Sadat assassinated by uniformed men

Other casualties reported in military parade attack

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat was assassinated today by men in Egyptian army uniforms who opened fire from a jeep during a military parade, then jumped out and charged the reviewing stand firing automatic rifles and hurling at least one grenade, officials said. Many other casualties were reported as thousands fled in panic.

The announcement of Sadat's assassination was made by presidential adviser Mansour Hassan after emerging from a meeting with six top officials, including Vice President Hosni Mubarak. Asked by reporters if Sadat was dead or alive, Hassan said, "dead." He said the funeral would be held "in a few days."

Regular programming was interrupted and Islamic prayers were recited on state radio and TV, as was done before the announcement of Gamel Abdel Nasser's death 11 years ago.

Egyptian government officials said at least two other people were killed and many others injured in the attack on the 62-year-old president, who infuriated Arabs at home and abroad because of his peace treaty with Israel and his recent crackdown on domestic opposition.

A Foreign Ministry official, who declined to be named, at first said Sadat was hit in the arm in the attack, which occurred during a jetfighter flyby and sent thousands of spectators fleeing in panic. But David Gergen, a White House spokesman in Washington, said Sadat was hit twice in the side.

The Egyptian government said Sadat was flown to Maadi military hospital by helicopter and underwent surgery. An Egyptian cameraman near the scene of the attack heard the the raiders shout, "Glory for Egypt, attack!," and yell, "agents and intruders" at foreigners seated in the grandstand.

In Beirut, one caller told news agencies that the Independent Organization for the Liberation of Egypt was responsible for the attack, but few knowledgable people in Lebanon had heard of the group before. Another caller said the Rejection Front for the Liberation of Arab Egypt was responsible. He said it was headed by the former Egyptian army chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Saadeddin Shazli. This too was not confirmed

Condolences began pouring in from around the world, including messages from President Reagan and former President Jimmy Carter.

Anti-riot police were deployed in Cairo, which was normal for an attack on a president, but there were no troop movements, and Egypt's ambassador in the United States said the gunfire was not part of a coup attempt.

The envoy, Ashraf Ghorbal, said he was told by his government three of the attackers were killed and three were captured alive. He also said the vice president was heading a cabinet session to deal with the attack.

The State Department said a U.S. Marine major, an Army lieutanent colonel and an Air Force captain also were hit but only slightly wounded. The Egyptian official, who requested anonymity, said many Foreign Ministry officials and others were wounded, including the Belgian ambassador and first secretary of the Australian Embassy.

Cairo Radio gave this account of the attack initially:

"At 1240 this afternoon — 6:40 a.m. EDT — during the military parade, a group of people fired at the main grandstand which resulted in the injury of the president of the republic, and some of those accompanying him. His excellency has been moved to where he is being treated by specialists. The vice president of the republic is personally following up on what procedures the doctors are taking."

Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazalla and Mubarak, who was on the other side of Sadat in the reviewing stand, were unharmed, Egyptian officials said. First reports said the defense minister was wounded during the shooting.

Fawzi Abdel-Hafez, Sadat's personal secretary, and Mohammed Rashwan, his personal photographer, were killed, reporters said.

AP reporter Lisette Balouny saw an armored personnel carrier pull up in front of Sadat's home in Giza, a suburb about four miles from the center of Cairo, after the attack. She said the walled residence was ringed with special presidential guards, all armed with automatic weapons.

Security guards at the gate said Sadat's wife, Jihan, had returned to the residence from the parade in a helicopter, picked up other family members and left again in the helicopter.

Foley said a group of men began firing at Sadat from a jeep towing artillery as it passed the grandstand. Two of the men jumped off the back of the jeep and charged the reviewing stand, firing from the shoulder.

"No one was sure it was real for a few seconds, then all hell broke loose," Foley said.

He filled Egypt's void

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Sept. 28, 1970 was a day of gloom in Egypt. It was the day Gamel Abdel Nasser died of a heart attack, leaving a void few thought could be filled.

Into the void stepped Anwar Sadat, a virtually unknown vice president, and Egypt changed direction.

While Nasser led the Arabs in wars ending in humiliation by Israel, Sadat led them in what he described as a "glorious Arab victory" in the 1973 Middle East War. At the risk of condemnation by many other Arab leaders, he became a peacemaker who stunned the world in November 1977 by visiting Israel.

The trip by the Egyptian president shattered Arab precedent.

Within three years after taking office, Sadat crushed one internal revolt against him, expelled 15,000 Soviet advisers and started turning Egypt's orientation from the Soviet Union to the United States.

He electrified the world in November 1977 when he declared he would go to the ends of the earth, "even to the Israeli Knesset (Parliament)" to discuss peace if it would save even one Egyptian soldier.

Less than two weeks later, Sadat was in Israel, stunning his own nation and horrifying most other Arab leaders. The visit culminated in the 1978 U.S.-mediated Camp David Accords that established peace between the two nations.

Sadat waged an off-again, on-again relationship with Col. Moammar Khadafy, leader of Libya, Egypt's western neighbor and one of Sadat's harshest critics as Egypt moved steadily toward peace.

In July 1977, Egypt and Libya clashed for five days along the border from the Mediterranean Sea south into the desert. The skirmishes, military and verbal, quickly subsided, but the rhetoric heated up from time to time.

In August 1976, Sadat won Parliament's unanimous nomination for another six-year term. He vowed to liberate all Arab lands taken by the Israelis in the 1967 Middle East War and to establish a "Palestinian entity."

Israel demanded most of Sadat's attention, even as he feuded with or befriended Khadafy, as he moved to strengthen economic and political ties with Sudan, Egypt's southern neighbor, and as he accepted financial aid from oil-rich Saudi Arabia.

After the 1973 Middle East war broke out, Sadat was hailed as a hero.

Extension of existing Voting Rights Act endorsed by House

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is endorsing an indefinite extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, without weakening it, and supporters hope the lopsided size of their victory will overcome expected resistance in the Senate.

For nine hours Monday, conservative Republicans sought to loosen the federal government's hold on enforcing voting rights, but every amendment they proposed was defeated.

In the end, with the support of civil rights leaders, the American Bar Association and the League of Women Voters, House Democrats succeeded in pushing through a tough extension of the civil rights law.

The final vote was 389-24. Only seven Democrats voted no, and most of the Republicans who supported efforts to weaken the extension voted for final passage of the legislation.

"I believe that this strong bipartisan vote will be a clear sign to the Senate that the country is strongly in favor of this extension to protect our most cherished right," said Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

"This is the people speaking," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., the principal author of extending the legislation, generally credited as the most successful civil rights measure approved during the 1960s.

But the House measure, opposed by Senate Judiciary Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., might not come up in the Senate until early next year.

As sent to the Senate, the extension includes continuation of the critical pre-clearance procedure under which all of nine states and parts of 13 others must seek Justice Department permission before making changes in voting laws or regulations. Many of those states are in the South.

The law was designed to make sure that the voting power of blacks, Hispanics or other minorities is not diluted by local officials or state legislators.

Testimony before a House Judiciary subcommittee showed that in many jurisdictions redistricting plans and practices to discourage minority voting are commonplace, especially in states like Mississippi, Virginia, Georgia and Alabama.

But the measure also permits the 22 covered states and hundreds of counties within them to "bail out" or escape from federal supervision, beginning in 1984, if they can prove that their minority voting records have improved and that they no longer have discriminatory voting practices.

Most of Monday's often bitter debate centered on how stringent the bailout provisions should be. All attempts to weaken the bailout standards were defeated by wide margins.-As approved by the House, the extension requires local jurisdictions to prove that they have done nothing illegal to discourage minority voting, that no federal examiners were ordered in to enforce the voting rights law and that they made positive efforts to improve the numbers of black, Hispanic, Indian or other minority voters.

Among the first votes was one on an effort to allow local federaljudges, instead of the U.S. District Court in Washington, to hear bailout cases. It failed 277-132.

Supporters of the amendment said judges in the area where the alleged discrimination took place should decide each case.

Reagan 'getting through' on AWACS package

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, taking charge of the campaign to sell AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, says he is making headway on saving the $8.5 billion arms package from congressional veto.

Reagan met with out-of-town editors at the White House on Monday and, in an interview released today, said, "I think this message is beginning to get through to members of the Congress."

All 53 Republican senators, including 19 on record against the sale and 19 more considered uncommitted, were invited to the White House for a pep talk by the president Wednesday afternoon. In the meantime, administration supporters weighed circulating a non-binding resolution calling on the president to guarantee that legal requirements are met before the five Airborne Warning and Control System planes are delivered to the Saudis.

Reagan gained a little time Monday when the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations committees indefinitely postponed voting on the sale.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, however, was expected to adopt a resolution of disapproval later today. Two-thirds of its members are on record against the sale, as are a majority of the full House and half the Senate.

Reagan, who said in a veiled reference to Israel last week that American foreign policy was no other country's business, told the visiting editors he is not abandoning the Jewish state.

"The truth is, we intend to stand by an old and trusted ally, and we mean that for all our allies," he said.

But he added: "We also intend to look for new and dramatic ways to protect and solidfy the security and peace of the Middle East."

The administration contends the weapons would enable Saudi Arabia to defend its oilfields. Opponents argue the arms might be used against Israel or could fall into unfriendly hands if the Saudi dynasty fell.

87 Haitians transferred to La Tuna

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Eighty-seven of the 97 Haitian refugees sent here from over-crowded federal facilities in Miami last July were transferred to the La Tuna medium security prison near El Paso Sunday night after a weekend disturbance in which they threatened to return to Miami by foot.

John Allman, superintendent of the federal minimum security prison camp here, described the transferees as "despondent, depressed and remorseful" as they boarded federal buses for La Tuna about 11:30 p.m. Monday.

Allman said the disturbance began after the evening meal Sunday. The men refused to eat and said they had decided to leave. About 50 outside law enforcement officers, including Department of Public Safety troopers and Texas Rangers, were called out to secure the perimeter of the unfenced camp. The men were persuaded to return to their quarters.

There was no violence and no one was injured, according to Allman, who added: "But we felt they had made a decision we couldn't live with. And I made the decision that they must go."

Buses were called in from other federal institutions and all but 19 of the refugees were taken to La Tuna. The 19 were taken by van to the Midland City Jail because there wasn't room on the buses. They will be transferred to La Tuna later this week. Allman said the men had been told by family members and others that they were being detained here illegally. A recent court ruling said the Immigration and Naturalization Service hearings to determine their eligibility to stay in this country couldn't be held until the men had the benefits of legal counsel.

"I'm sorry they had to leave here," said Allman. "Had they been better informed, they might not have taken the action they did."

Last week, Allman said the men were getting restless but were not causing any trouble. An insufficient number of lawyers in the area was responsible for the delays in INS processing, according to Allman, who said the other inmates had treated the Haitians well, giving them candy, cigarettes and soft drinks during their stay here.

Ten refugees who didn't participate in the disturbance will remain at Big Spring for INS processing. Allman indicated he had no idea how long it would take, and said a "mushrooming population of sentenced federal inmates" means that no more Haitians will be coming to Big Spring.

The camp has a capacity of 450 inmates and a current population of 206.

September's fall showers wind up in October

Those cooling and refreshing rains which many West Texas denizens welcome in spring and early summer seemed to have skipped around and wound up in October.

And the rains turned from a pleasant shower to a dampening drizzle this morning.

The fall drizzle, perhaps highlighted by thunder and lightning, is to continue into tonight and Wednesday, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The weatherman forecast a 40 percent chance of continued rainfall tonight and 30 percent Wednesday.

Showers and drizzle were falling throughout area towns this morning. And at least one segment of the population did not extend its usual welcome to the gentle downfall. Farmers.

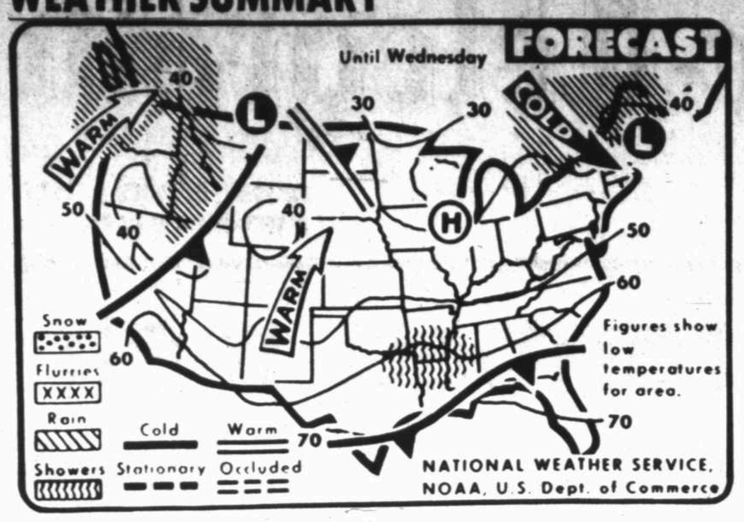
Cotton farmers are into harvesting their crops, but the untimely rains and decline of hot weather are retarding full cotton bolls.

Relatively cool - in the mid-70s - temperatures are forecast for Wednesday. Nighttime temperature is to be in the coolish mid-50s.

The early morning rain moved the weather service's gauge to 0.24 of an inch today for a 0.52 reading for the month. Rainfall for the year is pegged at 12.54 inches and is approaching the year's 13.51-inch normal rainfall.

Monday's peak temperature of 77 degrees was a distant 21 degrees behind the record high of 98 degrees for the date in 1937. The overnight low of 68 degrees couldn't even cast a shadow on the record low of 41 degrees set in 1932.

WEATHER SUMMARY



Car sales in 1981 had a dismal finish

By STEPHEN JONES
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Cars sales in the United States for the 1981 model year had a dismal finish, coming up short compared even with last year's slow showing.

Import cars, meanwhile, again raised their share of the market.

"The model year came in like a lion and is going out like a lamb," Arvid Jouppi, an analyst with Rooney, Pace Inc., said. "High interest rates almost killed the model year."

According to final figures made public Monday by the automakers, there were 8.95 million 1981 cars sold in the United States. That was 1.7 percent fewer than the 9.13 million sold in the 1980 model year.

The high-water mark for the U.S. market was the 1973 model year, when more than 11.4 million cars were sold. Of that, 1.7 million, or 15.4 percent, were manufactured overseas.

Sales of cars made in the United States during the model year were down 2.6 percent to 6.59 million from 6.79 million 1980 models. Import sales, by comparison, increased 1.1 percent to 2.36 million from 2.35 million.

The was one more sales day in the 1980 model year, so the percentages were figured on a sales-per-day basis.

Jouppi was able to see a bright spot for U.S. manufacturers, however.

"The import share crept up in 1981 to 26.5 percent (for the entire model year) versus 25.9 percent in the prior year," he said. "However, at the end, the imports sagged while the domestics gained.

"The domestics now have a product muscle that they have not had since 1973 and the imports are slowed by voluntary export restraints from Japan."

The latest monthly sales report, also released Monday, showed U.S. auto sales up 6.7 percent in September compared with the same month last year.

But that included a 0.9 percent decline in the last 10 days of the month.

"It was a poor month compared with a disastrously poor month last year," Jouppi said. "Considering the rebates, the relative success of September, poor as it was, was bought at a high price."

Each of the domestic automakers, except Volkswagen of America, had some sort of rebate or sales incentive program in effect through the first 23 days of the month. The last third of the month featured introductions of 1982 models by most of the automakers.

With the end of rebates came a halt to six straight 10-day sales period in which sales were up.

Sales of imported makes fell 10 percent for the month.

"The domestics have made some inroads on the imports because of the export restraints" imposed voluntarily by the Japanese government "and the rebates," Jouppi said.

Winds, heavy storms sweep Mississippi Valley

Heavy thunderstorms swept across the mid-Mississippi Valley today, downing trees and snapping powerlines in parts of Illinois.

In Missouri, hurricane-force winds struck Lambert-St. Louis Airport Monday night caused an estimated $1 million damage to as many as 10 small aircraft, airport officials say. Wind gusts were clocked at 95 miles per hour in the control tower and up to 80 miles an hour on the ground, the National Weather Service said.

Showers and thundershowers also hit portions of Oklahoma, southwestern Texas and the Texas coast. Rain and high winds extended over the Pacific Northwest.

The weather service forecast for today called for thunderstorms scattered from the southern Plains through the southern half of the Mississippi Valley.

The storms will move into the Ohio Valley and go eastward to the mid- and northern Atlantic coastal states.

It will rain in the Great Lakes, northern California and the Pacific Northwest.

Skies will be sunny elsewhere.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 30 in Casper, Wyo. to 85 in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Here are temperatures and sky conditions from selected cities:

East: Atlanta 69 fair, Boston 52 fair, Buffalo 55 hazy, Charleston, S.C. 65 fair, Cincinnati 67 cloudy, Cleveland 57 foggy, Detroit 53 showers, Miami 76 partly cloudy, Nashville 74 fair, New York 61 partly cloudy, Philadelphia 58 foggy, Pittsburgh 59 partly cloudy, Washington 66 fair.

Central: Bismarck 39 fair, Chicago 68 partly cloudy, Denver 52 fair, Des Moines 54 cloudy, Dallas-Ft. Worth 76 fair, Indianapolis 70 showers, Minneapolis-St. Paul 50 cloudy, New Orleans 73 fair, St. Louis 71 fair.

West: Albuquerque 56 fair, Anchorage 34 fair, Los Angeles 65 fair, Phoenix 77 fair, Salt Lake City 50 fair, San Diego 68 fair, San Francisco 58 fair, Seattle 54 rain.

Canada: Montreal 43 fair, Toronto 52 foggy.

Roy Innis appears in police lineup for assault charges

NEW YORK (AP) — After refusing to do so for two weeks, Roy Innis, chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, has appeared in a police lineup in connection with assault charges against him.

Innis, 47, is accused of beating a man he allegedly caught stealing his car radio.

Innis took part in the line-up Monday at the Manhattan district attorney's office under protest, describing it afterward as "insulting, humiliating and debasing to me and my organization."

Police said Amstead Rice, 31, identified Innis as one of several men who dragged him into the national black organization's Harlem offices and beat him the night of Aug. 14. Innis was arrested Aug. 19.

In a prepared statement issued Monday, Innis said: "Recently, as the result of attempts to regain stolen property of mine from an automobile pillager, I, the victim, was subjected to the shocking process of arrest and am now being forced to appear in a lineup as if I were a common criminal."

Both Innis' lawyer and a district attorney office spokeswoman declined to disclose the results of the lineup.

GOP senators demand report on MX missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key Republican senators, questioning the administration's strategic weapons program, are demanding a report prepared specifically for President Reagan and used in his decision to put MX missiles in existing silos and resurrect the B-1 bomber.

But Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger says because he report was directed to Reagan, "I don't think I have the authority just to release it."

The exchange came at a Senate Armed Services Committee hearing Monday on Reagan's six-year, $180.3 billion strategic weapons program, which Weinberger said would "create a deterrent that is far more stable and secure than exists today."

Weinberger was to continue his Capitol Hill lobbying for the plan with an appearance today before the House Armed Services Committee.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate panel, and Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, demanded to see the report, which recommended the main outlines of the plan the administration adopted. The report was prepared by a commission headed by Charles H. Townes, a Nobel Prize winner for physics.

The administration wants to build 100 MX missiles and put at least the first 36 of them in Titan silos, abandoning an Air Force plan to scoot them around among a network of shelters to keep the Soviet Union guessing about their location.

The plan also calls for building 100 B-1 bombers to take over from aging B-52s while research goes ahead on a new "Stealth" plane that can frustrate Soviet radar. This would reverse former President Carter's decision to abandon the B-1.

Air Force Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the panel that he supports Reagan's plan, although he doesn't think the new missiles will be safe from attack in the Titan silos.

Jones, saying he was speaking for himself and not necessarily all of the service chiefs, said, "I remain to be convinced" that the missiles can be made to withstand a Soviet attack by any means other than the "shell game" of multiple bases that the Carter administration had advanced.

Reagan, in an interview Monday with out-of-town editors, said of his defense decision:

"We have .... attempted to show some balance and flexibility. Our plans for the MX and the B-1 have these advantages: We can afford them, we keep our options open so that we can respond adequately and in time to any new Soviet buildup, and we send to the Soviets that signal that Winston Churchill once said was critical for any successful negotiations with the Soviet Union — strength of purpose and strength of resolve."

The B-1 and MX proposals require the approval of Congress. Questioning, some it sharp, focused on the MX in the Senate hearing.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., charged that "we have given the Soviets a better target to shoot at."

At a hearing later in the day by the House Appropriations subcommittee on defense, most of the discussion centered on the bomber.

Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., the subcommittee chairman assailed the B-1 plan as a "political decision" that would delay development of radar-eluding "Stealth" devices. Weinberger denied, however, that Stealth development would be slowed.

At the Senate hearing, Tower asked Weinberger to make the Townes commission report available.

Weinberger replied, "There are a number of documents and ... I will certainly explore the possibility of getting some at least of that direct information to you. They were, however, reports very specifically for the president."

"I understand that," Tower replied, "but ... I think that it is important for us to know how the decision was arrived at."

Cohen told Weinberger, "We should not tolerate the situation where we are now confronted with a military decision based on a report ... the conclusions of which are suggested here but which we don't have an opportunity to consider."

Weinberger had lunch with Reagan after the Senate hearing but said he did not bring up the senators' request.

Linda Hill, Tower's press secretary, said later that Tower would not be satisfied with just extracts from the report. She said Tower would wait to hear from Weinberger before deciding whether to take further action.

Armed with an umbrella, a Midland man makes his way through the drizzle to work this morning downtown as the sun tries to break through the overcast skies. As of 8 a.m. today, Midland had recorded .24 of an inch of rain in the past 24 hours, upping the annual total to 12.54 inches.

Homes evacuated after freight train derails

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — More than 1,000 people were evacuated from their homes early today after a freight train derailed, overturning five tanks of liquid chlorine and two of butane gas, officials said.

No injuries were reported, and none of the cars leaked, according to the Snohomish County Sheriff's Department.

The Burlington Northern train derailed two miles north of Marysville shortly before midnight PDT Monday, sending 26 cars off the tracks, the sheriff's department reported.

Fire officials ordered a nine-square-mile area cleared, and the evacuees were taken to the Marysville Junior High School.

The area had to be cleared before the wreckage could be removed and the overturned tankers righted, said Snohomish County Sheriff's Sgt. Tom Zinzer, adding that the greatest danger in a derailment of this type is handling the damaged cars.

Firefighters and a special crew from the railroad were dispatched to the scene to prepare to lift the tankers back onto the tracks, he said.

"They're pretty well banged up," he said. "They could start leaking any time. And with the rain, it wouldn't take much to turn into gas form (vaporous)."

The train derailed near Washington 99, where several businesses and factories are located, Zinzer said.

He said there were no homes in the immediate area, but several subdivisions are located about a half-mile away. The accident occurred in a major rail corridor along eastern Puget Sound.

The train was traveling north from Seattle to Ferndale when the accident occurred, said BN spokesman Kim Forman.

The cause of the derailment was under investigation.

Woman says she sold son to Houston couple for $300

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who says she was afraid she couldn't care for her son testified Monday she left her son with a couple who gave her $300.

Pamela Skiba, 21, said she left her 7½-month-old son with Bob and Diana Evans because "I did not want to see him on the street."

The juvenile court hearing was scheduled to determine whether Steven Feld should be returned to his mother, given to the Evanses, or be placed in a foster home. The child is now in a foster home chosen by the Harris County Child Welfare Unit.

Ms. Skiba said she arrived in Houston with $20 in her pocket last July after leaving Miami Beach because the boy's father wanted custody. She left a daughter about three years older than Steven "somewhere in Florida," she said.

She said she was looking for shelter in Houston when a girl handed her a pamphlet advising her to seek out "St. Anne."

"I called 'St. Anne,' who said her name was Mrs. Evans, and made an appointment for the same day," she said.

Mrs. Evans said Ms. Skiba couldn't take care of the baby, the mother testified.

"I was hurt," Ms. Skiba said.

The two women were joined by Mrs. Evans' husband. Together, Ms. Skiba said, the couple offered her $500 if she would leave her son.

"I just wanted counseling," she said. "I wasn't seeking to give Steven up."

Nonetheless, she said, she took the money — minus $200 for counseling and attorneys' fees. Three days later, she and the Evanses visited an attorney, where she signed notarized documents.

"As far as I knew, I was signing my baby over to the Evanses," she said.

She testified that she called the couple a week later and said she wanted her son back, but said Mrs. Evans told her she would have to repay the money first. She said then Evans got on the phone and threatened to call the police if she did not leave them alone.

Polaroid battles Kodak in patent infringement

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Polaroid founder Edwin H. Land opened his company's patent infringement case against Eastman Kodak by trying to give the judge an instant picture of how Kodak copied his creations.

Camera in hand, the 71-year-old Land snapped photos of a lawyer and court stenographer and described in detail the workings of his first black-and-white camera, introduced in 1948.

At issue is Polaroid's contention that Kodak copied 10 patents when it introduced a camera in 1976 to compete with Polaroid's SX-70 camera. The non-jury trial of the suit began Monday before Judge Rya Zobel in U.S. District Court.

Until 1976, Polaroid had been the sole manufacturer of instant cameras for nearly three decades.

Polaroid lawyer William K. Kerr said Kodak was worried that the SX-70 — which produces fast, dry instant color prints — would cut into the company's conventional film business.

"Kodak unsuccessfully tried to develop non-infringing methods," he said. "But they bumped against stone walls and eventually were driven to infringe upon Polaroid's patents."

This patent infringement, he said, "strikes at the very heart of Polaroid's business," whereas instant photography represents "only a very small part of Kodak's overall business."

Frank T. Carr, a Kodak attorney, countered that Polaroid, by obtaining dozens of patents protecting minor technical changes, has tried to keep its exclusive hold on the instant photography business.

"The market is there for anyone who can develop and sell a product," Carr said. "Polaroid has viewed this as a domain that no one can enter except at terrible risk."

Carr maintained that Polaroid's patents are invalid, even though Kodak employed its own research to develop its instant camera.

In a pre-trial brief, Kodak argued: "Polaroid's penchant for patenting every slight improvement rather than only true innovations has led to a vast inventory of look-alike patents, ponderous in size, bewildering in complexity, but differing only in trivial and predictable respects from each other and from the prior art. The 10 patents in suit fall squarely in this category."

Six of the 10 involve rollers, gears and other parts inside the cameras, while the others cover the chemistry and workings of the film.

During his testimony, Land explained the introduction of the first color film in 1963 and the technology of the SX-70, which went into production in 1972.

Cleveland parents call off blockade of school buses

CLEVELAND (AP) — Upset by a low turnout, parents say they're calling off a blockade of city school buses that they started to protest a cost-cutting plan that forces students to use public transportation.

On Monday, about 100 parents managed to strand 230 district school buses, about half the fleet, by blocking depots. But disappointed organizers had predicted 700 parents would show up for the blockade.

"It's just a lack of cooperation among the black leaders," said Mrs. Jesse Rogers, wife of the president of Parents United for Action, a group comprised mostly of black parents.

"We talked to so many people in the last three days who said they would work with us. None of them showed up," she said following a Monday night meeting of the group.

Cleveland's school board decided last month it was too expensive to provide school buses for all of the 36,000 students in the district who must use some form of transportation under a court-ordered desegregation plan.

As a result, more than 9,000 students who ride to school are forced to take Regional Transit Authority buses and trains at an estimated savings of $2 million to the district.

Parents say they are concerned about long waits for buses in the winter's pre-dawn hours, especially for younger children. They say they could accept RTA use if only high school pupils were taking them.

About 15,000 students were stranded or delayed Monday by the protest. No arrests were made.

Alfred D. Tutela, the district's director of transportation, said the issue is closed. He said he will meet with parents to discuss individual complaints but added there will be no changes in the plan.

"Maybe when kids start to get hurt or killed, maybe then something will happen. I hope it doesn't come to that, but those buses aren't safe," Mrs. Rogers said.

Construction, automaking showing signs of weakness

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two industries hobbled by high interest rates — construction and automaking — are showing further signs of weakness through new announcements of layoffs and sluggish sales.

At the same time, the banking industry adopted a 19 percent prime rate, a drop of one-half percentage point and its lowest level in five months.

Economists said a factor in the prime rate's slide from 20.5 percent as recently as last month was a decline in demand for credit caused by a slumping economy. And they predicted the prime rate would continue to fall.

Deere & Co. said Monday that a Christmas shutdown at two plants making construction equipment would be extended by one month because of the depressed housing market.

Operations are to be halted between Jan. 4 and Feb. 1 at Deere plants in the Iowa cities of Dubuque and Davenport, idling about 5,300 workers.

High interest rates have made it difficult to finance construction projects and to find buyers for new homes. And for financial institutions, old mortgages with single-digit interest rates are cutting into profits at a time when new funds are costing twice as much to raise.

Richard Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, on Monday proposed legislation that would allow federally chartered savings and loan associations to demand payment of a mortgage loan when a home is sold, even if state laws would allow the new buyer to take over the existing mortgage at the same interest rate the seller had been paying.

The nation's automakers, meanwhile, reported slumping sales for the final 10 days of September, with the exception of a 41.8 percent gain by Ford Motor Co. from the same period a year ago.

Donald Maude, chief financial economist at the investment firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., said the figures "suggest auto sales will be extremely weak in October and November with promotional programs already expired."

The American Iron and Steel Institute reported steel production fell to 2.129 million tons last week, a 3.4 percent decline from the previous week.

The business-financed research group said its Measure of Business Confidence fell to 57 on a scale of 100 in the third quarter, down from 61 in the second quarter. The index stood at 58 in the first quarter and at 63, its most recent high, in the last quarter of 1980.

Jim Hightower, at a news conference in front of the state capitol Monday, annouces his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Texas Commissioner of Agriculture. Hightower holds up a loaf of white bread which, he says, costs the consumer 70 cents — of which the farmer receives only six cents.

Hightower announces candidacy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jim Hightower, who lost a race for the Texas Railroad Commission last year, has announced as a candidate for agriculture commissioner in the 1982 Democratic primary and says this time he means to win.

Hightower, sweating in a black three-piece suit in 90-degree weather, made his announcement Monday from the back of a pick-up truck with bales of hay as his rostrum.

"I am running as an old-time, unreconstructed, unapologetic, working-people's Democrat. I'm the candidate of the consumers who feel gouged when they go into that supermarket with a $20 bill and come out with a little sack and no change. I'm the candidate of the family farmers and ranchers who are tired of being efficient, productive, competitive and broke," he said.

Country singer Steve Fromholz warmed up the crowd on the Capitol lawn, and Hightower provided sandwiches and soft drinks.

Hightower said a coalition of consumers and farmers would help him beat Reagan Brown, who has been commissioner the past four years.

He said both farmers and consumers had been hurt financially by "giant middlemen corporations" while Brown sat idly by.

"That's my main complaint — there has been no fight," Hightower said, calling Brown a "do-nothing" who had been "AWOL on the big issues every time it counted."

Hightower, 38, has been president of the Texas Consumer Association for a year and will give up the office this weekend.

He failed in the 1980 Democratic Primary to unseat Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent, 633,423 to 588,475. But he said the race gave him name recognition that equals or betters Brown's. Hightower said he believed he could defeat Brown with a campaign treasury of $300,000 and already has raised $50,000.

During Brown's four years in office, Hightower said, food prices have risen 50 percent while prices paid to farmers have plummeted and caused "more than 8,000 good Texas farmers to go under."

He quoted a rural saying that "the water won't ever clear up until you get the hogs out of the creek" and said:

"The hogs are in the creek and they're not going to get out on their own. We're going to have to put our shoulders to it and push them out, and that's what I'm doing — rallying a constituency of gougees to shove the hogs out of the creek," Hightower said.

He said the commissioner could fight high food prices by seeking anti-trust lawsuits, jawboning food corporations, testifying before congressional committees and helping farmers market their produce to consumers without middlemen.

Before entering politics, Hightower was editor of the Texas Observer. He was director of the Agribusiness Accountability Project in Washington, D.C., for five years and wrote two books on food policy. Hightower also was national coordinator of former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris' unsuccessful presidential effort in 1976 and was legislative assistant of former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, in 1967-69.

Suspect held without bond

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A construction worker is being held without bond on an attempted capital murder charge in connection with the wounding of a Los Fresnos police officer after he was arrested for the shooting death of a highway patrolman, authorities said.

Leonel Torres Herrera, 34, was arraigned before Cameron County Peace Justice Luis Romero, who denied bond and ordered Herrera held in the Cameron County Jail.

The charge filed Monday against Herrera was in connection with the wounding of police officer Enrique Carrisalez, who was shot minutes after a Department of Public Safety trooper was killed.

Carrisalez remained hospitalized Monday in critical condition, said a spokesman at Valley Baptist Medical Center in Harlingen.

Following hearing, PUC examiners to spend month on Bell decision

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two Public Utility Commission examiners, armed with data collected during a six-week hearing, will take a month to prepare their recommendations on Southwestern Bell's $469.8 million rate hike request.

The marathon hearing ended Monday, shortly after a final skirmish which the phone company lost. Texans probably won't know until December if their phone bills will go up.

Examiner Bob Gillespie said his report should be ready in early November. He said Examiner Carolyn Shellman would issue her report at the same time. Ms. Shellman will determine how much money Bell should get. Gillespie must figure out which customers should pay for the increase, if there is one.

The three-member PUC probably will set the rates at a December hearing, Gillespie predicted.

The company wants to raise monthly residential bills by $5.45, with no increase in intrastate long distance charges. Bell faces increasing competition in the long distance field.

Paul Roth, Southwestern Bell vice president, has testified that local service charges must be increased to be more in line with the actual cost of the service.

The PUC staff, recommending about $247 million in increases, says $42 million of the increase should come from a 5 percent rise in intrastate long distance fees. The increased revenue from long distance would mean the company would need only a $2.40 monthly increase on residential bills.

Although Southwestern Bell opposes a long distance toll increase, company lawyers on Monday tried to introduce testimony that the $42 million would not be enough.

Company economic analyst Bruce Egan's prepared testimony complained that the $42 million in long distance hikes does not take into account the fact that fewer calls would be made if the price jumps.

In order to bring in $42 million in revenues, Egan's testimony said, long distance hikes of $78.5 million would be needed.

"The $42 million recommended by (the staff) is not worth $42 million to the company," said Bell lawyer Jim Wurtz.

Company spokesman Dale Johnson said Bell still wants no long distance increase, but wants to make sure that if one is approved it would be fair to the company.

Egan's calculations increasing long distance tolls would mean 26,915 fewer long distance calls a year.

Several of the intervenors in the case, including MCI and U.S. Telephone — long distance competitors — persuaded Gillespie not to allow Bell to introduce Egan's testimony into the record. The intervenors said Egan's comments were not proper rebuttal testimony, but was new information Southwestern Bell should have offered when it presented its case here.

Drownings case called 'hot potato'

MARLIN, Texas — An attorney for one of three lawmen charged with negligent homicide in the drownings of three black youths says the officers' trial has been moved twice because officials think the case is a "hot potato" that could stir up racial unrest.

The trial was moved Monday from a state district court here to a county court at law in San Marcos. The proceedings earlier were moved from Mexia, where the three youths drowned, to nearby Marlin.

"There is no doubt the publicity here has made it almost impossible for my client to get a fair trial," said Joe Cannon, attorney for Limestone County probation officer David Drummond. "It's been difficult to get a judge. No one wants this. It's a hot potato. I don't blame them."

District Judge Thomas Bartlett said the trial was moved out of his court to the Hayes County Court at Law in San Marcos after "statements in the news media by certain persons created an atmosphere in this county that is charged with racial tension to the point that violence is almost invited."

Bartlett said Marlin officials feared the trial would bring in outsiders who would create unrest. Officials in Limestone County had wanted the trial moved to Marlin because they said the officers would not get a fair trial in Mexia.

Limestone County Deputy Kenny Elliott, 23, Reserve Deputy Kenneth Archie, 23, and Drummond, 32, face misdemeanor charges of negligent homicide in the deaths of three black youths.

The officers are accused of transporting Carl Baker, 19, Anthony Freeman, 18, and Steve Booker, 19, across Lake Mexia in an overloaded motorboat after arresting the teen-agers at a "Juneteenth" celebration on suspicion of drug possession.

The youths drowned when the boat overturned in the middle of the lake.

The CD for All Savers...From First National

Now, First National offers a program for "all savers" to enjoy savings with high interest yield plus a tax benefit. It's called the All Savers Certificate of Deposit.

Here's how it works: From now until December 31, 1982, you may invest as little as $500 in a First National All Savers CD for a maturity of one year. During that year, interest earned by the CD may be excluded from your taxable income up to a maximum $2,000 for couples filing joint tax returns, $1,000 for those filing separately. The current annual rate is 12.14%.

The interest rate on the CD will change every 4 weeks, but the rate in effect at the time you invest is fixed for the full one year term. Although the interest rate is not compounded, you may receive interest payments monthly, quarterly or upon maturity. If the CD principal is withdrawn prior to maturity, the tax exclusion is forfeited and there is substantial penalty. Deposits are insured by the FDIC.

Compare First National's All Savers Certificate to other investment alternatives, consider your tax plan, then visit one of our CD representatives in our main lobby.

N.J. state senator is co-conspirator in bribery case

By PAUL MOSES
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Union City Mayor William V. Musto, who is also a state senator, has been named an unindicted co-conspirator in a federal bribery indictment filed against a Bergen County contractor.

The indictment Monday was the second filed in an alleged scheme by several Union City officials to buy a building from its owners for an inflated price of $2.57 million in city funds in exchange for bribes.

The purchase was halted when a public vote turned down the proposed sale.

In the latest indictment, Richard Van Nortwick, president of Van-Rad Contracting Co. of Lyndhurst, was charged with gathering $20,000 by submitting phony vouchers to the local school board.

Van Nortwick gave the money to a Musto aide, school trustee Frank Scarafile, so Scarafile could return a bribe that a reputed organized crime figure had demanded back, the federal indictment charged.

Van Nortwick's lawyer, Eric Summerville, said his client would plead innocent. He said Van Nortwick did not inflate any bills and did not pass along any money.

Van Nortwick is charged with conspiracy, interstate travel in aid of a bribery scheme and four counts of making false statements to the government, each of which carries a sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine upon conviction. He also faces three wire fraud charges, each carrying a penalty on conviction of up to five years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

The indictment is related to a separate case involving charges against Musto, Scarafile and seven others, including the alleged mob figure, Dominick D'Agostino of Garfield.

According to the charges in both cases, Musto, Scarafile and Union City School Board President John Powers agreed to accept money from owners of the Vista View medical building in Union City. The earlier indictment identified the amount as $200,000, with a $50,000 down payment. Musto has pleaded innocent to those charges.

In return, the city would buy the building for the inflated price of $2.57 million, according to the charges.

Two owners of the building, Dr. August Juliano and Ludwig Bruschi, were under indictment at the time on federal bank fraud charges and later were convicted of getting a $2.1 million loan by using false documentation to inflate the building's value.

The city government had agreed to purchase the Vista View building, but local attorney Libero Marotta organized a petition drive against the deal.

Local voters in the city of about 55,000, urged on by Marotta's charge that the deal stemmed from collusion with the building's owners, rejected the purchase Jan. 15, 1980.

Court considers if defendants' freedom can be denied

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger call for bail reform, the Supreme Court will decide whether states can automatically deny some defendants their pre-trial freedom altogether.

The high court said Monday that it would review a ruling that Nebraska's constitutional amendment barring bail for suspects charged with serious sex crimes is unconstitutional.

At issue is a provision in the U.S. Constitution that says bail cannot be excessive but doesn't say whether release can be denied for all people accused of certain crimes.

The reforms advocated by Reagan and Burger appear to stop short of automatically denying bail when certain crimes are involved.

The president, in a Sept. 28 speech to the International Association of Chiefs of Police, said he advocated tightening standards for pre-trial release.

"We will push for bail reform that will permit judges — under carefully limited conditions — to keep some defendants from using bail to return to the streets, never to be seen in court again, until they are arrested for another crime against innocent life."

Reagan did not spell out his plan, but presumably it would only apply to reforms in the federal system.

Burger, in a speech last Feb. 8 to the American Bar Association, proposed restoring "to all bail release laws the crucial element of future dangerousness based on a combination of the particular crime and past record, to deter crime while on bail."

The case accepted for review by the Supreme Court is expected to yield a definitive ruling on whether thre is a constitutional right to bail.

The Nebraska Constitution was amended by popular vote in 1978 to ensure bail for people awaiting trial on criminal charges "except for treason, sexual offenses involving penetration by force or against the will of the victim, and murder, where the proof is evident or the presumption great."

Eugene L. Hunt was charged with forcible first-degree sexual assault in Omaha, and was denied bail under the state constitutional provision. He was later convicted of first-degree forcible sexual assault and sentenced to eight to 15 years in prison.

Last May 13, the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruling on Hunt's case, said the federal constitutional bar on excessive bail applies to the states. The court said a blanket denial for certain classes of defendants — specifically those charged with serious sex crimes — also violated the Eighth Amendment of the Constitution.

"If the Eighth Amendment has any meaning beyond sheer rhetoric, the constitutional prohibition against excessive bail necessarily implies that unreasonable denial of bail is likewise prohibited," the appeals court said.

But the appeals court noted that Congress and state legislatures "seemingly possess the power to deny the right to bail" to all people charged with crimes for which the death penalty might be handed out.

Nashville sponsors salute to Vietnam veterans

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The pain of remembering the Vietnam War brought tears to some veterans, while others used a city-sponsored salute to soldiers to speak out about the effects of Agent Orange.

The Star Spangled Salute to Vietnam Veterans at a Nashville park Sunday was paid for with money city employees normally use for their annual picnic.

"It means a great deal to me, mostly for those I served with who didn't come back," said Michael D. Smith, a Marine in Vietnam from 1968 to 1970. "It should be more for those who are not here to be honored."

One former medic, Scott Summer of Nashville, held a tattered American flag that once marked the grave of his best friend in Vietnam.

Summer cried openly when he remembered his birthday on Nov. 3, 1970, the day his buddy, Kenneth Brown, was killed.

The salute featured fly-overs by units of the Tennessee National Guard, paratroopers from the 101st Airmobile Division at nearby Fort Campbell, Ky., music and entertainment from a variety of groups and free food.

Smith, an assistant manager of a restaurant, wore an orange T-shirt, which he said symbolized his protest against the use of the chemical defoliant called Agent Orange that was sprayed on the Vietnam jungles.

He said he suffers from internal disorders, has trouble sleeping and is often nervous and blames all of his health problems on Agent Orange.

"I don't think the government really knows (all the effects) and I don't think they are being truthful," Smith said.

David Hensen, who was in Vietnam for two years, said veterans have been ignored too long, adding that the event was like "an attempt to put medication on a sore that's been running for years."

Mayor Richard Fulton, who declared Sunday "Veterans Day for Nashville," presented medallions to two former prisoners of war from Nashville, businessman John Deering and Adm. William P. Lawrence. A relative accepted for Lawrence, who is on duty in Hawaii.

Sears to buy Coldwell Banker & Co.

CHICAGO (AP) — Coldwell Banker & Co., the nation's largest independent real estate broker, probably will be acquired by Sears, Roebuck and Co. for an estimated $175 million or more, both companies say.

Sears, the nation's largest retailer, already owns about a 17.6 percent interest in Coldwell Banker, or 899,866 shares. Sears is proposing an offer of cash and securities to acquire the remaining shares.

The companies announced Monday an agreement in principle to the sale.

Sears plans to make a cash tender offer of $42 per share for up to 1,536,000 Coldwell Banker shares, with a Friday deadline. Sears also will reserve the right to buy up to 2,304,000 shares if that does not affect the tax-free nature of the merger and the reorganization that follows the tender offer.

The merger is subject to a vote of a majority of Coldwell Banker's outstanding leftover shares. Industry sources say the deal is valued between $175 million and $179 million.

Edward Telling, chairman and president of Sears, said in a prepared statement that one of the main reasons for the transaction is the "quality of Coldwell Banker's management and personnel."

C. Wesley Poulson, Coldwell chairman, said the firm's board has agreed that "our shareholders' interests are best served by acceptance of the Sears proposal."

Between 2.3 and 2.8 Sears shares would be given for each Coldwell share, with the exact exchange determined later.

Coldwell Banker has 406 officials across the nation. It also operates residential real estate offices, including the Thorsen network, in the Chicago area.

In the fiscal year ending in June, Coldwell Banker reported a 15 percent increase in revenue to $345.5 million. However, earnings fell 46 percent to $5.948 million or $1.35 a share. The company said the decline was due, in part, to the cost of expansion and a slow real estate market.

If the merger is approved, Poulson will become chairman and chief executive officer of the Seraco real estate group of Sears, responsible for Coldwell Banker, Homart Development Co., Allstate Savings and Loan, the PMI Group of Companies, Executrans and Allstate Enterprises Mortgage Corp.

No more doubletalk

It was a refreshing departure from the diplomatic doubletalk that usually follows a high-level international conference. The Reagan administration wasted neither words nor time in telling the American people and the world that its first major discussion with the Soviet Union got nowhere.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig said his four-hour meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko last week in New York failed to reduce tensions or to solve any problems. Such cold-turkey candor is undoubtedly discouraging to disciples of detente who often submerge harsh reality beneath rosy ambiguities. But the world's situation demands nothing less. Americans, if they are to defend themselves, must have the unvarnished truth about their relationship with their most dangerous potential enemy.

In laying the groundwork for the most important contact yet with the Soviet Union, President Reagan last week sent a conciliatory letter to Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev expressing hope for greater "mutual respect ... than we ever had before." And Secretary Haig, just prior to meeting Mr. Gromyko, made a firm but conciliatory speech to the U.N. These two U.S. olive branches were rejected out of hand by the Soviet foreign minister in a strident denunciation of the United States one day later before the U.N. General Assembly.

No one should be surprised, therefore, that the Soviet foreign minister rebuffed U.S. concerns about the Red Army occupation of Afghanistan, Soviet expansion in Southeast Asia, and threatened intervention in Poland. Another critical issue, limiting medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, remained deadlocked because the Soviets insist the United States should not deploy its Pershing and cruise missiles in NATO defenses against the Soviets' 250 powerful SS-20 missiles targeted on Europe.

Besides demonstrating again the Reagan administration's nononsense realism about Soviet intentions, the one thing the Haig-Gromyko conference did accomplish was an agreement to confer formally in Geneva on Nov. 30 and seek control over nuclear weapon levels in Europe.

Perhaps the most significant long-range result of this initial, exploratory U.S.-Soviet conference is that the Soviets were made to realize the administration means what it's been saying: That the Soviet Union will be judged by its actions; that the days of a free ride to aggression are over; that international transgressions will bear a heavy price.

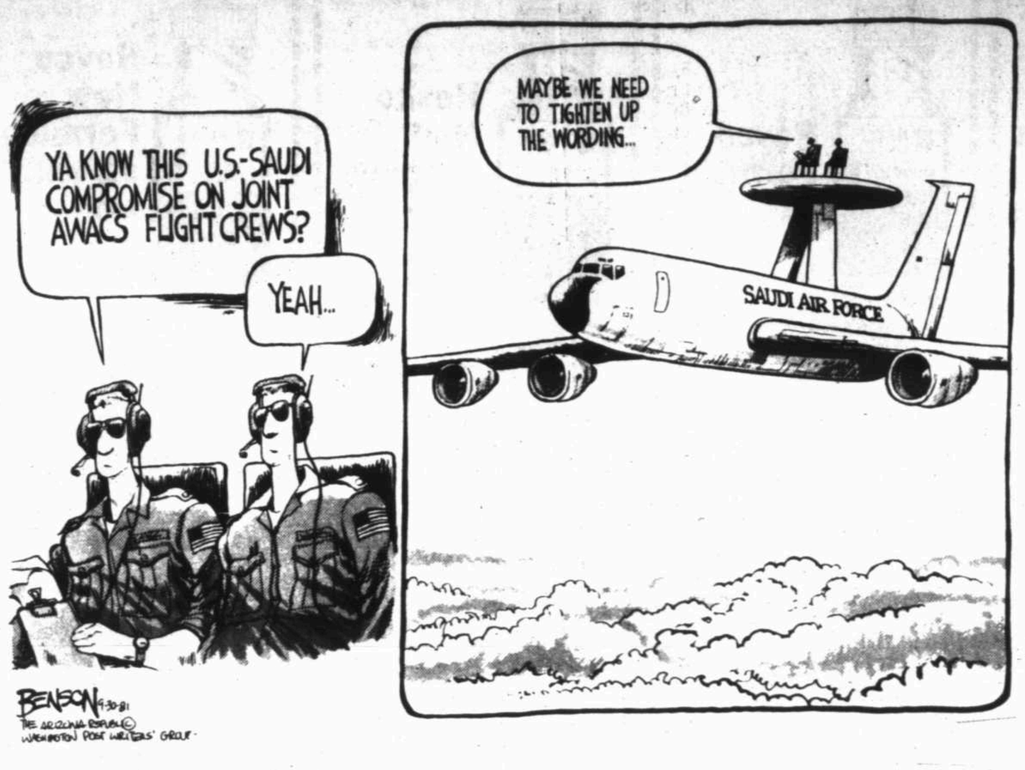
Unquestionably, the Soviets dislike these prospects. But they probably respect the United States more today than at any time in a number of years. This is not without a lot of meaning because as respect is a guardian of peace, just so is contempt an invitation to war.

A need to worry

The English-language skills of Americans (especially the youngergeneration) have long been of concern to educators, parents, employers and just about anyone who communicates with the written or spoken word. They might well worry about geography, too.

In a cartoon map in the July-August edition of the Sierra Club magazine, a third state appeared in the space actually occupied only by Georgia and Alabama.

Perhaps after American schools have succeeded in producing better readers, they will need to emphasize other fundamentals such as geography and history.



MARK RUSSELL SAYS

What are we to do with these retired CIA agents who go to work for terrorist governments instead of puttering in the garden and watching Lawrence Welk?

●

Other retired government employees sell real estate or buy a mobile home and move to Florida, but not some former CIA people. They sell the latest weapons to Libya and you can bet they get more from Kadaffi than a gold watch.

●

The CIA and the Justice Department say that the ex-agents aren't doing anything illegal. So, next time you read of a terrorist attack waged with American-made weapons, don't complain. Some nice old retiree is earning a little extra money.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Texas targeted for NCPAC 'manipulation'

WASHINGTON — The National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC) is widely regarded as an organization of hot-eyed ideological fanatics determined to save the world from liberals. In fact, it is a slick, cynical group of professional manipulators who believe the voters can be gulled by expensive negative campaigns.

Jack Anderson

The depth of NCPAC's cynicism is revealed in its battle plan for next year's state and congressional elections in Texas. Polls have convinced NCPAC's chairman, Terry Dolan, that Texas and Florida are conservatism's land of opportunity in 1982.

My associate Vicki Warren obtained a copy of NCPAC's invasion plan for Texas, authored by Dolan himself. The cover page is labeled "PRIVATE AND CONFIDENTIAL," and on top of that, the seven inside pages are stamped "TOP SECRET."

It is a revealing document. Dolan suggests at one point that NCPAC's 1980 campaigns demonstrated that voters are fools who can't or won't look beneath the surface. As he puts it, "the reality is that people decide on image rather than substance."

Dolan also reveals the basically "anti" approach that NCPAC uses: "Creating a negative impression is easier than a positive impression."

The legislative redistricting that has come out of the 1980 census gives NCPAC's operatives a golden opportunity, Dolan writes. Liberal incumbents "will be picking up perhaps hundreds of thousands of new voters who have no clear image of the incumbent," he explains, adding: "Therefore, we will not have to change impressions, we will be able to create them."

No specific targets have been picked definitely yet, according to Dolan's battle plan. But he writes that "I am currently considering" five Democratic incumbents as targets worthy of a NCPAC blitz: Majority Leader Jim Wright and Reps. Jim Mattox, Martin Frost, J.J. Pickle and Henry Gonzalez (whose name he misspells).

It won't be cheap, Dolan warns. NCPAC is budgeting $800,000 for its Texas campaigns, he writes. In addition, apparently, he envisages an equal amount for "my Independent Expenditure Program to destabilize at least three of the incumbents cited above" — an unfortunate use of the CIA's old euphemism for fomenting revolution against targeted governments.

Dolan is not above pirating techniques from the Chinese Communists. At one point, discussing the economic advantages of "piggybacking" campaign commercials that attack incumbents in three congressional districts in the same media market, he writes:

"We might even consider using a term 'Gang of 3' and advertising in all three districts using all three names."

Instead of picking an ideologically "pure" candidate to run in a targeted district, Dolan would first establish what kind of constituency was out there by district-wide polling. "Once we have the correct political profile on a district, we can immediately look for the correct candidate and go ahead with that candidate," he explains.

Dolan's battle plan for Texas has a carpetbagger aroma to it. Though NCPAC "is willing to establish a Texas Department which will serve the needs of all the candidates," he makes it clear that his out-of-state people will be running things. He refers, for example, to "the detailed information we will need to identify a candidate ... to define the issues ... and to direct the debate which ensues."

NCPAC will also provide schooling for candidates, campaign managers and finance chairmen. All the Texas conservatives will have to do is sit back and let NCPAC take over.

Footnote: NCPAC refused to talk with me or my staff because I previously referred to the organization as "ultraconservative." Maybe Dolan would prefer "ultracynical."

EXECUTIVE MEMO: The White House offered a modest "last hurrah" to some 40 employees of the Community Services Administration who were victims of the "Reagan RIF" (reduction in force): They were invited to join the welcoming throng on the South Lawn for Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's arrival. Invitations are routinely sent out to federal agencies whose employees may want to participate in such ceremonies. CSA's allotment of tickets was oversubscribed; the soon-to-be-fired employees apparently had little else to do as their time ran out.

— Labor Secretary Ray Donovan's tenure started off badly enough at his confirmation hearings, with allegations that he had hobnobbed with union racketeers. Things haven't gotten much better since. The White House slapped him down when he spoke out on the air traffic controllers' strike, and the Senate accused him of flubbing a Teamsters Union investigation. He has been given no political assignments for the administration, either in the labor field or in his home state of New Jersey. "He lacks political sense," explained a White House aide, "and in this pressure cooker, that is a devastating problem."

— The CIA's circuitous intelligence gathering often boils down to diplomatic gossip, as these excerpts from secret documents show:

"A recent Italian intercepted message mentions an Israeli Foreign Ministry official's assessment ..."

"A PRC (People's Republic of China) diplomat recently informed an untested Romanian clandestine source ..."

"According to an intercepted message, (one country's intelligence agency) has been ordered to pass to Pakistan details of a purported plot of Afghans ..."

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan cuts off Weinberger's debate on the MX missile

WASHINGTON — President Reagan "did all the talking" during a Sept. 28 hush-hush session on the MX missile with Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger in his White House living quarters right after Reagan returned from his law-and-order speech in New Orleans.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

When Weinberger raised his familiar arguments against putting the MX mobile missile in protective shelters, Reagan cut him off. The president said he had made up his mind on the MX: There would be no more temporizing. He wanted the MX built — he wanted it land-based.

Reagan told Weinberger to proceed with research on the so-called "long duration" aircraft that, if ever built, might be used to carry the MX sometime in the future. But for now, the president hammered home his theme: The U.S. must show the Soviet Union and its European allies that it can make tough decisions.

CARTER IN '84?

Hamilton Jordan, who masterminded Jimmy Carter's phenomenal climb from obscurity to the 1976 presidential nomination, is eyeing an even harder assignment: taking Carter from national rejection in 1980 to the 1984 nomination.

In telephone conversations with the former president's supporters around the country, Jordan has hinted at a Carter comeback. But one of Carter's most generous and loyal supporters brought Jordan up short: You must be dreaming, he said, or else totally unaware of Carter's unpopularity around the country.

A footnote: Robert S. Strauss, Carter's campaign chairman in 1980 who has toyed with the notion of a 1984 presidential run himself, has quietly told supporters that it is no go. Strauss believes a campaign would be more likely to destroy him than nominate him. But that does not rule out Strauss as the first Jewish vice president.

$30 BILLION BOO-BOO

Sen. John Glenn was making slow progress trying to persuade Japan's defense officials to increase military spending. But when a headline announcing "White House to Cut $30 billion in Defense" screamed across page one of a leading Tokyo newspaper, Glenn was completely undermined.

The Sept. 1 headline was over a Washington story quoting "White House officials" that President Reagan was planning to reduce military spending by that amount. In fact, the source — White House chief of staff James Baker — was out of touch when he leaked that erroneous word. Reagan soon put him straight.

But the damage had been done in Tokyo. Glenn, a defense-oriented Democrat with presidential aspirations, had pressed the Japanese hard to raise their puny defense spending, particularly in view of the massive American effort defending Japan's oil sources in the Mideast. With the appearance of that headline, Glenn knew that the smiles on the faces of the Japanese officials spelled defeat for him.

NEW AND OLD RIGHT

The difference between the new and the old right was pointed up when Sen. Barry Goldwater succumbed to the pleas of Majority Leader Howard Baker for the decisive vote to enact the trillion-dollar debt limit.

Giving back Republicans some of their old medicine for refusing to cooperate with debt ceiling problems of Democratic presidents, all Democratic senators withheld their support — insisting that Republicans provide all votes for the unpleasant but necessary chore. Baker finally twisted Goldwater's arm after three junior Republican senators — Bill Armstrong of Colorado, Charles Grassley of Iowa and Steve Symms of Idaho — said no.

Armstrong, Grassley and Symms (along with Sens. Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire and Don Nickles of Oklahoma, who also voted no) are members of the new right, committed to hard principle. As a more flexible old rightist, Goldwater could not refuse his majority leader's entreaties. Baker was so relieved that, in plain view of the Senate galleries, he hugged the man who used to be called Mr. Conservative.

'LIBERATING' EL SALVADOR

According to intelligence reports, France and Mexico timed their diplomatic recognition of leftist insurgents in El Salvador to coincide with the most recent — and, as it turned out, unsuccessful — guerrilla offensive.

The idea, pushed particularly hard by the French, was that recognition from Paris and Mexico City would be timed with occupation of Salvadoran "liberated zones" by the communist-led guerrillas. But the offensive failed to establish any clear areas under insurgent occupation.

The Franco-Mexican strategy has the imprint of French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson. As commissioner of the European Community in Brussels before the French Socialist election victory this year, Cheysson pushed a plan for European aid poured into "liberated zones" in El Salvador.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 6, the 279th day of 1981. There are 86 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 6, 1683, the first German settlers in America arrived in Philadelphia.

On this date:

In 1848, Austria declared war on Hungary.

In 1949, President Truman signed the Mutual Defense Assistance Act for military aid to NATO countries.

In 1958, the American nuclear submarine "Seawolf" surfaced off New England after establishing a world record by remaining submerged for two months.

In 1978, medical researchers in Calcutta, India, announced the birth of the world's second test-tube baby.

Ten years ago: President Nixon obtained federal court injunctions ordering striking longshoremen to return to work on the West Coast and in the port of Chicago.

One year ago: China accused the Soviet Union of instigating a clash on the Mongolian border, the first known incident between the two Communist nations in more than a year.

CHARLEY REESE

Be certain before you buy a gun

Should you buy a handgun for self-defense? A lot of people are asking themselves that question lately. As a man who has grown up around guns and always owned them, maybe I can help you decide.

Charley Reese

The first question you should ask yourself is, am I willing to kill another person? If the answer is negative, don't buy a handgun. Guns are for killing, not for scaring people or wounding them.

Once you introduce a gun into a situation, your opponent may well assume you intend to kill him and if he's armed, shoot.

The old and true rule is this: Never pull a gun unless you intend to use it; never shoot unless you shoot to kill. Think about this seriously. Once a human being is sprawled on your living room floor bleeding all over your carpet, it's too late to decide that you can't handle it emotionally or psychologically. He's going to stay dead and you're going to live with his death for the rest of your life.

Even if you are willing to kill, I don't recommend buying a gun, especially a handgun, unless you are willing to spend the time and the money to learn how to use it. That means more than just shooting six bullets. It means a minimum of 40 hours on a range.

In a self-defense situation, you will likely be in the dark, scared, and caught by surprise. If you are not familiar with your weapon and its operation, it may — under those circumstances — be more of a threat to you than to the intruder.

It goes without saying that you must learn to handle the weapon safely — and if you have children, to teach them gun safety. It also goes without saying that you don't leave a loaded gun around were small children, yours or your neighbor's, can get it. More people die from falls than from gun accidents, but one child is one too many.

Despite what the anti-gun nuts say, the gun itself is only an inanimate object, a mechanical device for propelling a projectile. The point is that the gun, being inanimate and mechanical, will kill whoever happens to be in front of it when it fires. Makes no difference to the gun whether it's a burglar or you.

Another point to consider is that for a gun to be useful, you, the gun, and the threat have to be in the same place at the same time. A gun in the closet is useless if you wake up staring into the baby blue eyes of a rapist. A gun in the glove compartment of your car is not much help if you are being mugged in the parking lot. Frankly, because so many states have stringent laws against carrying a concealed weapon, this pretty well rules out the handgun except for defense of your home or business. And there you have some advance warning of danger.

Still another point is to familiarize yourself with the law as it pertains to self-defense in your particular area. Generally, you must believe yourself to be in imminent danger of death or great bodily harm and have no way to retreat. You are not entitled to kill someone who looks suspicious and most especially you are not entitled to shoot someone who is stealing your hubcaps or even running out your front door in the middle of the night.

A gun is nothing more than a useful tool and like any tool, it requires skill and intelligence to use it properly. Its advantage is the same one it's always had — it's an equalizer. A 75-year-old man or a 110-pound secretary can with a gun defend themselves against a muscular, 200-pound assailant.

But buying a gun for self-defense is a serious step. Think it through carefully before you make the decision. Finally, if you do buy one and you do shoot somebody, kill them. Otherwise, you'll end up being sued by some gimp-legged burglar who will swear he was a lost Bible salesman who only wanted to use your telephone.

British to grant strikers' demands

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government says it is going to grant some of the demands of the IRA hunger strikers now that they have ended their fast.

One newspaper reported the guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army and its ally the Irish National Liberation Army would not get what they want most, the right for prisoners to associate freely with each other. But another said this demand would be partially satisfied.

The government's Northern Ireland Office said it would announce within days changes in the regulations for prisons in Northern Ireland that have been approved by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her Cabinet.

The Times of London predicted that the government would meet two of the hunger strikers' five demands — the right for prisoners to wear their own clothes and the restoration of parole time lost because of participation in protests. It said the prisoners would also be given some freedom of association.

But the conservative Daily Telegraph, which supports Mrs. Thatcher, said the government would refuse to grant free association.

The hunger strikers' other two demands in their campaign to be treated as political prisoners or prisoners of war were the right to more visitors and mail and exemption from prison work.

Freedom of association was considered most important because it would create a POW-camp atmosphere in which IRA commanders could teach military tactics and instill discipline.

The Rev. Ian Paisley's hardline Protestant supporters were more upset by a report that some of the parole time would be restored. Prisoners in Northern Ireland receive a 50 percent reduction of sentence for good behavior, and restoration of this would men immediate release for 150 male prisoners from the Maze and 20 women from the Armagh Prison.

Sources close to the government said the government would probably give 20 percent time off, reducing the number eligible for release.

The IRA called off the seven-month-old hunger strike in the Maze Prison on Saturday after the families of five of the six men still fasting said they would order medical treatment to save their lives as soon as they lost consciousness. The fast began March 1, and 10 men starved to death.

The IRA accused the Roman Catholic church of undermining the strike by pressuring the strikers' families. It threatened more hunger strikes if it was not satisfied by the changes in prison regulations.

The British government refused to negotiate or make any concessions will the prisoners were fasting, contending that would legitimize the IRA's guerrilla war to end British rule in mostly Protestant Northern Ireland and unite the province with the predominantly Catholic Irish republic.

Catholics caught in the middle

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army accuses the Roman Catholic Church of undermining the hunger strike at the Maze Prison by pressuring families of the fasting prisoners to stop the dying.

But the church did not condemn the protest against nationalist guerrillas being treated as common criminals until four prisoners starved themselves to death.

The church itself has no links with the illegal guerrilla army and condemns the murderous tactics it has used in its 12-year campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland. But most of the guerrillas of the IRA's Provisional wing are recruited from the province's 500,000 Catholics, and they are fighting against the return to power of the million Protestants.

During the seven-month campaign for the equivalent of political prisoner status, the Catholic hierarchy was criticized by all sides. Government and Protestant leaders accused it of indecision. IRA sympthizers accused it of betrayal.

Catholics opposed to the IRA objected to priests giving the last rites and church burials to men they said were committing suicide in violation of the church's teaching.

The Rev. David Miles, national coordinator of Catholic Information Services in London, replied that the hunger strikers believed the republican cause was more important than the teachings of the church, and they were making a decision in "good conscience."

"The church gives the benefit of the doubt to the conscience of the person concerned and does not refuse its ministrations," he said.

When Bobby Sands was dying in May, Pope John Paul II sent a special envoy to try to get him to end his fast. The mission failed, but the emissary gave the first victim of the hunger strike a gold crucifix that he was reported clutching when he died.

Later that month, when Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher visited Belfast, the primate of All Ireland, Cardinal Tomas O Fiaich, declined an invitation to discuss the hunger strike with her. His office said he had important church engagements.

It was not until mid-June, after four hunger strikers had died, that the Irish church's leaders gave its first unequivocal condemnation of the fast. The bishops of both Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic issued a statement calling the hunger strike "evil" and condemning the "murder, bombing and street violence" that followed each death by fasting.

Humphrey Atkins, then the British cabinet minister for Northern Ireland, praised the statement in a conciliatory letter to O Fiaich.

As the strike dragged on without budging the British government and each death was followed by violence, most of it in Catholic districts, support waned among the Catholics. The strikers' families came to believe that more sacrifices would be futile.

Solidarity leaders attempt to avert cigarette strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leaders in dozens of Polish cities are trying to calm union members who want to strike over the doubling of cigarette prices, union organizers report.

Lech Walesa, the leader of the independent labor federation, asked the workers to delay all protests until Solidarity's congress decides on a response to the price increases that took effect Monday.

Delegates to the congress accused Walesa of "shakiness" after he proposed talks with the government talks on the price hikes. The government indicated it might lower prices of the more expensive brands if the union agreed to talk.

There was little public reaction to other price increases that went into effect Monday on trout, carp and processed fruit. But the Poles are among the heaviest smokers in the world, and prices after the increase range from 40 cents to $1.80 a pack for domestic cigarettes and up to $5 a pack for foreign brands.

"We firmly protest against any price increases without the approval of society," said workers in a statement from one of Poland's two biggest cigarette factories, in Krakow. "The government has gone from slithering price increases to provocative ones."

Union members from Silesia threatened protest strikes in the coal mines, Poland's chief earner of the foreign exchange needed for imports and payments on the $27 billion owed Western banks and governments.

Customers at tobacco kiosks reacted with hostility to the price hikes, vendors said, but they reported no violence.

"Look, there are three smokers in my family of five," said a man standing in line. "This increase will push us to the brink of bankruptcy."

A 25-year-old schoolteacher was angered by the suddenness of the increase, which was announced only two days before it took effect.

"They introduced it on the sly, and I think some advance knowledge of it would have removed some of the sting," he said.

Yasser Arafat to visit China

PEKING (AP) — Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, arrives Wednesday in Peking for four days of talks with Chinese leaders, who support the PLO and denounce Israel.

The official Xinhua news agency said today that Arafat is making an "official and friendly visit" at the invitation of the government. It will be Arafat's third visit to China. His first was in in 1964, his second in 1970.

BRANIFF STRIKE FORCE STUNS PASSENGERS WITH FREE TICKETS, CHAMPAGNE AND MORE!

"SURPRISE ATTACKS" TURN FLIGHTS INTO PARTIES ALL OVER THE U.S.

DALLAS-FORT WORTH — Last week, Braniff continued to strike back with some of the boldest strategies ever seen in the airline business. On selected Braniff flights between cities all over the U.S., passengers were shocked to find themselves enjoying free drinks or free champagne while people identified as "Braniff Strike Force" members handed out free airline tickets.

HUNDREDS WIN AIRLINE TICKETS TO HONOLULU, LONDON, ACAPULCO, MEXICO CITY AND ACROSS CONTINENTAL USA.

It all began last Tuesday, late in the morning, as the Braniff Strike Force made its first hit. Having secretly boarded Flight 18, between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington, they waited till the flight was aloft, and as the hostesses began serving free champagne, they shocked the passengers by handing each one a free certificate good for a future trip between any two Braniff cities in Mainland U.S. Passengers were stunned, but this was just the beginning.

That same day, other flights were hit. On the 5:45, Miami to Dallas-Fort Worth, passengers were surprised with free drinks, and two free trips were given away, one to Honolulu, the other to London. And the same things were happening simultaneously on flights out of Washington, Miami and Memphis.

Wednesday, additional strikes were reported out of Dallas-Fort Worth, New York and other cities. And Thursday and Friday saw more of the same.

All passengers received free champagne or free drinks, and many won trips to Mexico, Acapulco, Honolulu, London, and again, incredibly, several flights found every single passenger receiving free tickets for future trips on Braniff.

WHERE WILL BRANIFF STRIKE NEXT?

The question everyone is asking is, are those just isolated instances? And the answer, according to a Braniff spokesman, is "absolutely not! In fact, this is just the beginning!" And an unidentified Strike Force member added, "It can happen any time, any plane, any place." To better your chances of being on one of these flights, she suggested calling Braniff for reservations in Midland or Odessa at 563-3885. All other Texas cities call toll-free (800) 492-4300.

When pressed further for information on where Braniff would strike this week, she gave an enigmatic smile and replied, "at 30,000 feet."

Surprised Braniff passenger receiving free trip to Honolulu from unidentified Strike Force member.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, October 7, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress June Allyson celebrates her birthday today. Also born on this date: Vice President and third-party presidential candidate Henry A. Wallace (1888-1965). Your interest in art will bring you new pleasure and profit in the coming year. Beauty plays an important role in both business and romance. Your kind and sympathetic attitude helps restore harmony within the family circle. Do not be surprised if others sometimes mistake your natural reserve for shyness. Although you do not find it easy to form quick and casual friendships, your intellectual interests win you many loyal admirers. Your love life is on a smooth course. Avoid making impulsive decisions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to come to terms with loved ones over money. Romance has much to offer you now. Show confidence in yourself and others will rally around! Review work schedule.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Postpone travel: You may be able to achieve the same results by making phone calls and writing letters. Go ahead and reach out for help. Others are waiting for you to ask.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone offers support that he or she does not really intend to give. Do what you can to establish better lines of communication. You have the skills to come out on top!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Place more emphasis on getting your professional and personal life better organized. A financial decision will be made in your favor. Deal from a position of strength.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Push ahead full steam! Romance may be a bit unsettling; a long-term relationship could suddenly change. Be careful when dealing in real estate. Trust experts' advice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Others may be more objective than you are right now. Listen to the advice of an old friend who has your best interests at heart. The cash flow increases.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Direct more attention than usual to cementing deal. Do not let up on an artistic or creative project. Keep spending within reasonable limits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be prepared to accept additional responsibilities. New rewards are part of the picture. A hunch will pay off. Romance is in the air.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your creative talents come to the fore. Deal with any hostility in a mature manner. The financial outlook improves. Powerful influences are at work in your behalf.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An exchange of ideas with loved ones give you new hope for the future. Your social life gets a shot in the arm following a chance meeting with member of opposite sex.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not make excuses for others. Instead, help them to stand on their own feet. Discard any feelings of anger. Mate will be more enthusiastic than usual about entertainment plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romantic partner makes you happy by showing up unexpectedly. You need to clear up a financial matter. Loved one has an idea that proves to be the sensible thing to do.

This hand is from an international match almost 30 years ago. Study the play and decide whether declarer made a good play and why, or whether declarer was simply lucky.

Even by the most aggressive standards North's decision to make a limit jump raise is wildly optimistic. South had something to spare for his continuation to game.

West led the jack of clubs, Dummy's king lost to East's ace, and East cashed the queen of clubs before shifting to a diamond. Declarer won the king of diamonds and led the ace of spades, felling West's king. Declarer drew the remaining trumps, cashed the ace of diamonds and conceded a diamond to West's queen. West shifted to a heart, but it was too late. Declarer won the ace, entered his hand with a club ruff and discarded dummy's remaining heart on his high diamond. His only losers were two clubs and a heart.

Declarer was rather lucky to find a singleton king of trumps. He was even luckier that East chose to shift to a diamond rather than a heart, which would have left him with no play for his contract. Despite that, declarer made his contract because of a well reasoned play.

Declarer worked out that, even if East held the king of spades doubleton and it could be picked up with a finesse, he would go down if he used the ace of hearts as an entry for the trump finesse. When declarer later gave up a diamond trick, the defenders would be able to cash a heart trick to complete a one-trick set.

So declarer could not afford to expend the ace of hearts before his diamonds were set up. And he could not set up diamonds before drawing trumps, because that would need specifically a 3-3 break in the suit, which was unlikely in light of East's shift to a diamond at trick three.

Our compliments to those readers who reached the same conclusion.

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Sandra Day O'Connor drives past photographers as she arrives for her first day of work Monday at the Supreme Court in Washington. The first Monday in October is the traditional opening day of the high court.

Justice O'Connor handles first day with poise

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a dramatic moment in American history — the first time a woman has served on the bench of the U.S. Supreme Court — but Sandra Day O'Connor handled it with the same aplomb she exhibited during her Senate confirmation hearings.

As the court began its new term Monday, the 51-year-old former Arizona appeals court judge showed no reluctance in making her public debut as a working Supreme Court justice. Her first inquiry from the bench — regarding a complex offshore oil and natural gas leasing case — came little more than a half hour into the first oral argument.

"Mr. Silard, may I ask a question?" Justice O'Connor said at 10:46 a.m.

John Silard, arguing on behalf of the Energy Action Educational Foundation, already had asked several other justices to delay their questions until he finished a point. He did the same with the court's 102nd justice, saying: "Just a minute, your honor."

After answering a previous question from the bench, Silard invited Mrs. O'Connor to proceed.

"It isn't clear, is it, that even if California wins here, that the secretary (of the Interior) would use the bidding system California prefers," she asked. "The secretary would still be free to use other experiments."

Her question referred to California's bid in the case to obtain an offshore oil and natural gas leasing system that would yield greater revenue for the state. The views of the educational foundation Silard represents are essentially the same as those held by the state of California.

Silard elaborated on the various leasing systems available without ever specifically agreeing or disagreeing with Mrs. O'Connor's line of reasoning.

He finished his argument by looking directly at Mrs. O' Connor and saying he hoped the court's decision would grant "a new life to leasing."

Mrs. O'Connor began her work day shortly before 8 a.m., arriving at the court in a compact car.

When she took the bench for her first public working session, her husband, John J. O'Connor III, was sitting in the front of the courtroom. Nearby was Potter Stewart, whose retirement as a Supreme Court justice July 3 opened the way for President Reagan to keep his campaign promise to nominate the first woman to the high court.

Mrs. O'Connor was sworn in Sept. 25 after being confirmed unanimously by the Senate.

She had served a year and a half as a judge on the Arizona Court of Appeals and, before that, as a trial judge and state senator.

Hostility prompts Daniel to attend trial

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Former Texas Gov. Price Daniel Sr. says the hostility expressed toward his family during a bitter child custody fight prompted his appearance in the courtroom where his son's accused killer is on trial.

But defense attorneys argued Daniel acted as an "intimidating force" to prospective jurors who may be selected to decide the fate of his daughter-in-law, Vickie Daniel.

Mrs. Daniel, 34, is charged with murder in the Jan. 19 shooting death of her estranged husband at their sprawling ranch home outside this rural Southeast Texas town.

Daniel, patriarch of one of Texas' most prominent families, showed up Monday as jury selection began, but Jack Zimmermann, Mrs. Daniel's attorney, said the former governor's presence violated his client's rights.

Zimmermann argued the only remedy would be to dismiss the murder charge, but visiting State District Judge Leonard Giblin of Beaumont denied the motion, saying the list of prosecptive jurors daniel scanned was public record.

Last April, Daniel and his daughter, Jean Daniel Murph, of Richardson, unsuccessfully fought for custody of two small sons born during the couple's stormy four-year marriage. A jury unanimously agreed to let Mrs. Daniel keep her children.

When called to the stand during Monday's session, the elder Daniel recalled that one prospective juror said he would kill the entire Daniel family if given a gun.

"Anytime any prospective juror thinks he wants to kill the Daniel family, I think I ought to at least know so I can be on the lookout," Daniel said.

Daniel, a former Texas Suprememem Court justice who repeatedly challenged both defense attorneys and prosecutors on points of law, said he attended the openning session only as a "curious observer" and dismissed the notion that he and District Attorney Carroll Wilborn would confer later.

Wilborn also scoffed at Zimmermann's motion to dismiss charges, saying "If people can't come to a public courtroom and watch a trial, I don't know what it's here for. I don't want the Daniel family to have to go through this again."

The prosecutor also disclosed he planned to call as a witness Kimberly Moore, the 13-year-old daughter of Vickie by a previous marriage who was in the family home the night Daniel was killed by the bullet from a .22-caliber rifle.

Wilborn said he also would call Houston Family Law Judge Sam Emison, who presided at the custody trial, and the younger Daniel's ex-wife, Diane.

Minister lobbies to exempt school from regulation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, said Monday a minister whose church's "Christian academy" has drawn attention because of the alleged spanking of a 13-month-old baby lobbied this year to exempt such places from state regulation.

Whaley said the Rev. Jerry West, pastor of Pampa Baptist Temple, "spent some time in Austin lobbying for passage of this bill," which later was changed to apply to all private schools — both religious and secular.

The lawmaker said in a letter to all legislators that he arranged an hour-long conference in his office last session between West and a Texas Department of Human Resources staff member.

"In the name of religious freedom, Reverend West feels no one from the outside should have any control over their actions. Reverend (Lester) Roloff feels the same way — so did Jim Jones — so does Ayatollah Khomeini," Whaley said.

"History books are full of calamities created by over-zealous religious leaders.

"We are seeing a new wave of religious zealots that are trying to force their religious ideas on everyone, but at the same time claim religious freedom from any type of government control," Whaley said.

Pampa Baptist Temple's assistant pastor, James Franklin Means, was charged with misdemeanor assault last month in connection with the alleged spanking of a 13-month-old baby in the nursery operated by the church's Pampa Christian Academy.

The Department of Human Resources has asked Attorney General Mark White to seek a district court order closing the Pampa Christian Academy. Regional administrator of the DHR at Lubbock, said there have been two complaints of child abuse against the school.

Martin said the academy had been licensed by DHR but when West became pastor, it refused to allow DHR inspectors to make the annual examination required for renewal of the license.

Man wins fight against U.S. Postal Service

By R. BRIERLEY THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Karl Flail, deaf since childhood, had an excellent driving record, but even federal equal opportunity rules couldn't get him into the driver's seat of a Postal Service truck.

On Monday, however, Flail applied for the job again after word came that he won a two-year fight and the Postal Service had dropped regulations against hiring deaf truck drivers.

In abandoning the rule, the Postal Service conceded defeat against Flail's lawsuit that alleged the federal government had failed to abide by its own equal opportunity rule.

"I feel good," the 38-year-old newspaper compositor said in an interview via teletype from his Wanaque home before leaving for the Paterson post office to make an appointment for a postal driver's test.

"It is fair that the post office should hire deaf people. I am glad that I won the court case," said Flail, who shares the home with his wife, Mary Carolyn, and a daughter, Carrie, who also are deaf.

"There has been a settlement and the post office is lifting its requirement that had limited its driver requirements to people who were able to hear a conversational voice from 15 feet away," said Jeanne O'Neill, a Postal Service spokeswoman in Washington.

"The hearing requirement will remain in effect for drivers of trucks of five tons or more," she added.

In May 1979, the Postal Service wanted to put Flail in a letter-sorting job because of the hearing disability.

Flail, who has had an excellent driving record for more than 20 years, wanted a job on the road, said state Assistant Deputy Public Advocate Harriet Katz, who represented him in court.

He first complained to postal authorities and then to Deaf Advocates Inc. in North Hackensack, which enlisted the aid of the public advocate.

Ms. Katz filed a lawsuit one year ago and was moving to a trial before U.S. District Judge Frederick B. Lacey in Newark when postal authorities suggested a settlement during the summer. It was made final recently.

"The settlement will enable Mr. Flail to begin working as a mail carrier for the post office in Paterson," said Ms. O'Neill. "He will also receive seniority back to May 1979, when he was originally denied the job, and a back pay award."

She declined to specify an amount.

House to consider appropriations bill

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's call for additional spending cuts headed for its first congressional test today with House consideration of an appropriations bill that the administration says is hundreds of millions of dollars over budget.

Reagan's House allies argue that the $87.3 billion appropriations bill for the department's of Labor, Education and Health and Human Services must be trimmed.

"This bill is far in excess of what the president could be expected to sign into law," House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said in an interview Monday.

Reagan vowed last week to veto any "budget-busting" bills Congress sends him.

Michel said there is "no question there are enough votes (in the House) to sustain a veto," which requires a two-thirds vote to be overriden.

The House Democratic leadership, meanwhile, decided to offer an amendment which would reduce the bill by $74 million and technically bring it within the guidelines set by a preliminary budget resolution enacted by Congress in May.

Even with that action, however, the appropriation measure, which provides much of the money for the three Cabinet departments and related agencies, would exceed Reagan's March budget proposals, which the administration is using for its yardstick.

Republicans say the bill actually is about $800 million off the mark.

But Democrats reject the argument.

"We don't scorekeep against the president's March figures," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who heads a House Budget Committee task force on how appropriations bills compare with budget targets.

Even if $74 million were cut, Republicans wanted to send the measure back to the House Appropriations Committee for more work.

"More and more members are concluding that's the most practical way to achieve savings," Michel said.

To do that, Michel would have to use the same strategy to beat a 52-vote Democratic margin that gave Reagan earlier budget victories — keep the Republican ranks solid and attract a significant number of conservative Democrats.

"I think we've got a good shot at doing that," Michel said.

But there could be problems with holding moderate Republicans in line on this vote because the bill embodies many of the social programs they have argued against cutting further.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., the Budget Committee chairman, said sending the measure back to committee instead of offering a series of amendments to cuts the bill was the "easy way out."

Republicans "didn't want to hang their members out to dry" on hard votes, Jones said.

Michel acknowledged that he prefers to "get as much as you can with as little effort."

He added that the votes on the bill today, and on an agriculture appropriations bill to be considered Wednesday, will help Reagan's allies map strategy for getting the $13 billion in additional 1982 spending cuts and $3 billion in increased tax revenue proposed by the president.

A few "test runs" will be necessary to gauge sentiment for additional budget cuts and "see how many can walk the plank, so to speak," Michel said.

The Labor-HHS-Education measure is one of 13 appropriations bills that actually provide the government's spending authority for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. None of the bills has received final congressional approval and the government is operating under a stopgap measure that expires Nov. 20.

Italian government can keep paintings

ROME (AP) — The Italian government can keep a valuable collection of paintings seized four years ago from actress Sophia Loren in a dispute over export of currency and artwork, a Rome court says.

Loren

The third penal section of the Court of Cassation rejected Monday the last possible appeal by Miss Loren in the case.

Italian newspapers estimated the value of the paintings at $6.5 million. The collection includes a canvas by the Italian master Canaletto.

The paintings were seized from Miss Loren's villa in a suburb of Rome when she was being investigated on charges of illegal export of capital.

The actress was acquitted of the charges, but a judge ruled in February 1980 that she couldn't get her paintings back because the collection was never in her name but in that of a foreign company.

Italian press reports predicted the paintings, which are in storage in Milan, would be donated to Italian museums or sold at auction.

Miss Loren and her husband, producer Carlo Ponti, have given up Italian citizenship and live in France.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says "there is evidence" that Swedish diplomat Raoul Wallenberg is being imprisoned by the Soviets, and that the administration is "going to do everything in our power" to win his release.

Wallenberg, credited with saving the lives of more than 100,000 Jews in Hungary during World War II, on Monday was named an honorary American citizen by Reagan.

The president praised him as "the Swedish savior" and said: "What he did, what he accomplished was of biblical proportions."

Former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill is the only other person to be named an honorary citizen.

With U.S. cooperation, Wallenberg was assigned to the Swedish embassy in Budapest in 1944, and helped Jews escape at a time when thousands were being taken to Nazi extermination camps.

Despite his diplomatic standing, Wallenberg was seized by the Soviets in 1945. The Kremlin has said Wallenberg died in a Soviet jail.

Among those attending the ceremony were Wallenberg's sister and brother, Nina Lagergren and Guy von Dardel, Swedish Ambassador Wilhelm Wachtmesiter and a delegation of Senate and House members.

NEW YORK (AP) — Although her grandfather is appearing in a show just a few blocks up Broadway, actress Cathryn Harrison says she hasn't seen Rex Harrison in 10 years.

But Miss Harrison, a cast member of "The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby," adds that "we talk regularly on the phone."

The actress, who is the daughter of singer Noel Harrison, made her remarks Sunday night at a party following the opening of the 8½-hour, two-part play based on a tale by Charles Dickens.

Miss Harrison, in her 20s, says she hopes to see her grandfather while in New York, where he is starring in a revival of the musical he made famous — "My Fair Lady."

Hammer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industrialist Dr. Armand Hammer has taken charge of the president's Cancer Panel, promising to put some "business discipline" into the group.

Hammer, trained as a physician before he gained his fortune as a pioneer in trade with the Soviet Union and as an art collector, will head the three-member board that monitors the nation's $1 billion fight against cancer.

The 83-year-old board chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp. was sworn in Monday before an audience of 40 people in the office of Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker.

"I hope that our budget will not be cut," Hammer told reporters before the ceremony. "Originally there was talk of cutting it 20 percent. That would be a disaster."

The National Cancer Institute and other health research agencies were largely left untouched in the first round of Reagan's budget cuts, but they may be hit by his latest call for 12 percent cuts in most domestic programs.

Bordello's new movie location in Pflugerville

LAGRANGE, Texas (AP) — Like many a young boy who used to visit its famous bordello, this tiny Texas town has grown up — so much so that Hollywood has decided to film "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" somewhere else.

"LaGrange has changed so much and has modernized so much that it made it impossible" to film in the community, said Pat Wolf of the Texas Film Commission, which is helping Universal Studios embark on a $30 million film version of the hit Broadway show.

"LaGrange doesn't look like LaGrange any more," she said.

The cameras are to begin rolling this week and local reaction is mixed; the mayor says he couldn't care less, but the Chamber of Commerce sees the move as a lost opportunity for business.

Universal has picked a white Victorian farmhouse in Pflugerville, about 100 miles northwest of LaGrange, to portray the Chicken Ranch — the disorderly house that introduced LaGrange to America.

Ms. Wolf said several new office buildings in LaGrange, population 3,500, ruined the country setting that movie officials were seeking, and Stan Brosette, a Universal publicist, said he found LaGrange "kind of drab" and said Pflugerville "is pretty and old and pleasing to the eye."

●

Besides, he said, LaGrange lacked facilities required by the large crew. Among the stars are Dolly Parton, Burt Reynolds and Dom DeLuise.

"I don't think they have a Hilton in LaGrange," Brosette said.

However, Pflugerville is a sleepy town north of Austin which has fewer than 800 people, one major intersection and no business district.

The bordello operated in the same building from 1915 until 1975, when it was closed by the state after Houston television reporter Marvin Zindler did an expose. It ran with the private acquiesence of public officials and its last madam, Miss Edna Milton, would accept produce — such as chickens — from her farm customers, giving the place its name.

Larry King's musical, and the movie, are about the confrontation between fictional versions of Zindler, Miss Edna and Waller County Sheriff "Big Jim" Flournoy.

LaGrange Mayor Charles Jungmichael said the decision to film in Pflugerville "doesn't make any difference to me.... I don't see how that kind of publicity would help our city any. We've got enough problems down here without that thing."

But Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Marian Butts said "there is only one LaGrange."

"I really think they will be missing something. I'm from LaGrange, and I don't think they could find a better place than LaGrange."

But Brosette said, "this is a movie, not a historical documentary."

"We could go to Czechoslovakia if it looked right. We are not trying to copy every detail."

Indeed, the scenic farmhouse picked to portray the bordello is a far cry from the rundown, one-story building that housed the real Chicken Ranch and still stands.

Meanwhile, in Pflugerville, "some people are pretty upset" by the filming, said resident Robert Fox. "But I'm waiting to see the pretty girls. I haven't seen one yet."

Affiliated Publications to build satellite facility

BOSTON (AP) — Affiliated Publications, parent company of The Boston Globe, has announced it will build a $36 million satellite production facility for the newspaper on a 13-acre site north of here as part of a $45 million capital expansion plan.

The printing plant will go into operation in 1984 with an initial capacity of 140,000 papers an hour and a potential for doubling the number, the company announced Monday.

It added that $9 million will be spent to modernize the newspaper's Boston plant.

The new plant was needed to accomodate The Globe's anticipated growth and expansion throughout New England, the company said.

Affiliated also announced it has entered into a joint-venture agreement with McCaw Communications Inc. of Bellevue, Wash., to purchase two West Coast companies — a cable television firm and microwave common carrier.

Midlander receives scholarship

AUSTIN — Julian David Rivas of Midland was one of 118 entering freshman and transfer students to receive scholarships at the annual scholarship banquet sponsored by The University of Texas Ex-Student's Association here Sept. 2.

Rivas received an Alumni Scholarship, which is part of the Texas Exes' program to recruit outstanding students to attend the university. All of the Alumni Scholars were ranked in the upper 25 percent of their classes.

Survivors include his wife, Ethel Jackson of Midland; a stepson Don Simon of Midland; a stepdaughter, Dee Ann Hurley of Irwin; seven grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

The family request memorials be directed to the St. Ann's ☆Episcopal Church in Lake Worth or to one's favorite charity.

Indian Ocean arms to be beefed up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon soon will increase stockpiles of weapons, ammunition and other supplies in the Indian Ocean area, a move that will enable a Marine brigade to fight twice as long in a crisis there.

Three ships are being loaded at a military terminal near Southport, N.C., and will sail this month to join seven other storage vessels stationed near the British-owned island of Diego Garcia, some 2,300 miles from the Persian Gulf, Marine officials.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the material aboard the three additional ships would increase from 15 to 30 days the length of time in which a Marine brigade, flown to the region in an emergency, could fight without being resupplied from the United States.

This is considered critical because the first few weeks of fighting could determine the outcome of any battle to keep the Soviets or any other hostile force from overrunning Persian Gulf oilfields.

The Pentagon has designated a 12,000-man Marine air-ground task force based in California as the first major combat unit that would be deployed to the Indian Ocean area if the need arose to defend U.S. interests there.

In a crisis, the Marine force would be air-lifted to a position near its objective. There, according to the officials, it would draw tanks, artillery, fuel and other supplies and equipment unloaded from the depot ships with which the Marine unit would rendezvous at a friendly port.

The plan also provides for deploying several Air Force fighter squadrons and some supporting Army elements from the United States to back up the Marine brigade unit, the officials said.

The three ships now being loaded for the long voyage to the Indian Ocean include a conventional cargo vessel and two ships carrying supply-laden barges.

Some cargo will be carried in 20-foot-long containers which can be lifted with relative ease onto landing craft.

The first seven depot ships were sent to their anchorage near Diego Garcia a little more than a year ago. They include three vessels designed so that heavy vehicles and rolling stock can be driven directly onto a beach or a dock rather than being lifted laboriously by cranes.

The Marine brigade force and supporting Air Force and Army units are the lead elements of a Rapid Deployment Force begun by the Carter administration in response to a perceived Soviet threat to the oil-producing lands around the Persian Gulf.

Young seeks Atlanta mayor spot

ATLANTA (AP) — Election officials predicted more than half of Atlanta's registered voters would turn out today as former United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young and six other candidates vied for mayor.

Mayor Maynard Jackson, the city's first black chief executive, is barred by law from seeking a third consecutive term. He has thrown his support behind Young, a 49-year-old former civil rights leader and former congressman.

There also were predictions that votes would be cast along racial lines in the non-partisan election.

"Blacks will vote for their candidates. Whites will vote for theirs. If there's a 10 percent crossover, I'd be very surprised," said Atlanta pollster Claibourne Darden.

Fulton County Elections Supervisor Tom Malone forecast a larger voter turnout than when Jackson was re-elected in 1977 with only 42 percent going to the polls.

"I expect we'll have a 50 to 55 percent turnout this time," Malone said. "There's a little more interest this time since we're electing a new mayor."

Malone said he was basing his prediction on the fact that some 3,300 absentee ballots have been requested for the election, which he said indicated a turnout of more than 50 percent.

If none of the candiates wins a majority of today's vote, the top two candidates will square off in an Oct. 27 runoff election.

Young, who held the U.N. post during the Carter administration, predicted Monday that he would win the election without a runoff by capturing 53 percent of the vote.

Other candidates are state Rep. Sidney Marcus, a liberal white businessman with a 13-year record representing the Atlanta area in the Legislature; Fulton County Commissioner A. Reginald Eaves, a black former Atlanta public safety commissioner; Warren Shulman, a white attorney who has actively courted the city's conservative and Republican voters; state Rep. Mildred Glover, 46; Socialist Workers Party candidate Andree Kahlmorgan, 29, and businessman John Thompson, 42.

The election also features races for city council president, 18 council seats and nine posts on the city school board, as well as confirmation votes for five City Court judges, one Municipal Court judge and the city solicitor.

Atlanta has some 191,000 registered voters, about 56 percent of whom are black. When Jackson first was elected in 1973, about 49 percent of the city's registered voters were black.

Albuquerque voters to choose mayor

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Albuquerque voters were lining up at the polls today as scheduled to elect a mayor after a district judge denied two attempts to delay the election.

The action Monday by Judge Rozier Sanchez, who cited the "terrible injustice" that postponement would be to the voters and candidates, will not be appealed, said the parties who had filed the suits seeking the delay.

The two 11th-hour lawsuits had been brought against the city, protesting the addition of Thomas Lance to the mayoral ballot.

Mayoral candidate G.P. Reyes sued late Friday, and Anastacio Torres, a citizen active in the Republican Party, sued soon after the courthouse opened Monday.

Reyes was requesting a temporary restraining order, posponing the election until a new drawing for ballot position could be held. Torres was protesting that adding Lance to the ballot violated four different state election laws.

Lance was placed on the ballot in the 10th, and last, position in an emergency reprogramming over the weekend of the 305 voting machines set up for the election.

He had sued the city last week, contending he was wrongly kept off the ballot because the city clerk used an outdated voter registration list to check his nominating petition.

His suit was settled when the city agreed to add his name to the ballot under the supervision of representatives of the League of Women Voters.

Sanchez, who last Friday approved the plan to add Lance to the ballot, hurried his ruling Monday against Torres and Reyes to allow them time to appeal further. But he refused to delay the election.

"If the election were delayed for even one day, the public could refuse to go to the polls," Sanchez said.

City Attorney George Bryan had argued that the election, if delayed, could not be held again until Dec. 15 and that it would cost the city another $100,000 to reschedule it.

Reyes' attorney, Jeffrey Dahl, argued that the agreement between Lance and the city to place the candidate in the 10th position violated state election law and infringed on Reyes' First Amendment rights to free speech.

Torres said he joined Reyes' suit because he would like to see the letter of the law carried out.

Voting Rights supporters cheered by House vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of an indefinite extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act are hoping resistance in the Senate will be overcome by the size of their victory in the House, which approved the action on a 389-24 vote.

Democrats Monday pushed through the tough extension of the civil rights law, generally considered the most successful approved during the 1960s, rejecting several amendments proposed by conservative Republicans that would ease the federal government's authority to enfoce voting rights.

As approved, the extension includes continuation of a pre-clearance procedure under which all of nine states and parts of 13 others must ask the Justice Department permission before changing voting law or regulations. Many, but not all of the states, are in the South.

But the measure also permits the 22 covered states and hundreds of counties within them to "bail out" or escape from federal supervision if they can prove their minority voting records have improved and they no longer have discriminatory voting practices.

The issue probably will not come up in the Republican-dominated Senate until early next year.

While the House debated voting rights, the Senate Armed Services Committee heard the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff say he "remains to be convinced" President Reagan's plan to base MX missiles in existing but strengthened silos would protect them from Soviet attack.

Air Force Gen. David Jones said the decision to put the MX in Minuteman and Titan silos was made despite his preference for a plan by which the missiles would be shuttled among new shelters in Nevada and Utah, a system intended to prevent the Soviet Union from being able to find and destroy them.

Jones said he was speaking only for himself.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said the administration will not reconsider its "firm, final decision" to house MXs in old silos pending further basing decisions in the mid 1980s.

He maintained that placing the first 36 MX missiles in "hardened" concrete silos will "give us the strongest possible deterrent forces as quickly as we can get them." Reagan proposed a total of 100 of the missiles, but didn't say how the other 64 would be based.

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., urged Congress to reject the MX proposal as well as the 100 B-1 bombers the administration wants to build as part of its $180.3 billion defense modernization program.

On another major armaments question, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that opponents of the administration's proposed $8.5 billion Saudi Arabian arms sales, including five AWACS radar planes, are "irresponsible in the extreme."

Reagan, meanwhile, unveiled a statement from 16 former defense and foreign-policy officials supporting the sale.

Cruise missile plan has drawbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decision to place nuclear warhead cruise missiles on attack submarines has good points but some possible drawbacks, says NATO Commander Gen. Bernard Rogers.

In a discussion Monday with reporters, Rogers said the decision "will give some ammunition" to Europeans who oppose deployment of new U.S. long-range missiles on their continent and prefer to strengthen NATO by basing any new weapons at sea instead of on land.

The United States is prodding NATO to carry out a 1979 decision to station 572 new U.S. ground-launched cruise missiles and Pershing II ballistic missiles in Europe starting in 1983 to counter the Soviet Union's new SS-20 mobile land missiles.

Rogers said he believes nuclear cruise missiles aboard attack submarines would be a less visible demonstration of the alliance's resolve to counter a growing Soviet missile threat to Western Europe.

However, he said Reagan's decision on basing the missiles on submarines is "a good idea from the standpoint of demonstrating U.S. resolve" to overcome a perceived overall U.S. nuclear disadvantage.

"I carry water on both shoulders," Rogers said of Reagan's decision, which was part of a complex package the administration announced Friday on revamping U.S. strategic forces.

Regarding the continuing movement in Poland seeking more independence from the Soviet Union, Rogers said he has received authority from alliance political leaders to take any "prudent precautionary defensive measures" if the Soviets invaded.

He said he requested and received the permission last December so that "we won't be surprised and we will be in a position to prevent any spillover" by troops from Eastern Europe into WesternlEurope.

Rogers said there is no possibility of any action by NATO countries to help the Poles in the event of a Soviet invasion.

Awards luncheon salutes 75 hospital volunteers

Seventy-five volunteers were presented award pins at the annual luncheon of the Women's Auxiliary Inc. of Midland Memorial Hospital.

Over 100 persons attended the event at Green Tree Country Club.

Mrs. Jimmy Davis, outgoing president, "held court" over the event. Other outgoing officers were Mrs. Reg Lyle, first vice president; Mrs. Mickey Cappadonna, second vice president; Mrs. Tom Wilkerson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Dick Baxter, treasurer; and Mrs. Philip Whealdon, recording secretary.

New officers introduced include Mrs. Lyle, president; Mrs. Baxter, first vice president; Mrs. Ed Hooper, second vice president; Mrs. Thomas Ingram, recording secretary; Mrs Flake Thompkins, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Robert Ketter, treasurer.

Robert Hopkins from the First Baptist Church gave the invocation.

A style show narrated by Joan Henry included a showing of fall fashions from Grammer-Murphey. Models who walked the fashion runway to the piano music of Dodie Tweelings, hospital volunteer, were Gloria Eng, Jan Kalil, Shawna Seltzer and Becky Sullivan.

Following the show, Mrs. Davis introduced members of the hospital administration, past presidents and auxiliary officers.

A. C. Buchanan, vice president of operations at Midland Memorial Hospital, presented the 75 awards given for hours of service to the hospital.

In the president's annual report, Mrs. Davis told of the auxiliary's progress over the past 18 months. She reported that three new services have been added to the program, and they are in the Allison Cancer Treatment Center, Laboratory and Pediatric Toys for the Cancer Center.

The auxiliary currently has 174 active members, 86 contributing members and six honorary members. Income is derived from the Gift Shop in the hospital, dues, camera project, vending machines, uniforms and other miscellaneous sources.

During the past 19 months, the auxiliary has purchased and donaed to the hospital several pieces of equipment valued at over $107,000. Since 1950, the auxiliary has given $447,912.75 to Midland Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Davis discussed another main project of the auxiliary, the scholarship program. In the past 19 months, five scholarships have been awarded to the following persons: Rhonda Mack (who applied for and received the award twice), Diane Ham, Tina Thomas and Susan Warfield. These scholarships are awarded to girls who are interested in a nursing career.

Six members of the auxiliary are members of the Texas hospital auxiliary association and include Jere Hubbard, Doris Howbert, Joan Henry, Nada Baulch, Joan Cramer and Mrs. Davis.

Following her report, Mrs. Davis introduced Mrs. Lyle as new president and new officers were installed by Ray Branson, president of Midland Memorial Hospital.

Branson also spoke to the group, asking its help in setting objectives for the hospital in the years to come. He also told the group that he wanted more input from the auxiliary in deciding the hospital's objectives and expressed his appreciation to the group for its work.

Mrs. Davis was presented with a past president's pin by Mrs. Lyle, who then introduced the new executive board.

Awards presented included the following:

13,500 hours — Corinne Barley and Carole Hobbs.

8,500 hours - Eulalia Geisler.

6,000 hours - Dorothy Davis and Dixie Osborne.

5,000 hours - Betty Tull.

3,500 hours - Jerry Cappadonna, Beth Elderkin and Joan Henry.

3,000 hours - Verneta Baxter, Norma Baumann and Helen Cronenberg.

2,500 hours - Lorene Jones, Dorothy Matthews, Florence Mailey, Harriett Reaves and Dorothy Steinman.

2,000 hours - LaRae Aaron, Mary Cox, Mary Wood, Jane Wyant and Marge Shoemaker.

1,500 hours- Jean Blanchard, Della Campbell, Sandra Hyer, Jimmie Hollis, and Virginia Lyle.

1,000 hours - Martha Lou Birchum, Charlene Bridgeman, Janis Cappadonna, Jackie Ingram, Lois Parker, Jack Potter, Mary Parmer, Beverly Horst, Florence Whealdon, Pat Causey and Winn Stovall.

500 hours - Ginny Ketter, Janice Kubica,, Jessie Loach, Nelda McDuffy, Betty Morrison, Norma Robb, Ardis Smith, Connie Thacker, Ann Westerman, Sandy Wilkerson, Monette Hicks and Marilyn Hooper.

100 hours - Pat Barker, Kaylene Burgard, Marilyn Crowley, Clarice Douthitt, Sue Ellison, Nellie Fischer, Helena Gaston, Ann Goff, Janet Huebner, Kay Holder, Reva Kilgore, Modelle McCright, Freda Masdon, Ruth Newton, Deborah Pierce, Marilyn Richardson, Patti Rosignol, Sara Rotan, Dee Schiemenz, Betty Seeker, Betty Spry, Nancy Stafford, Blanche Tilley, Doris Tompkins, Darla Tucker and Marilyn Volpe.

Decorations committee members were Janice Kubica, Betty Tull and Norma Robb.

...WEEK OF OCT. 5-11 has been set aside as National Family Sexuality Education Week. Permian Basin Planned Parenthood is sponsoring the week in the Permian Basin.

Parents are the most important sex educators of children, Planned Parenthood stresses, but often because of embarrasment or fear that they have to be experts they pass up the opportunity to talk openly with their own children. The child's friends often end up providing the "answers," and in this way a lot of misinformation is passed around. The young person then is likely to become involved in experimentation with sex with little real knowledge of the risks and responsibilities involved. Myths such as "You're too young to get pregnant" or "You can only get pregnant if you want to" lead teenagers to believe they are safe from pregnancy when they are not.

Last year one out of every 10 teenage girls became pregnant, most of the time unintentionally.

National Family Sexuality Education Week is combating the myth that exposure to sexual information leads to promiscuous behavior. According to Planned Parenthood, just the opposite is true: ignorance leads to curiosity and experimentation, usually without responsibility. Most parents agree that they should give information about sex to their children, but they would like to feel more comfortable discussing it. About 98 percent say that they need some help in knowing how to talk about this difficult subject, according to the local Planned Parenthood.

Planned Parenthood assists parents in talking with their children about sex through programs open to the public, films available to community groups, free booklets and a resource center with a variety of books and other materials. For more information, contact your local Planned Parenthood office at 563-2530...

DEAR ABBY

Cure for stinginess won't come cheap

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: All my life I have been very cheap, and the older I get, the cheaper I get, but I can't seem to help it. I am now 41, and I know that my friends and co-workers must talk about me behind my back. It's beginning to bother me.

I have enough money, so that's not the reason I'm cheap, but I go out of my way to avoid picking up a check, and sometimes I even lie and say I don't have any money with me.

What makes me act this way? And how can I get over it? — CHEAP IN TRENTON, N.J.

DEAR CHEAP: There is undoubtedly a deep-rooted psychological reason why you and your money are seldom parted. However, if you are sufficiently motivated to get over your cheapness, you can do it, but it won't be cheap. Through psychotherapy (here we go again!), you can be conditioned to loosen up.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column in the Delaware State News, a faithful girl Friday, signing herself "Lakewood, Calif.," said her boss said he would give her $200 if she could guess within $200 the price of an elegant sofa shown in a magazine.

"Lakewood" said her guess was $2800. The boss said the price was $3000 and refused to give her the $200, saying that her guess was just $1 low.

You concurred with her calculation that $2800 is within $200 of the $3000, but I think she missed it by a whisker — Abe Lincoln's whisker on a penny, that is.

To be within $200 of $3000, her guess would have had to be at least $2800. The boss was wrong, too. Her guess was 1 cent low instead of $1. — PICAYUNE PENNY IN DOVER, DEL.

DEAR PICAYUNE PENNY: Picky, picky, picky! Others (but not many) wrote to nail me on the error. As a "Promotor of Precise Phraseology" in San Francisco pointed out, the secretary's error was not in MATH, it was in ambiguous LANGUAGE.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter offering some informative tips on how to treat people who are blind, you listed many things the blind can do for themselves. However, you failed to mention one sport enjoyed by the blind that most people find truly amazing: downhill skiing!

Here in Aspen, Colo., there is a program called BOLD (Blind Outdoor Leisure Development), with about 125 trained local guides who guide sightless people wherever they want to ski on the mountain. We provide them with skiing lessons free, as well as rental equipment at no cost to them if they wish. We even take them out for evenings of "apres-ski." We help about 50 blind skiers a winter. — ROBERT E. LYON, SNOWMASS, COLO.

DEAR ROBERT: Kudos to you and those with the BOLD program.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that the child we adopted when he was 5 weeks old is now 30 and has leukemia. He is doing fairly well on chemotherapy pills, but his doctor says he may have to have a bone marrow transplant from a compatible person — meaning a blood relative.

Of course, since he is adopted I will need to know how to reach his birth mother if he is to have a transplant. Whom should I contact in the city of his birth in order to trace his birth mother? I'm sure there must be lawyers or agencies that do this. — NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Get in touch with the adoption agency that placed the child with you. In some (but not in all) states, it will cooperate. Also write to ALMA, P.O. Box 154, Washington Bridge Station, New York, N.Y. 10033, and list your name. This organization does an excellent job of "matching" adoptees with their natural parents when all parties concerned are eager to be reunited.

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

World Service Day observed by Lioness 700

Lioness 700 Club in Midland observed annual World Service Day Saturday by entertaining residents at Sage Health Care Center in Midland.

Lions Club throughout the world celebrates one day in October each year by conducting a service project at that time.

Oct. 5 is the date set aside as World Service Day in 1982.

In Midland, a fellowship time with refreshments, visits and group singing was held Saturday. Residents were presented with "dust mitts" made by club members to assist the residents in dusting and cleaning their rooms and possessions.

The afternoon of entertainment and fellowship at Sage Center has become an annual affair for the Lioness 700 Club. Officers of the group are Paula Ketchum, president; Lisa Drummond, vice president; Cindra Rankin, secretary-treasurer; an Betty Whitmire, newsletter and publicity.

Clinic treats binge eaters

BOSTON (AP) — Depressed by a death in the family, job stress or a broken love affair, they gorge themselves on food, then ingest massive doses of laxatives or induce vomiting to empty their stomachs.

Victims of bulima, or the "binge-purge syndrome," are often covering some psychological ailment, and researchers say the affliction is becoming increasingly common among young Americans, particularly women.

As many as one of every five women in American colleges are victims of the syndrome to some degree, according to medical researchers. To combat the problem, Massachusetts General Hospital has established an eating disorders clinic.

About 20 percent of the women attending the clinic have a related ailment, anorexia nervosa, a disorder stemming from a compulsive desire to be thin and leading to virtual self-starvation.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Baby hints for mommies

DEAR HELOISE:

I have to say thanks a zillion for me and my son (who is 10 months old) for all of the great baby hints you've printed from your family of readers!

I've discovered two things which I think might be helpful to other mommies.

For the great collection of sweaters and hats that infants receive, I purchased a skirt hanger — the type that holds four to five skirts using clips on each rung.

Each clip holds a sweater by the shoulder seams. The matching cap can be clipped with the sweater.

I keep mine in the hall closet so when we're in a rush to get going — and aren't we always — I don't have to hunt through dresser drawers, etc. Sets stay together too.

Also, instead of taking up precious diaper bag space with a large container of baby powder, or spending a mint on the tiny ones, I put the powder into a small spice bottle — one with shaker holes and a screw-on plastic lid. — Michelle Wood

WHAT'S IN A NAME

Dear Heloise: Help! How is your name pronounced? I've heard, He'loyce, Hel'loyce, Hel'louise, Helo'ise.

I enjoy quoting you, so would appreciate knowing how to pronounce your name correctly. — Evelyn Rohlfsen

+ + +

Oh! Bless your heart! I know a lot of folks have gotten their tongues tangled up over my name, but if you'll remember to say Hello-ease, you'll have it right.

However, as long as you take the time to think of me, it matters not to me how you pronounce it! But, I love you for trying! — Heloise

SHOWER CURTAIN FIXER

Dear Heloise: I've found that the nicest way to repair torn shower curtain holes is to use filament tape — the filmy, reinforced tape used in taping packages for mailing, etc.

Use a paper hole punch for the shower rings and it will last forever. — Ruh Cox

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: When you have a cut on the top of your finger, instead of wrapping an adhesive bandage strip around it and wrinkling the end, cut a slit in the center of each end of the tape to within one-fourth inch of each other at the middle.

Then, hold the bandage part of the tape over the tip of the finger and wrap the four adhesive strips diagonally around in the opposite direction, crossing one another so the center of the tape conforms to the shape of the fingertip. — H.L. Cobb

+ + +

Neat! — Heloise

BEDWETTER

LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

Back to basics

By ERMA BOMBECK

There's a movement underfoot to make college students literate.

What will they think of next.

The general consensus is that advanced education has swung too far toward specialized studies and needs to get back to courses that prepare students for life.

I couldn't agree more. That's why I was delighted to see the following courses on my son's senior schedule.

Remedial Bicycle Watching: (3 hours) Designed for the novice who has had three bicycles ripped off in five years. Bring chains, locks, small explosives and detonator. Bicycles will be furnished.

Is There Life After Lunch?: (3 hours) A seminar with guest lecturers who outline advantages of staying awake to participate in cleaning room, soaking laundry, doing required reading, and in the final quarter adding a class or two.

Letter Writing Block And How To Solve It: (1 hour) A creative approach to writing letters home that do not start with cliches like, "Thank your lucky stars when your son says he is busted and only means he is out of money." Workbooks and tapes extra.

Your Car And Faith Healers: (2 hours) A frank look at automobile mechanics who promise to fix your transmission by adding water. As a bonus, Dr. Weingard Schuyler, Heart Institute, will once again conduct a class on how to survive an insurance premium notice where a claim has just been filed.

Parent Weekend: Religious Experience Or End Of the World As You Know It: (CRASH COURSE) How to make a roommate of the opposite sex disappear. How to decorate with books and pencils. How to arrange for instant enrollment. Applicants will be screened according to level of need. Guaranteed to give new meaning to "Have a good day."

Jogging for Bodies: (5 hours) A fun approach to physical fitness in which warm-ups are eliminated and the emphasis is on meeting girls/boys. Applicants should be able to talk and jog at the same time.

Someone the other day said they feared that general education would promote intellectual conformity and a sterile acquiescence for the sake of social cohesion.

I asked my son about that.

He said he is taking Social Cohesion and the History of Perrier next semester.

Officials consider Lindbergh files

By R. BRIERLEY THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey State Police files on the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby that were kept secret nearly 50 years are to be reviewed today by state officials who will consider whether to make them public.

Anna Hauptmann, 83, widow of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, who was electrocuted in 1936 for the abduction and slaying of the son of the late aviator Charles Lindbergh, filed a freedom-of-information lawsuit last week seeking access to the files. She claims the information will prove her husband innocent.

At the hearing at state police headquarters here will be Gov. Brendan Byrne, Attorney General James Zazzali, and David Wilentz, the former state attorney general who prosecuted Hauptmann in 1935, Byrne's office said. There was no indication when a decision would be made.

The files come to 90,000 pages. Also covered for inspection by the lawsuit are the child's clothing and the ladder alleged to have been used in the abduction.

John Farmer, a spokesman for Byrne, said the governor was considering an executive order granting Mrs. Hauptmann access to the files. Farmer said the order also would open the files to a Maine man who claims to be the child.

"I don't know what will happen, we're still working on it," Farmer said Monday.

Byrne has urged Zazzali to open the records. But an aide to Zazzali said the state police might not be able to meet Byrne's request without a special order because investigative files are not considered public records.

Reliable sources who wished to remain anonymous said the order would make the records available to those who have filed freedom of information suits against the state.

Such suits are pending by Mrs. Hauptmann and by Kenneth Kerwin, 51, of Biddeford, Maine, one of two men claiming to be the oldest child of Charles and Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

Hauptmann was convicted of taking the 20-month-old child from the Lindbergh mansion in Hopewell in 1932 and killing him.

Mrs. Hauptmann and Kerwin both are represented by Robert Bryan, a San Francisco lawyer, who claims he has enough evidence to file a suit for the widow that would prove her husband innocent.

Col. Clinton Pagano, the state police superintendent, said authorities recently reconstructed the evidence against Hauptmann and "I am convinced it shows the right man was convicted."

Wilentz, who was reluctant to discuss the case for many years, said last week he wouldn't object to revealing the files.

New Jersey's State Police Superintendent Clinton Pagano poses with one of the more than nine cases of Lindbergh kidnap trial evidence at State Police Headquarters on Friday. Gov. Brendan Byrne, the State Attorney General and former Attorney General David Wilentz will examine the documents today.

New GAO head no stranger to Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charle& A. Bowsher, the new head of the General Accounting Office, is no stranger to the Washington establishment he must police or the politicians he must please.

Confirmed by the Senate by a 99-0 vote last week, the Elkhart, Ind., native was to be sworn in today by Vice President George Bush, who presides as Senate president.

Bowsher enters his new job with a mandate from President Reagan to expand the GAO's efforts to make government more efficient.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, has shed its image as strictly an accounting agency. In recent years, it has concentrated on determining whether government is working — and in pointing out areas where money is being wasted.

Although the GAO is a congressional agency, Bowsher was appointed by Reagan. He will serve a 15-year term, replacing Elmer Staats, who retired.

Bowsher enters his new job with some helpful experience. An accountant by profession, he has worked not only with the federal bureaucracy but also with the politicians in Congress since coming to Washington from Chicago 14 years ago.

Bowsher's first job was assistant secretary of the Navy for financial management. Nominated by Lyndon B. Johnson, he was reappointed when Richard M. Nixon took office and served in that job until 1971.

The 50-year-old Hoosier returned to his accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. in 1971. Since then he has specialized in public service accounting — a job that has taken him into several major departments and agencies.

In 1976, his firm was chosen to provide accounting help for both the Democrats and Republicans in the presidential campaign and Bowhser was placed in charge of supervising compliance with federal election laws.

Millionaire's tax deduction cut

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Tax Court is sharply reducing a tax deduction claimed by a multimillionaire who sold a replica of the yacht America to the Merchant Marine Academy alumni association.

The court upheld an Internal Revenue Service finding that S. Prestley Blake of Somers, Conn., should pay $632,995 in back taxes and penalties for 1973 through 1976. The IRS was overruled on another $15,968 in penalties.

The court said Blake must pay tax on the increased value of stock that he gave to the academy's Kings Point Fund — stock that was sold and the proceeds used to pay Blake for the 106-foot schooner. In testimony, Blake conceded that the chief purpose of the gift was to pave the way for disposing of the yacht.

Blake's "dominant objective for these interrelated transactions was to dispose of the America; it was not to make a gift of stock to the fund," wrote Judge Arnold Raum.

Blake received $685,000 cash for the yacht; the court found the fair value of the vessel was only $375,000 and allowed a deduction for that amount.

The philantropist's tax troubles in connection with the yacht didn't begin when he, in effect, gave it away. Blake tried without avail to write off as a business expense the cost of operating the yacht, claiming he was running a charter service.

The court ruled: "We are thoroughly satisfied on all the evidence that the acquisition and operation of the America was not a profit-oriented venture. The vessel was acquired for the pleasure and gratification of Mr. Blake. He used it extensively, although the evidence shows that he did not always derive the pleasure that he had hoped for."

According to court records, Blake's wholly owned corporation, S.P. Blake, Inc., bought the yacht in November 1972 for $500,000. The boat is a replica of a yacht built in 1851, after which the America's Cup is named. The replica is best known as the veseel used to promote Schaefer beer.

Blake entered into a charter agreement with a yacht management firm, which prepared a proposed schedule of charters. But during the more than two years that Blake owned the yacht, the judge said, it was chartered to an outsider for only one week, for $5,500 plus expenses.

Court records indicate that the boat was in almost constant need of repair and that Blake was so dissatisfied that he decided to give it to charity.

In March 1975, he gave 35,000 shares of Friendly Ice Cream Corp. stock to the Kings Point Fund. The fund directors noted at the time that the donation was "to be used for the purchase of the yacht America and her maintenance."

The stock was sold for $701,689. On April 25, the fund paid Blake $685,000 of that amount for the boat.

Blake and a brother started Friendly Ice Cream Corp. in the mid-1930s on a $547 loan. The Blake family owned about 45 percent of the total shares of stock when the firm was sold in 1978 for $162 million, according to court records.

Because Blake originally paid only $98 for stock that was sold for $685,000, he will have to pay tax on the $684,902 difference.

'Son of Sam' cited in criticizing benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is citing the $350 monthly benefits paid to the "Son of Sam" to criticize the payment of benefits to people who, in his opinion, are not entitled to them.

"Doesn't it sort of strike you strange that Son of Sam, serving that 75-year sentence up there for all his murders, is getting $350 a month from disability, Social Security, because they say he's incapable of holding a job?" Reagan said Monday in a meeting with out-of-town editors.

The "Son of Sam" cases involved violent attacks that led to the fatal shooting of six people in New York City in 1976 and 1977. David Berkowitz pleaded guilty to the crimes and is serving a 25-year to life sentence.

"We have people in California that I know of in mental institutions for the criminally insane who are drawing regular payments because due to their mental illness, they had been judged incapable of holding jobs," Reagan said. "But now, we're paying their room, board, medical care, and laundry, housing and yet they're getting that payment. These are things that need correcting."

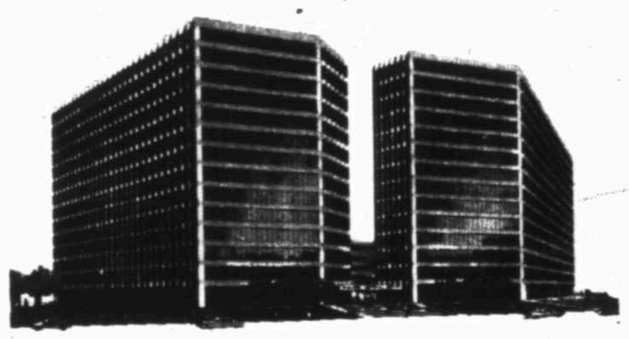
Tax-Free Savings Interest From Midland National. Coming October 1



The President's new tax bill will soon be in effect. This means that beginning October 1, we can offer you our Tax-Free Interest Savings Plan. With our plan, you'll be able to earn up to $1,000 (individual return) or $2,000 (joint return) of tax-free interest.

Our one-year savings certificate will pay interest equal to 70% of the average investment yield of the most recently auctioned 52-week Treasury Bill. And, the interest rate applicable at the time you open your account is guaranteed for one full year.

Certificates purchased on October 1 and 2 will earn 12.61%. (A new rate will be effective October 5.) To equal the 12.61% tax-free rate, you would have to earn 18.01% if you're in the 30% tax bracket, 21.01% in the 40% tax bracket, and 25.22% in the 50% tax bracket.

To open your account, all that's required is a minimum deposit of $500 for a one-year period. However, you'll probably want to invest more in order to take advantage of this great tax savings.

Our new Tax-Free Interest Savings Plan is just one of the many services available to you at Midland National, where you'll find professionals dedicated to serving your banking needs.

So stop by on or after October 1. And we'll show you how to put our Tax-Free Interest Savings Plan to work for you.

Acid rain poses threat to states

Rep. Clarence Brown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen states east of the Mississippi River are extremely vulnerable to the harmful effects of acid rain, 10 others face moderate threats and "it can't be long before every state in the union is affected," an environmental group says.

The National Wildlife Federation's study on the severity of threats posed from acid rain to Easter states was released on the eve of a congressional hearing today on the pollution problem.

The House Energy subcommittee on health and the environment, considering the Clean Air Act, was scheduled to hear complaints from the Canadian government that acid rain from the United States was harming lakes and forests in Eastern Canada.

National Wildlife Federation researchers analyzed data on the acidity of the rainfall in the Eastern United States and then compared that to information on each state's soil and water chemistry to estimate potential damage to fish, soils, crops and buildings.

Massachusetts was ranked as having the highest acid rain level in the East at 4.1 on the pH scale and was one of 10 states called "extremely vulnerable" to acid rain.

Florida, with the smallest level of acidity at 4.7, was the only state to be ranked only "slightly vulnerable."

"Our study should lay to rest once and for all the claims that acid rain damage is confined to a few hundred lakes in upstate New York," Dr. Jay Hair, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, said Monday. "With states as far south as Florida showing signs of vulnerability to acid rain, it can't be long before every state in the union is affected."

Hair said the study emphasized the need for tighter controls on coal-burning electric utilities as part of its reauthorization of the Clean Air Act.

Electric utilities and the coal industry say not enough is known yet to justify expensive new controls on sulfur dioxide emissions, one of the pollutants blamed for making rainfall acidic.

Meanwhile, Rep. Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio, a member of the House Energy subcommittee on health and the environment, said Monday that Canada is demanding more stringent U.S. air pollution laws than it is willing to impose on itself.

Brown released a Library of Congress analysis of U.S. and Canadian air pollution laws indicating that Canadian laws are weaker than U.S. laws in several key areas, including strength of federal regulatory power, the nature of standards and auto emission controls.

The level of acidity is measured on a pH scale that places distilled water at the neutral level of 7 and normal rainfall as slightly acidic at 5.6. Vinegar has a pH of 3. Each numerical decrease means a 10-fold increase in acidity.

Louisiana was given a rainfall pH of 4.6, but the study gave it no overall ranking because the environmental group said it lacked sufficient data.

Dairy interests seek compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some dairy interests, fearing the House may vote to effectively freeze dairy price supports for years to come, are pushing a compromise they say will solve the problems plaguing the dairy program now.

"I recognize the necessity to send a signal to our dairy farmers thoughout the country that we do indeed have to slow down the rate of growth in production of milk and milk products in this country," says Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on diary.

The battle over dairy price supports is expected to be one of the hottest disputes when the House takes up the new four-year package of commodity supports Wednesday.

It was Harkin's subcommittee that last spring successfully defied the Reagan administration's call for major cuts in dairy supports and convinced the full Agriculture Committee to maintain supports at 75 percent of parity, where they have been most of the last three decades. That is three-fourths of the price that would give farmers the same spending power they had in 1910-14.

The committee decision, pushing the 1982 cost of dairy supports more than $500 million over the budget allocation, came amid repeated indications that support levels of the past four years — set at 80 percent of parity — were still encouraging excessive milk production while consumption has been decreasing.

The result was soaring government expenditures and substantial accumulation of milk productions to maintain dairy prices, making the program a prime budget-cutting target for President Reagan. As of Aug. 1, the government-owned diary inventory totaled 14 billion pounds with price-support costs expected to run around $2 billion this year.

When the situation failed to change even after dairy producers were denied a support increase in April, the Senate finally voted for the price-support program Reagan wanted. That program would freeze supports at the October 1980 level of $13.10 per hundred pounds until the cost of the program drops below $750 million a year, probably not before 1984. There has been an increasing likelihood that the House would follow suit.

To head off adoption of what Harkin called "the first step in the total abolition of the total dairy price-support program in this country," Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, has come up with the compromise plan. It would bring program costs within an acceptable range of about $1.1 billion.

The proposal freezes the milk support at the old $13.10 level for the next year just as the Senate bill does. But while the Senate plan keeps supports at that level as long as the government cost is $750 million or more, the Bedell proposal requires an increase next Oct. 1, probably of 2 percent to 3 percent, no matter what the dairy outlook is. In subsequent years the support level can be lowered if government milk stocks exceed 3.5 billion pounds.

"That is the most reasonable way out of the predicament we find ourselves in today," Harkin said. "It will be a reasonable solution to this problem, not the gutting action that was taken by the Senate."

Harkin and others tried to win support for the compromise last week by dropping their opposition to a bill rolling back a 3 percent increase in milk prices that is temporarily in effect until the new farm bill is approved.

The emergency legislation passed the House easily but stalled in the Senate.

Bedell's compromise will automatically become part of the farm bill when the House takes it up, but attacks on it are expected, some cutting supports more severely than the Senate plan.

Senate trying to bypass dairy-state senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee is trying to bypass a major dairy-state senator who has been blocking attempts to roll back a costly increase in dairy price supports.

But even if the committee succeeds, as expected, the increased support level will remain in effect for at least nine more days.

After Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., continued blocking a vote on the emergency legislation Monday, Agriculture Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., called today's committee session so the bill could be pushed to a Senate vote over Proxmire's objections.

But late Monday, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., citing other business facing the Senate, said a vote on the bill would not occur before Oct. 14, the day Congress returns from a six-day Columbus Day recess.

Milk price supports automatically rose 3 percent last Thursday, from $13.10 a hundred pounds to $13.49, because Congress has yet to approve a new price support program.

The increase will eventually be rolled backed either by the emergency bill or by the new farm bill, which is expected to clear Congress by the end of this month. The House already has approved the emergency bill and is taking up the farm bill this week.

In the meantime, however, the higher support level is costing the government an additional $400,000 a day, according to Don Friedly of the Agriculture Department's dairy branch. But Friedly said that if the higher supports remain in effect for too long, the added cost could hit the $1 million a day originally forecast by department analysts.

In addition, officials remain concerned that the short-term support increase will trigger boosts in consumer prices that never will be rolled back.

They fear that even a temporary increase might give milk marketers an excuse to raise consumer prices although the higher government support price will have little effect on their costs.

Because the government had not raised milk price supports for more than a year, they say, the markeers have not had many acceptable reasons for increasing prices.

Under the dairy program, the government buys nonfat dry milk, butter and cheese from manufacturers at the support price so the remaining supply of milk will bring dairymen a price near the support level.

Friedly said original cost estimates of $1 million a day or more were based on the long-range impact of the higher price supports, which would probably have encouraged even greater increases in production and sharper declines in milk consumption. In the short run, he said, those things shouldn't happen.

Farm threatened by estate taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is little evidence that the family farm in America is threatened by federal estate taxes, the General Accounting Office said Monday.

The GAO report conflicts sharply with the argument made frequently by politicians, that heirs often are forced to sell the family farm to pay estate taxes when the chief owner dies.

Service workers strike Cornell University

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Service and maintenance workers seeking their first contract struck Cornell University today and pickets went up at entrances to the Ivy League campus.

"There was not sufficient progress to either postpone the deadline or recommend approval," Barbara Rahke, a organizer for the United Auto Workers union, said shortly after the midnight strike deadline passed.

Personnel Director Gary Posner called the strike by some 950 workers "outrageous" and said the administration has made plans to consolidate dining halls and hire temporary replacement workers if necessary to keep the school open.

"We are simply not capable of shutting off the educational spigot and sending 17,000 students home," Posner said.

Ms. Rahke said the union has not asked students or professors to refrain from attending classes in sympathy.

Cornell has both public and private components. Several of its colleges are part of the State University of New York while the others are private. Gov. Hugh Carey last week intervened in the 5-month-old negotiations, calling on both sides to avoid a strike.

The workers are employed by the private part of the university, so a state prohibition against strikes by public employees does not apply.

In a statement to employees Monday, Cornell President Frank H.T. Rhodes said, "You have a right to continue to work if you wish to do so. I encourage you to exercise your rights thoughtfully."

The UAW, bargaining agent for all of the university's food-service, agricultural, maintenance, custodial and grounds workers, staged a three-day work-stoppage on parent's weekend, the last weekend in September.

All issues except pay, fringe benefits and pensions have been resolved, the UAW said over the weekend. Neither side has made public its economic proposal.

The first picket line began at midnight at an agricultural experiment station of the university in Harford, about 15 miles east of Ithaca.

Strike deadlines of midnight Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday were extended during a weekend of negotiating and union meetings.

Migrant worker ad campaign saves money

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — An advertising campaign aimed at holding down the number of migrant workers traveling to Michigan succeeded, and saved the state more than $500,000 in the process, a state official said.

Some 30,000 migrant farm workers came to Michigan this year, 25 percent fewer than in 1980, Manuel Gonzalez, director of Migrant Services in the state Department of Social Services, said Monday.

The $500,000 savings to the state resulted from a decline in financial assistance to needy laborers in the first seven months of 1981, he said. The DSS issued fewer food stamps and paid less for emergency transporation between work sites or back to the South, the home of most migrant workers.

"The bulletins (circulated in the South) did play a big effect," Gonzalez said. "It (the savings) largely was due to less people definitely working longer. They had less of a need to call on us."

Some growers had feared the low-cost campaign to limit farm workers might backfire and leave them without enough help to harvest this fall's apple crop. But the "shortage we were concerned about did not develop," Gonzalez said.

"A substantial number (of workers) waited and came in just at the right time," Gonzalez said. "They are pretty much following our advice."

This spring, Michigan officials saturated states including Texas and Florida — which supply 60 percent and 25 percent of the migrant workers to Michigan respectively — with public service radio announcements.

Printed bulletins in Spanish and English warned workers not to come to Michigan unless they had a confirmed job and housing.

About 75 percent of the workers who come to Michigan, the fourth largest user of migrant labor in the United States, of Hispanic descent, Gonzalez said. Some 97 percent are U.S. citizens or legal residents of the United States.

Many of the workers return to Michigan each year for decades and harvest a range of crops from strawberries to rhubarb, Gonzalez said.

Work on the apple crop will continue through the end of November when most workers will return to their homes. Other laborers will stay on to help harvest Christmas trees.

Gonzalez said another campaign to educate migrant workers about Michigan will be staged next year, although it might take a different form.

"It seemed to work tremendously (this year)," he said. "We'll have difficulty coming up with an encore."

Cargo door latch blamed for luggage 'bombs'

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — New York Air officials blame a faulty cargo door latch for the unscheduled landing of five pieces of luggage in the middle of New Jersey's largest city.

Moments after departing Newark International Airport Monday morning, the suitcases fell from an open door on the commuter flight bound for Washington, airline officials said.

There were no reports of injuries.

Three of the bags were recovered in Newark's Ironbound section and were flown to Washington for reunions with their owners. Two other pieces of luggage — an attache case and a gray suitcase — are still missing, New York Air officials said.

As the unidentified pilot of the 7:50 a.m. flight reached an altitude of 1,000 feet, he noticed a warning light indicating the cargo hold on the underside of the plane was ajar, said airline spokeswoman Doris Huddleston.

The plane returned to the Newark airport without incident.

Two of the pieces hit the roof of a Sherwin Williams paint store and another bag was found in the backyard of a house, said Police Lt. Armando Fontoura.

"Ten feet either way and those suitcases would have come down right where people were coming into work," said Scott Papier, personnel director for Sherwin Williams Co. "It's one of those things where you think you've seen it all and something like this happens."

"Suprisingly, they (the suitcases) sprung open, but they didn't disintegrate," Ms. Huddleston said.

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating the incident.

Doctor says Casino Row woman has 'death wish'

By MITCHELL LANDSLANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The woman charged with running down 29 people with her car on Casino Row here last Thanksgiving, killing six of them, is convinced of her innocence but "has a death wish" and wants to die in the gas chamber, her psychiatrist says.

Dr. Louis Richnak said Monday that Priscilla Ford, 52, suffers paranoid delusions and is not competent to stand trial on the six counts of murder and 23 counts of attempted murder and battery with a deadly weapon.

Richnak said Mrs. Ford believes her car went out of control because someone tampered with it. She understands the charges against her, he said, but is incapable of helping her defense.

"It is my opinion that Mrs. Ford is not willing to assist her attorney because she has a death wish," the psychiatrist told a Washoe District Court in a pre-trial hearing. "She wants the gas chamber."

The prosecution has said it will ask for the death penalty if she is convicted on the murder charges. Jury selection is to begin Wednesday.

Mrs. Ford has entered double pleas to all counts of not guilty and not guilty by reason of insanity.

Richnak disputed a state sanity commission finding that Mrs. Ford is mentally fit for trial, saying she "hasn't shown even a moderate improvement" since beginning court-ordered psychiatric treatment in January.

Richnak is the medical director of Lake's Crossing Center for the Mentally Disordered Offender, where Mrs. Ford is held.

He said Mrs. Ford also is schizophrenic, suffers "delusions of grandeur," believes she has "divine powers" and has a fear of open places and crowds.

More hearings were scheduled today on defense attempts to ban cameras and tape recorders from the courtroom and place a gag order on all parties to the case to stop them from talking to reporters. Judge John Barrett said he generally opposes attempts to restrict news coverage of trials.

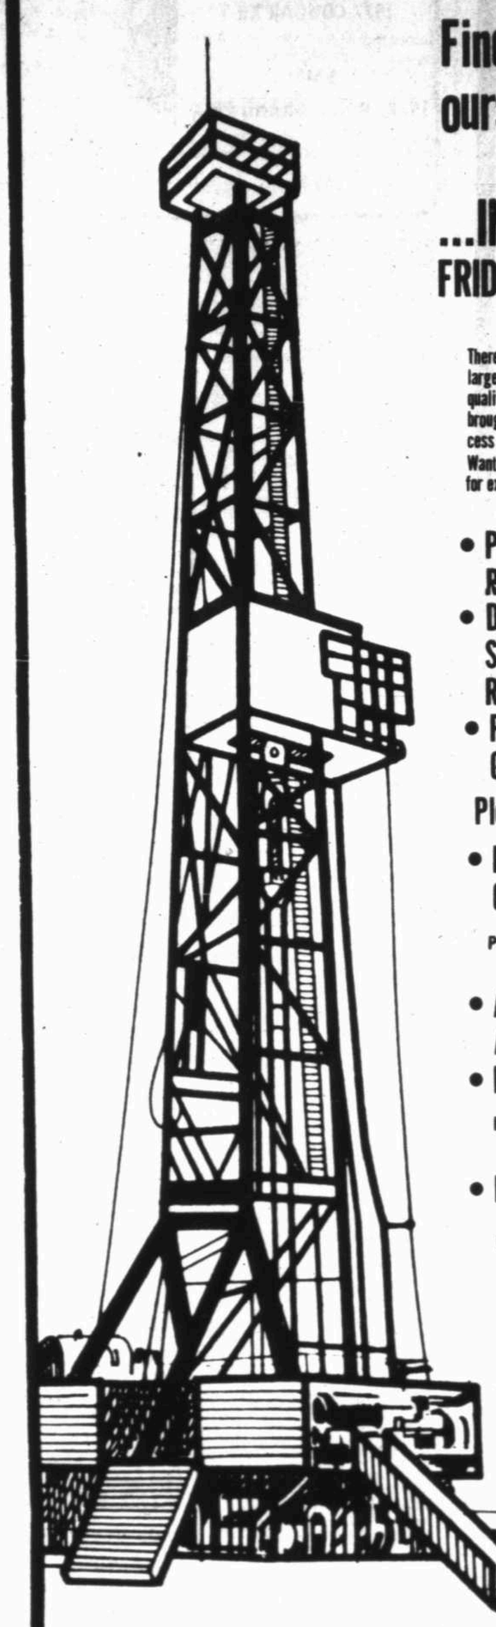
OIL & GAS PROFESSIONALS



Find out why we call ourselves SUPERIOR

...IN MIDLAND INTERVIEWS
FRIDAY-SUNDAY, OCT. 9-11

There are many reasons why we're called SUPERIOR and generally regarded as the largest independent oil and gas producer in the U. S. Perhaps the most evident is the quality of our people. Aggressive, innovative people applying advanced technologies have brought us accomplishments that are the envy of the industry. A significant wildcat success ratio and hydrocarbon replacement greater than total production were no accidents. Want to join an expanding leader? Talk to us in Midland. We have immediate opportunities for experienced supervisors and professionals in the disciplines listed below:

Baseball's Longest season continues

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Cincinnati Reds' manager John McNamara called it "the season that wasn't," but for eight teams that mastered baseball's patchwork playoff scheme, it not only was, it still is.

Baseball's intradivision playoffs — a postseason mutant spawned by the 2-month-long midseason players' strike — were set to begin today, marking the start of the longest postseason in baseball history.

Under baseball's plan, this so-called miniseries will be a best-of-five games between the first- and second-half winners of the two divisions in each league.

The Los Angeles Dodgers and Houston Astros in the National League West and the Oakland A's and Kansas City Royals in the American League West got it rolling today.

The four East Division teams in the two leagues begin play on Wednesday — Philadelphia at Montreal in the NL and New York at Milwaukee in the AL.

Only after the division winners are decided through this process will the league championship series begin, scheduled for Oct. 13-18. The World Series is scheduled for Oct. 20-28, assuming the weather is cooperative. And that's a rather large assumption in some of the more northern cities at that time of year.

By way of comparison, the 1949 World Series ended in victory after five games for the New York Yankees over Brooklyn on Oct.9. In 1969, the first year of the league championship playoffs, the World Series ended Oct.19 with the New York Mets beating Baltimore in five games.

The real dichotomy of this season, however, is not how long the teams will play, but which will play.

For instance, none of the four teams involved in the National League playoffs would have made it past Sunday if won-lost records were not split.

Neither Houston nor Los Angeles had the best overall record in the NL West. That distinction belonged to Cincinnati, which had the best record in baseball this year, 66-42. Since the Reds finished second in both halves, however, they missed the playoffs, which prompted McNamara's remark.

The St. Louis Cardinals found themselves in similar circumstances, finishing with the best overall record in the NL East, 59-43, but, again, a second-place finisher in both halves.

"I don't feel any compassion for the Reds," Houston third baseman Art Howe said, "and anybody who says we backed into the playoffs is crazy. We outplayed them (the Reds) in the second half of the season. Sure, they had a good streak, but we must have done something right because they couldn't catch us."

What Howe, and others who reached the round of eight, have said in essence is that the ground rules were set and accepted by the players before play was resumed on Aug.10. The split season was part of the labor agreement the players negotiated with management over the issue of free agency.

Still, it's baseball. With bats and balls. With gloves and white chalk-marked diamonds. And the teams that made it have shown no less enthusiasm for getting on with the playoffs.

"Right now, I don't feel anything," the Phillies' Lonnie Smith said earlier in the week, "but when the day comes, I'll be excited."

The A's and Royals were given the honor of starting baseball's historic miniseries with a scheduled 3:10 p.m., EDT, start in Kansas City. Royals right-hander Jeff Leonard, 13-11, was picked to oppose Oakland right-hander Mike Norris, 12-9.

At night in Houston, one of this season's best possible pitching matchups is scheduled to take place. Houston's Nolan Ryan, 11-5, who pitched his fifth no-hitter this season, will pitch against rookie Dodgers left-hander Fernando Valenzuela, 13-7.

On Wednesday, Steve Carlton, 13-4, is set to go for Philadelphia against the Expos' Steve Rogers, 12-8, and the Yankees will send Ron Guidry, 11-5, against Brewers right-hander Moose Haas, 11-7. The Phils-Expos and A's-Royals series also continue Wednesday.

Eagles blunt Falcon's rally

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Eagles may not have been the epitome of perfection — but no other team in the National Football League can boast of a record as perfect as theirs.

"I'm not going to tell you we can win 16 in a row this year because we can do many things better than we did tonight," Coach Dick Vermeil said after the Eagles ran their record to 5-0 (the only 5-0 in the league and the first 5-0 in the team's 49-year history) with a 16-13 victory over Atlanta which really wasn't decided until the last of the Falcons' five serious mistakes.

The first two were interceptions of Steve Bartkowski passes. The first-quarter pickoffs by linebackers Al Chesley and Reggie Wilkes led, five plays later in each case, to Tony Franklin field goals of 36 and 34 yards and a 6-0 lead.

The third was Alfred Jenkins' fumble following a reception of a Bartkowski pass. The recovery by defensive end Greg Brown six seconds before the end of the third period preceded Franklin's 43-yarder with 3:14 gone in the fourth. It was the game-winner, giving Philadelphia a 16-10 lead.

Then came Atlanta's backbreakers.

On the ensuing drive, the Falcons swept down to the Philadelphaia 18-yard line and Bartkowski connected with Jenkins in the end zone for the touchdown which — with Mick Luckhurst's extra point — would give them a 17-16 lead. But tackle Eric Sanders was flagged for holding, the TD was wiped out and Atlanta had to settle for Luckhurst's 43-yard field goal with 6:45 left.

All was not lost, though. If the Falcons could hold the Eagles and force a punt, they'd have one last shot. They held them. They forced the punt — but James Mayberry ran into Max Runager trying to block the kick, another flag was thrown, and Philadelphia kept the ball until time ran out.

"We had so many chances to win," said Falcon Coach Leeman Bennett. "But the mistakes killed us. You hate to lose a game that way. We got a lot of bad breaks, but we also got a few good ones."

And Bartkowski said, "We played winning football. We just came out the losers."

Vermeil sounded as though the Eagles played losing football but just came out the winners. "I don't think we convinced them we are a better team . . . but we got the turnovers when we really needed them. That was important, because we didn't move the ball on them. We didn't dominate the game, but we won. "The touchdown pass before halftime was a turning point because it gave us a jump on them."

The touchdown pass was a 30-yarder from Ron Jaworski to to Charlie Smith 91 seconds from halftime. That made it 13-0.

"I was really concerned at thelhalf about that lead," Jaworski said. "In the back of my mind was that we were up 13-0 here, just like we were up 13-0 in that playoff game (a 14-13 loss to the Falcons in 1978). I told the guys to play as though we were 13 behind instead of 13 ahead."

Late in the third period, that 13-point lead was shockingly shaved to just three. First Luckhurst, who had missed a chip-shot 19-yard field goal in the second period because of a low center snap (the ball hit the left upright and bounced back), connected on a 35-yarder.

Then, on the ensuing kickoff, Neal Musser's tackle caused a Wally Henry fumble and Kenny Johnson, the cornerback beaten so badly on the Jaworski-to-Smith touchdown pass, grabbed the ball and sprinted unimpeded into the end zone. The two scores came 12 seconds apart.

"I was pleased that we didn't fold up the tent and go home after that touchdown," Vermeil said.

In all, the Falcons outplayed the Eagles in just about every department. They controlled the ball for nearly 34 of the 60 minutes. They outrushed Philadelphia 112-107 with William Andrews leading all backs with 84 yards. And Bartkowski outpassed Jaworski 232-161, although Jaworski threw just 26 times compared to Bartkowski's 46.

But in the end the Falcons' three-game winning streak against the Eagles came to an end. "Atlanta was the only team in the league that had our number," said Jaworski. Now, nobody has numbers like Philadelphia's.

"We're not cocky. We're not an egotistical team," Jaworski said. "We're level-headed enough to know we have 11 to go."

Rangers plan many changes

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — There probably will be some new faces in Texas Rangers uniforms when the 1982 baseball season begins.

The Ranger brain trust already is plotting strategy for next year, hoping to prevent another collapse that dragged the team slowly but surely out of playoff contention before September ended.

For the past seven seasons the Rangers have strutted out of spring training promising to challenge for a division title, and for seven years the Rangers have died in September.

"Disappointed? That's an understatement," said Ranger board chairman Eddie Chiles after watching his team nosedive to third place in the second half of baseball's split season. "After we came back, when the strike was settled, I began to be disappointed, and nothing ever happened to change that feeling."

Texas finished third in the second-half standings, four games below .500.

Chiles, vice president Eddie Robinson, manager Don Zimmer, scouts and minor-league executives met Monday to discuss the team's folding act, and what to do about it.

There is no official word yet, but here is what seems likely:

Third baseman Buddy Bell, catcher Jim Sundberg, pitchers Rick Honeycutt, Danny Darwin, Doc Medich, Charlie Hough, and John Butcher seem the only sure bets to return. They were the only consisten bright spots throughout the year.

Second baseman Bump Wills, outfielder John Grubb and pitchers John Henry Johnson, Bob Babcock, and Ferguson Jenkins (already released) surely will not be back. Wills is demanding too much money, Grubb's bat turned to sawdust in July and Zimmer has lost confidence in the pitchers.

Lee, MHS clash tonight in 5-5A volleyball tilt

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Midland High and Midland Lee close out the first half of the District 5-5A volleyball race tonight at the MHS gym starting with the junior varsity battle at 6 p.m. followed by the varsity at 7 p.m.

The Tall City clubs are out of contention for the first half title. MHS takes a 12-9, 3-3 mark in the fray while Lee is 14-9, 4-2. Both teams would like a victory to build on as the second half race opens next Thursday. The first half title will be decided tonight when San Angelo, 6-0, meets the Lady Steers, 6-0, in Big Spring.

A victory by Lee would leave the Rebels in sole position of third place. A Rebel loss would bunch Midland High, Lee and possibly Abilene Cooper (if Cooper beats Abilene High tonight) in third place with 4-3 records.

Tonight's battle will feature the height and strength of Lee's front line against the jumping ability and finese of Midland High's front line.

Defensively, both teams are quick, hustling units that are excellent at going to the floor for saves.

Judy Gatlin and Missy Larrimore

Judy Gatlin and Missy Larrimore lead MHS's defensive unit. Up front, the Bulldogs look to Shelia Christian, Penny Griffin, Holly Randell and Ann Miller for their spiking power. Gatlin is usually the setter that the Pack looks for and she ranks as one of the best in the distirct.

On the other side of the net, Lee presents a tall front line lead by Rozenna McCabe, Suzanne McGaha, Pam Landers and Lesa Burnett. In the last few game, McCabe has been a dominating force in Lee's victories. Karen Carpenter and Debra Quintela round out the Rebs starting lineup. Carpenter is excellent at playing the net or roaming in the second line to pickup any loose balls. Quintela is the cog that makes the Lee wheel turn. She is an excellent setter and when the Lee front line is having a good day spiking the ball you know that Quintela is in top form with her sets.

Films reveal Tech not guilty

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech's game films of Saturday's 24-23 loss to Texas A&M show the Red Raiders did not deserve an offsides penalty that blunted a potential scoring drive late in the game, according to Tech coach Jerry Moore.

But Moore said he is not angry at the officials who made the call and does not blame them for the loss.

"I don't want to get off on the officials," Moore said Monday. "They have a tough job at best and we certainly didn't lose the game because of them. We lost because A&M played better than we did."

The crucial call came with three minutes left in the game and A&M leading by one point. Tech quarterback Ron Reeves passed 38 yards to Renie Baker at the Aggie 17, but the offsides call wiped out the gain and Tech's drive stalled.

"What made the play look bad was that (guard) George Smitherman was late getting off the ball," said Moore. "It gave those around him the appearance of being offsides. But it's easy to roll the film back and forth the day after the game . . . the officials don't have that luxury."

A&M overcame a 23-10 deficit with two fourth-quarter touchdowns for the one-point victory, giving the Aggies a 1-0 Southwest Conference record while Tech fell to 0-2.

USTA/Penn begins

Mike Bauer draws No. 1

Play got underway at 10 a.m. today in the Midland Tennis Club's 21st annual Fall Tournament and its second edition of the USTA/Penn Circuit and the favorite, according to the seedings, is Mike Bauer, Lafayette, Calif.

Bauer is riding a hot streak with victories at Corpus Christi and Abilene. The 22-year-old senior at the University of California-Berkeley, defeated Derek Tarr, South Africa, who is fourth-seeded here, at Corpus Christi.

Since taking a breather for the U.S. Open, Bauer has won two of three tournaments. The only one he missed was at Wichita Falls, where New Zealand's Jeff Simpson, seeded No. 2 here, was the winner. He beat Larry Davidson, Swarthmore, Pa., who is seeded third.

The firing begins today at Midland High Tennis courts and will continue through Saturday before moving to the Midland Racquet Club for the finals Sunday.

After conducting a collegiate-flavored invitational for 19 years, the MTC switched to the USTA/Penn Circuit last year, bringing to the Tall City the future Grand Prix Tour players. It's on the USTA/Penn Circuit that young, aspiring players earn the points to make the big tour.

Last year's champion, Marty Davis, San Jose, Calif., won't be back, but Juan Farrow, St. Louis, who lost 6-3, 6-2 to Davis in the finals, will be here. However, this time the four time NCAA Division II All-America at Illinois- Edwardsville isn't seeded.

Completing the seedings in the 64-player field are No. 5, Frany Hyett, Palisades, Calif.; 6. Mike Gandolfo, Lakeland, Fla.; 7. Randy Druz, Houston; 8. Jeff Turpin, Dallas; 9. Cary Stansbury, Palo Alto, Calif; 10. Peter Lamb, South Africa; 11. Vallis Wilder, Westfield, Mass. 12. Nigel O'Rourke, Canada; 13. Armand Molino, Hollywood, Fla.; 14. Andy Andrews, Raleigh, N.C.; 15. Phil Lenhoff, Novaga, Calif., 16. John Picken, Canada.

Jeff Turpin, the highest seeded Texan in the field, was a three-time All-America at St. Mark's High and is currently enrolled at SMU. In 1978 he was a member of the USTA Junior Davis Cup team.

Mark Turpin, is a 1979 SMU grad, earning All-America recognition as a senior. He played on Segment Four of the USTA/Penn in 1980 and finished in 17th place in the singles. He teamed Jeff to take 14th in doubles.

Chariots of Fire not really porno

Los Angeles Times

In the middle of the film, "Chariots Of Fire," all the male principals begin taking their clothes off. But, not to worry. You're not going to be subjected to those grotesque couplings that pass for entertainment in today's Hollywood. This is a stag reel only in the sense it's about men and honor (presumably spelled with a "U" in this case) and a day when people still believed in knighthood and chivalry, God and country, Oxford and Cambridge, and the world had not yet come to revere rogues and rotters. There are women in this picture, the kind who wear hats and gloves to lunch, and curtsy to royalty and sing in a Gilbert and Sullivan chorus, not a punk rock band. The men are taking their clothes off for a race, not a romp.

Can a footrace run in 1924 be a subject for a 1981 movie? Yes, if the footrace says something about the time and place in which it took place. And, if it says something about the time and place we live in. This picture does both.

IT WAS England between wars. The life force had not yet gone out of the Empire, but the doughty body of old England had not yet been exsanguinated by continental slaughters, the Olympic Games were coming up, and we focus in on the aspirations of a group of athletes who are right out of the pages of "A Shropshire Lab."

If you check through the Guinness Book of Olympic Records, you will see the bare-bones information that Britain's Harold M. Abrahams won the 100-meter medal in the Paris Olympics of 1924, and Eric Liddell of Scotland won the 400 meters. Good-o! Up the Empire!

Except that Harold Abrahams was hardly the English country gentleman. Harod was Jewish, the son of a Lithuanian emigre who had become, as the saying had it, more English than the English, and he admired extravagantly the culture and society he was in and sent his son to Cambridge. Harold was not so enamored of the breed, subjected as he was to the casual anti-semitism of the dons of that era. This wrankled him into determining to beat these young lords and earls at their own game, which was, then, foot-racing. He hired a coach, studied films of the world class sprinters he would have to beat, and he was a generation ahead of his time. He did in 1924 what Iron Curtain coaches would not begin to do until the 1950s when they joined the Olympic movement with athletes who were clones of the Olympic greats they saw on the films.

ERIC LIDDELL was a Brit of a different cast, too. He had the bur of Scotland on his tongue and the grace of God in his heart. Like Abrahams, he could run like the wind. Like Abrahams, he had his hang-ups. Eric would not run on Sunday. Eric would keep holy the Sabbath Day. Even when the hundred-meter Olympic heats would be held on Sunday. The future King of England himself would plead with Eric not to let the Crown down. In the movie's most moving scene, Eric gently tells his liege there is a higher Crown than England's.

NOT MUCH to make a movie on, you might think. Wrong. No one jumping through skylights with blazing Lugers, no half-clothed young women panting on silken bed, but this film is so lovingly done, it's like stepping back through a time warp into a Britain of the elegant '20s. The camaraderie of the British Olympic team becomes a framework for brotherhood as tautly knit as the lives of the Bengal Lancers. Director Hugh Hudson lingers lovingly on the English and Scottish countrysides, and the peculiarly lap-waved coastlines of Brighton, and the meaning and the grandeur of the Olympics was never more clearly defined. History tells us that Harold Abrahams achieved his wish. He ignored the disapproval of the fossils of academe (brilliantly played by Sir John Gielgud and Lindsay Anderson).

NHL faces off tonight

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For the past two National Hockey League seasons, the St. Louis Blues have been the sport's most improved team. If the Blues can repeat that achievement a third time, they'll probably run away with the Norris Division title as well as the league's overall points race.

The Blues finished second in the overall standings last season with a team-record 107 points. That marked an increase of 27 points over their 1979-80 output. And in that season, the Blues wound up with 80 points, which was 32 points more than they managed in 1978-79.

St. Louis opens the 1981-82 campaign Tuesday night by hosting the Pittsburgh Penguins, a team which extended the Blues to the second overtime of the fifth game of the opening round of the playoffs last spring before falling. St. Louis then was ousted from the Stanley Cup chase by the New York Rangers in the quarterfinals.

The Blues don't figure to catch anybody by surprise this time around. And if they continue their rise in the points derby, they should have no trouble outdistancing Minnesota, Chicago, Toronto, Detroit and Winnipeg in the newly aligned Norris Division.

Still, following their playoff troubles against the Penguins and Rangers, there is some doubt about the Blues.

"Maybe there are some people who still think we're not for real," said St. Louis General Manager Emile Francis, the man most responsible for the rebirth of the Blues. "That's OK. Let them think that. They'll be in for some surprises."

Another team which might provide some unexpected thrills for its fans this season is the Quebec Nordiques, who host Hartford Tuesday. The Nordiques were 19-5-5 after acquiring goaltender Daniel Bouchard from Calgary. With Bouchard in the nets from the start of the season — though he missed training camp as a holdout and might not play right away — and with the dynamite line of Stastny, Stastny and Stastny triggering the offense, Quebec will be tough.

Last season, center Peter Stastny was NHL rookie of the year with 39 goals and 109 points, while his brother Anton — who defected along with him from Czechoslovakia in the summer of 1980 — also had 39 goals.

Y-O team rides to San Antonio

Y-O used its three-goal handicap to good advantage Sunday to pull out a 7-6 victory over the Midland Polo Club in the qualifying match for the nationals of the United States Polo Association.

Y-O now moves to San Antonio for the national tournament next weekend.

Carlos Galindo led the Y-O team with two goals, one from 90 yards out in the second chuckker. Jimmy Yarbrough and Hector Galindo had the other two goals for Y-O and the three-goal handicap gave them the win.

Wicky El-Effendi led MPC with three goals while Jimmy Stimmel produced two. Spencer Beal produced a tail shot in the sixth period of play.

RHCC hosts WJCC meet

SNYDER — Western Texas College produced a team score of 294 here over the weekend to win the second of six Western Junior College golf tournaments.

WTC now has 12 points for two tour victories while Midland College, Odessa College and New Mexico Junior College all have eight points for second place.

The tour moves to Ranchland Hills Country Club Friday at 9 a.m.

OC was second in this tournament with 301 while MC was third with 310 and NMJC fourth with a 311.

WTC's Pete Petri was medalist with a 72. MC was led by Bruce Carroll's 76 while Mike Petersen, Dave Waszak and Steve Goetzmann followed with 78. Dean Hulsey had an 80 and Tom Spilman an 83.

City golf play slated

The 18th annual Midland Women's City Golf championship will be held Oct. 20-21-22 at Hogan Park Golf course with the first day of play determining the medalist and flight pairings.

The tournament will be medal play. And golfer who has been a resident of Midland for a minimum of 30 days is eligible to play.

A free practice round is scheduled at Hogan Oct. 15. Carts are no included. Entry deadline is Oct. 16 and entry fee is $20, carts not included.

A luncheon is scheduled for RHCC after the final round Oct. 22. To enter, contact Hogan Park Golf Course (682 7891).

White 'probable' for 49ers

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas quarterback Danny White suffered a jammed right wrist and a puncture wound in his left elbow in Sunday's 20-17 National Football League loss to St. Louis but was a probable starter against San Francisco.

White jammed and bruised the wrist on the last play of the game and boarded the team plane with ice on his wrist. He also took medicine for the cut in his elbow.

On the bright side for Dallas was the return to the probable list of center Robert Shaw who has missed several weeks with a leg injury.

There were several mixups last week between White and reserve center Tom Rafferty, who actually is a guard pressed into service because of an injury to backup John Fitzgerald.

Bryant undergoes surgery

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University doctors refuse to speculate on when North Carolina running back Kelvin Bryant will return to action after injuring his knee and undergoing surgery.

Bryant, one of the nation's leading rushers and the NCAA's top scorer with 15 touchdowns, injured his knee Saturday during fifth-ranked North Carolina's 28-7 victory over Georgia Tech. Doctors operated on the knee Sunday.

Is your small copier being killed by popular demand?

A few extra copies here. A little overtime there. And suddenly everyone wonders why the copier quit.

Well, you can't blame the small copier. It's only built for small work loads.

Fortunately, there's a bigger small copier. The compact Minolta EP 520.

It has the capacity to put in a lot of overtime without a lot of trouble. And it takes options to help a growing business handle work overloads.

And the EP 520 has Minolta's exclusive micro-toning system to give you crisp, clear copies on any kind of paper. Up to 11" x 17".

It even has a self-diagnostic system to tell you when it needs service.

So get the bigger small copier. The Minolta EP 520.

It could be the most popular decision you make all year.

The EP 520. Your Next Copier.

Green talks with Chicago

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies manager Dallas Green, a candidate to become president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs, says he'd "be a fool" not to negotiate with the team.

Andrew McKenna, the new Cubs chairman, said he has met three times with Green to discuss whether he would be interested in taking on the Chicago posts, which would give him complete authority over player personnel and selection of a manager.

Green, who has spent 25 of his last 26 years in professional baseball with Philadelphia, called the discussions with the Cubs "very, very preliminary."

He said he would like to come back and manage another year, "but the funny thing is, nobody's asked me to come back."

"I have to feed my family somehow," he said. "And baseball is the way I've chosen for me to feed it. If I'm not going to do it in Philadelphia, I've got to do it somewhere else."

The 47-year-old Green noted that the Phillies have been put up for sale, leaving his status less secure than it could be elsewhere.

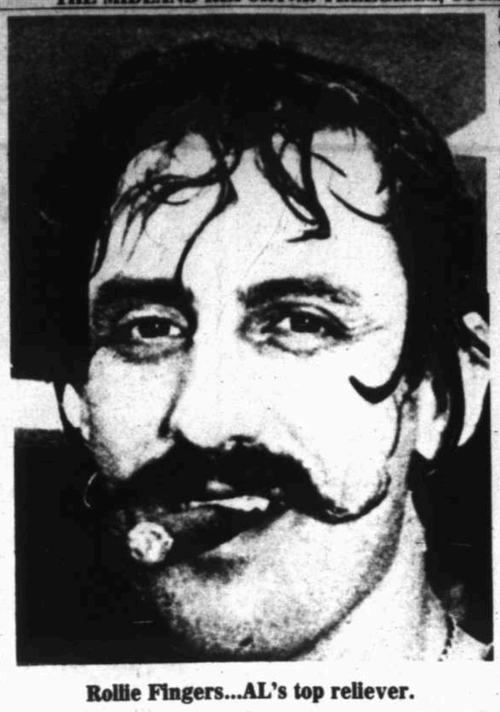
"There's going to be a change of ownership here in Philadelphia, and that will affect a lot of things here," he said.

Green assumed his current post in 1979 without any experience as a manager, and last year he guided the Phillies to their first World Series championship in the 97-year history of the franchise.

Green, who was a right-handed pitcher in the majors for nearly five years, worked as an executive in the Phillies' organization for 11 years.

McKennna said the other candidates for the job include current Cubs general manager Herman Franks and a "highly placed executive in baseball."

The Chicago Tribune — which, like the team, is owned by Tribune Co. — reported that indications are that Green has been offered a multi-year contract, probably for five years — at an annual salary of approximately $200,000 to $250,000.



Rollie Fingers...AL's top reliever.

SPORTS SCRATCHPAD

Sutter, Fingers top Firemen

Former Midland Cub Bruce Sutter earned a $125,000 bonus from the Cardinals for winning his second Fireman of the Year award, edging Atlanta's Rick Camp with a 3-5 record and 25 saves. Milwaukee's Rollie Fingers was the American Leage winner with 65 points. Points are determined on two for a win or save and minus one for a loss...

Former El Paso Diablos' manager Buck Rodgers was on the verge of being fired, but after his Brewers won the American League second half, he may be manager of the year. "Certainly, I'm gratified. I like to have that asterisk after my name showing Buck Rodgers was the manager when the 1981 Brewers won a championship. But it was the players who won it. It was the players who looked at themselves and found out what they were made of. They liked what they saw in themselves and their teammates."...

"When you really come down to it, it really was the season that wasn't," John McNamara, whose Reds had the best overall record in baseballat 66-42 but failed to make the playoffs, said. But even the Reds record is suspect. Would the Reds have won more games than any other club if the first-half division champion Dodgers had played their regular starters throughout the second half? "I'm sure L.A. wouldn't have featured that Albuquerque lineup," said Reds outfielder Dave Collins. "Over 162 games we may not be the best. But I feel we deserve a chance to prove it," said Reds third baseman Ray Knight...

Ted Turner, Atlanta Braves owner, will not make a decision on retaining or firing Bobby Cox until Wednesday, after a face-to-face meeting. "It's just about the hardest one of my life. I know Bobby is going through hell, and I'm so sorry for that. I feel awful about it. But what he's going through can't be much worse than what I'm going through. I hate these things. I love everybody on that team. I'd like to keep 'em all, but I'd like to win, too. I can't spend all my time in sackcloth and ashes. That's what Job did when he lost his family."...

Coach Fred Akers doesn't think Texas is as good as it can be... noting Texas "still has a chance to be a top team, but I don't think we're a top team at this point." He said a defense that has allowed only 20 points and 197 yards a game offensively, "is giving the kind of effort and playing with the kind of enthusiasm associated with top teams... the kicking game is coming around. We certainly need to be better against Oklahoma than the other teams we've played."...

What to look for in a new offering announcement:

The name Howard Weil.

(Experience experience)

Robert Craig

Though all new offering announcements look pretty much the same, the presence of one distinguishing clue is worth noticing. Look for the name Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedrichs, Inc., among the firms underwriting the issue.

Out of the record number of new offerings, Howard Weil's syndicate specialists handpick those of special interest to investors in this area, particularly energy and petroleum issues. Each is carefully scrutinized according to tough standards before the company puts up good money to back it.

So when you see the name Howard Weil on a new offering, write for the prospectus. Better yet, call your broker at Howard Weil. He gets regular reports on the firm's syndicate participations and has access to detailed research on the issues offered.

Legislator fears landowners may fight oil piracy

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A legislator says oil pirates are operating with impunity in the Texas oil patch and he fears possible violence if state officials do not act to solve the problem.

Reacting to a Sunday Associated Press story about oil rustlers, Rep. Tommy Adkisson, D-San Antonio, issued a statement calling for an investigation of oil thievery to determine what legislative measures could be taken to halt it.

"My information is that sheriffs, district attorneys and the Texas Rangers and the Texas Railroad Commission field personnel just don't have the manpower and adequate legislation to cope," Adkisson said.

"They're out there chasing bull elephants with flyswatters. The petro pirates are running over them with impunity."

"Sunday's Associated Press story shows this is a statewide problem, with potential thefts in the hundreds of millions of dollars. In district 56D alone I know there are at least 1,000 landowners affected by oil activity in the Austin Chalk and Buda Clay that has been generated during the last few years," Adkisson said.

"I know that many landowners are seething whith rage and a feeling of helplessness, and if state officials don't act, then the shotguns and rifles will be coming out. It is obvious that the Texas Railroad Commission does not have the manpower nor the enforcement legislation necessary to stop these petro pirates."

The AP story quoted Floresville rancher Jimmy Van Winkle, who carries an AR-15 semi-automatic rifle to protect oil from four wells on his Wilson County ranch. Van Winkle also hired Pinkerton detectives and alleged that half of his wells' production, valued at $360,000, was stolen over a three-year period.

The district Railroad Commission office here has only six field investigators for 43 counties active with new drilling, and statewide the regulatory agency has about one investigator for every two counties, officials said.

"When you consider that a load of crude is worth from $3,000 to $4,000 each, compared to $300 to $400 each only eight years ago, you can see that this is a relatively new and growing menace," Adkisson said. "Not only are the landowners and oil royalty owners being ripped off by these petro pirates, but also the honest truckers, the honest refiners, the stockholders of reputable oil companies and the taxes of the federal, state, county and school entities."

Adkisson said Texas legislators had been caught off guard by the rapidly changing situation in the state's oil industry because until recently most crude oil moved by pipeline. He said now it pays to drill wells that produce less and are not productive enough to hook up pipeline gathering systems.

"Obviously we need legislative changes to at least slow down these petro pirates, and the first step is to probe the extent of the piracy, the cost to the general public and then the legislative measures needed," the legislator said.

Last session, the Texas Legislature approved legislation making it a felony to steal even one barrel of oil, but officials of the Texas Independent Oil Producers Association said enforcement of the law was breaking down in the investigative and prosecutoral areas.

Reagan withdrawing offshore oil drilling regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing a possible defeat in Congress, the Reagan administration is withdrawing a proposed regulation that coastal states say would have given Interior Secretary James G. Watt too much control over offshore oil drilling.

The administration's decision was announced Monday by Rep. Norman D'Amours, D-N.H., chairman of the House Merchant Marine subcommittee on oceanography, who called it "a major victory for the coastal states."

The move also was applauded by Michael L. Fischer, executive director of the California Coastal Commission, as "a significant victory for state rights, certainly in the coastal states."

D'Amours' subcommittee had spearheaded a drive in Congress to veto the proposed regulation, which had been scheduled to go into effect Oct. 16.

The full Merchant Marine Committee passed a resolution of disapproval 20-15 last week despite heavy administration lobbying against the measure, which was sponsored by Reps. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., and Joel Pritchard, R-Wash. A similar resolution was pending in the Senate Commerce Committee.

D'Amours said the administration withdrew the regulation "because it did not want to suffer defeat on the House floor. I think it was obvious that this was not a partisan issue, where the administration could count on House Republicans for support."

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration confirmed the action but said it would have no immediate comment on the reason the regulation was withdrawn.

The regulation, proposed in July, would have said decisions on offshore oil leasing do not "directly affect" state coastlines until drilling rights are actually sold.

The definition of "directly affecting" is important because it is the legal trigger that requires federal actions to be consistent with state coastal management plans and mandates consultation with state officials to the "maximum extent practicable."

The "directly affecting" section was the basis for a federal judge's order earlier this year blocking Watt from offering environmentally sensitive tracts off the coast of California for drilling. The judge said Watt's pre-leasing decisions "directly affected" the California coast and invoked the state consultation requirements.

Officials from California, Maine and Massachusetts, representing the nation's coastal states, told the House subcommittee in hearings that the proposed regulation would mean states would have no voice in the long-term planning for their coastlines.

The states would be blocked from having any effective voice until the coast had been carved up and sold and oil companies had millions of dollars invested, the states complained. By then, it would be difficult to reverse or influence federal decisions, they said.

D'Amours said the regulation was an attempt by Watt and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige "to exticipation in the development of energy resources off their coasts."

Arab nation to buy U.S. drilling company

ALHAMBRA, Calif. (AP) — The $2.5 billion sale of an American oil-drilling company to the Kuwaiti government will be investigated by a congressional subcommittee looking into Arab investments in the United States.

The sale would be one of the largest Arab investments in the United States ever made public.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., chairman of a House commerce subcommittee, said Monday he would ask the Treasury Department to request that the deal be held up until an investigation could be conducted.

"OPEC countries are holding us up at both ends" in oil prices and in takeovers of U.S. industries, Rosenthal said.

Rosenthal also said he expected an investigation by the Interagency Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States, headed by the Treasury department.

Under the agreement, announced Monday, the 48.5 million outstanding shares of common stock of Santa Fe International Corp., based in the Southern California town of Alhambra, would be purchased at $51 a share by Kuwait Petroleum Corp., which is owned by that country's government.

Santa Fe's directors, who include former President Gerald Ford, voted unanimously in favor of the deal. The transaction has been approved by the required authorities in Kuwait.

The stock closed at $22 a share Monday on the New York Stock Exchange, up 25 cents.

Santa Fe is an international contractor that explores for gas and oil and has worked in Kuwait. It is not related to the Santa Fe Railroad or its parent, Santa Fe Industries Inc.

It was founded in 1946 by 62 former employees of the drilling subsidiary of Union Oil Co. of California, who paid $750,000 for the subsidiary. It now has 15,000 employees worldwide.

Under the plan, Santa Fe would become a subsidiary of Kuwait Petroleum and would continue to be based in Alhambra and operate under U.S. law.

E.L. Shannon Jr., Santa Fe chairman, said all its directors agreed to remain on the board and Kuwait Petroleum will name additional directors.

In 1980, Sante Fe had revenue of approximately $1.2 billion, half of which was derived from foreign operations. Net income was $80.9 million.

Sante Fe does produce oil, but not in the United States. Its major oil-production operation is in the North Sea. The company makes most of its money from exploration.

According to the Treasury Department, members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have an estimated $600 million in direct U.S. investments — those which account for 10 percent or more of ownership. However, The New York Times reported today that a Rosenthal subcommittee staff member said Commerce Department figures show that publicly known direct investment by OPEC nations in the United States comes to $2 billion, excluding 14 real estate deals and 42 other transactions.

In July, Kuwait Petroleum failed in a bid to buy 15 percent of Getty Oil Co. for $1 billion. The kingdom also is believed to have major holdings in Atlantic Richfield Co.; Phillips Petroleum Co.; Gulf Oil Corp.; Du Pont & Co., through the chemical giants recent takeover of Conoco Oil; and at least 15 other U.S. oil companies, the Times said.

Order would allow CIA domestic operations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A draft presidential order would give the CIA its first authority to infiltrate and influence U.S. organizations and conduct covert operations in this country designed to affect foreign events, government sources say.

The draft order, which President Reagan can issue without congressional approval, was prepared to replace restrictions imposed on U.S. intelligence agencies by President Carter in 1978. But the administration has sent the order to the House and Senate intelligence committees for comment.

On Monday, a dispute threatened to break out between the Senate panel and the administration over the Justice Department's refusal to give on-the-record explanations of legal questions raised by the draft.

Several congressional sources said the impact of the order would hinge on the interpretation placed on some passages.

Sources inside and outside the government said the order also would:

—Permit CIA covert agents to infiltrate any domestic group for a lawful purpose as defined by the agency's chief. With additional approval from the attorney general, the CIA agents could secretly try to influence the activities of the groups.

—Remove prohibitions against the CIA's conducting "special activities," or covert actions, inside the United States if they are not intended to influence U.S. policies or politics.

—Allow U.S. intelligence agents to follow and photograph Americans and U.S. corporations abroad even if they are not believed to be agents of a foreign power or involved in terrorism or drug traffic. The Carter order requires such a suspicion.

—Retain bans on assassinations anywhere and on CIA electronic surveillance in the United States and on CIA break-ins in this country.

—Assert that restrictions on FBI electronic surveillance or warrantless break-ins against U.S. citizens and corporations are not meant to limit the constitutional powers of the president.

The CIA refused comment on the proposed order.

The sources said the draft specifically states the order does not authorize any violations of existing laws, but some sources said that in certain areas, particularly involving Fourth Amendment protections against unreasonable searches, there is little or no existing law other than the Carter executive order.

Some sources raised the question of whether the new CIA domestic authority would violate the National Security Act of 1947, which set up the agency and barred it from operating domestically. But one Republican source said "there is no burning desire to get the CIA involved in domestic activity."

Another source added that some sections of the order may have been mistakenly drafted more broadly than the administration actually intended.

Several sources said another key issue would be the implementing procedures that agency chiefs establish to carry out the order. Those procedures require approval by the attorney general, but, unlike the Carter order, do not have to be disclosed to the intelligence committees.

Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Intelligence subcommittee on rights of Americans, said the Justice Department refused to give on-the-record testimony on the interpretation of the draft order at a closed hearing Monday.

The subcommittee, in turn, refused to accept off-the-record testimony and the hearing broke up.

Schmitt, however, said he was confident "this will still be worked out" and the administration will agree to present its formal position on the legal questions. The senator added that he wanted to hear from FBI Director William H. Webster.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair had no comment on the matter.

But an administration source, citing the principle of separation of powers, said Reagan officials were reluctant to create a legislative record on an executive branch action. This source said the committee was planning a formal request for tony and the administration had not yet decided whether to invoke executive privilege.

The Carter order contained prohibitions designed to prevent recurrence of U.S. intelligence abuses in the 1960s and 1970s, when FBI agents sought to discredit and disrupt civil rights and anti-war activists, and CIA agents collected information about legal dissenters. Those epiSkdes were uncovered by a Se committee in the mid-1970s.

Carter basically limiteD infiltration and influence of domestic organizations to the FBI, but the Reagan draft would open that activity to the CIA. The Reagan proposal would allow CIA agents to secretly influence the groups' activities.
