Suspect still jailed

BIG SPRING — A local man arrested Monday on charges of aggravated kidnapping and burglary with intent to commit sexual assault remains in the custody of city police today.

Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said today the sheriff's department did not accept the transfer of Victor Mendez, 20, to the county jail. "We have asked them to hold him," Standard said.

Police had sought to have Mendez moved from their holding facilities.

Radio reports today said the transfer had taken place. "That has not occurred," Standard said in contradiction to the reports. "I forsee where it will (take place), but it has not happened yet."

Standard said Mendez could be transferred by the first of next week, when five county prisoners could be transported to the Texas Department of Corrections.

The delay in transfer is not due to overcrowding in the county jail, but arises from concerns of "personalities in conflict" if Mendez were to be transferred, he said.

Mendez was arrested by city police Monday in connection with the abduction of a 4-year-old girl from her home. The girl, who was captive for several hours, was later hospitalized with serious injuries.

Angels and Big Spring

MIDLAND — Two Big Spring nights will be held at Midland Angels baseball games July 23-24 at the Midland Angels Stadium.

The events are being sponsored by Big Spring Chamber of Commerce.

Tickets are free and are available at area radio stations, the Herald, and the Chamber of Commerce office.

Motorcycle hits tractor

BIG SPRING — A New Mexico man traveling through Howard County Wednesday is in stable condition at a Lubbock hospital today after being involved in a auto accident.

William A. Rank, 20, Ruidoso, NM, was transported from Scenic Mountain Medical Center to St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock by a Flight For Life helicopter after his motorcycle collided with another vehicle, a hospital spokesperson said.

Rank was traveling south on Highway 87 near the intersection of State Highway 46 when his vehicle struck a tractor traveling in the same direction, according to a Texas Highway Patrol report.

Rank's 1988 Kawasaki struck the tractor being driven by a Midland man after Rank attempted to pass the vehicle and the tractor attempted to make a turn off.

Woman injured

BIG SPRING — A Big Spring woman is in good condition at a local hospital today after suffering undisclosed injuries in an automobile accident early Tuesday morning, a hospital spokesperson said.

Virginia Howard, 62, is recuperating from undisclosed injuries at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after being injured when the blue Mustang she was driving on Texas Highway 350 Tuesday collided with another vehicle.

Howard's vehicle struck another vehicle being pushed in the road when the vehicle accidentally crossed over into the other side of the lane, according to a highway patrol report. The accident occurred after Howard's vehicle had just crossed over the crest of a small hill and was unable to stop in time, the report said.

The 1979 flatbed pickup truck being steered by Manuel Jara, 40, of Big Spring, was being pushed by friends after it had stalled, shortly after leaving a business close to where the accident occurred.

Forsan teen hurt

BIG SPRING — A Forsan teenager was treated and released from a local hospital Wednesday after the vehicle she was a passenger in went off the road and struck a concrete fixture.

Christy Mills, 17, Forsan, was a passenger in an undisclosed type of vehicle when the driver became distracted and veered from the road into a concrete telephone fixture, according to a highway patrol report. Mills suffered an injury when her head struck the dashboard of the vehicle; she was not wearing a seatbelt, the report said.

The driver of the vehicle, Stan Fraley, 25, Big Spring, did not require medical attention.

Trooper: Woman was going for her gun

By RUTH COCHRAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A Department of Public Safety trooper testified in County Court Wednesday that he now has no doubt a woman fleeing from police was going for a gun when officers tried to pull her from her truck.

Under questioning by defense attorney Robert Miller, DPS Trooper Weldon Jones told a six-person jury that Leslye Schulze was struggling violently, backing away and leaning over in the seat when officers tried to pull her from her truck after a 27-minute car chase through Big Spring in April.

Schulze is on trial for a misde-

"We had to hold her in place until (the ambulance) got there . . . I pulled (the arm) up only enough to get her handcuffed. I didn't handcuff her any differently from anyone else. meanor charge of fleeing to elude officers and nine misdemeanor traffic violation charges. While she was being arrested and handcuffed during the April 8 incident, Schulze's left arm was broken. The Big Spring woman has accused officers of police brutality.

Jones told Miller and the jury that after officers dragged Schulze through the window of her truck, another DPS trooper founded a loaded .22 rifle between the seats of Schulze's truck.

"After the fact, knowing there was a gun, yes she was going for the gun," Jones said in response to Miller's questions.

Besides Jones, five Big Spring policemen took the witness stand Wednesday with three or four more expected to testify today. All five testified that they participated in the half-hour car chase that wound through Big Spring.

Officer Richard Perez was the first to take the stand, and he told the four-woman, two-man jury that after spotting a speeding truck near the post office, he attempted to pull it over. Perez testified he chased the truck for eight minutes, often "at high rates of speed," before losing it.

Perez identified the driver as the defendant, Schulze, and said he tried several times to pull her over.

A red ribbon warned people that asbestos removal was underway at Marcy Elementary School.

Hazardous asbestos removed from school

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The stark black lettering on the red tape that recently surrounded entrances to Marcy Elementary School left no doubt that a hazard was present.

Danger — Asbestos, the warning read.

For the past few months, district employees have been removing material containing the cancer-causing agent from local school buildings.

The workers — trained and licensed by the state in asbestos removal — completed their task at Marcy Wednesday, according to Ron Logback, assistant business manager for the Big Spring school district.

Logback said the removal, which is mandated by federal law, was also done at Moss Elementary this summer and plans call for some removal at the high school building within the near future.

Inspectors from the Environmental Protection Agency recently toured local facilities and gave the district a "clean bill of health. They told us our district was in the top 10 percent as far as compliance with the rules go." — Murray Murphy, assistant superintendent.

"It's an on-going thing," Logback said. "We'll probably be doing it for the next ten years."

"We're only going to remove it when we're doing a major renovation or a maintenance repair. It'll be done on an as-needed basis," he added. "We're not planning any major (removal)."

Logback noted that the district began removing friable — easily crumbled — asbestos from local schools prior to 1987. The only remaining friable asbestos has been encapsulated to satisfy federal requirements.

But, when the district decided to replace carpeting at the Marcy library, officials decided to remove the underlying floor tiles, which contain the deadly material.

"When you do a major renovation, you expose the asbestos and then have to go in and do a major abatement," Logback said. "We wouldn't have done anything if we had left the floor tiles intact. But (once the tiles were exposed) we didn't see any reason to leave them in there."

An abatement was performed at Moss Elementary when district officials performed a heating system upgrade, and another is planned at the high school as soon as the building's boiler is replaced.

"We're only going to do work in areas where we're doing ma-

Logback said.

Assistant Superintendent for Instruction and Personnel Murray Murphy said that inspectors from the Environmental Protection Agency recently toured local facilities and gave the district a "clean bill of health. They told us our district was in the top 10 percent as far as compliance with the rules go."

Murphy added that future removal will probably only be done during the summer months when the buildings are vacant.

"That's about the only time we'll be able to do it," he said. "It's totally out of the question to do that when there's kids around."

Double shifts put new dam back on schedule

By MARC SCHWARZ
Staff Writer

STACY DAM — Project delays have forced Stacy Dam construction workers to undertake double shifts, but the dam should be finished on schedule, according to Joe Pickle, secretary/treasurer of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The main delay occurred as workers drilling the core trench, essentially a 150-foot deep trench at its maximum, struck weathered rock instead of the Permian limestone needed to ensure no water can seep underneath the dam.

"We had two choices," said John Arthur, resident engineer for the consulting engineering firm Freese and Nichols, Inc. "We could go back and dig a deeper core or we could build a concrete cut-off wall at the bottom of this trench."

Engineers elected to use a rock cut-off wall, which was poured with concrete, creating the cut-off wall. The delay cost about three days and a quarter of a million dollars.

"If we hadn't done something, the water might flow through the cracks in the weathered rock core, and the first thing you know, your dam's not holding water any more," Pickle said. "If you don't have a stable foundation, it gets slick and swells like a water balloon."

"That's what happened to Possum Kingdom Dam when it moved about a foot a few years ago. They thought it was going to go down the river. We've put $30 million into this dam, and we don't want it to move."

Arthur said the engineers and construction workers were well prepared to handle the core trench problem.

"It's not a rare problem," he said. "It's not the first time it's happened on this job. It's happened with concrete, creating the cut-off

Teens find stolen loot

KAUFMAN (AP) — Two Kaufman boys went fishing for crayfish and came up with so much stolen money they didn't believe it was real, police said.

Kaufman police Lt. Capt. Dick Osgan said a pair of 13-year-olds were at a stock tank near the city cemetery Wednesday when one of them needed a weight for his line. He went digging through a box containing scrap metal and found $15,500.

The boys thought it was play money and stuffed it into their pockets. Later they gave some bills to some girls and even tossed money along a city street. One girl showed money to her mother, and authorities were summoned to investigate, Osgan said.

Police later determined it was money taken from an April bank robbery, according to the Dallas Times Herald.

Osgan said the money found Wednesday was "only a drop in the bucket" compared with the sum stolen.

Doll sent to council

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The mailing of a voodoo doll to two City Council members, along with a note saying a spell would be cast on them if they attempted to trim the police budget, has prompted authorities to investigate.

Authorities say the small doll, made of corn husks wrapped in cloth and painted black with white facial features, was addressed Wednesday to Councilmen Weir Labatt and Nelson Wolff.

The doll arrived in a small box wrapped in brown paper with the city's detailed zip code, investigators said.

Labatt reported the mailing to Mayor Pro Tem James Hasselocher, who ordered a police investigation.

Hasselocher was the ranking council member Wednesday because Mayor Lila Cockrell was out of the city.

"Sending something like that and making threats requires an investigation," said Hasselocher.

Last year, Labatt and Wolff tried unsuccessfully to reduce the amount of money budgeted for the police helicopter.

Siamese twins born

LUBBOCK (AP) — Doctors say Siamese twins who were born at a hospital here are in an undetermined condition.

The twins were born Wednesday at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, said Tom Neff, the institution's senior vice president.

A hospital physician who spoke on condition of anonymity also confirmed the births, the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reported. The doctor said the twins, who are joined at the abdomen and share a common liver, were delivered by Caesarian section.

The conjoined twins were born between 3 a.m. and 6 a.m., the doctor said, adding the sex of the infants was not known.

Disease evidence found in whooping cranes

By The Associated Press

San Antonio Zoo officials say evidence of avian tuberculosis in an ailing female whooping crane poses big problems for wildlife officials' attempts to protect the endangered birds from extinction.

Meanwhile, Canadian and U.S. wildlife experts recommended discontinuation of a whooping crane foster parent experiment that cost the governments a total of $2 million but failed to produce a single egg in 15 years.

The ailing 3-year-old female whooping crane, found near death at its Aransas County habitat in Austwell last April, was being treated at the zoo. It is one of two that have remained at the refuge since the winter of 1987.

"In all probability, the crane definitely has avian tuberculosis," Ken Fletcher, zoo veterinarian, said Wednesday. "And if that's the case, we've got a real problem on our hands."

Wildlife officials fear the other whooper, a male, also may have contracted avian tuberculosis, although no tests have been conducted on it.

A tissue sample from the abdominal cavity of the female whooper was sent last month to the National Wildlife Health Research Center in Madison, Wis.

Animal care officers there have confirmed that acid-fast bacillus, the cells that indicate tuberculosis, are evident in the tissue sample.

The acid-fast bacteria have been found in ducks in Texas but never in a whooping crane here, Fletcher said. However, avian tuberculosis has been found in a western flock of cranes that migrates from Idaho to New Mexico each winter, he said.

Officials don't know if other cranes in the 138-bird flock have contracted the disease or if the birds were infected at the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge, where they winter near Rockport, said Fletcher.

He told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times refuge officials have limited measures to protect the cranes from infection. But no treatment is available for the terminal disease, which usually kills a bird within a year.

Fletcher said whoopers normally live for at least 40 years, and only about 200 are known to exist in the United States.

The female whooping crane's tissue sample was recently sent to a U.S. Department of Agriculture laboratory in Ames, Iowa, for conclusive testing. Results are expected within a month, officials said.

Avian tuberculosis has never been treated successfully, said Nancy Thomas, endangered species disease specialist at the research center, the only laboratory that conducts research on infectious diseases for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The two whooping cranes that may be suffering from avian tuberculosis have eaten little and have lost weight during the past few months. Their breast bones protrude, and they have lost plumage.

"These birds have been extremely weak and ragged-looking," said Brent Giezantner, Aransas refuge manager. "These two birds are the first that have ever stayed at the refuge for two summers in a row."

Confidentiality repeal sent to Gov. Clements

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill repealing a new law that allows police to withhold the names of felony crime victims will be signed by Gov. Bill Clements, a spokeswoman says.

"At the direction of the governor, our staff worked with sponsors of the bill to make sure the problem was straightened out," said Rossanna Salazar, deputy press secretary to Clements.

The repeal was approved by the House with a 134-0 vote after it was amended to protect certain crime victims from being contacted by companies soliciting business, such as those selling home security systems.

The Senate concurred with the House amendment, 27-0, and sent the bill to Clements for his consideration.

News organizations decried the confidentiality law after a number of law enforcement agencies began withholding information they previously had made public. The law was passed in the regular session that ended May 29.

Some agencies withheld information on missing children and accident victims, said George Irish, San Antonio Light publisher, in testimony this week to a House committee. Irish represented Texas Media, a first amendment and freedom-of-information coalition of seven Texas news media organizations, in urging repeal of the new law.

Rep. Fred Blair, who sponsored the confidentiality law and the bill repealing it, said the original measure "was being broadly applied to accident victims, DWIs, missing children — all the kinds of things that we want to provide information on."

"So we repealed it, and we're going to take a look at it in the future," said Blair, D-Dallas. Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, was the Senate sponsor of both measures.

Blair said the bill sent to the governor accomplishes "about half" of what he wants in order to protect crime victims, but that he wanted "an ample opportunity for full discussion" before attempting further changes.

The bill, in addition to the repeal, would prohibit using crime victim information obtained from law enforcement agencies to solicit business from the victim or a family member of the victim.

The prohibition would apply to victims who were physically injured in a crime or whose home was illegally entered.

The bill would give the attorney general power to sue under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act to stop such use of the information. Violation of the law would be punishable by civil penalties totaling up to $10,000 and the payment of court costs and attorney's fees.

Court decision clears way for cigarette/cancer trial

AUSTIN (AP) — Six major cigarette manufacturers, plus their trade and research groups, have lost an early round in a suit by the family of a longtime smoker who died of lung cancer, but a lawyer for the companies says they still expect to win the fight.

The early round victory by the family in the Texas Supreme Court cleared the way for a trial on the merits of the case even though the woman didn't smoke the companies' brands of cigarettes.

The Supreme Court, without comment Wednesday, denied an appeal by the "Big-6" companies, The Tobacco Institute, Inc., and The Council for Tobacco Research — U.S.A. Inc. in the Jefferson County case.

A trial court granted summary judgment for the institute, council and companies, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco; Philip Morris, Inc.; Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.; Lorillard, Inc.; Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.; and Liggett Group, Inc.

The Beaumont Court of Appeals reversed that decision and returned the case for trial. The Supreme Court affirmed that ruling but offered no comments on the merits.

The damage suit was filed by I.D. Rogers and the two surviving children of Marjorie Rogers, who was a regular smoker by age 16, smoking one to 1½ packs per day. At age 57 in November 1982, she was diagnosed as having lung cancer. She died in December 1983.

The Rogers family alleged that the six major American cigarette manufacturers entered into a civil conspiracy and "concert of action" to suppress and conceal certain scientific and medical information relating to cigarette smoking and disease.

To carry out their conspiracy, the Rogers family alleged, the Big-6 formed The Council for Tobacco Research — U.S.A., Inc., and The Tobacco Institute, Inc., and these organizations, along with B-6, have carried out such purposes since 1954 and 1958, respectively.

The family pleaded that Marjorie Rogers would likely have quit smoking, and would have avoided contracting lung cancer except for the conspiratorial conduct.

The Beaumont appeals court noted that Mrs. Rogers smoked only cigarettes manufactured by the American Tobacco Co., which is not a party on appeal because that cause of action was severed.

The basic position of the non-supplying manufacturers, according to the appeals court, "is that a single cigarette manufacturer has a duty to inform only the users or consumers of any hazards associated with the use of its own products and that, under no circumstances, would a cigarette manufacturer's duty to warn extend to the users of a competitor's product."

"We disagree," the appeals court said. "An attractive, stimulating advertisement of one manufacturer could easily influence a person to smoke a different brand of cigarettes."

William Townsley of Beaumont, a lawyer for the Rogerses, said the case was based on the theory that the industry itself was to blame for "misleading the public about the health effects" of smoking cigarettes.

"I think we should evaluate the conduct of industry acting as a group, speaking as one voice," Townsley said.

Collectors selling guns tied to tower shooting

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas area gun collector is offering for sale the seven guns that Charles Whitman carried to the top of the University of Texas Tower for a bloody rampage that left 16 dead, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

The newspaper said in a copyright story that sale of the three rifles, one shotgun and three pistols stirs painful memories of the 1966 attack in which 31 people were wounded.

Wayne Buxton of Richardson purchased an advertisement in a gun collector's publication for the sales, according to the newspaper.

The report said Buxton had instructed editors of "Shotgun News", which has run the ad in three issues of the three-times-a-month publication, not to divulge his name or phone number to callers.

However, the newspaper said it tied the post office box number given in the classified ad to Buxton. The gun collector did not immediately return telephone calls today by The Associated Press.

Buxton told the newspaper he doesn't want to discuss what the ads call The Whitman Collection because "there's too much pain in the state of Texas" associated with the slayings.

"I have no interest whatsoever in resurrecting pain or any sad feelings," he said. "It's a source of pain to certain people, and I don't want to get into that."

Buxton, describing the pain as "a function of time," said the pistol used to kill President Lincoln is now a tourist attraction in a museum in Washington, D.C.

"But there's no pain involved" in the Lincoln assassination weapon because sufficient time has passed, he said. Buxton would not tell the newspaper how he obtained the weapons or how long he has owned them.

House approves expansion of protected coastal areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort to sharply limit oil drilling off the U.S. coast, spurred by the Exxon Valdez disaster, is headed to the Senate with a strong voice of approval from the House.

The House on Wednesday approved the most extensive ban on offshore oil leasing of the decade, widely expanding prohibitions for one year against drilling off large portions of the Atlantic, Pacific and Alaska coasts.

"Those people who have allied themselves with the oil industry understand how dramatic a statement this is now," Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., said before the vote.

The one-year moratorium was part of the $11 billion Interior Department appropriation bill, which was approved 374-49. There was no separate vote on the oil leasing provision.

The Senate has not voted on the Interior appropriation and several senators plan to introduce similar prohibitions.

The Bush administration opposes the expanded prohibitions.

Under the House bill, leases for offshore oil drilling would be banned in areas off the coasts of California, Florida, a stretch of the Atlantic Ocean between Maine and Maryland and, for the first time, off part of Alaska's coast.

The appropriations bill sets spending by the Interior Department and related agencies for fiscal 1990, and the provision prohibits appropriated money from being used to lease or approve oil drilling or exploration in the areas during the year.

Miller and other legislators are seeking to permanently ban drilling in some areas of the outer continental shelf.

"This moratorium will provide needed breathing room to enact the stronger safeguard I have proposed of a 10-year moratorium," said Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J.

Support for limits on offshore oil exploration has grown since the March disaster in which the tanker Exxon Valdez spilled 1.6 million gallons of oil into the pristine Prince William Sound.

Smaller tanker accidents over one weekend last month spilled oil into water off the Texas, Delaware and Rhode Island coasts.

The American Petroleum Institute, the major industry trade group, called the House vote "a tragedy for our nation."

"In an emotional reaction to tanker oil spills, the House has taken an action that will inevitably boomerang," the institute said in a statement. "Tanker traffic bringing imported oil into U.S. waters will have to increase as domestic oil production continues to decline."

De la Garza takes the most trips, Ortiz sees the most countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Mickey Leland's overseas travel is "hot and sweaty and substantive," Rep. Solomon Ortiz, who visited 27 countries in two years, says he takes trips, not junkets.

All told, the Texas congressional delegation took 74 trips in 1987 and 1988 at a minimum cost to taxpayers of $400,000, according to Public Citizen, a congressional watchdog.

Their destinations ranged from Leland's trips crisscrossing the Third World to a series of economic conferences Rep. Martin Frost attended in Madrid, Paris and Milan.

"Trips are important and not junkets," said Ortiz, who visited more countries on his seven trips than any other Texan. "They are designed to give congressmen a first-hand view of the problems and developments abroad."

On one trip alone for the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, the study said Ortiz was in nine countries — Mexico, Belize, Jamaica, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Guyana, Trinidad, Tobago and Venezuela.

During another fact-finding mission on narcotics, Ortiz touched down in five more countries — Korea, Thailand, Burma, Singapore and Indonesia — at a cost of $18,878.

Ortiz said he also travels as a member of the Armed Services Committee because "we are concerned about the living conditions of our GIs. We're concerned about where they live, where they sleep and the diseases they face. We want to see if military contracts are being carried out and whether buildings are built to specification."

"As a general proposition," says Frost, a Dallas Democrat, "it is very helpful for members (of Congress) to gain exposure to other parts of the world."

Frost, a member of the House Rules Committee, which has no role in drafting legislation, took two of his three trips with the panel. One journey took him to Spain, Portugal, Morocco and the Ivory Coast, the second to Spain, Malta, Turkey, Kenya and Senegal.

Frost argues that the influential Rules Committee does decide which bills go to the floor and whether they can be amended, meaning the members are asked to make important foreign policy decisions.

Leland, a Houston Democrat who heads the Select Committee on Hunger, took five of his seven trips with the panel; many of the destinations were not exactly hot tourist attractions — Botswana, Zambia, Ethiopia, Haiti and Vietnam.

"Mickey's trips have been working, grueling trips — non-stop in terms of meetings and on-site visits. They're hot and sweaty and substantive," said his spokeswoman, Alma Newsom.

Leland also visited Taiwan with the Energy and Commerce Committee and at the speaker's request went to Spain, the Soviet Union, and Germany.

With nine separate trips, Rep. Kika de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, took the most of the delegation, but only visited 13 countries, returning to Mexico five times.

The nine trips taken also put De la Garza, a Mission Democrat, in fourth place among all members of Congress in the number of separate overseas outings, Public Citizen said.

Some Texans ventured behind the Iron Curtain over the past two years, with Rep. Jack Brooks of Beaumont traveling to Poland, and Sen. Phil Gramm and Reps. Jake Pickle and Jim Wright also going to the Soviet Union.

Others ventured into countries on the fringes of war or torn by strife — Rep. Tom DeLay's only trip was to Nicaragua, Rep. Charlie Wilson returned three times to Pakistan.

The study said only a handful of the state's congressmen took no overseas trips in the last two years — Republican Reps. Steve Bartlett of Dallas, Joe Barton of Ennis, Larry Combest of Lubbock and Lamar Smith of San Antonio, and Democrat Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio.

Bartlett's spokeswoman, however, said he did take one short trip on a regularly scheduled Defense Department flight to Europe.

Public Citizen said globetrotting members of Congress took a total of 1,053 overseas trips in 1987-88 at a cost to taxpayers of at least $13.5 million.

"There are many valid reasons for members of Congress to travel at taxpayer expense, but at least some of these trips appear to be unjustified excursions," said Joan Claybrook, president of the Ralph Nader organization.

Uncontrolled plane crashes into ocean

MIAMI (AP) — A small plane, its pilot apparently unconscious or dead, crashed into the Atlantic Ocean today after flying for hundreds of miles with military jets on its tail, authorities said.

Rescue operations began immediately for the unidentified pilot, who had been tracked southward by military aircraft manned with parachute rescuers since he radioed a distress call.

Arlene Salac, FAA spokeswoman in Atlanta, said "Our operations center reports the plane is down as of 12:20 southeast of Cape Canaveral."

Nothing more was heard from the pilot after he reported to air traffic controllers in Virginia at 8:30 a.m. that he was having chest pains and difficulty breathing. He had taken off from Washington's National Airport at about 6:30 a.m., bound for Rocky Mount, N.C.

Rescuers from Homestead Air Force Base south of Miami, specially trained to parachute down to ditched pilots in the ocean, followed the wandering plane on the last leg of its journey, as it gradually ran out of gas.

Military pilots who tracked the plane said he appeared to be slumped over the controls. The aircraft apparently was set on autopilot and there was no one else visible in the plane, which can seat up to six, officials said.

The pilots of the intercepting planes tried unsuccessfully to establish voice contact.

Officials could do little as the helpless plane made its way south over open ocean.

Dam

magnitude."

Despite the delay's monetary cost, the cost of the dam is expected to approximately match the budget allotment.

"It will be very close to the contract price," Arthur said.

Pickle estimates the dam itself will cost "about 31 million, compared to a contract price of about 30 and three quarters million." Total cost for the project is projected to be some $68 million.

The dam is sufficiently close enough to the contract price for officials to exercise an option and substitute soil cement for rock rip-rap to protect the upslope portion of the dam from water erosion.

"The main reason for using soil cement is that it's better," Arthur said. "We couldn't find any rock hard enough for rip-rap. It just didn't prove economical to use."

Soil cement is composed of a mixture of 10 percent cement and 90 percent sand and gravel, Pickle said, while rip-rap is merely successive layers of different sized rocks.

The Concho River Snake, long a potential snag to the project as environmentalists feared it might be driven to extinction by the new dam, may finally make its peace with dam supporters. Within 10 days, CRMWD crews are expected to begin construction of six "riffls" along the river banks. The riffls will provide calmer, shallower water thought beneficial for young snakes.

"We'd thought we'd avoided it, but the (U.S. Corps of Engineers, acting on orders of the U.S. Department of Wildlife) told us we had to build up to six riffls," Pickle said. "The riffls will be weighted toward the upper end, with more near Lake Spence than near the town of Maverick."

Closure of the project is set to begin in mid-October, and should be completed next spring.

"The contractor is studying a closure plan to submit to the water commissioner before we can actually begin closure; the plan is expected in about a week," Arthur said.

"We've set the closure date at Oct. 15," Pickle said. "We want to close during fall or winter when the river flow is at its minimum. And then we can avoid hurricane season."

But the newly created lake's impact on Big Spring will be minimal, said Pickle.

"I don't think there will be any effect on the consumer, and I don't anticipate it'll disturb the consumer," he said.

Although San Angelo, and perhaps Midland and Odessa will pump their water from the new lake, Pickle said Big Spring isn't likely to follow suit.

"My guess is that Big Spring isn't likely to see any Stacy water because of the economics of the situation," he said. "It's more practical to get water from Lake Thomas and Lake Spence because of pumping costs and distance and lift. Stacy water would be more expensive."

Big Spring might benefit in a round-about way from the new dam, however.

"The drain on Lake Thomas and Lake Spence will be less, so we might have more water at our disposal," Pickle said.

If badly in need of water, though, Pickle said Big Spring could receive it from Stacy Lake.

"If and when Big Spring has need of Stacy water, we could run a pipeline to the junction at Garden City," he said. "That pipeline would be 25-30 miles long, though, and cost several million dollars. It'd be costly, but not prohibitive."

The delays in the dam project have been "annoying," Pickle said, and have been mostly caused by unfavorable rains and unforeseen construction difficulties.

"We're going to bring us schedule," Pickle said.

When the dam closure is completed sometime next spring, the resulting artificial lake will be immediately opened to the public for boating and swimming, Pickle said, but fishing may still be in the future.

"We'll talk to the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife, and go by their recommendations," he said. "The lake will be stocked, but depending on the lake's water level, they may tell us to hold off a year or two before we allow fishing."

Weather

Showers and thunderstorms developing in the warm humid air ahead of a slow moving cold front extended from eastern Colorado and the Texas Panhandle across much of Oklahoma and southern Arkansas early today.

The thunderstorms produced severe weather in Arkansas and Oklahoma Wednesday evening. Thunderstorms in Arkansas produced hail at Midland and strong winds which downed trees around Waldron. Wind gusts to 58 mph were reported at Dardanelle.

Thunderstorms in Oklahoma produced golf ball-size hail at Clear Lake and Howe.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered early today across northern Mississippi, central and southeastern Alabama, southern Georgia and South Carolina.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms developing along a stationary front were scattered in the upper Ohio Valley and the mid-Atlantic Coast. Thunderstorms produced up to two inches of rain in West Virginia, with flooding reported in the Grafton area.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms in southern New England, eastern Pennsylvania, Florida, eastern West Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, Alabama, the lower Mississippi Valley, the Texas Panhandle, northern Colorado, the Nebraska Panhandle, western South Dakota.

Agent Orange study under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study on exposure to Agent Orange, the toxic defoliant used in Vietnam, may have been designed by the government to fail, a congressman charges.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., also said Tuesday the decision two years ago to cancel the massive study by the Centers for Disease Control has wrongfully put the lid on other government research.

"The federal government has effectively used the CDC study to stifle any attempts to link Agent Orange to health effects," Weiss said at a hearing of his Government Operations subcommittee on human resources and intergovernmental relations. "CDC has had the last word on Agent Orange."

"Either it was a politically rigged operation or it was a monumentally bungled operation," Weiss said.

Many Vietnam veterans have said they have developed cancer and that their children have a high incidence of birth defects because of Agent Orange, which was used to clear dense jungle during the war.

House cuts arts agency funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman outraged over artworks depicting explicit sexuality and religious desecration says the House's decision to strip $45,000 from the federal arts budget is "a slap on the wrist."

The House approved the cut in the National Endowment for the Arts budget after attempts to first take away all the agency's money and then reduce its budget by 10 percent failed.

"I'm afraid the long and the short of it is that they will get a message they can get away with anything and take nothing but a modest slap on the wrist," said Rep. Richard Armey, R-Texas.

The fight over arts funding, heightened by recent controversial exhibits that had federal money behind them, was debated for five hours before the amendment trimming the NEA's budget was approved 361-65.

The bill earmarked $144.2 million for the endowment, which provides grants to artists, writers and art exhibitors.

Witnesses urge ad restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television is sending one message to the nation's most impressionable viewers, says a senator — "buy, buy, buy."

Witnesses urged Congress at a hearing Wednesday to restore restrictions on children's TV programs and join other nations that use television to enlighten rather than exploit the young.

The barbs at the broadcast industry came at a hearing by the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation subcommittee on communications on two bills that would restore the restrictions and give the federal government new authority over children's fare.

"Instead of inspiring children to learn, broadcasters are pushing them to buy, buy, buy," Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, an author of one of the bills, testified.

Metzenbaum said commercials in children's shows have increased since 1984 and some programs urge young viewers to dial 900 telephone numbers to hear taped messages from cartoon characters.

Woman tried on fetal drug charge

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — A judge must decide whether a cocaine addict whose two children were born with the drug in their bodies should be found guilty of delivering drugs to her unborn babies.

A prosecutor said Jennifer Johnson, 23, knew she was feeding her daughter cocaine through the umbilical cord.

She knew full well a long time ago that when she took cocaine, it went to that baby," Assistant State Attorney Jeff Deen said.

But Johnson's lawyer, Michael

Sweeting, questioned whether her addiction justified charges of drug trafficking and child abuse. He said Johnson could not have known that she was committing such a crime.

The Johnson case could set a dangerous precedent, according to the American Civil Liberties Union, which sent a representative from New York City and a doctor who testified on Johnson's behalf.

Johnson, who now lives in an Apopka drug treatment center, did not testify.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A poster of jailed Nelson Mandela is the only image of the 71-year-old leader that the South African public has seen. The prisons act prevents publication of photographs of prisoners.

Mandela asks for talks, not release from prison

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela says from prison that the white-led government can only end the bloodshed in South Africa through dialogue with the banned African National Congress.

"I would also like to confirm that my release is not an issue at this stage," said Mandela, who heads the ANC. "I only would like to contribute to the creation of the climate which would promote peace in South Africa."

Mandela met for 45 minutes on July 5 with President P.W. Botha at the president's Cape Town residence and the report fueled speculation that the man considered the leader of South Africa's 28 million blacks may soon be freed.

Mandela, who has been in prison for more than 26 years, was his first since 1985 that was approved by the government for public release.

Mandela, who is serving a life sentence for sabotage and plotting to overthrow the government, has over the years occasionally sent messages out through his lawyer and other visitors.

The ANC is the leading guerrilla group fighting apartheid, under which South Africa's black majority has no vote in national affairs. It is based in Lusaka, Zambia and seeks a South African state based on one man, one vote.

Botha has said he wants to create conditions to free Mandela.

"There is something Oriental in the way (Mandela) has turned weakness into power," Business Day, the country's leading financial daily, said today.

"He has achieved much by doing virtually nothing, forcing his jailers, progressively by word, the conditions of his release," the editorial added. "It is not too much to say that the government is now the prisoner of its prisoner: it cannot escape his embrace."

Man convicted for talking to ABC

BEIJING (AP) — A man who was accused of spreading rumors after he spoke to an American television crew about the military assault on Tiananmen Square was sentenced to 10 years in prison today.

The television news said Xiao Bin, 42, also was deprived of all political rights for three years in a decision by a court in Dalian, northeast China.

Xiao, vice section chief in a rubber factory, was charged with spreading counterrevolutionary rumors after telling an ABC television crew that 20,000 people were killed when the army fired on pro-democracy protesters and their supporters June 3-4.

During the interview with ABC, Xiao said Tiananmen Square was covered with blood and that tanks had run over people.

China denied anyone was killed in Tiananmen Square. It says about 200 civilians died when soldiers were forced to fire on rioters who blocked their way as they entered Tiananmen Square. Chinese sources and Western diplomats have put the figure as high as 3,000 and say troops fired randomly into crowds.

Farmer kills 14 in shooting spree

LUXIOL, France (AP) — Funerals for 14 people killed by an emotionally troubled farmer who went on a rampage with a shotgun will replace Bastille Day festivities in this small, close-knit village, the mayor said today.

Christian Dornier killed his mother and sister and wounded his father Wednesday before getting in his car and driving around shooting at everyone in his path, police said. The dead included several children.

Authorities said Dornier, who is about 30, wounded nine people, including a police captain, and was himself shot and wounded before being captured.

Mayor Roger Clausse, whose 5-year-old niece was among those killed, said Dornier was believed angered by his elderly father's decision not to turn over to him management of the family farm in Luxiol, which is near the Swiss border.

Party chief removed from post

MOSCOW (AP) — The immensely unpopular chief of Leningrad's Communist Party has been removed from the post, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced, calling the move a critical step in the democratization of the ruling party.

The official, Yuri Soloviyov, was rejected by voters in March elections for the new Congress despite running unopposed. It was an embarrassing vote of no confidence; a majority of voters scratched his name off the ballot. The 60-year-old Soloviyov, who had headed the country's second most powerful regional party organization, is also likely to lose his seat on the party's 20-member ruling Politburo.

Voters in Leningrad, the country's second-largest city with 4.8 million residents, rejected virtually their entire party leadership in the historic spring elections for the Congress of People's Deputies.

East German athletes defect

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — Three East German soccer stars defected just hours before their team played a Swedish club in an international cup match, the Swedish team manager said today.

The leaders of the East German first division club Wismut Aue and their Swedish hosts Örgryte IF believed the three: one member of the national team and two from the junior national team left the country Wednesday.

"They are probably already in West Germany," Örgryte's manager Lennart Magnusson said.

He said the players asked for their passports Wednesday to go shopping. When they did not show up before the game, their hotel rooms were searched and found empty.

"It's very sad. The East German leaders were in despair and we were disappointed," Magnusson said.

"East German teams may never be able to come here again," he added.

No introductions needed at Jim Smith get-together

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you call the Hyatt Regency in suburban Bethesda, Md., this weekend and ask for Jim Smith, expect exasperation.

There will be about 50 Jim Smiths registered.

They're members of the Jim Smith Society. They'll be attending its annual summer get-together, reveling in what they have in common — a name.

They're only a fraction of the Jim Smiths who belong to the society. Its membership numbers 1,502, from virtually every state and many other countries.

And the 1,502 are just the tip of the Jim Smith iceberg. No one knows how many Jim Smiths there are — the Census Bureau keeps this sort of information confidential — but the Department of Veterans Affairs counts more than 16,000 on its rolls.

The Jim Smith Society is the brainchild of — this will come as no surprise — a gent named Jim Smith.

A good-natured James H. Smith Jr., 68, of Camp Hill, Pa., retired public relations man, he is the self-described "founder-president-newsletter editor-chief bankroller."

He established it 20 years ago.

No goals for this society, no high purpose, except to exist and count noses.

"My membership application includes a line in which I ask applicants to list their most significant achievement," founder Smith recalls. (One who responded by writing: "Living up to the name by being completely undistinguished.")

No Jim Smith has ever occupied the White House, Smith concedes. There once was a U.S. Sen. Jim Smith from New Jersey. A handful of congressmen, a couple of governors went by that name, history shows.

But ask him to come up with really famous Jim Smiths and he won't bowl you over.

Currently, he'll list the secretary of state of Florida, a Republican who used to be a Democrat; a state senator in Alabama, and the commissioner of the California highway patrol. That's about it for the Jim Smith Hall of Fame.

But the Jim Smiths have fun when they get together.

"We've had instances when someone inadvertently calls out, 'Hey, Jim!'" recalls Camp Hill's Jim, "and 50 heads turn."

Trial

At one point, the pickup slowed almost to a stop, Perez said, as if it were pulling over.

"At that time the driver stuck her head out the window and looked at me," Perez said, and gave an obscene gesture with her left hand. "All during the pursuit she kept doing it, sticking her head out the window. There was a big smile on her face."

Perez testified that the driver of the truck ran through numerous red lights and stop signs during his portion of the chase.

Former Big Spring officer Bruce Morgan, who took the stand after Perez, told the jury that he took the position of lead car in the chase after Perez missed a turn the truck made. Morgan testified that he and Sergeant Drew Bavin tailed the truck at various times until Schulze was arrested.

Morgan, who is a deputy with the Lampasas County Sheriff's Office, said he and other officers tried to stop the truck with a "rolling road block," which involves boxing in a fleeing car with three patrol cars. He said the truck squeezed out through a gap in the first road block attempted but was finally stopped by the same tactic to end the chase.

Under questioning from County Attorney Hardy Wilkerson, who is prosecuting the case, Morgan said he was the one who broke Schulze's arm.

Morgan testified that Schulze was on the ground struggling, when officers attempted to handcuff her. Morgan said she was fighting officers "the whole time. She knew she was going to be handcuffed and continued to resist."

As Morgan tried to bring Schulze's left arm around behind her back to cuff her, the arm snapped, he said.

"She continued even with one hand to try to get up," Morgan said. "We had to hold her in place until (the ambulance) got there."

Morgan told Miller that Schulze's arm broke "probably from resisting arrest."

"I pulled it up only enough to get her handcuffed," he said. "I didn't handcuff her any differently from anyone else."

"Nobody stepped on her arm because I had a hold of her arm. It (the arm) snapped in my hands. There was no foot. It snapped in my hands."

Several more Big Spring officers testified after Morgan, and attorneys expected the case to continue through today.

Bush's speech: What would Marx have thought?

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Karl Marx University, where President Bush on Wednesday praised Hungarian moves toward a free-market economy, no longer requires that students read "Das Kapital." Indeed, as Bush spoke, the statue of Marx was out of sight — hidden by a press platform.

"History has proved that a free-market economy provides a much higher living standard," said Magdolna Sass, 24, one of the thousands of Hungarians who reacted enthusiastically when Bush proclaimed that the Iron Curtain is parting and that "your great country is leading the way."

At the rear of the glass-covered courtyard where Bush spoke was the hall's life-size statue of a seated Marx. The brow was furrowed; the eyes pressed deep in thought; the right hand reaching upward in a type of clawing motion — seemingly trying to keep its grasp on this country of 10 million.

But few saw the statue of the godfather of communism. Towering over it was a press platform crowded with reporters and photographers covering the first visit ever by an American president to Hungary.

Zsuzsanna Szabo, like Ms. Sass a recent graduate of the university, said she found Bush's speech "very important."

"There certainly are steps that must be taken to improve our economy," she told a reporter.

Long rounds of applause greeted Bush, who was given an enthusiastic standing ovation when he finished.

At one point, the president praised Hungary's willingness to break with the past and asked his audience:

"What better example of this could there be than one simple fact — Karl Marx University has dropped 'Das Kapital' from its required reading list?"

The 19th-century German genius' monumental work, along with his other writings, formed the basis for the Communist systems that have spread around the globe.

Yet, despite the students' growing interest in capitalist proponents from Adam Smith onward, both graduates agree that Hungary will not completely turn its back on Marx any time soon.

"That would only be possible when the old guard politicians die off," Ms. Sass said.

"Everyone now says he's in favor of reforms," Ms. Szabo said of the school's students. "But I'd say only about 70 percent of them really believe in a free-market economy."

Bush's pro-capitalism speech was not the first irony visited on the Karl Marx University of Economic Sciences since its founding in 1951.

The president of the 3,700-student school, Csaba Csaky, said in a recent interview that his institution had been "the cradle of the reform process" that began moving Hungary's economy away from strict Marxism-Leninism two decades ago.

Imre Nagy, the reformist premier abducted by Soviet forces during the 1956 revolt and later executed, once taught agricultural economics at the university.

And, just four months ago, the very hall in which Bush spoke was the site of the founding congress of the Hungarian Democratic Forum, one of the new opposition groups planning for the nation's first open elections next year.

Niklos Namath, right, presented to him Wednesday. The iron curtain between the two countries was removed earlier this year.

Do Americans tell cows how to eat?

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
BUDAPEST, Hungary

One of the minor mysteries of President Bush's trip to Eastern Europe is this: Does he really think Americans are fond of saying that you shouldn't tell a cow how to eat cabbage?

Bush suggested to a group of Hungarian journalists that the line about cows and cabbage is a common saying in the United States. The journalists, in turn, sent his words to newspapers here.

Now, perhaps everybody in Hungary is talking about the way Americans won't tell their cows how to munch cabbage.

This strange business began in the Oval Office last week when Bush was discussing his trip with the Hungarian reporters. Bush, who has praised democratic reforms here, was asked if the United States would be equally happy if a leftist-communist-socialist coalition was elected.

The president said, in part, "It would be inappropriate for the president of the United States to try to fine-tune for the people of Hungary how they ought to eat — how the cow ought to eat the cabbage, as we say in the United States."

Bush likes offbeat sayings, such as describing a person who's a phony or a bluffer as "all hat and no cattle." That term comes from his years in Texas. Though not often heard around the White House, it is arguably understandable.

But the cows and cabbage remark confused even top White House aides.

Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser, gave a blank stare when asked if he knew what the saying meant.

Informed it was something Bush had said, Scowcroft said Bush's line may not be exactly right but added: "There is something about cows eating cabbage." He said he'd look into it.

David Demarest, director of White House communications, said Bush's comment rang a bell. "I'm familiar with a saying like that, but not exactly that saying."

Roger Porter, Bush's adviser on domestic and economic policy, admitted he'd never heard such a saying.

And a Texan who works in the White House — and who will be unnamed here — said he was familiar with a line that sounds like the flip side of what Bush said.

Once you've explained to someone how something is done, the Texan said, you can say, "I told him how the cow ate the cabbage."

He didn't know why people say that, he said they just do.

The final judge of the cow and cabbage caper is John Sununu, the White House chief of staff.

He was asked in a television interview what Bush meant by his line.

Sununu's first reaction was to laugh.

"That's an old Walker Point saying," he joked, referring to the Bush family's seaside compound in Kennebunkport, Maine.

More seriously, Sununu offered a 171-word explanation, containing such pithy phrases as the United States' not wanting "to define the final format of the internal structures" that other countries should adopt.

Compared with Sununu's verbiage, Bush's words seemed to take on new clarity. He was saying the United States wasn't going to butt in too much.

One other curiosity from this trip: the president's wife, Barbara, thinks that Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski is a funny fellow.

Jaruzelski, of course, is the man who imposed martial law in 1981 to crush the Solidarity union and imprison its leaders. I safely thought he has sanctioned democratic reforms that resulted in sweeping election victories by Solidarity.

Even so, Jaruzelski is generally regarded as colorless and stiff.

President gets peach of a deal

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — President Bush pulled out a wad of Hungarian money and did his bit for free enterprise today in a bustling produce market.

Bush, after his speech at Karl Marx University, went shopping at the market on nearby Dimitrov Square, the same one where British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher purchased garlic and peppers on a 1983 visit.

crowd, and blew kisses with his hand.

He was greeted with applause wherever he went in the ornate, wrought iron market, built late in the 19th century, where vendors sell succulent heaps of fruit, vegetables, meat and other produce from Hungary's rich farming land.

Most of the produce comes from small private plots.

Man can't find a charity willing to receive

DEAR ABBY: In the past 10 years, my wife and I traveled to Canada on various tours, and during those trips we accumulated a fair amount of Canadian coins and currency. I kept putting the coins in a good-sized jar until the jar was full and weighed about nine pounds. I decided to send this jar to some worthy group located as far north in Canada as I could find.

I found a small town on the map, and wrote to the president of a well-known worldwide service club in that town offering to send the club my Canadian coins. I received no response. Then I wrote to the president of the Chamber of Commerce in that town. I never heard from him, either. So I wrote to their international headquarters in Chicago, and received no reply.

I then personally went to the local chapter of another international service club, showed them my jar of Canadian money and asked if they wanted to send it to their Canadian chapter. Two employees were there at the time, and they both laughed at me!

I was ready to give up, when I thought maybe a church mission could use it, so I wrote to the bishop of the Episcopal church in Whitehorse — in the Yukon area. The bishop responded immediately, telling me of a small mission in his area, so I mailed the jar to the bishop, who forwarded it to this little mission.

Soon after, I received a nice

thank-you letter saying they had purchased a pulpit Bible with part of the donation, which they had counted, and it came to $144.27!

So, you see, Abby, two international service clubs missed out on a nice donation by their silence and laughter.

If you use this letter, please don't identify me or my city. I don't want to embarrass anybody. — WELL TRAVELED

DEAR WELL TRAVELED: Congratulations on your resourcefulness as well as your determination to put your "hard-to-get-rid-of" Canadian money to good use.

Shame on those who ignored your offer, and double shame on those who laughed at you.

DEAR ABBY: I bet your mail doubles over this goof! "Dog-tired," describing her guests' badly behaved dog, "Toughie," wrote: "As you probably know, most dogs are housebroken only for their own homes."

Abby, that's errant nonsense, as are most generalizations. Dogs are like children. They know only what they have been taught by their "parents." A dog that is housebroken at home knows what the word "no" means, and its owners should use it more often.

Of course, "Dog-Tired" should let Toughie's owners (and any other "friends" who impose on them) know that he is not welcome, but he's only a dog. They are to blame for his misbehavior.

Thousands of people think that if they read it in "Dear Abby" it's true, so please correct this instance of dog abuse. — DIANE SILVER, ARLETA, CALIF.

DEAR DIANE: All right, I'll go quietly to the dog house and bone up on my canine training. But for the record, my mail not only did not double over that goof, yours was the only letter I received pointing out my ignorance.

DEAR ABBY: I have read that blood donated in the United States is now routinely tested for the AIDS virus. If the blood tests "positive," is the donor notified of this fact?

Please answer this question in your column because I'm sure many others would like to know. — FORT SMITH, ARK.

DEAR FORT SMITH: If the blood tests "positive," it is tested again. If it tests "positive" a second time, the donor is notified.

DEAR MIXED UP IN BAY CITY: Please, please, do not drop out

'Life stages' help agency target consumer market

NEW YORK (AP) — It used to be that age had a lot to do with how we act and what we buy.

Now, stage could become important in how products are pitched to us, according to J. Walter Thompson, the ad agency that bills $3.8 billion annually worldwide.

When they talk about stages, they aren't talking about second childhoods or mid-life crises. They're talking about say, a young parent, married and whose oldest child is pre-teen. That young parent could be 25 years old or 50.

"We no longer define parents in terms of their own age, but by the age of their children," says Peter Kim, who heads JWT's consumer behavior department. "We have found that studies based on age such as 50 plus, the greying of America or lifestyle studies, such as the yuppies, are obsolete as we enter the 1990s," said James B. Patterson, chief executive officer of J. Walter Thompson USA. "If we think of people in terms of their life stage rather than their age or even socio-economic position, we will have a more accurate window into their needs and desires."

In the post-war years, life was fairly cut and dried. A young man got a job, married and started a family all before he was 30. He stayed married through his retirement and until he died at 69. The young woman spent her life as homemaker.

Not so today and not well into the 1990s, says Kim. Today, he says, young people will go through many phases between the time they leave school and die, at average age 80 by the year 2000.

There are the singles, broken into four groups — at-home singles, young adults living with their parents; starting-out singles, young adults sharing or supporting their own apartments; mature singles, older adults either never married or divorced; and left-alone singles, widowed seniors or older divorced adults, 77 percent of them women.

There are two types of couples — young couples recently married and childless, and the empty nesters, those left alone because their children are grown.

In addition to young parents, the parental life stage includes mature parents and single parents. Mature parents are married and their oldest dependent child is a teenager or adult. Single parents are unmarried parents rearing their own children.

The whole thrust of this, of course, is how to target the markets. Empty nesters and mature parents, just in case you're wondering, are the largest groups, 65 million total now and 77 million in 1995. The 33 million mature parents control $650 billion in income while the 32 million empty nesters control $520 billion.

By 1995, when baby boomers age, mature parents' ranks and income are expected to swell by 24 percent and empty nesters' by 14 percent.

Move over, yuppies.

Country showdown

By RUTH COCHRAN
Staff Writer

Aspiring Dolly Partons and Alabamas looking for their big break have their chance Friday night during the 8th Annual True Value Hardware/GMC Truck Country Showdown.

Future country singing stars can hit the road to Nashville starting with a local talent contest sponsored by KYBG Radio and Big Spring Hardware at 9 p.m. in the Brass Nail I. The winner of Friday's contest advances to the state-wide contest in Fort Worth and a shot at one of six regional competitions in the nation.

The winners of those regional contests will face off in Nashville for prizes that include a one-year recording contract.

Jim Richards, assistant news director at KBYG, said the contest has drawn about a dozen acts and will continue to accept entries through Friday afternoon. Entry blanks can be picked up at either KBYG or Big Spring Hardware, and there is a registration fee of $5.

Any performer who has never had a national recording contract can enter.

Contestants can perform as solo artists, duets or groups, Richards said, and each act must perform for a minimum of seven minutes. The Heart of Texas, the house band at the Brass Nail, will perform with any artist needing a backup. Richards said, and the band will be available for rehearsals Friday afternoon.

The winner of Friday's contest here qualifies for the state-wide competition, Richards said. The state winner collects $1,000 in cash as well as valuable exposure, he said.

"There'll be talent scouts in Fort Worth," Richards explained, "and there will be some prizes at state. From state they'll go to regional competition. The winner of that goes to national competition."

"The winner of that gets $50,000, a recording contract and a 1989 GMC truck."

Richards said contestants will be judged on a point system in five categories: how well material reflects country music; tightness of performance; originality of arrangement; start quality/appearance; and talent. Bonus points are available for using original music.

Big Spring Mayor Max Green, Councilwoman Gail Earls and Big Spring Herald reporter Ruth Cochran will serve as judges.

The country showdown is the largest country music talent contest in the world, Richards said, and it annually draws more than 100,000 country performers nationwide.

TV notes 20th anniversary of Apollo 11 moon landing

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Kuralt will be co-anchor with Dan Rather of CBS News' special program marking the anniversary of the first moon landing, but when the real event happened 20 years ago, he missed the whole thing.

For others who missed it, or simply want to watch it again, CBS, PBS and the Arts & Entertainment Network will offer specials commemorating the momentous event. CBS will show footage that didn't get on the air in 1969, A&E will re-create coverage as it happened, and PBS' special catches up with several of the astronauts — some famous, some forgotten — from the Apollo program.

Kuralt missed out on the event, because, he said, of Perry Wolff, who is the producer of the two-hour CBS News special slated for Thursday, "The Moon Above, the Earth Below."

Kuralt was dispatched by Wolff to do a thoughtful day-in-the-life piece on that momentous day, starting with sunrise in Maine and, numerous airline connections later, concluding with sundown in Hawaii.

"I had to stand out there in the sun for hours with a terrific headache, I remember, having crossed eight or nine time zones, waiting for the damn sun to go down so that I could deliver my emotional closing of this thing," Kuralt recalled at a recent news conference.

"So I missed it all, but on the way from Los Angeles to Honolulu is when the moon landing took place, and the pilot of the airliner, being a pilot, was very much interested in this," and, listening to radio, relayed a play-by-play to largely disinterested passengers.

Kuralt took his camera crew around the plane and interviewed people. "I said to one woman, 'Well, this is a very exciting day, isn't it?'" and she said, 'Yes, I've never been to Hawaii before.'"

Others around the country and the world were not so blasé, and the extraordinary events of that day in 1969 are magnified by hindsight and nostalgia.

"The excitement of the journey really does get you all over again," Kuralt said. "I had forgotten many of the details, and I had never seen some of the pictures — earthrise from the moon and other breathtaking things, and I had forgotten also what a perilous, unlikely trip it really was."

The moonwalk was yet another milestone in the decade when television news came of age.

NBC and ABC plan to cover the anniversary in regular programming. There will likely be a special "Nightline" on ABC devoted to the anniversary.

As it did with the 25th anniversary of the JFK assassination, Arts & Entertainment has compiled NBC footage into an "as-it-happened" special, "Moonwalk: As It Happened 1969." A&E's coverage will begin 20 years to the minute after the real event on July 16 with liftoff of Apollo 11 (check local listings for time). The moonwalk is on Thursday night. Splashdown occurs Monday, July 24.

"As It Happened" and "The Moon Above" will no doubt provide ample nostalgia. PBS' "The Other Side of the Moon" aims to be more current — how did the moon mission affect the men who participated in it?

"The Other Side of the Moon" airs July 19 and includes interviews with eight astronauts from the Apollo program, some whose names are familiar and others who have become a lesson in historical trivia: Jim Irwin, Rusty Schweickart, Buzz Aldrin, Pete Conrad, Alan Bean, Edgar Mitchell, Al Worden and Stuart Roosa.

Two Steer track stars sign with South Plains

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Former Big Spring High School track athletes Dennis Hartfield and Ben Gonzales have signed track scholarships with South Plains College in Levelland.

South Plains track coach James Morris has also signed Gerry Woodberry, a 1988 standout sprinter from Lamesa, and Gary Lewis Tucker, a regional track qualifier sprinter from Terrell.

Thursday
notes

Hartfield, a sprinter, finished seventh in the 100 meters this past spring at the state meet. His best times are 10.39 in the 100 meters and 21.36 in the 200. Coach Morris said Hartfield will be a strong addition to the sprint relay. Hartfield is the son of Deborah Evans.

Gonzales is a middle-distance runner, and placed fifth in state in the 800 meters, running a career-best 1:55.1. He finished 12th at the state cross country meet this past fall, and was a third place finisher in the 1600 at the state meet in 1987. Coach Morris said that Gonzales is an excellent prospect with great leg speed. He is the son of Lupe Lopez.

This past May, South Plains finished fourth at the National Junior College Athletic Association Track and Field Championships. Eight SPC athletes turned in All-American JUCO performances, and one took the national championship in the decathlon.

Local boxer Rene Villa has been selected to participate in the Fifth Junior World Championship Training Camp at the Olympic Training Center in Lake Placid, N.Y. July 16-Aug. 7.

The purpose of this camp is to prepare the athletes to compete in the fifth Junior World Championships in Puerto Rico Aug. 7-9.

During the training camp there will be two athletes in each weight division. Villa is a 147-pound welterweight. Participation in the camp doesn't guarantee selection for the Junior World Championships.

The selection of the team will be made by the coaching staff, and will be based on the athletes attitude and performance in camp.

A volleyball clinic will be conducted July 31-Aug. 4 at Big Spring High School.

This clinic is for girls who will be in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades next year. The students will be trained in fundamental skills, rules of the game, physical training and game situations of volleyball. Each student will also receive a T-shirt. Cost of the camp is $60 for a full day and $40 for a half-day. Deadline to enter is July 1. For more information call Julie Hall at 263-7114.

The Second Historic Invitational Yea-A-Ah Buddy State and Divisional Softball Tournament Qualifier, will be July 14-16 at Bellmead Softball Complex in Waco.

There will be divisions Men, class B, C, D; women, class B, C, D; and coed. Winners of each division receive state of national berths.

The first three teams will receive team trophies and the first two finishers will also receive individual trophies. There will also be other awards. Entry fee is $100 per team.

For more information call (817) 799-3611, ext. 3606, or (817) 752-6408.

A 16-team girls basketball tournament will be held at the First Baptist Church Family Life Center in Abilene.

Summer League ULL guidelines. For more information call David Leyerle at 675-8144.

Lori Micelli, one of five Women's International Bowling Congress representatives from throughout the country, will visit Big Spring Saturday, July 15 as guest of the Big Spring Women's Bowling Association for its 6:30 p.m. forum meeting at the Days Inn.

Questions dealing with league procedures and policies will be answered during this local association's forum meeting. The meeting is open to all members of the women's bowling association.

The Inaugural Low Buck Men's Softball Invitational Tournament will be this Saturday and Sunday at Washington Park in Midland.

Entry fee is $100 per team and entry deadline is July 13 at 9 p.m. The first through fourth place team will receive team trophies. The winners also will receive bat bags and second place finishers will receive screened T-shirts. There will also be awards for all-tourney, golden glove, MVP and tournament manager award.

For more information call Jesse Varracco at 686-9933 (work), or 683-9929 (home) or Mark Galan at 687-1567 (work) or 684-5277 (home).

There will be men and women's slowpitch softball tournaments for Class C, D and church league teams Aug. 5-6 at Robert Lee.

Entry fee is $90 per team and entry deadline is July 29. The first four place teams will receive team trophies. The first three place teams will also receive individuals awards. The will also be awards for golden glove and MVP.

For more information call 453-2415 or at 5:30 p.m. call Becky Ross at 453-4671 or Ann Stephens at 453-4729.

The First Annual Lorenzo Pineda Jr. Hispanic Basketball Tournament will be Aug. 5-6 in Las Cruces, N.M. at the Activity Center on the campus of New Mexico State University.

It is a double elimination tournament and entry fee is $150 per team. There is a 15-player limit roster and deadline to enter is July 31 at midnight.

For more information call Lorenzo Pineda at (505) 546-4641 or Woody Jamie at (505) 526-0550 or Gilbert Paez at (505) 523-0746.

The Big Spring Country Club Golf Course will be the site of a parent-child golf tournament this Saturday and Sunday.

Entry fee is $30 per player. There are two divisions. Division I is for high school grads and their parents; Division II is high schoolers and their parents. There is a $10 entry fee for high school players. Trophies will be awarded to the top finishers.

For more information call Ron Plumlee at 263-7694.

Now news from Comanche Trail Ladies Golf Association...

Monday afternoon saw Betty Auckland, Dee Jenkins and Ina Stewart take first place in nine-hole scramble play on the front nine. The team shot a four-under-par 33 to win.

Finishing second, two strokes back, were Peggy Marshall, Mary Malone, Dana Wilkinson and Patti Woodall.

In couples play on the back nine last Thursday, the team of Jerry Roach, Martha Saunders and Paul and Dee Jenkins shot a 31 to win. Two teams tied for second with 33s.

The Spring City Senior Citizen Center will sponsor a 42 domino tournament July 18 starting at 9 a.m.

Entry fee is $2 and participants must be 60 years of age or older.

Local semi-pro baseball team, the Big Spring Red Sox split a doubleheader with Ozona last Sunday in Ozona.

The Red Sox won the opener 10-3 behind the hitting and pitching of Frankie Rubio. Rubio aided his cause with a grand slam.

The Red Sox lost the second game 3-2 as David Roach was the losing pitcher. Ozona scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh to win. Roach hit a homer for the Red Sox.

The Red Sox, 16-4 for the season, will host the San Angelo Bruins Sunday at Roy Anderson Complex. The doubleheader begins at 1 p.m.

Paxton going to Central

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Boyce Paxton, head basketball coach at Big Spring for the last three years, who led the Steers to their first district championship in 32 years, has accepted the head basketball coaching job at San Angelo Central High School.

Paxton's selection came on a unanimous 5-0 by the Central school board Tuesday.

Paxton's hiring fills a vacancy created May 11 when Central athletic director and head football coach Don Gandy relieved Scott Galloway of his duties. Galloway was reassigned to a junior high post.

Galloway compiled a 91-63 record in five years at Central. Gandy has cited philosophical differences for Galloway's reassignment.

BOYCE PAXTON

Paxton said of his new job: "I'm really excited about the opportunity in front of me. I'm excited about the prospect of returning to 5A ball. It's been a few years since I've been in 5A and I feel that that the best competition is at that level."

The Abilene native is a 19-year coaching veteran, and has had six-playoff teams. Last year the district championship Steers were 20-12, and were defeated in the area playoffs by Lubbock Dumbars. In his three year tenure at Big Spring Paxton compiled a 61-35 record.

San Angelo Athletic Director Ken Fannon said Paxton abilities and background helped in the selection process.

"He (Paxton) works real well with youngsters...has a real direction to his program and works well within the system," said Fannon. Fannon said that Paxton would have an assignment within the Bobcats football program.

Fannon said that assignment would most likely be some scouting for the football program.

Paxton, 42, started his high school coaching career at Class 3A Ralls after graduating from Texas Tech. After three years he went to 4A Pleasanton, where he coached three years. He then went to 4A Belton where he coached four years and then to Port LaVaca Calhoun when he stayed eight seasons, before coming to Big Spring.

A member of the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches All-Star selection committee, Paxton said he will assume his new coaching duties as soon as possible.

Poke QB retires after 13 seasons

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Some say Danny White was star-crossed and there's evidence from the 1981 NFC championship game to back the theory.

Other critics claim he was a choker who couldn't produce in a big game, haunted by the pressure of succeeding Roger Staubach, the king of the NFL comeback artists.

Whatever the reason, White never took the Dallas Cowboys to the Super Bowl and was branded a loser.

"It was a terrible burden for Danny to have to step into the shoes of someone like Roger but I thought he handled it as well as anyone could have," Tom Landry once said. "He's had injuries at critical times and a lot of bad luck. I always have had a lot of confidence he would overcome them."

Landry made these remarks in 1985. The next year White broke his wrist when he was enjoying his best season. He never fully recovered from the injury and spent the rest of his career trying to hang on with a weak arm that couldn't reach deep receivers.

White retired on Wednesday after a 13-year career with a few what-might-have-beens forever frozen in his mind.

—What IF Golden Richards had caught White's first down pass over the middle in the Cowboys' painful 28-27 loss to San Francisco in the NFC championship game in January 1982? The 49ers were out of time outs and the Cowboys could have run out the clock. Instead, San Francisco drove the length of the field to score the winning touchdown.

—What IF a 49er hadn't tackled Drew Pearson by his shirttail in the few seconds left after the San Francisco score. Pearson caught a pass from White and was gone for a touchdown if he had his shirt tucked in. After the game White fought his way in tears through the raucous San Francisco crowd which had rushed onto the field. He lost his chin strap but kept clawing hands away from his helmet.

His distress was understandable. He had played almost a perfect game yet the team lost. On the day he retired White reiterated that it was his most bitter disappointment.

"Danny was never the same quarterback after that game," the late Ernie Allen, the Cowboys' super scout for decades, once said. "It was like he felt he had given it his best shot to get the team into the Super Bowl and it didn't work. Somehow Danny lost some of his confidence and he shouldn't have. It was through no fault of his own."

White got off to such a great start when he replaced Staubach prior to the 1980 season.

White produced a Super Bowl II miracle with two late touchdown passes to beat Atlanta to advance to the NFC championship game at Philadelphia.

The Cowboys lost 20-7 to Philadelphia with White having an off-day but Dallas fans were concentrating too much on future Super Bowls than blaming the quarterback for the loss on a day when he hit only 12 of 31 passes for 127 yards with an interception.

As it turned out, White would take the team to only two more NFC title games and zero NFL title games.

The year after the agonizing loss to the 49ers, White got Dallas into the NFC title game against the Washington Redskins. He did so with big games in a 38-0 victory over Tampa Bay and a 37-26 triumph over Green Bay.

Then came another Super Bowl II NFC championship match. White was hurt in the first half and Gary Hogeboom finished the game in a 31-17 loss to the hated Redskins.

In that game, White developed a reputation of looking for the door in a big game.

"Teams like to come after Danny because they believe they can intimidate him and get him out of there," Allen said. "They don't think he'll play hurt."

In his later years with the Cowboys, White was a sitting duck for pass rushes because of his immobility. He broke his wrist when sacked by the New York Giants' Carl Banks in 1986.

White left the game with a 59.6 percent career passing mark and 154 touchdowns to 129 interceptions.

He completed passes for about 15 miles in the NFL.

And what will he be remembered for?

Unfair or no, as the man who couldn't carry Staubach's water bucket.

El Paso ousts National 'Stars

Dist. III Tourney

Big Spring National League All-Stars 5-3 in District III Little League Tournament play Wednesday night.

The Nationals scored three runs in the first inning but the El Paso team came back with five third inning runs, eliminating the Nationals for the tournament. The Nationals exit the tournament with a 1-2 record. El Paso goes to 2-1 in tournament play.

Both starting pitchers had problems in the early going, and the relief hurlers came in and did excellent jobs. El Paso starter Sam Harrison lasted one-third inning, allowing three runs on four hits. He was replaced by J.P. Enriquez. The tiny right-hander whitewashed the Nationals the remainder of the game. He got to win by scattering five hits, fanning seven and walking one.

Nationals starter Ryan Williams lasted two-and-two-thirds innings. He allowed five hits and five runs. Reliever Steven Cantu came in and did a masterful job, allowing only two hits, fanning five and walking none.

In the first inning, Williams retired El Paso in four batters, the Nationals came out smoking in the bottom of the first. After leadoff hitter Chris Vanover fanned, the Nationals answered with four consecutive base hits.

Brien Burchett singled, and scored from third on a wild pitch. Next Trey Cauble got a base hit. Second baseman Cauble was the only National Leaguer to get two hits. He also doubled in the third inning. After Cauble, Chad Kemper got an infield hit, scoring Cauble with the second run of the game. Kemper made it 3-0 by scoring on Williams' single.

In the third it was El Paso's time to erupt. With one out Enriquez singled to left field. Enriquez was the only El Paso player to collect two hits. He also singled in the fourth inning.

After Williams got leadoff man Kyle Ryan to line out for the second out, Will Steadman singled, scoring Enriquez with El Paso's first run of the game. Steadman went to second on a passed ball, and scored on Paul Walker's base hit. The next batter Harrison, made up for his bad start on the pitcher's mound, by blasting Williams' offering deep over the left field fence for a two-run homer, giving El Paso a 4-3 lead.

The next batter Brad McDonald reached base when the second baseman dropped a fly ball. He promptly stole second, and scored the fifth and final run on Josh Monsen's single.

The Nationals had chances to score in the third and fourth innings. In the third Cauble doubled, went to third on a passed ball, and was tagged for the third out trying to score from third on a wild pitch.

In the fourth the Nationals got three hits but failed to get a run. Pinch runner Dallas Hopper was thrown out at the plate by the center fielder when trying to score from second on Brant Farris' base hit. It was also the third out of the inning.

Former lover seeking big bucks from GM

RICHMOND (AP) — The former lover of Houston Oilers general manager Ladd Herzog has amended a lawsuit seeking a trust fund for their daughter and punitive damages, alleging that Herzog and his ex-wife conspired to keep money from the child.

The amended petition accuses Herzog and his ex-wife of concocting a "friendly divorce" to cheat the child of financial support to which she otherwise would have been entitled.

In her case before state District Judge Thomas Stansbury, Joann Barbara DeNicola, 37, asks for $250,000 in damages, $150,000 in attorneys' fees and a trust fund made up of half the property Herzog gave to his ex-wife, Kathleen, in their July 1988 divorce.

Herzog is several months support payments for his daughter, 23-month-old Meghan Diane, and has not seen the child since mid-April, the lawsuit says. A contempt of court motion against Herzog is pending, but investigators have not been able to locate him to serve a subpoena.

Herzog resigned his $450,000-a-year post as Oilers general manager Feb. 1. In a deposition, Oilers owner M.C. (Bud) Adams Jr. said the resignation followed his offer to Herzog of a one-year contract, a $50,000 raise and a one-year probationary term. Herzog reportedly requested a five-year contract. The amended petition accuses Herzog of being "voluntarily unemployed or underemployed."

Herzog's phone number is unlisted and he could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press.

High schools may be linked to point-fixing

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — The FBI said more than $1 million in alleged betting cash may be seized in a gambling probe, and the Florence police chief said claims of point-fixing at north Alabama prep games came from reliable sources.

But top Alabama high school officials cast doubt on allegations that coaches and referees were involved in fixing high school games.

Police Chief Rick Thompson said authorities seized football records at Coffee and Bradshaw high schools to investigate the game-fixing allegations. The records for the past two years were seized under subpoenas issued by the Lauderdale County district attorney's office.

The two schools were also ordered to turn over all film of sporting events for the past two years, and Florence Superintendent of Education Thomas Taylor said football game films were given to authorities Wednesday. But Taylor said it could take longer to locate films of other sporting events, in addition to football and basketball, had been filmed.

"I think the Pete Rose thing shocked a lot of people nationwide," Thompson said. "I think this may shock a lot of people nationwide ... and it's probably not just happening in north Alabama."

Thompson's comment came after federal and state agents, on a series of raids in seven north Alabama cities over two days, confiscated cash and property. FBI spokesman Tom Wiseman of Huntsville said the amount of seized cash is approaching $1 million.

He said agents counting the money in Florence had reached the $1 million mark. He said as much as $500,000 more may be in a safe deposit box that agents sought court approval to open.

Wiseman said he could not release other information on the safe deposit box.

Thompson said the investigation over two years has turned up allegations that north Alabama high school games may have been fixed with game clocks and yardsticks altered to help beat a point spread set by gambling oddsmakers.

Two former coaches, a former high school player and a 15-year veteran of the Muscle Shoals police force were among those whose homes were searched under court warrants.

"We received the information on possible game-fixing from several unconnected sources," Thompson said. "We feel this information is reliable and has been verified."

But Herman "Bubba" Scott, director of the Alabama High School Athletic Association in Montgomery, said he doubts the allegations are accurate. He said Wednesday that no specific games, or names of individuals, have been given. "We have no explanation of how it was done," he said.

He said his office found there were no excessive numbers of complaints from the north Alabama area concerning clocks or sideline chains.

"I just don't believe any of our coaches or officials are involved," Scott said. "I don't feel like our integrity is questioned at all."

"I'll be totally in shock if we find out any of our officials are involved in this terrible ordeal," said Bud Smith, president of the Tennessee Valley Football Officials Association, which handles most of the prep games in the Florence area.

There are rumors around who could spot something strange, said Smith, referring to allegations of clock-tampering or altering yard markers. "I have never witnessed any situation that has ever caused me to have suspicion."

"I think it's ridiculous to assume a person would fix a high school game," Colbert County football coach Don Creasy said. "I realize there may be some individuals who would bet on high school games, but to stoop to game-fixing is ridiculous."

Wiseman said the allegations of game-fixing are being pursued by Florence authorities, not the FBI. He said the FBI is focusing on a "sports gambling line" coming into Alabama in violation of federal statutes. He said the gambling under investigation in Alabama included bets on high school games as well as on professional and college games in a number of sports.

Among those whose homes were searched in the investigation were Gannum Smith and William Floyd "Brub" Hamilton, former assistant football coaches at Coffee High School. Smith was boys' track coach and assistant football coach when he resigned after last season. Hamilton, now a driver's education instructor at Bradshaw High School, last served as an assistant football coach at Coffee in 1980.

Smith's lawyer, Gary Smith, said his client denies any knowledge of game-fixing and feels "like his career is practically ruined before he's even had a chance to respond." Hamilton declined to comment on the matter.

There have been no arrests. Wiseman said no arrests are expected and that when the investigation is complete it will be sent to the U.S. attorney in Birmingham for possible grand jury indictment and prosecution.

Baylor gets nod

By The Associated Press
One Dallas writer expects a miracle year from Baylor football coach Grant Teaff and a Tyler writer says the Bears deserve watching, but they are not in the majority.

Most of those in the know about the Southwest Conference — a panel of 37 sports writers — told Texas Football Magazine that they expect Arkansas to successfully defend its SWC football title.

The magazine's annual poll gave the Razorbacks the No. 1 seed for the upcoming SWC season, with 16 1/2 first-place votes.

Texas A&M, under new coach R.C. Slocum, got 10 13 first-place votes.

Baylor received 6 1/2. Harless Wade, a writer for The Dallas Morning News, was quick to pick Baylor.

"Even without swallowing a worm (as Teaff once did for inspiration), it's time for another one of Grant Teaff's miracles," Wade said.

Jon Mark Beilue of the Amarillo Globe-News chose Arkansas. "The Hogs are about as pretty as their name, but they will return to the Cotton Bowl," Beilue said.

Steve Estes of the Tyler Courier-Times said the Aggies would win because "Darren Lewis said so. But watch out for Baylor."

Texas and Houston each received two first-place votes and were forecast to finish fourth and fifth.

Individual honors went to Texas A&M running back Darren Lewis as the pre-season offensive player of the year and Baylor linebacker James Francis was named defensive player of the year.

Lewis was the No. 2 rusher in the nation last season behind Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders. Lewis gained 1,692 yards, accounting for 38 percent of the Aggies' offense.

Francis made 82 tackles last season, including 51 solos, and had eight tackles behind the line of scrimmage. He recovered two fumbles and blocked a kick.

Texas free safety Willie Mack Garza is the sophomore of the year, beating out teammate quarterback Mark Murdock.

Garza, a former record-setting running back at Refugio, played cornerback for the Longhorns last season but has moved to free safety this season.

Cuero running back Robert Strait, expected to be ready for fall practice after undergoing knee surgery, was voted the SWC newcomer of the year.

The Razorbacks must replace eight defensive starters but they have eight returning starters on offense, including quarterback Quinn Groves and running back James Rouse.

Groves produced 1,481 yards passing and rushing last season. Rouse has 2,018 career yards despite missing nine games in 1986 and half of last season.

Barry Foster led the Hogs' in rushing as a sophomore last season.

The Aggies also return a veteran group that includes eight offensive and six defensive starters.

Lance Pavlas has the early nod to replace injured Bucky Richardson at quarterback when fall drills begin next month.

Guidry retires

NEW YORK — With his family watching, pitcher Ron Guidry announces his retirement from the New York Yankees Wednesday after an unsuccessful comeback attempt.

Midland edges Shreveport

By The Associated Press
Chris Graves batted a home run in the seventh inning to help Midland clinch a 3-2 victory over Shreveport in a Texas League baseball game.

Danny Grunhard also scored a homer in the first inning for Midland, batting over the 25-foot-tall center field fence 400 feet away from the plate. Officials said it was Midland's Jeff Richardson was awarded his seventh save of the season.

Diaz designated hitter Tim McIntosh had two RBIs, including a home run. El Paso second baseman Greg Edge had three RBIs.

El Paso snapped a three-game winning streak by the Mets, who scored their only run in the bottom of the fifth inning when second baseman Dave Joiner drove in center fielder Chuck Carr.

Winning pitcher was Steve Monson, 6-2, while the loser was Ron Gideon, 0-1.

The two teams meet again Thursday at 7 p.m.

San Antonio's Dan Henley had four hits while Dave Hansen, Walt McConnell, Carlos Hernandez and Luis Lopez, who had a key three-run homer, all had two hits each in the missions (which took 11 innings) for 13 hits.

The Missions had three clutch two-out hits to extend its winning streak to three games.

San Antonio pitcher Kevin Armstrong hurled seven innings to gain his fifth win in 11 decisions. Isidro Marquez pitched the final two innings.

But Armstrong watched his shutout dissolve when Dennis Carter hit his sixth home run of the season to lead off the fourth inning.

Lopez walked in the fourth and advanced to third on Mike White's infield grounder. He scored on Henley's single to left to make it 4-1.

Joe Kesselmark and Hansen opened the fifth with singles. Kesselmark scored on McConnell's bad-hop single over Arkansas shortstop Julian Martinez. But Lopez lined into a double play with Hansen holding at third base. Hansen then trotted home on Hernandez's two-out single to left.

Arkansas got three of its hits in the first inning but didn't score off Armstrong. Catcher Hernandez threw out one runner attempting to steal.

Wichita's Ricky Boness gave up two runs in seven innings.

Charlie Hillemann went 3-for-4 with one RBI and Kevin Garner hit a two-run homer in the fourth for the Wranglers, 47-43.

Both of Tulsa's came on solo home runs — one by Juan Gonzalez in the first and the other by Dean Palmer in the seventh.

Wilson Alvarez, 2-2, took the loss for Tulsa, 49-41.

Texas League

the first home run over that spot in the four-year history of Fair Grounds Field.

In other league play Wednesday, El Paso whipped Jackson 6-1. San Antonio beat Oklahoma City 6-1 and Wichita bashed Tulsa 10-2.

Graves' homer for Midland made the score 3-1, grabbing the victory. David Martinez, 9-5, was credited with the win, while the loser was Larry Carter, 4-2.

Rich Aldrete drove in both Shreveport runs, with a ground out in the sixth inning and a single in the eighth inning.

BIG SPRING AMERICANS 10, MIDLAND TOWER 1

ODESSA — The Big Spring Americans remained alive behind the three-hit pitching of Trey Terrazas. While improving his tournament record to 1-1, Terrazas fanned 13 Tower batters.

Terrazas was also Big Spring's top hitter, going two-for-two at the plate, with a single and triple. The Americans pounded out 11 hits.

The American Leaguers will play Odessa Jim Parker today at 5:45 p.m. at Sherwood field.

At 7:45 tonight, the undefeated Big Spring Internationals will play Lamesa at Jim Parker field.

SCOREBOARD

Kansas City at New York, doubleheader (4:30 p.m. EDT). The Royals throw two veterans, Brett Saberhagen and Charlie Leibrandt, against two of the Yankees' rookie starters, Clay Parker and Dave Eiland.

STATS

The only players to represent four teams in the All-Star Game are Rich Gossage and George Kell. ... During his 14 seasons with the New York Yankees, Ron Guidry went through 15 managerial changes.

STREAKS

Oakland's Dave Stewart, 13-4, is on a pace to win 20 games for the third straight season. Jim Palmer is the last pitcher to win 20 or more games for three consecutive seasons when he did it four straight times from 1975-1978.

SWINGS

Julio Franco and Ruben Sierra combined to go 3-for-6 in the All-Star Game with an RBI. In 17 previous All-Star Games, since the franchise moved to Texas in 1972, Rangers' All-Stars had gone 2-for-18.

SLUGGERS

Last season, Los Angeles' Kirk Gibson was the MVP with 25 homers and 76 RBIs. San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell enters the second half with 31 homers and 81 RBIs.

SITES

The 1990 All-Star Game will take place at Chicago's Wrigley Field. In 1991, it will be played at Toronto's SkyDome. It will be Wrigley Field's third All-Star Game.

SLUMPS

The Los Angeles Dodgers are 6-17 on artificial turf.

SO LONG

Left-hander Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees announced his retirement on Wednesday. Guidry, 38, retires with a lifetime 170-91 mark — the Yankees' fourth best total behind Hall of Famers Whitey Ford, Red Ruffing and Lefty Gomez — and a 3.29 ERA. He won the Cy Young Award after his near-perfect 1978 season, when he went 25-3 with a 1.74 ERA, nine shutouts and 248 strikeouts.

STATUS

Right-hander Tim Stoddard has been released by the Cleveland Indians. The spot on the roster was filled by recalling pitcher Keith Atherton from Class AAA Colorado Springs. The Indians will have to make another roster move July 17, when right-hander Tom Candiotti is scheduled to come off the disabled list. Candiotti went on the 15-day list July 2 because of a weak muscle in his right shoulder.

SIDELINED

Shortstop Kurt Stillwell of Kansas City was placed on the 15-day disabled list Wednesday with a bruised knee.

SCOUTING

Mark Lemke (Atlanta Braves) had two hits and three RBIs as the National League beat the American League 8-3 in the Triple A All-Star game at Columbus Wednesday night.

SPEAKING

"Anybody who played here ought to get two, three extra years service." — Ron Guidry on pitching for the Yankees.

SEASONS

July 14

1916 — St. Louis Brown Ernie Koob went the distance in a 17-inning 0-0 tie with the Boston Red Sox. Carl Mays went the first 15 innings for the Red Sox and Dutch Leonard finished.

1946 — Cleveland's Lou Boudreau hit four doubles and a home run in the first game of a doubleheader against Boston but Ted Williams connected for three home runs and drove in eight runs for an 11-10 Red Sox victory.

1956 — Mel Parnell of the Boston Red Sox pitched a no-hitter against the Chicago White Sox for a 4-0 victory at Fenway Park.

1967 — Eddie Mathews of the Astros hit his 500th home run, off San Francisco's Juan Marichal at Candlestick Park. Houston beat the Giants 8-6.

1968 — Hank Aaron got his 500th home run, off Mike McCormick, as the Atlanta Braves beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2.

1968 — Don Wilson of the Houston Astros struck out 18 Reds in a 6-1 victory over Cincinnati in the nightcap of a doubleheader.

1970 — Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds scores on Jim Hickman's 12th-inning single after bowling over Cleveland's Ray Fosse at home plate to give the National League a 5-4 victory over the American League at Riverfront Stadium.

1972 — In a major league first, Bill Haller was the umpire behind the plate while his brother Tom was the catcher for the Detroit Tigers.

1977 — George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds hit three consecutive home runs and Tom Seaver pitched a two-hitter to beat the Atlanta Braves, 7-1.

Names in the news

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A benefit concert for the Boys and Girls Clubs had special meaning for Alan Paul of the pop group The Manhattan Transfer, who got a start thanks to the organization.

The Boys Club of Newark provided him a college scholarship, private singing lessons and emotional encouragement, said Paul, a club trustee.

"They always let me sing at parties and other functions," said Paul. "That helped my self-esteem and made me believe in myself and my talent."

The benefit Monday at Newark Symphony Hall featured The Manhattan Transfer, the four-member a cappella group; Take Six, the Grammy-winning gospel group; and singer Dionne Warwick, an East Orange native.

Paul said Ms. Warwick, a family friend, took him to his first recording studio when he was 14 years old.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo traded ethnic jokes with radio-television talk show host Larry King, and the leader of a Jewish organization said the exchange was in poor taste but not offensive.

"Let me ask you about the Italian people," King said to the son of an Italian immigrant during an interview Monday. "You say the wrong thing, they punch you. In the army, they surrender."

"The Jewish people wouldn't serve," shot back Cuomo. "They were conscientious objectors because of the wage rates."

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

FRIDAY, JULY 13, 1989

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: catcher Mike Fitzgerald, actors Harrison Ford and Bob Crane, TV pioneer Dave Garroway, Congressman Jack Kemp, comedian Cheech Marin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The outlook brightens for those seeking employment. Although a business decision is out of your hands, someone is working behind the scenes on your behalf. Take a chance on a blind date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your bark is more fierce than your bite, but not everyone knows that. Settle down and show business associates your wit and understanding. Travel with a companion you know well. Share expenses.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Two heads will definitely be better than one when deciding on business priorities. Government service may play a big role in helping your career. A college decision requires putting away extra money.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Maturity counts big when higher-ups decide who gets a job. Stay on your toes, but do not let anyone know how eager you are. Patience and candid conversation will salvage a relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your inventive methods may not work today. Let others take the lead for a change. Physical activity helps clear the cobwebs away. Try to walk or play tennis on your lunch hour.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take inventory of recent investments before making any new ones. Seek experts' advice and follow it to the letter. Think big in business. Halfway measures will not work. Accept a social invitation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Curb a tendency to over-react to difficult situations. A neighbor wants to become a friend. You can gain large concessions by making small ones to mate or partner. Romance has a special glow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Flattery works wonders, especially with a small child. You make money by helping others — and win applause, too. A romantic partner who feels neglected could stray. Be attentive. Dine in a quiet, love-inspiring setting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Show more initiative and higher-ups will give you more authority. A sterling work performance is the key to career success and a fatter paycheck. Be careful not to neglect family members.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A morning telephone call brings good financial luck. Follow current trends. A great day to hunt for bargains in unusual places. An obstacle to romance begins to disappear. Play a waiting game.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not rest on your laurels. Develop new talents. Send out a date resumes if job-hunting. Avoid anyone who wallows in self-pity. Romance is better the second time around!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone who once rejected you needs your advice or services. Big money is paid for original ideas. Guard yours so you alone reap the profits. A gift or bouquet helps mend a rift.

Umpire files suit against newspaper

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for former major league umpire Satch Davidson filed suit against the New York Daily News and one of its writers Wednesday seeking more than $5 million in damages for a story alleging Davidson conspired to fix major league games.

KRIV-TV in Houston obtained a copy of the suit which said the Daily News and writer Dave Kaplan irresponsibly and maliciously published an article falsely reporting that Davidson, who retired in 1984, had been involved in gambling and helped to fix baseball games.

Davidson, 54, seeks damages of $5 million or more from New York News Inc., depending on the net worth of the organization.

The suit also asks for $50,000 or more from Kaplan, depending on his net worth.

"What I've said and what the lawsuit says speaks for itself," Davidson, an umpire for 19 years, said Wednesday night.

When reached Wednesday night, a member of the sports department at the Daily News deferred comment until Thursday morning.

The suit is the result of a story the Daily News printed in its April 9 editions.

"In the Umpire Gambling article, the Daily News and Kaplan, purporting to rely on an anonymous source to CBS, reported that CBS News was planning to air a segment within a few days on gambling by umpires, including proof that former major league umpire Satch Davidson actually helped fix baseball games," the suit said.

The suit denied that Davidson had ever gambled, fixed games, or had been involved in or part of any gambling by umpires.

CBS never intended to broadcast any allegations that Davidson was involved in fixing games, the suit said.

Immediately after publication of the article, CBS News denied it intended to broadcast any report accusing Davidson of gambling.

Between scenes

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar (left) and Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Boomer Esiason relax Wednesday between scenes for a grocery store chain's television commerical being filmed here. Kosar had his contract extended to day for six years. Esiason led the Bengals to the Super Bowl where they lost to San Francisco.

Mookie becomes a rich man

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Two weeks after being selected as the 12th player in the NBA draft, Mookie Blaylock has become a millionaire.

Getting the starting point guard job with the New Jersey Nets may take a little longer, coach Willis Reed said.

"I'm going to take it slow with him. If he exceeds that pace, fine," Reed said Wednesday after Blaylock became the first of this year's NBA first-round choices to sign by agreeing to a four-year, $2 million-plus contract.

Listening to Blaylock, one gets the impression he intends to supplant veteran free agent Lester Conner quickly.

"I can play with anybody," Blaylock said in a telephone conference call from the Dallas office of his agent, Bill Blakeley.

Blaylock reportedly will receive $500,000 in his first season, with his salary jumping to $800,000 by the final year. The deal also contains incentives that could bring the value of his contract to nearly $3 million.

"Mookie is the player we wanted all along and we're glad to come to an agreement this quickly," Nets executive vice president Bob Casciola said. "This is as smooth a negotiation as we've ever been involved with."

Blakeley said the Nets' opening offer was very close to what he sought.

"We were able to wind through two months with in a couple of weeks," he said. "We were receptive to what the Nets were willing to pay. We were close from the start with the numbers and were able to work it out."

Blakeley said the incentives will be achieved through team oriented output rather than individual accomplishments.

However, Casciola said none of the incentives were based on victories.

Blakeley refused to give the exact contract terms, although Casciola said it was four years in length and in excess of $2 million.

"At some point everyone will know what it is," Blakeley said. "We don't want a positive or negative reaction at this point."

Blaylock, the only guard in NCAA history to have consecutive seasons of 200 assists and 100 steals, will have one other job besides beating out Conner, who is an unrestricted free agent. He will also have to win over the New Jersey fans.

The Nets traded popular forward Buck Williams to the Portland Trail Blazers to get the first round pick they used to take Blaylock. New Jersey also got often injured center Sam Bowie in the deal.

"I love pressure. You have to have pressure sometime," said Blaylock, who said he was pleased with the contract, adding his salary would not put any extra pressure on him.

"I have a lot of confidence in myself," he said. "I can motivate players by my actions."

There are some reporters close to the team who feel some veterans — such as center Joe Barry Carroll — cannot be motivated.

"Any guy can be motivated," Blaylock said. "But it takes time. I can play with anybody. I'm not concerned about it."

Reed said Blaylock would join the Nets team in the Southern California summer league before training camp. He added that both forward Chris Morris and guard Dennis Hopson would also play on the team.

Blaylock said he planned to buy his mother a car with the money from his new contract, and when pressed, added he intended to buy a Volkswagen for himself because, "I'm economical."

Cowboys coach pondering trade offers

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Jimmy Johnson says he's considering trade offers for rookie quarterback Steve Walsh, but none has been enticing.

Johnson said several teams, which he refused to identify, had offered a first round draft choice in 1990 and presented the Cowboys with a list of players from which they were free to choose at least one member.

Teams previously identified as interested in Walsh are Minnesota, Green Bay, Kansas City and Miami.

Walsh, the first player chosen in the NFL supplemental draft Friday, was taken by the Cowboys, who gave up a first-round choice in the regular draft next spring.

Johnson continued to say he is reluctant to trade Walsh, even though the team has rookie quarterback Troy Aikman.

"I'd definitely be very concerned about trading a quality, quality player like Steve Walsh to someone we have to play every year," Johnson told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Meanwhile, Joe Courge, the agent representing unsigned veteran quarterback Steve Pelluer, said he has been told the Cowboys are discussing trades involving his client with as many as 11 teams. Atlanta, San Diego and Detroit have expressed the most interest, Courge said.

Pelluer, who started 14 games last season, is seeking an annual pay increase from $302,500 to a base salary between $600,000 and $650,000.

The Cowboys made a new offer Tuesday that Johnson said provides Pelluer the chance to make more than $600,000. Courge rejected the offer, saying it was laced with performance incentive clauses.

NFL Notes

Norman Braman, who interrupted a trip to Europe to vote on a new NFL commissioner, was checking into the hotel last week when he was told by a league official that it was being reported that Jim Finks had already agreed to a contract.

"Those guys have some chutzpah," the owner of the Philadelphia Eagles said, referring to reporters who wrote about the contract. "Where do they get this stuff?"

No, said the official, the reporters were reliable and so was the report.

"Those guys have some chutzpah," Braman said again, this time referring to the search committee that decided on Finks and Finks alone. That night, the Eagles' owner met with Minnesota's Mike Lynn and San Francisco's Edward DeBartolo to plot the strategy that postponed Finks' election.

It was the opening salvo in a power play that may be with us for years.

The 11 owners who blocked Finks by abstaining were irked that six "old guard" owners on the screening committee, who together had 200 years in the league, could pick a commissioner and negotiate a contract without involving the other 22.

So in the interests of future harmony, it would help if the search committee got all 11 dissidents together rather than picking off the three more necessary to get the New Orleans general manager confirmed.

But picking off one at a time might be tempting, because the dissidents are a disparate group.

They include power-seekers like Lynn, DeBartolo and Denver's Patrick Bowlen; cantankerous types like Indianapolis' Robert Irsay and Miami's Joe Robbie; and newcomers like Seattle's Ken Behring.

New England's Victor Kiam and Dallas' Jerry Jones. Plus Tampa Bay's Hugh Culverhouse, a former power who recently has become disenchanted with the interested in Walsh are Minnesota, Green Bay, Kansas City and Miami.

Walsh, the first player chosen in the NFL supplemental draft Friday, was taken by the Cowboys, who gave up a first-round choice in the regular draft next spring.

Johnson continued to say he is reluctant to trade Walsh, even though the team has rookie quarterback Troy Aikman.

"I'd definitely be very concerned about trading a quality, quality player like Steve Walsh to someone we have to play every year," Johnson told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Meanwhile, Joe Courge, the agent representing unsigned veteran quarterback Steve Pelluer, said he has been told the Cowboys are discussing trades involving his client with as many as 11 teams. Atlanta, San Diego and Detroit have expressed the most interest, Courge said.

Pelluer, who started 14 games last season, is seeking an annual pay increase from $302,500 to a base salary between $600,000 and $650,000.

The Cowboys made a new offer Tuesday that Johnson said provides Pelluer the chance to make more than $600,000. Courge rejected the offer, saying it was laced with performance incentive clauses.

Score it NFL 1, agents 0 in the supplemental draft that gave Steve Walsh (temporarily) to the Cowboys; Timm Rosenbach to the Cardinals and Bobby Humphrey to the Broncos.

That's because Rosenbach (13th pick) and Humphrey (17) lasted longer than expected. And Walsh, the second pick, isn't about to get anything near the $11 million over six years Troy Aikman got from Dallas as the first pick in the regular draft.

In fact, Rosenbach may have lasted so long because teams were worried that his agent, Gary Wickard, was asking $1 less than Aikman. So Walsh, who most teams considered more impressive in workouts, went ahead of Rosenbach, who throws the ball much harder.

"A lot of people were scared to death by Wickard," says one general manager.

Now Miami, Minnesota, Kansas City and Green Bay all want Walsh from Dallas. In fact, Miami's Don Shula, who already has Dan Marino, bristled last week when someone suggested to him that Walsh was a less than excellent prospect.

Humphrey, who might have been a top five regular pick if healthy, scared teams because he had two stress fractures and reportedly ran just a 4.7 40-yard dash in several workouts.

The fear was that he might be another Keith Byars, thought to be a franchise runner before he twice suffered the same of injury as Humphrey. Playing on artificial turf in Philadelphia as a pro, he's never run like he did at Ohio State and is at his best as a receiver.

But the Broncos say they timed him in 4.62 and Humphrey says he wasn't in football shape when he worked out. In Denver he'll play on grass for a team that hasn't had a standout runner since Otis Armstrong.

FROM LIMBO TO LIVING ROOM

Last March, shortly after he had stepped down as the 49ers coach following his third Super Bowl victory, Bill Walsh was asked what he would be doing in his new job as "executive vice president for football operations."

"I'm a coach," he always said.

Surviving the good old days

By STACY PAYNE
Herald Editor

Judy Reed lives in California now, but she was a Pinkerton while being raised in Martin County. She was headed for Stanton Drug last week when I ran into her, probably for one of those famous hamburgers and milk shakes she used to enjoy while still living in these parts.

She and I talked a few minutes about the good old days, then she handed me a little something that made me realize that the good old days for her were not quite the same for me.

For All Those Born Before 1940 follows:

WE ARE SURVIVORS! Consider the changes we have witnessed!

We were born before television, before penicillin, before Polio shots, before Xerox, frozen foods, plastic, contact lenses, Frisbees and The Pill.

We were born before radar, credit cards, split atoms, laser beams, and pantyhose. Before ballpoint pens, dishwashers, clothes dryers, electric blankets, air conditioners, drip dry clothes — and before man walked on the moon.

We got married first and then lived together. How quaint can you be?

In our time, clothes closets were for clothes, not for coming out of. Bunnies were small rabbits and rabbits were not Volkswagens. Designer Jeans were scheming girls named Jean or Jeanne, and having a wonderful relationship meant getting along well with your cousins.

We thought fast food was for eating during Lent and outer space was the back of the Riviera Theater.

We were before house-husbands, gay rights, computer dating, group therapy, and nursing homes. We never heard of FM radio, tape decks, electric typewriters, artificial hearts, word processors, sweat suits, and wearing earrings. For us, time-sharing meant together-ness, not computers or condominiums. A chip was a piece of wood. Hardware meant hardware and software wasn't even a word.

In 1940, "Made in Japan" meant junk and the term "making out" referred to how you did on your exam. Pizzas, McDonalds and instant coffee were unheard of.

We hit the scene when there were 5 and 10 cent stores where you could buy things for 5 and 10 cents. Sundaes were made with ice cream and for one nickel you could ride a street car, make a phone call, buy a Pepsi, or buy enough stamps to mail a letter and two postcards. You could buy a new Chevy for $600, but who could afford one? A pity, too, because gas was only 11 cents a gallon.

In our day cigarette smoking was fashionable. Grass was mowed. Coke was a cold drink and Pot was something you cooked in. AIDS were helpers in the principal's office.

We were certainly not before the difference between the sexes was discovered, but we were before sex changes. We made do with what we had and we were the last generation that was so dumb as to think you needed a husband to have a baby!

Judy, thanks for the creativity. By the way, how did you get through tanning sessions without FM radio? You did have tanning salons didn't you? Microwave popcorn? Sun roofs? VCRs? PacMan? Compact discs?

In last week's edition of The Herald, I wrote that Bob Haislip's mother, Sara, was married to Laban Green Haislip. She was not. She was married to Harry Haislip.

Parade

STANTON — The Martin County Old Settlers Reunion kicked off Saturday with a parade through downtown Stanton. Pictured are several of the floats that wound through the city during the parade and were viewed by hundreds of residents and visitors.

Phelps puckers up to fight cancer and to help a friend

By STEVE REAGAN
For the Herald

STANTON — Louis Phelps probably would do almost anything for his friends — or a good cause — but he almost balked when it came time to kiss a pig.

But Phelps, displaying good humor about the situation, puckered up and smacked Bubba the Pig during the 56th Old Settlers' Reunion, held here Saturday.

Phelps' strange kissing date came about as part of the first-ever American Cancer Society Kiss-a-Pig contest, which was held in conjunction with the reunion.

"There's just no way to describe it," he said when asked what it was like to kiss the porker. For his part, Bubba seemingly protested the entire episode by squealing loudly.

More than $100 was raised for the Stanton branch of ACS during the contest, according to Marsha Todd, project chairman for the group.

Phelps and seven other candidates raised money during the morning. The twist to the event, however, was that they were raising donations for the other contestants. The winner, the person who had the most money raised in his or her name, had the "honor" of kissing Bubba.

Jack Allred was the apparent winner, but a week-long bout with the flu prevented him from performing his duties. Phelps then volunteered to take his sick friend's place.

"Jack's pretty well down with the flu, so I volunteered to take his place," Phelps said. Pointing at co-contestant Teresa Barnhill, he added: "I think Teresa should have won it."

Despite the seemingly disgusting nature of his task, Phelps said he didn't mind taking part in the project.

"My mother died of cancer in December," he said. "This seemed like a good thing to work with."

About 90 percent of the money raised will remain in Stanton, with

Council questions discrepancies

By STACY PAYNE
Herald Editor

Stanton councilmembers were adamant about having Tele-Media Company officials change the wording in a franchise ordinance at their regular meeting, Monday, July 10.

Tele-Media Company of Mid-America is in the process of buying the current cable television company operating in Stanton, Landmark Cablevision. Roy Pickett, city attorney, noted several seeming discrepancies in the language of the document that would allow the franchise transfer.

Robert Shock, District Manager of Tele-Media, stated that the terminology was "merely generic in nature," due to the many towns and cities who will also be considering the transfer, that the language was not intended to cause any confusion.

"We are one of the most highly rated cable companies in the country," Shock said. "We are the largest independent company. We are one of the top-notch companies.

If we weren't, I would not be working for them. There is no intention of anything underhanded at all."

Nevertheless, the councilmen insisted on several changes that were written into the franchise transfer contract before the meeting was adjourned. According to city law, the contract must be read on three different occasions before final approval can occur.

If approved, the transfer will include a contract renewal with the City of Stanton for 15 years. Rex Thackerson and Gary Redwine, service personnel that are already familiar to Stanton residents will be retained by Tele-Media Company.

Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport reported to the Council on the Maternal and Infant Care Access program. Because of the increase of clients receiving assistance from MICA, and other Texas Department of Health programs, additional space was needed.

He stated that earlier the county had already agreed to pay an additional $27 to assist MICA's expansion. The city agreed to pay the remaining $27.

In other action, the council voted to solicit engineering services for the Texas Commerce Department's Paving and Drainage Program. The project will include a drainage system for Lake Pauline, and the paving of several streets on the city's southside.

The current sealcoating program was expanded by the council. Additional streets were added, and according to Gary Harris, Engineer of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., bid prices were lower than expected, creating an additional $20,000 for the sealcoating.

Harris also reported on meeting with the Martin County Commissioners about sharing the cost of closing the current landfill and constructing a new one in the north end of the county.

He said that the commissioners are considering the plan. He also stated that Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., were "right on target as to task completion" on the landfill project.

Commissioners may assist with landfill

By STACY PAYNE
Herald Editor

The Martin County Commissioners will consider sharing the costly close-down of the old Stanton landfill and the construction of the proposed new one.

Stanton Mayor Danny Fryar reported to the County on cost and task completion of the Environmental Protection Agency-mandated project.

Fryar explained that the EPA was shutting down many landfills in West Texas, and that "Stanton is not excluded."

He said that the city had already spent $20,000 of the proposed $65,000 cost for preparing the draft permit. Other costs, which may end up costing the city and/or county as much as $750,000, included a Texas Department of Health review of the permit and a city-appointed engineer's response to that review.

A public hearing will be held after a final draft is prepared.

Fryar said that a major cost will include the bidding on, construction and operation of the EPA-approved landfill, as well as the actual closing down of the existing landfill.

The new landfill, according to Engineer Gary Harris, of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., will be constructed in the north part of the county. He said that the projected completion date of the project is 1992.

Harris added that a completion study was designed from a projected population growth estimate. "We not only took into account the city's population growth, but also the county's. It is based on a 25-35 year growth."

After a period of discussion on the considerable cost to both the city and county, Fryar explained that the estimated cost of $750,000 was only for the closing of the existing landfill and the construction of a new one.

"It will take approximately $150,000 a year to manage and operate the landfill once it is completed," he said.

Harris said that manpower probably will be needed at the site. "There will be much more stringent rules and regulations about what goes in, and you will have to have the manpower at the gate for that."

County Judge Bob Deavenport, after the report and discussion, said that the court recognized the landfill as "one of the biggest problems that area residents have."

"I think it is one of the biggest challenges that the county or the city has ever had," Fryar concluded in agreement.

The court received bids for a mower and tractor. After voting to purchase a Bush Hog 12615 Rotary Cutter for $7,950 from Feagins Implement in Big Spring, Deavenport appointed Commissioners Ronnie Deatherage and E.D. Holcomb to inspect several tractors that had been proposed by area retailers.

Sandy Jones, Clinic Coordinator for the Martin County Clinic of the Texas Department of Health, and Elvia Erives, Outreach Coordinator for Maternal and Infant Care Access, reported on several operations and activities of the clinic.

Jones said that MICA had expanded to such an extent that additional space to facilitate the program's activities was warranted. The court awarded the local TDH chapter a $27 stipend to pay the question of the space.

The commissioners voted to purchase five high-band radio units for the County Road and Bridge Department. Eddie Jameson, road superintendent, requested the high-band system to replace the current low-band system because of major air wave interference. He explained that licensing for the high-band would cost $150.

Luxton authors history of co-op

To help commemorate its 50th birthday, Cap Rock Electric is publishing a history of the co-op. Authored by Peggy Luxton, communications advisor, the hardbound book will be published to coincide with the co-op's Golden Anniversary Annual Meeting, scheduled in September.

As well as chronicling the changes that have transpired at the co-op over its 50-year history, the book will also feature first-person accounts of members' recollections of the big day when electricity finally reached their rural homes. The book will also have early photographs of Cap Rock, its members, facilities, and equipment.

Luxton said that the book was researched from publications of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, the national organization for rural electricians, as well as the Association of Texas Electric Cooperatives, the statewide organization. Also used for research were board meeting minutes from the co-op's beginnings.

Luxton has been an employee of the co-op for 13 years. Before assuming the position of communications advisor, she served the co-op as dispatcher and meter reader, being the first female to work in the field. Before coming to Cap Rock, she spent 11 years as a certified police officer. She also has prior experiences in journalism, having been editor and columnist for a semi-weekly newspaper.

Peggy Luxton, head of communications for Cap Rock Electrical Co-op, is shown writing at her desk. Luxton recently authored a history of the co-op in celebration of its 50th anniversary.

She holds an Associate Degree in Criminal Justice from Henderson County Junior College in Athens, and a Bachelor's Degree from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Psychology. She holds the Basic, Intermediate, Advanced, and Instructor's Certificates from the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement.

She was an honorary member of the faculty of Kilgore Junior College, where she was an instructor in the East Texas Police Academy.

Among her responsibilities as communications advisor are the publication of a monthly newsletter for co-op members, a newsletter for employees, as well as newsletters for past managers and members of the board and for members of the co-op's Member Advisory Committees. She also prepares press releases, is the co-op photographer, and writes and edits a newspaper section for the statewide publication, the Co-op

Power.

"I love working for Cap Rock," Luxton said, "especially in the dynamic, innovative direction the co-op has now taken. We are all working toward the same goal — being the best electric utility in West Texas. We will accomplish that feat by providing the best service and by utilizing the ideas, advice, and expertise of co-op board management, employees and members. We have no doubt we will reach that goal."

"This is one of the programs the society came up with," she said. "We were going to do it last fall, but decided to do it at the same time as the reunion, since there'd be more people here."

After being kissed by Phelps, Bubba returned to his home, the Theodore Wells farm. It is unknown if the porker will return for next year's contest.

The Kiss-A-Pig contest was just one of many activities held during the reunion, which began Saturday morning with a parade through the downtown area.

Immediately following the parade, several contests, including egg and cow-chip tossing and bubble-gum blowing, were held.

The historic Convent and the renovated Texas Theater were open for tours during the afternoon. Proceeds from the tours went toward the Convent's restoration.

The City Park was the site for children's games and a barbecue, while activities concluded with a country-western dance at the Community Center.

In connection with the reunion, several Courtney School and Stanton High School classes held their reunions during the weekend.

Old Settler category winners were as follows:

Window decorating: First place, Reid's Barber Shop; Second place, Susan's Flowers; Third place, Stanton Drug.

Floats: First place, Methodist Youth; Second place, Chamber of Commerce; Third place, Convent Foundation.

Farthest Traveled to attend: Tommy and Sherata Haislip, from New Jersey.

Thanks for the help

Dear Editor:

The Old Settlers Reunion will go down in history as a great day. I want to publicly thank everyone who took part in any way.

Every committee carried out their responsibilities without a hitch! The list would be too long if I tried to list each one, so I will just say thanks to each of you who supported me by carrying out your duties. You certainly did cooperate and I appreciated it.

There are a few that I want to personally thank: The faithful American Legion veterans who presented the Color Guard; Billie and Sam Houston for heading the parade as parade marshals (which we have not had before). They, on their matched horses, made such an impressive sight; and the Stanton High School Band! The band directors, Rick Lee and Kirke McKenzie, made quiet an effort to have the band in the parade (and they had several obstacles to overcome to do so). I think everyone was so happy to see and hear the band. Tell them when you see them how much we appreciate them and the students who took part.

The parade (some said) was the biggest ever. This is because so many businesses, individuals and organizations entered floats or some type of parade display, as well out-of-town cars, buggies, horses, etc. Thanks to Cap Rock Electric and the men who drove the

35th reunion

Members of the 1954 Stanton Graduating class are all smiles as they ride their float downtown last Saturday. The group held their reunion on both Friday and Saturday.

Cap Rock correspondence

By PEGGY LUXTON

Cap Rock Electric was very honored to join Martin County in its celebration of Old Settlers' Reunion this year. Cap Rock had another reason to celebrate as well — it's the 50th birthday year for the co-op.

More than 500 persons visited Cap Rock during its Open House. Tours of the facilities, bucket truck rides, and refreshments were offered to guests. The all-expense-paid trip to Puerto Vallarta that Cap Rock offered as door prize went to Mrs. Roscoe (Barbara)

Thomas. Her name was drawn from the hopper in the drawing following the Old Settlers' Reunion.

Cap Rock employees were also in the Old Settlers' Parade this year. Employees constructed two floats — one featuring a working pump jack and a lineman on a transformer bank pole. That float was driven by Terry Smith and Wally Hazelwood rode the pole. The other float stressed the difference in West Texas lifestyle before and after the advent of electricity. The float was driven by Billy Luxton. Riding on the float were Mrs. Mike (Leatrice) Adams and her children, and Deana and Donnie Jones. The float was constructed by Richard Barnes' underground crew.

Cap Rock's new Hi-Ranger bucket truck was in the parade. Throwing gum from the truck were Juble and Angie Brown, Mike Cooke and employees' children. Bovee Powell drove the truck.

Cap Rock also displayed the refurbished service vehicle that will be given away as grand prize in a drawing at the co-op's Annual Meeting in September. Kay Lynne Lucas and children were in that vehicle.

Other Cap Rock employees used the co-op's vehicles to pull floats for other organizations. J.A. Luxton and Vicki Bryan pulled one float, Kerry Fletcher and his daughter pulled another. Johnny Hinojosa pulled another float, as did Larry and Patsi Simer. Donnie Thompson and Donnie Williams drove vehicles for others. Richard Barnes coordinated the vehicles and drivers.

Blood drive deemed a success

The blood drive held at the Martin County Community Center June 30 was deemed successful, Janice Bundas, local blood drive coordinator said. She added that 73 units of blood were given, others were deferred.

Each blood donor received a printed T-shirt given by the ladies Hospital Auxiliary.

Bundas explained that blood donors' names were placed in a drawing at the First National Bank of Stanton and Blocker Oil Company. Jessie Cortez received a $50 savings bond from FNB. Gracie Villa won a $20 fill-up from Blocker Oil.

Bundas said she was enthused by the participation and credits the local businessmen for the large turn-out.

"In 1989, businessmen grouped together to encourage their employees and customers to donate," she said. "Due to their interest in the local hospital, the contract agreement with Permian Basin Blood Center was met for the first time."

M&M Meter Service employees kicked off the blood drive promptly at 9 a.m. Paige Eiland offered his employees at Eiland & Associates an extra incentive of one day off from work for donating. The First National Bank employees appeared at the blood drive near the end of the day to help cap the activities. "I am confident that with the next blood drive being scheduled in conjunction with the health fair, the hospital will reach its goal of 100 units this year," Bundas said.

pick-ups to pull the many floats. Thanks to the Stanton Volunteer Fire Department for working so hard to get the old fire truck running and in the parade.

There was some kind of entertainment for everyone all day because folks like Jean and Jim McGilvery shared their townhouse (the old Texas Theater), with the public and proceeds going to the Convent Foundation; games sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce; music at the community center and the park; Open House at the Convent and also Cap Rock Electric's 50th year celebration; the museum, class reunions, sidewalk sales and shoppers' mart.

I could go on and on thanking individuals and would probably still miss someone. So I will just say thanks to you all. The day was a great one beyond my wildest dreams and it was certainly worth the effort.

This is a public letter of appreciation to Cap Rock Electric, its organization, staff and employees for their help during the Old Settlers Reunion.

Peggy Luxton was on the phone weeks in advance offering help and then following up on that offer.

Cap Rock sent trucks and supplied the drivers that pulled the floats in the parade. They brought an air compressor to air up float tires when the need arose — and it did many times. Cap Rock employees were there in numbers to help out anywhere and everywhere they were needed. The parade was much longer this year, and with their help, it went very smoothly.

Stanton Little League concludes season

By LANCE HOPPER

Little League Superintendent
The 1989 season of Little League baseball has come to a close and what an exciting end to a spectacular season of ballgames. I believe it was Yogi Berra that once said "It ain't over til it's over." This has been proved out once again at the diamond.

In the Minor League play, the Wildcats defeated the Twins and the Pirates to end the season undefeated. The Pirates made a game of it in the latter innings, though, showing us that "it ain't over til it's over."

The Twins went on to defeat the Pirates in a thriller in which both teams tried to outlast the other. All in all, the minors had a competitive season and saw many close ballgames.

In Major League play, two teams were tied going into the final week of play and a third team stood a chance — if the games fell right — to tie the other two for a three-way lock-up for first place.

The Angels and the Rangers were tied for first place going into the last week's games. The Yankees were in the hunt, provided that the Rangers and the Angels lost their respective game that week — but that was not to be.

On Monday, June 27, the Rangers defeated the Yankees in the last game of the season for both teams, and the Astros beat the Angels the following night on a last-inning home run with two runners aboard in the last game for those two teams — proving Yogi right once again.

All-Star selections were chosen by the coaches and the fifteen boys competed in a tournament with four other rural communities in Iraan on July 6, 7 and 8. (Tournament coverage will be in next week's edition of the Herald).

Commissioners Steve Stallings and I would like to thank all of the ballplayers, coaches, parents, grandparents and fans who have supported the league this year. Two very special thanks go out to the sponsors of the teams, and to the Xi Epsilon Delta Sorority for their cooperation and work.

Commissioner Stallings and I would also like to thank our volunteer umpires on the bases (they are too numerous to mention) and our greatest gratitude to the men behind the plate — James Johnson, Mike Payne, Jerry Williams and David Standefer — for their unending support and willingness to be counted upon when the League needed them.

The commissioners and the league would like to point out to the community that during this past year, a total of 317 ballplayers participated in various leagues. At this time the league is having to "squeeze" approximately 60 ballgames into 30 days. The league is constantly growing and the need for another park is becoming very evident.

We have been denied the park before but would like to think that "it ain't over til it's over."

The Minor League teams were the Athletics, Bluejays, Redsox, Pirates, Twins and Wildcats.

The Major League teams were the Rebels, Astros, Yankees, Angels and the Rangers.

SISD wins award

Stanton Independent School District has been awarded a certificate of "exceptional effort in safety" for participation in the Texas school safety honor roll program.

This program is sponsored by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and its purpose is to make school campuses safe for students by urging schools to be safety conscious throughout the year.

The certificate is signed by George R. Gustafson, president of the Texas Safety Association, and William Kirby, state commissioner of education.

UWCD news

By MARK HOELSCHER

The Martin County Underground Water Conservation District Salt Water Disposal inventory is nearing completion and location maps will be available within the next two weeks.

In addition to providing these maps to the general public, the Water District plans to develop a monitoring program consisting of water wells located around these Salt Water Disposals and take chloride samples from them on a quarterly basis.

The District is now in the process of soliciting the help of area well owners in gathering these samples. We would encourage everyone to view the Salt Water Disposal Well map, and become a part of a district wide monitoring network.

For more information please call the District at (915) 756-2136 or come by our office at 207 1/2 North St. Peter (behind First Bankers). This is a free program. Testing is done at the District office and collection vials can be obtained there also.

'Trippers' needed

The Martin County Senior Citizen Center is trying to get enough people together to take a trip to Palo Duro Canyon in Canyon to see the outdoor musical "Texas."

At least eight to 10 people are needed before the trip can be made. Plans call for the group to leave on a Friday afternoon and return Saturday. The group will leave either the last part of July or the first part of August. If you are interested in going, please come by the center or call 756-2791.

Also, Permian Gold cards are available at the center. These cards give you a discount at participating merchants in Midland and Odessa. They also hope to have some participants in Stanton later this summer.

The cards are free and if you want a directory, they ask for a $2 donation, which you can usually get back with your first discount. For more information, please call or come by the center.

4-H shooters compete

Martin County 4-H Super Shooters participated in their first competition Saturday, June 24, in Midland.

In the sub-junior division for ages 9 through 12, the winner of the trap competition was Ben Miller. Jason Hopper was third, and he also placed first in skeet competition.

In the junior division for ages 13-14, Sonja Hopper won the trap competition and Kenny Stewart was third. Shane Louder was second in the skeet competition.

In the senior division, ages 15-19, Robby Wilson was second in trap, shooting 98 of a possible 100 targets. He also placed third in the skeet shoot.

On Saturday, July 1, the Super Shooters traveled to Windy Hills Gun Club in Big Spring for a trap and skeet competition.

Martin County fared even better despite 105-degree temperatures.

In the sub-juniors, Ryan Webb was first in trap, Jason Hopper was fifth and Jeremy Louder sixth. In skeet competition, Hopper was first, Webb third and Louder fourth.

In the junior division, Sonja Hopper was second in trap, Shane Louder was third and Will Miller was sixth. In skeet competition, Hopper won first and Louder took third.

Robby Wilson was second in trap and fourth in skeet in the senior division.

High-point honors went to Ryan Webb in the sub-junior division, and Sonja Hopper was the junior division.

4-H news

By Kathryn Burch
County Extension Agent

What's more irresistible than one 4-Her? Try 200 members from the all displaying their talents in the 4-H Clothing Project on the stage of Ozona High School's Auditorium.

The District 6 4-H Fashion Show featured five 4-Hers from Martin County, Thursday, July 6 at the Ozona High School Auditorium.

4-H members from the 22-county area were competing in buying and construction categories, the culmination of their clothing projects.

Amanda Riley, the 12-year-old daughter of Tom and Rebecca Riley placed first in the Junior Party Wear Division. Amanda's all cotton blue calico print dress

Coming from a cotton producing county, Amanda is a strong supporter of cotton products.

Jennifer Adkins won second place in the Ready-to-Wear Active Sports Division. She modeled a tennis set of white trimmed in yellow and turquoise. She is the daughter of Bob and Deborah Adkins.

Jessica Holloway won third place in the Ready-to-Wear Division Tailored Daywear. Her Southwest wearable art T-shirt and short skirt were a smashing hit. She is the nine-year-old daughter of Jerry and Tahita Holloway.

Tarah Schuelke placed in the top third of her group taking home one of the few coveted blue ribbons. She constructed a darling pillow ticking jumper adorned with pink watermelons. She is the 10-year-old daughter of Kenneth and Patty Schuelke.

Belinda Riley placed in the middle third of her class with a red ribbon. She wore a darling night gown and carried a stuffed rabbit. She is the nine-year-old daughter of Tom and Rebecca Riley.

The 4-H Clothing program is carried out under the guidance of the Martin County Extension Office.

The sponsors for the event included West Texas Utilities, Trans-Pecos Cotton Growers, St. Lawrence Cotton Growers, El Paso Wool Cotton Growers, Sanderson Wool Commission and the District 6 Texas Extension Homemakers Association.

In the 4-H Clothing project, adult leaders teach lessons various clothing-related subjects to the 4-H members, who range in age from nine and/or third grade to age 19. This year's projects in Martin County were varied, some of the activities were a string-pieced quilt raffled for the Heart Association, consumer judging projects furnished by Haislip's of Stanton, mending skills and cotton-field-to-fabric project.

4-H Clothing projects teach critical thinking skills, poise, and communication skills, all skills our young people need to be successful in life.

For more information about the 4-H program in Martin County, contact me at the county extension Office at 756-3316, or come by the office in the Courthouse.
