Reagan on his way to Guam

President Reagan

HONOLULU (AP) — President Reagan, leaving today for Guam and the final stop before he travels to China on Thursday, said his trip is aimed at building support for opposing the Soviet Union's "expansionist aggression."

"We journey to China in a spirit of peace and friendship, realistic about our differences, but desiring to build upon our common interests," Reagan said in a prepared departure statement.

Reagan planned to spend Wednesday night in Guam before continuing on to Peking on Thursday.

The president said the United States "must work with our friends to keep the Pacific truly peaceful — an ocean for commerce, not conflict."

The United States, he said, will work with its friends, including China, to "make the world safer, by working for peace and jointly opposing expansionist aggression. That is what our trip to China is all about."

While he did not name the Soviet Union, it was clear his references to aggression reflected growing concern in Washington over a Soviet military buildup in the Pacific region.

Reagan said his trip "symbolizes the maturing of the United States' relationship with China," giving credit to former Presidents Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter for initiating the process.

Meanwhile, officials said it was virtually certain Reagan would be able to sign an agreement in Peking on nuclear cooperation between the United States and China, which would clear the

Prices up .2 percent in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — Strong food price declines overcame the first gasoline price hike in six months to send consumer prices up just 0.2 percent last month, the government said today.

It was the smallest overall gain in three months.

The lion's share of the credit went to cheaper meat and poultry, eggs and fresh fruit, which sent food prices overall down 0.1 percent following gains of 0.6 percent in February and 1.6 percent in January.

Food prices were down for the first time since last July and were more than enough to counteract a 1.0 percent jump in gasoline prices.

For the first three months of the year, consumer prices have risen 5.0 percent, calculated annually, and were right on target with many economists' predictions that inflation for all of 1984 will be in the range of 5 percent. Others, however, cite the economy's recent strong rebound and say they fear that the pace of inflation could step up later in the year.

Presidential economist Martin Feldstein saw only good news in the report, calling it "further evidence that the economy is not overheating." If the strong food price decline is eliminated from the March calculation, he said, consumer prices rose a moderate 0.3 percent.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the report "very reassuring news in view of the extraordinary growth of the economy in the first quarter," when the gross national product spurted ahead 8.3 percent.

Fitzwater also said today's report was "very promising for a downward trend in interest rates."

Colleagues mourn Ansel Adams' passing

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Using nothing but a camera and the scenery around him, Ansel Adams raised public consciousness about the environment while carving an exalted place for himself in the history of photography, said colleagues mourning his death.

Friends, students and fellow photographers across the country on Monday remembered Adams as a champion of environmental protection and a photographer whose rare vision will endure.

Adams died of heart failure Sunday night at a Monterey hospital where he had been since Friday. His wife of 56 years, Virginia, was at his side. He was 82.

"The greatest impact he had on 20th-century photography was the role he played in establishing photography as a fine art," said David Featherstone, executive associate of the 12,000-member Friends of Photography, which Adams helped found.

Those images include "Monolith, the Face of Half Dome" and "Moonrise, Hernandez, New Mexico," considered by many to be landmarks of 20th century art. "Moonrise" sold several years ago for $71,500, the highest price ever paid for a photographic print, and his books and folios of photographs have sold more than 1 million copies, making him a millionaire.

Adams' work "changed our sense of what the physical world was like," said John Szarkowski, director of the photography department at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, which Adams also helped found.

"Before, people thought mountains were made out of stone. He demonstrated they were made out of light and were never the same twice."

Born Feb. 20, 1902, Adams snapped his first photograph at age 14 during a family vacation to Yosemite National Park. He had ambitions of becoming a pianist, but exposure to the work of Paul Strand in 1930 convinced him to pursue photography as an art and a career.

"I felt those works," said Adams, who developed a concept called "visualization."

"In my mind's eye, I am visualizing how a particular revelation of sight and feeling will appear on a print," he said in a magazine interview last year. "If what I see

Vietnam tells vets it will search for MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven Vietnam veterans, the first to visit Cambodia since the Vietnam War, say they've been promised that the government in Phnom Penh will undertake its first efforts to locate the remains of 82 Americans missing in action in that country.

Robert O. Muller, a wounded Marine lieutenant who is the president and founder of the 17,000-member Vietnam Veterans of America, also said officials in Vietnam told them they have the remains of eight Americans ready to be turned over to U.S. authorities.

So far, Vietnam has returned the remains of 88 Americans but 2,490 servicemen, mostly fliers, are still listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia. The United States and Cambodia have had no contact on the subject.

In a telephone interview, Muller discussed a 15-day visit he and other members of the organization made to Southeast Asia earlier this month. A delegation from the group had visited Vietnam last year, but the veterans were the first to visit Cambodia since the war ended.

In addition to the missing Americans, they discussed the resettlement of children fathered by American servicemen during the war, the effects of Agent Orange on the Vietnamese people and cultural exchanges.

Muller decried the U.S. refusal to establish diplomatic relations with Vietnam and American support for awarding Cambodia's seat in the United Nations to the Khmer Rouge element led by Pol Pot — a government he accused of genocide on an unparalleled scale.

He said the delegation of veterans was taken to a mass grave on the outskirts of Phnom Penh containing the bodies of 30,000 to 40,000 Cambodians. He said they saw stacks of skulls, each bashed in at the identical place at the back of the head.

"You could still see the blindfolds, the hands still tied behind backs," Muller said. "It was unbelievable. You would hear the bones crunch as you walked along."

Among those killed and buried in the field in 1977 were two or three Americans, Muller said he was told.

The group also visited a prison where, he said, more than 20,000 Cambodians were tortured and killed by Pol Pot's forces between 1975 and 1978, when Vietnam invaded and installed its Cambodian allies in control of much of the country.

"These lunatics took photographs of their victims before and after they tortured them," Muller said of the Khmer Rouge. "We went through room after room after room

Organization, aggressiveness, communication.

These keys words were voiced Monday evening by candidates seeking their party's nomination in the May primary during a forum sponsored by the Leadership Midland Alumni group. Held in the Plaza Club, featured speakers were candidates in contested races.

Leading the procession of candidates was Vern Martin, incumbent district attorney seeking re-election on the Republican ticket. "It's not whether people love me or like me, but whether I'm worthy of the vote," he said.

Looking back on his two four-year terms in office, Martin said he had learned from his mistakes. And the contested race this year has made him start re-thinking some of his office's policies.

Saying that 791 persons had been sent to the state penitentiary since he has been district attorney, Martin contended he hasn't been soft on criminals.

But his Republican opponent Al Schorre disagreed, noting that in 1982 the Midland County district attorney's office got a conviction rate of 43 percent, as compared to the state average of 62.5 percent.

"We need to get more aggressive with burglars and drug dealers. There's a correlation between drug dealers and burglars," said Schorre.

HE ALSO CALLED for better communication between the DA's office and the victim. "There's nothing more discouraging for a victim to open up the newspaper and see his case has been handled and he's never been contacted," Schorre added.

The county attorney's race on the Republican ticket is being fought by Mark Dettman, now an assistant county attorney, and Michael Wil-

Doctors prepare virus to develop blood screening test for AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers are gearing up production of the virus that appears to cause AIDS in an effort to have a blood screening test for the mysterious disease widely available within six months.

Officials announced on Monday that government researchers found a virus that probably causes the debilitating and deadly breakdown of the body's immune system known as acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS.

The officials made it clear that scientists have not discovered a cure for AIDS and acknowledged that any treatment that eventually results from identification of the virus may come too late for those currently afflicted with the deadly disease.

Robert Gallo

Scientists at the National Institutes of Health, led by Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute, were credited with isolating the virus they call HTLV-3 and devising a process to routinely detect and grow it.

Health officials said their evidence that HTLV-3 is the link to AIDS is so firm that they consider the results a remarkable achievement after only three years of research.

"The NCI work provides the proof we need that the cause of AIDS has been found," Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler told a news briefing.

AIDS results in the collapse of the immune system, which defends the body against disease. Victims become susceptible to rare cancers, pneumonia and other infections that lead to disability and death.

The ability to mass-produce the virus opens the door to developing a vaccine to prevent AIDS and also has resulted in a test to detect evidence of the virus in blood.

Developing an anti-viral vaccine is difficult, but Gallo said it might be possible to isolate a portion of the virus, using genetic research techniques, that could stimulate immunity without causing the disease.

Authorities said such a vaccine could be available for testing in two or three years.

Fair weather in store for Midland, Permian Basin

Another fair night and day are in store for Midlanders.

For tonight, the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a low in the mid-50s and southwesterly winds at 5 to 15 mph.

The high on Wednesday is to be in the low 90s. Winds are to be southwesterly at 10 to 20 mph.

The peak temperature on Monday was 81 degrees, while the record high for an April 23 is 95 degrees in 1965. The overnight low was 55 degrees, and the record low for an April 24 is 37 degrees in 1968.

STATE

High pressure centered off the upper Texas coast dominated the state's weather today, keeping skies clear to partly cloudy and temperatures mild to warm.

Forecasts called for skies to remain clear to partly cloudy statewide. Highs were to range from the 70s in the Panhandle to the lower 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Most areas were to have readings in the upper 70s.

Temperatures were slightly cool early today with readings ranging from the mid 40s in the Trans Pecos area and northern sections of the High Plains to the mid 60s in South Texas and along the coastal plains. Most areas, however, had readings in the low to mid 60s.

The high pressure system kept winds light from the south and southeast over the eastern two-thirds of the state. Southwesterly breezes around 10 mph were reported over most of the High Plains.

A weak cold front was moving towards the Panhandle at dawn, but the front was not strong enough to cause any significant developments in Texas today.

NATION

A delayed spring smiled on many parts of the nation today, with fair skies the rule, but the shipping lanes of the Great Lakes carried an icy reminder of a brutal winter as some waterways remained frozen five miles from shore.

The intense storms that have pounded the nation from the Rockies to the Southeast for several weeks were nowhere to be seen early today. However, cloudy skies and rain still plagued the Northeast and a few showers dampened Florida, the Dakotas and northern Nebraska.

The rain that fell on the Dakotas blew in on winds that gusted to 50 mph. Residents of North Dakota also got a treat today as the aurora borealis — the northern lights — put on its dazzling show.

For most of the rest of the nation, sunny skies prevailed.

Forecasters predicted that showers would linger over the Northest and Northwest for the rest of today. But sunny skies were expected across most of the rest of the country, with brisk winds blowing across the Plateau region, the Rockies and the northern Plains.

Highs today were expected to range from the 40s in the Rockies and northern Plains to the 70s and 80s over the southern half of the nation. The Northeast and Northwest expected highs in the 50s.

Midland statistics

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair tonight with a low in the mid-50s. Winds southerly at 5-15 mph. Fair Wednesday with a high in the low 90s. Winds southwesterly at 10-20 mph.

way for American businesses to sell nuclear power equipment to the Peking government.

In Honolulu, Reagan combined fun in the sun with a high-level briefing on Soviet military activity in the Pacific as he made final preparations for his China trip.

Accompanied by his wife, Nancy, Reagan sunned at poolside and went for a stroll on Waikiki beach Monday as part of a leisurely schedule designed to ease the effects of jet lag on the 73-year-old president.

The flight to Guam will take seven hours and 40 minutes, and the Peking leg of the trip Thursday will take another six hours and five minutes, with the president's arrival scheduled for 2:05 p.m. Peking time (1:05 a.m. EST).

Peking is 13 hours ahead of Washington, and Reagan's aides plotted a slow journey, with frequent rest stops en route.

The president will cross the International Dateline on his flight to Guam arriving on what will be Wednesday there, though still Tuesday on the U.S. mainland.

Although Monday was devoted largely to rest, aides said Reagan wasn't completely idle. Larry Speakes, the White House deputy spokesman, said the president carried a special 3-inch thick briefing book, white with blue lettering and affixed with the presidential seal, to the swimming pool to study.

Speakes said Reagan will have a final pre-China briefing Wednesday in Guam, focusing on Reagan's first day of meetings in Peking on Thursday.

Speakes said the briefing would be a round-table discussion led by Secretary of State George P. Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

Reagan will be greeted on his arrival at Peking's airport by Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian. He is expected to meet with Deng Xiaoping and other top government and Communist party leaders during his three days in Peking.

Senior officials traveling with Reagan predicted privately that an agreement with the Chinese on a nuclear cooperation accord would be ready for Reagan to sign in Peking. They were unsure whether it would be complete, or whether it would leave some issues to be resolved in future negotiations.

"It is possible that we can conclude that agreement and have an announcement during the trip, but that is about all I can say now," Speakes said in response to a question at a news briefing.

Speakes also said a proposal to include a Chinese astronaut on a future U.S. space flight could be decided during the Reagan visit.

The deputy press secretary said Reagan received a briefing here Monday on the Soviet military threat in the Pacific from Admiral William J. Crowe Jr., the commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific.

The briefing, Speakes said, focused on the "overall threat that the (U.S.) military is prepared to defend against in the theater, in the region and the role that our regional allies play in meeting these challenges to our national security interests."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger also has expressed concern over what he called "the growing Soviet military presence in Southeast Asia" including joint amphibious exercises with Vietnam this month.

In a speech in San Francisco on Monday, Weinberger confirmed intelligence reports that Soviet troops had staged amphibious landing maneuvers on the Vietnamese coast for the first time.

Consumer prices increase .2 percent in March

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said today that factory orders for "big ticket" durable goods — those expected to last at least three years — edged ahead 0.8 percent in March, the smallest one-month gain since December.

Prices had risen 3.8 percent for all of last year, the smallest gain in more than a decade.

The best news for consumers in today's report was that the devastating effects of last year's severe weather on food prices have dissipated, as has the influence of a deadly chicken influenza.

Price decreases were posted for beef, down 0.5 percent; pork, off 0.4 percent; poultry, down 1.0 percent; and fresh fish, down 0.5 percent. Eggs prices plummeted 12.1 percent while fresh fruit prices fell 2.2 percent. Vegetable prices, however, rose 0.1 percent.

One analyst, noting the previously reported 30.2 percent spurt in March wholesale fish prices, said he expected that dramatic increase to be reflected in the April retail price report.

As for energy, the Labor Department said the bad news on gasoline was moderated by a 5.0 percent drop in fuel oil prices, which had soared 10 percent in January and February, and by an accompanying drop in natural gas prices.

Despite the 1.0 percent jump in gasoline prices, the sharpest one-month increase since May, those costs are still 12.4 percent below their peak of three years ago.

In all, March's increase in the price measure was half the the 0.4 percent seasonally adjusted advance in February and one-third the 0.6 percent of January.

Detailing the March Consumer Price Index, the department gave this breakdown of its calculations:

—Transportation costs overall soared 0.9 percent, boosted by the higher gasoline prices and by higher costs for new and used cars. New auto prices rose 0.5 percent while used car prices surged 2.4 percent.

—The cost of local telephone service tumbled 0.8 percent after posting a record 8.5 percent gain in January with the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Overall phone charges fell 0.5 percent.

—Medical care costs were up 0.5 percent, down moderately from January and February and in line with the average monthly increase of 0.5 percent recorded in 1983.

Dettman cited his experience in the county attorney's office, including on the list of duties the responsibility for prosecuting all misdemeanor cases, which is about 3,000 cases a year, and handling juvenile matters.

Since 1981, Dettman has been chief county prosecutor and also has worked representing the county in civil rights violations cases. "We need someone who is an experienced prosecutor."

Williams contended the county attorney must be a person who has "wide diversification of talents." As a native Midlander who emigrated to Los Angeles for his college education and then returned to the city after graduation, Williams said the county attorney must be committed to the city.

IN THE DISTRICT attorney's office, Williams said he has tried 10 cases and gotten 10 convictions with seven of the people being sentenced to Huntsville. The candidate said a county attorney must provide practical advice to county commissioners.

In the sheriff's race on the Republican ballot are incumbent Dallas Smith and challenger Gary Painter.

Smith, who was elected in 1976, recalled he had outlined goals that needed to be obtained. Most of those have been accomplished, he said, with the help of the County Commissioners' Court and public support. "If you agree with the concepts, ideas and management I've given the Sheriff's Office in the last seven years, then join with me. My goal is to attempt excellence. It's hard to achieve and difficult to maintain."

Painter, formerly with the Highway Patrol and Midland Police Department, said he hopes to get a stronger patrol division in Midland County. A former sheriff's department employee, he said the turnover in the department is high and morale is low. He also called for a continuous learning program for the individual.

THREE CANDIDATES are going for the Justice of the Peace, Precinct 1, Place 1 on the Republican ticket: incumbent Charlie Sprayberry, Dewey Lee and Robbie Rucker.

Sprayberry said he is the only candidate with experience and training to be a JP. He advocated an open door policy and said he is available to the people. "It's important to be accessible to the public," he said.

Experience for the job isn't picked up by watching the JP court, he contended.

Lee said he has worked for the District Attorney's office the past seven years and feels he has some understanding of the court system. "The JP court reaches more people than any other court. I want to bring some decorum to the JP court that it currently doesn't have. There will be no eating of food or smoking in the courtroom. That's a distraction."

He also noted that a JP is called out to "investigate all kinds of deaths. It's important how the body is handled." And sometimes those bodies "are gory."

Ms. Rucker said she has taught school 20 years and managed a real estate company. She agreed that the JP court is the one that most people "are in front of."

"The justice should be a recognized person in Midland and of sufficient intelligence. I bring better basic qualifications to the office. I would bring my talent and eagerness. I'm not a slow learner. I will bring dignity that it should exemplify," she said.

Turning to one question that she has heard while campaigning, she said, "People ask why would a woman want to be a JP? If a woman can be a doctor, she can be a JP," Ms. Rucker said.

On the Democratic ballot, C. DeWayne Davis is being challenged by Scott Welch for county commissioner of Precinct 3.

INCUMBENT DAVIS stated that "Midland County is not the dark continent of American politics. It's not remote and antiquated." The Commissioners' Court is the chief policy maker of county government and many people aren't concerned with it, he said. But they should be because of the taxpayers' money it spends.

Davis cited $2 million spent on law enforcement and another $2 million doled out on roads and bridges. And there are continuing problems such as Odessa's sewage which floats by on Monahans Draw, he noted.

Welch, son of Charlie Welch who served on the Commissioners' Court until he lost a bid for re-election in 1982, listed his background in real estate and banking. Born and raised in Midland County, the younger Welch said his job as county commissioner would be to represent the people and he has knowledge of the people.

When times get tight, people don't spend as much, he said, "and county government should be the same way." Welch said he had knowledge of county government "through home."

in my mind excites me, there is a good chance it will make a good photograph."

"His impact and influence on the field was both as an artist and as a leader for the recognition and appreciation of photography as an art form," said James L. Enyeart, director of the University of Arizona's Center for Creative Photography, which Adams helped found.

Adams willed all his negatives to the center with instructions that they be printed by advanced students, "not just locked up in a case."

Adams, who lived in Carmel, taught photography almost from the beginning of his career, passing along his Zone System of exposure calculation, now a staple of serious study of photography. He wrote 40 books, and an estimated 5,000 students have attended his seminars and workshops.

Adams' devotion to his art was matched only by his passion for protecting his beloved wilderness. A member of the Sierra Club board of directors for 37 years, Adams was an outspoken foe of the Reagan administration, which he called the "greatest threat to our environment ever."

"His pictures and books moved millions to save the Earth's wild places. The Earth has lost a great friend," said Ron Rudolph, assistant executive director of the San Francisco-based environmental group Friends of the Earth.

where all four walls were covered with photographs of their victims. Everywhere you looked, there were shackles and devices to torture that were as barbaric as you could imagine."

"What angered us, given this evidence, is that the U.S. government still recognized Pol Pot as the legitimate government of Cambodia," Muller said. "To us, this is immoral and an outrage. It goes against humanity."

Among the pictures in the prison were those of three Americans who were killed in the prison, Muller said. He said people and documents at the prison identified two of them as Michael Scott Deeds, James William Clark and Lance McNamara, although, he said, the identity of McNamara was not certain.

He said he understood the three were on a yacht and picked up in Cambodian waters by the Khmer Rouge forces and forced to sign confessions before they were put to death. An Australian was also with them, he said.

He said Hun Sen, foreign minister in Cambodia, said he had no information about the 82 Americans missing in his country but promised to form a committee within his ministry to "gather whatever information could be gathered and explore what could be developed."

Muller said the Vietnamese government agreed to receive a delegation from his organization four times a year and that Sen said the group would be welcome to visit Cambodia at the same time.

Muller said the Cambodian foreign minister also said he would meet with U.S. officials despite the lack of diplomatic relations. And in every meeting with Vietnamese officials, the veterans were told of Vietnam's eagerness for normal relations with the United States, Muller said.

Doctors developing test for AIDS

Dr. Edward N. Brandt, assistant HHS secretary for health, said, however, that the blood test could be widely available within six months. With the blood test, proteins obtained from the laboratory virus are used to attract and identify antibodies formed in the body by a similar viral infection.

Mrs. Heckler said the blood test allows identification of AIDS victims with nearly 100 percent certainty.

By screening donors and checking supplies of blood, which are suspected of being one way the virus is transmitted, "we should be able to ensure that blood for transfusion is free of AIDS," Mrs. Heckler said.

At the National Cancer Institute's Frederick Cancer Research Facility in Maryland, researchers are developing methods to increase production of the viral proteins needed for the blood test.

Brandt said the problem is switching from making pint quantities to the thousands of gallons needed for an estimated 23 million blood tests a year.

More than 3 million transfusions are given annually and much more blood is used to make blood products such as those used to treat hemophilia and other blood disorders, he said.

Dr. Alfred J. Katz, executive director of National Red Cross Blood Services, praised discovery of the virus and said his organization is anxious to evaluate the newly described test "as soon as possible."

Brandt said the latest developments do not offer much immediate hope for those already diagnosed as having AIDS, a number now estimated to be more than 2,400.

"What we have at the moment is not of particularly great benefit to those with the disease right now," Brandt said. However, he added, the blood test should help researchers define the early courses of the incurable disease and possibly find a way to intervene at an earlier stage.

He also raised the distant possibility of using HTLV-3 to develop super antibodies that might be injected into victims to fight an AIDS infection.

According to Gallo and papers outlining the work of his team, the virus appears to be a member of a family of viruses called human T-cell leukemia virus (HTLV) previously suspected of having a role in AIDS.

Gallo said he believes HTLV-3 may be identical to a virus called lymphadenopathy associated virus (LAV), which was discovered last year by French researchers at the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

The scientist said his group has worked closely with the French researchers and, despite some recent "misunderstandings," still is collaborating with them. He denied that his group was trying to steal credit from the French for finding the virus.

El Paso doctor loses bid for appeal money

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso doctor convicted last year of drowning a fetus during an abortion has been turned down in his request for county aid in paying the costs of his appeal.

Raymond Showery also has lost a bid to receive county financial assistance in his appeal of a ruling last week. That ruling revoked his $200,000 appeal bond in light of a recent involuntary manslaughter charge filed against him.

In denying the doctor's requests Monday, State District Judge John McKellips said Showery failed to present sufficient evidence that he was indigent.

McKellips said he would reconsider the request that the county pay Showery's appeals cost if the doctor could provide tax records, bank statements and other information to the court to support the indigency claim.

Showery was convicted last fall of killing a 6-month-old female fetus in a 1979 abortion at his south El Paso medical clinic. He was sentenced to 15 years in prison but had remained free on the $200,000 appeal bond.

McKellips revoked the bond last Thursday, six days after Showery was charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of a woman who died after having an abortion at his clinic.

Showery told the court Monday that because he has been jailed without bond, he cannot continue to work and earn money to pay his appeal court costs.

"The only source of income I have is my work and, of course, I'm not working any more. I'm in jail," Showery testified.

He also said that because he recently filed for bankruptcy, all his property is in the care of the court.

But under cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Debra Kanof, Showery could not detail his economic status, answering "I don't know," to many questions about the financial operation of his clinic and his personal bank account.

Showery also said he has been able to pay his attorney, Michael Gibson, only about 80 percent payment of his fee for handling Showery's appeal of the murder conviction and his recent bond hearings.

The indigency requests did not apply to the involuntary manslaughter case.

Gibson said he had an ethical duty to continue handling the two appeals, but said the indigency issue probably would arise again when the involuntary manslaughter charge goes to trial.

"Obviously, we're going to have to do something about it," Gibson said after the hearing. "If he can't pay now, he probably won't be able to pay for that either. I guess we'll cross that bridge when we get to it."

Bullock: No new revenue estimates needed for session

AUSTIN (AP) — There won't be any new state revenue estimates for the special legislative session expected in late May or June, Comptroller Bob Bullock says.

Bullock said Monday the estimates of expected state income he made last year are still good.

Bullock said his last prediction stated the present state budget of $30.9 billion would leave $15 million avaiable for spending at the end of the state's two-year fiscal period, Aug. 31, 1985.

"Today, with eight months of actual experience in this budget period, actual revenues are running within four-tenths of one percent of what we estimated," Bullock said. "That means there is absolutely no reason for me to adjust the bottom line up or down."

The Select Committee on Education recommended last week improvements in Texas public school education that would cost $987.3 million more than present spending through August 1985.

Gov. Mark White has said he will call a special session of the Legislature to consider the committee's recommendations, which include a minimum 10 percent teachers pay raise, if he finds majority support from Senate and House members.

New evidence to be presented in Brown trial

EDINBURG (AP) — Attorneys prosecuting former inmate Eroy Brown have promised "new scientific evidence" will be presented today by either a ballistics expert or pathologist to prove Brown is guilty of murder.

Brown, 33, has admitted killing Texas Department of Corrections farm manager Billy Max Moore and Ellis Unit Warden Wallace Pack in April 1981. But he has said he thought the men planned to torture him and he killed them in self-defense.

Brown was tried twice on capital murder charges in the Pack slaying. The first trial ended in a hung jury and a second jury in Galveston acquitted Brown.

Charges in the Moore case were reduced from capital murder to murder by Walker County District Attorney Frank Blazek. The case is being tried in Edinburg on a change of venue.

Blazek, who said he would finish presenting the state's case this afternoon, had promised before the trial began that he would offer "new scientific evidence" to prove Brown's guilt. He said he would be calling the two scientific experts this morning.

On Monday, the all-Hispanic jury heard testimony from Warden James A. Williamson and prisoner James Solomon concerning events surrounding the deaths of the two prison officials.

Under cross-examination, Williamson stated that the two TDC officers were off duty the Saturday they were killed. Williamson, an employee of the Ellis Unit at the time of the shooting, was the first official to arrive at the scene.

Solomon, 50, testified that he heard gunshots while Pack, Moore and Brown were in Pack's car and saw the warden stumble from the car and move toward a drainage ditch. Brown has said he was being taken to a field where inmates were beaten.

Judge rules at-large elections don't discriminate in Pecos

PECOS (AP) — The city of Pecos and a Reeves County school district do not have to alter their election process from an at-large system to single-member districts, a federal judge has ruled in a lawsuit that contended the current elections discriminate against Mexican-Americans.

In a 15-page decision, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said, "Since the Mexican-American residents of both electoral systems are clearly the majority in actual numbers of populous and in registered voters, and will continue to be an increasing majority in both, if established trends continue, the impact of polarized voting (whether it exists or not) has no detrimental impact upon the election of Mexican-American candidates to either of the elected bodies in issue in this cause."

Bunton added that "in the near future, the Anglos of Reeves County could very well be in this court, bringing the claims for relief that plaintiffs now present."

Bunton's ruling came in a lawsuit filed April 21, 1983, against the city of Pecos and the Pecos-Barstow-Toyah Independent School District of Reeves County by three plaintiffs, who alleged that at-large elections provided Mexican-Americans with less of an opportunity than Anglos to elect officials of their choice.

But Bunton said a recent election in Reeves County, in which four of the five people elected to city and school offices were Mexican-Americans, proved the at-large voting system did not discriminate against "minority" groups.

"The past ignoble history of Reeves County is merely that — the past unfortunate history of ignorance...The latest April 1984 election is proof of the modern history of Reeves County," the judge said.

THE BETTER HALF

"It's a letter from the FBI. You have to register your pound cake recipe as a lethal weapon!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, April 25, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Wireless telegraph inventor Guglielmo Marconi, lord protector of England Oliver Cromwell, baseball manager Fred Haney and broadcaster Edward R. Murrow were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: singer Ella Fitzgerald, Al Pacino, Meadowlark Lemon, actress Talia Shire and dancer Melissa Hayden. The business outlook is greatly improved. A new partnership or venture has an excellent chance for success. You are better at giving than receiving. Let others reciprocate for all the nice favors you have done. A new environment brings good luck and a unique opportunity.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A financial venture undertaken with a Taurus will enrich you both. A strong bond exists between you and an old friend. Mate or partner could become jealous. A candid discussion banishes doubts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not be sentimental when negotiating contracts and business agreements. A longtime relationship may be put to the test. Trust others to give you the kind of help you need.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Think twice before getting involved in someone's business or personal affairs. A change in lifestyle brings greater comfort and glamor. You get a new idea about an old problem tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your finances will benefit from an expert's advice. Be willing to pay for it. Higher-ups value loyalty and practical suggestions. A historical novel gives you a fresh perspective.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Overseas investments bring modest gains. Your participation in a community event could result in higher social status. Someone you know only slightly will soon be a close friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family member's demands could put you in a no-win situation. Assert yourself. First impressions count big. You impress someone who can help launch a pet project. Romance is in the air.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A business decision must be made without delay or success could slip away. A financial problem seems less serious when you face it head-on. Show your tender side to loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are your own toughest critic. Be kinder to yourself. Do not worry about barriers that may not exist. If you want to revive an old pastime, do it! Some recreation is essential.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take things one at a time. Clear up a backlog of paperwork before important documents get misplaced. A phone call gives you an intriguing idea. Family members deserve more of your time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Figure out a way to get more rest. You risk your health and effectiveness when you spend all of your hours working. Romantic partner will open up when you do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A last-minute cancellation could open a whole new world to you. A romantic adventure is not as hopeless as you think. Be patient; eventually loved one will come around.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Save money by making your own home or car repairs. There are better places for you to spend your money. Those who depend on you feel more secure when you act confident.

TV play funny, charming

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Give David Fishelson and Zoe Zinman credit for attempting something new, and unorthodox, with "City News," tonight on public television's "American Playhouse."

The result is an hour of visual, and frequently aural, images that somehow converge in an amusing, awkwardly charming story about the editor of an underground newspaper and his secret desire to draw a cartoon strip.

Elliot Crown, in his film debut, plays Tom Domino, the editor and publisher of The Other Paper, a small weekly on New York's Lower East Side.

The film cost less than $100,000 to make, but it's a neat package, nonetheless. Alas, there is only one genuinely laughable (slapstick) scene in the film, though Fishelson and Miss Zinman seem more inclined to sophisticated humor (naughty language).

The funny moment comes with Domino calling on banks in search of "quick cash" to save his newspaper. "The most I ever got was a handshake ...when they knew I was there," he says. He's shown in a darkened room, hand extended, pumping up and down, while a banker works unaware of the editor's presence.

In any case, "The Other Paper," Domino says, "was going to be my shot at the big time...I wasn't out to get popular, just a Pulitzer."

He meets Daphne (Nancy Cohen) in a bar, and they strike up a conversation:

Daphne: "So what is it you do?...No, don't tell me."

Tom: "What?"

Daphne: "Suffer."

As they continue to talk Domino realizes that the young woman will be the inspiration for the comic strip he has always wanted to draw.

He rushes back to his office and starts work on the cartoon, which quickly becomes a popular success.

"To keep the strip continuing," he says, "I had to make sure of one thing... that my muse didn't get away...I started drawing what happened between her and me... That wasn't bad for a guy who was not an idea man."

Despite the popularity of the strip, The Other Paper is about to go bankrupt, and some members of the staff complain that Domino is spending too much time with Daphne, and not enough trying to save the rag. Then, one night, $20,000 arrives in a bologna and cheese sandwich.

Business picks up, and, the editor declares, "My life had gotten so intense, I didn't need Daphne to write the strip anymore."

Opening lead: King of ♣.

When you are missing three cards in a suit including the king, the finesse is the percentage play. However, if you have reason to believe that the finesse can't win, any other line is better.

Although it probably wouldn't have made any difference to the final contract, we are not enthused with South's decision to reopen with a one spade overcall. That virtually gave up on any chance of reaching a heart contract. A reopening double is the standout choice. Also, North's refusal to act at the one level is pusillanimous. If he felt he was too weak for a takeout double, surely little harm would befall a one spade overcall.

West led the king of clubs and declarer's prospects were dismal. He seemed to have a sure loser in diamonds and hearts even if the king of diamonds would furnish a discard, and then there was the trump suit to contend with.

The trump finesse would normally be the odds on play, but West surely held the king because East, who was marked with diamond length, quite probably would have been able to respond over one club if he had a king as well. So declarer gave up on a trump finesse for the combined chance of either dropping a singleton king of spades off side or an end play.

If West held the guarded king of spades, he could not have more than two hearts — the bidding had marked him with at least five clubs and four diamonds. So declarer won the ace of clubs and immediately led a low diamond. West went in with the ace and continued with the queen.

Declarer won the king in dummy, discarding a heart from hand. He ruffed a diamond, ruffed a club on the board, then crossed to the ace of trumps to ruff his last club in dummy. To set the stage for West's demise, declarer cashed the ace-king of hearts and exited with a trump to West's king. With nothing left but minor suit cards, West was forced to give declarer a ruff sluff and, with it, his doubled contract.

Boss's best friend

They've been called everything from "go-fers" to the real bosses, but one thing is certain: Were it not for the millions of secretaries in the companies and corporations around the United States, business would not be performed nearly as efficiently or professionally.

Secretaries may be overlooked on a routine basis, but that shouldn't be the case this week. Monday marked the start of National Secretaries Week, an annual observance that will continue through Saturday.

Laurence J. Peter, the man who is known for authoring the Peter Principle, once theorized that women secretaries were unable to rise to the level of their own incompetence because of sex discrimination in the market. Thus, said Peter, the efficient work of secretaries saved their bosses from themselves.

That may be a comforting thought for both the nation's bosses and secretaries and, of course, it is indisputable. What it is not is the final word in regard to the secretaries' profession. That word is impending change.

In fact, the Bureau of Labor Statistics says there will be a steady need for secretaries in the coming decade. The bureau predicts that the total number of persons employed as secretaries or stenographers will climb from 2.7 million in 1982 to as many as 3.5 million in 1995.

As the pool of secretaries grows in the next few years many of the incoming ones will be male. Ironically men dominated the field until the turn of the century and now there is a trend for men to again enter a field dominated by women. Men also are becoming nurses, flight attendants and telephone operators — further breaking down age-old job discrimination sexual barriers.

The profession is changing. But the purpose of National Secretaries Week appropriately doesn't even address the question of gender. It merely urges that the purpose of the week is to "bring recognition to professional secretaries for their role as management's right arm in business, industry, education, government and the professions."

The poor get poorer

If you're a middle-income citizen who has been feeling bad about how much money you had to send to the IRS last Monday, just be grateful that you aren't poor: it would have been worse.

A new study from the Joint Committee on Taxation shows that while most other families are enjoying lower tax rates, families with poverty-level incomes are facing sharply higher rates than they did a few years ago.

In addressing this issue at a House Ways and Means subcommittee hearing last week, Treasury officials made the now-familiar administration response that lower inflation has compensated for other losses that poor people — especially those who work — have suffered in the past few years.

But official poverty counts, which are adjusted for inflation, show that not only are more people now living in poverty, but the degree of their destitution has increased. Even the poverty numbers understate the situation, because they do not take account of the higher tax rates that the committee study reveals.

Poor people are paying more taxes because payroll taxes have been rising sharply, and because the administration's tax program did not include adjustments in the features of the income tax code that affect them most.

The 1981 tax cut reduced income tax rates, but it did not increase either the standard deduction or the personal exemption. As a result, the tax threshold, the income level at which people must start paying income taxes, has stayed constant, while inflation has pushed more and more poor people, especially those who work, into the taxable-income range.

At the same time, the Earned Income Tax Credit — which supplements the earnings of very poor families — has seriously eroded in value.

A family of four earning a poverty-level income will pay 10.5 percent of its meager resources in taxes next year. In 1978 it paid only 4 percent. A family of six will pay 11.1 percent, up from 6.1 percent in 1978.

Even after income-tax indexing takes effect next year, the tax burden on the poor will continue to grow, because the Earned Income Tax Credit — alone among major tax-code features — will not be indexed.

It is noteworthy that neither of the tax bills recently voted by Congress would do much to help the poor.

The Senate, thanks to the efforts of Sen. Bill Bradley, voted a $25 increase in the maximum value of the Earned Income Credit paid to working poor parents. That's in sharp contrast to the $1,000 IRA tax benefit the Senate voted to phase in for top-bracket families with non-working wives.

Rep. Charles Rangel is pushing for a more generous credit, but the tax bill passed by the House provides no increase at all. It's too bad that the poor can't afford to hire a well-connected lobbyist to push their case.

U.S. trying to close 'mind gap'

WASHINGTON — In past columns, I have reported on secret projects to adapt psychic phenomena to military purposes. For example, in laboratory experiments, psychics have been used to spy on the Soviets by projecting their minds outside their bodies.

Jack Anderson

One psychic was able to describe a secret Soviet base — in astonishing detail that was later confirmed by satellite photographs. Another located a Soviet Tu-95 "Backfire" bomber that had crashed in Africa.

U.S. Navy and Air Force chiefs are skeptical about these experiments, which they describe scornfully as "witchcraft" and "black magic." But the Army's intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. William Odom, has been impressed with some of the results.

Odom is worried about intelligence reports that the Soviets are far ahead in psychic research. Inside the Pentagon, he has raised the question of whether the Soviets could use psychics to penetrate our secret vaults. This has led to talk in the backrooms about raising a "psychic shield" to block this sort of remote spying.

The CIA is also taking psychic research seriously. Former CIA Director Stansfield Turner told critics that their skepticism about the CIA's psychic projects was healthy — but the research should keep pace with their skepticism.

The most impressive research in this area has been conducted by Harold Puthoff and Russell Targ, both respected academics with the Stanford Research Institute in Menlo Park, Calif. Puthoff is still with the institute; Targ left two years ago to form his own company, Delphi Associates. They began their experiments in the early 1970s, using psychics to describe scenes at specific coordinates on the globe. The project, partly funded by the Pentagon and the CIA, was called "Scanate" for "scan by coordinate."

Their latest project, code-named "Grill Flame," produced some amazing results. Psychics described the contents of locked filing cabinets; they mentally breached the security of secret military installations.

Earlier, they had discovered the rings around Jupiter years before their existence was scientifically established by satellite photographs.

Despite these impressive achievements, sources told my associates Dale Van Atta and Joseph Spear that the psychics' success rate is only about 70 percent. For example, psychics who were asked by the Pentagon to pinpoint the place were Italian Red Brigade terrorists were holding Gen. James Dozier prisoner in January 1982 never came close.

But the occasional successes encourage intelligence officials to keep trying in hopes of giving remote spying more respectablility. They are also concerned about the Soviets who are known to have spent many more years and far more money on parapsychological research.

CITIZENS WATCH: When Ted and Francoise Gianoutsos of Arlington, Va., decided to donate some of their savings to the Fish and Wildlife Service for long-term conservation programs, they were surprised to learn that the agency had no authority to accept money to be used over a period of several years. The law required donations to be spent within the same fiscal year.

So the Gianoutsoses set out to have the law changed. Their efforts were the impetus for legislation establishing a Fish and Wildlife Foundation, a non-profit corporation that will accept and administer gifts for the conservation of fish, wildlife and plant resources, including educational programs and protection of endangered species. During the foundation's first 10 years, the Interior Department will provide up to $1 million in matching funds.

The Gianoutsoses started the ball rolling with a $5,000 donation, and plan to give money each year. They have also set up a testamentary trust fund that should make available several million dollars to the fund when they die.

The foundation bill passed both houses of Congress unanimously, and was signed by President Reagan on March 26 despite his expressed "serious reservations." Actually, the chief opposition to their idea came from then-Secretary of the Interior James Watt. (The Gianoutsoses suspect this was because they are both outspoken Democrats.)

Avid nature lovers, the Gianoutsoses feel their efforts were a good way to give back something to the country that has given them so many opportunities. Ted is the son of Greek immigrants and Francoise gave up her French citizenship to become an American.

BACKFIRE OF THE WEEK: The federal government's massive giveaway of cheese was supposed to not only feed the hungry but to cut down on the huge stocks of surplus cheese in government warehouses. The result, however, has been an increase in the amount of unsold cheese the government buys under the dairy support program.

It seems the giveaway allowed some consumers to stop buying cheese at the supermarket. This meant the dairy farmers were stuck with more cheese than usual, and the government is required under the law to buy any the farmers can't sell. So the government's stockpile of surplus cheese has grown from 619 million pounds in 1981 to 1 billion pounds last year. The cost of the government's purchase of surplus cheese and butter went from $1.3 billion in 1979 to $2.8 billion in 1983.

Soviet 'itch' Kirkland, Hatch

WASHINGTON — A KGB alert to Soviet agents around the world has confirmed the cautious hopes of an odd couple — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and conservative Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch — that they are getting under the Kremlin's skin.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Kirkland and Hatch disagree about nearly everything, particularly the merits of Ronald Reagan. But on April 6 here, they were observed in affable conversation emerging from a board meeting of the six-month-old National Endowment for Democracy. They and other members of the board are among the very few Americans aware that the creation of the new organization marks belated U.S. financing of open ideological combat with Soviet communism by private U.S. institutions.

The Endowment for Democracy is intended to promote democracy in general, and free labor unions in particular, throughout the world. Private institutions, not the CIA or Pentagon, will use government money. But neither the odd couple nor the Reagan administration anticipated the Kremlin's angry response after Congress established the Endowment last November.

The flash-alert late last year to KGB agents coincided with a harsh attack on the Reagan administration and Kirkland by Tass, the official Soviet news agency. That betrays deep Soviet vulnerability and suggests the contour of a new Cold War, offering better prospects for the U.S. than are found today in Central America or the Mideast.

Tass branded Kirkland as part of the "corrupt top crust of the AFL-CIO" — words conceivable for Hatch himself to throw at Kirkland if the context were domestic. But in the ideological war between Moscow and Washington, Hatch and many of his conservative Republican allies are one with Kirkland.

The AFL-CIO's foreign operations department, headed by Irving Brown, for years has been the only non-governmental American attempt at ideological warfare against the Soviet system. After operating on the thinnest shoestring for decades, Brown now has $11 million as a first installment in Endowment funds from Congress. Thanks to Hatch and Democratic Rep. Dante Fascell, the other congressional member of the Endowment's board, there's a lot more for Kirkland where that came from.

Uncle Sam funding big labor worries the Kremlin, where memories remain vivid of Kirkland's bold effort to help Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and safeguard Poland's budding free labor union in 1980. Walesa and Solidarity's still potent underground remnant are at the top of the Kirkland-Brown-Hatch-Fascell list for immediate assistance: transistor radios, printing presses, other tools needed for underground struggle. While ruling out support for "violent" change or the use of any U.S. "intelligence activity," the Endowment's bylaws put no restraints on efforts to build and protect free labor unions.

Congress has voted $18 million for the current fiscal year to finance such non-governmental intrusions into ideological battlegrounds, with the funding going to $32 million next year. Besides Poland, targets eyed by the Endowment include the Philippines, to shore up opposition parties before dictatorial President Ferdinand Marcos' re-election campaign; Guatemala, to strengthen a system of free political parties to stand up against extremism of both the right and left, and Chile, where authoritarian President Augusto Pinochet is driving labor leaders into the Communist Party.

But Moscow is the real target, and the Kremlin knows it. Concern is centered in the International Department of the Central Committee's Secretariat, headed by Boris Ponomarev. One of Ponomarev's key functions is guidance for Soviet agents and propagandists abroad on the U.S.-Soviet balance — military, economic, political and in what he calls "social movements."

The only U.S. "social movement" worthy of Ponomarev's attention has been Irving Brown's worldwide but money-short operations at the AFL-CIO. Thus, U.S. intelligence agencies, analyzing Soviet internal rhetoric, say privately that the Kremlin views all this as Ronald Reagan's "devilish scheme" — a new, bigger ideological offensive based on Brown's record of success.

When Reagan made his memorable House of Commons speech in June 1982, predicting that Marxism would wind up on "the ash heap of history," the Endowment for Democracy was not even a gleam. It has now racked up two improbable achievements: It brought together Kirkland and Hatch, who was targeted for a purge in 1982 by the AFL-CIO, and — more notably — it has frightened the Kremlin.

Mining flap shows bad U.S. policy

The flap over the mining of some Nicaraguan harbors provides us all with examples of the kinds of things which so often prevent our nation's foreign policy from succeeding.

Charley Reese

The mines were planted by Nicaraguan rebels with the help of the Central Intelligence Agency. The Senate and the House are raising cane about them. The House wouldn't even act on the President's bill authorizing funds for El Salvador.

The examples this incident provides are examples of: hypocrisy, incompetence, and partisanship at the expense of the country.

The Congress's outrage is hypocritical because it is based on the claim that it had no knowledge of the mining. This is false. The CIA briefed the House intelligence committee and the Senate intelligence committee weeks ago.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, who wrote an indignant letter to the CIA director, Bill Casey, is just mistaken. He was told about it, but he is 75 years old, God bless him for the great American he is, and he either forgot, didn't hear it, or didn't read it.

The examples of incompetence are provided by the CIA and by the President. The President's public policy is flawed. He is saying publicly and to the Congress that it is not the intention of the United States Government to overthrow the Marxist government of Nicaragua. It should be.

But if he doesn't want to overthrow it, then he should not send the CIA down there to recruit, train and fund Nicaraguans whose reason for risking their lives is to overthrow the Marxist government. The Nicaraguans are not interested in merely harrassing the Sandinistas. They want the freedom they thought they were going to get when they all combined to overthrow the Somoza government.

It would be grossly unfair and destructive of America's prestige to withdraw support from these people now. If all the President really wants to do is harrass the Nicaraguan government, then he should have told the CIA to hire mercenaries rather than recruit Nicaraguan patriots.

The CIA demonstrated its incompetence by proposing the mining operation. To blockade the ports of another nation is an act of war. The United States still maintains diplomatic relations with Marxist Nicaragua. Furthermore, mines will blow holes in the ships of allies as well as in the ships of Communist nations.

In other words, the mining was bound to embarrass the President and cause more political damage than it could achieve military benefits. The CIA should have known that. The President's national security advisers should have known that. The Congressional intelligence committees should have known that. War, covert or overt, is serious business and it should not be left to amateurs.

Who in Washington could imagine that you could mine the harbors of a nation with which we maintain diplomatic relations and not cause an international flap? Who in Washington could imagine that the CIA's role in the mining could be kept secret when everybody in the world already knows that the CIA is funding the Nicaraguan liberations forces? Whoever they are, they have no business being in Washington.

The example of partisan ship at the expense of the nation is being provided by the Democrats. They knew about the mining. They know the Sandinista government is a threat to democracy in the Western hemisphere. Yet they are willing to sacrifice American interests by viciously attacking the Presidente on a matter in which they certainly share complicity just to score points in an election year. It is a shameful performance.

The President should turn up the heat. He should break diplomatic relations with the Marxist government of Nicaragua. He should send the Secretry of State to the Organizations of American States to demand that the Marxist junta step down and allow the Nicaraguan people to choose a truly representative government. If necessary, he should recognize a Nicaraguan government in exile and openly support it.

Former President Jimmy Carter sent his Secretary of State to the OAS to demand that anastasio Somoza step down and Somoza had been elected. Some of the same leftwing Democrats who are screaming now had no compunction at all about cutting off aid to Somoza and helping the Sandinistas topple his government.

Sometimes I think we don't need any external enemies. We seem to do enough damage to ourselves.

Quadriplegic 'spiritually dead' before relinquishing death wish

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quadriplegic Elizabeth Bouvia says she has ended a seven-month quest for self-imposed starvation because she hopes treatment at a Mexican hospital will improve her disabled condition so she will no longer be totally dependent on others.

"If I'm going to live, I don't want to live like I was before. I want to get better," Ms. Bouvia told the San Diego Union in today's editions. "I want to be able to get around and live like everybody else."

The 26-year-old cerebral palsy victim, who wanted to be released from what she called a life of agony, was in good condition at the Hospital Del Mar in Tijuana, Mexico, on Monday, doctors said.

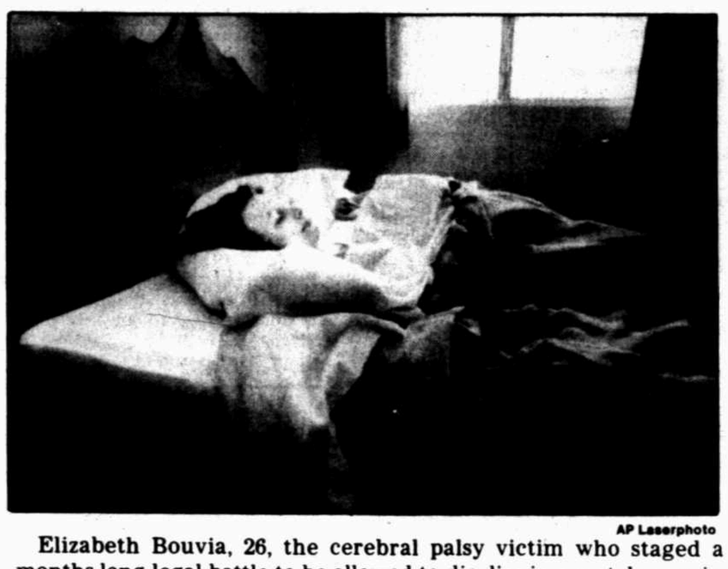
She returned to the hospital for treatment of an infection after a three-day stay at a nearby motel, where she decided to end her fast Sunday and ate french fries, a burrito and part of an egg and muffin.

Dr. Ernesto Contreras Rodriguez, founder of the hospital, said he would be personally working with Ms. Bouvia.

"From now on I will be with her all the time ... until she says I don't want you anymore," Contreras told the newspaper.

"The first miracle is to bring her back to life. Spiritually and emotionally she was dead," he said.

The doctor also said he was "happy and proud" that an intern at the clinic helped convince Ms. Bouvia to abandon her suicide wish.



AP Laserphoto

Elizabeth Bouvia, 26, the cerebral palsy victim who staged a months-long legal battle to be allowed to die, lies in a motel room in Tijuana, Mexico. She says she originally had gone to Tijuana to die, but friends and doctors talked her out of her suicide wish and now she says she wants to get better.

By demonstrating his compassion for Ms. Bouvia, intern Rigoberto Alvarez Quintero "showed he had a good sense of human life," Contreras said.

"I'm happy. We have to give something from ourselves to a noble cause," Contreras said. "I am proud of him and will congratulate him."

Dr. Juan Felipe Lagos Graciano, director of medicine at the hospital, said Ms. Bouvia's condition had improved Monday, and that she was eating solid food and was being fed vitamins and glucose intravenously.

Congressmen set to challenge MX

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy-four members of the House, including many who have generally supported President Reagan's defense buildup, will attempt to block production of the MX nuclear missile when the Pentagon budget comes up next month.

The group told Reagan in a letter sent Monday that "while many rationales have been offered on behalf of MX, the actual deterrent value of the system is negligible."

The letter was circulated by three key Democrats, Reps. Joseph P. Addabbo of New York, chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on defense, and Nicholas Mavroules of Massachusetts and Charles Bennett of Florida, both of the Armed Services Committee.

The Armed Services panel already has voted overwhelmingly to cut 1985 production of the multi-warhead MX to 30 missiles, instead of the 40 asked by Reagan.

But in their letter to Reagan, the 74 House members said they will attempt "to delete from the budget $3.1 billion which has been requested for fiscal 1985 MX production," and, moreover, "We will propose to de-authorize and rescind previous fiscal 1984 MX procurement funding, and terminate production before additional billions are obligated for a program without military justification."

Last year, the House approved procurement of the new intercontinental ballistic missile by a 9-vote margin. That victory for the president came in the wake of the Soviet downing of a Korean Air Lines jumbo jet, and also followed his claim that the program would enhance the U.S. negotiating posture at strategic arms talks. But the Soviets subsequently walked out of the talks.

"The administration is fixed in the belief that one nation can achieve nuclear superiority," said Mavroules. "We need to achieve an effective deterrence. But, in fact, the MX does not contribute to that deterrence.

"The MX further drains money away from other military programs vital to our national defense," he said. "It can no longer be justified on the basis of military or arms control requirements."

The letter to Reagan said that "We support many of the defense initiatives which have been advanced over the last three years. A revitalized conventional force, the building of a modern Navy and improvements in the quality of life for our military men and women are the product of Congress and the administration working together.

"Yet ... the burden falls upon Congress to resist weapons systems which are highly questionable, and from the standpoint of military capability, unnecessary. The MX is such a system."

Lucas' partner faces 10 murder charges

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Ottis Elwood Toole faces a possible death penalty if convicted for the 1982 first-degree arson-murder of a man in a suburban Jacksonville boarding house. Then he faces nine more murder charges in three other states.

Toole's trial was scheduled to resume today with the second day of jury selection. Monday, 15 prospective jurors were questioned. Prosecution and defense attorneys said they expected testimony to begin Wednesday after the panel is seated.

The arson and murder case will be Toole's first trial on 10 murder charges he faces in Florida, Louisiana, Texas and Colorado.

In this week's trial, Toole is accused of setting a boarding house on fire Jan. 4, 1982 in Springfield, a Jacksonville neighborhood. A 64-year-old man, George Nicholas Sonneberg, died of injuries suffered in the fire. The Sonneberg case is the only murder charge Toole faces in Florida.

If convicted Toole, 37, could be sentenced to either life in prison or to death.

In the first day of jury selection, prosecutors asked presiding Circuit Judge James Harrison to strike two of the jurors they questioned because the individuals opposed the death penalty.

But Harrison refused their request. Instead, he recommended that prosecutors appeal his decisison to the Florida Supreme Court, which has not yet ruled on the issue.

Toole and companion Henry Lee Lucas have confessed to a stream of crimes that authorities in 17 states believe may have claimed at least 100 victims, authorities said.

Lucas, 47, who linked up with Toole in Jacksonville in 1977, has been convicted of three homicides in Texas, receiving two life sentences and the death penalty.

Lucas, who scavenged for a living in the four years that he lived in Jacksonville, claims to have killed as many as 360 people and is charged with 17 slayings, officials said.

Police who have interviewed the pair say they traveled from state to state, picking up hitchhikers, breaking into houses and shooting people through their front doors or windows.

Toole had just started serving a 20-year prison term for a May 1983 Jacksonville arson when Lucas implicated his former associate in the fire that killed Sonneberg.

Student burglars caught

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — A Penn State University senior directed a band of thieves "out for thrill and adventure" who used stolen pass keys and made off with everything from exams to a microwave oven, police and school officials said.

The student burglars also lifted computer parts and a refrigerator as well as cases of soda, cheese and bread from the dining hall, according to charges in 12 criminal complaints.

The key to the operation, authorities said, was two rings of 70 "grand master" pass keys that allowed entrance to almost every building on the sprawling campus of 33,000 students in rural central Pennsylvania.

"Some of the stuff was given away, like they were just out for the fun of it," said university spokesman Peter Silvestri.

"Some of it was food in which they went back to the dormitory and just passed it around," he said, adding that the thieves "seemed to be out for thrill and adventure."

The value of the stolen equipment has been estimated at between $5,000 and $10,000.

The burglaries described in the complaints ended April 5 with the arrest of David E. Schmidt, a senior nuclear engineering major from Acton, Mass. He was charged with burglary, unlawful possession of a controlled substance and other offenses and was placed in Centre County Prison in lieu of $250,000 bond. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for next week.

A search of Schmidt's dormitory room turned up lock picks and about 60 grams of marijuana, police said.

Steven Brown, an electrical engineering major from Miramar, Fla., was arrested April 18 and charged with burglary. Bail was set at $20,000.

More arrests are expected, police said. About 10 students are believed to have been directly involved in the burglaries although perhaps twice that many could be charged, said a source familiar with the probe who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

Schmidt was described as the ringleader in most of the criminal complaints.

In one scheme detailed by police, Schmidt allegedly drove with four others to a campus laboratory to steal a microwave oven March 31.

When they arrived at the lab, "Schmidt opened the door and led them to a classroom where Schmidt diagrammed the building and showed where he was positioning people," one of the complaints said.

The complaint said police knew of the alleged heist through an informant who said he was paid $30 by Schmidt for helping.

Another complaint charges Schmidt with theft of trade secrets. It says he "did enter, remove and offer for sale" two electrical engineering exams from a campus laboratory and sold them for $30 apiece.

Chinese told to tidy up for Reagan

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese are shining up the capital for President Reagan's visit and government leaders have told the people in Peking's cramped courtyards and hovels: Clean up and refrain from spitting while the president is here.

As Reagan and his three-plane entourage make their way across the Pacific Ocean, Peking workers are toiling to plant trees, pot flowers outside the Great Hall of the People and otherwise put the best possible face on the dusty Chinese capital.

The state-run press has given China's 1 billion people few details about the trip, the first by an American president since China and the United States normalized relations in 1979. Reagan is to arrive in Peking on Thursday.

Chinese sources say they have been told by word of mouth to tidy up, not to spit and to keep their young children from "da xiao bian" — relieving themselves — on the street.

Preparations for the six-day visit have exasperated government bureaucrats, who have been besieged by White House emissaries and the U.S. news media for special services ranging from extra telephones to leased limousines.

CBS News rented a big Chinese red flag limousine for its staff and the hotel's entire ground floor atrium bar as a studio, at a cost of thousands of dollars.

A press corps of 300 has booked 400 rooms in the hotel, a $75 million U.S.-Chinese joint venture with a glass facade, a 24-hour cafe that serves hamburgers and pizza and a grand ballroom where Reagan will be host at a banquet of American roast turkey, salad, soup and California wine.

So as not to make a mockery of the crockery, these Chinese waiters and waitresses spent Monday afternoon practicing their serving technique for President Ronald Reagan's return banquet. The visiting VIP will host Chinese leaders at a traditional American turkey dinner April 28 at the Great Wall Hotel in the Chinese capital.

The hotel's Hong Kong and American managers are holding three-hour crash courses every afternoon in the ballroom, frantically training the 120 Chinese waiters and waitresses who will work the banquet Saturday night.

"We have given each one a table and told them: 'This is your responsibility,'" said Thompson Lam, the hotel executive in charge of the banquet class.

But he said on banquet night, one of the hotel managers will serve the presidential table, to avoid any misunderstandings, embarassments or calamities.

The Reagans will stay at the Diaoyutai Guest House, a former imperial fishing haunt that the communists have transformed into an estate for visiting VIPs.

Four dead due to high food prices

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Police opened fire with bullets and tear gas bombs on protesters angry over government-ordered price increases. At least four people were killed and 100 injured.

Police reported about 300 arrests as riots broke out in at least five cities during the protests Monday, which coincided with a call by businessmen for a 24-hour general strike.

Rioters set fire to three supermarkets and three furniture stores in the capital's old district and smashed windows in scores of other stores in looting sprees.

Police armed with automatic weapons and tear gas grenades patrolled the streets today to try to prevent any new outbreak of violence in this Caribbean nation's capital.

The unrest is seen as President Salvador Jorge Blanco's toughest challenge since taking office 20 months ago. To meet the terms of a $599 million loan from the International Monetary Fund, he last week ordered a 200 percent increase in prices of all imported goods, including medicine, and also raised prices of domestic foodstuffs by varying levels.

The public reacted when the long Easter weekend ended. Gangs of youths set up barricades of burning tires and pelted police with stones. Police responded first with tear gas and then gunfire.

Police said three men and a woman were killed. A Dominican radio station said a policeman also was shot and killed, but police would not confirm the report.

Officials at four metropolitan hospitals, their emergency rooms packed with the injured, reported a total of least 100 people hurt. Radio and television stations broadcast emergency calls for blood donations.

A radio station reported that a 70-year-old woman, Ana Disla, was fatally injured when she was struck by a tear-gas canister, but police said she suffered two gunshot wounds and was taken to a hospital where she was in serious condition.

Police also said a man, who was not identified, was struck by bullets and doctors had to amputate both his legs.

Disturbances and arrests also were reported in cities of Santiago, San Francisco de Macoris, Barahona and San Cristobal.

Among those arrested in Santo Domingo were Narcisco Isa Conde, secretary general of the Dominican Communist Party. Police said he was picked up at his home and apparently was not involved in the demonstration. His party issued a statement protesting the arrest.

Also arrested at home was Hanlet Herman, a longtime government opponent with ties to Cuba who has participated in past rebellions, including the 1965 civil war that ended when U.S. troops were dispatched to intervene.

Jorge Blanco met Monday night with his Cabinet, but no details were disclosed.

Under the price increases, the cost of a small package of bread rose to the equivalent of 10 cents from six cents and a pound of sugar to the equivalent of 32 cents from 26.

Jorge Blanco said the price switch for foreign goods was dictated by the current real exchange rates.

Refusing to devaluate the Dominican peso, the government is using a dual exchange currency rate system.

Police seize $37 million in drugs

PARIS (AP) — Narcotics police staked out a shed in a village near Versailles and seized 6.6 tons of hashish and 110 pounds of opium in what authorities today called a record haul of illicit drugs in France.

Authorities said the drugs could have brought in $37 million in street sales.

Some of the hashish had been hidden in jute bags, the kind French farmers use as potato sacks.

Four men from Marseille with criminal records were arrested in the weekend seizure, authorities said. Also arrested were two brothers from Lebanon and an Algerian, police said.

Some of the drugs were to be sold in France and the rest was headed for other parts of Europe, said a spokesman for the Interior Ministry.

The spokesman said undercover police and customs agents trailed the drug shipment after it was unloaded in Marseille off a ship that arrived from the Middle East. They tracked the drugs to a hamlet south of Paris, where drug agents staked out a shed.

Around midnight Easter Sunday, the spokesman said, police stopped a truck from leaving the shed, and found about 1.6 tons of hashish inside the vehicle. The hashish was divided into 2.2-pound (1-kilogram) bricks.

Agents then raided the shed, where they found five tons of hashish and 110 pounds of opium. Hashish is a concentrated, intoxicating form of hemp.

Authorities did not not name those arrested. The Interior Ministry spokesman said the suspects were being transferred to holding cells in Paris.

Sandinistas reject pleas from church

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government has rejected church leaders' pleas that it negotiate with rebels and is reportedly reinforcing troops near the Honduran border to brace for a new insurgent offensive.

In Costa Rica, leaders of anti-Sandinista forces based there said Monday that the CIA might be aiding them indirectly but denied published reports that they follow orders from the U.S. intelligence agency or any other foreign group or government.

In Managua, the official government newspaper Barricada carried the Sandinistas' rejection of the appeal by Nicaragua's Roman Catholic bishops. The plea, made in a pastoral letter, was one of the strongest issued by the church leaders against the leftist Sandinistas.

The junta said negotiations would be a "dialogue with the murderers of our people."

In the pastoral letter, the bishops also called for the government to free those imprisoned for "ideological difference" and to end press censorship and violence against the Indian minority.

Reporting on the fight against the rebels, the Nicaraguan Defense Ministry said 120 rebels and 19 Sandinista soldiers were killed in combat during the past week.

Barricada said the government reinforced troops in the northern provinces of Matagalpa and Jinotega, where, according to the Defense Ministry, two of the bloodiest battles last week were fought.

The government was readying for renewed attacks from the Honduran-baseed Nicaraguan Democratic Force, Barricada said.

In an account of one of the battles last week, the government said 300 rebels attacked a Miskito Indian village defended by 70 soldiers. One soldier and four civilians were killed in the attack on Sumubila, 228 miles northeast of the capital.

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, visiting the village, was quoted as saying rebels in the north were planning an offensive that "can come at any moment."

The Nicaraguan Democratic Force fights in the north, while the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, known as ARDE, concentrates its effort in the south. U.S. intelligence sources in Washington say both groups receive CIA assistance.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, Alfonso Robelo, political director of ARDE, said "there could be CIA money that comes indirectly to ARDE. What does not arrive and what we will never accept is foreign orders."

The New York Times has quoted Costa Rican government officials and diplomats as saying the CIA has given ARDE equipment and money over the past few months but threatened to withhold aid if the rebels did not follow its directions.

In another Central American development Monday, the far-right candidate for president in El Salvador said at a news conference that chaos during the first round of the presidential balloting March 25 created "the most fraudulent election in the history of El Salvador."

The candidate, Roberto d'Aubuisson, was the second-leading vote-getter in that elections and faces the top vote-winner, Jose Napoleon Duarte, a moderate in a runoff May 6.

D'Aubuisson said Monday: "It was fraudulent in every sense, in the logistics of the distribution (of voting materials), in the deception of the voting places, and in the incorrect lists."

Boston, Milwaukee and New Jersey, which each lost the third game of its best-of-five National Basketball Association playoff series after winning the first two, get another chance to advance to the second round tonight.

The Celtics will be at Washington, which won Game 3 111-108 in overtime Saturday, while the Bucks are at Atlanta and the Nets host the defending champion Philadelphia 76ers. The Hawks stayed alive Saturday with a 103-94 triumph and the 76ers staved off elimination Sunday with a 108-100 decision.

In tonight's other games Utah is at Denver, Dallas at Seattle and Portland at Phoenix. The Nuggets, SuperSonics and Suns each won Game 3 at home for a 2-1 lead after splitting the first two games on the road.

PACIFIC Division champion Los Angeles swept Kansas City in three games, while the New York Knicks, leading Detroit 2-1, host the Pistons Wednesday night.

The upstart Nets, who won handily in the first two games of the series at Philadelphia, shrugged off suggestions by the 76ers that Sunday's loss would plant seeds of doubt and fear in underdog New Jersey.

"It was kind of unrealistic to think we'd sweep Philly three-to-zip," Nets forward Buck Williams. "No question the pressure is still on the 76ers. We're still up 2-1 and they're the defending champs. Coming into the series we had nothing to lose. Win, lose or draw, people were saying the 76ers are the ones who should win."

Washington, with the worst regular-season record among the 16 NBA playoff qualifiers, is living up to its reputation as one of the most physical teams in the league.

Celtics forward Cedric Maxwell predicted more rough stuff in Game 4.

"It's just brewing, and the longer this series goes, the worse it's going to get as far as physical contact and animosity between each other goes," Maxwell said.

BUT BOSTON star Larry Bird said the Celtics should advance if they stick to basketball instead of toughness.

"If we don't do better, it's going to be a fifth game and a lot of guys tighten up in a game like that," Bird said. "It would be tough losing three in a row, especially when you know you've got the better team."

Atlanta, 31-10 at home and 9-32 on the road during the regular season, is concentrating on beating the Bucks again at the Omni before worrying about how to beat them at Milwaukee.

"This gives us some momentum," Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello said. "We didn't have any before."

Utah, the Midwest Division champion, is in danger of being eliminated by the Nuggets, which finished 38-44 in the regular season. But the Jazz are now 0-4 in Denver this season, including Sunday's 121-117 defeat.

"Sure our backs are against the wall," Utah Coach Frank Layden said. "But we're not out of it yet."

Like Denver and New Jersey, Seattle and Phoenix both lead their series 2-1 against teams with better regular-season records.

BUT SUNS Coach John MacLeod said it's no fluke that his team leads the Trail Blazers. Phoenix won its last six regular-season games to finish 41-41, while Portland was 47-31.

"We've really turned things around these last two months," MacLeod said. "Our guys are playing with a great deal of confidence ... Instead of folding in the close games, we're battling right to the end. That was lacking in our play earlier this season, especially on the road."

Undoubtedly, what SuperSonics guard Gus Williams said about tonight's game at Seattle could have been echoed by anyone on the Suns, Nets or Nuggets, who all must go on the road for Game 5 if they don't win Game 4 at home.

"We don't want to go back to Dallas," Williams said. "We've got to do it now."

Midland High's Allan Foret
...he's fast, but not that fast

Foret: Spring's double trouble

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High's Allan Foret is fast, but not that fast.

He can run the 100-meter dash in 10.5 but that isn't quick enough to get from a Saturday track meet to a Saturday baseball game, especially if either event is out of town.

Foret has trouble even making it from track to baseball practice during the week. He usually arrives at the diamond near the end, allowing only enough time to take a few swings at the ball in the batting cage. He does manage to make Tuesday games, home or away.

At least, that's the way it was this season for the Midland High junior. Up until he failed to qualify for the Region I meet, ending his track season, Foret was concentrating on his sprints. Still, both sports benefit from his presence and both coaches accept his divided loyalties.

"Coach (Johnny) Williams never complains becuase I don't cheat my track much," said Foret. "Coach (Tim) Whalen — it disturbs him because I tend to miss more baseball than track."

"IF YOU work hard at each, you can do both," said MHS track coach Williams. "My general feeling is that a kid should compete in as many sports as his ability allows. Some are fortunate that they are capable in several different events. These two just happen to coincide and it makes it more difficult than competing in three consecutive seasons."

MHS baseball coach Whalen, who has let it be known all year his team "has deceptive speed, we're slower than we look," is glad to have Foret as much as he can. In three games, Foret has been sent in as a pinch runner (scoring twice) and in two others was giving a starting role in centerfield. Whalen wouldn't let him bat though.

"Competing in two sports hurts his baseball a bunch because his hitting is so far behind," said Whalen. "He's a good athlete running bases and defensively he has good hand and eye coordination for running and catching the ball. He can throw the ball too. Foret has a strong arm."

Foret has the same assessment.

"Competing in two sports hurts them both, baseball more than track," he said. "My batting is the main thing. Playing the outfield has always come pretty natural to me."

TRACK AND baseball aren't the only sports Foret competes in during the school year. During football season last fall, he earned a starting wide receiver position and was the main threat in the Bulldogs' passing attack.

Foret was the run-away leader in 4-5A passing statistics with 41 receptions for 665 yards (16.2-yard average per catch) and six touchdowns. On two occasions he threw passes and the one that was caught went 61 yards for a TD. The four times he carried the ball were good for 54 yards (13.5). He led the team in scoring with 36 points and was the only Bulldog to earn an first team All-District berth in football.

When both track and baseball seasons are going, his daily football is a third practice session he goes through each day.

"I have football in the morning, lifting weights and going over plays on a regular basis," said Foret. "On Tuesdays I do my track workouts in the morning so I can go to the baseball game. On a regular day, it's football in the morning and track in the afternoon followed by baseball."

AROUND THE start of track season — before baseball — Foret came up with a back injury that hampered both sports.

"I really don't know how it happened," said Foret. "It kind of built up. It got to the point where it hurt in track and I went to see a doctor."

That injury also contributed to his down fall at the plate, delaying the start of his hitting practice. He also feels it's part of the reason he didn't start in baseball until recently, track season's end.

"I don't start but if I hadn't missed practice because of injury I might be a good hitter. I hope I'm healthy next year" said Foret, who understands and accepts the bench role he played. "I realize it's not fair for me to start over someone who practices every day while I'm just part time."

Now that Foret is able to concentrate full time on baseball, he has found an increasing role with the Bulldogs. In two games, he's been the starting centerfielder because, "with his speed he can run down a lot of balls in the outfield."

With a little more practice in the batting cage, maybe Whalen will let him go to bat before the season's over.

Beaumont beats Cubs again, 4-1

BEAUMONT — The Texas League woes of the Midland Cubs continued here Monday night as they dropped a 4-1 decision to the West Division leading Beaumont Gators.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the Cubs, leaving the Midland team with a 3-11 record for the season and seven games behind the Gators.

The only bright spot for the Cubs in this one was the fact that they ended a 17 inning scoreless streak with a single run off winning pitcher Jim Leopald (1-0) in the eighth inning when Gary Varsho doubled home Rick Baker.

The Gators had shutout the Cubs Sunday and the Cubs hadn't scored a run until Monday's eighth inning since the ninth inning Saturday night in another loss to the Gators.

Pat Casey's two-run homer in the third inning did most of the damage against the Cub pitching staff, which has performed well with no support. Cub pitchers gave up only five hits, but Ron Richardson (1-1) took the loss.

Leopald gave up only four hits to the Cubs and KOed 12 in 7⅔ innings of work. Matt Schessky finished up for Leopald and added another strikeout.

The Cubs are 0-4 on the current road trip, matching their losing streak and meet the Gators again tonight before heading for a five-game set in El Paso where they hope to find friendlier hosts.

Beaumont is now 10-4 on the season and own a two-game lead over the West Division field.

Altobelli losing patience

By PHIL COLLIER
Copley News Service

The Orioles had only one runner on base for Murray or Cal Ripken Jr. to drive in during the first inning of their first 11 games.

The situation is complicated by the fact that one of the Orioles' few hot hitters, new third baseman Wayne Gross (.412 average, three homers) is injured (strained knee).

"Forget those April cliches," he says. "I'll punch the next guy who mentions them."

THE PHILLIES, who lost to Baltimore last October, are getting little production out of fledgling first baseman Len Matuszek and seem likely to make another trade with the Cubs, this time for Bill Buckner. ... Several days ago, a writer asked Cub manager Jim Frey if the Buckner trade rumors had subsided. "It's subsided," he replied, "but it hasn't died down." ... They called it a generation gap, rather than a communications gap, when a pop fly fell between Pete Rose, Montreal's 42-year-old left fielder, and Argenis Salazar, the Expos' 20-year-old shortstop.

VETERAN Angels catcher Bob Boone's reaction to his 9-for-55 slump: "I never knew I could love and hate this game at the same time." ... Left-hander Steve Trout's last two outings marked the first time a Cub pitcher has had back-to-back complete games since Rick Reuschel in 1980. ... Power Outage: The Houston Astros have hit one homer in their first 14 games — Craig Reynolds connecting off the Phils' John Denny. ... The Cardinals, for all their speed, have been behind in the early innings so often that they stole only six bases in their first 13 games. By playing with caution, they grounded into 19 double plays.

Reds' Cedeno tries to handle anger surges

ATLANTA (AP) — Cincinnati Reds outfielder Cesar Cedeno says he can feel the effects of an off-season stress-management course, which taught him to control his self-destructive anger.

The 33-year-old outfielder said the course has helped him to handle setbacks like his lack of playing time this season.

"Things have happened this year with the team that I know would have bothered me — not playing that much, that kind of thing," Cedeno said Monday, an off-day for the Reds. "If those things had happened last year, I don't know how I would have reacted.

"I'm afraid to think about it, really. I would have blown up. I would have said things I would have been sorry for later on. I know that. But now, it is different."

Cedeno created a stir last season when he tore up a boarding pass at a Chicago airport because he wasn't given a first-class seat on the team flight. He realized he had to do something about his problem temper.

"That incident with the plane was really overblown, but it was things like that, my reaction to them, that led me to take the stress program over the winter," Cedeno said.

Chinese told to tidy up for Reagan

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese are shining up the capital for President Reagan's visit and government leaders have told the people in Peking's cramped courtyards and hovels: Clean up and refrain from spitting while the president is here.

As Reagan and his three-plane entourage make their way across the Pacific Ocean, Peking workers are toiling to plant trees, pot flowers outside the Great Hall of the People and otherwise put the best possible face on the dusty Chinese capital.

The state-run press has given China's 1 billion people few details about the trip, the first by an American president since China and the United States normalized relations in 1979. Reagan is to arrive in Peking on Thursday.

Chinese sources say they have been told by word of mouth to tidy up, not to spit and to keep their young children from "da xiao bian" — relieving themselves — on the street.

Preparations for the six-day visit have exasperated government bureaucrats, who have been besieged by White House emissaries and the U.S. news media for special services ranging from extra telephones to leased limousines.

CBS News rented a big Chinese red flag limousine for its staff and the hotel's entire ground floor atrium bar as a studio, at a cost of thousands of dollars.

A press corps of 300 has booked 400 rooms in the hotel, a $75 million U.S.-Chinese joint venture with a glass facade, a 24-hour cafe that serves hamburgers and pizza and a grand ballroom where Reagan will be host at a banquet of American roast turkey, salad, soup and California wine.

The hotel's Hong Kong and American managers are holding three-hour crash courses every afternoon in the ballroom, frantically training the 120 Chinese waiters and waitresses who will work the banquet Saturday night.

"We have given each one a table and told them: 'This is your responsibility,'" said Thompson Lam, the hotel executive in charge of the banquet class.

But he said on banquet night, one of the hotel managers will serve the presidential table, to avoid any misunderstandings, embarassments or calamities.

The Reagans will stay at the Diaoyutai Guest House, a former imperial fishing haunt that the communists have transformed into an estate for visiting VIPs.

Four dead due to high food prices

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Police opened fire with bullets and tear gas bombs on protesters angry over government-ordered price increases. At least four people were killed and 100 injured.

Police reported about 300 arrests as riots broke out in at least five cities during the protests Monday, which coincided with a call by businessmen for a 24-hour general strike.

Rioters set fire to three supermarkets and three furniture stores in the capital's old district and smashed windows in scores of other stores in looting sprees.

Police armed with automatic weapons and tear gas grenades patrolled the streets today to try to prevent any new outbreak of violence in this Caribbean nation's capital.

The unrest is seen as President Salvador Jorge Blanco's toughest challenge since taking office 20 months ago. To meet the terms of a $599 million loan from the International Monetary Fund, he last week ordered a 200 percent increase in prices of all imported goods, including medicine, and also raised prices of domestic foodstuffs by varying levels.

The public reacted when the long Easter weekend ended. Gangs of youths set up barricades of burning tires and pelted police with stones. Police responded first with tear gas and then gunfire.

Police said three men and a woman were killed. A Dominican radio station said a policeman also was shot and killed, but police would not confirm the report.

Officials at four metropolitan hospitals, their emergency rooms packed with the injured, reported a total of least 100 people hurt. Radio and television stations broadcast emergency calls for blood donations.

A radio station reported that a 70-year-old woman, Ana Disla, was fatally injured when she was struck by a tear-gas canister, but police said she suffered two gunshot wounds and was taken to a hospital where she was in serious condition.

Police also said a man, who was not identified, was struck by bullets and doctors had to amputate both his legs.

Disturbances and arrests also were reported in cities of Santiago, San Francisco de Macoris, Barahona and San Cristobal.

Among those arrested in Santo Domingo were Narcisco Isa Conde, secretary general of the Dominican Communist Party. Police said he was picked up at his home and apparently was not involved in the demonstration. His party issued a statement protesting the arrest.

Also arrested at home was Hanlet Herman, a longtime government opponent with ties to Cuba who has participated in past rebellions, including the 1965 civil war that ended when U.S. troops were dispatched to intervene.

Jorge Blanco met Monday night with his Cabinet, but no details were disclosed.

Under the price increases, the cost of a small package of bread rose to the equivalent of 10 cents from six cents and a pound of sugar to the equivalent of 32 cents from 26.

Jorge Blanco said the price switch for foreign goods was dictated by the current real exchange rates.

Refusing to devaluate the Dominican peso, the government is using a dual exchange currency rate system.

Police seize $37 million in drugs

PARIS (AP) — Narcotics police staked out a shed in a village near Versailles and seized 6.6 tons of hashish and 110 pounds of opium in what authorities today called a record haul of illicit drugs in France.

Authorities said the drugs could have brought in $37 million in street sales.

Some of the hashish had been hidden in jute bags, the kind French farmers use as potato sacks.

Four men from Marseille with criminal records were arrested in the weekend seizure, authorities said. Also arrested were two brothers from Lebanon and an Algerian, police said.

Some of the drugs were to be sold in France and the rest was headed for other parts of Europe, said a spokesman for the Interior Ministry.

The spokesman said undercover police and customs agents trailed the drug shipment after it was unloaded in Marseille off a ship that arrived from the Middle East. They tracked the drugs to a hamlet south of Paris, where drug agents staked out a shed.

Around midnight Easter Sunday, the spokesman said, police stopped a truck from leaving the shed, and found about 1.6 tons of hashish inside the vehicle. The hashish was divided into 2.2-pound (1-kilogram) bricks.

Agents then raided the shed, where they found five tons of hashish and 110 pounds of opium. Hashish is a concentrated, intoxicating form of hemp.

Authorities did not not name those arrested. The Interior Ministry spokesman said the suspects were being transferred to holding cells in Paris.

Sandinistas reject pleas from church

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government has rejected church leaders' pleas that it negotiate with rebels and is reportedly reinforcing troops near the Honduran border to brace for a new insurgent offensive.

In Costa Rica, leaders of anti-Sandinista forces based there said Monday that the CIA might be aiding them indirectly but denied published reports that they follow orders from the U.S. intelligence agency or any other foreign group or government.

In Managua, the official government newspaper Barricada carried the Sandinistas' rejection of the appeal by Nicaragua's Roman Catholic bishops. The plea, made in a pastoral letter, was one of the strongest issued by the church leaders against the leftist Sandinistas.

The junta said negotiations would be a "dialogue with the murderers of our people."

In the pastoral letter, the bishops also called for the government to free those imprisoned for "ideological difference" and to end press censorship and violence against the Indian minority.

Reporting on the fight against the rebels, the Nicaraguan Defense Ministry said 120 rebels and 19 Sandinista soldiers were killed in combat during the past week.

Barricada said the government reinforced troops in the northern provinces of Matagalpa and Jinotega, where, according to the Defense Ministry, two of the bloodiest battles last week were fought.

The government was readying for renewed attacks from the Honduran-baseed Nicaraguan Democratic Force, Barricada said.

In an account of one of the battles last week, the government said 300 rebels attacked a Miskito Indian village defended by 70 soldiers. One soldier and four civilians were killed in the attack on Sumubila, 228 miles northeast of the capital.

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, visiting the village, was quoted as saying rebels in the north were planning an offensive that "can come at any moment."

The Nicaraguan Democratic Force fights in the north, while the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, known as ARDE, concentrates its effort in the south. U.S. intelligence sources in Washington say both groups receive CIA assistance.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, Alfonso Robelo, political director of ARDE, said "there could be CIA money that comes indirectly to ARDE. What does not arrive and what we will never accept is foreign orders."

The New York Times has quoted Costa Rican government officials and diplomats as saying the CIA has given ARDE equipment and money over the past few months but threatened to withhold aid if the rebels did not follow its directions.

In another Central American development Monday, the far-right candidate for president in El Salvador said at a news conference that chaos during the first round of the presidential balloting March 25 created "the most fraudulent election in the history of El Salvador."

The candidate, Roberto d'Aubuisson, was the second-leading vote-getter in that elections and faces the top vote-winner, Jose Napoleon Duarte, a moderate in a runoff May 6.

D'Aubuisson said Monday: "It was fraudulent in every sense, in the logistics of the distribution (of voting materials), in the deception of the voting places, and in the incorrect lists."

Midland High's Allan Foret
...he's fast, but not that fast

Foret: Spring's double trouble

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High's Allan Foret is fast, but not that fast.

He can run the 100-meter dash in 10.5 but that isn't quick enough to get from a Saturday track meet to a Saturday baseball game, especially if either event is out of town.

Foret has trouble even making it from track to baseball practice during the week. He usually arrives at the diamond near the end, allowing only enough time to take a few swings at the ball in the batting cage. He does manage to make Tuesday games, home or away.

At least, that's the way it was this season for the Midland High junior. Up until he failed to qualify for the Region I meet, ending his track season, Foret was concentrating on his sprints. Still, both sports benefit from his presence and both coaches accept his divided loyalties.

"Coach (Johnny) Williams never complains becuase I don't cheat my track much," said Foret. "Coach (Tim) Whalen — it disturbs him because I tend to miss more baseball than track."

"IF YOU work hard at each, you can do both," said MHS track coach Williams. "My general feeling is that a kid should compete in as many sports as his ability allows. Some are fortunate that they are capable in several different events. These two just happen to coincide and it makes it more difficult than competing in three consecutive seasons."

MHS baseball coach Whalen, who has let it be known all year his team "has deceptive speed, we're slower than we look," is glad to have Foret as much as he can. In three games, Foret has been sent in as a pinch runner (scoring twice) and in two others was giving a starting role in centerfield. Whalen wouldn't let him bat though.

"Competing in two sports hurts his baseball a bunch because his hitting is so far behind," said Whalen. "He's a good athlete running bases and defensively he has good hand and eye coordination for running and catching the ball. He can throw the ball too. Foret has a strong arm."

Foret has the same assessment.

"Competing in two sports hurts them both, baseball more than track," he said. "My batting is the main thing. Playing the outfield has always come pretty natural to me."

TRACK AND baseball aren't the only sports Foret competes in during the school year. During football season last fall, he earned a starting wide receiver position and was the main threat in the Bulldogs' passing attack.

Foret was the run-away leader in 4-5A passing statistics with 41 receptions for 665 yards (16.2-yard average per catch) and six touchdowns. On two occasions he threw passes and the one that was caught went 61 yards for a TD. The four times he carried the ball were good for 54 yards (13.5). He led the team in scoring with 36 points and was the only Bulldog to earn an first team All-District berth in football.

When both track and baseball seasons are going, his daily football is a third practice session he goes through each day.

"I have football in the morning, lifting weights and going over plays on a regular basis," said Foret. "On Tuesdays I do my track workouts in the morning so I can go to the baseball game. On a regular day, it's football in the morning and track in the afternoon followed by baseball."

AROUND THE start of track season — before baseball — Foret came up with a back injury that hampered both sports.

"I really don't know how it happened," said Foret. "It kind of built up. It got to the point where it hurt in track and I went to see a doctor."

That injury also contributed to his down fall at the plate, delaying the start of his hitting practice. He also feels it's part of the reason he didn't start in baseball until recently, track season's end.

"I don't start but if I hadn't missed practice because of injury I might be a good hitter. I hope I'm healthy next year" said Foret, who understands and accepts the bench role he played. "I realize it's not fair for me to start over someone who practices every day while I'm just part time."

Now that Foret is able to concentrate full time on baseball, he has found an increasing role with the Bulldogs. In two games, he's been the starting centerfielder because, "with his speed he can run down a lot of balls in the outfield."

With a little more practice in the batting cage, maybe Whalen will let him go to bat before the season's over.

It's down to nail chewing

By The Associated Press

Boston, Milwaukee and New Jersey, which each lost the third game of its best-of-five National Basketball Association playoff series after winning the first two, get another chance to advance to the second round tonight.

The Celtics will be at Washington, which won Game 3 111-108 in overtime Saturday, while the Bucks are at Atlanta and the Nets host the defending champion Philadelphia 76ers. The Hawks stayed alive Saturday with a 103-94 triumph and the 76ers staved off elimination Sunday with a 108-100 decision.

In tonight's other games Utah is at Denver, Dallas at Seattle and Portland at Phoenix. The Nuggets, SuperSonics and Suns each won Game 3 at home for a 2-1 lead after splitting the first two games on the road.

PACIFIC Division champion Los Angeles swept Kansas City in three games, while the New York Knicks, leading Detroit 2-1, host the Pistons Wednesday night.

The upstart Nets, who won handily in the first two games of the series at Philadelphia, shrugged off suggestions by the 76ers that Sunday's loss would plant seeds of doubt and fear in underdog New Jersey.

"It was kind of unrealistic to think we'd sweep Philly three-to-zip," Nets forward Buck Williams. "No question the pressure is still on the 76ers.

NBA Playoffs

We're still up 2-1 and they're the defending champs. Coming into the series we had nothing to lose. Win, lose or draw, people were saying the 76ers are the ones who should win."

Washington, with the worst regular-season record among the 16 NBA playoff qualifiers, is living up to its reputation as one of the most physical teams in the league.

Celtics forward Cedric Maxwell predicted more rough stuff in Game 4.

"It's just brewing, and the longer this series goes, the worse it's going to get as far as physical contact and animosity between each other goes," Maxwell said.

BUT BOSTON star Larry Bird said the Celtics should advance if they stick to basketball instead of toughness.

"If we don't do better, it's going to be a fifth game and a lot of guys tighten up in a game like that," Bird said. "It would be tough losing three in a row, especially when you know you've got the better team."

Atlanta, 31-10 at home and 9-32 on the road during the regular season, is concentrating on beating the Bucks again at the Omni before worrying about how to beat them at Milwaukee.

"This gives us some momentum," Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello said. "We didn't have any before."

Utah, the Midwest Division champion, is in danger of being eliminated by the Nuggets, which finished 38-44 in the regular season. But the Jazz are now 0-4 in Denver this season, including Sunday's 121-117 defeat.

"Sure our backs are against the wall," Utah Coach Frank Layden said. "But we're not out of it yet."

Like Denver and New Jersey, Seattle and Phoenix both lead their series 2-1 against teams with better regular-season records.

BUT SUNS Coach John MacLeod said it's no fluke that his team leads the Trail Blazers. Phoenix won its last six regular-season games to finish 41-41, while Portland was 47-31.

"We've really turned things around these last two months," MacLeod said. "Our guys are playing with a great deal of confidence ... Instead of folding in the close games, we're battling right to the end. That was lacking in our play earlier this season, especially on the road."

Undoubtedly, what SuperSonics guard Gus Williams said about tonight's game at Seattle could have been echoed by anyone on the Suns, Nets or Nuggets, who all must go on the road for Game 5 if they don't win Game 4 at home.

"We don't want to go back to Dallas," Williams said. "We've got to do it now."

Beaumont beats Cubs again, 4-1

BEAUMONT — The Texas League woes of the Midland Cubs continued here Monday night as they dropped a 4-1 decision to the West Division leading Beaumont Gators.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the Cubs, leaving the Midland team with a 3-11 record for the season and seven games behind the Gators.

The only bright spot for the Cubs in this one was the fact that they ended a 17 inning scoreless streak with a single run off winning pitcher Jim Leopald (1-0) in the eighth inning when Gary Varsho doubled home Rick Baker.

The Gators had shutout the Cubs Sunday and the Cubs hadn't scored a run until Monday's eighth inning since the ninth inning Saturday night in another loss to the Gators.

Pat Casey's two-run homer in the third inning did most of the damage against the Cub pitching staff, which has performed well with no support. Cub pitchers gave up only five hits, but Ron Richardson (1-1) took the loss.

Leopald gave up only four hits to the Cubs and KOed 12 in 7⅔ innings of work. Matt Schessky finished up for Leopald and added another strikeout.

The Cubs are 0-4 on the current road trip, matching their losing streak and meet the Gators again tonight before heading for a five-game set in El Paso where they hope to find friendlier hosts.

Beaumont is now 10-4 on the season and own a two-game lead over the West Division field.

Altobelli losing patience

By PHIL COLLIER
Copley News Service

The Orioles had only one runner on base for Murray or Cal Ripken Jr. to drive in during the first inning of their first 11 games.

The situation is complicated by the fact that one of the Orioles' few hot hitters, new third baseman Wayne Gross (.412 average, three homers) is injured (strained knee).

"Forget those April cliches," he says. "I'll punch the next guy who mentions them."

THE PHILLIES, who lost to Baltimore last October, are getting little production out of fledgling first baseman Len Matuszek and seem likely to make another trade with the Cubs, this time for Bill Buckner. ... They called it a generation gap, rather than a communications gap, when a pop fly fell between Pete Rose, Montreal's 42-year-old left fielder, and Argenis Salazar, the Expos' 20-year-old shortstop.

Power Outage: The Houston Astros have hit one homer in their first 14 games — Craig Reynolds connecting off the Phils' John Denny. ... The Cardinals, for all their speed, have been behind in the early innings so often that they stole only six bases in their first 13 games. By playing with caution, they grounded into 19 double plays.

The Cardinals' Joaquin Andujar wore no T-shirt in his five-hit shutout at Chicago the other day, though the temperature was 42 degrees. "I don't worry about hot or cold," he said. "The only time to worry is when you get sick. If you don't get well, you die."

A PLANE transporting the Montreal Expos had to make an emergency landing in Indianapolis the other day because reliever Jeff Reardon thought he was having a heart attack. It develops that he was allergic to a wine sauce he had been served. The irony of this is that Manager Bill Virdon doesn't allow alcoholic beverages on team flights. ... Philadelphia pinch hitters, led by John Wockenfuss, Joe Lefebvre, Sixto Lezcano and Ozzie Virgil Jr., are off to a 20-for-24 start with seven runs batted in.

FORMER CLEVELAND reliever Jim Kern, talking about the Indians: "If they have a player who is talented, they try to trade him for three players who aren't."

Reds' Cedeno tries to handle anger surges

ATLANTA (AP) — Cincinnati Reds outfielder Cesar Cedeno says he can feel the effects of an off-season stress-management course, which taught him to control his self-destructive anger.

The 33-year-old outfielder said the course has helped him to handle setbacks like his lack of playing time this season.

"Things have happened this year with the team that I know would have bothered me — not playing that much, that kind of thing," Cedeno said Monday, an off-day for the Reds. "If those things had happened last year, I don't know how I would have reacted.

"I'm afraid to think about it, really. I would have blown up. I would have said things I would have been sorry for later on. I know that. But now, it is different."

Cedeno created a stir last season when he tore up a boarding pass at a Chicago airport because he wasn't given a first-class seat on the team flight. He realized he had to do something about his problem temper.

"That incident with the plane was really overblown, but it was things like that, my reaction to them, that led me to take the stress program over the winter," Cedeno said.

Women cagers to try it again

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bill Byrne, commissioner of the new Women's American Basketball Association, says the fledgling professional league will concentrate on the East, Midwest and South in its first season this fall.

The new league officially began operations today with its first player draft of 14 rounds in a downtown Columbus hotel.

Of the first-year alignment, Byrne said, "That's where all the talent and interest seems to be. We're expecting to go to the West Coast in 1985."

Byrne helped form and served as a commissioner for two years of the Women's Basketball League which folded in 1981.

"I started it but I didn't fold it," he said.

Why does he believe the pro sport will survive now?

"I think the time is right. Look at the growth of the women's college programs. And the Olympics will be a big help. Of the 15 players on the U.S. Olympic team, only four are underclasswomen," Byrne said Monday in the league's headquarters in Columbus.

"Wouldn't it be nice for them to bring the gold medal with them into our new league?" he asked a sports writer.

Ken Boggs, the new league's attorney, disclosed Columbus will be one of the 1984 franchises in the WABA.

"It was firmed up today," he said Monday of the Ohio team. He listed the other charter members as New York, New Jersey, Boston, Baltimore, Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas and Houston.

Boggs, however, said the first draft was to be conducted among only eight teams. He would not say which city would be asked to sit out 1984 and join the league in 1985.

Byrne said Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle are expected to join in 1985.

"We'll play a fall schedule of 22 to 30 games this fall and then play a summer schedule next year," he said.

McKeon ready to trade

Analysis

An AP Sports Analysis
By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Jack McKeon sat in a hotel lobby puffing on a stogey and waiting for some action.

"If you see anyone who wants to make a trade, tell them I'll be in my office," said McKeon, director of baseball operations for the San Diego Padres. "I'm always available."

McKeon's office seems to be anywhere he blows his smoke, only, when he sits down to make a trade, he's not blowing smoke.

In fact, in the past four years, McKeon has greatly enhanced his reputation as the Padres' wheeler-dealer. He wasn't always universally well regarded. There were those who questioned his ability to judge talent and make meaningful deals. But most of these folks have taken a low profile recently.

Acting as the Padres' general manager since 1980, McKeon has molded a club that finished 28 games below .500 in 1981 into a solid pennant contender.

McKeon operates from a simple premise. Pinpoint your deficiencies. Decide what you can afford to give up. Check around. And make the best deal available, whether it's through free agency or trade.

McKeon was one of the most active of the GM types at last December's winter meetings in Nashville, Tenn., where he set up a day-long operation in the hotel lobby. He was involved in one three-way deal with the Montreal Expos and Chicago Cubs, and he made a trade with San Francisco. Numerous other gambits fell through.

"You know what I'd like to be able to do," he said. "We ought to hold these meetings on a boat. Get a big ship, anchor it in the middle of the Pacific Ocean. That way no one could get away or hide. They'd have to sit down and make deals.

"I've always got something going."

In the past two years, the Padres have signed two of baseball's top free agents — Steve Garvey from Los Angeles in 1983 and Rich Gossage from the New York Yankees in 1984.

McKeon topped off his year by trading pitcher Dennis Rasmussen to the Yankees from third baseman Graig Nettles, acquiring the left-handed power he needed to compliment Garvey. The transaction was the Padres' 21st in the past year.

That's why McKeon has earned the nicknames "Trader Jack" and "Sultan of Swap."

McKeon was responsible for acquiring 21 of the players on the Padres' 1983 winter roster, including pitchers Tim Lollar, Luis DeLeon and Ed Whitson, shortstop Garry Templeton and catcher Terry Kennedy.

McKeon joined the Padres in September, 1979 as an assistant to General Manager Bob Fontaine. He took over from Fontaine on an interim basis in September, 1980 and, in July, 1982, the Padres gave him a new three-year contract.

Even before McKeon came to the Padres, he had shown some baseball smarts. He managed the Kansas City Royals in 1973-75, building the club into a contender and helping acquire such players as George Brett and Hal McRae.

With Dick Williams managing, San Diego finally appears ready to make its move in the National League West. Some feel the club still is a year or two away from unseating the defending division champion Los Angeles Dodgers.

By winning eight of their first 10 games and jumping to a 3½-game lead in the division on April 13, the Padres might have been saying their future is now. With acquisitions like Nettles, Gossage and Garvey, and homegrown players like Tony Gwynn, Kevin McReynolds and Eric Show, the Padres may not have far to go.

Bandits shock Panthers

USFL Roundup

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Playing without injured star wide receiver Anthony Carter hurt Michigan, but not as much as Tampa Bay's ability to take away the Panthers' running game, Bandits defensive end Mike Butler says.

John Reaves threw two touchdown passes Monday night to lead the Bandits to a 20-7 victory over Michigan, extending the defending United States Football League champions' losing streak to three games.

"We felt that since they had lost two games in a row they would want to set up their running game," said Butler, a former Green Bay Packer. "So what we wanted to do was take that away from them from the beginning and that's what we accomplished."

That's an understatement.

Tampa Bay limited Michigan to just 44 yards rushing, 10 first downs and forced five turnovers, including four interceptions against Panther quarterback Bobby Hebert.

"Once we stopped the run and got the lead, the line was teeing off and wasn't even thinking about the run," said Butler. "That's when we starting putting pressure on the quarterback. It made Hebert a little jittery."

Hebert completed 18 of 35 passes for 262 yards.

"I just think it was a lack of concentration," said Hebert, who excited the crowd of 31,443 momentarily in the first period with an 80-yard touchdown pass to rookie Walter Broughton that tied the score 7-7.

"It's like when things are going good, they are really going good," he said. "When things are going bad they're going bad. At times a quarterback is only as good as they people around him."

Hebert has been missing his best friend on the field in Carter, who has been sidelined since suffering a broken left arm three weeks ago.

The Panthers haven't won since, dropping to 6-3 and a first-place tie in the Western Division with Oklahoma and Houston, two expansion clubs.

"Obviously they miss Anthony Carter," said Bandits' Coach Steve Spurrier after directing his team to its third straight victory. "He's a super all-around player. But our defensive coaches came up with a good game."

Butler agreed.

"I think the true champions are the ones that come to the top at the end of the year. That's what we seem to be doing."

Reaves was particularly good against Michigan, hitting 22 of 37 passes for 251 yards. He hit Marvin Harvey on a 12-yard TD strike in the opening quarter and connected with Eric Truvillion on a 17-yard scoring play just before halftime to give the Bandits a 14-7 lead.

"We've played well the last couple of weeks," Reaves said. "Our offense is really starting to gel, particularly the offensive line."

Zenon Andrusyshyn booted field goals of 38 and 20 yards in the second half to ice the game for Tampa Bay.

"It's difficult to do the job when we get outplayed," said Michigan Coach Jim Stanley. "We didn't get enough pressure on the quarterback. It appeared that we didn't have enough heart and soul."

Olympics may be out for Budd

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — South African distance runner Zola Budd probably will not be eligible for the Summer Olympics despite her British citizenship, a Swedish member of the International Olympic Committee said Monday night.

Gunnar Ericsson, a member of the IOC's eligibility committee, told the Associated Press: "It is unlikely that she will be eligible to compete in Los Angeles according to the information I have received on her."

Postal Service told wages are out of line

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations between the Postal Service and its two major unions were beginning today in an atmosphere of union resentment over management statements referring to high costs of labor.

In opening remarks at the negotiations, Postmaster General William F. Bolger said, "The Postal Service and postal unions will have to come to grips with the reality that postal wage levels currently exceed those paid for comparable levels of work in the private sector of the economy."

Bolger said the Postal Service would attempt to do what has been done in other labor contract talks: "to realign company wage rates with the labor market, such as two-tiered wage schedules and a variety of forms of compensation adjustments and-or deferrals."

Some 601,640 paid employees are represented by postal unions, with the majority in the American Postal Workers Union or the National Association of Letter Carriers. Rural letter carriers and mail handlers are smaller groups that will be negotiating separately.

Union leaders have been critical of a statement adopted at the last meeting of the Postal Service's governing board. Moe Biller, president of the Postal Workers Union, said the board "publicly blasted its own employees when it outlined its bargaining position."

The board statement said, "We must control expenses, permitting us to maintain and improve service to the mailing public while extending the cycle of rates. General rate increases should not take place every three years, as has been the recent pattern, but no more often than every four or five years."

The statement said that, "With postal labor costs amounting to over 80 percent of our total costs, it is obvious that the compensation we pay Postal Service employees largely determines the prices we must charge in order to break even."

Biller said the statement shows that the board members do not think that postal wages and benefits should be increased over the next three years and called the statement "shameful."

Vincent Sombrotto, president of the letter carriers union, said the service should recognize that union members "have made major contributions to the productivity growth and overall financial health of the Postal Service. We expect to be rewarded adequately for our efforts. We regard the present agreement as a floor, not a ceiling, and — consistent with the canons of American trade unionism — we intend to negotiate upward."

A contract is needed to replace one that expires at midnight, July 20. If an agreement is not negotiated, an arbitrator will take over, something both sides say they want to avoid. A strike would be illegal.

Bolger said Monday that postal workers "have good compensation and good benefits." He noted that they have a clause that protects them from layoffs and "the most generous retirement system in the world."

Bolger said postal employees do not want a strike. "When someone asks if there will be a strike, I quickly and emphatically say no." Bolger said postal management and union members "all have the same goal, good service to the public."

Pipeline ordered to refund $80 million

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on Monday ordered Northwest Central Pipeline Co. to begin refunding about $80 million to its natural gas customers in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Texas.

The order followed a petition filed by the Kansas Corporation Commission earlier this month which urged the federal commission to prohibit Northwest Central from postponing the refund for 18 months.

As a result of the ruling, Gas Service Co. of Kansas City, Mo. — Northwest Central's largest wholesale natural gas customer — said it will reduce gas prices immediately to its 400,000 natural gas customers in Kansas by 5 cents per thousand cubic feet.

That decrease represents only a small portion of the total refund, which is estimated to be about $30 for the average residential customer, a Gas Service spokesman said. Larger reductions or refunds are anticipated, he said.

About 50,000 customers of Union Gas System of Independence and 25,000 "C" system customers of Kansas Power and Light Co. of Topeka also are served by Northwest Central and will benefit from the refund. The "C" system makes use of out-of-state, instead of Kansas-produced, gas.

FERC told the pipeline company to consider refunding the $80 million over 12 months, instead of the usual six-month refund period.

In its petition, the KCC asked that the refund, $57 million of which results from an overcollection on winter gas bills, be made over 12 months to ensure that those who use the most natural gas in winter receive appropriate refunds.

Using lower gas prices over the next six months to make the refund would benefit industry most because industrial use is steadier throughout the year, the KCC's petition stated.

Unusually cold weather prompted a high demand for natural gas last winter. That high demand allowed Northwest Central to use cheaper natural gas to supplement the expensive gas it already had agreed to buy through so-called take-or-pay contracts.

Computer Insurance: Do you need it?

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Oil Writer

Want to know what the latest advancement in personal computers is?

Computer insurance.

The Texas Insurance Advisory Association (TIAA) is recommending owners of personal computers examine the uses of their equipment, its value and the perils it is exposed to, to determine the best insurance protection to purchase.

In Midland, while computer dealers and insurance agents agree that not every personal computer owner needs additional insurance coverage, there are some exceptions.

One retail computer dealer said individuals should evaluate their risk before adding additional insurance and that if the cost is not prohibitive and the use justified it then the investment would be a sound one.

There are essentially two ways to insure a personal computer used in the home. The first way is to consider it as any other object in the home and cover it under a Texas homeowners or tennants policy. The second option is to cover equipment and software under an electronic equipment policy.

According to Tom Hollis, a partner with Mims and Stephens Insurance Agency, the basic homeowner's policy protects the computer against losses from fire, theft, hail, lightning, vandalism, smoke, etc.

For the consumer who does not use the computer for business, he said, and whose personal use is largely recreational, the standard homeowners or tennants policy usually provides all the coverage needed.

Under this policy, Hollis said, the computer is not protected against flood damage, and electrical failures are only covered if they are caused by lightening. Also, the standard policy does not cover replacement cost of software programs. It will, however, replace the blank storage disk.

In addition, TIAA said that as other equipment and programs are added, consumers may want to increase their coverage accordingly.

TIAA and Hollis agree that consumers should purchase a policy with replacement cost coverage. Unless a policy is written for replacement cost coverage, most policies are written to pay the actual cash value of the property — the amount paid less depreciation.

Because of rapid advances in technology, computer obsolescence occurs very fast; even if a computer is failry new, it may depreciate more quickly than other property, according to TIAA.

If the computer is used for business reasons in the home and the user wants to have the equipment and data covered, he or she needs to purchase the electronic equipment policy, "no question about it," Hollis said.

In Texas, the electronic equipment policy protects the heavily used and relied on machine against the usual quirks and afflictions.

Introduced in Oct. 1, 1983, the standard policy is used by all insurance companies in the state. The policy comes in two different forms: small computer/machine which is for hardware that is worth less than $250,000; and comprehensive electronic form which is for equipment worth more than $250,000.

The small form is an all risk policy with some exclusions. It covers not only the computer but also any components, connections, extensions, etc. In addition to equipment, the policy also covers loss of media — converted data or programs or instruction vehicles — and extra expenses the insured has to pay in order to resume normal operations.

The policy itself does not cover losses that are the result of mechanical breakdown or machinery malfunction, short circuit, etc. but it can be endorsed to provide this coverage. Power surge is covered but only if it occurs within 100 feet of the location named in the policy, unless caused by lightning.

According to TIAA, whether one opts for coverage under a homeowners policy or electrical equipment policy depends on the equipment's value and function. However, for those who truly rely on a personal computer, Hollis and TIAA advise that duplicating disks and storing them in another location is a wise move.

Hollis also said, another way for consumers to guard against power surges is to intall a power regulator which will maintain a constant flow of electricity to the machine.

Hollis cautioned consumers not to over insure their equipment, "You can spend a lot of money if you want to cover all the bases, however for the average personal computer user, its not necessary," Hollis said.

Mexico cleaning up oil-polluted waterways

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The state oil monopoly PEMEX said Monday it is making progress in cleaning up the swamps and waterways contaminated by its refineries in and around Coatzacoalcos port.

Coatzacoalcos is the PEMEX oil complex in Veracruz state off the Gulf of Mexico. Residents and environmentalists have long complained about pollution caused by the refineries there.

"As a result of (all our) activities, there now are no hydrocarbons in the Coatzacoalcos River," PEMEX said in a statement.

"Since last year," PEMEX said, "the main cause of contamination in the area has been eliminated — the drainage waters of the Gen. Lazaro Cardenas del Rio refinery in Minatitlan."

Minatitlan is about 13 miles southeast of Coatzacoalcos. Almost all of the land between the two oil towns is swamp.

Mario Ramon Beteta, the head of PEMEX, has given priority to the cleaning up of the Minatitlan-Coatzacoalcos strip, PEMEX said.

Citing its accomplishments in the region, PEMEX said it has removed oil and debris from the waterway known as the San Francisco stream, "which for many years has carried the residue of the (Lazaro Cardenas) refinery."

Within the next month, the marshy area known as the San Alejandrina swamp will be "totally clean" and plants once again will grow there, PEMEX said. PEMEX maintained that fishermen would be able to to use the San Alejandrina waters again at an unspecified time in the future.

Bankruptcy increases expands needs for CPA services

From staff reports

The number of businesses filing for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code has quadrupled in the past two years, vastly expanding the number of services required of accounting firms, a leading national CPA firm reported.

Financial requirements have created an unprecedented demand for protection of creditors, trustees, and the owners and employees of firms involved, as described in a brochure offered for business owners and legal advisors by Fox 7 Company, a Denver-headquartered firm with offices in 53 cities including Midland.

"The complexity of the conflict among parties in a bankruptcy is reflected in the statistic that only 1,300 cases were resolved out of some 14,000 filed in 1982," according to Howard Ehler, partner in the Midland Fox office.

"When an organization's plans are not accepted, this bottleneck is a further threat to the viability of the organization, and the company may have to liquidate. Our experience is that timely action by a team of attorneys, industry specialists and accountants is necessary to assure a faborable results.

"The changes in bankruptcy law have creaated new problems and opportunites involving debtors, creditors, shareholders and legal counsel. The 1978 code, in some ways, has made it easier for debtors — corporate or individual — to avail themselves of the protection offered by bankruptcy laws. Often, the conflicting claims of secured creditors and of unsecured creditors require the specialized accounting service of those who have experience in either, or both, sides of such conflicts.

"Good professional advice in such instances can help either of the parties."

Accounting services relating to bankruptcies are different from the general accounting services rendered to a business entity, Ehler noted. This is the result of the adverse surroundings, and the necessity for investigative work on many elements of the engagement, he added.

"Our approach is to provide advance and to help a troubled business become a profitable operation. Many times we are able to provide fresh ideas, and assistance to management, for an entity which then is able to preserve its viability," Ehler said.

"The bankrupt compay remaining operational under Chapter 11 has many options available for regorganization and restructuring of debt and equity. Some of the more gratifying business experiences of an outside consultant are to see a corporation become revived, and go on to enjoy a long and successful life."

FTC may approve Standard, Gulf merger Thursday

By the Los Angeles Times, Washington Post News Service

The Federal Trade Commission is expected to give preliminary approval Thursday to Standard Oil Co. of California's proposed $13.2 billion acquisition of Gulf Oil Corp., provided that certain overlapping refining and marketing operations are sold, industry sources said Monday.

The FTC is expected to issue a consent agreement requiring that Cal Standard sell about 4,000 Gulf service stations in six Southeastern states and one of Gulf's two largest refineries, according to unidentified sources quoted Monday by the Dow Jones News Service. The refineries are in Port Arthur, Texas, and Alliance, La.

San Francisco-based Cal Standard also is expected to be required to sell a Gulf interstate pipeline that runs from the Gulf of Mexico to the Northeast, the same route as a Cal Standard pipeline, the sources said.

Spokesmen for both companies would not confirm the the settlement's reported details because they said that the FTC had not yet made a decision on what terms it will require. An FTC spokeswoman would not comment on its investigation, but she confirmed that the commission is scheduled to meet Thursday.

However, Cal Standard said that it is willing to sell any Gulf assets as a condition for approval of the merger, except for actual oil and gas reserves. A Cal Standard spokeswoman also said that selling the 4,000 stations would make sense because both companies "do have marketing in common" in the six states said to be affected.

Industry experts have predicted ever since the merger was proposed in March that it would win FTC approval provided that certain assets were divested to reduce antitrust concerns. The merger, the largest ever proposed in U.S. corporate history, would result in the nation's third-largest oil company.

If the FTC announces the consent agreement as expected Thursday, Cal Standard would be free to begin purchasing Gulf shares immediately, spokewoman Nancy Arvay said. Holders of more than 79 percent of Gulf's outstanding shares so far have agreed to sell their stock under Cal Standard's $80-per-share offer, she said.

Cal Standard also would be free to begin negotiating terms for selling the Gulf stations and refinery. The company said that "several" buyers were interested in the assets, but refused to name them.

However, formal approval of the merger would not take place until after a 60-day public comment period and another 60-day period during which the FTC could modify the consent accord.

Cal Standard's Arvay said that if the FTC requires a spin-off of 4,000 Gulf stations in the Southeast, the states most likely to be affected would be Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Cal Standard, which markets gasoline under the Chevron brand name, currently ranks first in retail gasoline sales in three of those states, Alabama, Kentucky and Mississippi, and would rank first in all six if the Gulf stations were included, said Dan Lundberg, publisher of a Los Angeles-based oil and gas industry newsletter.

The industry sources quoted by Dow Jones also said that the FTC may allow Cal Standard to sell other stations, possibly in the Northeast, to fit the requirements of certain buyers.

Cal Standard also expects to reduce by "10 percent to 15 percent" the 60,000 U.S. jobs in the merged companies, Chairman and Chief Executive George Keller told Dow Jones. Keller was not available for additional comment. It was unclear whether jobs would lost in both the Gulf and Cal Standard organizations.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Major wildcat stepout completed in Andrews

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Brazos Petroleum Co., Midland, has completed a major wildcat stepout in Andrews County. The operators No.1 Grace, was completed pumping for 138 bopd., 32 Mcfd gas and 80 bwpd. It is six miles from nearest production in Block 49, and is located 554 ft. from the north and east lines of Section 13, Block A-38, PSL survey, 23 miles west of Andrews.

The well was drilled on seismic data and an additional seismic line is being shot to help spot additional locations. The operator feels that at least two more tests will be drilled to test the Devonian and Ellenburger, as a result of of dipmeter data. The operator believes the producing structure is a faulted thrust block, a structure which is rare in the Permian Basin.

The No.1 Grace was completed in the Devonian, using 500 gals. acid for treatment and a frac using 20 bbls 2 percent KCL. It was drilled to a total depth of 11395, plugged back to 9908 and completed through perforations at intervals between 8718-8751 ft. Formation tops were set at 11,242 Ellenburger; 10,955 Waddell; 10,544 Simpson.

Two gas wildcats completed in 7-C

Irion and Schleicher counties have each gained new wildcat gas wells.

Exxon, Midland, completed its No.1 State University 'ES' for 4.16 Mmcfd. The well is located 1419 ft. from the north line and 98 ft. from the west line of Section 6, Block 53, UL survey, 13.4 miles south of Mertzon.

It was drilled to 8100 ft., plugged back to 7700 ft. Casing was set to 8100 ft. and the well was completed in perforations from 6948-6980 ft. The new wildcat was treated with 3200 gals. acid and fraced with 40,000 gals. fluid and 82,500 lb. sand. Gas liquid ratio was 157,745:l.

In Irion County, Ozark Exploration Inc., Dallas, has completed a gas wildcat for 1.2 Mmcfd. It is the No. 2 Wardlaw, located 2800 ft. from the south line and 4600 ft. from the east line of Abstract 510, R. Rodriguez No. 1803 survey, 16 miles northeast of Mertzon.

The wildcat was drilled to 6800 ft., plugged back to 6711 and completed in perforations from 6412-6463 ft. It was treated with 1500 gals. acid and fraced using 32,000 gals. of fluid and 66,000 lb. sand.

Other gas completions in Distric 7-C include: Hexagon Oil & Gas's No.4 Munn, completed in the Fortson-Burke (Canyon) field for 4.23 Mmcfd, and J&R Petroleum's No.1 Petrie an Ellenburger well completed in the King field for 2.05 Mmcfd.

Red Bluff field gains new gas producer

H.L. Brown Jr., Midland, has completed the No.1 Red Bluff, as a Wolfcamp gas discovery in the Red Bluff field of Loving County. The well was completed for 2.28 Mmcfd, after being drilled to 12,144 ft., being plugged back to 12,049 and completed through perforation intervals from 11,532-11,570. Location is 1320 ft. from south and east lines of Section 1, Block 57, T&P survey, 13 miles east of Orla.

Hendon Exploration to re-enter dry wildcat

Hendon Exploration, Midland, will re-enter its No.1 Fowler '12' to take a second look at the Strawn, according to the operator. Located 1980 ft. from the south line and 660 ft. from the east line of Section 12, Block 35, T&P survey, 14 miles northwest of Garden City, the dry hole was originally drilled to 11,243 ft. and plugged. The operator will now go back to the top of the plub at 10,964 ft. to re-test the Strawn.

Nine new wildcats staked

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Firms join in pipeline conversion

LOMBARD, IL — MidCon Corp. has anounced that its MidCon Ventures, Inc. subsidiary has entered into a agreement with Houston Natural Gas Corp. and Transok, Inc., whereby MidCon affiliates and Transok will join Houston Natural in a project involving the conversion of a 457-mile, 30-inch crude oil pipeline o natural gas service.

As previously announced, Houston Natural has entered into an agreement for the acquisition of te pipeline from Texoma Pipe Line Co. of Tulsa, Okla., for a purchase price of $130 million. The line extends from Nederland, Texas to Cushin, Okla.

MidCon Corp. is the parent of major interstate and intrastate natural gas transmission operations, with subsidiaries also engaged in oil and gas exploration, coal mining, and contract drilling. In commenting on the agreement with Houston Natural and Transok, MidCon chairman, O.C. Davis said, "Our involvement in the future use of this projct has the potential of fulfilling important long-term corporate objectives in a traditional line of business.'

Hrubetz Oil completes Miocene test

DALLAS — Hrubetz Oil Co. has successfully completed its first offshore Moiocene test according to J.A. Savage, senior vice president-exploration.

The HOC No. 1 27-L, located three miles offshore near High Island in Texas State waters, tested at 4.2 million cubic feet of natural gas per day through a 16/64 inch choke. The 9,000 foot Miocene test well perforated and completed fromaproducing sand at approximately 8,100 feet.

Hrubetz Oil Co. was successful bidder during the recent Texas State Waters Sale on off-setting blocks south and east of High Island block 27 where the test was completed. The additional block increase Hrubetz's acreage position to a total of 5,760 acres.

Hrubetz Oil Co. is an independent oil and gas exploration and production company with headquarters in Dallas and offices in Abilene and Midland, Walnut Creek, Calif.; Denver, Colo.; Lafayette, La.; and Oklahoma City.

FEDERAL TAX-FREE INCOME

- Diversification
- No management fee
- Units in multiples of $1,000 plus accrued interest
- No redemption or service charge
- No coupons to clip

*This current return represents the net annual interest for each year but the first year after annual expenses, divided by the public offering price of $1.01062. It varies with changes in either amount. In the first year the current return as of 4-18-84 will be 9.64%. In the opinion of counsel, interest income from units of the Trust is exempt from Federal income taxes but may be subject to state and local taxes. The 'AAA' rating results from insurance relating only to the bonds in the portfolio and not to units of the trust. The rating also results from certain reinsurance agreements. Bond interest and principal payments are insured. The terms of insurance and reinsurance are fully described in the prospectus. Neither the insurance nor the reinsurance removes market risk since they do not guarantee the market value of the Trust units. No representation is made as to any insurers or reinsurers ability to meet its commitments.

This advertisement is neither an offer to sell nor a solicitation of an offer to buy any of these securities. The offering is made only by the Prospectus. Copies of the Prospectus may be obtained in any State in which this announcement is circulated from only such dealers or brokers as may lawfully offer these securities in such State. # Ector County struggles with strays

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Growing numbers of unclaimed animals wandering about Ector County have animal control officers struggling to keep up with daily additions.

Coy Willis, director of the county animal shelter, appealed to Commissioners Court Monday morning for more of the drugs used to tranquilize and euthanize (put to death) animals found out in the county or being housed in the crowded shelter.

Commissioners allowed Willis to transfer $585 from his machinery and equipment budget (which he said would have gone for dog traps) so he could keep the abandoned animal population at bay.

"This hopefully will last us until the end of the budgetary period (Oct. 1)," said Willis. "We will be close."

A variety of factors contributed to the increased need for the drugs, said Willis.

"Since we're still losing population," he said, "it's coming down all over the county."

Pointing to the transients choosing to leave the Permian Basin with the slowing of the economy, Willis said, "They leave a lot of animals behind."

"The first thing they do is lighten the load by getting rid of their pets," he said.

He predicted further increases in the number of strays and abandoned animals found as more people decide to leave the area, including those who have returned in hopes the local oil business has picked up. "They're leaving animals behind too."

Aside from difficulties that go with an economy based on the oil and gas industry and its booms and busts, Willis blamed his need for more drugs on a factor beyond man's control.

This year's drought has stifled grass growth on the county's grazing lands, prompting hungry cattle to find ways through fences and onto roadways.

Willis estimated his department, which also serves the city of Odessa, had found as many as 10 cows per month on roads and that 25 percent more on-site euthanizations had been done (at $54 per head), many on livestock that had been struck by passing cars.

In these cases, Willis and his workers are hard pressed to get owners to claim their animals after they've caused accidents which sometimes mean liability for injuries or damages.

"It's something you have to get used to," he said. "You have to look at the overall picture, the overall good of the animal population and what burden it puts on society."

Willis said dog-bite victims have spent about $2,000 on medical bills for the 45-70 cases reported to his office each month, about one third of the total he estimated are occurring.

The city of Midland and Midland County handle animal control independently.

Rice Freeman-Zachery, public information officer for the city's animal control department, said, "Midland has very few stray dogs." Animals loose inside city limits usually have owners, but are not restrained, she said.

Still, the city does euthanize animals each month as shelter facilities reach capacity. Of 399 animals brought in last January, 236 were eventually killed. This is about one quarter the monthly Ector County average of 800.

Outside Midland city limits, Constable Tom McGinnis serves as the animal control officer. In following the state legislature's ban on leash laws in the county, his office's efforts are devoted to rabies control and bite cases.

General pushes High Frontier

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

With an investment of $3 billion a year, or 1½ percent of the defense budget, the United States could have in place a defensive system for the country that wouldn't involve nuclear missiles, according to Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham.

As director of the High Frontier satellite project, Graham was in Midland Monday morning to appeal to local businessmen for monetary support. During a news conference in the Petroleum Club, Graham contended support is growing nationwide for the project and said a small portion of the defense budget next year is devoted to it.

While President Reagan has verbally supported High Frontier and designated $1.776 billion next year, Graham said the support is "too timid. He should take a Kennedyesque approach, make a statement that by the end of the decade we'll have the best space defense."

High Frontier calls for placing 432 satellites in space. If a nuclear missile is shot toward the United States from another country, a satellite with 40 to 50 conventional rockets on board will direct those rockets toward the missile and destroy it in the air. There should be no nuclear explosion, he said, since the nuclear materials aren't put in place until near the target.

If work started tomorrow, it would take until the end of the decade to get the entire system in place. The space shuttle would be used to place about 12 satellites in space at one time, and putting the 432 in place would take 2½ years to accomplish.

Graham isn't opposed to having MX missiles, and he would like to see more updated aircraft. But High Frontier should eliminate the need to keep pouring dollars into more nuclear missiles. Without High Frontier, the United States is following the road of "mutual assured destruction," he said.

"The satellites are non-nuclear. They wouldn't kill a single Russian. To oppose this system means you support mutual assured destruction," said Graham. "High Frontier removes the threat of continuous destruction."

The defense system doesn't involve new technology or more scientists. It just needs engineers and money, according to Graham.

The Pentagon has opposed it, but the project director contended it's because the plan won't fall under the government's bureaucratic control. "The bureaucratic apple carts are knocked over all over Washington."

Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham

A poll taken recently in California by Arthur Finkelstein & Co., a national polling firm, showed 82 percent of the respondents favored High Frontier. "The young people supported it better than older people," said Graham. "To people my age, it sounds like Buck Rogers."

Tagged "Star Wars" by the national media, Graham said he at first objected to that description. But with that label he's getting supporters who comment that "it was the good guys who won" in the movie by the same name.

The Soviets have registered their disapproval of High Frontier, but Graham said that country is attempting its own project. Just as countries fought for supremacy on the high seas and in the air, the United States and Soviet Union are racing to see who will be first with a defensive satellite system. Graham warned that if the Soviets are first, it may mean they control space in the same manner as they do air space over their country — no other aircraft allowed.

Graham contended High Frontier falls in line "with the ethical base for our kind of government and with our Judeo-Christian philosophy."

Graham is trying to keep High Frontier on its not-for-profit status. If it fell under the wing of the federal government, he's afraid it would be controlled by the bureaucrats.

La Frontera offers temporary shelter to war's victims

"It's very dangerous and difficult living there (San Miguel, El Salvador). In truth, you're afraid of both the guerrillas and the army. So I left with three cousins and an uncle."

— Griselda Margarita, Salvadoran refugee

LAREDO (AP) — The two-story, peach-colored building squats squarely within the compound of a surrounding metal fence, but the atmosphere is not that of a jail.

Teenage boys — prime recruits for both Salvadoran guerrillas and the government army — work up a sweat playing soccer on the cement yard in the afternoon sun.

Girls sit on classroom chairs brought outside to the shade of the building and play dominoes, chatting about what attorneys have said concerning their pending cases.

The place is known as La Frontera, Spanish for The Frontier or Border. What was a former halfway house for alcoholics is now a temporary home for mostly Salvadoran youths escaping the violence in their Central American home.

The recent election carries little meaning for most of them. They say they have nothing to do with the state of affairs in El Salvador, especially since many are too young to vote.

Their stories vary, but all were caught by the U.S. Border Patrol while trying to enter this country illegally — sin papeles, without papers.

La Frontera, operated by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Corpus Christi through Catholic Social Services of Laredo, offers the aliens an alternative to the Webb County Jail, said Roxanne Guerra, chief administrator of the Catholic Social Service.

Mrs. Guerra also oversees nine other programs sponsored by the diocese, including a battered wives' shelter and a counseling center.

Her emotional involvement with the people in the house is evident from her response to the children gathered around her.

"I'm seriously considering adopting Maria Celia so she won't be sent back, but I'm not sure of all the bureaucratic complications we'll have to go through since she's here illegally," said Mrs. Guerra, a grandmother of five, putting her arm around a 13-year-old girl.

Maria Celia, who has no relatives in the United States, said, "I want to stay with her, she treats us very well."

A more typical case is that of ninth-grader Griselda Margarita who hoped to reach her mother, who works in a factory near Dallas. Griselda left her father and three younger brothers in San Miguel, a city in southeastern El Salvador.

"It's very dangerous and difficult living there," Griselda said. "In truth, you're afraid of both the guerrillas and the army. So I left with three cousins and an uncle."

She said a coyote, or illegal alien smuggler, brought them into the United States for $300, bringing them most of the way in a truck and helping them cross the Rio Grande in inner tubes.

She and her cousins have been in La Frontera for two weeks. Her uncle was sent to the alien detention facility at Los Fresnos near Brownsville.

"It's nice here. They give us food, clothing and I've made friends," she said of La Frontera.

Griselda's attorney said she may qualify to stay with her mother, who has applied for political asylum.

A Salvadoran refugee looks out of the window of "La Frontera" in Laredo, an alternative to jail for people caught trying to enter the United States illegally. Catholic Social Services of Laredo runs the center, which houses refugees as they await deportation hearings.

Ties of friendship stretch across political gulf

I received a letter from Tehran, Iran two weeks ago.

Ever since the American hostage crisis there, it has not been considered chic to have Iranian friends, but the ties built between individuals don't abruptly vanish just because regimes rise and fall.

I met Mina (names have been changed for their own protection in Iran) and her family when they lived in a modest suburb of Houston, next door to my best friend, Nancy.

Mina's husband, Reeza, had come to the United States to earn an MBA because at that time an American degree was necessary to get a good job in Iran. Ironically, when he finally did return to Iran after the Shah left, he had a hard time finding work since American school attendence made him suspicious to the new government.

Mina's son, Massieh, and Nancy's child, Nicole, were born just six weeks apart. Sharing the eternal fears, frustrations and joys of expectant mothers made the two women close friends.

I ONLY SAW Mina and Massieh when I visited Nancy's family, but Massieh was cute and Mina was kind, so it was easy to like them.

Mina returned to Tehran in 1979 because she was homesick and missed her mother. She was also weary of facing people in stores and businesses, who — angered over the hostage crisis — told her, "I don't serve Iranians!"

Mina believed she would be able to leave Iran and rejoin her husband after her visit. She was wrong; the borders were closed. Eventually, Reeza also had to return to Iran to be with his wife and child.

Mina telephoned Nancy from Tehran occasionally, but it became too expensive and, more importantly, soldiers visited Mina to question her about why she was calling Americans and what she was telling them.

Now Mina can only send letters and even they are apparently sometimes intercepted, opened, read and taped shut again by some anonymous censor.

Mina's most recent letter, which Nancy has sent circulating among Mina's friends, is not her most depressing one, but it is sad enough:

"DEAR NANCY,

"It is nearly two months that I have not being able to write. I was thinking about you a lot and miss you very much.

"I want you to understand our life here. It is getting worse and worse every day. We are all tired of having a long war which has killed a lot of our people for nothing. Most of the families have lost their son or man.

"Every night, we are waiting to have bombs in our house. It is just like a hell.

"The news on TV every night makes me sick. All the time it is showing dead bodies of children or women or men who have been burned by bombs or people who have no heads or arms or showing a mother holding a burned child and crying.

"We are all getting mad.

"The expense of foods and everything is so high. Most nights the lights of all (the) town go off. It shows the enemy's airplanes (where) to come.

"Just think how hard it is. I get Massieh in my arms and cry and pray for him. I do not mind if I get killed, but I feel sorry for Massieh and blame myself — why did I bring him to this world?...

"Believe me, I have lost my mind. Reeza is trying to cool me down. He is trying to take me to a doctor. Most nights I cannot sleep. I look like an old woman.

"I am sorry (that) after all this time I write a bad letter to you. Please forgive me.

"TELL ME, how is Nicole? In the last picture you sent me, you all looked beautiful. Nicole was best. She is growing so beautiful. Massieh took your picture to school and showed it off to his friends.

"Please write more about her and yourself and please do not stop writing. I know you have a lot to do but be sure that (the) one, most thing which makes me happy is a letter from you. When I get a letter from you, that day is one (of the) most happy days in my life and I read it to Massieh and he likes it a lot.

"Nicole's birthday is near. I am so sorry and feel bad to not send her anything, but tell her I love her very much and kiss her a lot and send me a photo.

"Send my love to Pete (Nancy's husband) and your Mom and David and every one I know.

"I have to go to bed and I am sure I (will) sleep well tonight because (writing) you made me feel good.

"Love, Mina"

HERE IN THE United States, snug in our homes with our newspapers and television sets, it is easy to view conflict in other nations as distant, abstract problems — just everyday East-West politics.

Reading Mina's letters, however, I can't think of the Iran-Iraq war as faceless soldiers battling in an obscure desert.

Instead, I see frightened women — on both sides — in blacked-out cities hugging their children and praying that no bombs would fall on their homes from the dark sky during the long night.

Computer glitches send letters to opponents

By The Associated Press

Politics has entered the computer age, sometimes to the chagrin of candidates who try to give their mass mailings a personal touch that backfires.

Republican Phil Gramm's form letter has a nice slant to it. It calls all Texans "senator" and suggests they can keep taxes and government spending down if they run themselves, but they don't have to because Gramm is.

But John Tower, who received one of the letters on Monday, is already a U.S. senator. The reason Gramm is running is because Tower is retiring.

Tower, a stalwart Republican and state chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign, also received a letter from state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin, who is running for the Democratic senate nomination.

The letter blasted Reagan economic policies and asked for a donation.

"I need contributions," wrote Doggett, "from people who share my views on arms control, on environmental protection, on equal opportunity for women and minorities, on economic fairness."

Rich Paul, a Doggett spokesman in Austin, reacted with mock surprise.

"Oh my God," he said, laughing. "We don't feel embarassed since we've received many of Tower's and (senate candidate U.S. Rep. Robert) Krueger's and Gramm's letters. I think it's a function of the computer age. When you are sending out thousands and thousands, it's impossible to scan every single one to avoid that one lone embarrassment."

A form letter sent by U.S. Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, who is seeking the Democratic nomination to run against President Reagan in November, asked Tower for money and sent along an invitation to Hart's hoped-for inauguration.

"Sen. Tower does plan to attend the Reagan-Bush inaugural in January 1985," Dottie de la Garza, Tower's spokeswoman, said Monday.

David Bolduc of Austin, a district coordinator for Hart, said it's not unusual for computer letters to go to the wrong places, especially when the campaigns use various lists of possible supporters.

"I get all kinds of mail for Republican candidates," said Bolduc. "I get mail from crazy (North Carolina Sen.) Jesse Helms. It's computer glitches. It gets in and it gets out."

Hart, meanwhile, returned to the state Monday, campaigning for delegates to be selected at May 5 precinct caucuses.

In an appearance in Austin, Hart said voters made their decision on his opponent, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, when they voted President Carter out of office in 1980.

Planned Parenthood announces promotion

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Dana Frazee, executive director of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, announced a promotion and the hiring of three new employees in the administrative offices.

Karen Pieper-Hildebrand was promoted to Education and Resource Director. Ms. Hildebrand has been with PPPB almost two years and was the Education and Resource Associate. She is now responsible for organizing new programs and workshops and oversees all current programs. She also teaches classes and is a speaker for school and church groups.

A Permian High School graduate, she received her bachelor of arts degree in sociology from Angelo State University. She is active in the Ector County Community Service Organization and the Coalition for Pregnancy Alternatives.

Yvonne Harris was hired as the Education and Resource Associate. She will be in charge of the resource center, which includes a large selection of books, films and periodicals relating to family planning and health. She also will be involved in fund-raising activities and will coordinate current programs.

A graduate of Odessa High School, she attended Odessa College and was a production manager of the Rupert Co. She worked for three years as Volunteer Coordinator for the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center and is a volunteer at the Odessa Volunteer Center and a member of the Ector County Community Service Organization and Women's Information Center.

As the new Clinic Services Director, Gail McCormack will supervise all eight Planned Parenthood clinics, coordinate medical continuing education programs and oversee the medical policies and procedures which govern the care provided to the clients.

A registered nurse, Ms. McCormack received her degree in nursing at The Baroness Erlanger School of Nursing in Chattanooga, Tenn. She was an operating nurse for 16 years and head nurse of urology surgery at St. Luke's Hospital in Houston. She served as captain in the U.S. Air Force and was an infection control practitioner at Diagnostic Center Hospital in Houston three years.

Tricia Shelton of Midland, director of community relations, will direct all public affairs and public relations activities at PPPB. She received her degree from Texas Christian University in radio-television and was admissions counselor at the University of Texas at Austin. She also was a news reporter/anchor and public affairs director for KMID-TV for five years.

A resident of the Permian Basin for the last 12 years, she is active in the Midland Junior League and Chi Omega alumni. She served as district president and state officer of Texas Press Women and was on the boards of several community organizations, including PPPB, from 1976-79.

Hart urges Texans to reject 'two failed pasts'

Sen. Gary Hart

AUSTIN (AP) — Gary Hart, renewing his drive for the Democratic presidential nomination, asked Texans to vote for him instead of Walter F. Mondale or President Reagan, whom he called relics of old politics.

"I run because I do not think America should be left with a bleak choice between two failed pasts," Hart said in remarks in a prepared text but not delivered to an audience of about 900 at the University of Texas Monday.

"The incumbent Republican president and the present Democratic front-runner are both beholden to interest groups trying to buy themselves an exemption from the common burden," Hart told the enthusiastic audience.

"Perhaps we can't expect every president to be a profile in courage, but, at the least, we can't accept a president who is primarily a profile in constituency service," he said.

After the Austin speech, Hart flew to Shreveport, La., to meet with independent oil producers and stress his message that the government should promote domestic energy sources rather than resist taxes on imported oil.

In addition to restating the "new ideas" themes of his campaign, Hart was on the offensive against old-line Democratic Party officials, labor leaders and big corporation chiefs.

Saying "the soul" of the party is at stake, Hart pleaded with Democrats to ignore the former vice president's 2-1 lead in delegates for the Democratic National Convention in July and instead give him their support in the remaining state caucuses and primaries.

In another passage in his prepared text, but deleted from the speech he delivered, Hart said, "We cannot defeat an incumbent president in thrall to the privileged and the powerful by nominating a Democratic candidate in debt to interest group politics. We cannot be content with a choice between a president so reckless that he seems ready to take any risk — and a candidate so cautious that he offers no real hope of change."

The strong speech came after a weekend of brainstorming in Washington among Hart and his senior aides over how to revive the Colorado senator's lagging campaign and halt Mondale's push toward the nomination.

Pollster Patrick Caddell, an adviser to the Hart campaign, said the Austin speech was part of "a major kickoff of the second half" of Hart's quest for the presidential nomination.

Felony escape charges to be filed against burglary suspect

From Staff Reports

Felony escape charges are expected to be filed against a burglary suspect who was recaptured within minutes after fleeing police custody early Monday night.

According to police, 18-year-old John Fitzgerald Davis of 1206 E. Cuthbert Ave. was being booked following his arrest on a burglary warrant about 8:15 p.m. As officers were taking him upstairs to the jail, he turned and ran out the back door.

He was captured seven minutes later near the intersection of Lamesa Road and Louisiana Avenue by patrol officer Ricky Benton. He was re-arrested without incident, according to police reports.

In burglary complaints filed within the past 24 hours, M.D. McMurry of 161 Barbara Lane said two checks made out to him were stolen from his car while it was parked at 601 N. Marienfeld Monday morning. The checks were for $215.09 and $396.69. There was no sign of forced entry, according to police.

And Jerry Warren, 2309 Brunson, Apt. A, said a television set, stereo equipment and a .38-caliber Smith & Wesson handgun were among the items taken in a break-in of his residence. Entry was gained through an open kitchen window.

Austinites upset by influx of prostitutes downtown

AUSTIN (AP) — Churchgoers and businessmen in an area just south of downtown Austin are angry about a recent influx of out-of-town prostitutes who are operating boldly in the area.

"You kind of expect it in a neighborhood with bars, but when you get right into a regular old business neighborhood and they're congregating around the door, it's definitely detrimental to their business," said police senior Sgt. Gene Freudenberg.

Police and area residents say the prostitutes, who work all hours, stroll along South Congress Avenue and solicit business from people in cars stopped at traffic lights.

"There seems to be a growing number. They're bothering everybody. Cars are circling the block. It looks like a circus," Freudenberg said.

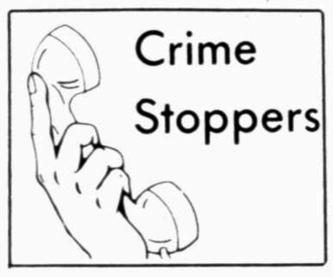
Incidents have included prostitutes accosting women customers outside an auto showroom and one prostitute distracting drivers by pulling her pants down during rush-hour traffic, police said.

The prostitutes have told police officers they are from out of town, including California, New York, Reno and Dallas, Freudenberg said.

"They think Austin is just wide open because there are low fines, and they are not hassled too much," Freudenberg said. "Until the penalties are raised to the point where it's not profitable to them, they'll continue to do it."

The average fine imposed for an offense called loitering in a roadway is $112 to $124, Associate Municipal Judge Harriet Murphy says. Suspected prostitutes often are arrested for loitering in a roadway because, with that charge, officers don't need to prove that an offer of sex for money was made.

Odessa body shop burglars sought by Crime Stoppers



Crime Stoppers is seeking information this week on the March 3 burglary of Gypsy's Custom Body Shop at 315 W. 2nd St., in Odessa.

When Odessa police responded to the burglary call, they found the shop had been entered through the skylight. The burglars apparently unlocked an overhead door and drove a vehicle inside. Tool boxes, tools used in auto body repair, hydraulic jacks, air driven sanders, cutting torches and paint guns were taken. The burglars apparently were in the shop for a long period of time.

Odessa Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 cash reward for information that leads to the arrest and grand jury indictment of the burglar or burglars.

Crime Stoppers, which pays cash rewards for information leading to the indictments of felony offenders, may be contacted by calling 333-TIPS in Odessa or 694-TIPS in Midland. All callers can remain annonymous.

HRC, TEC set up summer job bank

Human Relations Council and Texas Employment Commission are working together to find summer jobs for Midland youth.

According to Gloria Ellis, HRC director, the Summer Job Bank is an employment service for youth between the ages of 14 and 21.

The bank's purpose is to assist youth and businesses with part-time and summer employment.

Also, the bank introduces and initiates youth into the work force. An orientation session to teach youth the responsibilities and attitudes necessary to find and hold a job will be scheduled. Also planned are seminars on grooming, job seeking skills, interviewing, budgeting and miscellaneous topics.

There are no income guidelines for this program. Youth may apply at the HRC office, 2101 W. Wall St., Suite 3, or call 684-5866 or 684-5867.

Third of three transients identified

From Staff Reports

The third of three transients killed in last week's fatal house fire at Marienfeld Street and Lousiana Avenue has been identified as Wayne Anthony Thomason.

Thomason, a 30-year-old roughneck from Hazzard, Ky., had lived in San Diego, Calif., for some time prior to moving to Midland two years ago, according to police.

He and two other men were badly burned in the April 16 fire that broke out about 3:30 a.m. in a couch after smoldering for some time.

The other victims were earlier identified as 33-year-old Robert W. Sherrin of Sweetwater and 53-year-old Don Maness of Magnolia, Ark.

State files lawsuit against petroleum firm

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says months of undercover work by a state investigator in McAllen has led to a securities fraud lawsuit involving the sale of oil and gas leases in Louisiana.

Mattox said Monday he had obtained a temporary restraining order against Antilles Petroleum Corp., Brownsville, and eight individuals, as well attaching three of the company's bank accounts totaling $400,000.

The attorney general said State District Judge Melchor Chavez of Brownsville, who signed the restraining order, had set a May 3 hearing on Mattox's request for a temporary injunction.

In addition to Antilles, Mattox's suit names as defendants Antilles president John Fleming, vice president Michael Fleming and agents Robert McCarthy, Alberto Osorio, Roberto Rivas, Joe Ybarra and Henry Gomez. Also named as a defendant is Louisiana resident Parey Branton, hometown unknown.

The lawsuit accuses the defendants of securities fraud, selling unregistered securities with unregistered agents and deceptive trade practices.

Mattox's petition says the defendants have told potential investors that they own oil and gas leases in several Louisana parishes and that they are selling working interests in the leases from Antilles' office in Brownsville.

One allegation is that the defendants have represented that oil has been hit in certain wells when only salt water has been found.

The lawsuit seeks civil penalties against each of the defendants, which could range up to $10,000 per defendant, and asks for appointment of a receiver to take over Antilles.

Ector County struggles with strays

Ector County picks up dogs and cats without their rabies tags, while McGinnis explained Midland ordinances do not require that tags be displayed, only that proof of vaccination be provided on request.

Concerning keeping the stray population under control, McGinnis said, "It's more or less up to the people out in the county." He estimated his office handles 10-12 bite cases each month.

Loose cattle are taken care of by whichever agency answers the call, said McGinnis, who said he would like to see the city and county start a program like Ector County's.

Nautical look sailing into spring sunset

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Ever since 1846, when the 5-year-old Prince of Wales created a sensation by climbing aboard the royal yacht Victoria and Albert dressed in a miniature version of what British sailors were wearing, nautical motifs have been one of fashion's darlings.

The idea was simple: crisp white (or navy) pants (or skirt) worn with a shirt set off by a middy collar, bow tie and wide-brimmed sailor hat. The idea was also fetching, so much so that the nautical styles that the young prince popularized among the juvenile set have grown into one of the few women's fashions that have not only endured but have also become as much a harbinger of spring as the first crosus.

This year, though, the look has taken on a different cast. Traditionally classified as sportswear — perfect for a sail on the yacht (or rubber raft) or a stroll on the beach (albeit Jones) — nautical looks this spring are sailing into the sunset as one of Seventh Avenue's favorite evening styles.

"Fashion has reached the stage where very often things are reversed: What is often used in a casual point of view is being reinterpreted in updated, dressy versions," said Joan Simpson Raines, a spokeswoman for designer Adele Simpson, who used anchors as everything from the trim on the belt of a daytime dress to the glittering focal point of a beaded evening gown.

"The nautical look is popular for evening because it's kind of a whimsical look and just because it's unexpected," added Deborah Kase, a spokeswoman for Oscar de la Renta, whose nautical evening wear includes vivid combinations of sequins and organdy. "It's something you expect for cruise wear." But the idea of doing nautical stripes in sequins with trompe l'oeil bows is amusing and unexpected, she said. "There's a glamor and a luxury in it."

And the combination of luxury and whimsy is, indeed, an integral part of the look. One of those who went — if you'll pardon the expression — overboard on it all was designer Bob Mackie, who swapped both the traditional red, white and blue colors and the traditional sweet little silhouettes for something bolder. "There are no real sailor colors in the collection, except white," said Mackie, whose inspiration for the nautical themes came from seashells he found at his new Malibu beach house. "Instead, I used pinks and aquas and lavenders."

Similarly, Jackie, who is known for the spangled gowns he has long created for celebrities, topped his beaded sailor skirts with voluminous middy blouses that extend to the hips. "The look (of the blouse) is extreme — something you'd have to wear in the evening said Mackie, who even dressed the bride in his spring showing in a white taffeta gown with sailor collar.

Nautical styles often herald spring for women's wear, but usually are considered sportswear. This spring, though, the look will be considered evening wear. Here Bob Mackie puts on an exaggerated blouson over a beaded skirt.

Color, fabric inspire award-winning styles

Copley News Service

"Men don't want to wear a uniform, but they want to look classic. A man in a tuxedo is classic. I'm not one for crazy men's clothes; I'm too traditional for that. A man looks beautiful in a tuxedo. If he's too colorful, he's competing with the woman," Mackie says.

It would be difficult to compete with the fashions of Mackie. He has won four Emmy Awards and two Costume Designers Guild awards, as well as several Academy Award nominations for best costume design. He has done costumes for movies, including "Max Dugan Returns" and "Staying Alive," and has his own collection of fashions for women.

Mackie studied art in his hometown of Los Angeles, then went to work as a sketch artist for designer Jean Louis, later with designer Edith Head. He began designing for television shows and created costumes for actress Mitzi Gaynor's nightclub act in the 1960s. For 11 years he designed all the costumes for the Carol Burnett television show. But it was the sexy, slinky, all-out costumes he designed for Cher to wear during the "Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour" in the 1970s which made the designer so visible.

"I spent 20 years as a costume designer," he says, "and things began repeating themselves. I needed a new thrust in my life." So he moved on to design his own fashion lines.

"Clothes are a costume, in that a costume conveys who this character is. People judge you and where you're coming from by your clothes. It's a way of projecting how you feel about yourself and who you are," Mackie says.

His fashions include bathing suits, lingerie and a haute couture line. Mackie gets inspiration for designs from color and fabric, he says, as well as traveling across country and abroad.

"I love to go on trips, even though I don't seem to get any inspiration from them right at the minute. But then a year later, something inspires you and you know the trip paid off."

Mackie's primary interest now is haute couture lines. "It's much better to have a couture line as your heaviest idea. Then that idea can sweep over into other areas," he says.

"I sell a lot of evening clothes. I came into the design world with a reputation for dressy, glamorous clothes, even for daytime. I'm not geared to sportswear, but I think people want a lot of variety. They want dressy things as well as sportswear."

Although Mackie obviously takes pride in his fashions, he says the key to glamour is "knowing yourself and how to put yourself together.

Yves Saint Laurent's loyal ladies also make a point of dressing in YSL from head to toe for the master's shows. And when Kenzo unveils his collection during Pret-A-Porter in Paris, the guards have to hold back the groupies in matching Kenzo outfits.

As designers have risen to celebrity status, fashion clones have come to provide the scenery at their shows. But that's not the case with Liz Claiborne. When the New Yorker presented her spring and summer lines at Robinson's in Woodland Hills recently, her designs blended into the SRO crowd. Claiborne wouldn't have it any other way.

"Our clothes don't scream a label," she explained. "I don't think clothes should dominate a woman. They should provide a background and take on the wearer's personality."

This philosophy, along with a seemingly endless selection of color-coordinated separates and dresses, has made Claiborne the darling of the career-woman set. And while her collection isn't unique in the industry — comparably priced Carole Little for St. Tropez West and Jones New York are also very popular with working women — her collection offers the greatest variety.

The variety and appeal have paid off handsomely: her clothes are carried by every major department store in the country, as well as many specialty stores, and in 1983, her company, Liz Claiborne Inc., reported sales of $226 million.

Considering the size of the company, Liz Claiborne Inc. does very little advertising. What advertising she uses is done on a cooperative basis with retailers.

"We haven't found it necessary to do institutional advertising," she noted. "We've chosen to take that money and put it into the product."

And herein lies her strength: Claiborne not only transforms new trends such as the cropped pant and duster coat into understandably and salable sportswear, she accessorizes the looks and offers them at reasonable prices, ranging from $15 for a tummy-bearing T-shirt to $190 for a silk velvet dress. her popular linen blazers for spring go for $120.

She is able to maintain those prices by shopping worldwide for the most economical fabrics and production facilities.

Peering through her trademark owlish glasses, she said, "I design with my own needs in mind. Being a working woman myself — one who has to dress quickly in the morning and doesn't love to shop by the hour — I relate to their needs."

However, the designs on the rack look decidely more feminine than those on her back. Dressed in her own mushroom-colored unconstructed linen jacket, white T-shirt, white linen cuffed trousers and white loafers, she said her personal style is not a reaction to being a female in a male-dominated industry.

"I'm more comfortable in pants. When I'm working, I'm always kneeling down and running around. Besides," she added, running a hand across the back of her boyishly cropped hair, "this is my style. I think the older you get, the more settled in your style you become."

Claiborne, a slim woman who hardly looks her 54 years, was born in Brussels, the daughter of a banker. Most of her early childhood and teens were spent in New Orleans. After studying fine art and painting at the Academie in Paris, she returned to her birthplace.

She was discovered after winning the national design contest sponsored by Harper's Bazaar. Buoyed by that success, she moved to New York and took her first job as assistant to Tina Leser, followed by a stint with Omar Khayam. The next 16 years were spent as head designer at Youthguild, an established dress house.

"But I was restless," she recalled, "and I couldn't find the kind of clothes I personally wanted to take me through my day as wife, mother, homemaker and working woman – at affordable prices. I figured other women had to have the same problem and maybe I could help solve it."

With these objectives in mind, Claiborne and her husband, textile expert Arthur Ortenberg, launched their own company in 1976 with $250,000 they borrowed from family and friends. Her concept caught on immediately — first with store buyers and then with consumers.

DEAR ABBY

Texas millionaire can't discuss his finances

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago when my wife and I were divorced, she tried to clean me out. She said I was a "millionaire." What is a millionaire? Does having more than a million dollars in total assets make me a millionaire? Or do I have to have a net worth of more than a million dollars?

I have no one to discuss my finances with. At present I don't have a CPA. And when I did have one, I never disclosed my total situation because I was afraid if he knew how much I had he might charge me more for his services.

Since my divorce I have accumulated quite a lot of property. I'm not bragging, but I haven't done too bad for a country boy who never went to college. I'm still single and plan to stay that way unless I meet a woman who doesn't judge a man by how much money he has. I drive a 10-year-old car and prefer to keep a low profile.

Thanks for any advice you can give me, but most of all I want to know if I'm a millionaire. — DOING OK IN TEXAS

DEAR DOING OK: According to the dictionary, a millionaire is one whose wealth is estimated at a million or more dollars, so you qualify.

My advice: Raise your profile a little, enjoy the fruits of your labor and use everything you have going for you — including your money.

P.S. If you want to withhold information from your CPA, that's your business. But don't try to fool the IRS — that's THEIR business.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think that after being a houseguest for a week, it is proper to make a long-distance telephone call saying "thanks" in lieu of a bread-and-butter letter?

It seems to me that considering the work and expense involved for the hostess, a guest should take the time to write an expression of thanks.

I will bow to your decision, before condemning. — ASKING TOO MUCH?

DEAR ASKING: The written thank-you note is without question the most elegant and mannerly way to express gratitude. But don't condemn any method of conveying thanks — including the telephone call. It gets the job done.

P.S. Whatever happened to that charming custom of saying it with flowers?

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column on prescription drugs was a real service to everyone — except nurses!

I'm so tired of hearing, "Ask your doctor or pharmacist." I'd like you to know that nurses are also highly informed sources who are frequenty consulted about drugs. And they should be. The Gallup organization reports that 32 percent of the average nurse's work time is spent on medication-related functions. Besides at work, nurses are constantly asked about drugs by neighbors, friends and relatives. And did you know that nurses can prescribe drugs in 13 states?

DEAR MS. MASON: Acknowledged. And thanks for the needling. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY:
You ask where laddies put their nose.
When kissing pretty lasses,
I'll tell you my sad tale of woe,
Right on my nice clean glasses. —
NEIL H. BARRUS

AT WIT'S END

Child-rearing lacks 'instant gratification'

By ERMA BOMBECK

The trouble with raising kids is there is no instant gratification. Just when you're sailing along and you feel it's all worthwhile you get a plastic ice scraper from your 27-year-old son for Mother's Day that he picked up free at the gas station.

You get plain tired and wonder how much longer you have to hang on.

We all need stories with "happy endings" to sustain us. A mother in California said recently she got a note from her son that said, "I appreciate you. I know I have contributed to your headaches."

Bingo! A year and a half ago, according to his mother, he barely spoke English. (Yeah, man!) He was going to surf as a profession, had been asked to leave three schools, was involved in alcohol and drugs and was neither moral nor immoral, he was amoral (he made his own rules).

Work and patience turned him around and today he's in school and is a caring human being.

The other letter is from a "carrier" of parental frustration who has seen the light. She wrote, "My mother never turned to drink. No one could save her from chocolate, but I couldn't blame her either. I was the child who announced at 7:15 on a Monday morning Sister Margaret James wanted 47 pairs of used nylons for an art project.

"I was the adolescent who yelled, 'I hate you!' because I was not allowed to hitchhike 65 miles in December and sleep at a rock concert.

"The vicious threat of my mother has been partially realized: 'May you have twins just like yourself.' I am now the mother who contemplated breaking my child's legs when my husband announced, 'We'll get a dog as soon as the baby can walk.'

"I live in fear that the punk look will still be with us when my daughter is old enough to date. I don't know how my mother stood it."

Shared projects special

Copley News Service

There is something very special about a project that is shared. Whether it is one person or a dozen with whom you share, there is joy in doing it together. The following is information on a project we are starting in our church. It will work for any group.

Block by block we are making a quilt. This quilt, when finished, will be raffled off.

Each member of the group will make one or more blocks using her own scraps and embroidering her name in the corner of each block. The group is furnishing the fabric and the batting which will be precut and ready to go.

As do all major projects, this one needs a few guidelines:

— Select a quilt pattern that features blocks that can be finished individually rather than assembled and finished. Select a pattern that is not too intricate, so that even the beginner can handle it.

— Make a list of requirements to go along with each block so that the blocks will be uniform. For example, the type fabric to use (we suggested polyester-cotton, which is easy to find); what type thread to use; the finished size of each block, and a deadline for having the blocks finished.

— If possible, assemble the quilt as the blocks are turned in. This will keep the work moving.

Designer's spring fashions 'relaxed'

Hearst Feature Service

Valentino of Rome described his spring couture collection as his most relaxed, ever. Indeed, it appeared soft, undeniably pretty and always inspired by the sweater.

The show that took place before a 500-strong crowd at Rome's Excelsior Hotel proceeded with a showing of dresses that looked like suits, and prints that were at once nostalgic, modern and with enough drapes, fold and tucks to make a silhouette indecipherable. In a lesser master's hand, it might have been a disaster, but Valentino made it a magical showing.

"The mood for the day and the evening is the sweater look," he said before the start of his showing. He made everything look like knits, including new blouson tops, easy jackets and even paillettes sewn into chiffon. And he applied ribbed sweater stitching in all fabrics as details on jackets and dresses.

But there was more going on than just pullovers.

Valentino's new silhouette was sculpted like an hourglass and was knife-edged neat. Key to the look was a new, corset-shaped waist and hip panel shown on most of his 110 ensembles. It gave sexy shape to his tops, blurred distinction between dresses and suits and redefined the blouse.

The long sexy midcalf skirt had pleats sewn over the thighs and ruffling open at the knee. The cardigan jacket was straight-edged with fine pleats in back, or loose over buttoned-up blazers. New florals were overblown and sparsely patterned on white and black silk cocktail dresses or dainty and nostalgic in crepe.

Draping showed up in a sleek beaded crepe gown that blouses and wraps around the waist. A partially-draped cocktail dress had the torso split down the middle between smooth and sheer fabrics.

"I have brought back Valentinio white," said the designer of the color he claimed for his own in an all-white collection in 1967. Along with a lot of gay colors, it ran throughout, paired with black or navy.

He showed white crepe-skirted Deauville suits for day and white beaded linen tops for evening. Other fabric virtuosity reigned in a clever tartan kilt skirt made of chiffon and worn with a paillette top and black linen jacket.

Elsewhere he flaunted classic plaid wools in a new extra-full smock, sometimes worn over a new fringed-at-the hem long skirt.

Other excesses: refined paillettes, stiched to look like silk jacquard or knit, but sewn on chiffon and shaped into short-sleeved sweaters over transparent paillette skirts.

Large shirts popular

— Unbutton it and wear as a casual, unstructured jacket over rolled-up pants or jeans.

— Layer it over a camisole or T-shirt by buttoning only the bottom buttons, then belting loosely over hips.

— Pop it over a bathing suit as a cool and light-weight beach coverup when you have had enough sun.

Actress Caron enters Houston hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — Leslie Caron has been hospitalized for tests after being "doubled over in pain" because of a stomach ailment, according to a published report.

The 52-year-old French actress was taken to St. Luke's Hospital after Saturday night's performance of "On Your Toes," but hospital spokeswoman Elaine Moore said Miss Caron asked that details of her condition not be released.

"She performed Saturday, but she was in quite a lot of pain," the newspaper quoted the source.

An understudy, Rebecca Wright, took Miss Caron's place in Sunday's final two performances at Houston's Music Hall. The show was to open tonight in Dallas.

Jim Nabors

HANA, Hawaii (AP) — Jim Nabors, the actor-singer who played Gomer Pyle on TV in "The Andy Griffith Show," and "Gomer Pyle USMC," got to meet the president — but in the process lost his wheels.

Nabors, 51, had a Yamaha dirt bike stolen from his Hana ranch Sunday afternoon, police said Monday.

The theft occurred while Nabors was in Honolulu attending an Easter service at St. Andrew's Cathedral, where he was among those who greeted President and Mrs. Reagan. The Reagans stopped in Hawaii for two days on their way to China.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — As if he needed any more honors, Michael Jackson has been commended for "his unique blend of personal charm and style" by the California Assembly.

The lower house approved Assemblywoman Teresa Hughes' resolution honoring the superstar singrer on Monday. Appropriately, it was a voice vote. Now the measure goes to the state Senate.

The resolution noted that Jackson, 25, an Encino resident who carried home eight Grammys this year, has contributed "to the expansion of the music and entertainment industries and the promotion of the state of California in the worldwide community."

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Digger Phelps and Gerry Faust are better known for directing the fortunes of the high-powered Notre Dame football and basketball teams, but this week they'll tackle another heavyweight by the name of William Shakespeare.

Phelps, Notre Dame's basketball coach, and Faust, his counterpart on the Fightin' Irish football team, will be among a host of performers participating in a 100-hour marathon reading of the works of the Bard of Avon.

Twelve hours later, Faust will give his rendition of Macbeth.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Hundreds of Chileans stood in line for more than half a day to get tickets to the first concerts by the renowned pianist Claudio Arrau in his homeland since 1967.

A line that eventually wound for three blocks around the Municipal Theater started forming 14 hours before the box office opened Monday morning. Theater officials said tickets would remain on sale round the clock until all 1,570 for each of the three concerts were gone.

Arrau, 81, a New York resident since the late 1940s, has been quoted by newspapers here as saying he wanted to play in Chile for a generation of young people who never heard his music live. He has also scheduled a free concert exclusively for students at an 8,000-seat auditorium.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Princess Yi Pang-Ja, widow of the last crown prince of Korea's Yi Dynasty, wants her court dresses returned to Korea, the Yonhap News Agency said today.

Yonhap said the 82-year-old princess, born of a royal Japanese family and married to her Korean husband, Yi Un, made her wish known in a documentary film about her life which will be televised in Japan and South Korea.

The princess and her husband, brother of King Sunhong, were married in Japan before the Yi Dynasty fell under Japanese colonial rule in 1910. She returned to South Korea in 1962.

The formal Yi Dinasty dresses the princess wore had been donated to the Tokyo museum when World War II ended in 1945, Yonhap said. The princess wished to see her dresses returned to South Korea and preserved in the Korean National Museum, the agency said.

Film Society honors star of stage, screen

NEW YORK (AP) — Claudette Colbert, whose career on stage and screen spans more than half a century, was honored by the Film Society of Lincoln Center for her work in 64 films.

The gala event Monday, attended by such stars as Lillian Gish, Fred MacMurray and Ray Milland, kicked off at Avery Fisher Hall with clips of Miss Colbert's films and tributes by some of her peers. Afterward, the glittery gathering moved across Lincoln Center to the New York State Theater for a party.

"I've met and worked with practically everybody in the business," Milland said at the tribute. "Miss Colbert is the most delightful one of them all, and I love her."

Colbert, 80, interrupted rehearsals in London with Rex Harrison for the play "Aren't We All?" to attend.

Among the film clips was the silly and sexy hitchhiking scene with Clark Gable in the 1934 gem "It Happened One Night." That film won an Academy Award for both actors and director Frank Capra. There was also the pool-size milk bath in the 1933 film "The Sign of the Cross," and Miss Colbert being unfurled from a rug in the 1934 epic "Cleopatra."

Miss Colbert, who entered a box wearing a red gown and soon donned large dark glasses, shook her head and laughed at the end of nearly every series of film clips. With her heart-shaped face, small waist, high cheekbones and curly bangs, she looked amazingly like her movies' younger self.

"I knew her way back when — during the Revolutionary War," said actress Arlene Francis. She called Miss Colbert "a lovely, decent, marvelous woman," adding, "It has replenished my life, knowing her."

Others who spoke were George Rose, who acted with Miss Colbert and Rex Harrison in "The Kingfisher" on Broadway in 1978; Kitty Carlisle Hart; choreographer Jerome Robbins; Claire Trevor; and producer John Logan.

Among those in the audience were Joan Bennett, Hermione Gingold, Miss Gish, Patrick O'Neal, Polly Bergen and Amanda Plummer.

Miss Colbert spoke last and briefly, thanking those who spoke and attended. After seeing the film clips, she said, she realized "I had all the best-looking men on the screen."

House of Carpets has new look

If you haven't visited Midland's oldest and most repected name in carpets recently, you should drop in and see their "new look".

Almost 33 years ago, the House of Carpets was first openned in Midland. It was Midland's first carpet store, and today continues to be the number one name in carpets in Midland and the surrounding area.

Recently, in its present location in the Village Shopping Center on West Wall Street, the House of Carpets completely re-decorated the interior of the store. The new interior was designed, and most of the actual work was done, by the sales and decorating staff at the House of Carpets, including Scott Welmaker, Rebecca Minott, Eric Unger and Greg Elsner.

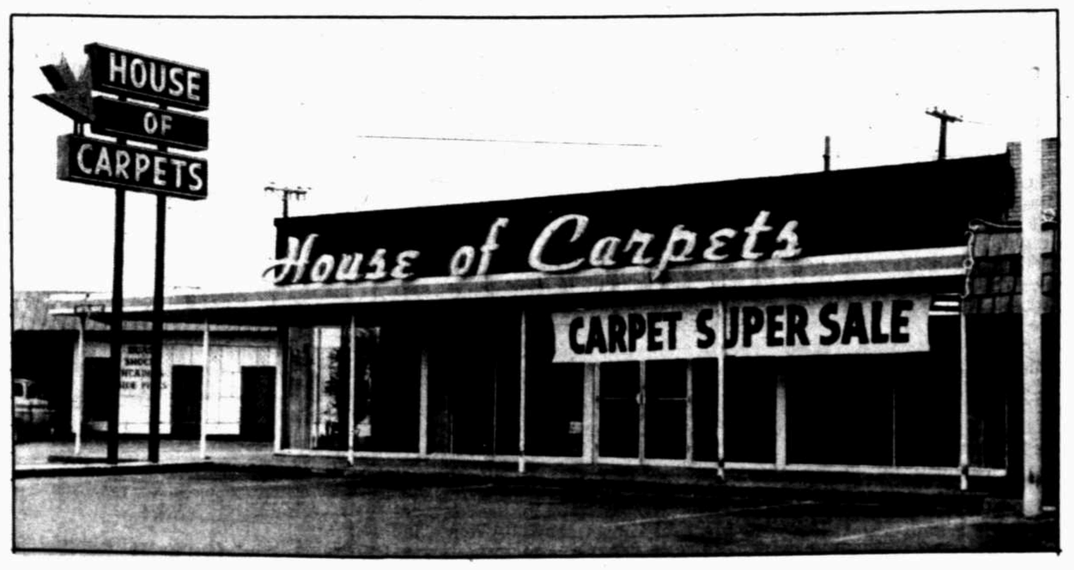
The House of Carpets' new look includes an entry covered with ceramic tile, one of the newest items featured at House of Carpets. Also, the vinyl department is covered with a fine quality of never-wax vinyl, and has a new lighting system designed to better show the many patterns and qualities of the sheet vinyls and tiles.

There is a new coffee room for employees and customers, and the design department has been completely redone to better display draperies and, wall coverings, miniblinds and vertical blinds. You'll enjoy making your selection in this pleasant, convenient atmosphere.

Rebecca Minott, staff designer at House of Carpets, is an associate member of ASID and is well qualified to assist you in your selections of everything in your home, from paint or brick colors, to lighting fixtures and wallcoverings. There is usually no charge for her design services when items are selected from House of Carpets.

Another of the new features at House of Carpetsare the vertical carpet rolls showing this seasons most popular colors and styles. Many items shown on these vertical rolls are available for prompt or immediate delivery. Because of the large size of these samples, you can get a clear idea of the way it will appear on your floor, which is a great advantage over selecting from tiny samples.

In addition to having almost everything to make the interior of your home more beautiful, the House of Carpets has experienced people to help you make the wisest and most practical choice. Since some carpets may look good, but actually do not hold up to the performance level you desire, you can safely put your trust in the well-trained personnel at House of Carpets, Midland's most respected name in carpets since 1951. Drop in and see them in their newly re-decorated store in the Village Shopping Center, soon!



House of Carpets has a new look. The new look was designed and most of the work done by the staff. Stop in and see what they have done. House of Carpets is located in the Village Shopping Center.

Mother ordered to undergo test

BARNSTABLE, Mass. (AP) — A woman who church officials say admitted drowning her daughter 10 years ago was ordered to undergo psychiatric testing after pleading innocent to first-degree murder.

Nancy M. Cross, 41, will use an insanity defense, her lawyer said Monday.

The drowning of Wendy Lynn Cross, 8, on Sept. 20, 1973, had been ruled accidental.

Barroom rapists won't be deported

BOSTON (AP) — A judge said he saw "no reason for further punishment" as he ruled that two men convicted of raping a woman on a barroom pool table should not be deported.

Joseph Vieira, sentenced to six to eight years in prison, could have been deported because of a previous weapons conviction. Victor Raposo, serving nine to 12 years, faced possible deportation because he had been in the country less than five years. Two other Portuguese immigrants convicted in the case did not face deportation.

Monday's ruling by Superior Court Judge William Young virtually binds immigration officials from taking any action against the two.

Jury selection begins in mayor's trial

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jury selection has begun in the extortion trial of Edward McIntyre, the first city's black mayor, who is accused of three counts of using his office for personal gain.

McIntyre, 52, was indicted Jan. 18 by a federal grand jury Prosecutors say he tried to extort money from developers interested in city-owned river-front property.

Lawyers began selecting 12 jurors and four alternates from a pool of 82 men and women Monday. Black leaders, including Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, have helped raise money for McIntyre, and some have said that racism was behind the charges.

No action planned against airline

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — No action is planned against Regent Air after a case of marmalade fell from the landing gear door of one of its passenger jets during takeoff, injuring a driver on the New Jersey Turnpike, a federal official said.

Employees for a caterer apparently "just forgot about" removing the case, said Ron Randolph of the Federal Aviation Administration. Other debris from the plane littered Newark International Airport Sunday and closed one runway for two hours, officials said.

Religious order loses fourth bid

DETROIT (AP) — A religious order has overwhelmingly lost its fourth bid in a stockholders' vote to halt constuction of Detroit Edison Co.'s Fermi 2 nuclear power plant.

Eighty-one million shares of the utility's stock voted against the proposal by the Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, which opposed the plant on safety and cost grounds. Seven million shares backed the plan.

The facility 25 miles southwest of Detroit is 98 percent complete, and should begin producing power next year, the utility said.

Counselors discuss plans for theater

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Parents, students and officials of a theater school where the artistic director was charged with sexually abusing children met with counselors to discuss plans for keeping the facility open, a spokeswoman said.

Marcy Dowse, communications director for the Children's Theater Company, also said Monday that an unspecified number of staff members have been suspended as part of an ongoing investigation.

House votes to help World's Fair

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana's House of Representatives approved and passed on to the Senate a financial bailout plan to keep construction going at the site of this year's World's Fair.

The vote was 66-29 in favor of lending the fair $10 million. Opponents criticized the loan at a time when fiscal belt-tightening has the state facing cutbacks. The measure goes to the Senate today.

The fair, due to open May 12, has had trouble meeting its construction bills for the $94 million project.

President approves abortion bill

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — President Antonio Ramalho Eanes said abortion "remains reprehensible" but signed into law a bill legalizing it in this predominantly Roman Catholic country.

In a nationwide television broadcast Monday, Eanes said approval of the bill by both Parliament and the nation's constitutional court led to his decision despite his own reservations over the measure. The Catholic community had mounted a strong anti-abortion campaign.

The bill will permit abortions in cases of rape, danger to the mother's health or malformation of the fetus.

The only countries in Europe that now prohibit abortion are Ireland and Belgium. Spain, which passed a similar abortion law last year, is waiting for a decision on the bill's legality from its constitutional tribunal.

Army censors news broadcasts

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The army command has ordered censorship of all news broadcasts in and around the capital — the latest in a series of restrictions to counter popular pressure for direct presidential elections.

Congress votes Wednesday on whether, and when, to abandon the current system of picking the president through an electoral college. Millions of Brazilians have demonstrated recently for direct elections, and organizers vowed to stage large protests in Brasilia prior to the vote.

Defense Ministry to recruit women

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The Defense Ministry reportedly is planning to recruit 1,000 to 1,500 women for the West German armed forces next year. They would be the first women in the armed forces since Germany was divided at the end of World War II.

Peter-Kurt Wuerzbach, the No. 2 man in the Defense Ministry, was quoted Monday by the Hamburg newspaper Bild Zeitung as saying West Germany hoped eventually to put 15,000 women into uniform.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Cabinet must give approval before the recruitment can begin.

Tip O'Neill's wife in hospital

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Mildred O'Neill, wife of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, is being treated at U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden for a bronchial condition, an Air Force spokesman said today.

Her husband, a Massachusetts Democrat, left a congressional delegation touring Kenya, Greece and Austria, and was staying with his wife, according to the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

Mrs. O'Neill, who was accompanying her husband on the tour, was flown Sunday to the Wiesbaden Regional Medical Center from Kenya via the Greek island of Crete, the spokesman told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

She was sent to Wiesbaden upon recommendation of the U.S. Navy physician traveling with the congressional delegation, he said.

Mrs. O'Neill was listed in "stable condition" after receiving treatment for a long-standing "bronchial problem that had worsened," the spokesman said, quoting from a report issued by physicians treating her in the hospital.

LEGAL NOTICES

FOR CLARK COUNTY
In Re the Welfare of
INFANT JOHN DOE, A MINOR
No. 84 5 00115 6
NOTICE
TO: TERRY FOSTER, AND TO ALL WHOM IT MAHY CONCERN

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that there has been filed in the above entitled Court a Petition praying that the parent/child relationship between said child and the natural father of said child be terminated. Said Petition alleges that Terry Foster is the natural father of said infant child. The child was born April 11, 1983, in Vancouver, Washington; the child is believed to have been conceived in Midland, Texas in July, 1982.

YOU ARE FURTHER NOTIFIED that you have a right to file a claim of paternity under Chapter 26.26, RCW, or to file a Notice of your intent to declare or claim paternity. As a result of such a filing, you may be entitled to blood tests, to a trial on the issue of paternity, and to other rights as set forth in Chapter 26.26, RCW.

YOU ARE FURTHER NOTIFIED that a hearing to establish paternity of the minor child above described, and to terminate the natural father's relationship with said child and the child's relationship with his natural father, will be heard on Monday, the 7th day of May, 1984, at the hour of 11:00 a.m., or as soon thereafter as the Court's calendar permits such hearing to begin. This hearing will be held in the Department of the Juvenile Judge of Clark County, Washington, at the Juvenile Hall, in Vancouver, Washington.

FINALLY, YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT IF YOU FAIL TO FILE A CLAIM OF PATERNITY BY THE DATE OF THE HEARING OR FAIL TO APPEAR AT THE HEARING SET FORTH ABOVE, YOUR RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES WITH REGARD TO THE ABOVE DESCRIBED CHILD SHALL BE TERMINATED.

DATED this 12th day of April, 1984
George J. Miller, Clerk
By: Sandra G. Monahan, Deputy
