Oil-fire strategy

HOUSTON — Texas oil-well firefighters say they expect to begin battling burning Kuwaiti oil wells within 10 days, but their strategy may be different than originally planned. Representatives of three firefighting companies returned Monday from a tour of 540 burning wells in Kuwait, saying a water shortage has made traditional firefighting impossible in the war-ravaged country. "There are some of these fires that we need to put out fast," said T.B. O'Brien, president of a Midland consulting company that is organizing the firefighting effort in Kuwait. "It looks like we're not going to be able to get the water we need."

Poll: No opinion

NEW YORK — As a swirl of diplomacy and violence fixed world attention on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, a majority of Americans in an Associated Press poll said they had not thought enough about the issue to have an opinion. The poll did show that the Persian Gulf War produced clear public opinion winners and losers among the players in the Middle East peace process. Fifty-five percent of the sample of 1,005 adults said they gained respect for Israel. While most's opinion on the Palestine Liberation Organization was unchanged, 25 percent said they lost respect for the PLO.

McLean burger

In its latest move to counter sluggish sales and answer a growing chorus of criticism of its food, McDonald's plans to introduce a hamburger that is lower in fat. The new hamburger, which the company might announce as early as Thursday, would be the first such product to be available nationwide at any fast-food chain. The low-fat burger, which in test marketing has been called the McLean Deluxe, uses a new process that substitutes water for some of the fat. The sandwich, offered in addition to McDonald's other burgers, would have about half the fat of the company's large hamburgers, like the Quarter Pounder.

OPEC to pull 1 million barrels a day

■ Algeria, Iran urge sharper cuts; Saudi Arabia balks.

Associated Press

GENEVA — OPEC ministers decided Tuesday to restrain wartime oil production by about 1 million barrels a day in an effort to halt a slide in crude prices.

Algeria and Iran urged a sharper reduction to try to drive prices up several dollars a barrel to the cartel's target price of $21. But powerful Saudi Arabia, flooding the market with oil during the Gulf crisis, opposed deep cuts.

After two days of bargaining, a majority of the 13 nations agreed on a production ceiling of 22.3 million barrels a day in the April-June quarter.

Iraq did not attend the cartel's first meeting since the outbreak of war in the oil-rich Gulf region.

Indonesian Oil Minister Ginandjar Kartasasmita predicted in an interview the arrangement "will arrest the price deterioration. It will reverse the trend."

Nigeria's minister, Jibril Aminu, said a number of producers felt that with the agreement, prices would rise to $20 a barrel by the end of the April-June quarter.

"(The market) might stabilize," said Gabon's Jean Ping. "But without an agreement, it would collapse for sure."

World oil markets were weakening before the agreement was announced in the belief that OPEC would fail to reach any kind of agreement or only a token reduction. But prices started climbing as details of the pact were assessed by professional oil traders.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, light sweet crude oil for delivery in April settled at $19.68 per barrel, up 69 cents. In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude oil for delivery in April settled at $19.03 per

N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Secretary of State James A. Baker III concluded talks on Tuesday with Israeli and Palestinian leaders without either side indicating any fundamental change in long-held positions.

Baker appealed to Palestinian leaders from the Israeli-occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip to discard the Palestine Liberation Organization and negotiate directly with the Israelis.

At the same time, Baker appealed to Israel's prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir, to consider taking a range of steps to open the way for negotiations with the Arab countries and with the Palestinians.

This range of options, Israeli and American officials said, included a halt to Israeli settlement-building in the territories, stopping the deportation of Palestinian militants, ending arrests of Palestinians without trial and, most important, declaring that Israel would not rule out an exchange of land for peace with the Arabs someday.

The Palestinian leaders told Baker that the PLO was their sole representative and that they had no intention of replacing it.

And while Shamir did not reject Baker's overture, other senior Israeli officials indicated privately and publicly that the idea that this Israeli government would even suggest trading land for

Council vote pulls plug on city light ordinance

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland city councilmen, in a narrow vote Tuesday, reversed a previous decision and extinguished proposed outdoor light regulations.

The council voted 3-2 against the ordinance, which would have affected residential and commercial outdoor lights deemed offensive by city-code officials.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said public outcry over the ordinance had grown since the regulations were approved 5-2 on first reading Feb. 19.

Thomas, who initially supported the ordinance, voted against it Tuesday, as did councilmen J.D. Faircloth and Bob Monaghan.

Thomas

"Some new insight has been given to it through public response," Thomas said. "It affects only a very, very small handful of people in the community.

"I question in my mind whether it's worth it to go through all this trouble for a handful of people."

The council vote was greeted by applause from about a dozen members of the audience gathered in the Council Chamber.

Councilmen Tom Johnston and Bill Williams voted against snuffing the ordinance, while Councilmen John Castro and Tony Carrillo did

Government, Exxon ready to settle spill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government and Exxon Corp. are poised to sign a $1.1 billion settlement of claims over the Exxon Valdez oil spill that likely would include a guilty plea to at least one criminal charge, sources said Tuesday.

A source close to the talks said the settlement amount would be $1.1 billion. However, the source also said Exxon was having some second thoughts about the settlement after a federal judge issued an order Tuesday intended to protect the rights of five native Alaskan villages.

A law enforcement source said Exxon had tentatively agreed to plead guilty to at least one criminal charge as part of the deal.

Exxon initially had refused, but Attorney General Dick Thornburgh insisted that any settlement include such a plea, the law enforcement source said. It was not clear whether the company would plead to a misdemeanor or a felony.

Justice Department sources said a settlement could be announced as early as Wednesday.

Trustees table bond election vote

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Despite audience sentiment to "gut up" and vote to call a bond election, Midland school board trustees tabeled the issue following a public forum Tuesday evening.

"We have until March 20 to call a bond election for May 4," said Ken Marks, school board trustee. "I think we should study the issue more and I propose we call another public forum."

Only James Fuller opposed the motion to table the action item.

Several hundred Midlanders showed up to support a bond issue "even if it means higher taxes."

All speakers, many of them educators, agreed that overcrowding was a reality.

Sherry Malouf, a mother of two children in Santa Rita Elementary School, said, "Santa Rita has outstanding teachers, but the overcrowding challenges causes an outstanding teacher to become burned out."

All but two of 24 persons who addressed the board were in favor of a bond, many also asked to have the junior high school added into the bond, which was eliminated from the bond package proposed by the citizen advisory committee.

"I challenge the school board to put aside its single-member district problems and put up a unified front about where the junior high

Schwarzkopf makes first tour of Kuwait; port reopens

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf arrived in Kuwait City Tuesday and scooped up sand from a peaceful Persian Gulf beach in his first visit to the liberated emirate.

The general, who commanded allied forces in the Gulf War, said the number of Iraqi dead, estimated in the tens of thousands, would probably never be known.

"Most of them are buried in mass graves in the desert," Schwarzkopf said in remarks to reporters on the beach.

Elsewhere in Kuwait, the U.S. ambassador helped open the country's first major port since Iraqi troops seized the emirate last Aug. 2. And thousands of Kuwaitis crowded a soccer stadium seeking permission to leave the country and the chaos brought on by the war.

British Royal Navy divers, meanwhile, found a number of bodies that had been bound and weighted so they would sink in the murky waters off Kuwait's coast, a British television report said Tuesday.

During his triumphant visit, Schwarzkopf ruled out a long-term U.S. ground troop presence in the region and said he hopes the cease-fire with Iraq holds so the war is truly over.

"As far as I'm concerned it's over. Saddam Hussein had better know it's over. If Saddam Hussein makes the mistake of starting it again then he's going to have a lot more trouble than he has on his hands in Iraq right now," Schwarzkopf said.

Walking on the Kuwait beach with Gen. Jaber al-Sabah, the commanding general of Kuwait's armed forces, Schwarzkopf stopped, bent over and filled two small "magic genie" bottles with sand.

"This is sand from the liberated beaches of Kuwait," Schwarzkopf said. "That's what this is and we're very proud to be able to do this. ... This is something that I promised myself that I would do."

He said he planned to give one bottle to his children.

The beach played an important role in the allied victory in Kuwait, acting as a giant ruse U.S. strategists used to fool Saddam Hussein.

U.S. military officials believe Iraq thought the spearhead of the allied attack on Iraqi forces would come as an amphibious assault on Kuwait City. The assault never came.

"I am very happy to see that the city is not destroyed," Schwarzkopf said. "I am very happy to see that the bombing we did was against Iraqi targets. But most of all I'm just happy to see that the city is liberated and that it's back in the hands of Kuwait."

Not all Kuwaitis are so happy.

An official at the Ministry of Interior said more than 10,000 people have requested permission to leave the country temporarily. Many are disgusted by the government's slow progress in restoring basic necessities such as food, water and electricity.

"The government is simply incompetent, unqualified, unpopular and unwanted," said Abdullah al-Fadyl, a 32-year-old engineer who was among the 2,000 people standing in line at the Kadma Soccer Stadium to apply for an exit visa.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clear skies, warm day ahead

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for clear skies with a high near 70 and variable winds at 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the upper 30s.

Thursday is expected to be increasing in cloudiness with a high in the mid-60s.

Tuesday's high was 73 compared with the record high for that date of 95 in 1989. The overnight low was 43. The record low for this date was 14 set in 1932.

STATE

It was blustery and balmy across most of Texas as temperatures climbed Tuesday under generally sunny skies.

An intense low pressure center in eastern Kansas was helping to produce gusty winds across the eastern sections of West Texas. Northwest winds were gusting to 50 mph in the eastern Panhandle causing blowing dust.

Strong west to northwest winds prevailed across the rest of the state with speeds of 15 to 25 mph.

A dry line separating much drier continental air from the moist Gulf of Mexico air moved most of the way across Texas. A few showers lingered late Tuesday along the Texas-Louisiana border although no significant rainfall occurred.

Skies were mostly sunny except for the extreme southeast and eastern sections, where it remained partly to mostly cloudy.

High temperatures were mostly in the 70s statewide with 80s in South Texas and 60s in the Hill Country.

Forecasters expected it would be fair to partly cloudy statewide today with highs in the 60s and 70s except South Texas, where 80s were anticipated.

NATION

A fast-moving storm blew across the Plains and into the Midwest on Tuesday with snow, rain, high wind and a possible tornado, and a new Pacific storm spread rain and snow across the Northwest.

Showers and thunderstorms extended over northwestern and west-central Missouri with wind up to 60 mph. An apparent tornado damaged a silo on a farm near Glasgow in central Missouri, police said.

At midday, snow fell across southwestern Wisconsin, southern through west-central Minnesota, south-central North Dakota, eastern South Dakota, and north-central Nebraska.

The storm swept across Colorado's eastern plains early Tuesday; blowing snow closed some schools and roads. Interstate 70 near Burlington was closed until midmorning because of wind, blowing snow and low visibility, the Colorado State Patrol said.

The storm had moved into Colorado Monday; wind gusted up to 100 mph and up to a foot of new snow accumulated in some central mountain areas.

Up to 9 inches accumulated during the night at higher elevations of the Black Hills in western South Dakota.

Rain extended along a curving front over parts of Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, the rest of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

Parts of western Kansas had zero visibility Tuesday when wind gusting to 89 mph blew up a dust storm that forced authorities to close rural schools and some roads, including parts of Interstate 70 in the Goodland area. Sustained wind speeds of 53 mph were reported in Dodge City, 44 mph in Hill City and Hays, and 40 mph in Garden City, where gusts peaked at 89 mph.

The Kansas dust also cast a haze over central and northern Oklahoma and reduced visibility in some areas to as low as a half mile.

Dust also blew over southwestern Nebraska, northern Texas and eastern Colorado.

Freezing rain or rain mixed with snow extended over remaining sections of South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana.

Ice began accumulating on tree limbs and power lines in Illinois, and the National Weather Service said 6 inches of snow could fall in the northern part of the state by this morning.

In advance of the storm, winter storm watches were in effect through today over the northern mountains of West Virginia and the Washington metro area, the weather service said.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

COUNCIL: Ordinance is defeated by 3-2 vote

(From 1A)

not attend Tuesday's meeting. Castro supported the ordinance on first reading, while Carrillo and Faircloth were the only ones to oppose it.

"I had a tremendous amount of people call and say they were for the ordinance," Williams said. "I analyzed it from a personal viewpoint and thought about what was best for the community.

"But I don't have any problem not having an ordinance. I bet you there weren't 12 lights in town that would have been affected."

Johnston would not comment on his vote. He has said he supports city regulation because it could resolve future problems between neighbors.

Development of the ordinance, which would have been implemented April 1, followed the outbreak of a feud between neighbors over outdoor lights.

Kevin Gafford, whose outdoor lights at 3305 Douglas Ave. became the source of the controversy, said the council's final vote represents the community's views.

"I see the ordinance as unnecessary," Gafford said. "I think everybody has a right to enjoy their property the way they want to. If there's somebody who's unreasonable, it belongs in the court."

Gafford and neighbor Ralph Miller have been involved in a dispute over outdoor lights. The conflict boiled over into City Hall late last year.

Miller, 3303 Douglas Ave., asked the city to regulate outdoor lights. He said Gafford had erected far too many outdoor lights in his yard.

"I'm certainly disappointed in today's vote," Miller said Tuesday.

He blamed the ordinance's defeat on public misunderstanding of the proposal. Because a majority of Midlanders support the regulations, the issue likely will come up again in the future, he said.

In general, the proposal, which had no grandfather clause, stated that residential and commercial use of outdoor lights must not create a problem for those on adjacent properties.

The rules were more specific for residences.

Residential outdoor lights were to be shielded to prevent direct beams from hitting abutting property any higher than 3 feet above the ground. Light intensity on adjacent property could not exceed 0.5 foot candles.

City code enforcement authorities would have served as the outdoor light police, acting primarily on complaints.

The officers would have issued warnings to first-time offenders. Failure to comply could have resulted in a maximum $2,000 fine. Municipal court judges would have heard cases and levied fines.

Outdoor lights could have exceeded regulations if adjacent owners agreed in writing to allow the direct beams on their property.

Also excluded was lighting installed by a governmental entity for public benefit on public rights of way, parks, playgrounds and recreational facilities.

Lighting authorized by the city for construction or maintenance of streets, facilities or utilities also would have been exempt.

The ordinance would not have regulated holiday lighting, such as Christmas lights.

Other Texas cities, such as Abilene and Lubbock, have enacted similar regulations.

MISD: Trustees delay vote on bond election

(From 1A)

needs to be," said John Kennedy, to the loudest applause of the evening. "The board needs to be unified before campaigning begins."

Another parent, Bruce McNeill said new construction items need to be separated. "Voters are not going to accept another take it or leave it deal," he said, not elaborating.

Teachers complained of teaching up to 64 students in a class, teaching physical education in hallways and having offices in janitor's closets.

Bill Saxon questioned Midlanders who thought the original $24.5 million bond package was too high since the average homeowner would have a tax increase of $21 per year. "Twenty-one dollars," he said. "Wouldn't it be terrible to have to pay that price? You can see several movies, or buy seven packs of cigarettes or get one month of cable for that."

Saxon said leaving the junior high school off of the ballot would send a message to students that "seventh and eighth graders really don't matter."

Ernest Angelo, who spoke out publicly in opposition of the previous bond, said school board trustees need to study why the previous bond issue was defeated.

"Taxpayers don't want higher taxes," he said. "They are going to ask: 'Do we have to have it? Do we need it?' "

Angelo suggested board members prioritize items. "Multipurpose rooms are nice to have, but do we need them?"

Angelo said leaving the junior high off of the ballot would be a "subterfuge."

"You don't have to be too smart to know that, as voters, we will be faced again with another whole package," he said.

Board trustee George Staley replied, "Multipurpose rooms are only 8-10 percent of the bond issue. They are a real need and not just dreamed up. Is the bond going to fail because of 8 percent of it? I think Mr. Angelo needs to go see some of the schools."

Carol Willis, a substitute teacher with children in the school district, questioned building the Alternative Center. "It will only serve about 250 kids," she said. "What about the junior high? If junior high schools' needs were better met we might not have so many potential dropouts."

School board trustees said another bond failure would mean looking at alternatives such as year-round schools, partitions in classrooms or split sessions.

Superintendent Joseph Baressi said of all the alternative options he favored year-round schools.

Mel Schonhorst, the school district's financial consultant, also noted that the Attorney General's office will allow the issuance of school district bonds and other obligations until Sept. 1.

"The approval of school district obligations after that date will depend on action taken by the Legislature," he said. "This may be the last bond election where the board will have discretion over how monies are spent."

School board trustees will host a called board meeting and open forum beginning at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Midland High School. Consideration of adopting an order calling for a May 4 bond election will be an action item, again.

In other action, the board approved the appointment of a commission to study redistricting of single-member school board districts.

Committee members are Alma Marshall and Doris Richardson (District 1), Elivia Hernandez and Delores Medrano (District 2), Martha Barnes and Lynn Hightower (District 3), George Hamilton and Karen Telck (District 4), Edwin Magruder and L.D. Sipes (District 5), Kelly Cooke and Gary Willis (District 6), C.M. Van Eman and Kelly Brown (District 7).

Trustees also approved a resolution honoring Goddard Junior High School's MATHCOUNTS team and the district's nine National Merit Finalists (including the recent addition of Brandt Jordan).

In other action items, the board approved Project Acceleration, an innovative program which features site-based management and positive reinforcement concepts for South Elementary School.

SPILL: Parties ready to settle oil slick claims

(From 1A)

A three-party settlement among the company, the state and the federal government would, if judges approve, wrap up the state's case against Exxon for civil damages, now pending in a state court, and the federal criminal case, scheduled for trial April 10 in U.S. District Court in Anchorage. It would not affect the hundreds of private civil lawsuits filed against Exxon.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin on Tuesday lifted an order that had barred the federal and Alaska governments from signing a settlement with Exxon. In place of that order, the judge issued one intended to protect the rights of five native Alaskan villages to pursue their own damages against Exxon.

Alaska Gov. Walter J. Hickel's spokesman, Eric Rehmann, said, "The governor is extremely happy with the terms that have been reached at this point. The terms are in the best interests of the people of Alaska."

"The judge has given a green light," Rehmann added. "If the two parties agree based on the judge's order, it's a done deal."

State Attorney General Charles Cole said last week the proposed settlement would be for about $1.2 billion.

The villages said they feared the government was negotiating away their right to seek damages from Exxon without allowing them to participate.

TALKS: Palestinians maintain ties with PLO

(From 1A)

peace one day was out of the question.

The sense conveyed by the Israeli and Palestinian responses was that, at least for now, the gulf war had really not brought or forced much new thinking in Arab-Israeli matters.

In fact, if anything, the war appears to have provided more of a timeout in the Palestinian-Israeli conflict than a catalyst for its solution.

More Israeli civilians and soldiers have been stabbed to death by Palestinians in the two weeks since the gulf war ended and Israel lifted its curfew in the West Bank and Gaza than were killed in six weeks of Iraqi Scud missile attacks.

Yet both sides seem more interested in being positive with Baker — to avoid blame for what they regard as the inevitable failure of this new round of American diplomacy, rather than sincerely considering bold new steps.

American officials traveling with the secretary of state insist, though, that it is still very early in the postwar diplomatic process.

Further, they say, while no breakthroughs are near, both Israelis and Palestinians are encouraging him to keep working because they recognize that the status quo is becoming increasingly intolerable.

Baker began his second day in Israel by meeting alone with Shamir for an hour and 20 minutes. During their session, a senior administration official said, Baker laid out his plans for seeking peace, in which he would try to promote Palestinian-Israeli negotiation simultaneously with peacemaking between Israel and the Arab nations.

Baker asked Shamir to "consider a range of different steps" that Israel might take in order to get diplomacy started, and he outlined the "new thinking" he had heard from Arab nations over the weekend.

The steps Baker mentioned, the senior official said, included reiterating that Israel was committed to an interpretation of Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338 that would not rule out exchanging land for peace.

This last point is crucial for the Americans because only if Israel accepts this principle might Arab nations be willing to make positive gestures — like ending their state of belligerency with Israel and abandoning an economic boycott.

Also, only after such an Israeli commitment might Palestinians be prepared to accept self-rule in the West Bank, under continuing Israeli occupation, as a transitional phase before a final territorial settlement.

Resolution 242 calls on Israel to return territories occupied in the 1967 war in exchange for recognition from the Arab nations and secure borders. Shamir has consistently argued that the resolution does not mention "all the territories" and that since Israel has already returned the Sinai to Egypt, it has fulfilled the land-for-peace requirements of the resolution.

Yossi Ben Aharon, director general of Shamir's office, told Israel radio on Tuesday that the government would not make such a commitment at the start of negotiations, which he said should begin without conditions.

"To focus only the U.N. resolutions can lead only to failure," Ben Aharon said. "It is natural we all must be ready for negotiations without preconditions, and then we will confront the territorial issue."

American officials said Shamir promised to consider Baker's suggestions and to come back with some of his own. The Israeli prime minister did not rule anything in or out, and Baker did not ask for any definitive answers now, the American official said.

A few hours after meeting with Shamir, Baker went to the residence of the American consul general in Jerusalem, Philip Wilcox, and held talks with 10 leading Palestinian figures from the West Bank and Gaza.

OPEC: Long-term impact is difficult to assess barrel, up 66 cents, at the International Petroleum Exchange.

The long-term impact of the OPEC pact on consumer prices is difficult to assess, but could eventually result in a rise of a couple of pennies in retail gasoline costs. By some industry reckonings, every $1 change in the price of a barrel of oil amounts to a 2-cent to 5-cent change in gasoline prices.

Prices for OPEC's crude have been eroding since late last year because of a growing oversupply.

The average price of a basket of crudes monitored by the cartel was $17.72 a barrel last week, well under the $21 benchmark. It topped $37 in October, during the height of Gulf crisis paranoia about disruption of supplies from the critical production region.

Working out the new production arrangement was an obvious struggle for the cartel, which once dominated the oil market but has since lost considerable influence due partly to internal bickering and non-OPEC rivals.

"It wasn't easy," said Ginandjar. "If you ask, 'Could you sleep well in the last couple of days?' I would say, 'No.'"

Shortly after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait in August, the cartel scrapped production limits so nations with excess capacity could produce more to offset losses of crude on the market.

A U.N. embargo banned sales of about 4 million barrels a day of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil. After the war, the sanctions were lifted on Kuwait but held in place on Iraq.

Led by Saudi Arabia, the cartel's production soared well above 23 million barrels a day.

With the hostilities ending, some producers wanted the cartel to wipe at least 2 million barrels a day off the market.

But Saudi Arabia, at the start of the meeting, made known it had no intention of clamping down on production anytime soon.

It argued that without a formal ceasefire and with badly damaged oil industries in Iraq and Kuwait, the Gulf crisis was not yet over.

Under the new arrangement, nine of the 13 countries will cut back by about 5 percent to reach the output ceiling of 22.3 million barrels a day in the April-June quarter.

Algeria and Ecuador, which have not increased pumping during the crisis, were spared from cuts. Iraq and Kuwait, their oil industries damaged by the war, weren't included in the agreement.

Saudi production will fall to about 8 million barrels a day from current output of 8.4 million. Before the Iraqi invasion, the Saudi quota was 5.4 million barrels a day.

ACLU asks police chief to resign in taped beating case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union led the charge against Police Chief Daryl Gates with a full-page ad Tuesday urging him to resign in the wake of a videotaped police beating of an unarmed motorist.

Meanwhile, a grand jury held a second day of closed hearings to determine what criminal charges, if any, should be filed against officers involved in the March 3 beating of Rodney King.

A plumber with a new video camera recorded the beating and sold the tape to a local television station for $500. It was broadcast first locally, then around the nation, prompting thousands of angry calls to the Police Department and the mayor's office calling for Gates' resignation.

The ACLU's ad in the Los Angeles Times included a photograph of a baton-wielding officer and the headline, "Who do you call when the gang wears blue uniforms?"

The advertisement featured a return coupon with which readers could urge Gates to resign.

"It's an opportunity for people who feel strongly about this to become part of a movement to have him resign," said ACLU executive director Ramona Ripston.

The ACLU said the ad was part of a "multilevel campaign" to seek the chief's ouster. It will appear in seven local newspapers, including Daily Variety, Los Angeles Sentinel, a black community newspaper, and Jewish Journal. The total cost to the ACLU will be about $65,000.

Authorities said King, 25, of suburban Altadena, was stopped after being chased by the Highway Patrol at speeds that topped 100 mph. Police joined the chase after King left the freeway and began running red lights, officers said.

Once he was stopped, police officers using batons and an electric stun gun beat King as he begged them to stop. The incident horrified television viewers and blackened the reputation of the 8,300-officer police force.

Gates, who acknowledged King was hit more than 50 times with batons, called the beating "an aberration" and said he will not resign. The City Charter gives him lifetime tenure.

Bush threatens veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush may veto energy legislation that fails to open an Alaska wildlife refuge to oil and gas exploration, Energy Secretary James Watkins told Congress Tuesday.

Drilling the refuge is essential to the administration's energy plan, Watkins said.

Watkins testified before the Senate Energy Committee, which is considering whether to allow oil companies to develop a coastal stretch of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge on the Arctic Ocean next to the Canadian border.

Alaska Gov. Walter Hickel, also appearing before the committee, estimated that 85 percent of Alaska's residents favor drilling. He disputed claims that development could harm the environment.

The oil industry believes the coastal plain of the refuge offers the best chance for a major oil discovery in the United States. The Interior Department has estimated the chances of finding oil there at about one in five. If there is any oil, the chances are even that there is at least 3 billion barrels, the department has said.

Revenue from oil leases in the refuge would total more than $3.1 billion and royalties could eventually be has much as $30 billion, according to the Energy Department. The state would get a substantial portion of the money, although the revenue split between state and federal government remains a matter of dispute.

Environmentalists have succeeded for a decade in blocking all attempts to open the refuge with arguments that the arctic environment is too fragile to risk, and the oil would do little to curb dependence on imports.

"It would only extend our addiction to oil," complained George Frampton, president of the Wilderness Society, on Tuesday.

Economic growth may get better

When Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait, he took the world economy hostage. Oil prices rose dramatically. Financial markets took a beating. Interest rates climbed. And the confidence of American consumers ebbed.

In fact, the conflict in the Persian Gulf contributed significantly to the recession that began in the United States during the fourth quarter of 1990, interrupting the longest peacetime expansion in modern American history.

But now that the conflict is over, the American economy appears poised to move into recovery. That the U.S. economy was closely related to developments in the gulf is evident from the trend lines of several important economic indicators during recent months.

For instance, since Jan. 16, when the allied air offensive began, the price of oil has declined from $32 a barrel to less than $19. As a result, pump prices have fallen more than 10 cents a gallon from an average $1.24 to $1.13. Gas prices would be even lower were it not for the nickel-a-gallon federal tax that kicked in last December.

The successful war effort also has proved a stimulant to Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average stood at just over 2,500 in mid-January and is now at just over 2,900, a 15 percent gain. The U.S. market euphoria has spilled over to exchanges in London and Tokyo.

Meanwhile, consumer confidence began to rise in February after falling to a 10-year low in January. Even more encouraging is the fact that the consumer survey was conducted before the conclusion of the war. Next month's numbers should show a marked improvement.

Perhaps more than any other single bellwether, consumer confidence is key to the overall state of the economy. That is because consumers drive two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

When consumers are optimistic about business conditions, employment, prices and other economic factors, they spend money, which in turn produces economic growth. When they lack confidence, they do not spend and the economy softens.

It may be premature at this point to declare that the economy has shaken off the doldrums. Various indicators suggest that the economy is still contracting. Nonetheless, with the Persian Gulf war behind us, the economy is almost certain to get better rather than worse.

ANOTHER VIEW

Poison gas: Only part of problem

Reflecting his Persian Gulf war experience, President Bush last week issued a highly welcome pronouncement: The U.S. is tightening controls over exports of chemicals and equipment for arms-making.

That's a hopeful, if small, sign that Bush intends to try stopping the spread of sophisticated arms at the source. But why stop at that?

The president can do much more, like getting others to curb sales of materials and equipment essential to make chemical, biological and nuclear arms. He can also reduce buying pressure by spurring talks on a new treaty to ban the manufacture, possession and use of chemical weapons. He can support legislation to punish countries that produce, acquire or use such weapons.

And there is no reason to confine arms control efforts to these weapons and exclude sophisticated new conventional arms. After all, what made Iraq so menacing to its neighbors were the modern tanks and aircraft it had already acquired from abroad.

Until now, U.S. companies have needed no license to export most chemicals to countries suspected of wanting them for weapons manufacture.

The regulations issued last week extend controls to 50 chemicals and, for the first time, to equipment used to make arms. But these restraints will work only if America's gulf war allies follow. Germany, shamed by its indiscriminate sales, has begun to do so. Others across Europe need to as well.

A bill passed by the Senate and now before the House could induce them to do just that. It would not only impose sanctions on states that develop or use chemical or biological arms.

It would also bar any foreign companies that sell materials or equipment to make such arms from selling in the U.S. — unless their governments punish them. Bush vetoed similar legislation last year but has pledged not to do so again.

He has committed himself to ridding the world of chemical weapons. But he has insisted on retaining 2 percent of U.S. chemical stocks until all countries capable of making chemical weapons accept a ban. That insistence is holding up a treaty to ban these weapons in 40-nation talks in Geneva.

So is U.S. backtracking on on-site verification. Bush could give new impetus to the talks by shifting his stance on both issues.

The president has been strangely silent on the need to curb conventional arms sales to the Mideast. Instead, his administration proposes to sell some $33 billion in new weapons this year, two-thirds in this volatile region and much of that to Saudi Arabia and Israel.

It has just notified Congress it intends to sell $1.6 billion in new weapons to Egypt, including 46 F-16 fighter planes. Just how much reassurance do the Saudis, Israelis and Egyptians need now that the U.S. is planning a larger permanent presence and more exercises?

The U.S. would be better off restraining arms sales to the Middle East and getting other states to do the same. As Iraq's aggression shows, the world can ill afford business as usual on arms of all sorts.

Brady Bill faces uphill fight against NRA

WASHINGTON — A camera crew set up shop one evening a few weeks ago near a bridge just two blocks from the U.S. Capitol, and they waited for actor Charlton Heston to arrive.

Anderson

Heston's latest starring role is in commercials for the National Rifle Association, in which he shows the seamier side of Washington, D.C., and makes his point — that the nation's capital is also the murder capital. And if they have guns, why shouldn't you?

Except there isn't much within eyeshot of the Capitol that is seamy enough to make the NRA's point. So while the crew waited for Heston to arrive, they added some cosmetic touches. They chalked graffiti on the bridge support and added an eery mist — the kind of thing that middle America expects to find in a ghetto.

Heston arrived and taped an ad similar to one that he did three years ago. He walked in front of the bridge support, which, thanks to Madison Avenue, looked like a moldy, vandalized wall of a tenement building. Washington is still the murder capital of the nation, and law-abiding people are taking the heat for it, Heston said. Criminals, not guns, are the problem. Citizens are being disarmed while criminals rule the streets. Then Heston walked past the end of the bridge support and the Capitol loomed in the background.

The ad makes the neighborhood around the Capitol look like murder central, but it was taped in a relatively safe neighborhood. When our associate Scott Sleek asked the NRA about the creative license, a spokesman said it was done to "enhance what was already there."

Why the media blitz now? Because the NRA is doing battle with a formidable opponent, James Brady. He was Ronald Reagan's press secretary on March 30, 1981, when Reagan and his entourage emerged from a Washington hotel and met a barrage of bullets from the gun of John Hinckley. One bullet pierced Brady's skull and, in that act, Hinckley crippled him and created a life-long advocate for gun control.

Ten years later, Brady and his wife, Sarah, are doggedly pressing Congress for a gun-control law called the "Brady Bill." It would require a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases so police could check the buyer's background. The Bradys are joined by Handgun Control Inc., a public interest lobby, in their campaign to get the bill through Congress.

Congress has been gun-shy about passing the bill because of intense lobbying by the NRA. House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., has said he will allow the Brady Bill its day on the House floor. Gun-control crusaders hope that day comes by March 30, the 10th anniversary of the shooting.

Even though the bill will see the light of day outside of a House committee, it faces an uphill fight. The NRA's political action committee has spread millions of dollars in campaign contributions across Congress.

The gun-control lobby doesn't have the resources that the NRA has, and can't match a media blitz. But the movement has mounted an ad campaign. One magazine ad features a picture of Brady in his wheelchair and the headline, "This handgun statistic just broke his silence."

The gun-control lobby claims the Brady Bill could save thousands of lives, and tens of thousands of head injuries, but that Congress is afraid of alienating the NRA and its money.

DEJA VU — History may repeat itself in the Persian Gulf. Opposition to Iran's late Ayatollah Khomeini led President Reagan to support Iraq's Saddam Hussein. Now opposition to Saddam has led President Bush to make friends with Syria's Hafez al Assad, who in some ways makes Khomeini and Saddam look like Boy Scouts. Our intelligence sources warn that Assad is likely to become the next menace to Middle Eastern peace. He is already dickering with Moscow to buy modified Scud missiles.

Support of war essential to winning votes

You can say what you like about members of Congress, but they are always aware which way the wind is blowing.

Right now the wind is blowing toward George Bush and the way he won the war. The people in the most trouble are those members of Congress who voted against the President's use of armed force to teach Iraq a lesson.

Buchwald

So the naysayers have to play catch-up for their elections. They have ordered their political managers to change their images from doves to hawks overnight.

Freddie Havemeyer, who is in charge of Sen. Hiram Whipple's campaign, was ushered into the senator's office.

Whipple said, "Were you able to kill the picture of me in an Arab headdress kissing Saddam Hussein? It was taken when I visited Iraq just before the war."

"No, sir. Your opposition is building its entire TV campaign around it. We have a difficult road to hoe. Here, try these on."

"What are they?"

"Eighty-second Airborne camouflage fatigues."

"With an ammunition belt!"

"That's just for credibility. Our staff has been working on some slogans. How do you like 'Today Baghdad, Tomorrow the World'?"

"That's strong," the senator said.

"We're way behind in the polls, and we must destroy your wimp image. Now, the next major concern is, how do we out-American-flag the other guy? We'd like you to wear this flag in your handkerchief pocket at all times."

"But it's bigger than a tablecloth."

"People have to see it, senator. Okay, we've got you outfitted for the campaign pretty well. Let's discuss what you should say. Suppose they ask you why you voted against war powers for Bush?"

"I'll say that I thought I was voting against farm subsidies for Russia."

"It's weak. The reason you voted against Bush is that his demand for using our armed forces wasn't tough enough. You wanted him to promise the country that he would nuke Basra."

"I did?"

"At this time it would be a mistake to attack Bush personally, so you should say that once the war started you had no differences with the President. To prove it, you can hold up this picture of you and Bush shaking hands."

"That was taken in 1973."

"Nobody will know. Your job in this campaign is to attack Saddam Hussein for bringing so much misery to the world."

"What if they find out I gave him an autographed basketball from the Celtics when I went to Baghdad last year?"

"We're going to have to take a chance on that. Here's your standard speech for the campaign."

"Hey, this sounds just like the Gettysburg Address."

"What's the difference? If you've heard one war speech, you've heard them all."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Ghost of Kirov lives in current Soviet politics

LONDON — Hunger forces change or repression. Early in 1934, as famine stalked the Soviet Union, a movement began within the Communist Party to find an alternative to the ruthless Stalin and his secret police, the NKVD.

Safire

A Bolshevik from Leningrad, Sergei Kirov, began to gain in popularity. At the 17th Party Congress, although all public speeches lauded Stalin's leadership, some 15 of the delegates apparently did not vote. That must have struck the secret police as ominous.

In December of that year, in what became Communism's central individual crime, Kirov was assassinated. Stalin expressed shock; curiously, Kirov's bodyguard, on his way to be interrogated by Stalin himself, was killed in a car accident.

A young Communist was chosen to take the rap. Kirov's Leningrad sponsor, Grigory Zinoviev — you remember him from "Dr. Zhivago" — was falsely implicated in the murder by the NKVD. This led to the Moscow "show trials" of 1937 and the purge and execution of all opposition.

Yet murder will out. In his 1956 "secret speech," Nikita Khrushchev implied that Stalin and the secret police were the real culprits; and 30 years later, in the spirit of glasnost, Mikhail Gorbachev appointed a commission headed by his closest associate, Aleksandr Yakovlev, to find the truth in the party's secret archives about the Kirov affair.

As may be seen, this is no ordinary murder mystery; it goes to the heart of Soviet history and the nature of Communist rule. And it is hotly topical: although Americans think of Kirov as the ballet company from Leningrad, the successors to the Stalin secret police at KGB headquarters in Dzerzinsky Square see any revelation about Kirov's real murderers as a blow to their own legitimacy.

Today, famine again stalks the Soviet Union. Despite a record grain harvest last year, the corrupt system could not turn this into bread on the table. According to a report by Gosplan, the Kremlin's economic bureaucracy — given confidentially to the International Monetary Fund and revealed Saturday by the BBC — Soviet gross national product will plunge this year by nearly 12 percent, four times the rate of last year's decline.

That projection is consistent with the remark dropped by Georgi Arbatov, whose moral compass is a weathervane, that the share of Soviet production devoted to armaments and troops is now up to 33 percent (compared with 6 in the United States). This is the garrison state run amok, behaving like a wolf that cannot stop licking a knife and consuming its own blood.

The sensible way to cope would be with a massive cut in arms spending, the elimination of the huge, unproductive KGB and the devolution of market power to the republics.

The other way is Gorbachev's power-retentive way: spending a greater percentage on the army and the secret police, begging for food from China and the West, and cracking down on those who hunger for freedom or food. It's the same story: hunger forces change or repression.

On Sunday, well over 100,000 people marched in Moscow, 70,000 in Leningrad, beneath colors that predate the red banner. They support Boris Yeltsin, the new leader who has challenged the Gorbachev call for a reaffirmation of central control and wants to form the anti-Communist party.

In a colossal misjudgment that will vitiate the place in history earned by the Persian Gulf war, President Bush snubs the reformer and supports the dictator; the new British prime minister foolishly apes the error; and the European Parliament forgives "bloody Sunday" in the Baltics and succors the despot.

In Moscow, a longtime Gorbachev intimate disgusted with the turn of events looks for his way to sound the alarm. Aleksandr Yakovlev writes a long article in Pravda on the Kirov murder.

The commission he heads has covered up damning evidence of Stalin-NKVD complicity, Yakovlev charges; that was no car accident that killed the bodyguard witness. Every Russian who reads his scathing denunciation of the latest whitewash knows that the KGB reached other, craven commission members and told them not to rattle Kirov's bones.

Unmistakably, Yakovlev is warning Boris Yeltsin, whose car has suffered four accidents in the past year: remember what happened to the last popular challenger to the tyrant.

Kirov was killed on the orders of Stalin, who then posed as his avenger to purge all who threatened his power. Boris Yeltsin is in the same political position as that doomed alternative to dictatorship, and is in the same personal danger in 1991 as Sergei Kirov was in 1934.

Air Force budget to eliminate thousands of pilot jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Would-be Top Guns face being grounded by the Air Force, which must eliminate thousands of pilot slots in the next few years due to budgetary cutbacks, Pentagon officials say.

The Air Force will sharply reduce the number of ROTC graduates admitted into pilot-training programs and shift about half of those in flight schools into non-flying jobs, an Air Force personnel officer said Tuesday. Fewer field-grade officers will be in the cockpit and some pilots will be shifted to National Guard or reserve units.

The Air Force said it will need only 16,500 pilots by the end of fiscal 1997, down from 21,000 in fiscal 1990. The number of pilots will be down to 19,900 when this fiscal year ends in September, said the officer, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Merrill A. McPeak, said in an interview with the Air Force Times, an independent paper serving the Air Force, that there will be a surplus of 2,500 pilots in 1994.

"To deal with the pilot surplus," McPeak said, "we are going to have to do some very painful things over the next few months."

Under budget cuts affecting the entire military, the Air Force is mandated to go from its current 36 tactical fighter wings to 26 wings. "The tactical air force bore the brunt" of the cutbacks, losing about 500 cockpit positions this year, the official said.

He said the Air Force, now with about 6,200 planes, will have about 4,700 by 1995.

Among the first to be affected by the pilot surplus will be ROTC cadets, the officer said. Of 350 ROTC-commissioned lieutenants from fiscal 1990, only 30 will be admitted into undergraduate pilot training. Among 1,070 ROTC cadets scheduled to graduate in fiscal 1991 and 1992, 590 will be selected for pilot school.

The others can enter the Air Force in non-flying jobs or leave the service, but ROTC scholarship cadets must pay back money received from the government if they elect not to join up.

The officer also said that about half the 800 people scheduled to graduate from pilot-training programs from April through December this year will be "banked," or given non-flying assignments for the next two or three years.

Winds limit search for missing plane

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — Civil Air Patrol units hampered by high winds continued their search Tuesday for a twin-engine airplane with two Hobbs businessmen aboard.

Lt. Col. Al Korzan of New Mexico's air patrol said high winds in the mountains caused safety problems and limited the search for the Beechcraft Baron plane that was reported missing over the weekend.

"We're searching but we're going it at a higher altitude, which is not as effective, but we can't do it any lower safely," he said.

Korzan identified the plane's pilot as Robert Stipp, in his mid-70s, and the passenger as Blake Stanfield, in his mid-30s.

Korzan said the search began Sunday after the plane was reported missing a day earlier.

The plane left Hobbs for Hermosillo, Mexico, on March 5 and was to return Saturday. Family members who became concerned when it did not return on schedule discovered the plane never landed at its Hermosillo destination.

It was reported earlier that Stipp and Stanfield left Hobbs on Sunday, but Korzan said the pair left last week on what apparently was a combination business-pleasure trip.

The last radio contact with the pilot occurred about nine minutes after takeoff, he said.

Serbians yield to 3-day protest

N.Y. Times News Service

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The Yugoslav republic of Serbia bowed Tuesday night to major demands of anti-Communist protesters who have blocked the capital's downtown area for three days.

As masses of demonstrators shouted their approval, the government announced that it was dismissing the directors of the television station who the protesters had held responsible for what they denounced as propagandistic news programs.

In addition, it acceded to the demands of the students by releasing Vuk Draskovic, head of the nationalist Serbian Renewal Movement, from the prison to which he was taken after organizing the initital mass protest on Saturday.

"We want Vuk, we want Vuk!" cried many among the tens of thousands who spent much of the day raising and repeating their demands as the government weighed its response. Toward the end of the day word came that Draskovic had been released and was coming to the demonstration.

When he arrived, Draskovic told a tumultuous crowd estimated at 100,000 that Serbian politics would never be the same. He resumed his attack on the government of the Serbian republic, headed by President Slobodan Milosevic, a former Communist whose party now calls itself Socialist.

"They have no right to claim the will of the people," he said. "In their election promises, the Socialists never said they would use tanks on Serbian children. They have no right to invoke the will of the people. This is the will of the people."

The government's decision to accommodate the protesters appeared to be a significant setback for Milosevic, who had initially taken an uncompromising line toward the tens of thousands of people gathered in Terazije Square since Sunday.

The student leaders said they were satisfied and promised to disperse the demonstration. But some in the crowd said they would stay until Milosevic and his Socialist Party had been forced from power.

Soviets to vote on union treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet republics voting to preserve the union in Sunday's referendum will unite under a new treaty in a country renamed the Federation of Sovereign States, an aide to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev predicted Tuesday.

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics cannot keep its name because many of its 15 republics have dropped the words "Soviet" and "Socialist" from their own names, said Grigory Revenko, the presidential staffer in charge of negotiations for a new Union Treaty.

Revenko said republics that vote against preservation of the union in Sunday's referendum will be allowed to secede, but only according to the national secession law.

Independence activists say that law, which requires that the national legislature approve of the republics' secession, makes leaving the union virtually impossible.

Many republics want no part of any union. Others are demanding a loose federation rather than a formal union with a strong central government.

Gorbachev will address the nation on television Saturday night to urge approval of the referendum, Revenko said.

The referendum "has legal force" but is "unlikely to finally decide the destiny of the country," he said.

Republics that approve the referendum will proceed with construction of a union "on the principles that the republics prefer," Revenko said.

Six republics — Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Georgia, Armenia and Moldavia — are refusing to hold Sunday's referendum.

De Klerk wants end to racial laws

N.Y. Times News Service

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — In one of the most significant steps yet undertaken to break down the barriers of apartheid, President F.W. de Klerk introduced legislation on Tuesday to scrap all racial discrimination in land ownership and to allow South Africans to live where they choose.

Five proposed laws presented in Parliament were accompanied by a sweeping program of land tenure revision detailed in a policy document issued Tuesday by the government.

Senior officials said the changes would not only put an end to residential segregation but also redress the disparity in land ownership between the country's black majority and its white minority.

Because of the old laws, nearly 87 percent of the country's land has been reserved for the 5 million whites, who now constitute about 13 percent of the total population of about 37.5 million.

Parliament, which is dominated by de Klerk's National Party, is expected to repeal the old laws and approve the new ones before it adjourns at the end of June.

In a preface to the policy document, called a white paper, de Klerk said the new program and laws "represent a historic turning point in the history of South Africa."

The laws to be repealed are the Land Acts of 1913 and 1936, which reserved most of the land for whites, the Group Areas Act of 1966, which mandated racially segregated white, mixed-race and Asian neighborhoods, and the Black Communities Development Act of 1984, which imposed similar segregation on black townships.

But the proposed new policy failed to offer any restitution to an estimated 3.5 million black South Africans who were dispossessed during the last three decades by white minority governments that tried to enact an ideology of racial separation. They can go home only if they buy back the property from which they were evicted.

Bomb kills U.S. man in Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A U.S. serviceman was killed late Tuesday when a remote-controlled bomb exploded outside his suburban home, officials said.

Police identified the victim as Sgt. Ronald Steward, 35, who served at the Hellinikon U.S. Air Force base for the past five years. The base adjoins Athens' international airport.

Hygea Hospital, north of the capital, said Steward died during surgery.

Steward's hometown or branch of service was not immediately known.

A police spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a bomb planted in a water meter under the sidewalk outside Steward's house exploded at 10:30 p.m. in the Ano Glyfada district.

U.S., Albania renew ties

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States will resume full diplomatic relations with Albania on Friday, ending 52 years of non-recognition, American and Albanian officials announced Tuesday.

Administration officials said Foreign Minister Muhamet I. Kapllani was flying to Washington to take part in the formal act of diplomatic recognition with Assistant Secretary of State Raymond G.H. Seitz.

Months will pass before a U.S. ambassador to Tirana is named and still more time before an American embassy begins functioning in the Albanian capital, an administration official said.

But the Bush administration has concluded that it is desirable to act now because "we want to get engaged in the democratic process in Albania," the official said and because the Communist government of President Ramiz Alia "is at least attempting reform."

USSR to set pullout date

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The date for completing the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Poland will be fixed at a meeting between President Lech Walesa and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, a senior Soviet general said Tuesday.

Gen. Mikhail Moiseyev, the Soviet army chief of staff, said the 50,000 Red Army troops in Poland would begin pulling out as soon as next month, but the two leaders will set a deadline for completion at a future meeting.

No time or place for the meeting has been announced.

Poland is the only Eastern European country that doesn't have a treaty with Moscow setting out a timetable for a Soviet pullout now that the military structure of the Warsaw Pact has been abolished.

MPD renovations in final phase

■ Councilmen award contract for remainder of construction on the police department headquarters.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The refurbishing of what will be new Midland police headquarters entered its final phase Monday when city councilmen awarded a $1.4 million contract for further renovations.

The final leg of construction on the Midland Police-Communications Center will be at least $54,500 more than expected. It will cost an extra $50,000 for a new roof and $4,500 for tile instead of carpet in some areas of the 601 N. Loraine St. building.

It will cost almost $1.3 million to renovate remaining parts of the facility and buy new furniture. Construction, to be conducted by Mid-Tex of Midland, is expected to begin April 1 and take seven months to complete.

Police personnel also will not have to use World War II-era furniture when they move into their new home by next year, councilmen said. The outdated furniture will be replaced sometime in the future, they said.

Councilman Tom Johnston said it is important to make the center a top-notch facility.

"I think the police deserve a nice facility," Johnston said. "The citizens of Midland deserve a nice facility."

Police Chief Richard Czech said it would be inappropriate to place worn furniture in the center.

"We're spending a million dollars to buy and renovate a building," he said. "To put people in there with World War II desks is not the best idea.

"Citizens want a first-class police department. It will be nice to have people sitting in decent furniture. It's a morale booster."

Dispatchers already have taken their seats in a command center in the building's basement, while communications officers have moved into renovated offices.

When completed, the overhauled center will be the product of a project started in 1988, when the city bought the building for $1.2 million.

Contractors almost are finished with the $1.2 million first leg of the project, which included remodeling the basement and first floor.

The final phase will include refurbishing the second and third floors and rebuilding the entrance along Loraine Street. The new entrance will include a wheelchair ramp for physically handicapped persons.

Construction costs for the revamped Loraine Center are being paid through a $4.3 million bond issue approved by voters in 1988 and part of $1.9 million in certificates of obligation issued last year.

Councilmen said money for any additional costs will come out of reserve funds.

In other action Tuesday, the council gave its blessing to Betona Aviation Inc.'s buyout of Rich-Air Co.

Oil-field battles to begin soon

■ Firefighting companies say that putting out fires at Kuwaiti oil wells will require a different strategy because of a water shortage.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Texas oil-well firefighters say they expect to begin battling burning Kuwaiti oil wells within 10 days, but their strategy may be different than originally planned.

Representatives of three firefighting companies returned Monday from a tour of 540 burning wells in Kuwait, saying a water shortage has made traditional firefighting impossible in the war-ravaged country.

"There are some of these fires that we need to put out fast," said T.B. O'Brien, president of O'Brien, Goins and Simpson, a Midland consulting company that is organizing the firefighting effort in Kuwait. "It looks like we're not going to be able to get the water we need."

James Tuppen, an oil firefighter at Houston-based Boots & Coots, said the destruction of Kuwait's water lines by Iraqi troops has made traditional oil-well firefighting impossible.

The catastrophe is costing the tiny Persian Gulf country $2.7 billion a month in lost revenues and officials said it could take a long as six months to rebuild damaged water lines.

Firefighters usually use massive amounts of water to fireproof their clothing and to cool the burning wells. The fires then are extinguished with water or with explosives placed above the infernos. The blasts from the explosions starve the fires of oxygen, snuffing them out.

The new strategy will involve the use of nitrogen to extinguish many of the blazes, Tuppen said.

Hollow pipes, called Venturi tubes, will be placed over the burning wellheads to channel the fires and the liquid nitrogen will be pumped into the tubes through a small hose connected to a refrigerated truck, representatives said. The nitrogen suffocates the flames by forcing out the oxygen that feeds the blaze.

But some firefighters say using nitrogen is more dangerous than water-snuffing methods because wells could reignite.

"I know it's possible, but I see it only as a temporary solution," said Henry Crichlow, founder of the University of Oklahoma oil-well blowout control school. "There is always the danger that even hot fragments of soot could start these back up again."

O'Brien and other experts acknowledge the nitrogen well-snuffing method is relatively untested, but said it should create few safety problems on Kuwait's low-pressure wells.

Houston-area firms of Boots & Coots, Red Adair Co. and Wild Well Control gathered firefighting equipment Tuesday into about two dozen tractor-trailer rigs awaiting shipment to Kuwait.

The equipment will be shipped out to Kuwait by U.S. military transport planes.

Although it may take 18 months to snuff out all the fires, the damage to Kuwait's oil industry is not irreversible, Tuppen said.

Ex-chief of police recalls life in Midland

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

When Harold Wallace first arrived in Midland in 1951, he came by bus with $11 in borrowed money in his pocket.

Wallace had traveled from Clarksville to fill a job as a police officer.

"When we came it was a boom and you couldn't find a place to stay," Wallace said. He slept in the jury room courtesy of the Sheriff's Office.

Two weeks and a paycheck later, Wallace was able to bring his wife, Ella Ruth, and three young sons to Midland.

After three months as a patrol officer, Wallace made detective. Eight months later, Wallace was promoted to chief of police — a position he kept until his retirement in 1976, when he returned to Clarksville.

Wallace, now 77, and his wife recently returned to Midland for a visit in light of the 50th anniversary of the Midland Police Department being celebrated this year.

The couple brought with them 14 scrapbooks, 25 years full of memories from the Police Department.

Those memories — newspaper articles, letters and such — were donated to the Police Department archives to be displayed for the anniversary.

During an interview Tuesday, the Wallaces recalled some of their years spent in Midland.

When Wallace was first made chief, he headed a department of 23 in a city with a population of about 22,000.

"To be a boom town or oil town, it had a pretty bad reputation but I personally couldn't say that about Midland," Wallace said.

Crime was mild, a little of everything but nothing outstanding, Wallace said.

"Crimes that if you put them in a bucket and shook it up you couldn't pull out any one thing," Wallace said.

Nevertheless, Wallace said he remembered "a good many murders over the 25 years."

One murder involved the killing of a police lieutenant in the early 1960s.

A man had escaped from a sheriff's deputy and had taken the officer's gun in the process, Wallace said. The police searched through the night for the escapee.

Owners of oil well royalties sue Dresser

■ Parker & Parsley well royalty owners sue service companies for unspecified damages.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Royalty owners in 523 Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. oil wells have filed a class-action lawsuit against the service companies that last year lost millions in a similar suit brought by Parker & Parsley.

The latest suit, filed Feb. 15 in 238th District Court, alleges that Dresser Industries, Inc. and associated companies short-changed Parker & Parsley on materials for fracturing jobs.

The royalty owners are seeking unspecified damages for the lost well production and lost market value of the wells, as well as punitive damages.

The allegations in the pending suit are essentially the same as those leveled by Parker & Parsley in its litigation.

"The scheme had the purpose of enabling the servicing entity to quote a low discount that induced Parker & Parsley to accept its bids for fracturing work," the suit states.

Fracturing involves injecting wells with chemicals and sand to create fissures through which oil can flow easily to the surface.

Injections performed without enough of the requisite fracturing materials resulted in lost well production and cost royalty owners income, according to the suit.

Named as plaintiffs on behalf of the approximately 1,500 royalty owners are Glen Snell, Ola Wright and Bruce Key.

Defendants are Dresser Industries, Titan Services Inc., BJ Services Co. USA Inc., BJ Hughes Holding Co., Baker Hughes Production Tools Inc. and Baker Hughes Inc.

Neither the plaintiffs' nor the defendants' attorneys could be reached for comment Tuesday afternoon.

According to the suit, the service companies "intentionally and consistently delivered to and injected into the 523 wells less fracturing materials than Parker & Parsley requested, contracted for, paid for, and required for a proper fracturing job."

The wells listed in the suit are the same ones involved in Parker & Parsley's suit against the service companies. The outcome of that suit, heard last October in U.S. District Court in Midland, was a $185

Go fly a kite — safely

Staff Report

Now that kite flying season is here again, TU Electric is cautioning youngsters that the pasttime can be a shocking experience if the flyer fails to follow a few commonsense safety tips.

TU Electric Manager Bill Griffin advised against flying kites in the vicinity of electric power lines.

"If your kite gets caught in electric wires, call TU Electric," said Griffin, "and someone will get it down for you."

Griffin also offered other safety rules for kite flying:

- Use dry string, not wire, anything metallic or any string with metallic threads.
- Use kites made of wood and paper, not wire or metal.
- Don't fly kites on rainy days.
- Avoid busy streets and highways while flying kites.
- Fly kites away from TV and radio antennas.

"Young people following these rules will get more fun out of flying kites and at the same time will keep from getting hurt or losing their kites," Griffin said.

March sales tax rebates increase over last year

By David Morris

March tax rebates for the city and Midland County have increased compared with the same time last year, state comptroller's office figures show.

The rebates come on the heels of a report showing a 15.2 percent increase in gross sales in Midland for the third quarter of 1990.

Midland County received a $367,090 rebate check from Austin this week, an 18.4 percent increase over last year's $310,080.

County Auditor Floyd Jarnigan said he couldn't explain the increase and added that it was not entirely due to activity in the oil and gas industry.

"We'll take it, though, whatever's the cause," he said.

The city of Midland received a $584,129 rebate, a 13 percent increase over the $516,739 received in March, 1990.

The rebates reflect taxes collected by businesses in January and reported in late February.

Businesses collect both the state's 6¼ percent sales tax and all local sales taxes and send them to the comptroller's office with their tax returns. The state retains its share and returns the remainder to local

AUSTIN — Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said late Tuesday that the Senate-House conference committee should be able to vote a final school finance equalization bill out of committee by next Tuesday.

The committee spent three hours Tuesday night comparing the Senate and House versions of the bill side by side. The bills are sponsored by Parker and Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice. The 10-member committee must reconcile differences and the Legislature must approve a bill before an April 1 deadline set by the Supreme Court.

"This state operates from crisis to crisis," Parker said, "and the only way we ever are going to persuade the people of Texas and the Legislature to take a serious look at what we are paying, and who's not paying, is to force a tax-by-tax review of our revenue gathering."

The finance bill now will go to the Senate for consideration.

As for school equalization, the state Supreme Court ruled in 1989 that the school financing system is unconstitutional because it discriminates against property-tax poor districts.

Any bill will have to take some money from rich districts and give it to poor districts, but the House bill would make it easier for districts to enact additional property taxes and keep the money, known as "local enrichment."

Parker's plan calls for a minimum tax of 70 cents per $100 valuation, rising to $1 by 1994, with three additional optional tax tiers up to the $1.50 allowed by the state constitution.

The House bill requires a minimum tax of 60 cents, rising to 80 cents after four years.

Teacher convicted of misdemeanor assault

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A Municipal Court jury found a Goddard Junior High School teacher guilty of misdemeanor assault Tuesday in connection with an incident involving one of his former students.

Fred E. Stricklin was accused of kissing the student, whose name and age were not released, against her will on Nov. 5, 1990.

The five-woman, one-man jury fined Stricklin $200, the maximum allowable. Jurors reached their verdict after a day-long trial before Municipal Court Presiding Judge Robin Smith.

Stricklin pleaded innocent to charges of simple assault by touch last December. His attorney, Richard Alvarado, promised to appeal Tuesday's verdict.

Stricklin, reached at his home Tuesday night, declined to comment on the jury's verdict.

Midland Independent School District board members were expected to consider disciplinary action against Stricklin during an executive session Tuesday night, school officials said.

Tom Holland, MISD personnel director, said Stricklin could face termination. Board members also can recommend no punishment, suspension with pay or suspension without pay.

Stricklin, an MISD teacher and coach since 1976, has the right to appeal an adverse board decision.

Holland said Stricklin's conviction will be reported to the state education commissioner's office, which could revoke Stricklin's teaching certificate.

Assistant City Attorney Sharon Ryan, who prosecuted Stricklin, said the girl Stricklin is accused of kissing was not a Goddard student when the incident occurred.

Board members adjourned a public forum at 9:40 p.m. Tuesday at Midland High School, returned to the administration building to complete items on the unfinished agenda including an executive session. No decisions on Stricklin were made at press time.

Rich Henderson, who founded Rich-Air in 1959, said consolidation of the aircraft services makes for a more attractive regional facility. "We feel like this is the correct thing to do," he said.

Charles T. Perry, Betona president and chief executive officer, said the combined operations will be named Avion Flight Centre Inc.

"We're going to try to bring in a new marketing campaign, a new image," Perry said.

The new facility, he said, could serve as a major stopping point for transcontinental flyers.

"We've been pretty good at attracting them to Midland," Perry said. "The weather is good and it's a quality airport."

Rich-Air operations have included two terminals at the airport and all hangar space except that occupied by Cutter Beechcraft and Betona.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Odessan to head highway agency

Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ray Stoker Jr. of Odessa was appointed chairman of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation Commission Tuesday by Gov. Ann Richards.

"It will be a lot of work for low pay but I'm happy to assume the responsibility and will do a good job," said Stoker, who received a call from the governor's office Tuesday morning notifying him of the appointment.

Stoker has been a member of the commission for the last five and a half years.

The appointment comes at a vital time for the department.

State government departments are reviewed every 12 years — referred to as sunset legislation — by the Legislature on whether to keep the entity intact.

"As chairman I will be addressing concerns of the representatives of the Senate and of the House during the sunset process," Stoker said.

Stoker will also speak to the Legislature about funding for improving the highway trunk system in Texas. The project, which will essentially benefit rural Texas, is a 10,000-mile, four-lane divided highway system that will link cities with more than 20,000 population with outlying areas.

In addition, the department will be considering environment issues. "The environmental concerns are more and more part of highway building," Stoker said.

CPA seminar slated

A series of seminars to keep Certified Public Accountants appraised of new developments starts Saturday, March 16, at Midland College. The programs will be held on the third Saturday of each month from 9-11 a.m. in the Health Sciences Building lecture hall.

The first seminar deals with qualified and non-qualified stock option programs and is conducted by Joe J. Miller, Jr., a Certified Financial Planner.

Cost of the program is $12 in advance or $15 at the door.

Continuing Education Units are available through Midland College and the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy.

More information is available by calling Midland College's Continuing Education Office at 685-4518.

Center receives grant

The Midland Rape Crisis Center recently received a $5,000 grant from the Burlington Resources Foundation representing Meridian Oil Company.

The Burlington Resources Foundation is the major channel of philanthropy for Burlington Resources, Inc., and its subsidiaries.

The foundation administers a consistent contributions program in recognition of the company's opportunity to support and improve the general welfare and quality of life in communities it serves.

Local students to debate

ABILENE — Hardin-Simmons University debaters Joanna and Becki Horn of Midland will be competing in the American Debate Association national tournament beginning Thursday in Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Joyce Wascom, debate sponsor, will accompany the HSU debate team.

More than 75 teams will be competing for top honors.

The topic for the debate will be "Resolved: That the United States should substantially change its trade policy toward one or more of the following nations — Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, South Korea and China."

They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. David Horn of Midland.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Felony theft

ODESSA — A 30-year-old Odessa woman was arrested Tuesday for felony theft that involved as much as $27,000 withdrawn from a Midland bank in a check scam, Odessa police officials said.

Schanda Michele Smith remained in jail Tuesday with a bond set at $20,000 by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

The alleged theft occurred in December 1990 and was reported in January by Arnold S. Phillips, a bank investigator for NCNB, 303 W. Wall Ave, police said.

According to police reports, Ms. Smith allegedly ran a newspaper advertisement seeking work as a home care nurse. She was subsequently hired — using copied identification of another home care nurse — by a couple to care for an ill relative, the report said.

The suspect reportedly forged checks belonging to the couple and deposited them in a bank account she had opened under a false name, the report said. Ms. Smith is alleged to have made withdrawals from the non-existent money deposited, police said.

In addition, $1,800 in cash was advanced and $1,300 in purchases made with a credit card of the couple. Police estimate as much as $30,000 was involved from the bank withdrawals and credit card misuse.

Drug arrests

LAMESA — Two additional people were arrested Tuesday on drug charges after 18 others were arrested Monday evening following an investigation by the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, Dawson County Sheriff's officials said.

All the arrests stemmed from Dawson County grand jury indictments handed down after the task force investigation that began in November 1990. Four more arrests are expected to be forthcoming as a result, officers said.

Arrested Tuesday were Joe Morales Perez of Midland for delivery of cocaine, $25,000 bond; and Susan Snell of Sweetwater for delivery of cocaine, $25,000 bond.

Dawson County Sheriff's Office, Lamesa Police Department and the Department of Public Safety assisted the task force in the arrests.

Jet emergency

A military F-4 Fathom landed safely at Midland International Airport about 11:23 a.m. Tuesday after emergency crews were alerted the jet was experiencing possible fuel problems, according to fire and airport officials.

Upon inspection, the jet was found to have a faulty fuel gauge.

Destination and origination of the aircraft was not disclosed.

Fuel spill

ODESSA — Clean up crews sanded a gasoline spill caused by a gasoline tanker leak at about 8 p.m. Tuesday in the 3600 block of Andrews Highway, Odessa fire officials said.

The amount of fuel spilled was not available, officials said.

A follow-up effort to clean the area will be handled by the Texas Water Commission, fire officials said.

"We had some pleasure over the 25 years and some tears, too," Wallace said. There were 126 employees of the department when Wallace retired.

Looking back, Wallace said crime hasn't changed much, although it has increased.

"One thing that makes it different is that more people are reporting crime," he said.

"Law enforcement is basically about the same except for better equipment," Wallace said.

Wallace said he misses police work.

taxing entities.

The city assesses a 1 cent sales tax, while the county collects half a cent. Texas allows a maximum of 8¼ cents in sales tax to be levied in a community.

Last week, the comptroller's office issued 1990 third-quarter gross sales figures for the city and county which show a 15.2 percent increase over the third quarter of 1989. The third quarter includes July, August and September.

Figures show sales of $452.6 million in the three-month period of 1990, compared with $393 million in 1989.

Retail sales were up 9.1 percent, going from $202.3 million in 1989 to $220.8 million in 1990.

The sales figures reflect an increase of oil- and gas-related sales of 20 percent over third-quarter 1989, from $15 million to $18 million. Manufacturing sales increased by 32 percent, going from $31.9 million to $42.1 million. Total wholesale trade was up 37 percent from 1989, jumping from $65.6 million to $89.6 million.

"For us, I think it's a very positive sign for the economy that we're seeing that much growth in manufacturing," said Janna King, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. She described manufacturing as a basic sector of the economy and an indicator of economic strength.

Ms. King said Midland's sales increases are especially encouraging when viewed in light of increases statewide.

In manufacturing sales, the state posted a gain of only 11 percent. Overall, gross sales in the third quarter for all of Texas were up 8.7 percent.

In Ector County, third-quarter gross sales were up 17.6 percent, going from $537.9 million in 1989 to $632.8 million in 1990. Retail sales were up by more than 20 percent, going from $240.1 million in 1989 to $289.2 million in 1990.

So far this year, both Midland and Ector counties have collected more in sales taxes since the beginning of 1991 than they did for the same period last year.

Midland has collected $2.4 million this year, compared with $2.2 million last year, a difference of about 11 percent. Ector County, meanwhile, has collected $2.13 million, compared with $1.98 million last year, for an increase of about 8 percent.

License revocation urged for DWI

■ NTSB chairman says revoking the license of anyone arrested for DWI is an important step to saving lives.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas should pass a bill that would revoke the driver's license of anyone arrested for driving while intoxicated, the chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board told state lawmakers Tuesday.

Kolstad

James Kolstad said an administrative license revocation law, already in effect in 29 other states, is "the most important step you can take to save lives on your roads and highways."

Kolstad said that in 1989, 22,415 people were killed in traffic crashes that involved alcohol, and about 345,000 people were injured in alcohol-related crashes nationwide.

"Clearly, we are not doing an adequate job in keeping alcohol-impaired drivers off the road. We have to change people's behavior," he said. "Most experts agree that many impaired drivers persist in their behavior because they think they won't be caught or convicted. That perception, unfortunately, is based on reality."

In Texas alone, during the first 11 months of 1990, 1,266 people were killed in alcohol-related crashes, and another 31,896 people were injured, said Rep. Parker McCollough, the bill's cosponsor.

"Administrative license revocation can prevent a significant amount of this tragedy," said McCollough, D-Georgetown. "It's going to be the policy of the state of Texas that if you get behind the wheel drunk, you're going to lose your license."

One of the most beneficial aspects of administrative license revocation, Kolstad said, is speed. Instead of waiting for a trial, a driver's license immediately would be confiscated.

Under McCollough's bill, the driver then would be given a temporary, restrictive license that would be effective for 40 days, during which a driver could seek an administrative hearing.

If the hearing established that the driver failed or refused to take the test, the license would be revoked.

"This approach works," Kolstad said. "It specifically deters those drivers caught drinking and driving from doing it again. It generally deters potential drinking drivers who have not been caught, because these drivers become concerned that they will lose their driving privileges."

Kolstad said despite concerns that the measure could deny due process, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that revoking a driver's license before an administrative hearing is acceptable, as long as the post-suspension hearing is held soon after.

Milo Kirk of Mothers Against Drunk Driving also testified in favor of the bill before the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee. Those opposing the bill included the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association and Suzanne Donovan, director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

"One of my overall concerns is giving the police the power to arrest, test, revoke the licenses, and then they're essentially giving the hearing," Ms. Donovan said. "It really has the potential for denial of due process, and for real arbitrary and capricious application on the part of the police officers."

"In the broadest sense, it brings the adjudicative powers to the executive branch, but beyond that, it's not at all clear that the police officers are going to be able to give some sort of fair hearing," she said.

Kolstad said the NTSB also supports a bill under consideration by the House committee that would lower the legal blood alcohol content for drivers from 0.10 to 0.08. He also urged the state to increase sobriety checkpoints.

Committee Chairman Rep. Sam Russell, D-Mount Pleasant, referred the measure and several others to subcommittee, where he recommended they be rolled into one comprehensive bill.

Pilot says his luck held up in gulf

AUSTIN (AP) — Maj. Emmett Tullia, an Air Force pilot who just returned from the Persian Gulf, says his luck held during a raid on Baghdad.

Even in broad daylight, Tullia said, he could barely see as the deadly hail of enemy and friendly fire mixed with the smoke from the burning Iraqi capital.

Tullia, an F-16 pilot stationed in the tiny Persian Gulf state of Qatar, watched helplessly as two buddies from his squadron, nicknamed "The Lucky Devils," succumbed to the inferno.

"The air was thick. So thick it was like an overcast day," the 35-year-old fighter pilot recalled. "About the only thing you could see were the sparkles on the ground where missiles were fired or bombs hit ..."

"I think I used up most of my luck that day."

But his luck held as he dodged the dozen or so missiles fired toward his plane. So did that of his two downed comrades, who were captured by the Iraqis but made it out alive.

After escorting one of those men — Maj. Jeff Tice, a released recently prisoners of war — back to the United States, Tullia came home Monday to a hero's welcome in Austin.

Nearly three dozen relatives, friends and well-wishers greeted Tullia with banners, flags, flowers, cheers and hugs when the pilot arrived at Robert Mueller Municipal Airport.

AT&T to reduce in-state rates

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans making long distance telephone calls within the state using AT&T will see their rates reduced beginning at midnight Wednesday, according to the telephone company.

Vaughn Aldredge, an AT&T spokesman, said that under the new rates, a daytime, 10-minute call between Dallas and Houston will cost $3.34 instead of $3.71, a 10 percent decrease. Evening rates have been trimmed about 17 percent, he said.

With this reduction, AT&T said its price cuts since October 1990 have totaled about $123 million, lowering in-state rates by more than 12 percent.

"While the March 14 rate cuts apply to many AT&T services, more than 80 percent of the savings will flow to residential and small business customers," said Gray Bryant, an AT&T vice president.

According to the company, a typical residential customer who makes calls in the early evening will save up to $3.60 on a $20 monthly bill for in-state long distance calls, compared with pre-October prices.

Republicans vow to fight proposed income tax

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Partisan wrangling over a proposed state income tax grew hotter Tuesday, with Republicans vowing to fight it and Democrats saying the GOP must shoulder responsibility for the state's budget mess.

Wearing a button that read "Don't Mess With Taxes," GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said Republicans in the Legislature and across the state would lead a campaign against any income tax plan.

"It is unnecessary, it is unneeded, and it is unacceptable to the voters of Texas," Meyer said.

"The Republican Party is standing up for the working people of Texas in opposing a Texas income tax ... The devious Democrats said 'New Texas' — the devious Democrats meant new taxes," he said.

But Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the Democrat who is urging passage of an income tax, said Republicans were being hypocritical.

Bullock noted that appointees of former Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, hold majorities on virtually every state agency board that is asking for more money from the Legislature.

"They are the ones that approved all the budget requests of all the state agencies in Texas which called for absolutely billions of dollars in additional spending," Bullock said.

"The majority of all the boards are still in the hands of the Republican appointees," he said.

Legislative leaders say the $52.4 billion in state income estimated for the 1992-93 budget years will fall about $4.6 billion short of what is needed to maintain current programs.

Bullock is calling for a 5 percent personal income tax and an 8 percent corporate income tax to raise funds for prisons, increased welfare caseloads and to meet a Texas Supreme Court order to equalize school funding.

Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle accused Republicans of trying to make partisan hay over income taxes.

"Obviously, neither Democrats or Republicans like income taxes or any other taxes. However, no one likes illiteracy, bad schools or criminals being released early from overcrowded prisons," Slagle said.

"Democrats are willing to have an intelligent, nonpartisan debate on what we should pay for and how we should pay for it. When are the Republicans going to behave responsibly and join in that debate?" he asked.

Rep. Tom Craddick, chairman of the House Republican Caucus, said the GOP will propose spending cuts that would allow government to meet its obligations without raising taxes.

"Republicans believe a healthy, expanding economy will provide for additional government revenue by expanding the tax base," said Craddick, R-Midland.

Gov. Ann Richards, meanwhile, reiterated her plans to call a mid-July special session for writing the final state budget but said she hasn't decided on the income tax question.

"I think that this is not the time, really, to play politics," she said of Meyer's attack. "They (Republicans) ... didn't come forward with any plans of their own, did they? Well, it would have been nice, because we need to cooperate now."

Richards said that by waiting until July, lawmakers will have before them the results of comprehensive audits of state agency spending plus recommendations from her blue-ribbon tax study committee.

"Splendid Stones"

To be a gem, a mineral must be beautiful, durable and rare. Of the 3,000 minerals known to humans, only 80 qualify as gemstones, and some consider that number high. The mystique of diamonds, the fire of rubies and the soothing powers of emeralds are made up as much as myth and legends as physical properties. This special examines some of the world's most famous gem and jewelry collections, including the Faberge eggs designed for Russian Stars.

In the 1950s, a moronic moose and an all-American squirrel became a fixture of American television. This program salutes the irreverent series that satirized any and everyone. Full of clips and interviews with members of the series' creative team and actors who provided character voices, the special also profiles the two men, producer Jay Ward and animator/writer Bill Scott, who powered the project..

Lee wins wild one, 10-9

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs came out higher than fight promoter Don King's hair Tuesday, but Midland Lee second baseman Allen Chase administered the knockout blow in the District 4-5A baseball opener for both teams at Johnson Field.

Chase's two-out single in the bottom half of the seventh inning scored Smily Hinojos and Abel Rodriquez to put the finishing touches on a 10-9 comeback win over the Bulldogs, who held leads of 8-1 midway and 9-7 late in the slugfest.

The victory enables the Rebels to keep pace with Odessa High, which downed Odessa Permian 7-1, and with Abilene Cooper, which got by Abilene High 8-5 in the league's other openers. San Angelo was idle.

Jeff Johnston, who faced seven Rebels without giving up a hit, earned the win with two scoreless innings of relief work. MHS Reliever Brian Rounding suffered the last-inning loss.

"We were down by seven runs in the fourth inning, but you just don't give up on kids like these," beamed first-year Lee head coach Jesse Banavidez after collecting his first league win. "They (Rebels) showed a lot of character in this game."

They had to because it was the fired up MHS squad that set the pace in this one. MHS nicked Lee starter Brian Tomlin for three runs in the top of the second before sending him to the showers during a five-run fourth.

But Bulldog starter Dewayne Culpepper, whose 3-for-4 day at the plate was marked by a double, a home run and two RBI, tired in the bottom of the fourth and MHS' 8-1 lead began to evaporate.

The Rebels chased Culpepper off the mound with four straight hits, including Sean Salois' bases-loaded double off the fence in front of the scoreboard in left, and Lee's six-run rally narrowed the lead to 8-7.

"If you get the ball up, they're going to hit it hard," Culpepper said. "I got a little tired, got the ball up around their waists and they seemed to hit it hard each time."

Midland Lee's Brad Sanders is unable to break up a first-inning double play, which Bulldog second baseman Carlos Pena finalizes with his throw to first base. MHS short stop Ritchie Greth, who started the play, looks on.

Chase wins classic battle

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Even though the 10-9 score of Midland Lee's District 4-5A baseball opening win over Midland High may not seem befitting of the word "classic" to the sport's purists, it was a classic baseball situation that brought that tally about.

Down by one run in the bottom of the seventh and final inning, the Rebels had two outs with runners on second and third. Up to the plate stepped Allen Chase, Lee's junior second baseman, for the final confrontation against MHS pitcher Brian Rounding, also a junior.

The two had been foes — as well as teammates once — in the local youth leagues, and had faced each other many times before. Here they were again, mano a mano, pitcher against hitter with the game on the line.

Chase stepped up and when he saw that Rounding's first offering was a curveball, the pitch Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez had told him to look for, the Rebel infielder ripped a shot to left field that scored Smily Hinojos and Abel Rodriguez. The hitter won this time.

"We have been facing each other ever since sixth grade. It's been quite a competition over the years, but I've done pretty well against him," Chase said. "Coach told me to look low and away, and I just went with the pitch."

"I was just thinking about getting the ball over the plate where he could put it in play and we could get an out. I was

Soccer picture a mess

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Midland High did its part to complicate the District 3 soccer playoff picture. But it may not be enough.

Mario Rodriguez' penalty shot in the 73rd minute gave the Bulldogs a 1-0 win over Abilene Cooper in their regular season finale Tuesday at the MHS field.

But depending on how the district standings rule is interpreted, Midland Lee may have clinched the second playoff spot in District 3 with a 2-1 win over Abilene High.

Section 1100.21 of the District 4-5A Policy Book states that "the team with the second highest percentage of district wins shall be declared the district runnerup."

Lee boosted its district mark to 7-2-2 with Tuesday's win, while Midland High finished its season at 6-4-2. The issue is complicated because the University Interscholastic League Administrators Manual for soccer states that "unless the district executive committee specifies otherwise, tie games shall count as one-half game won and one-half game lost."

If Lee were to lose its regular-season finale against San Angelo on Saturday, the Rebels would finish at 7-3-2. Factor the ties into the winning percentage using the aforementioned UIL guidelines and the Rebs would finish with a .667 winning percentage.

Midland High finished at 6-2-4. Using the UIL formula, the Bulldogs would also finish at .667.

The question is, has the 4-5A Executive Committee specified anything contrary to the UIL guidelines? If they have, Midland Lee is in the playoffs and Midland High's season is complete. And, if Lee

Competitive field ready for Tall City tourney

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Twenty-nine teams with 145 individual high school golfers tee off in the 5th annual Midland Tall City Invitational tournament Thursday morning at Green Tree, Ranchland Hills and Midland Country Clubs.

The two-day, 36-hole event has become one of the region's premier links events in its short history. This year, its reputation loooks to grow even larger with one of the toughest fields ever featured.

"Out of a 16 team field, 12 have a legitimate chance of winning," Midland Lee head golf coach Ronnie Stephens said. Sixteen of the 29 teams will compete in the Division I draw; the remaining 13 teams are second or third squads from Class 4A and 5A programs, as well as the Midland Christian varsity.

All seven schools from District 4-5A — Midland High, Midland Lee, Odessa High, Odessa Permian, Abilene High, Abilene Cooper and San Angelo Central will compete. The nine additional schools are Lamesa, Del Rio, San Angelo Lakeview, Borger, Pecos, Denton, Big Spring, El Paso Hanks and Andrews.

Stephens chuckles when asked who's favored to win.

"That's a good question," Stephens said. "There are several teams that are very capable. Abilene Cooper has played well the last couple of weeks. Andrews and Big Spring would have to be favored too because they've already won tournaments. San Angelo should be the top team in our district, and Midland High has made some steady improvement.

"If people want to see a good high school tournament, they ought to come out to this one."

Lee finished seventh in last week's San Angelo Classic, but the Rebels were only nine strokes out of first. Midland High was a step off the pace, finishing eighth, 12 strokes out of first.

How tough is the remainder of the Tall City field? Lamesa won the Sweetwater tournament last weekend; Del Rio won its home tournament this year; Borger, one of the top Panhandle teams, finished fourth in San Angelo last weekend, and Denton is perenially one of the top teams on Northeast Texas, making the regional tournament for several years.

In addition, Hanks boasts of the top golf program in El Paso, and Big Spring won the San Angelo Classic.

"It's been a funny year for all of West Texas," Midland High golf coach John Ford said. "We haven't seen the (low) numbers out of West Texas teams. Especially in our district and in the 2-4A district."

David Sotelo and Ryan Thompson will start on the first squad for Lee. The other three spots will be decided before the start of the tournament; Seniors Randy Scharfenberg, Greg Garner and Ruben Rojas, and sophomores Dean Watson and Bill Buffaloe will start for MHS.

Division I teams tee off Thursday at 8:30 a.m. and complete play Friday at Ranchland Hills.

Division II squads begin play Thursday at 8:30 a.m. at Midland Country Club and finish Friday at Green Tree.

Lee's first squad tees off at 9:30 a.m. Thursday; Midland High follows at 10 a.m.

ACU tabs Mauldin

ABILENE (AP) — Tony Mauldin, the head basketball coach at Western Texas College for four seasons, has been named head coach at Abilene Christian University.

The announcement was made Tuesday.

Mauldin, former president of the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, had a 54-67 record at Western Texas. He was 14-16 this season.

Mauldin also coached Morton High School to three Texas Class 2A titles.

The Wildcats were 0-26 under interim coach Darryn Shearmire this year. Shearmire was promoted from assistant coach after the resignation of head coach Dee Nutt in November.

ACU will start next season with a 38-game losing streak.

"We know it will take hard work to turn the program around," Mauldin said. "We don't expect to go from the bottom to the top in one year. I know it will take awhile."

Davis may resign

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M basketball coach Kermit Davis Jr. will be asked to resign, according to a high-placed source, but Tuesday was given two days to review an investigative report on his recruiting practices.

Davis

The source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press, "It's not good for Davis. He will be allowed an opportunity to resign. If not, we'll have to let him go."

Tuesday's Answer — Shortstop Roger Peckinpaugh served as Yankee captain from 1914 to 1921. No other Yankee captain served more than six seasons.

Prices rally

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rallied Tuesday after OPEC agreed to cut crude production by 1 million barrels a day.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $19.68 per barrel, up 69 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Unleaded gasoline for delivery in April settled at 71.76 cents a gallon, up .35 cent. Home heating oil for delivery in April settled at 55.80 cents a gallon, up 1.37 cents.

Dollar lower

NEW YORK (AP) — A second day of central bank interventions pushed the dollar lower Tuesday, but analysts said unflagging confidence in the postwar economy helped stem the currency's decline.

Gold was mixed.

In New York, the dollar fell to 135.84 yen from late Monday's 138.20 yen.

In New York sterling rose, fetching $1.8625 by day's end, more than late Monday's $1.8515.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's prices, included: 1.5703 German marks, down from 1.5815; 1.3605 Swiss francs, down from 1.3705; 5.3495 French francs, down from 5.3845; 1,172.00 Italian lire, down from 1,180.00; and 1.1538 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1558.

Gold was mixed. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery rose 10 cents a troy ounce to settle at $364.80. New York Republic National bank later quoted a bid of $364.60, off 40 cents from Monday's late bid.

In Zurich, gold fell to a closing bid of $364.75, down from $368.10 bid late Monday. Earlier in Hong Kong, gold fell $5.46 an ounce to close at a bid of $365.57.

Silver fell in New York, declining 6.4 cents a troy ounce to settle at $4.006 on the Commodity Exchange.

Stocks fall

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 16.84 to 2922.52, marking the fourth consecutive day of losses.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by a ratio of nearly 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,035 up, 534 down and 463 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 176.44 million shares, against 161.60 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.55 to 202.49.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slid 1.53 at 353.33.

Attorney General says speculation hurt U.S.

■ A Pennsylvania Attorney General has charged that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has not done its job to regulate speculation of oil prices.

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Speculation in oil harmed the economy because the federal agency charged with regulating commodities trading failed to do its job during the Persian Gulf crisis, according to an attorney general's testimony to be presented to Congress on Wednesday.

Even though petroleum prices have now retreated to their pre-war levels, the testimony shows that oil trading at the New York Mercantile Exchange is still under fire from critics who say consumers are being victimized.

"Excessive speculation artificially drove up prices to the detriment of this nation's economy," Pennsylvania Attorney General Ernest D. Preate Jr. says in testimony prepared for a hearing by the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs.

"One federal agency, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, has been given authority by Congress to act against excessive speculation, but has not effectively done so," Preate was to say in the hearing arranged by Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman, D-Conn.

The CFTC would have no response to the charge until Commissioner William P. Albrecht testified on Wednesday, a spokesman said.

"We will be commenting to try to make sure the record is straight," CFTC spokesman Herb Jackson said Tuesday.

The Mercantile Exchange, where energy futures are traded in the United States, has vigorously disputed contentions that oil speculation is a problem. Exchange officials say they run an open market where buyer and seller meet, quickly and efficiently arriving at a fair prices for crude oil, unleaded gasoline and home heating oil.

Most of the trading is done by oil companies seeking to hedge their business against unexpected price swings, Mercantile Exchange President R. Patrick Thompson says. Thompson was also to testify Wednesday.

Thompson says the exchange did a good job of handling the huge price swings brought on by the latest oil crisis. He points out that prices came back down more quickly than they did during earlier oil shocks, in the days before oil prices were set by futures trading.

After Iraq invaded Kuwait in August, oil prices soared for several months, virtually doubling to $40 per barrel in October. Traders ran the price up on fears that the Mideast turmoil could disrupt vital crude supplies.

Although those fears never materialized, oil traders and Mercantile Exchange officials said after the fact that the concerns had been realistic, and prices would likely have spiked even if there had been no futures trading in oil, as it had during previous crises.

But the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General, which looked into oil pricing along with its counterparts in Connecticut and North Carolina, said earlier oil crises featured actual supply problems, not just fears.

"We can now say assuredly that those future market 'guesses' about supply shortages were dead wrong — but the damage from higher oil prices has been done," Preate said in his prepared testimony. "Higher oil prices have increased the federal budget deficit, slowed the economy into recession, 'whip-sawed' all of the securities markets, and added the burden of higher energy prices for American households."

The attorneys general recommend the formation of a special "Oil Policy Oversight Committee," which would have broader powers to set technical guidelines for oil futures trading. It would operate something like the Federal Reserve Board in its efforts to influence interest rates, Preate said.

Marathon Oil generates majority of USX revenue

■ In an effort to get their stocks evaluated with stocks of similar products, USX is applying for restructuring.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

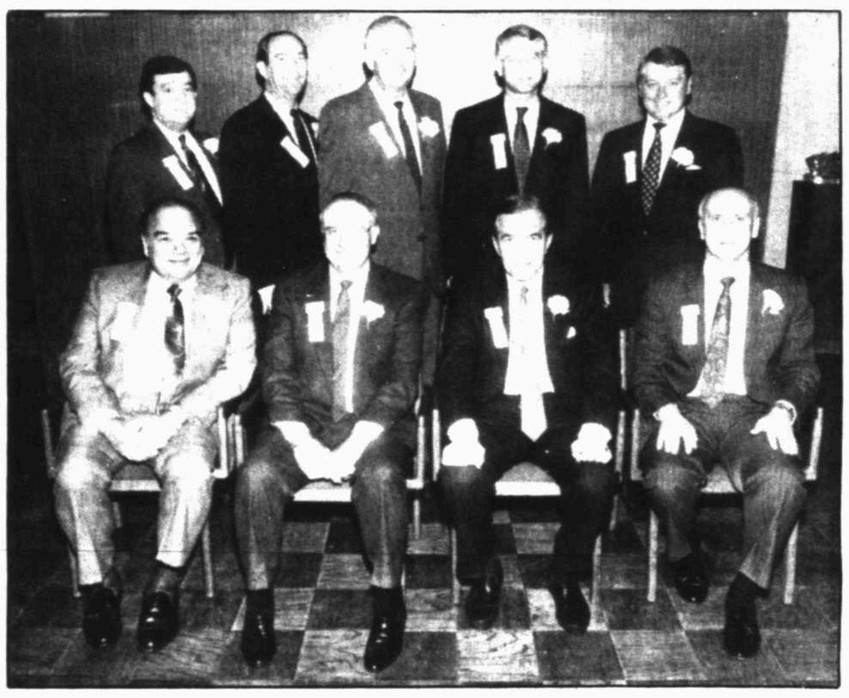

The life of an integrated oil company is interesting, but when one of the nation's top oil companies marries the nation's top steel company, it can get very interesting as Marathon Oil Co. has been finding out since 1982.

USX purchased Marathon Oil Co. in 1982, which was then the 17th largest oil company in America. Since then Marathon has followed aggressive exploration and development plans, and now accounts for approximately 70 percent of USX revenues.

The president of Marathon Oil Co. and the chairman of USX were in Midland Monday to be honored at a Midland Wildcatters Reception and talked briefly about future plans and past problems.

Commenting on the fact that USX is rapidly becoming an energy company, Chuck Corry, chairman of USX said: "The steel business is tough. We have to compete in a global market in which most of the steel industries are subsidized by governments and used as national public works projects to employ people. There is not much way America can compete with that arrangement." He also noted that the U.S. was used as a "dumping ground" for all low-priced surplus steel.

Even though there was wide disparity between the value of USX energy stocks and its USS steel stocks, Corry said USX stockholders had voted not to spin off the steel operations to focus on energy.

Brian Adamcik Reporter-Telegram

He did note, however, that USX Corp. was willing to allow its steel and energy common stocks to be traded as separate issues to give investors a "pure play."

"We thought each stock should be allowed to move in accordance with other stocks in its industry," said Corry. The stock restructure plan must be approved by USX stockholders in May.

The arrangement is reported to be a compromise with investor Carl Ichan who owns 13.3 percent of USX Corp. and has long been an irritant to management. Ichan had claimed that Marathon assets were grossly undervalued because they were locked into the overall stock price of USX.

One of the major assets of the corporation is the Yates field of West Texas, the jewel in the Marathon crown. Vic Beghini, president of Marathon, said that the Midland region was accounting for about 46,000 barrels daily of oil production and 44 million cubic feet of gas sales.

"We plan to continue to pursue an aggressive development and recovery program in this area," he said. Noting that the company was pleased with the successes of horizontal drilling in the Yates field.

In addition to domestic efforts the company also maintains a large portfolio of international projects, with production in eight countries and concessions in 16 countries.

Big independent oil company gets new leader

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jack L. Messman was elected president and chief executive officer of Union Pacific Resources, the nation's second largest independent oil company.

He succeeds William L. Adams as chief executive. Adams, 62, will remain chairman of the company, which is a subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp. in Bethlehem, Pa.

Messman, 50, has been the chairman and chief executive officer of USPCI Inc., Union Pacific's Houston-based environmental services subsidiary, since 1988. He will be succeeded in that capacity by Robert S. Jackson, chief financial officer of Union Pacific Resources.

The appointments take effect May 1.

Union Pacific Resources last year earned $240 million on sales of $857 million.

Former Lincoln S&L president pleads guilty

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The former president of the Lincoln Savings and Loan Association pleaded guilty on Monday to two federal securities fraud charges in connection with the criminal investigation of the defunct institution and its former owner, Charles H. Keating Jr.

The charges against Raymond C. Fidel related to the sale of high-yield "junk bonds" issued by Lincoln's parent company, the Phoenix-based American Continental Corp., which Keating headed.

Fidel is the only Lincoln executive who has been charged with crimes on a federal level. He, along with Keating and two other company executives, have been charged with California state fraud counts that are similar in scope to the federal criminal charges.

The state indictment, as well as the federal "information" filed against Fidel last week, says that the four executives misled investors about the safety of American Continental bonds sold through Lincoln branches.

Lincoln, based in Los Angeles, ultimately failed, forcing American Continental into bankruptcy and leaving the junk bonds worthless.

Regulators say Lincoln's collapse will cost taxpayers more than $2 billion, making it the largest savings and loan bailout so far.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to much personal happiness. Making more contacts with the business world will boost your income. A relationship that gets off to a rocky start in August could turn golden in October. Refine your job skills next November. A long-desired reconciliation with a sibling will make the winter holidays truly joyful. Marriage holds special appeal in early 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: golfer Andy Bean, actress Deborah Raffin, singer-songwriter Neil Sedaka, bandleader Sammy Kaye.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The spotlight is on joint finances. Intriguing investment opportunities arise. Do not waste valuable time arguing about trivial matters. Give a romantic relationship time to develop.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful not to overlook an important task or health matter. Real estate transactions enjoy highly favorable influences. Consult a lawyer before signing agreements. Romance is in bloom!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Come to grips with what is happening at your place of work. Focus on what needs to be done immediately. A promotion or raise could be in the works. Take a calculated risk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Clear up an old misunderstanding with your mate or business partner. Attention to minute detail is the secret to your success. People and places at a distance could be in the spotlight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Move ahead with an interesting new plan. Influential people will be impressed by your enthusiasm. Be careful not to overlook something important. An excellent evening for socializing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Listen to your strong inner voice. Lady Luck is on your side in both business and romance. A conflict could develop on the home front if someone insists on constantly bringing up the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your enterprising attitude helps you make sweeping improvements at home. A decorating project is just one possibility. Protect your credit rating. Be sure to pay your bills on time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can make fantastic progress on a new project today. Job interviews will go well. Return telephone calls promptly and write important letters. A hobby could become a source of income.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Long-term plans take precedence now. A move to another city or business location is a real possibility. Consult family before making a final decision. Community work brings you deep satisfaction.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emotionally and creatively, it is all happening now. Be ready to move quickly when a golden opportunity presents itself. Previous endeavors begin to pay off.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Projects that are in the preparatory stage may provide more pleasure than the actual launching. Travel could boost your earning potential. In romance, speak from the heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Great real estate news puts you in a positive frame of mind. Working hard now will pay huge dividends down the road. When accepting an honor, share the limelight with your loved ones.

TODAY'S CHILDREN should be excellent students, thanks to their tremendous powers of concentration. These youngsters are highly sensitive to people's moods and try hard to please them. They have a deep dislike of conflict. Wise parents will point out the pitfalls in always trying to appease others. These Pisces' lively imaginations make them good writers, actors and public relations counselors. A strong interest in psychic phenomena and mysticism can be channeled into profitable enterprises.

Opening lead: King of ◇

When the enemy threat is there for all to see, don't just ignore it. Take what steps you can in an attempt to neutralize it.

Over North's takeout double, East took advantage of the vulnerability to preempt to the three-level with a hand that most would be happy to consign to the garbage pail. South had just enough to enter the auction freely, and North's raise to game was clear-cut.

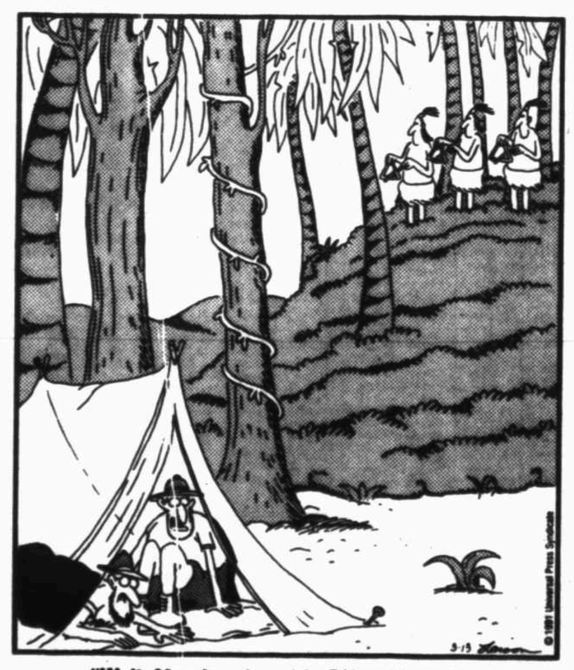

West led the king of diamonds, on which East followed with the deuce. Prospects for the defense were not very bright. The only fast tricks available were the ace-king of diamonds and ace of spades. If there was a setting trick available, it would have to come from the club suit.

East's deuce of diamonds was distressing to West. It meant declarer held at most two diamonds and that, left to his own devices, declarer would be able to obtain two discards on dummy's diamonds. If that happened, the chances for a club trick would go aglimmering.

There was just one hope—declarer had to have started with four clubs and no more than five trumps. West continued with the ace of diamonds and another, on which a club was discarded from the closed hand. Declarer could see what was coming, and in an attempt to forestall the defense's schemes, South wasted no time in leading a trump. But West grabbed the ace of spades and led a fourth diamond, and East's six of spades was a defensive boon. Although declarer could overruff, there was no place to park the club loser. Twist and turn as much as possible, declarer still had to concede a club trick at the end—down one.

Princess Kiko expecting baby, the emperor's first grandchild

TOKYO (AP) — Princess Kiko, wife of Emperor Akihito's second son, is expecting the couple's first child in October, the Imperial Household Agency announced Tuesday.

Princess Kiko

The baby, if male, would stand third in line to the throne, following Crown Prince Naruhito, 31, and the baby's father, Prince Akishino, 25. The baby would be the emperor's first grandchild.

The announcement said doctors reported the 24-year-old Kiko in good health.

She and Akishino married June 29. Naruhito, the emperor's eldest son, is still unmarried.

Kiko was a graduate student at Gakushuin University and a commoner before she married her former fellow student, known then as Prince Aya. She is the daughter of a professor at the school.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Cartoonist Hank Ketcham, creator of the mophead character Dennis the Menace, has dedicated a $200,000 playground he designed at Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children & Women.

"I don't like teeter-totters or swings," said Ketcham as he showed off the play area for children who are disabled or recovering from such maladies as spina bifida and cancer.

The new playground features cushioned flooring and recreational equipment that can be used to help children exercise as well as have fun, hospital officials said Monday.

"We feel that play is a very important part of a child's life, and it helps in the healing process," said John Bozard, the hospital's executive director.

The playground is the second one designed by Ketcham, who created one in Monterey, Calif.

This one took special effort because childhood disabilities had to be kept in mind, within an atmosphere that would be "unhospital," Ketcham said.

The hospital is named for golfing great Arnold Palmer, who has been its chief fund-raiser.

LONDON (AP) — An English professor has been honored for recasting the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" into an epic poem set in his native St. Lucia in the Caribbean.

The $18,500 W.H. Smith Literary Award, sponsored by a retail book chain, was disclosed Tuesday in both The Times and The Daily Telegraph.

Derek Walcott, 61, teaches at Boston University and did not plan to attend the awards ceremony, the newspapers said. He is involved with final rehearsals at the American Repertory Theater in Boston for the premiere of "Steel," his musical based on the birth of the steel band in Trinidad.

"Omeros," a poem of 2,500 stanzas, was published last year by Faber and Faber.

"I think what is being honored is not me but the simple life of St. Lucia," The Telegraph quoted Walcott as saying. "I've never really felt concerned about the reception of the poem.

"I don't mean that in an arrogant way, but because it's about St. Lucia, which is not a society that knows about literary awards as prestige. I almost feel guilty about accepting the prize."

OPENER: MHS leads in hits

(From 1D)

Not as hard as Culpepper, however, who after being relegated to center field led off the top of the fifth with a solo homer over the right-field fence that stretched the lead to 9-7.

"If I went 4-for-4 with three triples it doesn't change anything if we lost," Culpepper said. "The ones with Lee seem to hurt the most because they're crosstown rivals.

"We worked hard for this game, but they got the last hit and that's what counts."

Lee scratched out one run in the bottom of the sixth when David Sullivan reached on an infield single and scored on Shane Greeley's double to left. After Johnston retired the Bulldogs in order in the top of the seventh, the Rebels' last hope lay in the middle of its lineup.

Johnston, batting for the first time in the game, slashed a leadoff single to right-center. But the hurler was erased when Hinojos hit into a force play at second.

Hinojos moved to second on a base hit up the middle by Salois. Benavidez then sent Rodriquez in to run for Salois, and Mark Siedenberger stepped in to pinch hit. His roller to the pitcher's mound moved both runners up, but it also gave Lee its second out.

Chase looked at just one offering from Rounding — a curve ball — and with both runners moving he smashed it between third and short to cap a game in which all 19 runs were earned via 27 hits.

"We're young, and when you get a big lead and you're young its easy to relax and put it back in neutral," said Rick Wood, the first-year coach of the Bulldogs. "We found out we can't do that, especially with a good team like Lee.

"But I'm tickled with the way we played because Lee is well coached, they hit the ball well and when we made mistakes on the mound they took advantage of it."

MHS out-hit Lee 14-13, and Jeff Casbeer and Jeremy Burton joined Culpepper with three hits and two RBI each for the Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs host Abilene High at 2 p.m. Saturday at Angels Stadium, while the Rebels travel to Abilene to take on the state's No. 1 ranked Cooper Cougars, also at 2 p.m. Saturday.

CHASE: Hitter takes all

trying to pitch smart, but he hit a good pitch. You've got to give credit where credit is due," Rounding said.

"The way they hit, you have to respect them from a pitcher's point of view. That's the best hitting Lee team in a long time. You have got to pitch smart."

As a matter of fact, both teams had a pretty good day at the plate. Even though the Bulldogs lost, they out-hit Lee 14-13. MHS pitcher/outfielder Dewayne Culpepper was 3-for-4 with a solo home run, and was a triple shy of hitting for the cycle. Outfielder Jeremy Burton and catcher Jeff Casbeer also had three hits for the 'Dogs.

Chase wound up with a 2-for-4 line, with three RBI for the Rebels. Lee shortstop Shane Greeley was 2-for-3 while driving in three more runs, and catcher Sean Salois' bases-loaded double was inches short of being a grand slam to left.

But after all else was done, it was Chase's hit that will live in the memory of most of the fans present, and Benavidez would not have it any other way.

"Sometimes Allen struggles and kind of looks bad, but if you're a pitcher who is going to give up on Allen Chase, he's going to hurt you. He's not going to take an 0-for-4 because he will eventually get his licks. That's why he's leading off," Benavidez said.

SOCCER: Clarification of playoff rules is expected lost Saturday, that would mean the second-place team (Lee, 7-3-2) would have more losses than the third-place team (MHS, 6-2-4).

(From 1D)

MISD Athletic Director Jack Tayrien said Tuesday that he interprets the district rule to mean that Lee is in the playoffs. Tayrien said that — the way he and at least one other district AD see the rule — ties and losses are not factored into the system unless the teams have the same number of wins.

"I don't have the authority to certify the district runners-up, though," Tayrien said. The Executive Committee must certify playoff representatives by March 23.

Tayrien said that he will ask the Executive Committee today to clarify Section 1100.21.

Of course, the question is moot if Lee wins or ties Saturday.

Midland High coach Tom Esikhati was matter of fact about the situation.

"I would argue the point (if Lee loses Saturday and the teams fall into a percentage tie)," Esikhati said. "It's pretty hard to give a clear solution on what should be done.

"But I don't want to be controversial ... until we see what happens Saturday."

If Midland High is indeed done, the Bulldogs ended on a high note.

The MHS defense kept Cooper at bay in the second half. The Cougars couldn't get off a shot in the last 40 minutes after giving MHS goalkeeper Bryant Mueller a couple of scares in the first half.

Sweeper Jeff Lanning said the Bulldog fullbacks picked it up a notch in the second half.

"We put a little more effort into it," Lanning said. "Coach talked to us about it at halftime.

"In the first half, we were a little out of control, but in the second half, we tried to bring the ball downfield on the ground."

Esikhati said the second-half plan was to utilize the whole field instead of playing kickball.

"I told the fullbacks to contain, let the midfielders control and not worry about our forwards getting caught offsides."

Offsides calls plagued MHS all afternoon, due in part to Cooper's offsides trap defense. But Esikhati didn't want to adjust his offense specifically to cut down on offsides calls.

Rebels secure second place

Staff Report

ABILENE — Midland Lee apparently secured a bi-district playoff berth with its 2-1 win over Abilene High in District 3 soccer actioin here Tuesday.

The Rebels, 7-2-2, earned the second playoff spot in District 3 no matter how they fare against San Angelo on Saturday if Section 1100.21 of the District 4-5A Policy Book is intrepreted literally (see related story).

After a scoreless first half, Abilene High's Barry Reese drew first blood in the 52nd minute off a corner kick. But less than a minute later, Lee's Greg Pepper created a one-on-one situation with the AHS goalkeeper and scored his third goal of the season as a result.

Later in the second half, Lee's Mark Steward scored the game-winner with an assist from a sharply-executed crossing pass by Pepper. Steward's seventh goal of the season tied him for the team scoring lead.

The Rebels wrap up the regular season Saturday with a 2 p.m. start against San Angelo at the Lee field.

"I didn't want to slow down the rhythm of our offense," he said.

Rodriguez broke out of a three-way tie for the team scoring lead with his sixth goal of the season after a Cooper player was whistled down for a hand ball in the penalty area.

Elsewhere in the district, San Angelo wrapped up the district title with a 4-0 win over Odessa Permian. The Bobcats take a 9-0-2 district mark into Saturday's match with Lee.

Cooper coach benched for rest of season

Staff Report

ABILENE — Abilene Cooper head baseball coach Andy Malone was suspended for the remainder of the season Tuesday after being charged with using "vulgar and profane" language during a post-loss tirade.

After the Cougars lost two games Saturday in the Fourth Worth Southwest Classic tournament, Malone allegedly used strong profanity while berating his team on the way home. Monday, an unidentified player and his parent took the charges to Cooper athletic coordinator and head football coach Randy Allen, who then relayed them to the Abilene superintendent.

Malone will be replaced by former assistant Randy Jones, while Jim West takes the new top assistant's job. Malone is in his ninth year as Cooper's head baseball coach.

The incident marks the second time this school year Malone has been involved in controversy. In October, 1990, he was charged with gross mismanagement of Cooper baseball enterprise funds after overseeing transactions without proper documentation.

Carbohydrates are dieter's best friend

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

In 1910, Americans got almost 60 percent of their calories from carbohydrates; by 1980 the figure had fallen to 43 percent. The gap has been filled in by fat.

If you add the fact that Americans get less exercise now than they did in 1910, you can easily understand why they grow fatter every year.

"It's gluttony and sloth," said Dr. Elliot Danforth Jr., director of the Clinical Research Center at the University of Vermont in Burlington.

Or, to put it in 20th-century terms, the way to lose weight is to eat less, especially fat, and exercise more. Hardly new concepts. Most people have long since tired of hearing them.

But singling out fat as the No. 1 enemy provides a new twist on the old message. For years, Americans were led to believe that whether they limited their diets to 1,800 calories a day by eating pasta, rice and broccoli or by eating ice cream, brownies, potato chips and hollandaise sauce, the results would be the same. It was the number of calories eaten that was important, not where they came from.

We know now that for most people, that is not true.

A DIET HIGH in complex carbohydrates is a better bet for losing weight than most other kinds of diets. There are several reasons why fatty foods go directly to your hips and thighs and carbohydrates do not. For one thing, a gram of fat has nine calories whereas a gram of carbohydrate or protein has only four. So fat has more caloric density.

Though a calorie is a calorie from the point of view of the heat it produces, when fat, protein and carbohyrate calories enter the body they do not act the same way. "Almost 97 percent of fat that is eaten goes into fat stores in minutes," said Ron Goor, who with his wife, Nancy, wrote "Choose to Lose" (Houghton Mifflin, 1990).

"Fat is very, very different from carbohydrates. There is a very limited capacity to store carbohydrates in the body."

Carbohydrates can be stored as fat, but it takes a lot of them, much more than a person would ordinarily eat, for that conversion to take place. The body gives a high priority to balancing the amount of protein and carbohydrate it takes in with the amount it uses. But the body does not control fat as well.

THE RESULT IS that "one is likely to make mistakes in the fat balance," said Dr. Jean-Pierre Flatt, professor of biochemistry at the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester.

It's easy, as the Frusen Gladje commercial told us, to eat an entire pint of ice cream, all alone, in one sitting. It is just as true with a box of cookies, even a whole pie. Think how much easier it is to eat 1.5 ounces of potato chips than it is to eat 12 ounces of baked potato, which has the same number of calories. That's because eating large quantities of fat does not make you feel satisfied or full.

But eating carbohydrates does, particularly those found in grains, beans, fruits and vegetables, which differ from the carbohydrates found in refined sugars.

Eating carbohydrates leaves one feeling satisfied or full in about 20 minutes.

This is not an open invitation to eat carbohydrates in unlimited quantities. To lose weight you still have to take in fewer calories than you expend in energy. But one of the biggest problems with dieting is that most people have a limited tolerance for being hungry.

THEY LAST A few weeks on a diet, maybe even lose the amount of weight they wanted, and then their willpower evaporates. They go back to eating as they did before the diet.

"If you start out at 180 pounds and reduce to 150 pounds, you are going to have to live the rest of your life eating as a 150-pound person," said Paul Moe, a research leader at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Beltsville Human Nutrition Research Center in Maryland.

"If you eat again as a 180-pound person, you will become a 180-person again. People have this mystical idea that after they stop dieting they can go back to whatever they were eating before."

Flatt of the University of Massachusetts said: "Dieting quickly is a very different situation from reasonable weight maintenance."

Start the day out right with high carbohydrate breakfast ideas that include wheat waffles, blueberry oat muffins and pasta egg scramble.

In a crash diet, "you have to figure out how to beat the appetite in order to lose weight quickly, in spite of being hungry."

For weight maintenance, "you have to make hunger and appetite part of the system. In the long run, people are very influenced by hunger. You can't use willpower all the time."

So if you choose a diet with fewer calories than you usually eat, but one that is high in complex carbohydrates, you are likely to feel more satisfied than if you choose a diet with the same number of calories but low in carbohydrates. This makes maintaining the diet easier.

IT IS NO longer a contest between willpower and hunger: you won't be hungry. Dr. Olaf Mickelsen, a professor of nutrition at Michigan State University, proved this theory in 1975, but no one was paying attention.

He found that slightly overweight young men lost weight painlessly when they included 12 slices of bread a day with their meals. One group ate low-fiber bread, another ate high-fiber bread. Each group lost weight, but the group that ate the high-fiber bread lost more.

It is even easier to lose weight if you do a little aerobic exercise. That does not necessarily mean jumping around in a gym or running around a track when it is 10 below. Walking will do, slow walking. In fact, it will do even better than high-intensity exercise, Flatt said.

The amount of calories burned by running three miles in 40 minutes is about the same as that burned by walking three miles in one hour, but the walker will burn a higher proportion of fat.

DEAR ABBY

Those who are closest should have final word

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I must take issue with your answer to "Unfinished Business," in which you said, "It is appropriate for the kin of the deceased always to have the final say regarding funeral matters."

Van Buren

I have a male friend whose lover of 14 years died recently; let's call the lover Sam. While Sam was alive, his parents had virtually disowned him, refusing to acknowledge that he was gay or that he had been the devoted live-in companion of my friend for most of his adult life.

Sam's parents had not spoken to their son in years. Yet when Sam died, they swooped in, took his body away in total disregard for Sam's wishes and my friend's feelings, and they buried Sam in a town he had hoped never to see again!

Why is it "appropriate" for parents to do what they did? Think about it, Abby: There are many cases when friends and lovers, not parents, are the ones who deserve to have the final say. — BOILING IN BUFFALO

DEAR BOILING: Considering the circumstances, it was NOT appropriate — indeed it was cruel, presumptuous and hypocritical — for Sam's parents to have acted as they did.

In cases where lovers or friends are closer to the deceased than his or her kin, individuals in Sam's situation should give certified documentation to their attorneys and to their lovers indicating that he (or she) shall be in charge of funeral and burial arrangements, and, possibly, the disposition of the estate.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of three years refuses to sleep on his left side. He believes that if he sleeps on his left side over a long period of time, it will damage his heart. So every night he hugs me for a few minutes (I sleep on my left side), then he turns his back on me in order not to damage his heart.

Abby, he is making me paranoid about this because I always sleep on my left side, which my husband insists is bad for my heart.

Is there any medical evidence to support his claim? — LEFT-SIDE SLEEPER IN TEXAS

DEAR LEFT-SIDE SLEEPER: A call to the American Heart Association confirms the following: Sleeping on one's left side does no damage to the heart.

DEAR ABBY: Now that you are asking your readers to write to our men and women in the Middle East, I just had to write this letter. It is really a belated thank-you for a letter you had in your column in 1967, asking your readers to write to the servicemen who were stationed in Thailand during the Vietnam War.

My father read that letter in your column and urged me to write. Thinking it was the patriotic thing to do, I wrote to "Any Serviceman" and it ended up in the hands of a young man named Andersen. He answered my letter, and it was the beginning of a very romantic correspondence.

I want you to know that as the result of that correspondence, I have been happily married for 21 years to the serviceman who answered my letter. We now have two wonderful sons. One is a senior in high school, and the other is now in the U.S. Marine Corps.

Thank you, Abby, for encouraging people to write to our servicemembers. One never knows what a letter may lead to, or how it can change your life. I found out, and can't thank you enough. — LINDA ANDERSEN, SAN DIEGO

DEAR LINDA: You belong to a very large club. I could write a book about the couples who found each other through "Operation Dear Abby." And one day, I may. Please send me your husband's given name, rank and serial number for my records.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WALTER IN WINNIPEG: It's not necessarily true, but the joke you refer to goes like this: "The difference between the Yiddish and the British is: The British leave and never say goodbye, and the Yiddish say goodbye and never leave."

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: More Favorite Recipes by Dear Abby, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Spice up Easter ham

NEW YORK (AP) — For a spicy, sweet flavor, glaze your Easter ham with spiced honey and brown sugar. Fully cooked, boneless hams can be reheated in a conventional oven in about an hour, depending on the size of the ham.

Boneless hams are sold in weights ranging from 1½ pounds to 11 pounds. They will yield 4 to 5 servings per pound.

The Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board says ham should be kept in its original package in the coldest part of the refrigerator until it is ready to be cooked. Store leftovers, tightly wrapped, in the refrigerator for up to 4 or 5 days.

Freezing, which often affects texture, is not recommended unless the ham is wrapped tightly in a moisture-proof and vapor-proof package and kept at 0 degrees F or colder. Frozen ham should be used within two months.

HONEY-GLAZED HAM

¼ cup packed light brown sugar
1 tablespoon honey
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
1 3- to 4-pound boneless ham, fully cooked

For glaze, combine brown sugar, honey and allspice in a small bowl.

Take ham from the refrigerator and place it on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Insert a meat thermometer into the thickest part of the ham, not touching the bone or fat. Add ½ cup water to pan. Cover. If covering the pan with aluminum foil, leave thermometer dial exposed. Cook in a preheated 325-degree F oven for 19 to 23 minutes per pound, or until thermometer registers 135 degrees F. Remove cover. Spread glaze over the ham; cook an additional 15 to 20 minutes. Allow ham to stand, covered, about 10 minutes, or until thermometer registers 140 degrees.

Corporate, Banking & Business

Q. I have a retail establishment that I operate as a sole proprietorship. I carry public liability insurance as required by my landlord, but I find the premiums becoming increasingly high and hard to justify. Should I incorporate?

A. Incorporating will not relieve you of the obligation to carry public liability insurance as required by your lease. However, if your business is incorporated, and a judgement is taken against it in an amount in excess of your insurance coverage, your personal assets would be insulated from execution on such a judgement. A corporation provides a shield for your personal assets, but requires some trouble and expense in setting up and maintaining.

Q. My wife and I are in the process of divorcing. How will the Judge decide who will carry and pay for health insurance coverage for my daughter?

A. The Family Code provides that in any suit affecting the parent-child relationship, the Court shall order that health insurance be provided for the child. The Judge will consider factors such as the cost and quality of available coverage and will give priority to coverage supplied by an employer. The Court may order either party to supply the coverage and can order one party to reimburse the other for the expense of carrying the child on the policy.

If health insurance is not available for the child at either place of employment, the Court may order the party who pays child support to provide health insurance to the extent that it is available from another source, such as individual coverage, if that party is financially able to provide such coverage.

Estate Planning And Probate

Q. What is a living trust?

A. A living trust is a revocable trust created by a person (the "grantor") to avoid probate on his assets when he dies. Generally, the grantor serves as trustee of the trust. The trust is administered primarily for the benefit of the grantor during his life. Upon the death of the grantor, the assets of the trust are distributed according to the terms of the trust agreement. Assets properly transferred to a living trust will not pass under the grantor's will or be subject to the probate process upon the death of the grantor. A living trust provides convenience and privacy and can reduce the expenses of administration of the grantor's estate. However, the assets in a living trust are includable in the grantor's estate for federal estate tax purposes and are subject to estate tax if the grantor's taxable estate exceeds $600,000.

Chocolate terrine makes an elegant Easter dessert

By Nancy Byal

Capture the season's best fruit in a fabulous fresh-tasting dessert, perfect for Easter entertaining because you can make it the day before. A duo of spring favorites — tangy rhubarb and juicy strawberries — serve as the splashy backdrop to a two-tone chocolate and orange chiffon. Dress up each serving with fresh fruits, mint and chocolate curls.

CHOCOLATE TERRINE WITH SPRING FRUITS

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup water
4 slightly beaten egg yolks
4 egg whites
¾ cup whipping cream
6 ounces semisweet chocolate, melted and cooled
2 tablespoons orange liqueur
2 cups sliced fresh rhubarb or ½ of a thawed 16-ounce package frozen rhubarb
1 cup sliced strawberries
¼ cup water
½ cup sugar
4 teaspoons cornstarch
Orange sections (optional)
Whole and sliced strawberries (optional)
Fresh mint (optional)
Chocolate curls (optional)

In a 1½-quart saucepan combine unflavored gelatin and the ¾ cup sugar; stir in the ¾ cup water. Stir in egg yolks. Cook and stir over medium heat until gelatin is dissolved and mixture comes to a gentle boil; cook and stir for 2 minutes more. Cover surface with clear plastic wrap. Cool to room temperature, about 1 hour.

In a large mixer bowl beat egg whites with an electric mixer on high speed until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight); fold in the cooled gelatin mixture. Beat the whipping cream just until soft peaks form; fold into gelatin mixture. Divide into two equal portions, about 2 cups each.

Into one portion, gently fold melted chocolate; cover and keep at room temperature. Into remaining portion, gently fold orange liqueur; pour into an 8x4x2-inch loaf pan, spreading evenly in pan. Cover and chill liqueur layer until partially set, about 20 to 30 minutes.

Carefully spoon the chocolate portion onto the liqueur layer when it is almost set but still slightly sticky to the touch. Cover and chill the terrine about 6 hours, or until firm.

For sauce, in a medium saucepan combine rhubarb, 1 cup strawberries and ¼ cup water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer for 5 to 8 minutes or until tender. Drain, reserving liquid. Discard pulp.

Add enough water to liquid to equal 1¼ cups; return to saucepan. Stir together the ½ cup sugar and cornstarch. Stir into liquid in pan. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir for 2 minutes more. Cool. Cover and chill.

To serve, unmold the terrine onto a serving platter. Slice to serve. If desired, decorate with orange sections, additional strawberries, mint and chocolate curls. Serve with sauce. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 75% adult and 25% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributor's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
