNT here, enough to blow away half of Santiago."

"This means we have discovered the tip of the iceberg. Underneath there are many other things," he added.

The police agency did not say how many M-16s were found, but said they had been captured by communist forces when the U.S.-backed South Vietnamese army surrendered in April 1975, ending the Vietnam War.

All of the supplies had been brought ashore in inflatable rafts from Soviet fishing trawlers, the agency announcement said.

It reported security forces raided the site late last week and arrested three Chileans. One of the suspects was identified as an electrical engineer who the agency said had spent 13 years in Cuba, and another as a medical student. No information was given about the third detainee.

Two small Marxist guerrilla groups are operating in Chile, but the agency did not say which organization it considered responsible for gathering the arms.

Ethiopian famine could happen again

SEKOTA, Ethiopia (AP) — Foreigners and Ethiopians who saved millions of lives by pushing back famine in Ethiopia warn it could happen all over again soon unless aid donors take further steps to prevent it.

Michael Priestley, United Nations coordinator for Ethiopia, put it bluntly:

"The generous response and the compassion it represented will be brought to naught, indeed made mockery, if there is no follow-up to bring Ethiopia back from the brink of famine."

In this town at the edge of Tigray province, oxen graze in thick green pasture that a year ago was the dusty moonscape backdrop to biblical famine.

Men emerge from World Vision and International Red Cross warehouses, staggering under bags of seeds to plant teff, their staple grain.

Teklie Senbetie, 35, has his first crop in the ground for seven years. He survived by begging and doing odd bits of work. His young daughter, Wolete, died last year.

Women who lost children at the notorious camps of Korem and Ibnat now draw water from hand-dug wells and cook donated grain for those who remain in their families.

Kassaway Aweta, 14, was among the children who stared hollowly into the cameras in 1984. Now he is industriously making toys from tin cans and bits of wire and helping in the field.

Relief workers have grown fat cabbages, beets and corn on a demonstration plot irrigated by well water. Nearby, rich stands of rain-fed sorghum shows farmers their fortune may have returned.

The first rains in five years fell so heavily that some roads are impassable troughs of mud. Relief trucks stopped and nutrition deteriorated rapidly, according to a U.N. assessment.

A Belgian air force C-130 shuttles Red Cross food from Asmara to Sekota and drops it, 12 tons at a time, onto the muddy runway.

"Sure people look well and healthy," said Pat Banks of World Vision, which is also to airdrop food until harvest. "But if relief stops, in two weeks' time they will be skeletons."

Across Ethiopia, the harvest cannot be assessed until late October and locusts could wipe out a good crop, said Desmond Taylor, U.N. World Food Program director here.

The rains that broke the drought in Africa also have spawned huge swarms of locusts that devour crops by the ton. Northern Ethiopia is one of the areas in Africa most susceptible to a locust onslaught.

Even in normal times Ethiopia must import up to 500,000 tons of food annually, half the amount rushed in last year. U.N. officials say 6.4 million Ethiopians need extra help through next year.

The Ethiopian Highlands are so badly eroded that any variation in the rains could trigger more famine. In places, 25 tons of topsoil per acre disappear each year.

In western Ethiopia, large pockets of potential famine already worry officials.

"Rehabilitation is as desperate as relief," said Dag Hareide of the U.N. Emergency office, "but it is getting much harder to find the funds for it."

Brother Augustine O'Keeffe, coordinator of the umbrella Christian Relief and Development Association and veteran of the great famine of a year ago, is apprehensive.

"If we are to avoid a situation like what we witnessed last year, there has to be a long-term development program and food-security stocks," he said. "But the level of donations in very small indeed."

The problem is largely ideological. The United States provided a third of the billion dollars in relief aid, but law bars it from giving development assistance to Ethiopia, which has a pro-Soviet Marxist government.

Taye Gurmu, acting director of the government's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission, said in an interview he was thankful for generous Western aid, from private agencies and governments.

"We could not have done it without them," he said. "We have made mistakes, and there is a great deal to do, but we are beginning to get things under control."

More controversial was the resettlement of nearly 600,000 people — often at gunpoint on a few hours' notice — from the impoverished highlands to less crowded lands in the south.

Most Western sources dismiss as grossly exaggerated the estimate of 100,000 deaths which the French group, Medecins Sans Frontieres (Doctors Without Borders), advanced last year.

Dutch tanker explosions in port kill eight, injure 64

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Explosions in a Dutch tanker sold for scrap killed at least eight people and injured 64 others Monday in the port of Kaohsiung, port officials and police reported.

Police said six other workers were missing. They were cleaning grease from the Canari at the time of the explosions and were feared trapped in the burning tanker.

Police said many of the victims, all Taiwanese, were workers on nearby ships also hit by flying metal from the tanker.

The cause of the explosions had not been determined, police said.

In London, a spokesman for Lloyds Shipping Intelligence said the 300,000 ton tanker was hit by an Iraqi missile on Nov. 5, 1985, in the Persian Gulf.

The vessel sustained serious damage and the engine room caught fire, said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The spokesman said the fuel tanks blew up Monday when workers drilled a hole in the ship's side to pump out fuel.

Pakistan floods damaging

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Floods in northern Pakistan have killed at least 38 people, injured 44 and left large areas of farmland under water, a newspaper said Monday.

The Frontier Post reported that 38 people have died this month after unusually heavy rain in the northwest Frontier province. The rain sent rivers over their banks, flooded valleys, destroyed 143 houses and inundated scores of villages and surrounding farmland, it said, quoting figures released by the provincial government.

Much of the northern region is mountainous and remote and reports from the area can take weeks to reach the capital.

Most of the flooding victims died when their houses were swept away by rivers or collapsed under landslides, the paper reported. Cattle and many other farm animals also were killed, it said.

Sudan army repels attack

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The army repelled an attack by rebels on a town in southern Sudan, and inflicted "heavy" casualties on the insurgents, the Sudan News Agency reported.

The official agency's report Monday quoted an army spokesman as saying the rebels attacked the town of Kodok, 45 miles northeast of Malakal, capital of Upper Nile, one of the three provinces in southern Sudan.

Kodok is located on the Nile, and the spokesman was quoted as saying the rebel attack was aimed in part at blocking river transport.

The spokesman did not specify when the attack took place, or give further details of rebel or government casualties. He said the area was now under army control.

Rebels of the Sudan People's Liberation Army took up arms in 1983. They are demanding greater autonomy and economic and administrative reforms.

British ship raised from Delaware Bay

LEWES, Del. (AP) — A British ship targeted nine times by treasure hunters has finally been raised from Delaware Bay nearly 200 years after it sank, but it could be weeks before the HMS deBraak's wealth can be captured.

While archaeologists clean the remains, the salvors who raised the deBraak Monday night plan to spend the next two to three weeks scooping up the sediment beneath the wreck in hopes of finding what they think could be up to $500 million worth of booty.

"The deBraak has come home!" said Kevin McCormick, project manager for the salvage firm, Sub-Sal Inc. of Reno, Nev. "This is the first step in a long process."

About 40 small boats bobbed nearby, ringing their bells while passengers cheered.

According to lore, the deBraak was laden with treasure plundered from Spanish and French vessels in the Caribbean when it sank in a squall in May 1798 as it headed for the Delaware coast.

The deBraak, under the command of Capt. James Drew of the Royal Navy, was a Dutch cutter before it was captured by the British in 1795.

Estimates of the treasure the ship carried range from $5 million to $500 million.

Since the latest salvaging effort began two years ago, about 600 gold and silver coins have been recovered, as well as historical artifacts.

The state of Delaware, which has provided security for the salvage operation, will receive 25 percent of the profits.

McCormick and his crew lowered a 15-ton cradle to the ship on Sunday. Monday night, they lifted what was left of the hull, a 70-foot section of the starboard side and its keel and stern, to the surface by hauling the cradle up with a steel cable attached to a crane.

The deBraak hung suspended from the cable, sihouetted by floodlights, before the salvage crew hoisted it onto a barge to be taken to a warehouse where archaeologists will inspect it.

"Everybody's going to get a good look at it," McCormick said.

Claudia Melson, a state curator, has spent the past year cleaning, restoring and cataloging items already taken from the wreckage.

"I've been keeping inventory and doing basic conservation, which means getting the artifacts into fresh water to get the salt out," said Ms. Melson, who watched as the wreck was lifted above the surface.

"It was very dramatic to see it here at nighttime with all the ghostly qualities the legend deserves," she said.

McCormick and his crew, who located the wreck by sonar, made the ninth salvage attempt on the vessel.

The first was made by the British Navy shortly after it sank.

Although the salvaging will continue, no treasure can be claimed until a federal lawsuit against Sub-Sal is settled.

The suit, against Sub-Sal and its president, Harvey Harrington, alleges breach of contract.

It was filed in U.S. District Court in Wilmington by Worldwide Salvage Inc. of Rhode Island, which contends that Harrington had an oral agreement to salvage the deBraak with Worldwide and share the profits.

The suit seeks punitive damages to be set by the court and a share of the profits.

Recommendation stirs airline smoking debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Academy of Sciences is calling for a ban on smoking aboard at least some commercial jetliners, concluding cigarette smoke poses health and safety problems, according to government and industry sources.

The recommendation, contained in a report to be made public this week on overall air quality concerns in aircraft cabins, is expected to revive a long-standing debate over whether the government should further restrict smoking aboard large jetliners.

The issue has been largely dormant since the Civil Aeronautics Board voted two years ago to ban smoking on all flights of less than two hours. The board almost immediately reversed itself and the order was never put into effect.

The CAB opted, instead, to prohibit smoking only on small commuter flights of 30 or fewer seats. Airlines are required in the larger jets to provide special smoking and non-smoking sections.

According to the sources, who asked not to be identified by name, the report by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences will call for a smoking ban on at least some of the large jetliners where there now is no prohibition.

The Academy of Sciences study on cabin air quality was ordered by Congress.

Smoking critics have said any recommendation from a panel of scientific experts that calls for further restrictions on smoking aboard commercial jetliners was sure to help revive the issue.

"This would be a new catalyst," said John Banzhaf, director of ASH, a group which has been campaigning to curb in-flight smoking for years. He acknowledged that the issue has been largely dormant since the last CAB action in mid-1984.

The Tobacco Institute said it was preparing to make public its own "scientific study of 65 in-flight air tests showing that the current smoking rule on commercial airliners effectively minimizes the exposure of passengers seated in no-smoking sections to environment tobacco smoke."

Rear-seat lap belts may be unsafe, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Should rear-seat automobile passengers buckle up or unbuckle?

Government safety experts say they can't agree in the wake of a new federal study indicating that in many crashes the lap-only safety belts, which are found on the rear seats of most cars, often cause more severe injuries than they prevent.

The National Transportation Safety Board revealed Monday that a study of 26 frontal auto accidents involving rear-seat passengers who wore the lap belts showed that in many cases the belts themselves caused the most serious injuries.

The NTSB study acknowledged that its sample of accidents was statistically small, but concluded that the samples clearly show that lap belts often restrain the wearer in a way that causes serious head, spinal and abdominal injuries because of the concentration of impact forces and the "jackknife" effect of the torso across the belt.

"In many cases, the lap belts induced severe to fatal injuries that probably would not have occurred if the lap belts had not been worn," the NTSB report said, although it stopped short of urging such belts not be used.

But Patricia Goldman, the NTSB's vice chairman, told reporters the safety board "is unable to state with confidence whether passenger vehicle occupants should be advised to use lap-only belts or not" in light of the findings.

Ms. Goldman emphasized that the answer was to require automakers to install shoulder-lap belts, such as those required on front seats, in the rear seats as well. Some foreign automakers already provide such belts, and several U.S. manufacturers have plans to soon phase them into their cars.

Nevertheless, tens of millions of cars are expected to have only lap belts on rear seats for years to come and the mere suggestion that those might better go unbuckled brought immediate reaction.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration issued a statement disputing the validity of the NTSB study. The agency, which regulates auto safety, called it "a specific search for cases in which belts failed" and an unfair sample of all types of accidents.

"Everything we've seen points out clearly and consistently that you're better off with the lap belt on," NHTSA Administrator Diane Steed said in an interview. She said there have been numerous studies that have found the lap-only belts reduce the risk of death and serious injury when all types of accidents are considered.

"While lap belts are far from optimum, and in some cases they can make things worse ... it is still wise to keep the belts on," said Brian O'Neill, director of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

But he acknowledged in some accidents the belts may be harmful, although he suggested those drawbacks are outweighed by other accidents such as those in which a person not wearing a belt might be ejected from the vehicle.

Soviet husband-wife team prepare high-wire audition

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — A husband-and-wife high-wire act who defected from the Soviet Union may have the spark of greatness in them, says a circus impresario who has offered them a paid tryout with the Greatest Show on Earth.

Bertalina Kazakova and Nikolai Nikolski are celebrating their 14th wedding anniversary today by considering the offer, which they say they probably will accept.

Kenneth Feld, president of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which bills itself as the Greatest Show on Earth, met for two hours with the couple Monday and said he would make them featured performers if they can design a spectacular tightrope act in the next two months.

"I am not able right now to see what they can do," Feld said. But, "I sense a spark in them that I find in the great performers."

Ms. Kazakova and Nikolski, featured performers with the Moscow Circus, were granted political asylum in the United States last week. They defected while in Argentina.

Feld offered to build the couple the necessary rigging at the Ringling circus' winter home in Venice and provide them with food, shelter and spending money until mid-October so they can demonstrate their abilities.

"If I like what I see, they'll be with the Greatest Show on Earth next year," he told reporters.

Feld met with the couple at the Lakeland Civic Center, where he is producing a show.

The couple's lawyer, David Bercuson, said they were "working around the clock, literally, to create an act."

Ms. Kazakova, who speaks some English, was asked why she and her husband wanted to work for Ringling Bros.

Good aviation record masks helicopter ills

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's military is chalking up a good aviation safety record this year, but the statistics mask a high accident rate for Navy and Marine helicopters and increasing mishaps involving the F-14 jet fighter.

Safety records provided by the services also show that accidents involving two Air Force planes, the aging F-4 and the front-line F-15, are running ahead of last year.

And the Army, though reporting fewer accidents than a year ago, is acknowledging for the first time two serious helicopter accidents.

In addition, the Army is investigating a series of engine failures in two of its older helicopter models, the OH-6 and OH-58A.

Proven fighter pilot prompts 'Top Gun'

By JAN TOMAS

SAN ANGELO (AP) — "MIGs, MIGs, MIGs, shoot, shoot, shoot."

High above the Vietnam countryside, then 29-year-old Navy Lt. John C. Smith ordered his wingman into action. Smith shot down the first MIG of the Vietnam war. The wingman downed the second plane, and Smith quickly blew another MIG from the sky. The date was June 17, 1965.

Four years later, although he never downed another enemy plane, Smith became the nation's first Top Gun, the commander of a Navy fighter weapons school. The school, a graduate training program, has been popularized in the movie "Top Gun," released this summer.

Smith, retired from the Navy, now is general sales manager for Jim Bass Ford.

The film features thrilling aerial combat maneuvers. Sleek, powerful F-14s streak through the air, rolling, climbing and diving.

One of the tactics featured in the film was originated by Smith. The F-14 finds a "bogey" on his tail. By using a maneuver which unexpectedly "puts on the brakes," the chase plane overflies the F-14, allowing that pilot to aim and shoot. The tactic was used twice in the film, but Smith claims it is actually used as a last-ditch tactic.

Smith's Vietnam MIG kill so impressed the Navy, he spent the next year teaching at various flight training schools around the nation, he said.

"It gave me credibility," Smith said.

It was Smith's reputation as a pilot and flight instructor that made possible his suggestion for Top Gun.

Smith had spent most of his Navy life as a flight instructor at Miramar, Calif. He had flown 300 combat missions (he would ultimatly fly 436 missions, the most flown by any pilot in Vietnam). As instructor, Smith's main task was to familiarize pilots with the F-4, the Navy's new swept-wing fighter plane. That plane has since been replaced by the F-14, Smith said.

In 1968, three years after Smith shot down the MIG, a report was released by the Pentagon which said the kill ratio was 2½ enemy planes shot down for every one American plane.

After reading the report, Smith said he became angry.

"We could not live with that," Smith said. "We knew we had to have more hours, better tactics, better adversary pilots."

Smith, then 33, discussed the problems with his friend Lt. Cmdr. Dan Pedersen. They knew pilots were misfiring, missing targets, throwing switches and getting frustrated, nervous and scared. "They were not able to do the job."

They talked of how their friends had seen buddies shot down. Sometimes the downed pilots parachuted safely only to be captured by North Vietnamese. "We lost a heckuva lot of men," Smith said.

The men discussed the possibility of a graduate fighter weapons school. "We said, 'Hey, we've got to do this.'"

For three weeks, Smith and Pederson worked day and night. They telephoned to Washington and other armed forces units for support. The Fighter Weapons School, nicknamed Top Gun, was approved. Three more instructors were recruited.

The first five classes were held in a trailer. "We had no money, only expertise," Smith said.

A pilot from each fighter squad with top airmanship and instructor qualities would spend five weeks studying and practicing air combat maneuvers. Each pilot was expected to return to his unit to pass on what he had learned. The five-week course included the latest research on the MIG-19. Smith designed the curriculum and devised new tactics, which are still used today, he said. Smith commanded Top Gun for 2½ years.

After Top Gun began, the kill ratio improved from 2½-1 to 14-1, Smith said. The school's first graduate shot down five enemy planes, achieving a status as ace pilot, Smith said.

Smith logged 8,000 hours in the F-4, but he never shot down any more enemy planes after the first encounter of the war. "I wanted ace so bad..."

Still, Smith's record is remarkable. He recalled that day in 1965 when he was catapulted off the deck of the Midway with five other F-4s.

The target, a highway bridge, was 120 miles inland in North Vietnam. Navy attack planes (light bombers) had struck the bridge.

"The bridge was down. The fighters stayed behind in a race track pattern in case MIGs came to hit the attack planes. The last attacker called 'feet wet' as he approached the coastline. Now we could exit. We were in teams of two, about 25 miles apart. I said, 'Let's vacate.'

"But I changed my mind. I said, 'Let's give it one more orbit. I turned 50 degrees to the left and picked up two targets on the scope about 38 miles away.

"Who could have been there? All the friendlies had vacated. I could see two targets about three miles apart. I climbed higher, calling it out. 'Bogey dead ahead at 20 miles — bogey at 18 miles.'"

Smith and his wingman agreed on tactics. Smith would fly by the first bogey and identify it. If it was the enemy, the wingman would fire on it, Smith would shoot at the second plane.

Smith flew slightly off course into the sun as he met the bogey. The pilot rolled sideways to get a better look at Smith. Smith spotted the round wing tips unique to MIGs. Smith's plan worked, and three MIGs fell out of the air that day.

"It was not a dogfight. We were using the weapons system the way we were supposed to. There was no hurry, no panic. It was a classroom kill."

The impudence of fighter pilots depicted in the movie was true-to life, Smith said.

In one scene of "Top Gun," a nervy fighter pilot (played by Tom Cruise) flies his plane upside down over the cockpit of an unfriendly plane. The astonished pilot looks up to see the two Americans snapping pictures and gesturing objectionably.

"We did things like that," Smith said. "Fighter pilots are so cocky. Top Guns were the worst. Most women were turned off by them.

"If a pilot was quiet and sedate — if he was at home in the library, he's not a fighter."

Smith recalled how he flew cockpit to cockpit with Russian Bears or Badgers, when he had to discourage them from spying on fleet operations. Russian pilots looked up to find Smith and his backseat man holding up large cards with insults printed on them — in Russian.

Italian-born chef makes good in East Texas town

By MECHELLE BALL

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — "You're probably wondering why I am in Nacogdoches," said Giacomo Aievola. "People always ask me that."

A long way from his home in Geneva, Italy, Aievola is preparing gastronomic delights for patrons of Rossini's Restaurant. Aievola learned to prepare his Northern Italian dishes at a culinary school in Saramo, Italy, on the Riviera.

Aievola's wife is a native East Texan, and "this is one reason why I am here in Nacogdoches. Nacogdoches, I think, is one of the best little East Texas towns — more culture, more open," he said.

The Italian chef says he also chose this area for its greenery and lakes.

"I like hunting, boating, and fishing. It is a good place to relax and to get away from the pressures of the big city," he explained.

When he and his wife decided on Nacogdoches for their home, Aievolo was looking for a place to relax and "play around more than cook — I want to enjoy what I'm doing. You get tired when you're working in the big city — pressure of the big hotel. It's a big facade — a big rush. There's somebody in the corner waiting for your job."

Aievolo speaks from experience in the city. After graduation from culinary school, he signed up with an Italian cruise line because he wanted to see the world. He prepared meals for both Caribbean and around-the-world cruises.

Later he moved onshore, preparing delicacies in Miami, Fla., for such celebrities as Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett and Jack Collins. For a three-year period he was the chef at The Crest Hotel in Vail, Colo. He owned his own "club" in Houston and was the executive chef for the Melrose Hotel in Dallas when it was renovated and re-opened.

As executive chef at the Melrose, he had 45 individuals working directly with him in the kitchen, Aievolo said, all of whom he trained.

"I started six months before we opened the Melrose and I had to supervise everyone," he said.

"When you have average cooks you have to do everything yourself," Aievolo said he has learned.

On opening night, the hotel expected 3,000 of Dallas' elite. He began preparations a week ahead of time.

"It seemed like everyone in Dallas showed up," he said. "Instead of 3,000, there were 5,000, but we made it."

Because of his strict professional training, Aievolo was prepared to perform, he said, "You have to be able to produce."

When he was attending culinary school, Aievolo said, "A chef at that time was God — he was 50-65 years old and very reserved."

In the "old days" those desiring to become chefs had to start from the bottom as dishwashers. Then the students learned to set up tables properly and the etiquette of a first-class waiter — how to serve and everything about wines and champagnes.

"A professional waiter, years ago, had to know everything," he explained. "It was his responsibility to show and tell the customer what he was eating."

From this point, those studying were required to memorize all the tools, pots and pans needed to prepare fine foods. Then they were taught "little-by-little" how actually to prepare Northern Italian recipes.

"A lot of people think Italian cooking is oregano and tomato sauce — that's not true. Italian cooking is more European," explained the chef.

In fact, he compares many of his recipes to the French style of cooking, with one exception — his dishes are "much lighter."

"I like a lot of veal dishes. I can make a lobster — any style. I like to create new dishes," said the chef.

One of his creations, "Snapper Cousteau," is prepared with fresh snapper topped with scallops and shrimp — all cooked in a light wine sauce and delicately spiced with fresh herbs.

Aievolo says it is a rarity to find fresh dishes prepared in restaurants, since many establishments rely on the microwave and the can opener.

"Very few places will you find original cooking," he said. "If I'm given enough notice, so that I can get the ingredients, I can fix any dish you like."

Darkhorse du Pont

Although it is much too early to get a clear idea of who will run for the presidency in 1988, it is not too early to pay careful attention to what candidates and potential candidates say about key issues. While some may speak cautiously in order to avoid alienating voters, one who has taken square stands on a number of controversial programs and policies is Republican Pierre S. du Pont IV, former governor of Delaware.

The du Pont name has not been as conspicuous as some of the other often-mentioned presidential possibilities in his party, and he is labeled a dark horse at this juncture. In June, however, he won the distinction of being the first 1988 candidate to set up a campaign committee. Here are some of his positions:

★He favors the Reagan administration's Strategic Defense Initiative, calling it "the first program since Hiroshima that gives the United States an opportunity to build a defense against the most dangerous circumstance of our age."

★Aid to the anti-Sandinista freedom fighters in Nicaragua has the strong support of du Pont. He also would like to give assistance to those struggling to determine their own destinies in other nations, including Angola and Afghanistan.

★To improve the nation's schools he suggests dropping courses like "driver education, photography and bachelor living" and replacing them with "calculus, chemistry, foreign languages, and English."

★He believes in supply-side economics as a means of reducing taxes and curtailing the mountainous costs of the federal bureaucracy.

Candidate du Pont obviously has given much thought to this campaign platform. In that regard, voters may want to take a hard look at this thoughtful politician.

INS editorial lacking

This is in response to your editorial dated Aug. 3 in which the INS Sting operation was discussed.

Your editorial stated that the method used by the INS "bordered on objectionable," but it was your opinion that those deported had it coming to them. You stated that these individuals were not citizens and were in fact "violating the law."

Does the means justify the end? Do these methods follow the true spirit of what we Americans like to think makes our country different from other less open, and more police-like countries? The INS, in your opinion, is guilty of mail fraud. Are our government agencies now investigative branches similar to those f nd in closed, non-democratic s cieties where "big brother" watches the people in even the most innocent asspects of our daily lives such as mail collection?

Unfortunately INS not only tricked the illegals, but also tricked the newspapers and local readers into believing only the illegals were deported due to that scam. We know of at least one friend of a "winner" who is an American citizen but, because he was unable to prove his citizenship, was deported. Since when do Americans have to carry proof of citizenship? It is true that some of these individuals were violating the law, but what about employers of these individuals? Were they not violating the law by hiring them? We spend thousands and thousands of dollars to send these individuals back, but has the real problem been addressed?

Does their presence "disenfranchise citizens?" This is a good negative "catch all" phrase, but what does it really mean? The assumption is that illegal aliens are not contributors to our society. They pay taxes with the understanding that as long as they are illegal they will not be able to reap the full benefits of their labor. Some of them even forego their income tax credit for fear of deportation. It is also questionable as to whether or not these jobs would ordinarily be filled by legal residents of the area. Many American citizens who are unemployed refuse to do these kinds of "dirty jobs" for such low wages. Of if they do take the job, they do so only for a short while until a better job can be found. If you do not believe this, check with the job vacancies at the Texas Employment Commission or with the employers of these illegal aliens.

Your editorial also stated that a number of the illegal aliens were receiving food stamps and unemployment benefits. If this is true, the problem is with our system not with the clients. Even illegal documents are eventually detected by the Social Security system. Why aren't our social service agencies coordinating their efforts if this kind of abuse is such a burdensome problem? We question this exaggeration. Although their U.S.-born children and, in some instances, their American spouses qualify for assistance, often aliens are too afraid of deportation to apply for assistance.

It is true that we do need to push Congress to address the immigration issue, but we should do this within a proper perspective. Treating the symptoms is not going to cure the patient. What we need to do is diagnose the problem in a logical manner and treat the illness.

We would like to suggest that the editor reevaluate his "realistic posture" and that he offer more concrete suggestions as to how to solve our problems, rather than find a scapegoat to help us deal with our current economic woes.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 12, 1898, Hawaii was formally annexed to the United States after Congress passed a joint resolution. The resolution thwarted opponents of annexation who had succeeded in blocking Senate ratification of a treaty signed with the Hawaiian government in 1897. Hawaii was granted territorial status in 1900, and became the 50th state of the union in 1959.

On this date:

In 1676, the most destructive Indian war in New England history ended with the death of Wampanoag Chief Philip near Mount Hope, R.I.

In 1851, Isaac Singer was granted a patent on his sewing machine.

In 1867, President Andrew Johnson suspended Secretary of War Edwin Stanton.

In 1898, the peace protocol ending the Spanish-American War was signed.

In 1915, the novel "Of Human Bondage" by William Somerset Maugham was published.

In 1941, French Marshal Henri Petain called on his countrymen to give their full support to Nazi Germany.

In 1948, Oksana Kasenkina jumped from a third-story window of the Soviet consulate in New York to prevent being returned to her native country. She survived, and later became a U.S. citizen.

In 1960, the first balloon satellite — the Echo I — was launched by the United States from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Ten years ago: The Republican Platform Committee voted to support ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, over the objections of delegates supporting former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, who was challenging President Gerald Ford for the party's nomination at the Kansas City convention.

Five years ago: Trans-Atlantic air travel began returning to normal after Canadian air traffic controllers ended a two-day boycott of flights to and from the United States. The Canadian controllers agreed to join their government in a study of whether the American air traffic controllers' strike was having an impact on safety.

One year ago: A Japan Airlines Boeing 747 crashed into a wooded mountain range in central Japan, killing 520 people. Only four people survived the world's worst single-aircraft disaster.

Today's birthdays: Comedian-actor Cantinflas is 75. Actress Jane Wyatt is 74. Choreographer Michael Kidd is 67. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., is 61. Actor-director John Derek is 60. Actor George Hamilton is 47.

Thought for today: "Quoting: the act of repeating erroneously the words of another." — Ambrose Bierce, American author (1842-1914?).

Control concerns hang over Aquino

MANILA — A question hangs like the sword of Damocles over President Corazon Aquino: Are her apron strings strong enough to hold the Philippines together?

Jack Anderson

Not long ago, she would pour the coffee while the men talked politics. Now she has become the chief topic of their discussions — a modern Joan of Arc whose dramatic rise from housewife to president has made her appear larger than life.

Public expectations may have soared beyond her ability to make good. She has no magic cure for the bleak poverty that holds three-fourths of the Filipino people in its grip. Some day those hungry people will forget that she inherited the economy, that she didn't cause their misery. In fact, the euphoria that followed President Ferdinand Marcos' ouster is already beginning to fade.

Meanwhile, she has formed a Good Government Commission to recover the ill-gotten wealth that Marcos squeezed out of the Filipino economy for himself and his cronies — loot estimated at more than $10 billion. The commission has seized assets or placed its people on the boards of 180 companies. This has sent a nervous tremor through the business community, which largely supported Aquino's takeover. Now businessmen are worried about government control — a fear that has also scared off foreign investors.

Aquino also freed political prisoners and opened talks with communist insurgents. The communist ingrates merely intensified their guerrilla attacks. Army officers, whose lives are on the line, complained to me that Aquino is naive.

I found Mrs. President, as she likes to be called, in firm command at Malacanang. She spoke with quiet authority, wasting no words on political flummery. I asked many questions, but they all centered on one overriding issue: Can this delicate but determined woman, this housewife-turned-president quell a communist insurgency and heal a ravaged economy?

I think so. I sensed a character of steel beneath her silken manner, also a pragmatism that keeps her idealism in check. Aides told me about the time she put her male advisers in their place. She had listened patiently while they, talking down to her, explained some political issue and told her what she should do. She responded ever so softly. "Gentlemen," she said, "this is the last time you'll tell me what to do."

Yet this remarkable woman cannot put Humpty Dumpty back together again by herself. She will need the help of the United States, which gave the Philippines its independence and its democratic traditions.

President Aquino isn't asking for aid. She believes the payments now coming from Washington ($900 million under a five-year agreement) should not be counted as aid but as rental for the use of Clark Air Force Base and Subic Bay Naval Base, the two largest U.S. military bases outside America.

She also hopes to increase trade with the United States, particularly the sale of sugar. The Philippines have been shipping sugar to America since the trading ship Astrea brought back the first cargo in 1796. Until Cuba went communist in 1961, the United States bought sugar only from the Philippines and Cuba.

Then the market was divided up among several countries. Still, the United States continued to buy more than 25 percent of its imported sugar from the Philippines until President Reagan cut the amount in half four years ago. This has brought economic devastation to the sugar cane fields.

The country that benefited most from the Philippines' loss was the Dominican Republic. Coincidentally, the Dominican government hired as its fixer in Washington Reagan's former aide and adviser, Mike Deaver. But other countries, including South Africa, also got sugar quotas at the Philippines' expense.

All President Aquino asks is that her impoverished country be given back its historic sugar share and also be given fair trade treatment. As she would like to remind Washington, poverty is the mother of rebellion, and the best way to defeat communism in the Philippines is to fight poverty.

• • •

AQUINO'S RIVAL: The gossip in Manila is that Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile is merely waiting in the wings for the right moment to brush President Corazon Aquino aside and take her place in Malacanang. I found Enrile to be a world-class politician who spoke frankly about his situation. He made it clear that he would be available if his country should call. But he has no intention, he said, of staging a military coup to replace her. She can count on him, he said, to be a loyal member of her cabinet.

• • •

THE MARCOSES AND ME: The last time I visited the Philippines, it was still a democracy, and the Marcoses occupied Malacanang. They invited me to dinner at Malacanang; President Marcos loaned me his helicopter for a hop into the hinterlands; and the first lady took me on a five-hour tour of Manila. The friendship lasted until Marcos seized dictatorial power. I assailed his regime and, in return, was attacked by Marcos. Once I wrote him a friendly letter, urging him to release his imprisoned rival, Benigno Aquino. I got back a rambling, personal reply, citing his case against Aquino. Later Marcos let Aquino go but then exiled him.

FLORA LEWIS

Third ear, eye could diminish nuclear fears

IXTAPA, Mexico — The idea is spreading that nuclear arms control is everybody's business, not just the nuclear powers', because everybody would be affected by nuclear war. The atom has no respect for neutral.

Flora Lewis

That is the theme behind the meeting here of the heads of six governments from five continents. They are moving on from pious proclamations to an acceptance of responsibilities. The search for practical, concrete measures within their capacity has led to a focus on observation and verification.

They can't force the United States and the Soviet Union to make agreements, but they can make it harder to refuse by putting themselves in a position to bear witness if there is cheating. The first step has been announced: plans for a network of monitoring stations to support a nuclear test ban. The proposal calls for Soviet and American participation if possible, but if not, the countries say they'll do it on their own.

Mexico, Argentina, Sweden, Greece, India and Tanzania are involved at this stage, offering a favorable geographical spread. but there are more ambitious ideas that could lead to a truly new global peace alert system.

That would be to establish an international scientific research and reporting center with a seismic ear to the ground and a surveillance eye in the sky.

The recent publication of a Swedish photograph showing new activity at the Soviet Semipalatinsk test site gave a glimpse of what such a system could mean. Obviously the Russians know what they are doing, and if a Swedish commercial satellite can spy on them, American military intelligence has recorded even more. But it took the Swedes to tell the world.

A full system could provide constant, complete public warnings of major military activity around the world, independent of both Soviet and American decisions to keep secrets or to announce what they learn. The six states represented here don't have the resources to do it alone, but they can take the initiative to bring in competent and adequate help.

Sadly, the United Nations isn't the right place to go; it is too hamstrung by its quarrels and bureaucratic booby traps. But there are a dozen or more countries with advanced scientific and engineering capacities whose contributions could make the system work, and there are signs that several are already willing.

The beauty of the plan is that it can be totally apolitical, like international weather reporting, without reference to national defense policies, fears and rivalries. If it is established on a strictly technical basis, committed to full and immediate reporting, it would quickly develop an immense international authority that, in turn, could do a lot to ease tensions based on mistrust.

The system could work as a much more sophisticated version of President Eisenhower's unrealized "open skies" proposal, with the advantage that it wouldn't depend on Soviet-American cooperation.

As John Kenneth Galbraith points out, what he calls the "nuclear theologians" now have a monopoly of information which permits them to exclude practically everybody else from weighing in on nuclear arms issues, though not from exposure to the nuclear threat. They distort the debate and obscure the meaning of decisions.

The result is the mindless growth of nuclear arsenals, as though they produced a life of their own by coupling in mutual fear. Dr. Jerome Wiesner, President Kennedy's science adviser, recalled as he listened to the contemporary roster of the nuclear family that in 1961, he and then-Defense Secretary Robert McNamara argued whether the United States would have all it could possibly need if it built 200 or 1,000 missiles. Those seem halcyon days now.

Wiesner has submitted a paper to the Ixtapa conferees for an "International Arms Verification and Study Center," the heart of the third eye and ear plan, but with important provisions for training and research.

"An effective way to build a common security system," he wrote, "is to substitute information for weapons."

This is quintessential good sense, since all the nuclear powers insist that the purpose of their weapons is never to be used but to prevent any others from being used. At last both intelligence and technological advance are being turned on how to back away from the brink. Deterrence is better than war, but a way to diminish fears is better yet.

CHARLEY REESE

AIDS 'tiger' deserving of research attention

Bob Kunst, who is running for the U.S. Senate in Florida, is an anachronism — a man of passion in passionless times.

Kunst is apparently one of those people with a need for a cause. In the Vietnam War, it was the anti-war movement. Then he discovered or decided — I don't know which — he is homosexual, and homosexual rights became his cause. Currently his cause is arousing public concern about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome or AIDS.

Charley Reese

Kunst has no chance to be elected nor does he deserve to be elected. He is only running to provide himself a platform for talking about AIDS. He is using the tactics he's comfortable with — the demonstration, the press conference, the media stunt.

Kunst's cause, however, deserves public attention. On his single issue, he's right. AIDS is a far more serious public health menace than most public officials have acknowledged.

Many people seem to be under the impression that it is a homosexual disease or at least a disease at which only a few types of people are at risk. The AIDS virus, however, has no sexual preference. Like all viruses, it is a microscopic bit of chemicals on the border between life and non-life. It knows nothing about its environment. It just reacts as its chemical properties dictate.

Some people even seem to resent the attention AIDS has received, as if the disease itself were somehow immoral. Homosexuals must feel like the man who saw the tiger. He's the fellow who came home in time to see a tiger eating the last of his children. He fled screaming to the village to warn the others about the man-eater. But the others just yawned in his face. Of course you are concerned, they said, because it was your family the tiger ate.

Actually, it appears that AIDS has the potential to become the Black Death of the 20th century. Public health officials — not homosexuals — are projecting that within 5 years, 179,000 will have died of it and 270,000 more will be dying of it. They think more than one million Americans now carry the AIDS virus.

Kunst and other homosexual activists have impaled their cause on the horns of their own dilemma. Fearing that AIDS might be used as an excuse to isolate, shun or even persecute homosexuals, they have strenuously stressed it cannot be spread by casual contact. The unforeseen consequence has been diminished public interest.

Unfortunately, no one knows how AIDS is spread. They know some of the ways — sex, dirty needles, contaminated blood, mother-to-offspring. The statement that there is no evidence that AIDS can be spread any other way is a bureaucratic copout.

Scientists said there was no evidence that yellow fever and malaria were spread by mosquitoes until they discovered it. There was no evidence that leprosy was caused by a bacteria until it was discovered. Scientists just don't know. Every listing of AIDS cases contains a category, Unknown/Other — meaning cases which involve people who do not appear to be in any of the high-risk categories. There is as yet no explanation for the unusually high concentration of AIDS cases in two small Florida communities. You can't prove there is no evidence by asserting you haven't found any.

A few years ago there was no evidence that the AIDS virus even existed and for all we know it may not have. We do know that in a very short time this disease is spreading far and fast and that so far it is 100 percent lethal. A British scientist has pointed out that the virus remains infectious for up to seven days in water and close to a week in a dry state. He points out it is found not only in semen and blood but in tears, saliva, and bronchial secretions.

Kunst is wrong about a lot of things, but not about this. We'd better put some heavy public research dollars on this tiger now. It has a huge appetite and no particular preference for any one kind of victim.

This year one of political surprises

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Private eyes in North Dakota and gothic politics in Alabama are threatening to upset the calculations in two key races in this year's battle for control of the Senate.

Both states are considered prime hunting grounds by Democratic Party strategists trying to figure out where they can pick up the four seats they need to regain a Senate majority.

For months, Democratic leaders pleaded with Rep. Byron Dorgan, North Dakota's sole congressman, to challenge Republican Sen. Mark Andrews, who looked like an inviting target in a state hard hit by the troubled farm economy.

Dorgan agonized and finally said no and the Democrats reluctantly moved the state several notches lower on their wish list.

Alabama was always near the top of the Democrats' list. Sen. Jeremiah Denton, a former prisoner of war, was elected in 1980 on President Reagan's coattails, the first Republican sent to the Senate from the state this century.

Democrats were optimistic that Rep. Richard Shelby, whose voting record was almost as conservative as Denton's, could reclaim the state's normally Democratic majority.

But this is a year of political surprises, with each event seeming a little more bizarre than the last.

Leading the list for a while was Adlai E. Stevenson's strange encounter with the followers of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche. The former senator had cast off his image as an ineffective politician, the residue of his 1982 campaign, and was campaigning like a tiger as he headed for a rematch with Illinois Republican Gov. James Thompson.

Stevenson's dream of gaining revenge in a rematch was jolted in the primary when two LaRouche followers won the Democratic nominations for lieutenant governor and secretary of state. Rather than run on a ticket with the LaRouche candidates, Stevenson renounced the Democratic nomination and restructured his campaign under the banner of the Illinois Solidarity Party.

"It's been a difficult several months," said Democratic National chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr., when Stevenson visited Washington to get the national party's endorsement for his campaign.

So far, there is little indication that Stevenson's troubles will endanger the re-election prospects of Democratic Sen. Alan Dixon.

Events in North Dakota and Alabama may have far more impact on Senate races.

When Dorgan refused to challenge Andrews, the Democrats turned to state tax commissioner Kent Conrad who was running an aggressive campaign but was regarded as, at best, a dark horse bet to unseat the GOP senator.

Within the past week, an unpredictable element was injected into the race when it was disclosed that someone had hired a private investigator to check into Conrad and Dorgan.

Copies of documents and clippings were mailed anonymously to North Dakota news organizations.

Andrews denied any link to the activity and said, "That's not the way we do business in North Dakota."

"This sleazy business is an ugly turn in North Dakota politics," said Conrad.

It was too early to know how voters might react to the gumshoe caper.

In Alabama, Shelby had been climbing steadily in polls as he ran advertising questioning Denton's effectiveness.

Then came the runoff for the Democratic nomination for governor — a bitter contest between Attorney General Charles Graddick and Lt. Gov. Bill Baxley. Graddick won the runoff by a margin of 8,756 votes. Baxley challenged the outcome because Graddick, a former Republican, had urged voters who had cast ballots in the GOP primary to support him in the Democratic runoff.

There is no party registration in Alabama but Democratic Party rules bar people who vote in a Republican primary from participating in a runoff to settle a Democratic nomination.

A federal court panel and the state Supreme Court upheld Baxley and left it to the Alabama Democratic Party to try to figure out how to resolve the situation without alienating a lot of voters.

The obvious choices are to schedule another runoff or declare Baxley the winner. Some Alabama Democrats are also looking at the possibility of naming someone else as the nominee.

Meanwhile, Shelby has been sitting on the sidelines, painfully aware that whatever the outcome of the intraparty battle, he may have lost the momentum that had carried him within striking distance of Denton. The battle also could send large numbers of conservative Democrats, who supported Graddick, into the ranks of the GOP.

Nun with medical degree is angel of mercy

By MICHELLE PERRON

TUTWILER, Miss. (AP) — A Roman Catholic nun with a medical degree is an angel of mercy tending the sick in this little town in the flat and steamy farmland of the Mississippi Delta, one of the poorest communities in the nation.

The nearest hospital is 15 miles away in Clarksdale. So is the nearest Catholic Church.

Sister Anne Eucharista Brooks, 48, is one of just five doctors in all of Tallahatchie County, but that's not unusual in this state. Forty Mississippi counties have just five doctors or less.

But Tallahatchie County, with 17,000 residents, also ranks among the five poorest counties in the nation, and that's what attracted Sister Brooks.

Tutwiler, population 1,200, had been without a doctor for five years when Sister Brooks arrived three years ago.

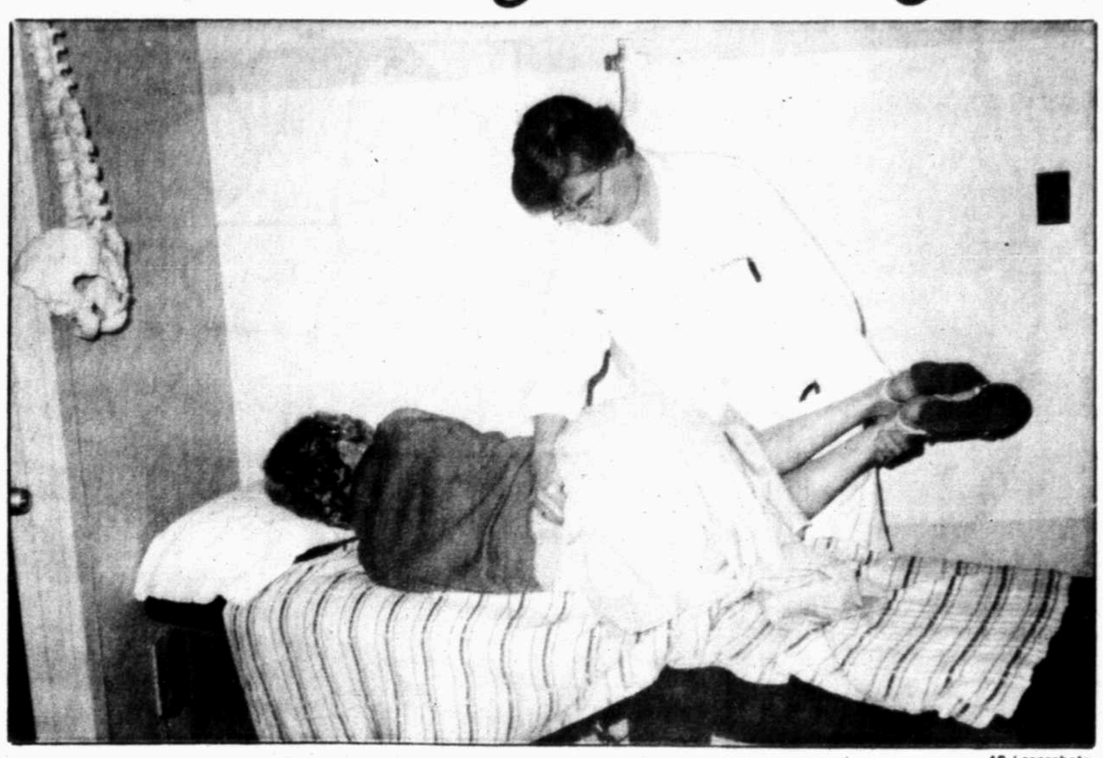
"I've been coming to see Dr. Brooks ever since she came here," says 85-year-old M.C. McCollum, who still lives on the plantation where he used to pick cotton. "I don't know what we'd do without her."

Sister Brooks earned her medical degree at Michigan State University in 1978 with the help of a scholarship from the National Health Corps in a program designed to train physicians to work in small rural towns. After working among the poor in Detroit and South Florida, she came to Mississippi in 1983.

Before settling on Tutwiler, she got out a map and began knocking on the doors of local government and health care officials in areas of Mississippi targeted by the National Health Corps.

"I almost got kidnapped several times, the need for doctors is so great," she recalls.

Deciding on Tutwiler, Sister Brooks took over a roomy clinic left behind by a federally supported program phased out almost a decade earlier.



AP Laserphoto

Dr. Anne Brooks, who is also a Roman Catholic nun, tends to a patient with a back problem. Brooks is the only doctor in Tutwiler, Miss., and often goes without pay for her treatment.

Most of her 4,000 patients are poor.

Often she watches helplessly as patients go without medication to buy food, or put off needed tests because they can't afford to lose a day's pay. Sometimes that pay is under $10.

Most of her patients don't have cars and rely on relatives or friends to get them to her office. Some have walked as many as five miles for an office visit, she says.

"There is such a great need for medical care here," she says. "Sure, it takes a lot out of me, but my patients give a lot back."

McCollum is a favorite patient. On this day, the two compare gardening tips as she begins her examination.

"You should see my corn. It's way up to here," says McCollum, indicating the height of the stalks with his hand.

His forearms are dried and scaly from 52 years of picking cotton in the Delta sun, but his chest and shoulders look like a 30-year-old's.

McCollum recently suffered a mild heart attack, but today it's his arthritis that is bothering him. Sister Brooks prescribes some medication, tells him to quit working so hard, and asks about his wife.

Although he no longer picks cotton, McCollum lives in a house on part of the land he used to farm for a plantation owner. Little of the land is farmed these days, but the owner has let many of his former workers remain in the small houses built years ago — before indoor plumbing and central heat.

McCollum is one of the few residents with a car. It's a "clunker from some time in the 1960s," and it breaks down often.

"I bring people to see Dr. Brooks pretty regular...whatever I can do, you know," he says. "I try to help everybody I can, white or black, poor or rich."

Sister Brooks' staff includes three nuns who work as nurses and counselors. Much of their time is spent simply talking with the patients, encouraging them through hard times.

"And we try to give the patients some self-respect," she says. "We teach them about their illnesses — and how to control or prevent them. That gives them a sense of responsibility, a sense of control that they need very much."

Sister Brooks does not receive any federal or state money. Her clinic is funded entirely by private donations and intermittently paid patient fees. Only 10 percent of her patients can afford to pay for medical care.

Among the rest, about half are covered by Medicare or Medicaid. About 40 percent are unable to pay at all, but most make some attempt.

"Sometimes people come in two years later to pay off their bill," she says. "And almost all of them offer to do some kind of work for me. We have had some people work their bills out that way. We've got a woman washing the gowns and sheets and one making medical charts, and we deduct the equivalent of the minimum wage."

When she's not in her office during regular clinic hours, Sister Brooks is often making house calls, dropping off donated clothes or checking on someone she hasn't seen in a while.

With Clarksdale's hospital — and its valuable ambulance — 15 minutes away, Sister Brooks got used to middle-of-the-night emergencies long ago.

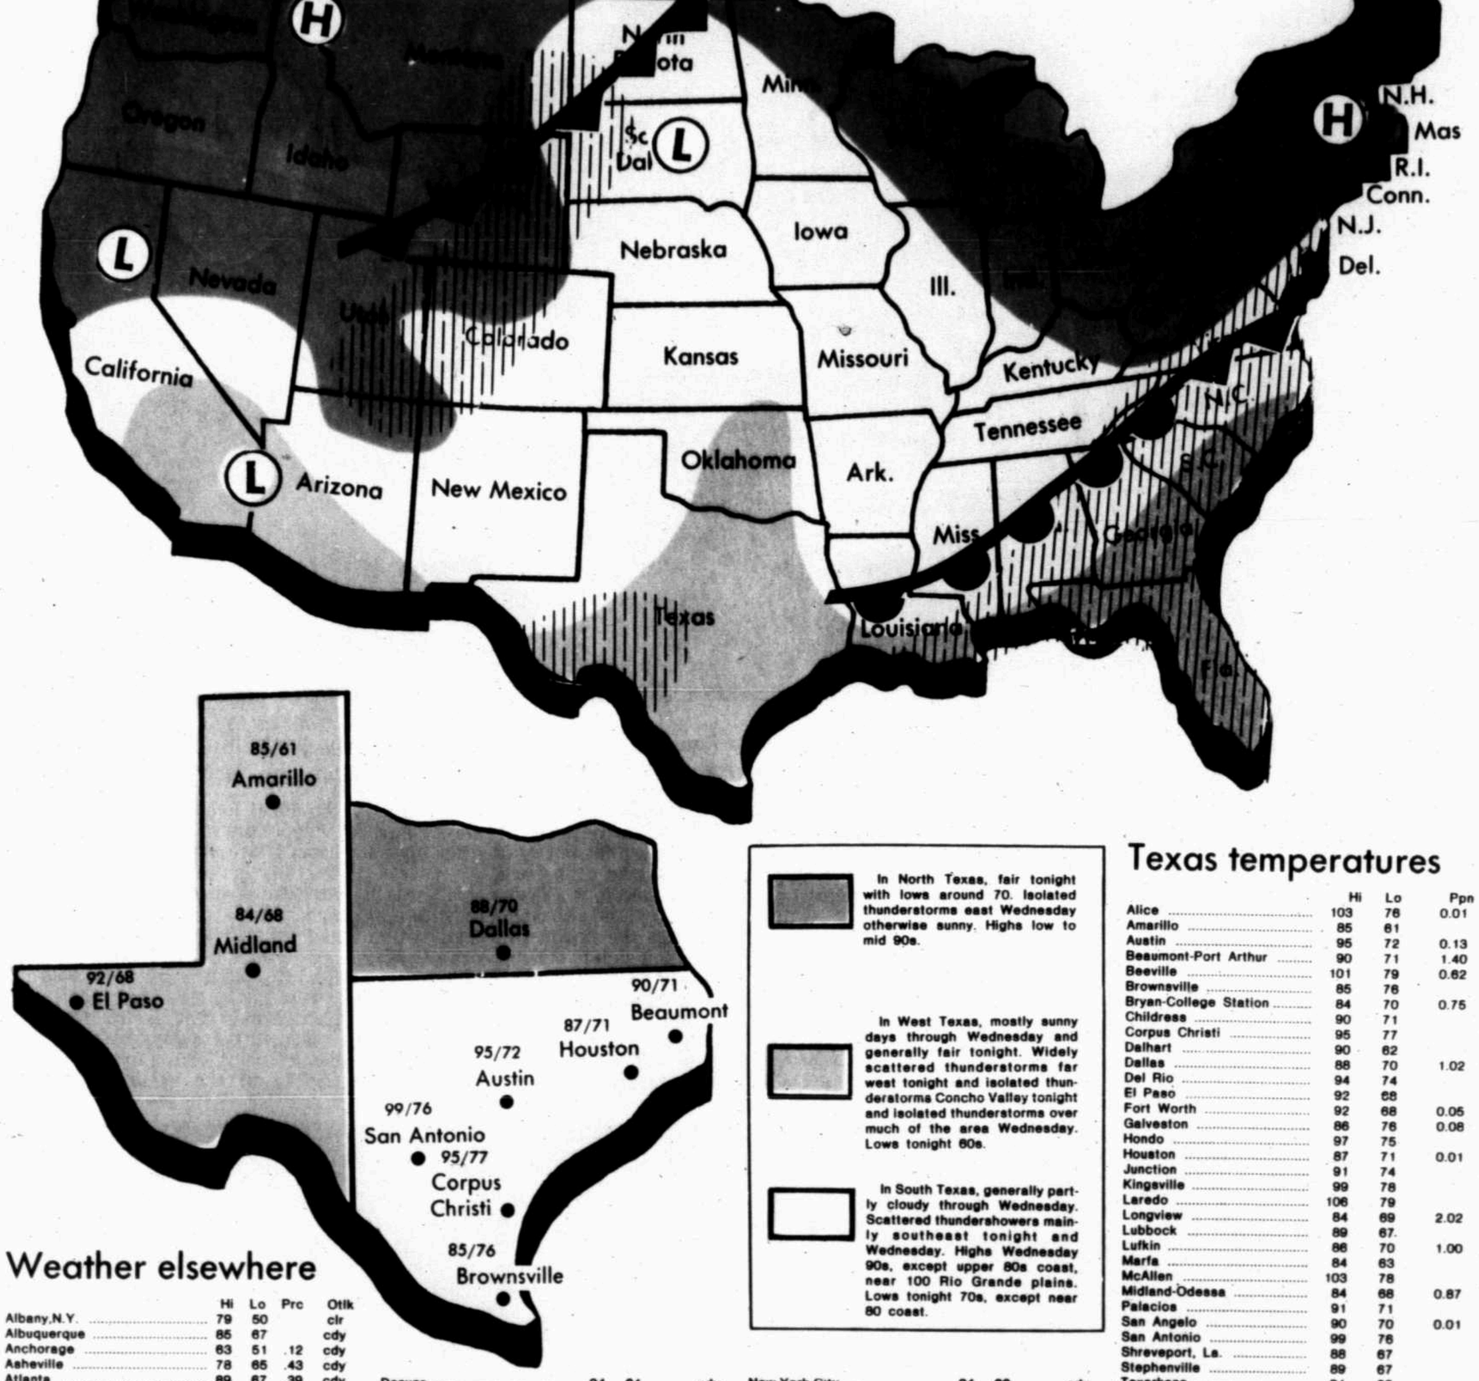
TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH — (Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING — (A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)



In North Texas, fair tonight with lows around 70. Isolated thunderstorms east Wednesday otherwise sunny. Highs low to mid 90s.

In West Texas, mostly sunny days through Wednesday and generally fair tonight. Widely scattered thunderstorms far west tonight and isolated thunderstorms Concho Valley tonight and isolated thunderstorms over much of the area Wednesday. Lows tonight 60s.

In South Texas, generally partly cloudy through Wednesday. Scattered thundershowers mainly southeast tonight and Wednesday. Highs Wednesday 90s, except upper 80s coast, near 100 Rio Grande plains. Lows tonight 70s, except near 80 coast.

Thunderstorms are forecast

The chance of thunderstorms is once again in the forecast for the Midland-Odessa area. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms for Wednesday afternoon. Wednesday's forecast also calls for a high in the lower 90s, partly cloudy skies, and southeasterly winds at five to 15 mph.

The NWS is predicting a low tonight in the upper 60s to be accompanied by partly cloudy skies. Winds will be out of the southeast at five to 10 mph.

Monday's high of 84 was 22 degrees below the record high set in 1964. This morning's low of 68 was eight degrees above the record low set for this date in 1931.

STATE

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast for much of Texas through tonight.

Showers were expected over southeast portions of North Texas, most of South Texas, far West Texas and the Concho Valley, forecasters said.

Forecasts called for mostly fair to partly cloudy skies over the rest of the state through tonight.

Showers and thunderstorms are expected to decrease Wednesday, the National Weather Service says.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the upper 60s and 70s with a few readings in the lower 80s possible in extreme South Texas. Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 90s, ranging to as high as near or slightly above the 100-degree mark in Southwest Texas.

Skies were mostly fair around the state at dawn today although some showers and thunderstorms were reported along the coastal plains.

NATION

Strong thunderstorms hit sections of the South and Nebraska today and rain was widespread elsewhere, but much of the nation's midsection turned cool and fair.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from the mid-Atlantic states through the Southeast and Florida, across the Southwest, and across Kansas, South Dakota and western sections of Missouri and Iowa.

Fair skies prevailed from New York and western Pennsylvania across the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and Kentucky through western Tennessee and Arkansas into the southern Plains.

Temperatures were on the low side across the Great Lakes region, with early-morning readings in the 40s to 50s.

Tway's final charge stuns the Shark

By Wayne Lockwood
Copley News Service

TOLEDO, Ohio — One minute, Bob Tway was trying to figure out how to keep the 68th PGA Championship going.

The next minute, he had ended it. By winning.

If you think Tway was surprised, imagine how Greg Norman felt.

Tway holed a 25-foot bunker shot on the final hole to win his first major championship, completing a comeback that saw him make up nine strokes on Norman in the final two rounds — four in the closing eight holes.

Tway finished with a 1-under par 70 for 276, 8-under par and two stokes head of Norman — who struggled to a 76 in the rain-postponed closing round.

The two golfers came to the final hole tied, with Norman apparently in an advantageous position.

Both players thought his second shot was on the green, although it had spun back off into the adjacent rough.

Both thought Tway's second shot was buried in the bunker to the left front of the green, although it turned out to be resting atop the sand.

STILL, NORMAN'S chance of getting down in two shots appeared much better than Tway's.

"When I saw my lie, I thought I had a chance to make a four," said the champion. "I figured, well, maybe he won't make his putt and we'll go to a playoff."

Tway's shot floated out of the trap, bounced, rolled to the cup, hit the flagstick and fell in.

That quickly, he had joined Gene Sarazen (double-eagle at the Masters) and Tom Watson (chip-in in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach) in the lore of the game's dramatic tournament-winning shotmakers.

The 12,500 who came back on a Monday at Inverness Club for a delayed final round went crazy.

Tway, normally the most undemonstrative of players, began leaping up and down in the trap.

"If I could jump like that in high school, I would have played basketball," he said sheepishly.

PGA Championship

AND NORMAN?

"Was he stunned? Of course he was stunned," said Peter Jacobsen, the third member of the threesome. "It was like getting hit by a quick Mike Tyson jab."

Norman was left with the prospect of having to hole his shot simply to force a playoff.

Instead, Norman hit a pitching wedge well past the hole and bogeyed to finish two shots behind Tway and one ahead of Jacobsen.

As a result, Tway claimed his fourth victory of the season — a run that began with the Shearson-Lehman Brothers Andy Williams Open in San Diego and also includes the Westchester Classic and the Atlanta Classic.

Tway is the first player to win four tour events in a single year since 1982, when Craig Stadler, Tom Watson and Calvin Peete all accomplished that feat.

Tway also prevented Norman from winning more than one of this year's major championships (British Open), even though he led all four going into the final round.

The two are now running neck-and-neck in the race for Player of the Year honors (virtually even) and the money-winning championship (Norman leads, $644,729 to $600,005).

Norman earlier in the round, appeared in command when he birdied nine while Tway bogeyed to regain the four-stroke lead with which he began the round.

BUT AN unlucky lie for Norman, whose drive came to rest in a divot at 11, resulted in a double-bogey that set Tway's comeback in motion.

"He hit a great bunker shot, no two ways about it," said Norman.

"With all the pressure on him ... he probably thought I was going to make four from where I was. He has a shot where if it doesn't go in it's going to go 20 feet past the pin.

"All credit to him. He did the right thing at the right time."

He hit a shot for all time.

Latest word on Herschel: No bombshells

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys President Tex Schramm says he has talked with running back Herschel Walker's agent, but that there aren't any "big bombshells" yet to report.

Walker has been released from his USFL contract by the New Jersey Generals to negotiate with the Cowboys, and Schramm said at the Cowboys training camp that he had talked to agent Peter Johnson "two or three times."

But, Schramm said, "there are no big bombshells" to be expected any time soon.

"I HOPE they can come to Southern California soon so we can discuss matters further," said Schramm, who was expected to leave for NFL meetings in New York Tuesday night.

Johnson said Monday night he planned to arrange a trip to Thousand Oaks soon, perhaps as early as today.

"We'll be there this week, or maybe as early as Tueday," he said. "Herschel is very eager to get things worked out and to wear a Cowboys uniform."

"Herschel wants to get back onto the football field," Johnson said. "And we now have the rights to negotiate with the Cowboys."

The Cowboys drafted Walker in the fifth round in 1985. The 1982 Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia, he owns the professional football rushing record with 2,411 yards in one season.

POKE NOTES: Defensive lineman Mark Walen says he has set a Sept. 1 target date for beginning full workouts with the Dallas Cowboys.

Walen, the club's third-round draft choice, became the last of the NFL team's 14 draft choices to sign when he reached agreement with the club Saturday.

Despite Walen's self-imposed target date, Cowboys trainer Don Cochran said it may be eight weeks before he can test his fractured foot.

Walen broke his right foot while jogging at the Cowboys' training facility in May and has rehabilitating in Los Angeles ever since.

It took three hours, 11 minutes, 24 hits (five of which were homers), nine errors and 17 runs for the Midland Angels to lose and the El Paso Diablos to win, 10-7, at Angels Stadium Monday night, but at least one can say that things went pretty much to form for the Texas League West.

It was the fifth straight loss for the slumping Angels, who are now 12 games under .500 at 18-30 in second half play. It was also five straight victories by the surging Diablos, who kept their 2½-game lead over San Antonio, a 5-1 winner over Beaumont Monday.

This is the last homestand of the year for Midland, which has 10 games in the next nine days at Angels Stadium, and it looks like they are just playing out the string.

The bright spot is the fact that the Angels have drawn a record 102,723 fans after the 1,065 on hand Monday and don't have to draw another Midlander this year in order to call it a good season at the gate.

But things aren't going so hot on the field for the Angels. They produced five errors against the Diablos Monday and have lost six of their last seven games.

And yes, Virginia, the Angels blew another lead to let this one get away. The Angels owned a 4-3 lead in the third when a grounder by Dave Montanari plated James Randall from third, but it got away quickly.

The Diablos tied it in the fourth when Alan Cartwright doubled and went to third on an error by left fielder Brian Brady and then scored on a sacrifice fly by Todd Brown.

El Paso took the lead for good in the fifth on RBI singles by Billy Joe Robidoux and Cartwright along with a bases loaded walk to Brown.

Robidoux was credited with the game winning hit, and if that name rings a bell, it should. Robidoux is the one who started the season with the Milwaukee Brewers before knee surgery sidelined him. He's back with El Paso doing rehabilitation work.

The reason he was with the Brewers was probably because of what he did against the Angels a year ago. Against Midland alone, Robidoux had 52 RBI and 19 homers. He was less effective Monday with only two singles in four official trips to the plate and one RBI.

"I'm just trying to play myself back in shape," said Robidoux. "I don't know when I'll be back with Milwaukee. It all depends what kind of roster moves they make. There is a possibility I'll be with El Paso the rest of the year."

Robidoux came in hitting a meager .216 in 37 plate appearances, but Angels Stadium is his Big League tonic.

"Things started off good for me last year against Midland and I was hitting with a lot of confidence. But this is a good place to hit," understated Robidoux. "I feel pretty good at the plate, but not as good as I would like. However, I'm not getting fooled by pitches, I'm seeing the ball well and the swing will come around. The knee is coming along fine."

Robidoux was making big news with the Brewers before he injured his knee against Oakland while trying to score a run.

"Everything was going well for me and the injury just happened at a bad time. I was hitting for average and driving in some key runs. The injury was disappointing. I'd much rather be playing in Milwaukee than El Paso, but you do what you have to do. I like playing at El Paso because I know the parks and some of the pitchers."

El Paso manager Duffy Dyer likes his team's chances down the stretch.

"I'm happy with the way we're playing. We won four straight from San Antonio to take over the lead in a great homestand and we're hitting the ball well. We've got some good averages going up there to the plate," said Dyer. "We didn't show it tonight with four errors, but we've been playing good defense also."

El Paso boasts four of the top six hitters in the Texas League. Steve Stanicek leads the league with a .339 average and is followed by No. 3 Cartwright, .333; No. 4 Charlie O'Brien, .333; and No. 6 Jesus Alfaro .326. Midland's Randall is fifth overall at .328.

Astros lengthen lease on first

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros continue to stay ahead by coming from behind.

For the 18th time this season, the Astros won in their final at bat, as Alan Ashby's two-run double in the ninth inning Monday night produced a 7-6 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Ashby's bases-loaded, one-out drive into the right-field corner kept the National League West-leading Astros four games ahead of second-place San Francisco. Los Angeles is third, eight games back.

"I've never been on a club that can come back like this one can," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "This is a game we didn't deserve to win. We lost this game four different times on the basepaths."

The Astros, trailing 6-3, scored twice in the eighth inning and could have scored more without a baserunning mistake. After Jose Cruz homered, Ashby singled and pinch-hitter Terry Puhl walked.

Dickie Thon followed with a fly ball that right fielder Mike Marshall misplayed for an error that allowed one run to score, but Puhl and Thon both wound up at third base and Puhl was tagged out.

In the Houston ninth, Denny Walling led off with a single and Glenn Davis drew a walk from Ken Howell, 4-8. Kevin Bass then lined a drive over center fielder Reggie Williams' head, but Walling held up to see if the ball would be caught and was thrown out at the plate.

Davis took third and Bass moved to second on the play, and Cruz was intentionally walked, bringing up Ashby.

"It was a tough at-bat. I was trying to get a fastball to drive, but he jammed me," Ashby said. "Fortunately it fell in down the line. I didn't hit it well, but it turned out all right."

NL Roundup

Braves 11, Padres 6

Dale Murphy homered twice and doubled, driving in four runs and powering Atlanta over visiting San Diego.

Murphy hit a three-run homer off reliever Gene Walter that capped a six-run second inning. Murphy led off the fifth with his 20th home run of the season.

Giants 13, Reds 4

Pete Rose went 5-for-5 for Cincinnati, but home runs by Bob Brenly, Bob Melvin and Candy Maldonado powered San Francisco over the Reds.

Brenly's three-run homer gave the visiting Giants a 6-4 lead in the sixth inning and Melvin, who hit a solo homer earlier, had a three-run triple that sparked a seven-run seventh. Maldonado added a two-run homer.

Rose set an NL record with his 10th five-hit game, his first since April 28, 1982. Rose drove in three runs with four singles and a double, and raised his average to a season-high .222.

Morris: The Stopper

Associated Press

DETROIT — Jack Morris showed once again what being a stopper is all about.

After three straight losses to the Boston Red Sox, the Detroit Tigers won the last game of the series 5-0, as Morris threw a three-hitter for his fourth shutout, best in the American League and tied for the major league lead.

It was his 10th complete game.

"Our pitching really wasn't all that hot the first three games," Morris said. "I'm not pointing fingers or naming names. We just didn't get the job done. We got our five runs tonight, played good defense and won."

Morris, 14-7, struck out three and walked four. He was backed by homers from John Grubb and Lou Whitaker.

"The Jack Morrises of this world, there are very few of them," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "He's taken pretty good care of me for the last seven years."

The Tigers, who had entered the series 4½ games behind Boston and lost three straight to the AL East leaders, clawed to within 6½ games of the Red Sox.

Boston's two closest rivals won on Monday night. New York moved to within five games of first with a 6-5 victory over Cleveland. Mike Flanagan stopped Baltimore's five-game losing streak and the Orioles moved to within six by beating Toronto 3-1.

Grubb had two RBI in the game. He hit his 10th homer leading off the second inning, and singled in Detroit's last run, in the seventh.

Whitaker followed a third-inning walk with his 16th homer. Darnell Coles was 4-for-4 in the game. He singled home Grubb in the sixth.

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 11-8, lost his second straight start since his suspension ended.

AL Roundup

Orioles 3, Blue Jays 1

Flanagan held Toronto to two hits in 8⅓ innings, and Don Aase preserved the victory that ended Baltimore's five-game losing streak.

Flanagan, 6-7, entered the ninth with a one-hit shutout, but a walk to Ron Shepherd and Tony Fernandez's RBI double gave Aase the chance for his 29th save.

A scoreless tie was broken in the sixth inning by Toronto second baseman Garth Iorg's error. Rick Dempsey walked and was sacrificed to second. Juan Bonilla's grounder went through Iorg's legs and Dempsey scored easily.

Toronto's Jimmy Key, 10-8, allowed only seven hits and two walks in 7 1-3 innings.

Yankees 6, Indians 5

New York's Don Mattingly ended Cleveland's three-game winning streak with a tie-breaking single in the bottom of the ninth inning, with the bases loaded and two out.

Brian Fisher, 7-5, was the victor in relief of Ron Guidry, who gave up home runs to Brook Jacoby, Tony Bernazard and Julio Franco in his 6⅓ innings.

The Yankees took a 5-4 lead in the seventh on Henderson's 20th homer and a two-run single by Mike Easler, butthe Indians tied the game in the ninth when Franco led off the ninth with a single. Pinch-runner Otis Nixon stole second and scored on Joe Carter's single.

Twins 2, Angels 0

Minnesota's Bert Blyleven, 12-10, pitched a three-hitter for his fifth straight complete game, taking the AL lead with 11 this year. He raised his career record to 27-12 against California with his 53rd career shutout.

Gary Gaetti hit a sixth-inning homer, his 24th of the year.

Don Sutton, 10-9, allowed only six hits in seven innings.

White Sox 6, Brewers 1

Chicago scored six runs on five hits — two of them a two-run homer and an RBI single by rookie Russ Morman.

Morman's hits were the only two for the White Sox until Daryl Boston added a two-run single in the three-run eighth. Carlton Fisk led off the ninth with his 11th homer.

Floyd Bannister, 7-9, scattered eight hits and two walks in his third complete game this year.

Milwaukee starter Chris Bosio, 0-1, gave up only one hit — Morman's homer — in five innings.

Mariners 6, A's 4

Reliever Fernando Arroyo, making his first major-league appearance since 1982, walked Bob Kearney, Spike Owen and Domingo Ramos, forcing in the two game-winning runs with two outs in the top of the ninth inning.

Danny Tartabull gave Seattle its first four runs with a seventh-inning grand slam.

Mets 8, Phillies 4

Keith Hernandez continued his RBI streak and helped Dwight Gooden and New York win in Philadelphia.

Hernandez and Gary Carter hit run-scoring doubles in the fourth inning. Hernandez has driven in at least one run in eight straight games, a team record.

Gooden, 12-4, gave up nine hits, struck out 10 and walked none. One of the hits was Rick Schu's two-run homer in the ninth.

Darryl Strawberry added a two-run single for the Mets. Don Carman, 5-4, took the loss.

Pirates 10, Cubs 8
Pirates 10, Cubs 7

Mike Diaz hit a three-run homer and Barry Bonds had a solo shot during a seven-run seventh inning that led Pittsburgh past Chicago.

The visiting Pirates also won the completion of a suspended game, 10-8, on a pinch-single by Bonds in the 17th inning. The game had been stopped because of darkness April 20 with the score tied 8-8 after 13 innings.

Pittsburgh has won nine of 10 games against the Cubs this season. Rick Rhoden, 12-7, won the regularly scheduled game and raised his record against Chicago to 4-0 for the season and 17-6 in his career.

Cardinals 5, Expos 4

Mike LaValliere hit a two-run homer off Floyd Youmans with two outs in the eighth inning, carrying St. Louis over Montreal.

The visiting Cardinals trailed 4-3 when Terry Pendleton led off the eighth with a double and Clint Hurdle walked with one out. After Pendleton was caught stealing, LaValliere connected off Youmans, 11-8, for his second home run of the season.

Midlanders win state church softball title

From Staff Reports

For the second time in three years the Golf Course Road Church of Christ has earned a berth in the National Church Tournament with a state title.

GCRC won its title in the Church Open State tournament in San Angelo besting a field of 85 teams. The title was won by defeating Southern Methodist of Tyler, 19-8, in the final game. The Midland team also won the state title in 1984 and was fifth in 1985.

David Hatfield was voted the tournament's Most Valuable Player to head the All State Tournament team. Also earning recognition as all-staters were Gordon Autry, Van Kimbro and player-coach Randy Tanner of GCRC.

GCRC now advances to the National tournament held Labor Day weekend in Burlington, N.C.

To help raise funds to get the team there, a fundraising, All You Can Eat Spaghetti dinner will be held Aug. 20 at the Golf Course Road Church between 6-7:30 p.m.

Gold falls

LONDON (AP) — Profit-taking early today pulled gold bullion back from its highest levels in two years. The U.S. dollar advanced against all major currencies except the British pound.

Bullion traders in London said gold's decline occurred mainly in Hong Kong, where the metal closed at a bid of $384.89 a troy ounce. Although the price was $4.16 higher than the previous day's close in Hong Kong, it was down sharply from the $391.40 reached in New York late Monday.

The profit-taking was attributed to Swiss and U.S. interests.

Later, in London, bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $386.10, up 10 cents from the opening but down from Monday's late bid of $387.50.

In Zurich, Europe's largest bullion market, gold was quoted at a bid of $385.75, down from $389 late Monday.

The U.S. dollar meanwhile, generally gained ground in thin European trading.

Traders attributed the rise to technical factors and large commercial dollar purchases in the Far East. They predicted the rebound would be temporary.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Monday:

—2.0705 West German marks, up from 2.0562

—1.6673 Swiss francs, up from 1.6530

—6.7195 French francs, up from 6.6800

—2.3370 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3175

—1,424.50 Italian lire, up from 1,413.50

—1.38855 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3845

Against the trend, the British pound rose to $1.4860 from $1.4835. Sterling has been boosted by Kuwait's decision, announced Monday, not to sell oil on the spot market in September and October.

Britain is the world's fifth-largest oil producer.

In Tokyo, the dollar edged up to 154.05 Japanese yen, from 153.85 yen. Later, in London, the dollar was pegged at 154.25 yen.

Halliburton, Dresser announce drilling-fluids joint venture

New York Times News Service

DALLAS — The Halliburton Co. and Dresser Industries, two of the nation's largest oilfield-services concerns, said Monday that they intend to combine their drilling-fluid divisions in a joint venture, forming the world's largest drilling-fluid operation.

The Dallas companies said the deal, which is expected to be completed before Oct. 31, involves the combining of assets valued at $250 million. Kenneth S. Miller and Russell J. Hoffman, analysts with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York, said that within the last 18 months, all but one major drilling-fluid operation, NL Industries, had formed joint ventures to consolidate and cut costs.

While spokesmen for the two companies declined to say whether the partnership would result in layoffs, many past joint ventures of other companies have led to plant closings and staff reductions.

The drilling-fluid industry supplies lubricants and other liquid composites used in the oil and gas drilling business. It has been severely hurt by the recent drop in energy exploration and production.

Herb M. Ryan, a spokesman for Dresser, said the division had revenues of $445 million last year, but business was down by a third this year. Halliburton's unit had revenue of about $265 million last year, Miller said.

The new venture, which would be based in Houston, would be 60 percent owned by Dresser and 40 percent owned by Halliburton. The two companies, though, would have an equal share in appointing committee members to oversee the new venture.

Dresser, which began restructuring two years ago, expanding into non-energy businesses and selling unprofitable units, earned $1.4 million, or 1 cent a share, on revenues of $956 million for the quarter ended April 30. For the comparable period last year, the company earned $23.3 million, or 31 cents a share, on revenue of $1.04 billion.

Halliburton, which has also been hit hard by the slumping industry, lost $524.6 million, or $4.94 a share, on revenue of $854.9 million for the quarter ended June 30. Much of the loss was caused by a $502.9 million writedown in the value of drilling-related assets. The company lost $474.8 million, or $4.37 a share, on revenue of $1.2 billion for the same period last year.

"The strategy's one of survival," said Ryan of Dresser. "Once you've tightened your belt all you can," a partnership is "one of the next things you look at."

Saudi Arabia halts discounts on crude

NICOSIA (UPI) — Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer, plans to lower oil production to its OPEC-assigned quota by abolishing lucrative cash discounts on crude sales beginning Sept. 1, the Middle East Economic Survey reported Monday.

Last week the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' agreed to cut production by nearly 4 million barrels to about 16.8 million barrels a day and to reimpose previous national output quotas.

Since May the Saudis have been offering cash discounts ranging from 50 cents to $1 a barrel to high-volume customers. These discounts are in addition to the Saudis' netback pricing arrangements, which link the crude price to the value of petroleum products refined from each barrel.

"It is expected that the Saudis will try to trim the August nominations figure down as far as they can, but output for the month is likely to remain pretty high, with incentive discounts having been already committed for August," said MEES, an authoritative oil journal with close ties to the kingdom.

"However, for September it is planned to bring down production sharply to the quota level" of 4.35 million barrels a day, the journal said.

MEES said tanker nominations for Saudi oil are running 6.1 million barrels a day in August. The kingdom's production was 5.4 million barrels a day in July.

The oil journal said if the removal of discounts encourage all customers cut back their purchases of Saudi crude to their minimum contract levels, "this should bring Saudi output back within the 4.35 million barrels per day quota."

In a rather surprising move toward the end of the recent OPEC conference in Geneva, Saudi Arabia proposed that the meeting should decide on a return to setting fixed prices for crude oil, thereby eliminating netbacks and other forms of formula pricing.

Algeria and Libya supported the proposal, but other delegates called it "premature" and member countries were asked to submit papers outlining their ideas of a future pricing structure for OPEC, MEES said.

President: Gulf States needs money

AUSTIN (AP) — If Gulf States Utilities is to weather a worsening financial crisis, it must be allowed to charge customers higher rates, the company's president says.

"We absolutely have to have increased revenues from the customers," GSU President E. Linn Draper said Monday. "We can't go to Wall Street and borrow, even for the short term. It is a crisis situtation."

Draper described the utility as having "really reached the end of the rope as far as revenues covering expenses is concerned."

GSU is seeking a rate increase in Louisiana, and a similar hike will be requested in Texas later this year, he said.

"If we don't get a large amount of increase in rates in the two jurisdictions, we will not have the cash that is required to continue to do business," Draper told a news conference.

"It's a critical time in our corporate life. Our financial condition is plainly grave."

Draper said the company is suffering from the economic battering that has hit communities all along the Texas-Louisiana Gulf coast, where unemployment has soared as the petrochemical industry has declined.

He said GSU is doing "everything we can" to avoid bankruptcy.

"We think bankruptcy would be a disaster, not only for the owners of the company but for the region in general. I think the bankruptcy of a major utility like ours would have repercussions that would further damage an already fragile economy along the Texas-Louisiana Gulf Coast," he said.

E. Linn Draper

The company's board last week decided to cancel a dividend, the first time such action has been taken since 1947, Draper said.

Despite that cancellation, however, Gulf States' anticipated income next year will still fall about $500 million short of anticipated expenses, he said.

Hearings begin over All American Pipeline

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The federal government Monday jumped into a bitter fight between Goodyear Co. and environmentalists who oppose a planned pipeline over a major Central Texas aquifer.

Goodyear's proposed All American Pipeline began drawing fire early this year from people living south of Austin who worried the heated crude-oil pipeline could destroy their drinking supply, the massive Edwards Aquifer.

Reacting to charges that Goodyear had not adequately assessed the pipeline's possible ecological damage, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management ordered a environmental impact statement. The process started Monday with a public hearing here.

Mac Hoffman, All American's area superintendent, said the pipeline is in the public's best interest. Hoffman pointed to additional refinery jobs on the Texas Gulf Coast, increased domestic oil production and a greater local tax base from the pipeline.

The pipeline would carry crude from California — where refineries cannot handle the production needs — across the Southwest to Webster, which is between Houston and Texas City.

"This is a project that will encourage economic expansion and will be good for the state," Hoffman told officials from the Bureau of Land Management.

But several elected officials showed up to protest the possible ecological damage the pipeline could cause. Those officials said they do not oppose the pipeline, just its location.

"There are some places over which a pipeline should not be built, and one of them is over our water supply," said Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos of Austin.

Barrientos and others said the pipeline should run north of the aquifer to avoid the chance of polluting the water supply of nearly 1 million Central Texans.

LaMarque Rep. Lloyd Criss, who represents a coastal area with many refineries, stressed that the pipeline would create jobs and tax dollars and must not be stopped soley for environmental reasons.

World economy is tied to the string of an oil price yo-yo

ANALYSIS

By ROBERT RENO
Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Who would have imagined five years ago that major segments of the economy — the stock market, even — would by 1986 be reacting favorably, even jubilantly, to the news that OPEC had agreed to force another round of oil price increases?

And who, back when higher oil prices were the principal destabilizing force in the world, would have believed that economists would now be so divided on whether higher oil prices are a good thing for the economy?

Of course, the OPEC agreement reached last week is fragile and uncertain. It could easily fall apart if enough members cheat on their pledge to limit production. And there are huge incentives for some of them to do so. They have been driven to this agreement by desperation. And desperation could as easily induce them to cheat on it. All of them have huge excess capacities. All of them have very low production costs. The turn of a spigot can either wreck this agreement or make it ineffective. Besides, it is not all that clear that OPEC can readily control prices anymore.

Wall Street rallied as handsomely to the prospect of higher oil prices as it used to when there was the slightest sign that oil prices were about to collapse.

And economists were divided into saying that significantly higher prices would be:

A: A good thing.
B: A bad thing.
C: A wash.

To the extent that higher oil prices are inarguably inflationary and to the extent that we have been terrorized for nearly a generation by inflation, you would think that nobody would be for them except the principal owners of the world oil-based assets and those countries that are net exporters of oil, a category that does not include the United States, the world's largest consumer of oil.

But then, the United States is also the world's second-largest producer of oil. And this means that large segments of its economy are hurt by lower oil prices even if there is a net benefit to the nation.

Some economists argue that higher oil prices will make a recession more likely. Others say they could help prevent one.

Surely the economic distress in states like Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma caused by the collapse of oil prices has had unfavorable consequences far beyond the borders of those states, especially in the banking industry. No nation can easily or safely celebrate the existence of a severe and perhaps chronic recession in such large sections of itself. And surely a default by Mexico, a beneficiary of higher oil prices, scares the wits out of U. S. policy makers.

Higher oil prices would be good for the Soviet Union, an exporter, bad for Italy, a heavy importer. They would be good for poor Mexican peasants, bad for poor Brazilian peasants.

As the old saying goes, one man's price is another man's income. And over the past 13 years, vastly higher oil prices have resulted in enormous net transfers of wealth and income to oil exporters and to owners of oil assets as well as between states like New York and states like Texas.

If the new OPEC agreement does not work, the possible destabilizing effects of a further decline in oil prices is, to be sure, pretty scary.

But surely, given the entirely unequal distribution of oil wealth in the United States and in the world, the angels must be on the side of lower oil prices.

Legislators have questions about interstate banking

AUSTIN (AP) — Interstate and branch banking got support from state regulatory officials Monday but some legislators still had questions.

"What does an old family bank do if someone buys the Taco Bell across the street and puts in a branch bank?" asked Rep. Stan Schleuter, D-Killeen, at a hearing of the House Financial Institutions Committee.

"Who's to say if the money will come in here or go out to other states if an out-of-state bank buys a Texas bank?" asked Rep. Bill Haley. D-Center.

The committee held a long public hearing on three measures presented by Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne, and supported by Texas independent bank and holding companies.

Gibson said the three measures — one on interstate banking and two on branch banking — would not be brought up for a committee vote until, and if, Gov. Mark White opens the special session to banking issues.

Gibson said one measure would allow nationwide interstate banking, meaning that any bank or holding company in another state could buy a bank or holding company in Texas, or the other way around.

The other two measures, one a proposed constitutional amendment, would allow banks to have up to three branch banks within a county.

Present law allows a bank to have service branches only within a certain distance of the home bank.

"Generally we are a supporter of these bills," said James Sexton, state banking commissioner.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Texaco completes 246 barrel well

From Staff Reports

TEXACO, INC., Midland, reports a strong Silurian producer in the Lowe field of Andrews County.

On potential test, the No. 240-J J.E. Mabee "A" NCT-1 pumped 246 barrels of 47 gravity crude, 260 Mcfd and two barrels of water from perforations 12,824 to 12,866 ft. The interval was acidized with 4,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,057:1.

Drilled to 13,298 ft., the well was plugged back to 12,971 ft. with 5 1//2 inch casing set at 13,308 ft. Top of pay was 12,824 ft.

Location is 1,803 ft. from south and 584 ft. from east lines of Section 38, Block 40, T-2-N, G&MMB&A survey, 22 miles southeast of Andrews.

Cowden field gains Grayburg producer

The Cowden South field of Ector County gained an additional Grayburg producer as UNION OIL CO. OF CALIFORNIA completed the No. 809 Moss Unit in the field.

The well was tested to pump 125 barrels of 36.9 gravity crude, 40 Mcfd and 158 barrels of water from perforations 4,480 to 4,673 ft. The interval was acidized with 10,000 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 15,000 gallons of gel, 14,000 lbs. 20/40 sand, and 12,000 lbs. 12/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 320:1.

Drilled to 4,750 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 4,706 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,913 ft., include the Rustler at 1,644 ft., Yates at 2,928, Queen at 4,223, Foster at 4,405, and the Grayburg at 4,416 ft. Pay was topped at 4,480 ft.

Location is 3,950 ft. from north and 1,982 ft. from east lines of Section 6, Block 42, T-3-S, T&P survey, two miles southwest of Odessa.

Houston firm finals 54 barrel discovery

A Houston firm has comleted a Cisco discovery in Tom Green County, east of the Christoval Northeast field.

GRACE OIL CORP. finaled the No. 1 Simcik to pump 54 barrels of 38 gravity crude and 12 barrels of water from perforations 4,110 to 4,146 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,500 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 700:1.

Permitted as a 6,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,000 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,800 ft. The well was plugged back to 4,262 ft.

On ground elevation of 1,974 ft., formation tops include the Swastika at 3,220 ft., Cisco at 4,110, Harkey at 4,640, and the Strawn at 4,950 ft.

Location is 3,744 ft. from north and 2,024 ft. from west lines of Section 5, S.O. Lubbock survey, Abstract 5119, 11 miles south-southeast of San Angelo.

Grace is currently drilling the No. 2 Simcik, a 6,000 ft. wildcat located northeast of the No. 1 Simcik.

Spraberry Trend gains three new producers

ATKINS PETROLEUM CORP., Midland, has completed three wells in the Spraberry (Trend Area) field of Martin County, all three in the Schenecker "32" lease.

The No. 1 Schenecker "32" potentialed to pump 46 barrels of 38.5 gravity crude, 44 Mcfd and 95 barrels of water from perforations 7,845 to 9,460 ft.

Atkins tested the No. 2 Schenecker "32" to pump 48 barrels of 38.5 gravity crude, 40 Mcfd and 82 barrels of water from perforations 7,833 to 9,476 ft.

Also, the No. 3 Schenecker "32" was completed to pump 47 barrels of 38.5 gravkty crude, 39 Mcfd and 88 barrels of water from perforations 7,844 to 9,475 ft.

All three well s are located in Section 32 of Block 38, T-1-N, T&P survey, six miles north of Midland.

■ 1. DICKENS EXPLORER PLANNED. Scholl Drilling Co., Amarillo, will drill its No. 1-F Pitchfork Land & Cattle Co. as a 4,200 ft. exploratory well 16 miles north of Jayton.

The Dickens County location is 2,503 ft. from north and 533 ft. from east lines of Section 4, Block WT of the WTRR survey.

Oil concession agreement signed

ISLAMABAD (UPI) — The government has signed an oil concession agreement with Anglo-Suisse (Pakistan) Inc., a joint venture between private Pakistani investors and an American oil company for oil exploration on more than 1.1 million acres in southwestern Pakistan.

The state-owned Oil and Gas Development Corp. also was a party to the three-year licensing agreement, which covers an area southwest of Hyderabad in Sind province on the Arabian Sea.

Gil Labbe, president, and Naeem Sarfaraz, director of the newly created Anglo-Suisse (Pakistan), told a news conference that they chose the acreage because it is adjacent to the "highly successful area" developed by Union Texas in Sind and close to the OGDC's producing field of Tando Alam.

Crystal plans to file Chapter 11

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — In a bid to avoid bankruptcy brought on by depressed prices on the world oil market, officials of Crystal Oil Co. said Monday they had asked the firm's debtholders to ease its financial burden.

The oil and gas exploration company had filed a financial disclosure statement saying it intended to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. However, a previously announced intention to file on Aug. 8 was extended until Sept. 5 to allow time for the debt holders to respond.

"The plan is to exchange the current debt for some new securities and reduce the interest," an officer of the firm said. "If we get the right kind of response — a 100 percent vote for — there would really be no need to file bankruptcy."

But the officer, who asked not to be identified, said a 100 percent vote in such cases is never practical.

"The bottom line is we are asking the debtholders to take an equity position in the company," he said. "We have some foreign holders. It's a very complicated document. The debtholders needed more time to study the proposal more thoroughly."

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Mitchell: OPEC plan will add to complacency

THE WOODLANDS — A leading advocate of an oil import fee says that OPEC's agreement to reduce oil production "will add to the U.S.'s already dangerous complacency about the level of oil imports."

The OPEC action "may increase domestic drilling incentives to a very limited extent, but it doesn't change a thing insofar as the threat to American economic and military security are concerned," said George P. Mitchell, president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., a large independent oil and gas company.

"The new agreement may hold up, but probably not," he said. "Clearly it is essential to factor in thye unpredictability of OPEC action in making our own national policy."

Enron reports $12.4 million loss in quarter

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. reported a second-quarter loss of $12.4 million that company officials blamed partially on the slump in oil prices.

The loss amounted to $.55 per primary share, compared with a break-even level in 1985's second quarter in which the company reported net income of $12.3 million.

The 1985 results had been restated to reflect an accounting change in the company's exploration and production operations.

Coastal set back by $22 million quarterly loss

HOUSTON (SWN) —Net earnings of the Coastal Corp. for the second quarter of 1986 were $30 million, or $.68 per common share, compared with $30.5 million, or $.63 per share a year ago.

Results for the first half of 1986 showed a net loss of $22 million, reflecting the severe impact of sharply lower oil prices on first quarter refining and marketing operations. The first-half loss was equal to $1.34 per share. A year ago, Coastal reported first-half earnings of $66.9 million or $1.83 per share, not including the first quarter for American Natural Resources Co., which was merged with the company effective March 31, 1985.

Total operating profit for the second quarter was $187.4 million compared with $185.8 million last year. For the six-month period, operating profit was $217.2 million in 1986 and $290.2 million in 1985.

Wilson Energy announces debt extension

Wilson Energy, Inc. has successfully renewed and extended its bank loan which was up for renewal, as announced by its president, John M. Wilson.

The debt extension allows the company to go forward on future drilling programs with industry partners.

Judge dismisses former bank VP's indictment

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton today dismissed a federal grand jury indictment against a former vice president and loan officer of a defunct Midland Bank.

Olen Mack Brock, a former vice president and loan officer of the defunct First National Bank of Midland, was indicted July 10 by a federal grand jury for embezzlement and sharing the benefits of a loan. He pleaded "not guilty" July 14.

Defense attorney A.L. "Dusty" Rhodes said the indictment was dismissed because "the government realized they did not have a case" against Brock.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Blankenship refused comment on the dismissal.

"It's very unusual for the government to dismiss a case like this. When they do so it's obvious that he (Brock) is not guilty or they cannot prove he is guilty," Rhodes said.

Rhodes said federal authorities assured him they "will not continue to harrass or take any further action" against Brock "unless they could determine that he had done something wrong."

"I do appreciate the integrity of the government in making their decision to dismiss the case," he said.

Brock, 49, of Ruidoso, N.M., became the fifth Midland-Odessa exbank officer in 1½ years to be indicted for embezzlement and fraud charges stemming from bank loans.

The indictment was a product of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's probe into improper banking practices in the Permian Basin.

The three-count indictment alleged that Brock tried to defraud the bank of $21,700 through a loan by the bank to Quado Construction Co., in 1981.

Brock also was charged with fraudulently causing $87,000 to be loaned to a the Bost Land Corp., and receiving $12,500 from that loan in October 1981.

The third count alleged Brock received an unspecified amount of money through a loan transaction to J.L. Davis of Midland.

"I am obviously pleased beyond words that this dismissal occurred and that no trial will be required to show my innocence," Brock said.

Brock said he had no information that the government would indict him.

"I only wish that the government had made a complete investigation before the indictment. They would have determined by the investigation that I am completely innocent.

"I have been in banking for over 12 years and I am well familiar with the banking rules and regulations. I have violated no laws and the indictment should not have been returned against me."

Brock said he commends the government for "their integrity and professional conduct in dismissing this case when it obviously became apparent to them that they could not prove any misconduct on my part as charged."

Brock said he intends to continue in the business field, but has not decided whether he will return to banking.

If tried and convicted, Brock could have faced up to 15 years in prison — five years on each count — and a $750,000 fine.

Brock left the First National Bank of Midland before it failed on Oct. 14, 1983, when the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. took over the bank, which had lost millions of dollars in soured energy loans.

Since late April 1985, federal juries in Midland have convicted three former bank presidents and a bank director of fraud:

— Eddie Thomas, 43, former president of the filed MetroBank of Midland at Midland Regional Air Terminal, is serving a 20-year prison term and has been ordered to pay $550,000 in restitution. He was convicted of 14 counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds and making false entries.

— Roger Harris Clark, 43, an engineer who was a former director of Permian Bank & Trust of Odessa and owner of manufacturing companies in Odessa and Tulsa, was sentenced by Bunton to 10 years in prison and was ordered to pay $378,317 in restitution. Clark was convicted of five counts of mail fraud, wire fraud, wire-transfer fraud and making false statements to secure a bank loan.

Friday is deadline to be registered voter

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Plan on venting your economically-based frustrations at the polls this November? Better hunt down that voter registration card.

What...you've not received a new yellow one since you moved?

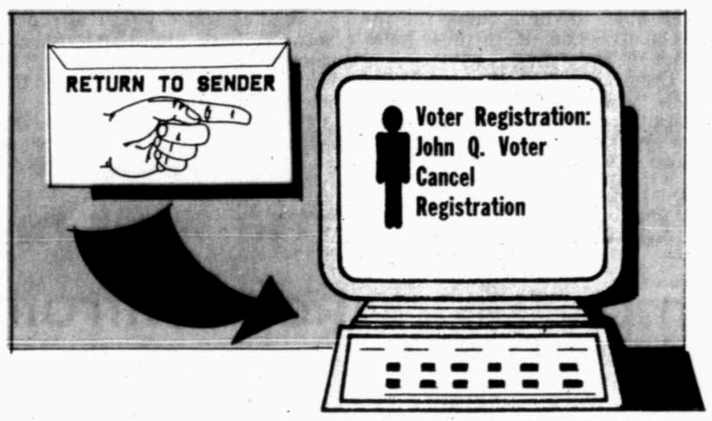
Then Bettye Calvert, the Midland County Election Administrator, wants you.

Under the Texas Elections Code, any registered voter who has not notified Ms. Calvert's office of an address change in the last two years will be removed from the master voter registration list this weekend.

That means those who have recently moved had better register by Friday or else, Ms Calvert said.

Since the new cards were mailed to some 55,500 registered voters in January, about 8,964 have been returned to the office, Ms. Calvert said.

Postal authorities are instructed under the election code not to forward the renewal cards and to return it to the county election office, Ms. Calvert said.



Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

"This is the law because it is the only way we have of keeping our records up to date.

"Even if you've moved next door in the same apartment complex, your new registration card was not forwarded," Ms. Calvert said.

Ms. Calvert explained that in Texas there is a permanent registration system whereby a person only has to register once.

If the person moves, all he has to do is notify her office of an address change, she said.

If voters don't, they are purged from the master list and they must re-register, Ms. Calvert said.

Ms. Calvert said voters who have not changed their address were allowed to vote in the municipal and primary elections held in April and May, even though the 1984 cards were effective only through March 1.

"We gave them a long grace period — this is it."

Ms. Calvert said she wanted to stress, though, that the 8,964 figure doesn't mean that number of people have fled Midland in these hard economic times.

"Many times the voters have just moved to another residence in Midland."

If a voter finds himself in this boat, he can change his address through the mail by filling out the backside of his voter registration card and sending it to the county elections office at P.O. Box 3434, Midland, Tx., 79702.

Or he may notify the office in person at 709 W. Washington Ave.

Friday is the last day to make the change. Those who don't will not be eligible to vote in November.

"They will walk up to the polls and be told they don't exist."

City now home for Secret Service man

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland is now home for an agent of the U.S. Secret Service.

Charles Blankenship, 37, was transferred to Midland from the Washington, D.C., area July 20, and operates an office out of his residence here.

He is responsible for handling affairs for the Secret Service in the eastern part of the El Paso District, an area extending north from Midland to Andrews County, south to the Big Bend region, and east almost to Big Spring.

"It's something we've been trying to do for a long time, but we could never get it approved by the hierarchy," Blankenship said, who worked in the Midland-Odessa area periodically before he left the El Paso office in 1980.

Bill Driscoll, Special Agent in charge of the El Paso office, said he requested an agent be permanently assigned to this area two years ago.

"You know how quickly the wheels of government turn," he said.

Driscoll said about 25 percent of his office's workload originates in the Midland-Odessa area and south of here.

Blankenship said the Secret Service, in addition to being charged with the protection of the president, vice-president, and other government officials, is an arm of the Treasury Department.

The agency is responsible for investigating crimes such as counterfeiting, forgery of U.S. Treasury checks and savings bonds, other crimes involving U.S. currency, and credit card fraud.

Murder trial to begin is 'fairly uncommon here'

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland District Attorney Al Schorre says a murder trial like the one beginning today for the bludgeoning death of a furniture salesman is fairly uncommon here.

"We just don't have that many homicides in Midland County," Schorre said.

According to records, he said there were only four jury trials for manslaughter or murder in the past 12 months.

Jury selection begins this morning in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District for the trial of James Robert Chambers, 25, who is accused in the beating death a 45-year-old Midland man.

Chambers has been accused in the June 9, 1982, murder of Wylie Randolph Wilson, an Aladdin House Furniture salesman.

Schorre said in a case like the Wilson murder it is impossible to determine the man-hours worked in preparation.

This case, he said, has produced four indictments.

"One investigator has worked on and off on this case since September of '85," Schorre said. "It naturally takes more time than a burglary trial or a drug trial."

Schorre said on a major case his office always employs at least two prosecutors and an investigator.

"No, it's (a major trial) is not really a disruption at all. That's the ultimate goal — to try the case," Schorre said. "That's what we're here for."

Wilson's body was found by a group of oil field workers June 10 in a pasture along County Road 160, about one-half mile east of FM 1379.

Two brothers, Leroy McKee and Elroy McKee of Midland, were arrested for the robbery and murder in 1985 after the case was reopened by the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Elroy McKee, 25, was tried in March and received a life sentence for the murder and 20 years in prison for the robbery.

Leroy McKee, 25, pleaded guilty to the robbery in May and was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Chambers was arrested April 25 and another co-defendant, Jackie Dorn, 32, was arrested April 24 following their April 23 indictment for the murder.

Dorn's trial is scheduled to begin Aug. 26, also in Baskin's court.

After Wilson's body was found, police found his blood-spattered car parked at the Kingsway Inn Apartments, 3801 W. Wall.

According to testimony in Elroy McKee's murder trial, on the night of June 9 the brothers and two other men returned to the apartment of Patricia McKee, Leroy's ex-wife, who lived at Kinsgway Inn.

Ms. McKee testified the men had blood on their clothes, and she said Elroy told her they had killed a man for his jewelry.

The State's other witnesses in the case were four inmates at the Midland County Jail who testified they heard Elroy McKee talk about the case.

The murder weapon has not been found, authorities said.

Pilot John Hill, age 10, banks a Cessna 172 in a turn over Lake Lewisville during a flying lesson. Hill, from Arlington, has been flying since December, 1985. Hill flies once a week during the school year and three to four times a week during the summer.

County hiring now permitted case-by-case following freeze

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — On June 9 Ector County Commissioners ordered a freeze on county hiring as part of an effort to overcome an anticipated budget shortfall.

However, hiring apparently will be permitted on a case-by-case basis.

Commissioners on Monday approved District Attorney Eric Augesen's request to hire a full-time secretary to replace one who left July 31.

Also, Animal Sheltor Director Dr. C.K. Jones was granted permission to fill a part-time animal attendant position who will work only 30 hours per week.

In other action, commissioners rejected three claims seeking damages from the county and cleared the way for attorneys to file lawsuits.

Odessa attorney Jerry Childs, representing Eduardo Bustallos, contends his client was injured April 5, 1986, when his motorcycle and a pickup truck collided at the intersection of Huntington and Westmore streets.

Childs alleges Bustallo's "serious injuries resulted because a sign warning of construction work under way in the area had been knocked over and was not visible to him."

Melissa Hirsch, on behalf of David Lewis Brown, sought $270,000 for mental anguish and lost wages, alleging Brown was "falsely arrested on or about June 29" by Ector County sheriff's deputies and detained in jail for approximately one month.

Ms. Hirsch contends sheriff's deputies "had no just case to arrest or detain" Brown.

Amanda Abdallah, through her attorney, Warren Burnett Inc., represented by Elisa Vasquez, sought $500,000 from Ector County alleging she "received negligent treatment and care "at Medical Center Hospital in January 1986.

This caused her to "sustain personal injuries and damages," Ms. Vasquez alleged in her client's claim.

Fifth grader says flying four-seater Cessna 172 is just 'plain sailing'

ARLINGTON (AP) — Fifth-grader John Hill has to prop himself up on three pillows when he takes the controls of a Cessna 172, but he says flying the four-seater is plain sailing.

"It's easy," said the 10-year-old Arlington elementary school student. "You just give it the gas until you get to 60 mph, you pull up the steering wheel and you go up.

"And, oh yeah. You got to keep the plane in the middle of the runway."

John, who learned how to drive a car when he was seven, says he wants to be an astronaut when he grows up. In the meantime, he drives a car in the parking lot at his father's business and flies airplanes.

His father, Johnny Hill, noted that his son doesn't drive without a licensed driver along as passenger and doesn't fly without flight instructor Mike Fields.

"He has to be 15 to solo legally," said Fields, who works for Cothran Aviation. "If he were old enough, John could complete the requirements for a pilot's license within a year."

John said he has trouble convincing his friends that he flies an airplane. He started in December 1985, when he asked his parents for flying lessons.

"We didn't think he would really stick with it," said his mother, Patsy.

John persevered and now flies once a week during the school year and three to four times a week in the summer.

Ms. Hill says the $52-per-hour flight instruction bills make it an expensive hobby, but she said the expense is worthwhile.

"If it were just a hobby, with no future for him, I don't think I'd be supportive. But this is what he wants to do," she said.

John, a member of the Junior Astronauts Association, said he would like to work with the space program eventually. Before then, he wants to earn a place in the Guinness Book of World Records by flying from California to South Carolina next summer.

"It will be the longest trip for the youngest person on a trip across the country," said Hill.

John, who recently graduated from a two-seater Cessna 150 to the Cessna 172, is rehearsing his flying skills and learning new flight patterns.

He says his landings are his only problem.

"I kind of bounce. You're not supposed to do that."

Odessa College to make available 200 scholarships under $200,000 program

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Odessa College President Phil Speegle Monday announced 200 scholarships will be available under a $200,000 scholarship-loan program.

According to Speegle, the program will be funded under a special allocation from the scholarship fund. The program will be in addition to already existing financial aid programs totalling more than $1 million, he said.

OC's scholarship funds come from donations, vending machines and various college services.

Announcement of the program follows on the heels of a program announced last month by Midland College, under which full scholarships are to be granted to any student graduating from Midland public schools this year.

Noting OC is preparing to celebrate its 40th anniversary, Speegle said, "Education is the most effective vehicle to change people's lives and let them go in different directions."

Of the $200,000 set aside for the new program, $120,000 will be for student loans, while $80,000 is earmarked for scholarships and will only pay for tuition and fees.

Student loans must be repaid with one percent interest. The OC scholarships will be granted until funds run out.

Applications are available at the college's Financial Aid Office.

Saying he didn't know what impact the program mignt have on enrollment, Speegle said the program will in no way lower OC's academic standards, since any adult who would benefit from attending OC can be admitted now.

Commission approves proposed boundaries to protect Aquifer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Commission approved boundaries for a proposed taxing district designed to promote protection of the Edwards Aquifer water that feeds Barton Springs.

The action Monday completed the first phase in the latest fight for creation of the Barton Springs-Edwards Aquifer conservation district in South Austin, Travis County and northern Hays County.

The district was originally proposed in the Texas Legislature in 1985, but developers opposed the bill and it died in a House subcommittee.

Proponents went to the Texas Water Commission a year ago to give voters an opportunity to create the district despite the legislative setback. Since then, action has been mired in legal maneuvers and hearings.

Kent Butler, a proponent of the proposed district, said the next step would be to ask for a hearing to create the district, now that the boundaries are known.

If approved by the commission, citizens in the area, which includes South Austin, would be asked in an election whether the district should be created.

Travel, energy cuts could save millions yearly

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The state could save $125 million yearly if it economized on travel, energy, employee health benefits and other administrative services, a Senate committee reported Monday.

The Senate Committee on Agency Services Management recommended establishment of a commissioner of services management who would supervise centralized services for such things as energy conservation, travel for state employees, communications systems and printing.

The committee also recommended a bonus plan as an incentive for state employees to save money without cutting services. It would allow the staff to split one-fourth of the savings, with another quarter going back into the agency budget and the other one-half going back to the state general fund.

A centralized energy conservation program could help save as much as 20 percent of the annual $200 million energy bill for state agencies, the report said, citing a Public Utility Commission study.

The report also recommended that the state stop paying health benefits for temporary employees and those who have worked less than 90 days.

Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, said most of the changes were attempts to bring state agencies in line with general business practices.

The report has the support of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis, Leedom said, and the special legislative session could act on the changes if the bill is drafted in time.

He doubted that the changes would come in time to help the state's cash-flow problems, because of the time required to move people and change systems. "That's the importance of trying to pass it now," he said.

The committee included two senators, representatives of the governor and the lieutenant governor and 13 state agencies.

Odessa civic leader named for Alcohol, Drug Abuse Commission

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Nominations Committee voted unanimously Monday to recommend to the full Senate that Nancy White Perry of Odessa be confirmed to the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

Gov. Mark White appointed Mrs. Perry, a civic leader, to the commission last year. Her term runs through 1989. Sen. John Montford, Mrs. Perry's senator, spoke highly of her, saying, "Mrs. Perry has the kind of committment to serve this commission unselfishly."

Some of the other commission members up for Senate review said they are concerned about cuts in alcohol and drug programs. Sen. Bob McFarland said the state will lose out in the long run by cutting funds for substance abuse. "You can pay now or pay a lot more later," he said.

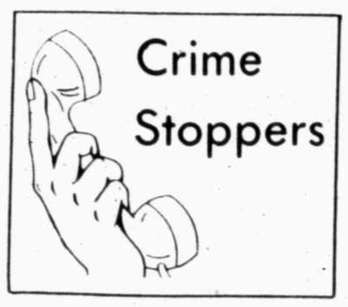
Oddessa Crime Stoppers seeks clues in Mr. Tux theft

Odessa Crime Stoppers is seeking information about the burglary of the Mr. Tux rental store, 1520 E. 8th St. in Odessa.

Sometime during the evening hours of November 20, 1985, someone broke into Mr. Tux and took approximately 20 coats, and assorted pants and shoes. Most of the items taken had "Lord West" or "Palm Beach" labels attached. Investigators said no new leads have developed and are seeking the public's help.

Any information about the burglary could be worth $1,000 this week, if it leads to the arrest and indictment of those responsible.

Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for other felony crimes. In Odessa, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 333-TIPS, and in Midland at 694-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.



Hardware store offers hard-to-find items

By KELLEY SHANNON

ELKHART (AP) — After 37 years in the business, Wilda Page knows hardware.

And the residents of this East Texas community know she knows hardware.

Ms. Page has been selling it along with other odds and ends at her downtown Elkhart shop since she and her parents pooled their resources and bought the store in 1949.

Since then, shoppers have come to know Page Hardware as the place to buy everything from chicken wire, to paint, to cotton duck for pea-picking sacks.

The store's building was constructed in 1916, and part of it still has hardwood floors, a wooden ceiling and a ceiling fan to keep air circulating.

In 1979, Ms. Page bought a grocery store that closed next door and expanded her hardware business. But she said she doesn't like the new section quite as well.

"It has a cement floor, which we don't like — it's too tiresome," she said.

The shelves are stocked with items some browsers might consider out-of-date or unusual. For instance, at Page Hardware customers can still buy bored well buckets for the type of wells constructed years ago.

In those days, wells were usually small holes in the ground, and the bucket is slender to fit those holes.

But Ms. Page doesn't sell too many of them now. "Once in a great while," she said.

Displayed in the store's front window are two different sizes of wash boards. Ms. Page said occasionally a customer buys one for washing clothes in sinks.

One man bought one before Christmas last year as a present for his wife, Ms. Page said.

But most people don't really buy them for washing clothes. "People hang them on the wall and put magnets and put signs on it," she said.

Another popular item throughout the years has been cotton duck sacks used for pea-picking.

"Used to there wasn't any place between here and Corsicana that stocked the sacks," she said. "We were about the only people that stocked the sacks."

The San Antonio company that made the sacks has stopped production, so Page Hardware only sells the cotton duck, and pea pickers must sew their own sacks.

"Now they come from Oakwood and all around to get the duck because we don't have the sacks," Ms. Page said.

Also on the shelves of the hardware store are plenty of pots, pans and cooking items. Near that section, a shopper with a careful eye will spot a truly unusual hardware store item — "slop jars."

"Then can't get them anywhere but here, and they're easy to find," said Ms. Page. The store also stocks bed pans "for when they're really sick," she said.

Police to charge four men arrested in possession of controlled substance

From Staff Reports

Four men are expected to be charged with possession of a controlled substance after their arrest early today by Midland Police, according to police reports.

Reports said police observed an automobile traveling northbound near the intersection of Carver Steet and Indiana Avenue about 2 a.m. this morning. The vehicle reportedly ran a stop sign, and was westbound on Indiana when it was stopped by police near the intersection of Madison Street and Indiana.

The driver and at least one passenger were questioned by police, and police allegedly found a controlled substance, phenmetrazine, in the car. The men, both from Midland, ages 22 and 25, were arrested.

About 1:30 a.m. police made another arrest, also near the intersection of Madison Street and Indiana Avenue. The suspect, a 38-year-old resident of Big Spring, was arrested for possession of a controlled substance. It was uncertain if the two arrests were related.

Police Roundup

A 27-year-old Midland man was arrested shortly before 2 a.m. in the 2700 block of Big Spring, according to reports. Police said the man was found intoxicated and allegedly had Phenobarbitol tablets that were not prescribed for him. The man also allegedly was in possession of drug paraphenalia.

In other reports, a burglary was reported in the 600 block of W. Cuthbert. Jeannie Medlin told police a 19-inch color television, an AM-FM cassette stereo, and a cable converter box valued at $400 were reported stolen from her residence.

Garden tools valued at $575 were reported stolen from the maintenance shed of an apartment complex in the 600 block of George Avenue. The manager of Sutton Place Apartments, Connie Okrasinski, told police the items were apparently taken sometime between 3 p.m. Sunday and 8:15 a.m. Monday.

An AM-FM radio valued at $125 and cassette tapes valued at $20 were reported stolen Monday from an automobile while parked in the 1500 block of S. Fort Worth.

The Midland County Sheriff's Department reported the burglary of three saddles valued at $550. The victim, Bill Welch, told officers the items were taken from a building near the intersection of Cotton Flat Road and Interstate 20.

Two groups not pleased with approval

AUSTIN (AP) — For different reasons, two groups say they aren't pleased with the House Ways and Means Committee's approval of a proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting a personal income tax in Texas.

Texans Against State Income Taxes said Monday that the committee's failure to include corporations under the proposed ban makes companies "sitting ducks" for future taxation.

The Texas League of Women Voters, however, said the personal income tax ban is going too far because the state should keep all its financial options open.

AGENT

Blankenship said the agency receives calls from local law enforcement agencies and private citizens about possible crimes, and, of course, is especially interested whenever the president is mentioned.

"We do get calls from various institutions and do talk to quite a few people," he said.

"What we used to have to do is send an agent 300 miles to that area every few weeks or so. This arrangement just makes sense," Driscoll said.

"It is mainly for our convenience because we have such a large area to cover. Technically, he still works out of this office."

Blankenship said from his experience in the El Paso office he is familiar with the Midland area.

"I've always wanted to come out here," he said. "The people are very friendly and I'm really looking forward to living in Midland."

DISMISSAL

— Max Malone, 53, former president of Permian Bank and Trust of Odessa, was sentenced by Bunton to 24 years in prison and was ordered to pay $317,410 in restitution. Malone was convicted of 13 counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds and making false entries. Bunton dismissed one of the counts.

— Bill Tapp, 42, former president of Bank of the West in Odessa, was convicted on 10 counts of embessiement, misapplication of funds, making false entries and making loans without the approval of the bank's board of directors.

White says taking education funds would hurt

AUSTIN (AP) — A House panel's vote to take $1.1 billion from education funds long viewed as untouchable is a move that would hurt Texas school children, Gov. Mark White says.

But Speaker Gib Lewis said his plan, approved Monday by the appropriations committee, hurts no one and could be the key to solving the state's cash flow problem without a tax hike.

"I don't know why we haven't done it years ago," he said. "It's been such a sacred cow that it's never been touched."

White said a tax hike would be a better solution than dipping into the Permanent School Fund and Permanent University Fund. He said those funds have been sacred for good reason.

"Taking monies from the permanent trust funds set aside for our children and their education would set a terrible precedent," he said. "The plan represents a major departure from the far-sighted policies established more than 100 years ago for the financing of public schools and universities in this state."

Hans Mark, chancellor of the University of Texas System, said taking money from the Permanent University Fund will hurt.

"If we want to maintain the construction program now on the books, it will cost us more money. Alternatively, we can cut back the construction program. That's probably what we'll have to do. But to say it has no effect is wrong," Mark said.

The appropriations committee voted Monday to take $1.1 billion — the amount of capital gains earned by the PUF and PSF in the past five years — and use it to replace general revenue that could be used elsewhere in state government.

Lewis said Attorney General Jim Mattox has indicated he would probably issue an opinion saying the move is legal. The speaker also predicted the full House would back the plan.

The funds are the backbone of the state's higher education and public education systems. The principal cannot be spent, but interest income is put into funds that are spent.

Profit from security sales has been put back into the unspendable principal. The Lewis plan would take that capital gain for the past five years and put it into the spendable portion.

The PUF, now about $2.4 billion, is divided among the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems. The PSF, now greater than $5 billion, is divided among all local school districts.

Lewis said his plan, plus $600 million in spending cuts approved by the appropriations panel, adds up to no tax hike this year, despite the projected $3.5 billion state deficit.

"If we pass this bill intact, this will carry us way into next year without even having to think about a tax bill," said Lewis, who opposes the tax hikes called for by White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Lewis said it's ludicrous to talk about tax hikes when the two funds have more than enough money.

"You let that money sit there because maybe 15 or 20 people are zealously guarding it," he said, adding that it reminded him of the fable about "the old king counting his coins and everyone was starving."

The funds transfer drew some opposition in the 29-member appropriations committee, but got 16 "aye" votes. Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, was among the dissenters.

"It concerns me that future legislatures faced with budget crises as we have here will perhaps want to dip further into these funds. I believe these funds were established by our forefathers for some very beneficial reasons and they've served our state well," Uher said.

South Texas man jailed in stabbing spree

KOUNTZE (AP) — A South Texas man was in custody today in connection with a stabbing spree that left one woman dead and another hospitalized.

Jasper County authorities said the man was arrested just before 7:30 p.m. in the stabbing death of Ruby Hafford, 42, and the stabbing of Sharron Johnson, 30, a Hardin County Sheriff's dispatcher said.

No other details of the arrest were available.

Christian publishers to reprint porn report

WACO (AP) — A Christian publishing company will sell a paperback reprint of a report on pornography by the U.S. Attorney General's commission so the public can better understand the issue, company officials say.

"I think a lot of people are still in a time warp when it comes to pornography. They're still thinking it is 1956 and we're dealing with Playboy centerfolds," said Charles "Kip" Jordon, executive vice president of Word Publishing.

The federal report is the result of a 14-month study by an 11-member panel appointed in May 1985 by Attorney General Edwin Meese III. The final draft was released July 9, and it contains 93 recommendations for controlling pornography.

The commission reviewed current findings, held public hearings, heard testimony from those who said they were pornography victims and other witnesses, read or viewed samples of pornography and visited "adults only" businesses.

"We're trying to remain as balanced as possible in this and still remain feeling human beings," Jordon said. "We don't want this to be perceived as some kind of right-wing religious crusade. But what is chronicled in this report goes well beyond what most people would ever imagine."

The $9.95 paperback will be available Sept. 5, and it will contain 2,235 separate magazine titles and 725 books found in pornography shops, Jordon said. Word will distribute the book to both Christian and mainstream bookstores.

Jordon said Word expects some feedback from Christian bookstores on the book, but added that the "enormous outcry" against the findings of the attorney general's commission in advance of its publication convinced Word to distribute the report.

"All we're saying is that the First Amendment applies to both left-wing and right-wing organizations," Jordon said. "Certain groups and publications have sought to impose their own censorship on the findings of this committee. We just don't want it to be submerged."

Dr. James Dobson, a Word author, was a member of the panel that studied the materials. Jordon said Dobson kept Word officials apprised of the commission's findings.

Jordon said major New York publishing houses refused to distribute the report.

City manager proposes eliminating 600 jobs

DALLAS (AP) — Unveiling a new city budget for this shining example of Sun Belt prosperity used to be a glossy show of swelling revenues projections and healthy budget surpluses.

Not this year.

City Manager Charles Anderson — faced with Dallas' worst financial crisis in history — proposed a $1 billion budget Monday that eliminates 600 city jobs, drastically reduces or dooms some basic city services and increases most fees by 20 percent.

"This is the hardest thing I've ever had to do," Anderson said. "I've never had a more difficult year."

The council sat quietly when Anderson and Deputy City Manager Camille Barnett outlined the proposed budget.

"We simply have to acknowledge the fact that we aren't a boom town any more," said City Council member Lori Palmer. "This is reality."

The proposed budget maintains the current tax rate of 49.18 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, but most homeowners still would see a tax increase because reappraisals this year have raised property values by an average of 35 percent.

The proposed budget recommends nearly $20 million in cuts in city services such as park programs, library operations, health and human services and city building security operations to help make up an expected $60.3 million shortfall in revenue caused by a downturn in the Texas economy.

If the budget were adopted as proposed, all city swimming pools would be closed next summer, the summer playground program would be eliminated, the Oak Cliff animal shelter would be closed, the central library would be closed evenings, recreation centers would be closed one more day per week, city park maintenance would be reduced and city support of arts groups would be cut about 15 percent.

In addition, millions of dollars in repairs to city equipment, buildings and drainage facilities would be deferred, all response times except to fire and police emergencies would increase and $1.4 million would be cut from social service and health programs, Anderson said.

Despite the cutting of some 600 jobs, however, the budget recommends hiring 61 police officers, 16 civilian police employees, 33 firefighters and seven fire inspectors.

Anderson recommends increasing the monthly garbage collection fee from $5 to $6, the average residential water bill from $23.29 to $27, the dog registration fee from $10 to $15 and most other city fees and charges by 20 percent.

Miniature horse breeders discovered two fillies, mare valued at $10,000 missing

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas-area couple who raise rare miniature horses discovered two fillies and a mare, valued at $10,000, missing from their farm and fear the theft may endanger the stolen unweaned foals.

Gertrude and Max Craig, who have cared for the miniature horses for 20 years, discovered the missing miniatures while bringing cups of grain to some 20 horses on their 7-acre farm near Pleasant Grove, an East Dallas neighborhood.

They said someone cut the fence surrounding their pasture and carried the horses out Sunday night.

The mare's young colt, Little Dude, which has not been weaned, was left behind, the couple said. The stolen fillies, Boots and Cookie, also have not been weaned.

"There are two mamas here without their babies and one baby without his mama," said Craig, 67.

Mrs. Craig, 65, said the two fillies could die because they have not been weaned. Another mare seems to be caring for Little Dude, she said.

Agents seize 851 pounds of cocaine at airport hangar

McALLEN (AP) — Federal agents on Monday seized 851 pounds of cocaine stuffed into duffel bags found near an airport hangar and arrested five men, including one whose $2 million bank account was seized earlier this year, authorities said.

The cocaine, worth an estimated $15 milion wholesale, is the largest amount seized in the Rio Grande Valley, said John Wagner, a supervisory agent with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

The five men were taken to the Hidalgo County Jail in Edinburg and will be taken before a federal magistrate Tuesday on charges of transporting cocaine and possession with intent to distribute, Wagner said.

He said DEA and U.S. Customs agents seized the cocaine near a hangar at the Weslaco Airport about 4:30 p.m.

"After our investigation and surveillence we were able to connect these men specifically to the cocaine," Wagner said.

He said one man was arrested in McAllen and the other four on a road between McAllen and Edinburg. One of the men had been arrested last week and was out on bond on a charge of possession of cocaine.

Former AP newsman dies

AUSTIN (AP) — A memorial service for William E. Keys, former Associated Press newsman and retired director of the University of Texas News and Information Service, was scheduled for today at St. Matthews Episcopal Church in Austin.

Keys, 78, died Friday in a Fredericksburg hospital following a brief illness, the university announced Monday. He headed the UT news and information service from 1945 to 1967.

From 1935 to 1945, he worked for The Associated Press in Dallas and Austin. He was a reporter for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin from 1927 to 1929, and for the San Antonio Express from 1929 to 1935. Since his retirement, Keys had been active as a freelance writer.

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., Keys attended the University of Pennsylvania.

Survivors include his wife, Dorothy, two daughters, Sarah Keys Creedle and Margaret Carpenter, both of Austin, and six grandchildren.

Broker goes home to party

AUSTIN (AP) — John Thomas Henderson, who in 1984 nearly upset incumbent Democratic Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace, says he is returning to the Democratic Party.

Henderson, an Austin real estate broker, ran as a Republican in 1984 and came within 33,000 votes out of nearly 5 million cast. Henderson lost the GOP primary for Railroad Commission this year.

Henderson, who had been a Democrat before, said Monday he was returning to that party because the Texas GOP failed to help him in 1984.

"If they had given me just one ounce of support in 1984, I would now be occupying Mack Wallace's chair on the Railroad Commission," Henderson said.

Import oil tariff introduced

AUSTIN (AP) — A resolution calling on Texas congressmen to support imposing a tariff on imported oil has been introduced in the Texas Senate.

The resolution, authored by Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, calls on Texans in the U.S. House and Senate to support proposals of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, that would require the federal government to reduce the nation's dependency on foreign oil.

"The imposition of an oil import fee will allow us to control our own destiny instead of being at the mercy of some Middle Eastern shiekdom," Sharp said Monday.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, August 13, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You enjoy new financial security. Commitments made in the past will put larger amounts of money in your pocket. A relationship that seemed to be slipping away does an 180-degree turn, evolving into something very special. Your health benefits if you exercise greater self-discipline. Remain true to your high values.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Los Angeles Dodgers reliever Tom Niedenfuer, "One Day at a Time's" Pat Harrington, Cuba's Fidel Castro, Cleveland Indians slugger Andre Thornton, Alfred Hitchcock, markswoman Annie Oakley, evangelist Rex Humbard and actresses Quinn Cummings and Gretchen Corbett.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Common sense is more important than anything you can learn from a book now. Make a decision about real estate. Job conditions improve when you speak your mind. Pay any overdue debts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep any secrets to yourself, especially those related to your career. Stopgap measures won't work. Think about long-term goals. Pass up a dubious financial opportunity. Your reputation could be at stake.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It will take more than talk to extricate you from a tight spot. Plan ahead and you will avoid trouble. A romantic adventure sends your spirits soaring. Better days lie just ahead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good time to launch new enterprises. Set the stage by developing a useful partnership. Get routine chores out of the way so that you will be ready to accept a special challenge.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): News from overseas could have a beneficial effect on your finances. Protect your valuables while traveling. Social activities and romance chase boredom away. Do not reveal too much too soon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An indirect approach could work best today. Search for the right words to tell someone the truth without hurting him too much. Romance reaches a new plateau.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unpredictable happenings keep you on your toes. Life is more interesting than ever! The pressure of a rush project should be about over. The future of a relationship hinges on your flexibility.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Back away from a scene. You may feel a sense of loss when a friend moves away or you head off to college. Call an old flame. Things might be different now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you really want something done today, you better do it yourself. Let a child know that you understand his or her problem. Keeping a secret wins you a friend. Avoid credit purchases.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Discretion is the better part of valor. Try to convince a friend-adviser who lives at a distance to move closer. You are able to mend a breech with a financial backer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel that you can do no wrong now. Go slow. Be skeptical about what a competitor tells you. The romantic picture brightens. A promising relationship turns serious. Avoid making demands.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A lost item could turn up in an unexpected place. Do not let yourself get involved in someone else's problems. Everyone needs some privacy. Your emotions could mislead you. Be objective!

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

In 1898, the Merrimac was scuttled to block Santiago Harbor channel. The vessel has given its name to the "Merrimac Coup," where an unsupported high card is sacrificed to block entry to a key hand.

North-South were employing a 21-22 range for their opening two no trump bid. With 5 high-card points, a six-card minor suit and a relatively balanced hand, North had no interest in any contract other than three no trump.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and declarer saw no point in holding up. With only one entry to dummy, declarer could not afford to cross to the table for a club finesse, so he made the fine play of the king from hand. East held up, then won the club continuation with the queen as West discarded a diamond.

The threat of the club suit was there for all to see, and the only entry was the ace of hearts. That suit had to be attacked at once if the defense was to prevail. However, it would not be good enough for East simply to shift to a low heart; declarer would win in hand and lead his last club, and the ace of hearts would still be there as the entry to run the suit.

East found the winning defense and shifted to the king of hearts. Now declarer had three heart tricks instead of two, but he had no way to enjoy the board's long clubs. Holding up the ace of hearts would not help, since East would continue with another heart; taking the ace would remove the only sure entry to dummy.

Declarer tried his best by winning with the ace of hearts and setting up clubs. After ducking a spade, he tried to reach dummy with the jack of diamonds, but even if West held the queen the defenders would have five tricks—two spades, two clubs and one diamond.

Cronkite in ABC interview: CBS 'not being serious enough about news'

Walter Cronkite

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite, making a rare appearance on rival ABC, said Monday that taking the "CBS Morning News" away from the network's news division could give the show "elbow room" to compete with its rivals.

CBS announced last month that the perennial third-rated program, with Forrest Sawyer and Maria Shriver as co-hosts, would be replaced with a revamped show under a new department outside the news division.

"They think it gives them a little more freedom taking it out of news, where I'm very proud to say CBS has very strong strictures," the former "CBS Evening News" anchor said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Cronkite, speaking from his sailboat in Portland, Maine, also said network broadcasts should concentrate on communicating important news. "I felt we weren't perhaps being serious enough about the news," he said.

Melvin Fisher

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Treasure hunter Melvin A. Fisher says he enjoys the looks on kids' faces when they see the gold bars, silver plates, pieces of eight and antique weapons in his exhibit at the Indianapolis Children's Museum.

"They can come in really bored about history but go out really turned on about the way people lived and the tools they used," said Fisher, 65.

Monday was "Mel Fisher Day" at the museum, which has the only exhibit of the treasure Fisher retrieved from the Atlantic off the Florida coast from two sunken Spanish ships, despite protracted legal wrangles with government.

"I'll never retire and just do nothing, but rather I'll probably be a consultant and oversee expeditions," he said. "I will probably be treasure hunting the rest of my life. Its not just the gold or the emeralds. It gets in your blood."

KILCHOAN, Scotland (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II, who underwent what was described as a routine heart checkup last week, climbed 152 steps to the top of Britain's most westerly lighthouse Monday.

The 60-year-old queen became the first British monarch to climb the 114-foot Ardmurchan Lighthouse, overlooking the Irish Sea on the southwestern coast of Scotland. She is vacationing the rest of this week at Balmoral Castle.

Lighthouse keeper Jim Hardie said the queen managed the climb with ease, and was not out of breath when she reached the top.

Buckingham Palace said the queen underwent a routine examination last Tuesday at London's National Heart Hospital. The palace has not disclosed details of the checkup, but said the queen is in good health.

Double C Stable offers fun and exercise for the entire family

Learning to ride can be a fun experience for the entire family and Double C boasts some of the finest riding facilities in West Texas. These include a large indoor arena, a permanent dressage ring, round pen, wash racks, hot walkers, hacking-/galloping area and a full set of jumps.

In order to better serve their clientelle B.J. Carpenter and Cowden Oliver, owners of Double C Stables, recently added trainer Peggy Trousdale to their staff. English riding is Trousdale's specialty and she has more than ten years experience teaching and training riders and horses. Trousdale has taught clinics in dressage, jumping and general horse management all over the United States and many of her students have won in competition.

Trousdale's clinic credits include Middle Tennessee, Council Oaks, Amwell Valley Hounds and the 1983 USPC National Festival. "I've even been a polo groom," Trousdale jokes.

"Seriously, Double C has some of the best facilities I've seen for dressage, hunter and jumper training," said Trousdale, an 'A' level Pony Club graduate.

Riders at all experience levels will find individualized care and service at Double C, where private riding lessons can be scheduled using your horse or Double C's. Beginning riders will be taught how to care for their horse and equipment, as well as riding. More advanced riders can learn new skills and full coaching for competition is available.

Do you have an unbroken horse, or perhaps a horse that hasn't been ridden for awhile? Double C will train your horse for you!

"Professional training for your horse can be the difference between enjoying a ride or not," Trousdale commented. "Not only do you get better training for the horse, but it's also safer for you."

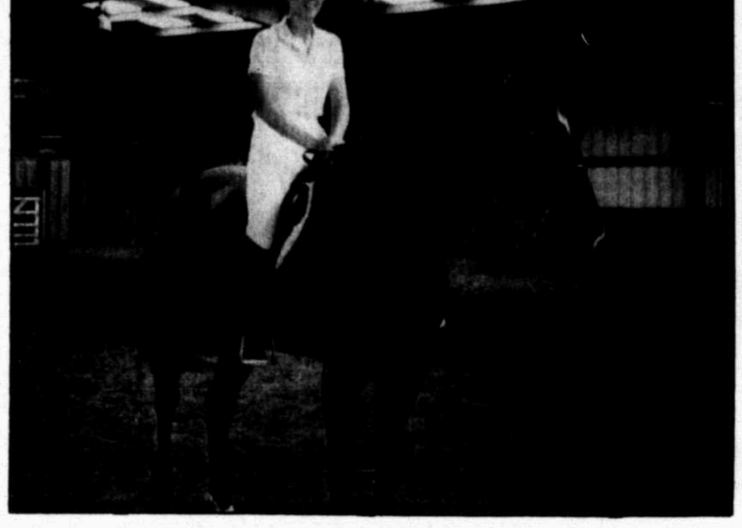
"We do urge anyone who is interested to come out and view our facilities," Trousdale said. "I hope to be able to give the people in this area a chance to use my expertise. Since there is a lot of horse activitiy around here, I feel I can give a new perspective to people on their riding."

Complete boarding facilities are available. Double C will stable and train all types of horses, Trousdale pointed out. "Of course we are most well known for our quarterhorses, but we have many different types of horses in our stables now."

Constant, on-grounds supervision ensures safety and quality care at Double C Stables.

Thanks to their outstanding facilities Double C will be hosting several shows during the year, including an Open Dressage Show in September and a Hunter/Jumper Schooling Show in October.

Located on Cloverdale Road, two miles east of Florida Avenue, Double C is surrounded by areas suitable for trail riding. Western riding and full training for cutting horses is also available. For more information about any of the programs at Double C Stables call 687-6442.



Peggy Trousdale, new on the staff at Double C Stables, has more than a decade of experience in English riding. For information concerning instructions call 687-6442.

The cleaning, finishing and inspecting staff at Fashion Cleaners, 801 W. Wall, has 160 years of combined experience. Trust your fine clothing to the experts - (front, l to r) Vicente Aguirre, Mary Caballero, Virginia Burnett, Rita Madrid, Tina Dominquez, Virginia Mancha, Teresa Venegas, Yolanda Ceinceros, (back row) dry cleaner Wayman Pitchford, Maria Rodriquez and Sharon Pinson. Trust the Fashion Cleaners experts with your dry cleaning

For over 49 years the people of Midland have trusted their fine clothing to Fashion Cleaners, 801 W. Wall. It's no wonder when you consider the expertise and care that goes into each garment cleaned or laundered at Fashion Cleaners.

Owner James McCain says that their cleaning, pressing, finishing and inspecting staff alone has a combined 160 years experience. Waymon Pitchford, Fashion's dry cleaner, has 30 years of experience.

Each time a customer leaves a garment, table cloth or drapes at Fashion Cleaners, he can count on it getting expert care. Each item is handled approximately 19 times in the cleaning, finishing, inspecting process. Clothes are inspected five times for spots.

There's no question about it, Fashion Cleaners' has a long-time commitment to quality dry cleaning.

There are two types of dry cleaning provided by Fashion Cleaners. McCain explains that a petroleum cleaning product is used for most dry cleaning. He calls this "one of the better" cleaning processes and points out that it leaves the natural oils and fibers in the fabrics. Sizing is used in each dry cleaning load to provide a better feel or body. It's one of the extra touches that make Fashion's work look so nice.

Fashion's second dry cleaning system, Fuormatic, uses Dalclean. This closed unit is dedicated to silks, ultra suedes, furs and wedding dresses. McCain says, "It does a beautiful job."

However it is cleaned, each garment is checked for spots, touch-up, minor repairs, button replacement and hems that are out.

Each garment, table linen, drapes or other dry cleaned item is hand finished by experienced personnel. Special equipment is used to insure a smooth finish, and more sizing may be added. The Coat-A-Matic is used to shape the shoulders and crease the collar of jackets.

Sweaters are measured in six places before cleaning, then cleaned and put on the steam table for blocking. Then, all six measurements are checked again.

Finally, the garments and other cleaned fabrics are carefully hung, and the customer sees the result of a constant commitment to quality dry cleaning and laundry.

Yet, this is only part of what happens behind the scene at Fashion Cleaners. Furs are cleaned, glazed and kept in cold storage. The alteration and tailoring department is constantly setting appointments for fittings. And, pillows are sanitized and put in new ticking.

In addition, Fashion Cleaners is now equipped to offer quality laundry service. Week after week satisfied customers leave their bundles of fine clothes that have lost their dazzling appeal or neat simplicity. When they pick those same clothes up they find garments that have been carefully laundered and given a fine finish.

McCain explains that their laundry equipment is all new, state-of-the-art machinery. The completely computerized washers are fully automatic and can be programmed for various kinds of fabrics. Shirts and jeans laundered here come out looking really sharp, whether you request starch or no starch. Because, either way each garment is hand finished. McCain is particularly excited about their ability to offer beautiful shirt service.

If you've come to appreciate the extra effort Fashion Cleaners' experts put into their dry cleaning, now is the time to check out their shirt service. You'll find that Fashion will do an equally superb job finishing your shirts.

Fashion Cleaners also has the Eldon Drapery franchise which can offer you complete drapery service, including taking the drapes down, cleaning them and rehanging them.

You'll enjoy the expertise and commitment to quality at Fashion Cleaners, 801 W. Wall. For your convenience, they have a second location at ClayDesta.

Rainbow Press meets a full spectrum of printing needs

Many Midlanders have found that in the midst of all the fog of a business routine, Rainbow Press is a beautiful discovery. It's as refreshing as the sight of a rainbow on a misty day.

Rainbow Press is the promise of a better future when it comes down to your printing needs. For those simple little jobs where everything is black and white, you can count on a good clean presentation when Rainbow does the printing. At the other end of the spectrum, Rainbow Press will show their colors for those extra special printing jobs. The whole rainbow of choices is yours at Midland's fine printer, located at 2706 W. Betty's Boutique has back-to-school and office fashions for fall

Back-to-school time marks an exciting beginning both for students and other individuals. That means you need a new wardrobe suitable for all your activities — a wardrobe that's right for the office or one that can take you from the classroom to a football game to a Saturday night date.

Betty's Boutique, located in the San Miguel Square, has all the junior styles you need for your back-to-school wardrobe. Betty says their Guess jeans and overalls are really popular and her selection is totally awesome.

Blouses, sweat shirts and jogging suits also make the "must have" list for this fall. Mickey Mouse fashions and the oversized look are definitely "in" and in stock at Betty's.

To complete your fall wardrobe, Betty's has a large selection of accessories. To help you make the grade Betty's has lots of belts, more handbags than ever before and sheer Hanes hose in the fashionable fall colors.

For the professional woman that is under 5'4", Betty's has the Missy Petite styles that are appropriate for the office scene. J.H. collectibles and Personal Petites offer a wide selection of skirts, dresses and coordinates.

For all their customers, Betty's has added a selection of sleepware. A perfect gift for your back to college girls are night shirts, which are a comfortable favorite in the dorm. Betty has also added beautiful gowns and robes for home and leisure.

Visa, MasterCard and American Express are all accepted, and Betty does have a layaway plan.

For fashionable clothes and the right accessories to match, go by Betty's Boutique in San Miguel Square.

Copy Service and Supplies opens new downtown showroom

Many dignitaries, including Mayor Carroll Thomas, turned out for a big celebration as David Ingrham cut the ribbon for Copy Service and Supplies new showroom in the Vaughn Building, 400 W. Texas.

Copy Service and Supplies was started in 1945. Since that time the company has grown with the technology of the copy machine industry and with the Midland business community. Last Friday Copy Service and Supplies, Inc. and Midland reached another milestone as the company's new downtown showroom was opened in the Vaughn Building, 400 W. Texas.

David Ingrham, president of the local company, announced that instead of opening the new showroom in their "normal quiet, efficient manner," they decided to invite Midland to join in the celebration.

County Commissioner Wallace Craig echoed the sentiment that it was time for some good news in Midland.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Carroll Thomas and many others turned out for the big ribbon-cutting celebration.

The beautiful showroom has a contemporary air, entirely appropriate for the display of state-of-the-art office equipment, offered by Copy Service and Supplies.

Mita is the copier on display. Ingrham says they choose Mita "because they do nothing but copiers... they have the edge in quality manufacturing, design and fabrication."

Mita maintains that edge by putting its profits back into research and development for better, more advanced copiers.

Copy Service and Supplies recently added Olympia typewriters to their Mita line. When asked why a company that had specialized in sales and service of copy machines alone for so many years would begin offering typewriters, Ingrham had an enlightening response. "The primary stimulus was that the office of the future is going to be completely integrated... A big part of that will be the keyboard technology... It won't be that far in the future when they'll (office personnel) sit at a word processor, type a letter for administration, then touch a key and it will be printed on a copier across the room, around the corner or across the world."

Ingrham felt it was important for his company to get some experience servicing keyboards, so they will be well prepared for the "smart" copiers.

No doubt, Copy Service and Supplies, Inc. is looking to a bright future in Midland.

Shorts: Super styles beat summer heat

By JULIE VARGO TURI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Summer's soaring temperatures demand the pared-down panache of easygoing togs. Less becomes more as winter-weary skin begs to worship the sun. In an effort to keep cool, hot and heavy trousers are tossed aside in favor of leg-baring shorts.

While shorts have always been a staple of warm-weather wardrobes, this season they burst onto the fashion scene in a new light. Faded cut-offs and nylon running shorts take a back seat to more dramatic shapes — curve-caressing bicycle shorts, carefree jams and trim walking shorts. Punchy prints write the ticket for off-duty hours. Rainbow-bright tints replace tired neutrals.

Fashion-conscious divas pair those leg-baring bottoms with everything from neat linen jackets and blouses for a day at the office to body-conscious tops for a romp in the sun.

The skinny bicycle shorts lining the racks in department and specialty stores trace their roots to athletic shops where cyclists have been buying the durable spandex bottoms for years.

For the Saturday biker who's more interested in fashion than function, Claude Montana slices his interpretation of the trendy cycling short from stretchy, crayon-colored knits. The sleek shorts hug the thigh and caress the leg as they slip to the knee. For an even more body-conscious look, Montana pairs these bottoms with slim tunics cut from the same fabric.

Tattletale bicycle shorts demand a fine-tuned physique, but there are plenty of options for those who didn't spend quite enough time at the gym this winter. Longer walking shorts, with their fuller cut and roomy pleats, hide a multitude of figure flaws. These crisp shorts even defy John Molloy this summer, weaving their way into the office under natty blazers in place of the traditional skirt .

"The city short suit — shorts worn with a jacket and blouse — is an option to the traditional suit," says Marty Karp of Mary Ann Restivo.

Restivo cuffs pleated, linen walking shorts and pairs them with a short, V-front jacket. A longer, tailored blazer tops crisp Bermuda shorts at Perry Ellis.

There are even alternatives for those who want to wear their shorts to the office, but don't want everyone to notice. "We are seeing a revival of the shorts playsuit — shorts that are worn under a matching dress," says Lucille Klein of Sanger Harris. "The woman unbuttons the skirt and her shorts peek out, or she can take the skirt off entirely and just wear the top of the dress with the shorts."

Carefree days spent soaking up the sun demand more fun-loving attire. Surfer shorts, called jams, make a comeback this season as the weekend uniform. The long, baggy, drawstring shorts boast the same wild combinations of prints — gigantic florals, bold geometrics, crazy abstract designs — that made waves with the California surfers and beach bums back in the '50s.

When you pull on a pair of jams, forget everything your mother ever told you about combining tones and mixing prints. Hot pink and chartreuse mingle with slashes of red, orange, emerald and royal. While a solid T-shirt in neon yellow or an equally bright color is still acceptable, the more daring opt for a fun-loving mix-and-match.

Leg-toning tips make summer beautiful

By JULIE VARGO-TURI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — Summer is the season for bare-as-you-dare legs — high-cut swimsuits, leg-flattering shorts, thigh-grazing minis. But if you spent the winter months dodging the gym, chances are that while the temperature tempts you to take it all off, your legs are pleading with you to leave it all on.

Don't despair. It's not too late to trade droopy saddlebag hips and cottage cheese thighs for leaner legs and a shaplier silhouette.

Experts agree that a combination of diet, aerobic workouts and toning exercises is the fastest way to streamline legs. "Once you get into a consistent program of diet, exercise and spot toning, you can begin to see results in three to four weeks," says Diane Whiting, YMCAerobics and Fitness director here. "It's important not to do too much too quickly. If a person becomes sore and discouraged in the beginning, they tend to quit working out."

Before beginning any spot exercising, however, it is important to start losing those extra pounds. "A woman interested in slimming her thighs and toning her legs should first concentrate on taking off any excess weight," says Joyce Ward, aerobics director for President's Health Club. "Otherwise, spot exercises will contour the muscle under the layer of fat. This can actually result in a bigger leg."

To peel off pounds, choose moderate, low-intensity workouts that can be easily paced and extended over a long period of time. Swimming, running, biking and aerobic dance, when done at least three times a week, will burn stored fat.

Lack of time, money or costly gym equipment is no excuse to let your legs turn into Jell-O molds. Walking briskly is one of the easiest, safest and least expensive ways to tone legs, buttocks and hips while deriving aerobic benefits. A good pace can burn about 300 calories if you cover three miles in an hour.

Once you've established a diet and workout regimen, concentrate on spot exercises to streamline legs. "If a woman really wants to shape up her legs, doing toning exercises with leg weights will speed up the process," says Ward. "Anything that offers resistance to the muscle will intensify the results. An industrial rubber band — one of the large kind that are about an inch wide — slipped a round the ankles while doing leg lifts is also excellent."

When doing spot exercises, concentrate on tightening the buttocks and leg muscles. Don't try to lift the leg too high or swing it too fast. Aim for a consistent pace and do the exercise correctly.

If your form deteriorates, the chance of injury increases. "So many of the spot exercises for legs and thighs can strain your lower back if done incorrectly," says Ward. "Make sure your posture is correct when exercising and work on increasing the number of repetitions."

AT WIT'S END

Time away costs

By Erma Bombeck

In the Guilt Hall of Fame, one plaintive cry stands out over all the others: "What did you bring me?"

For generations, children have been able to bring parents to their penitent knees with that one simple question. It is what makes fathers buy $50 talking bears at airport gift shops and mothers prowl through drugstores for coloring books on the way home from a hysterectomy.

Somehow, we must pay an exorbitant price for abandoning our children with $5,000 worth of toys, a $2,000 entertainment center, two freezers full of food, enough soft drinks to launch the QE II and a baby sitter who is being paid to monitor their breathing. I have been a pigeon so many times, I can't pass a ledge anymore without feeling I'm home.

Sometimes I feel like the comedian who said recently he was gone for two hours and his family put his face on a milk carton. Every child psychologist I have ever read has recommended time away from your children. The kids need it and the parents need it. Yet, how many of us can afford it?

Most guilt-ridden parents work under the theory that you never buy affection with anything that fits under the seat of an airplane.

A few years ago, I gave a speech in the Bahamas. I was there two days... speaking and smiling for a day and half. The other half day was spent scrambling through gift shops looking for peace offerings for my kids because I was having such a great time speaking and smiling. I ended up with a large drum which rode between my knees and a spear which caused airport security great anxiety. ("When was the last time Miami was attacked by spears?")

Finally, at journey's end, I made my presentation. The kid grabbed it, ran to his room and emerged two minutes later.

"The drum has little bugs in it that are crawling around the carpet and up the walls. Did you bring anything else?"

I never learn. I lugged a blowfish that I had to hold away from my body on a string all the way from Mazatlan, Mexico, and two coconuts with painted faces from Hawaii. I have paid $5 for a childproof toy at the supermarket in which the bell was removed in five seconds. Not to mention the horns of a steer which I strapped to my back to get home and it lived under my son's bed for five years.

Why do we do it? Because kids know all the right buttons to push. We equate presents with love. Ergo, if there are no presents, there is no love.

I always wanted to return from a trip and when my kids asked, "What did you bring me?" I wanted to say, "Me! I wash, wax, dust, flush and play. I'm unbreakable, always in style and I fit. You don't have to feed me, clean me up or put me away. I love you even when you don't love me."

I was afraid they'd sling me under the bed with the rest of the stuff.

DEAR ABBY

Pile of socks small hill for military wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Not Sure in Louisiana," whose fiance — a U.S. serviceman stationed in England — shipped her 203 pairs of dirty socks to launder:

Don't complain, Honey. At least you know what he spent his money on. Also, he'll never have to buy another pair of socks as long as he lives.

I've been married to a Navy man for a long time, so let me give you a little advice. Any woman who is married to a career military man will be expected to do her share of dirty work, from a ton of laundry a week to patching a leaky sewer on a trailer home. (Tar is best, but it's murder to get off your hands and clothes.)

So, you must learn how to: fix a flat tire with a broken jack; cook hamburger 1,000 different ways; move your kids, your home and your life halfway around the world without his help; travel cross-country with three kids, a St. Bernard and a cat in a broken-down station wagon because you want to be there when he comes off a seven-month cruise; be Mommy, Daddy, chauffeur, cook, nurse, tutor and referee; get a part-time job to make ends meet; accept the fact that there's a right way, a wrong way and the military way; be diplomatic, tactful, loving and cheerful if it kills you; and adjust to so many different moves you sometimes forget where you're living — without becoming an alcoholic, a drug abuser or a mental case. You'll be too busy loving him to complain about his stupid socks. — NAVY WIFE (NEARLY RETIRED)

DEAR ABBY: Are you ready for something trivial? A co-worker took me to task for failing to say, "God bless you," every time she sneezed.

I told her I thought it was silly. Why should sneezes be "blessed"? No other bodily noises evoke a blessing. Not coughing, belching, hiccuping, etc.

This friend makes a regular conversation out of a sneeze:

"Ah, choo!"

"Bless you."

"Thank you!"

"You're welcome."

As far as I'm concerned, the sneezer should say, "Excuse me for spreading germs." Why did sneezes come to be blessed in the first place? — NO BLESSER IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR NO BLESSER: In the Middle Ages, legend had it that when a person sneezed, the soul temporarily left the body. However, saying, "God bless you!" prevented its being snatched away by the devil. (It may not help, but, like chicken soup, it can't hurt.)

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the woman who was glad she had married a handicapped man in a wheelchair. I would like to tell my story:

Sixteen years ago, over strong protests from family and friends, I married a man whose doctors told him he had about two years to live. He was an overseas missionary who had been sent home to die. We met in a nursing home where I was a volunteer.

Abby, I loved and respected this man, and would have been content with just two years together. However, I suspected that poor nutrition played a major role in his illness, so I eliminated sugar, salt, junk food, white flour and food additives from his diet. (Fortunately he didn't drink or smoke.)

The combination of our strong faith in God, his determination to get well and a proper diet restored his health. He returned to full-time ministry, earning two doctorates along the way!

The man I married could barely move his 140-pound, 6-foot 2-inch frame from wheelchair to crutches. Today he stands tall and straight, with no gray hair, leading a normal, active life at age 59. I couldn't ask for a better husband.

My advice to anyone considering marriage to a physically handicapped person is this: If the handicap is your only concern — go for it! Strong faith and good health habits can work miracles. — LUCKY IN NEW YORK

DEAR LUCKY: He's lucky, too.

Tips for foot care

CHICAGO (UPI) — Parents know that children's feet grow like mushrooms so to acquaint parents with basic foot care, Dr. Scholl's Foot Health Council has a free booklet, "Caring for Your Children's Feet From Infancy to Adolescence." Written by two orthopedic specialists, Dr. Charles Gudas of the University of Chicago and Dr. John Waller of New York's Lenox Hill Hospital, the booklet offers these tips:

Basic foot hygiene — Wash and dry feet thoroughly, then apply foot powder to help keep them dry.

Preventing athlete's foot — After sports activities, shoes should be allowed to dry. Youngsters should not share shoes.

Dancing en pointe — Dancers should not dance en pointe until their feet and leg muscles are strong enough to allow them to stand at the ballet barre without relying on toe shoes for support. Point work should not begin until 12-13 years of age.

For a free copy, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Scholl's Parents Booklet, PRB-UP, 303 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, IL 60601.

House considers defense spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is trying to decide how much "Star Wars" anti-missile research money the government should spend next year and whether President Reagan should be forced to observe the SALT II nuclear arms treaty.

Those contentious issues are at the top of the agenda as the Democratic-controlled chamber plows through a bill authorizing a defense budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Whatever passes the House will have to be reconciled in a conference committee next month with the defense spending plan approved last week by the Republican-run Senate.

The House bill would authorize $292 billion for defense and the Senate measure $295 billion. Both figures are not much above the current $286 billion budget and are far below Reagan's $320 billion request.

The Senate bill proposes $3.95 billion for Star Wars and suggests, but does not require, that the United States should continue to adhere to weapons limits that are part of the unratified 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

The bill on the House floor includes $3.8 billion for Star Wars, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative. Reagan sought $5.3 billion for the program, which will spend $3.1 billion this year.

Pending before the House are four different Star Wars budgets ranging from Reagan's full request down to $1 billion.

On SALT II, an amendment is pending that would bar spending any money for weapons that would put U.S. arsenals above the numerical limits in the pact.

Reagan says he will no longer be guided by SALT II in making weapons-building decisions because he says the Soviets are violating the pact.

Reducing the Star Wars budget and adhering to SALT II are two major goals of a group of House Democratic liberals who have been critical of the Reagan administraton's Pentagon budget in past years.

The administration opposes both goals, arguing that they will hamper efforts to reach new arms control treaties with the Soviets.

As it worked through the bill Monday night, the House:

— Shot down two attempts to kill next year's planned purchase of 12 MX missiles at a cost of $1.1 billion. The two amendments, rejected 210-178 and 217-179, would have used the money to build non-nuclear weapons and reduce the federal deficit by differing amounts.

— Voted 277-125 against banning the Air Force from buying the new T-46 planes to train pilots, rejecting arguments from opponents who say the service should come up with another trainer. But the House ordered the Air Force to consider other trainers. The Senate is supporting the T-46.

— Voted twice against requiring a new series of tests for the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the much-criticized personnel carrier being produced for the Army.

— Voted 211-188 against adding a $1.5 billion Trident missile-firing submarine to the bill. The Navy wants the sub, and the Senate has approved it, but the House Armed Services Committee torpedoed the idea because of budget constraints.

— Rejected, 306-94, an amendment killing $1.4 billion for the new Trident II missiles that will go aboard the subs later in the decade. The Trident II has a longer range and greater accuracy than the Trident I, the weapon it replaces.

Senators fighting special-interest funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators who want to curb the growing influence of special interest money in congressional campaigns are confident they can win the Senate's first head-on vote on the issue in a decade.

"I'm optimistic we'll have more than 50 votes," Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said Monday after the Senate opened debate on his bipartisan legislation to limit campaign contributions by political action committees.

The 100-member Senate was scheduled to vote on the proposal today.

Boren and 17 co-sponsors were fighting the congressional clock because floor action on the PAC-limit bill — delayed since last December — finally began with only five weeks left in the scheduled 1986 session.

Even if the measure finally clears the Senate, it also would have to be approved by the House, where more than 100 members are co-sponsoring a similar bill.

Boren, one of a handful of senators who do not accept campaign money from PACs, said he was encouraged by Monday's debate over limiting a source of funds created by post-Watergate reforms in the mid-1970s.

"I think we're gaining on both sides of the aisle," he said. "We've been picking up substantial strength. You didn't have senators flocking to the floor to oppose what we are trying to do."

On Monday, Boren and his allies recited statistics showing PAC money going to congressional candidates from labor, business and ideological groups increased from $12 million in 1974 to $104 million a decade later. The figures also showed 98 members of Congress got more than half their campaign money from PACs in 1982, while 163 members were in that category in 1984.

PAC critics say this growing stack of money has contributed greatly to a sharp rise in the price of getting elected. Successful Senate candidates in 1976 spent an average of $600,000, but the average winner in 1984 spent $2.9 million, according to Boren.

The legislation generally would limit House candidates to $100,000 in PAC money per election cycle. Senate candidates would face a general limit of from $175,000 to $750,000, depending on a state's population.

The bill would cut the maximum amount a PAC can give a candidate from $5,000 to $3,000, while raising the amount an individual can contribute from $1,000 to $1,500.

"The PAC system tends to give special interests a disproporionate share of influence," Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said Monday. He added that raising money from PACs to help finance increasingly expensive campaigns is a "grubby, demeaning task."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said PAC spending "is a way for a special interest group...to prevail against the public interest. No one voluntarily parts with thousands of dollars...unless there's a payoff.... It may come in a speech not delivered, in one change in a 240-page bill, in hiring a staff member who is sympathetic to a PAC."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, defended PAC money. "America is about special interests. How do we bring about a concensus of special interests to bring about the national interest?"

The measure's chief opponent, Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., predicted the changes would give affluent individuals more power in elections and foster an increase in independent spending by PACs for or against candidates.

Boschwitz said he would attempt to amend the PAC-limit bill to prohibit PAC contributions to political parties and to outlaw so-called soft money, the nonreportable contributions of cash and services that business and labor give to the parties.

NATION IN BRIEF

Soviets' American victim has job, two apartments

Mauri

NEW YORK (AP) — A New Yorker portrayed in a Soviet documentary as a victim of capitalism has two homes and a union job in which he could earn $35,000 a year, according to his union, his employer and a published report.

Following his eviction last year from a Manhattan apartment, Joseph Mauri, 57, appeared in the Soviet film "The Man from Fifth Avenue." The apartment owner wanted to turn his living quarters into a sewing room.

Mauri now is on an expense-paid tour of the Soviet Union, where he has been featured in newspapers and on national television. The Soviet news agency Tass called him a man "who first lost his job and then also became homeless."

Mauri seeks to publicize the plight of America's homeless, but he is not homeless himself. In an interview two weeks ago, he said he moved to a small, $112-per-month room in a residential hotel after his eviction.

The Daily News reported today that Mauri has a studio apartment on Manhattan's Upper West Side, for which he pays less than $400 a month.

Reagan visiting Illinois

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, less than two weeks after approving subsidized sales of U.S. wheat to the Soviet Union, is making a one-day outing to his native Illinois to lend moral support to financially pressed Midwestern farmers.

Outlining Reagan's plans before today's trip, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the aim was "to demonstrate his interest in the problems that are faced in agriculture."

The president was to award blue ribbons to youngsters participating in livestock competition at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield, and congratulate those participating in "Operation Haylift" for drought-stricken Southeastern farmers.

Vote likely on evidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a House subcommittee investigating Michael K. Deaver are predicting the panel will turn over to an independent counsel evidence of possible perjury by the former presidential aide.

The House Energy and Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee was scheduled to vote today on whether to supply the information. Deaver's attorneys requested the panel to provide whatever evidence it had to the court-appointed independent counsel investigating conflict-of-interest charges against Deaver.

The attorneys protested leaks to the press last week about a staff report's conclusion that there was evidence of possible perjury by Deaver during his subcommittee testimony.

Lockheed payments held

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says it is doing a good job watching how defense contractors run secret programs, even though it admits it is withholding some payments to Lockheed Corp. because the company cannot locate 1,400 secret documents.

The Pentagon's so-called "black" programs are "well-conceived, well-managed and subject to appropriate oversight," Donald Hicks, undersecretary of defense for research, told a House subcommittee Monday.

But Reps. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., and John Dingell, D-Mich., criticized Hicks' comments.

"We should rethink our whole approach to classified programs," Wyden said. "There ought to be fewer of them."

Penalty hard to collect

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department believes it will be difficult to collect a $1.2 million fine levied against a fugitive California businessman for illegally shipping advanced computers to Moscow.

However, Donald Creed, a department spokesman, said the denial of all export privileges may prove to be a harsher penalty for the businessman, Charles J. McVey Jr.

"The difficulty of collecting the fine is not unique in this kind of a case," Creed said Monday. "The important part of this order is the denial of export privileges, and it takes effect immediately. If he is doing business overseas that has anything to do with U.S. products, he has a problem. Nobody will deal with him."

Monday's denial order prohibits anyone from conducting export dealings with McVey and his three firms in Anaheim, Calif. — Vanguard International Ltd., Facilities Management Ltd. and Land Resources Management Inc. — that involve goods of U.S. origin, Commerce Undersecretary Bruce Smart said.

The equipment that McVey allegedly shipped to Moscow, "including sophisticated computers, peripherals, oscilloscopes, software and a satellite image processing system, have direct military uses and are controlled for national security reasons," Smart said. "These goods would not have been approved for export to the Soviet Union."

Has drought ended?

Associated Press

Thirteen Georgia cities already have exceeded their average August rainfall, and meteorologists are debating whether the increased moisture signals an end to the drought plaguing the Southeast.

Heavy thunderstorms spanned the drought region on Monday, from southeast Virginia to Florida's panhandle.

More than 4 inches of rain fell Monday in Greensboro, N.C., while Pungo, Va., reported 3 inches within three hours. The storms downed trees and power lines in much of North Carolina. A woman was electrocuted when she got tangled in a downed electric line in Durham, N.C.

The death toll from heat in the South and Midwest since July 1, meanwhile, reached 123 on Monday as South Carolina officials announced six more heat-related deaths.

National Weather Service meteorologist William Lerner said the damp August is a fluke.

Burger urges lawyers to stress self-discipline

NEW YORK (AP) — Chief Justice Warren Burger says lawyers can deflect growing public hostility with more dignified advertising, fewer contingency fees and tougher professional self-discipline.

The alternative, he told the American Bar Association in his 17th and final "State of the Judiciary" message, is regulation, as in medicine "when there was overstepping of the bounds, and the public interest required action which the professions themselves failed to take."

Another ABA audience Monday gave Gov. Mario Cuomo a standing ovation when he criticized President Reagan and the U.S. Senate for selecting judges on the basis of ideology.

"It is not unusual for a president to try to bend the (Supreme) Court to fit his own ideological, social or political beliefs," Cuomo said, noting that Republican Abraham Lincoln did it and so did Democrat Franklin Roosevelt.

But he added that selecting justices because of their ideologies "excludes those who may exhibit far superior judicial talent but happen to belong to the wrong party or philosophical school."

"If this country wanted its Supreme Court to reflect the immediate social or political wishes of the nation's people, it would provide for the election of the court," Cuomo said.

Outside the hotel where Burger spoke, about 500 demonstrators blew whistles and decried the Supreme Court's decision allowing states to prohibit sodomy.

Members of the Coalition for Gay and Lesbian Rights, an umbrella group for the city's homosexuals, held placards and chanted, "Married or single, gay or straight, sodomy laws bring fear and hate."

The 78-year-old retiring chief justice did not address any of the issues the court has handled recently. He instead focused on professional issues.

Aggressive advertising by lawyers in telephone books, newspapers and on television suggests that "some lawyers have lost sight of the traditional values," Burger said. "Some of the advertising would make a used-car dealer blush with shame."

He likened ads that offer potential clients an initial free consultation to "a fox telling the chickens he will not bite them until after they're inside the henhouse."

Referring to the chemical leak in Bhopal, India, that killed 2,000 people, Burger said: "Few things have done more serious damage to the standing of the legal profession than the ... shocking spectacle of open solicitation by a handful of lawyers who dashed off to India to solicit clients."

Although he criticized contingency fees in liability cases, Burger did not suggest they be outlawed or abolished. He called instead for their control by judges in some cases. With such fees, lawyers are paid a portion of the damages won by their clients and get nothing if they lose.

Burger also charged that the legal profession has not adequately disciplined itself, and he blamed the misconduct of a few judges for a recent negative public opinion of the profession.

He also reviewed what he said were improvements during his 17 years, including the systematic training of court administrators, increased concern in law schools for teaching trial advocacy and professional ethics and the advent of dispute resolution.

During its meeting Monday, the ABA's House of Delegates refused to end an agreement it has with the Association of Soviet Lawyers.

ABA leaders admitted that the Soviet lawyers' organization is an agency of propaganda against human rights activists. However, they said, it was necessary to maintain ties to the Soviet group to be able to register American lawyers' objections to Soviet human rights and other policies.

Among the panel discussions at the ABA convention Monday was one on terrorism, attended by Attorney General Edwin Meese III, FBI Director William Webster and other officials.

Meese suggested that the best method for dealing with terrorism is a policy like that chosen by President Reagan in April, when the United States bombed Libya, in retalia-
