'99 grad gets scholarship

Special to The Brand

HOUSTON — A Hereford High School graduate was among 70 Texas 4-H students receiving Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo Scholarships.

Meredith McGowan was named as a recipient of one of the four-year scholarships, which are valued at $10,000. The scholarships were presented during ceremonies last week at the Texas 4-H Roundup in College Station.

McGowan, the daughter of Jim and Lucy McGowan, was ranked No. 6 in the Class of 1999 at Hereford High School.

She plans to attend Texas A&M University, where she will major in animal science. During her high school career, she was president of the 4-H Horse Club, served as an FFA officer, was captain of the cross-country team, and was a member of the Deaf Smith County 4-H Council, National Honor Society, Student Council, band, Key Club, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, PALS (Peer-Assisted Learning), Bluebonnet Girls State and the honor roll.

She also earned first-place honors as a member of the horse judging team in the American Junior Paint Horse Association World Judging Contest.

She also was a Camp Fire youth.

Report: Civic health improves

WASHINGTON (AP) — America might not become a "nation of spectators" after all.

Last year, the National Commission on Civic Renewal issued a report that decried Americans' disengagement from government and community work. But now the commission releases an update that says the nation's civic health is on the mend.

"We can now say with confidence that the decade-long decline in our civic condition has not only halted, but has significantly improved," said

William Galston, executive director of the commission, which spent 18 months studying the state of citizenship in American life.

The 20-member commission, which tracks trends in family stability, civic membership, crime and other factors to monitor the nation's civic and moral pulse, issued its index of national civic health. The index fell by more than 20 percent during the decade ending in 1994 and then began its ascent.

The index for 1997, the last year the commission has been able to compile data to track all the trends, says more people trust the government, feel safer in their neighborhoods and participate in politics. And Galston, who has gotten a peek at more recent data, says he thinks the civic health index will continue to rise.

"My guess is that when we do the index for 1998, it will continue to show an improvement," Galston said.

Last year, the commission, chaired by William Bennett, a Republican and former education secretary, and former Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., issued a double-barreled message: The civic health had eroded and it was unclear whether positive signs foretold a rebound.

"Never have we had so many opportunities for participation, yet rarely have we felt so powerless," last year's report said. "In a time that cries out for civic action, we are in danger of becoming a nation of spectators."

The new index says the percentage of adults who trust the federal

Getting some practice

How'd I miss it? — That's what could be going through Ronnie Martinez' mind as he turns to look at the ball thrown to him by his father, Tony Martinez, during a little batting practice Thursday afternoon at Hereford Aquatic Center Park. The boy had just taken a Mark McGwire-type swing at the pitch, but in this case the ball didn't fly out of the park.

Political legend is dead

● Bullock dominated Texas' world of politics for more than 40 years

AUSTIN (AP)

Former Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, an often gruff and always imposing figure in Texas politics for 40 years, died today at his Austin home.

Bullock, 69, had suffered various health problems over the years. Most recently, he was hospitalized for congestive heart failure. He died about 7 a.m., according to aide Tony Proffitt.

Bullock's career took him from the depths of alcoholism to the heights of the lieutenant governor's office, widely considered the most powerful in state government. "Records will reflect that Bob Bullock was a giant of Texas history with few peers," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant.

Both highly controversial and highly effective, he never lost an election or the competitive fires that burned so hot for so long. "I don't like to lose," he once told an interviewer. "You show me a good loser, and I'll show you a loser."

The lifelong Democrat retained the power to surprise, even when he wasn't running. In 1998, he endorsed Republican Gov. George W. Bush for re-election and for an office Bush wasn't then even seeking, saying, "I would be proud to call him my president."

Born in Hillsboro on July 10, 1929, Bullock won a seat representing his hometown while still a Baylor Law School student in 1956. He was re-elected in 1958.

It was the opening page of a long public resume that started when no Republican held statewide office and ended when Republicans held them all.

He entered private law practice after leaving the House but returned to state government in 1967 as an assistant attorney general. He organized the office's first anti-trust and consumer protection division, winning a major recovery for Texas hospitals in a price-fixing lawsuit against national pharmaceutical firms.

Bullock served as an aide to the governor from 1969 to 1971, then was secretary of state in 1971 and 1972. There, he reformed the campaign finance reporting system.

In 1974, he was elected to the first of four terms as state comptroller, the state's chief tax collector.

BORN — July 10, 1929.

DIED — June 18, 1999.

EDUCATION — Hill College; Texas Tech University, Bachelor of Arts; Baylor University, law degree.

CAREER — Lieutenant governor, 1991-99; state comptroller, 1975-1990; secretary of state, 1971-72; aide to governor, 1969-71; assistant attorney general, 1967-68; Texas Historical Commission, 1963-65; state representative, 1957-59.

FAMILY — Wife, Jan; three adult children; one grandchild.

QUOTE — "On and off for 40 years, I have walked through the halls of this magnificent Capitol building, 40 years in partnership with the people of Texas. ... Only death will end that love affair with Texas."

House shoots down gun bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled House narrowly voted to loosen restrictions on sales at gun shows, handing a victory to the National Rifle Association in the wake of a spate of school shootings. President Clinton conceded momentary defeat.

Asked today if the NRA beat him, Clinton snapped: "They did."

The 218-211 vote, he added, "was a great victory for the NRA but it was a great defeat for the safety of our children."

Supporters of the measure said it would help restore the rights of law-abiding citizens, but Clinton accused them of squeaking the legislation through "in the dead of night" when the average American might not notice.

"So one more time, the Congress of the United States ... said, 'We don't care what's necessary to protect our children. We can't possibly bear to make anyone in the NRA mad," Clinton said bitterly in a morning-after exchange with reporters in Cologne, Germany.

The House vote took place Thursday at midnight on an amendment sponsored by the chamber's most senior Democrat, Rep. John Dingell of Michigan, to a juvenile crime bill being crafted as a response to recent high school shooting sprees in Colorado and elsewhere.

Only a few hours after recessing early this morning, the House resumed debate on amendments that would bring the House version closer to the Senate-approved gun restrictions.

The House began its daylight proceedings today by approving, 311-115, an amendment by Rep. Tom Davis, R-Va., requiring safety locks to be sold with all handguns.

Far from conforming to the Senate-passed gun restrictions, Dingell's provision would cover even fewer gun shows than current law. In addition, the amendment would give the government only 24 hours to complete background checks, rather than the three days that is now the case.

The House rejected a Senate provision requiring background checks at gun shows, regardless of their size or the number of guns sold. The proposal by Rep. Carolyn McCarthy, D-N.Y., lost 235-193.

McCarthy, whose husband was shot to death on a Long Island, N.Y., commuter train, was near tears as she addressed the chamber.

"What we were supposed to be doing tonight was trying to serve the American people," who in polls following the April 20 Columbine High School shootings in Littleton, Colo., decisively favored more gun control, McCarthy said.

Dingell said her proposal would have allowed government too great a role over the private lives of gun owners, required background checks of buyers who purchase firearms at flea markets and driven gun shows out of business.

"To go beyond this is simply to harass innocent, law-abiding citizens and to hurt people who love to go to

News in brief

Texas executes Canadian killer

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — This time, there was no last-minute reprieve to keep Joseph Stanley Faulder from becoming the first Canadian to be executed in the United States in almost a half-century.

Faulder, 61, avoided the Texas death chamber last December when the U.S. Supreme Court issued a reprieve 30 minutes before he could have been executed.

On Thursday evening after losing a flurry of legal challenges that included efforts by the Canadian government and U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, the former auto mechanic quietly went to death for killing a 75-year-old East Texas woman at her home in 1975.

"No statements," he said, shaking his head, when he was asked while strapped to the death chamber gurney if he had anything to say. Six minutes later, after a couple of coughs and gasps, he was pronounced dead.

Faulder's attorneys won support in the two federal governments by arguing his conviction for the beating and stabbing death of Inez Phillips was tainted because he never was told after his arrest that he could seek legal help from Canadian authorities.

The right is specified under terms of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, a treaty whose signers include the United States and Canada.

At the State Department, a spokesman who requested anonymity said officials tried a variety of appeals, including personal pleas from the Secretary of State.

The lethal injection came on Faulder's 10th execution date and after what Texas officials said were reviews by 10 different courts and more than 38 judges during the inmate's nearly 22 years on death row.

Agents look for suspected killer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — The hunt for suspected serial killer Rafael Resendez-Ramirez has customs and immigration agents closely watching the Texas-Mexico border, where fugitives are caught practically every day.

"We're all very much aware of the information that the FBI has provided," said U.S. Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner. "It has brought us to a state of heightened awareness that this wanted man could possibly come into the United States or we might catch someone leaving the United States."

Police have described Resendez-Ramirez — a 39-year-old Puebla, Mexico native suspected in five beating deaths in Texas and one in Kentucky — as a transient who hops freight trains from town to town.

On Thursday, Texas Rangers and FBI agents headed to Illinois to compare Resendez-Ramirez' fingerprints with evidence collected at a double murder in Gorham, Ill. The bodies of a father and daughter were found there Tuesday, 100 yards from a rail line.

Resendez-Ramirez is wanted on a federal fugitive warrant. The FBI, Department of Public Safety and other law enforcement agencies routinely give border authorities posters and information on wanted people and fugitives, said Ernest Tijerina, U.S. Customs Chief Inspector in Brownsville.

"We get them quite often," Tijerina said. "The only difference (with Resendez-Ramirez) is it's a high profile case."

Once the FBI notifies customs about a fugitive or wanted person, the information is passed on to customs agents at ports of entry and international airports, Ms. Turner said.

KEEPING THE PEACE: More than 1,100 Texas Army National Guard soldiers have started their training for a NATO peace-keeping mission in eastern Bosnia early next year. Officials say the 49th "Lone Star" Armored Division will be the first Guard division ever in control of active combat troops and multinational forces.

Prison officials extend hepatitis C treatment

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas prison health care officials have agreed to make evaluation and treatment of hepatitis C available to many additional inmates.

A study has shown that more than 42,000 Texas inmates, almost a third of the prison population, could be infected with the deadly hepatitis C virus.

The Correctional Managed Health Care Advisory Committee, which oversees prison health care, voted unanimously to adopt a more aggressive hepatitis C policy on a pilot basis, according to the Houston Chronicle in today's editions.

The committee chairman, Dr. David Smith, said that the Legislature appropriated no money specifically for the program but representatives of the Legislative Budget Board have agreed to consider making more funds available.

The new policy lowers the threshold for referring prisoners infected with hepatitis C to specialists for a thorough evaluation, including such procedures as a liver biopsy.

The current policy calls for referring prisoners who are infected with hepatitis C after two blood tests three months apart indicate abnormal liver function. Under the new plan, prisoners with abnormal liver function in two tests at least one month apart would be referred to specialists.

Decisions about treatment will be left to the specialists who will evaluate the prisoners. But officials say they expect the prison system to move rapidly toward treatment with a combination of two drugs, interferon and ribavirin.

Until recently, prisoners were treated with interferon alone. Studies have shown that the combination treatment, approved by the Food and Drug Administration in 1998, provides long-term benefits to far more patients.

The combination treatment also is more costly. Dr. Michael Kelley, director of preventive medicine for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said the prison system pays about $3,700 per patient for a standard, 48-week course of interferon treatment. Providing combination treatment for the same length of time costs almost $13,000.

Until recently, about 75 Texas prisoners had received treatment for hepatitis C. Smith said he expects the new policy to cause that figure to increase rapidly.

A 1994 study of California prisoners found that 41 percent were infected with the liver ailment; a more recent study in Maryland showed a 30 percent infection rate, more in line with Texas.

The rate of infection in the general U.S. population is estimated at 1.8 percent. Prisoners are at high risk for various reasons, chiefly their high rates of drug injection.

Authorities investigate boot camp accusations

Inmate walks away, files charges of abuse

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County juvenile authorities are investigating accusations that a boot camp officer hit, kicked and dragged a teenager when he couldn't perform calisthenics.

The boot camp director denies the allegations and said Alfredo Garcia, 14, was physically restrained only when he threatened to run away from the privately run camp in West Dallas.

"We don't abuse kids," Kenneth Grant, director of the Concerned Citizens of Dallas camp, told The Dallas Morning News. But "we cannot let a child just walk off the premises, because we're responsible for that child."

The organization has run the camp for troubled teens since 1997 under contract with the Dallas County Juvenile Department.

Mike Griffiths, director of the Dallas County Juvenile Department, said the investigation should be complete next week.

"We obviously are concerned," he said. "These kids, even if they're tough kids, street-wise kids, they're still kids."

Garcia was assigned to the two-day camp because he violated the curfew rules of his probation. He is serving six months' probation for a fight at his former school in Irving, which his mother said was his first offense.

Garcia and his mother deny that he tried to escape the boot camp. They said he was physically and orally abused because he could not do the exercises and complained that the workout made him nauseous.

Ms. Garcia said she took her son to the emergency room for treatment after he came home with bruises on his back and cuts and scrapes on his palms and knees. She also filed an assault complaint with the Dallas Police Department and complained to a county liaison at the boot camp.

Grant said the point of the camp is to instill discipline in children and show them that they can take orders and that "it won't kill them."

He said staff members are chosen for their military background so they can drill the kids. The senior officer in the alleged incident is a lieutenant in the Army Reserve.

The boot camp has had two previous complaints against it, according to a 1998 evaluation by the county. A county juvenile department official said neither involved physical contact with a child.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married for 12 years. It was the second marriage for both of us. My husband takes care of his widowed mother, runs her errands, shops for her and handles her financial affairs. My mother-in-law's bank account is in her name, along with the names of my husband and his ex-wife.

Ann, this bothers me to no end. The issue is not the money. My mother-in-law is not a wealthy woman. She has a modest income. My husband has not seen or spoken to his former wife in several years. From what I've heard, she was neither a good wife nor a good mother. I told my husband it hurts me deeply to see her name on his mother's checking account, but he claims he hasn't had time to change it. After 12 years, I think something besides procrastination is going on.

I realize this is a small matter, but it is affecting our relationship. He doesn't seem to care that this bothers me, and he refuses to fix it. When I told him I was writing to you, he stormed out the door. Any advice? — No Location Please

Dear N.L.: When your husband storms back in, tell him I said it's time he and his mother took his ex-wife's name off the joint bank account and put yours on. Twelve years of foot-dragging is too long. Insist on it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a college student with a problem. A guy I know is spending the semester abroad. Before he left, he told me he had romantic feelings for me. I let him know I wanted to be a friend and nothing more. He asked if he could write to me, and I said that would be fine.

At first, his letters were friendly and interesting, but lately, they are sounding like love letters. He tells me he misses me and fantasizes about us getting married and having children. Even though I have told him I am not interested in marrying him, he continues with his fantasies.

I don't want to hurt his feelings, Ann, but I am afraid when he comes back to the United States, he will expect me to be in love with him. Things have gotten completely out of hand. I don't need any more stress in my life. How can I resolve this problem? I need your help right away. — Panicking in N.Y.

Dear Panicking: The lad sounds bonkers. My advice is to write and tell him that unless he is willing to have a platonic friendship, you cannot see him anymore. Be straightforward and emphatic. If he persists with his fantasies, end the relationship.

Dear Ann Landers: My "how-we-met" story is not as romantic as some I've read in your column, but it is rather unusual, and I hope you will print it.

When I was 10 years old, I could hardly wait for Saturday afternoons so I could go to the latest Tarzan movie. My older sister, under parental pressure, had to take me. The tickets cost 10 cents. We went every week. After we came home, I would try to re-enact the vine-swinging scenes, complete with the famous Tarzan yell.

One day, my sister's boyfriend arrived from out of town with his brother, Bob. I was spying on them from the tree when my sister saw me and yelled, "Get down!" I swung on a branch, lost my grip and landed on Bob. He caught me and broke my fall. My sister was very embarassed and called me a "clumsy ox." I must have made quite an impression on Bob, because 10 years later, he asked me to marry him.

At our 50th wedding anniversary party two years ago, when Bob told that story, he added, "I certainly made a lucky catch when she fell for me that day." — Anne in Sylvania, Ohio

Dear Sylvania: I made a lucky catch, too — thanks for providing me with a sweet story to end the week.

FELLOWSHIP

OF BELIEVERS

The secular calendar tells us it's summer. But the liturgical (church) calendar tells us this is the season of Pentecost. All through the summer months and into Thanksgiving all the suggested lectionary texts will instruct the church in better ways to live.

The gospel text for this, the Fourth Sunday after Pentecost, is Matthew 9:35-10:8. In that text, the pastor sees a seed that should develop into a sermon entitled, "Rhythm and Balance: The Way Life Works." Hopefully, the sermon will stimulate fresh thinking and encourage new living.

Gathered worship at FOB begins at 10:30 and concludes no later than 11:30. Coffee, conversation and morning refreshments are served at 9:15. "Forum," an open-discussion-style Sunday school for teens and adults begins at 9:30. A unique Sunday school adventure for children also begins at 9:30. A supervised nursery is available at all services.

Since the pastor is an avid Spurs basketball fan, this Sunday's "Forum" topic should challenge his priorities. The question is, "Has Sports Become a Religion?"

FOB is a multi-denominational church - independent, ecumenical and inclusive. FOB welcomes thinking, nurturing, believing, doubt, humor, playfulness, questions, and generosity.

The church building is located at 245 N. Kingwood (at Moreman), next door to the Hereford Care Center.

The church itself is scattered. Some will be in worship on Sunday. Others will enjoy sleeping in or playing with the kids/grandkids at home. Some will be on vacation. Some will be farming or golfing. But they are all loved and affirmed.

FIRST UNITED

Sunday programming includes Weigh Down Workshop at 5 p.m. There will be a combined youth gathering for "Nerd Night" at 6:30 p.m.

Registration for Vacation Bible School is scheduled from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. June 26 in Fellowship Hall. This year's VBS theme,

Nimetz hired to become tennis coach at HHS

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

It looks like Hereford High Tennis got themselves a good coach coming.

A good coach who knows a lot about the sport. Hereford, Amanda Nimetz has been hired to coach the tennis team for Hereford High School.

Nimetz, who received a master's degree from Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls, brings to the Hereford tennis program a lot of expertise in the field. She played her collegiate years at the University of Houston, where she received her bachelor's degree in sports marketing and administration.

The tennis experience has been years in the making.

"I grew up playing tennis and traveled with it," Nimetz said.

And the tennis program at Hereford will need someone like Nimetz to turn the program around. The Whitefaces and Lady Whitefaces failed to place in the district championships.

"When I sat with her, I just wanted to play tennis," Girls' athletic director Brenda Kitten said. "She is a great motivator."

Helping Nimetz is not only her playing experience, but also her coaching experience. She has served as tennis instructor at Bellaire, Wichita Falls and Amherst, Mass.

"I've always liked athletics," Nimetz said. "I wanted to work with sports and kids and I found it interesting to me."

She has even done more in the business of sports. Just look at the list.

A graduate assistant coach, marketing and sports information assistant and tennis instructor while working on her master's at Midwestern.

Camp Counselor at a Discovery Camp in Wichita Falls.

Programming assistant at Liberty Sports Com in Houston.

Sales Planning Assistant at Prime Sports Channel.

Youth Director Intern for the Dallas Cowboys Experience at the Dallas Cowboys Training camp in Wichita Falls.

"The professional sports aspect taught me to be a professional, deal with peers and see the pro side of coaching," Nimetz said. "Working in the professional level helps you do that."

The professionalism will come to the tennis program through Nimetz. But she will also bring some excitement to the program.

"I am really excited and can't wait to get there," Nimetz said. "I just want to help kids, help them through my experiences and get them motivated to play tennis."

Nimetz said that it will not be an overnight process, but she hopes that her excitement can rub off on some of her players.

"If one player is not playing, she wants that other player on another player who is playing a match," Kitten said of Nimetz enthusiasm for the sport.

Watch out, Hereford. Tennis excitement is just around the corner. It can spread quickly.

Braves and Borger tie game, 4-4

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

It was one of the strangest happenings in the world of sports.

A baseball game ended in a tie.

You read it right. A tie in a baseball game.

The Hereford Braves strangely tied the Borger Reds 4-4 on Thursday at Whiteface Field.

"In all my years of coaching I've never been in a tie ball game before," Braves coach Jon Dan Alaniz said. "It is kind of strange."

Early on, it looked like any other normal baseball game for the Braves.

After a sacrifice ground out by Borger's Ryan Newell scored Kyle Cato in the first inning, the Braves tied the game when J.P. Holman's single to left sent Andrew Ramirez home and tied the game at one run apiece.

The Braves looked like they were going to run away with the game in the second inning. Ramirez's flyout scored Kyle Artho for a 2-1 lead.

Then, L.J. Vallejo scored on a fielding error by the Reds and a 3-1 lead.

Richard Salinas' single sent Toby Torres to home plate for what it seemed at the time a comfortable 4-1 Braves lead after two innings.

Borger denied the Braves a victory in the third inning. After Chris Hudley scored a run on a walk by Braves pitcher Hector Zambrano, Ryan Newell ripped a single to left and scored Kyle Cato and James Abel, tying the game at 4-4.

From there, the opportunities were few for each team, as both pitching staffs took over.

In the fourth inning and the bases loaded, Chris Hadley was brought in to relieve starting pitcher Ryan Newell and retired three straight Hereford batters to end the threat.

"The new pitcher came in there and threw some good strikes," Alaniz said. "He caught our batters off guard considering he was a new pitcher. He just threw their timing off."

From there, Hadley and Braves pitcher Eddie Lacey, who replaced Zambrano in the sixth, retired batter after batter with strikeouts and bad hits.

"We played as hard as they did today," said Zambrano, who struck out four and gave up six hits. "We've just been doing better this year."

But the Braves will get another chance at the Reds, when they play next Thursday at Borger.

"I know this team we'll be fired up to play these guys again," Alaniz said.

Despite the tie, this was a moral victory for the Braves, who have struggled in matches against Borger.

"A tie is a tie and it's better than a loss," Alaniz said. "Well take this and run. At least we didn't take it in the loss column."

And in this case, as strange it was, the Braves will take the tie and walk with it.

Slide — Right fielder Kyle Artho slides into third base after a fielding error by Borger that helped more Hereford runners get on base during the Braves' 4-4 tie with Borger on Thursday. Artho would score later on a sacrifice groundout.

Rangers oust Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — These were the type of games the New York Yankees dominated during their record-setting season last year.

Most of the time, their pitcher was at the top of his game, they were rocketing line drives with runners on base and mixing in a little luck for the game-winning hit.

Those were the same type of games the Texas Rangers couldn't seem to win against New York — especially in their house of horrors at Yankee Stadium.

This isn't 1998 anymore. Texas turned two line drives by Chili Davis into five outs and scored the winning run off Roger Clemens on a ball that didn't even make it halfway up the third-base line to beat the Yankees 4-2 Thursday night.

"It was just one of those games when you go home and come back tomorrow," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "We were spoiled last year. Everything went our way. But this is normal."

Only if normal includes a triple play, a 30-foot game-winning swinging bunt and a rare Texas win at Yankee Stadium. The Rangers had lost seven straight in the Bronx and 21 of 29 overall to the Yankees before winning 3-0 on Wednesday night.

"We're not going throw this one back," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "We've had a lot of bad things happen here. Things happened to go our way tonight."

On a night when Clemens (6-2) had 13 strikeouts — including 10 in the first four innings — the Rangers managed nine hits, four in the infield, and three runs in seven innings. Clemens lost for the second time in three starts after not losing a decision for more than a year.

Aaron Sele (7-5) wasn't as dominating, but he proved more effective than his former Boston teammate. Sele allowed two runs, six hits and five walks in seven innings. John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 23rd save in 25 chances.

"I knew Roger was on tonight, so I just wanted to keep the game close," Sele said. "These are the games that are tough to win, but you have to win them."

Through four innings, Clemens looked like he might equal — or even surpass — the record of 20 strikeouts in a game he shares with Kerry Wood. He had 10 strikeouts and struck out the side in the first, second and fourth.

"His slider was as good as I've seen it," Oates said. "It was breaking at the last second. He was throwing the fastball up by people and getting them to swing at the splitter down. He had all three pitches working."

The strikeouts dried up after that. He set down one batter in each of the fifth, sixth and seventh innings, while also allowing a run in each inning. Royce Clayton doubled and scored on Mark McLemore's fifth-inning single to tie the game at 1.

Gonzalez, who struck out three times against Clemens, tattooed an eye-level fastball into the left-field seats in the sixth for his 19th homer to tie it at 2.

"It was a high fastball and I thought he would be looking for something down," Clemens said. "When he gets it, it's going to go."

The Rangers took the lead when Gregg Zaun reached on an infield single, advanced to third on a bunt and a groundout and scored on Roberto Kelly's swinging bunt up the third-base line.

"These teams have so many good hitters, you don't expect the game to be won on a play like that," Kelly said.

The Yankees, who entered the game with a 15-inning scoreless streak against the Rangers, ran themselves out of a rally in the second inning.

With Tino Martinez on second and Paul O'Neill on first, Sele ran a full count on Davis. Torre sent the runners, and Davis hit a liner to second baseman McLemore, who threw to shortstop Clayton for the second out.

Clayton threw to first to complete the Rangers' first triple play since Aug. 8, 1977, against Oakland and just the second since moving to Texas.

"Chili sat on a heater and that's what he got," Sele said. "If I left it up a little, it would have been trouble. I kept it down and Mark was right there."

The Yankees finally scored in the third when Sele walked Bernie Williams with the bases loaded. They took the lead again in the fifth on an RBI single by Tino Martinez.

After O'Neill singled with one out in the eighth, Davis lined to pitcher Mike Munoz, starting an inning-ending double play and proving that this indeed was the Rangers' night.

"I made seven outs in four at-bats," Davis said. "Just bad biorhythms tonight."

Braves give Astros 8-5 whooping

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Millwood was already fired up. Jose Lima got him even more pumped.

Millwood took a perfect game into the seventh inning before Craig Biggio singled, and the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 8-5 Thursday night, denying Lima his 12th victory.

"It's tough to throw a no-hitter anyway, especially against a team with so many good hitters," Millwood said. "If any pitcher says they don't know what's going on, they're lying."

"I knew what was going on and the adrenalin was going. But we needed to win this game for the team."

Millwood (7-4) took a no-hitter into the seventh inning for the second time in three starts. On June 6, Boston's John Valentin broke up the bid with a leadoff single in the seventh at Fenway Park.

"I thought he had a great chance to get this one," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "The hit by Biggio was out there and he went and got it."

Millwood sent Lima sprawling with a pitch in the third, angering Lima, who shouted at the Braves right-hander.

"Yeah, it fired me up," Millwood said. "The guy already has 11 victories and that fires me up because I didn't want him to get No. 12 against me."

Millwood heard Lima's shouts, but didn't respond.

"I think he overexaggerated a lot," Millwood said. "I tried to throw a fastball for a strike. I even came back in here and asked the guys, and they said the pitch was right over the plate."

Biggio said he was waiting on a fastball in the seventh.

"I watched him for a couple of innings and saw he was throwing a lot of first pitch fastballs to get ahead," Biggio said. "He threw me a first-pitch fastball and it was a good pitch, but I was able to put it in play."

Millwood struck out seven of his first nine batters. In all, he allowed two hits — the other was a single to Bill Spiers — in seven innings with a season-high 11 strikeouts and one walk.

Millwood gave up an RBI groundout to Carl Everett and threw a run-scoring wild pitch after Biggio's hit.

Millwood also drove in a pair of runs, going 1-for-2 at the plate. Javy Lopez was 4-for-5 for the Braves.

Lima (11-3) allowed seven runs and a season-high 10 hits in six innings.

"I'm not going to change anything," Lima said. "If you are going to hit me, then congratulations. Tonight's game taught me a lot of lessons. I lost it when I walked the pitcher, so I have no excuses. I was terrible."

Houston, which has lost three straight following a win in the series opener, is 1-3 since bench coach Matt Galante took over as interim manager in place of Larry Dierker, who had brain surgery.

Atlanta went ahead in the fourth on Lopez's run-scoring single, Ryan Klesko's RBI double and Millwood's bases-loaded walk. The Braves added four runs in the sixth on Lopez's solo homer, Millwood's RBI single and Ozzie Guillen's two-run double.

Houston cut it to 8-5 in the ninth on Everett's RBI double and a two-run double by Ricky Gutierrez. Rudy Seanez got the final out for his third save.

Cowboys sign Deion to extension despite questions

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Deion Sanders is on the defensive after Dallas Cowboys officials insinuated the football star may not be up to playing his best.

"I was hurt severely in the last game I played in the playoffs and I still played my game," Sanders said at Cowboys headquarters in the Dallas suburb on Thursday, the same day the team announced his contract extension.

The Cowboys were wrapping up a three-day mini-camp at their Valley Ranch practice site.

"We really don't know if he's going to play at the level we'd like for him to," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones told reporters. "But when I look at what our alternatives are and when I look at what he can bring to the table for our team this year, it's worth the risk."

The issue came up as Jones — reeling from salary-cap problems and Sanders' nagging toe injury — agreed Thursday on a contract extension for the All-Pro cornerback.

"I don't feel I have to prove anything," Sanders told The Daily Oklahoman at Valley Ranch. "It wasn't like I was on a downward spiral. I just have to go out there and keep doing what I've been doing..."

Jones wouldn't say how much the extension is worth, but he conceded that the decision is a calculated risk.

Jones initially announced Thursday that it was a three-year deal. But Jones later said he misspoke about the time frame, according to Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple.

"The tentative agreement has been reached, although the contract has not been signed and the length of the agreement will not be released," Jones later said.

Officials say the deal is unquestionably complex, especially since the Cowboys find themselves about $1 million below the league's salary cap. The extension is expected to be signed Friday and includes incentive clauses to ensure that Sanders gets paid in full only if he performs up to expectations.

The only specifics Jones offered are that the signing bonus will be paid up front.

The extension is expected to be surpass the highest contract for an NFL cornerback: a four-year, $22.8 million deal that Dale Carter signed recently with the Kansas City Chiefs.

Sanders, still sidelined from a turf toe injury he suffered on Nov. 15, attended workouts on Friday but did not practice.

He underwent toe surgery April 28. The team trainer said last month that recovery was expected to take another three to four months, lasting at least into the preseason. Dallas starts the season Sept. 12 at Washington.

gun shows," Dingell, a former NRA board member, told the House.

Clinton, who is attending a world economic conference in Cologne, Germany, said, "Instead of closing the deadly gun-show loophole, the House of Representatives voted in the dead of night to let criminals keep buying guns at gun shows. This vote will not stand the light of day. I will keep working until Congress stands up to the gun lobby and makes the commonsense measures passed by the Senate the law of the land."

Earlier, the House voted to permit the Ten Commandments to be posted in schools and state public facilities, a provision that supporters said would help promote morality.

Clinton said he applauds the intent behind that amendment, but believes the measure invites a court challenge. He said he would speak to lawmakers about "another option" he didn't specify that would avoid imposing one religion on students.

The votes marked the House's opening shots at juvenile violence in the politically volatile period between a spate of school shootings and an election year. The task is particularly weighty for House Republicans, who are defending their narrowest majority — six seats — since the GOP's historic takeover of Congress in 1995.

Democrats chanted "six seats, six seats!" as the vote on Dingell's amendment was tallied. But the chief GOP vote wrangler, Majority Whip Tom DeLay of Texas, wasn't listening. After days lobbying his colleagues, his eyes stayed locked on the vote board, which lists the names of lawmakers and the votes as they cast them.

Dingell had promised 38 Democrats would support his amendment. But when DeLay realized seven additional Democrats were voting yes, the Texan slapped his hands together once, turned toward the back of the chamber and pumped his fist back and forth in victory.

"We are whipped, but we're not down," Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee, D-Texas, said on her way back to the Capitol this morning.

The House this morning passed several measures that bring its juvenile justice bill closer to the Senate's. Members:

—Approved by voice vote an amendment by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., that would ban the import of large-capacity ammunition clips, magazines and other devices that hold more than 10 rounds.

—Adopted, 372-53, an amendment by Rep. Randy Cunningham, R-Calif., permitting retired and former law enforcement officers to carry concealed weapons.

show officials increased the number of 4-H scholarships from 60 to 70, the second increase in two years.

Selected by members of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the scholarship recipients all demonstrated academic excellence and strong leadership throughout their high school careers. Scholarship recipients must pursue a degree in agriculture or life sciences at a Texas college or university to qualify.

The 4-H scholarships are funded through net proceeds from the 1998 Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo. With the recent increases in educational support, the show's contributions to youth programs exceeds $7.6 million in 1999, and $60 million since the show's educational program began in 1967.

"I might not have realized it then, but in every project I did or in every horse show I attended, I was learning something much more important than how to lead a horse or what to feed it — something that would motivate me the rest of my life and make me a much more successful person. I was learning how to set goals and do everything imaginable to reach them," McGowan said.

government rose to 38 percent in 1997, up from 29 percent in 1994. Americans' perception of how well the government is going its job often improves in times when crime rates are declining and the economy is robust, Galston says.

The index also says fewer people are afraid to walk near their home at night — 38 percent in 1997, down from 47 percent in 1994. Declining crime rates and community policing practices that move police officers from their squad cars to street corners may be responsible, he says. The index also reveals that more people are becoming politically involved.

Between 1994 and 1997, the percentage of adults who attended a rally or speech rose from 5.5 percent to 6.5 percent. The number who worked for a political party increased from 2.7 percent to 3.4 percent. And the percentage who said they belonged to a reform group went up from 2.8 percent to 4.5 percent.

Accord near on Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much heavy lifting remains, but Republicans and Democrats on a key House committee are at least talking with Clinton administration officials about reaching a compromise Social Security rescue plan.

"I believe there is goodwill on all sides and a genuine desire to solve this problem," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

About 25 members of the panel met behind closed doors Thursday and heard from House Speaker Dennis Hastert, who told reporters afterward the bipartisan session was a signal that Social Security reform is still possible.

"I've encouraged them to keep at it," said Hastert, R-Ill. "Starting to work on a bipartisan basis is very important."

Although no decisions were made, the fact that Republicans and Democrats were privately talking compromise together — even inviting Social Security Commissioner Kenneth Apfel to participate — was itself unusual on such a politically charged issue.

Archer said all sides agreed to "expend every effort" at achieving reform for the retirement program, which faces insolvency by 2034 as the big baby boom generation collects benefits.

"We're in the process of determining how we begin to move this forward ... with the cooperation of the administration," he said.

Archer spoke to reporters standing shoulder-to-shoulder with Rep. Charles Rangel of New York, the senior Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee. Rangel said Hastert and House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., have asked the committee "to try to work together to come up with a bill."

Rangel said that although major differences remain on the approaches to saving Social Security, "there are no differences in us recognizing we have to come up with something that we can sell to the House Republicans and the House Democrats."

If that were successful, Archer added, there would be enough political momentum "that the Senate would be put in a position where they would have to act."

Several rank-and-file lawmakers echoed the positive nature of Thursday's session, but many cautioned that the panel is not yet ready to begin the tough job of hashing out an actual compromise bill.

Hopefuls offer ideas on gun control

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Bill Bradley believes the legislative amendment passed by the House allowing the posting of the Ten Commandments in schools may be unconstitutional.

Presidential candidates had a broad range of reaction to the Ten Commandment amendment and to gun control legislation.

"It will have to be tested in the courts," Bradley said Thursday of the Ten Commandments amendment. "My hunch is it's unlikely to pass constitutional muster."

Vice President Al Gore said: "It's a lot easier to childproof a gun than to bulletproof a child."

Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the GOP front-runner, said states and localities should have the authority to make their own decisions about their own schools, said spokeswoman Mindy Tucker.

GOP presidential candidate, Gary Bauer took partial credit for the measure, saying the amendment is "a bill I helped draft."

"I believe if more American children read the Ten Commandments and are taught what they mean, they will predictably engage in less crime," he said, noting the sentiment for religion in the schools after the recent student massacre in Colorado.

"I went to Littleton, Colo.," Bauer said. "What you see are little handmade signs everywhere, 'Let our children pray,' and 'Bring religion back in to our schools.' I think there's something stirring out there."

Another GOP candidate, Steve Forbes, called the House's approval of displaying the Ten Commandments "a positive thing. The Ten Commandments, we need to understand and adhere to. The more we see them, the better off we'll be."

Bradley was in Los Angeles to lay out his agenda on guns, which included a call for a ban on "junk" handguns, the inexpensive, cheaply made weapons most often linked to crime.

"These can explode in a user's hand," the former three-term senator from New Jersey said while holding up a Lorcin .380 semiautomatic gun. "They are dangerous."

Bradley called the gun one of the 10 most often used in crimes and said that in Los Angeles alone there are 45 varieties of such guns. He quoted numbers from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms that show 81 percent of the guns it links to crimes can be called junk guns.

The stance seemed a slight retreat from reports last month that Bradley was considering pushing a ban on the sale of all handguns. His aides say the ban on all handgun sales is a long-range goal, but they were announcing measures that could be pursued immediately.

Bradley, who is challenging Gore for the Democratic presidential nomination, said he would support a ban on both the possession and sale of junk guns, also known as Saturday night specials.

Bradley also proposed a one-per-month limit on handgun purchases, banning anyone convicted of domestic violence from owning a gun, restricting firearms dealers to commercial areas, bumping up the cost of licenses for gun dealers, requiring a registration process for handguns similar to auto registration, and requiring background checks on buyers at gun shows.

'The General's Daughter': stylish, well-acted thriller

By Bob Thomas

The Associated Press

When reviewers arrived for a preview screening of "The General's Daughter" at Paramount Pictures, they were handed a printed card asking them not to reveal "the surprising twists and ending of the film."

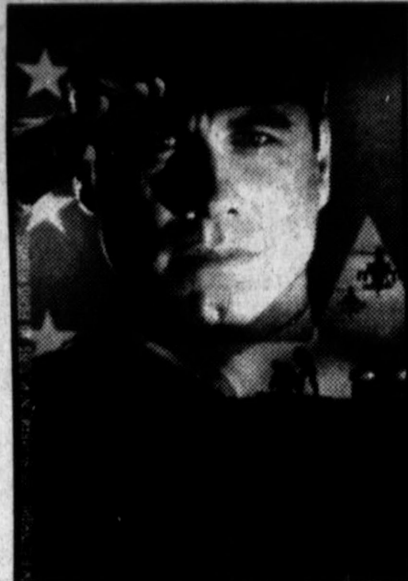

What do they think we are — spoilsports who tell readers how a picture ends? As to the "surprising twists," it would take a column or two of print to report them all.

What can be said about "The General's Daughter" is that it is a stylish, well-acted thriller, loaded with sex and full of shock as well as perplexity.

Christopher Bertolini and William Goldman wrote the script, based on a novel by Nelson DeMille. While novelists can often convincingly spin far-fetched yarns, these can be difficult to tell in the more realistic medium of film. This is a movie that requires special attention to plot and characters.

"The General's Daughter" gives John Travolta another chance to display his remarkable range. He plays Paul Brenner, a noncommissioned investigator of crimes at a Southern army base. We first see him masquerading as a good of boy selling weapons to a crooked buyer.

The buyer thinks he can get out of paying by eliminating the dumb redneck. Bad idea. Brenner gets the better of him with the help of an outboard motor blade.

'The General's Daughter' is showing at Moovies 6, 400 N. 25 Mile Ave.

A horrendous murder is discovered on the base, and Brenner is assigned to investigate. He is surprised to be joined by an officer, Sarah Sunhill (Madeline Stowe). They had been lovers while on duty in Belgium — "We'll always have Brussels," he tells her jokingly.

The relationship between the two sleuths is one of the film's assets. There is little of the male-female bickering you would expect in such a situation. They view each other with respect.

The investigation uncovers a number of characters who are not quite what they seem: a revered general (James Cromwell); a flippant, mystery-laden colonel (James Woods); a serious-minded colonel (Timothy Hutton), an ally of the investigators; the colonel's close-lipped aide (Clarence Williams III); and more.

That's about as far as we can go without spilling any of Paramount's beans.

Travolta has been supplied with sharp dialogue and a well rounded character that could possibly begat a sequel. He and Woods have a lengthy, confrontational scene that is thrilling to watch, like Connors and McEnroe slugging it out in their primes.

Simon West's direction keeps the action and the suspense in high gear throughout, and Peter Menzies Jr.'s camera work maintains a creepy atmosphere, as does Carter Burwell's music.

"The General's Daughter" is a Paramount Pictures release produced by Mace Neufeld. Rated R for language, nudity, violence and depictions of sadomasochism. Running time 118 minutes.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions: G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13 — Special parental guidance strongly suggested for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

NC-17 — No one under 17 admitted.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

476

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Judges, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

JEPHTHAH

ON THE EVE OF BATTLE WITH THE AMMONITES, JEPHTHAH HAS VOWED TO THE LORD THAT IF HE IS VICTORIOUS... WHATSOEVER COMETH FROM HIS "HOUSE" TO GREET HIM IN VICTORY SHALL BE SACRIFICED TO THE LORD...

COME DOWN TO US AND FIGHT—OR ARE YE ALL OLD WOMEN?!

OUR SWORDS THIRST FOR BLOOD—COME DOWN!

JEPHTHAH'S MEN, ADVANTAGEOUSLY PLACED UPON THE HEIGHTS, EAGERLY AWAIT THE COMMAND...

ARISE! FALL UPON OUR Foe AND SLAY THEM!

AND THE DOWNHILL CHARGE OF THE ISRAELITES HITS THE AMMONITES WITH SLEDGE-HAMMER FORCE!

NOW THE RANKS OF AMMONITES SEND UP TAUNTS AND JEERS TO JEPHTHAH'S SOLDIERS...

SAVE THIS FOR YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SCRAPBOOK

Next Week THE WEAK LINK!

THIS DEVOTIONAL & DIRECTORY IS MADE POSSIBLE BY THESE BUSINESSES WHO ENCOURAGE ALL OF US TO ATTEND WORSHIP SERVICES.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

NEW 4 Bedroom, doublewide $39,900 and payments starting as low as $365 a month w.a.c. American National Homes, 4800 Amarillo Blvd. East. 1-800-294-7974 or 374-4433.

Injuries to knees examined

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
News digest

WASHINGTON — It took just one wrong jump, and women's basketball star Rebecca Lobo was on the floor in agony, yet another victim of a torn knee ligament called the ACL.

The very day Lobo was writhing in pain last week, doctors were meeting to figure out how to battle a growing problem: Women are far more susceptible to this debilitating knee injury than men.

It's not just a risk for professional female athletes, but for high school and college teams, and even women who like a little weekend skiing, soccer or hoops.

Anterior cruciate ligament injuries are notorious because they're so painful and can require months of treatment and rehabilitation. But they also can predispose people to serious knee arthritis later in life, said Dr. Joan McGowan of the National Institutes of Health.

The good news: There are some ways women can protect their knees, lowering the risk of injury by strengthening their hamstrings and learning to crouch properly while jumping, concluded a consensus conference sponsored by the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons.

Critics say criminal kids ending up victims as well

CHICAGO — The crime was horrific: Two young boys aged 10 and 11 dangled a 5-year-old playmate from a 14th-floor window when he wouldn't steal candy for them, then calmly dropped the screaming child to his death. The 1994 slaying brought an emotional warning from President Clinton about kids whose "hearts can be turned to stone by the time they are 10 or 11 years old." It also presented the nation with a dilemma: how to punish the perpetrators without helping to harden those hearts.

Five years later, the older boy is headed for adult prison for attacking a fellow inmate in a youth lockup. His defenders say Jessie Rankins, now 15, never got a fair chance to turn his life around with the psychiatric care he desperately needed.

"They're going to say that this proves the point that he's beyond help," said Hersheila Conyers, a lawyer for Rankins' younger co-defendant. "But I look at it with my own biases and say that this kid should have been treated differently. I think that we failed Jessie Rankins all along the line."

Prosecutors said Rankins used a toothbrush to sexually assault a 13-year-old inmate at the state's Warrenville youth prison in 1996. He pleaded guilty Monday as an adult to criminal sexual assault and could get up to 30 years in prison when he is sentenced July 29.

Hitler quote in yearbook sparks parental outcry

NEW YORK (AP) — The use of a quotation from Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf" for a high school senior's yearbook statement has led to an outcry from parents and an apology from the student.

Nicole Scuderi, an art major at Fiorello H. LaGuardia High School, chose the following quote for her yearbook, 550 of which were distributed last week:

"The very first essential for success is a perpetually constant and regular employment of violence. — Adolf Hitler, Mein Kampf."

Parents reacted quickly to the quote, including Ronny Bassan, whose son attends the performing arts school.

"Need I elaborate what these kinds of hate statements can lead to, e.g., Columbine, Paducah, Jonesboro, etc.," she wrote in a letter to the school's principal, Paul Saronson.

Teachers struggle to bring women's history into class

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Each fall, as Doris Meadows begins another year of teaching 11th-grade history, she gives her new students a task: Compose three lists of famous Americans in history.

Everyone can complete the first category — a list of 10 famous white men. But when it comes to finding women and blacks for the other lists, nearly all her students come up short.

"They can't make it to 10," said Meadows, a teacher at Joseph Wilson Magnet High School in Rochester.

How to work women's history into high school teaching is one of the main topics of debate at the Berkshire Conference on the History of Women. The annual three-day forum, which was held at the University of Rochester, drew 1,300 scholars.

At Stanford University in 1972, Meadows taught one of the first college classes in women's history. When she was hired 12 years ago by Wilson Magnet, a public school, "it was kind of a natural progression for me to try to bring that knowledge into my classroom," she said.

History courses that put the spotlight on women and re-examine the past through the prism of gender are now commonplace on American college campuses. Over the past two decades, historians have been integrating that discipline's insights into their teaching and writing.

Still, many high school textbooks mention "the big events, like women's suffrage, and then it tends to be episodic," Meadows said. "To learn from history, people need to know the full story, not just the list of presidents."

One of the panelists was Sally Schwager, director of the Women's History Institute at Harvard. Since 1985, she has conducted a teacher's program to help high schools find ways to make history "much more inclusive, not just for women but different races, social classes and religions."

Women's history "began as a project of putting women back into history" but has flowered into an academic specialty.

Drought took toll on Ogallala Aquifer

The drought of 1998 took a heavy toll on Panhandle producers' crops, livestock herds and especially on the Ogallala Aquifer.

The Ogallala Aquifer has long been believed to be a vast underground lake fed by snow and precipitation. In reality, the Ogallala Aquifer is a layer of coarse-grained sand, clay, silt — a portion of which is saturated with water.

The saturated thickness of the aquifer ranges from less than 20 feet in the Panhandle to more than 1000 feet in parts of Nebraska.

The depth to water level ranges as much as the saturated thickness level itself.

In Bailey County, the saturated thickness can be reached at a minimum of 12 feet below the surface. In other areas, the saturated thickness may be as deep as 300 feet or more below soil surface.

The irrigation necessary to produce last year's crops affected the aquifer's water level more than in the previous 10 years.

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District in Lubbock recently issued the results of its annual depth-to water level measurements.

The report indicates between 1989 and 1999 the depth to water level in monitored Deaf Smith County wells decreased on the average of 1.14 feet per year.

Between 1994-1999 the decline was 1.24 feet, but the 1998 decline was 1.44 feet.

"The saturated thickness is as varied as the landscape itself," said Carmon McCain, information and education director for the HPUWCD.

The well within the water district, closest to the surface in Deaf Smith County is in the southwest portion of the county, approximately 3 miles from the Castro County line and 7 miles from the New Mexico border.

Landowners living near the center of the county will have to drill the farthest, almost 340 feet, to reach water. The saturated thickness of the aquifer within the county ranges in depth from 40 to 100 feet deep.

The HPUWCD monitors 89 wells in Deaf Smith County each year, taking measurements from December to early February.

These data are used to record the average annual changes in the water levels in the Ogallala Aquifer within the district.

Depth to the water in monitored wells changed from a nominal .04 feet to as much as 3.42 feet.

Why in the world is the Death Tax still alive?

VOTERS
SAY IT'S BAD

77% would vote for a member of Congress who supported the repeal of the Estate Tax (which is really a Death Tax).¹

COMMUNITIES
SAY IT'S BAD

The Death Tax is a leading cause of why family farms and businesses go under — leading to thousands of layoffs across America.²

EXPERTS SAY IT'S BAD

For every $1 taken from a family owned business to pay Estate Taxes, another $1 is wasted in order to prepare and comply with the tax.³

BUSINESSES
SAY IT'S BAD

96% of manufacturing firms and 90% of minority-owned firms feel that the Estate Tax impedes their long-term business growth.⁴

CONGRESS SAYS IT'S BAD

The Joint Economic Committee found that the costs to collect the tax are roughly equivalent to what it takes in — a little over 1% of the federal budget.⁵

America gets it.
You get it.
Get your legislator to get it.

Congress can start this year by initiating the phase out of this obsolete and erroneous tax. Ask Congress to support Estate Tax cuts. Call, write, e-mail or fax your local US Senator or US Congressional Representative today.
