'Back ... near for staffers

Campus administrators — to include all principals — will return to work Monday and for Snyder teachers, "back to school" will be three weeks away.

As part of House Bill 72 mandates, classes will begin this year after Labor Day, almost one week later than normal.

130 dead in DFW Delta jetliner crash

GRAPEVINE (AP)–A Delta Air Lines jumbo jet crash claimed about 130 lives, but 32 others somehow survived the first major disaster at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Amid the smoldering wreckage of Delta Flight 191, which crashed shortly after 6 p.m. Friday in severe weather on its final approach, there were signs of life. Even two dogs walked out of the tail section as investigators retrieved the flight recorders that may reveal secrets behind the crash.

"I'm amazed anyone survived," said Dr. James Atkins, an emergency room physician at Dallas' Parkland Memorial Hospital who was among the first doctors on the scene.

Dr. Charles Petty, the Dallas County medical examiner, said at 2 a.m. Saturday that his field agent at the crash site said 119 bodies had been recovered.

"And they are still in the process of picking up more," Petty said. "Most of these bodies do not have identification on them." Only four identifications had been made, he said. No names had been released pending notification of relatives.

"It looks as if the bodies have been thrown down into a huge garbage dump," Petty said.

Surviving passengers described the anguished moments prior to the crash.

"I saw the ground coming up," said passenger Christopher John Meier of Temple. "The left side came up and disappeared. Then the right side came up and disappeared, too. I thought I was going to die.

"I walked away and started rounding up the people that weren't hurt to help the people that were hurt. There was a lot of screaming and yelling."

The jumbo jet crashed and exploded during a heavy thunderstorm while it headed toward a landing.

Witnesses counted 40 to 60 bodies draped in yellow plastic on the tarmac near the wreckage of the Lookheed L-10011, which went down shortly after 6 p.m. near the airport's northern boundary. The flight had originated in Fort Lauderdale, Fla, and was enroute to Los Angeles.

Delta spokesman Matt Guilfoyle said the plane was carrying 149 passengers and 12 crew members. The survivors included 29 passengers and three crew members, he said.

Officials were still trying to account for all of the deceased, he said.

All three members of the cockpit crew were killed. They include Capt. Ted Connors, 57; first officer Rudy Price, 43; and second officer Nick Nassick, 44, all of Atlanta.

Connors had 31 years experience with Delta and the trio had a combined total of 25 years with the L-1011.

An infant died at a hospital, and a witness said a man was decapitated when the jet struck his car on Texas Highway 114. At least 34 people were injured, including a person not on the plane, hospital officials said.

But the urgency was directed

Prison term ends child injury case

Rosalio Gutierrez Jr., 21 — charged with injury to a child in connection with a blow to the head suffered by his then 18-month-old daughter — was sentenced to 10 years in the Texas Department of Corrections Friday night.

The six-man, six-woman jury hearing the case deliberated for 2 hour and 45 minutes before returning the verdict in the punishment phase of the trial at 10:55 p.m. Trial proceedings in 132nd District Court began Wednesday.

Earlier in the day, the jurors had heard final arguments in the guilt or innocence phase of the trial before returning a verdict of

AJRA tickets now available

Tickets are now on sale for the AJRA National Finals Rodeo, to be conducted for the 10th straight year here Aug. 13-17.

Performances will again be nightly at 8 o'clock in the Scurry County Coliseum.

Ticket prices are $4 for adults and $2 for children age 12 and younger. These may now be purchased at the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, Boss & Hoss Western Wear, Anthony's and Bar-H-Bar Western Wear. These will be sold at the door also.

Box seats are $6 each and may be reserved by calling the chamber.

Locally, the finals are sponsored by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce and Board of County Development.

National sponsors of the finals will be Wrangler, an AJRA sponsor since 1983, and Dodge, co-sponsored locally by Snyder Motor Company. This marks the first year with Dodge as a sponsor.

Event sponsors note that "the best of the pros" are back for the 1985 finals, headed by Bob Tallman, coming back as rodeo announcer for his fifth consecutive year. His co-announcer will be Bill Venz.

Pro clowns Rick Chatman, Tom Feller and Leon Coffee are back again also to spotlight a week of entertainment and bull fighting. Chatman was last year's World Champion bullfighter and has been with the AJRA National Finals for 10 consecutive years.

Agencies merger finalized

Snyder Insurance Agency, a business fixture in Scurry County for 60 years, has merged with Boren and West Insurance Agency.

Clyde Hall will continue as the owner-operator of Snyder Insurance and is now joined in the business by his son Rick, who has moved back locally from Denver City.

John Boren, owner of Boren and West, plans to retire from the day-to-day operation of the firm.

The combined two agencies

The SHS graduating class of 1970 had a reunion out at Willow Park this weekend. Each year, Snyder has a several class reunions, and it might be a good idea to have one giant school reunion once every four or five years.

With so many Snyder grads living here, the project would be a natural and could turn into a big event that rivals even July 4th.

Folks are always a little reluctant about attending class reunions. The 10th reunion is alway easier than the 5th and the 20th is even easier.

The best reunion story we've heard occurred to a fellow who worked in an big insurance office in the Dallas area. He was a graduate of the Masonic Home High School. The invitation was mailed to his office, and the address caused coworkers to have a lot of fun–at his expense.

On the notice, "ex-student" was abbreviated "ex-stud."

It happened last week at the Lions Club's annual White Elephant Sale. Sonny Greenfield of Thompson Shoes made sure his footwear competitor, Bill Dryden, went with him to the weekly club meeting.

Greenfield had set up the fact that his white elephant item would be one hour of work done by Bill Dryden. Tom Machen of Tom's Marine bid $6.50 and won Dryden as his white elephant prize.

All three guys need to visit a doctor's office that has a sofa–Greenfield for thinking Dryden would work, Machen for paying $6.50 and Dryden for going anywhere with Greenfield.

New store will offer men's line

A new men's store will open in Snyder Monday, Suits Us, located one block west of College Ave. at 1908 37th St.

Manager for the locally owned store will be Cindy Banta.

Hours of operation will be from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturday.

Although a complete line of men's dress clothes will be offered, the featured item will be two lines of men's dress suits, Austin Reed and Henry Grethel.

Ask Us

Q. — What was the best year Snyder ever had for state sales tax returns and how does this compare now?

A. — In 1982, the year's sales tax topped at $944,095. In 1983, this dropped to $802,692, a 14.9 percent drop. During 1984, the total rose to $874,325. As for 1985, the latest figures have Snyder's sales tax some 12.4 percent under 1984's. If the current trend continues, less sales tax than 1983's amount is projected.

Local

Band meets

Snyder High School band students are requested to meet in the high school band hall at 9 a.m. Monday.

The 1985-86 school year will see local band students under the guidance of a new band director, Walter Reneau, formerly of Pecos. He served as band director there the past five years.

Vehicle fall

A 15-year-old Snyder girl was injured when she fell from the back of a pickup Friday around 2 p.m.

According to reports, Ashley LeAnn Dennis of 3209 40th St. was riding in the back of a 1957 Chevrolet pickup driven by her mother, Mary Jacquelyn Dennis. She fell from the vehicle at the intersection of 30th St. and Ave. U.

She was admitted to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries described as multiple cuts and brusies and a possible broken hip.

Jury continues

The Scurry County Grand Jury was scheduled to meet at 1:30 p.m. Saturday to finish considering cases first presented to them Friday.

An ongoing trial in 132nd District Court delayed the start of Friday's proceedings until 2:30 p.m.

They were unable to finish all the cases presented for indictment by 5 p.m. and court officers released them at 5:30 p.m. Friday and scheduled the Saturday session.

Meetings here

Snyder city council members will conduct their regular August meeting Monday while Scurry County officials will skip this Monday's normal session.

The council will meet beginning at 6:30 p.m. at city hall.

Scurry County Commissioners will not meet Monday due to the absence of two of the commissioners. They will meet in regular session Monday, Aug. 12.

Weather

Snyder temperatures: High Friday, 96 degrees; low, 71 degrees; reading at 7 a.m. Saturday, 74 degrees; precipitation, none; total precipitation for 1985 to date: 19.16 inches.

Area Forecast: Saturday night, lows in lower 70s. Sunday, mostly sunny and continued hot. Highs near 100. Southeast winds 5 to 15 mph.

Troops pursue rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Soldiers backed by airplanes and helicopters surrounded a force of as many as 1,000 rebels that attacked a city north of the capital and then retreated in small groups into the nearby mountains, the Defense Ministry said.

The leftist Sandinista government said soldiers killed 41 of the guerrillas and captured 10 others.

Civilians reached by telephone in Esteli province confirmed the military was pursuing rebels. They said government airplanes and Soviet-made Mi-24 helicopters were repeatedly flying over nearby mountains in search of the guerrillas.

The rebels, using mortars, rockets, grenades and automatic weapons staged a daring attack on La Trinidad, a city of 15,000 people 75 north of Managua early Thursday.

Rebels rarely attack so close to the capital. The 12,000-strong Nicaraguan Democratic Force, or FDN, is the largest of the four U.S.-supported rebel groups fighting the Sandinistas. The group normally operates in northern Nicaragua from bases in Honduras.

There was no independent confirmation of the Defense Ministry's statement.

In the communique, the ministry said government troops surrounded 800 to 1,000 anti-Sandinista rebels in northern Esteli province after the attack on La Trinidad.

The ministry said the rebels had broken up into small fighting groups and that troops and aircraft were sent into the area.

In an earlier statement, the ministry said 33 rebels, 11 soldiers and three civilians were killed in the fighting. There was no explanation for the two versions of casualties.

The senior officer at La Trinidad, Lt. Jose Vindell Lira, said the rebels destroyed two buses en route to Guatemala and Mexico, but did not harm the passengers.

ABC employee kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A veteran Lebanese employee of ABC was kidnapped today by gunman while driving along a crowded seaside road to Beirut airport, his office announced.

Shakib Hmeidan, 50, operational manager for ABC in Beirut, was en route to the airport to catch a flight to the United States in a chauffeur-driven car when four gunmen in a blue Peugeot stopped him, according to a colleague who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The men, armed with rifles, ordered Hmeidan out of the car and into their Peugeot. They took the keys of the ABC car and warned the driver, whose name was withheld, not to follow them.

ABC employees here said they had no idea why Hmeidan, who has worked for the network for 17 years, was kidnapped or who seized him.

He was abducted at 11:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m. EDT) on the crowded seaside Rouche roadway, only 200 yards from an anti-riot police checkpoint, his colleagues said.

Some 200 red-bereted police officers and 400 Lebanese army troops were deployed in west Beirut on July 16 under a new Syrian-sponsored security plan to end anarchy in the Moslem half of the capital.

The plan appeared to hold for the first few days, but gunmen slowly began reappearing on the streets.

Fourteen foreigners, including seven Americans and four Frenchmen, have been missing in Lebanon since March 1984. Extremist groups have claimed to have kidnapped most of them.

The missing foreigners include four journalists. Terry Anderson, 37, chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press was kidnapped March 16, and Alec Collett, 65, a British journalist on assignment for the United Nations Relief and Works Agency when abducted March 25. Jean-Paul Kauffmann, 42, a French journalist, and Alfred Yagoubzadeh, 26, an Iranian photographer for the French Sipa agency, also are missing.

Jeremy Levin, the Beirut Bureau Chief of the American Cables Newtork News, was kidnapped March 7, 1984, but escaped his captors in February.

Meanwhile, Christian army units battled with Druse militiamen in hills above Beirut today, jolting the capital with the sound of crashing rockets and shells.

Several rockets smashed into Christian mountain resorts northeast of Beirut, but there was no immediate word on casualties.

The fighting broke out shortly after midnight and reached a peak around dawn. Both sides ignored repeated calls for a cease-fire.

Former president Fulgencia Batista regained control of Cuba after a 1952 coup d'etat.

Queen Elizabeth's third son, Prince Edward, was born in 1964.

French artist Edouard Manet died in 1883.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO SAVE THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN TAXES EACH YEAR?

If your taxable income is $29,900 per year or higher, you are unnecessarily giving ⅓ to ½ of the interest you earn on your C.D.'s or Moneymarket Funds to the IRS. One of the best ways to correct this expensive problem is to learn about tax-free income alternatives. Municipal bonds offer tax-free yields.

We are sponsoring a seminar on four different ways to invest in municipal securities:

1. Tax Free Checking Accounts
2. Individual Municipal Bonds (Tax Free)
3. Insured Tax Free Trust
4. Tax Free Bond Funds

Diabetes can block bloodflow

DEAR DR. GOTT — An older woman I know who has diabetes had to have her foot removed because of gangrene. I don't understand the connection, but I've heard it's not uncommon.

DEAR READER — Diabetes causes accelerated arteriosclerosis, a more rapid development of arterial blockage. All arteries are affected by this process, those to the feet as well. If the blockage causes a profound reduction in blood flow, the tissues will not receive enough oxygen. Over time, the tissues may die and gangrene will result. Once tissue death is evident, the destroyed portions must be surgically removed, since preventive measures are then of no use.

Your acquaintance's foot was virtually lost by the time she had surgery; the operation only served to prevent the dead tissue from making her dangerously ill. Of course, she and her doctor are undoubtedly concerned about her remaining foot; if gangrene affected one, it may soon affect the other.

DEAR DR. GOTT — For the last few months I have had a small bump on the roof of my mouth. It varies in size and sometimes is hardly perceptible. It doesn't hurt at all. What could cause it? Should I be concerned about it?

DEAR READER — The lining of the mouth may often swell unexpectedly in a patchy distribution. Your waxing and waning bump probably is due to a low-grade inflammation or irritation on the roof of your mouth. However, I suggest you check it out with your dentist because the bump is new and unusual reactions sometimes can occur in that portion of the mouth.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm 16, and for the past few months I've been feeling very run-down and tired all the time, even though I've made efforts to improve my sleeping habits and diet. I've also been nauseated and have had pains in my upper abdomen. Could I have a slight case of mono?

DEAR READER — Your symptoms are very non-specific and suggest a variety of possibilities. My first thought was that you might be pregnant.

It is true that mononucleosis is associated with being run-down, but most 16-year-olds with the disease complain bitterly of sore throats and swollen glands, neither of which you mention.

Fatigue, nausea and abdominal pain may be due to anything from anemia to infection. You should see your family doctor. By talking with you and performing a simple examination, he may be able to find the answer to your difficulties.

If you have questions about MENOPAUSE, you can get answers in Dr. Gott's new Health Report on the subject. Send 75 cents plus a self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Menopause.

Freshman Success Seminar Thursday

The last of the Western Texas College Freshman Success Seminars will be held Thursday.

Students planning to enroll for the fall semester as full-time freshmen seeking degrees and who have not attended a previous seminar, are urged to attend.

Incoming students receive information about the college and can also pre-register for classes. Students who do not have an ACT or SAT score on file will be required to take a placement test before registering. These test are given at the seminar and a $5 fee is charged.

The seminar on Thursday begins at 9 a.m. in the Student Center and will conclude about 4 p.m. Students may talk with counselors about the selection of courses and scheduling.

Registration for the fall semester will be held Aug. 28-29. Evening classes will begin on Aug. 29 and day classes on Aug. 30. Freshmen can move into dorms on Aug. 27 to be on hand for Freshman Fun Night that evening.

Western music program is planned at Senior Center

Western music will be presented by Hoss Clayton's band at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Senior Citizens Center.

The program will be in the dining room before the serving of the noon meal.

Thursday night will be game night. A meal, including beef stew, fried okra, cornbread and lemon meringue pie will be served starting at 6 p.m. Games, including bingo and pool, will follow.

Senior citizens who need transportation for the evening activities should call 573-4035.

Seniors who enjoy miniature golf may play at 8:30 a.m. Thursday at the Westerner Golfland on College Avenue. A special rate is given. Bowlers meet at Snyder Lanes at 2:30 p.m. on Wednesdays. Seniors can also swim or join a swimastics class at the WTC indoor pool at 1 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Information about the full schedule of activities for Senior Citizens can be obtained by calling the center office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

Democrats hoping for high voter turnout in runoff

By The Associated Press

The state's Democrats hoped for a high voter turnout in Saturday's special congressional runoff to keep the Republican party from netting its first major Northeast Texas officeholder since Reconstruction.

Texas Republicans, on the other hand, contended a conservative trend in Texas politics would enable GOP contender Edd Hargett to defeat Democratic opponent Jim Chapman for the 1st Congressional District seat.

Secretary of State Myra McDaniel, the state's chief election official, predicted Friday "a moderate voter turnout in the 18 percent range for this runoff election."

Absentee voting was so heavy throughout the district that officials opened courthouses across the 20-county area last weekend in an unprecedented move to ease the crunch.

EPA superfund put on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with fiscal uncertainty, the Environmental Protection Agency is preparing to halt all but emergency toxic dump cleanups under its "Superfund" program.

EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas said the dramatic step was necessary to preserve Superfund in the event Congress doesn't meet a Sept. 30 deadline for reauthorizing the five-year-old program.

"During the next several weeks, I will begin to implement a slowdown of the cleanup program," Thomas said in a letter sent Thursday to Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Thomas said this involves the "bleak prospect of slowing or halting cleanup work at many sites nationwide. ... In addition, I will place a moratorium on new hiring for Superfund, reduce our support contracts and limit all other work not directly related to emergency response activities."

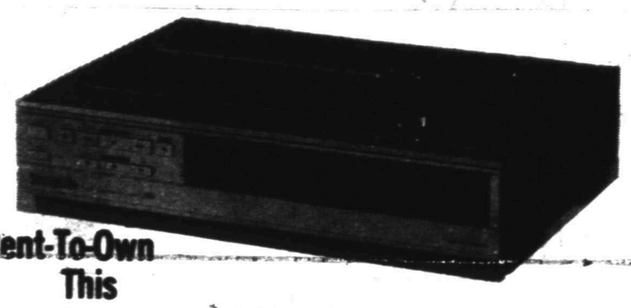

When Congress left Thursday night for its summer recess, bills to renew the toxic chemical cleanup effort for five years were still awaiting floor action in the House and Senate.

Dingell and other lawmakers have expressed concern that Congress may be unable to get acceptable legislation to the White House for President Reagan's signature before the program's taxing authority expires Sept. 30 and its resources begin drying up.

Thomas said he was "confronted with limited choices. I can continue to operate the program assuming that it will be extended in a timely fashion. Or I can ease the program into a slowdown in hopes of minimizing the damage. The consequences of playing brinksmanship are unacceptable to me. I feel I must choose the latter option."

He said EPA was compiling a list of Superfund sites "which are now in the pipeline awaiting normal contractual commitments. These are the sites where work will cease first. As we move into fiscal year 1986 (on Oct. 1), more sites will be affected. ...

Over plane shooting...

Can't sue Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ruling that the Soviet Union cannot be sued in U.S. courts for shooting down Korean Air Lines Flight 007, a federal judge has dismissed lawsuits by survivors of many of the 269 people killed in the attack.

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. also ruled Friday that two companies that built the plane and equipped it with electronic navigation gear cannot be held liable for the aircraft's "deliberate destruction" on Sept. 1, 1983.

KAL Flight 007 was shot down by missile-firing Soviet jet fighters over the Sea of Japan after it strayed into Soviet airspace. The Soviet Union contended the New York-to-Seoul flight was on a spy mission.

Robinson said federal law grants foreign governments immunity from lawsuits in American courts for governmental acts that take place outside the United States.

In addition, he said, the long-established "act of state" doctrine bars American courts from judging the actions of other governments that occur on foreign soil or from interfering with the political conduct of foreign affairs.

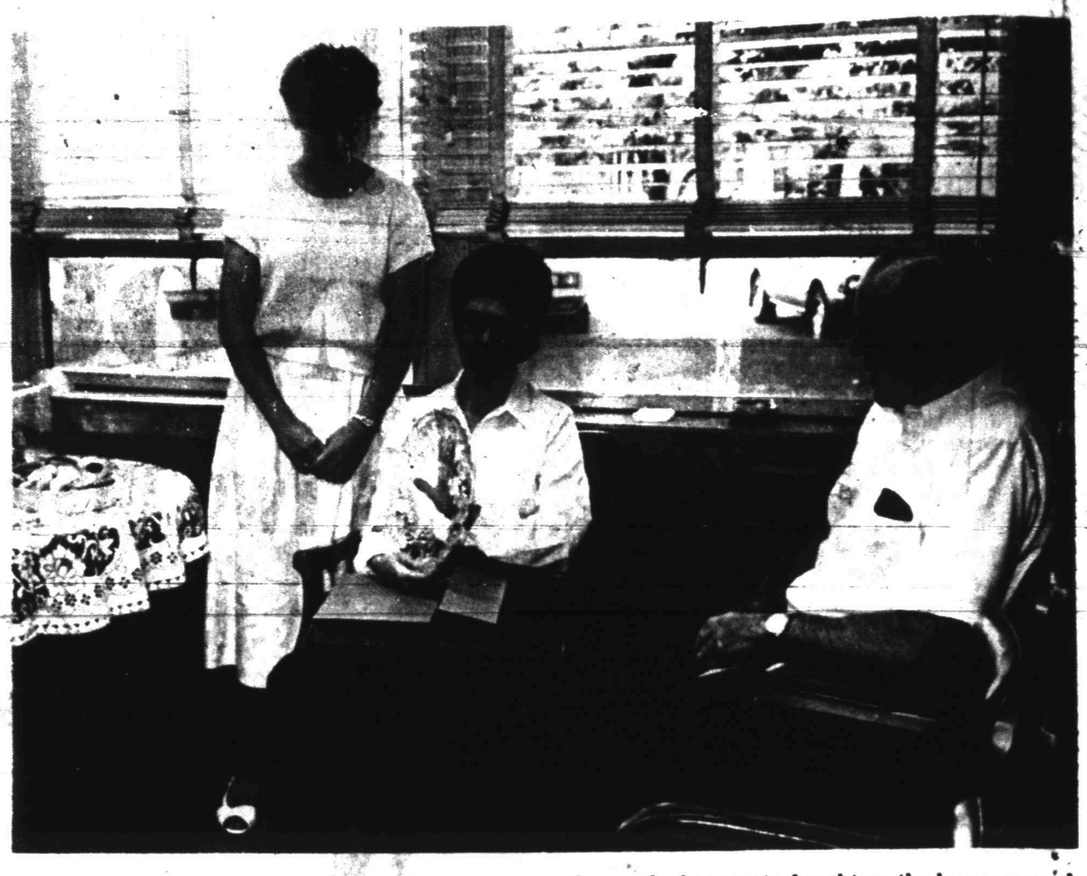

"The act of shooting down the unarmed aircraft, while deplorable, did take place within Soviet airspace for motives unknown," Robinson said in a 17-page opinion. "The court can conceive of no action which is more classically political in nature or less open to judicial determination than the decision of a government to exercise its military power."

The Soviet Union refused to be served with the lawsuits of 220 survivors of the incident and responded with a diplomatic note saying it was immune from legal action.

Robinson issued a separate opinion on the suits against Boeing Co., which made the plane, and Litton Systems Inc., the manufacturer of the navigation equipment.

"No jury in the land could reasonably find that this chain of events, assumed to have begun with equipment failure and ended with an act of military aggression by a world power against a commercial airliner, was foreseeable to the airplane and equipment manufacturers," the judge wrote in the separate 19-page opinion.

Robinson earlier dismissed claims against the U.S. military filed by the plaintiffs. Still pending are suits against the U.S. government and Korean Air Lines.

Summer camp teaches kids to live with disease

AUSTIN (AP) — Besides all the typical day camp features — athletics, arts and crafts, games and nature trips — Camp Bluebonnet has a difference: medical education for diabetic children.

The camp, which ended Friday, is the first of its kind in the Austin area, according to the Austin American-Statesman said.

Thirty campers between the ages of 4 and 13 paid $15 to participate in the camp, sponsored by the American Diabetes Association, the Lions Club and the Austin Parks and Recreation Department.

Camp director Jan McClarty said she thought of starting a day camp in Austin for diabetics after attending one in Houston with her diabetic child two years ago. Ms. McClarty found others who shared the idea, and they began to make plans last spring.

Ms. McClarty said the dual purposes of the camp were to provide a fun week and to teach diabetic children how to take care of themselves.

Daniel Snare, Texas program director for the American Diabetes Association, said the disorder causes the metabolism of the body to function improperly, resulting in high levels of sugar in the blood.

The pancreas does not produce enough insulin to allow glucose to be used, so it accumulates in the blood, Ms. McClarty said. Symptoms include fatigue, excessive urination, marked thirst and hunger. Children typically are insulin-dependent diabetics, so they depend on daily insulin injections.

Under the supervision of registered nurses, dietitians and counselors, the campers are taught to inject themselves with insulin, to test and record their blood-sugar levels and to maintain proper eating habits.

"The kids are learning what proportions of what kinds of foods to eat, and how to match the food with the insulin intake in order to keep the blood-sugar level at a normal point," Snare said.

Ms. McClarty said the children can "share some of what they're going through with others their age and recognize that other kids are also dealing with those problems.

"What has really made the camp a success are the things that have happened that we didn't plan on, like the interaction among the parents and the kids."

The camp director said that at the beginning of the week, the children set goals — like eating balanced meals, exercising more and taking care of their condition without being reminded by their parents.

"We want to make it clear and teach the kids early on that they have a life of their own to control," Snare said.

80 mph gusts were possible during crash

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A government meteorologist says a violent thunderstorm cell with downdrafts of up to 80 mph passed just north of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport about the time a jumbo jetliner crashed.

"The thunderstorm formed north to northeast of the airport and drifted to the south or southeast," Bryan Harmon of the National Weather Service forecast office said. "From what I could see of the observation data, it had downbursts of 80 mph."

About 130 people died when Delta Air Lines Flight 191 crashed on approach to the airport shortly after 6 p.m. Friday.

"It looked like the cell developed just northeast of the airport and moved due south at a very low rate of speed," about 5 to 10 mph, said Harmon. "As far as thunderstorms go, it's a significant downburst, but there have been downbursts of more than 100 mph."

Airline officials said the cause of the crash, which occurred between 6:05 p.m. and 6:08 p.m., had not been determined. Harmon said he could only discuss weather conditions at the crash.

"You'd be hard-pressed to say it couldn't relate to it one way or another," he said.

Harmon said downdrafts can affect an airplane in the same manner as sticking an arm out the window of a moving car, with the arm moving from a still column of air in the automobile to suddenly being subjected to winds of 45 mph.

"It can definitely alter your course," he said.

Harmon said weather data at 5:51 p.m. CDT, shortly before the crash, showed scattered clouds at an altitude of 6,000 feet, with visibility of 11 miles and winds of about 9 mph and scattered thunderstorm clouds.

At 6:02 p.m., there was no precipitation, and winds were east-northeast at 9 mph, Harmon said.

"Visibility was 11 miles. Winds then shifted to northerly at 42 mph, gusting to 53 mph — but by that time, the plane had already crashed," Harmon said.

He said the observation at 6:05 p.m. included a broken deck of clouds at 6,000 feet, obscuring anywhere from half to 90 percent of the sky.

Horrified folks watch Delta jetliner go down

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Highway commuters battling a sudden thunderstorm and early weekend travelers waiting at the airport were horrified Friday to see a Delta jumbo jet crash in a ball of fire, striking at least two cars on a highway.

"The rain was so hard you couldn't see 30 feet in front of you," said Anthony Rogers, who was headed west on Highway 114 near the airport at the time of the 6 p.m. crash.

"All of a sudden it seemed like ... a big jolt just bounced my car," Rogers said.

"I pulled over and tried to gain myself, and I got out and walked over toward this other car and saw the guy had been taken out of it, and he was like 30 feet from his car. He was decapitated ... "

"The car was completely demolished," said W. J. Blankenship, a battalion chief for the Irving fire department.

"I was driving through shrapnel ... or pieces of plane," said another unidentified man who had gone to the airport to pick up his daughter.

Larry Sears of Dayton, Ohio, who was waiting in an airport terminal for a flight, said he saw the left wingtip hit the ground. "It just exploded," he said.

The plane bounced over a field and hit a water storage tank before breaking up on final impact, witnesses said.

"You could see it hit and bounce around," said another man, who was waiting for a Piedmont flight, and declined to give his name. "There was a big ball of fire out there."

"I saw a ball of flame go into the air just as the explosion hit, and black smoke came out," said Wendell Harrison, who saw the crash through a window at one of the terminals at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Tony Maza didn't see the lightning. But he felt the violent storm.

"I did not see lightning. All I could feel was a heavy gust of wind coming in behind the plane and the plane itself in sight and it exploding," he said.

"The plane was coming in real low. I saw the nose hit a car on the highway," said Robert Braden, who was on the 10th floor of an airport hotel. "It went into a ball of flame. The back end caught on fire and skidded across the ground."

Another witness, a Federal Express employee, said he had arrived moments before the plane crashed.

"I just looked over my shoulder ... we see this plane coming down out of the gray," he said.

For Jay Slusher, the vantage point was the back row of the ill-fated flight.

"We came down in very heavy rain. You couldn't see anything out the window," he said.

Survivors recall crash ordeal

DALLAS (AP) — Christopher John Meier, one of those who survived the crash of a Delta Air Lines jumbo jet, said it was "just luck" that he lived to tell the tale.

Meier, 35, of Temple, Texas, was returning from a business meeting in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. It was only the second time he had flown since February 1984 when he flew for the first time.

"I saw it happen. I thought I was going to die," Meier told reporters as he left Parkland Hospital in Dallas after being treated for bruised ribs.

Meier said he was sitting in a window seat in row 41.

"I was watching the plane land. I saw the ground coming up. Then we hit. The plane bounced once. Then it bounced again.

"The left side came up and disappeared. Then the right side came up and disappeared," Meier said.

The next thing Meier remembered was the plane came to rest in a steep tilt. He was clutching the armrest so he wouldn't slide out, he said.

Meier said he recalled climbing out the of the seat and then walking over several more before jumping 20 to 25 feet to the ground.

"I walked away and started rounding up the people that weren't hurt to help the people that were hurt," he said. "There was a lot of screaming and yelling."

Meier was one of about 30 people who survived Friday's crash that killed about 130 people.

Thirty-one passengers and three flight attendants were known to have survived, said Greg Graze, a spokesman at Parkland Hospital.

The three-engine Lockheed L-1011 crashed a few minutes after 6 p.m. CDT, said Jerry Cooper, a Delta spokesman. Graze said Delta officials informed him that the plane carried 149 passengers and 12 crew members.

Officials said the plane crashed during a heavy thunderstorm on its final approach to the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Jay Slusher, 33, of Phoenix, Ariz., another injured passenger hospitalized at St. Paul Hospital, recalled the incident vividly.

"We were on approach to landing and I think we hit what we call a wind shear and the ride got rougher and rougher and rougher. And I thought we had hit, we had landed. And I think in fact we had hit something.

"The next thing I know I saw the flames coming and I thought we were going to explode. And after that I got sort of jumbled around and I ended up sitting in the seat on my side," Slusher said in an interview.

"I unbuckled the belt, jumped out of the plane and ran, and basically after that tried to help the people that I saw that were injured," he said.

As of midnight Friday, four people had been released including Meier, Juanita Williams and Annie Edwards, both of Pompano Beach, Fla., and Gilbert Green of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Alexander Graham Bell received a patent for the telephone March 7, 1867.

White Sox zip past New York Yankees

by The Associated Press

It's not likely New York Yankees speedster Rickey Henderson - or anyone else - will ever again hit into a double play the way he did against the Chicago White Sox Friday night.

With the two teams tied 3-3 in the seventh, New York had Bobby Meacham on second and Dale Berra on first when Henderson singled into left-center.

Meacham, who held at second to see if the ball would be caught, slipped running to third. Both he and Berra, trailing just a few feet behind, were tagged out at home by catcher Carlton Fisk for a double play.

The White Sox went on to win 6-5 in 11 innings despite a two-run homer by New York's Dave Winfield that tied it 5-5 in the 10th.

In other American League games, it was Baltimore 8, Cleveland 6; Toronto 5, Texas 3; Kansas City 4, Boston 3 in 10 innings; Chicago 6, California 3, Minnesota 1; and Oakland 3, Seattle 1.

In the 11th, Ozzie Guillen scored the winning run from second on an 85-foot roller down the first-base line by Luis Salazar.

Blue Jays 5, Rangers 3

Toronto won for the 12th time in its last 13 outings and extended its lead over second-place New York to 9½ games in the Eastern Division. George Bell hit a grand-slam homer and Rance Mulliniks added a solo shot against Texas.

Doyle Alexander, 11-6, was the winner with eight innings of eight-hit pitching against the Rangers, who have lost their last four games.

Texas had taken a 3-0 lead with the help of Toby Harrah's solo homer.

Angels 3, Twins 1

California maintained its two-game lead over Kansas City in the West behind the pitching of rookie Kirk McCaskill and Brian Downing's two-run homer.

McCaskill had a two-hitter and had retired 21 straight batters until he walked Roy Smalley with two outs in the ninth. McCaskill was replaced by Donnie Moore, who recorded his 20th save despite giving up a single to Kent Hrbek.

Downing's 11th homer of the season came off right-hander Ken Schrom, 8-12, and erased Minnesota's 1-0 lead built on Smalley's solo homer in the first.

Rod Carew singled in the first and eighth innings, leaving him with 2,998 hits in his bid to become only the 16th player to reach 3,000.

Royals 4, Red Sox 3

Kansas City, held to two hits for eight innings by Bruce Hurst, rallied to beat Boston in the 10th on Lonnie Smith's RBI single with the bases loaded.

Dane Iorg singled leading off the 10th against Mark Clear, 1-2, and Jim Sundberg then sacrificed pinch-runner Pat Sheridan to second. After Clear's wild pitch sent Sheridan to third, Jorge Orta and Willie Wilson walked and Bob Stanley singled for the Royals' ninth win in 10 games.

With Boston leading 3-1, Hal McRae's two-run double off Clear tied the score after Wilson singled and Smith doubled to start the ninth against Hurst.

Tigers 4, Brewers 1

Frank Tanana pitched his first career one-hitter and faced just one batter over the minimum of 27 to lead Detroit over Milwaukee.

The only hit allowed by Tanana, acquired by the Tigers on June 20 from Texas, was a solo homer by Ben Oglivie in the fifth.

Snyder Black begins stint at tourney in Louisiana

DENHAM SPRINGS, La. – Snyder Black was to take on Denham Springs in first-round action of the Babe Ruth League regional tournament here Saturday, which has a World Series berth in the balance.

The tournament is double elimination, with the eventual champion qualifying for the Babe Ruth League World Series later this month in Maryland.

Snyder, West Texas Babe Ruth League champion, was scheduled to face the tournament host at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Coach Albert Lewis was excited about the tournament, citing good pitching and hitting as the key to the team winning the West Texas crown.

"We only gave up two runs in the (West Texas) tournament and that's great. This will be stronger competition, but I thought Plainview (which Snyder beat in the finals) had a real fine ballclub," he said. "We may lose out and be packing our bags Sunday, I don't know. But we're glad to be going and we're going to give it a good shot. We're getting good pitching and we're putting the ball in play."

Working in Snyder's favor could be the fact that its first-round opponent, Denham Springs, received a bye as tournament host and did not have to earn its way here.

"That may mean they aren't as strong as some of the teams here, but of course, they could also have an excellent team," said Lewis.

In other first-round games Saturday, an East Texas champion was to play a Louisiana champion at 3 and a South Texas champion was to play an Oklahoma champion at 5:30. Arkansas, also represented here, received a first-round bye.

A victory for Snyder Saturday would put the Black team back on the field at 5:30 Sunday against the South Texas-Oklahoma victor. Losers of the Snyder-Denham Springs and South Texas-Oklahoma games will vie at 8 p.m. Sunday.

SPRINTING HOME – Snyder Black, the local Babe Ruth League team, was to begin regional tournament competition in Louisiana Saturday. The Black team, West Texas state champions, were hoping to earn a berth to the Babe Ruth League World Series. Above, Steve Parker rounds third, headed for home. (SDN Staff Photo)

Hunting licenses available; 'seasons' listed by county

Hunting and fishing licenses for the 1985-86 seasons are on sale at several business in and around Snyder now and may available in other stores soon.

Licenses have increased in price over the 1984-85 term. A resident combination hunting and fishing license, for instance, has increased from $12 to $15.

Some of the more common licenses and their prices include: resident hunting, $10; resident hunting exempt, $6; non-resident small game hunting, $75; temporary (5-day) non-resident fishing, $8; and general non-resident hunting, $200.

The licenses, which are effective Sept. 1, are or will be available at Timely Pawn and K-Mart in Snyder and Sterling Grocery in Ira. Other stores may also be carrying the licenses.

Upcoming hunting seasons for Scurry County and the area are listed below. Details on the upcoming dove season will be released at a later time.

Sports in summary

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) - Lee MacPhail, the labor chief for baseball's owners, sharply rejected two points of Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's "potential solutions" as the two sides planned to resume negotiations today after a two-day layoff.

The two suggestions with which MacPhail took strongest exception were that owners stop blaming players for their financial difficulties and that owners put $45 million in escrow while the two sides negotiate how much of a pension raise the players get.

MacPhail said in a statement that he would continue to review the commissioner's recommendations in an attempt to avert Tuesday's strike deadline.

TENNIS

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) - Wimbledon champion Boris Becker and teammate Hansjoerg Schwaier won their singles matches to get West Germany off to a 2-0 lead against the United States in the Davis Cup quarterfinals.

Becker easily defeated Eliot Teltscher in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 and Schwaier outlasted Aaron Krickstein 2-6, 6-1, 2-6, 6-1, 8-6 in a match that lasted 3 hours and 35 minutes.

In other World Group quarterfinals, defending Davis Cup champion Sweden took a 2-0 lead over India on singles victories by Anders Jarryd and Mats Wilander in Bangalore, India, while Australia and Paraguay split their opening singles matches in Sydney, Australia.

In Eastbourne, England, John Lloyd fought back from two sets down to defeat Jacob Hlasek 5-7, 2-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-5 to give Britain a 1-0 lead over Switzerland in their quarterfinal match-up.

GOLF

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Swede Mats Lanner shot a 6-under-par 66 and took a two-stroke lead over British Open champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Johnny Miller of the United States halfway through the $182,000 Scandinavian Enterprise Open golf championships.

Lanner put together a 11-under-par 133 after 36 holes on the tough Sven Tumba Country Club course outside Stockholm.

Miller, the overnight leader, slipped into a tie for second with Lyle.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) - Lauri Peterson, the defending champion, shot a 3-under-par 69 for a 36-hole total of 4-under 140 and a share of the second-round lead in the $175,000 LPGA Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

Soviets plan to send team to 1988 Olympics in Seoul

TOKYO (AP) - The Soviet Union is saying for the first time that it will send a team to Seoul, South Korea, for the 1988 Summer Olympic Games.

Leonid Zamyatin, the top spokesman of the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee, told Japan's Kyodo News Service that Moscow has already informed the International Olympic Committee that there will be a Soviet team at the Games, Kyodo said Friday in a dispatch from Moscow.

The Soviet Union led a Communist-bloc boycott of the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles and it has been widely speculated that the Soviets also would balk at going to South Korea, a country it does not recognize officially.

In Lausanne, Switzerland, headquarters of the IOC, spokeswoman Michele Verdier said the IOC had received no official word on the matter from the Soviet Union or any other country. She said invitations will not be sent until nine months before the Games.

She noted that IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch met with sports officials in Moscow last week and expressed hope afterward that the Soviet Union would participate in the Games, scheduled for Sept. 17 to Oct. 2, 1988.

Soviet sports officials said late last year that a decision on participation would not be made until much closer to time of the Games - a month or so before they start.

Zamyatin and other Soviet officials were not immediately available for comment because government offices had closed for the day.

George D. Miller, secretary general of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said in Colorado Springs, Colo., that he was pleased with the news, and added that while he had no official word on the Soviet decision, from what he has heard from them earlier, "it doesn't come as a surprise to me."

"I believe there is a recognition by the Soviets and the Eastern bloc that participation in the Games is essential to maintain the integrity of their national amateur athletic movement," Miller said. "We certainly look forward to competing with them."

The Soviet Union and most of its allies boycotted last year's Olympics, giving as the main reason what they said was insufficient security for their delegations. However, their action was seen as a retaliation for the U.S.-led boycott of the 1980 Games in Moscow.

Amateur leading at Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) - It's been 29 years since an amateur won a pro golf tournament, and Scott Verplank is carefully, even aggressively staying away from any predictions that he may break that string.

"I guess we'll find out Sunday afternoon," the 21-year-old Oklahoma State student said Friday after six birdies on his last eight holes gave him a three-shot lead at the halfway point of the Western Open.

"I won't worry about that until, when and if the opportunity arises," said Verplank, the current national amateur champion and winner of four other important amateur titles this summer.

He admitted he was "kind of nervous" when he started second-round play as the tournament leader, and was obviously uncomfortable in a mass interview after his closing burst of birdies had finished off another 68 and put him through 36 holes at 136, eight under par on the Butler National Golf Club course.

A clipped, one-word response, "no," or "no comment," or even a vague shrug served as answers to most of the questions, which largely concerned his chances of becoming the first amateur to win a professional tournament since Doug Sanders won the 1956 Canadian Open.

"I played with him the first two rounds in the U.S. Open. He's a very good player, good driver, good touch with the putter," said Seve Ballesteros of Spain, who got back in contention with a 68 that lifted him to 143.

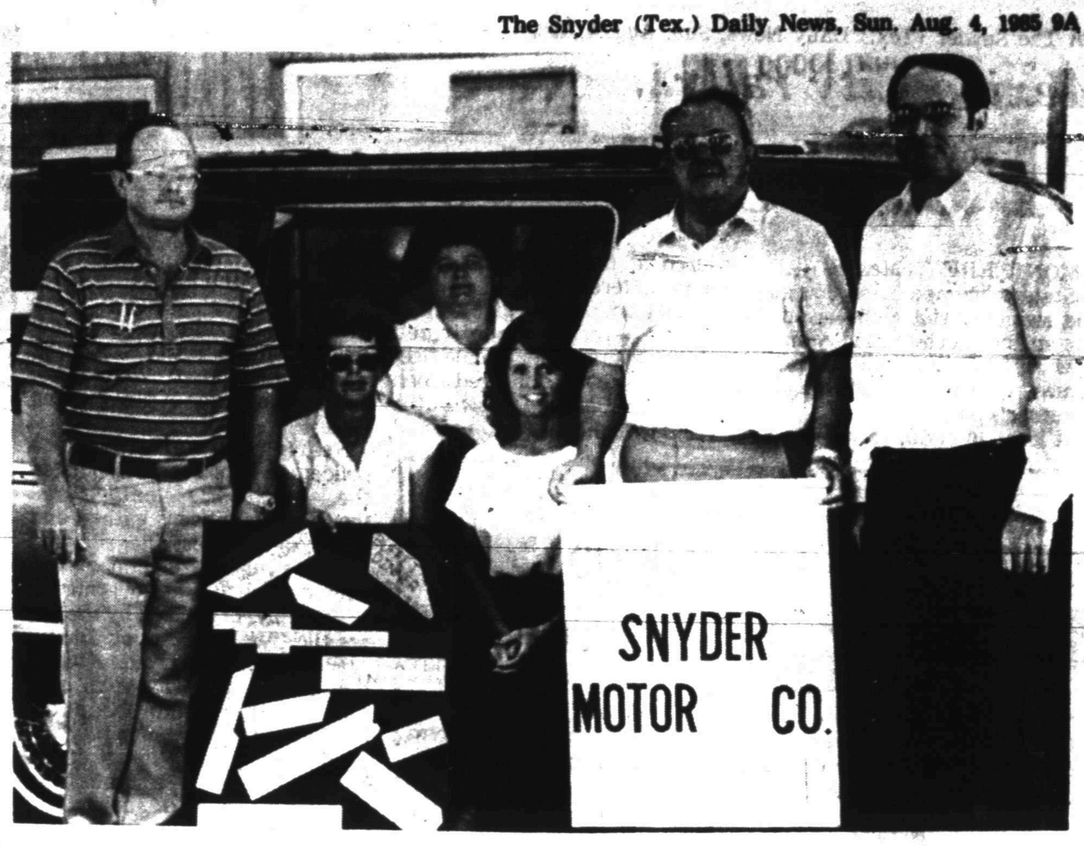

"Scott is showing a lot of poise. It's no surprise that he's there. The kid can play," said Canadian Dave Barr, five strokes off the pace at 141. Barr one-putted nine times on the way to a second round 67.

"Scott is the Nicklaus of the amateur players. He has an incredible record," said Steve Jones, who chipped in for an eagle-3 on the way to a 67 that lifted him into second alone at 139.

Barr and Jim Thorpe, who had a no-bogey 66, were next at three under par.

They were followed by Corey Pavin, Craig Stadler, Scott Simpson and Ernie Gonzalez at 142. Pavin had a 67, Simpson 70, Stadler 71 and Gonzalez 73.

Defending champion Tom Watson had a 72 and was at 146. Nicklaus also matched par 72 and was at 148. Leading money-winner Curtis Strange, however, failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 72-149.

HOLE IN ONE PRIZE – A new Dodge van is being donated by Snyder Motor Company to anyone who shoots a hole in one No. 3 during the upcoming Raggedy Ann & Andy Golf Tournament. Ann and Andy event nears; tourney sponsors recognized

Several special prizes, including a new Dodge van, will be up for grabs at the August 10-11 Raggedy Ann & Andy Golf Tournament.

The tournament, held at Snyder Country Club, already boasts a full field of 60 two-person teams.

Snyder Motor Company is donating a new Dodge van for anyone fortunate enough to hit a hole-in-one on No. 3 either Saturday or Sunday.

An additional $300 will be shared by the first six players who hit shots inside a four-foot circle on No. 9.

Other prizes include longest drive and nearest to the pin awards.

The tournament includes a practice round and optional sweepstakes on Aug. 9. Shotgun starts will begin the tournament at 8:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. both Aug. 10 and 11. A buffett dinner will also be held on Saturday, Aug. 10.

Sponsors for the tournament include American State Bank; Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Directors; Burgess-McWilliams Pharmacy; James R. Burleson, M.D.; Price Courter; Consolidated Tool & Supply; Cox Jewelery, CRC Wireline, Inc; Don Dollins, Fluid Transports, Inc.; Bob Hargrove, H&L Services, Inc.; H.D. Workouts scheduled for frosh volleyball

Two-a-day workouts for varsity and junior varsity volleyball at Snyder High School will begin Aug. 12, it has been reported.

Freshman volleyball workouts are scheduled to begin Monday, Aug. 26, at 6 p.m.

Coach Vicki Nelms released a first-week scheduled for freshmen, which follows:

Monday, Aug. 26, 6-9 p.m.; Tuesday, Aug. 27, 9 a.m.-noon; Wednesday, Aug. 28, 6-9 p.m.; Thursday, Aug. 29, 3-6 p.m.; Friday, Aug. 30, 5-8 p.m.

Anyone who cannot attend the workouts is urged to contact Coach Nelms or Coach Patty Grimmett, however, Coach Nelms noted that "these workouts will determine our freshman volleyball team. They are very important."

Also, any girl who has signed up to be a volleyball manager, or any girl who is interested, should come to the high school gym at 10 a.m. Aug. 8.

Girls planning to participate in volleyball should be aware of several other key dates:

- All ninth grade girls need to report for physicals at 5:30, Aug. 8 at the main building of the high school. Also, anyone who has transferred into the school system, or who has not participated in athletics, or anyone who has had surgery or been under a doctor's care during the past year should report for a physical.

- Workout equipment for those in varsity and junior varsity volleyball may be picked up at 10 a.m. Aug. 8 at the main high school gymnasium. Anyone who cannot do so should contact Coach Nelms at 573-8529 or 573-4237 and give her their shoe size.

Two-a-days on Aug. 12 will begin at 8 a.m.

The first varsity scrimmage is scheduled for Aug. 19; the first game for Aug. 20.

Ladies golf news

Winners of the Ladies Golf Association low net foursome held last playday were Suzy Reed, Becky Knipe and Donna Stehley.

Low putters were Delores Key in the A flight, Suzy Reed in the B flight and Donna Stehley in the C-D flight.

Winners of the Friday Night Swingers low ball with one-fourth handicap were: First Flight - Betty and Larry Hildreth, first place, and Jimmy Watkins and Ethel Wadleigh, second place; Second Flight - John and Suzy Reed, first place, and Billy Wayne and Xan Harris, second place; Third Flight - Eddie and Joyce Epley, first place, and Dutch and Donna Stehley, second place.

Sunday will be the regular monthly couples tournament. Tee time is 1:30 p.m.

Tuesday's playday will be Blind Partners, nine holes, followed by a luncheon and business meeting.

Several ladies participated in Lamesa's 4-Lady Scramble. The team of Juanita Hester, Joe Sterling, Betty Hildreth and Kaye Cypert won second in the First Flight. Carolyn Greene, Rhylene Stoker, Ethel Wadleigh and Bobbie Hargrove finished fourth in the Championship Flight.

Several Snyder ladies will compete in the Diamonds in the Rough at Diamond Oaks Country Club in Fort Worth, Aug. 6-8. They will be Carolyn Greene, Rhylene Stoker, Ethel Wadleigh and Suzy Reed.

Garrison cops gold medal at annual Sports Festival

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - International gymnastics rules, which have reduced the number of perfect 10.0 scores since the 1984 Olympics, lifted Kelly Garrison to the gold medal in the women's all-around competition at the National Sports Festival.

Garrison, 18, of Altus, Calif., the runner-up to Sabrina Mar in the 1985 national championships, trailed early after falling from the balance beam Friday night. But she rallied before a festival gymnastics record crowd of 9,300 in the Assembly Center at Louisiana State University.

Going into her final event, the floor exercises, she was second to Joyce Wilborn of Passaic, N.J., by .35 of a point.

When her floor exercise score was posted as 9.4, it appeared that Wilborn had won the gold medal and Garrison would have to settle for the silver. But later, it was announced that the score did not include an extra two-tenths of a point for virtuosity - a bonus added under the new rules.

That gave Garrison a total of 37.60 points to Wilborn's 37.55.

Wilborn got some consolation when her East team won the gold medal in the team competition with a score of 183.70. Garrison's West team got the silver with 181.75 and the South earned the bronze with 181.60.

In the Greco-Roman competition, five members of the national team lost, one under tragic circumstances.

The only gold medal awarded in wrestling went to Bill Scherr of Bloomington, Ind., whose twin brother Jim yelled advice from the corner.

Scherr scored a 4-1 victory over Pete Bush of Iowa City, Iowa, earning a berth on the United States team that will compete in the world championships at Budapest in October. The two were in the medal match two days earlier than the other freestylers because they were the only ones to show up for the 198-pound competition.

Athletic physicals changed

Due to a scheduling conflict, physicals for all ninth grade students planning to participate in athletics at Snyder High School have been changed from Aug. 6 to Aug. 8 at 6 p.m.

Students are urged to report for physicals at 5:30.

Physicals are required of ninth grade students, any student entering the school system or planning to participate in athletics for the first time, or any student who has had surgery or been under a doctor's care in the past year.

Equipment for those participating in varsity and junior varsity football and volleyball will be distributed soon.

Football equipment will be issued all day Aug. 7. Volleyball equipment will be issued at 10 a.m. Aug. 8.

Two-a-days in both sports will begin Aug. 12.

Mexico City rally...

Police fire tear gas

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — State policemen firing tear gas and swinging riot clubs wadded into an angry crowd Friday night after an opposition political rally turned violent in front of the governor's palace.

At least 10 civilians were seen injured at the scene and many others suffered eye and skin irritation from the tear gas.

There were unconfirmed reports several other people fleeing the scene were injured when they were chased down the streets by police who kicked and clubbed them.

It was the first violent demonstration since Jorge Trevino of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, was inaugurated Wednesday night as governor of Nuevo Leon state.

Nearly 100 armed state policemen stood guard outside the governor's palace as thousands of citizens gathered in the plaza to protest alleged fraud in the July 7 elections and Trevino's election as governor.

The rally, organized by the opposition National Action Party, or PAN, remained peaceful while the party's gubernatorial candidate, Fernando Canales Clariond, spoke.

"We're not going to break the peace. We must continue the struggle," he told supporters, who waved blue and white PAN banners and shouted, "Canales yes, Trevino, No."

But the crowd refused to leave the plaza fronting the palace after Canales and other PAN officials left. The people turned toward the palace and began tossing bottle caps, coins and paper wads at police.

During the rally, the fourth since the elections, Canales said PAN officials had delivered the governor's office a box of petitions containing about 100,000 signatures calling for Trevino to resign.

GIANT WATERMELON--Eddie Johnson, president of American State Bank, slices a 51-pound melon brought to the bank lobby by Snyder farmer Wayne Eubank (right). Eubank had bragged to Johnson about his melon crop and the banker challenged that if Eubank would bring a 50-pounder to the bank, he would personally cut it in the lobby. Eubank delivered four Friday morning--all in excess of 50 pounds. Employees and customers enjoyed the treat. (SDN Staff Photo)

Challenger to stay extra day

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle managers decided today to extend Challenger's mission in orbit by a day, until Tuesday, to give the astronauts more time to add to their scientific harvest now that the ship's $60 million telescope pointer and most other instruments are working.

The new landing time was set for 3:47 p.m. EDT Tuesday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The extension was requested by ground scientists, who have expressed delight over data being gathered by their instruments on the sun, stars, galaxies and Earth's atmosphere.

NASA officials made the decision after determining that Challenger had enough fuel for the extra day, plus enough for two contingency days beyond Tuesday. Forecasters said weather also should be good Tuesday at Edwards.

Challenger was slightly low on liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen, which are used to generate electricity, but the seven astronauts have been conserving in case the flight was extended, said Flight Director Al Pennington.

The astronauts spent much of today conducting experiments and their conversation was confined to technical exchanges with scientists on the ground.

They did take a few minutes to transmit to the control center spectacular television views of a cloudless section of Earth over which they passed. Clearly visible were the Sahara desert, the north coast of Africa, the Mediterranean, the boot of Italy, Greece, Turkey, the Black Sea and the Caspian Sea in the southern part of the Soviet Union.

"Absolutely beautiful," said Mission Control.

Mission scientists said they would like the extra day primarily to gather data from three telescopes mounted on a $60 million pointing system that was inoperative until Friday, when the astronauts repaired it with a new computer program worked out on the ground.

During the three days the instrument was unable to point, the astronauts used fine-aiming devices on the individual telescopes. Each maneuver required extensive testing and calibration and cost valuable data-gathering time.

guilty against Gutierrez at 3:50 p.m.

The defendant remains free on bond set at the time of his indictment with formal sentencing scheduled for Aug. 14.

Gutierrez was indicted for the charge in June in connection with injuries sustained by his daughter in May.

She was initially hospitalized here for treatment of head injuries on May 13 but later transferred to Lubbock after suffering respiratory failure.

The filing of criminal charges against Gutierrez followed on May 23 after doctors in Lubbock had examined the child and determined the full extent of the injuries.

toward the living.

Hundreds of people gathered at a blood center across the street from Parkland, the city's major trauma center. They also crowded into makeshift waiting rooms at the hospital itself to donate blood.

Medical staff members volunteered in such numbers that many were turned away, said Dr. Erwin Thal, coordinator of the emergency operations.

Also gathered at the hospital were relatives of victims, many crying as they waited for word. They were secluded in a waiting room near the emergency room, not talking to reporters.

Loses engine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shortly after Delta Air Lines Flight 191 crashed Friday in Dallas, killing about 130 people, another of Delta's L-1011 jets bound for Dallas was forced to turn back due to engine trouble, officials said.

Man charged in hit and run

Police jailed a 30-year-old man on six misdemeanor charges following a hit-and-run traffic accident shortly after midnight Friday.

According to police reports, Leroy Spires III, who listed a Roscoe address, backed his 1982 Ford Bronco into an unmarked Snyder police car on the parking lot of a local private club at 12:02 a.m.

He then allegedly fled the scene but was stopped and arrested at 12:19 a.m. in the 3000 Block of Ave. F.

In other action, officers jailed four suspects for public intoxication Friday evening with one of those additionally charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

SATURDAY MORNING FIRE — Snyder firemen were called to a house fire at 3204 Ave. B at 7:43 a.m. Saturday. A bedroom of the David Johnson residence reportedly sustained significant damage from the blaze and smoke damage was reported to the remainder of the residence — owned by Carlos Mijares of San Angelo. pictured at the door of the residence are Snyder firemen Walter Banks and Tony Whittenburg. Firemen answer two calls Friday

Snyder firemen answered two calls Friday, one an apparent false alarm.

At 3:05 p.m., firemen were dispatched to a possible house fire at 3205 Hill Ave. The report turned out to be false, however.

In addition, firemen were called to the Ira Cafe in Ira at 12:03 p.m. where they found a defective flourescent light ballast which was causing smoke.

Births

Twin sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Bob Lee of Clyde Aug. 1 in Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene. Jeremy Brett weighed four pounds eight ounces and Justin Blake weighed four pounds seven one-half ounces.

The couple has three daughters, Jennifer, Shelly and Trina, who welcomed the babies home.

Grandparents include LaGene and Jean Gaylor of Waco, and Norma Lee of Snyder and J.B. Lee, also of Snyder.

Obituaries

Claude English

Services are set for 10 a.m. Monday for Claude S. English, 94, who had been a resident of Snyder the past 60 years.

English, who had been a resident of Snyder Nursing Center the past year, died at 3 p.m. Thursday. Services will be held in the Primitive Baptist Church with burial to follow in the Snyder Cemetery under the direction of Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home.

A retired cafe cook, English had lived at 3202 Ave. H in Snyder. He married Beula Pitner on July 22, 1909 in Rains County. She died Feb. 21, 1930.

Born Feb. 9, 1891 in Baldwin, Miss., he was a member of the Primitive Baptist Church. He was also preceded in death by one foster daughter, Loressie Smith.

Survivors include a brother, J. Clifton English of Denison and numerous nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Bobby McCormick, Beecher McCormick, Junior McCormick, Billy McCormick, Dale Nolan and Alfred Linville.

David Smith

MONAHANS–David G. Smith, a former Snyder resident, died at 1:04 Wednesday in Ward County Memorial Hospital in Monahans after a short illness.

Smith, 53, grew up in Snyder and graduated from Snyder High School. He moved to San Angelo in 1949 and joined the U.S. Army in 1950.

Smith's body was donated to the Texas Tech University Medical School for research.

Born in Portland, Ore., Smith had a journalism career that began in 1959 with the Newport News Daily Press and the Times Herald in Virginia. He was Korean bureau chief for the Pacific Stars and Strips in 1961 and he was editor of the Fort Eustis Sentinel for one year.

In 1969 he joined the San Angelo Standard-Times as a sports writer. He was assistant managing editor of the San Angelo paper when he left to teach at the Texas Youth Council facility at Pyote.

Survivors include his wife, Ingrid of Monahans; a daughter Gwendolyn of Fort Worth; a son, Mark of Midland; and a grandson, Clayton of Midland.

Mrs. Coldewey

LORAINE — Funeral services were conducted at 4 p.m. Saturday in the First Baptist Church of Loraine for Hazel Coldewey, 78. She died Friday at 6:25 a.m. in Root Memorial Hospital.

Officiating Saturday was the Rev. Richard Alkire, pastor. Burial was in the Loraine Cemetery under the direction of Kiker-Seale Funeral Home.

She was born Sept. 2, 1906 and was a life long resident of Texas. She was a member of the Loraine First Baptist Church and a retired bookkeeper.

She married Virgil A. Henderson April 19, 1927 in Loraine. He preceded her in death Feb. 6, 1970.

On Sept. 18, 1970, she married Leonard A.V. Coldewey in Loraine. He preceded her in death Feb. 23, 1985.

Survivors include one stepdaughter, Joyce Reddin of Midland; three step-sons, Maurice of Midland; Joe Ed of Colorado City; and Raymond of San Antonio.

Also, one half-sister, Dernelle Fowler of Waco; one stepbrother, Arba Cranfill of Coahoma; 11 step-grandchildren and three step-great grandchildren.

Freight trains explode in head-on crash

WESTMINSTER, Colo. (AP) — Two Burlington Northern freight trains collided head-on Friday, touching off an explosion and fire that enveloped the area in thick, black smoke. Three crewmen were dead and two others were missing and presumed dead, officials said.

At least a dozen cars derailed in the crash, which occurred about 7:30 p.m. on tracks below the Boulder Turnpike, authorities said. Heat from the flames caused one lane of the overpass to collapse and forced the closing of the four-lane highway, U.S. 36, between Denver and Colorado.

Thick, oily smoke from burning diesel fuel could be seen in Fort Collins, 60 miles away.

The collision was the fourth fatal accident involving Burlington Northern trains in less than 16 months.

"Apparently we have five fatalities," Burlington Northern spokesman Bill Joplin said.

Three men were dead and two others were missing more than three hours after the accident, said West Adams Fire Chief David McCarty.

Three crew members were in the locomotive of the northbound train, and two were in the southbound train, officials said.

No bodies had been removed from the wreckage as of 10:30 p.m. because of the flames and intense heat, authorities said.

Neither train carryied hazardous materials, according to Colorado State Patrol Capt. John Callahan.

A Burlington Northern conductor, who asked not to be identified, said one train was carrying paper and lumber and the other a load of rocks.

The collision occurred within a few hundred feet of some homes in the sparsely populated area northwest of Denver. Officials had planned to evacuate residents within a half-mile radius but called off the evacuation after firefighters gained control of the blaze.

Several brush fires also were sparked by the blaze.

"It looked like napalm going up," said Gary Mortensen, a nearby resident who said he witnessed the crash. "After it happened, I saw a bunch of cars stacked up under the bridge."

"Remarkably there were no accidents on the turnpike," said Westminster police spokesman Steve McDonald. "The viaduct looks like it just melted down. The heat was so intense it basically collapsed."

Investigators from Burlington Northern and the National Transportation Safety Board were at the scene Friday night.

BACK TO SCHOOL BUYS

Scurry County Folks...

By Linda Baylor

Always learning, searching, reading and embracing new experiences and ideas, Mr. and Mrs. Henry (Virginia) Clark entered a new phase of development in their lives April 1 when he retired from Texas Electric Service Company with 35 years service to his credit.

Retirement is always an adjustment and Mrs. Clark stated that she had difficulty with it at first. "I kept feeling like it was a vacation and then I would wonder when he would go back to work," she laughed. "It's really strange how you can get use to a set pattern and then it changes or breaks," she added.

The Clarks enjoy doing many things together and each one has made the necessary adjustments and are well into the enjoyment of retirement life.

"I love to cook and we love to entertain. My husband is a great helpmate. And he's a good cook too," she said. The couple enjoys all forms of entertaining from backyard cookouts to formal dinner parties.

They also enjoy playing golf and doing yard work. "Each morning, I go out into the yard to see what has changed overnight," she added pointing out her special flower project for this summer.

Both are Scurry County natives and both enjoy traveling. They spent their 25th wedding anniversary in Paris, France and their 30th wedding anniversary in Australia. Other places they have visited include Japan, South Africa, New Zealand, Portugal, Spain, Morocco, England, Switzerland and a number of islands.

They have also traveled in 36 states and are planning more travels for the future.

They have two children. Mrs. Thomas E. (Marcia) Brown lives in Amarillo with her husband and two children, Jim and Christina. David and his wife, Dianne, live in Sacramento, Calif. with their four children, David, Lonnie, Andy and Kelly.

Both the Clarks enjoy their own individual hobbies. He has a well-equiped workshop while she mixes, with a delicate balance, her hobbies and clubs.

The most prevalent hobby involves geneology. The clubs revolving around this hobby include Martin Preuitt Jr. Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Texas Chapter Colonial Daughters of the Seventeenth Century, George Cogdell Chapter of the Daughters of the American Colonists, and Texas Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Mrs. Clark pointed out that she had been able to trace her family's history back to the 16th century in some cases. And she also noted that her mother's maiden name was Clark and she married A.C. Preuitt. Then, Mrs. Clark reversed the situation by marrying a Clark ..."but there was no relation within the two families..." she said.

Other clubs include the Altrurian Daughters and Codgell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

She is also a member of the Musical Coterie. She stated that her mother had joined this organization in the 1920's and that it had been formed seven or eight years prior to that.

She is a life member of the Martha Ann Woman's Club and has served as a member of the board of directors twice.

She is a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Lisa Lynn Franklin, Nathan Brent Beck exchange vows in double ring ceremony

Lisa Lynn Franklin became the bride of Nathan Brent Beck in a double ring ceremony held in the First Baptist Church at 7:30 p.m. July 6. Sam Kitching of Lovington, N.M. officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Cloyce Talbott and E.L. Franklin, both of Snyder, and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Beck, also of Snyder.

Arch and spiral candelabra rose gracefully from a bed of woodwardia fern, Boston fern miyan fern to define the altar. and miyan fern to define the altar. Three large arrangements of mixed Holland flowers graced pedestals rising above the bed of ferns. The choir railing and center candelabra were draped with smilax.
draped with smilax entwined with white dendrobium orchids.

The bridal aisles were lined with candle pew markers. A large arrangement of mixed Holland flowers adorned the foyer.

Hayley Patterson, cousin of the bride, and Jamie Beck, niece of the groom, served as candlelighters. They wore identical gowns fashioned of white embroidered net over white silk satin.

Texas Tech String Ensemble provided the wedding music. Selections included "Canon" by Pachelbel; "Rhosymedre" by Vaughan-Williams; "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach; and "Six Minuets" by Telemann.

Special musical features included soloists Mark Lyon, "Crazy"; Stacy Talbott and Lyon, "To Me"; Talbott and Glenda Hollingsworth, "Light A Candle"; and Ms. Hollingsworth, "The Lord's Prayer".

Lynn Bethel served as the organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a formal gown of imported white reembroidered alencon lace appliqued on white silk satin. The moulded basque bodice, veiled with imported lace, was intricately beaded with clusters of miniature seed pearls, imported paillettes and cut crystals.

The Victorian collar was enhanced with a sheer yoke which was lined with beading of pearls. Long sheer sleeves accented with small appliques of jewelled lace added interest to the gown.

Tiny self-covered buttons and loops highlighted the back of the bodice.

The skirt, slender in front with gathered fullness at the sides and back, fell softly from the natural waistline and was accented with a wide banding of jewelled lace. From the fullness at the sides and back a wide chapel length train was gathered.

The veil of white silk illusion formed soft clouds of folds beyond the chapel length train. It was gracefully secured to a bandeau fashioned of miniature white blossoms and enhanced with satin ribbon loops and floor length streamers.

To complete her ensemble, the bride carried a cascading bouquet designed with white dendrobium orchids, white phalaenopsis orchids, Star of Bethlehem, white roses, freesia and alstromeria.

In keeping with tradition, she wore a white scarf which belonged to her great-grandmother, Mrs. Lovie Parker, for something old. Her gown served as something new and she borrowed an opal ring which belonged to her mother. Her aunt, Charlene Light, gave her a blue garter and she wore pennies minted in the year of their births in her shoes for luck. The pennies were given to her by Jan Kruse, a friend.

Stacy Talbott, step-sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. The bridesmaids included Leslie Light, cousin of the bride, Ninette Greene, Susan Hamlett, Grace Talbott of Midland, sister-in-law of the bride, and Laurie Donelson.

They wore matching tea length gowns designed of white embroidered net over white satin. The bodice featured a high Victorian collar and short latern sleeves. A satin ribbon sash marked the waistline and gently gathered the skirt.

They carried matching arm bouquets of Holland flowers.

Kelly Beck, neice of the groom, served as flower girl. She wore a gown of white embroidered net over white silk satin and carried a basket of spring flowers.

The ring bearer was Page Patterson, cousin of the bride. He wore a black single-breasted tuxedo. He carried an off white pillow covered wth antique lace. Matching lace formed a ruffle.

The groom wore a black single-breasted tuxedo with a black tie and matching cummerbund. His boutonniere was fashioned with a white rose and white freesia.

Jimmy Beck, father of the groom, served as best man. The groomsmen included James Caldwell, Casey Peterson, Joe Beck, Weldon Beck, brothers of the groom, and Barry Blackmon.

The ushers were Larry Light and Robert Patterson, cousins of the bride, Jeff Franklin, stepbrother of the bride, Chris Bagby of Arlington, and Richard Derrick.

The groom's attendants wore outfits which matched his. Their boutonnieres were fashioned of white freesia.

The bride's mother chose a silk chiffon tea length dress of pale blue, and the groom's mother selected a matching dress of teal blue. They wore matching corsages of white roses accented with freesia.

The registry table was covered with an off-white moire with lace squares which were decorated with nosegay flowers and ribbon streamers. The bride's book centered the table and was highlighted with ivory jewelled net over ivory satin.

Grace Bell of San Antonio and Monica Matson of McKinney assisted the guests at the table.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Snyder Country Club.

The bride's table was covered with an off-white moire taffeta cloth. The tiered wedding cake was decorated with a mixture of Holland flowers including orchids, rubrum lilies, roses, freesia, nerine lilies, conflowers, alstromeria, gerbera daisies and surrounded with smilax garlands which were filled with matching flowers.

The groom's table was covered with a lemon leaf cloth and featured a tiered chocolate cake decorated with white roses and Star of Bethlehem. The centerpiece was a tall arrangement of Holland flowers nestled in a crystal vase.

Following a wedding trip to the St. Thomas and Virgin Islands, the couple will make their home in Lubbock.

Both the bride and groom are graduates of Snyder High School and both are currently attending Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents July 5 at 6 p.m. in the Snyder Country Club.

On June 1 the bride was honored with a luncheon at the Snyder Country Club. The hostesses included Mmes. N.R. Clements, Steve Allen and Glenn Patterson.

On June 20 she was honored with a lingerie shower in the home of Mrs. Mal Donelson. Other hostesses included Laurie Donelson, Tracey Williams, Ninette Greene and Cari Walker.

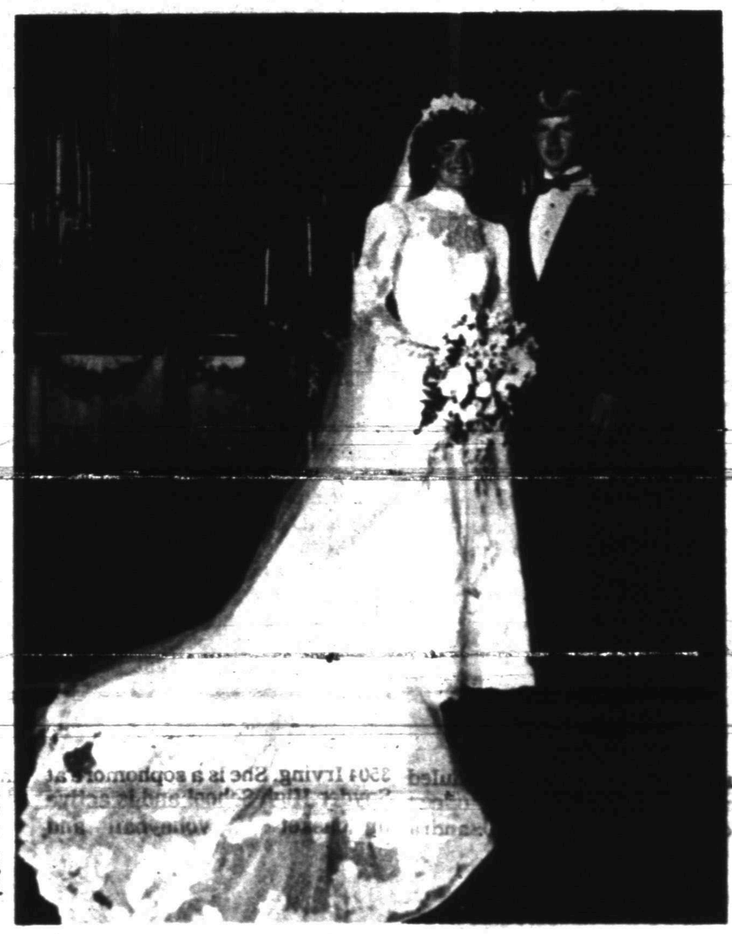

On June 24 she was the guest of honor at a recipe and spice party in the home of Mrs. Herb Reed. Other hostesses included Mmes. Jimmy Key, Richard Stoker and Jim Burleson.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held in the home of Mrs. Paul Thompson July 6. Hostesses included Mmes. John Greene, Joel Hamlett and Mal Donelson.

A dinner was given July 3 in the home of Mrs. Morris Light. Leslie Light assisted as hostesses.

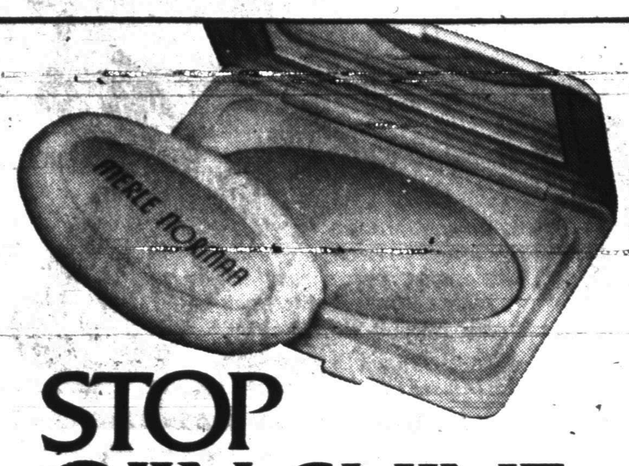

The bride and groom were honored with an Hawaiian Party June 8 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hargrove. Other hosts included Mr. and Mrs. Ken Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Seale, Mr. and Mrs. John Reed, Mr. and Mrs. John Greene and Mr and Mrs. Jack Cypert.

BRIDGE

James Jacoby

Leaving out the guesswork

The "strip and end play" is a weapon that Harry Lampert thinks bridge players should have in their arsenals. Here's an example from his most recent book, "The Fun Way to Advanced Bridge."

Note that South did not bid Blackwood after the jump to four spades by North. Why? It is wrong to ask for aces when you have two small cards in an unbid suit. If your side is missing an ace, you will not know which ace, and you might end up losing the first two tricks. Here, because cue-bidding informed South that North had a diamond control, the small slam contract was arrived at with good chances for it to be made.

Declarer wins the opening lead of the diamond king with dummy's ace and draws the opponents' trumps in two rounds. He now strips the club suit by playing out the A-K-Q. If he were in seven, he would now have to find the queen of hearts. Since he is only in six, putting the defenders on lead with a diamond forces them either to play the heart suit for him or to give a sluff and a ruff for 12 tricks.

Don't fret at the simplicity of today's deal. Remember that some of our new readers may think the play described here is named for an act in a burlesque show.

Scurry Library News and Views

This week's feature is "The Texas Governor's Mansion" by Jean and Price Daniel. The mansion is one of the finest examples of 19th century Greek Revival architecture.

It was started by master builder Abner Cook in 1854 and finished in 1856 and has been the official residence of 37 Texas governors and one U.S. military governor.

The book also contains biographical sketches of all the governors and their first ladies.

MRS. WILLIAM LEWIS HAYES

Tyer-Hayes wed in Floydada ceremony

Tana Jean Tyer of Floydada and William Lewis Hayes of Rotan were united in marriage July 20 at 6 p.m. in the First United Methodist Church of Floydada with the Rev. Earl Blair, pastor, officiating.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tyer of Floydada and Mr. and Mrs. Louie Hayes of Rotan.

Grandparents of the couple include Mrs. Wells of Kansas; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tyer Sr. of Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Otis E. Firestone of Snyder, and Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Hays of Rotan.

Shayla Moore and Eden Moore, both of Amarillo, served as candlelighters.

Kelby Sue served as pianist and Mrs. Stan Nowlin of Rotan served as organist. The soloists included Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gregory of Floydada and Rhonda Campsey of Texline.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a formal white silk taffeta gown which featured an off-the-shoulder illusion effect. The short, puffed sleeves were accented with gathered silk roses. Overlapping layers of taffeta highlighted the bodice and settled at the natural waistline where they were gathered into a silk rose. Cascading from the rose were silk taffeta streamers forming an asymetrical effect.

The full ballroom skirt was gracefully drawn into a mid-cathedral train.

To compliment her ensemble, the bride carried a cascading bouquet fashioned of flowers in various shades of lavender and accented with babies breath.

The matron of honor was Tracy Tyer Zachary of Amarillo, sister of the bride. Tammy Tver Hawkins of Odessa, sister of the bride, and Darlene Hardy of Canyon, friend of the bride, served as bridesmaids.

The attendants wore matching tea length gowns designed of Hawaiian orchid taffeta. They carried matching bouquets created in various snades ot orchid and lavender. The bouquets were gracefully secured atop white Bibles.

The best man was Weldon Hayes of Rotan, brother of the groom. The groomsmen included Ward Hayes of Rotan, brother of the groom, and David Grounds of Jacksonville, Fla., friend of the groom.

The ushers were Tommy Hawkins of Odessa, Michael Zachary of Amarillo, both brothers-in-law of the bride, and Keith Mullins of Rotan.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

Other members of the house party included Julie Faulkenberry, who assisted the guests at the registary table; Kelley Myers, Felt, Okla.; Rhonda Campsey, Texline; Tanya Tyer, Hale Center, cousin of the bride; Mrs. Keith Mullins, Canyon; Michelle Coulter, Allison; and Lindsey Moore, who distributed rice bags.

The bride is a graduate of Floydada High School and West Texas State University. The groom is a graduate of Rotan High School and WTSU and is currently employed with Cargill in Houston where the couple will make their home.

"There is no more lovely, friendly and charming relationship, communion or company than a good marriage," said Martin Luther (1483-1546).

Cantaloupes Texas tradition

PECOS, Texas (AP) — Pecos cantaloupes have become a Texas tradition, and their annual sale has brought in thousands of requests for the melons from Texans and people in other areas of the country, according to Pecos melon marketers.

"We sold 5,000 boxes on the first day," July 11, reported Field Yow, Foster Frozen Foods sales manager, who said that number is a good first-day figure.

He predicted a possible season (six weeks) total of between 300,000 and 400,000 boxes. Each box holds about 10 or 12 melons, he said.

He said Texas is the biggest market, but explained that the muskmelons also are sold thoughout the South, East and Northeast.

"We have a lot going to Chicago this year," Yow said.

Street-side sales are going well, too, according to Shaun Blackmon, who operates a fruit and vegatable stand in the Foster Frozen Foods parking lot.

"I sell number two melons," he said, explaining they already are ripe and people will buy and eat them on the same day.

"There's a lot of locals that come every day and get two or three melons," he added.

Blackmon, who sells four cantaloupes for $1, claims Pecos cantaloupes are the best. "They're the most popular melons in the world because they're sweeter," he said. "People can get watermelons anywhere, but they come to Pecos for the cantaloupes."

Yow, who has been with Foster Frozen Foods for eight of its 20 years, also claimed Pecos melons are the best. "I don't know why but it's just the growing conditions," he said. "It's just ideal growing conditions.

Yow could not estimate the number of customers, but said a lot of tourists will stop to buy cantaloupes. "People see the sign and stop," he said.

But Pecos cantaloupes are not the only Texas cantaloupes, and the manager of Presidio Valley Farms has a different opinion about which melons are best.

"We have a better quality cantaloupe than them," Bill Bishop said. He contended his cantaloupes are better because they are "raised in a better climate and better soil by better farmers."

Bishop said his company "is usually through about the time Pecos starts" selling cantaloupes. He said he began selling his melons June 15.

"We shipped out something like 300,000 or 400,000 cartons of both honeydew and melons," he said. "We've got lots of Safeways, Krogers and H.E.B.'s."

Bishop said the crop this year was good but not exceptional and that most of his business was out of state.

Both managers said they do not sell many cantaloupes to companies in western areas of the country.

"We can't go west because California is such a strong market," Yow said. "California dictates the produce market. They'll ship more in a day than we will in a season."

But Pecos-area farmers produce a "locally famous crop," he said.

And 30 or 40 truckloads arrive daily with 20,000 pounds of cantaloupes each, said Yow.

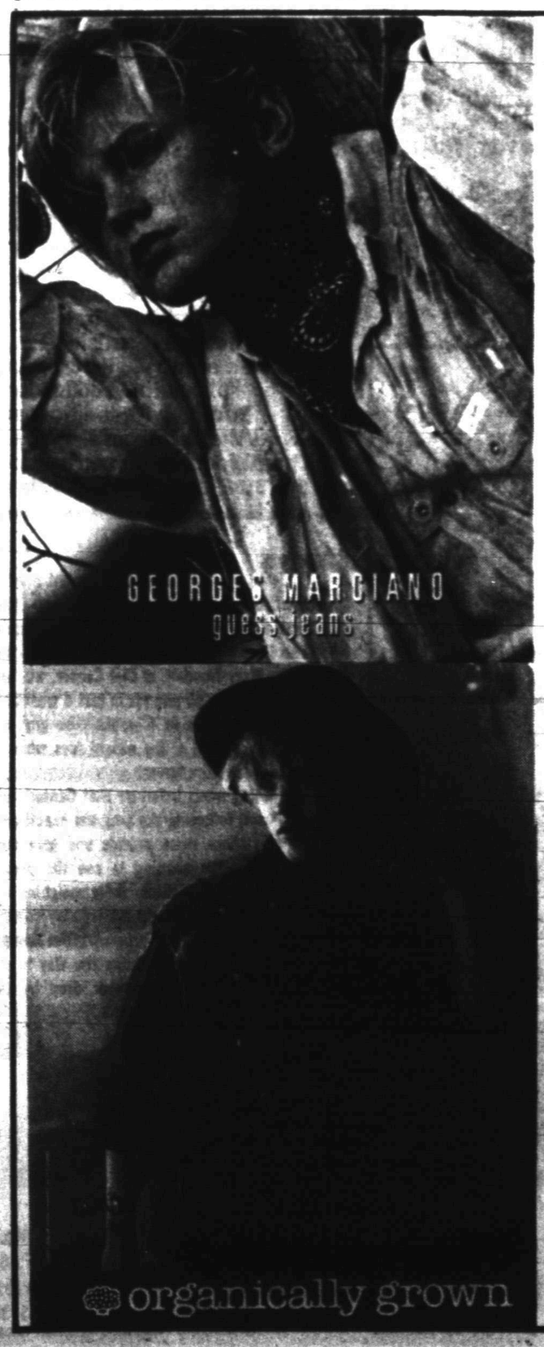

The growing demand for luxury cars in the United States also is taking place in Europe, according to Jaguar PLC. The firm says it plans to establish independent distribution networks in France, Spain, Italy, Holland, Luxemburg, and Belgium to satisfy increased demand.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My problem is sharing space with my roommate, who insists on having her boyfriend over up to five nights a week. He oftens stays overnight. I've come home from work to find them eating—just enough for themselves, nothing for me!

Sometimes I'd like to just rest and watch TV, but I can't because her boyfriend is doing his homework. (He's 35.)

I have guests, too, but never this often. Occasionally I go to their place. My roommate says she doesn't like her boyfriend's place, so he comes here. I said this is unfair to me. My roommate insists it's her right to have guests whenever she pleases.

Recently I was informed that her mother is coming for a month's stay. This I can tolerate because there's definitely a beginning and an end; with the boyfriend, there's no end.

She may want to live with him, but I don't. I've tried to communicate with her, but get no response. What should I do?

NEEDING SPACE
IN SYRACUSE

DEAR NEEDING: If you haven't heard of "assertiveness training," find a therapist who teaches it to people who (a) make a habit of letting other people push them around, (b) are too passive for their own good, (c) are tired of being abused, but write to Dear Abby asking how to put a stop to it.

DEAR ABBY: I witnessed a minor crime. Since then I have been subpoenaed three times to appear in court. I don't get paid when I miss work. The courthouse is quite a few miles from my home, and the nearest parking I can get is five blocks away. Each time it costs me $12.50.

So far it's cost me $487.50 to be a good citizen. Is this justice?

I'll never cooperate again. Please print this.

THE REAL VICTIM

DEAR VICTIM: Consider this: Let's say a crime was committed against you, and the one witness who observed the crime refused to come forward for whatever his reason. In the absence of a witness, the accused was presumed innocent and was set free to commit other crimes. Was that justice?

DEAR ABBY: So much of your space has been devoted to the smokers vs. non-smokers controversy, how about equal time for those of us who don't drink, and are appalled at the number of fatalities resulting from drunk drivers?

I think it is the height of hypocrisy for a person to complain that my smoking is a threat to his health, then go forth in a less than sober condition to become a potential highway murderer.

My damage to another's health by secondhand smoke is a questionably valid theory. A drunk behind the wheel of a car is an unquestionably greater hazard to greater numbers.

It is interesting that so many of the activists in the "damn-the-smokers" crusade have kicked the habit, and are now determined to frustrate my enjoyment.

I can assure you that as a recovered alcoholic, I have no inclination to deny the pleasures of socially acceptable levels of drinking to others.

I believe that I have a right to equal treatment from non-smokers. Please give us smokers a break, and print this.

Hays girls in horse show

ABILENE -- Shanna and Shawn Hays participated in the 23rd annual Texas State 4-H Horse Show here last week.

Over 500 horses and their exibitors from the 14 Texas districts were on hand for the week-long competition.

Shanna showed her six-year old quarter horse mare, Swizzy, while Shawn showed his eight-year old quarter horse gelding, Skippa Bar Jack.

Both qualified for the showmanship at halter preliminaries in which 168 contestants were entered. Shawn also qualified for the finals in Western Pleasure.

Shawn was selected sixth in Hunt Seat Equitation out of 88 top contenders.

City slickers find relaxation down on farm

POTTERS MILLS, Pa. (AP) — Looking over her gently sloping central Pennsylvania farmland, with its grazing cows and clear mountain stream, Freya Phillips considers herself a vendor of the simple values of life.

She and her husband, Bert, operate General Potter Farm, one of Pennsylvania's 38 vacation farms which offer city slickers a chance to muck out barns, bale hay or just commune with the outdoors.

Three years ago the couple moved from their suburban State College home to the 17-room farmhouse nestled on 45 acres at the entrance to the Seven Mountains. The house, which is registered as a National Historic Homestead, has six guest rooms which can sleep two people each.

Although they work the farm, where they raise beef, they have kept their full-time jobs "to support our habit," Mrs. Phillips jokes. She is an elementary school teacher and he is a chemist.

They are members of the Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Association, a 30-year-old group under the auspices of the state Agriculture Department whose members open their homesteads to vacationers.

The Pennsylvania vacation farms attract thousands of visitors each year. In the past two years the association has received requests from nine states for information on how to set up similar programs.

Mrs. Phillips, who was Pennsylvania's "Honey Queen" in 1960, first learned of the vacation program in 1980 at Pennsylvania State University's annual agriculture show. Intrigued by the idea, she and her husband bought their farm a year later. It was certified by the association in 1982 after they had renovated most of the old house, which is now decorated with antiques and period pieces.

The vacation farms must be "real working" farms, not just scenic spots in the country, says Frank Topper of the state Agriculture Department. They must have pure drinking water and a "healthy environment." They are inspected every two years.

Guests may join in the farm chores if they want to, but are never required to, Mrs. Phillips says.

All the farms serve homecooked breakfasts, and many offer dinners. Some go whole hog and provide three rices for meals and accommodations vary from farm to farm, but are generally well below hotel rates.

For example, according to the 1985 Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Directory, the Clover Paradise farm in Williamsburg, Pa., offers visitors two-bedroom apartments with private baths, kitchens and living areas (linens, paper products, soap and kitchen utensils provided).

"A country-style breakfast is served every day except Sunday," the guide says. Rates for adults are $21 a day, $125 a week; children, age 5-12, $10 a day, $60 a week; children under 5, free.

At Mayfield in Carlisle, Pa., near Amish country, visitors can have a guest house big enough for a large family with additional rooms in the farmhouse. Rates, with breakfast and dinner included, are $100 a week or $19 a day for adults; children under 12, half price.

The Phillips "farm vacation plan" (weekends only, June through August) includes breakfast and dinner for $24 per adult. Children under 12, $15 a day. Under the "bed and breakfast plan," which includes only breakfast and runs all year, it's $30 for two adults in a shared room.

Snyder Daily News and Bill McClellan are to be commended for their excellent coverage of all our games. The write-ups made our boys feel proud and will be a source of memories for many years to come.

Colonial Hill Baptist Church and Gerald Garner, in particular, should be thanked for recognizing our need for transportation to the games in Abilene. Even though none of our boys were members there, the church volunteered their bus and sent drivers every night we traveled so the boys and coaches could be together.

Showcase Video and Jerry Gunset were responsible for providing a VCR in the bus, so the boys could watch the videos of their Snyder games, taped by John Zalman.

There were several people who donated money for gas and for trophies given to the boys. A local cakemaker, Rita Graham, donated one of her masterpieces to the boys for their last party. All of these donations were appreciated!

Finally, for all the fans who came either to the Snyder games or traveled to Abilene with us, your support meant a lot. The team knew they had a lot of support throughout their time together. It was a wonderful summer!

Shark bite results in $1 million suit

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An 18-year-old Mexico City woman has filed a $1 million lawsuit against South Padre Island and Cameron County, claiming they were negligent when she reportedly was bitten by a shark last year.

Martha Gaytan de Castro claims the city and county officials failed to warn the public about the shark danger last year.

Miss Gaytan de Castro was attacked July 24, 1984 while wading in chest-deep water off Padre South Hotel. The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in 138th District Court, claimed negligence because the area is maintained by both the town and county as a public park.

But city and county officials deny jurisdiction of the area.

According to the lawsuit, the woman's medical bills amounted to more than $1,500. She sustained cuts to her right leg and left foot.

Witnesses said the woman was dragged underwater and visibly shaken for more than a minute. The fish was described as being about 5 feet long and blue in color.

City officials tried to downplay the publicity and some denied that the fish was a shark.

Pan American University biologist Robert Edwards said three days after the attack with "reasonable probability" the fish was a finetooth or blueback shark.

A few hours before Miss Gaytan de Castro was attacked, a 12-year-old College Station girl also was attacked by a shark a few miles south.

Let the Hilton handle hernias

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

According to an article in the March 3 New York Times, the Mount Sinai Medical Center in Manhattan has been granted permission by state health planners to spend almost $500 million to upgrade its medical complex. The hospital will tear down 10 of its 26 buildings, add a new 633-bed wing, renovate its private pavilions, build new operating rooms, enlarge its emergency suite and generally tidy things up a bit.

If you were to become a patient in the institution after the project's completion, you would be asked to pay a base rate of $569 for each night spent in the hospital. This figure is for room and board only; it does not include doctors' fees and the scores of additional charges tacked on the bill by the hospital.

As part of the compromise needed to gain state approval, Mount Sinai agreed to join the city's 911 emergency system and "to help improve the quality of medical care for poor people in predominantly black and Hispanic East Harlem."

I don't know how many of you have been hospitalized recently in a prestigious center like Mount Sinai, but I can tell you it's no vacation. The food isn't four-star. Drinks are not on the house. There are no double beds. The staff — probably extremely competent — is not, however, geared up to answer your every wish and anticipate your every need. You do not get to sleep soundly all night, because that's when interns do their thing, and night nurses can't stand a nestful of quietly slumbering patients. These damsels are young and want a little action on the 11-to-7 shift; they want some rowdiness, a little fun and noise — anything to keep the interns awake and interested.

In short, hospitals are not the kind of places you go for a rest ... especially if you're not feeling up to par or just had a disagreement with the Mrs. about who should change the sheets.

Off the top of my head, I can think of several resorts where you could have a whale of a good time for $569 a night. I've never been to these spots, but I'll wager you could have a real blowout. Also, getting there is half the fun, unlike picking your way over the garbage and avoiding a mugging between 98th and 102nd Streets, where Mount Sinai nestles.

I wouldn't be surprised to learn that 500 bucks would get you a nice suite at one of New York's better hotels — complete with free parking, room service and a French maid. Maybe even a good floor show. And your spouse, or current nearest-and-dearest, could accompany you to share the festivities.

I think hospitals are vying with hotels for the tourist trade. But it's just a flash in the pan.

Hotels don't have a chance as long as Medicare and medical insurance pick up the tab. Have you ever heard of an employer offering vacation insurance? Something like: $800 a day, if you're disabled, for two weeks in Acapulco? No, hospitals have the edge, and they know it. You're willing to put up with food that's been steam-wilted, interns who are surly and bleary-eyed, nurses who stick an amazing array of objects into your every orifice, because ... because you're kinky? Not on your life! It's free! It's a health lottery, and you, neighbor, have just won the grand prize: a glorious 10-day getaway to Municipal Hospital! Retail value, $5,690. Tips not included. Void where prohibited by law.

Some of you may truly believe that hospitals are nonprofit, humane organizations whose reason for existence is to serve the sick and make them well. I won't argue the point. But if that's true, how come Business Week reported that David A. Jones, chairman of Humana, Inc. — the third-largest hospital holding company, with 86 acute-care hospitals — earned $18,116,000 last year? Does he know something we don't?

I have a suggestion for a budding entrepreneur. If a nationally known hotel chain could be enticed to offer free X-rays, blood tests and hernia operations, and if we could convince an insurance company to issue special policies ...

Bandsman lives with 'junk'

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — At first sight, you get the impression you're in the presence of the man who has kept Kodak in business all these years. The expansive but cozy home on the corner boasts what seem like hundreds of photographs in additon to countless items of memorabilia.

By the stairs is a large hand-written banner proclaiming "We Love Prof," and in a room he keeps locked is an old, hand-cranked phonograph machine. Off to one side is a stack of Mexican sombreros, while in the corner is yet another stack of unmounted photographs.

Welcome to the home of Raymond T. Bynum, the pioneering bandman of the Southwest who helped make marching bands a reality in dry, hot West Texas and influenced music education during his many years at both Abilene High School and McMurry College.

Now 78, Bynum says he doesn't get around as much as he used to, but his memory of the past hasn't dimmed. He seems to have an opinion on just about everything. And unlike many men of accomplishment, he's hopelessly curious about others.

His wife of more than 50 years, Catherine, calls it just plain nosiness. "You'll never find anyone to prove he's timid," she said.

Bynum jokes with his wife about the mess of memorabilia scattered about their house.

"Junk? Yes, junk's the name for it," she said, smiling graciously and shaking her head as she moved off to another room. "We just learn to live in the big middle of it. If you can't beat it, you have to live with it."

Bynum was the son of a schoolteacher who was constantly moving around because of differences with smalltown school boards jealous of his use of authority.

"He was a real strong on what I call dis-CIP-line," Bynum said, coining his own form of a favorite word. "He didn't get along with the school boards, but he did get along with the kids."

Most of Bynum's early years were spent in different towns in Louisiana (he was born in Springdale, Arkansas because his "mother's sister's husband was a doctor and they went up there to save money.") By the age of 13, he was living in Anson, where he met Catherine.

She moved to Waxahachie and later studied at Trinity University. But she returned to Abilene in 1931 and fell in love with Bynum, who was already a rising influence in regional band music. They married in 1934, and have four children and five grandchildren.

Bynum graduated from Sterling City High School in 1922 and enrolled at Simmons College to study to become a Spanish teacher. While there, his roommate invited him to try out for the famed Cowboy Band.

Bynum admitted he didn't know much about playing a band instrument, and when someone handed him a bass horn, he was clearly confused. "I didn't know whether to blow on it, suck on it or play it with a bow," he said.

Even when he did learn to play the instrument, Bynum was forced to give it up whenever a spotlight-loving Simmons College football player wanted to play it in public. During one engagement at which his father attended, Bynum was forced to sit it out.

"I was probably pretty sad looking," Bynum said, remembering that concert. At any rate, his father felt enough sympathy for his son to help correct the situation. "Daddy bought me a saxophone pretty soon."

Playing band music became one of Bynum's joys, and soon after he graduated from Simmons with a degree in Spanish in 1926, he began teaching both Spanish and band at Abilene High School. He started the band program, from scratch, practically the first in the Southwest.

He found school boards accommodating. "It just caught on here, probably because of the emphasis on football. The school board would give you a good bassoon because you had a good marching band — even though you seldom used a bassoon in the marching band."

And he recalled attending some early-day national band conferences, including those attended by legendary band leader William Revelli. At those conferences, "I got a new vision hearing those bands. They could play in tune and could play the proper instrumentation."

Suitably inspired, he began perfecting the band program at AHS, eventually winning every top band award during his 20 years there, and watching as John Phillip Sousa, during a tour here in 1931, conducted AHS Eagle band members.

Eventually, Bynum quit teaching Spanish. His enthusiasm for band prompted him to go back to Simmons — now Hardin-Simmons University — and get his music degree. After two decades as AHS band leader, he directed band at McMurry College for 26 years.

In his duties at McMurry, Bynum was able to concentrate less on marching bands and more on pure musicanship. He toured the globe with the band, and his home contains mementoes of his tenure there, including a Dutch poster proclaiming a visit by the McMurry Band.

Retired in 1972, Bynum lives with his memories. He can show pictures of his bands (including early shots of the AHS band and their "sorry-looking outfits") and point to students who became prominent citizens.

The first successful trans-Atlantic radio-telephone conversation took place in 1926 between New York and London.

Private jails emerge across United States

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

About $25 a night can get you a single room, a bathroom down the hall, and three meals in a Houston hostelry, which seems pretty reasonable at today's prices.

In fact, it isn't even the "guests" who pay. But there's a drawback. They can't check out at will, for this is the Houston Detention Center of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The management is the Corrections Corporation of America, one of a growing number of companies in the business of prisons for profit, taking the place of government wardens and sending the bill to the taxpayer.

"It's been an absolutely outstanding relationship. They know just exactly what they are doing," says Peter B. O'Neill, Houston director of the INS. He says the year-old facility, where illegal aliens await deportation hearings, is "a perfect installation."

The Houston experience is not unique. INS has also contracted out detention centers in Laredo and El Paso, Texas, Denver and Los Angeles, and plans another in San Diego.

Legislatures in Texas and New Mexico have authorized private prisons. Other states, including Kentucky, Pennsylvania and Connecticut, are considering the switch. Some cities and counties already have privately run jails.

Hamilton County, Tenn., for example, has turned over operation of its 325-bed, high-security Silverdale Detention Center to CCA, based in Nashville.

The rise of private prisons stems from many recent trends. Jails are overcrowded, the public resists financing more jails, and the Reagan administration has emphasized efforts to shift responsibilities from the public to the private sectors.

Add the profit motive, and you have a dozen companies bidding against each other for a chance to design, build, and operate a new breed of prison that has its eye on the bottom line.

Not everybody welcomes the trend. Civil libertarians and some criminal justice experts question prisons for profit on ethical and legal grounds and wonder whether it's constitutional for government to turn over police power to private corporations. Union prison employees claim it is an attempt to bust unions. Some sheriffs see the trend as a loss of turf.

But others say private security prisions are more efficient and do the same job for less money, and still make a profit.

The nation's jail population is growing. It has doubled in the last decade to about 700,000 and the nation now spends about 417 million a day to bar inmates.

Moreover, because of federal court orders and lack of money, governmental agencies see the private sector as a way out. The agencies draw up specifications for the prisons they would like to have, and then they advertise.

In response, security companies like CCA, which operates several INS facilities in addition to the Hamilton County Jail, or Behavioral Systems Southwest of Pomona, Calif., which operates an INS center in Los Angeles and numerous local jails, submit bids for contracts. A bid is selected, and the winning company then builds the prison.

The cells are rented to the government for a fixed amount per inmate per day, "kind of like a hotel with room and board," according to George Zoley, director of local government services for Wackenhut Corp. of Coral Gables, Fla., one of the nation's largest private security companies and a bidder for the INS.

Duke Austin, an INS spokesman in Washington, says his agency finds the arrangement to be "quite successful."

He says the government was not saddled with real estate or construction costs or with "hiring government employees on a career basis," although "the day-to-day cost of holding people is pretty much the same."

The American Correctional Association, with 16,000 members among prison administrators, parole and probation officers and the like, is a strong proponent of private sector involvement in prisons.

"It is very effective for state, local and federal facilities," says Hardy Rauch, director of correctional standards for the ACA.

The ACA points out that "privatization" is not new.

"It's been occurring for 100 years," Rauch said. "Certain support services — health, hospitals, food service, education, drug rehabilitation, transportation, staff training — have long been contracted out."

Nationwide, contracts for such individual services is a $200-million-a-year industry, he said.

In 1982, Florida became the first state to turn over its confinement program for boys convicted of serious crimes to a private entity. The Jack Eckerd Foundation operates the Okeechobee reform school for boys. Pretrial detention facilities for juveniles still are run by the state.

Across the nation, several hundred juvenile detention centers, halfway houses and other penal institutions with relatively docile populations have been operating on contract since the early 1970s.

The National Governors Association in March adopted a resolution noting that private enterprise could run prisons the way it "now operates hospitals, drug and alcohol treatment programs or job training programs for government."

"What is new is the complete contracting of the total facility," Rauch says. The so-called "turnkey" prisons are handled privately from design, site selection, financing and construction to operation.

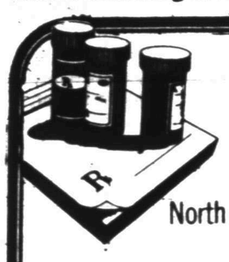

Still, criminal justice experts say they have ethical and practical questions about private prisons.

Is it right for private guards to carry out the quasi-judicial functions now performed by government employees, such as determining when prison rule violations occur, deciding what punishment should be imposed and making recommendations to parole boards?

And what is the incentive to keep costs down once private companies are the sole proprietors of prisons, or to consider alternatives to incarceration?

These same critics are concerned with the possibility of a strike by private prison workers and the chance that private companies will lobby legislatures for harsher sentences to ensure profits.

Japan, not German was always bomb's target

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the start, America targeted Japan and not Germany for the first atomic bombing because of a greater fear of German retaliation, two researchers say.

But the actual decision to bomb Japan in August 1945 was based on political rather than military reasons, journalist-editor John Kelly and scientist Arjun Makhijani told a news conference Thursday.

They also charged that postwar estimates vastly exaggerated the number of allied casualties that would have occurred in an invasion of Japan.

As for the decision of where to drop the first atomic bomb, Kelly and Makhijani said Japan was targeted not because it was apparent Germany would be defeated before the bomb was ready but because American experts were more fearful of possible German A-bomb retaliation.

The two said Japan was targeted in May 1943, two years before the war in Europe ended, at a time when it was expected that the first atomic bombs would be ready in September 1944.

Japan was targeted "largely because of the fear that, if the bomb was a dud, the Germans, with their atomic capability, would learn more from the unexploded parts and make more deadly use of them than Japan," Makhijani said. He said there also was some fear the Germans would retaliate using poisonous radioactive materials against Great Britain.

Concern that the bomb might be a failure even led at one point to a preliminary target selection of the Japanese fleet at the island of Truk, in the Pacific, so that if the bomb did not explode it would sink and be difficult to retrieve, the researchers said.

Once the targeting decision was made with work progressing on a bomb, the researchers say, the secret Manhattan project and its huge costs created a powerful political momentum and temptation to use it without military necessity.

Kelly and Makhijani said they launched their research for Japan's Kyodo news service, which is publishing the results in Japan.

President Abraham Lincoln signed a bill in 1862 to end slavery in the District of Columbia.

Sip N Spin...

Couple opens laundry bar

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jon and Brenda Thompson have the remedy for everyone tired of those boring hours spent at the laundromat waiting for the dryer to stop spinning.

They plan to open Sip N Spin, San Antonio's first combination bar-delicatessen-launderette.

"This is the new wave of the laundry future," Thompson said.

The new business, set to open Aug. 12, will be located in a 3,000-square-foot building in northwest San Antonio.

A third of the space will be taken up with the bar-delicatessen, which will be separated from the laundry by a glass wall.

Customers will be able to sip wine or beer, have a soft drink, a sandwich, or a breakfast roll while still keeping an eye on the washing machines.

The Sip N Spin also will offer a play room for children and a wash and fold service.

"It ought to be a really great way to do something that's no fun to do," Mrs. Thompson said.

A similar business has opened in Austin and has had considerable success, she said.

The Thompsons said owning their own business has been a longtime dream.

Thompson is a service supervisor for Siemens Medical Systems Inc. Mrs. Thompson has worked as an orientation and mobility specialist for the blind.

Health Commission rides into Austin sunset

AUSTIN (AP) — Even before Dora McDonald joined the Texas Health Facilities Commission, she detected a worrisome sign of a possible fatal illness, and her early diagnosis proved correct: the agency goes off the state support system Aug. 31.

The agency, created under federal pressure in 1975, had a lot going for it, including the stated backing of Texas' three top political leaders, as it struggled for life during the Legislature.

But it was one of six state agencies that failed to survive the "sunset" process in 1985, and is the second largest to be abolished by legislators since regular agency review began in 1977.

In 1983, the House killed the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council, which traced its roots to the energy crisis of the 1970s, by slashing all but $500,000 phase-out money from its proposed $12.4 million budget.

Legislative debate included Weatherford Rep. Bill Coody's memorable remark that TENRAC "couldn't find a quart of oil in an Exxon station."

Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, was even more persistent — "obsessed," said Ms. McDonald — in digging the grave for the Health Facilities Commission, which had 29 employees and a 1985 budget of $1.1 million, or $500,000 less than the agency collected in fees.

Ms. McDonald said the agency was established by the Legislature after the federal government raised the "heavy hammer" of withholding $250 million a year in health planning funds unless a process was set up to control the construction of health facilities such as hospitals and nursing homes.

The end came on May 23, four days before the Legislature adjourned, when the House voted 98-49 not to consider a bill that would have extended the commission's life for 12 years.

Its passing leaves Texas without any state regulation of health facility construction.

Other agencies succumbed this year — the Texas Prosecutors Council and the Texas Coastal and Marine Council to name two — but none appeared as vigorous as health facilities.

Even those who tracked the commission's vital signs hourly profess not to know exactly what did it in, but they agree that only Speaker Gib Lewis could have kept it alive.

"I think any time the lieutenant governor and speaker want a bill passed ... and both get behind it, it's coming through," said Rep. Charles Evans, D-Fort Worth.

Evans, one of Lewis' key lieutenants, sponsored a bill that would continue the commission but he said, "For years the commission was arrogant, and didn't tend to its business. It wouldn't listen. Its problem? Attitude, attitude, attitude."

Ms. McDonald, who has 7½ years of legislative experience as a former aide to Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and a master's degree in public administration, said the first danger sign occurred in 1983 when a bill was introduced to abolish health facilities.

That was about the time she was seeking appointment as one of the agency's three commissioners, and she recalled, "I checked into its chances of survival. ... I talked to a number of people in the House, the attorney general's office, Senate, and they all told me they wanted that agency continued and they felt like it would continue."

But the signs weren't all good — the 1983 bill bothered her. "Rarely do you see a bill filed to abolish an agency, and get a bill hearing and everything," she said.

The measure never got to the House floor, however, and the agency tried before the 1985 legislative session to persuade the Sunset Advisory Commission that health facilities deserved to stay in business.

On the commission's side were Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who inscribed a photograph of his swearing-in of Ms. McDonald to "one of Texas' finest public servants"; Gov. Mark White; the sunset commission; the Senate, which voted 24-7 to extend the life of the agency; the Texas AFL-CIO; the Gray Panthers; hospital and nursing home associations; business health coalitions; statistics on cost-containment and, presumably, Lewis.

"I was told that the leadership was in support of the continuation of the Health Facilities Commission, and Gib Lewis in the final days of the session said he was in support," said Ms. McDonald.

Commission Chairman W.G. "Cotton" Kirklin, a House member in 1953-57, described Lewis as a friend and said when he saw him a week or two before the end of the session Lewis told him, "I want to help that commission. I'm for it."

Your Birthday

Aug. 4, 1985

Your prospects for success look very good for the coming year, provided you are consistent in your endeavors. Don't start things and leave them half finished.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be imaginative and visionary today, but also be able to distinguish between what is feasible and what is not. Daydreams won't work. Major changes are ahead for Leos in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It will prove wise today to stay out of the confidential affairs of others and also to bar them from yours. Complications could arise in either instance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't pretend that you're willing to share something equally if you're not. People you try to kid will see through your little deception.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Objectives for which you aim today could be illusionary. The prize you're eagerly seeking might be just an empty package.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not speculate financially today in unfamiliar areas. Your lack of expertise could cause you to make expensive mistakes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you are responsible for household chores today, don't shirk these family duties. People who are depending on you will be severely disappointed if you let them down.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This may not be one of your more productive days. You'll know what needs to be done, but you could be such a slow starter that you'll never get off the launching pad.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 19) Companions with whom you pal around today might be in a better financial position than you, so don't try to match them dollar for dollar if they go on a spending spree.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Critical situations must be faced realistically today. Don't be guilty of pulling the wool over your own eyes. Analyze things from every angle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your hunches and perceptions could be faulty today and compel you to make unwise moves. Talk matters over first with people whose judgment you respect.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to dawdle your time away today on expensive, frivolous pursuits. If you're a bit loose with your money and you might spend more than you intended.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be mindful of your behavior today, especially if you associate with people who could either help or hurt your career. A bad impression won't be easily erased.

It only makes sense that a newspaper's most faithful readers are those that are most faithfully written about.

These include elected officials of all stripes, high school coaches, cops, people in the world who try to "do-good," people who have just had a wreck and criminals.

In true journalism fashion, we should say alleged criminals, because that is exactly what they are until a judge pronounces sentence.

All of which reminds us of Beekie Flynn.

Beekie was, in the jargon of the trade, a bad actor. Still in his early 20s, he already enjoyed an infamous reputation dating back to school days.

And on the semi-weekly where we worked, we encountered his name with frequency in police reports. Mostly misdemeanor stuff and mostly dealing with Beekie's habit of 1.) getting wasted and 2.) getting riled.

Beekie either had a sizable chip on his shoulders or an excessive amount of pride, we never figured out which. But he had some claim on bitterness since he not only came ento the planet poor, but crippled as well.

Born with polio, from his earliest beginnings he had to motivate around using state-provided crutches to assist legs reinforced by state-provided braces.

We'd see him being booked in or out of the county lockup, which happened to be located in the courthouse which happened to be across the street from the paper office.

Sometimes a close proximity between a newspaper and its readership isn't such a hot deal for the paper. And since we were handy after checkout time, Beekie wasn't above dropping by and commenting about his press clippings from the previous day.

We came to recognize his coming, hearing the irregular clink and clank of his metal crutches as he moved down the hallway toward our office cubicle.

We particularly remember Beekie in connection with an assault charge filed against him — and to understand his displeasure you have to understand that first there is assault and then there is aggravated assault.

The second more serious charge is filed when the injured-end of the complaint is struck, battered or otherwise clobbered with an "object."

We'd been told — erroneously, it turned out — that Beekie was facing aggravated assault charges due to a little mixup with one of his drinking buddies.

The next morning, the metallic scrape of Beekie's approach was heard. It always seemed that he took forever to maneuver what could have been no more than 20 ft., so we sat there waiting.

Beekie, as usual, wanted his side of the story told and what he felt was a blemish on his character corrected.

"Hey man, what you want people to think? Let me tell you something. I hit that dude with my fist, man, not my crutch."

Maybe it's a public relations problem.

It could be that New Zealand simply doesn't have adequate professional help of that nature in Washington. Possibly it has no one at all, not previously having been in noticeable need of assistance with its image.

Well, it's a thought, one prompted by a revealing Washington Post report about another country entirely. Seething South Africa.

According to the Post, South African interests in this country are being furthered by, at last count, 31 agents registered with the Justice Department. The South African representation is high-powered and bipartisan — not, one might suspect in the latter respect, entirely by accident.

The law firm of John P. Sears, for example, is on Pretoria's payroll for a half million dollars a year. You may have heard the name before. Sears was Ronald Reagan's manager at the beginning of the 1980 presidential campaign.

Then there is the firm headed by former Sen. George A. Smathers (D-Fla.). Its reported annual retainer is somewhat less — $300,000 — but that could be, as they say, politics. Wait until '88.

So what do South Africa's public relations arrangements have to do with New Zealand? Nothing, directly. But they provide an interesting perspective on Washington's strikingly different attitudes toward the two countries — relative restraint on worsening racial repression in South Africa and outrage at New Zealand's declining a port call by a U.S. warship that may or may not have been carrying nuclear weapons.

That incident occurred, you may recall, back in February. But it is not being diplomatically forgotten. Secretary of State George Shultz, on a recent Pacific tour (New Zealand pointedly omitted from the itinerary), continued to hammer away.

It is, as Shultz sees it, a matter of principle. By its uncooperative behavior, New Zealand has weakened allied unity, injected a new element of risk and raised basic questions about "responsibilities in the modern world."

There are certain similarities between New Zealand and South Africa from the American point of view. Both are the offspring of a European civilization that is also the American heritage. Both have been American allies in the major wars of this century.

But there are also significant differences. Shultz acknowledges that, as uncooperative as New Zealand may for the moment choose to be, it remains "a country that has the same basic values we do."

It is questionable whether the same can seriously be said of a South Africa that, driven by its racial obsession, presents an ever more brutal face to its own people and the world.

There is, however, something else to be said about South Africa in that context. There's no danger of any problems about port calls there. U.S. warships haven't been putting in in South Africa since 1969 because of the treatment encountered by black crew members.

There is yet another difference between the two countries, the most important one. South Africa is a deepening crisis preparing to explode. New Zealand remains a stable, functioning democracy, an asset rather than a threat to the free world. The only real damage to the alliance from the port call tiff, if any, has been in the overreaction to a small ally's gesture of independence. It does not speak too well of the way the leader of an alliance of free nations goes about meeting its responsibilities.

Washington may have its reasons for treating two old allies so differently. Public relations probably has nothing to do with it.

But neither, clearly, has principle.

SUNDAY
July 28

Based upon a finalized list of Scurry County values, taxing entities here have now received notice of each's "effective tax rate" — that is the tax amount they will have to charge to generate the same amount of tax dollars as last year.

It was reported Sunday the hardest hit was the Snyder ISD, which must now add 6 cents to its tax rate just to stay even with last year's ad valorem tax needs.

With homeowner property insurance costs now established by the State Board of Insurance, Scurry County finds itself in "the best territory in the state" for proposed rates effective after Nov. 15, it was reported Sunday.

The recommended rate reflects a 6.3 percent decrease for a territory including a stretch from Big Spring to Abilene.

A group participating in the annual "Pilgrimage to Pantex," sponsored by the Austin-based Red River Peace Network, brought their protest of the nuclear arms race to Snyder Wednesday evening.

Sixteen bicyclists and six support personnel arrived in Snyder from Abilene as part of their journey to the Amarillo Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant.

FRIDAY
August 2

Increased fees for use of the Western Texas College golf course and racquetball facility were approved Friday by the WTC board of trustees.

The increase was characterized as an adjustment to keep both facilities "paying for themselves." In addition, weekend rates for play at the golf course were upgraded as an attempt to direct more play to the middle of the week.

Letters to the Editor

TO THE EDITOR:

Some religious group has begun placing signs on roadside fences across much of Texas. These signs are hardly noticed until one appears on our own fence. Then arises the question, "What should we do?"

If the sign is left alone we could be seen as dull and unspecific. Moreover, the signs look trashy and they clutter the country side. We also have to wonder if the statements used do any good. For example, the statement "Jesus Christ is the Answer" is usually true but it lacks specificity. What if the question is, "Who shot J.R.?", or "Who roams the earth like a hungry lion?"

On the other hand, if the sign is removed we can be accused of having non-Christian values. We can imagine the president of a religious organization along with his sidekick judge holding spotlights in our faces and asking questions like: Do you, have you ever, or will you ever believe in the historicity of the Old Testament of the Bible?

Come on sign people! Have a heart! Please don't put us in this dilemma!

Sincerely,
Kenneth E. Gibson II

Sea turtle sightings delay giant project

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Recent sightings of an endangered species of sea turtle along the Gulf Coast have forced the Army Corps of Engineers to delay for at least six weeks its plans to build an eight-acre, $3.9 million project to include shops and a civic aquarium.

Fishermen have reported catching the Kemp's Ridley sea turtle — the most endangered of all sea turtles — off Sunfish Island in Corpus Christi Bay. The turtles also were reported to have washed up on shore last month.

Only 5,000 to 6,000 of the world's smallest sea turtle are known to exist, and the Gulf coastline along Mexico's state of Tamaulipas is the only known nesting site of the species known to biologists.

Thomas Rennie, project manager, said that under the Endangered Species Act the Corps is required to ask for an official biological opinion from the National Marine Fisheries Service in St. Petersburg, Fla. on how the landmass project will affect the endangered sea turtles.

The Office of Protected Species and Habitat with the NMFS in Washington D.C will issue the opinion, which will influence the future of the proposed seaside development, Rennie said.

"All of our plans have been pushed back about six weeks, unless we get the opinion sooner. The sooner we get it, the sooner we can move on the permit," Rennie told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

"Although we've asked for an expeditious review, it may take up to six weeks for the opinion to get back to us," he said.

If Corpus Christi Bay is found to be a critical habitat area for the Kemp's Ridley turtle, future development in Corpus Christi Bay could be halted, said Charles Oravetz, chief of the protected species management branch of the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Corpus Christi recently was the winner in a hotly contested bid to be the homeport for the Navy's restored battleship U.S.S. Wisconsin. Future deepening of the ship channel for the Port of Corpus Christi and facilities to house the battleship could be affected, Oravetz said.

But Oravetz does not think there will be severe repercussions for Corpus Christi.

"There's always the possiblity a turtle could be run over by a ship, but it's remote. All projects in the bay probably would have to proceed in a manner without jeopardizing the existing species," Oravetz said.

At the very worst, he said, the opinion from his agency will probably require developers to take measures to ensure the sea turtles in the bay are not jeopardized. Specifically, more cautious methods of dredging the bay would have to be implemented, he said.

"Based on the information I have seen and heard, it doesn't appear the bay is a major nesting area for the Ridleys," Oravetz said. "They've probably always been there."

The U.S. and Mexico are hoping to create a second nesting site on the Padre Island National Seashore near Corpus Christi. For several years, eggs from the endangered turtles have been transplanted from nesting sites in Mexico to the National Seashore Beach to develop the site.

Ed Klima, director of the NMFS laboratory in Galveston, said all of the sea turtles captured in the bay have been juveniles, many of them wild.

But some of the sea turtles found in the bay have been from the transplanting project, which the fisheries service began in 1978 to nurture the fast-diminishing numbers of the Kemp's Ridley sea turtle, Klima said.

"It's not at all unusual for them to be out there. They utilize the bay systems for feeding. It could be their population is beginning to increase," Klima said.

"MORRIS, YOU HAVE A COLD! Take two cups of chicken soup and call me in the morning."

Business brisk on El Paso boardwalk

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — For Enrique Reyes, business has been booming lately, the Border Patrol can attest.

Reyes makes his living by placing a wooden board across a shallow stretch of the Rio Grande between El Paso and its sister city of Ciudad Juarez and charging between 50 cents and a dollar to people who don't want to get their feet wet while crossing into the United States illegally.

"They're day workers and shoppers. More and more people are crossing here because there are more and more people without jobs in Mexico," Reyes told the El Paso Times.

Between 4 and 10 a.m. every day, about 150 people cross his "bridge," he said.

The Border Patrol announced Thursday that it arrested about 800 undocumented aliens a day during July in the El Paso sector while focusing its efforts almost exclusively on those trying to travel farther into the interior by bus, train, plane or car.

The 24,661 arrests in July topped the previous high of 23,444 apprehensions made in September 1983 in the Border Patrol district, which stretches from the Arizona-New Mexico border to a point about 100 miles southwest of El Paso, between Sierra Blanca and Van Horn.

Farther downstream, a Border Patrol official said 12,687 people were caught in the Laredo sector trying to cross illegally into Texas. That's more than double the number of such arrests in July 1984, assistant border chief Joe Garza said.

He said July marked the largest increase in arrests of illegal aliens since the Border Patrol began keeping track in 1924. Garza blamed the peso devaluation and the poor Mexican economy for the jump in people trying to slip into the United States.

Patricio Cardiel Barron, one of those who crossed into El Paso on Thursday on Reyes' bridge, said he was planning to go no farther than the border area. Cardiel, 57, a laborer from Juarez's colonia San Antonio, said he comes to El Paso every few days to do yard work, then returns to Juarez.

Cardiel had a plaster cast on his arm. He said he broke it six weeks ago when he ran and slipped while trying to flee from Border Patrol agents.

Larry Richardson, chief agent for the Border Patrol's El Paso sector, said increased numbers of aliens also are trying to travel farther into the interior.

He said his agents are nabbing more "inferior-bound aliens" because they are sorting out illegals with the border as their destination and concentrating on those headed farther into the United States.

Richardson said agents are using television cameras installed along a nine-mile border stretch of downtown El Paso.

Aubin said the Border Patrol picked up 2,122 people from 78 other countries during fiscal year 1984. Most were from Central and South America, he said.

Iran spends millions everywhere to buy arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran, bogged down in a bitter and bloody war for the last five years, has spent millions of dollars around the globe to buy weapons wherever and whenever it can, U.S. officials say.

The arrest Thursday of U.S. Army Lt. Col. Wayne G. Gillespie and five other people for conspiring to sell missiles to Iran is only the latest instance of the Islamic nation's effort to support its stalemated war against neighboring Iraq, the officials assert.

According to the Justice Department, the arrests marked the 17th time since 1981 that an attempt to illegally sell weapons to Iran has been blocked.

The United States banned the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran six years ago, after the shah, a U.S. ally and favored military client, was overthrown and replaced by religious fundamentalists led by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The attempted shipments to Iran include parts for warplanes, helicopters, tanks and clothing to protect soldiers against chemical weapons.

Six people were arrested last month for allegedly stealing F-14 fighter parts for shipment to Iran. That case arose out of investigations of supply irregularities aboard the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk in San Diego.

Iran, desperate for weapons to use against the superior firepower of Iraq, has sent agents around the globe to buy weapons wherever and however they can be purchased, according to U.S. officials, who discussed the matter only on condition they not be identified.

The reason is simple: Iraq is heavily supplied with weapons from the Soviet Union and has a large advantage over Iran in most categories of heavy weaponry such as tanks, artillery and warplanes.

However, the Iranians, with a population about three times that of Iraq, have a big edge in manpower.

Although accurate figures are difficult to come by, Iran has lost tens of thousands of troops in "human wave" assaults along the front lines.

The Iranians have mounted several large-scale infantry attacks, but all were blunted in fierce fighting during which Iraqi forces made good use of their advantages in firepower such as tanks, the officials said.

The United States has undertaken two major efforts which have caught some of the shipments intended for Iran.

The first, run by the State Department, monitors arms sales and shipments with a particularly close eye on Iran.

Meanwhile, U.S. Customs launched "Operation Exodus" in October 1981. Intended originally to implement a Reagan administration goal of cutting down the shipment of U.S. arms and technology to Soviet bloc countries, the effort has also stemmed the shipment of some military equipment to Iran, according to Customs officials.

The government says those arrested Thursday were conspiring to sell Iran a variety of short-range missiles, particularly the TOW, a major anti-tank weapon of the U.S. Army.

Iraq has about three times as many as tanks as Iran, according to the U.S. officials. "Facing that kind of disadvantage, it's not surprising they're trying to buys TOWs," said one official.

In an affidavit, the FBI said one of the six men arrested was Amir Hosseni, who claimed to be an Iranian government official.

In 1900, the U.S. Post Office began selling books of stamps. A book of 12 two-cent stamps sold for a quarter.

Limitations that you have placed on your thinking will be lifted in the year ahead. You will broaden your vistas and thereby enjoy greater success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your associates will be watching you carefully today to determine your views and outlook. If you have a positive attitude, it'll inspire them to think similarly. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Opportunities could come your way today through the good auspices of two people who are concerned about your welfare. These are individuals you've helped.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Partnership arrangements you have with friends today have excellent chances for success. Hold good thoughts and everything will fall in line.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Don't put off until tomorrow anything that should be done today, especially where your career is concerned. Success is more likely if you strike now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Things should work out more to your liking today if you're involved with people with whom you have strong emotional bonds, rather than with nodding acquaintances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There are some shifts in conditions today that will work to your ultimate advantage. These are the changes for which you've been hoping.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is a good day to arrange a face-to-face meeting if you have an important matter you've been anxious to discuss with another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your earning potential is greater than usual today, so don't sell your talents or services short if you are performing tasks for others. Ask for what you deserve.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Exercise your initiative today in situations that require prompt action. You'll want to protect your interests, as well as those of others with whom you're involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to finish up several projects that you have left dangling. Complete the old to your satisfaction before tackling the new.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today, strive to associate with friends who inspire you to explore new horizons, rather than wasting time with pals who inhibit your vision.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's to your advantage to set loftier material goals for yourself today. If you want more, this will encourage you to try harder to get it.

Houston freeways a haven for unsafe speeding trucks

HOUSTON (AP) — City officials, fed up with an increasing number of accidents, believe Houston's freeways now are a haven for unsafe trucks and that it's time for the Texas Legislature to protect motorists with tough new safety regulations.

The state's trucking industry agrees.

"There are abuses that cannot be ignored," said John Danks, director of safety of the Texas Motor Transport Association in Austin. "But we need effective legislation, not just some bill that pays lip service."

Ironically, a proposal that would have required statewide enforcement of federal truck safety measures died in the state Legislature during the last session.

The latest outcry came after a portable tank carrying 5,000 gallons of highly flammable liquid fell from a tractor-trailer rig on a freeway ramp Tuesday and burst into flames.

The driver was killed and a major traffic artery was closed for repairs of a steel rail that melted in the heat of the fire.

That was not the only recent major truck accident on Houston's freeways. In the past week:

— An 18-wheeler loaded with frozen foods overturned on a freeway ramp.

— A tractor-trailer overturned at an interchange, spilling 150 gallons of fuel.

— An 18-wheeler crashed through the median at a freeway interchange to avoid colliding with another truck stopped in traffic. All traffic lanes were closed for nearly three hours.

— A truck spilled more than 200 gallons of toxic hydrochloric acid. There were no injuries but rush-hour traffic was blocked on the feeder road while firefighters cleaned up the spill. The driver was given a citation for failing to have a permit to transport the chemical through the city.

"This is getting to be a daily habit," Fire Marshal Eddie Corral said.

The death of the truck driver Tuesday was the 14th traffic fatality so far this year involving a tractor-trailer rig. This compares with the 11 fatal tractor-trailer accidents recorded in all of 1983 and 1984.

Corral estimated about 4,000 trucks, many carrying hazardous cargo, criss-cross the nation's fourth largest city every day.

"Half these guys don't even know what they're carrying, and they come barreling through here at 90 miles an hour," Corral said. "We don't have the vehicles that can catch them, the manpower or even the authority to try. Only the police can do that and there aren't enough of them."

"'Yes' and 'no' are the simplest words, but they require the most thought," according to Pythagoras, the Greek philosopher and mathematician.

Writer looks at couples who stay together

NEW YORK (AP) — Francine Klagsbrun, a writer, likes things neat and tidy. Sam Klagsbrun, a psychiatrist, leaves hair in the sink.

She hates cold feet and dampness. He surprised her one day with a kayak.

She calls herself "a terrible worrier." He has a knack for looking at life's brighter side.

Despite their differences, the Klagsbruns have one thing very much in common: They take equal pride in the health and longevity of their marriage.

In fact, the Klagsbruns, who have a 15-year-old daughter, recently celebrated their 30th anniversary, an event that prompted their friends to offer not only congratulations but also a question:

How do they do it?

Not just the Klagsbruns, of course, but millions of other couples who stay married through good times and bad, through fights about money, differences with in-laws and problems with sex.

After three years of interviews with married couples across the country, Mrs. Klagsbrun has come up with a realistic, readable and reassuring response, in a 309-page volume just published by Bantam Books.

"Married People: Staying Together in the Age of Divorce" takes a close look into the living rooms and bedrooms of more than 80 couples who have managed to make their vows last.

The book explores shifting patterns of power and dependency between couples, ways in which they fight, their methods of coping with crises, and their suggestions for maintaining satisfying sex lives through the decades.

Changing roles of men and women figure prominently in many of the couples' stories. Husbands talk candidly about darker feelings of insecurity, competition and neglect that can surface when wives go back to work. Working women talk about replacing feelings of financial dependency with feelings of guilt and resentment as they struggle to fulfill various responsibilities.

Couples also talk about the comforts of married life, the understanding and intimacy that grow over time.

The purpose of the book was twofold, says the author. She points out that while the divorce rate is soaring, more people are getting married each year than ever before. And 58 percent of first marriages last more than 15 years.

"I wanted young people to know that it's possible to have a good and long marriage," Mrs. Klagsbrun says. "It's not always easy, but divorce doesn't have to be the first or even the second alternative.

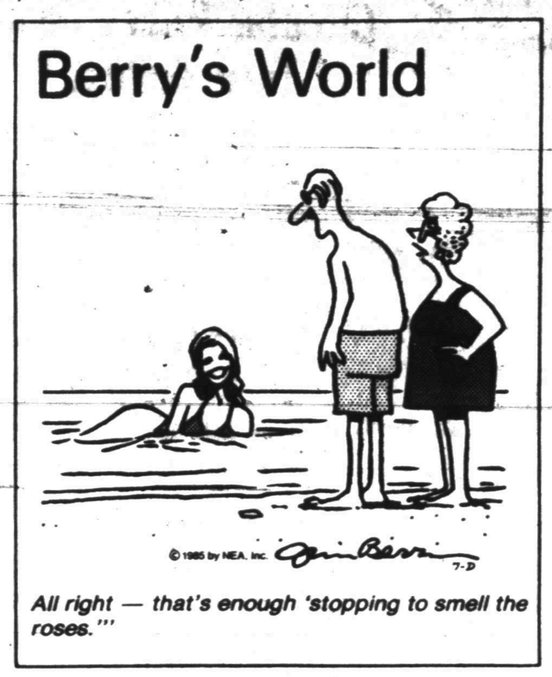

"And I wanted people in marriages to know that their problems aren't unique. We all play that game of looking at other people at parties and thinking they aren't fighting about money, their kids are perfect, their sex lives are perfect. But others' marriages aren't perfect either."

Dispelling the notion of perfection is one key to longevity in marriage, Mrs. Klagsbrun decided. "You start a relationship with a dream of perfection. Then you start finding the flaws, the annoying, the irritating. You start to lose what you had earlier, a kind of rosiness about everything.

"That's when it can truly begin. That's when you can start dealing with the real person. Some people think of that as compromising. I disagree. I think being able to come to terms with the fact that some things that bother you about your spouse aren't going to change is the very essence of maturity."

Paradoxically, the ability to deal with change — your own or your partner's — is another key ingredient, one Mrs. Klagsbrun likens to an astronaut making in-flight corrections. "Change is inevitable in marriage, and it tends to bring anxieties. But in the strongest marriages, both partners are able to adapt to the change in the marriage or the other partner and when necessary, to change themselves."

Some discoveries were surprising, Mrs. Klagsbrun says. She found, for example, that common interests aren't important. On the contrary, different interests tend to add spice. Common values, on the other hand, are essential, as are trust, an assumption of permanence, and an enjoyment of one another.

All right — that's enough 'stopping to smell the roses.'"
