O.J. interest poll

Recent polls conducted nationally indicate Americans have grown weary of the events surrounding the O.J. Simpson pre-trial hearing. However, when the actual trial begins — as it is expected to within the next few days — do you think you will again find yourself interested in testimony and following the events as they unfold? Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400, category 7655. If you think you will be interested in the trial, press 1. If you feel you will no longer find the story of interest, press 2. You have the opportunity to leave a comment after you cast your vote. We ask that you leave your name, but that is optional. The poll will remain open until noon Tuesday. Results will be published in Wednesday's edition.

Traffic fatality

ODESSA — An Odessa woman was dead and three other Odessa residents were in serious condition at Medical Center Hospital Sunday after two vehicles hit telephone poles earlier in the day.

According to Odessa police officials, a 1987 Cadillac driven by Adrian Thomas was going at a high rate of speed in the 700 block of 31st Street at about 3:25 a.m. Sunday. The Cadillac attempted to make a right turn onto Center Street, lost control and struck a telephone pole on the southeast corner of Center and 31st streets, officials said.

A 1988 Mercury, driven by Latonya Renea Morris, 26, was following the Cadillac at a high rate of speed and struck a telephone pole in the east alley of Center Street, officials said.

Ms. Morris, Deidra Shantel Lewis, 22, and Kienandra Williams, 17 — both passengers in the Mercury — all were taken to the hospital.

Ms. Lewis was pronounced dead at 5:17 a.m., officials said.

Jerome Ellis, 16, a passenger in the Cadillac, also was taken to the hospital.

Thomas fled the scene and police are searching for his whereabouts.

49ers end Dallas' bid for three-peat

■ San Francisco beats stubborn Cowboys 38-28 in NFC final, moves on to Super Bowl against San Diego, victors over Pittsburgh, on Jan. 29 in Miami.

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The ghosts are gone. The makeover is complete. The San Francisco 49ers are Super Bowl-bound, as they planned to be all along, after finally beating Dallas in a game that counts.

The Niners exorcised the memory of two straight losses in the NFC title game to the Cowboys by beating them 38-28 Sunday, denying Dallas its shot at becoming the first team to win three straight Super Bowls and giving themselves a shot at becoming the first to win five.

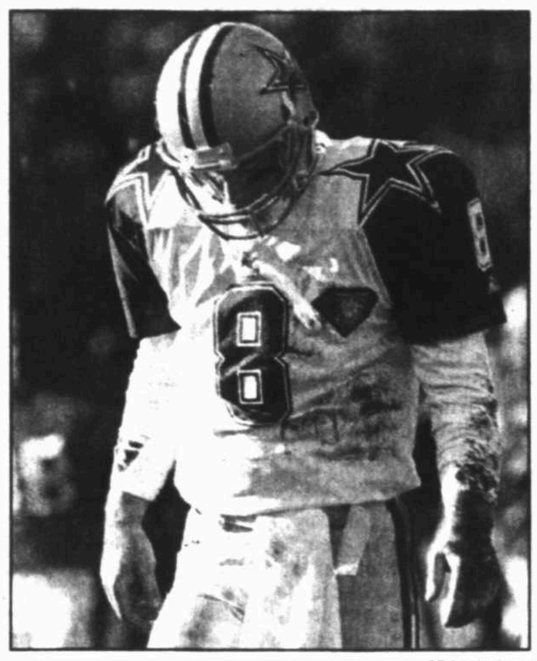

Steve Young, Deion Sanders and the rest of the 49ers will take their new in-your-face attitude to the NFL title game, where they will play the San Diego Chargers in an All-California matchup in Miami on Jan. 29. The Chargers were 17-13 winners over Pittsburgh in the AFC championship.

San Francisco, which routed the Chargers 38-15 in San Diego on Dec. 11, was installed as a 17½-point favorite to become the 11th straight NFC champion to win the Super Bowl.

Bush's elementary school gives a thumbs-up

One of George W. Bush's old schools will be paying tribute to him this week as he becomes the next governor of Texas.

No, not a college or even his high school.

It's the school where he probably was more interested in recess than in mapping out his future.

Sam Houston Elementary School — where Bush attended school while his family lived in Midland — has found a unique way to honor its most famous ex-student.

A 4-foot-square piece of plywood, shaped into the state of Texas and printed with about 580 blue and red thumbprints will travel to the Midland ball at the civic center in Austin Tuesday, with hopes that Bush himself will receive it.

Kelly Hullender, a first-grade teacher at Sam Houston, said her class wanted some way to get involved in the inauguration this week because Bush had attended their school.

"We wanted something that the whole school get involved in," Ms. Hullender said. "Something special from Bush's old school."

Ms. Hullender said the plywood is painted white, with a small schoolhouse painted over where Midland is on the map.

Russian troops fight to encircle Grozny, rebels

■ Forces battle to close in on outnumbered, outgunned Chechens; heavy fire resounds south of palace.

Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — Backed by rockets and heavy artillery, Russian tanks and ground troops fought Sunday to close in on outnumbered and outgunned Chechen rebels, some of them using World War II-era equipment.

The capital of the secessionist republic was rocked by explosions as shells slammed into tall buildings, and pillars of black smoke soared hundreds of yards into the sky. A huge orange blast shook the city around noon, sending up a giant, black mushroom cloud.

Rebels still held the presidential palace in the center of the ruined city, but their positions south of the palace were coming under strong attack.

Russian forces driving from the north of Grozny appeared to be trying to completely encircle the center by linking up in the south of the city. Heavy machine-gun and rifle fire resounded in the southern districts throughout the day.

"The Russians are just firing at everything," said Hasan, a Chechen fighter.

Rebel fighters said Russian troops had forced their way overnight into the wrecked palace, the symbol of Chechnya's independence drive, but were driven out in ferocious fighting early Sunday.

The Russians now hold several buildings on the same square as the presi-

'Wasn't that bad,' says ex-juror who spent 57 days under guard

■ Erik Rasmussen doesn't envy panel, alternates now in seclusion for murder trial of O.J. Simpson.

By Deborah Hastings
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — He wanted ice cream; he got it. He wanted to fish; he got a chartered boat. Sex, however, was out of the question.

It's been almost two years, and Erik Rasmussen can still compute instantly the number of days he spent as a sequestered juror in the federal trial of four white policemen accused of beating black motorist Rodney King.

"Fifty-seven," Rasmussen said. "You want the minutes, too?"

But he doesn't regret his public service. "It wasn't that bad," Rasmussen says. "We only had about two days when we really couldn't stand each other."

He doesn't envy the jurors and alternates now in seclusion for the murder trial of O.J. Simpson, accused of killing his ex-wife and her friend. Simpson jurors have been warned they may remain at their secret location for up to six months.

"That's tough," Rasmussen said. "That's a long time. I wouldn't want to do it."

The people on Rasmussen's jury carried a heavy responsibility. The same four officers already had been tried in state court in 1992, and their acquittals provoked devastating rioting that killed 55 people.

For the federal trial the next year, jurors were secretly whisked to the downtown Hilton. They lived in isolation, under armed guard, in a sealed wing on the 10th floor.

Like many others across the United States, a group of African-American Midlanders paid tribute Sunday to one of the greatest proponents of civil rights.

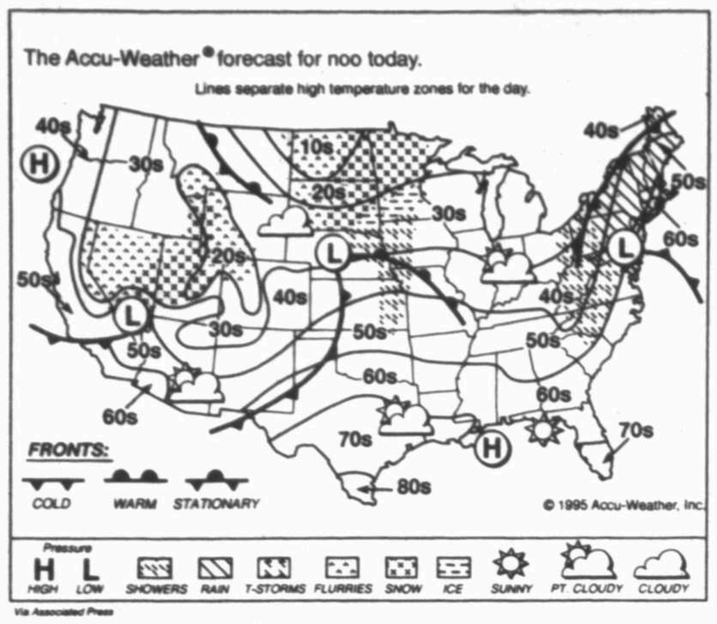

A group of about 30 people gathered at Washington Park, to march in Midland's ninth annual Freedom Celebration and Memorial to Martin Luther King Jr., sponsored by the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

The celebration honored what would have been King's 66th birthday today. He was killed in 1968.

The celebration has always been held on a Sunday to honor King's years as a minister, according to chamber

Look for clouds, high near 70

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies in the morning with decreasing clouds in the afternoon, a high near 70 and southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be mostly sunny with a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 37, Sunday's high reached 75, compared to the record high for that date of 79 set in 1935. The record low was 6 set in 1972.

STATE

Texas skies were fair to partly cloudy Sunday with afternoon temperatures in the 60s and 70s.

In North Texas, readings ranged from 60 at Sherman to 66 at Mineral Wells. Winds were from the south at 10 to 20 mph over the west and central portions of the region with mostly light winds in the east.

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies, with a slight chance of thunderstorms at night in the central and western portions of the region. Windy conditions also are expected in those areas during the day, when highs should be in the 60s and 70s. Lows will be in the 40s and 50s.

Temperatures in West Texas and the Panhandle ranged from 62 at Guadalupe Pass to 75 at Midland and Wink. Winds generally were from the south to southwest at 10 to 20 mph.

Forecasters predict partly to mostly cloudy skies through tonight with highs typically in the 60s and 70s. Lows will range from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 30s and 40s elsewhere.

NATION

Heavy rain fell Sunday in the East, where flooding hit part of the Appalachians, and snow in the West closed some Wyoming highways. Parts of flood-damaged California got more rain.

By midafternoon, Sunday's rainfall along parts of the central and southern East Coast totaled as much as 4 inches, bringing weekend totals in some areas to more than 9 inches.

Some roads in western North Carolina remained closed by mudslides and flooding. Three Boy Scouts were killed Saturday when a footbridge collapsed as they crossed a swollen creek.

A line of strong thunderstorms pushed across eastern North Carolina and eastern Virginia, with wind gusting to 45 mph in Carteret County, N.C.

Rain also was scattered over parts of the upper Ohio Valley and lower Great Lakes.

The Northeast had another day of unseasonably mild temperatures, with Boston posting a record of 66. Wind gusted to 51 mph at Burlington, Vt.

In the West, snowfall included nearly a foot in Utah's Wasatch Mountains, with 2 to 4 inches at lower elevations in the Salt Lake City area.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BID: Niners beat 'Boys in game that counts

(From 1A)

"I said, 'This is your year. It's your turn,'" Aikman said.

For the 49ers, this victory was more than just another big win in 13 years of big wins, perhaps because they even got their wish of beating the Cowboys at their best. Emmitt Smith, who came into the game with a hamstring injury, played most of the way and scored two touchdowns for Dallas, but was a non-factor because of San Francisco's quick 21-0 lead.

This victory was vindication for Young, who "couldn't win the big one" after taking over in 1991 for Joe Montana. It was also redemption for coach George Seifert, who operated in the shadow of Bill Walsh and whose job may have been in jeopardy despite a career mark of 83-24, a percentage of .776. That's by far the best in NFL history.

So who could be surprised that, after the game, Young took what amounted to a victory lap around waterlogged Candlestick Park with the crowd chanting "Steve! Steve! Steve! Steve!"

And who could be surprised that Seifert, who won the Super Bowl after the 1989 season, his first year as Walsh's successor, called the win "the coaching thrill of my life."

"It's a great feeling you just can't believe, 47 guys coming together," Young said. "We came together with a purpose."

Another of those 47 guys, Eric Davis, started it with a 44-yard interception return, one of three early Dallas turnovers that sent the Niners on a 21-0 rampage in the first 7½ minutes of the game. Typically, as Davis ran into the end zone, Sanders helped up Troy Aikman and made some kind of remark.

But more than Sanders, it was Young, throwing for two touchdowns and running for another, who demonstrated the team's new in-your-face attitude with a robust end-zone spike after his 3-yard, third-quarter TD on a quarterback draw.

But these are different 49ers with a defense designed specifically to beat Dallas, using some innovative, financial maneuvering under the NFL's salary cap. Many of the defensive players, led by Sanders, reflect the combative attitude that was apparent an hour before the game when the running backs from both teams engaged in a short scuffle in the north end zone.

The brawl apparently stemmed from the kind of trash-talking frowned upon during the reign of Montana.

It continued early when the defense forced three of the five turnovers it got from the Cowboys to take a three-touchdown lead. Three times Dallas got to within 10 points, but Young twice retaliated by bringing the 49ers back, including a 28-yard TD pass to Jerry Rice with eight seconds left in the half. The way the 49ers won negated the pre-game boasts of Dallas coach Barry Switzer, who downgraded San Francisco's 21-14 win earlier this year "because they got three interceptions and we won't let that happen again.

"If we do, we lose."

Well, it happened again, it happened early and they lost, despite the fact that Smith, who entered with a pulled left hamstring, lasted until he pulled his right hamstring with 10:28 left. He had 74 yards in 20 carries.

Young's statistics weren't great — he completed only 13-of-29 passes for 155 yards. But he ran 10 times for 47 yards, and moved the 49ers when he had to.

The Cowboys had the better stats — Michael Irvin caught 12 passes for 192 yards, a Dallas playoff record. Aikman was 30-of-53 for 380 yards and was intercepted three times, two by Davis and a third by Sanders. Aikman had been 7-0 in the playoffs as a starter.

On the third play from scrimmage, Davis, the forgotten cornerback once the Niners signed Sanders, slid in front of Irvin on a slant, grabbed the ball and took it 44 yards untouched to the end zone. There he was swamped by virtually the entire San Francisco team.

On the next series, Davis knocked the ball loose from Irvin after a reception and Tim McDonald recovered. That led to a 29-yard TD pass from Young to Ricky Watters.

Then, on the ensuing kickoff, Adam Walker knocked the ball loose from Kevin Williams and kicker Doug Brien fell on it at the 35. Six plays later, rookie William Floyd took it in from a yard away and it was 21-0 before the first quarter was half over.

But Dallas didn't quit.

On the next series, on a third-and-23 from the San Francisco 44, Aikman found Irvin in stride on the goal line to cut it to 21-7. And the Cowboys seemed set to score on their next possession when they inexplicably ran a draw on third-and-10 from the 49ers' 12. Smith gained only 2 yards and Chris Boniol hooked his field-goal try.

Brien hit from 34 yards to make 24-7 with 5:54 left in the second quarter, but Dallas came back with another quick drive, 63 yards in eight plays capped by Smith's 4-yard TD run.

That set up two crucial series.

Dallas, on its own 16 with 59 seconds to go in the half, elected to throw three times and John Jett's 23-yard punt gave San Francisco the ball at the 39 with 30 seconds left.

Three plays later, Rice simply streaked past Larry Brown and caught a perfect pass from Young.

"That was the big play," Young said.

dential palace. But it was difficult to determine exactly how the fighting was going with no information coming from the Russian or Chechen military commands in Grozny.

"The Russians are storming the center of the city in wave after wave and they are being slaughtered," said Sayed Bemin, a Chechen fighter.

On the roads outside Grozny, Russian munitions convoys loaded with thousands of artillery shells approached the city on Sunday.

The Chechens said they were running low on ammunitions and weapons. Some fighters asked journalists for weapons and ammunition.

One rebel fighter carried a World War II submachine gun, and some Chechens were using hunting rifles. One Chechen fighter wore an old Nazi helmet.

The shelling on Sunday was a continuation of the Russians' strategy of trying to break Chechen resistance and clear the way for the infantry. There were several unexplained lulls in the artillery attacks in the afternoon.

There appeared to be fewer rebels in Grozny, but many were sheltering in bunkers. Most fighters said they were determined to hold on, although many appeared tired and somber after days of fighting.

"We'll kill all of these vipers," said the fighter Hasan.

Moscow sent tens of thousands of troops into Chechnya on Dec. 11 to reassert its control over the mostly Muslim republic of 1.2 million in the Caucasus Mountains. The ground assault on Grozny began New Year's Eve.

The fall of Grozny would allow Russia to install a provisional government in Chechnya, but would not give it firm control over the southern republic. Chechen militants have vowed to continue the fighting from the mountains, where many are now based.

Thousands of people are believed to have been killed in the war, although casualty estimates vary wildly.

A fourth journalist was killed in Grozny.

officials.

The group walked from the park, winding their way down Indiana Avenue, Carver and Lee streets, to St. Paul's C.M.E. Methodist Church, 409 S. Lee St. Many in the procession waved flags as the group sang "We Shall Overcome."

"This march is very important because it lets people know that we are still part of a struggle," said Robbyne Hocker-Fuller. "We have come a long way, but we still have a long way to go. Every day, it seems there are things that happen that set us backward.

We want to remember Dr. King and all the leaders we have had," she continued. "That includes the people who are leaders today."

Jashe Fuller, 9, one of several children who marched at the front of the parade, said it was important for young people to remember King.

"He was important and we should remember him," she said. "And, the parade is fun."

The celebration at the church included gospel songs and a reading of a portion of King's famous "I Have a Dream Speech," from Aug. 28, 1963.

The event also included the awarding of the chamber's Community Service Award, which was given to Bertha M. Starks. Ms. Starks, a retired history teacher, was one of the residents responsible for establishing Christmas in April in Midland.

"She was one of the best history teachers I ever had," said Mrs. Fuller. "She really made history come alive."

The celebration also was used as a fund-raiser for the chamber's annual scholarships for high school seniors — one student at each high school.

GUARD: Ex-juror describes sequestered life

(From 1A)

"We each had our own suite," recalls the 56-year-old Rasmussen. But they had no telephones, radios or televisions. They were allowed no private conversations or private visits with anyone, especially spouses.

"We were allowed one phone call each night, after dinner," Rasmussen says. A marshal listened to every word, after advising the line would be cut if anyone mentioned the trial.

Jurors could be alone only in their rooms.

"A marshal was always watching," Rasmussen said. Newspapers were delivered with big holes where trial stories had appeared. A communal hotel day room was outfitted with a television and VCR so jurors could watch court-approved movies and programs, but a marshal controlled the remote.

One movie they watched was "Groundhog Day," in which a man lives the same day over and over. "It's kind of an appropriate movie, if you think about it," Rasmussen said.

Each morning at 6:20, a marshal awakened jurors by pounding on suite doors.

Family visits were allowed on weekends. Rasmussen's wife visited regularly; his grown son lived out of state.

"We were taken downstairs to a conference room, and then they brought my wife in. A marshal would sit in the corner," Rasmussen said, chuckling.

After a couple of weeks, he forgot the marshal was there. Without embarrassment, he told his wife he loved her and he missed her. The marshal, he said, "became like a piece of the wall."

Every effort was made to entertain and comfort jurors, within the parameters of good taste and judicial rules. But after a couple jurors got a little too tipsy at dinner one night, panelists were limited to two drinks per meal.

When Rasmussen's lunches kept arriving without his requested ice cream, he had a marshal mention it to U.S. District Judge John Davies. "The next day, there were three gallons of ice cream sitting there with spoons."

An avid angler, Rasmussen also complained he really missed fishing. A boat was chartered, and jurors spent a weekend day off Newport Beach.

"The marshals really liked it," he said, "because it kept us really isolated."

There also were picnics in Griffith Park and a trip to Universal Studios, all at taxpayers' expense. (Prosecutors estimate a sequestered jury costs $191 daily per panelist).

At Universal, jurors learned they were being watched even more closely than they thought.

A friend recognized one of the panelists and approached. "This guy walked up, and before he could even say anything, two marshals that we'd never seen before stepped between them," Rasmussen said.

When eating out, jurors had to raise a hand if they needed to use the restrooms. That allowed a marshal to check the stalls to ensure nobody else was present and no newspapers had been left behind.

The jurors reached verdicts after about a week of deliberations.

It was a Friday afternoon, and although they desperately wanted to go home, they also wanted to look dignified announcing their decisions. "Some of us were wearing sweats," Rasmussen said.

So they endured one more night of sequestration.

The kids were just out of their minds with excitement," she said. "They were so excited that this would be going to George Bush."

Ms. Hullender said her class signed a note attached to the back of the plywood.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Winners from recent UIL Math/Science Practice Meet

The West Texas Frontier Council of Teachers of Mathematics held a UIL Math/Science Practice Meet Saturday at Lee High School.

Approximately 3000 students, grades five through 12, participated in the meet. Students came from the entire West Texas area representing 30 high schools, 21 junior high schools, and 15 elementary schools. Over $3000 in scholarships were awarded to the eight top ranking seniors.

Events at the meet included number sense, calculator, mathematics, science, and computer science.

Huge crowd attends pontiff's final Mass in Philippines on Asian tour

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Pope John Paul II drew his largest crowd ever on Sunday for a final Mass in the Philippines, underscoring his view that the church's future lies in Asia.

He left today for Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea — the second stop on his four-nation, 11-day pilgrimage through Asia.

In his farewell remarks in Manila, the pope said, "Christ is working ... for a new springtime of Christianity in this continent."

On Sunday, for the first time in four decades, members of China's state-sponsored church joined a pope in prayer.

Vatican officials estimated the crowd at Sunday's Mass was between 2 million and 5 million, but its sheer size defied any accurate measure. People filled the huge Rizal Park, where the Mass was held, and spread for miles along wide boulevards.

The crowd clearly was larger than the 2 million people who attended the pope's final Mass in Krakow, his Polish hometown, in 1979 during his first visit to his homeland as pope.

After the Mass, the pope told Asian bishops that the Roman Catholic Church's future lies in Asia, home of two-thirds of the world's people but where only 3 percent are Christian.

'Just as in the first millennium, the cross was planted on the soil of Europe, and in the second, on that of the Americas and Africa, we can pray that in the third Christian millennium, a great harvest of faith will be reaped in this vast and vital continent.'

— Pope John Paul II

"Just as in the first millennium, the cross was planted on the soil of Europe, and in the second, on that of the Americas and Africa, we can pray that in the third Christian millennium, a great harvest of faith will be reaped in this vast and vital continent," the pope said.

The Philippines is Asia's only predominantly Christian country, and about 85 percent of the 66 million Filipinos profess Catholicism.

"If Filipinos in the millions go 'ga-ga' over movie stars and beauty queens, there can be no limits to the hysteria and frenzy a pope can generate," commentator Nelson Navarro wrote today in The Manila Standard newspaper. "Only in the Philippines and five or six other minor countries does the Vatican have such a strangehold on social policy."

Despite the enthusiasm for the pontiff here, the Vatican faces obstacles to spreading the faith to Asia's teeming millions.

U.S. airlines operating in the Pacific were alerted to a bomb threat from Muslim extremists, who U.S. and Philippine authorities said were planning to attack an American aircraft to protest the pope's Asian tour.

The Mass, which took place on the church's 10th World Youth Day, marked the first time that delegates from China, including the state-sponsored Patriotic Association, had joined with the pope in prayer. China refuses to allow Catholics to accept papal supremacy.

Collapse threatens fragile Bosnian truce

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — With a new escalation of fighting in northwest Bosnia, a U.N.-brokered truce seemed dangerously close to collapse Sunday without clearing the first of many hurdles.

Bosnian Serbs, clearly defying the terms of the accord, halted the movement of U.N. military convoys through much of their territory, while refusing to open a road out of Sarajevo.

A shell that may have been fired from Serbs in neighboring Croatia killed a 19-year-old girl Sunday morning at a school in Bihac, in the northwest. Another shell killed a 15-year-old girl and wounded her mother. Government radio said a total of 11 people were wounded when dozens of shells hit.

The shelling, plus a mortar attack on a bridge in downtown Bihac that killed five people Saturday, may have been a response to an attempt by government troops to push out of the encircled town, said Col. Gary Coward, a U.N. military spokesman in Sarajevo.

Bosnian government troops on Saturday seized Klokot, a village two miles northwest of Bihac and about a mile east of the Croatian border, and continued their offensive Sunday, advancing almost four miles to the west of Bihac, Coward said. They now control a vital water treatment plant.

"To fire on civilians in the very crowded town of Bihac, where 60,000 people live, is nothing less than murder," said Paul Risley, another U.N. spokesman.

A local cease-fire was reached around nightfall. But "we'll see overnight how effective it was," Coward said.

The bloodshed in Bihac put new strains on a Bosnia-wide cease-fire that started on Dec. 24 and on the overall four-month cessation of hostilities agreement signed Dec. 31 by Bosnian Serbs, the Muslim-led government and Bosnian Croats.

PUC proposal is overregulation

A proposal now before the Texas Public Utilities Commission in Austin that, if enacted, would require utility companies in Midland, Ector and 35 other Texas counties to provide Spanish translations of their bills and notices for customers who request them would be one more counterproductive regulation on utilities and should not be approved.

The proposal reportedly will call for further steps in bilingualism in other areas of utility operation and some companies have voiced early opposition on the basis that the increased costs can only be passed on to all consumers.

Under the proposal that would affect the 37 counties in Texas where exclusively Spanish-speaking people number 2,000 or more, based on population figures from the 1990 U.S. Census, utility companies would be required to provide Spanish translations for the bills and notices if customers seek them. PUC Chairman Robert Gee noted, "This rule is an effort to ensure that citizens of Texas can make better choices as consumers — that's what drives a free-market economy."

While we are aware of the need in some areas of Texas for utility companies to provide Spanish language translations for their Hispanic consumers, the proper way for such a service to be provided is for the customers of that utility company to request the special feature and the company to respond in the interest of adequately serving the needs of those consumers.

There is no question that the Hispanic population in Texas is increasing or that utility companies should strongly consider implementing special services for that segment of their customers in an effort to better serve them. But the question here is whether a government mandate for such a service should be enacted and we think it should not. That is how government overregulates the marketplace, thus increasing the cost of goods and services for ALL customers, not merely those who such a special service is designed to benefit.

In fact, George Tryfiates, executive director of English First, noted the group is opposing enactment of the rule. He said, "Spanish-speaking services do not help anyone actually learn English. . .Americans, no matter where we're originally from, did not come to this country so the PUC could babysit us. The PUC's attitude is a slap in the face for hard-working immigrants who are learning English."

Even with that noted, however, we're opposed to the ruling because it is overregulation of the marketplace, which will push up the cost of utility service to all consumers. That is unfair and unnecessary.

The rule also potentially is not needed. TU Electric's Midland District Manager, LuAnn Morgan, noted recently that other than bills, all other information on the company's notices already is printed in both English and Spanish. That's as it should be, if a utility company is truly attempting to serve all its customers, but paying government bureaucrats to make companies take those steps that they should take anyway to serve customers is definitely overregulation.

ANOTHER VIEW

Commission's rules won't test Congress

The United States is enjoying peaceful labor-management relations. Yet serious problems persist. Outdated laws prevent workers from joining labor-management teams to discuss ways to improve productivity and quality. Employers flout workers' right to organize unions free of retaliation. A third of all non-union workers want to join unions, but are thwarted by the majority of workers who do not.

A presidential commission headed by John Dunlop, a former labor secretary, proposed constructive solutions this week (Jan. 12). They would largely exempt labor-management teams from prohibitions on "company unions." The idea is to give managers and many workers what they say they want: something in between no representation and full-fledged, often confrontational unions.

The commission also proposed that workers who want to form a union be guaranteed swift elections; currently, owners can hold up elections pending endless legal challenges. The commission proposes using binding arbitration if owners and a new union cannot negotiate their first contract.

Surveys reveal, surprisingly, that most workers prefer workplace groups that have little power but which managers embrace to groups that wield power but which managers oppose. Workers believe that managers have become too powerful to defeat and that international competition makes cooperation essential. The commission accommodates these desires to cooperate.

The commission will be criticized, with justification, for timidity. It did not recommend such pro-management steps as permitting companies to require workers to submit grievances to arbitration. Nor did it urge such pro-labor steps as eliminating the ban on company unions or prohibiting companies from hiring permanent replacements during a strike. But the commission put forth useful proposals that go as far as the new Republican-controlled Congress is likely to roam.

Battle over U.S. troops in Golan looms

WASHINGTON — Democrats and Republicans aren't the only parties that will be slugging it out on Capitol Hill in 1995. As a sideshow to the partisan fireworks, Israel's Likud and Labor parties will by vying for congressional hearts as the Middle East peace process reaches another critical juncture.

Anderson

Officials close to the peace talks fear that a public relations campaign by conservative Israelis may prompt Congress to unwittingly throw a wrench into the delicate negotiations.

Specifically, some members of Congress who style themselves as "pro-Israel" are openly questioning an anticipated call for American troops to monitor the Golan Heights if Israel and Syria make peace. Some Israel observers believe this loose coalition of lawmakers is taking its cue from a lobbying campaign being waged by former officials of Israel's conservative Likud party. While individual members of Congress have their own reasons for questioning aid to the Middle East, Likud's agenda is quite clear: No concessions of any kind, especially land, to Israel's Arab neighbors.

Although no lawmaker will publicly oppose peace in the Middle East, sources in Washington who support Israeli President Yitzhak Rabin believe peace could be undermined in several ways. Some in Congress, for example, want to slap additional conditions and tighter monitoring on American aid to Yasser Arafat when Palestinian aid comes up for reauthorization in June. Others, like Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., are hostile to foreign aid in general, though aid to Israel will likely be off the table. But the loudest outcry in Congress — and the most serious threat to the peace process — will come from the prospect of sending American troops to the Golan.

"Many in Israel who oppose the peace process and oppose. . . any degree of compromise on the Golan Heights have the ears of some members of Congress," says Jason Isaacson, director of government and international affairs for the American Jewish Committee. "And they do not hesitate to become involved in the political process in the United States."

Supporters of Rabin and the Clinton administration fear that any pre-emptive actions by Congress could severely delay, or even kill the chances for an accord.

So far, the battle has been fought in the court of public opinion, as Israel's supporters from both ends of the political spectrum vie for Congressional attention. One lawmaker who has heard the call is Rep. Jim Saxton, R-N.J., who raised eyebrows last fall when he sponsored a forum to discuss the use of American troops in the Golan. Although people from both sides of the issue were invited, most of the actual participants were opposed to the introduction of U.S. troops. Yet Saxton maintains he is keeping an open mind.

"The interesting thing is that the Israeli leadership and the PLO leadership. . . are generally on the same wavelength," the envoy continued. "The odd people out are Congress. Not the (U.S.) State Department." Yet it is Congress that must provide the funds that Arab countries seek as a fringe benefit of peace.

CHARLEY REESE

Constitution doesn't OK president's spending

How do you feel about obligating $9 billion of your money to bail out the corrupt and incompetent government of Mexico?

Reese

It is your money, you know. In these days of Rome on the Potomac, politicians act as if the government had its own money and could do what it pleases. But the government has no money of its own. Every dollar it spends or obligates comes out of the sweat of the American people in the form of taxes.

So, when the Clinton administration decided to extend a $9 billion line of credit to the government of Mexico to help it prop up its currency, the peso, it acted in a highhanded, arrogant manner.

Where in the Constitution is the president authorized to spend the public's money without so much as a by-your leave? No where. Only Congress may authorize spending and appropriate the public's money, and so far as I know Clinton got no such specific authorization.

Forget for the moment whether you think propping up the peso is economically proper or not. My point is that the government should not have agreed to do this without getting specific authorization from the people through their elected representatives.

In fact, of course, the U.S. government is really, once again, bailing out Wall Street and rich investors. Again, from where does it get the authority to do that? It's not even moral. Plenty of ordinary Americans lose their shirts over bad investments year in and year out, and the U.S. Treasury Department does not bail them out, make good their losses or extend them a line of credit.

Furthermore, the Mexican government deliberately devalued its own currency and has known all along that its value was artificially inflated. The effect of a 30 percent devaluation of the peso is the same as putting a 30 percent import tax on American products. In other words, to heck with NAFTA; Mexico is erecting an economic barrier against American imports.

We truly need to get our government back under control. Too often, as in this case, it acts without authorization and does what it darn well pleases.

Under our Constitution, not one penny may be authorized or spent without majority votes by both Houses of Congress. Under our Constitution, no American soldier should be sent to war without an express vote by majorities in both Houses. Yet, the executive branch has grown accustomed to committing U.S. troops hither and yon under the guise of peace-keeping or enforcing United Nations resolutions.

I would hope we can build a consensus among Americans to put a stop to this practice. No American soldier should ever risk his life for any reason except in the defense of his own country. For an American to die in Panama or Somalia or Haiti or anywhere else just on the whim of a president is a monstrous violation of the spirit of the Constitution.

This wisdom, easily found in the words of most of our forefathers, is as old as mankind.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

MIKE ROYKO

It's snap to host talk show, solve America's problems

A right-wing talk show host was on TV the other day defending the journalistic standards of shows such as his.

Royko

He denied that bizarre and untrue statements are frequently spewed on the airwaves and said his show and others are just as factual as newspapers and other traditional news outlets.

There is no difference, he indicated, between trained reporters double-checking facts and some anonymous person calling a radio show and blurting an opinion.

If he's right, then I've found an easy way to get my column done. All I have to do is follow a typical talk-show format.

We'll start with Joe from Cicero. How you doin' Joe?

"I'm doin' great. How you doin'?"

I'm doin' great too.

"That's great that we're both doin' great."

Great. What's on your mind, Joe?

"Well, I just wanna say that there ain't one lousy politician in the whole country who ain't a dirty lying no-good low-down rotten rat, and nothin's gonna get any better until we throw out every one of them. So tell me, when's that gonna happen, huh?"

I don't know, Joe, I suppose when people vote them all out of office.

"Wha, you mean we can't get rid of them without an election? We got to vote on it?"

I think that's the way it works, Joe.

"See how hard they make it for us. I told you they was all rats."

You may have a point, Joe, and now Lou from Glenview. What's on your mind today, Lou?

"I think I have a solution for the problem of all these teen-age girls having babies and going on welfare."

We can sure use a solution, Lou. So tell us about it.

"The president should go on TV and declare a national slogan: 'Just Cross Your Legs.' There should be public service announcements on TV and bumper stickers and T-shirts and billboards saying, 'Just Cross Your Legs.' In all the churches, ministers could make 'Just Cross Your Legs' the message in their Sunday sermons."

Hey, that's some idea, Lou from Glenview.

"Yes, and so young girls would remember it, every day at school they could recite a pledge of crossed legs just like the Pledge of Allegiance. I've written one. It goes like this: 'Just cross your legs, just cross your legs, there can't be any chickens without the eggs.'"

Hey, you may have something there, Lou. Now Bill from Sunny Hill. What's up, Bill?

"Yeah, it really bugs me about all those Mexican aliens sneaking across the border. The way I see it, the trouble is that when we catch 'em and kick 'em out, they just sneak back in again."

Yes, they are pesky that way. So what should we do?

"We should shoot 'em. Then they won't sneak back in again, especially if they're dead."

Ah, so you want the border patrol to just open fire? Interesting thought.

"Not just the border patrol. The rest of us, too. I'm a sportsman and I'd like a chance to hunt some aliens, and I'm sure there's a lot of guys like me. Naturally, we'd have to get hunting licenses and that would bring money in to the government. And there wouldn't be any limit or season, not until we start running short of aliens. This could be a heckuva an industry, with alien hunting clubs, guides, a safari kind of deal. What do you think?"

Well, that's an original idea, Bill. But what if they're just winged or nicked. Wouldn't that put a burden on the hospitals?

"I told you, I'm a sportsman. If you wing something, you got to put it out of its misery."

Good thought, Bill. Of course, there could be a few legal problems there, and maybe some lawyer will call in and talk about that. But now we have Jane from Sunny Lane. What's going on, Jane?

"I'm very upset by that sexist caller who talked about a Just Cross Your Legs campaign for young girls. What about the men? Remember, it takes two to tango. So something should be done about the men, too."

Good idea, Jane. Should they cross their legs? If everybody had their legs crossed, they couldn't even walk, much less tango.

"No, I think that what should be done with young men is this: If they go around having children and don't support them, then their things should be cut off. You cut off a young man's thing and, believe you me, he won't do it again."

Makes sense to me, Jane. But there might be a few legal difficulties on this, too.

"Then we should cut off the lawyers' heads."

That's a thought, Jane, and a lot of people would agree with you, but some people might disagree, such as the wives of the lawyers.

"Then we should cut out their tongues."

Maybe so, but we're out of time and my engineer is waving at me.

"We should cut off his hands."

We'll be back tomorrow, so have a good day and keep smiling.

"Not if we cut off all their lips."

King heirs control message through markets

ATLANTA (AP) — With plans for an interactive museum and journeys to Graceland for marketing tips, the heirs of Martin Luther King Jr. appear eager to step up the selling of his memory.

Marketing experts and those who have had contact with the King family say the moves are driven by a desire to control how King's message is disseminated as well as by profit.

And they caution that marketing the image of one so revered carries many pitfalls and requires a great deal of delicacy.

"There are so many millions of people that respected Martin Luther King that would want some memento of what he stood for," said Kenneth L. Bernhardt, marketing department chairman at Georgia State University.

"The danger is in trivializing the person and his accomplishments," he said.

King, a Baptist minister who helped lead a national fight for blacks' civil rights in the 1960s, was assassinated April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn. He would have been 66 on Sunday. The national holiday commemorating King's birth was celebrated for the first time Jan. 20, 1986.

While the nation observes his birthday today, the Kings are moving on several fronts.

The estate recently gave the job of handling licensing requests to Atlanta-based Intellectual Properties Management.

Dexter King, King's youngest son and head of the King Center in Atlanta, has met twice with the caretakers of Elvis Presley's image. And the family has been in a well-publicized battle with the National Park Service over rival plans for a tourist attraction in Atlanta, King's hometown.

The Wall Street Journal reported last week that King has discussed a possible motion picture, video projects and merchandising of other products with Turner Broadcasting System Inc. and Time Warner Inc. The companies would not confirm the talks.

GOP governors take credit for Washington's 'revolution'

By John King
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Posing as models for the Republican Congress to follow, GOP governors are opening their new terms calling for tax cuts, smaller government, dramatic welfare reforms — and for Washington to get out of their way.

As they push their legislatures to adopt their agenda, many of the Republican governors are also competing for credit — bragging that they aren't following the revolution in Washington, but that they started it.

"We are serving as a beacon for the rest of the nation," Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson said the third inaugural address of his career earlier this month.

"New ideas to Washington, D.C., seem to be old ideas to the state of Mississippi," GOP Gov. Kirk Fordice said in his state of the state address last week.

"Today, Michigan's renaissance is America's hope," Gov. John Engler proclaimed in his second inaugural address.

Yet the Republican governors seem to be a booming echo of their congressional colleagues as they demand that Washington cut taxes, shrink the size and reach of government, and adopt welfare reforms that require and reward work.

"It makes what we are saying in Washington all the more believable because these governors are proving these ideas work," said Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour.

The speeches by Republican governors over the past two weeks also offer a glimpse at the issues likely to dominate state legislatures this year: tax cuts and giving local communities more say in school programs to a host of efforts to crack down on juvenile crime through tougher sentences, new anti-gang laws and making it easier to try youths accused of violent crimes as adults.

Some state laws go beyond Brady

Associated Press

Kentuckians can sell their personal handguns to a perfect stranger with nary a thought. Chances are, it won't come back to haunt them.

But in Connecticut, it's let the seller beware. If someone sells a gun there without checking on a buyer who wasn't supposed to have one, the seller could earn five years behind bars.

"So the penalty is on the seller not on the buyer, so that's how it becomes enforceable," said Connecticut state Rep. Michael Lawlor, D-East Haven, who sponsored the measure. "I think it's pretty much foolproof."

Connecticut is among 19 states with some form of legislation that goes beyond the Brady Law and regulates secondary handgun sales between individuals, according to Handgun Control Inc. of Washington, D.C.

In California, for instance, secondary handgun sales must be conducted through a licensed gun dealer, with records of the transaction kept on file. Hawaii enacted legislation last year requiring a new permit application each time someone purchases any handgun, and applicants sign waivers giving police access to any mental health records.

Connecticut's new law puts the careless or callous gun seller in the same boat with the gang members the measure seeks to disarm.

That state's legislation, passed in July, requires anyone buying a handgun to get an eligibility certificate, said Lt. George Constantine, head of Special Licensing and Firearms unit of the Connecticut State Police.

DEAR ABBY

'Cold day in hell' wedding blizzard beats reader's story of ruined cruise

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You asked if anyone could top the ruined cruise wedding. Well, I can. I was married on March 13 in Albany, N.Y., during the blizzard of '93. Twenty-seven inches of snow fell and the wind chill was 60 below zero.

Van Buren

I cried for two hours that morning as the phone kept ringing. Relatives and friends were calling to say they were snowed in and wouldn't be there.

My soon-to-be husband called and fought with my mother. Somebody hung up on somebody — I still don't know the whole story. By the time the photographer arrived, I had regained my composure, until he told me his windshield wipers were frozen solid and he had to leave immediately to pick up another car.

Just then, I happened to glance out the window to see two limos drive by the house without stopping. The husband of one of my bridesmaids ran out in the blizzard and flagged them down. I wore snow boots under my wedding gown.

When we arrived at the church, the parking lot was scattered with 4x4's, and only half of our guests had made it.

After the ceremony, the photographer was taking pictures when one of the limo drivers ran into the church and yelled, "We have to leave now!" Apparently one of the limos was completely frozen, and visibility on the roads was near zero, so our wedding party of six piled into the one remaining limo and began a frightening ride to our reception.

We arrived to find 60 of the 120 expected guests. We called a halt to our reception after a few of the relatives became hysterical worrying about how they were going to get home, since all the roads were closed. I put my boots back on, and my husband and I pushed our guests' cars out of snowdrifts.

My husband and I finally arrived at my parents' home to get our luggage and head for the honeymoon suite of a local hotel. When we turned on the TV, we learned that the hotel was on fire and being evacuated!

All roads out of town were closed, so we had no choice but to spend our wedding night at my parents' home. We were unexpected and there weren't enough beds, so we spent our wedding night on the floor in sleeping bags!

We had planned to travel to a ski resort the next day, but the roads were still closed, so we spent our honeymoon at my parents' house, shoveling snow and scraping ice. True to his word, my husband had said, "It will be a cold day in hell when I get married!"

Well, it was. — LISA PALLOZZI, BASKING RIDGE, N.J.

DEAR READERS: Today we pay tribute to a great American, Martin Luther King Jr., whose words of wisdom are even more meaningful today than they were 27 years ago, when he said:

"One day, somebody should remind us that, even though there may be political and ideological differences between us, the Vietnamese are our brothers, the Russians are our brothers, the Chinese are our brothers; and one day, we've got to sit down together at the table of brotherhood."

God bless America, and may we Americans, by our conduct, be worthy of God's blessings.

LEGAL HELP FOR CEREBRAL PALSY VICTIMS

Many parents wonder if medical negligence caused their child's cerebral palsy. The majority of cerebral palsy is not caused by medical negligence, but medical and nursing mistakes around the time of birth do cause cerebral palsy. We can help with the answers to your questions and if there is medical negligence we may be able to obtain a settlement or verdict for you or your child.*

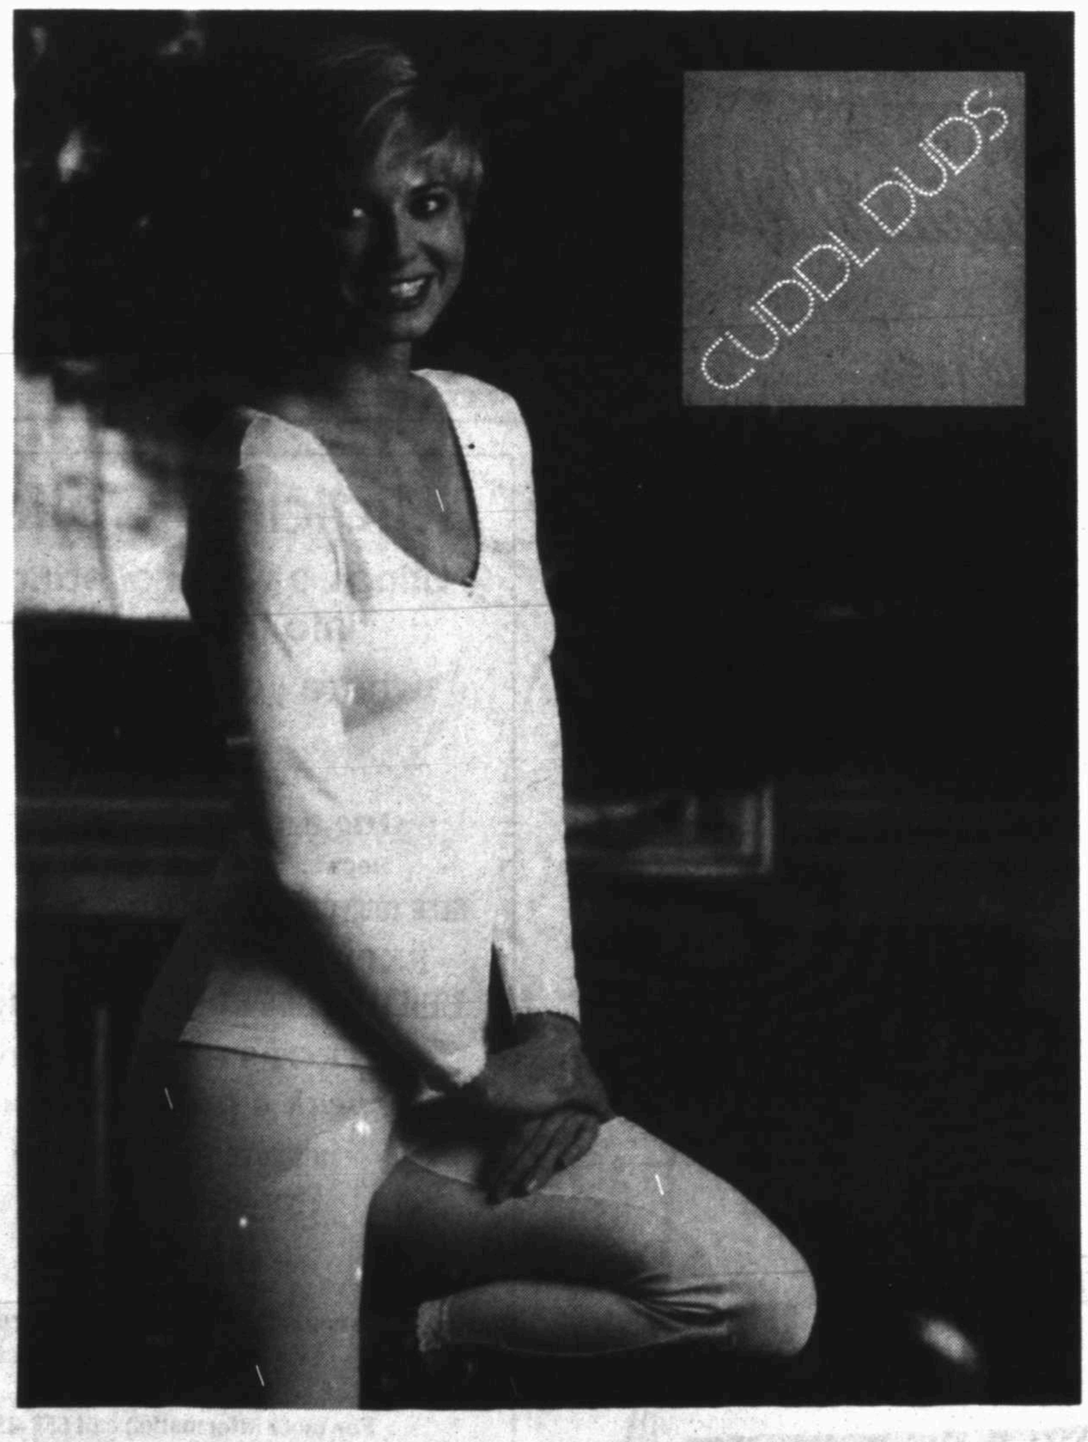

Some of the many factors we consider are:
1. Did your baby have seizures or "jitteriness" within 48 hours after birth;
2. Did your baby get enough oxygen during labor, delivery and in the nursery;
3. Was your baby taken to the intensive care nursery;
4. Was there fetal distress detected by the electronic fetal monitor or stethoscope;
5. Was your baby born depressed, very blue, floppy or in need of resuscitation;
6. Was there a delay in performing an emergency C-Section;
7. Were there umbilical cord problems, including knots, wrapped around neck, etc.;
8. Were there placental problems such as abruption or insufficiency;
9. Was there an extremely traumatic delivery, difficult forceps, vacuum extraction, baby bruises, etc.;
10. Did your baby have low blood sugar,

MONEY WATCH

Be honest, now ...

What would you do if you found some cash left at an automated teller machine? The Cirrus ATM network put that question to a group of men and women recently. Thirty-three percent of the men said they'd take the money and run, compared with 22 percent of the women. Twenty-eight percent of the women would try to find out who lost it, vs. 23 percent of the men. While gender was a significant factor in determining response, so was the person's age and the region in which they live. The survey said respondents 55 and older and those from the South were less inclined to take the cash, while Easterners under age 35 were more likely to keep it.

Piggy bank videos

American kids spend more than $6 billion a year on toys, clothes and other goodies, but they have only a limited understanding of money and how it works. So contends a group of marketers for the financial services industry. The group, in coordination with the American Bankers Association and the National Council on Economic Education, has come out with the educational video "Piggy Banks to Money Markets" for children and their parents. It's available through certain banks, insurance companies and other financial services companies.

Disability hurts

When workers are laid up, their employers sometimes feel a pinch in their pocketbooks. The average cost of disability per employee, which includes worker compensation payments or disability insurance, was $3,372 in 1992, up from $2,427 in 1989, according to a study by the insurer UNUM Corp. These costs typically account for 5 percent of total payroll, it says. To get a better handle on employee absences, more companies are starting disability management programs. "Once it is known where and why absences for accident and illness occur, the related costs can be managed more effectively," says Patricia M. Owens, a UNUM vice president.

Company time

More workers are learning about personal finances through employee-sponsored programs. A recent survey by William M. Mercer Inc., an employee benefits consultant, found 84 percent of the 88 large U.S. corporations it polled had investment education programs in place. Sixty-four percent had retirement planning programs and 54 percent sponsored financial planning programs. About half the programs went into effect after 1992.

Frugal customers to be catered to in '95

■ Retail chains continue targeting those who are watchful of their dollars.

By Vivian Marino
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Attention shoppers: This year's big January white sale is also being held in April, June and October. And a few months in between.

Specials on tools and yard equipment can be found throughout the year, not just around Father's Day.

There's no longer room for strict tradition in the retail industry. Fierce competition and changing demographics have forced stores to hold down prices year-round rather than on certain dates, as they did in the past.

It's a bit of Americana lost, perhaps, but a pleasant gain for today's frugal consumer and a trend likely to continue through 1995 and beyond.

"I remember when I was younger, my mother giving me advice to buy all my household stuff during the white sale," said Sandra Shaber, an economist at Wefa Group, an economic forecasting concern. "People would go out and buy bedspreads and sheets every January — even if they didn't need them — because they were on sale.

"Now ... it's a continuous white sale. That goes for most other merchandise."

Special promotions and clearance sales have been around for decades, but the frequency at which we're seeing them now started in the late 1980s, when the recession began to hit. When consumers began to pare back their spending, stores were saddled with merchandise they couldn't sell.

Stores began to mark down heavily, and consumers figured out they could buy the goods they wanted at better prices if they waited a while. They could even force prices to drop, simply by not buying.

Moreover, the rapid expansion of the retail business in the '80s meant there were many more stores competing for the same customers. The store with the lower prices usually won.

Today's two-income families have grown accustomed to buying marked-down merchandise, yet they don't have time to wait for periodic sales. Often there's no need to.

Popular discounters like Wal-Mart and Kmart, specialty shops like Bed, Bath & Beyond, and home-shopping television networks are drawing more middle-income shoppers.

"As long as the quality is there, there's no longer a stigma attached to shopping at a lower-priced discounter," said Karen Sack, a retail analyst for Standard & Poor's Corp.

"In the '90s, you're probably seeing more everyday lower prices."

To be sure, giant retailers like Sears and J.C. Penney acknowledge they're holding more sales today than they did 10 years ago.

"We have about a dozen significant and unique sales events every year," said Jan Drummond, a Sears, Roebuck and Co. spokeswoman. "We've always been a promotional retailer. But what we've been seeing is a lot more promotional events from other retailers. We believe the trend is having more sales."

It's uncertain if computer stock will remain high

By Antyony Ramirez
N.Y. Times News Service

Computer stocks soared to dazzling heights in 1994 while the market drifted. Whether they will stay aloft this year depends on several variables, most notably consumer demand.

"The big story is that the personal computer industry, after a very good 1993, raged on in 1994," said Drew D. Peck, a Cowen & Co. analyst.

After a 15 percent gain in 1993, the American Stock Exchange's computer technology index gained 22.6 percent last year. That performance really shines when compared with the weak 2.1 percent gain in the Dow Jones industrial average and the 1.5 percent loss for the Standard & Poor's 500 index. Most other indexes also turned in declines for the year.

The computer technology index, compiled for options trading, consists of 26 stocks, including well-known names like IBM and Intel, and some lesser-knowns like Computer Sciences. Only five of its stocks, including Unisys and Cray Research, lost ground last year.

Why were computer stocks such winners? One word says it all: consumers. Last year was the first time that the computer industry had depended so much on the consumer for profits. Buying surged at Christmas for CD-ROM software and machines equipped to handle such popular products. By comparison, businesses were tightfisted.

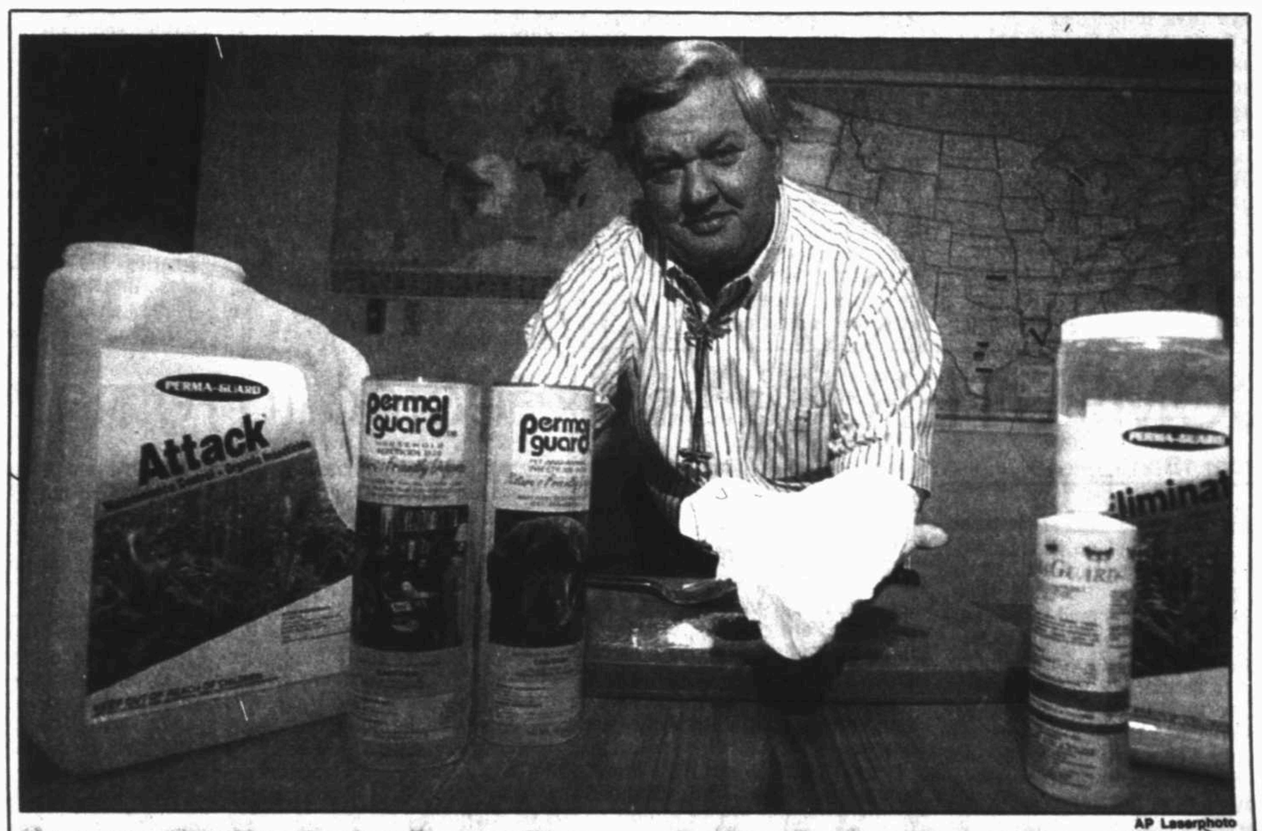

"Without the consumer, the computer business would have been an unmitigated disaster," Peck said. Consumer purchases of computer hardware rose 40 percent last year, compared with a 5 percent increase in business demand, he said. Computer companies can make as much initially from an individual consumer as from a business customer. Both are likely to spend about $2,000 for a computer, Peck said.

Software is another matter. Each new machine bought for a business will lead to $2,000 or more in software purchases in the first year, while consumers on average spend less than $500 for such items as CD-ROM encyclopedias and video games. So demand for software may taper off this year even if consumers continue to buy computers.

"Every analyst is going to watch the March quarter very nervously," Peck said, for any sign of flagging consumer interest.

In the opening days of this year, com-

Insecticides pay off for one Texas company

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — John Brannen is a colorful guy who wears turquoise jewelry, munches on antelope jerky and snatches up a good business deal as fast as you can say "bug."

After dealing in construction machinery for years, Brannen stumbled into insecticides at a livestock show.

Now Brannen says he's riding a financial tidal wave with Organic Solutions, his San Antonio company that he claims offers the right organic insecticide at the right time for the growing organic industry.

"This is so super," Brannen said. "We're having a ball, if you want to know the truth."

Organic Solutions went public last month and is being traded on the NASDAQ electronic bulletin board. The company is projected to have sales of $24 million to $30 million in fiscal 1995, Brannen said.

Organic Solutions manufactures and distributes Perma-Guard, an insecticide consisting mostly of diatomaceous earth, or DE. The natural material is a plankton fossil that kills insects by grating against their protective outer coating and robbing them of moisture.

Perma-Guard also contains insect-killing pyrethrum, from the chrysanthemum flower, and sassafras.

Perma-Guard is sold as a crawling insect killer, a general household insecticide, a fire ant killer and flea, tick and lice

Analysts suggest 'convertible' compromise

By Chet Currier
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — If investors can't find much to choose from in either stocks or bonds these days, they can look at something in between — convertible securities.

Convertibles are a hybrid species, which can take the form of a bond or preferred stock, that is designed to blend the best features of debt (bond) and ownership (stock) securities.

They pay interest or dividends at what is most often a higher rate than the dividend yield of the issuing company's common stock. At the same time, they can be exchanged for shares of that common stock, and thus carry an opportunity to participate in the growth of the issuer's business.

"With convertible securities, you have solid current yields, so you're getting paid to wait, and you have excellent equity participation on the upside," says John Calamos, president of Calamos Asset Management, a Naperville, Ill. firm that specializes in convertibles.

While all that may be true, however, analysts say it would be a mistake to assume that convertibles represent only the

SMART MONEY

By Mary Rowland
N.Y. Times News Service

Social security checks

Q: I am a school psychologist working for the New York City Board of Education. I have been receiving Social Security checks since my 70th birthday on Oct. 15, 1993. Although F.I.C.A. taxes of $2,600 have been deducted from my salary this year, my Social Security checks have remained the same. There is no reflection of my continued contributions. Why is that?
— Wallace Schneider, Manhattan

A: As long as you continue working, you must pay Social Security tax on your earnings. Whether the additional tax increases the amount of your benefits, though, depends on how much you earn. Benefits are based on your best working years, or the years in which you earned the most money, according to Dale Detlefs, a Social Security consultant in Louisville, Ky.

For those born after 1928, the 35 best years are used to calculate benefits. Because you were born in 1923, the best 29 years are considered. If your current earnings are not among those years, they will not affect your benefit. Furthermore, once a taxpayer reaches the maximum benefit, additional taxes will not lead to a bigger check.

"In that case it's just like so many other taxes we pay where we see no direct benefit," Detlefs said.

Telephone bonds

Q: Among the daily "key rates" listed in The New York Times business section is a puzzling listing for telephone bonds. I've checked with a number of business librarians and none can explain it. What is it?
— John Marsh, Woodside, Queens

A: Telephone bonds is a generic name for a listing that was once the AT&T bond, a bellwether for the bond market. The listing, compiled by Salomon Brothers, currently quotes the price of the USWest 7½ percent coupon bond due in 2023.

Investors are interested in the telephone sector because these bonds are less volatile than industrial-sector bonds, said Stevyn E. Schutzman, a bond research analyst at Salomon.

"These companies have very strong credit fundamentals," Schutzman said. "They do not have a need to raise capital in the debt markets. And the telephone sector is noncyclical."

Bonds and bond funds

Q: What is the major difference between corporate bonds and corporate bond funds? When prices drop, is the principal of one more secure than the other?
— Thelma Blumberg, Baltimore

A: Both investments lose value when interest rates rise. But if you buy an individual bond, you can hold it until maturity and get your principal back. A bond fund contains a number of individual issues chosen by the fund manager, who may buy and sell continually. Because the bond fund has no maturity, there is no guarantee that you will get your principal back.

positive sides of bond and stock investments.

In 1994, when both of those markets struggled, it should be no surprise that convertibles did too.

An average of 31 mutual funds that invest in convertibles, calculated by Lipper Analytical Services Inc., declined 3.79 percent last year, assuming reinvestment of dividends.

That was actually a bit worse than either the average taxable bond fund, which lost 3.28 percent, or the average stock fund, which lost 1.69 percent, according to Lipper's reckoning.

In periods when investors' enthusiasm is cooling, any security like convertibles that represents a claim on another security can be hit with a double whammy.

It can lose ground in line with the underlying security, and fall further as the amount of "premium" that investors are willing to pay for the convertible's attractions diminishes.

Of course, that shrinkage tends to make convertibles potentially more attractive to new buyers. In general, the ideal time to buy any security is when it is least popular.

But getting the timing just right is a tough assignment. Analysts who follow the convertible market at Salomon Bros. think it will produce another negative total return in the first half of 1995 before rebounding in the second half.

Should interest rates rise further than analysts are expecting, the pressure on convertibles could be more intense and long-lasting than that.

Choosing the right convertible can also be a demanding assignment. It requires not only studying the attractiveness of the underlying company, but also the pricing of a convertible relative to the issuer's common stock and to other convertibles of similar issuers.

For those who lack the time, skills and inclination to put in that kind of study, convertible mutual funds offer diversified portfolios chosen by a professional manager.

Over the five-year period ended Dec. 31, which encompassed a wide variety of economic climates and circumstances, Lipper's average of convertible funds chalked up a total return of 57.09 percent.

That showing outperformed most categories of bond funds, and surpassed the 55.56 percent return registered by Lipper's average of general equity funds for the same period.

That presents some longer-term evidence to support the case of bulls like Calamos.

"Convertibles offer a defensive way to participate in the equity market," he declares. "That doesn't mean you don't take a hit now and then, but the yield and prospect of capital appreciation makes them a very attractive investment."

No. 1 funds pretty good in year 2, too

By Chet Currier
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — In the changeable world of stock mutual funds, yesterday's champion can easily become today's or tomorrow's chump.

The pattern was set early in the industry's history, when the "go-go" fund managers of the 1960s metamorphosed into the "no-no" names of the early 1970s.

Of all the maxims used to warn fund investors, few are so often quoted as the time-honored disclaimer "Past performance is no guarantee of future results."

There is much to heed in all this. Nevertheless, says one experienced fund-watcher, the historical record also makes an important contrary point.

Sheldon Jacobs, publisher of the newsletter The No-Load Fund Investor in Irvington-on-Hudson, N.Y., says people who invest with hot funds can in fact be handsomely rewarded by something he calls "persistency of performance."

Jacobs draws this conclusion from the results that would have been achieved by investing each year since 1976 in the fund ranking as the No. 1 performer the previous year among diversified no-load funds.

"If you had adopted this strategy 19 years ago, you would have done more than four times as well as if you had invested in the average equity fund," he reports.

In the period he studied, no fund ever repeated as the top performer. The typical results each achieved dropped off dramatically from the average gain of 57.1 percent in the standout year.

But the funds still tallied an average year-after return of 23.2 percent, far better than the 14 percent gain recorded by the average fund. Over sustained periods of time, a compound return of 23 percent could only be counted as spectacular.

Yet the downside worked out to be pretty mild, in the setting of a long bull market for stocks. In only two years did the hypothetical investor in this strategy suffer losses — the bear-market years of 1981, when the Hartwell Leverage Fund was down 13.2 percent, and 1990, when the Twentieth Century Vista Fund was down 15.7 percent.

Jacobs's study excludes international funds and nondiversified funds such as sector and gold funds, whose portfolios tend to rise and fall with the changing moods of the marketplace.

"It is imperative that only diversified funds are considered," Jacobs writes in the January issue of his letter.

ORGANICS: Product can be used as additive

(From 1B)

products for pets.

Brannen says his product, registered with the Environmental Protection Agency and approved by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, does not harm humans or other warm-blooded animals. In fact, it can be used as an animal food additive.

Patrick Butterworth, general manager of Mother Nature Garden Center, one of the oldest organic nurseries in Dallas, said diatomaceous earth has become increasingly popular, as has organic gardening.

His store sells Perma-Guard and other DE-based products as well as plain diatomaceous earth, which Butterworth said is the cheapest way to buy the substance.

"We carry probably five (diatomaceous earth products) under different labels, and people buy them," Butterworth said. "Sales in diatomaceous earth have grown quite rapidly in the last four years."

Brannen wants to cash in on that trend with Organic Solutions.

"The timing is the key," said Organic Solutions operations vice president Victoria Rich, noting the current push by the EPA and USDA to eliminate pesticide health hazards and pressure from the World Bank internationally for cleaner pesticides.

These days Brannen, 51, finds himself hobnobbing with government officials in China and demonstrating his Perma-Guard products in New York to visiting leaders from the Ukraine.

Organic Solutions has about 1,500 distributors. Twenty-two corporate employees are based in San Antonio. About six full-time workers operate the manufacturing center in Arizona, and 30 to 40 people work there during the peak spring period.

Brannen, whose family runs a tool and machinery business in San Antonio, got interested in the insecticide industry on a hot July day in 1993 during a 4-H livestock show in Austin. Texas A&M University students were demonstrating a diatomaceous earth product.

"I watched that for a while and lights started going off — this is neat," he said. "So I bought all the products they had so they couldn't show it to anybody else."

Brannen tried to buy the company, Organic Plus, but its owners wouldn't sell. So he became a distributor.

Then, in September 1994, Brannen bought a competing company — Perma-Guard — which got its start in the early 1960s and was being run by 78-year-old Wally Tharp, an original company salesman.

Organic Solutions plans to continue manufacturing and distributing the product as Perma-Guard but may eventually manufacture it for other labels, Brannen said.

Organic Solutions is trying to set up distributorships in 15 countries, but its products primarily are sold in the United States and Mexico. Efforts to clean up Mexico's environment are helping to generate interest in low-risk insecticides in that country, Brannen said.

While he promotes the organic nature of his product, Brannen doesn't hide the fact that he's out to make money.

"I want business. I'm not here to save the world. I mean, it's great that we have a product that doesn't harm anything," he said. "But you can't afford to do all these nice things until you make a profit, and I was raised to make a profit."

Organic Solutions attracted national attention last year when it advertised for six weeks on Rush Limbaugh's radio show. The company received 120,000 calls in one day during the advertising run.

COMPUTER: Sales expected to remain relatively high

(From 1B)

puter stocks, like the broader market, have inched up. By Friday, the Amex computer index had risen 0.61 percent. But take note, technology stocks tend to rise early in the year on optimistic forecasts, only to slump in the spring and to bottom out in the summer before their cyclical winter rally.

Stephen C. Dube of Wasserstein Perella Securities said he did not expect consumer purchases of computers to fall appreciably this year. Personal computers can be found in fewer than a third of American homes, and are sure to be in the majority within a few years, he reasoned.

Should consumer interest decline, pent-up business demand after a soft year in 1994 could compensate. Foreign sales, especially in an expanding Asia and a recovering Europe, may help, too.

Among the favorite stocks of computer industry analysts are Compaq, Hewlett-Packard and Cisco Systems. And Wall Street sees big things for IBM, with 1995 profits expected to rise almost 40 percent, to $6.07 a share.

Compaq was among the industry's stars last year. After climbing more than 50 percent in 1993, its stock vaulted more than 60 percent in 1994 on an earnings surge tied to consumer sales. More than half of Compaq's revenue in the fourth quarter came from consumer products like the Presario with CD-ROM features, said Dube, who recommends the stock.

Among Compaq's detractors is William J. Milton, a computer analyst at Brown Brothers Harriman & Co. Compaq had only "a strong first five months and a so-so seven months," Milton said. The stock has simply returned to its May 1994 price of $40, he added, and can expect to do no better than the overall stock market in 1995.

Shao F. Wang, a computer analyst for Smith Barney, calls Hewlett-Packard a continuing growth story and predicts the stock, now trading at $102, will reach $120 a share within a year. "Hewlett-Packard is hitting on all cylinders," he said.

Roxane Googin, a computer technology analyst for Gruntal & Company, expects Cisco Systems to reach $45 a share in the next year, up from $34 now. Cisco, the world's largest supplier of computer networking systems, is "the universal joint of the Tower of Babel," allowing computers from different makers to talk to each other, she said.

But the real emerging areas are digital video and computerized consumer goods, said Peck. LSI Logic will become a major supplier for the next generation of digital video systems, he said.

FRUGALITY: Large retail stores acknowledge more sales held

(From 1B)

hold the traditional post-Christmas sales, Columbus Day blowouts, Father's Day specials and July summer clearances, which consumers have grown to expect. But the sales tend to be longer in duration, retail analysts say. (Some stores advertised post-holiday prices on ornaments, cards and other yuletide trappings before Christmas.)

Many stores also have created their own promotional "holidays," marking things like corporate anniversaries or semiannual inventory sales, along with early bird specials or one-day sales.

At Penney's, "there's virtually some sales promotion every week," said spokesman Hank Russman. "The thought ... is to build customer traffic, an urgency that this is the time to shop. But it isn't the situation where all the pillow cases are on sale, for example.

"There are certain items in our store that never go on sale. We sell an enormous amount of merchandise, most at regular price."

Still, industry analysts say "regular price" these days often means lower markups from the wholesale level, or the cost of the merchandise to the retailer.

"Retailers are much more willing to accept a lower initial markup," said Janet J. Mangano, a retail analyst with Burnham Securities Inc. "That often means lower profit margins."

Retailers are reluctant to discuss markup policy or sales schedules. But analysts say the current initial markup on apparel, for instance, is at least 10 percentage points lower than it was about 10 years ago. It's even lower on supermarket products, generally in low single-digit territory today, they say.

Today the average markup on apparel ranges from between 40 and 60 percent at department stores and between 30 and 40 percent at discounters, analysts say.

Unlike most other merchandise, clothing generally goes on sale about four to eight weeks after it reaches the racks to make room for new styles and seasons, which change far more rapidly than weather warrants, retail experts say.

By the end of the season, the marked-down price could approach the wholesale price, although the selection will seem skimpy and picked-through.

Part of the problem with the apparel industry is that the aging baby boomers, who comprise a huge chunk of the nation's population, are far less fashion-minded, analysts say.

"Ten years ago, we measured status according to what we wore. Today, it's the landscaping of the home, number of bedrooms, day care centers or piano lessons for the kids," explained Thomas J. Tashjian, a retail analyst with First Manhattan Co.

Pam Stubing, an industry watcher from Moody's Investors Service, agreed, noting also the lack of any blockbuster fashions in recent years. "Women are not taking direction (from the apparel industry) as they once did. They want to do their own thing. Any length of (dress) hem is OK."

While clothing sales have softened, sales of things like home electronics and fine jewelry — items considered to be more of an investment — have soared. Such was the case during the most recent holiday season.

The retail industry finished 1994 on a mixed note, with the bargain-hunting holiday shopper once again calling the shots.

Federated Department Stores, for instance, said same-store sales, or business at stores open at least a year, rose a modest 2 percent in December over the same month a year ago. The Limited, which sells apparel, had a 4 percent same-store sales drop.

Key seasons in retailing year

Some key seasons in the retailing calendar:

January-February — Sales on holiday merchandise continue thru mid-January. Some resort and cruise wear goes on sale. January white sales. Valentine's Day and President's Day sales. Early spring clothes come out in mid- to late January, while winter clearance sales continue.

March-April — Late spring clothes come out in March. First markdowns on spring apparel are taken in early March, while leftover winter merchandise is on clearance racks. By mid-April early summer fashions are out while Easter fashions are on sale. Pre-season sales on air conditioners.

May-June — Tools, yard equipment. Mother's Day, Father's Day promotions. Memorial Day sales.

July-August — Summer clearance and July 4 sales. Early fall fashions arrive. Stores hold back-to-school promotions.

September-October — Liquidation of late summer, early fall fashions. Labor Day and Columbus Day sales. Early holiday sales by October. Winter fashions come out.

November-December — Resort-cruise wear comes out. Pre-Christmas markdowns. Veteran's Day and day after Thanksgiving sales. More markdowns may be taken depending on how strong retailers' business is.

Prosecutor seeks death penalty, lawyer says

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A prosecutor will seek the death penalty against the woman who allegedly drowned her two little boys, then claimed they were taken by a carjacker, her lawyer said Sunday.

Susan V. Smith is charged with two counts of murder in the deaths of her sons, 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex.

For nine days she maintained that a carjacker took her car and her boys on Oct. 25. She and her estranged husband, David, made televised pleas for their return.

The boys' bodies were found in her car, submerged in John D. Long Lake near Union, 60 miles northwest of Columbia, after police said they obtained a written confession from her.

Solicitor Tommy Pope, who's prosecuting the case, said last week he would not reveal his decision on whether to seek the death penalty until a court hearing today.

But Mrs. Smith's lawyer, David Bruck, said at a news conference Sunday that Pope told him Friday of his decision to seek capital punishment if she's convicted.

Pope told The Associated Press he would not comment or confirm Bruck's announcement.

JAN 16 1995

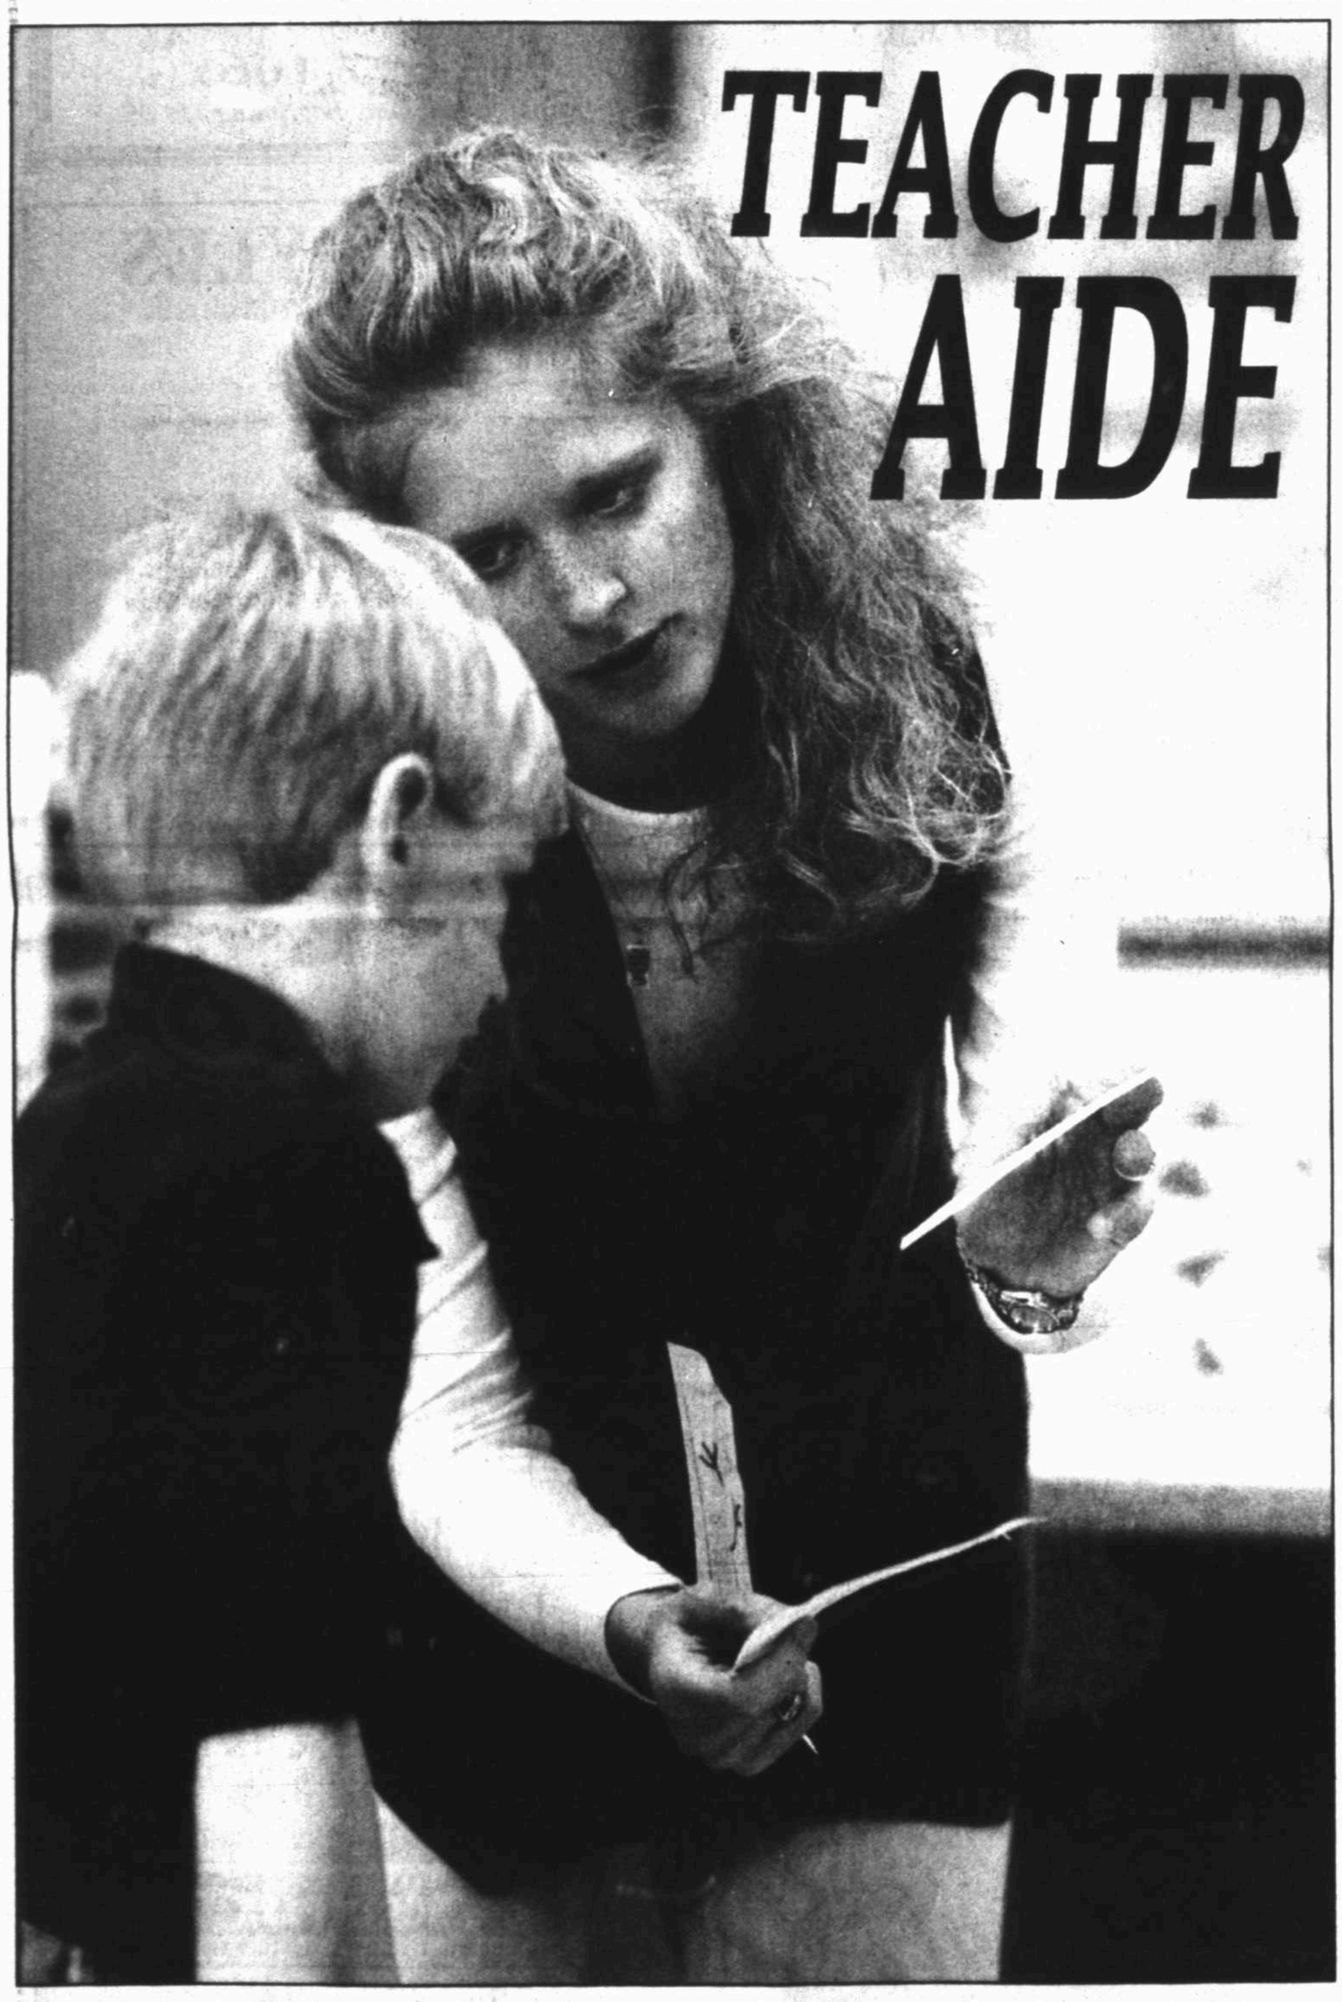

Jennifer Baer, right, and her friend Lisa Oetting walk across the LHS campus to their English class in the morning.

Jennifer and Rusk Elementary School kindergarten teacher Nan Sublett lunch together prior to the start of class.

TEACHER AIDE

Jennifer Baer may learn everything she needs to know in life from helping to teach kindergarten.

The Lee High School senior begins her school day as a student and ends it as a teacher assistant at Rusk Elementary School.

As a participant in the Home Economics Cooperative Education (HECE) program, she is learning about child development on the front lines in an actual classroom. She is also earning high school course credit and some pocket money.

The greatest benefit of all, Jennifer said, is finding out if working with children is a vocation she wants to pursue.

She said facing all the bright young faces her first day on the job was "kind of scary. But now it's a lot of fun."

The high school student said learning to assert herself in the role of a respected authority figure and a role model has been a novel experience.

"The hardest thing is trying to relate to the kids without seeming like their friend or babysitter," she said.

Her day begins an hour before high school starts with a "zero hour" course. HECE students take four courses (to acquire full-time status) and spend the other half of the school day in kindergarten classes or day-care centers.

"This is the only program I know of which really gets kids into the preschool or kindergarten classroom," said teacher Nell Davenport, HECE program coordinator at LHS.

Ms. Davenport said about 100 students at both LHS and Midland High School campuses participate in the program.

"It's amazing how being in the classroom really lets students know whether or not this is the career for them," Ms. Davenport said. "Some students come in planning to teach, certain it is what they want to do, and end up saying: 'Ohhh. This is more than I expected.' "

Some HECE students said they come home from school and immediately take a nap, exhausted from "running after kindergarteners."

THE TEACHERS say the high school students can be just a energetic as the kindergarteners. "We give the high school students a book to read (aloud to the pupils) or a project to do, and in no time the teen-agers are hopping back saying: 'I'm done. I'm done. What do I do now?' " said Jill Heith, kindergarten teacher at Greathouse Elementary School.

Jennifer said she is most impressed with how her young charges have changed since the first day of school. "Some of the kids came into class and they didn't even know how to use scissors. Now they can write," Jennifer said.

An accomplished musician, Jennifer was recently named to the All-State Band. The LHS drum major has spent many hours practicing to march in Governor-elect George W. Bush's inauguration parade. When her school day ends with getting kindergarteners out the door, Jennifer heads to band practice where she rehearses until 6 p.m. Then it's time for homework.

Although she isn't fazed by her grueling schedule, Jennifer said she is ready to move on and pursue a career in music education to teach music to elementary school pupils. "I'm ready to graduate. I could go tomorrow," she said, garnering laughter from veteran teachers eating lunch with her in the teacher's lounge at Rusk.

Right now she is settling for putting keepsakes from kindergarteners into her senior memory book.

"I don't know how we would get by without 'Miss Jenn' (as Jennifer is known to her kindergarteners)," said Nan Sublett, the teacher Jennifer assists. Ms. Sublett, a nine-year kindergarten teacher, said, "Jennifer is getting a real taste of the profession. Not only that, she gets hugs."

Haley may retire

DALLAS — Dallas defensive end Charles Haley, frustrated in his bid for a fifth Super Bowl ring, told teammates and coaches that he is retiring, a Dallas radio station reported.

Radio station KLIF reported Sunday night that Haley made the announcement on the team flight home to Dallas after the Cowboys' 38-28 loss Sunday to San Francisco in the NFC championship game.

Telephone messages to the Dallas Cowboys office were not returned immediately Sunday.

In the dressing room after the game, Haley had told reporters that he was considering retirement.

"It's something I'm going to give strong consideration," Haley said.

Haley has another year left on his contract in which he is due to make $1.8 million.

Haley was one of two Dallas defensive players to make The Associated Press All-Pro first team.

Issel quits Nuggets

DENVER — Dan Issel quit as coach of the Denver Nuggets on Sunday, saying the job is "making me something I don't want to be."

No replacement was named.

In a hastily arranged news conference at McNichols Arena, Issel said he will remain with the Nuggets' organization, but did not say in what capacity.

"I never coached before, and I certainly won't coach again," said an emotional Issel, who was in his third season with the Nuggets (18-16).

Laying big odds

LAS VEGAS — Oddsmakers anticipating a Super Bowl mismatch made the San Francisco 49ers a 17½-point favorite Sunday over the San Diego Chargers, the biggest opening margin in Super Bowl history.

The wide point spread didn't deter some bettors, who quickly put money on the 49ers and prompted one sports book to move the line to 19 points.

"The first bet we took was over $10,000 on the 49ers," said Lenny Del Genio, sports book manager at Bally's hotel-casino, where the line was 19 points shortly after the 49ers beat the Dallas Cowboys 38-28 in the NFC championship game.

San Diego defeated Pittsburgh 17-13 for the AFC title earlier Sunday.

Last year, $54.5 million was wagered on the Super Bowl in Nevada sports books, with bookmakers keeping $7.5 million of that in profits.

■ Emmitt Smith gives valiant effort as Dallas is denied a third straight trip to the Super Bowl.

By Dave Anderson
N.Y. Times News Service

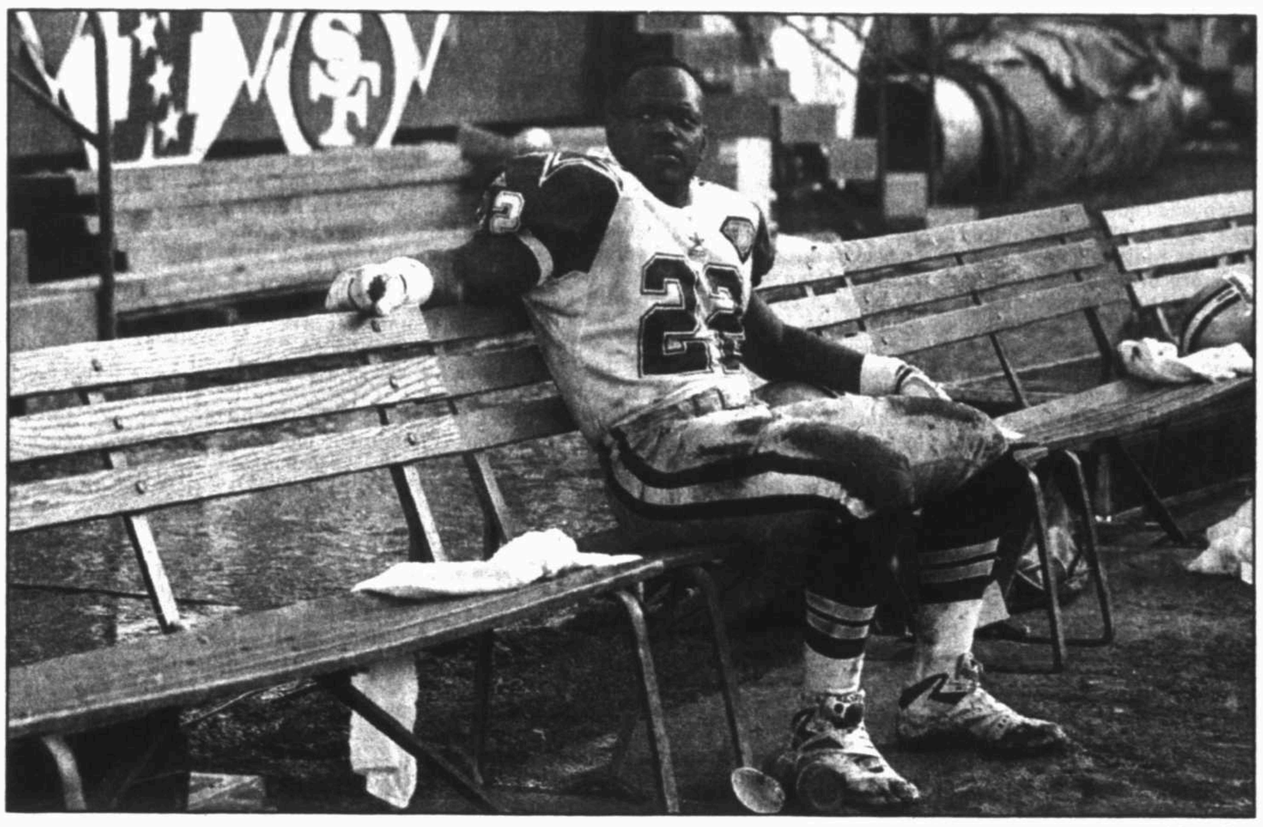

SAN FRANCISCO — Emmitt Smith not only endured the Super Bowl playoffs a year ago with a separated shoulder that would require surgery, but he enjoyed the challenge.

"I want to be the man when the spotlight is on," he would say later. "I wanted to be a guy who could play hurt and still be effective."

In Sunday's National Conference championship game, the spotlight was on him again. On him and on his damaged hamstring muscle inside his left thigh. And until the Cowboys' All-Pro running back yanked his right hamstring in the fourth quarter he was more effective than many people had expected despite three frustrating factors: his bad leg, the soggy Candlestick Park grass and the 49ers.

Bursting to a 21-0 lead in the first eight minutes and a 31-14 lead at halftime, the 49ers minimized much of whatever effectiveness Smith had by forcing the Cowboys to pass more than planned.

SAN FRANCISCO — With each touchdown, the ghost of Joe Montana receded further into history. With each pass and each quarterback draw, he exorcised the hex Dallas had seemed to have over his 49ers.

Steve Young brought San Francisco within one victory of the validation he's been seeking his whole career — a Super Bowl title. He had two scoring passes and ran for another in a 38-28 win over the Cowboys in Sunday's NFC title game.

Young, the league's MVP this season, has heard for years that he'll never be considered a great quarterback until he wins a Super Bowl. That's something

Jones, Lady Chaparrals battle Westerners in key WJCAC tilt

By Bill Petitt

■ RADIO: Western Texas at Midland College, 7:30 p.m., KCRS (AM 550).

Midland College women's coach Ron Jones could have saved the mileage on his car and not bothered to scout Western Texas' team as he prepared for tonight's conference matchup.

If Jones knows any team in the league it is Western Texas. He spent last season in the WTC camp as the head coach of the team that earned a trip to the Region V Tournament before accepting the MC job.

He knows the team like the back of his hand, and now Jones hopes that he did not teach WTC too well as he and his Lady Chaps take on the Westerners tonight at 7:30 p.m.

"Four of their top seven players I recruited," said Jones, "but they play a lot differently than when I was there. Coach Nichols mixes in some zone defense with here man-to-man. They present some of the same problems that we give other teams. We are going to have to take advantage of our size advantage tonight."

WTC's offense looks like a mirror of Midland's — plenty of shooter that can shoot the three-pointer and enough inside punch to keep defenses honest.

Tammy Wilson, a guard from Lampasas and Erica Thompson, a sophomore that played with Roslynn Dunn in Plainview two years ago, give the Westerners good perimeter shooting.

Western Texas coach Brenda Nichols returns to her junior college alma mater. Nichols, formerly Brenda Welch, played from 1985-87 under then-coach Kelly Chadwick before moving on to Sam Houston State.

Chargers cut through curtain, head to Miami

By Barry Wilner

PITTSBURGH — They weren't supposed to start the season 6-0, they weren't expected to make the playoffs, and the San Diego Chargers certainly weren't considered to be a Super Bowl team.

But the Chargers found a way past Pittsburgh's new Steel Curtain. They couldn't go through it or around it, so they went over it, and charged into their first NFL championship game.

Dominated nearly the entire game by the Steelers' blitz and unable to convert on third downs, the Chargers won by beating the blitz on a third-down, 43-yard touchdown pass from Stan Humphries to Tony Martin with 5:13 remaining. That sensational play gave San Diego a 17-13 victory for the AFC championship, denying Pittsburgh a fifth trip to the Super Bowl.

AUSTRALIAN OPEN

Sampras heads list at year's first slam event

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — As the Australian Open begins today, the aura of invincibility that surrounded Pete Sampras each time he strode on court a year ago is gone.

He won Wimbledon and the U.S. Open in 1993 before capturing the 1994 Australian and almost every other tournament for months afterward, creating the largest gap in history between his No. 1 ranking and all the other players.

Sampras still is No. 1, the man to beat and the betting favorite as he defends his title in the year's first Grand Slam tournament. But there is far less fear among his rivals and far more confidence that he can be beaten.

None of this change in attitude has to do with a loss of power or speed or determination by Sampras, who is completely healed from the injuries that nagged him last summer after he won Wimbledon again. He still owns one of the best serves in tennis, still is quick and efficient at the net, still steady from the baseline.

Rather, it is the result of improvements made by his main rivals, notably Andre Agassi, who surged from a low of No. 32 to No. 2 by year's end after winning the U.S. Open, and Boris Becker, back up from No. 11 to No. 3, with an eye on regaining the top spot he held briefly after winning here in 1991.

There is two-time Australian champion Jim Courier, trying on a new attitude that he hopes will help him enjoy the game at the same time he works his way back up the rankings from No. 9.

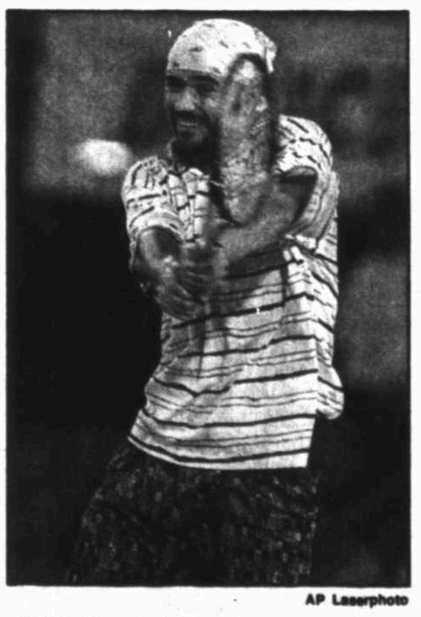

And there is No. 5 Michael Chang, who got a psychological boost by beating Sampras in straight sets in the final of an exhibition Saturday.

"As far as the top players, everyone is very close," Chang said. "Pete's had some injuries and it takes its toll on you after a while, physically and mentally. Everyone realizes that no one can be No. 1 forever, and what goes up comes down. So you try to see if you can pop in there."

Tennis is nearly as much of a mental game as it is a physical one, and sometimes the sheer belief by a player that he is capable of beating the best is enough to do it.

"I think I should have beaten Pete in all three matches we played in October and November, not only twice, so he could really feel the pressure from my side," Becker quipped. "But on a more serious note, Andre won the last Grand Slam tournament at the U.S. Open, and he played extremely well in the last few months of '94.

JAN 16 1995

EMMITT: Dallas comeback falls short

(From 1C)

And with a 38-28 victory, the 49ers moved into Super Bowl XXIX against the San Diego Chargers on Jan. 29 in Miami while destroying the Cowboys' opportunity to be the first team to win three consecutive Super Bowl titles.

"We will win," Jerry Jones, the Cowboys' owner, had proclaimed in announcing Barry Switzer as Jimmy Johnson's successor as coach following Jimmy Johnson's departure in a clash of egos. "We must win."

But Sunday the Cowboys didn't win. And up in the Fox network's studio above the entrance to the Cowboys' locker room, Jimmy Johnson was chuckling. This time a year ago he had "guaranteed" on a Dallas radio talk show a Cowboy victory over the 49ers in the conference title game, but he chose the 49ers to win Sunday's game.

Maybe if the 49ers hadn't jumped to that quick 21-0 lead, Smith could have helped the Cowboys grind out a triumph. In 20 carries, he netted 74 yards.

On his first carry, Smith slipped on the soggy grass and tumbled for a 3-yard loss. But by halftime he had rushed 11 times for 26 yards, including a 4-yard touchdown that narrowed the 49er lead to 24-14. Early in the second half he bolted to a 1-yard touchdown that lifted the Cowboys within 31-21.

The difference in Smith's struggle a year ago and his struggle this time was perhaps best described by his teammate, Michael Irvin.

"Injuries and hurts are different things," the Cowboy wide receiver said. "Emmitt's shoulder was a hurt. Hamstrings are injuries."

Especially for a running back. If a lineman has a damaged hamstring, his leg can be taped like a mummy's. But a running back not only must run. To be effective, he must be able to blast through a hole that might only be available for a split second, he must be able to change direction without worrying if his ham will collapse.

"When you have a problem with your wheels, it's different than upper-body injuries," said Switzer. "Your wheels need to be 100 percent."

Emmitt Smith hasn't been 100 percent since Dec. 19, when he toppled in the Louisiana Superdome with a pulled ham. He wasn't even in uniform against the Giants in the season finale. On his eighth carry in the first quarter of the divisional playoff with the Packers a week ago, he grimaced in pain when tackled, sat on the carpet at Texas Stadium, finally arose and walked tenderly to the sideline.

He had aggravated his damaged hamstring. The next day the Cowboys listed him as "questionable" for Sunday's title game.

"He'll start," Switzer said Friday after the Cowboys' arrival here. "How long he'll play, it depends how long he can perform."

There are no miracle cures for a damaged ham. The muscle simply needs time to heal. Usually that time is at least four to six weeks. But it's been four weeks since Smith toppled in New Orleans, and only one week since he felt what he described as a "twinge, a grabbing sensation" during an 8-yard gain against the Packers.

Larry O'Neill, the Cowboys' trainer, was mum all week on Smith's injury, but the treatment is common knowledge among other NFL trainers.

"When he hurt it a week ago, he either tore the muscle more or stretched the scar, knocked the scab off so to speak," one NFL trainer said. "I'm sure he's been treated around the clock with ice and heat, with an electric stimulator to provide more blood that helps the healing."

On the sideline Sunday Smith had that electric stimulator attached to his left calf.

"His leg probably will be taped like it were in a splint," that trainer added. "It's like a bundle of twigs. If they're loosely wrapped, they all move around. But if they're tightly wrapped, they stay together. With a tight tape job, you essentially make the whole upper leg one unit."

During the week Smith was a visitor to the hyperbaric chamber in the Cowboy complex.

"They put him in there to get more oxygen in him," another NFL trainer said. "Oxygen and blood help the healing process. Our rule of thumb is that a player must be able to run full speed in practice in order to play on Sunday."

Even during Sunday's warm-up, Smith never seemed to be running full speed. But when the game started, he was out there. In the spotlight where he wants to be. But the 49ers turned out the electricity.

CHARGERS: San Diego shakes off poor first half

(From 1C)

Thin, with thousands of people against us," Martin said. "Nobody ever gave us a shot. We can put that behind us and go to the Super Bowl now."

They go to the big game burdened by the AFC's 10-year losing streak, and go as 17½-point underdogs to San Francisco, which defeated Dallas 38-28 in the NFC championship game later Sunday. The 49ers routed the Chargers 38-15 in San Diego on Dec. 11.

But the Chargers insist they are not the Buffalo Bills, losers of the last four Super Bowls, or the Denver Broncos, who contributed three dreadful performances to that string of futility.

"I think these two teams have the right kind of style to go against the NFC in the Super Bowl," Humphries said.

Both had the style, only San Diego — a 30-1 shot to win the Super Bowl at the start season — had the fortitude on Sunday.

"We've been underdogs all the way through the season," All-Pro linebacker Junior Seau said. "The character on this squad is enormous. You just can't measure it.

"You have to do something rare to get respect in this league."

How rare it was on this warm, wet day, that the Chargers would overcome a record crowd, a superb defense that had shut them down most of the way, and their history of postseason flops.

"Well, we've talked all year long about the playing," said coach Bobby Ross, who has turned around a franchise that won the AFL title in 1963, then made only two losing trips to the conference championship in the next two decades. "The talking doesn't do it. Our guys never stopped believing."

Right down to the final minute. The Chargers withstood a last-gasp Steelers' drive that carried to San Diego's 3-yard-line. Linebacker Dennis Gibson twice knocked down passes in the end zone — the last on fourth down — preserving the Chargers' biggest NFL victory.

"It was like they already had plans for the Super Bowl," cornerback Darrien Gordon said. "The one thing you don't want to feel is not respected.

"They had no respect, they had their Super Bowl rap and their towels and they made excuses for the loss at San Diego.

"But we're the ones going to Miami."

The Chargers, who were the league's last unbeaten team, will face the four-time Super Bowl champion 49ers on Jan. 29 at Joe Robbie Stadium.

"We don't know how good we are," defensive tackle Reuben Davis said. "We've been up and down all year."

After Gibson's gems, several Chargers whipped out Terrible Towels to begin their celebrations. Meanwhile, the Three Rivers Stadium record crowd of 61,545 that came expecting to relive the 1970s, fell silent and began filing out.

"This is like a dream or something," Davis said. "We got a couple of those Terrible Towels in our bag. We are going to take them and burn them. We are going to burn them at the Murph. Burning down the house with the Terrible Towel."

It was the second exceptional comeback for the Chargers. Last week, at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium, they trailed Miami 21-6 and rallied to win 22-21. This time, despite going 1-for-8 at one point on third downs and rarely giving Humphries enough protection, they struck for two big plays to turn it around.

The first came on a blown coverage during a blitz by Pittsburgh, leaving Alfred Pupunu wide open down the right sideline for a 43-yard TD.

Means, the only 1,000-yard rusher in the game, was held to 69 yards on 20 carries. Humphries was 11-for-22 for 165 yards and one interception.

YOUNG: QB runs way to Super Bowl

(From 1C)

his predecessor, Montana, seemed to do regularly.

To have that chance, San Francisco needed to get past Dallas — the team that had defeated Young's 49ers in the NFC title game in each of the past two seasons.

Young responded with a 13-for-29 passing day and added 47 more yards on the ground, keeping the Dallas defense off balance all day.

After Eric Davis gave the 49ers an early lead with an interception return for a touchdown, Young made it 14-0 with just 4:19 gone when he faked a handoff, pumped down the middle and floated a pass in the right flat to Ricky Watters — who high stepped down the sideline for a 29-yard score.

Young struck again with just 13 seconds left before halftime. He hit Jerry Rice in stride in the left corner of the end zone for a 28-yard scoring toss that made it 31-14.

He also hurt the Cowboys on the ground. His 9-yard draw in the first quarter set up a 1-yard scoring burst by William Floyd. In the third quarter, Young ran in from the 3, stretching over the goal line for the Niners' final touchdown.

(Fla.) Junior College as an assistant coach.

Nichols brought 6-foot-0 sophomore forward Jackie Wright along with her to provide some from the outside. Wright is fifth in the WJCAC in scoring with 14.7 points per game and ranks in the top 10 in steals, assists, rebounds and blocks in the conference.

WTC has a 4-1 record since the semester break, including a 2-0 mark in the WJCAC which puts the Westerners in a tie with Frank Phillips for the conference lead.

"I think we have matured a lot since the semester beak," said Nichols. "Going into Midland it just depended on who comes to play. If we show up, then we could win, if they show up it's theres.

"We have been playing good, team defense. We cannot focus on just one player because they have Jordan outside and Kailahi inside."

Midland enters the game 15-4 on the season after defeating Odessa College 93-66 last Thursday to even its conference record at 1-1.

Kailahi, ranked tenth nationally in scoring with 20.3 scoring average, and Dunn combined for 48 points as Midland connected on 7-of-10 three-pointers in the second half to pull away from the Lady Wranglers.

Jones anticipates criticism for loss

By Whit Canning
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — With slightly more than seven minutes gone in the game and his proud league champions being compared to a band of Redskins who once dropped one of these affairs, 73-0, Jerry Jones closed his eyes.

"We'd had all those turnovers," he said, "and I just closed my eyes and said, 'OK, when I open my eyes again, we'll be getting the breaks instead of San Francisco.'"

Nice try, Jerry.

Upon further reflection, the owner of the now-dethroned Cowboys admitted that "this has just been terribly disappointing."

In the next breath, however, he staunchly defended everyone wearing silver and blue — including the coach.

"Considering the circumstances under which he came in, Barry Switzer has done a terrific job," Jones said. "I know there'll be a lot of criticism. I know a lot of people will say that if Jimmy Johnson was here we would have won.

"I don't believe that. Who knows? Maybe we wouldn't have even made it this far. But people should take their shot. I know our fans are disappointed and the buck stops with me. I made the decisions, and I'll have to deal with it.

"This team fought back valiantly today under a severe disadvantage — and there aren't many teams that could spot San Francisco 21 points and come back and play this well."

Asked if he accepted the view that a loss here signalled the "end of a dynasty," he said, "No."

"I don't see it that way," he said. "It is the end of a run of two Super Bowl titles, certainly, but other great teams in the past have lost like this and come back.

"There's a great challenge to staying on top, and I welcome that challenge. We aren't going to panic — there will be no coaching changes — and I feel very comfortable with our situation for the future."

Iseel quits Nuggets job

DENVER (AP) — Dan Issel quit as coach of the Denver Nuggets on Sunday, saying the job is "making me something I don't want to be."

No replacement was named.

In a hastily arranged news conference at McNichols Arena, Issel said he will remain with the Nuggets' organization, but did not say in what capacity.

"I never coached before, and I certainly won't coach again," said an emotional Issel, who was in his third season with the Nuggets (18-16).

Issel, who had a 78-86 record at the end of his second season, guided the Nuggets to the second round of the 1994 NBA playoffs.

"I tried to make the right decision for my family and for the organization," Issel said. "The Nuggets have made a very generous offer. I will stay with the organization.

"Bernie (Bickerstaff, the general manager) and I have been talking about it for a long time. It came to a head in the last couple of days. It's tough to do something that your heart isn't in."

In 1992, Issel replaced Paul Westhead, whose teams posted dismal 20-62 and 24-58 records.

Issel was a star player for the Nuggets and is a Basketball Hall of Fame inductee. He retired in 1985.

He returned to Denver in 1988 to do color commentary for the Nuggets until he became the team's 10th head coach.

During the first round of last season's NBA playoffs, Issel guided the Nuggets, the youngest team in the league, to an upset over the Seattle SuperSonics, the team with the best record in the Western Conference. It was the first time a No. 8 seeded team ever beat a No. 1, the Nuggets winning the series 3-2 after losing the first two games.

Denver then lost the first three games to Utah in the second round, before winning the next three and losing in Game 7.

Mavs upend Spurs

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Jimmy Jackson's three-point play with 16.8 seconds left snapped a tie and led the Dallas Mavericks to a 108-103 victory over the San Antonio Spurs Sunday night.

After David Robinson's steal and dunk for San Antonio tied the game at 103 with 36 seconds left, Jackson, who finished with 37 points, hit a 15-foot jumper and foul shot to snap the Mavericks' two-game losing streak.

Sean Elliott missed a 3-point shot on the next San Antonio possession before Jamal Mashburn sank two free throws to seal the victory.

It was Dallas' fourth victory in its last 13 games and its second win in San Antonio this season. The Spurs have dropped their last two after winning 13 of their previous 14 games.

Robinson led San Antonio with a season-high 43 points and 17 rebounds.

SuperSonics 131, Trail Blazers 124

TACOMA, Wash. — Gary Payton scored 29 points and Detlef Schrempf made two free throws with 11.6 seconds left as Seattle held off a late rally for a victory over Portland.

Three Trail Blazers scored 30 or more points, but it wasn't enough as Portland lost its sixth straight to the Sonics. Rod Strickland had a career-high 32 points, while Cliff Robinson and Clyde Drexler added 30 points apiece.

The Sonics led 126-116, but the Blazers closed to 127-124 before Schrempf's two free throws. Schrempf had 21 and Shawn Kemp added 24 points for the Sonics, who won their sixth straight game overall and 15th straight at the Tacoma Dome.

Celtics 98, Kings 97

BOSTON — Dee Brown's buzzer-beating layup capped an eight-point spurt and lifted Boston to a victory over Sacramento.

The defeat kept the Kings winless at Boston Garden since 1978.

Sacramento took a 97-90 lead with 1:31 left on two free throws by Brian Grant, who had 12 rebounds and a season-high 25 points. David Wesley and Dino Radja each made two free throws for Boston to make it a three-point game with 58.7 seconds left.

Dominique Wilkins had 22 points for Boston and Eric Montross had 14 points and 13 rebounds. Webb had 18 points and Olden Polynice 12 points and 12 rebounds for Sacramento, which has not won consecutive road games all season.

Frogs start fast out of SWC gate

■ SWC Roundup

When Texas Christian defeated Houston 106-92 to take its second Southwest Conference game in as many tries, coach Billy Tubbs knew who to thank.

Texas coach Tom Penders gave the Horned Frogs the incentive they needed to win Saturday after TCU beat the Longhorns 102-98 on Tuesday, Tubbs said.

"He said that we couldn't beat Houston because we would have a big letdown after beating them (the Longhorns) the other night," Tubbs said after the Saturday victory.

"I guess his thought is that everyone gets so up to play them that they can't come back and play anyone else."

Kurt Thomas had 33 points and Michael Thoele had 24, including six 3-pointers, for TCU (10-4, 2-0 SWC).

Thomas also pulled down 14 rebounds and blocked six shots as he helped chill the Cougar offense on the Horned Frogs' court in Fort Worth.

Meantime, Texas bounced back against Texas A&M, defeating the Aggies 115-82 Saturday in Austin.

Roderick Anderson had 23 points and Terrence Rencher added 21 as Texas (8-3, 1-1) scored a school-record 55 points off 35 A&M turnovers.

In Lubbock, Mark Davis scored 27 points to lead Texas Tech to a lackluster 95-77 victory over Baylor.

Davis was one of four players in double figures for Tech (6-6, 1-1). Lance Hughes had 20, Jason Sasser, 19, and Koy Smith, 11.

Morse claims first tour win

■ Golf Roundup

HONOLULU — John Morse, again taking advantage of the par-5s, shot a 4-under 68 Sunday to win the $1.2 million Hawaiian Open by three strokes — his first victory on the PGA Tour.

Morse, who held a two-stroke lead entering the final round, finished at 269 over four rounds, gaining 17 strokes on the long holes at the Waialae Country Course.

There was no better example than the closing hole when Morse produced an eagle on the 552-yard par-5.

In capturing the first prize of $216,000, Morse had to hold off six challengers, including Duffy Waldorf and Tom Lehman, who finished tied for second at 272.

Azinger, who is making a comeback after battling cancer, Glasson and Pohl finished at 14-under 274, with John Huston and Mark Brooks another shot back. Beck was alone at 12-under and 1990 Hawaiian Open winner David Ishii and Grant Waite were at 277.

LPGA T of C

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — When the round was finally over, and the crystal trophy that goes to the winner of the LPGA Tournament of Champions was in her hands, Dawn Coe-Jones relaxed and smiled.

And smiled. And smiled.

Coe-Jones withstood rainy weather and an elite field of 38 other champions from the past two seasons to win by six shots, with Beth Daniel the distant runner-up. Coe-Jones' closing 69 gave her a 72-hole total of 7-under-par 281 on the North-South course at Grand Cypress.

Daniel, who shot a 71 for a 287 total, was the only other player to finish under par. Pat Bradley (68) and Betsy King (72) followed at par 288, one stroke ahead of Helen Alfredsson (72).

Coe-Jones began the day with a three-shot lead over Liselotte Neumann, who fell from contention when she bogeyed the fourth and sixth holes. The leader made the turn at 2-under for the day and birdied No. 11 to maintain a five-shot lead over Daniel and King.

"I tried not to look at the scoreboard, but it was difficult. I'd never been in that position before," said Coe-Jones, who had never led a tournament after three rounds. "I didn't settle down until after the sixth hole."

The winner earned $115,000 — nearly half the $230,388 she won in 1994 — for her third victory in 12 seasons on the LPGA tour.

Senior T of C

DORADO, Puerto Rico — Jim Colbert made a remarkable recovery from a bunker on the third hole of a playoff, then made a 3-foot putt to beat Jim Albus in the Senior Tournament of Champions.

Colbert and Albus had finished 54 holes on the 6,740-yard Hyatt Dorado Beach East course with 7-under-par 209 totals. They played No. 18, No. 17 and then No. 18 again in the playoff.

Albus missed birdie putts inside 12 feet on the first two playoff holes, then watched his final effort roll over the right lip of the cup.

"The last one was the same line I had an hour earlier at 18," he said. "I thought it was in when I hit it, but it hung out there."

Colbert, who earned $148,000, had 17 pars and one birdie in closing with a 71.

Albus, who shot 69, seemed poised to run away early. He moved from 4-under to 9-under through 10 holes. At No. 12, though, he took a double-bogey, cutting his lead over Colbert to one stroke.

"I played pretty well," said Albus, who also finished second in the final event of 1994. "I hit just two bad shots at 12 and 16 and that ended up costing me the tournament."

Second place was worth $87,000.

Lee Trevino got to 7-under with a birdie at the par 5 10th, but he bogeyed five holes the rest of the way and finished tied for sixth at 214.

Dent and Larry Gilbert, who shot 70, shared third at 210.

Young America captures first America's Cup race

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Young America emerged from a storm-damaged compound Sunday to win its first America's Cup race by beating the all-women America3 by 37 seconds on the fourth day of the defenders trials.

Young America's yacht was damaged two weeks ago when a fierce storm devastated its boatyard.

But by Sunday, the crew was ready. Young America, in 15-knot winds, won the start but was overtaken by America3, which led for the first four legs of the course.

America3 was penalized for tacking too close to its opponent and had to complete a 270-degree turn before regaining the lead.

It was the second straight loss for America3, which lost to Stars & Stripes by nearly six minutes Saturday.

The America's Cup scoreboard is tied with one point each for Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes, America3 and Young America.

On Monday, Young America is to race Stars & Stripes.

On the challengers course, there were celebrations for New Zealand and Australian teams.

Team New Zealand defeated France America 95 by 2 minutes, 40 seconds. The other New Zealand syndicate, Tag Heuer Challenge, beat Japan's Nippon Challenge and won by 57 seconds. Syd Fischer's Sydney 95 defeated Spain by 3 minutes, 43 seconds.

In racing Monday, Sydney 95 will face John Bertrand's oneAustralia. The two New Zealand teams, Team New Zealand and Tag Heuer, also meet for the first time. In the third challenger contest, Japan will race France.

The challenger scoreboard: Team New Zealand, 2 points; Sydney 95, 2 points; Tag Heuer Challenge, 1 point, France America 95, 0; Nippon Challenge, 1; oneAustralia, 0; and Spain, 0.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The business outlook brightens now. Social connections could help you land a major contract in March. Any career moves require careful deliberation; you have a lot at stake! Romance will be on a fast track once summer begins. A late autumn wedding is possible. A friend offers valuable financial advice; follow it to the letter. Marital bliss will reach an all-time high during the winter holidays.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: country singer Ronnie Milsap, actress Debbie Allen, Nigerian singing sensation Sade, Baseball Hall of Fame pitcher Dizzy Dean.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An interest in the spiritual side of life grows stronger. Talks with an acquaintance strengthen your beliefs. A change of lifestyle could mean new comfort and serenity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be cautious about what you eat and drink today. Overindulgence could bring regrets and inconvenience. An argument over money gives you food for thought.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Think twice before signing on the dotted line. Seek updated information from reliable sources. Good timing is vital if you decide to share a secret. Put romance on hold for the time being.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tackle those chores that have been piling up. Devising a foolproof work schedule may be impossible. Be mindful of your friends' advice. Avoid those people who seek to exploit your talents or resources.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look for ways to make routine tasks more interesting. Otherwise, the monotony could get you down. Repeating office gossip will damage your professional reputation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good day for buying new clothes. You have a real sense of what looks becoming on you. Do not be disappointed if you must settle for inexpensive additions to your wardrobe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone new appears on the work scene. It could be love at first sight. Good things are coming your way. Be patient. Have faith in your ability to turn a troubling situation around.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Protect yourself in the clinches. Someone may try to involve you in a compromising situation. Watch what you do and say. Seek quiet retreats and pleasures tonight. A new friendship could bring great happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New alliances are favored. Reach out to someone who seems overly serious. Shared goals unite you. Begin to save a dollar wherever you can. Small economies can make a big difference to the bottom line!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid those who are greedy or aggressive. Patience is essential when supervising children. Making some minor changes in your daily routine will help you relax. Follow your intuition in romance; it is right on target. Be considerate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Artistic inspiration could strike during a quiet moment. A groundbreaking project will get the green light soon. Stick to conventional business methods; others will respect your acumen. Be more understanding of your mate's foibles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Weigh your words carefully in conversations concerning money. You need to emphasize your flexibility both at work and at home. An outsider could provide valuable insights on a work-related matter. Show your appreciation.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K J 9 5 4 ♡Q 8 7 6 ◇Void ♣A 10 7 2

The bidding has proceeded:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
1♡	2◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A - If left to play there, we are sure that two diamonds wouldn't even be your second-best spot! But what can you do about it? Partner would have doubled with any interest in spades, so all you can do is pass and hope for the best.

Q. 2 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A 7 ♡A Q J 7 3 ◇J 6 ♣10 7 6 3

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♡	Pass	2♣	Pass
2♡	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♣	Pass	3◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - So far, you have done no more than confirm a minimum opening bid with a club preference. What partner has in mind is an open question, but it cannot damage your interests to now pinpoint your side strength. Bid three spades.

Q. 3 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q 9 4 ♡A K 8 7 3 ◇8 7 6 ♣K 5

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♠	Pass	2♡	Pass
4♡	Pass	?

A - If you play that partner's jump raise is strong, then you are surely worth a move. Since you have nothing to cue-bid, we suggest you show your spade fragment by bidding four spades. However, we won't quibble with a raise over game of five hearts. If your initial response promised game-going values, however, pass.

Q. 4 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K 10 7 6 ♡K 9 5 2 ◇Q 10 9 6 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♣	1♡	?

What action do you take?

A - If you play Negative Doubles, that would be a reasonable choice. If not, your singleton in partner's suit makes any bid by you fraught with danger. We would pass to see how the auction develops.

Q. 5 - East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A K 9 6 ♡5 ◇K Q J 3 ♣Q 10 9 8

The bidding has proceeded:

EAST	SOUTH	WEST	NORTH
1◇	Pass	Pass	1♡
Dbl	?

What action do you take?

A - We might well have overcalled one spade despite having only a four-card suit. Now we have to tell partner that we could have the best hand at the table, and the way to do that is by redoubling.

Q. 6 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A K J ♡Q 10 5 4 3 ◇8 6 4 ♣Q 6

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♠	Pass	1♡	Pass
2◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A - Partner's reverse shows a good hand, but there's a strong possibility that some of your spade values might be wasted. You can tell partner that you have a good hand with a strong holding in spades by jumping to three no trump.

E Street Band, Big Man back Springsteen on two new tunes

NEW YORK — The boys — and the Big Man — got back behind the Boss.

The E Street Band, which backed Bruce Springsteen for 15 years before splitting in the late 1980s, reunited briefly to cut a pair of new tunes for a greatest hits album due out Feb. 28. No tour is planned.

Springsteen, E Street Band reunite briefly.

The Springsteen-penned "Secret Garden" and "This Hard Land" feature saxophonist Clarence "Big Man" Clemons, organist Danny Federici, bassist Garry Tallent, drummer Max Weinberg, guitarists Nils Lofgren and Little Steven Van Zandt, and Springsteen's wife and ex-backup singer, Patti Scialfa.

While some members of the band appeared on Springsteen's 1987 "Tunnel of Love" album, this marks the first time since 1984's multiplatinum "Born in the USA" that Springsteen recorded with the entire band.

"Streets of Philadelphia" — for which Springsteen won an Academy Award last year — is one of 16 tracks in the greatest hits package, which will cover Springsteen's career from "Born to Run" through the present.

Nothing from his first two albums, "Greetings From Asbury Park" and "The Wild, The Innocent and the E Street Shuffle," will be included.

Sorry, "Rosalita."

RADNOR, Pa. — Melanie Griffith and Don Johnson are enjoying smoother sailing after steering through difficult marital straits.

"I'm happy. He's happy. We're happy," she says in the Jan. 21 issue of TV Guide. "It's been a rough year, but I think the storm has passed."

Their marriage ran into trouble last year when Johnson, long a sober alcoholic, fell off the wagon and Griffith also started drinking again.

She quit five months later and filed for divorce, finding solace in spriritual and self-help books, then Johnson checked into the Betty Ford Center and convinced Griffith he wanted to get back together.

They're going to keep their private life private from now on.

"We don't want to talk about it in the press anymore, because it just isn't anybody's business," she says.

ANSONIA, Conn. — Who could argue with 8-year-old C.J. Matusovich's take on Paul Newman: "Well, his eyes are so blue, you just like him."

The brown-eyed boy, who started out modeling at age 2 after his mother contacted an agent she saw on a talk show, plays Newman's grandson in "Nobody's Fool," the story of a hard-luck construction worker trying to woo back his estranged family.

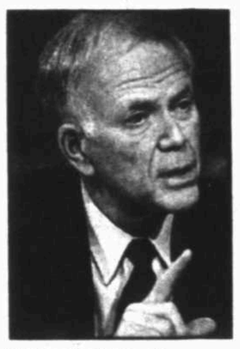

The boy's first movie role came in "The Professional," a suspense thriller released in November, starring Gary Oldman and Danny Aiello.

C.J. says being an actor has its plusses, like getting to meet Melanie Griffith, who also stars in "Nobody's Fool."

"She was a babe," he said, adding: "I heard that women are expensive. You have to buy them a diamond ring or whatever and then you have to pay them alimony checks."

* * *

RIVERDALE, Md. — No matter what the Senate Ethics Committee eventually may say about Sen. Bob Packwood, artists already are having their say.

"The Packwood Diaries" exhibit is about the senator.

An exhibit at a gallery half an hour from Capitol Hill, "The Packwood Diaries," is all about the Oregon Republican, from women's allegations of unwanted sexual advances to his battle to keep his diaries from the committee.

The paintings, sculptures and other works include William B. Schade's "Fun Files," which consists of ruled stationery from the "Big Gomper Motel" containing a man's list of triumphs in such areas as "Lip Pressing."

In the bright watercolor "Keeping In Touch," three Packwoods appear, some with six hands, all molesting women, and a fourth Packwood is seated at a desk writing, his tongue hanging out and three winged, naked women above his head.

The gallery invited Packwood, Oregon's congressional delegation, Maryland's congressional delegation and the Senate Ethics Committee to visit. So far, no takers.

OPEN: Field catches up with American star

(From 1C)

"The main thing is that Pete is not as dominant as he was in the first six months of '94. A few players have caught up to him, including Andre, including myself, including maybe two or three others."

Sampras is also aware that the level of play he produced last year may be hard to match.

"The first six months of last year I was pretty much unbeatable," he said. "I'm not sure if I can do that again this year. It's going to be tough, but I'm looking forward to that challenge.

"I'm more or less back from my injuries. It was nice finishing the year winning Frankfurt. I ended my year on a very positive note. I had a good rest. I was looking forward to coming back here. And I've always seemed to play well here. My health is great. I don't have any more nagging pain in my ankle and my feet. So I feel good and I'm ready to go."

On the Rebound Ace surface of the Australian Open courts, balls bounce higher, and topspin makes them kick deeper. It is the kind of court that suits Agassi, Courier and even Becker more than it does Sampras.

Agassi played on it for the first time in a tuneup exhibition last week at Adelaide, then flew in on a chartered jet to get the feel of the stadium court at the National Tennis Center. He liked what he saw.

Though similar to the hard-courts of the U.S. Open, the rubberized Australian courts are a little more favorable to baseline players like Agassi.

Similarly, they are perfect for the women who like to slug it out with topspin from the back, players like top-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Virginia Slims champion Gabriela Sabatini, who won the New South Wales tuneup tournament at Sydney on Sunday by beating Lindsay Davenport in straight sets.

Mary Pierce, who hits flatter, harder drives from the baseline, and Wimbledon champion Conchita Martinez also find their games suited to these courts, but a more aggressive player like Jana Novotna could be successful if she's at her best.

Pierce, who turned 20 on Sunday with some regrets about leaving her teens behind, had a breakthrough in her career here two years ago, reaching the quarterfinals of a Grand Slam event for the first time before losing to Sabatini in a brilliant match.

"That match I played against Gaby, I'll never forget, even though it has some bad memories for me," Pierce said. "After a while, I forgot about the bad memories when I lost those match points. When I look back on that match it did give me confidence in a way because although I had played tough against those top players and hadn't beaten any yet, I think that helped me to realize I could do it."

Pierce, who lost to Sanchez Vicario in the French Open after beating Steffi Graf, now has the confidence that she can beat anybody. Sometimes, that's all it takes.
