Iraq sentences U.S. civilians to 8 years

■ David Daliberti, William Barloon were tried, convicted for illegally entering Iraq.

Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Two Americans who strayed across the Kuwaiti border into Iraq were sentenced to eight years in prison Saturday in what the United States called a "misguided attempt" at diplomatic coercion.

David Daliberti and William Barloon were tried and convicted for illegally entering Iraqi territory, the U.S. State Department said, citing Polish diplomats who were monitoring the case for the American government.

Iraq had linked the Americans' fate to U.N. sanctions imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990 — a linkage Washington rejects. The United States has been adamant about maintaining the crippling sanctions imposed after Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait. Iraq has been lobby-

Staffers at paper take four awards at AP convention

Reporter-Telegram staffers took four awards — including first place in short features by Katherine Poteet — at the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors' convention. The winners were announced Saturday in Galveston.

Ms. Poteet won for a story titled "Drunk and Orderly," about a program to train police officers how to test for DWI (driving while intoxicated).

Lifestyle editor Elizabeth Edwin and staff writer Myra Lee Salcedo and staff photographers Curt Wilcott, Brian Adamcik and Joe D. Williams, won a second-place award in team effort for their package "Include Me In." The 16-page special section explored the concept of "inclusion," which recognizes people with disabilities as a part of the world.

Wilcott, chief photographer, also won a second-place award in feature photography for "MARC affection," which was part of that special package.

The final award was captured by news editor, Dallas Merrick, who took an honorable mention for front-page lay out.

High-speed chase sends pedestrians scrambling

A 25-year-old man sent adults and children "scrambling for their lives" as he raced through a Stanton park at 77 mph Saturday afternoon, drove the wrong way into traffic on Interstate 20, and evaded officers shooting at his tires for 18 miles, according to Midland police reports.

Midland isn't safe from AIDS virus, health-care experts say

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland is a fairly safe community to live in compared to large cities, but it is not safe from the AIDS virus, according to two health-care professionals.

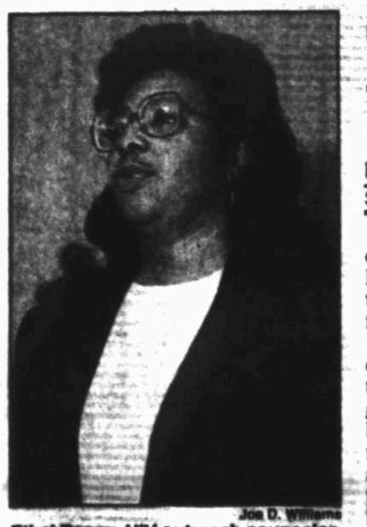

"HIV is a worldwide epidemic. But it is here. It is in this town, and it is in Odessa," said Ethel Denzy, certified HIV outreach counselor and licensed chemical dependency counselor.

"We have had 71 AIDS cases in Midland County (since 1990) and 38 deaths," Ms. Denzy said Saturday at the HIV/AIDS seminar hosted by the Women of Color Civic & Social Club.

Civic club member Cynthia Connally said the organization hosted the seminar "in order to keep our community aware of issues which impact us socially and politically."

Ms. Denzy said she regretted that only a few teenagers attended the Saturday afternoon event. "Our adolescents are at a high risk. And if they get HIV now, they might not know for 10 years. They might not have any symptoms until they are in their 20s."

Officials seek proposals to fund with annual block grant dollars

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The annual process has begun to decide where dollars from Midland's share of federal Community Development Block Grant funds should be spent.

As part of the procedure, city officials are accepting applications for distribution of some of the grant money generally used to benefit low- to moderate-income residents. Non-profit agencies can apply for a portion of the grant for programs that meet CDBG eligibility.

"We're looking for ideas, applications, proposals for the City Council to consider to fund," said Sylvester Cantu, the city's community development coordinator.

City officials expect to receive between $1.32 million and $1.41 million in CDBG dollars to be used in the fiscal year 1995-96. The higher figure is based on allocation calculations used in recent years; this year's appropriation may be less due to cutbacks initiated by Congress.

Last year, the city received $1.38 million. The largest allocations went toward paving streets, park improvements and housing programs. Those allocations followed historical uses of the money.

Evidence links cult to sarin attacks, report says

■ Aum Shinri Kyo cult has denied involvement in subway, Matsumoto poisonings.

Associated Press

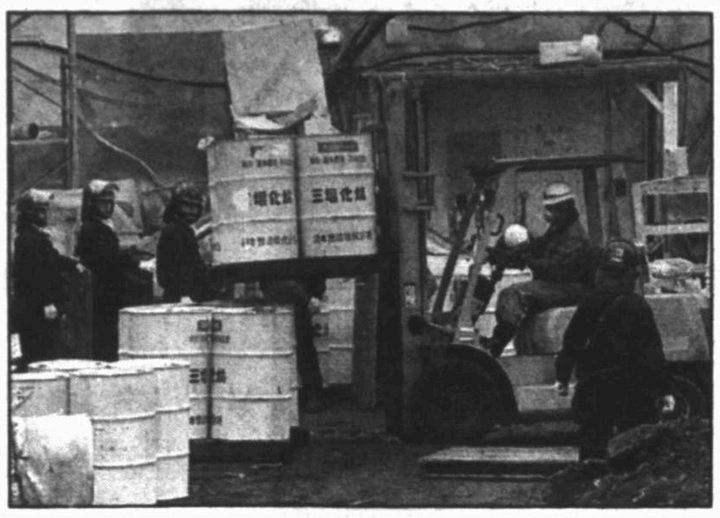

OSAKA, Japan — Police on Saturday reportedly linked chemical residue found outside a doomsday cult compound last year to the traces of nerve gas found in the Tokyo subway after an attack that killed 10 people.

The residue police found in soil samples nine months ago also matches that discovered following the mysterious deaths last year of seven people in central Japan, the Kyodo News Service said.

The nerve gas sarin was blamed in both cases.

No one has claimed responsibility for either Monday's subway attack, which also sickened 5,000 people, or last year's deaths in Matsumoto. The Aum Shinri Kyo, or Supreme Truth, cult has denied involvement in either.

Police would not confirm the Kyodo report. They have maintained that four days of raids on cult properties this week were prompted by suspicion the group was involved in kidnappings.

AP Laserphoto

Confiscated drums containing phosphorous trichoride are taken out of a warehouse during the fourth day of a police raid on one of the Aum Shinri Kyo cult's communes, Friday.

On Saturday, police seized hundreds more barrels of chemicals which could be used in the production of sarin.

Police told the national newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun that chemicals found on cult properties so far could have made enough sarin to kill 4.2 million people in an attack on an urban center. The newspaper did not say how police arrived at the figure.

Two weeks after the Matsumoto deaths, police took soil samples from near the group's compound in Kamikuishiki, at the foot of Mount Fuji, after neighbors had complained of noxious fumes.

Sarin samples were found, but no arrests made. The police on Saturday linked chemical residues found in those samples to the subway attack and the Matsumoto deaths, Kyodo said.

There was no immediate response from the cult, and phones calls to its offices were not answered.

Cult leader Shoko Asahara claimed he and about 850 followers are sick because of nerve gas attacks which he claimed were launched by the U.S. military.

"I say this because the substance (sarin) was detected from the air after more than 10 U.S. military planes flew over," he said in a videotaped statement to his followers, obtained Saturday by The Associated Press.

"Therefore, our enemy would be none other than the U.S. military, if we wanted to fight."

The video, which offered no evidence, was reportedly shown at 36 cult chapters and training centers nationwide.

Police continued to comb buildings owned by the group and removed tons of chemicals.

Wedding allows Kabul residents few hours of joy amidst civil war

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — The young bride wore a green floor-length gown, a sequined jacket and lace veil that fell to her shoulders. The groom wore a gray suit and red tie.

For a few precious hours last week, the wedding party could celebrate something joyful in Kabul and forgot about the civil war that has reduced entire neighborhoods to ruins and created refugee camps the size of small towns.

"Marriage is the most natural thing. War cannot stop us," said Wakil Ahmed Serhadi, 30, who like his 25-year-old bride, Waheeda, is a professor at Kabul University.

Their friends were mostly from Kabul's young, educated crowd. Instead of rice, they threw handfuls of Afghan money at the couple for good luck.

Friends danced and twirled around the couple, kissing the bride and slapping the groom on the back.

Clapping her hands to the rhythm of an Afghan rock-and-roll band, guest Afsana Bashizada said such celebrations seemed a lost art in Afghanistan, where war has raged for 16 years.

"Afghans have forgotten everything. They have forgotten to laugh, to party," said Ms. Bashizada, a friend of the bride.

Outside, a steady downpour beat a soothing rhythm on the tin roof. There were no thunderous roars of incoming rockets, no screaming planes overhead. Most important, there was no fear.

In a small room, with only the immediate family watching, the cleric married the couple. In keeping with Afghan tradition, the bride changed into a white dress after the ceremony.

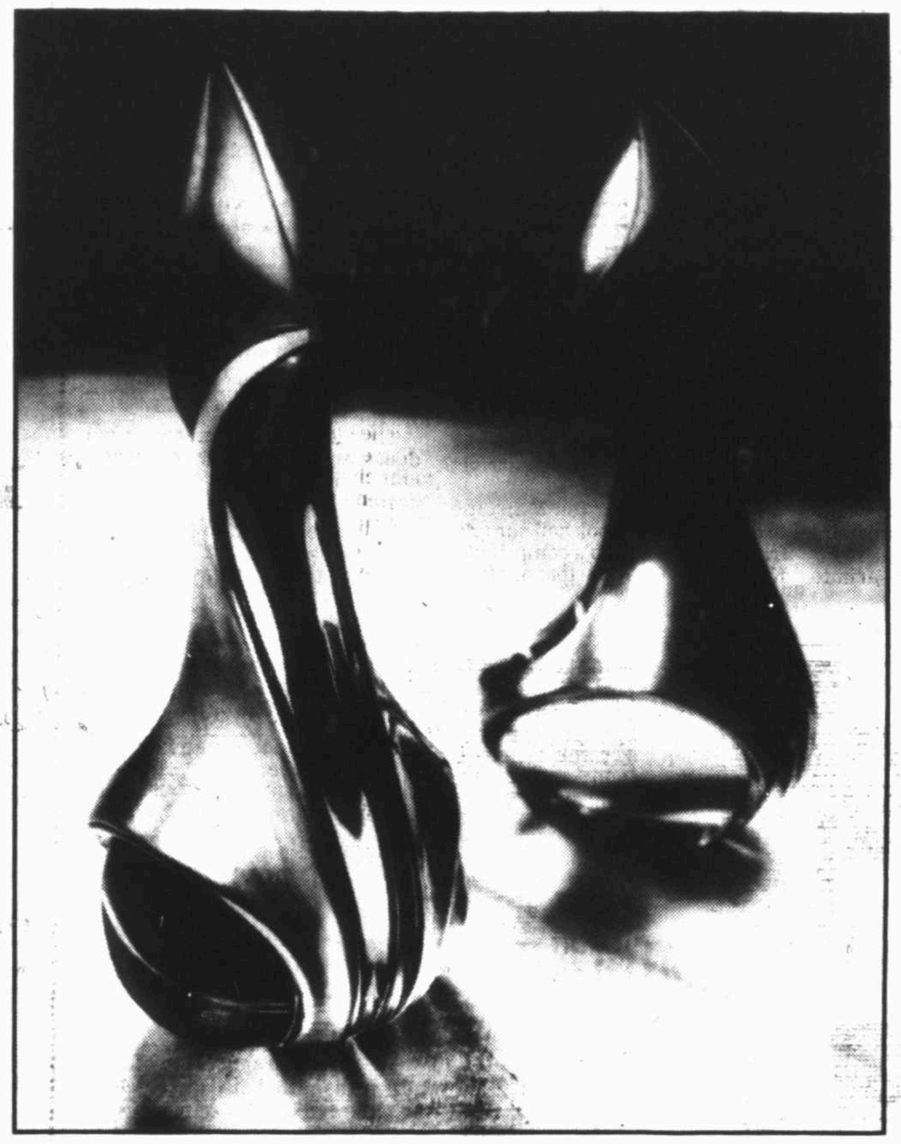

Then the party began in a large, carpeted living room as a young singer crooned a love song.

Swathed in satin and lace, the women sat together. Their delicate dresses and made-up faces seemed incongrous in Kabul, where there has been no electricity or running water for more than a year.

Today to be windy, mid-70s

Staff Report

Today's forecast is windy and mostly sunny with a high near 75 and west winds 20-30 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's forecast is fair with a low near 40.

Monday's forecast is sunny with a high in the upper 70s, the NWS said.

After an overnight low of 62, Saturday's high reached 83, compared to the record high for that date of 90 set in 1938. The record low was 23 set in 1955.

STATE

Severe thunderstorms rumbled across Texas on Saturday, pounding the region with heavy rains, large hail and strong winds.

Much of North Texas, West Texas and North Central Texas were under alert for tornadoes or thunderstorms much of Saturday evening.

Winds downed power lines and tree limbs in the Brownwood area, and strong winds blew the roof off a shed in the Ballinger area, about 65 miles to the west.

Winds estimated at 60 mph also caused damage in the suburb of Grand Prairie, west of Dallas, the National Weather Service reported.

Tennis ball-size hail was reported in East Dallas, and golf ball-size hail fell in Rockwall County, meteorologist Lonnie King said. Golf ball-size hail also fell in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas. Some windshields were smashed.

There were numerous reports of marble-size hail in adjacent counties to the north and west of Dallas.

National Weather Service radar estimated 1 to 2 inches of rainfall early Saturday evening in Collin and Rockwall counties, to the north and northeast of Dallas, causing some street flooding. As much as 3 inches of rain an hour was falling in the Dallas suburbs of Garland and Lancaster.

Several counties were under a flash flood watch Saturday night.

NATION

Snow nearly a foot deep closed highways and stranded travelers Saturday in Montana, and thunderstorms with heavy rain and hail stretched across the nation's midsection.

Heavy snow fell overnight on the northwestern Plains and northern and central Rockies.

Northern Wyoming's Big Horn Mountains got up to 10 inches of snow. In central Montana, Lewistown had 11 inches by midday and 8 to 10 inches fell at Absarokee. Drifts near Bozeman stood 2 to 3 feet high.

Blowing, drifting snow stranded vehicles along U.S. 87-89 between Great Falls and Billings, and along Interstate 90 between Bozeman and Billings, state police said. Both highways were closed from late Friday through much of Saturday.

There was no word how many people were stranded with their vehicles. State police surveyed the vehicles to make sure no one was in danger; some people were reported snowbound for hours.

Elsewhere, a band of strong thunderstorms extended across the Plains and Mississippi Valley, from south-central Texas northward through western and central Oklahoma into central and eastern Kansas, Iowa and southeastern Minnesota.

Hail as big as golf balls was reported in parts of western Oklahoma.

Heavy rain fell overnight in eastern South Dakota, with 1.64 inches at Sioux Falls.

Saturday's temperatures around the lower 48 states ranged from a morning low of 3 above zero at Truckee, Calif., to afternoon readings of 85 at West Palm Beach, Fla., and Sanderson, Texas.

PRISON: Iraq sentences soldiers to 8 years

ing for the sanctions to be lifted.

In Washington, Christine Shelly, a State Department spokeswoman, called the sentences an "obvious misguided attempt to take advantage of two Americans."

"There is no justification whatsoever for these sentences," she said in a statement. "These two Americans ... committed no offense justifying jail sentences. Mr. Barloon and Mr. Daliberti should be released immediately."

She called any attempt to link the sanctions on Iraq to the Americans' sentences misguided, adding that "in our diplomatic contacts we are making it clear that Iraq has nothing to gain" by doing so.

A White House official said President Clinton was "following the situation closely" and that the U.S. government is "continuing to work diplomatically for the return of these Americans."

No U.S. officials were present during the one-day trial, which a State Department communique said took place on Saturday. The United States has no diplomatic ties with Iraq.

Two Polish diplomats who represent U.S. interests in Iraq attended as observers, and the men were represented by a lawyer appointed by the Iraqi government, source s close to the case in Iraq said on condition of anonymity.

Media were not informed in advance of the trial, and the state-run Iraq News Agency carried no reports about it. There was no Iraqi government confirmation of the sentences in Baghdad.

'I haven't been happy with Iraq since the first time we had problems with them. I'm very disgusted with the whole situation. People cross our borders all the time...and they don't get eight years in prison.'

— Raymond Daliberti
prisoner's father

Trials in Iraq are conducted before a judge but without a jury. The maximum sentence for illegally entering Iraq is 20 years in jail.

Western officials say the two me n accidentally strayed across the border from Kuwait on March 13 while trying to visit a friend with the United Nations force that monitors the frontier.

Nizar Hamdoon, Iraq's ambassador to the U.N., said he spoke informally Saturday with U.S. diplomats to the United Nations. He gave no details, but said he might have some new word on the Americans today.

"This demonstrates the value of a bilateral dialogue," Hamdoon said, voicing Iraq's longstanding desire for formal diplomatic ties with Washington.

Joe Sills, a spokesman for U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, declined to comment on the case.

Daliberti, 41, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Barloon, 39, from New Hampton, Iowa, were both employees of American defense contractors in Kuwait.

"It's been one huge mistake, which has now mushroomed into a n eight-year prison sentence," said Barloon's brother, Edward Barloon of Rosemount, Minn.

In Jacksonville, Daliberti's father, Raymond, expressed outrage.

"I haven't been happy with Iraq since the first time we had problems with them. I'm very disgusted with the whole situation," he said. "People cross our borders all the times ... and they don't get eight years in prison."

Daliberti's wife, Kathy, received notification Saturday morning from the State Department that her husband had been tried and sentenced, said Joyce McCall, a family spokeswoman.

She said the Dalibertis have "a s trong hope that the sentence will not have to be served completely."

"They have indicated they are protesting at the highest levels," Ms. McCall said.

Mrs. Daliberti created a screen for the Worldwide Web section of the Internet on Saturday in which she vowed to keep people posted on developments.

She said Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., sent a letter Saturday to Clinton and Boutros-Ghali asking that the Americans' plight be considered a "top priority" in the United Nations.

Iraq insists it has complied with resolutions laid down in the 1991 Gulf War cease-fire, which among other things call for the destruction of its nonconventional weapon s, and that as a result the sanctions should be lifted. The United States maintains Iraq still hides information about its weaponry.

The sanctions, which bar Iraq from selling oil, have ravaged Iraq 's economy. The Iraqi dinar has plunged in value, and prices have risen so high that many cannot afford meat, medicine and other basics.

The Security Council renewed the sanctions earlier this month. Russia and France have been urging the council to ease the oil embargo if Iraq complies with U.N . weapons monitors, who are to report on the issue in mid-April.

The United States and Britain demand that the sanctions remain until Iraq also improves its human rights record and accounts for missing Kuwaiti equipment.

But the United States is backing a proposal that would allow Iraq to sell up to $4 billion in oil a year to pay for food and medicine, U.S. officials have said. The Security Council is expected to discuss the proposal this week.

SEMINAR: AIDS virus threatens Midland's teens

(From 1A)

"AIDS is such a powerful disease, it can give you a death sentence, but it doesn't have to be that way. It is preventable," Ms. Denzy said. "The only way to not get the disease is to avoid drug use and to abstain from sex. But we know our teen-agers are having sex."

Ms. Denzy said an indication of this is the high report rate of sexually transmitted diseases, including chlamydia.

The HIV counselor and a representative of the Texas Health Department said a dismaying local trend is that heterosexual females are engaging in unprotected anal sex in order to preserve their virginity. The health department representative said that makes females susceptible to various bacterial infections, as well as HIV.

Ms. Denzy also said, as of Tuesday, it was reported that there are 28 blacks who have HIV in the Midland/Odessa area.

The health department representative, who asked not to be identified due to the confidential nature of his work, said HIV transmission through needles is no longer focused merely on intravenous drug users. "Now we are concerned with people sharing needles, including needles for tattoos and ear piercing," he said.

"People need to know all of the risks, and take responsibility for taking care of themselves," Ms. Denzy said.

FUNDS: Officials seek proposals for grant money

(From 1A)

Public services are eligible for 15 percent of CDBG funds. That's the area non-profit agencies generally seek for program funding.

CDBG money can also be used to improve public facilities such as parks and community centers, provide infrastructure such as street paving and sewer lines, contribute to housing programs such as programs to encourage home ownership, eliminate and prevent blight areas, and to promote economic activity.

"There's a very broad range of activities. CDBG is a flexible resource," Cantu said.

CDBG allocations are required to meet one of three objectives: benefit low- and moderate-income people, prevention and elimination of slum and blight, or deal with urgent community development needs.

Typically, the majority of CDBG-funded improvements — such as street paving — are city-initiated.

Organizations requesting funds must apply to the city by May 5.

On May 23 the City Council will hold a public hearing to discuss housing and community needs and review funding applications.

"The council will take all that information in mind and come up with a preliminary plan and have a second public hearing," Cantu said.

At the second hearing — scheduled for June 27 — the council will present that preliminary plan to the public for review and feedback.

In August the council will approve the uses before sending details of the programs and allocations to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to audit. This year, the city is also required to submit a formal document of priorities of needs based on public input.

CDBG-funded improvements will begin Oct. 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.

DRUGS: Police charge man after high-speed chase

shortly after Midland patrol officer Rodney Porter witnessed Click in a suspected drug transaction in southeast Midland, according to Sgt. David Garcia. Click, 25, is on parole from Potter County for possession of drugs, he said.

Porter attempted to pull over Click, about 4:47 p.m., at Lamesa Road and Highway 80. When Click refused to pull over, the pursuit began and involved officers from the Texas Department of Public Safety, Midland County Sheriff's Office, Martin County DPS and Stanton police.

Driving on parts of Interstate 20, Click turned around on a service lane and traveled westbound in an eastbound lane, forcing oncoming drivers to take evasive action to keep from hitting him. Garcia said officers reported that Click appeared to be smoking a crack cocaine pipe and driving with his elbows.

"He was running cars off of the road and exited into Stanton and ran through a field into a park," Garcia said.

He said a tire had blown out on Click's vehicle and the rim was sparking fires all across the park.

"People were actually scrambling for their lives," Garcia said. Police reports indicate the car was clocked at 77 mph in the park.

At one point, as Click was leaving Martin County for Howard County, officers set out a stinger, a row of spikes intended to disable tires. However, Click saw the spike and bypassed it, Garcia said.

After Click drove into Lake Pauline — a dry lake bed south of Stanton — and there were no innocent bystanders nearby, Garcia said officers shot at the car's tires in an attempt to disable the vehicle and bring it to a halt.

"Midland police officers and DPS officers shot at the car's tires for 18 miles until they knocked out the rest of the tires," Garcia said.

He said that officers reported that Click appeared to continue to smoke crack cocaine.

Click was arraigned late Saturday night in Martin County, then transported to the Midland County Detention Center.

In Midland County he was charged with driving while intoxicated, driving with a suspended license, reckless driving, evading arrest, and possession of drug paraphernalia, according to reports. In Martin County he is expected to be charged with aggravated assault with a motor vehicle for endangering motorists on I-20 and for endangering pedestrians in the park.

Incidents put world on alert against nuclear traffickers

EDITOR'S NOTE — A half-century into the nuclear age, the world finds it ever more difficult to keep the destructive power of the atom out of ever more hands.

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — The matter-of-fact report from Prague — an account of what police found in an old Saab on grimy Argentinska Street — woke them up worldwide.

"The world of intelligence services was turned upside down," a Czech official recalled. "There were lots of middle-of-the-night phone calls, lots of long faxes."

What Czech police seized that day last December, along with three alleged smugglers, was a pair of metal canisters, crudely fashioned, wrapped in plastic, tossed in the Saab's back seat. They were loaded with six pounds of granulated doom — 2.73 kilograms of nearly pure uranium 235, one-third a Hiroshima bomb's worth.

Three months later, the investigation goes slowly. Where the enriched uranium was headed remains undetermined. But The Associated Press has learned that critical information points toward a major Russian nuclear institute as its possible source. And investigators suspect a wider multinational conspiracy.

The case is only the most alarming in a wave of nuclear smuggling incidents in Europe, with Prague just one front in an escalating global struggle over the spread of nuclear weapons.

On April 17 in New York, representatives of the world's nations gather to renew the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, the pact that commits governments to restrain atomic arms.

But to head off new nuclear crises — new Iraqs and North Koreas — authorities must also stiffen their guard at borders and air terminals and around nuclear facilities in Russia and elsewhere, to stop smuggled batches of uranium and plutonium that could give some state or terrorist group an invaluable headstart toward the bomb.

The CIA has formed a "non-proliferation center" to track the threat. The Interpol global police alliance is collecting data in search of trafficker networks. In Germany, a crossroads of the smugglers, the federal police established a 20-member "nuclear office" in November. The Germans have even deployed radiation detectors at major airports.

The statistics are startling. In Germany alone, there were 182 cases involving illicit dealing in radioactive materials in 1994.

Investigators believe the nuclear black market is, in many cases, a fools' bazaar, involving would-be brokers, often eastern Europeans, peddling material to each other or to police undercover agents. Ultimate buyers, end users, are never traced. The goods are mostly useless for weapons-making or anything else, although sometimes dangerously radioactive.

But in a handful of reported cases the smugglers had weapons-usable plutonium or enriched uranium — not enough to make a bomb by itself, but enough to trouble authorities, deeply.

Even more troubling, they do not know the number who are not caught.

"The thing I worry about at night is whether these interceptions are just a sampling of the problem," a senior Clinton administration official said in a Washington interview.

If Prague is just a sample, the world's watchdogs are right to worry.

Czech authorities clamped official secrecy on many details of the seizure and arrests, which they say resulted from a woman's anonymous telephone tip. But, from investigative sources, the AP learned a crucial bit of background about the Russian: His home is in Maloyaroslavets, an area 60 miles from Moscow that borders the Obninsk institute, a major research center where tons of highly enriched uranium are kept under less than rigidly secure conditions.

The Russians say the Germans and Americans exaggerate Russia's nuclear smuggling problem. Not one of the dozens of cases has been definitively traced to the former Soviet Union, they point out.

But the Germans — and now the Czechs — grumble that the Russians cooperate only sporadically with their investigations.

Circumstantial evidence clearly points east. Russian-language certificates are sometimes found with the material, as with the Prague uranium, attesting to its characteristics. Arrested couriers tell interrogators they have come from Russia. Even the metal containers have a rough, Russian finish, specialists say.

The Prague case points west, too, toward Germany.

Jan Subert of the Czech Interior Ministry said the investigation began in mid-1994, after German police in Bavaria seized a tiny amount of uranium of the same weapons-usable enrichment grade — 87.7 percent fissionable U-235. A German woman and five Czech and Slovak men were arrested for llegedly trying to sell it.

Information from that case led toward Prague, where the telephone tip and arrests Dec. 14 closed a circle, investigators said.

Now Czech police are trying to follow still further leads, to other suspects and shipments in what a top investigator said "undoubtedly" is a wider conspiracy.

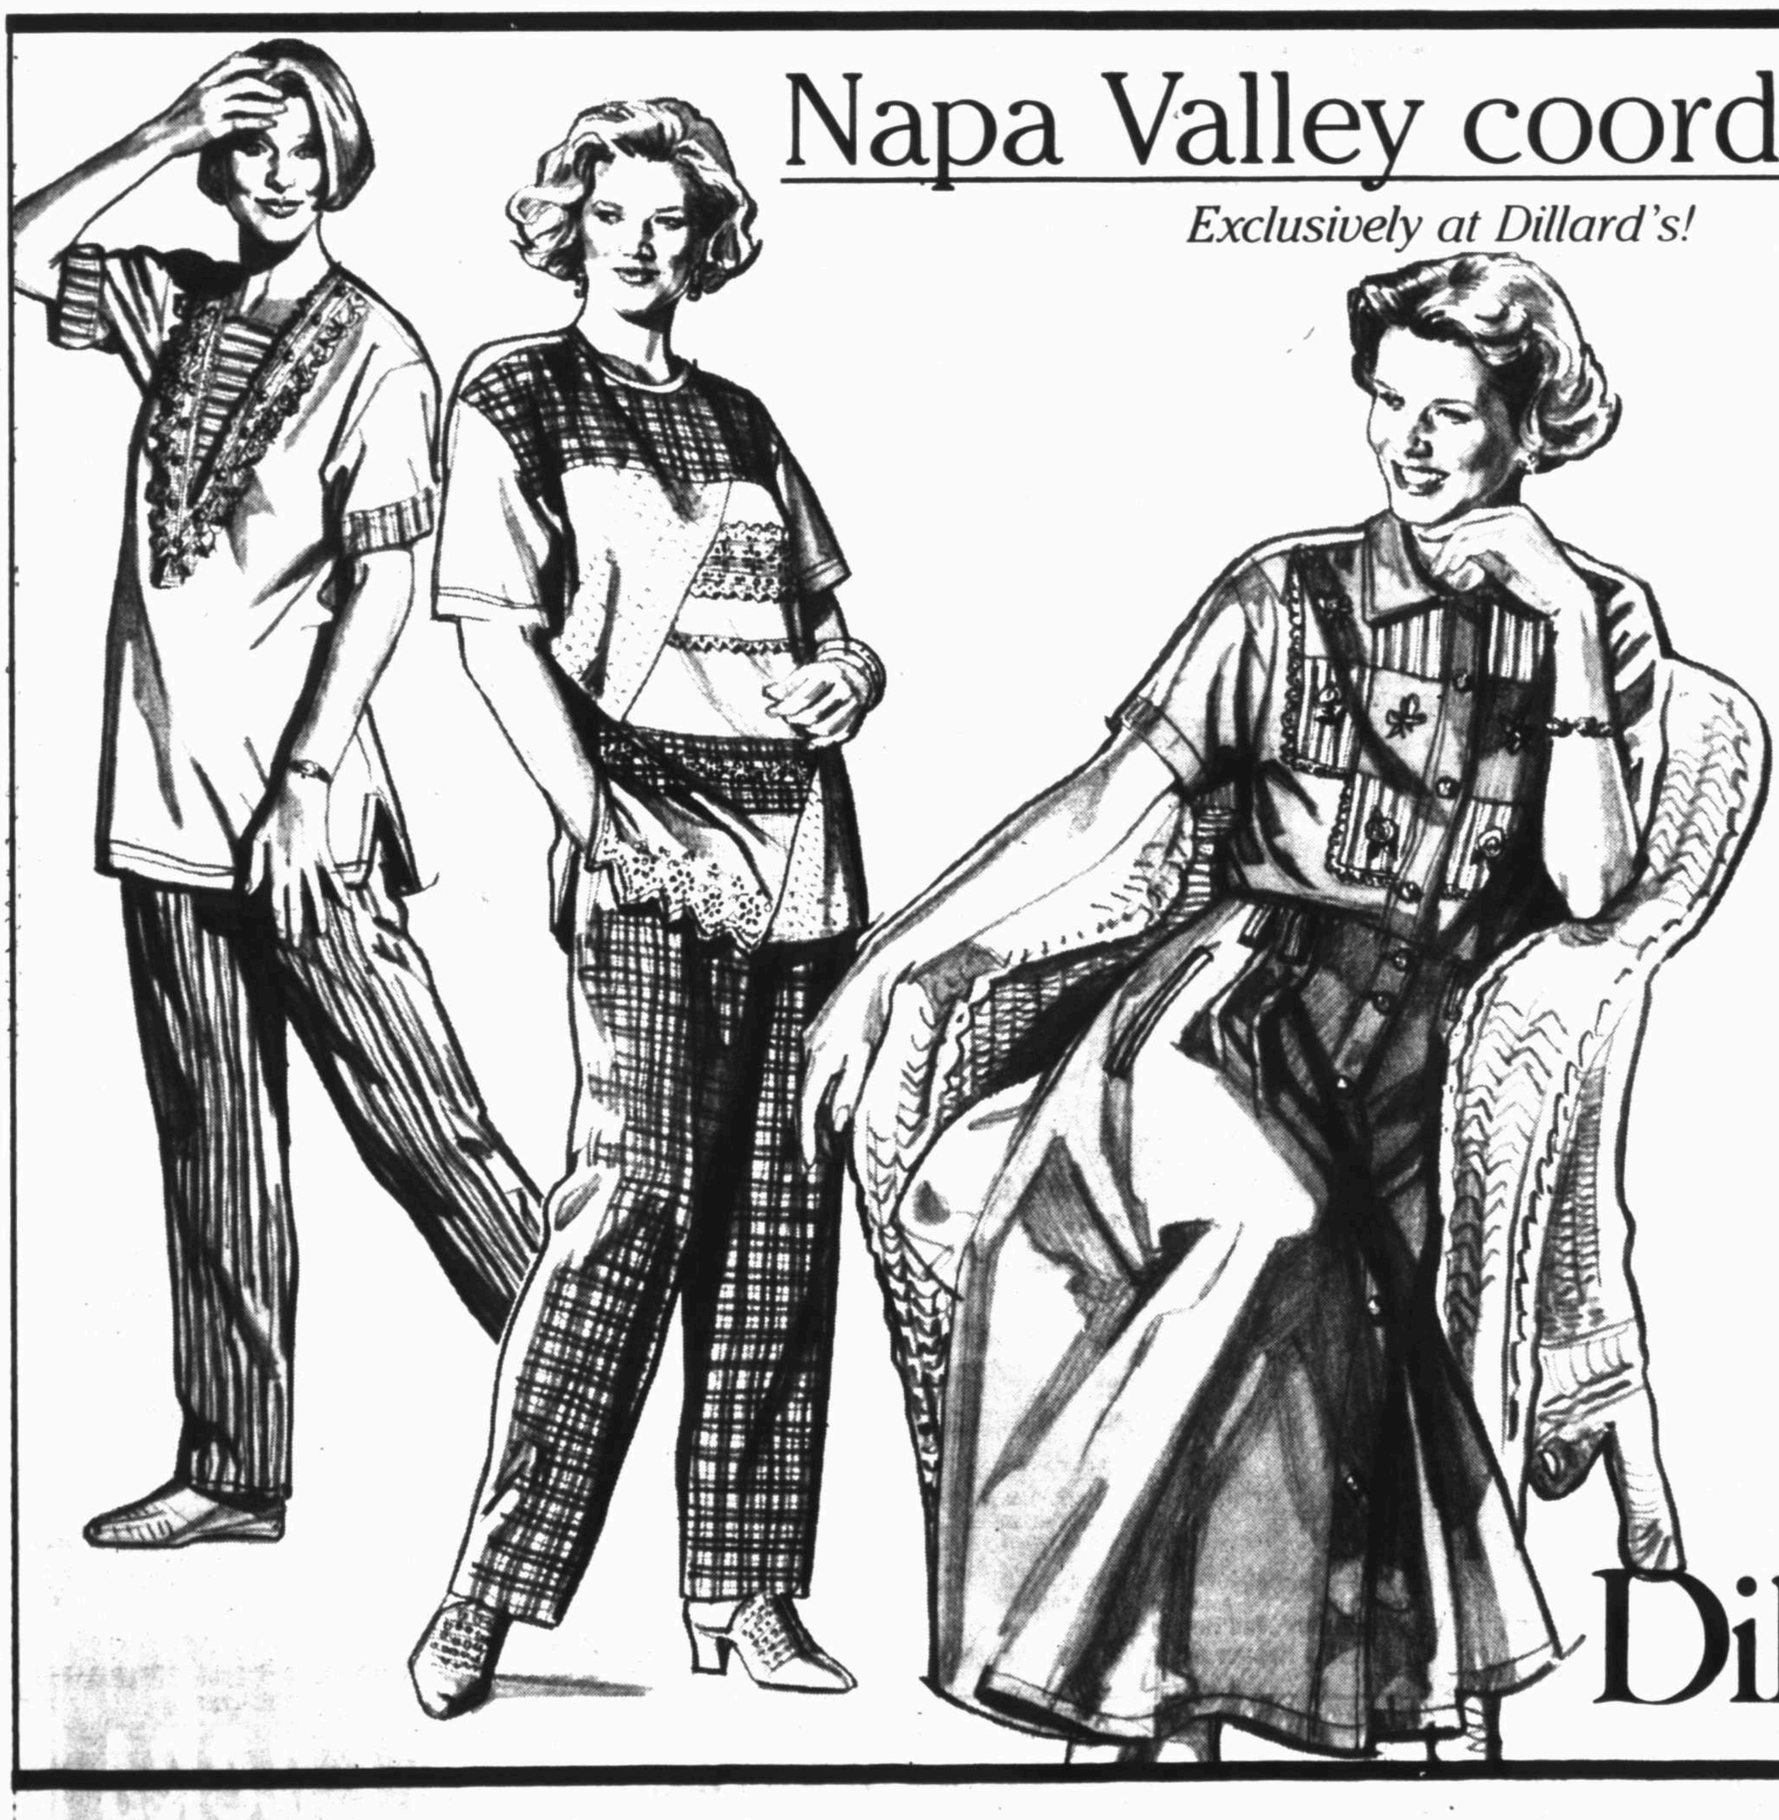

Police in Prague and Germany sense the hand of Russia's powerful organized-crime groups behind at least some smuggling cases.

Some Haitians see intervention as 'occupation'

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — They landed to the wild cheers of a liberated people. Now, as they prepare to hand over command to a U.N. force, the American troops are hearing some catcalls.

Some supporters of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide are grumbling about the U.S. intervention, even though it ousted a brutal military regime and restored Aristide to office. Enjoying a freedom of expression that didn't exist before the Americans arrived, they call the six-month-long U.S. army presence "the occupation."

Many Haitians express gratitude toward the Americans, and U.S. soldiers in Haiti speak in glowing terms of the mission's outcome and of their relations with Haitians.

"We feel needed, like we've really achieved something. It's a good feeling," said Specialist Richard Miller, as he shared his ration pack with two Haitian children.

But the complaints are rising: Some come from the leftist ranks of Aristide's more militant followers, others from the many poor, uneducated Haitians who believed the U.S. mission would relieve their poverty.

"They stopped the bullets killing us," one poor Haitian, Mimose Charles, said. "But we're still hungry."

President Clinton and U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali will be present Friday when the United States hands over authority to a U.N. command. Some 2,500 U.S. soldiers will remain in Haiti as part of the U.N. mission.

Clinton cites the Haiti intervention as one of his administration's shining successes.

Without a shot fired, U.S. troops landed in Haiti on Sept. 19, after an 11th-hour agreement negotiated by former President Jimmy Carter cleared the way for a peaceful arrival.

The American force ousted ruling Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, who had overthrown Aristide in a coup in 1991 and whose regime waged a campaign of terror that claimed some 4,000 lives.

With the Americans' landing, the killings ended. The repressive army was disarmed and dismantled. The military regime's leaders were given an amnesty, and Cedras and other top officials received U.S. financial help to relocate to new homes in exile.

Aristide has never appeared comfortable about having to rely on U.S. military help to return to power. And the U.S. government has never been entirely comfortable with Aristide, a former leftist Roman Catholic priest who lambasted the United States while building support among the Haitian peasantry.

Activist peasant groups meeting in Port-au-Prince charged Monday that the United States was trying to sabotage Aristide. At their first congress in more than three years — made possible by the intervention — they condemned the Americans as protectors of the murderous Haitian armed forces.

A new grass-roots group, Eyes on Haiti, has declared that Haiti has no reason to thank the Americans. It was established by popular bands whose voodoo-influenced rock music urges Haitians to turn their backs on foreign domination and return to their cultural roots.

"This intervention, it is the intervention of a father who comes to throw out his wayward son, because the army is the son of the American Army," said Lolo Theodore Beaubrun, a leader of the group and a member of the popular musical band Boukman Eksperyans.

The intervention included some blunders. U.S. soldiers outraged the inhabitants of one village when they turned up with a notorious paramilitary leader and arrested peasants in a decades-long land dispute.

This month, soldiers have angered some Haitians by rescuing suspected thieves from vigilante mobs.

Turkish operation to flush out rebel Kurds enters 6th day; villages reported hit by jets

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) — Turkish troops pursuing rebel Kurds fought fierce battles Saturday around northern Iraq's Metina mountain, and warplanes reportedly hit three villages at its base.

At least one villager was killed in the bombings, the private ATV Turkish television channel said. Other reports from the area said no one was killed.

Fewer than 500 Iraqi Kurds lived in the villages — Dergala, Beshila and Shilaza — and most of them had fled by Thursday. The mountain is about 25 miles east of the border town of Zakho.

A major Turkish operation to flush out guerrillas of the Kurdistan Workers Party, PKK, entered its sixth day Saturday. Some 35,000 troops backed by tanks and warplanes are taking part in the offensive against the PKK, which has sought autonomy for Kurds in southeastern Turkey since 1984.

Officials said the army has occupied a 140-mile strip of Iraqi territory extending roughly 28 miles south. The guerrillas have been launching raids from the bases into Turkey.

Gen. Hasan Kundakci said Friday at his base in Silopi, Turkey, that 168 rebel bodies have been recovered. Sixteen soldiers have been killed and 66 wounded, he said.

The army has wiped out 25 rebel camps and the guerrillas were in "great panic," Kundakci claimed.

The Turkish government says it will not leave the area until all the rebels are captured or killed and their bases eliminated.

Turkey's Western allies, including the United States, have insisted that it withdraw as soon as possible and ensure the safety of civilians. A 5-year-old girl also was reported killed on the operation's first day.

U.N. officials in the area and Iraqi Kurdish representatives have reported the detention of about 20 civilians. Villagers have said that soldiers searched houses and seized arms belonging to local Kurdish militias not linked to the PKK.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees planned today to move up to 2,000 refugees from camps near the border to ones farther south.

Some 13,000 Kurds fled southeastern Turkey last year after the Turkish army burned their villages.

The Solution: Laser Surgery
Laser surgery can be an effective way to remove small varicosities (veins) on the nose & cheeks. These veins occur as a result of sun damage and other factors. Laser surgery offers a superior way to remove these with little to no evidence of surgery. No down time, fast healing, and excellent results are common.

Serbs launch attacks hours after call for peace

CITYLINE Horoscopes/astrology, Call 560-2400, Category 1110.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Hours after the Bosnian Serb leader urged an end to three years of fighting and called for immediate peace talks Saturday, Serb gunners launched fierce artillery attacks on government-held towns.

Radovan Karadzic had coupled his peace plea with new threats to destroy the government army that has pressed punishing offensives in north and central Bosnia.

With Serb artillery shells raining on government-held towns in several parts of Bosnia, his appeal may have been just a maneuver to divert attention from a big counterattack.

New battlefronts also opened in other areas, and the capital of Sarajevo experienced the most intense artillery and small-arms exchanges in recent months.

The fighting was the worst since a now-shattered truce took effect Jan. 1. It was supposed to expire May 1.

Indicating he'd prefer talks with the Muslim-led Bosnian government without foreign mediation, Karadzic issued a "last call" for "immediate direct talks on peace, with cessation of all offensives," according to the Bosnian Serb news agency SRNA.

Belgrade's independent Studio B TV quoted him as saying Friday night that he had met with international negotiators and was ready to compromise.

Bosnian Serbs have taken 70 percent of Bosnia since rebelling against the republic's 1992 decision to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. They have repeatedly rejected an international peace plan that calls on them to give up about a third of the land they hold.

But fierce Serb artillery appeared to belie Karadzic's peace initiative.

U.N. officials said artillery or mortar fire from Serb positions hit the Muslim eastern section of Mostar in southwest Bosnia, killing a child and wounding six other civilians.

Bosnian television reported that dozens of people had been wounded and several killed in a heavy artillery attack on the eastern town of Gorazde.

U.N. officials said NATO jets flew over Gorazde apparently to deter further Serb attacks.

Bosnian TV also reported Serb shelling of several other government-held cities and towns, including Velika Kladusa in the northwest Bihac pocket and Gracanica and Tuzla in north-central Bosnia.

Karadzic had called for a return to the battle lines of Dec. 23, when the warring sides agreed to a cease-fire negotiated by former President Jimmy Carter.

Carter had gone to Bosnia in response to Karadzic's only previous plea for direct peace talks. Those talks never materialized.

Prior to the renewed shelling, Kemal Muftic, an adviser to Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, said he expected a Serb counteroffensive.

He noted Karadzic's appeal contradicted his statements made Friday, when Karadzic declared the truce over and called for a broader mobilization of soldiers.

Lt. Gen. Rupert Smith, the U.N. commander in Bosnia, conferred in Pale, the Bosnian Serb stronghold east of Sarajevo, with Bosnian Serb leaders on "humanitarian issues," Serb media reported.

SRNA claimed that Serb forces were pushing back the government offensive in the Majevica mountains near Tuzla. But U.N. officials said government troops had taken a mountaintop telecommunications tower vital to the Serbs.

Seven nations in European Union abolish border controls

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — In a move lauded as a breakthrough in the European Union's drive for unity, border controls between seven EU nations are being abolished today.

Travelers will be able to keep their passports in their pockets when moving from any one of the seven — France, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands — to another.

Greece, Italy and Austria are expected to join them in June.

But the move comes five years after it was originally scheduled, and it's on a much smaller scale: Several EU members are unready or unwilling to join borderless Europe.

Britain, ever the halfhearted EU member, has vowed to stay out, and because of its customs links with Dublin, is expected to keep Ireland effectively out as well.

The three other EU members, Denmark, Sweden and Finland, have yet to announce their intentions, but they are expected to abolish the controls, too.

The most visible impact today will be in the seven nations' airports.

Big airports have had to adapt their infrastructure to separate the new 'internal' European flights from others.

Passengers flying from Hamburg to Paris, for example, will not have their passports checked, whereas those flying from London to Brussels will have to brave long lines for passport controls.

So will travelers crossing so-called external borders, such as those between Germany and its neighbors, Poland and the Czech Republic, where security is being beefed up.

"We would be really happy if light traffic would prevail in the first days while the new control systems are broken in," said Volker Amler, spokesman of the German Border Police in the eastern regions, on Deutschlandradio Berlin.

"This weekend, no one should start a trip into the (eastern) neighboring countries unless absolutely necessary," he said.

Celebrations this weekend are muted, reflecting the EU's lack of unanimity.

"The situation is not satisfactory," said EU Internal Market Commissioner Mario Monti. "Our goal is clear: We are aiming at the abolition of personal controls throughout the Union."

It will be years overdue.

Already in 1985, five EU member states signed an agreement in the sleepy Luxembourg hamlet of Schengen to abolish all checks on goods and individuals by 1990, if possible.

The date came and went, as did three subsequent deadlines — all lost in quarrels over loss of sovereignty and practical problems to abolish checkpoints.

Opponents fear that the scrapping of traditional controls will create a haven for drug traffickers, terrorists and criminals — in spite of strengthened random controls inside the participating countries.

The European Council of Police Unions, representing 250,000 police officers, deplored a "lack of preparation," with its secretary general, Roger Bouiller, saying, "in certain ways, nothing is really done."

To streamline cooperation, police services from the seven nations have set up the Schengen Information System, which links up police computers and has information on everything from wanted terrorists to stolen cars.

Contract with America coalition frays over tax-cut measure

■ In public, core of Newt Gingrich's lobbying army remain united, but there are cracks over who should get $500-per-child credit.

By Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The vast and diverse lobbying coalition for the House Republican tax cut is showing signs of strain, just as it begins a campaign to pass the final portions of the "Contract With America."

In public, the business and conservative groups that form the core of Speaker Newt Gingrich's lobbying army remain united. But cracks are developing over who should get the $500-per-child tax credit.

Last week, 102 Republicans signed a letter calling for a lower income cap on the credit, which under the contract would be available to Americans who make up to $200,000 a year.

"We're in it as long as we're treated as equal partners in the coalition," said Gary Bauer, president of the conservative Family Research Council, which wants the full tax credit. "If we get a signal that our part is negotiable, but nobody else's is, then we've got other things we can spend our time on."

The tax package was constructed before last year's elections with politics and coalition-building in mind.

Bauer's 250,000-member group and the 1.5 million-member Christian Coalition were lured by the child tax credit. The Seniors Coalition was enlisted with a promise to undo President Clinton's tax increase on upper-income Social Security recipients. The Chamber of Commerce, the National Federation of Independent Business and other business groups were brought in with capital gains tax cuts, accelerated depreciation and equipment writeoffs.

As an added sweetener for business, GOP leaders decided this year also to abolish the hated alternative minimum tax, which was instituted in 1986 to ensure that large corporations don't use deductions and depreciation to escape paying taxes altogether.

All told, the tax breaks would total $189 billion over five years.

Last week's dissenting letter posed serious problems, because few if any Democrats are expected to support the tax cut and every GOP vote is needed. Business interests behind the bill began to worry the child tax credit could sink their own tax breaks.

When coalition members met late on March 17, the problem spilled into the open. Someone mentioned that the lawmakers' letter was being circulated for signatures, and Marshall Whitman, the Christian Coalition's chief lobbyist, spoke up.

"This provision is very important to us," he warned, according to one participant. Others backed off, concluding the issue didn't have to be faced yet. But the tension remains.

"What we've got to remember is, if any of us gets selfish we all lose," said Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, who heads the "Contract With America" lobbying effort for Gingich. "We just have to manage it."

"The leadership is in no position at the present time to stick their finger in the eyes of the pro-family movement," said Bauer. "There's already an uncomfortable amount of tension in the party over some family issues." If the leadership wants to curtail the bill, it should be in the area of capital gains, he said.

Altering the bill would not only alienate some of the strongest lobbying forces in the group, it could open the GOP up to charges of reneging on its contract promise.

For now, it is up to the coalition members to stir public support for leaving the tax credit alone, seeking to reassure nervous Republicans. "In a couple of weeks, we'll see what it looks like," Boehner said.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, sought to bolster the troops when he appeared before a meeting of 71 coalition lobbyists last Thursday. Armey, who one witness said "went ballistic" when he heard about the threat to the child tax credit, is its strongest supporter in the GOP leadership.

FedEx pilots recall their fight for life in hijacking

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The 500,000-pound cargo jet was at 18,000 feet. The weather was good. Takeoff uneventful. Then a man burst into the cockpit and flailed at the DC-10's crew with a hammer.

Battered and bloody after a half-hour struggle, the three crewmen managed to down their attacker and return the jet safely to Memphis.

They talked publicly about the April 7 attack for the first time last week at the federal trial of the hijacking suspect, Auburn Calloway. He is charged with attempted air piracy.

Their fellow FedEx flier was catching a ride to California as the plane's lone passenger, headed to an April 8 meeting with management to talk about possible falsehoods on his 1989 job application.

The prosecution says he was planning to commit suicide. His job was at stake. An ex-Navy flier, he had $800,000 in life insurance that would pay off regardless of how he died. And his children stood to collect on a $250,000 insurance policy if he died in an accident.

When the trial resumes this week, the defense is expected to argue that Calloway, 42, is innocent by reason of temporary insanity.

When the attacker lunged at the crew, the cockpit recorder picked up the sounds of battle.

"Get him, get him, get him," co-pilot Jim Tucker yelled.

"He's going to kill us," shouted pilot David Sanders.

As the crew tells it, Calloway's first hammer blow hit second officer Andre Peterson with such force his head smashed forward onto his desk. His skull was fractured front and back.

Tucker, at the controls, caught the next blow on the left side of his head. Slivers of skull dug into his brain.

Sanders came under a rain of blows as he struggled to his feet.

Their attacker stepped outside the flight cabin, grabbed a spear gun and ordered Sanders back to his seat.

Peterson grabbed the spear. Sanders went for the hammer.

Tucker sent the plane into a steep climb, later rolling the fully loaded jet almost upside down to keep the attacker off balance. He also radioed the airport.

"We need an ambulance and, uh, we need, uh, armed intervention as well," Tucker told the tower.

Sanders wrestled the hammer away as the assailant grappled with Peterson, biting him on the shoulder and arm.

Tucker put the plane on autopilot and traded places with Sanders. Peterson scooped up the hammer.

"I struck Mr. Calloway a couple of times with the hammer. I was afraid he was getting away from us," Peterson said.

"Whenever tax season rolls around I feel like _____ing."

Formula quirk in Medicare forces elderly to pay more

WASHINGTON (AP) — A quirk in a Medicare formula has left the elderly paying 49 percent of the bills for surgery, X-rays and diagnostic tests performed in hospital outpatient departments.

Normally, the elderly pay only a 20 percent share of the bills covered by Medicare Part B, or Supplementary Medical Insurance.

If nothing is done, by the year 2000 the elderly could wind up footing 65 percent of the bills for outpatient surgery, radiology and other diagnostic services in hospitals, Clinton administration health officials said last week.

In a report to Congress, the administration submitted a raft of possible changes in the way Medicare pays for outpatient hospital services but stopped short of endorsing any single solution.

One suggestion was that Medicare set payment rates in advance for outpatient services and limit how much the elderly must pay out of their own pockets.

Under all five scenarios outlined in the administration's report, hospitals would be paid $20 billion less from 1995 through 2001. Medicare's elderly and disabled beneficiaries would pay anywhere from $10 billion to $47 billion less in copayments.

The Medicare program itself would save $10 billion under one option, but under another alternative would have to shell out $27 billion more.

It would take legislation to enact any of these changes. Right now lawmakers are looking for ways to save tens of billions of dollars from Medicare, not cut seniors' copayments.

Tom Ault, director of policy development for the Health Care Finance Administration which runs Medicare, said the beneficiaries' copayments are a problem "that's getting worse each year."

But fixing it will be expensive, Ault said.

Carmela Dyer, the American Hospital Association's vice president for policy, said the HCFA proposals for a new advance payment system would "take too much money out of outpatient (services) too quickly."

For patients admitted to hospitals, Medicare has relied since 1983 on a fixed payment system based upon the severity of their diagnosis. In 1992, it adopted a fee schedule for physicians as well, and it pays fixed amounts for surgeries performed in free-standing ambulatory surgical centers.

But Medicare pays hospital outpatient departments after care is rendered, under a complex web of formulas that take into account the facilities' costs as well as what Medicare pays for the same procedure in other settings.

Surgical breakthroughs and budget constraints have caused a plunge in hospital admissions and an explosion in same-day surgery over the past decade. The American Hospital Association estimates that 55 percent of all surgeries this year will be performed on outpatients.

Judge spares man who killed three in 1993 death sentence

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A judge spared a triple killer the death penalty, citing mitigating circumstances that included the trauma of resorting to cannibalism while escaping from Vietnam.

Trahn Trung Le, 28, was sentenced to nine life terms Friday for stabbing to death the wife and two children of his former employer, a shrimper also from Vietnam. He will be eligible for parole in 75 years.

Three other children survived the Sept. 6, 1993, attack, which occurred after an argument in the victims' Pensacola home, where Le had gone to try to borrow money.

The defense argued that Le was mentally scarred at age 7 when North Vietnamese soldiers arrested and tortured his mother. Le's father had died when he was 2.

When he was a teen-ager, they said, Le endured great stress while trying to escape from Vietnam.

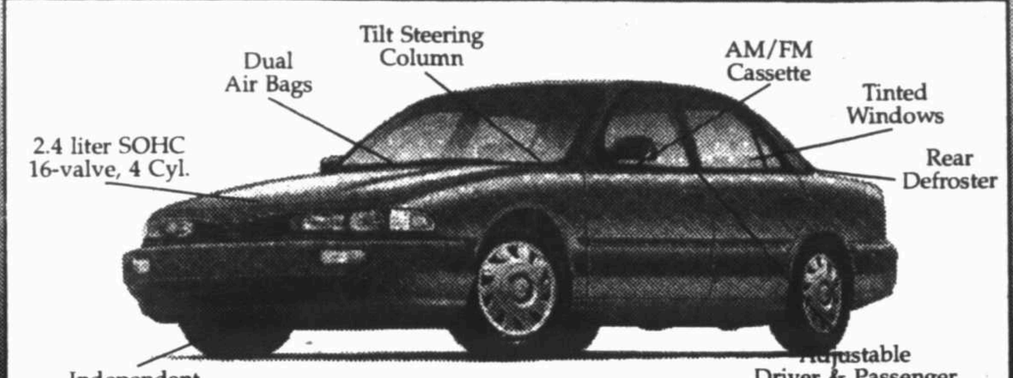

"He had to eat human flesh in order to stay alive," said Assistant Public Defender Sam Hall. "He's harboring a lot of pain. He's harboring a lot of anger."

Le pleaded no contest last month to three counts of murder, as well as charges of attempted murder, armed robbery and burglary.

Assistant State Attorney Tom Berrigan asked that Le be sent to the electric chair, but Circuit Judge John Parnham ruled mitigating circumstances outweighed those that would justify execution.

Cocaine addiction compounded mental problems from Le's childhood, said Hall and Assistant Public Defender Mike Van Cavage.

Politics, curiosity take former legislator beyond city limits

By Robert Greene
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two decades ago, Dan Glickman had trouble describing what a tractor does. Now the former congressman from Kansas is about to become the administration's chief advocate for farmers and ranchers as Secretary of Agriculture.

Glickman has done a lot of cramming since 1976 when he told a small group of farmers in Newton, Kan., "I know so little about agriculture I've never pushed a tractor in my life."

Politics demanded lessons in agriculture for the 32-year-old, reform-minded lawyer, president of the Wichita school board and congressional candidate, and grandson of Russian Jewish immigrants who built a scrap metal business. After all, the wheat fields in the 4th District pick up where the airplane factories and other Wichita businesses leave off.

Having been narrowly elected the first Democrat in his district in 35 years, ousting veteran Garner Shriver, he had to keep touch with local issues to stay in office. He could go against the grain as long as it wasn't wheat.

Restless curiosity, hard work and an affection for rural America did the rest.

Government farm policy "has preserved the structure of rural America, which is important for our country values wise," Glickman said less than artfully near the tail end of a grueling confirmation hearing last week. "I have felt for a long time that the strength of Jeffersonian democracy was because of a strong rural America."

That vision led him to fight without success in the 1990 farm bill to target farm program benefits to small- and medium-sized farms, by excluding those grossing more than $2 million a year. Fellow Kansan Pat Roberts, now a Glickman supporter and Republican chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, called him "a legislative activist who needs to find the wooly bears of the farm bill."

But in the same year, same bill, he opposed an effort by Reps. Dick Armey, R-Texas, and Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., to deny farm program benefits to anyone with an income over $100,000.

Those are bigger issues from his 18 years of Agriculture Committee work, where the complicated details of farm policy mean just about everything. Glickman has covered the bases, looking after Kansas' wheat, cattle and sunflower interests when he could, but also looking at budgetary and political realities.

In 1980, he fought large increases in crop price supports because he knew they would create false hopes in farmers and antagonize everyone else.

In 1982 he unsuccessfully proposed to boost wheat and cotton farmers' income by forcing them to idle more land. He now questions the wisdom of acreage idling.

"I think Dan Glickman's mastery of the material is very impressive," said the Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman, Richard G. Lugar of Indiana.

The committee's ranking Democrat, Patrick Leahy of Vermont, says Glickman's knowledge will enable him to make the cuts as painlessly as possible.

As a former Securities and Exchange Commission lawyer and member of the Judiciary subcommittee on economic and commercial law, Glickman has explored the market end of agriculture. He won increased federal oversight of commodities futures markets and supports merging the SEC with the Commodities Futures Trading Commission.

In 1990, he unsuccessfully opposed giving farm export credits to Iraq because of human rights abuses. The Gulf War left the Agriculture Department holding billions in bad loans. Human rights abuses in China, a major wheat customer, concerned him less, as in 1994 he urged favorable trade statu.

He fought the Clinton administration's 1993 proposal for an energy tax because it would hurt farmers. And he went against the administration by voting against the newest accord under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, keeping a campaign promise to the blue-collar constituents in Sedgwick County.

"I like to think I still have the spirit and independence I always have had," Glickman said during the 1994 campaign.

Spirit and independence may still be there, and he tackles the new, like forestry, with enthusiasm.

Money blows across highway

BOSTON (AP) — It wasn't pennies from heaven. It was dollars. Thousands of dollars.

"There's money blowing all over the place," a passing motorist told police Friday.

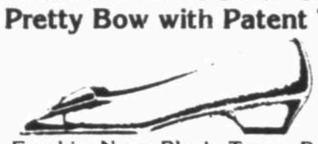

Bills littered both sides of the four-lane McLellan Highway in a mixed commercial-residential corner of East Boston, said Sgt. William Fleming of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

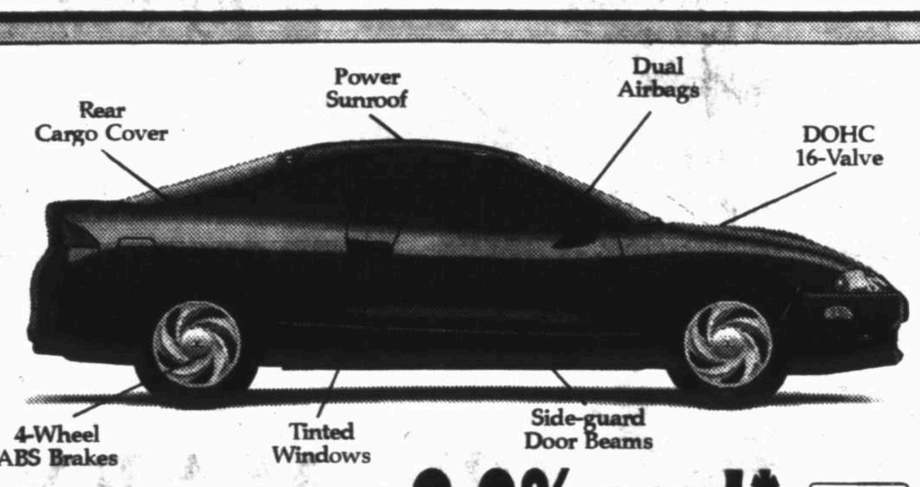

Officers recovered $7,070 in $100, $50, $20 and $10 bills; they have no idea how much was pocketed by passers-by.

No one had called to claim the money by Saturday morning, Officer Jim Browning said.

No one had turned in any more cash, either.

Debate on obscene material from computers intensifies

By Peter H. Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Amateur Action, a computer bulletin board that advertises itself as "the nastiest place on Earth!," was still open for business on Saturday despite the conviction of its owners last year on charges of transmitting obscene material over computer networks. The only change appears to be a warning that greets all callers:

"Amateur Action BBS is for the private use of the citizens of the United States! Use by law enforcement agents, postal inspectors, and informants is prohibited!"

Business appears to be good: a reporter was told he was "caller No. 1,083,677" just before he was offered a menu of choices that included "Oral Sex," "Bestiality," "Nude Celebrities" and "Lolita Schoolgirls."

Sexually explicit fiction and digitized photographs of naked people are common on the nation's rapidly growing computer networks, as are forums for discussing sexual fantasies. And computer experts and lawyers who specialize in cyberspace issues say a proposal in the Senate to bar such material from the nation's information networks is impractical, unenforceable, and perhaps unconstitutional.

"My major concern is to make the new Internet and information superhighway as safe as possible for kids to travel," said Sen. Jim Exon, D-Neb., author of the proposed Communications Decency Act of 1995, in a telephone interview on Saturday.

The proposal, which cleared the Senate Commerce Committee on Thursday without dissent, would impose fines of as much as $100,000 and two-year prison terms on anyone who knowingly transmits any "obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, or indecent" communications on the nation's telecommunications networks. The law would apply to telephone systems, cable, and broadcast television systems, and public and private computer networks, including the global Internet.

Similar laws have been proposed in several states, reflecting a growing national concern over use of a new communications medium that now reaches millions of homes in the United States.

"The potential danger here is that material that most rational and reasonable people would interpret as pornography and smut is falling into the hands of minors," Exon said. "The information superhighway is in my opinion a revolution that in years to come will transcend newspapers, radio, and television as an information source. Therefore, I think this is the time to put some restrictions or guidelines on it."

The proposals for restrictions have been met with incredulity and outrage by Internet users, legal experts, and civil libertarians, who contend that efforts to halt the flow of information in cyberspace — where, in effect, every computer is both a bookstore and a printing press — are futile on both technical and legal grounds.

There are more than 70,000 private computer bulletin board systems in the United States, and even more private business networks.

PRIMARY MEDICAL CLINIC
Quality physicians providing quality healthcare for the Permian Basin

Changes in medicine and the delivery of healthcare are being felt nationwide. These changes are brought about by demands from patients, employers, government, insurance companies, and others for more efficiency. Primary Medical Clinic is leading the way in the Permian Basin in adapting to these changes.

Since our beginning in 1983, Primary Medical Clinic has grown to include locations in Odessa, Midland, Lubbock, The Woodlands, Houston, and Baytown. This growth is possible due to our patient acceptance and our ability to provide cost effective medical services.

From a base of modern, well-equipped, extended hour clinics, we are adding specialty physicians, with the goal of being a full-service, efficient, cost-effective provider of healthcare. We currently have specialists in the fields of orthopaedics, general surgery, cardiovascular surgery, neurosurgery, pulmonology, critical care, internal medicine, psychology, and physical therapy.

From primary care to specialty care, Primary Medical Clinic has been, and will continue to be, the healthcare leader in the Permian Basin.

Cataract surgery lawsuit sparks fight over medical patents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Samuel Pallin wants fellow doctors to acknowledge him as an inventor of no-stitch cataract surgery — by paying royalties every time they make his patented frown-shaped cut on a patient's eyeball.

He has sparked an uproar by U.S. doctors who say patenting the way they practice medicine is unethical and drives up health care costs. They've persuaded Congress to consider outlawing the practice.

"The ramifications of this ... boggle the mind," said Dr. David Karcher, chief of the American Society of Cataract and Refractive Surgery.

At issue is patenting the actual steps a doctor takes to diagnose or treat a patient.

A California doctor, for example, got a patent on determining the sex of a fetus by scrutinizing the proper spot on an ultrasound for "external genitalia." He has demanded royalties from hundreds of obstetricians, who argue that's equivalent to patenting how to tell the right hand from the left on an X-ray.

About 500 urologists have been charged licensing fees for treating impotence with penile drug injections, an idea critics say has been around for decades.

Pallin is suing some Vermont eye surgeons for patent infringement, and, if he wins, plans to charge ophthamologists about $5 for every no-stitch slice made on the million Americans who seek cataract surgery each year.

Pallin argues his cut actually saves money, because a single suture costs $17. And he says these techniques are true inventions no less deserving of the 17 years of royalties a patent confers than a new drug is.

"I was the lucky one to come up with the right answer," said Pallin, a Sun City, Ariz., ophthamologist. "If it turns out I do profit from it, I won't complain or apologize."

But Pallin's lawsuit, the first over these "methods patents," sparked a fight by the American Medical Association and a cadre of doctors' groups. They contend physicians independently uncover surgical or diagnostic improvements and have an ethical obligation to share them quickly, while patents delay that information sharing and pass royalty costs to patients.

"There are very few revolutionary techniques, most are evolutionary," said Dr. Jack Singer of the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, the subject of Pallin's suit. "Patenting medical methods goes against the way medicine is taught and passed down in the entire world."

Prompted by the doctors' arguments, lawmakers later this year will consider outlawing methods patents. "We think we've got a chance to stop this economic Balkanization of medical research," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who introduced the legislation with Rep. Greg Ganske, R-Iowa, a plastic surgeon.

More than 20 countries forbid methods patents. U.S. law says any invention that is novel, has utility and is not obvious can be patented. In 1954, it began allowing medical methods patents.

But only recently have doctors sought and begun enforcing such patents. Traditionally, they get credit for new techniques when their research is published in international medical journals. Colleagues offer improvements, and surgeons adopt and adapt the procedures based on the public dialogue.

Dawn shootout leaves 3 dead on reservation

CATTARAUGUS INDIAN RESERVATION, N.Y. (AP) — Three people died in a dawn shootout Saturday between factions feuding for leadership of the Seneca Nation of Indians, police said.

Tensions have been high since Dennis Bowen was elected Seneca president in November, then refused to step down when the tribal council impeached him in February.

Council members accused him of refusing to hold meetings, barring opponents from meetings he did hold, and kicking two people off the council. They also appointed Karen Bucktooth president.

"We're on the verge of a civil war," said Rose Patterson, a Bowen aide. "If people allow the violence to continue, it's going to be a long time before police leave the reservation."

The shooting at a tribal government building, occupied by Bowen supporters for more than a month, began when a group fired into the building and its occupants fired back, Erie County Sheriff Thomas Higgins said.

"There was a lot of loud arguing for three minutes, finally I heard nothing but shots fired: Bam. Bam. Bam. Bam," Seneca Marshal Les McComber said.

Patterson said five Bucktooth supporters stormed the building after a night of drinking. Tim Clark, a spokesman for Bucktooth, said those who were killed attempted to enter the building after their tires were shot out by Bowen supporters.

All three dead were Bucktooth supporters, according to both sides. A fourth man, a Bowen supporter, was shot in the hand and leg.

Whole different world exists beyond camera's eye at O.J. trial

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Away from the pool camera's unblinking eye, there's a whole different world from what folks at home see when they watch the Simpson trial.

There's Brian "Kato" Kaelin trying to leave through the wrong door, Judge Lance Ito conducting a wedding ceremony for an inmate and a pregnant woman, a bored backbench lawyer working a crossword puzzle and bailiffs prowling for gum chewers and nappers.

Television makes the courtroom look bigger, Detective Mark Fuhrman shorter and Ito taller.

TV does not, on the other hand, show the jury and alternate panel, save for one momentary mistake by Court TV that exposed an alternate. Still, it's not like there's much to see.

The jurors are distinguished from other juries only in that they dress extremely well, the men in ties, the women in dresses and suits. All are impeccably groomed. One woman has towering blond hairdos that put mop-headed Kaelin to shame.

They don't flinch at the goriest of crime scene photographs. Only Kaelin has jolted them from their imperturbability; his wisecracks brought smiles and even laughter.

In fact, he's been a fountain of off-camera entertainment.

At the end of his first manic day of testimony, Kaelin left the stand and headed toward the jury room. A bailiff shook his head "no" and jurors seemed aghast that he was about to breach their sanctuary.

During one break, Kaelin was left on the witness stand and nobody told him what to do. He looked around quizzically until Detective Tom Lange, at the prosecution's table, motioned that he could stand down.

On the other side, Simpson's team is crammed in at two rows of tables, with attorneys Robert Shapiro, Johnnie Cochran Jr., Carl Douglas and F. Lee Bailey getting the front row with Simpson while Sara Kaplan, Robert Kardashian, and sundry DNA lawyers and private detectives sit behind.

Indeed, newcomers usually remark at how small the courtroom is. Lawyers sit shoulder-to-shoulder and what looks like a vast span between the counsel tables and Ito's bench is only a few feet.

Like his courtroom, Ito, a wiry 5-foot-5, looks a little larger on television. Others, including Fuhrman, Lange and Officer Robert Riske — the first on the scene — are bigger than they look. Lange stands about 6 feet, Fuhrman gave his height as 6-foot-3 — taller than Simpson — and Riske is about Fuhrman's size.

In the audience, the victims' relatives often make under-the-breath comments during testimony while reporters trade sarcastic remarks or hand each other breath mints and candy.

Nicole Brown Simpson's sister, Denise Brown, often talks with Simpson's son Jason. One day, Simpson's mother and Ms. Simpson's mother looked over family photos of their grandchildren, Justin and Sydney.

One of the odder scenes had nothing to do with Simpson: Ito performed a five-minute marriage ceremony for an inmate in a jail jumpsuit and his very pregnant fiance. Shapiro, studying papers nearby, barely noticed.

Excitement of emergency care draws veterinarians

By Penny Owen
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — B.J. was a healthy, active Rottweiler, before she started vomiting and moping around. The flu was in season, so her regular veterinarian treated her for it. She got worse.

It was well after normal working hours when B.J. hit a critical point.

"She got so sick later that evening that I panicked," said owner Carolyn Peck.

The ailing pup was rushed to one of Oklahoma City's two pet emergency rooms, where her diabetic onset got fast attention.

Between B.J.'s regular vet visits and a few nights of observation at the Veterinary Emergency and Critical Care hospital in north Oklahoma City, the 6-year-old canine was saved.

Pet emergency rooms aren't new — Oklahoma City veterinarian Jim Lee opened the after-hours Animal Emergency Hospital 11 years ago — but demand has grown, veterinarians say.

When other vets go home, these emergency vets open their double doors, accepting ailing animals of all kinds from 6 p.m. to 8 a.m. and any time after noon Saturday on weekends.

In come the gastrointestinal problems, the slice and nicks of a dog fight, the sudden catastrophe of a pet hit by a car.

Waiting for them is a mini-hospital equipped with everything from anesthetic and X-ray machines to intravenous pumps, respirators and computerized cardiac monitors.

There's a room for surgery and a lab for analysis. Cardiac patients have oxygen bins while those needing a transfusion can get a quick donation from the in-house dog or cat.

Most of the equipment was designed for humans, says Dr. Gary Kubat of the Emergency and Critical Care hospital, which opened in June.

Other vets can forward their late-night phone calls to these clinics, or bring their critical cases in.

Dr. Sharon Cary rushed a dachshund over one Tuesday for cardiopulminary resuscitation, after it took a turn for the worse at her day clinic. It didn't survive.

Sometimes vets leave their patients for long holiday weekends — a busy time in emergency care.

Kubat said one-third of his patients have gastrointestinal problems — especially dogs, which have a hankering for rat poison and holiday table scraps. Another one-third come in with some type of trauma — like a Memorial Day weekend fight at the lake — and the rest will have the remaining assortment of ailments.

Once, a cranky lizard was brought into Kubat's emergency room with an upset stomach — turned out he'd been eating rocks. It took several urgent visits to get the lizard's system moving again, but eventually the reptile improved.

A Boston Terrier was severely banged up when a car hit it. An emergency room X-ray revealed a fractured spine — and shiny matter in the tummy. The dog didn't make it, but during an autopsy, the vet found $2.75 in small change inside.

Animals have come with bullets in them and gashes revealing their innards. One night Lee treated a dog that had been shot in the face from 15 feet away.

"If you pet his head, pellets just fell out from under the skin," Lee said. "He lost an eye but he did very, very well."

Both Lee and Kubat say they're drawn to the excitement of emergency medicine. Each day is different. When temperatures soar, so do their calls. Other nights, the only drama they get is a wounded bird wing needing a cortisone shot.

Unless treatment is really critical, costs are competitive. But, as with humans, intensive care can get expensive.

"As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is for life."

It began when I was young and needed advice about birth control. You know, I can still remember my first visit. They sensed I was nervous, but their kindness made me feel comfortable and secure. And they offered a wide range of affordable services that covered all my special health care needs.
When I could afford to go somewhere else, I stayed. Planned Parenthood people are sensitive, courteous and as professional as can be. And everything is confidential.
Now that I'm older, I still go to Planned Parenthood for their midlife services, as they're as caring as ever.
I'm glad I've stayed with Planned Parenthood all these years. They're committed to the special health care needs of women of all ages. They really are for life!

Both sides profit in breast implant debate

BOSTON (AP) — Some doctors say silicone breast implants are perfectly safe. Others argue they make women sick. But on this they can all agree: The money for offering these opinions is excellent.

"This has been a growth industry for rheumatologists," Dr. Bruce Cronstein said.

Himself included.

This New York University Medical Center specialist, like many prominent in rheumatology, has chosen sides in the breast implant controversy.

Cronstein happens to be a consultant for Dow Corning, the biggest maker of silicone breast implants. Many of his colleagues have joined the other team, working for the plaintiff attorneys suing Dow Corning and other manufacturers.

No one denies these doctors believe in their positions, whether for implants or against. But accepting fees that range from $300 to $600 an hour at least raises the appearance that money might influence opinions.

THE SCIENTIFIC data about silicone's health effects are murky, and while there is no clear evidence that implants are harmful, no one can say beyond all possible doubt that they are completely safe, either.

A definite answer is obviously important to the estimated 1 million American women who have had their breasts enlarged or replaced with silicone.

Yet many worry the issue will never be settled, in part because so many of the researchers who could divine the answer appear to have a financial stake in the outcome: Their research, no matter what they find, will be tainted by the suspicion of bias.

"The money involved is so big that it's really almost impossible on either side to find anybody who is totally clean," said Dr. Stuart Silverman of UCLA, who treats patients sent by attorneys. "I don't know anyone who could do the research who is neutral."

For their part, doctors often say they enjoy the intellectual challenge of expert testimony or see a civic duty to educate lawyers and juries.

"It's important that first-class scientists be able to present material in a courtroom in a way that the public can understand," said psychiatrist James Hudson of McLean Hospital in Belmont, Mass., a witness for Dow Corning.

SOME DENY money is even a factor.

"I don't believe any of the people involved are doing this for financial reasons," said Dr. Luis Espinoza of Louisiana State University, who works with plaintiff attorneys. "We are involved, pro and con, because we feel it's right."

Doctors profit from their relationships with lawyers by accepting consulting fees to review medical reports, by testifying in court and by relying on them to send in patients. Whether they form these alliances for the money or not, the resulting work can represent a sizable part of some doctors' income.

Hudson, for instance, testified that $189,000 of his $232,000 total income in 1993 came from consulting for attorneys, mostly in breast implant cases.

Some doctors specialized in filling out paperwork for women who want to be included in a $4.25 billion settlement. In a trial last year, Dr. Nachman Brautbar of the University of Southern California said he has seen about 1,000 of these patients and typically charges $950 for consultation and legal papers, which adds up to nearly $1 million.

"If you have $4.25 billion flying around, it will stick to a lot of fingers. That's what I see happening," said Dr. Marcia Angell, executive editor of the New England Journal of Medicine.

IN FACT $4.25 billion is just the start of it. Without admitting wrongdoing, the manufacturers agreed to pay that much to settle the thousands of lawsuits filed after the U.S. Food and Drug Administration took silicone implants off the market three years ago.

About 350,000 women have registered for the settlement, most of them in case they get sick during the next 30 years. Perhaps 8,000 to 11,000 more are suing the companies on their own.

In two jury verdicts this year, one woman was awarded $5.2 million and the other $6 million. The companies' total liability from the remaining suits could be billions more.

At trial, the testimony of doctors and the weight of published medical research are crucial, so lawyers try to line up the best experts they can afford. The list of manufacturers' experts adds up to more than 175 names, including prominent physicians at Johns Hopkins, Duke, Baylor and Georgetown.

SOME QUESTION, however, whether doctors conducting seemingly evenhanded studies of silicone's effects, often with federal research dollars, should ever get cash from lawyers for manufacturers or plaintiffs.

"I firmly believe that anyone who is doing science that is financed by public money cannot take a stance in that kind of adversarial role," said Dr. Norman Anderson of Johns Hopkins University. "Otherwise, they are violating the public trust and the ethics of science."

Proving that these conflicts of interest actually bias results is difficult, although a recent review of published breast implant reports by Britain's Medical Devices Agency complained that "in some cases, careful analysis appears to have been set aside in favor of the defense of an entrenched position."

Some worry that even the most ethical might subconsciously design research and analyze results so they reach the conclusions that help their team.

"If you're on the plaintiff side, you will ask questions that, if positive, will support that. If you're trying to disprove an association, the questions are different. It does influence the science," said Dr. Ralph Schumacher of the University of Pennsylvania.

SOME ATTORNEYS believe that simply serving as a paid expert can harden opinions and close minds. During questioning, lawyers often force these witnesses into an intellectual corner, forcing them to take the strongest possible positions and leaving little room to admit doubt.

Paid experts are especially valuable in court when they can point to silicone studies they have gotten published in prestigious journals. Attorneys use these studies as ammunition to build up, or tear down, the case that silicone caused plaintiffs' illnesses.

Those who produce studies suggesting implants are bad, however, complain that they have a hard time getting them published.

"There is a bias among most physicians that this is a bogus illness," said Dr. Gary Solomon of the Hospital for Joint Diseases in New York City.

Clearing her name

'Exemplary mom' wages campaign to change law, get off Iowa's list of child abusers

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

MASON CITY, Iowa — One summer day, Joy Brown looked around and panicked: Her 5-year-old son Jamie had slipped out of the house. An hour later, mother and child were reunited, no harm done.

Her innocent mistake could have ended in disaster. She'll accept that.

But Mrs. Brown will not — now or ever — accept the state's conclusion: She belongs on a list of child abusers.

She has waged a dogged campaign to clear her name and to change the rules that lump her with those who habitually abuse or neglect their kids — and now, after more than 1 1/2 years of lobbying, some state legislators are saying she may be right and it's time to change the law.

"This is nothing short of a travesty," Mrs. Brown says, her voice husky with indignation. "I am NOT an abusive parent. I don't believe in spanking. ... I'm just a regular ordinary mom who takes good care of her kids."

The state of Iowa is unmoved. Yes, officials said in a letter, Mrs. Brown is "an exemplary parent" to Jamie, who has an autistic-like disorder, but yes, indeed, she also belongs on its child abuse registry.

TODAY, THE state stands by its conclusion made after the July 1993 incident: Joy Brown allowed her son to wander alone on a road, jeopardizing his safety. Her crime: "Denial of critical care."

"Certainly from that standpoint of this incident, that child clearly was in danger," said Eric Sage, head of the support and protective services bureau at the Iowa Department of Human Services.

"If you didn't change one circumstance in this scenario, except that the youngster got hit by a car," there would be no debate, he added. "That's one of the things you have to keep in mind."

This is the story of one mother's crusade. But it also offers a striking example of the tough balancing act faced by many embattled child welfare systems as they struggle with increasing numbers of troubled kids, record levels of abuse complaints and a public clamoring for fast action.

The result? Hard-line measures, expanded definitions of child abuse and mandatory reporting laws that leave little room for discretion when handling complex family issues.

"As you take out human judgment in the system, we're going to end up with situations like Joy Brown," said John Holtkamp, director of the Iowa chapter of the National Committee to Prevent Child Abuse. "Not everyone has to be labeled. One size does not fit all."

Holtkamp, who worked on nearly 1,200 child abuse investigations in 12 years with the state, says "the outcome does not seem fair" to Mrs. Brown, but he doesn't blame his former agency.

"It is well-intentioned people all the way around," he said. "But you know the saying about good intentions."

Dana Mack, an affiliate scholar at the New York-based Institute for American Values, frequently hears of stories of unwarranted child abuse probes. In Virginia, a woman was placed on a child abuse registry after her napping toddler, left alone in the car, wandered out onto a curb.

"How are we able to protect the children who need protection most when we overburden the child welfare system? We can't," Mack said.

OTHER EXPERTS, though, say single episodes should not be exaggerated, but records help establish patterns.

"We think it's important for police to keep records they don't expunge," said Donald Bross, a child welfare expert and director of education at the Kempe National Center, part of the University of Colorado.

"We probably would not ever be able to catch a Ted Bundy if we didn't begin to realize there was a person who kept showing up in association with losses they couldn't explain," he added.

Forty states have child abuse registries with varying approaches. In Iowa, a person is placed on the confidential list for 10 years if there's evidence of abuse, neglect or denial of critical care. Of about 20,000 people on the list, Sage said, most have single reports.

But he noted, "You must list the first time or you'll never find out if there's a second time." Few of those named "rise to the level of court action" and less than 1 percent on the list complain, he said.

Joy Brown joined that minority after the afternoon of July 21, 1993, changed her life. Jamie, the second-oldest of her four children, was watching a "Winnie the Pooh" video while she was placing her daughter, Kayla, then 1 1/2, in her crib.

Within moments, she realized Jamie was gone. She searched closets, the basement, under the beds, the barn. Nothing. "I was literally praying out loud that I'd find him," she recalled.

Her husband, Tom, drove by ditches, fearing his son had been hit by a car on the desolate strip of road in north-central Iowa, about two hours north of Des Moines.

The Browns had just moved there three weeks earlier; the proper door locks hadn't yet been installed.

Both knew Jamie's disappearance posed special risks.

The blue-eyed boy with shaggy brown hair and translucent skin has what doctors call pervasive development disorder — an autism-like impairment in which he rarely speaks. Sometimes, strangers think he's deaf.

JAMIE, NOW 7, can read and write and understands people, his mother says, but he usually will not respond verbally. He didn't utter the word "mom" until he was 4; he didn't tell her he loved her until last fall.

A stranger who spotted Jamie down the road drove him to the police station, where he was sitting when Mrs. Brown called 911. Her relief, though, faded when a state social worker, waiting there, began questioning them.

"He was trying to make us say that Jamie wore us out," recalled Mrs. Brown. She rejected his suggestions of respite care. "What's he going to do if he wakes up in a strange place with strange people?" she asked.

Days later, Mrs. Brown received official notice that she was listed on the child abuse registry. "You feel like a criminal," she said, "but even criminals get a hearing first."

> 'Everything can't be just black or white...I also think workers need to find out a little bit more than just sitting there and putting me on that list for 10 years.'
> mother

She was assured the list was confidential. But a few months later, she took Jamie for his regular hospital evaluation and, "What's the first thing they ask me: 'What's this about child abuse?' So they found out."

State officials say a limited number of people have access to the list.

MSR. BROWN appealed the decision, compiling a dossier that included a letter from Jamie's speech therapist praising her dedication. Eight months later, word came: She'd remain on the list.

"Everybody's saying, 'Oh well, you know you're a good mother.' That's beside the point," said Mrs. Brown, a lanky woman with long auburn hair who looks a decade younger than her 37 years. "Everything just can't be black or white. ... I also think workers need to find out a little bit more than just sitting there and putting me on that list for 10 years."

As a mother who attends a support group and lobbied for her son to attend classes with other kids, she resents being categorized with parents who have savagely beaten their children.

And she worries that other incidents may be seen in a false light. Jamie, she said, once fell off the couch and hurt his leg. "I thought, 'Oh, my God, I can't take him to the hospital ... They're going to think I did it.'"

Mrs. Brown also fears her record could prevent her from being a foster mother or establishing day care at home — two options she had considered.

AFTER LOBBYING numerous officials, she's made headway with some, including state Rep. Dennis May, who says "to compound (Mrs. Brown's) fear from a few fleeting hours into 10 years is not something the state wants to level against citizens like this."

A bill recently introduced in the Legislature, partially prompted by the Brown case, would hold such information for two years with no formal designation of child abuse unless there was another incident; also, a review council could hear appeals before names are placed on the registry.

Among other ideas that have been discussed by a special task force are limiting the registry to serious cases or a two-tiered data bank — one for less egregious reports.

Sage, the state official, supports that two-tiered approach, but cautions against any foolproof system. "There are going to be some people that are going to be caught in it, no matter what you do," he said.

Joy Brown is determined not to be one.

"I hope it doesn't take eight more years, but I'll fight until my name gets off the list. That's how much I believe this is wrong."

25-year-old knows his future: Riding powder

By Toby Smith
Associated Press

AMALIA, N.M. — Carl Gauna is tired of being asked what he's going to be when he grows up. At almost 25 years of age, Gauna knows exactly what's in his future. Riding the power, dude.

Snowboarding in this country rapidly has increased to where it now claims nearly two million disciples. How many snowboard bums are among them is unclear, but surely the number grows daily.

Gauna might be point man for the vagabond side of shredding. Twice, Gauna has dropped out of school to ride, and he works when he feels like it. He'd rather wear baggy, ripped nylon pants than be caught dead in Dockers. He has been broke and homeless, but he seldom has been without a board.

"It's what makes me happy," he says.

Gauna, a stocky guy with a three-day-old stubble, landed at Ski Rio, close to the Colorado border, last Thanksgiving. Since then, he has lived in a crumbling adobe house in this village at the bottom of the mountain resort. The place is unheated, and the commode sits out the back door. No matter, dude.

At night, Gauna stands over a wood stove with his roommate, another Albuquerque boarder named Tony Perez, a fellow with hair bleached the color of ripe bananas, and stirs a saucer of Ramen noodles.

In the morning, what remains on the stove has frozen solid.

Says Gauna, with a laugh: "It doesn't get any better than this."

On most days, Gauna heads up the hill to Ski Rio's halfpipe, a snowpacked trench, which he then races down as fast as he can, embracing the adrenalin rush, catching air, getting stoked.

Gauna holds a season pass on the mountain — he got it for helping to work on the snowboard park. People like him make the resort the most snowboard-friendly area in New Mexico.

Pausing between pulls off a bloody burger in Ski Rio's day lodge, Gauna says, "I see myself doing this when I'm an old man."

He started out as a young soccer player, and he was a good one. As a kid, Gauna played on select teams in Albuquerque and later for La Cueva High School, from which he graduated in 1988.

Soccer seemed to be his calling: In his freshman year he made the team at the University of New Mexico.

But that winter when a friend at Sandia Peak let him try a snowboard, everything changed.

The following summer, Gauna worked at his uncle's ranch in Vaughn, saved his dough and the next winter started going to Sandia regularly. He still was at UNM, an engineering student, but school suddenly held little attraction. Indeed, he worked out his schedule so he could take two to three days off a week from classes.

Soon, soccer went by the wayside, too.

"It wasn't fun anymore," Gauna says. "Soccer had gotten too competitive for me. I hated it when I lost in soccer, and I hated that part of myself."

On the other hand, snowboarding offered no such pressure. "I didn't have to impress anyone, at least at first," says Gauna. "In soccer, every time I touched the ball, I felt I had to do well."

By the next winter, 1990, Gauna signed on to instruct new snowboarders at Sandia Peak in exchange for the golden passport all boarders seek: a season pass.

Gauna still was living with his parents, but they had begun to be concerned with his lifestyle and arguments developed. The disagreements disappeared in 1991 when he tried college again, at Colorado Mountain College, a small school in Leadville, Colo. Leadville, however, is close by Summit County, a mecca of Western snowboarders. Gauna lasted half a semester.

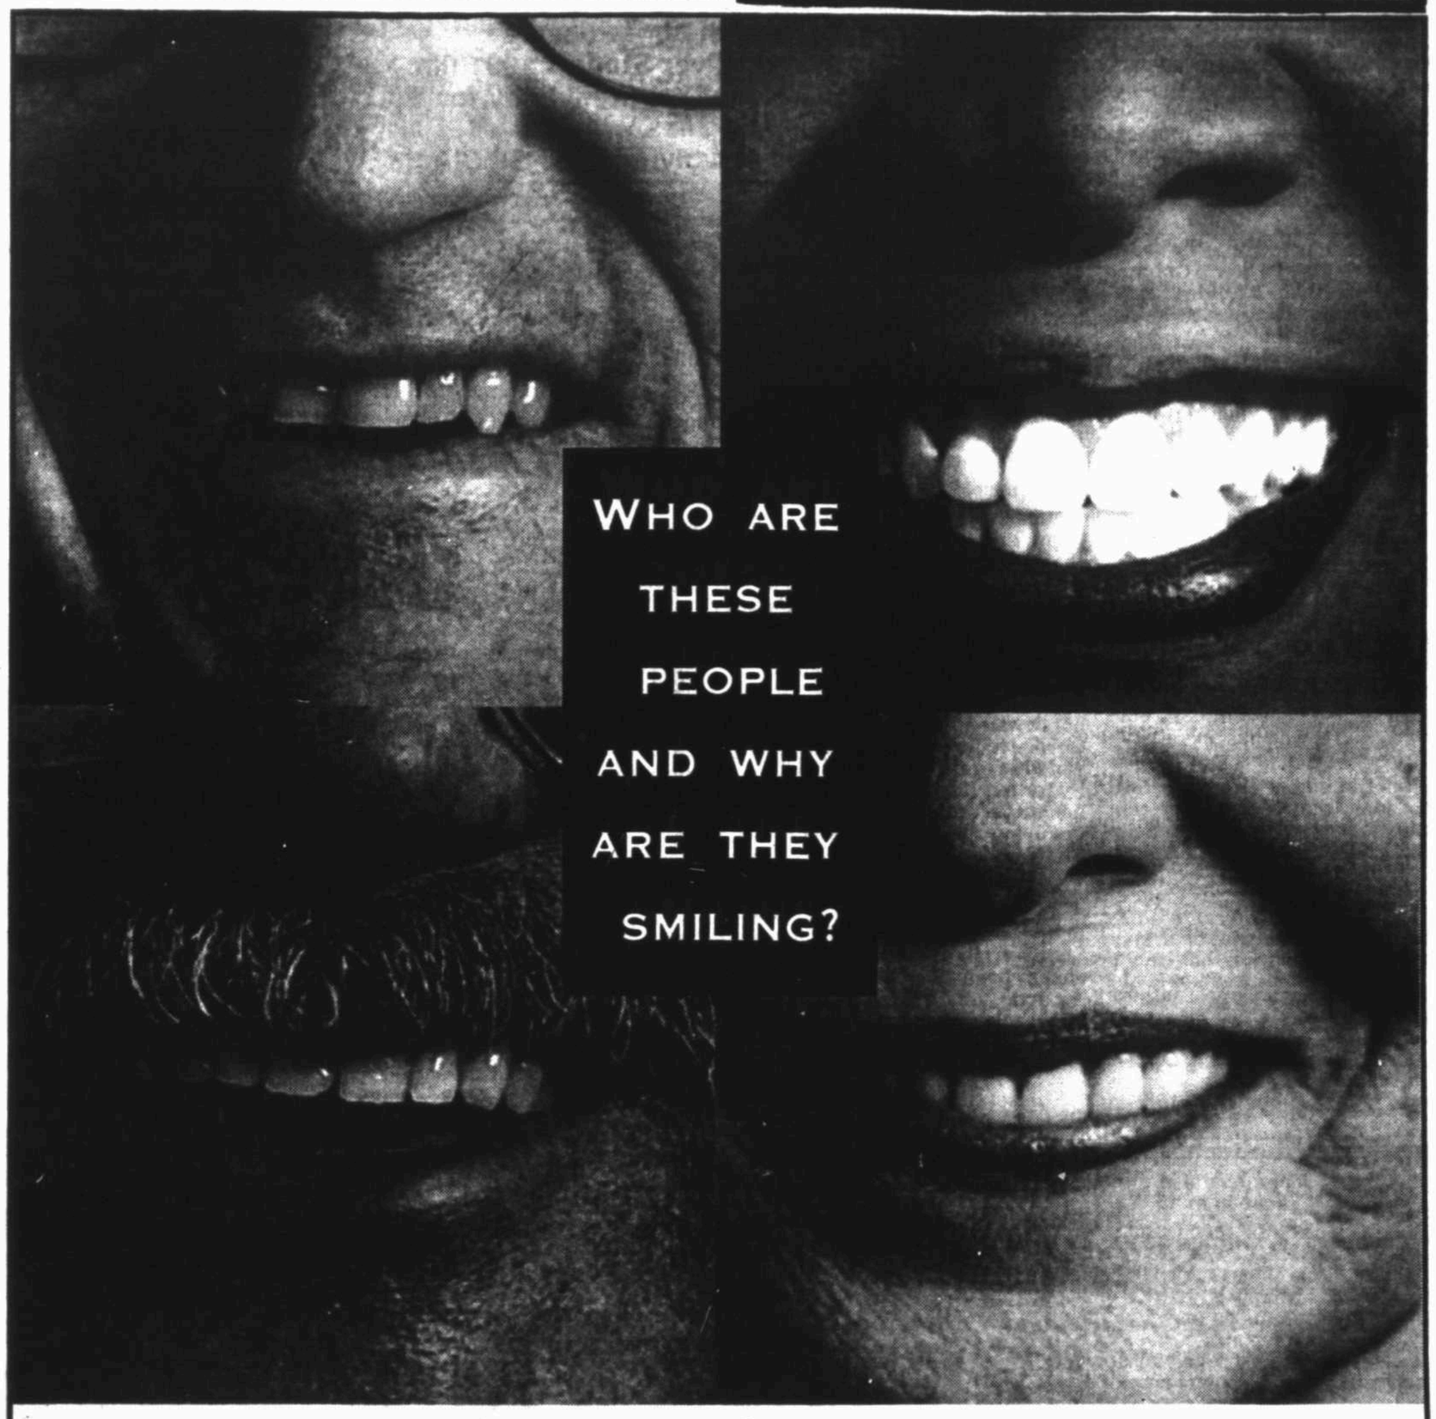

"I'd wake up at 6, and there'd be powder on Copper Mountain and I'd want to cut fresh lines all day. School lost that contest."

The next winter, Gauna wound up in Durango, Colo. He found work at a Subway sandwich shop and then as a Purgatory lift op, and his snowboarding skills took a giant leap.

"I learned to read a mountain," Gauna says. "A lot of snowboarders can do tricks, but they're terrible at going from Point A to Point B."

Board expects to release 2 million Kennedy assassination documents

BOSTON (NYT) — The head of a board set up to release government documents relating to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy said Friday the $6 million fact-finding effort will debunk many conspiracy theories but probably spawn some new ones.

John Tunheim, chairman of the Assassination Records Review Board, predicted at a State House hearing that by the time the board completes its work in October 1997, more than 2 million documents relating to the assassination would be available for review at the National Archives, in addition to the 2 million already there.

Despite the avalanche of material, panel members said the doubts that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone would probably continue to linger.

Even so, Tunheim defended the effort. "I think we are a very cost-effective way of doing this (when compared to) the cost of agencies responding to Freedom of Information requests and defending themselves in lawsuits from people who want to get at this information," he said. "I think there are issues for the American public that do need to be resolved."

Panel mémber Kermit Hall, who noted that controversy continues to swirl over whether John Wilkes Booth killed President Lincoln more than a century ago, said, "Basically the conspiracy theorist will always be able to find questions to ask that cannot be immediately answered."

A half-dozen academics, authors and researchers — whose theses ranged from Lee Harvey Oswald was framed to Oswald did not act alone in the assassination — spent three hours suggesting to the board what documents they should look for, where and why, the latter question not always clear.

Momentum for creating the board came following the release of Oliver Stone's 1991 film 'JFK,' which suggested that responsibility for the Kennedy assassination lies with a broadbased conspiracy involving the FBI, CIA and military intelligence.

Philip H. Melanson, political science professor at UMass-Dartmouth and author of "Spy Saga: Lee Harvey Oswald and US Intelligence," asked the board to release US military intelligence records on Oswald.

Other witnesses urged the five-member board to pursue reports that the windshield of the convertible in which Kennedy was riding in Dallas was switched after being pierced by a bullet and that Kennedy's gunshot wounds were altered as part of a cover-up.

Momentum for creating the board came following the release of Oliver Stone's 1991 film "JFK," which suggested that responsibility for the Kennedy assassination lies with a broadbased conspiracy involving the FBI, CIA and military intelligence.

According to Hall, surveys showed that before the film came out, 80 percent of American people believed the Warren Commission's conclusion that Oswald acted alone in the assassination. Following the film's release, 80 percent believed there was a conspiracy.

The session at the State House was part of a series of meetings the committee is having with conspiracy buffs and academics that have been held so far in Washington and Dallas.

Public outcry provided the impetus for Congress and President Clinton to pass the 1992 law calling for the release of relevant information.

Tunheim said most of the 50,000 documents concerning the assassination that US agencies still want to keep secret would be released soon. "Much of what we are seeing is information that is very old that can be shared with the American public without any degree of diffculty. So we expect to release most, if not all, of the records that we see," said Tunheim.

Golf tournament

The Texas Shrine Golfers Association will hold its annual mid-winter meeting and golf tournament in Midland Wednesday through Friday with Green Tree and Ranchland Hills Country Clubs to be sites. The Texas Shrine Golf Association (TSGA) has 1,200 golf members among the 13 Shrine Temples in Texas and it raises approximately $100,000 each year by staging golf tournaments. Money goes to the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Houston and the Burns Center in Galveston. Last year, American Shriners spent $336 million for operations, research and capital expenditures at 19 orthopedic hospitals and three burn centers in the country. All patients receive treatment free of charge, according to Bob Cain, president of the Texas Association.

Author visits

Janice Woods, author of "True Women," is to visit Abell Junior High School and Pages and Prints Bookstore on Friday. She will talk to honors history students at Abell during the day and then from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m. she will be at the bookstore to sign books and visit with patrons. "True Women" is a historical novel that traces the history of Texas and two families — her mother's and father's — from the Texas Revolution to the 1940s. Ms. Woods poured through family letters and other documents, diary entries, notes in family Bibles and recipe books, taped interviews and military records to craft a story viewed through the eyes of women, who generally played background roles. Ms. Woods was born in San Antonio, reared in Seguin and lives in El Paso.

Discussion set

Local law-enforcement officers will be discussing gang activity in Midland at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Midland High School Youth Center. Speakers include Det. Darrin Clements and Sgt. David Colburn of the Midland Police Department, and Sgt. Sue Rudie of the Sheriff's Department. In addition, members of the Crime Prevention Commission will be present. The public is urged to attend.

Public hearing

LUBBOCK — One in a series of public hearings on the High Plains Boll Weevil Eradication Referendum is set for 4 p.m. Wednesday at the county extension office. For more information, call 806-792-4904.

Guest speakers

ODESSA — Juanita Wollaston and Jeanne Stone — who assist people in finding missing relatives — are to be the guest speakers at the monthly meeting of the Permian Basin Genealogical Society. The meeting is set for 7 p.m. Monday at Ector County Library, 321 W. Fifth St. The public is invited to attend. For more information, call 1-915-332-0634.

Patel

From Staff Reports

After three spellers went head to head for many rounds in the eighth annual Midland Reporter-Telegram Regional Spelling Bee Saturday, Vinesh Patel of Abell Junior High School correctly spelled "embroidered" to win the competition.

Vinesh, the son of Dr. Ravi and Vidya Patel, was the top speller out of 33 contestants in the regional bee. He won the chance to participate in the 68th Annual Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C., May 28-June 3.

Chad Kiefer, who attends home school, came in second place, tripping up on the word "regime." As second-place winner Chad received the New Encyclopaedia Britannica.

After going three rounds with Vinesh and Chad, Aleem Rakeeb from San Jacinto Junior High School misspelled "pinnate" to finish third. He received the Word Master 1025 from Franklin Electronic Publisher, an electronic hand-held spelling computer.

Other winners in the bee were Jennifer Burris of Crockett Elementary School,

Museum honors couple, names gallery for them

From Staff Reports

Longtime Midlanders, Novadean and the late Fred T. Hogan, are being honored Monday at the dedication of a Museum of the Southwest gallery named in their honor.

The new gallery in the south wing of the museum was made possible by Lissa and Cy Wagner's generosity, which allowed for the remodeling and renovation of space to display art works given to the museum by the Hogans.

A reception to honor Mrs. Hogan and the Wagners is scheduled for 6 p.m.

Denna McGuire, president of the museum's board of trustees, will make the official presentation and unveil a plaque designating the Hogan Gallery.

Mrs. Hogan said it is "wonderful, an honor never expected," to have the gallery named after them. She expresses appreciation for the generosity of the Wagners that made the gallery possible.

Mrs. Wagner, immediate past president of the board, said she and her husband are pleased to be able to honor the Hogans with the gallery as an expression of appreciation for all they have done for the museum and the community at large.

In 1980 the Hogans gave to the museum 17 paintings by Santa Fe artists and members of the Taos Society of Artists.

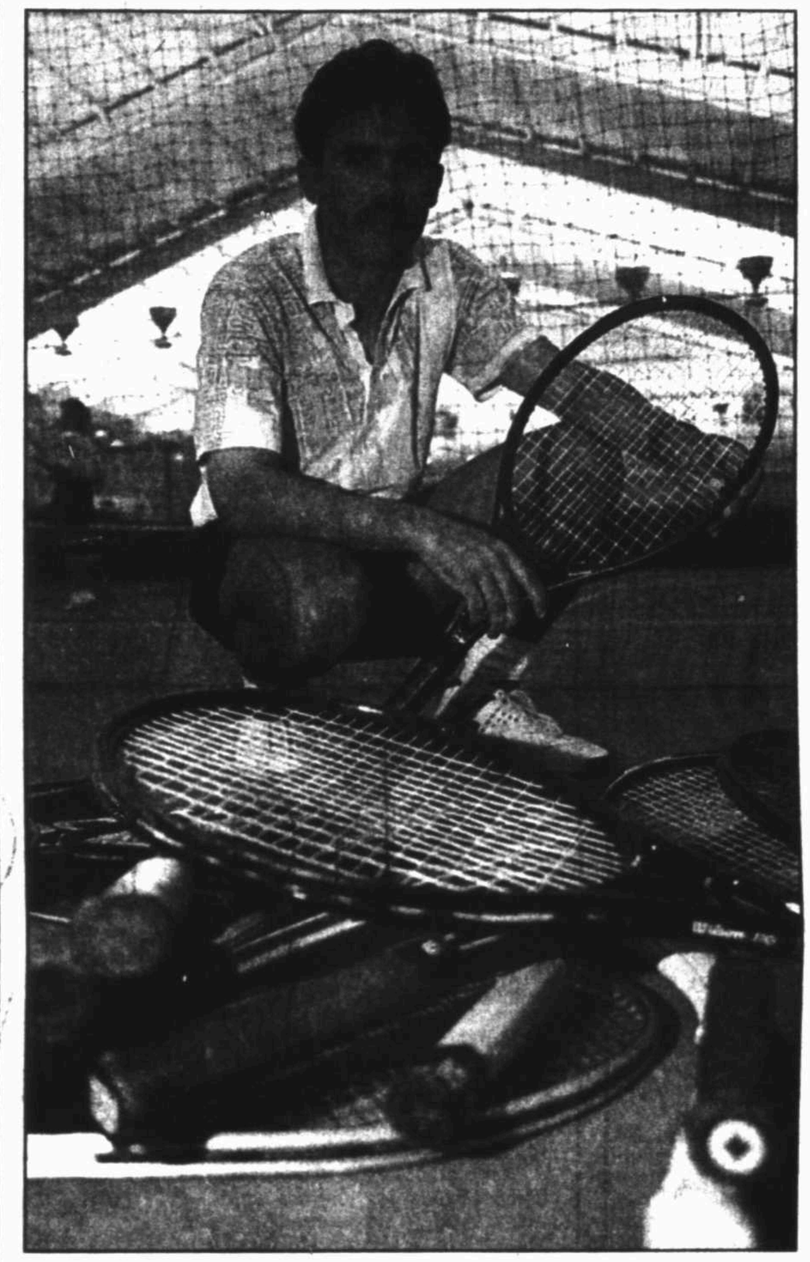

They have since added to the museum's collection. Two of those are favorites of museum visitors, Norman Rockwell's "Spring Song" and "The Flower of the Prison" by Eanger Irving Couse.

"The Flower of the Prison" was one of Hogan's favorite paintings and was given in 1986 as a memorial to museum benefactor Fredda Turner Durham. It was an award-winning painting done by Couse when he was studying in Paris and before he moved to Taos and became one of the Taos Society members.

Another gift from the Hogans is "The Naming," a large limestone sculpture by Doug Hyde. It depicts four Indian women encircling a baby as the center of a naming ceremony.

Hogan, a Montana native, died in 1993.

Luis Valdez, tennis pro at The Midlander, is collecting raquets for a program that would make the sport available to youths who don't normally play.

Reach Out Tennis program lets youth learn sports skills

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Underprivileged youth in Midland will be given a chance to learn a new sport in a program that removes financial barriers for children ages 6 to 11.

An addition to the Tennis Association of Midland, the Reach Out Tennis program will allow those youth, who ordinarily would not be able to afford tennis equipment and instruction, a chance to study under some of the city's best instructors.

"What we're trying to do is to bridge the gap between the kids that have never had an opportunity to participate in tennis and the kids who have had all the opportunities," explained Luis Valdez, who is coordinating the new program. He works as a tennis professional at The Midlander.

Although the program is geared toward producing top junior players who can compete across the nation, the main reason for having this kind of program is not simply for the few players with superb ability, Valdez said.

The gift of tennis can benefit all youth — fostering self-confidence and building character. Tennis provides challenges and forces the learning player to develop strategies, set goals and to learn to deal with life's ups and downs, Valdez explained.

"We'll be educating the parent, as well as the child, on what it takes to be a competitive tennis player," he said.

The system will be designed so that those students who do excel, who have the ability and the drive to win championships, will be moved into groups where play and instruction are more intense.

This will ensure that every youth's mental and physical abilities are challenged, Valdez said. Although most students will not play at this highest level, no students will be ignored; each will receive top-notch instruction and evaluation.

Just because a player may not be totally focused on the game one year does not

County residents boast of top production

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

SEMINOLE — Gaines County, which is lined with draws and spotted with playa lakes, might appear dry and flat and more brown than green in the lull between fall harvest and spring planting.

The old country is flat. The people are proud. And the soil and the reservoirs below the land are so rich that Gaines County rightfully boasts that its people — through hard work, know-how, and the blessings of nature — produce more cotton, more peanuts and more petroleum than any other Texas county.

"I don't care where you live, if you don't have self-pride in your community, you don't have much," said Leon Foote, a former cotton farmer who, along with his son, Jerry Don, runs Gaines County Farm Supply store. "It applies to the individual and then it carries over to the community."

Oil production, largely due to the discovery of the Seminole Field in the mid-1930s, is gauged in millions of barrels a month and is nearing 2 billion barrels in almost 60 years of production. Gaines County production has

Appearance is everything for exercisers in the 1990s

Ott

One of the truly bad things about being in your 40s during the 1990s is that you are pretty much required to make at least a token effort to — and I quote — "get the ol' body in shape" once the summer months start approaching.

And, that can mean just one thing ... you got it, exercise.

I know, I know. It's a pain in the you know what, but it's the law, especially if you have a white collar job that pays more than $30,000 a year. You simply have to be seen doing some form of exercise.

The optimum word here, of course, is "seen." It is crucial that other people actually witness you doing whatever it is you have chosen to do. Otherwise, neither your efforts, nor your stinky sweat, will count.

That's because for white collar people of the '90s, appearance is everything, proving once and for all, I suppose, that some things never change. Once a shallow person, always a shallow person.

Still, we must deal with the harsh realities of life, no matter how unfortunate they might be, so let's take a closer look at some of the exercise options that are available to the average 40-year-old who is clinging to the foolish notion that he or she, with enough pain and agony, can actually still look good in a swimsuit.

Those people could save considerable time and expense by merely sneaking a quick glance at themselves in the mirror, but, what the heck, let's amuse them by examining the possibilities just the same:

1. Jogging. This is perhaps the most misunderstood form of exercise in existence. When out-of-shape people decide to engage in physical activity they invariably think of jogging. This is dumb. Jogging hurts. Jogging gives you cramps and makes your joints ache. Only people who own huge amounts of stock in Advil should ever consider jogging.

2. Walking. Once a person has recovered from his attempt at jogging he will generally turn to walking as a viable alternative. This is wise. Walking is much less painful than jogging. Still, there are certain drawbacks that should be mentioned. Foremost is the unavoidable fact that walking is bad for the ego since the person in question is basically acknowledging he is just one step away from joining those old folks who nearly run over you as they walk in a giant circle at the mall.

3. Riding a bicycle. This is the logical in-between phase for those individuals who have the basic sense

NEED: Literacy spelling bee scheduled for April 7

(From 1B)

Fellow employees of team members serve as cheering sections for their teams and are also eligible for the audience participation segment of the bee and for door prizes. Team fee is $500. All funds raised go to Need to Read, the Midland United Way agency that battles adult illiteracy.

Other teams signed up to date are Texaco, Arco, Bank One, Texas Instruments, Parker & Parsley, Chevron and Midland College, which is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram.

A variety of door prizes will be presented with donors including Block Buster Video, Cox Video, Peyton's Bikes, French Chateau Hairworks, Merle Norman, Jo Jo's Eatery, La Bodega, Fiberflex, Pages and Prints, Mrs. Colsen's Coffee and Book Store, B. Dalton's, Flowerland, Expressions, Ivy Cottage, Hastings and Proteus Hair Salon. Prizes range from books, gift certificates and merchandise to dinners.

The annual Corporate Bee for Literacy is underwritten by the Reporter-Telegram in order that all proceeds can be used by the agency, which matches 165 adults seeking to improve their reading skills with volunteer tutors.

fourth place, and Matthew Hinkley from Trinity School, fifth place.

The spelling bee began 9 a.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College. The pronouncer for the third year in a row, was John Deats, director of the Learning Resource Center at Midland College. Judges were MC instructors Pamela Howell, and Sylvia Krusekopf, and retired Midland public school teacher Marydel Watkins.

NAME: Museum honors couple

(From 1B)

He came to Midland in 1925 as an oil scout. He was working with his father, who built Midland's first skyscraper, the 12-story Hogan Building. It is now the Petroleum Building.

During the Depression Hogan worked as night janitor in his father's building.

Hogan met his future wife when she was transferred to Midland by her employer, one of the Standard of Indiana companies, now Amoco. After they were married in 1937, they worked together as partners in their own oil company.

Hogan was involved in a number of civic projects and served as mayor pro-tem and mayor of Midland. He developed Midland's first golf course, helped initiate zoning laws, the city manager form of government, city planning board, and a new sewer system. He also was instrumental in obtaining for the city the former army bombardier base. It is the site of Midland International Airport.

Both Hogans were interested in art. Mrs. Hogan's parents had insisted she develop her talent with painting lessons, although she did not seriously pursue that interest.

Hogan enjoyed sketching and often drew during slow periods in his business. Mrs. Hogan said one of her treasured possessions is a pencil portrait her husband did of her.

Mrs. Hogan's art training acquainted her with the Taos painters, and Hogan knew Joseph Henry Sharp, one of the Taos Society, from the artist's trips to Colorado and Montana.

Mrs. Hogan recalls their first acquisition, an etching purchased from an artist in Estes Park, Colo. The piece cost about $1. Money was scarce in the days of the Depression with little for collecting art, she said, but as times became better, they were able to collect. They met and beveloped friendships with artists in Santa Fe and Arizona.

The couple's interest in art has been passed on to their granddaughter, Shelley Smith, formerly of Midland and now of Santa Fe. She is studying with artist Ned Jacob.

Ms. Smith and her brother, Chris Finseth, of Midland will attend the dedication.

not to jog but, at the same time, possess enough pride to avoid being seen walking. This is especially true for those who earn in excess of $50,000 a year. They have to make that much. That's because they will spend $600 on a new bike, another $350 for the proper riding attire, and then after, oh, a week or so, grow weary of the whole exercise bit. So they will lock up the bike in a back room, toss the riding attire in a drawer and move on to another form of physical activity, hopefully something equally expensive that they can tire of in a matter of days.

4. Working out in a gym. Are you kidding? In public? Those young 20- year-olds might laugh at you when you prove incapable of lifting 75 pounds over your head.

5. Working out at home. Are you kidding? In front of your loved ones? The cat, and probably even a house plant or two, will definitely laugh at you when you prove incapable of lifting 75 pounds over your head.

TOWN: County residents boast of top production

(From 1B)

outscored Andrews and Ector counties' production.

Cotton production, which reached a record yield of almost 355,000 bales in the early 1980s, generally is in the high 200,000 and the low-to-mid-300,000 bales a year.

Peanut production, which outpaces Comanche County's legume crop in Central Texas, reached 142 million pounds in 1994.

The impetus behind the high-crop production on the Texas High Plains is the wealth of underground water from the expansive Ogallala Aquifer. Peanuts, spinach, turnip greens, watermelons, wheat and other grains, and fruit orchards are produced on irrigated land. Cotton is produced on both irrigated soil and dryland.

"Normally, we are one of the highest-producing (cotton) counties around," said Seminole Mayor Wayne Mixon, who operates the high-speed Ocho Cotton Gin, one of a dozen in the county.

Last year, the Ocho Gin processed 65,000 bales of cotton, which ended up warehoused and then in textile mills. Much of the cotton is woven into denim. The gin's output in 1993 was 70,000 bales.

Gaines County covers more than 1,500 square miles, or sections. It is about half again as large as counties such as Terry, Yoakum, Lubbock, Dawson, Martin, Midland, and Howard.

Some irrigation cotton farmers have managed to produce from three to 3 1/2 bales to the acre.

"I'm not telling you they do that every year by any means," Mixon said. "It has been achieved."

He said Gaines County farmers have latched onto "innovative ways to increase their yields."

There are approximately 1,200 farms on 800,000 cultivated cropland acres in Gaines County.

"All of the farmers that weren't good caretakers and didn't take care of the ground, they are all gone," Mixon said. "They went off to do something else."

While strong farmland production ensures a healthy economy as long as prices hold up, there is concern among the farmers about the drain on the dwindling underground water supply.

"The market is suffering kind of a glut of peanuts right now," Mixon said. "The world has kind of turned to peanuts. Of course, you can have a crop failure over in Georgia or somewhere and correct that, too."

Gaines County farmers, similarly to those in neighboring Terry and Yoakum counties, produce Valencia, Virginia, runners, and Spanish peanuts for foreign and domestic markets.

"Gaines County is a large grower of peanuts and a good quality of peanut," Mixon said.

Many of the peanuts are exported to Europe and Mexico. In North America, they may end up in candies, cookies, peanut-butter jars, and, particularly the larger Virginia peanut, in peanut bags at ball games and circuses.

Peanuts require much water.

"Weather-wise, we need some rain," Mixon said. "We've been pumping pretty hard the last few years because of such droughts. "The water table is dropping."

Meanwhile, farmers have "learned ways to control that water," he said. "And we're concerned about how long that's going to continue to do like we're doing it. We need some rain. Dryland country desperately needs rain."

Jerry Don Foote, who farmed here until 1978 when he joined his father in the farm-supply business, acknowledged the dire need for rain.

"We can see it is getting weaker," he said of the underground-water reserves. "There is a fair amount of dryland in the eastern part of the county."

Foote said his farm experiences in both Terry and Gaines counties helped prepare him for the farm-supply business.

"I have an understanding of a lot of their (the farmers') problems — where they are coming from."

Of his early cotton-farming years, Foote admitted that "I have picked a little bit by hand — not enough to hurt me like my parents did."

For about 20 years, he raised Blue Lake green beans for Del Monte foods.

Like other farmers, he always is concerned about the weather, the rain or lack of it, and prospects for next-year's crop.

Doyle Fincher, 57, who primarily raises cotton and peanuts and also produces crops of spinach and turnip greens for the frozen-food market, said he "grew up farming."

"I've been farming all of my life. I can't get enough money together to get out," he said.

"Are you going to let it rain this year?" Gaines County farmer Helen Hearne asked Fincher, as she was passing through the farm store.

"I'm ready," he replied.

"Mother Nature could help us along," said Foote's wife, Donna. She grew up in a farm family and then married a farmer.

For farmers, rain is money in the bank just like good grassland is money to ranchers.

"I like farming," Mrs. Foote admitted. "You just can't depend on it" for income. However, the farm-supply business provides a "constant income" but one that is linked to the value of the crops and how well farmers fare.

Throughout Gaines County, there are about 15,000 people: Seminole, a town of about 6,700 people; Seagraves, about 2,400 people; and in rural areas around Loop, White City, Cedar Lake, Fairview, Paynes Corner, and Higginbotham.

Come September of each year, many of those folk will gather in and around Seminole for the annual Ag/Oil Appreciation Day. This year, it is set for Sept. 20 and 21, about the time mechanized diggers and thrashers start harvesting peanut crops. The accompanying West Texas Pecan Tour is sponsored by the Seminole-based Western Peanut Growers Association.

"Everybody is real positive," said Belinda Bornstein, manager of the Seminole Area Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the two-day ag-oil celebration. "For a small community, we are real fortunate" due to the prolific pools of oil and the bountiful cotton and peanut crops.

NEW: Program teaches tennis to youth mean they will not develop the drive later, he said. "I've learned that kids bloom at different times," he said.

Valdez received a "seed grant" from the Texas Tennis Association to fund the program this year, he said. Already, numerous business and community leaders have lent support for the program and this could mean state matching funds to expand the program next year, he said.

Although many volunteers have signed up, the program needs more, Valdez said.

He and fellow-coordinators Janice Gist and Grace Charuk are planning a workshop for April 8 so volunteers can study the project curriculum and to determine how best to proceed.

Volunteers will host tennis clinics on May 13 for students at Lee Freshman School, Midland Freshman School and Washington Park. This will educate students on the fundamentals of tennis and let them know about the new program.

For more information, contact Valdez at work, 682-0813, or at home, 683-5360; Ms. Gist at 684-7953; or Ms. Charuk at 683-6723.

Local engineering firms make finals for excellence awards

From Staff Reports

The engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper Inc. and its sub-consultant engineering firm of CH2M Hill, are finalists in the American Consulting Engineers Council's 29th annual Engineering Excellence Awards competition for design of the Jonathan W. Rogers Water Treatment Plant in El Paso.

Competition finalists were judged March 25-26 at the Westfields International Conference Center in Chantilly, Va. A panel of 22 judges from engineering, architecture, government, media, academe and the military will determine winners from a field of 131 finalists.

The winners will be announced May 23 in New Orleans, in conjunction with the American Consulting Engineers Council 1995 annual conference.

The water treatment plant will serve the needs of underdeveloped neighborhoods along the border with Mexico that previously received drinking water from dirty wells or tanker trucks that hauled water into the neighborhoods for batch distribution.

A major challenge was that the raw water source was extremely poor, a Parkhill spokesman said. Up to 20 percent can comprise treated wastewater effluent from a plant seven miles upstream. The project area is located downriver from El Paso and Ciudad Juarez storm runoff. The Rio Grande, the source of all raw water, flows only from releases from a nearby dam during the March through September irrigation season, the spokesman said. In addition, federal drinking water regulations are becoming increasingly stringent.

The firms turned to a system using ozone disinfection as the primary method of disinfecting the dirty water, and granular activated charcoal as a filter. This produced a system that actually promoted bacterial growth to fight pathogens and byproducts of disinfection. A final chlorine disinfection prevents biological growth.

Artist's works to be shown at reception

From Staff Reports

A reception honoring artist and University of Texas of the Permian Basin professor Bill Wiman is to be at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Museum of the Southwest. Wiman's paintings will be exhibited during the evening.

The reception is being hosted by members of the Advisory Council of the College of Fine Arts of the University of Texas at Austin.

Wiman will be conducting a Master Class for high school students at 4 p.m. in the Stables at the museum with Harriet Herd in charge of arrangements.

The artist earned his M.F.A. from the University of Florida. He has had 83 exhibitions, of which 41 were out of state. He has exhibited at the Louis Meisel Gallery and the Hansen Gallery, both in New York City, as well as the Morgan Gallery in Kansas City and the Adams-Middleton Gallery in Dallas. His work is in 15 public collections in six states, including the Butler Institute of American Art, the San Antonio Museum of Art and the Oklahoma Art Center.

Trinity School took first place in the academic category of the 1995 Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools (TAPPS) District 1 Academic, Art, and Music Meet. In addition, Trinity finished third in music competition and fourth in art competition.

More than 300 students from 10 schools took part in the meet, conducted March 6 and 7 at Lubbock Christian College.

Thirty-three Trinity students competed at the 1995 event, 19 of whom will advance to state-level competition. Nine students will represent Trinity at the TAPPS State music competition, which will be held April 7 and 8 at Texas Lutheran College in Sequin. Trinity will have 13 entries in the TAPPS State Academic and Art Meet, Friday and Saturday at Concordia College in Austin.

Individual results for Trinity at the District I Meet are as follows: Academic category — Paul Benson, fourth place, history; Blaine Noman, first place, computer science; Will Coombes and Sara Billingsley, first place, duet acting; Jeanna Cuny, fourth place, Spanish; Matthew Dickman, first place, number sense and second place, mathematics; John Driscoll, second place, mathematics; Patrick Durham, second place, advanced mathematics; Tarfia Faizullah, fourth place, spelling; Michael Gensert, fourth place, mathematics; Jessica Harvey, fourth place, ready writing; Eric Watkins, first place, computer science, first place, science, second place, number sense; Chris Wood, third place, computer science.

Art category — Will Crump, second place, pottery; George Driscoll, third place, opaque painting; Joel Freeman, fourth place, opaque painting; Amy Suckarieh, third place, pottery; Chris Timko, fourth place, sculpture; Laura Wilson, fourth place, print making; Meredith Younger, fourth place, pottery.

Music category — Will Coombes, fifth place, vocal solo; Double Quartet - Sara Billingsley, Sara Cartwright, Patrick Durham, Kelly Hoose, Michael Salgado, Daniel Scott, Ericka Tannich and Chris Wood (first place, sacred music and second place, pop music).

Texas military family recovers, rebuilds lives after devastating accident

By Alden Brown
Wichita Falls Times Record News

WICHITA FALLS — It was expected to be an easy parachute drop "a Hollywood Jump" on March 23, 1994, at Pope Air Force Base, N.C.

"It was a day much like today," said Connie Savell of Wichita Falls. Her 19-year-old son, Jason, was one of about 500 paratroopers on the runway staging area when an F-16 clipped the tail of a C-130 transport plane while trying to land and skidded in flames into a parked C-141 cargo jet loaded with fuel.

She said the paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division expected to have an easy jump on a pretty day before taking a four-day break from training.

Capt. Ken Golla was one of the officers helping load the aircraft when the F-16 skidded into the cargo jet, sending a fireball with its "finger-like flames" and shrapnel into the groups of paratroopers.

A year later, Connie reviewed the clippings and replayed the memories while her son, Jason, cared for his 7-month-old son, Brandon, and 3-year-old son, Corey.

Ken Golla never came home. His in-laws in Wichita Falls provided a temporary home for Golla's widow and child. His mother-in-law, Mary McGougan, said the healing process continues for their family. She helped her daughter and Ken's widow, Monica, leave for Austin on Wednesday where she will begin graduate school at the University of Texas. She had spent the past seven months dealing with the results of those fiery moments in March.

"We're all military originally," Mrs. McGougan said. "His dad is a colonel in the Army. His granddad is retired Air Force and had been in the 82nd Airborne in World War II.

"You're probably in more danger going to work in the morning normally, that's the kind of odds of this happening," she said. "Kenny loved the Army. He gave it his all. He thought his troops were wonderful and he did all he could for them. The big shame is for the Army. They had the makings for a wonderful leader."

And for Monica, there is the loneliness of his absence. "He was her one and only boyfriend," her mother said. "I think she has done well and is ready to go on with her life."

But the loneliness is difficult, Mrs. McGougan said. The 15-month-old baby helps. "If nothing else, it's a distraction," she said. "The baby takes a lot of care and you can't think of yourself all the time. I think the fact that (his daughter) won't know her Dad is a very weighty problem."

Both men had strong military families in common. Jason said he views his increased role as caretaker for his boys and the added closeness with the rest of his family as positives that came out of the accident.

"I was planning to make a career out of the military," he said. "At that time, I thought I was invincible. I look at life a lot different now. I took life for granted. "I'm just glad to be here, raise my kids and see 'em grow up," he said.

Connie said that Jason has become much closer to his father as well. Jason said he visits Rider High School daily to have lunch with his dad.

"For a long time, (Jason's father) James carried a lot of guilt," Connie said. "Jason told us for a long time he was going in the Army. When he decided that he was going into the Army, my husband told him how he would make rank faster. He just told him if you want to make a career of it, this is what you want to go through.

"From the moment we heard Jason was one of the victims, he kind of went to pieces on me," Connie said.

She said helping their son heal his wounds, though, provided a time of recovery for the entire family. Unlike many of the victims, Jason remained conscious until he reached the hospital.

Wire reports of the crash indicated 16 people were killed immediately and 82 were injured at 2:30 p.m. when the explosion took place.

Jason and his mother described events this way: The paratroopers were in the staging area preparing to board planes for a jump that day when someone spotted the F-16 crashing into the runway and the two pilots ejecting. Jason saw the flames, turned to run and was knocked off his feet.

He pulled his face from the runway "like he was peeling his lips and skin" from the cement. He looked over his shoulder to see his foot on his back.

"They put him on a vehicle to take him in before ambulances arrived," Connie said. "That probably saved his life." She said a soldier who was in shock fumbled with the I.V. and another injured soldier took over.

That soldier, Jenny Ernst, has remained in contact with the family. "She told him they were going to have to tie a tourniquet around his leg or he would die," Connie said.

When Jason said he would lose his leg if she tied a tourniquet, "she told him 'You already lost it.' "

That news made the therapy and recovery that followed easier, Jason said. "I think the worse thing is not knowing," Connie said.

Four died from Jason's unit, four were injured and one escaped injury while standing in the middle of destruction.

"When things happen, we wonder why we go through suffering," Connie said. "We wonder why ... When something happens to you, you go to something higher than you. You go to God."

That didn't make the months that followed easy. "Mama thinks she can kiss the booboos and make it better, but that was a time you can't," she said. "But life is precious," Connie said, her voice breaking.

"When he comes through that door and I see his smiling face, it's precious."

For Jason, the recovery continues. He plans to parachute Saturday with friends. He is undergoing physical therapy to strengthen his good knee. He said the Tai Kwon Do lessons he takes are improving the movement in that knee now that the pins are gone.

The family missed the memorial service in North Carolina Thursday, but plans to visit the Air Force base soon.

Jason's 18-year-old brother, Joey, plans to join the 82nd Airborne just as his brother did and his father before. Connie said they plan to be there when he graduates from training.

Home-equity law reform is needed

A bill now in the Texas Senate that proposes to give Texas homeowners the f ll rights of home ownership deserves serious consideration by lawmakers.

The bill — Senate Bill 301 — would reform Texas' home-equity borrowing laws to permit homeowners to borrow on the equity in their homes and to reverse mortgages that supporters say would be particularly attractive to senior citizens.

Already chambers of commerce in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Austin, El Paso, Corpus Christi, Arlington and Fort Worth have endorsed Senate Bill 301 — and with good reason. If enacted, the reform of Texas' home-equity borrowing laws is expected to generate more than $200 million in tax revenues and produce nearly 200,000 new jobs in Texas. That is the kind of economic boost that could really benefit the state.

The Texas Association of Business, chambers of commerce and the Small Business United of Texas have thrown their support behind Senate Bill 301. And the legislature's own "Interim Study Committee on Home-Equity Lending" has endorsed passage of legislation that:

- Allows citizens access to home-equity borrowing and reverse mortgages.
- Preserves the safeguards of the Texas Homestead Act, which is the strongest, most far-reaching homeowner protection in the nation.
- Gives citizens access to the same low-interest rates and federal income-tax deductions enjoyed by every other homeowner in the nation.

It's critical, of course, that any legislation enacted must retain the essential safeguards provided under the Texas Homestead Act, but as long as those protections are assured and Texas can still reap the economic benefits from reforming its home-equity borrowing laws, we say such a move would be a good one.

Yeltsin is worth effort of Clinton's May visit

President Clinton's decision to visit Moscow May 9-11 as part of the 50th anniversary celebration of the Allied victory in Europe was a tough call but one that is of considerable importance to the future of Europe and world peace. ...

Clinton's top foriegn policy aides are putting the finishing touches on a summit agenda that will include such touchy issues as Russia's brutal military action against nationalists fighting for independence in Chechnya and Russian cooperation with Iran in the construction of a nuclear reactor complex near the Persian Gulf. ...

Yeltsin ... needs a reassuring nod from the American leader to boost his sagging popularity. At the top of ... Yeltsin's agenda are continued American support for his economic reforms and Russia's fears of threats to its security. ... Yeltsin is particularly concerned about the possibility of NATO taking in former Warsaw Pact allies next year as members.

The flip side of the NATO coin is that the former Soviet satellites of Eastern Europe are anxious to become members of the alliance as a protection against a potential Russian military close to their borders. The word from Washington is that ... Clinton is prepared to ... assure (Yeltsin) that the alliance isn't an anti-Russia bloc. ...

It is in the national interest to deal with ... Yeltsin, warts and all. The United States can ill afford to turn its back and let him twist in the wind, as the isolationist fringe is urging, because he is Russia's best current hope for establishing democratic and free-market institutions. ...

Yeltsin is worth the effort because democracy and peace are worth the effort.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, March 26, the 85th day of 1995. There are 280 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 26, 1979, the Camp David peace treaty was signed by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at the White House, with President Carter signing as a witness.

On this date:

In 1804, the Louisiana Purchase was divided into the Territory of Orleans and the District of Louisiana.

In 1827, composer Ludwig van Beethoven died in Vienna.

In 1875, poet Robert Frost was born in San Francisco.

In 1885, the Eastman Dry Plate and Film Company of Rochester, N.Y., manufactured the first commercial motion picture film.

In 1892, poet Walt Whitman died in Camden, N.J.

In 1958, the U.S. Army launched America's third successful satellite, Explorer III.

In 1982, the U.S. Supreme Court gave federal courts the power to order reapportionment of seats in a state legislature, a decision that eventually led to the doctrine of "one man, one vote."

Attack in Tokyo proves we're vulnerable

WASHINGTON — The horrific nerve-gas attack by terrorists in the Tokyo subway last week has raised the specter that such an attack might soon happen in America

Anderson

A highly sensitive Central Intelligence Agency report from several years ago, a "Special National Intelligence Estimate," concluded that chemical and biological weapons have not been popular in the terrorist community. That's probably because the terrorists have been fearful of handling such weapons.

But the CIA report, which is classified "Secret," warned that "one successful incident involving such (lethal) agents would significantly lower the threshold of restraint on their application by other terrorists."

That incident has now occurred. The terrorists in Tokyo successfully coordinated five simultaneous attacks using liquid sarin — a nerve gas developed in Germany before World War II. The chemical potion was released during rush hour on three different subway lines that converged at the station near where many Japanese government employees work.

The attack left 10 people dead and 5,500 injured as commuters either stepped in the liquid or inhaled it as it evaporated into gas.

The low cost of chemical and biological weapons and their relatively easy availability make them attractive to terrorists — if they can be handled cautiously. Once terrorists overcome their fear of the weapons through adequate training, such deadly agents can be smuggled into any target area virtually immune from detection.

The poisons have been called the "poor man's atomic bomb" for good reason. It costs millions of dollars to build a nuclear bomb, but any reasonably intelligent biology or chemistry student can make a kilogram of deadly Type A botulin toxin for about $400.

The United States is wide open — as are all countries — to the threat of terrorists with chemical or biological weapons. They emit no telltale radiation, and they would not set off the metal detectors that protect many buildings in urban areas. Many of the universities and research laboratories that have the ingredients for many of these devices have inadequate security, while the knowledge that's needed to produce the weapons is easy to obtain.

Among American law-enforcement agencies, the Secret Service is most acutely aware of the difficulties of protecting against chemical or biological weapons attacks. The situation caught the agency's attention when an Army consultant sketched out how easy it would be to stroll through the White House with a tour group and leave behind an undetectable poison that would kill the building's inhabitants by the next morning. The best that Army-trained emergency teams can do at the White House or in any such incident is limit the number of casualties and collateral effects once a chemical or biological attack has begun.

Although Adolf Hitler had chemical weapons during World War II, the Germans never used them on the battlefield, fearing the Americans might retaliate in kind. In truth, the Allies had neither the agents nor the knowledge to make them.

The same fear of retaliation has kept belligerent nations — like the Iraqis in Operation Desert Storm - from using biological or chemical weapons in most wars. U.S. intelligence has determined that Saddam Hussein feared massive retaliation if he used such weapons, as he once did to kill hundreds of Kurds in his own country.

As events in Tokyo indicate, terrorists now feel no such timidity.

Agency offers guide to ethnic diversity talk

WASHINGTON — Have you got your kit yet? You don't want to start conversing without the government's guidance. And conversing about the topic the government has selected for us is, according to Sheldon Hackney, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, something we all "have a responsibility" to do.

Will

Hackney may sound slightly hectoring but that is just because he wants to be helpful. He believes we need help if we are to converse properly about "American Pluralism and Identity," so the NEH has produced a kit of "materials — conversation starters, book and film lists, documents, essays — to help spark the individual conversations."

This may seem like carrying coals to Newcastle because there is not and never has been a shortage of talk in America about that subject. It undoubtedly was a topic of conversation on the pitching decks of the Mayflower, and is, to put it mildly, not now neglected.

Furthermore, this designated topic of the Conversation, in the NEH's capacious notion of it, concerns just about everything. That conclusion is compelled by the "suggested reading and film list" included in the kit. The readings run from Aristotle to Maya Angelou, and the films, well, for example, the list includes these items:

"'Casablanca' — This World War II classic explores American values in the multinational setting of war-torn Casablanca. Pertains to question 6." (Question 6 is "Where do we as Americans belong in the world?") " 'Meet Me in St. Louis' — This musical depicts a family's experiences during the year of the St. Louis World's Fair. Pertains to question 5." (Question 5 is "What do we share as Americans?")

In the NEH's attempt to organize "thousands of small group discussions around the country" no detail is too small. Its advice includes:

"The meeting should not go longer than planned without the consent of all present. ... The site should be convenient to get to and there should be sufficient parking. ... Consider the size and the temperature (not too hot or too cold) of the room. ... Chairs should be comfortable and placed so that participants are able to sit facing each other. ... All participants will show respect for the views expressed by others."

It is sweet and true to the spirit of democracy that our government, which thinks we need to be told not to have the room too hot or too cold, nevertheless thinks we can read Aristotle and converse about momentous matters. At least we can if we are given meticulous instructions, particularly pertaining to sensitivity, about which the NEH is very sensitive:

"Consider having each session at a different location, allowing each racial, ethnic, or cultural group to play host. ... If your community has little racial or ethnic diversity, look for other kinds of diversity. You might find people of different ages, religions, political affiliations, socioeconomic levels, professions, or neighborhoods. ... You might need to help some participants overcome lingering feelings that they were invited solely because of their race, ethnic origin or cultural background." Yes, you might.

In the kit's booklet of scholars' essays there is one that should be read slowly and loudly to Hackney. James Q. Wilson of UCLA, noting that there actually may be less cultural diversity in America today than in the 1890s, writes:

"Most Americans have never doubted that there is or ought to be an underlying unity. The motto, E pluribus unum, though often violated in practice has never been challenged in principle. Except by intellectuals. ... If a 'national conversation' occurs, what will happen? The activists most likely to participate will be those most disaffected by America, and their conversation will provide further evidence to ordinary people that the great divide in this nation is not between rich and poor or between one race and another but between two cultures, the public and the elite. ... The 'conversations' some want to foster are already happening; if they are to be made better, questions posed by a few dozen intellectuals acting with government encouragement will not help, especially when a large fraction of these folk occupy, or are seen by the common man or woman as occupying, an adversary posture vis-a-vis the common culture."

Still, there is currently a congressional conversation about the importance of the NEH relative to other recipients of scarce public resources, and the National Conversation kit is timely as evidence.

Life's pleasures become endangered species

If you are fed up with the Puritan tyranny over modern America, boy, have I got a book for you!

"Endangered Pleasures" is the title. It is by Barbara Holland, and its underlying philosophical question is, "If the carefully lived life is so good for you, how come the people living it spend so much time thinking about death?"

Baker

Ms. Holland shamelessly advocates all the pleasures that have fallen into low repute since modern Puritanism cast its pall over the country. These include martinis, breakfast, wood fires, real coffee, loafing, lunching with lovers — as opposed to big shots — and doing your own gardening, among others.

"Joy has been leaking out of our lives," she writes. "We have let the New Puritans take over, spreading a layer of foreboding across the land until even ignorant small children rarely laugh anymore. Pain has become nobler than pleasure; work, however foolish or futile, nobler than play; and denying ourselves even the most harmless delights marks the suitably somber outlook on life."

As befits a writer whose cause is to save life's pleasures from the fate of the elm and the dodo, Ms. Holland makes her case with a light touch and a refusal to speak solemnly of anyone, even those grimmest of gloom-spreaders, the smoke police.

"Besides the human comradeship, the cigarettes themselves were company," she writes. "They're no longer a legitimate pleasure, but they were a pleasure once. We may have been stupid to smoke, but we didn't smoke from sheer stupidity; we smoked because we liked it."

Appropriately for an author promoting pleasure in joyless times, Ms. Holland makes her case in a mere 175 pages. Books that say their say without droning on at encyclopedia length are also one of our endangered pleasures.

I read her book during a recent vacation that provided a rare opportunity to read for the pure pleasure of reading. It's odd but true about the newspaper business that while it encourages a lot of reading, most of this reading is either not worth doing or not much fun.

In the not-worth-doing category are the bales of junk every journalist has to read to keep in touch with the same junky world his readers are in touch with.

The not-much-fun category may include some pretty good books. However, these are usually read, like the junk, to keep you in touch with the world or to please a friend or publisher. This makes them seem burdensome, as required reading was burdensome in high school. Can anything spoil a good book more certainly than making it "required reading"?

Anyhow — given the rare luxury of time to read a few things for pure pleasure, what did I haul home from the library but a collection of short novels by Ivan Turgenev and some stories by Gustave Flaubert.

Yes, here I drop flossy names. It's not to impress you though, but — quite the opposite — to confess to a shabbily furnished mind, a mind that years ago slyly finagled a diploma from literature professors without having rubbed up against the better class of writer. Until this vacation late in life, I had read nothing by Turgenev and only "Madame Bovary" by Flaubert.

Well, since it was a vacation, Flaubert and Turgenev were not "required reading." Their books could be opened, scanned, then taken or left. I opened them and was bewitched.

Flaubert's story "A Simple Heart," familiar to all literary humanity, I take it, though new to me, moved me to tears. Turgenev's "Smoke" and "Fathers and Sons," familiar even to high-school society, but not to me, were more than gripping stories. They were lessons in the art of the novel.

The effectiveness of their square, upright 19th-century structure made you realize how badly today's novels suffer from their authors' crazed hunger for movie sales, which makes their books read like screenplays.

Back from vacation, I search the shops for other work by Flaubert and Turgenev and find almost nothing. It's just as well. The junk has piled up: truckloads of magazine ravings about Newt Gingrich and the next elections, a dozen books of "required reading," the usual novels dying to be movies.

So reading becomes another endangered pleasure.

Some view government as secular salvation

Syndicated columnist Charley Reese has made several important observations lately about the righteous nature of conservatism and the failure of modern liberalism. The penultimate paragraph from the column printed on March 20, concerning the trivialization of government, should be the credo of every American who chooses to live as a political conservative. Government is indeed an "institutionalized force" that has been granted its power by the people. It would be a dangerous mistake, however, to view our government as a form of secular salvation. Yet liberals today do exactly this, and have embraced an ideology that is, ironically, anti-democratic.

Issue-specific liberalism had its day. Safety in the workplace, meat-packing plant inspections, abolition of child labor, women's suffrage, one person-one vote, have all contributed to making America a wonderful place to live. But modern liberals have crossed a sinister threshold in their search for Utopia. For example, life doesn't begin at conception - it begins whenever the mother says it does. In an unbelievable interpretation of the First Amendment, liberals hold that even voluntary prayer cannot be allowed in public schools as that would be tantamount to state-sponsored religion. Finally, and possibly most exasperating to conservatives like Charley Reese, George Will, and William Murchison, liberals demand federal intervention and monetary support to every fringe group and cause that claims to have had its "rights" trampled by conservatives.

The elections of 1996 may well be the most ideologically polarized since those of 1952. I hope that many more Americans will join our conservative movement, ever mindful that rights and responsibility go hand-in-hand, that God is our salvation, and that government is a lawful service that must be controlled, not championed.

Tax dollars are wasted on fully capable people

On a recent shopping trip I was appalled at the people who are allowed to use food stamps. The couple in line ahead of me were well-dressed, well-groomed, under 30 years of age, and perfectly able to work.

It is a crying shame that our hard-earned tax dollars are wasted on people who could do for themselves. Whatever happened to "You work for it and then you can spend it; now the government will pay you for not working.

It is time for welfare reform.

Oil companies place money over patriotism

Why is everyone so shocked at Conoco's willingness to deal with Iran, a sworn enemy of the United States? Gulf/Chevron did it 10 years ago in Angola, playing footsie with the Communist rebels there. In response to letters of protest, their public relations department sent a four-page apologia, summarized as "If we don't, someone else will." So much for business ethics.

A recent copy of "Offshore" magazine showed the major oil company concessions in offshore Vietnam. Nearly all U.S. major oil companies are represented. Some principle (or situation might be a better choice of word).

Major oil companies always put the almighty dollar above patriotism. They have for generations and will continue to do so. All multinational companies follow this practice. Really, who's surprised at this, having seen their records at home and abroad?

Education hasn't improved, despite rising costs trend

A striking 20-year trend in public education is this: costs continue to rise, but students aren't better educated. Here's one reason. Schools are turning into all-encompassing social service agencies, dispensing breakfast, health care, physical and mental rehabilitation, and babysitting.

The Texas Education Agency reports that in the past eight years, the number of non-teaching professionals in public schools...counselors, nurses, therapists, etc...rose 82 percent, compared to a student population increase of 11 percent.

Mayor, sewer department work Sunday afternoons

I would like to express my thanks to Mayor Bobby Burns and the Midland Sewer Department for their rapid response to a plugged sewer in the 3300 block of the alley south of Baumann Avenue at 4 p.m. March 19.

I found a manhole gushing sewage at 4 p.m. A neighbor said he had already called the sewer department. They arrived at 4:30 p.m., and in 30 minutes the flow had ceased. At this time the mayor arrived on the scene to see if the problem was taken care of. The sewer department personnel stayed for two hours with equipment to help clean the alley.

I just think the people of Midland should know that the mayor and the sewer department work on nice Sunday afternoons. I thank them.

FDA smoking story was very interesting

The story entitled "FDA says smoking a pediatric problem" was very interesting. (Reporter-Telegram, Thursday, March 9).

Now, isn't it against the law to sell cigarettes to a minor?

Question...If it is against the law to sell cigarettes to a minor, then why are they sitting outside the mall puffing on cigarettes without a care in the world?

Racism, xenophobia are reasons for depth of hate

God bless Mr. Don Handley! for his reply to Vera Wecker's March 12 letter saying she doesn't believe a school board should have to listen to speakers using a foreign language.

In the light of the passage of Proposition 187 in California, we find the United States is unfortunately rife with both racism and "xenophobia" (fear of foreigners). These are two powerful, emotionally charged reasons for the depth of the hatred that has so frequently been unleashed on new waves of immigrants to our country.

Mr. Handley's reference to the many Hispanics who died fighting for the United States prompts me to interject the fact that not only did legal and illegal aliens fight for our right to speak Spanish, but also citizens of Mexico joined in the fight during World War II. As an Immigration Advocate, I prepared a U.S. citizenship application for an elderly gentleman who was decorated with a Silver Medal by the Mexican Navy for service during World War II, helping the United States!

According to the "Domestic Council Committee On Illegal Aliens," created by President Ford to study the impact of undocumented immigrant workers, the committee reported that undocumented workers are good for the U.S. economy, and that many of these workers gave more to the U.S. in taxes than they took through welfare or free health care!

Although our history has oftentimes discriminated against people of different cultures, let us remind ourselves that, compared to many countries, the United States does have a long tradition of welcoming immigrants of which we can be proud and on which we can all build today.

Once again, kudos to Mr. Don Handley for his compassionate, empathetic and humanitarian letter. May God bless you and yours, Sir.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702, or you may fax to 682-3793.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Confusion reigns over 'special' designation

"You were wrong about Janet Reno's powers as attorney general," whispered Daniel Schorr, senior correspondent of National Public Radio, seated next to me at a speech Henry Kissinger was giving to the Nixon Center for Peace and Freedom in Washington.

Safire

In the moment when Henry turned from a castigation of multilateralism to the necessity of the expansion of NATO, I whispered back I was rarely wrong, but sometimes mistaken.

Next day, Dan called with the citation of my error, which appeared in the lead of a harangue about the never-ending cover-up of long-forgotten blunders: "Janet Reno's wrongheaded refusal to appoint an independent counsel in the Iraqgate scandal. ... ."

The whole idea of an independent counsel is that he or she is not appointed by anyone in the executive branch, the veteran of Watergate coverage explained. The law directs the attorney general, when confronted by credible evidence of wrongdoing by certain high officials, or when pushed hard by Congress, to ask a special panel of the Court of Appeals in Washington to name and empower an attorney of its choice to investigate. Thus, the formulation of my lead should have been "Janet Reno's wrongheaded refusal to seek the appointment of an independent counsel" etc.

Not content with Gotcha-gangsterhood, Schorr suggested: "But why not turn your error to constructive use in your language column? Confusion reigns on special prosecutor, special counsel and independent counsel. Straighten it out."

It goes back to Watergate, when Attorney General Elliot Richardson appointed Archibald Cox to be special prosecutor, a term long used in Justice Department regulations. After the Special Prosecutor Act of 1978 gave appointment power to the judicial branch, it occurred to legal minds that not all investigations led to prosecutions, and the title of the appointed attorney unfairly imputed guilt to those being investigated. The title was amended to independent counsel, a less menacing choice.

Meanwhile, at the Justice Department, it occurred to appearance-conscious officials that the word special, so long associated with the independence of special prosecutors, could be used to give the illusion of independence to appointees chosen (handpicked is the pejorative verb) by the attorney general, and remaining under Justice Department control. Hence, special counsel. That was the title given to Frederick Lacey in 1992, when the Bush administration resisted the extension of the Independent Counsel Act and wanted to give the appearance of having its Iraq actions reviewed by an outsider.

When I offered him the sobriquet patsy prosecutor, using patsy as an attributive noun (a noun that modifies another noun), some hypersensitive readers objected to patsy as being derived from Patrick and therefore a slur on the Irish, on the analogy of paddy wagon, and so should be used only by Irish pundits. The Oxford English Dictionary Supplement gives "origin unknown" for this slang word, but inaccurately defines it as "all right"; the great dictionary's citations prove that to be a sense in the past, but the predominant meaning of patsy is and always was, as Eric Partridge defines it, "dupe or 'fall guy,'" citing a 1925 play of that name by Barry Connors. But I digress.

In the Whitewater investigation (called "the Whitewater matter" by White House aides, "the Whitewater scandal" by partisan Republicans, and "the Whitewater affair" by sly subliminators), Special Counsel Robert Fiske, who was appointed by Attorney General Reno, was replaced when the Independent Counsel Act was renewed by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr, appointed — at Reno's request — by a judicial panel.

In terms of adjectives striking terror into the hearts of presidential aides and Cabinet officers, special is soothing and independent is terrifying. But can Starr be properly called a special prosecutor?

Yes, though the phrase should not be capitalized as if it were a title. Once a court-appointed counsel has persuaded a grand jury to hand up an indictment on anyone, it strikes me as fair to call him a prosecutor — and not just a run-of-the-mill prosecutor, but one made special by virtue of his appointment in an extraordinary manner.

"Anchorpeople reach for special prosecutor," white-haired Dan Schorr says, "because it sounds more sexy."

Does the scourge of Watergaters, conscience of the networks and out-mavener of language mavens prefer anchorpeople, anchorpersons or anchors?

"Hate 'em all," he says, playing the curmudgeon.

WIMPMUSH

"The president today announced," read the White House news release, "his intention to nominate Ray L. Caldwell ... deputy assistant secretary of state for burdensharing."

As a single word, burdensharing is not in dictionaries or stylebooks. Ordinarily, that means the phrase is written as two words; as the use becomes more frequent, the two are treated as a compound and separated by a hyphen. But in this case, the Clinton administration has put the title on the fastest track, whizzing past slow stylists at the Government Printing Office.

Rule 6.8 of the GPO's style manual covers solid compounds. "Print solid two nouns that form a third when the compound has only one primary accent," the Fed arbiters say, "especially when the prefixed noun consists of only one syllable or when one of the elements loses its original accent." You can break your head over that for a month, but the rule comes into focus with these examples: bathroom, bookseller, fishmonger, locksmith.

You ask: When a fishmonger and a bookseller find themselves trapped in a bathroom and send for a locksmith, are they engaged in highly stressful burdensharing, one word? Answer: Unfortunately, under Rule 6.8, only if the word is pronounced BUR-densharing, and not, as the barge-toters say, BUR-den-SHAREing.

Some of us remember the great moment of editorial sabotage during the Carter administration, when a prankster at The Boston Globe removed a headline that read "All Must Share the Burden" and replaced it with a headline that was somewhat more colorful and probably more accurate: "Mush From the Wimp."

Following GPO Rule 6.8, that would produce wimpmush, pronounced WIMP-mush, but two stressed syllables make impossible the State Department's furtive attempt to stretch the rule to fuse the nouns burden and sharing.

Caldwell is groaning under quite a load, and I'd like to help him, but in my personal stylebook he is deputy assistant secretary of state for burden-sharing.

Readers' views on: Armed campus officers

Campus officers are first ones to be injured

I read with interest Lisa Tanner's letter of March 12 and agree with her in some aspects, but disagree with other parts of her letter.

First of all it is the unarmed campus officer who comes in contact with the student who is carrying the illegal weapon, not the Midland Independent School District (MISD) patrol officers. If anyone is going to be injured it sure the heck isn't the patrol officers. From my own experience (nearly three years with MISD) as a campus officer, if you want to have your adrenalin skyrocket and your heart wind up in your throat, try patting down an armed student and when you feel the gun in his front pocket, then he starts to turn around and you start to wonder, is he going to go for the weapon or not and will he use it or not. I guarantee your life will start to flash in front of you. According to Ms. Tanner, campus officers are expendable or, as Dr. Baressi once stated, "campus officers would create a greater danger on campus if they were armed."

I remember the former chief of police purchased bullet-resistant vests for himself and the three patrol officers, because he felt they needed them, but the campus officers had no need for such protection. This gave me the impression that campus officers were second-class citizens. It wasn't that I was afraid of being shot, but the vest would lessen the force of a punch or stop a knife from causing serious injury.

If the MISD school board ever decides to face reality, they will go the same way as Ector County Independent School District did, and have all campus security officers commissioned and allow them to be armed also, because they will be the first ones to be injured, not the police officer who is 10 or more minutes away from the scene of the disturbance or tied up with other problems and unable to respond. However, as long as Dr. Baressi and the school board members refuse to take action on the problems and the students who create them, nothing will change. An armed officer will not solve all of the problems, but it may make a would-be offender think twice before doing something he or she will regret.

Citizens must unite to protect officers

I read with interest the letter March 12 by Lisa Tanner concerning our Midland Independent School District (MISD) Police not being allowed to carry arms. I find this situation utterly disgusting, in view of the following.

These police officers are licensed by the state, and as such are charged with enforcing the law at all times. These officers are in marked police cars, and I think it is safe to assume that any criminal caught in the act of robbing or destroying school property would, upon sight, figure that the officer was armed, thereby causing the vandal to possibly shoot in order to avoid apprehension. Possibly the best solution would be for the officer that gets a call, concerning an alarm being triggered at one of the schools in the middle of the night, would be to go get a school board member to accompany him to the location of the alarm. Hence the board member might have a little bit better understanding what these officers confront daily. Based on the cache of weapons that has been confiscated from students, it's time to realize that this is a hazardous job.

It would be interesting indeed, to check with other communities the size of Midland to see if their officers are armed.

What is the school district going to do when one of these officers is killed or seriously injured? Raise my taxes to pay for the lawsuit filed by the family against the school district.

Personally I think this is a very poor policy, and am considering other action to bring this to the attention of Midlanders who probably are not aware of this situation.

I have personally spoken to the president of the school board, and she tells me that she has brought this matter to the attention of the board. She further states that they did not care to consider this matter. So it appears that the citizens of Midland will have to unite behind these officers, as the board apparently feels that the matter of liability comes before the safety of these human beings. If liability is a consideration, let's unarm all police officers in Midland County.

Increase in prison beds won't solve overcrowding problem, officials say

AUSTIN (AP) — By the end of the year, Texas will have a larger prison system than all the Western nations, prison officials say.

But some predict that won't be big enough to house all the state's criminals in even the next few years.

Texas expects to have almost 145,000 prison beds by January 1996, with the majority ready by September of this year.

According to a report released this month by the state Criminal Justice Policy Council, the new prison beds will wipe out a backlog of state prisoners in county jails.

But if no new space is created by October 1996, the buildup will begin again, the report said. It would peak at about 13,000 convicts in August 1998.

"I think the state of Texas needs to be ahead of the curve in prison capacity," says Allan Polunsky, chairman of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Polunsky, who was named chairman March 1, said he plans to ask the Legislature this session for between 7,000 and 9,000 new beds in an effort to avoid another overcrowding problem like the one that led to the unprecedented building program currently under way.

"The state made a firm commitment. The criminal justice system is workable again. It's been in a state of paralysis for the last eight or 10 years," he said. "I think the big thrust is to ensure we have the capacity, so we don't get into the same (overcrowded situation) we were in."

But even if the new beds are approved, he said the state will need more to get to the 21st century.

"I would hope that someday this trend would level off, but I don't see it," Polunsky said.

When Polunsky became a board member of the criminal justice agency six years ago, the state had just 35,000 prison beds.

"We rewrote criminal justice history by the sheer magnitude of the building program we're conducting," he said.

The space he will ask for likely will be needed to hold maximum security inmates.

"We will be incarcerating a much more violent type of individual," he said.

In addition, the recent penal code changes, which were approved in 1993 and are being refined this session, call for longer sentences for more offenses.

Even so, at least one lawmaker is cautious about more building.

Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, said the prospect of needing more beds surprises him.

"I thought surely we had enough at 150,000 at the end of '95," said Whitmire, who chairs the Senate Criminal Justice Committee.

He said he was wary of building more prisons.

"Before we go into another expansion mode, I really believe we need to look at all of our options," he said.

He suggested contracting with county facilities, many of which were expanded to hold the backlog and are now largely empty, to hold nonviolent prisoners for a fee.

"We have a lot of county facilities that, in my judgment, no one is seriously discussing making a part of the continuum of punishment."

He pointed to Newton County, which he said built a new jail and is now leasing space to the state of Virginia to hold its prisoners.

"I'm for building what is needed, at the same time we need to look at all of our options," Whitmire said.

He suggested that the money would be found to pay for more prisons if the Legislature determined they were necessary for the public good.

"The bottom line is: As long as the public's demanding more public safety and we strengthen these statutes to make people serve more time for more offenses, we've got to have a place to put them."

But the continued growth of the system could be at the expense of other things.

"The significance (of the system's size) is that we're serious about public safety, and unfortunately, crime control is going to take money away from other worthwhile projects like education, health care and other important projects," Whitmire said.

Therapist: Gloria Rodarte Brun, M.D.
Dr. Brun will discuss the sudden decrease in hormone levels soon after a pregnancy which may contribute to mood and psychotic problems. In addition, the new experience of having a totally dependent child contributes to the emotional distress. It is important to differentiate normal postpartum blues from the more serious conditions.

Reunion heals veteran's trauma of 45 years

Leon Flake, left, and Jack Hogue, of San Antonio embrace each other Wednesday at the Kickapoo Downtown Airpark in Wichita Falls.

By Lois Lueke
Wichita Falls Times Record News

WICHITA FALLS — Jack Hogue had searched almost 45 years for his friend, Leon Flake, hoping to heal a shattering trauma from their youth.

The two Army veterans of the Korean War met in an emotional reunion this week.

The San Antonio attorney finally found the chance to say, "I'm sorry," to Flake for failing to rescue him during a bloody battle in which Flake was wounded and crying for help. It happened at Pohang, South Korea, on Sept. 2, 1950.

"It will always haunt me ... I know I would have been killed trying to get you, but I should have tried. It was the only time in my life I thought I was a coward," Hogue told Flake when he arrived on Wednesday.

As the two men sat down for a late lunch at the Wichita Club, Hogue expressed his pent-up feelings, tears streaming down his face.

Flake responded with assurances. "I wouldn't worry about that," he told Hogue. "I haven't worried about it so you don't have any worry coming."

And, in a teasing mood, "Well, you probably would have messed around and got us both killed and we wouldn't be here to celebrate."

The two men, both corporals in Company K, 3rd Platoon, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, participated in the assault against the North Koreans on what was known as the battle for Hill 99.

Hogue recalled that he and two other men, a sergeant and a scout, made it almost to the top of the hill. There they heard Flake's cries for help from the foot of the hill where he lay, both legs broken and torn by enemy machine gun fire.

"He called for help for a long time," Hogue said. "Then finally when he started calling me, calling my name, and I said, 'I can't take this any more, I've got to go back.'

"And my sergeant said, 'The hell you are. Don't you move.' "

It was an indelible memory, one that has plagued him on and off all these years, said Hogue, who served 25 years in the Army, including duty in Vietnam.

Flack remembered that a soldier named Pulinsky was able to reach him and apply tourniquets on his legs, saving his life, and that Pulinsky was shot in the chest by enemy fire but survived. Later South Koreans came with stretchers to take Flake to an aid station.

Flake and Hogue were two of the 34 survivors in the one-day battle. Company K started out with 249 men.

The poignant story of Hogue's apparent search for forgiveness began unfolding about 10 days ago when Flake received a telephone call from Hogue's daughter, Mei-Yu Bates, in San Antonio.

Flake describes the conversation:

"I was sitting at home watching television when the phone rang. I thought she was selling books or something."

"Mr. Flake?" she said, "Mr. Leon Flake?"

Flake identified himself.

"Were you in Korea in 1950? Were you wounded on Sept. 2, 1950?" she asked.

"Yes," he said. "What is this all about?"

The woman identified herself. "My dad has been looking for you for 45 years!" she said.

Hogue said his daughter finally located Leon Flake by calling all the Flakes listed on the state's birth certificates in 1931.

Flake said he has talked to Mrs. Bates several times on the telephone since then and exchanged letters with Hogue. Her husband, Bill Bates, flew Hogue to Wichita Falls in a private, four-seater aircraft.

The visit, said Flake, was "a once-in-a-lifetime deal.

Lanier aide leaked confidential files, ex-parole board member says

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Texas parole board member says an aide for Houston Mayor Bob Lanier leaked confidential files to crime victims groups in the city in hopes of stirring up opposition to paroling certain criminals, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

The allegation was included in a federal lawsuit filed in Laredo by Joe Hubenak, who left the board in 1993, citing health reasons.

Hubenak claims in his suit that he was harassed and intimidated into resigning by crime victims groups such as Houston-based Justice For All.

Hubenak, of Angleton, who served in the Texas House from 1969 to 1977, said that one former parole officer, Jessie Hockaday, was fired for leaking information on inmates to Andy Kahan, a top aide to Mayor Lanier.

Hubenak's suit claims that Kahan then gave the information to Justice For All.

Kahan is Lanier's victims services director and also serves as victims group coordinator for Justice for All.

Lanier told the Houston Chronicle in Saturday editions that he had not read the suit and therefore, declined to comment.

"I have no confidential information and I have not passed any on," Kahan told the Chronicle. "I thought inmates' lawsuits were frivolous. This one tops them all."

'I have no confidential information and I have not passed any on. I thought inmates' lawsuits were frivolous.'

— Andy Kahan, Houston mayor Bob Lanier's victims services director

Pam Lychner, president of Justice for All, said Kahan never gave the group confidential papers and said her group was not even formed when the alleged act was said to have occurred.

"The claims in this suit are completely outrageous," M Lychner told The Associated Press. "Justice for All was not formed at all until July or August of 1993. We will be filing every sanction allowed under the law against this plaintiff and his attorneys for this completely frivolous lawsuit. We believe that the federal court will comply."

Kahan said the controversy with Hubenak began over an inmate sentenced to 40 years for murder and 20 years for attempted murder. Kahan and others campaigned to keep the inmate in prison when his parole was approved and after serving only six years.

Kahan also wrote protest letters and visited the parole board office. Perceiving this as harassment, Kahan said, Hubenak wrote the murder victim's mother, who participated in the protest, demanding an apology.

The inmate, who was not identified in the Chronicle story, was eventually paroled but has returned to prison for aggravated assault, Kahan said.

When an inmate is eligible for parole, much of the information in the file used by parole board members is by state law, confidential. The file contains the inmate's prison record, crime, time served and other items such as recommendations from trial officials on whether parole should be granted.

Hubenak, who was appointed to the parole board in 1991 by former Gov. Ann Richards, was unavailable for comment. A message left with the only Hubenak listed in Angleton was not immediately returned to The Associated Press on Saturday.

But in a statement issued Wednesday through his attorney, Hubenak said Kahan has "victimized the victims' rights movement in Texas" by behaving illegally.

Murder suspect's 2nd wife divorced him day before death, court records show

COPPERAS COVE (AP) — The second wife of an Arlington man, held in connection with her slaying, had divorced him the day before she died, according to court records.

Jack Wayne Reeves remained Saturday in Coryell County Jail in Gatesville on a $500,000 bail bond on a charge of murder in the 1978 shooting death of Sharon DeLane Reeves, 34.

Reeves, whose current wife has been missing for five months showed no remorse during the investigations of the deaths of two former wives, police said in a search warrant affidavit.

This week, investigators used the warrant to search the home of the 54-year-old retired Army sergeant.

Reeves' current wife, 26-year-old Emilita, has been missing since Oct. 12.

Sharon Reeves was earlier believed to have shot herself in the chest while at home in Copperas Cove, a town of about 24,000 people located about 60 miles north of Austin.

But her death was reviewed after Arlington police became suspicious in the disappearance of Reeves' current wife.

the autopsy report and examination of old crime scene photographs showed probable cause that Sharon Reeves did not commit suicide, according to the affidavit filed by Copperas Cove police investigator David Berry.

Police also have reopened the investigation of the 1986 death of his third wife, Myong Reeves, 29. She drowned in Lake Whitney while the two were fishing.

However, Hill County Sheriff Brent Button said Friday that because no autopsy was performed and Mrs. Reeves was cremated, he did not anticipate reopening the case.

Area high school students can win one of 10 college scholarships and help raise money to right multiple sclerosis by participating in PROJECT: Learn MS '95. Sponsored by the Multiple Sclerosis Association of America.

PROJECT: Learn MS '95 is a national essay competition with more than $16,000 in scholarship funds available to any sophomore, junior or senior high school student in the country. Information on the essay competition is available through local high school guidance offices or by calling the MS Association at 1-800-833-4672.

Designed to encourage education about multiple sclerosis and highlight a nationwide "May is MS Awareness Month" campaign, participants are required to write a 300-500 word essay on MS and its effects on the family. By acquiring sponsors, students raise funds to provide services to MS patients across the country. Separate prizes will be awarded for various levels of fundraising. A panel of experts will judge the essays on content, grammar and style. All essays must be postmarked by May 22, 1995. Winners will be announced this summer.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — The Atlanta Braves' spring training exhibition game with the Montreal Expos was canceled Saturday because of the death of replacement pitcher and former Midland Angel David Shotkowski in an apparent robbery. Shotkowski, 30, of Hoffman Estates, Ill., was found dead on the sidewalk in front of an office high rise near the team hotel about 6:45 p.m.

Sgt. John English of the West Palm Beach Police Department said a call was received Friday evening that there was a shooting victim in the street. Police have no suspects, but witnesses said they saw a man ride north out of the area on a yellow mountain bike.

Tyson prays at mosque to begin journey back to title

■ Former world heavyweight champ Mike Tyson wears a white knit skullcap and visits the Islamic Society of America's mosque upon release from three-year prison term.

PLAINFIELD, Ind. (AP) — Former world heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, known for his ferocity, got down on his knees and prayed to Allah on Saturday, his first act in a journey that could restore his title and his fortune.

Wearing a white knit skullcap, Tyson, released from prison after serving three years for rape, was whisked off in a black limousine to a mosque at the Islamic Society of North America.

He was joined there by former champion Muhammad Ali, NFL Hall of Famer Mel Blount, rapper Hammer and hundreds of others.

A prayer of thanksgiving was offered in Arabic. Tyson, sporting a mustache and short beard, sat in the front row before the imam, bowing solemnly as rays of sunlight streamed through clear mosque windows.

A weary-looking Ali, a Muslim for three decades, sat nearby. Don King, the promoter who hopes to guide Tyson back into a multimillion-dollar boxing career, was behind them.

Tyson took his brute force instincts into prison, running into early discipline problems, then made peace with the stringent demands of prison life. He failed his high school equivalency exam, but he read regularly, recited Maya Angelou's poetry when she visited him and was tutored in Islam by Muhammad Siddeeq, who led Saturday's service.

"He's coming out a tougher man, a better man, a wiser man and a more spiritual man," Hammer said.

The Rev. Charles Williams, a longtime friend who visited Tyson regularly, said Saturday the fighter was more mature and more discriminating.

"He's learned about respecting himself, which is how you respect others," he said. "I think he's going to be very selective of the persons around him."

After the prayer service, Tyson took a private jet to his 66-acre estate, about 45 miles southeast of Cleveland — a stark contrast to the spartan 9-by-11 cell he shared

NCAA TOURNAMENT

Tennessee ends Lady Raider bid

■ Lady Vol seniors avoid being only Tennessee class never to play in Final Four by pounding Texas Tech 80-59 at home.

The Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The Tennessee mascot wheeled around the court on a training bicycle, towing a sign that said, "Minneapolis 962 miles." The crowd's roar might have been heard there.

After four years of unmatched success overshadowed by postseason failure, Tennessee's senior class claimed a spot in the women's NCAA Final Four next weekend in Minnesota with an 80-59 victory over Texas Tech on Saturday.

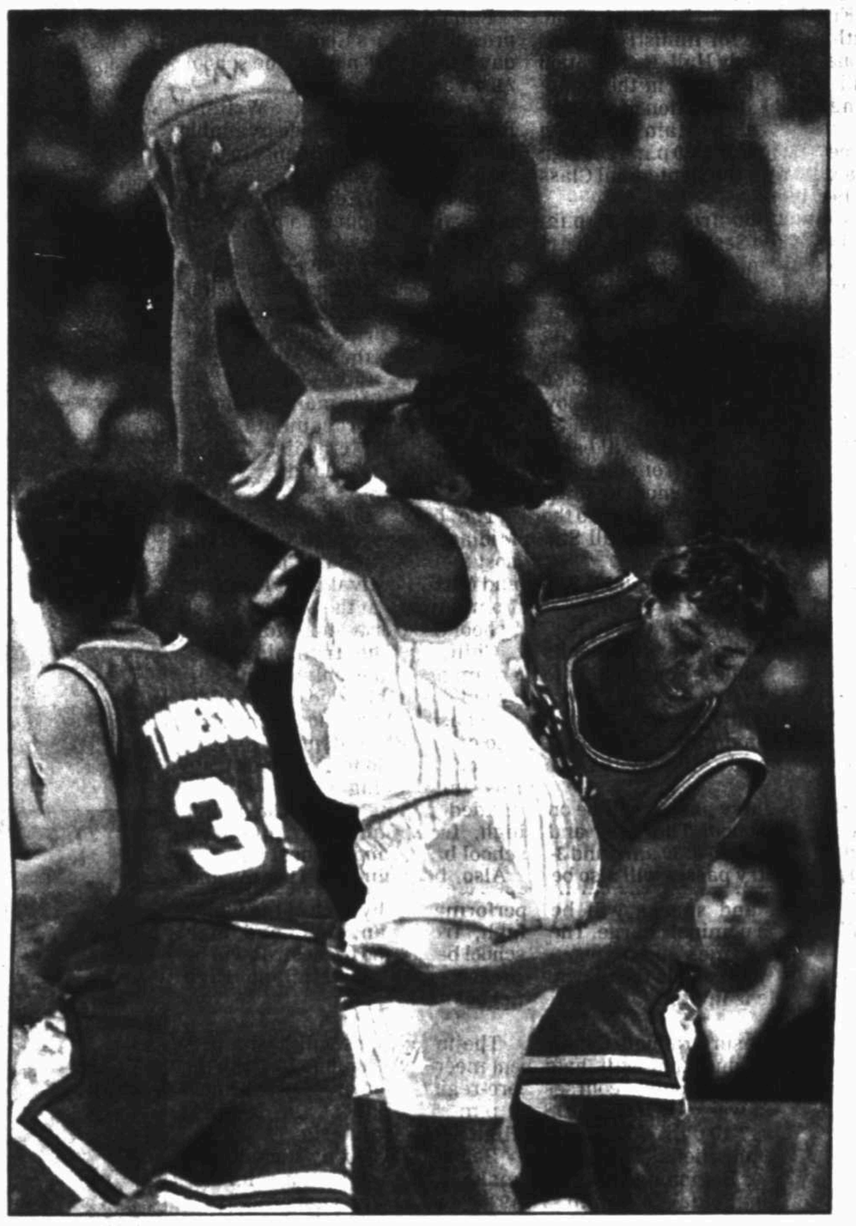

Despite having an overall record of 120-10, the Lady Vol seniors were better known for their potential to become the only Tennessee class never to play in the Final Four.

"I realized we were going to win with about four minutes left. That's the highest I jumped all night," said Dana Johnson, who led the Lady Vols with 24 points and 10 rebounds in the Mideast final.

"It felt great to get that monkey off our backs, so I won't hear that 'You're the only class that hasn't been to a Final Four.' You can throw that away now, and I don't want to hear it again. Because I'm going to be in Minneapolis come Wednesday."

BACK WITH A VENGEANCE

UCLA runs past UMass

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — UCLA, putting on a show of speed that would make any of its 10 past champions proud, is back with a vengeance in the Final Four.

Fifteen years after its last Final Four appearance, and 20 years since its last NCAA title, UCLA left Connecticut breathless in a 102-96 victory Saturday to capture the West Regional.

Not even a masterful 36-point performance by Connecticut guard Ray Allen could stop the Bruins, who raced in dizzying patterns and throttled the Huskies' key big man, Donny Marshall, on defense.

Lee's Stroman doubles state swim pleasure

Staff Report

AUSTIN — There is one title that had escaped Midland Lee junior swimming star Monica Stroman — the title of state champion. Well, she took care of that here Saturday at the Jamial Swim Center at the University of Texas — twice.

Stroman won both the 200-yard individual medley and the 500-yard freestyle in the state high school swimming and diving meet to become a two-event state champion and she still has another year to swim.

Stroman had a 2:04.68 time in the 200 IM and posted a 5:00.65 in the 500 free. She was dominant in the 200 IM, winning by almost a full two seconds. She won by

Mission Viejo swims to two team titles

Bartosz Kizierowski of the Mission Viejo (Calif.) Nadadores swims in the preliminaries of the 200-yard individual medley Saturday at Mabee Aquatic Center as Competition in the Speedo Junior Nationals West swimming championships ended.

It was probably not a surprise to anyone that the 1995 Speedo Junior Nationals West Chapionships would end with a bang, but the one question left was who would be the one to light the match.

Bartosz Kizierowski of the Mission Viejo Nadadores answered that question early with an impressive record-setting performance in the Men's 200-yard individual medley. Kizierowski's time of 1 minutes, 49.78 seconds broke the national record (1:49.81) set by Jan Esway in 1992.

Cooper deals stiff blow to Lady 'Dogs

A desperate throw to third base in the bottom of the seventh inning by Abilene Cooper catcher Melissa Parker dealt Midland High's softball team a devastating blow in the District 6-5A softball race Saturday afternoon at the Bill Williams softball complex.

Klien

Parker retrieved a wayward pitch from pitcher Hallie Woods and nailed MHS runner Heather Klien at third base for the third out to blunt a furious last inning rally by the Lady Bulldogs and hand Cooper a 3-2 victory.

Harper's three-run blast boosts Rebels

By Bill Petitt
Sports Writer

The game was billed as a pitcher's duel between Midland Lee's standout Lance Watters and Odessa Permian's Jeremy Delcor. Both pitchers rolled into the game with earned run averages well below 1.00 per game.

But Lee's offense made the most of an early Permian error and a three-run home run by Britt Harper in the sixth to propel the Rebels to a 9-5 win in a District 4-5A matchup at Ernie Johnson Field Saturday afternoon.

The win keeps Lee in sole possession of first place in District 4-5A with a 5-0 mark, 11-7 overall. Permian drops to 2-2 in league action and 12-4 overall. The win also extends Lee's regular season district win streak to 23 game dating back to the 1993 season.

Harper

Lee scored four runs, three unearned in the bottom of the first thanks to an error by Permian shortstop Miguel Bustos with two outs, the bases loaded. The error scored Kevin Jordan to break a 1-1 tie.

Left fielder Ryan Elder followed with a Texas League single to shallow right field, scoring Harper and Matt Withrow and the Rebels had got on top of Delcor early and provided the cushion Watters needed.

"Lee did a good job of taking advantage of our mistake early and then Watters bowed his neck and pitched well late," said Permian coach Steve Coleman. "I thought Jeremy (Delcor) did a good job of keeping his composure when there were some border line calls but that is part of playing on the road. I hate to see it for my pitchers when you have you give them the whole plate."

vidual title and sixth medal overall. Kizierowski, a native of Warsaw, Poland, enjoyed his prosperous stay in Midland.

"It was fun," Kizierowski said. "I came here to be a part of a team and have fun. I never thought about winning."

"Success will motivate me for more."

Kizierowski, 18, came to the Junior Nationals after competing at the Senior Nationals last week in Minnapolis where he won the 100-meter backstroke and placed in the top seven in the 200-meter backstroke (third), 50-meter freestyle (seventh) and 100-meter freestyle (fourth).

Kizierowski, who has also won the 100- and 200-yard butterfly and the 200-yard freestyle events this week, was also a key leg of the Mission Viejo's winning 400-yard medley relay, the Championships' final event, in a Senior National Qualifying time of 3:25.02. It was his second relay medal, his first coming on the second-place 800-yard relay on Friday.

The wins by Kizierowski, who was the men's high-point producer in the meet with 80, and the relays were a big part of Mission Viejo's domination in the men's and overall team races. Mission Viejo won the men's with 472 points (279 points ahead of second-place Elmbrook Swim Club) and the combined race 575-269 over Phoenix Swim.

Kizierowski said the success enjoyed by Mission Viejo in meets like this was a big reason for his coming to their facility to train.

"It (the team's success) motivates you for the future," said Kizierowski, who has not decided where he will swim collegiately. "The competition helps us out so much. I came here because of the competition."

In the women's division, the fight for the title went down to the final race of the day. It was there that Deanza Cupertino Aquatics, which trailed the Phoenix Swim Club by 18.5 points coming into the final day, took over.

Phoenix Swim, which didn't have a relay in the final, could only sit and watch as Deanza's two relay teams placed first and tied for seventh to win the women's team title with 238 points. The Husky Swim Club finished second with 212 points and Phoenix Swim was third.

"It's so unbelievable," Deanza's Sarah Chu said. "We had so many set backs on the way. The best part is throwing our coach (Pete Raykovich) in the water."

Addi Elsner of Bend Swim Club was the high-point female scoring 66 points during the five-day competition.

In other highlight races Saturday, Brian Baum of Sierra Highlands won the Men's 50-yard freestyle in a Senior National qualifying time of 20.66.

Swim West's Jeanna Willi took first-place honors in the Women's 50-yard freestyle with a time of 23.74 to qualify for the Senior Nationals that will be held in Pasadena in July and August with a time of 23.74.

Shannon Cullen of the Redlands Swim Team won the 200-yard individual medley in a Senior National qualifying time of 2:03.91. Elsner placed second also qualifying for Seniors with a time of 2:04.32.

City of Midland Aquatics, who hosted the meet, will say goodbye to the swimmers, but will have the eye of U.S. Swimming and Diving focused on the Tall City when the Phillips 66 National Diving Championships comes to town on April 19-23.

Tar Heels whip 'Cats

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (NYT) — It was billed as the battle of the blue bloods, North Carolina vs. Kentucky for the NCAA Southeast Regional championship and a trip to the Final Four in Seattle. North Carolina showed up. But who were those other guys?

"I'm kind of stunned," Kentucky Coach Rick Pitino said after the Tar Heels beat his Wildcats, 74-61, on Saturday at the Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center. "We worked on the characteristics of being a team all year. I'm stunned that individuals showed up instead of a team."

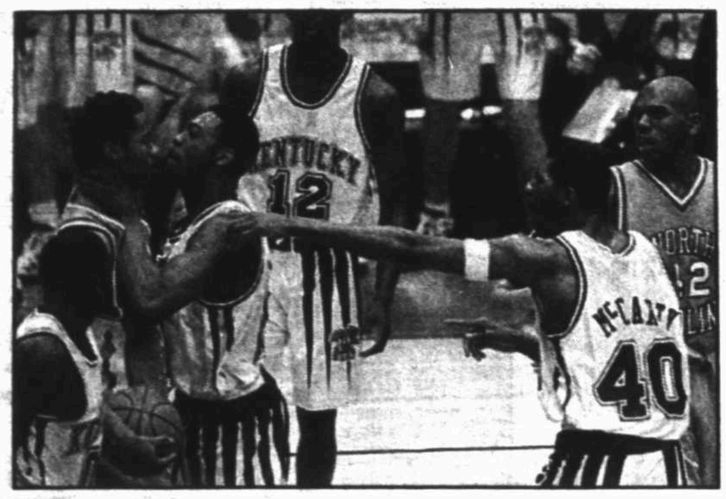

Kentucky put up 75 shots, many of them rushed, some of them awful, and made 21. That's 28 percent. The Wildcats were 7 of 36 from three-point range. That's bad, too.

Both points and shooting percentage were Kentucky lows for the season.

For his part, North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said he was disappointed, too, by the manner in which his team was rattled by Kentucky's press. The Tar Heels committed 20 turnovers, which tied a season high.

"We have to improve if we're going to be happy next week," Smith said.

The more patient Tar Heels, who shot 49 percent, got 18 points from senior guard Donald Williams and 18 from sophomore forward Jerry Stackhouse, who added 12 rebounds and was named the regional's most valuable player.

at the Indiana Youth Center 20 miles west of Indianapolis.

His Ohio mansion's wrought-iron gates were decked with yellow ribbons and banners that read: "MIKE welcome back to your family" and "Champ we missed you."

Tyson, who became the youngest heavyweight champ ever at age 20, had to pay huge legal bills, but at age 28 still could rake in $75 million to $100 million in a year of fights.

"They're negotiating like it's the sale of India, because he's very popular," Showtime boxing analyst Ferdie Pacheco said.

Some women's groups have decried Tyson's celebrity status and said it's wrong to treat him as a hero.

Tyson served only half of his six-year sentence because of good behavior but he still faces four years probation.

Tyson said nothing publicly Saturday, though a printed statement given out near the prison in his name said: "I'm very happy to be out and on my way home. I want to thank everyone for their support. I will have more to say in the future. I'll see you all soon."

UCLA: Freshman sparks Bruins with 26

as he spearheaded UCLA's offense, scoring 22 points and passing for 10 assists, and freshman shooting guard Toby Bailey came up with his finest all-around game with a season-high 26 points and nine rebounds.

"We had a point guard that was probably a little better than anyone on the floor. He was the difference," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said of Edney.

"He penetrated our zone," Allen said. "We couldn't contain him."

Top-ranked UCLA (29-2) didn't just outrun Connecticut (28-5), the Bruins outmuscled the supposedly more physical power from the Big East.

"If we had to go down, we went down to the best team we've played," Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun said. "I don't think it's just Tyus' speed. It's his ability to create opportunities for his teammates."

This was a game that proved UCLA worthy of its No. 1 ranking and sent the Bruins to Seattle as the favorite for the championship. Swamped by their fans in a celebration on the floor of the Oakland Coliseum Arena, the Bruins responded by hugging them and each other before going through the traditional ritual of clipping the net — scissors in one hand, video cameras in the other.

WOMEN: Tech falls short in regionals have a rematch in the national semifinals against Colorado or Georgia, both of which Tennessee beat during the regular season.

"I'm extremely happy for this team. I'm very proud of how Dana Johnson and Nikki McCray have handled NCAA play from the beginning," Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said. "They have been responsible for the way we've been able to play. Their willingness to play to win, attack ever possession, has really been the key in our offense."

The victory sent Tennessee to its eighth Final Four in 14 years, but first since claiming its third national title in 1991.

McCray had 22 points — 19 in the first half — and 11 rebounds. Pashen Thompson also had 10 rebounds to give Tennessee a 52-33 edge on the boards and a 24-9 advantage in second-chance points. Latina Davis added 11 points for the Lady Vols.

"The difference in the game, obviously, was rebounding," Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp said. "I think they did a great job of attacking the backside boards and really had some offensive rebounds that made the difference. And because of our size, we had trouble taking care of that."

Falcons acquire Metcalf

More Sports/6C

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons can turn their attention to defense in next month's NFL draft after acquiring Eric Metcalf in a trade with the Cleveland Browns Saturday that also involved swapping the team's two first round spots in the draft.

"It gets what we wanted done on offense and now it kind of directs our attention to finish the other things that we've got going defensively," Falcons coach June Jones said at a news conference outside the team's training complex.

The deal came one day after the Browns signed former Falcons star wide receiver Andre Rison, a free agent, to a five-year deal worth $17 million.

The trade gives Cleveland the No. 10 pick in the first round of this year's draft, with the Falcons picking up the Browns' No. 26 slot. No other players were involved. It also clears a large spot under the cap for the Browns, who were due to pay Metcalf more than $2 million this year.

The deal won't be completed until Metcalf, 27, passes a physical. Jones said he thought the six-year veteran would be in Atlanta next week for the exam.

Although he was listed as a running back with the Browns, the Falcons will use Metcalf as a slot receiver in their run-and-shoot offense.

Seven and eight-month-old birds for sale at the Running T Ostrich ranch..

Couple joins growing industry

From drilling oil wells to raising ostriches, Neil and Joanne Tinsley opted to leave the oil industry in 1993 for an exciting, growing industry and saw great expectations in raising the big flightless birds, so time came to invest in something that would be in great demand for the future market.

With so many human health problems caused by high cholesterol intake, one demand would be low cholesterol food, in which studies have proven ostrich meat to be a low cholesterol red meat. This low cholesterol meat is already up-to-date served in many elegant restaurants.

The ostrich boots and other leather products come from these beautiful birds and the feathers are being used for costumes, dusters and decorations.

Neil and Joanne say to everyone: "Get used to seeing these big, beautiful flightless birds because the market is here and it is here to stay."

Club forms to meet needs of ratite producers

The Sandhill Ratite Ranchers is a group of area ratite producers who meet on the second Tuesday of each month at Warfield Too Restaurant, in Midland at 8:00 p.m., to discuss different aspects of the ratite industry. The club was formed to meet the needs of the growing number of ratite producers in the Permian Basin and surrounding areas. The raising of ostrich, emu and rhea has become recognized as a viable and exciting industry.

The continued program of the ratite industry to meet their goals to produce meat, oil and leather goods requires the club to obtain knowledgeable speakers in these areas to keep producers aware of development in this growing industry. Important topics pertaining to management, ratite development and marketing are also discussed.

The Sandhills Ratite Ranchers have contributed funds to the Lubbock Burn Institute to assist them with research being done on the treatment of burns with emu oil. The club along with the Texas Emu Association and other ratite clubs have donated funds to Texas Tech, which is researching the correct slaughtering techniques and preparation of emu meat.

Sandhills Ratite Ranchers will be hosting a symposium on the ratite industry in August and will have a booth displaying ratite products at the Permian Basin Fair in September. Parties interested in further information about the club should contact the club president, Glen Lane, at (915) 684-7642.

Outback Secrets has products with emu oil

Outbact Secrets is the largest sales volume company of emu oil products in North America and the only network marketing company distributing emu oil products in the world.

The Outback Secrets formulas are the ultimate in all-natural skin care and relief of muscular aches and joint pain. They are exclusive and unique to any other products available in North America today. The perfect blend of ingredients is the result of years of Australian research and refinement, the brilliance of which can be witnessed simply by putting Outback secrets' products to the test.

The main ingredient of the vast majority of Outback Secrets' product line is emu oil, imported from Australia. The emu oil that goes into each product is the very finest available in the world. It is purified and deodorized, in the strict compliance to the quality control standards of the World Health Organization.

The emu is a flightless bird native to Australia and is part of the ratite family of birds, including ostrich and rheas. Aborigines discovered emu oil many thousands of years ago as a skin moisturizer, antiseptic, and for the relief of muscular aches and joint pain problems.

Laboratory research in Australia has confirmed that emu oil contains a high level of linolenic acid, a substance known to temporarily ease joint pain, and oleic acid, which has a local anti-inflammatory effect on dermal tissues.

Outback Secrets is the largest sales volume company of emu oil products in North America and the only network marketing company distributing emu oil products in the entire world. Today, Outback Secrets prides itself with affordable products so effective that numerous professional sports team trainers have become involved as distributors to treat their players. Professional athletes are also endorsing Outback Secrets products and they will be in every national sports locker room by the end of 1995.

Ostrich industry equals big profits

Ostrich meat is the alternative to red meat. Ostrich has less fat and cholesterol than chicken and looks and tastes like beef. I started with larger birds so that they would produce larger offspring and that's what you want. I have records on all my stock and reasonable prices on proven breeders and eggs.

The demand for this meat exceeds the supply, so become apart of this exciting industry. If you have any questions please call (915) 362-7958.

Former dentist joins growing emu market

Dr. J. C. Whitaker, longtime dentist in Midland, is excited about his new "profession," emu farming. After a medical retirement from dentistry, he needed a new challenge. The ratite industry was fascinating to him. After visiting several emu farms and completing extensive research, he decided to venture into this relatively new field.

'I enjoy working with the birds, and find them very comical. They are gentle animals, curious and playful.'
— J.C. Whitaker

"I enjoy working with the birds, and find them very comical. They are gentle animals, curious and playful. This is my first hatching year, and I will be selling the chicks. I will be glad to visit with any interested parties and offer suggestions about how to get into the business."

Dr. J.C. Whitacker, a longtime dentist in Midland, is excited about his new profession, emu farming.

The emu is a very interesting creature. Ultimately, they will become a major food source in the United States, their meat being more like beef than poultry - and very low cholesterol. Also, the leather and feathers are valuable by-products.

But most important is the oil that is produced by the emus. It is being used in pharmaceuticals, having proven to have medicinal, healing qualities, and cosmetics.

Couple touts ostrich benefits

Double D. Premium Farms, Inc. (dba Double D Farms), established itself in the ostrich industry in 1989. A six- year building and growing project was begun for owners Doss and Tek Dupuis. The result of those efforts is a full-circle ostrich farm that includes breeders, incubating and hatching, and rearing chicks.

They offer quality Blue Ostrich offspring as future breeding stock.

Doss and Tek encourage those who are not afraid of hard work and those who have investment funds available to consider the opportunities offered by the ostrich industry. A world-wide market for ostrich products is just waiting to be supplied! The ostrich industry is growing rapidly and is firmly incorporated throughout the United States. After all, ostrich production is America's number one agricultural alternative.

Raising ostriches can be labor-intensive business

Breeding and raising ostriches is an industry that is in its infancy - all those full-quill ostrich boots are made from imported skins.

Lance Turner, who has been in the ostrich business for about three years, believes the availability of ostrich meat and skin will begin to meet part of the demand in another year or two.

"The demand is there, now," says Lance Turner from Andrews County. He and his dad, I. J. Turner, have several breeding pairs and grow out birds, plus coming breeders. Since they started their business three years ago, they have built a barn with incubator room and hatchery, besides all their pens.

Raising ostriches can be a labor-intensive business when the hens start laying eggs because of the care required. The laying season may extend into the fall.

The eggs are picked up from the pens and placed in incubators, where Kathy, Lance's mother, is the substitute mother for the chicks. For 42 days, she weighs and handles each egg and regularly keeps records. When hatching time nears, she watches and if the chick seems to be having trouble breaking through the shell, a gentle tap by Kathy helps out.

At hatching a chick may weigh from 1 3/4 pounds to 2 1/2 pounds. During the first 6 months of life, the bird can grow a foot a month. By the time an ostrich reaches adulthood, the bird may be 8 feet tall and weigh 400 pounds.

Demand for ostrich meat, Turner believes, will only grow because of the nutritional value. A three-ounce serving is low in calories, 96.9, compared to turkey, 135, lean beef steak, 240, and pork, 275.

Emu profits enable couple to work with other animals

Danny and Janie Pradon have raised exotic animals from all over the world for over 10 years. At this time, they have African lions, Bengal tigers, zebras, llamas and many more species to numerous to list. They also raise many endangered species such ad red lions, mandrill baboon and Gibbon's apes.

Some ventures have proven to be more profitable than others. They raised ratites for 5 years. For them, the ostrich and emu have definitely proven to be a golden financial investment. If not for them, the Pradons could not afford to do the work with the other animals that they choose to do. For anyone interested in this exciting new industry, they are always open for questions.

Technology provides ability to trace lost, stolen ratites

EID, Inc. technology provides permanent and unalterable proof of identification with the ability to trace lost or stolen ratites and exotics via computer. Benefits include: purebred registration, high tech branding, infectious disease control, aid for insurance purposes and improved identification in shows, exhibition and transfer of ownership.

This technology consists of an 11mm transponder that is preprogrammed with a 10 digit, unalterable alpha/numeric code and is encapsulated in biocompatible glass. the transponders come with patented anti-migration tips and are implanted like any other intramuscular injection. When a radio frequency scanner is passed over the implantation site, the transponder is activated and returns the ID number to the reader where it is displayed.

Destron - Fearing is the product of a merger between Destron/IDI and Fearing Manufacturing Company (since 1945), two of the world's leading animal identification providers. By joining forces, Destron - Fearing has become the only complete animal identification solution company in the world.

In August 1993, Destron - Fearing became the electronic identification standard endorsed by the federation of European Companion Animal Veterinary Associations (FECAVA) to it's more than 18,000 member veterinarians from 18 counties.

Destron - Fearing is backed by the strength of its manufacturing partner. GM/Hughes, and by the strength and dedication of its marketing partners worldwide. To date, more than 3 million animal worldwide have been successfully implanted with Destron - Fearing transponders. Destron - Fearing is publicly traded on the NASDAQ national market system under DFCO.

MHS tastes first loop win

ODESSA — Midland High got its first District 4-5A baseball victory here Saturday with a huge 13-3 win over Odessa High.

The Bulldogs are now 6-10 on the season and 1-3 in league play while OHS fell to 7-7-1 and 1-4.

Clay Johnston had a huge day for MHS with three hits and six RBIs. He hit two home runs in the game. Keith Lant drove in two runs with a hit. Craig Coleman got the victory with a complete game, allowing only four hits to the Bronchos.

MHS never trailed in the game, scoring four runs in the top of the first inning and led 9-2 after three innings of play. T. Stewart and Chad Villareal each had two hits for the Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs will host Abilene High Tuesday at 4 p.m. at Christensen Stadium.

Lee softballers take 20th win

ABILENE — Midland Lee's girls softball team won its 20th consecutive game of the season here Saturday after a two-hour rain delay, beating Abilene High 5-0 on a one-hitter by Emily Hayes.

The win gives Lee a 20-0 mark for the season and an 8-0 standing in District 6-5A play. Lee has clinched at least a district playoff in quest for its first state playoff berth in its maiden season.

Abilene High, now 3-5 in district play, got its only hit off Hayes in the fourth inning when Rand Williams singled.

April Rice had two hits, including a double, to drive in two runs. Christian Lance ha two singles and an RBI while Kim Murphy had a double. Lee had a 1-0 lead after one inning and that was all they needed.

Lee will host Odessa High Tuesday at 4 p.m. at the Bill Williams Softball complex.

Lee netters win tourney

MONAHANS — The Midland Lee boys and girls tennis teams combined to win the Sandhills Invitational tennis tournament here Saturday.

The Lee boys were first in the boys division and the girls were second, giving the team the overall title.

The doubles team of Rae McNeill and Krystal Barnett are still on a tear. They haven't lost a match this season and are now 10-0 after taking the girls doubles title.

Austin Conner won the boys singles title while Glen Abrams and Eric Chandler captured the boys doubles title for a sweep. Rob Hunt was fourth in boys singles and Deborah Ho was fourth in girls singles.

Lee and Midland High will host the Midland Invitational tennis tournament next Friday and Saturday at courts at both schools.

MHS girls third

LUBBOCK — The Midland High girls track team scored 77 points to place third in the Lubbock Relays Saturday. Abilene High won the meet.

The MHS girls had one win on the day when Laura Johnston won the 100 hurdles with a 17.0 seconds in high winds. The MHS girls also placed second in three other events.

The Lady Bulldogs will be in the Odessa Invitational next weekend at Ratliff Stadium.

MHS JV romps

ODESSA - The Midland High junior varsity baseball team ripped out 17 hits to blast Odessa High's JV by a 22-2 margin Saturday.

Mike Carrasco got the win with a 4-hitter and he also had four hits, including a double and four RBIs. Shane Jobe and Russell Dunlavy both had three hits in the game and both had triples. Dunlavy drove in six runs and Hector Morales drove in two.

MHS' JV is now 4-6 on the season, 2-1 in district, and will host Abilene High at Zachery Field Tuesday at 4 p.m.

Greenwood wins

COLORADO CITY — The Greenwood Rangers defeated Coahoma 8-5 Saturday in the Colorado City baseball tournament.

Michael Otho got the win and Chad Berry a save as the Rangers climbed to 6-7-1 for the season. Josh Jones had a solo homer for Greenwood and Casey Otho had a triple.

Greenwood will host Seminole Tuesday.

MC's Zahn wins

GRADY — Midland Christian's Jerod Zahn won the 120 high hurdles at the Grady Invitational track meet Saturday with a 16.5 seconds.

Midland Christian Track Results

Boys: 120 Hurdles: 1. Jerod Zahn, 16.5. 400: 6. Chris Sugg, 1:01.4.

Lee JV wins

The Lee junior varsity pounded Odessa Permian 9-4 in baseball Saturday to climb to 7-3 for the year.

David Allison got the win while Chad Crow had a three-run homer. Chris Schramko had two hits, including a double, and Mike Hale had two hits. Chad Chandler and Bo Garrison each doubled in the game.

game since the Tournament of Championships," said Watters referring to a 10-9 loss to Permian after blowing a 9-2 lead in the bottom of the seventh inning. "They have got a real good hitting team. Towards the end I felt a little light (on the mound) but I just tried to stay with it."

Watters, who had allowed just one earned run in district play, was mortal on Saturday as Panthers Heath Pipes and Jim Vick launched two-run home runs over the right center field fence to keep Permian within striking distance at 6-5. But Harper put the game away in the bottom of the sixth.

"I told them in the dugout that we needed some runs before we had to go out and try and stop them the last inning," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "I was thinking back to that 9-2 score (in the last meeting) going into the last inning and I knew that we needed something big and there's nothing bigger than what Britt did."

After Daniel Carrasco and Raymond Martinez opened the inning with a single and walk. Jordan struck out looking before Harper, who boosted his batting average to .339 for the season, stepped up and connected on a towering home run over the left center field fence for the 9-5 lead.

"(Delcor) threw a fast ball and I was able to catch up with it," said Harper of his first home run of the season. "He had throw me that pitch three times before, but I missed it. I was just trying to get a gapper when I went up to the plate. I feel that I am hitting good right now. I was getting frustrated earlier this year when I would hit the ball right to someone, but I feel like I am swinging the ball good right now."

The Rebels, with memories of Permian's eight-run outburst in its last at-bat in the first meeting, shut down Permian in the top of the seventh when Watters struck out Bustos with two on base.

less than a second in the 500 free.

Also, Midland High senior Howard Flowers came through with a sixth place in the 100 backstroke with a 52.18 seconds. No other Midland state entrants earned a Top 6 finish in any event.

Stroman and Flowers won't soon forget this heady week of activity. Both also competed earlier in the week in the Speedo Junior Nationals, held in Midland, a conflict that didn't seem to matter when they took to the pool.

Stroman placed second in the 400 IM in the Junior Nationals earlier in the week while Flowers gained the consolation finals in both the 200 back and 400 IM at the Junior Nationals.

Odessa Permian's Terah Gisolo also had a good outing at the state meet with a third place in the 50-yard freestyle with a 24.31.

MHS: Hernandez double ignites Lady Cougars

(From 1C)

I could think of is that I had to get to it fast and make the play because I knew the runners would be going," Parker said.

The victory gives Cooper a solid 7-1 league mark while the playoff hopes of 4-4 Midland High were all but dashed. This was the win the Lady Bulldogs needed for a playoff push in their maiden 6-5A season.

"This was just maddening," said MHS coach Sherri Culwell. "We've been aggressive on the base paths all year and it has helped us, but this time, the catcher came up with a big play."

Trailing 3-0 going into the fatal seventh, MHS mounted a rally when Katrina Kelley started the frame with a single to center. Shelia Vines followed with her fourth hit of the game. Later Klien delivered a two-run single to plate Kelley and Vines and Joye Lewis followed with a walk to represent the winning run.

But Parker came up with the play of the game and the Lady Bulldogs have almost no chance of catching either Midland Lee or Cooper down the last four-game stretch.

Cooper came into the game having lost to Lee on Friday in Abilene. Then they had to catch a Saturday bus for Midland and the date with the hungry Bulldogs.

"I was wondering if we would be down after losing to Lee, but I felt good about this game because our kids were light and rowdy on the trip down here," said Cooper coach Connie Finn. "We needed this win. We just need to stay focused and take each game one at a time. We're expecting good things."

The two teams fought to a scoreless deadlock through four innings, but Cooper erupted in the fifth inning off of Kelley with three runs on five hits. Parker and Jill Malone each drove in runs while another scored on an MHS error.

Parker's RBI single broke the scoreless duel, but she says that it was a one-out double from designated hitter Vicki Hernandez that was the big hit of the game.

"Vicki's double started us off and I think that hit lifted the whole team," Parker said. "Everyone started hitting after that. It was depressing losing to Lee last night (Friday in Abilene), so we just needed to get something going."

MHS, 13-5 on the season, will travel to Odessa Permian at 4 p.m. Tuesday. Cooper is 10-1 on the season.

Pavin, Langer survive winds at TPC

The Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. — Corey Pavin and Bernhard Langer survived. The greens at The Players Championship might not.

For a third day the wind whipped across the TPC course at Sawgrass, blowing golf shots every which way and taking the already dry greens one step closer to resembling a municipal course in August.

"They must be very close to losing them," Langer said after shooting a 71 on Saturday to share the third-round lead with Pavin at 5-under-par 211. "But I guess they know what they are doing."

Langer, who got to 6-under when he rolled in a 75-foot birdie putt on No. 15, had a chance to hold the lead all alone but three-putted from 45 feet on No. 18 for a bogey, missing a 7-footer.

Lee Janzen was able to shoot 69 with a wonderful stretch of putting, making putts of 15, 18, 25 and 15 feet on the last four holes of the front nine for three birdies and a par.

Pavin, who managed an even-par 72, said the condition of the greens was "right on the edge. They need a little water so they don't die."

The difficult conditions make it unlikely that anyone will storm from the pack on Sunday with a really low score, but it also means the leaders could falter.

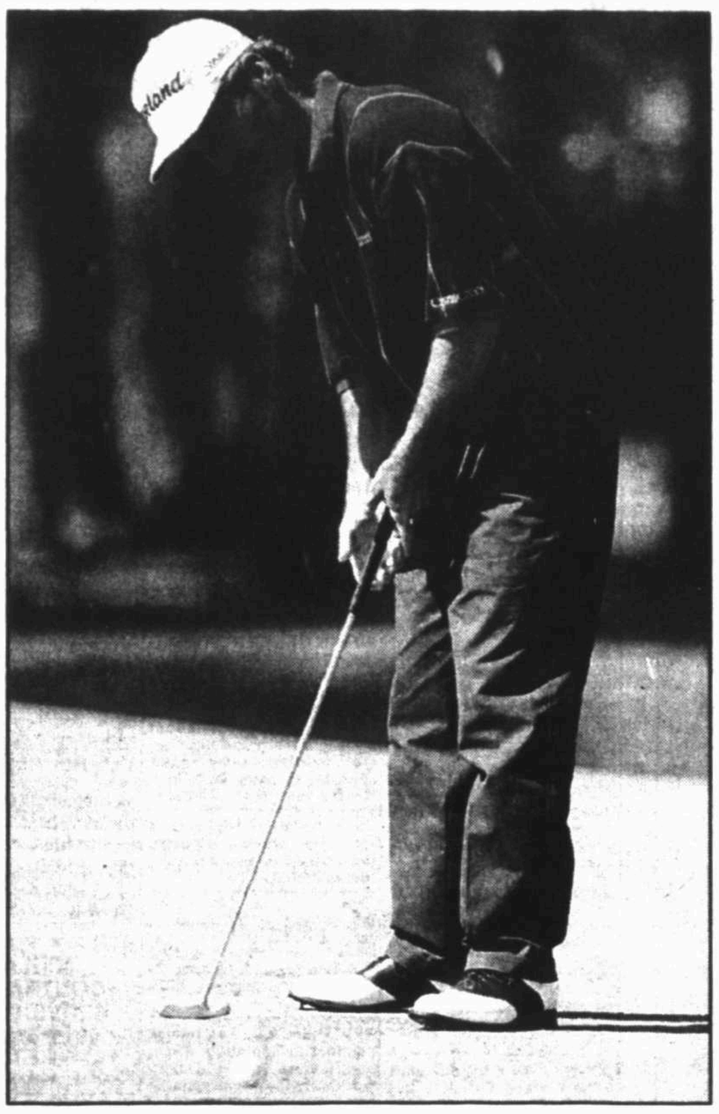

World Tour dead, for now

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. — The World Golf Tour was dead. At least in the minds of the heads of the PGA tours in the United States, Europe, Australasia, Japan and South Africa. At least in the form it was presented last fall. At least without the consent and control of the five men sitting there, saying it was dead.

"That particular project with those particular organizers doesn't make sense for us," PGA Tour commissioner Tim Finchem said, after he and the representatives of the other four tours met at The Players Championship. "We won't give it any more attention."

What he was talking about was the idea put forth in November, supported by Greg Norman and with a promise to televise it from Fox, that would create a series of eight tournaments guaranteeing big money to those pros willing to challenge the PGA rules against playing in events that conflict with tour tournaments.

Norman was the only pro to back that plan big-time, and any momentum toward supporting his stance was undercut by Finchem's immediate pledge to punish players who violated the tour's conflicting events rule.

Green holds Dinah Shore lead

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Tammie Green, her game steady despite pressure from challengers Nancy Lopez and Laura Davies, shot a 2-under-par 70 to maintain her lead.

Green went to 5-under for the tournament and will carry a two-shot lead over Lopez and a three-shot pad over Davies into the final round of the first of the LPGA's four major championships.

Lopez, fighting her way back from a opening-day 74, shot a third-round 68 to keep the heat on Green at Mission Hills Country Club. Davies, winner of last week's tournament in Phoenix, matched Green's par round to remain just off the pace.

Nanci Bowen, with a 71, and Susie Redman, with a 70, were four shots behind Green. Green began the day with a two-shot edge on Lauri Merten and Kelly Robbins. Merten shot a 73 to fall five shots off the lead, and Robbins struggled to a 76 that dropped her back into the pack.

Green, who finished third in the Dinah Shore last year behind winner Donna Andrews and runnerup Davies and tied for second behind Juli Inkster in 1989, had a birdie and a bogey on the front nine Saturday, then birdied Nos. 10 and 11 before parring out.

Pearson wins Mark III Vans 200, Hillin 8th

Associated Press

■ Auto Racing

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Larry Pearson, driving the way his famous father did so often at Darlington International Raceway, ended a seven-year winless streak with a victory in the Mark III Vans 200 Saturday.

Pearson, whose Hall of Fame father David won a record 10 times on the troublesome 1.366-mile layout, took the lead in his Chevrolet with 18 laps left in the crash-filled race. He beat the Ford of Busch Grand National points leader Johnny Benson by .28 seconds in winning for the first time at Darlington.

Midland High graduate Bobby Hillin Jr., driving the No. 18 Ford, finished in 8th place for a cash prize of $4,200.

Although admitting he does not like the track, Pearson said he listened to advice from his father, a winner of 105 Winston Cup races in his long career.

"He told me not to drive up too hard in the corners," the 39-year-old Pearson said. "He told me to just back off and you'll catch up coming out of the corners."

Pearson collected $21,550 from a purse totaling $267,208 for his first victory since Bristol in 1988.

After Benson came the Fords of Mark Martin and Chad Little and the Chevrolet of Phil Parsons.

The first half of the race was a battle between Little, twice a winner this season, and Martin. But they never were able to make up the track position lost in the final pit stop even tough the field was under caution.

Martin — who has won six of his last nine starts on the track — led 37 laps and Little 23 before they gave way to Steve Grissom for 45. Parsons, whose pit strategy was identical to that of Pearson, led 28 laps until the winner took control.

Bodine improves starting position in TranSouth 400

DARLINGTON, S.C — Brett Bodine was the biggest winner in second-day qualifying for the TranSouth 400, increasing his starting position by eight spots for the $1 million race today.

Bodine, 29th Friday in qualifying, toured the 1.366-mile Darlington International Raceway Saturday in a Ford Thunderbird at 168.486 mph. His speed a day earlier was 166.090.

Bodine will be eligible to have his name drawn from the fastest second-day qualifiers at NASCAR Winston Cup events as a wild-card entry in next February's Busch Clash. That race, held at Daytona International Speeway, puts one wild card in with 1995 pole winners.

Seven-time Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt, who like TranSouth 400 polesitter Jeff Gordon, already has qualified for the Busch Clash, failed to improve his starting position. Although he was nearly 1.5 mph faster Saturday, Earnhardt will start 23rd Sunday.

Earnhardt's speed in the second round was 168.388. Gordon's pole-winning speed was 170.833.

Also moving up eight spots in the second round were Steve Grissom and Greg Sacks. Grissom had a lap of 168.371 in a Chevrolet, and will start 24th Sunday. Sacks will start 30th after a lap of 166.557 in a Pontiac.

Hill retains pole for Brazilian Grand Prix

SAO PAULO, Brazil — Britain's Damon Hill retained the pole position Saturday for the Brazilian Grand Prix despite a strong challenge from world champion Michael Schumacher.

Hill's best lap Friday of 1 minute, 20.081 seconds, in a Williams Renault was enough to win the pole after the final session of time trials on the twisting 2,637-mile Interlagos circuit.

The anticipated Hill-Schumacher duel finally took shape, as the German went from sixth place into the outside front row spot alongside Hill for Sunday's race by trimming two full seconds off his Friday time.

"Schumacher has closed the gap," Hill said. "He had a good day today, and that means the race will be close. But my car is perfect and I can do with it what I want, no matter the track conditions."

With a light mist falling and black storm clouds advancing on the horizon, Schumacher, in a Benetton-Renault, set a best lap of 1:20.382.

"It will be a tough race, but a good show," Schumacher said. "The difficult track surface and the weather will make the race unpredictable."

Both drivers said uneven areas of the track hurt their performances and would force their teams to make last-minute suspension and shock adjustment changes to compensate.

Several drivers have complained about big bumps in the circuit, caused two weeks ago when trucks and heavy cranes rode on the track shortly after it had been resurfaced.

Britain's David Coulthard held third by shaving nearly a second off his Friday time, setting a best lap of 1:20.422.

Johnny Herbert of Britain put his Benetton-Renault on the outside of the second row with a best time of 1:20.888 in his final lap of the day.

Graf completes Lipton romp; Agassi, Sampras to meet in men's final

■ Tennis

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Steffi Graf, overshadowed much of this week by absent rival Monica Seles, completed her romp Saturday through a depleted field at the Lipton Championships.

The second-ranked Graf beat Kimiko Date 6-1, 6-4 to win the Lipton for the fourth time.

Afterward, Graf addressed the reclusive Seles, who remains sidelined nearly two years after being attacked by a deranged Graf fan. There's been recent speculation that Seles will soon return to the WTA Tour.

"I hope you're watching and I hope you're coming back," Graf said. "I really miss you and I think everybody else does too."

Davis Cup teammates meet today

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Andre Agassi and Pete Sampras will board the Concorde on Monday and fly to Europe for next weekend's second-round Davis Cup match between the United States and Italy.

"I couldn't ask for a better teammate," Agassi said.

And he couldn't ask for a better opponent. The friendly rivals meet for the third time this year in today's men's final at Lipton.

Sampras will remain top-ranked regardless of the outcome. Agassi, ranked No. 2, beat Sampras in the final at the Australian Open in January. Sampras beat Agassi in the final at Indian Wells this month.

Agassi has a 46-4 record since the start of last year's U.S. Open. Sampras is 20-3 in 1995, holds an 8-6 edge on Agassi and is seeking his third consecutive Lipton title.

U.S. medal total reaches 400 at Pan Am Games despite dropped baton

MAR DEL PLATA, Argentina (AP) — If not for a dropped baton, the United States might have gotten to the unconquered 400-medal level a little sooner at the Pan Am Games

No matter. The Americans got there Saturday when wrestler Zeke Jones, a former world champion and 1992 Olympic silver medalist, took the gold at 114 1/2 pounds. Jones, of Chandler, Ariz., beat Cuba's Carlos Verela 5-2.

"God bless America," Jones said. "As our medals totals continue to climb, it's showing that the United States is getting stronger and stronger in the Olympic movement."

On Friday, the U.S. team surpassed the record of 369 medals it set eight years ago at Indianapolis. The gold medal mark of 168, also at Indianapolis, was in reach, too.

One expected medal that didn't come was in the men's 1,600-meter relay.

Dino Napier hadn't dropped the baton in 14 years of relay racing. He still doesn't remember how it happened.

Napier fumbled the pass to Tony Miller, and the strong U.S. team finished out of the medals.

The other members of the team — Miller, Wendell Gaskin and Kevin Lyles — picked up ground, but managed only sixth.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsibility, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsibility for the omission of an ad.

HOMES

TRINITY

Set in a tranquil part of Trinity West, this elegant five bedroom, four bath family house was custom built by the owner, a well respected local builder.

The result is a house of incomparable style and elegance that is full of interesting features such as the cedar panelled spa room which opens onto the master bath and garden.

The quality of construction and attention to detail is apparent as soon as one walks into this gorgeous home. It has been well thought out, with recessed lighting, masses of storage space in the bedrooms and closets in the hallways.

Part of the house's appeal is the way the floor-plan is designed. The living areas of this big house flow together, thanks to the open design, and form the heart of the property. By using different floor coverings and large open doorways, the designer has been able to create a great sense of movement throughout the house.

The kitchen definitely sets the tone for the rest of the property. Full of all the modern conveniences that one would expect from a house of this caliber. It is a bright modern room that offers a tasteful brick floor, views over the garden and special elements such as the glassed in cabinets over the built-in desk. A large central island, masses of counter space and a huge pantry, coupled with all of the built-ins, add up to a kitchen fit for a gourmet chef.

Elegant hardwood floors in the formal rooms and entryway provide a classical touch, particularly as they are balanced by elements such as the crown mouldings.

It is the surprises, however, that elevate this home above others. For example, a study with its own facilities has been created out of the third garage. Set in landscaped grouds, this is truly a house of exceptional quality and it is listed at $230,000. Private appointments to view are available by contacting the listing agent Amy Johnson of Langston Realtors, at 685-0400.

Smart home updating provides greater return at time of sale

Peggy Strong, CRS, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

THE SEARCH IS OVER! It's a song overheard on the radio this week and it certainly applied to what we are trying to accomplish in this series of articles. As a Seller preparing to place your home on the open market, we have begun an inspection thru the Buyer's eyes. The Buyer has the opportunity to view all the competitive properties in his price range and the prepared Seller wants the search to end here at his home! Today we continue the inspection beyond the entry way. Good Luck!

One of the most obvious tidbits of advise is to clean house like you've never cleaned house before! COMMIT TO THE MOVE! Toss out unwanted clothing and other items that crowd your home or closets. A "too full" closet doesn't always relay the message that you've outgrown your home, but that there isn't enough storage for the buyer. Have a major garage sale, donation to charity, or rent a storage facility, whatever it takes, COMMIT TO THE MOVE!

UPDATE and NEUTRALIZE as much as you can or be prepared to address the issue via a lower sales price. Let's face it, avocado green carpet and foil papers are usually not suitable for the majority of today's buyers. Your Realtor can guide you as to what updating will give you a better return on your investment. Of course there are Buyers that are wanting to fix-it-up themselves, but at what price you can live with? Consider all your options and be prepared by getting bids for paint, carpet, vinyl, and wallpaper. Will the costs benefit you? Probably, but discuss it with your Professional Realtor! It's a difficult bite to swallow that you should do all these nice things you meant to do for yourself, but must now do for the Buyer. Take assurance that your efforts will be rewarded with a quicker and more appropriate sale!

Don't forget to change the filters on the return air and clean all vents. Dust the baseboards. Light bulbs and covers need to shine! Bathrooms need to smell Mr. Clean Fresh! Shades/blinds should be open giving that open light bright feeling.

Now it's time to take a hike (take FIDO with you) and let the Realtor do his/her job. With all distractions out of the way, the Buyer and his Agent can start singing, "THE SEARCH IS OVER". Gig'em!

Agents help smooth out details

Marilyn Jo Smith
Re/Max of Midland

Sometimes the need for a move is obvious, for example, if your work requires an across town or across country move, you are about to have twins, or a change in salary. If you notice that your home is no longer serving your needs, it may be time to call in a professional Realtor and discuss the options.

If you decide that a move is the necessary choice, there are several things to consider when listing your present home and beginning the search for a new one. With the help of your Realtor, you will get a good idea of what you may expect to get for your present home and what you can afford to spend on a new one.

From all of the new laws in selling your home to all of the financing options available, your Realtor is an invaluable asset in today's fast paced real estate world. After all, buying and selling a home is still the largest financial decision most families encounter.

Some families still attempt to sell their homes on their own. Though a valiant idea, many "For Sale By Owner" homes will not have the professionalism, the knowledge, and expertise of a Realtor. Professionals have experienced the problems that can arise in a transaction and can guide you through all the process. Both sides of a real estate transaction are emotional -- don't waste your precious time "working the deal" -- spend your time packing your bags and deciding where the tree will go next Christmas and leave the details to the Realtor!

Amenities cause variety reactions in different price ranges

Kay Pederson, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

Not all home improvements will add value to your home. Some things that are done to a home must be considered personal and the enjoyment of the family members may be the only return ever received for the expenditure.

For example, a swimming pool or a built-in spa may not cause the home to sell for any additional money. In lower price ranges, it may even hurt the sale of the home. As the price goes up, more of the cost may be recovered but as a rule of thumb, you can generally only expect to get half of what the pool cost.

Other examples of times that don't increase value include wool or other high quality carpet, oak paneling compared to ash paneling, solid brass plumbing fixtures, and slate or aluminum roofs. The logic is that the new buyer expects the quality to be good but will not usually pay for the top of the line.

On the other hand, there are some improvements which can cause the home to sell for more money and should be considered by homeowners especially when updating is appropriate.

Kitchens and bathrooms will date a home quicker than anything. And an updated kitchen with new appliances, counter tops and attractive cabinets will make buyers get excited and can make the difference when deciding between two homes.

A tremendous change can be made in a bathroom by adding new light fixtures, new mirrors, and attractive wallpaper to complement the tile colors.

Don't expect a buyer to have the imagination to be able to see what your home will look like if they replace the carpet, paint, or add new wallpaper. Take the time and spend the money to make these improvements before you put your home on the market. It will sell quicker and for more money than if you give the buyer an "allowance".

If you need help or suggestions, please call me.

Local agents receive award

Larry Hatfield
Re/Max of Midland

Debbie Hatfield
Re/Max of Midland

MIDLAND, MARCH 15, 1995 -- Larry and Debbie hatfield, sales associates with Re/Max of Midland have been awarded the Accredited Buyer Representative designation by the Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council (REBAC), a national organization addressing all aspects of consumer representation in real estate transactions.

The Hatfields recently completed the educational requirements for the national designation at an intensive two-day seminar held in Midland, Texas. Designees must also complete specified practical requirements and submit evidence of completed transactions in which they have functioned as a buyer's representative before being accepted in the designation program.

"Until very recently, the vast majority of real estate agents worked as exclusive agents of the seller," explains REBAC president, Charles m. Dahlheimer, "and most buyers were unrepresented in the purchase of a home. Today, there is a definite trend toward buyer representation, spurred on in part by strong efforts of consumer advocates such as Ralph Nader and organizations such as the Consumer Federation of America and AARP. it is our purpose to provide a nationwide registry of agents who not only call themselves buyer representatives but who have had the training and experience to deliver the service ethically and professionally. That is the purpose of our designation program."

Larry recently received his Certified Residential Specialist (CRS) designation in 1994 and Debbie expecting to receive her CRS also in the next few months.

REBAC was founded in 1988 and currently has over 4,000 members in all fifty states and Canada. Approximately fifteen hundred REBAC members in forty-seven states and Canada have achieved the Accredited Buyer Representative designation.

New rental laws step up security standards

Karen Foster
Kay Sutton,
Realtors

Recent laws concerning rental property require extra security precautions be taken by the owner. The locks on all outside doors must be equipped with a keyless dead bolt lock. The law also has specific requirements for French doors and for sliding doors.

Now available for use by landlords and tenants are numerous forms and addendum's for almost any situation or requirement. A tenant may wish to completely fill out and have approved by the manager or owner an "Inventory and Condition Form For Move In or Move Out" which provides the opportunity to specify any damage to the property at time of occupancy, or any repairs needed by the property. This same check list should be used at time of vacating to ensure that the property is in comparable condition as when the tenant began occupancy.

A separate pet agreement specifies what type and how many pets are to be allowed in the property. A pet deposit may be specified either refundable upon inspection, or a non-refundable cleaning deposit may be required.

Some landlords expect the tenant to do minor maintenance within specified dollar limit), others choose to oversee all repairs themselves.

If you have questions, call your Realtor for assistance in managing your rental properties.

PERMIAN BASIN
OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, MARCH 26, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

Ramone Gigala, behind, and Manuel Bustos service a well for Pride Petroleum Services.

Drilling improves

Drilling activity was mixed for the week ended March 17, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count inched up to 112 or the week and remains above the year-ago level of 99.

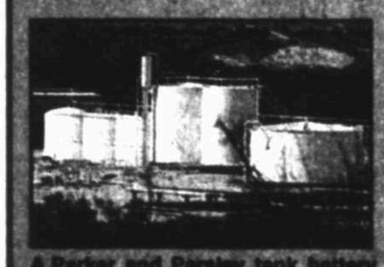

Lea County, N.M. remains the most active in the Basin with 21 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 10 rigs and Terrell, Midland and Gaines counties with eight rigs each.

Nationally, the rig count continues to slump, falling another eight rigs to 667 for the week. A year ago the count was 743.

Fancher leaves Atmos

DALLAS—Atmos Energy Corp. announced that Ronald L. Fancher has resigned from the company's Board of Directors, effective Feb. 21, 1995. The company previously announced that Fancher resigned as president and chief executive officer of Atmos on Feb. 21, 1995.

Atmos Energy Corporation provides natural gas service to more than 650,000 customers in Texas, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Louisiana and Kentucky through its operating divisions: Energas Company, Greeley Gas Company, Trans Louisiana Gas Company and Western Kentucky Gas Company.

A Parker and Parsley tank battery near Sterling City, ready to transfer oil.

Prices climb

Oil futures climbed to a 4-1/2 month high this past week, powered by concerns about disrupted energy supplies.

Reports of disruptions overseas - mainly an oil workers strike in Kuwait, an Iranian military buildup in the Persian Gulf and disruption of supplies from a key Venezuelan refinery sent prices soaring on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Late in the week, May contracts for delivery of West Texas Intermediate closed at $18.92 a barrel, the posted price at $17.25 a barrel.

Natural gas prices also moved higher,with April contract settling at $1.55 per thousand cubic feet.

Mobil acquisition

Mobil Natural Gas Inc. has entered into two separate definitive agreements to acquire select West Texas natural gas assets from the Enron-affiliated companies, Transwestern Gathering Co., Enron Permian Gathering Inc. and Northern Natural Gas Co.

Under terms of the agreement, Mobil will acquire various natural gas gathering, compression anda treatment facilities located in the Permian Basin. The facilities, which surround Mobil's 125 million cubic feet per day Waha Gas Processing Plant located in Pecos County, will enhance the company's ability to compete for volumes necessary to bring the plant to capacity.

"The acquisition of these facilities will more than double the current gathering attached to the Waha plant," stated H.W. Norton Jr., vice president of gas processing at MNGHI.

The assets include 260 miles of gathering systems, a 250 Mmcfd treatment facility, eight field compressor stations, central compression facilities totaling 4,600 HP and 170 connected meter stations.

The sale is subject to regulatory approval.

University Lands upbeat about lease sale

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

As the Board for Lease of University Lands prepares for its 87th annual Oil and Gas Lease sale, indications are the lease sale should be good for the University Lands System.

"The upbeat atmosphere we're seeing locally gives us a positive feeling about projections for the sale," said Wallie Gravitt, director of the University Lands office in Midland. "But you have to remember we never really know what's going to happen until we open the bids on sale day."

The annual lease sale will be held May 23 at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, Highway 191 and FM 1788, beginning at 10 a.m.

The offering is comprised of 145 tracts totaling 43,723.212 acres in Andrews, Martin, Ward, Loving, Winkler, Pecos, Crockett, Reagan and Upton counties. Minimum bids range from $4,000 for a tract in Pecos County to $16,200 for tracts in Andrews County.

Gravitt noted that included in the lease sale are eight tracts in Cooke County, "which are part of the Permanent University Fund but little known here in West Texas." The Cooke County tracts are part of the original 50 League lands in which the University of Texas System still has mineral interests.

"There was some definite interest in these tracts because they were nominated, which is sort of unusual," he said.

While Gravitt declined to make any predictions about the outcome of the upcoming sale, he noted that "Judging from the activity we've seen through the nominations process and from people coming to our library and using our information, it gives us a positive feel about the upcoming sale. We've been in situations where we've felt a little downbeat about the prospects for an upcoming sale. This year we feel pretty positive."

A primary reason for increased interest in university lands, he said, is the fact that the Board for Lease has scheduled two regular lease sales each year, one in May and one

Terrell County may be focus of sale

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

In conjunction with the 87th Oil and Gas Lease Sale, the Board for Lease will hold a Frontier Oil and Gas Lease Sale, offering frontier acreage in El Paso, Hudspeth and Terrell counties.

The sale will be May 23 at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, Highway 191 and FM 1788 at 10 a.m. Included in the sale are 186 tracts totaling 471,810.700 acres. Minimum bids range from $1,737 for a tract in El Paso County to $12,948 for tracts in Terrell County.

Interest has been high in Terrell County recently, following severan major gas disooveries in that area.

According to Wallie Gravitt, director of the University Lands office in Midland, there are 18 unsold sections left on University lands in Terrell County, all up for sale at the May 23 lease sale.

"We would hope to still have some interest generated there," he said.

All University lands in Culberson County have been leased, and Gravitt commented that "Whether that is a true indicator of what will take place on those leases, we don't know."

Terms for leases in El Paso and Hudspeth counties are as follows:

Primary term is 10 years.

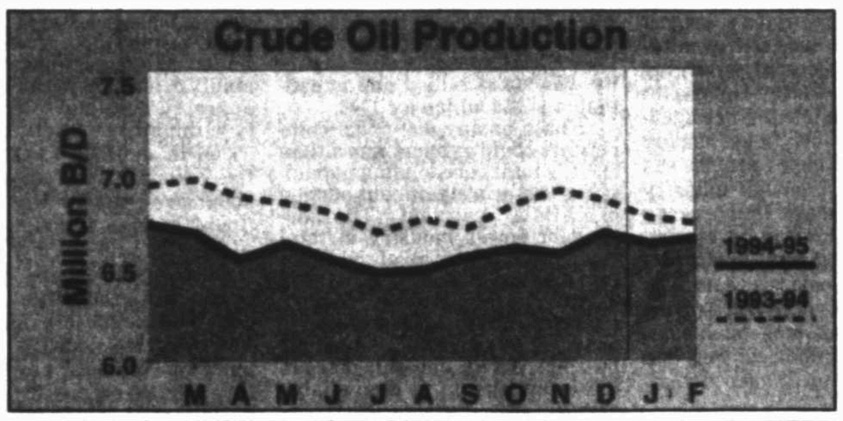

Each bonus must equal or exceed the minimum bid stated in the sale list.

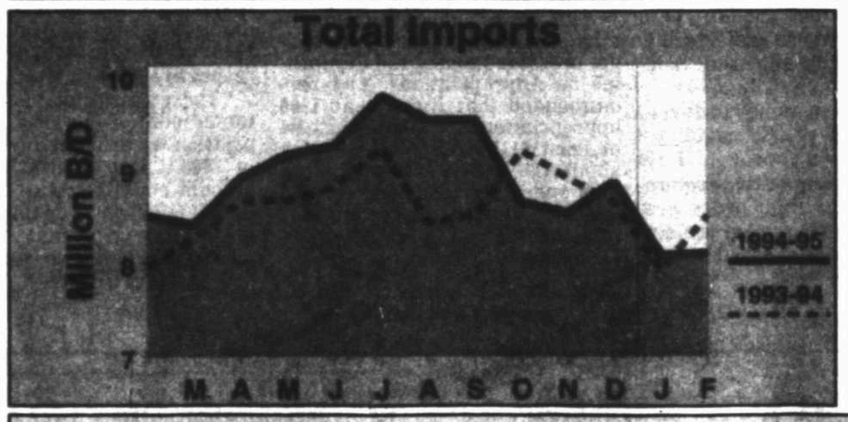

Rental is 10 cents per acre for years two through five, 20 cents per acre for years six through 10.

Royalty is 1/8 for the first 13 years, escalating to 3/16 with year

Offshore production boosts domestic crude output

Staff Reports

Increases in offshore production helped slow a decline in domestic production, according to the American Petroleum Institute's "Monthly Statistical Report."

According to the API, February production in the lower 48 states declined only 1.2 percent or 80,000 barrels a day from February 1994. This, the industry group said, is considerably lower than 1994's average annual decrease of 3.5 percent.

This slowdown in the decline is attributable to new deep water platforms in the Gulf of Mexico and increased production offshore California. In 1994, offshore production accounted for approximately 20 percent of total production, up from 18 percent in 1993.

Although crude production in the lower 48 states was lower in 1994 than in 1993, average production in the fourth quarter of 1994 was 5.032 million barrels a day or 30,000 barrels a day higher than the average production during the third quarter of 1994, the first quarter-to-quarter expansion in lower 48 production since the fourth quarter of 1992. Unlike 1992, where production rose for only one quarter, production in the lower 48 states for the last two months has averaged 5.059 million barrels a day or a marginal 27,000 barrels a day higher than production in the fourth quarter of 1994.

The API also reported that continued weakness for productions pulled down total imports in February. Crude oil imports were up 1.7 percent or 108,000 barrels a day from a year ago but product imports dropped nearly 24 percent or over 510,000 barrels a day. At 1.67 million barrels a day, product imports - though higher than in January - were at their lowest level for February in four years.

Total imports for February - crude oil and petroleum products - totaled 8,094,000 barrels a day compared to 8,500,000 barrels a day in February last year. Still, the API estimates that the underlying trend in imports is at least half a million barrels a day higher.

That weakness in demand also showed up in domestic deliveries, according to the API. The API reported that total domestic deliveries of petroleum products - a key measure of demand - were down 3.6 percent in February compared to February 1994.

Deliveries amounted to 17,647,000 barrels per day, compared to 18,302,000 barrels a day in February 1994. A 30.3 percent drop in residual (heavy) oil deliveries and a 2.7 percent decline in distillate (home heating oil and diesel fuel) deliveries were responsible for the overall downturn. Colombia becoming major oil supplier in spite of itself

By James Brooke
N.Y. Times News Service

TAURAMENA, Colombia — Once defined by creeks and cow paths, the arid landscape of the Andean foothills near Tauramena is now marked by helicopters, drilling rigs and the cowboy boots of American oilmen.

Foreign oil companies are drilling three miles down, tapping into a sea of low-sulfur crude oil capable of making Colombia a major oil supplier to the United States.

"The U.S. could import 10 percent of its oil from Colombia by the end of this decade," said Thomas G. Finck, president of Triton Energy Corp. of Dallas, who flew to Tauramena last month for the inauguration of a $300 million oil-processing operation. The tanker trip from Colombia's Caribbean oil port to refineries in Texas and Louisiana takes four days.

With production in the United States at its lowest level in four decades, the emergence of a nearby source of clean-burning oil is increasingly important for Americans. Last year, imports accounted for more than half of American oil consumption. And U.S. oil companies now account for 11 of the 18 largest foreign oil concerns operating in this country.

Only a decade ago, Colombia was an importer of oil. Today, it is Latin America's third-largest exporter to the United States, after Venezuela and Mexico. With most of Colombia's known oil reserves having been discovered by private companies, private investment will be essential both to maintain future exports and to explore the two-thirds of the country not yet explored for oil.

But in recent years, foreign oil companies have shied away from Colombia because of heavy taxes. The government has therefore begun to bear more of the cost of oil exploration and development. At the same time, it is planning a series of tax breaks.

And it has attracted the largest oil investment in the country's history. British Petroleum Exploration Co., with financial assistance from three partners — Triton of Texas, Total of France and Ecopetrol, Colombia's state oil company — is undertaking a $7 billion development in Cusiana and Cupiagua, two huge fields near Tauramena, about 90 miles northeast of Bogota, the capital.

The oilfields, which cover a thinly populated area the size of Connecticut, hold 2.1 billion barrels in proven oil and gas reserves. Ecopetrol announced late last month that probable and possible oil and gas reserves in the area totaled a further 3.9 billion barrels.

Helped by the oil investments, Colombia's economy is expected to grow 5 percent this year, the same rate as in the last two years. At the Tauramena fields, the largest confirmed in Colombia, oil production is expected to increase to 185,000 barrels a day by the end of this year from 90,000 barrels a day at present, and to 500,000 barrels a day by the end of 1997.

Colombia also offers other energy opportunities to Western companies. After British Petroleum announced the discovery of five trillion cubic feet in November.

SALE: Upbeat industry should improve activity

(From 1E)

"This has proved positive because the operators know there's a sale in May and again in November, and this lets them plan their exploration prospects along that line rather than waiting to see if there will be another sale."

He added that "Anything that generates activity on University lands will generate activity for lands nearby, so increased interest is good for everybody. And that works both ways - activity near our lands increases activity on our lands."

Lease terms are as follows:

■ Each bonus must equal or exceed the minimum bid stated in the sale list.

■ Rental is $5 per acre for years two and three, $10 per acre for years four and five.

■ Royalty is 25 percent with the opportunity for reduction.

■ Minimum production royalty is $5 per acre per year.

■ Primary term is five years.

The royalty can be reduced to 20 percent if production of oil or gas in paying quantities is established within the first 18 months of the least term.

It can be reduced to 22.5 percent if commercial production is established in the second 18 months of the lease.

Bids must be received in a sealed envelope endorsed "Sealed Bid For Mineral Lease, May 23, 1995" and received at the Midland post office addressed to Manager of University Lands, Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests, P.O. Box 553, Midland Texas 79702-0553 or at the University Lands office, 808 W. Wall, by 5 p.m. May 22. Bids can be submitted at the sale site until 10 a.m. May 23.

TERRELL: Active area

14.

Lease terms for Terrell County are:

Primary term is five years.

Each bonus must equal or exceed the minimum bid stated in the sale list.

Rental is $1 per acre per year for years two and three, $2 per acre per year for years four and five.

Royalty is 3/16 for the first eight years, escalating to 1/5 beginning with year five.

The damage rate for geophysical operations in these three countieswill be reduced to half the current applicable rate, available to any operator conducting seismic operations in these designated lease sale areas. The reduced rate will remain in effect until the date of the lease sale and afterwards will continue during the primary term for lessees and these respective leases.

Bids for any acreage involved in either sale must be received in a sealed envelope endored "Sealed Bid For Mineral Lease, May 23, 1995" and received at the Midland post office addressed to Manager of University Lands, Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests, P.O. Box 553, Midland Texas 79702-0553 or at the University Lands office, 808 W. Wall, by 5 p.m. May 22. Bids can be submitted at the sale site until 10 a.m. May 23.

OFFSHORE: Demand off

ond month in a row total deliveries have declined year-to-year.

Gasoline deliveries rose a marginal 0.5 percent in February. Motor gasoline deliveries averaged 7,307,000 barrels a day, compared to 7,272,000 barrels a day a year earlier. Reformulated gasoline accounted for 25 percent - 1,821,000 barrels a day - of all gasoline deliveries in the month.

Other statistics:

■ Distillate deliveries were 3,468,000 barrels a day, compared to 3,565,000 barrels a day in 1994.

■ Kerosine jet fuel deliveries reached the all-time February high, 1,535,000 barrels a day compared to 1,471,000 barrels a day in February 1994. Growth has been fueled by ongoing defense conversion and growing commercial air traffic.

■ Refinery utilization averaged 89.5 percent, the first time below 90 percent since last March.

■ Total stocks of crude oil and petroleum products at the end of February stood at 1,021,600,000 barrels, down 1.9 percent from the end of January but slightly above average for February. Crude oil stocks ended the month at 324 million barrels, the low end of recent experience. Gasoline stocks were roughly 12 million barrels below average for February. Distillate stocks were higher than usual as a decline in February was not enough to offset the excess over typical levels accumulated by the end of January.

COLOMBIA: High costs slow foreign investment of gas near the oilfields last August, the government began a $3 billion program to pipe gas to all urban households by 1997. The new find, equivalent to a billion barrels of oil, doubled Colombia's proven gas reserves.

Centragas, an affiliate of Enron Corp. of Houston, is building a $217 million, 357-mile natural gas pipeline. Fluor Daniel, another U.S. company, is part of an international consortium that has won a $310 million contract to build a second 215-mile-long branch of a national gas-pipeline network.

Still, the high cost of doing business in Colombia dampens interest in oil exploration. According to Byron E. Grote, Latin America director for British Petroleum, the Colombian government takes up to 90 percent of the value of each barrel pumped by his company. The government's revenue comes from Ecopetrol's production-sharing agreements and from corporate-income and other taxes.

The Colombian Oil Association, which represents 18 major Western companies, in a recent study of foreign investments, concluded that Colombia "is not internationally competitive to attract risk investments."

Since 1988, seismic studies conducted by private oil companies in Colombia have dropped by about two-thirds. The number of wildcat exploratory wells drilled has also dropped, to about a dozen last year from 52 in 1988.

The disillusionment of many foreigners with Colombia's oil conditions became clear last July when Colombia held its first auction of exploration lots. The Mines and Energy Ministry invited 150 companies to take part. Only three companies, all of them already operating in Colombia, submitted bids. Nowadays, the republics of the former Soviet Union as well as China, Vietnam and Cuba are all open to foreign oil exploration.

Colombian President Ernesto Samper Pizano seems to be listening to the oil companies' complaints. He plans to submit to the nation's Congress a bill that would exempt new oil operations from a so-called war tax of $1 a barrel on production.

The tax, enacted in 1992, helps pay for the army's defense of oil operations — favorite targets of Colombia's leftist rural guerrillas, who demand nationalization of the oil industry and more spending for social programs in areas where oil is produced.

'The government wants the oil money for social development.'
— Unidentified president, major Western oil company

Last month, the government announced that Ecopetrol would also pay more of the exploration costs incurred by its private partners. Ismael Enrique Arenas, an Ecopetrol vice president, said foreign companies are now negotiating for about 10 exploration and production lots.

The test of the new operating environment will come this summer, when Ecopetrol is to hold Colombia's second international auction of exploration lots.

Oil executives who visited the remote Taumarena processing facility were divided about the effects of the new measures.

'It is definitely a move in the right direction," said Steven Sparks, general manager of the Colombian subsidiary of Helmerich & Payne, an Oklahoma drilling company.

]But the president of a major Western oil company operating in Colombia was cautious, saying: "The government wants the oil money for social development. The war tax is being eliminated, but a new finance minister could come along with something new."

Area companies win AOSC safety awards

DALLAS - Globe Well Service of Big Lake, Great Basin Well Service Co. of Odessa, Pool Co. of San Angelo and Pride Petroleum Services Inc. of Midland were recently honored for outstanding accident prevention in oilwell servicing operations for 1994 by the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors.

The AOSC safety awards were presented in conjunction with the association's 1995 National Winter Meeting in Houston in February.

Globe Well Service received its second consecutive Gold Award in Group IV, 200,001 to 500,000 manhours. The company has also received five other safety awards from the AOSC in recent years. Globe operates eight rigs and has operations in Big Lake and Iraan.

Great Basin Well Service received a President's Recognition award in Group II, 50,001 to 100,000 manhours. The company operates a fleet of seven rigs based in Odessa.

Pool Co. also received a Gold Award in Group V, over 500,000 manhours. This is the eighth consecutive year that the Houston-based company has been honored by the AOSC for its safety success. Pool has operations in Andrews, Big Lake, Fort Stockton, Kermit, Midland, Odessa and San Angelo and Hobbs, N.M.

Pride received a Bronze Award in Group V. The company also won a Bronze Award in 1991. Pride is based in Houston and has operations in Andrews, Big Lake,, Big Spring, Crane, Eldorado, McCamey, Midlnad, Monahans and Odessa.

Well servicing companies representing 1,720 wsell servicing rigs and reporting nearly 24 million manhours worked participated in the association's safety awards program by following strict reporting guidelines. Awards were presented in five groups according to the number of manhours worked.

"The well servicing industry is definitely committed to safety. It is a segment of the entire oil and gas industry that is one of the most vulnerable to accidents because of the nature of the work and the complexity of the equipment," said AOSC President Mike McDermett of Cobra Industries Inc., Hobbs, N.M. "The companies participating in this program are to be commended for their commitment to reducing accidents and creating a safer work environnment for their employees."

The goal of AOSC's Accident Statistics Program is to prevent accidents through awareness and identification of potential problem areas in well servicing operations.

The Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors is an international trade organization which represents well servicing contractors who operate workover/well servicing rigs, mobile production equipment used to complete, workover and service producing oil and gas wells. In addition to contractors, the AOSC's membership includes companies that manufacture and supply equipment, products and services to the oil production industry.

Tom Brown Inc. reduces net loss reported in 1994

Tom Brown Inc. reported a net loss of $160,000 or 1 cent per share on revenues of $29,071,000 for the 12 months ended December 31, 1994 as compared to a net loss of $2,318,000 or 19 cents per share on revenues of $28,708,000 for 1993.

Cash flow - net loss before exploration expense, impairments of leasehold costs, non-cash option plan compensation expense and depreciation, depletion and amortization expense - was $9,429,000 for 1994 as compared to $9,743,000 in 1993. The company continued to curtail gas production throughout 1994 in response to lower than expected gas prices.

The company reported a net loss of $1,208,000 or 8 cents per share on revenues of $6,366,000 for the three months ended December 31, 1994 compared to a net loss of $579,000 or 4 cents per share on revenues of $8,506,000 in the same period of 1993. Included in the fourth quarter results was a charge of $700,000 for 3-D seismic on one of the company's option acreage blocks in the Wind River Basin in Wyoming.

Donald L. Evans, chairman and chief executive officer, stated that 1994 was a very successful year for the company as capital expenditures of $23 million added significant levels of both gas and oil reserves at a finding cost of 28 cents per Mcf equivalent. As previously reported, reserves increased 37 percent to 207 billion cubic feet equivalent representing a reserve replacement of 700 percent more than 1994 production. The company's financial position remains strong with a sizable cash position and no debt outstanding.

Parallel Petroleum says revenues up 36 percent

MIDLAND—Parallel Petroleum Corp. announced a 36 percent increase in oil and gas revenues for the year ended December 31, 1994, compared to the prior year.

Oil and gas revenues increased to $4.7 million from $3.4 million, while operating income increased to $1.3 million from $877,000. Net income in 1994 was $444,000, compared to $328,000 for the prior year.

In 1993 the Company charged off $48,000 from the cumulative effect of an accounting change.

During 1994, the Company's production of natural gas increased by 57 percent to 1.4 billion cubic feet from 889 million the prior year; however, average sale prices declined 10 percent to $1.68 per Mcf from $1.86 in 1993.

Oil production increased by 41 percent to 149,000 barrels from 106,000 in 1993, while average sale prices decreased to $15.81 per barrel from $16.86 in 1993.

The Company's proved natural gas reserves increased 13 percent to 21.6 billion cubic feet from 19.1 billion at year-end 1993. Proved oil reserves declined slightly to 1.57 million barrels from 1.61 million a year earlier.

Larry C. Oldham, President of Parallel, attributed the revenue gains in 1994 primarily to a full year of production from the Company's oil wells in Howard County, Texas, and production from three gas wells in Jackson County, Texas, onshore the Texas Gulf Coast.

Enron CEO testifies on OPIC, export bank

HOUSTON—Enron Corp. Chairman and CEO Kenneth L. Lay testified before the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Appropriations and Subcommittee on Foreign Operations on the role, effectiveness and appropriate levels of funding for the Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) and the U.S. Export Import Bank (EXIM).

As one of the world's largest developers of private energy infrastructure projects in emerging markets, Enron seeks significant funding from public finance agencies. A serious shortfall in lending capacity from these agencies has developed even though industry estimates indicate that energy projects to be built in developing countries should total about $625 billion over the next ten years. The amount that actually will be built will depend upon how much equity capital and lending capacity can be marshaled to finance it, Lay noted.

"U.S. companies should win a major share of these projects due to the competitive edge they hold and because they're willing to risk more of their own money to develop the project plans, negotiate contracts and win approval," Lay said. "But as competitive factors tighten and as bid processes increase the pressures on project costs and margins, financing is becoming absolutely pivotal."

Enron has projects that could require financing in excess of $5 billion in each 1995 and 1996 and in excess of $7 billion in 1997 (depending upon the outcome of negotiations or bids submitted), but the company and the energy industry face a serious shortfall in lending capacity to draw upon from OPIC and EXIM, Lay noted. OPIC's 1994 funding capacity was $1 billion and is estimated at $1.36 billion in 1995. EXIM's 1994 funding capacity was $14.88 billion and is estimated at $18 billion for 1995.

"Enron or any one of its competitors could exhaust more than OPIC's total core lending capacity for 1995 or a significant portion of EXIM's," Lay said. "The independent power industry in total could use much or all of the existing lending capacity of OPIC, EXIM and some other finance agencies combined. We prefer to use all U.S. sourcing as much as possible, but we can only do so to the extent financing is available here."

With these considerations in mind, but in light of the severe budget pressures facing the Committee on Appropriations, Lay recommended that fiscal year 1996 appropriations for OPIC must be at least $110 million, to support about $3.6 billion in core lending plus operating funds for several additional loan officers, and $850 million for EXIM to support about $21 billion for similar purposes.

"About 25 percent to 30 percent of each infrastructure project's total costs will be covered by cash equity from the private sponsors," Lay noted. "The remaining 70 percent to 75 percent must come from debt. Given the huge sums involved, the total debt needed for a project must usually be assembled from several sources. OPIC and EXIM are the mainstays among these sources."

Lay pointed to the strength of the financing agencies based on their ability to lend $20-$40 for each $1 of appropriations and by their ability to minimize operating costs.

"OPIC and EXIM's administrative costs per program dollar are about one-tenth or less of traditional foreign aid activities at AID," Lay said. "If anything, the finance agencies are doing too much with too little and are stretched to the breaking point. The selective addition of a few more loan officers at each agency is very much needed. "Bottom line performance is also strong. OPIC made profits of $160 million and $166 million in 1993 and 1994, respectively.

"These profits are nearly triple the amount of increase in appropriation we are seeking for OPIC in 1996," Lay said. "The total amount could be more than covered if OPIC were simply allowed to keep its own profits rather than having to return them to the Treasury and seek fresh appropriations each year. "EXIM's problem loan rate is less than 2 percent and it takes a very conservative approach by setting aside very high reserves and returning the unneeded portions to the Treasury, Lay noted.

One of the reasons the agencies have been able to record these positive results is that companies such as Enron who use them pay market-equivalent rates for the financing, Lay said.

"We think market-equivalent pricing by the public finance agencies makes good sense, and we support it," he said. "We are not seeking concessionary terms; we are seeking the sheer availability of sufficient lending capacity."

Enron Corp., one of the world's leading integrated natural gas companies with approximately $12 billion in assets, operates one of the largest natural gas transmission systems in the world totaling 44,000 miles on two continents; is the largest purchaser and marketer of long-term natural gas supplies in North America; produces and markets natural gas liquids worldwide; owns 80 percent of Enron Oil & Gas Company, one of the largest independent (non-integrated) exploration and production companies in the United States; and is one of the largest independent developers and producers of electricity in the world. Enron Corp. is traded under the ticker symbol, "ENE."

Texas Activity

The Texas Railroad Commission issued a total of 914 original drilling permits in February f1995, compared to 970 in February 1994. The total included 651 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 44 to reenter existing well bores and 219 recompletions. There were 186 new oil and gas well permits issued in the Midland area and 70 in the Lubbock area, which the Midland RRC office overseas. Total drilng permits issued in 1995 year-to-date is 1,770, an 8 percent increase from the 1,621 issued during the same period of 1994. Operators reported 313 gas, 340 oil and 30 injection and other completions in February, compared to 258 gas, 348 oi. and 25 injectionand other completions during February 1994. There were 63 oil and 10 gas completions in the Midland area and 41 oil and no gas completions in the Lubbock area. For the first two months of 1995, operators have reported 1,317 well completions, up 3 percent from 1,278 in the same period last year.

NAMEDROPPING

Pitts

GARY PITTS has joined Henry Petroleum Corp. as manager of acquisitions. He has over 20 years experience in the oil and gas industry, including working as an interpretational geophysicist/explorationist, regional geologist, exploration/exploitation manager and executive vice president operations for U.S. companies to vice president and attorney in fact in charge of North America for the Finnish national oil company, Neste Oy. His experience has taken him to every major U.S. producing basin, including Alaska, both offshore and onshore.

The board of directors of Phillips Petroleum Co. has elected KATHYRN C. TURNER as a new outside director.

Her election brings to 15 the number of directors, of which 11 are outside directors.

Turner is the founder, chairperson and chief executive officer of Standard Technology Inc., a high-tech engineering and manufacturing firm headquartered in Rockville, Md.

Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company (PEPL), a subsidiary of Panhandle Eastern Corporation, has named two new division managers.

ROGER SEGURA who has been division manager at Indianapolis, will assume his duties as division manager in Liberal, Kan. immediately. He joined the company in 1980 as a project coordinator with subsidiary WyoCoal Gas in Wyoming. H was named director of transmission services in 1989 and division manager in 1990.

MARK RYAN, who was director of transmission services for subsidiary Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., will replace Segura as division manager in Indianapolis. He joined the company in 1977 as an assistant engineer and became director of transmission services at the company's Houston headquarters in 1992.

MEETINGS

WTGS to host Tulsa consulting geologist

The West Texas Geological Society will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Bill McBee, whose topic will be "A Structural and Stratigraphic Syntheis of Events in the Region of the Intersection of the Arbuckle and Ouachita Structural Systems in Oklahoma."

The term "Oklahoma megashear" is proposed as a more appropriate name for the intensely faulted and folded west-northwest trending tectonic belt in southern Oklahoma, McBee says. The system extends both east-southeastward and west-northwestward to opposite margins of ancient Laurentia in northeastern Texas and central Utah, respectively.

The two systems had entirely different origins and stress fields and, although for a short time they were contemporaneous in activity, they were completely independent. The short-lived, thin skin Ouachita event had little, if any, structural influence on the long-lived, crustal scale megashear (Arbuckle) event.

McBee began his career with Chevron in 1948, working there until 1967 when he went to Houston with Monsanto and later to Calgary with Sinclair. From 1969 to 1980 he worked for Arco as division development geologist or leading a development geology team. He retired to consulting in 1980 and lives in Tulsa.

Cost of the luncheon is $7 and reservations can be made by calling 683-1573.

Accountants set Employer Appreciation night

The Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin will hold its annual Employers Appreciation night Tuesday at the Petroleum Club. The meeting will begin with social hour at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:45 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Robert Kiker, executive director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

As part of the meeting, the company of the year award will be presented.

Chevron, Nigeria award Escravos Gas contracts

SAN FRANCISCO—Chevron reached a significant milestone in the development of the Escravos Gas Project as the company awarded four contracts for construction of the onshore and offshore facilities for the project.

The contracts are valued at approximately $320 million (U.S.). Chevron Nigeria Limited holds a 40 percent interest in the project, and is operator for itself and its joint-venture partner, the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (NNPC), which holds the remaining 60 percent interest.

Richard Matzke, president of Chevron Overseas Petroleum, said today at signing ceremonies in Lagos that construction on the facilities will begin immediately. "The Escravos Gas Project is a testimony to the commitment of the long-term relationship between Chevron and the NNPC, and a significant milestone in the development of Nigeria's natural resources," Matzke said.

The Escravos Gas Project (EGP) represents Phase One of a multi-phase gas utilization program begun in 1992, and targeted for completion in 2006. EGP will gather and process natural gas now being flared in the Okan and Mefa offshore oil fields, where it is produced in association with crude oil. Phase One is expected to come onstream in 1997.

"The gas utilization program will substantially broaden Nigeria's revenue base through the economic utilization of part of Nigeria's gas reserve," said Bill Edman, managing director of Chevron Nigeria Limited, "which for this joint venture alone is in excess of 17 trillion cubic feet." Edman noted that the Escravos project will "extend the frontiers of Nigeria's oil industry," by utilizing the associated gas to generate electric power, and exporting the liquefied petroleum gas.

The four contracts cover construction of most of the equipment necessary for start-up of EGP: the onshore and offshore facilities, the compressors, and the floating storage and off-loading vessel.

"The Escravos Gas Project is the first major effort by an oil company to address the environmental concerns of offshore gas flaring in Nigeria," said Chief M. A. Olorunfemi, Executive Director of the National Petroleum Investment and Management Services.

Santa Fe Energy, partners announce Indonesian find

HOUSTON—Santa Fe Energy Resources, together with partners Anadarko Petroleum Corp. and Kerr-McGee Corp., announced a new field wildcat discovery on its Jabung Block located in Central Sumatra, Indonesia.

The North Geragai No. 1, the first well drilled on the license by Santa Fe Energy Resources and its partners, tested at combined rates of 5,100 barrels of oil per day, plus 30 million cubic feet of gas and 350 barrels of condensate per day from multiple intervals.

Additional reserve potential is indicated in oil or gas sands which were not tested.

"This well appears to have at least three potentially significant productive intervals", said James L. Payne, Chairman and CEO of Santa Fe Energy Resources. "We will test additional zones and determine the areal extent of the reservoirs through our delineation drilling which will begin later this year. In the meantime, we will be directing our exploratory efforts toward our NE Betara prospect, located approximately 25 miles northwest of this discovery, which we will begin drilling in May", he added.

One of the oil zones in the Geragai well was perforated between 5,300 and 5,333 feet and flowed 2,700 barrels of 43 API gravity oil per day, plus 1.3 million cubic feet of gas per day through a 32/64 inch choke. One of the gas zones, perforated from 4,100 to 4,170 feet, demonstrated exceptional productivity by flowing at a rate of 9.1 million cubic of gas and 150 barrels of condensate per day through a 40/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1,267 pounds per square inch. The calculated absolute open flow rate for this gas zone was 325 million cubic feet per day.

The Geragai discovery and the Betara prospect are located on Santa Fe Energy's Jabung Block, an area of approximately two million acres situated within the prolific oil producing province of Central Sumatra. The nearest shipping point for oil would be on the coast of the Java Sea, some twelve miles to the north. Two natural gas pipelines are planned to traverse the area, the first of which is scheduled for completion in 1997.

Santa Fe Energy Resources, Southeast Asia, a wholly owned subsidiary of Houston, Texas based Santa Fe Energy Resources, is operator under the Indonesian Production Sharing Contract.

Gas storage partnership formed

Tejas Power Corp. of Houston said it has formed a new partnership called Market Hub Partners L.P. with four other companies, and that it contributed its interests in five natural gas storage projects for a 66 percent limited partnership interest in the new venture.

The other limited partners, which agreed to contribute a total of $45 million in cash through 1996, are NIPSCO Industries Inc., New Jersey Resources Corp. and DPL Inc. The fourth participant doesn't want to be named, according to an SEC filing.

Conoco joins joint venture in Venezuela

HOUSTON—Conoco is one of three companies selected to negotiate a joint venture with Bitumenes Orinoco S.A. (Bitor), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Petroleos de Venezuela (PDVSA), to increase Venezuelan production and marketing of Orimulsion(R).

Orimulsion(R) is a boiler fuel comprised of 30 percent water and 70 percent bitumen emulsion produced from the Orinoco belt in Venezuela and is used by the electric power generation industry in lieu of conventional fuel oils. The majority of the production from the venture will be sold to Florida Power and Light. The venture also will focus on developing new international sales of the fuel.

Conoco was selected from among 30 international companies competing for the Orimulsion(R) project. Other partners will include Norway's state-owned Statoil and a consortium formed by the Venezuela engineering firm Janesta and the Andean Multinational company Distral Termica.

HS Resources posts record year

SAN FRANCISCO—Corporate Year-to-Year Results — HS Resources Inc. announced record levels of production, reserves, revenues, and operating cash flow for 1994. On a year to year comparison, production increased 47 percent, from 3.4 million equivalent barrels (MMboe) to 5.0 MMboe. Over the same period, reserves increased to 62.5 MMboe, replacing 182 percent of production. Revenues grew 27 percent, from $47.5 million to $60.4 million, while operating cash flow was up 12 percent, from $31.5 million to $35.2 million. Earnings declined from $10.1 million to $6.3 million, reflecting substantially lower commodity prices and increased allowances for depletion, depreciation, and amortization.

Per Share Year-to-Year Results

Per share net income was down 42 percent, from $0.92 to $0.53, reflecting lower earnings and the larger number of shares outstanding following the company's sale of 1,195,000 shares of common stock in November of 1993. Despite these factors, however, the company generated record per share operating cash flow of $3.00, up 4 percent from $2.88 for the prior year. "We are pleased to report that, despite low product prices, we have been able to increase operating cash flow and maintain our pattern of growth," said P. Michael Highum, President. He added, "Once again we should be near the top of the industry in operational efficiency, a position from which we should benefit in this low gas price environment."

Operations Summary

During the year, the company drilled 236 gross wells, making it one of the most active operators in the Rocky Mountain region. Approximately 163 of these were low risk development wells in Wattenberg Field, while 53 were a nearly equal mix of development and exploratory wells drilled in the Denver-Julesberg Basin outside Wattenberg Field (the "Greater D-J Basin"). Of the 53 wells drilled in the Greater D-J Basin, 41 were completed as producers for a 77 percent success rate. The remaining 20 wells were related to exploration in the company's other project areas.

During the year, the company made extensive use of 3-D seismic in the Greater D-J Basin and the Williston Basin. In the Greater D-J Basin, the company used 3-D seismic to image channel reservoirs which, in one case, resulted in a discovery and three successful development wells. As of mid-March, these four wells were flowing at a combined daily rate of over 950 gross equivalent barrels. In the Williston Basin, the company acquired approximately 120 square miles of 3-D seismic, resulting in two discovery wells and four offsetting development wells. Both programs have identified new exploration leads for 1995.

HS Resources also entered into a new project area, the Greater Green River Basin. Centrally located in southwest Wyoming's natural gas province, HS Resources now has 71,000 net undeveloped acres in the Basin. The first phase of the company's Green River Basin activity will focus on the Rock Springs Uplift, an area where the company expects to pursue numerous exploration and development opportunities during 1995.

Reserves

According to SEC established guidelines which use year-end product prices, the company reported proved reserves, as of Dec. 31, 1994, of 265.3 billion cubic feet of gas and 18.3 million barrels of oil, or 62.5 MMboe (pre-tax present value, discounted at 10 percent, of $230.3 million). The year's reserve additions of approximately 9.1 MMboe replaced 182 percent of 1994 production. Jim Duffy, Chief Financial Officer, said, "We are pleased to have replaced over 180 percent of our production, despite the impact of low product prices and the nature of our 1994 drilling program which focused on bringing previously booked proved undeveloped reserves into production. At year-end 1994, our proved developed reserves were over 6.3 MMboe greater than at the end of 1993. We fully expect the 1995 capital program to result in new reserve additions and production growth from both our existing and emerging projects."

HS Resources Inc., is one of the most active independent oil and gas exploration and development companies in the Rocky Mountain region. HS Resources' stock is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol "HSE."

Patterson reports well completions

SNYDER -- Patterson Energy, Inc. announced the successful completion of three significant oil wells in Grimes and Garza Counties, Texas.

In the Austin Chalk area of South Texas, Patterson completed two Grimes County dual lateral oil wells in Buda and Georgetown formations in the Iola Field. The Norwood No. 1 well, which was completed on March 3, 1995, produced more than 1,800 barrels of oil equivalent (BOE) per day during the first 17 days of production and continues to flow at rates in excess of 1,200 BOE per day. Patterson has a 17.575% working interest in the Norwood No. 1 well. Patterson's second completion, the Davis No. 1 well, was placed on production on March 6, 1995 and has been producing at rates in excess of 800 BOE per day. Patterson has an 11% working interest in the Davis well. With the completion of the Norwood and Davis wells, Patterson has participated in a total of five dual lateral wells in the Austin Chalk, Buda and Georgetown formations. The Company plans additional drilling in the Iola area of Grimes County, where the Company has interests in approximately 8,000 gross acres (2,280 net acres).

In the Permian Basin of West Texas, Patterson reported the completion of a field extension discovery well in the Trabow Field in Garza County. The Jack No. 1 well was drilled to a total depth of 8,352 feet and completed in the Ellenburger formation. The well, in which Patterson has a 38.75% working interest, is currently being tested at a daily rate of 120 barrels of oil and 60,000 cubic feet of natural gas on an 8/64" choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 600 pounds per square inch. The Jack No. 1 well is the first of four possible drilling locations in the Trabow Field identified by recently acquired 3-D seismic data.

Patterson Energy, Inc. is a Snyder, Texas based energy company engaged in contract drilling and the exploration, development and production of oil and natural gas. Patterson operates 22 fully equipped land-based drilling rigs in West and South Texas and owns oil and gas properties in the same areas. The Company's common stock and redeemable warrants are traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbols "PTEN" and "PTENW", respectively.

Mobil to add unit to Australian refinery

FAIRFAX, Va.—Mobil Corp. announced that a project to build a new $150 million fluid catalytic cracker (FCC) at its Altona refinery, near Melbourne, has received approval from the Australian Environmental Protection Agency and construction is now underway.

The 108 thousand-barrel-per-day (TBD) Altona refinery is undergoing a thorough modernization program and the new 23 TBD FCC is scheduled to be streamed before the end of 1996.

Catalytic Crackers use catalysts to break down heavy gas oil and residual feedstock into lighter products. The new unit will increase the proportion of high value products extracted from each barrel of crude oil entering the refinery.

"This investment reflects Mobil's continuing confidence in our business in Australia and will further strengthen refining profitability and our competitive position," said H. R. Cramer, president of Mobil Asia Pacific Inc., a unit of Mobil Corporation.

Toyo Engineering is the prime contractor for the Australian project. The Japanese engineering firm also constructed a similar unit which was recently commissioned at Mobil's jointly-owned KPI Chiba refinery in Japan. Toyo has now been involved in a number of successful projects with Mobil.

Pride Petroleum finals X-Pert acquisition

HOUSTON—Pride Petroleum Services, Inc. announced that it has completed the acquisition of X-Pert Enterprises, Inc. X-Pert operates 35 well servicing rigs in New Mexico and also provides lease maintenance services to oilfield operators.

Ray H. Tolson, chairman and chief executive officer of Pride stated, "The combination of our Permian Basin operations with that of X-Pert will make us a stronger and more efficient competitor in the region. We believe that the quality of services offered by Pride in West Texas and New Mexico will be unsurpassed."

Pride Petroleum Services, Inc. headquartered in Houston, is one of the world's largest well servicing contractors. Of the company's 515 rigs, 432 are located on land in the United States, 22 are offshore in the Gulf of Mexico and 61 are in Argentina, Venezuela and Russia. Pride also provides contract drilling services in the international markets it serves.

BRIEFS

New Mexico selling royalty in methane wells

The State of New Mexico says it will sell its royalty interest in approximately 204 coal bed methane wells in northwest New Mexico.

The gas qualifies for tax credits, and the State has obtained a ruling from the Internal Revenue Service on certain aspects of the sale.

The State's interest will be sold directly to a single biddger who has sufficient knowledge and experience to evaluate and absorb the risk related to an investment of this nature. Sealed bids are due by May 15, 1995.

For more information or a brochure contact: New Mexico State Land Office; P.O. Box 1148; Santa Fe, New Mexico 07504-1148 or call 505 827-1148.

Earth Day celebration set for Albuquerque

The Artesia Chapter of People for the West will host its 1995 Earth Day celebration at Mariposa Park in Albuquerque, on April 23.

The affair, which will feature several speakers, is designed to remind the public that other valuable resources, besides sagebrush lizards and spotted owls come from the earth. Last year's even, which was held at New Mexico's first oil well near Artesia, celebrated the oil and gas industry and its contributions to the state.

The Albuerque meeting will get underway with food and soft drinks at noon and will end with speeches on natural resources at 3 p.m. Those interested in helping sponsor the even or providing mass transportation to Albuerque may call Donna Fiebig, of Yates Petroleum at 505 748-4407.

Mobil announces offshore Guinea discovery

FAIRFAX, Va.—Mobil Corp. and United Meridian Corp. of Houston announced that subsidiaries have discovered oil on the Zafiro prospect offshore the Republic of Equatorial Guinea in West Africa. This marks the first significant oil discovery in Equatorial Guinea, which to date is producing only gas and condensate from the offshore Alba field.

The Zafiro-1 discovery well tested at rates exceeding 10,500 barrels of crude oil per day and 3.4 million cubic feet of gas per day. The tested interval is within the primary objective of the well, the Qua Iboe Formation. The well is on the 547,000- acre Block B, which is located about 18 miles from Mobil-operated Qua Iboe production in Nigeria. An appraisal drilling program is scheduled to begin in April to determine the extent of the Zafiro discovery and to assess its commercial viability.

This is the second wildcat well drilled on the block. The initial well, Delta-1, was a dry hole drilled on a geologically unrelated structure located about five miles southwest of the Zafiro discovery. The Delta-1 well was completed in December, 1994, and the Zafiro-1 wildcat commenced drilling on January 14, 1995.

Transcontinental Gas plans sunbelt expansion

HOUSTON—Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., a subsidiary of Transco Energy Co., plans to seek Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) approval for an expansion of its mainline system that will provide additional annual firm transportation capacity to serve markets in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina.

The proposed SunBelt Expansion Project is anticipated to begin providing service in 1997 with the incremental firm transportation capacity extending primarily from TGPL's station 65 to TGPL's station 145 near the South Carolina-North Carolina state border. The level of market commitment will determine the facilities, capacity and capital cost of the SunBelt Expansion.

TGPL will hold a 30-day open season beginning April 3 and ending May 2, during which it will accept nomination requests from shippers interested in the firm transportation capacity to be created by the SunBelt Expansion Project. An application seeking FERC approval of the expansion will be filed later this summer. Information regarding the service, projected rates and open season process may be obtained by contacting Jamie Craddock at 713/439-2541 or a customer services representative. General information about the open season is also available on TRANSIT(R), Transco's electronic bulletin board.

Camco sells STOP division to Total Safety

HOUSTON—Gary D. Nicholson, chairman, president and CEO of Camco International Inc. announced that Camco has sold its Safety Technology & Oilfield Protectors (STOP) division to Total Safety, Inc., a private company, in a cash asset purchase transaction. STOP provides toxic gas detection and safety equipment and training to the oilfield drilling industry. The STOP division accounted for less than 2 percent of Camco's consolidated 1994 revenues of $590 million.

Nicholson said, "STOP is an excellent organization but is not considered to be an integral component of our long term business strategy. In this transaction, Camco will realize the present value of the next 10 years of cash flow expected from this business."

Camco's trade names include Camco Coiled Tubing Services, Camco Products, Camco Wireline, Hycalog, Lawrence Technology, Reda, and Reed Tool. Camco International Inc. is a worldwide oilfield equipment and service company providing specialized products and services in drilling, well completions, production and well services.

Tesoro acquires KPL pipeline, marine terminal

SAN ANTONIO, Texas—Tesoro Petroleum Corporation announced that its Tesoro Alaska Petroleum Company subsidiary has acquired Kenai Pipe Line Company (KPL) through a $3 million stock purchase from Atlantic Richfield Company and Chevron Pipe Line Company.

KPL operates common-carrier pipeline and marine terminal facilities in the Kenai Peninsula area of Alaska. The KPL facilities are comprised of three major components: a marine terminal near Tesoro's Kenai refinery, the Middle Ground Shoal pipeline and the Swanson River pipeline.

The facilities, which include 23 total miles of pipeline, transfer crude oil from the Middle Ground Shoals and Swanson River oil fields, as well as the Soldotna Creek field, to the Tesoro refinery or onto tankers for shipment to other locations. Crude oil from the west side of Cook Inlet, from the Trans Alaskan Pipeline Valdez terminal and from other supply sources, can be unloaded from tankers at the KPL marine terminal for use in the refinery. In addition, the KPL facilities transfer refined products from Tesoro's refinery to vessels for delivery to various markets, and provide interim storage.

Tesoro Executive Vice President Gaylon Simmons said KPL is a logical addition to the company's Alaska facilities. "Our Kenai refinery has been KPL's principal customer. Owning these facilities, therefore, provides significant strategic benefits relating to both supply security and cost containment."

Tesoro Petroleum Corporation is a natural resource company engaged in petroleum refining and marketing, natural gas exploration and production, and wholesale marketing of fuel and lubricants.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Midland yields 245-barrel Fusselman strike

Staff Reports

A Fusselman discovery has been recorded in Midland County, eight miles southeast of Midland.

MURCHISON OIL & GAS INC. tested the No. 1 Golladay "T" to flow 245 barrels of 52.3 gravity condensate and 75 Mcfd on a one inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 30 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,877 to 11,880 ft., which had been acidized with 500 gallons of 10 percent acid and 1,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 12,000 ft. test, the well was drilled to 11,980 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 11,931 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,694 ft., include the Yates at 2,539 ft., San Andres at 4,249, Spraberry at 7,375, Wolfcamp at 8,920, Devonian at 11,307 and Fusselman at 11,859 ft.

Location is 1,695 ft. from east and 495 ft. from south lines of Section 48, Block 37, T&P survey, Abst. 995.

Conoco completes Strawn gas find

CONOCO INC. has gained a deeper pool Strawn gas discovery with recompletion of a former Wolfcamp 7400 producer in the Howard Glasscock field of Howard County, 25 miles southeast of Big Spring.

Conoco reentered the No. 22 Chalk Estate, testing it for a calculated absolute open flow of 885 Mcfd from perforations 7,585 to 7,716 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL acid and fractured with 29,442 gallons of gel and 104,000 lbs. sand.

Originally drilled to 8,000 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 7,899 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 7,585 ft. on kelly bushign elevation of 2,435 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 114, Block 29, W&NW survey, Abst. 1131.

The well was originally completed as a Wolfcamp 7400 producer in the Howard Glasscock field, tested in May 1986 to pump 55 barrels of 39.7 gravity crude and 55 Mcfd from perforations 7,302 to 7,388 ft.

Wolfcamp discovery pumps 125 barrels oil

Beneath 4,000 ft. San Andres production in the Wasson field of Yoakum County, two miles from nearest Wolfcamp discovery, ARCO PERMIAN has completed a Wolfcamp oil discovery, seven miles north of Denver City.

On potential test, the No. 1 Abilene Christian College pumped 125 barrels of 37.1 gravity crude, 5 Mcfd and 48 barrels of water from perforations 9,440 to 9,499 ft. The interval was acidized with 8,200 gallons of 20 percent acid and fractured with 15,000 gallons of gel.

Scheduled as a 10,900 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,940 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 10,678 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 3,644 ft., formation tops include the Rustler at 2,300 ft., Yates at 3,112, San Andres at 4,575, Abo at 7,770, Wolfcamp at 9,075 and Strawn at 10,368 ft.

Location is 1,738 ft. from north and 1,956 ft. from west lines of Section 673, Block D, John H. Gibson survey, Abst. 673.

Ellenburger discovery finaled in Upton County

J. CLEO THOMPSON has completed an Ellenburger discovery in Upton County, 3/8-mile southeast of the Wolfcamp discovery that opened the W. Richardson field, one mile east of Wolfcamp production in the Triumph field, 4.5 miles northwest of Rankin.

The No. 1 Richardson "3" was tested to pump 125 barrels of 50.9 gravity crude, 45 Mcfd and two barrels of water from open hole 11,460 to 11,523 ft.

Planned as an 11,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,523 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,460 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 2,517 ft., include the San Andres at 3,866 ft., Spraberry at 6,314, Strawn at 8,918, Devonian at 10,024, Fusselman at 10,824 and Ellenburger at 11,456 ft.

Location is 2,139 ft. from south and 1,776 ft. from west lines of Section 3, Block 2.5, TCRR survey, Abst. 386.

The operator has requested a field name of W. Richardson (Ellenburger) for the discovery.

The W. Richardson (Wolfcamp) field was discovered in September 1994 by the company's No. 1 Richardson, tested to flow 380 barrels of 45.1 gravity crude and 372 Mcfd on a 28/64 inch choke from perforations 8,264 to 8,283 ft.

Ector County field gets undesignated new pool

An undesignated new pool has been opened inthe York field of Ector County with recompletion of an Ellenburger producer in the field, four miles southeast of Penwell.

EXXON CO. U.S.A. plugged back the No. 3 R.L. York "B", testing it to pump 137 barrels of 39 gravity crude, 136 Mcfd and 69 barrels of water from perforations 10,156 to 10,216 ft.

Originally drilled to 12,521 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 12,985 ft.

Location is 1,974 ft. from south and 1,579 ft. from east lines of Section 14, Block 44, T-3-S, T&P survey, Abst. 574.

Atoka gas pay opened in Pecos County field

Atoka gas pay has been opened in the Waha field of Pecos County with recompletionof a former Devonian producer in the field, 29 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM INC. reentered the No. 6 Wayne Moore, testing it for a calculated absolute open flow of 160 Mcfd from perforations 10,030 to 10,065 ft.

Total depth is 18,001 ft. and the well was plugged back to 10,140 ft. A seven inch casing liner was hung from 10,206 to 12,028 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and west lines of Section 5, Block C-3, PSL survey, Abst. 5104.

The operator has requested a field designationof Waha (Atoka) for the find.

IP Petroleum opens pay in Winkler field

IP PETROLEUM CO. INC. has opened 7000 oil production in the War-Wink East field of Winkler County, five miles southwest of Wink.

IP tested the No. 2 University "44" to pump 100 barrels of 42.4 gravity crude, 23 Mcfd and 244 barrels of water from perforations 7,073 to 7,082 ft. The interval was acidized with 750 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 10,000 gallons of gel and 31,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Permitted as a 7,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,200 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 7,156 ft.

Formation toips, on ground elevation of 2,745 ft., include the Delaware Limestone at 4,966 ft., Cherry Canyon at 5,890, Manzanita at 6,167, Lower Cherry Canyon at 6,879 and Brushy Canyon at 7,149 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and east lines of Section 44, Block 21, ULS survey.

The operator has requested a field designation of War-Wink East (7000) for the discovery.

Eddy County yields one-barrel Yates find

A modest Yates discovery has been recorded in Eddy County, N.M.

Ray Westall tested the No. 10 Myra Myrtle to pump one barrels of crude from unreported Yates perforations.

Total depth is 850 ft.

Location is 760 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 9, T21s, R27e.

Conoco forms new electrical power unit

HOUSTON (AP) — Conoco Inc. said it was forming a new business unit to pursue projects in the electrical power market.

Conoco Power will have access to Conoco's resources and those of DuPont, Conoco's parent company. That will include access to a variety of low-cost fuels like natural gas, fuel coke and coalbed methane.

Conoco Power will be headed by Donald M. Condon Jr., who has managed businesses and major acquisition and disposition negotiations for both the chemicals and petroleum businesses of DuPont.

The unit will be based in Houston with employees in Houston and London.

Mitchell Energy to buy interest in East Texas wells

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. said it has agreed to buy interests in 78 East Texas oil and gas wells for $5.8 million.

The company also said that through a partnership it has closed on the acquisition of a 210-mile gas gathering system in West Texas for $2.3 million cash and a minority interest in a gas processing plant.

Mitchell Energy has sold more than $175 million in assets during the last 12 months although the company remains in the market for acquisitions, chairman George P. Mitchell said.

The agreement to buy the East Texas producing properties is with Pennzoil Exploration and Production Co. Average daily net production from those interests is 2.4 million cubic feet of gas and 114 barrels of oil.

C&L Processors, a partnership between Mitchell Energy and Conoco Inc., acquired the Eskota gas gathering system in West Texas from Sid Richardson Gasoline.

Butterflies, along with other insects, pollinate more than 65 percent of the world's flowering plants. The best butterfly nectar plants have tubular flowers of just the right length — no longer than the butterfly's proboscis. Here, a Monarch butterfly perches on a Butter Daisy.

It's About the Birds and the Bees

Conservation and ecology are important concepts in the second half of the 20th century. Donating money to support these causes is worthy, but many individuals want be more personally involved and aren't sure where to start.

Could be the first place to look is right in your own backyard. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) has a program that encourages property owners to open wildlife havens at home.

Texas Wildscapes, which began January 1994, now has more than 2,000 participants and nearly 300 of them have been certified by TPWD, according to information from that agency.

To be a part of Texas Wildscapes program, interested persons send $15 to the TPWD, and receive an information packet full of information about providing basics for good wildlife habitat, including food, water and cover.

Wildscapes work well for urban backyards, parks and schools, such as this garden pond.

Included in the packet are pamphlets about Texas plants and wildlife, booklets about how to attract wildlife to your garden, and information about which plants are native to which areas of the state.

After creating their wildlife sanctuaries, participants can register with TPWD, which will send each a certificate and an outdoor display sign. Certified wildscapes have at least 50 percent native plants and both food and water sources available to wildlife. Water sources can be a anything from a birdbath to a pond, according to the TPWD, and food sources can be anything from a fruit tree to a bird feeder.

Helping in a conservation effort doesn't have to involve huge amounts of space, time or money. Something as simple as a bird feeder can help.

Elena Cano, Wildscapes program coordinator, said "When someone sees a hummingbird drink from a feeder they hung, or a colorful songbird feeding in a fruit tree they planted, they are excited by the experience, but they also learn a direct connection between personal action and the benefits of conservation."

Wildscapes can be established in backyards, parks and schools, and also on larger properties, Ms. Cano said. "We have sites ranging from apartment balconies to small ranches."

FOR THOSE WHO would like to see exactly how the Wildscapes program works, the TPWD has set up 18 demonstration sites in Dallas and Houston, and more are planned, Ms. Cano said. Visitors to the sites learn firsthand how to provide places for wildlife to feed, drink and hide from predators. To arrange a visit to one of these sites, call (214) 293-3841 in Dallas or (713) 456-9350 in Houston.

The Wildscapes program is part of TPWD's newly-expanded Nongame and Urban Program. In 1993 the agency hired urban wildlife biologists for major metropolitan areas in the state, after census data showed that 82 percent of Texans live in just nine of these population centers.

To receive a Texas Wildscapes information packet, send a $15 check or money order to Texas Wildscapes, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas, 78744.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Former Midlander is nominated for Oscar

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Midlanders will be tuned in to the Academy Awards ceremony Monday evening in Los Angeles in great numbers, but no place will they be watching with such interest than at the home of Bea and R. Searle McGrath.

McKnight-Harrison

The McGraths' son, Doug, has been nominated for an Oscar in the Best Original Screenplay category for "Bullets Over Broadway," along with his collaborator, Woody Allen. The movie is a Roaring Twenties comedy.

Although Doug will be present for the awards ceremony, Woody will remain in New York and continue with his Monday night tradition of playing his clarinet at Michael's Pub. He could not be lured into going to the Oscars.

Doug was a member of Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players while attending Trinity School through the ninth grade. He then went on to graduate from The Choate School in Wallingford, Conn., and Princeton University. Doug joined the writing staff of "Saturday Night Live" in 1980 and has resided in New York City since that time.

A free-lance writer, Doug is known for "The Flapjack File," a satirical series on the Clinton White House, which appears in the New Republic. His work also can be found in other publications, including New York magazine.

In addition, his screenwriting credits include the remake of "Born Yesterday," starring Melanie Griffith and Don Johnson. He continues to write screenplays, having completed an adaptation of Jane Austen's "Emma" and "Green Dolphin Country," a remake of a 1947 Donna Reed-Lana Turner picture about two women in love with the same man.

BETTY AND PETE GRAHAM were in New York recently to attend the opening night performance of Strauss's "Der Rosenkavalier" at the Metropolitan Opera. Their daughter, mezzo-soprano Susan Graham, sang the title role.

Also sharing the exciting evening were Susan's brother and sister and their spouses, Alan and Sally Graham of Seattle, Wash., and Janet and John Jaquess of Roswell, N.M. Afterward, they were special guests at the cast party in the Grand Tier dining room.

Prior to her performance in New York, Susan was Dorabella in Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" at Royal Opera/Covent Garden in London. Upcoming recitals and recordings in Vienna, Sidney and Boston will be followed by the opera "Damnation of Faust," in which Susan will sing the role of Marguerte at La Scala in Milan, Italy, in May.

While in the Big Apple, the Grahams also enjoyed the hit musical, Gershwin's "Crazy for You," at the Schubert Theater.

AN EVENING in San Antonio to see "Phantom of the Opera" was the highlight of a recent outing to the Texas Hill Country for a group of Midland women.

Members of a local bridge group, some of whom have played bridge together almost 40 eyars, were guests in Jan and C.H. Brockett's home at Sunrise Beach on Lake LBJ. They were Mary (Mrs. Paul) Friemel, Polly (Mrs. Pat) Mackey, Lou (Mrs. Don) Matson, Ted Meyers, Ruth Roberts, Tommie (Mrs. Richard) Rowan and Liz (Mrs. Jack) Russell. Pat (Mrs. Bob) Meinzer of Austin and former Midlander Bobbie (Mrs. Bill) Simmons of Sunrise Beach joined the group for their chartered van ride to San Antonio for dinner and the spectacular production of "Phantom."

Shopping sightseeing, and of course, bridge playing rounded out the pleasure trip.

OUR HATS ARE OFF to the Midland Community Concerts Association, which has been bringing outstanding performing arts to our town for the past 48 years.

Most recently, the Bulgarian Children's Choir charmed the season ticketholders and their guests at a concert in the Midland High School auditorium. With their obvious joy of singing, their extraordinary voices and delightful ways, the young people proved that music is indeed the universal language. Their program included folk songs, hymns and music by the masters.

Among those enjoying the evening were Annalon and Billy Gilbreath, Dot and Greg Keys, Carolyn Foret, Judia and Dan Foreman and Shirley Ireland with her granddaughter, Holly Hill.

Finishing out the year will be pianist and humorist Dale Gonyea on April 6.

Francine Weaver, the newly-elected president of the association, tells us that the 1995-96 season promises to be top-notch. It will include "Forever Plaid," an off-Broadway hit featuring music of the Fifties; The Magic of Ballroom with the Fred Astaire Studio Dancers and Orchestra conducted by Ken Moulton; The Halem Spiritual Ensemble, comprised of six singers and two instrumentalists, and the Imperial Chinese Acrobats and Magicians, formed in 1950 and now one of China's foremost performing troupes.

Memberships will be available through the "Celebraton of the Arts" in May.

Gourmet recipes created for finicky felines

By Diane White
N.Y. Times News Service

Chicken — breast meat only — simmered until just done, not one second more. Killer hates rubbery chicken. Sometimes I'd prepare a side order of his favorite vegetable, asparagus, lightly steamed, al dente.

Looking back, I think it was when I moved on to sauteed chicken livers — medium rare, pink but not too pink inside, with shallots — that things began to get out of hand. The situation threatened to go right over the edge when I acquired a new cookbook, "Purrfect Dishes: Whisker-licking and Nutritious Recipes for Your Favorite Feline."

The author, Teri Goodman, the Martha Stewart of the pet food world, is the owner of the San Francisco-based company Dandy Doggie, purveyors of gourmet treats for dogs and cats. Her book, which sells for $14.95, is handsomely produced. And no, it's not a joke. The book's dustjacket copy assures readers that each of the recipes is packed with "top-priority nutrients," has been tested for "gobbleability" and is "a snap to prepare."

Which recipe would I try first? Lamb and olive couscous looked interesting. Somehow it had never occurred to me to cook couscous for the cat. Lack of imagination on my part, I suppose.

Tartan Treats? "Share a quiet moment on a lazy afternoon with your best friend," Goodman suggests. "While you relax with a steaming cup of tea and a buttered scone, your cat will curl up beside you and happily munch a shortbread cookie made especially for him."

No he won't. He'll want my scone.

Chicken with mole sauce? Salmon quenelles with shrimp sauce? Maybe giblets and greens. Or turkey patties in parchment. Or broiled mackerel maki. Sushi for the cat? "Yes, traditional sushi is raw and risky," Goodman writes. "But I broil the mackerel to avoid the chance of contamination from microorganisms that can live in raw fish."

That's good. I wouldn't want Killer to take the same risk I do every time I eat sushi.

I made a list, went to the store and bought the ingredients — mackerel, rice, scallions, sesame seeds, seaweed. Then I propped Goodman's book open to pages 32 and 33 and followed the recipe. I cooked the rice and broiled the mackerel and set both aside to cool. I toasted the sesame seeds and chopped the scallions. When the mackerel reached room temperature, I removed the skin and diced it. I flaked the fish, making sure to remove all the little bones. I added the skin and the fish to the rice, poured on the broiling juices, and added the chopped scallions and the toasted sesame seeds.

At this point I realized that I had already spent more time preparing sushi for the cat than I had hoped to spend making dinner for the rest of the family. So much for this recipe being a snap to prepare. And I hadn't even started on the trickiest part, rolling the maki. If I made a habit of cooking for Killer the rest of us would have to live on Lean Cuisine. Or Fancy Feast.

I broiled the seaweed, placed it on a cutting board, spread the fish-rice mixture on it and began rolling. After a bit of difficulty I managed to roll it up and cut it into rounds. I put a few pieces of the maki on a little saucer and, since I didn't have any of that plastic grass they use in sushi bars, garnished it with a sprig of parsley. I bowed politely in the traditional manner, and offered it to Killer.

He sniffed it. Then he walked away.

The rest of the family thought it was pretty tasty, although we agreed it needed wasabi. Maybe I'll try the salmon quenelles with shrimp sauce next.

Farrar to compete at state level

Staff Reports

Linda L. Farrar, named Woman of the Year last fall by Uptown Chapter, Business and Professional Women, has completed the Individual Development Program sponsored by BPW, and competed at the district level on Saturday at both Woman of the Year and in the speech competition of Individual Development. She will compete at the state convention in June in Austin.

Linda Farrar

Woman of the Year competition highlights achievements in BPW activities, current career, contributions to women in general, community involvement, past achievements and significant awards and honors.

Competition in Individual Development involves completing 16 hours of course work designed to develop speaking abilities through participation in a variety of formal timed and impromptu speeches. Workshops on group and work relations, debate and interview skills, and parliamentary procedures are included.

Ms. Farrar has been involved with BPW since 1989. She is currently second vice president in charge of membership. She created, organized and moderated the Networking in the '90s Seminar, an educational fundraiser for BPW, for the past four years.

Ms. Farrar, an independent agent with New York Life, has degrees in business and geology from the University of Wyoming. She moved to Midland from Houston 10 years ago while working with Mobil Oil. She was a professional geologist and in management for 14 years in the oil industry, and opened her own business in 1988.

She is a member of the board of directors of Campfire for Boys and Girls and Leadership Midland Alumni Association. She is a two-time graduate of Dale Carnegie and a charter and founding member of Networking Professionals. She volunteers at Manor Park.

Scholarship contest announced

PLANO — JCPenney is having a nationwide contest, "Who's Arizona?", to find four young men and four young women, aged 13-21, to represent the company's "Arizona" brand image through scholastic ability, community and school involvement, and volunteerism. Each winner will receive a $10,000 college scholarship, and will be featured in the company's national newspaper advertising. Applications are available through April 29 at the Juniors' and Young Men's departments at JCPenney in Midland Park Mall.

TELEPHONE SKILLS WORKSHOP

Eileen Shenker has been a professional telemarketing and customer service representative for the past 18 years.

•Enhance customer service
•Build your company image
•Increase your sales

Everyone who comes in contact with your customers on the telephone will benefit from this upbeat program. Your staff will learn how vital they are in promoting a good company image, how to make your customers feel important, and how to increase sales.

Eileen's Workshop will cover:
1. Promoting a positive company image and first impressions
2. Voice and personality

Mother's love stronger than her child's anger

EDITORS NOTE: Erma Bombeck is on a one-week vacation. This column originally appeared in January 1976.

By Erma Bombeck

"You don't love me!"

How many times have your kids laid that one on you?

And how many times have you, as a parent, resisted the urge to tell them how much?

Bombeck

Someday, when my children are old enough to understand the logic that motivates a mother, I'll tell them.

I loved you enough to bug you about where you were going, with whom and what time you would get home.

I loved you enough to insist you buy a bike that you could afford with your own money.

I loved you enough to be silent and let you discover your friend was a creep.

I loved you enough to make you return a Milky Way with a bite out of it to a drugstore and confess, "I stole this."

I loved you enough to stand over you for two hours while you cleaned your bedroom, a job that would have taken me 15 minutes.

I loved you enough to say, "Yes, you can go to Disney World on Mother's Day."

I loved you enough to let you see anger, disappointment, disgust and tears in my eyes.

I loved you enough not to make excuses for your lack of respect or your bad manners.

I loved you enough to admit that I was wrong and ask your forgiveness.

I loved you enough to ignore what every other mother did or said.

I loved you enough to let you stumble, fall, hurt and fail.

I loved you enough to let you assume the responsibility for your own actions at age 6, 10 or 16.

I loved you enough to figure you would lie about the party being chaperoned, but forgave you for it — after discovering I was right.

I loved you enough to accept you for what you are, not what I wanted you to be.

But most of all, I loved you enough to say no when you hated me for it. That was the hardest part of all.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

West Texas gardeners' questions are answered

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

At this time of year, buds are popping, flowers are blooming, grass is greening and gardeners get the itch to dig in the dirt. Questions of all types begin rolling into the Extension office as eager gardeners begin to explore the immediate outdoors we called the "yard." Here is a sampling of some of the most common.

Benge-Frost

Question: Do I need to scalp my lawn to get the old, dead grass off? And when should I fertilize?

Answer: No. Scalping is a harmful practice that damages the grass crowns, stems and stolons. Scalping is done by setting the mower at its lowest setting in an attempt to remove dead grass. Done at this time of year can leave grass more vulnerable to freeze injury.

Instead of scalping, lower mower enough to take off dead grass clippings but not hit the grass crowns. If you have a thatch problem, you need to dethatch. Thatch is a layer of old stolons, crowns and rhizomes that is sometimes seen with some hybrid bermudas and St. Augustine. After it begins to get too thick, it interferes with water absorption, fertilizer applications, and other applications. Thatch can be removed by hand raking or using power equipment like a power rake or verticut machine. Fertilize your lawn after the second or third mowing.

Q: Do I need to aerate my lawn?

A: Normally, home lawns don't need aerating unless you've got a hard, compacted soil. Clay soils, lots of foot or vehicular traffic, construction-remodeling, and high sodium salts are just a few of the factors that might cause a hard, compacted surface. Athletic fields and golf courses are commonly aerated due to the foot and vehicular traffic.

If you really have a compacted soil, indicated by hard surface, poor grass growth, water run off, and poor water uptake, aeration is very helpful. This practice is offered by some lawn care companies, or you can sometimes rent the equipment needed. There are even a few hand tools available that will aerate.

Q: Should I set out may tomato and pepper plants right now?

A: You can, but be prepared to possibly lose them in a freeze. If you set these temperature-sensitive plants out now, either cover them with protective devices or be prepared to cover them if a freeze is predicted. Our last average (emphasis on the average) freeze date is April 1. Averages, of course, are based on historical weather records and is no guarantee we won't have a freeze on April 10 or 15, or who knows when.

The best thing to do is just wait. There's really not that much advantage to planting tomatoes and peppers before April 1. If you want to get a jump on the season, plant a few plants but protect them in plastic wrapped cages, hot caps or vented milk jugs until warmer weather. Keep a close eye on these in case day time temperatures get too hot, and be ready to vent the protective devices.

If you decide to wait, April 1-15 is the best time to plant tomatoes. Set peppers out about 10 days later.

Q: I've still got a tremendous aphid problem on my live oak, but I did notice several lady bugs on the tree. Should I spray?

A: I would still give it some time. Lady bird beetles, commonly called lady bugs, are eating aphids, and better yet, the lady bugs' immature larva are eating even more aphids. The immature form of the lady bird beetle looks like a miniature black alligator with a few bright spots of yellow or orange on them. They move fairly fast over plant tissue, hunting for aphids, their favorite food. Female lady bird beetles lay masses of yellow-orange spindle-shaped eggs.

Another hungry beneficial out there right now is the green lacewing. These are slender, light green insects with large, clear, highly netted wings that are held above the body at rest. The females lay distinctive stalked eggs that look like tiny, very slender Q-Tips standing on end with only one cotton wrapped end sticking up in the air. They are laid this way (up off the leaf 1/2 inch) because when the eggs hatch, siblings have no reservations about eating one another. The immature forms of this insect love eating aphids and do a great job. They look very much like the immature lady bird beetle, but light brown in color and with a vicious looking pair of jaws.

So take another look at your tree. It could be there are enough good bugs out there to begin reducing the aphid population. If you still have a big problem at the time new leaves are emerging, you may need to spray.

Q: I have worms on my cabbage. What can I do to control these without chemicals?

A: There's a product available through the garden centers called Bt, which stands for Bacillus thuringiensis, a bacteria that is lethal to worms and caterpillars (immature forms of moths and butterflies) but is harmless to people, pets, other insects, birds or plants.

These immature are generally heavy foliage feeders, but when they eat Bt, within a few minutes toxins bind with receptors in the gut lining, causing the worm to get a severe stomach ache and stop feeding. In a few days, the immature darkens and dies, which is an excellent way to control worms or caterpillars on edible and ornamental plants.

Q: I've been told I can spray cacodylic acid on my lawn and it will kill all the weeds — even my dandelions! What do you know about this?

A: Cacodylic acid (sold under the common trade name Phytar) is a non-selective, contact herbicide that burns or kills any green plant tissue it gets on. It does not move in the plant, so it can't be translocated down into the roots or anywhere else in the plant. It also has no soil residual so it can't be taken up by the roots. It can be sprayed on a dormant lawn to kill winter annual weeds, but it is very unlikely that it would kill a tough perennial weed like dandelions, because it would not be moved down to the roots.

I would not use it right now because lawns are much too green and active. You could easily damage your lawn.

Many of the weeds that are a problem in lawns right now are winter annuals and will die once hot weather gets here. You may want to just forget them and concentrate your efforts on getting the grass growing vigorously. Regular, frequent mowing, deep watering (when needed) and two or three fertilizations a year will get grass healthy and reduce your weed problems.

Q: When I drive around town, I see this spectacular, yellow blooming vine. What is this gorgeous plant?

A: Carolina yellow jessamine, (Gelsemium sempervirens), is an evergreen vine or mounding shrub. It has dark green, glossy leaves and slender, twining stems. This vine has no aerial roots or other attachments, but climbs by twining. In the late winter or early spring, it begins to bloom with clusters of bright yellow flowers in dense clusters. Flowers are funnel-shaped, about 1-inch across and 1-inch long. This plant is very showy, very early in the spring. This vine is more delicate and better behaved in its growth habits than many other vines. In other words, it won't pull down one side of your house or cover up a car.

Find out the best vines, ground covers, shrubs and trees, by attending the Home Landscape School 7 p.m. April 10, 11, 17 and 18 at the Confederate Air Force. This is an excellent, informative school for the do-it-yourselfer or anyone working with a professional.

This school will arm you with the information and the "how to" of having that beautiful home landscape. Preregistration is $25 per household and will cover the costs of your landscape packet. Call 687-1351 and 335-3071 for more information.

If you have questions about the lawn or garden, call your local county Extension office for information.

White chocolate adds 'pop' to favorite corn snack

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

Here's a different sort of sweet for upcoming Easter celebrations. This recipe is from the folks at Jiffy popcorn.

WHITE CHOCOLATE PECAN CORN

1 pop-and-serve (3½-ounce) bag popcorn, butter or natural flavor, popped, or 10 cups of popped corn
10 ounces white chocolate or almond bark, chopped
½ cup pecan halves

Place popped corn in large bowl. Melt chocolate in large glass measuring cup. Microwave on high for 1 to 1½ minutes, or until chocolate is shiny. Stir to completely melt. Stir in pecans. Add chocolate mixture to popcorn and mix well. Spread on cookie sheet and allow to cool completely.

Nutritional analysis per ½-cup serving: 57 calories, 4 grams fat, no cholesterol, trace of sodium, 58 percent calories from fat.

Bobbie Bates, Weatherford, recently sampled Creole sauce served over meatloaf. Here's a version of the classic Louisiana sauce adapted from "Arnaud's Creole Cookbook" by John DeMers (Simon and Schuster, $17.95).

CREOLE SAUCE

¼ cup olive oil
1 cup chopped white onions
½ cup diced green bell peppers
1½ cups chopped celery
½ cup chopped fresh parsley
1 clove garlic, chopped
2 cups chicken or beef stock
½ tablespoon chicken base or bouillon crystals
2 bay leaves
½ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
½ cup diced tomatoes
1½ cups tomato puree
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
Tabasco sauce
Cayenne pepper

Heat olive oil in pot over high heat, then add onions, bell pepper, celery and parsley. Stir for 2 minutes, then add garlic. Add stock, chicken base or bouillon, bay leaves and thyme, tomatoes and tomato puree and bring to boil.

Reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Season to taste with salt, pepper, Tabasco and cayenne. This sauce can be kept, covered, in refrigerator for 2 to 3 days or it can be frozen.

Nutritional analysis per 2-tablespoon serving: 19 calories, 1 gram fat, trace of cholesterol, 49 milligrams sodium, 49 percent calories from fat.

Margie Gandy, Fort Worth, would like the recipe for the chicken salad served at the popular Lunch Box cafe. This is another clip-and-save recipe; put it in a safe place because we won't run it again until next year.

LUNCH BOX'S MANGO CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD
Serves 8

5 to 6 cups fresh broccoli florets
4 to 5 pounds (including bones) chicken breasts, poached and chilled
1 large red bell pepper, seeded, deveined and chopped
MANGO CURRY SAUCE:
1 (8½ ounce) jar mango chutney
1½ tablespoons curry powder
1½ cups mayonnaise
Chop chutney in food processor 15 to 20 seconds using on/off switch. Combine with remaining sauce ingredients, in a bowl, and blend well. Cover and chill.

Bring large pot of salted water to rapid boil. Add broccoli and cook until crisp tender (about 1 minute). Drain, then place in cold water to prevent further cooking. Drain again and pat dry.

Skin and debone chicken. Cut meat into bite-size chunks.

Combine chicken, broccoli and red bell pepper and toss gently. Blend in sauce and mix gently again. Chill well and serve.

Nutritional analysis per serving: 496 calories, 37 grams fat, 104 milligrams cholesterol, 323 milligrams sodium, 67 percent calories from fat.

DEAR ABBY

Silence can be golden when old friends meet

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently read this quote by Dave Tyson Gentry: "True friendship comes when silence between two people is comfortable." I was reminded of this true story about Laurel and Hardy:

Van Buren

Toward the end of his life, Oliver Hardy suffered a stroke that left him unable to speak.

When Hardy was able to have visitors, Stan Laurel went to Ollie's home, where he was met at the door by Ollie's devoted wife, Lucille. She showed Stan to the room where Ollie was sitting in a chair, and left the two comedians alone together.

About 10 minutes later, she noticed that she couldn't hear anything from that room. Wondering what was wrong, she looked in on them and saw a beautiful sight. Stan and Ollie were having a spirited conversation without uttering a word. Both men were masters at pantomime from their early years in silent films. This skill was never put to better use.

It also illustrates the deep brotherly love between the partners. Stan had determined that he would not underscore Ollie's inability to speak by talking to him. And Ollie, I'm certain, was grateful to Stan, who thus helped Ollie to maintain his dignity. — WALT MITCHELL, ORISKANY, N.Y.

DEAR WALT: What a poignant demonstration of "love" between these two old partners! Thank you for a heartwarming letter.

DEAR ABBY: I'm married to an extremely domineering man. He wants to control my life from morning until night. He listens when I'm on the phone (if I go to another room he'll come stand in the doorway or mute the TV so he can hear better). He picks up letters I'm writing and reads them. He questions my every move, and even pokes through my shopping bags.

I'm learning to deal with all those things, but he has one habit I cannot understand. He buys himself gifts and cards for holidays, and signs MY name, as though I had sent them.

Last Christmas, he bought himself a gift and had his secretary wrap it. The card enclosed read, "To Sam, with all my love, (signed) Mary." He put it under our tree and refused to tell me what it was. He spent days shaking it under my nose, saying, "I wonder what you got me ... ha, ha!"

On Christmas morning, he made a big ceremony out of pretending to be surprised. When the family came over, he made a point of announcing, "Look what my sweet Mary got me!"

On Valentine's Day, there was a large envelope on the table marked "To my Sweetie from Mary." (I had already given him a gift and Valentine card, and also prepared an extra-special dinner.)

He asked, "Isn't that a cute card you got me?" When I said, "I didn't buy it — YOU did," he laughed and said, "Oh, that's all right."

I asked, "WHAT'S all right?" He replied, "Well, I know you would have bought it for me if you'd seen it first, so I did it for you." Abby, this made my gift and card seem pointless.

What's wrong with him? Please ask a psychiatrist. — TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: I fear that you have good reason to be "troubled." Your husband sounds delusional. My asking a psychiatrist will not help him. He needs to SEE one.

DEAR ABBY: Your letter from the couple in Long Branch, N.J., brought back many memories. (I smiled; no — laughed out loud!)

My husband and I attended a marriage enrichment weekend, and it was wonderful. We went through airports holding hands, whispered sweet nothings in each other's ears, and found new joys we never knew existed. We can't thank you enough for introducing us to Marriage Encounter — that was almost 20 years ago, and we haven't lost the glow that comes from being in touch with the one you love.

We celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary last St. Valentine's Day. Thank you, Abby, for all the good you do. — TRACY AND DOUG VANDERGRIFT, ALBERT LEA, MINN.

DEAR TRACY AND DOUG: Congratulations on your 50th. May you enjoy many more years of wedded bliss in the best of health.

Weight gain is normal part of growing older, researchers say

N.Y. Times News Service

Postmenopausal women on hormone-replacement therapy often complain that the treatment encourages weight gain.

In fact, "if you age, you gain weight," says Dr. Laura Bookman, director of the Beth Israel Menopause Wellness Center in Boston.

"There's a little increase for women who go through menopause" with or without hormone therapy.

In a study released earlier this year in the Journal of the American Medical Association, all the postmenopausal women in the trial gained weight, even if they weren't taking hormones.

Referred to as the PEPI trial (for postmenopausal estrogen/progestin interventions), the study showed that women on placebo gained more weight than women on hormones.

The PEPI study "is the best study out there," says Dr. Christopher Coffey of OB/GYN Associates of the North Shore in Salem, Mass. "There have been a couple of studies; both failed to show any increase in significant weight gain."

"There's no difference either on or off hormones," says Dr. Victoria Ravnikar of the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester, Mass., who specializes in menopause. "It's probably the patients' perception."

And all the other factors of midlife, she says.

"Everybody gains weight," says Bookman. "You have to exercise a lot and you can only eat a certain amount."

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Lifestyle Department office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only of winners, not runners-up or contestants. These announcements will be published on a space available basis.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and with anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required.

A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements.

Portrait photographs of the bride only or photos of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements.

A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements. Anniversaries photos must be relatively current.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted.

The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

Photos can be picked up in the Lifestyle Department after publication, or a self-addresses, stamped envelope can be enclosed for the photo to be returned by mail.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and articles.

Vanderbilt's etiquette book gets '90s update

By Martha Woodham
N.Y. Times News Service

Amy Vanderbilt meets the '90s — and it's not a pretty introduction.

For the first time, Vanderbilt's venerable "Complete Book of Etiquette" covers bowling, bowling, the blue-collar sport of the Archie Bunker set — not your usual perusers of etiquette books.

First published in 1952, the book, which hits local stores in February, still has must-have tips on fox hunting and how to give a dinner party without a butler. Look for yachting, however, to show up as the democratized "boating" in the 1990s version.

Other '90s topics in the new book include: planning a society benefit, working with a real-estate agent, cellular phone etiquette and tipping. There's also an expanded section on stationery, with 25 sample letters for a generation more used to picking up a phone than a pen.

Authors Nancy Tuckerman and Nancy Dunnan even cover that once-taboo topic: money.

Talking about money has long been considered in poor taste. But with such socialites as Pamela Churchill Harriman and Donald Trump down to their last couple of million (it's those nasty squabbles over failed investments, darling), money is now dinner table conversation.

So Tuckerman and Dunnan dish up advice on dealing with people who have more or less money than you. Let's give them credit. They do say: "Try to avoid talking about money more than absolutely necessary. It becomes boring and can be offensive."

The revision began when Tuckerman realized the Vanderbilt book was last updated in 1978 (by manners maven Letitia Baldrige, known for her impeccable White House protocol background).

Tuckerman says that despite the proliferation of rudeness and crudeness, Americans are still interested in good manners.

Amy Vanderbilt once said. . .

By N.Y. Times News Service

In 1958, Amy Vanderbilt was dispensing such advice as this:

- A thoughtful man, even if he is a nonsmoker, carries a lighter or matches so he can light a woman's cigarette.
- The remarriage of divorced people is always quiet, with only a few witnesses. Underage children are not permitted to attend.
- When traveling, an executive and his secretary should request rooms on separate floors to avoid any appearance of impropriety.
- The hostess with a television set should never assume that her guests are willing or eager to look at it. . . . They probably have a set at home they could have turned on.
- A man touches his hat when giving up his seat on a public conveyance for a woman. He then stands as far away from her as possible and does not look at her.
- People carry calling cards, which are left during visits to people's homes.

Amazing New Tune-Up Guarantees Your Air Conditioner Won't Break Down...Or This Is FREE!

I Will Have One Of My Champion Technicians Perform All This To Rejuvenate Your Air Conditioning System:

- Inspection of indoor coil
- Clean blower housing and remove all debris
- Monitor refrigerant level and add up to 2 lbs. of freon
- Clean evaporator drain line to prevent water damage
- Clean or replace filter for less restriction
- Tighten all wire connections for safety
- Calibrate Thermostat for accuracy
- Clean and remove vegetation from outside coil
- Adjust fan belt (if necessary) to maximize efficiency
- Vacuum out and brush heating coil to prevent unpleasant odor
- Evaluate ductwork
- Lubricate all moving parts including motors
- Electronically measure amperage draw
- Secure fan blades for safety
- Balance motor for reduced wear
- Monitor expansion valve for optimum operation, efficiency and capacity.

And more!

Call now for your Precision Tune-Up and Professional Cleaning.

No One Else In My Field Makes You This Bold Guarantee!

Permian Basin - Now you can have your air conditioner rejuvenated to "Factory Fresh" condition, and I guarantee it won't cost you a penny! In fact, you'll make a profit.

As you already know, your air conditioning system gets dirty, out of alignment, less efficient, and wears out about twice as fast as it should!

In fact, most air conditioning systems die in "middle age" and use 30% to 50% more electricity than they need to.

I've created a fascinating solution to this problem that will make your home more comfortable, safer and save you a lot of money...with a special offer I hope you'll find irresistible.

$129 Worth Of Service For Only $79

Now, I know what you're thinking..."What's the catch? Where's the gimmick? Are you completely nuts?"

But, there's a method to my madness. I have two reasons for letting you get this much service for 50 cents on the dollar.

First, my business is normally slow during spring time, and I decided that rather than lay off my top technicians, (and add to the unemployment statistics) I would strip out everything but raw cost and keep my technicians busy. Second, I'll actually make money on this in the long run anyway. Most people who sample my service like it so much they use me again at normal prices (which, by the way, are great compared to my competition). So, both of us win. You'll just win sooner than I will.

Anyway, doesn't it just make sense to get this service so your family doesn't have to live with the uncertainty of a system break down on the hottest day of the summer?

Double Risk Free Money-Back Guarantee

Get your air conditioning system restored to "Factory Fresh" condition for only $79 and here's my guarantee to you:

Guarantee #1. If your air conditioning system breaks down this summer and needs repairs for any reason, I'll refund your $79...no questions asked!

Guarantee #2. If this amazing tune-up doesn't save you at least $89 (giving you a profit) in lower electrical usage this summer I'll also refund the $79 with no hard feelings.

Since it can cost thousands of dollars to replace your system, and when you consider the electrical savings, and since you have absolutely no risk, doesn't it just make sense to give my tune-up a try?

It's easy, just call my dispatcher William, and he will schedule a Champion Technician to your home.

Composer also worked citrus grove

BRADFORD, England (AP) — English composer Frederick Delius (1862-1934) had German-born parents, and his wool merchant father discouraged his son's musical aptitude.

So, in 1884, young Delius set out for Florida to become an orange planter and, secretly, to study music. He divided his time between work in the citrus groves and musical studies in Florida and Danville, Va., before returning to Europe.

In 1888, his first symphonic work, titled "Florida," was performed in Leipzig, Germany, by an orchestra of 60 musicians whose sole payment from the impoverished composer was a barrel of beer.

Delius wrote numerous operas, suites, rhapsodies, concertos, songs and orchestral variations. Many were based upon his own travels.

The works include "Over the Hills and Far Away," (1895), "Appalachia," (1902), "Sea Drift," "Brigg Fair," (1907), and "In A Summer Garden," (1908).

Lemon at its best in a sqeeze

By Tom Sietsema
N.Y. Times News Service

The clever cook knows it as more than a fillip to the drinker's gin and tonic or the garnish crowning the fish eater's plate.

And while the lemon knows no season, the sunny yellow fruit's clean, clear and rousing flavors epitomize spring as surely as do morels in the forest, shad at the fishmonger's and a crisp linen suit on the street.

Among other virtues, lemons lend spark to butter and white sauces, curdle milk for use in breads and cakes raised with baking soda, and even lift fruit stains and fish odors from a cook's hands and cutting board. The flavoring agent d-limonene, extracted from the oil of lemon, is one of the ingredients in the top secret formula for Coca-Cola, author Margaret Visser says in her treatise "Much Depends on Dinner."

Indeed, a lemon's attributes are as legion as its fans:

Counting calories? Lemons are low in them, only about 20 calories per medium-size raw fruit — and never mind the fact that you probably rarely eat them whole and more often in the form of fattening pies, cookies and cakes. For the diet-conscious, a spritz of lemon on a naked salad, unadorned baked potato or plain piece of fish can mean the difference between bland and tempting. A cup of raw lemon juice is only 60 calories.

Health-conscious? Among fruits, lemons rank among the highest in vitamin C content — a medium-size model delivers about 35 percent of U.S. recommended daily allowance for the vitamin.

FOR YEARS, in an effort to ward off scurvy, English ships were obliged to carry sufficient lemon or lime juice for each sailor to have an ounce a day after being at sea 10 days (which is why the English are referred to as "limeys"). Jean Carper, author of "The Food Pharmacy" (Bantam Books), says lemon oil can kill fungi; lemon extract is known to kill roundworm in humans.

Feeling economical? The lemon is completely usable, from the obvious juice to the skin (a bit of freshly grated zest lends zip to sauces, and blanched, drained strips of lemon peel can be used for edible garnishes) to the shell itself. Just scoop out the flesh and fill the cavity with sorbet, a souffle mixture, cold sauces or miniature vegetables or fruit.

The price is right, too: The fruit weighs in at anywhere from 20 cents (for a small lemon) to 69 cents (for a large one).

From a culinary standpoint, lemon is a natural antioxidant, and it can be used to coat certain sliced fruits (apples, bananas, pears) and raw vegetables (artichokes, eggplants) to prevent discoloration when exposed to the air. The juice also acts as a mild bleaching agent for keeping white vegetables white — try adding some to a pot of cooking potatoes — and retaining bright colors in vegetables. In addition, marinating raw fish in lemon juice is one method of "cooking" in both South America and the Pacific Islands.

Lemons combine superbly with sugar and butter (can there be a better marriage than the one in lemon meringue pie?), but many savory dishes benefit from their presence, too. Anyone who's familiar with the traditional Moroccan tagine — in one variation, a long-simmered stew of chicken and vegetables — knows that the dish's beauty lies in the alluring addition of whole preserved lemons.

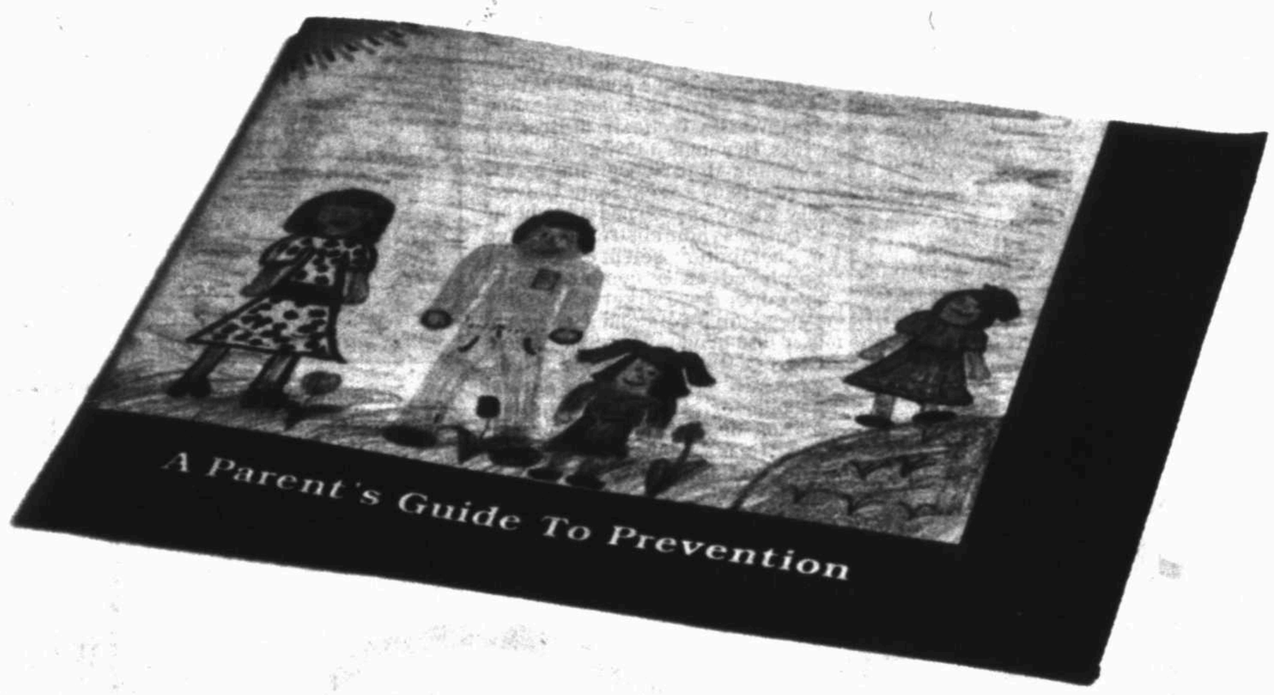

NATURAL CLEANERS, lemons lend themselves to more than cooking and eating. To clean copper or brass, rub either with fresh lemon juice and a soft cloth. Glasses sparkle when rubbed with cut lemon or soaked in lemon juice and water. Odors left on cutting boards can be removed by bleaching them occasionally (just rub a cut lemon over the surface). Toss used lemons in the garbage disposal to keep the sink smelling fresh.

Selecting lemons is easy. In the market, look for smooth, thin skins — they're the juiciest — and avoid anything wrinkled or bearing a greenish cast. Keep in mind that weight, a sign of maturity in the fruit, is more important than hue.

There are several schools of thought on how to extract the greatest amount of juice from a lemon.One suggests rolling room-temperature citrus under your palm on a counter top before squeezing it. A more contemporary method advises putting the fruit in the microwave oven on high power for about a minute before juicing, until the fruit is warm to the touch (much longer and unpierced fruit is prone to exploding). Trials in a home kitchen reveal the latter method to yield best results.

Avoid using an aluminum pot to cook lemons in; the fruit can discolor the metal, and minute amounts of aluminum sometimes can leach into the food, which isn't harmful but can alter the taste of a dish.

It gives you a place to turn.

Trees draw attention to natural resources

When the site visit team from the Texas Coordinating Board visited Midland College two weeks ago, they were particularly pleased with the beauty of the college's campus—the architecture and the landscaping.

Since the early days of the college, the community has been involved with making the college a city showcase. Many individual Midlanders donated several thousand dollars for landscaping, The Beal Family donated money to landscape Beal Plaza and employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram donated money to landscape the area around the administration building.

That tradition of community involvement in the landscaping of Midland College continues with the recent donation of trees by a Midland-based foundation.

The Natural Resources Foundation of Texas' gift of 300 trees was made to draw attention to Texas' natural resources. The Foundation advocates using a common sense approach to environmental issues. The donation also honors the Foundation's connection with MC's Environmental Technology Program, according to Executive Director Mike Bradford. Midland College students have been instrumental in helping the foundation collect data for different research projects.

Eileen Piwetz, Director of Institutional Advancement & Effectiveness at Midland College, Mike Bradford, executive director of the Natural Resource Foundation of Texas, and MC Grounds Superviser Bruce Orrick admire seedlings donated to Midland College by the foundation.

The foundation is an educational and fact-based agency, Bradford said. Its goals include working to heighten awareness of the value of natural resources, promotion of good stewardship of those resources and creation of a broader understanding of the role that active management plays in regeneration, conservation and enhancement of renewable natural resources now and in the future.

The foundation is involved in education that provides answers to environmental concerns while avoiding the hype and hysteria that accompany many environmental issues, Bradford said.

Grounds supervisor Bruce Orrick said he is pleased with the donation of the trees that will become part of the 25-30 varieties of trees and shrubs already planted around the campus.

"We appreciate the donation," said Orrick.

Student Activities plans seminar, tryouts

The Student Activities office at Midland College is mixing business and pleasure with a financial aid seminar and preparation for cheerleader tryouts set for the month of April

If you really want to go to college but you have questions about tuition, fees, financial aid, grants, loans, childcare or transportation, the answers to these and other questions may be found at Midland College 1-3 p.m., April 5 in the Roadrunner Room of the Scharbauer Student Center.

A panel of experts will answer questions and provide information to help students get in college and stay in college.

"Our goal is to make people knowledgeable of the opportunities there are to return to college," said Evelyn Owen member of the Re-Treads, the campus club sponsoring the event. For more information, call the Midland College Student Activities office, 685-4544.

Preparation for cheerleader tryouts for the 1995-96 school year will begin on April 4 with a mandatory orientation. Several clinics follow with the tryout date set for April 26.

In addition to attending MC next year, cheerleaders will be required to take 12 semester hours, maintain a 2.0 grade point average, attend the National Cheerleader Association cheerleading camp in July and attend all home and out-of-town games.

Midland College provides a $600 scholarship for tuition and fees to the cheerleaders and mascot. Uniforms and expenses for travel and NCA camp are provided. For more information, call Tommy Ramos at 685-4701.

State evaluators cite outstanding programs at MC

Three Midland College academic programs were given exemplary ratings and all of Midland College's other technical education programs were recognized for their outstanding qualities during the exit report of the Texas Coordinating Board's site visit evaluation team.

The college's Legal Assistance program under the direction of Nancy Hart, the Office Systems Technology Program under the direction of Rebecca Bell and Leanne Jamison and the ADN Nursing program taught by Kim Bezinque, Judy Bartley, Rachel Cross, Carmen Edwards, Doro Flores, Nancy Harris, Glenda Helton and Pat Sullivan were cited as exemplary.

Coombes

Criteria used in evaluating the programs included curriculum, quality of instruction, program enrollment, number of graduates and job placement rate.

Associate Vice-President of Instruction Deana Lusk said she was pleased with the results of the review.

"Every active technical education program got a good review," she said. "Basically we got a sound bill of health."

Other programs cited as outstanding included Law Enforcement, Welding, Automotive Technology, Management, Accounting, Child Care, Air Conditioning Heating and Refrigeration, Drafting, Electronics and Environmental Technology.

The site visit team also recognized Rita Nell Diffie, director of Special Populations, for excellent support services provided to students. The team also cited as excellent the Midland College campus and facilities and praised the college for developing the Chaparral Circle Endowment Fund that will provide a permanent income source for the college. The goal of the fund is to have $5.75 million by 1997.

"We did the things we needed to do," Lusk said about the college's preparation for the visit. "It was a productive experience with a worthwhile outcome."

The site visit was conducted by a team of peer evaluators made up of administrators and faculty members from six Texas community colleges and staff members from the Texas Coordinating Board.

The purpose of the visit was to review the general status of the college, evaluate instructional programs and monitor Carl D. Perkins projects. The site visit was March 8-10.

Volunteer tasters get 'the scoop' on some new low-fat foods

By Art Chapman
N.Y. Times News Service

While sifting through the mail looking for free samples to eat, I found in the April "Men's Health" magazine, a quick guide to the best and worst low-fat foods at grocery stores. The magazine sent out tasters and here is some of what they found.

In the chips, crackers and other snacks category, the tasters liked Bugles, Pringles' Right Crisps, Betty Crocker Pop-Secret and SnackWell's Fat Free Cracked Pepper Crackers, to name only a few.

They didn't like Weight Watcher Smart Snackers Barbecue Flavored Curls and Fat Free Gourmet Baked Potato Corns.

You should be warned: These tasters liked several of the flavored rice cakes, and that makes the whole survey suspect.

But you do have to lend some credence to a survey panel that enjoys Reduced Fat Oreo cookies.

SnackWell's Fat Free Double Fudge Cookie Cakes were the favorites, just nudging out the SnackWell's Fat Free Devil's Food Cookie Cakes. I would have it just the opposite myself.

By the way, I recently tried the new Keebler knockoff of the SnackWell's Devil's Food Cookie and it wasn't even close.

Keebler is having trouble keeping up with SnackWell's. If you doubt it, just check the supermarket counters.

Stores always have plenty of Keebler, and almost always a shortage of SnackWell's. It's that "cookie man" thang.

The magazine testers actually liked some of the fat-free cheeses and that's scary, but they did turn their noses up at Borden Lite Line Fat Free Swiss, Alpine Lace Singles, Kraft Free Singles Pasteurized Process Swiss Cheese Product and both the Philadelphia Brand and Healthy Choice brands of fat-free cream cheese spreads.

THE SCOOP ON BUTTERMILK

Here's one that has probably puzzled you for a long time. Why do they call it buttermilk when it doesn't have any butter in it and is recommended in many low-fat recipes.

"Environmental Nutrition," a diet and health newsletter, gives the answer:

"Traditionally, buttermilk was the name for the liquid left over after churning cream into butter. Today, little buttermilk actually comes from butter; instead modern buttermilk is cultured from skim milk. Either way, it has a rich tangy flavor and is very low in fat, despite its name."

Also in the newsletter is a word or two about cauliflower, broccoli and cabbage, three of the most recommended veggies on everyone's low-fat food budget.

The problem is, they stink because they contain sulfur compounds called mustard oils or isothiocyanates, the newsletter says.

"When cooked, these and other compounds break down to form various odoriferous compounds like hydrogen sulfide (rotten egg smell), ammonia, mercaptans and methyl sulfide," it says.

They aren't harmful, the newsletter says, but the longer you cook the veggies, the more they stink.

"To reduce the odor, steam the vegetables only until tender-crisp, and try adding a few pieces of bread to the cooking water to absorb the odoriferous compounds."

YEA AND NAY

I had a chance to try a couple new low-fat products last week. One was Hormel's Turkey Chili With Beans.

It is 99 percent fat-free, the label says, with only 3 grams of fat per serving and only 1 gram of saturated fat.

That's the good part.

As for the taste, I found it terribly weak. I like my chili strong. I want it to clump on the spoon and make me pay a nightlong price for eating too much, or eating it too fast. If chili doesn't do that, it is just beans and broth.

It wasn't the turkey that killed the taste in the Hormel brand; it was the lack of substance and spice.

The other new product is Little Debbie Oatmeal Lights.

Lights have half the fat of the original Oatmeal Creme Pies, but all the taste. They have almost as many calories, too. The originals have 170 calories per cookie; the lights have 140.

But the originals have 8 grams of fat to only 4 for the new lights.

Art Chapman writes a column on low-fat cooking and eating for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. Write him in care of the newspaper at Box 1870, Fort Worth, TX 76101-1870.

For fast-food fans, news is not very good

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

The people who condemned McDonald's Quarterpounders — as well as kung pao chicken, fettucine Alfredo and movie-theater popcorn — have had everyone's favorite lunchtime sandwiches analyzed for calories, fat and sodium.

The results? Well, there's not much left to eat.

"People tend to think of a sandwich as just a bite to eat," Jayne Hurley, the senior nutritionist for the Center for Science in the Public Interest and the author of the study, said recently as she announced the results.

"But often sandwich shops are giving you an entire dinner's worth of fat and calories in between those two big slices of bread."

In a survey in December of 175 sandwiches and subs from middle-price delis, restaurants and sandwich shops in Chicago, Los Angeles, New York and Washington, a typical tuna salad sandwich had 716 calories, 43 grams of fat and 1,219 milligrams of sodium; a spicy Italian sub from the Subway chain with mayonnaise or oil had 640 calories, 45 grams of fat and 1,553 milligrams of sodium, and an average bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich had 599 calories, 37 grams fat and 1,555 milligrams of sodium.

Perhaps most surprising was a vegetarian sandwich that had 753 calories, 40 grams of fat (that's three times that of a roast beef sandwich) and 1,543 milligrams of sodium. Its downfall? The avocado, the cheese and the mayonnaise-based dressing.

Some results were not surprising. A Reuben had 916 calories, 50 grams of fat and 3,268 milligrams of sodium. With corned beef, cheese and Russian or Thousand Island dressing, what would you expect?

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer-advocacy group in Washington, bought the sandwiches from individual shops and from chains like Au Bon Pain, Wall Street Deli, Schlotzky's and Subway. The sandwiches were analyzed by Southern Testing and Research Laboratories in Wilson, N.C.

Researchers made a composite out of nine samples of each type of sandwich and six samples of each type of sub.

The results were based on analysis of the composites; an individual sandwich bought in a deli can vary slightly.

What did most of the sandwiches in were mayonnaise, cheese and oil, as well as meat and salt.

Those who want to keep their fat, calorie and sodium consumption under control should stick with turkey breast and roast beef — and hold the mayo.

Or, to guarantee they know what they're getting, they should make their own.

Turkey with mustard had only 6 grams of fat, the lowest amount for sandwiches in the study, and a roast beef sandwich with mustard, with only 12 grams, was the second-lowest.

Several Subway subs did not fare too poorly in the analysis: ham and turkey, turkey, and veggies and cheese each had only 9 grams of fat and about 300 calories. Sodium levels were quite high, though: from 855 to 1,383 milligrams.

Other ways to improve the nutritional profile of lunchtime sandwiches are to use mustard, ketchup and pickle relish instead of mayonnaise; fill them out with lettuce and tomatoes, and avoid oil and cheese.

In addition, ask for low-fat dressing or low-fat mayonnaise, and order the sandwich on whole wheat.

Real cowboy cookin' can be really creative grub

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

It was the cow puncher's job to help satisfy America's hunger for beef. But in so doing, he helped to create a cuisine that continues to brand western fare.

It was the cooking of these cowboys that prompted B. Byron Price to write "National Cowboy Hall of Fame Chuck Wagon Cookbook" (Hearst, $20). Price, executive director of Oklahoma City's National Cowboy Hall of Fame, wrote the book to help preserve the traditions and food ways of not only the cowboys, but the ranch cooks who followed.

One of those ranch cooks was Price's mother. "There could be two to 22 people sitting at the table and she'd get together a meal," he said. "I remember some of the pies she'd put on the table — decorated wtih pieces of dough formed into our brand or the brand of someone who might be visiting."

It is Charles Goodnight who is credited with creating the first chuck wagon in 1866. Chuck wagons accompanied teams of cowboys on the spring and fall roundups. How those chuck wagons were outfitted depended on the wealth of the ranch owner and the region of the country, ranging from Texas to Montana.

"A lot of the cowboy population was Southerners, coming in from Tennessee, and they contributed a lot of their traditions to the food," Price said. "Along the Gulf Coast, there was a lot of black influence and a lot of the African-American food ways made their way into the food. Farther down, to the Rio Grande, there was more and more Spanish influence."

There was a lot of British ownership of ranches in the 1870s and 1880s and tea-sipping managers tried to wean the cow punchers off their beloved black coffee and onto tea. Caffeine junkies, the cowboys used so many pounds of tea leaves that the experiment was quickly abandoned.

But despite the variety of cultures and cooks, a cowboy fare of beans, bread and beef emerged over the years.

"They had to rely on bulk commodities and foods that wouldn't spoil," Price said. "They'd take dried fruit, rice, beans, and naturally sometimes they'd kill wild game, or in a rare instance catch a fish or kill a prairie chicken."

Not only were supplies far from varied, the chuck wagon equipment often wasn't the best or the most extensive. Cast-iron Dutch ovens (buried in coals to make biscuits, hung over the fire to make beans) were the norm and often there weren't enough of those to feed a big crew.

"In a pinch, however, an expert cowboy cook could prepare a hearty soup or a delicious 'son-of-a-bitch stew' without so much as a single pot by digging a hole, lining it with a cowhide (hair side toward the ground), and heating the ingredients with rocks warmed in a nearby fire," Price writes.

The cooks (usually earning a salary double that of the average cow puncher) were, in general, a creative lot. Cobblers were created with dried fruit and biscuits were often things of beauty and pride.

With the advent of extensive rail systems, the food of the West, and of the cowboys, changed.

Cowboy cooking, and its descendant, ranch cuisine, remains today and it is from modern cooks that Price collected the book's recipes. The recipes, some of which follow, are for chicken-fried steak, brisket, chili and chile stew, and simply prepared cakes that rely on dried fruits for their flavor. It is the food of our grandfathers and will most likely be the food of our grandsons.

TACO SALAD CASSEROLE

1 tablespoon olive oil
2 pounds ground round
1 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 tablespoon sweet Hungarian paprika
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dried oregano
½ teaspoon ground cumin
¼ teaspoon ground cayenne pepper
2 (16-ounce) cans stewed tomatoes, undrained
4-ounce can chopped green chile peppers, drained
2 cups small-curd cottage cheese
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1 large egg
12 corn tortillas
2 cups shredded iceberg lettuce
4 ripe plum tomatoes, seeded and chopped
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
½ cup sliced ripe black olives
2 scallions, chopped

In large skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat. Add beef, onion and garlic. Cook, stirring to break up meat with wooden spoon, until meat loses its pink color, about 6 minutes. Tilt pan to drain off excess fat. Add chili powder, paprika, salt, oregano, cumin and cayenne. Stir for 1 minute.

Stir in stewed tomatoes with juice and chilies. Bring to a simmer and reduce heat to low. Simmer, uncovered, until excess liquid is evaporated — about 30 minutes.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly oil 9x13-inch baking dish. In a medium bowl, combine cottage cheese, Monterey Jack and egg.

Place an overlapping layer of half the tortillas in the baking dish. Spread with meat mixture. Top with remaining tortillas, then spread with cheese mixture.

Bake until topping is firm in center, about 30 minutes. Let casserole stand for 5 minutes.

Top casserole with a layer of lettuce, then sprinkle with tomatoes, Cheddar cheese, olives and scallions. Cut into rectangles and serve immediately.

BUCKAROO SAUCY BEANS

1 pound dried pinto beans, rinsed, drained and picked over for stones
2 strips bacon, chopped
2 medium onions, chopped
1 small green bell pepper, seeded and chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups tomato puree
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon dried oregano

In large pot, combine beans and enough cold water to cover by 2 inches. Bring to a boil over high heat and boil for 2 minutes. Remove from heat, cover the pot and let stand for 1 hour; drain well. The beans can also be soaked overnight in a large bowl with enough cold water to cover by 2 inches, then drained.

Return beans to the pot and stir in bacon, onion, bell pepper, garlic and bay leaf. Add enough fresh water to barely cover. Bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat to low and simmer, uncovered, adding more hot water if needed to keep the beans barely covered, until beans are almost tender, about 20 minutes. (The exact cooking time will depend on the age and dryness of the beans.) Stir in the salt and continue cooking until beans are barely tender, about 10 more minutes.

Stir in tomato puree, chili powder, brown sugar, mustard and oregano. (Make sure that the tomato puree is not stirred in until the beans are tender. The acid in the tomatoes will inhibit the beans from softening if added too early.) Bring to a simmer over medium heat, reduce heat to low and simmer until beans are fully tender and sauce is thickened, about 10 minutes. Remove bay leaf and serve beans hot.

RAISIN LONG CAKE

2 cups raisins
2 cups water
2 cups sugar
½ cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, cut into pieces
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
3 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
Powdered sugar, for garnish

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter and flour 13x9-inch baking pan, shaking out excess flour.

In large saucepan, bring first 7 ingredients to boil over high heat. Reduce heat to medium and boil, uncovered, for 5 minutes. Transfer to a large bowl and cool completely.

Sift next 4 ingredients into raisin mixture and stir until smooth. Transfer to baking pan.

Bake until toothpick inserted in center of cake comes clean, 35 to 45 minutes.

Cool cake completely in pan on wire rack.

Sift powdered sugar over top of cake before serving.

Design by Missy Hallmark

Sisterly love

Story by Georgia Temple

Midlanders are invited to a family's birthday party at 8 p.m. Friday in Theatre Midland's Davis Theatre I. The occasion is Sara Rosensweig's 54th birthday. When the curtain rises on Midland Community Theatre's production of "The Sisters Rosensweig," the audience will find itself in Sara's London home for the special event. Sara will be joined by her sisters, Gorgeous and Pfeni.

"The best part of this play is the love of these women for each other," said director Rene Brister Chambers. "Their personalities are different, their careers are different, they live in three different parts of the world, and they quarrel frequently, but they truly love each other."

"The Sisters Rosensweig" is the newest play by acclaimed playwright Wendy Wasserstein, who won a Pulitzer Prize and a Tony Award for "The Heidi Chronicles."

"It's exciting, as a woman, to be directing a play by a woman author," Ms. Chambers said. "The women are the pivotal characters. It's about the women and their relationships, rather than being about the men from their point of view, which is not to say men won't enjoy the play. One of the critics I read made a comment that when you see 'Sisters Rosensweig,' you feel like it's your family, you will relate to them so much."

The sisters aren't the only ones at the party. They are joined by Sara's 17-year-old daughter, Tess, played by Amber Hanson, and her boyfriend, Tom, played by Shane Bybee.

"Tess, along with her radical boyfriend, Tom, wants to go fight with the Lithuanian resistance," Ms. Chambers said.

Tess and Tom are caught up in the hot issues of the day, such as the fall of communism in the Soviet Union, as well as the struggle for independence in Lithuania.

"It's set in 1991, and usually four years one way or the other wouldn't matter," Ms. Chambers said. "But there are issues with the demise of the Soviet Union and just the world situation as it existed then, which mean that the play needs to stay in 1991."

Also invited to the party are Merv, a 54-year-old faux furrier, played by Michael Trost; Nicholas, a man who is fond of young women, played by Odessan Bill Sibley; and Geoffrey — the one who claims responsibility for transforming the youngest sister from a plain "Penny" to a more interesting "Pfeni" — played by Odessan Dale Jenkins.

"The whole cast is just wonderful," Ms. Chambers said. "They are fun to work with and funny on stage."

If you are reading this column before 2 p.m. today, it isn't too late to go to the downtown library for the Friends of the Library Annual Meeting.

Elmer Kelton, author of the "Good Old Boys," which recently premiered on television, is the featured speaker. The public is invited to attend.

The libraries, downtown at 301 W. Missouri Ave. and Centennial Branch at Midland Park Mall, will be closed April 14 and 15 for Easter. It will be business as usual April 17.

The April craft time of the downtown library for 6- to 9-year olds will be 2:30 p.m. April 8. No preregistration is necessary for the program, Lets Make Flying Birds.

The Children's Department began its spring story time series for 3- to 5- year-olds last week. This set of six sessions on consecutive Tuesday and Wednesday mornings does require registration. To inquire if openings are available call 688-8991.

So many books-so little time! How does one find the best of the multitude of books published to spend his or her limited time reading?

Librarians and patrons may turn to The Readers Advisor. Now in its 14th edition the Bowker publication offers lists of what the editor specialists consider the best of the old and new in subjects as varied as Shakespeare and UFO's. Since Bowker also publishes Books-In-Print, the emphasis in the Reader's Advisor are books currently for sale with exceptions made for some out-of-print works expected to be available in public libraries.

Volume I is the best in reference works, British literature and American literature. Volume 2 focuses on world literature; volume 3 on social sciences, history and the arts; volume 4 on philosophy and religion; and volume 5 on science, technology and medicine.

So pick your subject and check out the best from the library. If the library doesn't own the book, there is interlibrary loan service. Another library loans the book to us for you to read. The only charge is postage to mail the book back to the lending library. You'll find The Reader's Advisor in the reference section of the downtown library.

The following was written by the Barbara Tillman, periodicals reference librarian.

Magazines are a never-ending source of information. We have in our periodicals area most of the major titles which are used for reference and research. We also have some pretty obscure ones not often mentioned. Of course, the whole collection is not going to serve a user's needs if he is faced with hundreds of magazines and no way to know where to look.

The famous old stand-by, The Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature, is still around in paper format and it is well used. However, technically inclined you may (or may not) be, CD-ROM is here and we are quite pleased to be able to offer several databases for public use.

At this time, the Periodicals Room has Ebsco's Magazine Article Summaries. This subject heading index is updated monthly and contains indexing to over 450 titles. The library owns a great many of these and, in most cases, can request an article on Interlibrary Loan from another library if the reference is in a magazine we do not have.

Of the subscriptions we do take, the most referred to publications as indicated by our in-house CD-ROM use statistics are New York Times, Newsweek, U.S. News & World Report, Education Digest, and Business Week. Close contenders are Sports Illustrated, Time, and Congressional Quarterly Weekly Reports.

We can also compile figures on magazines that are frequently requested but we do not have. In this manner, we hope to be able to keep more in tune with the needs of the public and, as the budget permits, provide material that will supply the student and businessman alike with currently popular and pertinent data.

SISTERS: Comedy to take stage in Midland

(From 1B)

The comedy, co-produced by Norwest, will be onstage through April 15. Opening night includes a 7 p.m. party at the theater, sponsored by Adventure Travel.

Tickets are priced at $8 for Friday and Saturday and $6 for Sunday and Thursday. For reservations call 682-4111. The theater has rated the comedy PG-13 due to its adult situations.

"There's going to be a beautiful set," said Ms. Chambers. "It's Sara's very expensive English home and because she is a banker with a Hong Kong bank, Paul (Fiorella) has chosen to put some really interesting oriental touches to her home."

The role of Sara is being played by Odessan Barbara Iglehart.

Greg Alexander, shop foreman, supervised the set construction. The light and sound design is by Edward W. Taylor and costumes are by Mae Dawson.

The other sisters also have careers.

"The middle sister, Gorgeous, is a radio talk show host," Ms. Chambers said. "And the youngest sister, Pfeni, was an author of important books such as 'The Life in the Afghanistan Village,' but she has since turned to writing travelogue books like 'Bombay by Night.'

Denise Mruk plays Pfeni, whose boyfriend, Geoffrey, is a very successful London musical theater director. Geoffrey invites his friend Merv, the world's leader in synthetic animal coverings, and there is a romance between Sara and Merv.

The play is "really quite funny," Ms. Chambers said. "Most of the humor comes form Gorgeous. She's just this wild, free, opinionated Jewish suburban housewife who accidentally became a celebrity in West Newton, Mass."

When the lights dim Friday, Midlanders will find Suzanne Martin making her first appearance on a Midland stage since "Mame," the last MCT production directed by Art Cole, who is now director emeritus of the theater. Ms. Martin began her stage career at MCT in "The Sound of Music," starring Bob Taubman. Ms. Martin's mother, the late Marg Samples, was in MCT productions for several decades.

"This is the first chance that I've gotten to be in anything," said Ms. Martin, who moved back to Midland in 1992. "It's a fun role. I'm real excited about it."

Ms. Martin, who has worked in the fashion industry, left Midland when she graduated from high school. She has lived, among other locations, in New York City — where she spent her leisure time attending live theater — and Hawaii.

"I moved around a lot, but Midland was always home," Ms. Martin said. "I knew that in my heart. That is also a theme that sort of comes out in this play, particularly in the character of Sara. No matter where you go, there you are. You really cannot escape yourself or who you are basically. My character has no problem with that."

Ms. Martin was drawn to tryouts because the play has good character roles for middle-aged women.

"The youngest one is 40," she said. "There are so few roles for women of those ages. Jane Alexander played Sara in New York. I saw it in '92. My role — Madeline Cahn won a Tony for playing Gorgeous on Broadway. It's really a great role."

Ms. Martin compared the feel of "The Sisters Rosensweig" to "Fiddler on the Roof." "This is a very universal story. It just happens to be the women are Jewish, and the author is a Jew, and it's autobiographical, but, it's a very universal story."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Reception planned

The opening reception for "My Vida: People and Places that are Important to Me" will be held from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. April 4 at the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum of the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

This exhibit is a result of the "Through Our Eyes" program, which is partially supported by the Arts Assmebly of Midland, Casa de Amigos and the Museum of the Southwest. Children will hang the exhibit Thursday. "Mi Vida" will remain at the facility until April 15.

■ Member drive set

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is kicking off its new member drive with "Memberfest" from 2 to 5 p.m. today.

Crafts for children and their parents in the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum, sky shows in the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, art demonstrations in the Hogan Gallery, adult crafts in the Stables, entertainment in the Turner Galleries plus "Under Starry Skies," Midland Arts Association juried show and "The Search for Ancient Plainsmen" exhibitions illustrate aspects of the museum's programming.

Memberships provide almost 25 percent of the operating budget helping the museum to maintain its collections and facilities and to provide programming for all age groups. A variety of membership categories are available, each with its own set of benefits. All membership levels receive the museum's quarterly newsletter and all mailings plus discounts on program fees.

Art, archaeology and astronomy are the main focuses of the museum, which is housed in a 1930s mansion and a modern wing with the additional facilities of a children's museum and a planetarium.

The purpose of the museum is to increase appreciation of art, culture, astronomy and science, particularly of the Southwest. For more information call 683-2882.

Chartered in 1965 and opened in 1966, the museum houses a collection of art and archaeological artifacts of the Southwest. The core of the paintings collection is the Fred T. and Novadeen Hogan Collection of Taos Society of Artists. Other collections include the Merritt Mauzey Collection of works by Texas artists, the Vogler Collection of Woody Crumbo prints and the Collection of Engravings by Karl

Company gathers 60 years of Oscar-winning songs

Strange that no record company thought of this before: Package versions of every Academy Award-winning song since 1934 and serve it up to an Oscar-rabid public in the weeks just before the ceremonies.

The idea behind Rhino Records' "The Envelope Please: Academy Award-Winning Songs (1934-1993)" is as obvious as the transition from black and white to color and back again in "The Wizard of Oz," which, incidentally, is represented here by Judy Garland's "Over the Rainbow," the Oscar winner for 1939.

"It's way overdue," says Tom Whitlock, who wrote the lyrics for "Take My Breath Away," the 1986 Oscar winner from "Top Gun."

"It's one of those things where I can't believe nobody did it before. After nearly three years of tracking down licensing rights for the 60 tunes, Rhino figures it knows why no one previously did this.

The five-disc boxed set is about as eclectic as any compilation could be, featuring crooning (Bing Crosby on "White Christmas"), sappy pop (Lionel Richie on "Say You, Say Me"), classic jazz singing (Billie Holiday's "All the Way"), children's tunes ("Zip-a-Dee-Doo-Dah," "Talk to the Animals") and pure funk (Isaac Hayes' "Theme From Shaft").

This is the incidental music of the big screen, a lot of the best and a little of the worst of American pop over the last six decades.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, MARCH 26, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your popularity soars to new heights. Romantic satisfaction will be easier to come by than in the recent past. Look for increased cooperation and support from your associates. Business trips undertaken in April, May and June will prove highly productive. Avoid vacationing in September or December. Unexpected developments will make work the place to be! A talent for writing merits further nurturing. Be creative.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstar Diana Ross, football player Marcus Allen, author Erica Jong, singer Teddy Pendergrass.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business transactions may be unavoidable this Sunday. Those who work for and with you can be helpful. Resist becoming entangled in a friend's romantic or financial schemes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A fragile alliance will be strengthened by a candid conversation. Old friends may provide the catalyst that makes a new plan successful. Discuss your objectives honestly with mate or partner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Expend your energies wisely. Otherwise, you may wind up too tired to socialize. Veer away from controversial topics when chatting with family and friends. A loved one shares a delicious secret.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Concentrate on long-range goals, not temporary fringe benefits. Your attitude has a lot to do with how family members will get along today. Avoid both borrowing and lending. Spruce up your work wardrobe.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family members draw closer together once new channels of communication are established. People who have been generous in the past will soon receive tangible rewards for their compassion. A romantic encounter is best postponed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New studies and intriguing acquaintances will stimulate creative thought. Writers, painters and musicians enter a highly productive period. Do not take your talents for granted. A terrific evening may lie ahead. Be sociable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Use logic to get what you want. Someone who is unhappy in romance seeks your advice. Your own love life is secure! Develop your writing skills if you get the chance. Helpful information is forthcoming.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Not a good day to leave arrangements to others. Take things into your own hands. Others may fail to fulfill their obligations. Wait for an explanation before trying to sort out a complicated situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You feel more settled today. A long-term alliance may be developing. Study the newspapers for job leads. Extend a helping hand to someone in need. A parent-child relationship needs careful nurturing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Putting troublesome issues into perspective is easier today. Sweetness and light abound, thanks to a special relationship. Relax in the company of those you love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take things easy today, choosing casual meals and gathering over more formal events. Your attitude may not match a close relative's mood. So what? Do your own thing while loved ones do theirs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spiritual guidance is more important to you than ever. Worthy deeds done in the past produce new rewards. A domineering approach could alienate loved ones. Be willing to make intelligent concessions.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣ Declarer's play is often determined by the defense. This hand, from a team match, illustrates the point.

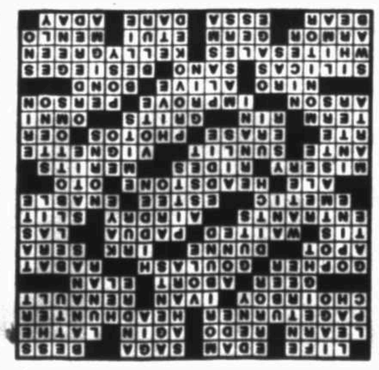

At both tables the final contract was six hearts, reached on identical auctions. At neither table did North consider the holding worth two forward-going bids, so both Norths elected to raise to two hearts rather than respond one spade. When South then made an ostensible game try of three diamonds, North elected to show spade values so to show spade values so both Souths considered the holding good enough to contract for 12 tricks in hearts.

At the first table West led the ace of clubs. Declarer ruffed, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. West was force to allow a spade to the queen to hold, otherwise the whole suit would be set up, and declarer ruffed another diamond as West showed out, discarding a club.

Declarer was running short of entries. Since another spade would allow a defensive ruff, South fell back on another chance. The queen of clubs was led from the board, covered by the king and ruffed with the eight. Three rounds of trumps were drawn, the king of diamonds was cashed, then the ten of spades was led. West allowed it to hold, but another spade was West's deathknell. Down to only clubs, West had to concede the last two tricks to dummy's jack of clubs and king of spades.

At the other table a trump was led. With several lines to choose from, declarer led a diamond and finessed the jack. When that held, two diamond ruffs in dummy, with the queen of spades and a club ruff furnishing entries to the closed hand, allowed declarer to draw trumps and set up a second spade as the fulfilling trick.

■ Performance set

IRRAN — Featured Trinity Broadcasting Network vocalist and gospel recording artist Vern Jackson will be performing at The First United Methodist Church here at 7 p.m. Friday.

No admission will be charged.

Jackson was the 1992 Vocalist of the Year for the Country Gospel Music Association and has won three Angel Awards.

■ Special concert set

The Adult Choristers of The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and the Sanctuary Choir of First Presbyterian Church will join in presenting a special concert of musical works by G.F. Handel April 9.

The concert, set for 3 p.m., will be held at first Presbyterian, 800 W. Texas Ave. No admission will be charged. A nursery will be provided.

The choral portion of the program will consist of Passion and resurrection excerpts from "Messiah" and selections from his "Coronation" anthems. Lester Ackerman, director of music at First Presbyterian, will conduct the combined choirs accompanied by a chamber oprchestra.

Vocal soloists will be Janet Menzie, Joe Duerksen and David Morrow.

■ Dolls on display

BIG SPRING — A century of history shows in the faces, hairstyles and costumes of a devoted doll collector's lifetime hobby, on display at Big Spring's Heritage Museum, 510 Scurry.

The exhibit, which includes about 1,500 dolls from the collection of a Big Spring family, recreates one of the city's landmarks — the Doll Museum. Although closed for many years, the building at Third and Gregg streets has long been a curiosity for local residents and visitors.

■ Performance set

Stephen Stills will perform at Midland College's Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. April 21.

Tickets are priced at $15 and $18.50. They may be purchased at Midland Sound, Dollar western Wear, Endless Horizons in Odessa, Circuit Electronics in Big Spring, and Dan's Music and Video in Pecos.

■ Third show set

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Company will present its third show of its 25th season, "Mother Hicks," at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, April 2, 8 and 9 at Permian Playhouse, 310 W. 42nd St.

"Mother Hicks" is set in a small town in Illinois during the Great Depression. The plays centers around a fondling girl, known only as Girl, played by Olivia Pettijohn; Tuc, a deaf boy eloquent in the langauge of his silence, played by Ryan Toomire; and Mother Hicks, an eccentric recluse who tends to all who need her healing, played by Betsy Cooper.

The troupe's next audition date is May 16 and 17. Hours are 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

For more information call the Playhouse, 1-915-362-2329. The box office is open Monday through Friday from noon to 6 p.m.

■ Works on display

A showing of works by textile artist Judith Shamp is on display at Pages & Prints, Plaza Oaks Shopping Center, through March.

Ms. Shamp is the owner of JR originals. Her work has been included in several invitational exhibits including the Yeiser Art Center's Fantastic Fibers show and has exhibited her work at the William Mather Museum, Turman Gallery and Indianapolis Museum of Art.

■ Workshops offered

Midland Community Theatre is offering adult acting workshops at Theatre Midland through April 13.

The "Acting: Beyond the Basics" will meet April 3-13. This workshop will be from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Cost is $30 for MCT members and $35 for non-members for each workshop. Sherry Engrstrom, who has earned her master of fine arts in acting and directing from the University of Houston, will be the instructor. For more information call 682-2544.

■ Paintings exhibited

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, is presenting through April 16 "Mysteries of Light and Shadow," an exhibition of pastel paintings by Kathleen Cook.

Ms. Cook, a resident of Kerrville, has been a professional artist for 26 years. Working exclusively in the vibrant pastel medium for the past 14 years, she is a signature member of the Pastel Society of America.

Her paintings have won major awards in national and international competitions. She has been featured in American Artist and Southwest Art magazines and is listed in "Who's Who in American Art," Bowker Edition.

She is a contemporary realist painter whose works are a non-traditional approach to her subject matter, said a release from Marilyn Bassinger, director of the Art Institute.

The public is invited to attend the free reception and gallery talk.

Regular hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. for more information call 550-3811.

■ Jazz Party set

ODESSA — The Odessa Jazz Association is presenting the 29th annual Odessa Jazz Party May 16-21 at the Holiday Inn Centre, here.

Musicians performing include Milt Hinton and Jack Lesberg, bass; Ken Peplowski, clarinet; Joe Ascione and Jake Hanna, drums; Bucky Pizzarelli, guitar; Ralph Sutton and Ray Sherman, piano; Harry Allen and Jim Galloway, saxophone; John Allred and Dan Barrett, trombone; and Ed Polcer and Randy Sandke, trumpet.

Hours are 8 p.m. to midnight May 16-20 and 2 to 6 p.m. May 21. Admission for all sets is $150 per person. Make checks payable to Odessa Jazz Association, P.O. Box 7948, Odessa, Texas 79760. for more information call 1-915-332-7871.

Buttons may be picked up at the Holiday Inn Centre May 16 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. and again at 7 p.m.

■ Presentation set

LUBBOCK — Yaron Svoray, son of Holocaust survivirs, is to present "In Hitler's Shadow: Neo-Nazis in the 1990s," at 8 p.m. April 6 in the University Center Allen Theatre at Texas Tech University.

In 1992, posing as a right-winged Australian journalist and neo-Nazi sympathizer, Svoray, a native Israeli, initiated a secret year-long mission to identify and expose the leaders of Germany's growing neo-Nazi movement.

Svoray, known as Ron Furey during his infiltration, testified before the U.S. Congress and the German ministry about his investigations. He now works with the Simon Wiesenthal Center to bring 34 leaders of the neo-Nazi movement to justice.

Tickets go on sale March 27 at the University Center ticket booth and all Select-A-Seat locations. Tickets are $5 for Texas Tech students and $10 for all others. For more information call 742-3610.

■ Broadcast set

Giacomo Puccini's "Tosca" will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House at 12:30 p.m. over KCRS.

American soprano Elizabeth Holleque will be heard in her Met broadcast debut in the title role, with Luciano Pavarotti as Cavaradossi, Juan Pons as Scarpia and Francois Loup as the Sacristan.

Israeli conductor Daniel Oren will make his Met broadcast debut leading the world. The announcer for the broadcast will be Peter Allen.

■ Exhibit hosted

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum, Seventh and Lee streets, is hosting the White House News Photographers Annual Awards Exhibition through April 22.

The exhibition, arranged through the Library of Congress, consists of 70 framed photographs and 47 clips on a continuous-loop videotape. The exhibition was made possible through support from Nations Bank, the Odessa Cultural Council and the museum's membership. For more information call 1-915-332-7123.

■ Program planned

A special program on William Shakespeare is planned for Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., April 8.

"The Bard's Birthday Celebration," which begins at 9:30 a.m. and ends at 12:30 p.m., includes 15-minute talks by Larry Griffin, Bob Anson and Quentin Taylor, and an acting portion featuring Marilyn Allen, Don Bachmann, Sherry Engstrom, Lori Taylor, Quentin Taylor, Bill Warren and Jerry Watson.

BBC organizers plan to present parts of scenes from "Macbeth," "Julius Caesar," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Romeo and Juliet" and "I Henry IV."

The event is again free. Members of the reading/discussion group known as "Shakespeare As We Like It" will host coffee and refreshments. At the mid-point break a birthday cake will be served.

■ Pianist to perform

Pianist and comedian Dale Gonyea performs at 7 p.m. April 6 at Midland High School Auditorium.

His performance marks the final concert in Midland Community Concerts 1994-95 season. New members signing up for the 1995-96 season will receive this concert as a bonus.

Concerts in the 1995-96 season will be at Midland High School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Admission to concerts is by season membership only. Those memberships cost $30 for adults, $10 for students through high school and $70 for a family membership.

MCC's 48th season includes the off-Broadway hit "Forever Plaid," The Magic of Ballroom with the Fred Astaire Studio Dancers, Harlem Spiritual Ensemble and the Imperial Chinese Acrobats & Magicians.

For more information on the season call 694-5314 or 694-2385. Memberships may be mailed to MCCA, P.O. Box 10836, Midland, Texas 79702.

■ Artists wanted

Las Manos is seeking artists for Septemberfest 1995.

Septemberfest is an outdoor festival held on the grounds of the Museum of the Southwest Sept. 8-10. The show is open to individual artists and crafts persons representing their own original work.

Categories for the juried show include, among others, ceramics, fiber, leather, jewelry, oil, pastels, photography and pottery.

Those interested in receiving an application or more information may write to Los Manos Septemberfest, P.O. Box 50668, Midland, Texas 797100, or call the artist chairman, 694-6828.

Deadline for applications is April 15. Las Manos is the auxiliary organization for the museum.

■ Exhibit displayed

ALPINE — The ninth annual "Trappings of Texas" exhibit of fine western art and custom cowboy gear is on display at the Museum of the Big Bend here.

The exhibit will remain until April 2. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

■ Choirs to perform

A concert of the combined choirs from Midland and Mifland Freshman high schools is set for 7 p.m. Thursday.

The choirs will perform music from their upcoming UIL competition and later choral competition at the Buccaneer Classic in Corpus Christi. These selections will include "Von dem Rosenbusch" by Schumann and "Lord in the Morning" by Paul Drummond.

The concert will be held in the Midland High School Auditorium, 906 W. Illinois Ave. No admission will be charged. The Booster Club will have a bake sale.

In addition, "Fiddler on the Roof" will be the MSHS musical this May. For more information call Barry Dowell, choral director, 689-1129.

■ Exhibit displayed

ODESSA — A mixed-media exhibit by artists Sara Waters and James C. Watkins of Lubbock is on display through April 15 in the Third Floor Gallery at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Md. Waters and Watkins, who are married, teach at Texas Tech University. She teaches sculpture in the school of art; he teaches drawing in the school of architecture.

The exhibit is funded in part by the Odessa Cultural Council. For more information call 552-2285.

■ Works displayed

A showing of works by local artist Boyd Harris and his exhibit "Digs at the Boydsville Tell" is on display at 1114 N. Big Spring St.

Gallery 1114 is featuring a retrospective of Harris' ceramics through April 27. The exhibit consists of pitfired and Raku ceramic sculptures and vessels. The art parallels the artist's interest in archaeology. The show has an installation room relating to his interest in archeology. Also on display are wall plaques, masks and paintings.

The artist's formative years were spent in New Mexico where his interests in the land and its prehistoric and primitive peoples was cultivated. In the late 1960s and early 1970s, Harris worked at the Roswell Museum and Art center.

For the past 12 years, Harris has taught a class at Midland College in Raku pottery and primitive firing techniques. He is a founding member of Gallery 1114 Inc., and his work is collected world wide.

Gallery 1114 is a co-operative center for modern and contemporary art. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday.

The show must go on: MCT celebrates 50 years

The Greek comic dramatist Meander called art "man's refuge from adversity." For countless Midlanders, the artistic community at Midland Community Theatre has provided just such an asylum since its inception in 1946.

Jami Owen, MCT volunteer who serves on the board of governors, credits the multi-talented, founding director Art Cole, now director emeritus, with nurturing the volunteer spirit during his 35 seasons here, thus setting a pace for those who followed.

"Art Cole made it jell," said Alva Butler, who was a member of the first board of governors along with George Putnam, Henry Murphey, J.S. Noland, H.S. Fogeron, Frank Stubbleman and Mrs. W.A. Waldschmidt.

"He had, and still has, a wonderful quality that just makes people want to come out and volunteer," Mrs. Owen said. "And that's been the basis of the strength at MCT. I am astounded every time I drive by the theater on Wadley, having lived in towns much smaller and larger than Midland, at the quality of the faculty, the staff, but most of all the volunteers. They are so committed."

Through the years, when disasters hit, volunteers were on the front lines restoring order.

"The show must go on," said MCT volunteer Marilyn Allen, referring to the fire following a performance of "Dracula" in 1978. At the time, MCT had just moved into its home at Theatre Midland.

"The smoke machine had been left on," said Mrs. Allen, honorary chair of the American Association of Community Theatre's Festival 1995, which will be held at Theatre Midland June 20-25.

"Art was out of town. The fire destroyed the entire set, but it was discovered before it did a great deal of harm to the theater. The next day, volunteers helped with vacuuming, cleaning and rebuilt the set so the show went on that night."

Longtime MCT volunteers Dottie and Jack Fox — who was stage manager for "Dracula" — were among those cleaning up the theater. That Saturday morning, at 7:30 a.m., when the couple went out to get in their car, Mrs. Fox said, "The girls (Cindy and Cissy) were already in the car, ready to go."

Mrs. Fox, whose mother, Mary Woods, made hats for the theater, first came to MCT to attend audition with a friend who didn't want to come alone. When they arrived, the director said he wanted everybody to read.

"I told Art I didn't want to be on stage. He said, 'There's lots to do backstage.' On 'Oklahoma,' I sewed patches on clothes, which is really not my field. I don't think anybody knew I was there because I took them home. I knew good and well I couldn't paint."

As time went on, Mrs. Fox found herself doing "one thing after the other," until she received a call from a friend, Bebe Fisher, another volunteer, who also was employed by the theater as its secretary. She was looking for a chairman for the mailing committee. Mrs. Fox said she'd be glad to help the chairman. Mrs. Fox recalled Mrs. Fisher's reply, "You are the mailing chairman. Be here tomorrow at 10. Thanks."

Through the years, the Junior League of Midland Inc. also has played an active role at MCT. Of the league's role, member Hariett Herd said, "They have been great volunteers there and have supported it financially also."

A longtime supporter of both, Mrs. Herd added, "I was interested in theater before Junior League ever got involved with it. I'm just interested in the cultural arts."

She and her husband, J.H. Harvey Herd, were drawn to MCT through their acquaintance with the Coles.

"I worked a lot in the box office and I was in three productions and on the board. I really enjoyed every minute of it. Harvey was also very active in it. I painted a few scenes, but didn't work backstage as much as in the box office. I liked meeting the people up front. I worked box office for years."

Another person who worked in the box office for years, having been initiated by Ruth Cole who trained all the box office volunteers, was Jane Kester, who first volunteered at MCT in 1957. That year, members of the board of governors included former President Bush and the late Wilmont Hunt, who served as president of the board of governors three times. His wife was Billie Hunt, who also a member of the MCT board of directors and has served as president of the Midland Symphony Guild and the Junior League of Midland Inc.

Mrs. Kester also made costumes during her time at MCT, working for Mae Dawson, staff costumer, on several occasions. By the time Mrs. Kester left the theater, she was in a staff position in the box office.

For Midlanders decades ago, MCT was, Paula Cahoon said, "Just a thing that was very accepted. And everybody took part in it. Everybody wanted to be a part of the theater. It was a small town and full of people who were alive and doing things. Everyone could go to the theater and say, "I can do that."

Mrs. Cahoon, who was the first woman to be president of MCT's board of governors, laughed as she recalled an accident she had backstage during the run of one of the musicals.

"Backstage was very dark in the wings. It had to be for some reason. There were lots of props standing in the wings. I had to make a quick exit, change my costume and get back on stage. I ran into something, fell, hit my head and knocked myself silly."

Fortunately, the dressers waiting for her saw what happened.

"I got up and dusted myself off. They came and got me and dragged me out and put my costume on me and put me out. I got back on stage like I was supposed to."

Lighting the shows presented its own set of difficulties that were well known by Joan Noel, who is running lights for MCT's production of "The Rainmaker" this season.

"The old boards themselves were so massive, they were as big as a kitchen dining table," said Mrs. Noel, whose husband, Ted, used to "do quite a bit" of construction.

"They had lots of little handles on them and big handles. You had to wrap around them and pull some down faster than the others. To raise the handles we sometimes needed more hands than two people had so naturally there were some flubs. Most of the time we survived."

Despite the fact that the shows were run by amateurs, their behavior was professional, Mrs. Noel said. "We tried to do it right. Art Cole was a stickler for being professional. We had to act as professional as we possibly could. We would get killed if we came out into the lobby in jeans.

They also had to be ready to act in a crisis, such as the one that occurred during the first "Sound of Music" presented at MCT. In that production, actors dressed as German soldiers would come into the audience and stand at the exits to keep people from leaving when they were searching for the family. One night, some of the men who were playing the soldiers did not arrive.

Mrs. Noel's son, Jeff, was pushing scenery back stage when he found himself conscripted into the German army along with another young man. Both were around 15 to 16 years old.

"The uniforms were too large," Mrs. Noel said. "They looked like little children standing up against the wall. It was kind of scary in a way. We knew they used a lot of young men in service at that time (during World War II). And it was kind of creepy to see young boys lined up in uniform."

The committed volunteer spirit at MCT is manifested in such dedicated people as Harry Harrison, who has spent decades working with the Summer Mummers, MCT's largest annual fundraising event; Bill Pomeroy and Bill Pennebaker, who have worked behind the scenes since the earliest years and are both now members of the board of trustees; and in backstage workers like Stan Shaeffer, who has been building sets for 49 years.

"When we first started out in that theater (City-County Auditorium), we didn't have a dime between us," Shaeffer said. "We used to hand rip the boards to get boards for the sets. We didn't even have a power saw. And it used to take us forever and a day.

"Then we got a hold of a fellow named Don McKibbin (now deceased), who worked with Humble Oil Co. And he had one of those circular power saws, so we wanted to make him president of the theater."

The City-County Auditorium had "no room backstage." During performances, moving the flats between sets meant they were carried outside to the three-

Purpose of Ham Hocks: Fun

By Pamela C. Allen

The organization that became known as Ham Hocks was founded on a fall night in the mid-1950's by a dozen or so "old hands" at Katie & Bill Hecks' home.

In an attempt to change the unorganized Stage Hands Union and give it a new name, Mickey Fitting suggested that "everyone knows that every ham needs a hock to hold him up." Of course, the name stuck.

A few months later, the first Ham Hock meeting was held at the Children's Room at Theatre Centre; Yettie White was elected the first president.

Today, as in the beginning, one had to do four shows to earn active Ham Hock status, and in order to make the actors happy, one credit could be on stage work.

Being composed of technicians, it became elitist in that being a back/off stage organization, actors were barely tolerated. Not much has changed in that basic attitude today. Providing it doesn't happen too often, we will make allowances for "techies" who occasionally lose their way to the shop and find they have been cast in a play.

At first, becoming a Ham Hock was bestowed by an earned invitation to join. In the 1960's the board requested that potential Ham Hocks had to seek inclusion.

Today, it has become, more or less, what I like to think of as the "Tom Sawyer School of Recruitment" — as in gettin' your co-workers, families and friends to come on down and help build or paint. (Yes, sometimes even fences!)

The biggest inducement — other than seeing your work on stage — to putting in as much time as we do working on productions, is meeting people.

Since its inception, there have been many weddings among the volunteer force. Who else could put up with a diehard Ham Hock, but another Ham Hock? It was and still is a family feeling group of people.

Looking at the old prompters — programs for each play — I read many family names working on both sides of the footlights. There are more single people and husband & wife teams working today than whole families.

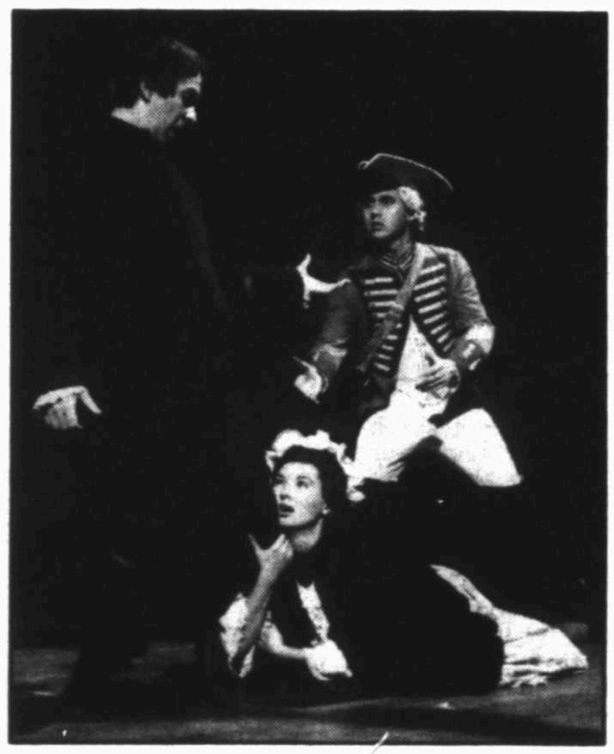

The avowed purpose of the Ham Hocks was to have fun! That is still true, but we have become the volunteer working arm of the Midland Community Theatre. We still enjoy each others' company at four annual Ham Hock outings — Angel Night, Ima Hog Annual Golf Tourney, Ham Hock Halloween Howl and Ham Hock Awards night that now includes The Spamm Awards.

The awards given out for the annual festivities are not the usual variety of Best Actor, etc. We poke fun at each other for the previous year's mistakes.

Most of the awards are self explanatory. For the Prima Donna Award, the Hammy goes to that actor who you've seen at every show and can do 15 minutes at the opening of the refrigerator door! Other awards include Terry Martin Klutz Award, the Golden Shaft and the Shaner-Petty Fit Award. All of these are in good fun and pick on every crew and actors and give us a chance to look back at what kind of year we had.

If you look on the rosters of any volunteer organization in this town you will see Ham Hocks. If it wasn't for the dedication of the first group of Ham Hocks showing us what it takes to be a volunteer, many organizations in Midland would not be what they are today. Midland Community Theatre sets the pace for volunteer organizations. The Ham Hocks are a big part of it.

Pamela C. Allen is president of Ham Hocks.

foot walkway between the two buildings — the American Legion Hall and the City-County Auditorium. Changing sets, Shaeffer said, "Took about three times as long as it should have."

Several plays staged at the auditorium called for a trap door, which the volunteers cut in the middle of the stage. After they cut the door, they discovered there was only about 3 1/2 to 4 feet under the stage before the caliche. Thus, they were only able to put in three steps, which made it difficult to exit. "In order to get under the stage at the bottom of the stairs, they had to bend way back." Shaeffer laughed. Everybody who walked down there looked like they were going down a slide."

Shaeffer still works backstage at MCT.

The shop has changed and evolved through the years.

"They've moved into a new class because they pay those supervisors," Shaeffer said of MCT's shop in recent years. "Modern tools have made it a lot easier." In the past, "they were practically all amateurs. Some of them couldn't nail. But if they couldn't nail, they could paint. There was always a use for them."

During its 50 seasons, MCT has moved from a budget of less than $5,000 in 1946 to a budget of $908,655 for 1995. Today, MCT, in its Theatre Midland home at 2000 W. Wadley Ave., employs 12 people full time and eight people part time.

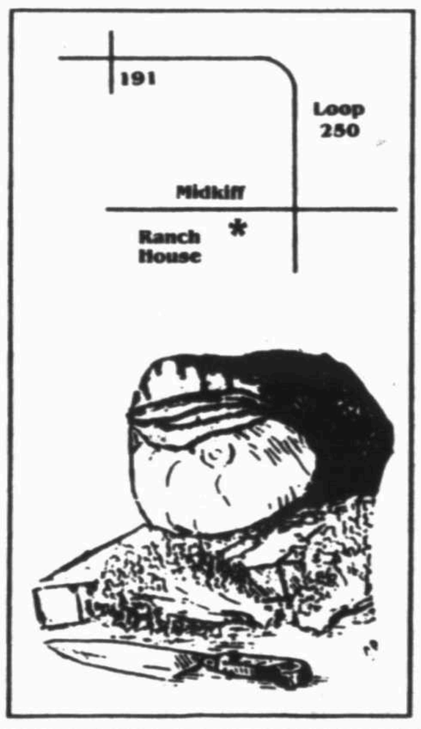

The community theater spirit hundreds of Midlanders found at MCT through the years was summed up by Mrs. Fox. "You could expand any kind of talent you had and learn to do something else," she said. "I think fun, friendship, good times makes community theater."

Longtime Midlander shares theater dream with community for 35 years

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

World War II brought a young soldier to West Texas who was to have a profound impact on the quality of life in Midland for close to four decades.

Equipped with boundless energy, the multi-talented Arthur S. Cole first saw the Permian Basin in 1942 when he was stationed at the Bombardier Training School at Midland Air Field as a news release writer and producer of war bond and musical revues. At the time, he was a sergeant in the U.S. Army Air Corps.

"We sold millions of dollars of war bonds in Midland and Odessa," said Cole, referring to the war-bond shows he produced between April 1942 and May 1945 when he was assigned to the 20th Air Force at Guam. "The shows were free to armed forces personnel and the public could get in if they bought a war bond."

While he was here, he made his Midland stage debut in "Arsenic and Old Lace." He also convinced his future wife, Ruth Rayner, to come to Midland in early 1943 to be married in the home of the late Naomi Lancaster. He had met Ms. Rayner in Fond Du Lac, Wis., when he worked for John B. Rogers & Co. Before the war, the 19-year-old Cole had directed community benefit shows across the country .

On his way to Guam in 1945, Cole, an Ohio native, wondered if a community theater might have a chance in Midland, which then had a population of 10,000. He wrote Midland arts patron Naomi Lancaster about the possibility of his finding employment here.

Midland had a history of local theater presentations that dated back to around 1930 and the Fine Arts Club. By the end of the 1930s, the name Midland Little Theatre had been changed to Civic Theatre. And, in 1942, the building of the City-County Auditorium, the site of the current Midland County Public Library, provided a convenient facility for the Civic Theatre. Cole's letter to Mrs. Lancaster included the idea of having "Midland Civic Theatre run like a small business." Mrs. Lancaster wired Cole: "We need you."

Mrs. Lancaster arranged a meeting between the Coles and 10 to 12 couples at her home on a Sunday afternoon.

"I presented my plan, and they bought it," said Cole, who returns to Midland this spring to reprise his role in "Harvey." "I wanted them to guarantee $200 a month for three months because if it was going to work, it would work in three months, and if it didn't work, they didn't owe me anything beyond the $600, and I didn't own them anything."

Cole recalled that geologist H.S. Forgerson, said, "'Hell, you can't live in Midland, Texas, on $200 a month. We'll pay you $250.' And they did."

The Coles arrived in Midland Jan. 28, 1946, which was the opening night for Midland Civic Theatre's production of "It Pays To Advertise."

"Within an hour after the show, overheated wires on photoflood lights on the stage ignited the curtain and fire gutted the City-County Auditorium, bringing an untimely end to this not too enthusiastically received show, and as it developed, to Midland Civic Theatre," said William H. Pomeroy, longtime supporter of theater arts.

Thus, MCT's first productions were presented in the high school auditorium until the City-County Auditorium could be restored. For the first six years of MCT's existence, Cole was the only paid employee, working as director, business manager, custodian and juggler of numerous other responsibilities.

"Many Midlanders still remember Art folding chairs, using a closet for an office, pulling the curtain, sweeping up after a performance," said Mary Frances Beverley, free-lance writer and longtime MCT volunteer. Until 1980, Cole shared his dream with the community.

"Midland was the only community in the country with the same, full-time paid director for more than three decades," Ms. Beverley said. "Without Art's leadership, MCT would likely have followed the limp-and-stumble pattern of many other amateur theaters."

In 1948, the Southwest Theatre Conference, covering a five-state area, was formed. Cole first attended in 1949. Later, he became its president. After the National Theatre Conference was formed, he also served as its president. In addition, he has served as a board member of the American National Theatre and Academy, the U.S. Institute for Theatre Technology Inc., and as the U.S. representative of American Educa-tional Theatre Association.

In 1965, MCT was invited by the American National Theatre and Academy and by the director of the American Community Theatre association to compete in the Third International Festival of Amateur Theatre in Monaco, sponsored by Prince Rainier and Princess Grace. Cole said they were told that their play "was the only one through which Prince Rainier stayed awake."

MCT's production was "The American Dream" by Edward Albee. Cole cut it to 48 minutes rather than 60, because he was horrified at the prospect of the curtain "being rung down in our faces if we went overtime." The moderator for the American entry's critique period said, "There were no flaws in the Midland production. Our panel has no criticism to make."

Cole was elected to the Council of International Theatre Association's Congress in 1967 and toured amateur theaters in Europe. The next year he became a member of the Theatre Appraisal Committee of the National Theatre Council, which produced the book "Theatre in America," released in 1968.

Cole was presented with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Annual Cultural Achievement Award and became president of the American Theatre Association in 1969. During his term, he put together the first national festival of community theaters in the United States. Also, in 1969, he was elected to the nine-member Council of International Amateur Theatre Association, the only American to serve on this board. He was given the first David Bryant Award by the Theater's director strives for quality, membership

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

A cold north wind blew tumbleweeds across the highway the day Don Bachmann caught his first view of Midland.

"I remember driving in from the airport, and I was thinking, 'My goodness this is desolate countryside,'" said Bachmann, recalling the January day in 1980 when he began his position as director of Midland Community Theatre. "Then, within a matter of days I came to the conclusion that we might be short on a pleasant climate and a pleasant environment, but we were sure long on pleasant people.

"And I say this wherever I go — the greatest strength in Midland, Texas, is the people who live here. They care about their community and they want it to be all it can be. And that's why the theater is successful. A lot of people have given of their time and financial resources to make it one of the top 10 community theaters in this country."

His arrival marked the close of Art Cole's successful 34-year-run as founding director of Midland Community Theatre.

"You're following someone of immense magnitude, who made a major impact not only in the Midland area, but also in the state, the region and the country," Bachmann said. "His credentials are a mile long."

Bachmann viewed the opportunity to step into MCT's director's chair as challenging.

His Midland directorial debut came when he directed the comedy "No Sex Please, We're British." "Fortunately, it wound up being a smash hit," Bachmann said. "Everybody liked it, and said, 'Well, maybe this guy isn't so bad after all.'"

Now in his 16th season as director, Bachmann finds the theater "still has the same accent" in several areas — play selection for the season, educational opportunities, youth theater and volunteers.

"We are now and always will be a volunteer-based theater," Bachmann said.

The theater has the same number of volunteers as it has had in the past, said Bachmann. "I think the numbers are basically the same, but they've shifted in their area of focus. Before we've had more volunteers working construction. Now we have more volunteers working on running crews."

"Hopefully, we're a little bit better at everything we do," he said. "I hope we've evolved and gotten stronger. The quality of the shows we do, through the natural process of evolution, has gotten stronger."

When it comes to membership, Bachmann said, "We strive to get about 5 percent" of the community. "We'd like to get more, but 5 percent is double what the average theater can draw."

MCT is conducting its membership drive and anticipates having 4,500 members at the end of the drive, he said.

As MCT looks ahead to the next decade, Bachmann said, "The theater wants to do more educationally and that's on all levels, whether that be with our youth theater program, our college association or continuing education for adults."

MCT wants "to ensure the financial security of the theater by building our endowment funds," Bachmann said.

This is a precautionary measure, he said. "The theater is probably the strongest arts institution in the community. We run the theater in the black year to year and only provide those services which we can afford to provide."

In addition, Bachmann said, the theater is working to "increase or expand the size of the membership base. We are going to try to get that number up over 5,000."

To achieve this goal, Bachmann said the theater plans to make a stronger marketing push, to provide more opportunities for people to participate in theater activities. "People want, in terms of main stage season, family entertainment by and large, but they also want to see a balanced season. That's been the cornerstone of the theater for 50 years."

The theater has kept ticket prices "artificially low," Bachmann said. "When you're a member of MCT, you're coming to see, for example, a top- notch musical like 'Annie,' and you're paying $5 to get in the door. A comparable ticket for a comparable quality performance would cost you five times as much any place else (in amateur theater circles). And when you get to the professional world, you're not talking five times as much. You're talking 10 times as much."

Out of the around 4,600 community theaters, Bachmann said, "There's only a couple of dozen community theaters in the country who do the caliber of work that we do."

When he looks at the broad view of "arts in the community," Bachmann said, "It's really a journey. I don't think you ever arrive. And, hopefully, you just continue to get better at what you do and provide more to your community, and if not more, certainly a higher quality. And that's what we strive to do."

As he looks over his years of association with MCT, his memories center around the people he has met and worked with in various productions.

"I've always enjoyed the high-quality productions we've mounted, but the greatest enjoyment to me comes from working with new people and watching them achieve all that they are capable of achieving. As an example, last year we did a production of 'A Few Good Men,' and we had several people who were just brand new to the theater. They came in and did an absolutely stellar job on an extremely difficult show. I couldn't have been prouder of their accomplishment."

Bachmann also has felt pride even when the show was not as well received by the audience as he would have liked.

"I have to consider where the people started and where they finished. It makes me like a coach. He may not win every game in the season, but he's getting 110 percent from his players. Any coach that isn't happy with that is crazy."

Julie Sharma, who plays Eliza Doolittle, and director Don Bachmann work between scenes on MCT's production of "My Fair Lady."

MCT to host fund-raising gala

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Midland Community Theatre remembers its past during its 50th anniversary season while it secures its future by holding its first fund-raising gala for its capital endowment fund in more than a decade.

"It's been 15 years since we have had a fund raiser for this endowment," said Jami Owen, chairman of the gala committee and member of the MCT board of governors. "Anyone who gives a donation for this endowment fund campaign will be giving to the future of MCT because that endowment ensures MCT's life and survival."

The black tie gala is planned for April 27 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"What better way to celebrate than to bring back the founder of MCT, Art Cole," Ms. Owen said. "We talked with Art. He agreed to come back and wanted to do 'Harvey,' which of course is the delightful story about the six foot tall invisible rabbit."

MCT has produced "Harvey" three times, said Ms. Owen, who began her association with MCT five years ago when she first moved to Midland and joined the MCT Singers.

"The first time was in the early '50s and then the late '60s, the mid '80s and now it's pleasing audiences once again," said Ms. Owen. Starring with Cole will be Pat Baskin, who has been in numerous MCT productions over the years including "Harvey" with Cole. Following the gala, "Harvey" will be on stage in Davis Theatre I April 28-May 13.

Although the gala is black tie, not everyone will be thusly attired.

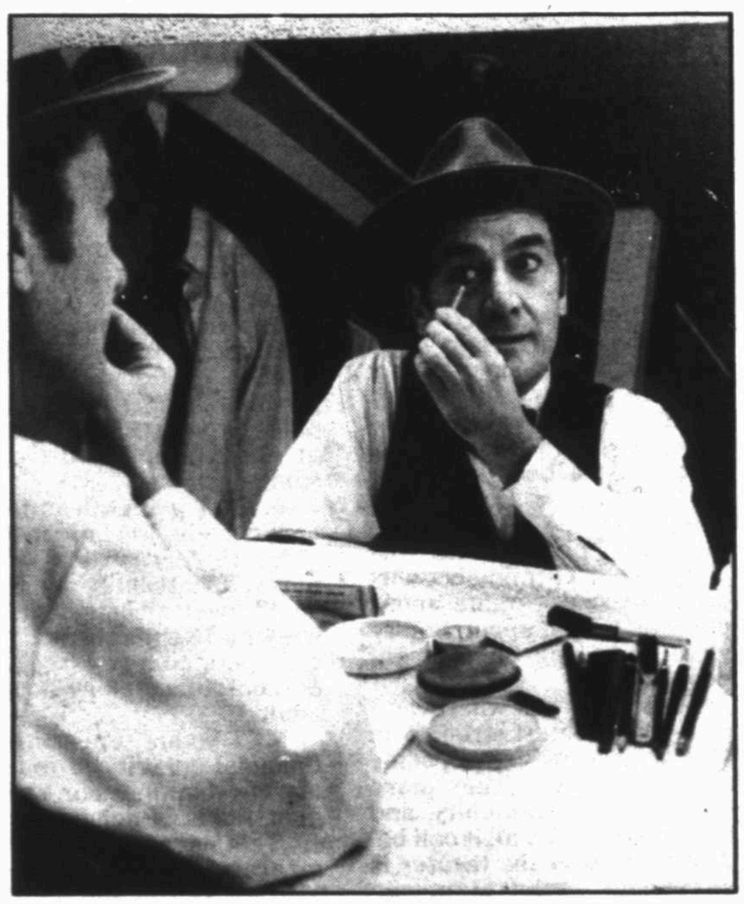

"People can also costume themselves in any attire that reflects a role that they've done on the MCT stage," said Ms. Owen. Admission to the gala ranges from $250 to $5,000.

"We have different categories of giving," said Ms. Owen. "The top category is $5,000 and above. These people will attend a dinner with Art Cole before the show."

Included in the admission price at all levels is the theater performance of 'Harvey' on Thursday, April 27, dessert and talking with the cast after the show.

"Anyone who remembers Art Cole will especially be delighted, and those of us, and I include myself in this latter category, that do not know Art are looking forward to meeting him," Ms. Owen said. "I've done research in the archives preparing myself for this gala and have come across stories about Art. I've talked with people who've reminisced about Art.

"Every time I talk to someone who worked with Art, their eyes mist over and they have a wonderful story about him. He had a wonderful and still has a wonderful quality that just makes people want to come out and volunteer. And that's been the basis of the strength at MCT.

Art Cole prepares for his performance in the 1969 MCT production of "Harvey." He will return to the MCT stage this spring to again play this role along with Pat Baskin.

MCT programs

The McLaren Comedy Playwriting Competition honors Mike McLaren, a writer, actor and radio personality who often appeared in Midland Community Theatre productions.

Past winners in the competition include "Always the Bride," 1990, Ken Girard, Los Angeles; "Flyaway Home," 1991, Bryan Williams, New York; "Dry Thunder," 1992, Bob King, Nashville, Tenn.; "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins," 1993, Rick Hamby, Big Spring; and "Maggie's Dance," 1994, Rick Hamby, Big Spring.

Pickwick Players gets young people involved in theater

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Since its creation in 1946, Midland Community Theatre has continuously conducted a theater school and produced plays for children.

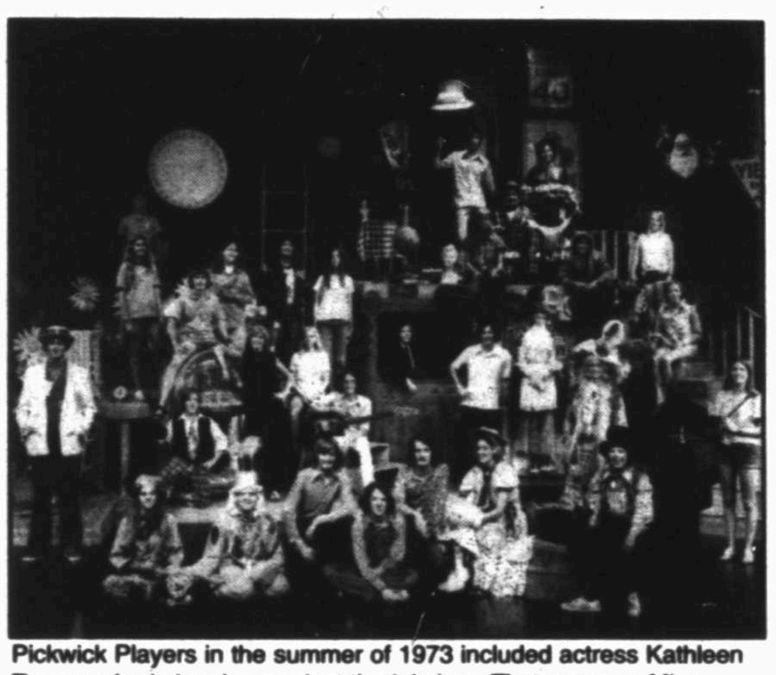

In the 1960s, MCT began an intensive summer program of children's productions. The program had a three-fold purpose: to give performance opportunities to young people in the program, to provide children with quality theater and to give college students hands-on experiences working with youth theater. The Pickwick Players grew out of that program; its inaugural production was a rock 'n' roll version of the classic fairy tale "Sleeping Beauty" directed by Ed Graczyk.

In 1972, the Winifred Ward Prize was given to the Pickwick Players by the Children's Theatre Association of America for being the outstanding new children's theater company. In 1992, the Southwest Theatre Association chose the Pickwick Players as the first recipient of its Amateur Children's Theatre of the Year award.

This decade, the Pickwick Players have been the U.S. representative at three international theater festivals, including — August 1990, the International festival of Youth Theatre, Christchurch, New Zealand; April 1992, Second World festival of Children's Theatre, Antalya, Turkey; and October 1994, 10th Austrian International Youth Theatre Festival, Heidenreichstein, Austria.

This decade, the Pickwick Players have been representative at three international theater festivals.

Membership is by audition for those in grades seven through 12. MCT also has theater classes for children. Rene Brister Chambers is the director of both. Today, under Ms. Chambers' direction, the Pickwicks are known for their performances of realistic adolescent dramas and dramatizations of children's classic literature such as "The Pinballs," "Troubled Waters" and "The Secret Garden." This May, the troupe will perform "Anne of Green Gables."

Pickwick Players in the summer of 1973 included actress Kathleen Turner, who is leaning against the jukebox. That summer, Miss Turner, the Pickwick's acting coach, played the villain in the Summer Mummers. Also pictured is Terri Wagener, the final writer on the screenplay for "Fried Green Tomatoes," standing under the Speed Limit 40 sign. This is from the production "Runaway," directed by Ed Graczyk, who is center front, third from right.

COLE: Former Midlander shared dream with community

(From 4)

ATA in 1973.

He and his band of volunteers went to to Dundalk, Ireland, in 1974 for the Maytime Festival. They presented "Butterflies Are Free." Cole received the Best Producers Award and Jim Salners, who appeared in MCT's 30th anniversary production of "Oklahoma," won the Best Actor Award.

"There is no doubt that Art Cole's stature in the area of the amateur theater helps promote our theater and community," Mrs. Frank Cahoon, longtime MCT volunteer, said in 1976.

In his long association with theater in Midland, "Art never had anything but great expectations for MCT, personally working for and demanding the best from hundreds of volunteer workers who share his attitude," Ms. Beverley said. "In 1976 a front page story in The National Observer noted, 'Theater (in Texas) is flourishing ... community theater has been sparked into life by the success of the Midland Community Theatre, the granddaddy of modern community theaters.'"

In 1980, Cole became director emeritus of MCT and moved to Colorado.

"What else was there for me? There were no more challenges. I finally had completed the job I had started out in 1946 to do. It took me a long time — 35 years — but we did it, and paid for it with not one bag of tax money. I decided to do something else with my life."

When he left Midland, Cole returned to an avocation he had left behind in the 1950s.

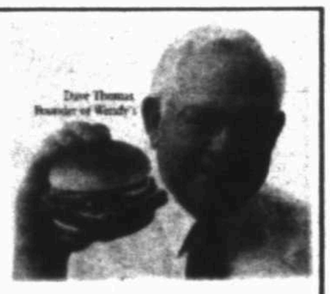

"I was a Sunday painter in the '40s and early '50s till we moved into that building on Indiana, and I just didn't have any time to paint anymore. In a way I had always been painting because I had been designing all my own stage sets. That was sort of painting. But I had always wanted to paint full time."

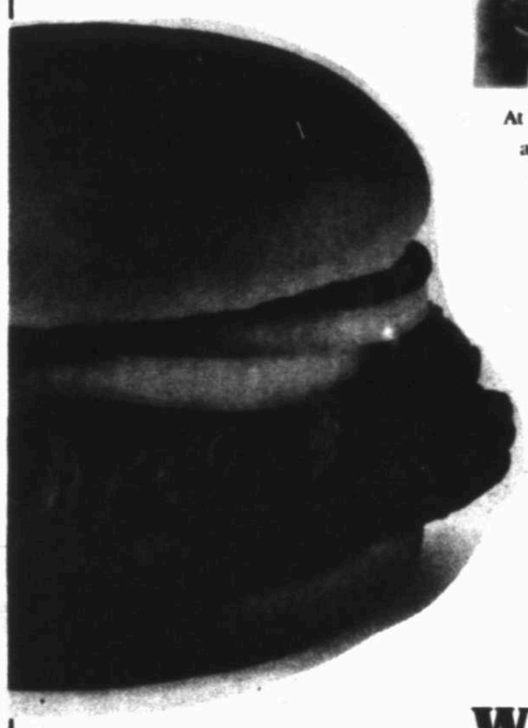

Cole, who now lives in Santa Fe, N.M., considers himself "a very lucky man" and describes himself as "a plateau person."

"I create the next plateau. When I look back over my life, that's exactly what I did. Finally, when the present theater was all built, I couldn't see any more plateaus there, and I had achieved what I set out to do finally. I'm just a slow doer."

As for his life today, he said, "I love it. Every day is a new excitement."

ACT IX celebrates 25th anniversary

Staff Report

ACT IX was organized in 1969 to assist the theater in carrying out its services and programs.

ACT IX is the women's auxiliary of Midland Community Theatre Inc. Its purpose is to promote interest in the theater, as well as assist the theater staff in maintaining and operating its programs.

The members assist by taking tickets, serving refreshments, mailing CUES, assisting with MCT's annual membership drive and staging fund-raisers for the theater.

The club meets once a month September through May. At these meetings members are treated to social events, programs, fashion shows, decorating ideas and cooking tips.

ACT IX was organized in 1969 to assist the theater in carrying out its services and programs. The name ACT IX stands for Auxiliary Community Theatre and 1969, the year it was formed.

ACT IX's first regular meeting was Sept. 22, 1969; the first officers were: president, Gene Velton; vice president, Joanie Holt; and secretary, Bebe Fisher. Committees formed included dressing rooms, props storage, wardrobe, sewing room, theater decoration, office volunteers, stamp books and hospitality. ACT IX began operations with fewer than 40 members.

ACT IX is celebrating its 25th anniversary. The club recently celebrated another successful Follies "Fun" Raiser co—produced by Nations Bank at the Yucca Theater.

ACT IX is planning a May Spring luncheon to honor past presidents.

Anyone interested in joining ACT IX may contact Siri Langston, membership chairman at 571-2264 or Kim Nearburg, president, at 684-5479.

Mummers remains theater's major fund-raiser

In 1949, Art Cole, Bill Pennebaker, Bill Pomeroy and Norris Creath were looking for ways to raise money for Midland Community Theatre. The idea of a summer melodrama appealed to them. Thus, the annual Summer Mummers was born.

In 1974 and again in 1977, the Summer Mummers was staged at the Maytime International Festival in Dundalk, Ireland. In 1993, olio segments from the annual event were presented in China under a sister-city cultural exchange between Midland and Dongying, China.

The first Mummers brought in $1,800, which was around 20 percent of the theater's budget. In 1994, at $1 a bag, the sale of popcorn brought in $32,000.

Mummers remains the theater's major annual fund-raiser. In recent years, the event, which includes a melodrama and olio, has brought in around 30 percent of MCT's gross budget, said Doug Heck, third generation Summer Mummers volunteer and producer of the 1995 melodrama. "In fact, over the past few years, Mummers grosses more than MCT membership sales."

Volunteers have made it possible. Mummers uses around 400 volunteers throughout the year, Heck said.

This summer, around 12,000 will see the event during 31 performances. By the close of the 1995 season, just more than 1,000 Summer Mummers performances will have played at the Yucca Theatre to audiences who have cheered on the heros and heroines, while booing, hissing and throwing popcorn at the villains.
