Of Coke, candy fund...

4-3 vote ends audit investigation

An investigation into the whereabouts of missing deposits from the Snyder Junior High School soft drink and candy fund ended Tuesday when school trustees accepted administrators' explanations by a 4-3 vote.

The called board session came on the heels of an audit made public earlier this month, which spurred controversy and allegations.

Tuesday night, after trustees and an overflow crowd of almost 100 spectators heard explanations as to where the almost $8,000 went, the issue was declared final.

"The supplemental information and documentation presented in this report tonight, in addition to the report given by (auditor) Mr. Joe Morren, explain the deficit," said Supt. Dalton Moseley in recommending that the board vote to end the investigation.

After explaining that all vending machines have been placed on a contract basis, Moseley added, "I believe it is time that we focus the district on the primary mission of serving the students and get on with business."

The audit, made public on Sept. 10, indicated a shortage of deposits from the fund of $1,620.50 in 1990 and $6,203.86 in 1991.

High School Principal Gary Patterson, who was junior high principal at the time, admitted to "poor accounting practices," but said no money was actually missing. Assisted by Business Manager Lee McNair, he provided handouts showing that $2,000 was in inventory, and another $4,000 in soft drinks and candy was given away during faculty and staff meetings, workshops, luncheons, school-sponsored UIL trips and as awards and incentives.

Patterson listed another $1,700 in undocumented cash disbursements for attendance awards, faculty luncheons, other functions and coffee and doughnuts.

The principal said that staff at the junior high had assisted him in accounting for the disbursements. He said he would make those names available to the board in executive session, if asked.

"No one I worked with at Snyder Junior High, no one that I was associated with in any way,

City residents to notice hike in sewer rates

Beginning Thurstday, the average resident will see a slight monthly increase in city sewer services.

New rates, recently adopted by the city council, will go into affect with the beginning of the fiscal year, Oct. 1.

Most city residents will pay about $4 more a month for sewer service, but some may actually pay less than they are now, depending on their water consumption.

In the past, residential sewer rates have been based on the number of water closets. The rate for a one bath home was $7.60 per month, two baths was $13.30, and so on.

Beginning Thursday, residents will be billed a $6 base charge plus a consumption charge.

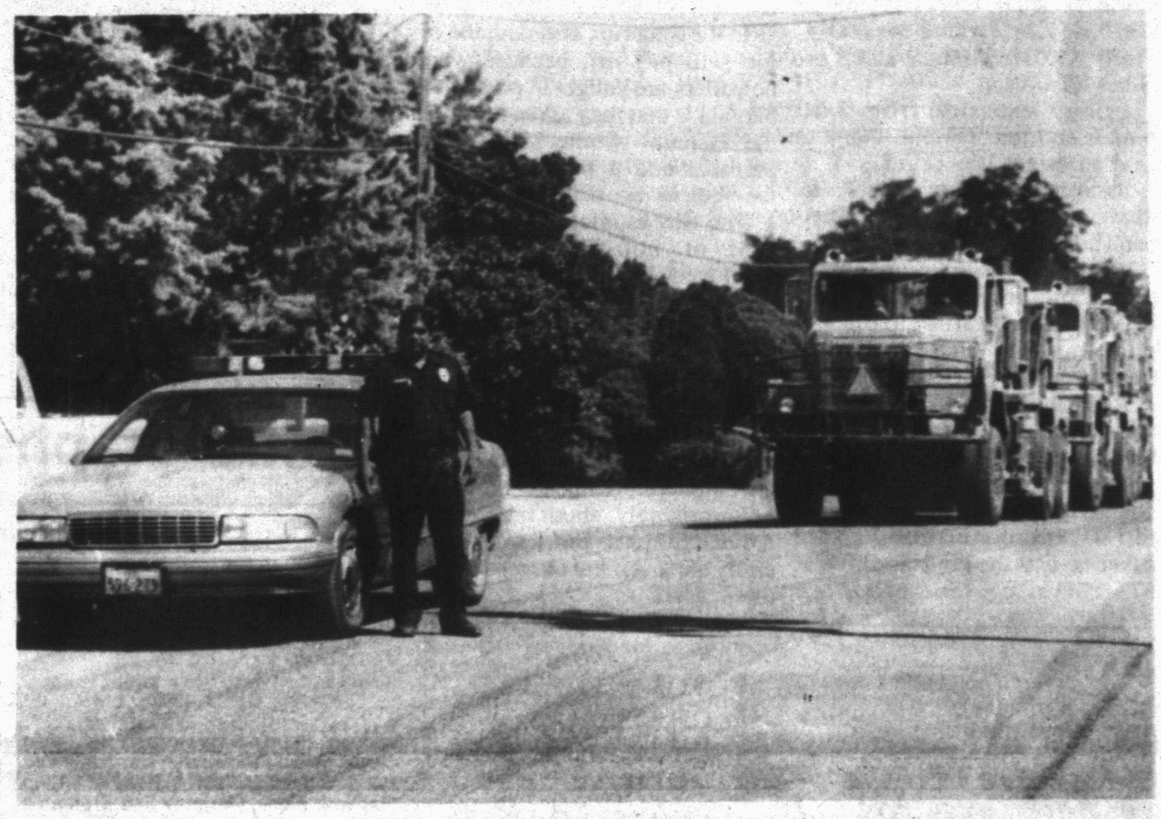

The consumption charge will be $1.80 per thousand gallons, based on 90 percent of the average monthly consumption from December, January and February. In other words, if a household used 6,600 gallons in December, 7,100 in January and 7,300 in February, its average consumption was 7,000. Ninty percent of the average would be 6,700, so the consumption charge will be $12.06. With the base rate of $6, the monthly bill will be $18.06.

Under the rate structure, a family in a two-bath home currently paying $13.30 will see a decrease in their rate to $9.24, providing they used no more than 1,800 gallons.

City officials have calculated that the average family used 6,210 gallons of water per month from December through February. Under the previous rate, the resident with two baths had a monthly bill of $13.30. Under the new rates, based on consumption rather than number of baths, the same resident will have a monthly bill of $17.18 — an increase of $3.88.

Commercial accounts will have a one-time option on how they wish consumption to be based. Businesses may elect to have their wastewater consumption based on the three-month average or on a 12-month average. Once the option has been selected, it cannot be changed. Businesses must

Both candidates 'ready'...

Stakes upped in debate chase

by The Associated Press

President Bush is suddenly seizing initiative in the battle over presidential debates, proposing a dramatic month of Sunday showdowns to close the campaign. Democrat Bill Clinton says Bush is bluffing, and challenges the president to face off this weekend.

"Let's get it on, let's get it going, less rhetoric, less posturing, and do what the American people want," Bush said today on ABC's "Good Morning America" as he tried to shake the perception he was ducking debates.

"Let's start Sunday — I'm ready," was Clinton's response to the Bush proposal. The Arkansas governor tried to keep the high ground in the debate war by noting Bush's refusal to participate has already caused three scheduled debates to be canceled.

As Bush and Clinton haggled over debates, Ross Perot was back on the morning news show circuit today, still awaiting a poll of his volunteers before deciding whether to enter the race. "No greater honor could any man have" than being urged to run, he said on CBS "This Morning."

Clinton said Perot was welcome but voiced aloud a growing worry in his campaign. "He could give the election to Bush if those who want change are equally divided," Clinton said in a taped interview on the same show.

With a guaranteed audience in the tens of millions, a debate series as proposed by Bush would dominate the final month of the campaign.

It would give the president four opportunities to break from his stagnant stand in the polls — but also risks giving Clinton four opportunities to hold his own against the incumbent.

For Clinton, the opportunity to close any stature gap with Bush would be balanced by the risk of squandering his lead with a misstep.

Strategists in both camps said Bush's proposal was unlikely to be accepted without change.

Cross 'pays debt,' freed from prison

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — James C. Cross, one of Texas' most notorious killers, was freed this morning after serving 26 years in prison for the rape-strangulation of a University of Texas student.

Cross walked down the steps of the Walls Unit with three other released inmates, jumped into the back seat of his attorney's blue Cadillac and put his arm around his wife, Gloria. The car then sped away.

The gray-haired Cross refused to respond to questions shouted at him from reporters.

Just before his release, which occurred shortly after 8 a.m., Austin attorney David Botsford read a brief statement in which he promised Cross would be a productive member of society and posed no threat to the public.

"For almost 27 years, Jim Cross has done almost everything possible to demonstrate he's ready, willing and able to be a productive member of society," Botsford said.

Prison spokesman Charles Brown disputed questions from reporters who asked whether Cross' release today illustrated a shortcoming of the Texas judical system.

"He's completed his sentence," he said. "Once he's completed his sentence he's free."

Meanwhile in Austin, the Coalition for a Safer Society, a victims' rights group, planned to protest the release at the Capitol.

Cross was sentenced to 80 years for the July 18, 1965, slaying of Susan Rigsby, 21, of Dallas. Miss Rigsby and her Chi Omega sorority sister, 21-year-old Shirley Stark, who had dated Cross, stopped at Cross' apartment on their way to register for school.

Both were raped and strangled. Cross, then a 22-year-old English major at UT, was accused of both slayings, but was never tried for Miss Stark's murder.

Texas prisons spokesman David Nunnelee said Cross, now 50, who has been denied parole 20 times since he was incarcerated, has accumulated enough good time to be discharged without supervision. He is one of the few Texas inmates to serve his full prison term.

"It's none of our business," Raven Kazen, spokesman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's parole division, said earlier this month.

58 undergo testing for officer training

Fifty-eight people are currently being interviewed for possible enrollment in an October correctional officer training class at Western Texas College.

The interviewing process will continue through Thursday, and Texas Department of Criminal Justice officials will notify the college concerning qualified applicants next week.

Local college officials said 130 people applied for the Oct. 26 class. Of those, 89 showed up for testing Tuesday.

Some of the others may be planning on testing on Oct. 13 in Abilene. Officials said 150 people have applied for that class, which will also begin Oct. 26.

Applications will be taken through Dec. 1 for the first correctional officer training (COT) class of 1993. That class is scheduled to begin Jan. 18.

The classes are 18-day classes. Those who complete the course and are certified are eligible for employment within the TDJC correctional division.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A person who thinks women in combat is a new issue has never been married."

George Breazeale, veteran Austin sportswriter, is doing a series on the top Central Texas football teams. Last Friday, The Glory Years featured the 1958 Elgin Wildcats who became known as the "Elgin Overachievers" and who lost in the Class A state finals to undefeated White Deer.

Breazeale wrote: "Forecasters, surveying only one returning starter from a 7-3 team of 1957, expected only a break-even 1958 season from Elgin. But they were unaware of the leadership qualities of Harry Krenek, a 180-pound senior back who went on to earn all-state honors."

Krenek, now president of Western Texas College, was interviewed for the article as well as pictured. Krenek's son, David, is a junior and No. 83 on the Snyder Tigers roster. David suffered a knee injury in the season opener with Sweetwater, but may be ready for action against Dumas this Friday.

Coach James Lyda, now in the construction business building the Alamodome in San Antonio, recalls Krenek as "a fantastic football player."

Added the coach, "Whatever it took to get the job done, running or throwing the ball or at linebacker, he would do. He had one problem: contact lenses. About all he could see without them was the color of the jerseys. When his contacts fell out, we'd usually find them."

Krenek recalls that one lens fell out early in the state championship game and it couldn't be found. He added, however, that it didn't affect the outcome.

The coach also praised Krenek's determination. "He was tough. One time in practice, he got a couple of teeth knocked out and played in our bi-district game the next night."

Krenek recalls that enunciation — not pain — was the problem. "Don Josephson was hurt, and I had to play quarterback. I'll never know how our players could understand me in the huddle, with my two front teeth broken off. I didn't have them pulled until after Christmas. Players didn't wear mouthpieces then."

IRS targets 10,000 non-filers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Up to 10 million individuals and businesses that don't bother filing tax returns are getting a new offer from the Internal Revenue Service: Come to us before we come to you.

"We simply cannot allow this type of massive non-compliance to continue," IRS Commissioner Shirley D. Peterson said in a recent interview.

The IRS is convinced that most non-filers are not willful violators. If they "get right with the government" before they are caught, Ms. Peterson said, the tax agency will help prepare their returns, offer an installment plan or maybe even negotiate a settlement for less than owed, if necessary.

"But those people who will not come forward voluntarily, for those who absolutely refuse ... we are going to reach out and touch them," she said.

Ms. Peterson predicted the new initiative, aimed at recovering an estimated $7 billion a year, will result in increased use of the IRS' ultimate weapon — criminal prosecution — against hard-core non-filers.

The IRS is so concerned about reducing the number of non-filers that it is assigning 2,000 of its 19,000 auditors and revenue agents to concentrate on bringing delinquents onto the tax rolls.

Because of personnel limits, there is a short-term risk of losing other revenue if the shift causes the regular audit rate to drop below the current nine taxpayers per 1,000, Ms. Peterson acknowledged. But, she said, "This problem (of non-filers) ... is getting worse and we simply must address it."

In the long run, she said, the effort will pay off, because when non-filers are caught, "part of the bargain is that they agree to stay in the system." Some 114 million personal and 6 million business tax returns are filed annually.

The IRS estimates that 64 percent of non-filers are self-employed individuals who deal primarily in cash. They have been out of the system on the average for four years; most are in their peak earning years and live in affluent neighborhoods. Less than 25 percent of their total income, on average, is reported to the IRS by an employer, bank or broker.

Surprisingly, about one-quarter are due refunds. But refunds generally are lost if not claimed within three years.

Those who continue to stay off the rolls will see their bills ballooned by interest and penalties.

The IRS is able to identify non-filers by checking wage and interest earnings reports from employers and banks, auditing employer returns and using tips from informants. Also, many people trip themselves: they suddenly drop out after several years of filing.

In one test of the non-filer program, 73 people responded to a speech by the IRS director in Omaha, Neb. The result: 20 of them came into the office and paid up, 26 filed but still owed money and 27 were due refunds.

During a one-day session in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., at which private accountants offered their help, 69 previous non-filers handed in returns and the IRS collected $78,000.

Quite often, a person becomes a non-filer after a significant event such as divorce.

On The Issues

The issue: homosexuals in the military

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Associated Press asks the Bush and Clinton campaigns for their stands on an issue each weekday and reports their responses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the views of the presidential nominees on the question: Should homosexuals be allowed to serve in the military?

Bush: "On this issue, I have followed the advice of our nation's top military leaders and will continue to do so." (The current policy of the armed forces is to exclude homosexuals)

Clinton: "Yes. I support repeal of the ban on gays and lesbians serving in the United States armed forces, in accord with the Pentagon study which stated that allowing gays and lesbians to serve would have no detrimental impact on our military strength."

Guerrero airs apology/attack ad

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad Commission candidate Lena Guerrero is taking to the TV airwaves in a bid to re-energize her campaign.

The Democrat began airing a commercial Tuesday night that apologizes for her false claim to a college degree and attacks her Republican opponent.

"I made a serious mistake," the Democrat tells voters in the ad. "I hope you can forgive me."

The 30-second commercial airing statewide also criticizes Dallas oilman Barry Williamson for seeking to regulate a business in which his wife and father-in-law are involved.

Mark McKinnon, the Austin consultant who created the ad, described it as a way to make sure all voters know Ms. Guerrero is sorry for her 12-year claim to a college diploma and that she resigned from the Railroad Commission.

"She's asking for a second chance and another look," McKinnon said. "We've had the debate over her academic record, and now we hope there will be a debate over her public record and the public record of her opponent. And we'll find out in the end what's important to people."

He said the commercial was being aired on all network affiliates in every Texas TV market.

The ad hit television on the same night Ms. Guerrero held a $100,000 fund-raising event at an Austin hotel and a reception at the Governor's Mansion.

Republicans protested the reception, saying the governor's defense of the woman she appointed to the Railroad Commission smacks of hypocrisy.

"Lena Guerrero has never admitted she lied. Ann Richards has never said it's wrong. Instead, the 'ethics governor' is using the people's house, the Governor's Mansion, to reward a career built on lies and deception," said Carole Keeton Rylander, who lost the GOP primary to Williamson.

Richards spokeswoman Margaret Justus said the reception was being paid for by Ms. Guerrero, so that no tax money was being used. She said the reception was no different than those hosted by previous governors.

McKinnon said the attack portion of Ms. Guerrero's commercial is designed to call voters' attention to ties between Williamson and oil and gas industry. His father-in-law is a Midland oilman and his wife has oil and gas holdings.

"Barry Williamson has some serious conflicts of interest. He's not going to represent working families, he'll be working for big oil and his family's holdings," McKinnon charged.

Williamson has said he would decline to take part in any Railroad Commission proceedings involving his father-in-law and that his wife's holdings are in a blind trust.

"That's like a blind fox guarding the henhouse," McKinnon said.

But a Williamson spokesman, Jeff Norwood, said neither Williamson nor his wife, Holly, has any control over the trust.

"Barry does not own any oil and gas properties or interests at all," Norwood said. "His wife owned some oil properties that were placed in a blind trust over a year ago. Holly has no control over that trust. It is a legally binding blind trust," Norwood said.

EPA official declares sludge ranch true recycling project

SIERRA BLANCA, Texas (AP) — A federal regulator has declared a West Texas sludge project "true recycling" and said it may not need a federal permit.

But the attorney general's office disagrees.

B.J. "Buck" Wynne, EPA Region 6 administrator, visited Sierra Blanca Ranch Tuesday at the invitation of some of the controversial sludge project's supporters. He declared it a "true recycling project" and said he's not sure if enough sludge is being applied.

"As a result of what I have seen here today, and after reviewing the chemical analyses of the sludge being applied, I have serious questions about whether the federal government ought to be regulating this activity at all through the issuance of a permit," Wynne said.

But Ron Dusek, spokesman for Attorney General Dan Morales, said the sludge does not meet New York City standards. Texas law prohibits the dumping of out-of-state waste in the state if the waste does not meet either state's regulations. The higher standards apply, he said.

"The burning question here, when you apply common sense to this, is if this is so beneficial for the soil, if this is fertilizer, why isn't New York selling it to the state of Texas instead of paying $168 million to have it hauled off?" Dusek said.

The attorney general's office has sued the EPA and MERCO, accusing the EPA of failing to follow its own permit rules when it gave MERCO permission to spread the sludge.

MERCO began spreading sludge in July on the 128,000-acre desert ranch, about 70 miles from El Paso.

The project is the largest ever involving arid rangeland and critics say the sludge contains dangerous levels of heavy metals and pathogens.

Co-Worker's Skin-Tight Outfit Stretches the Limits of Taste

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I work in a large office where both men and women are employed. We have never had a dress code, so the employees wear pretty much what they want to wear.

My objection is the way some women dress for the office. I object particularly to women in stretch pants. The other day, one woman wore skin-tight stretch pants with a sleeveless blouse tucked into the waistband. You could see her knee-high stocking line through her pants leg, and her slightly puffy stomach was protruding.

Some of the men just shook their heads as she walked by. She saw them snickering and announced that this was the latest style. Abby, am I wrong in thinking that this kind of outfit is inappropriate for an office? What do you think?

GERRI IN CINCINNATI

DEAR GERRI: The manner in which employees dress should be determined by those who set policy for the company. In the absence of a dress code, common sense and reasonable judgment should prevail. (Where is your office manager? This should be his or her responsibility.)

As for the woman whose stretch pants raised a few eyebrows: To quote from Robert Burns' classic poem, "To a Louse" (1786):

"Oh wad some power the giftie gie us
"To see oursels as others see us!"

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is going to have a Christmas wedding, so I would like to order your booklet on "How to Have a Lovely Wedding."

Also, is there some kind of minor operation that can be done to restore her virginity?

Please do not say where this letter is from, because this is a very small town, and you know how people gossip in small towns, if you get my drift.

HER MOM

DEAR MOM: I get your drift. But there is no way a girl's virginity can be surgically restored.

P.S.: The absence of a hymen does not mean that a girl has been sexually active. It can be ruptured through various sports activities.

DEAR ABBY: I think it was about this time last year you ran a suggested letter for those who wished to discontinue giving Christmas gifts to friends whom you felt sure would appreciate being removed from their gift-giving list.

I failed to cut it out, and now find that I need to let some friends know that we probably both would appreciate not having to go through the gift-giving procedure simply because we've been doing it for years. Thank you again.

ANONYMOUS, BUT ONE OF MANY

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Be absolutely up-front with your friends. Around Thanksgiving, write them a short note saying that you are counting your blessings — among them are friends with whom you can be completely honest. Then suggest: "From now on, let us exchange only Christmas cards — no gifts." I assure you they will not be offended.

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle-aged woman with a tendency to gain weight. I know women who eat twice as much as I do and never gain an ounce. I have high cholesterol and high blood pressure, so I have to be careful.

Everywhere I go, people try to push food on me. I take only modest portions, but I'm constantly asked, "Is that all you're going to eat?" What should I say?

WATCHING MY WEIGHT

DEAR WATCHING: Just say "Yes"!

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Students' jury finds pig guilty

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — The Pig did it.

According to a jury of fourth graders, the third Pig of storybook legend intentionally tried to cook the Big Bad Wolf. The O'Connor Elementary School students found Pig guilty of attempted wolf "poaching" Tuesday, and sentenced him to perform 100 hours of community service.

Pig began immediately by sweeping up the school sidewalks. His punishment was relatively light compared to the possible sentence of "becoming ham hocks."

Pig had maintained during the mock trial that the scalding incident was an accident.

Staff at the campus dressed as pigs, wolves, judges and attorneys to put on the play for students studying fairy tails.

During the testimony, jurors heard conflicting stories of what happened during the fabled incident.

Pig, played by school counselor Christina McNeill, told the young jurors that Wolf was scalded while illegally breaking into his house. Pig said Wolf was burned when he dropped down the chimney into a pot of boiling water.

Corpus Christi jury splits responsibility between teenager and liquor company

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — An 18-year-old Texas A&I University student was two-thirds responsible for her death from drinking at least 20 shots of Pepe Lopez tequila, a Nueces County jury has ruled.

But the jury Tuesday also awarded $1.5 million to Marie Brinkmeyer's mother.

"I think the message will be to put warning labels on their product so people will know that alcohol is lethal and to educate and advertise about their product, that it is lethal," said Ms. Brinkmeyer's mother, Joyce Brune of Orange Grove.

Jurors deliberated five days in the case against Brown-Forman Co. of Louisville, Ky.

Ms. Brinkmeyer was found dead in her dorm room at Kingsville on Nov. 14, 1983. According to trial testimony, she drank at least 20 straight shots of tequila at a dorm drinking party the previous night.

The lawsuit, filed in 1985, contended Brown-Forman was negligent because it failed to warn consumers that drinking too much alcohol too quickly could be fatal.

Corpus Christi lawyer Jorge Rangel, who represented the company, didn't return telephone calls from the Corpus Christi Caller-Times Tuesday.

Jim Ragan, Ms. Brune's attorney, said he expects his client to end up with about $500,000.

"Because the liquor company is 35 percent at fault, they will have to pay 35 percent of the award," Ragan said.

Ms. Brune said she intends to use some of the award money to set up a scholarship fund and improve educational facilities in Orange Grove.

Jurors said it wasn't an easy case to decide.

"There were extremes on either side of the issue," said presiding juror Bruce Easter. "That didn't help matters. I think a problem that some of the jurors had was separating their personal feelings and personal experiences with alcohol from the facts of the case."

The exceptions to the Law

By Phillip Alder

There are times when The Law of Total Tricks underestimates the number of tricks available during the play of a deal. The most important time is when there is a double fit.

When you and your partner have a double fit, normally only about 22 points are needed for game. You should always bid at least one more trick than your point-count suggests.

Therefore, if you have a two-suited hand and immediately hit a fit in one suit, you should try to show your second suit so that partner knows whether there is a double fit.

Today's deal suggests that it pays to compete — as it often does. Over North's limit raise of three hearts, showing about 11 total points and four trumps, East might have risked a take-out double. This would have persuaded West to sacrifice in four spades, based on the double fit in the black suits. Four spades doubled would have cost only 100 points.

Four hearts is defeated by a club lead and a spade switch. But West actually opted for a low spade. East put in the 10, confident his partner wasn't underleading the spade ace. If declarer wins this trick, he goes down. After drawing trumps, he takes the diamond finesse. But when it loses, East puts his partner on play with a spade to the queen, and a club switch nets two more tricks for the defense. However, South played his spade nine at trick one, cutting the defenders' communications. Later, South discarded one club loser on dummy's fourth diamond, losing only one trick in each side suit.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.

Magic Johnson rejoins Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Last time, the mood was grim and it was all Magic Johnson could do to flash his trademark smile. This time, he could do nothing but.

Joking with his wife and reporters from the outset, Johnson informed the world what it's been waiting for months to hear — he's back.

In the same room Tuesday where 327 days earlier he announced his retirement because he had contracted the AIDS virus, Johnson told a packed news conference at the Forum he will play for the Los Angeles Lakers this season.

"I'm playing again," he said. "Yeaaaa. Finally! That court is where I belong, no matter what happens.

"This is a lot more relaxed ... better. It was much tougher then because I was having to say goodbye."

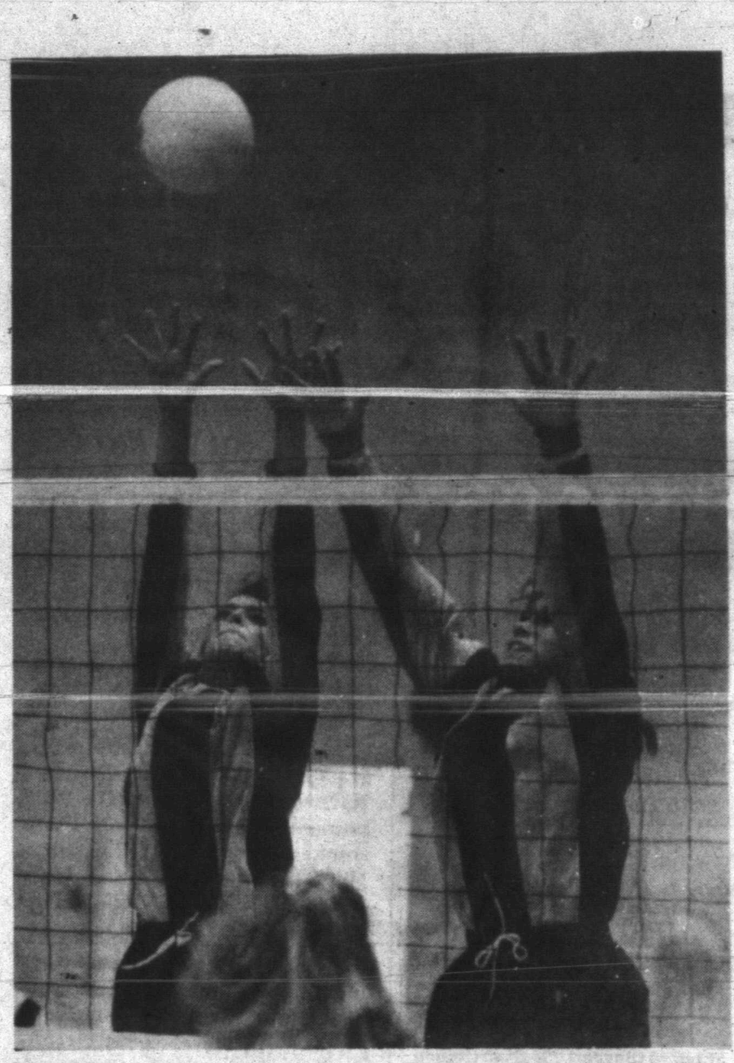

Johnson's wife, Cookie, said she was behind his decision to return "totally ... 100 percent."

"Cookie always told me I was coming back," Johnson said. "No, you haven't given me the OK sign, so I bribed her, gave her a million dollars, and she said it was all right."

Johnson, 33, said he won't play full time — 50-to-60 games is the starting point for this season — and he'll be examined often by doctors who admit they don't know just what the grind of professional basketball will do to a man with Johnson's medical condition.

"It's time to go back to work, it's time to have some fun," said Johnson, showing the bulk of an added 15 pounds he gained recently through a rigorous weight-training program. "I think the positives outweigh all the risks.

The Lakers report to Honolulu on Oct. 8 to begin preparations for the season.

WTC finishes 6th at Ruidoso

RUIDOSO, N.M. — Twelve of the nation's top 15 junior college golf teams were competing in the Midland-Odessa Invitational tournament at The Links here, so WTC's sixth-place finish didn't concern coach Milton Ham.

"We didn't play particularly good, but we didn't play bad," Ham said of his team's 54-hole 906 score.

"We're getting better all the time. We have a lot of freshmen on this team, and we have to get them seasoned a little bit.

"This fall season is good for one thing for golf coaches," he continued, "and that's getting everything lined out for the spring season, getting ready for conference, regionals and a run at the national tournament.

"We learned a lot here," Ham said. "The Links is a beautiful course, but it has a lot of mounds, big ones, so if you get off the fairway, you are, more than likely, going to have a pretty severe lie. We don't get to practice under conditions like that.

"The competition was extremely tough," the coach stated. "It's probably the best junior college tournament in the nation."

Defending national champion Midland College ran away with the tourney title, shooting a team total 855, 25 shots better than runner-up Odessa No. 2's 880.

Odessa No. 1 was third with an 881, followed by New Mexico Junior College's 883, an 895 from Western New Mexico and WTC's 906, featuring a 298 in Tuesday's final round.

Scotland native Steve Dundas of Midland was the tournament medalist. Dundas shot three below-par scores, 70, 65 and 68, for an individual-best 203.

Mike Torres led Western Texas with a three-round 222, including a three-under 69 Tuesday.

Chris Rogers added a 227 on rounds of 75, 77 and 75, Jimmy Flores shot a 74-77-80--231, Corey Adams fired twin 76s then capped off the tourney with a Tuesday 81 for a 233, and Neal Ray Davis notched an 81-83-74--238.

The Westerners will be at Odessa's Mission Dorado Sunday through Tuesday for the Odessa College Invitational.

Midland-Odessa Invitational at The Links, Ruidoso, N.M. Final results

Team standings: 1. Midland College 855; 2. Odessa No. 2 880; 3. Odessa No. 1 881; 4. New Mexico Junior College 895; 5. Western New Mexico 895; 6. WTC 906.

Medalist: Steve Dundas, Midland, 70-65-68--203.

WTC scores: Mike Torres 77-76-69--222; Chris Rogers 75-77-75--227; Jimmy Flores 74-77-80--231; Corey Adams 76-76-81--233; Neal Ray Davis 81-83-74--238.

Snyder boxers win at tourney

Johnny Vasquez, Jr. was among the Snyder Boxing Club winners at the group's weekend tournament at the Scurry County Coliseum Annex.

Vasquez defeated Adolfo Zubia of Odessa in his bout.

Other local winners include Joseph Martinez, who won in a decision over Mando Zubia of Odessa, Mike Martinez, Jr., a winner by decision over Andrews' Jose Somora, and Gabriel Vasquez, who earned a decision over Ft. Stockton fighter Gustavo Rodriguez.

Ignacio Martinez of Snyder fought an exhibition bout with national runner-up Humberto Zubia of Odessa.

Snyder Boxing Club members not in action Saturday and Sunday were James Vaughn, Greg Herrera and Travis Henderson.

Lady Rebels nudge Snyder

MIDLAND LEE — Snyder's Lady Tigers lost a three-game non-district volleyball match to Midland Lee Tuesday, 15-11, 14-16, 11-15, but SHS coach Patty Grimmett saw through the loss to the positive aspects of the match.

"I was pleased with almost everything," she said. "Of course, we'd like to have won, but the girls played really well and they're showing improvement every match.

"The girls see a loss, but I see that each match we get better. All these matches are getting us ready for district.

"Our won-loss record is what most people see, but when district starts next week, we'll all be 0-0.

"We should have beaten Midland Lee," she continued, "just a few things need to be worked on.

"We played offense so much better than we had earlier in the season. We were blocking them all the way down the net and our serving has improved tremendously."

Grimmett also had words of praise for defensive standouts.

"Melanie Duncan made an awesome block of a short set shot," she said. "And Brooke Kubena blocked a serve that went straight to the floor."

The Lady Tigers served 87 times in the three games, missing only six for a 93 percent success rate.

"The first game, we served great," Grimmett reported. "All three games were close all the way.

"They had one girl who was hitting at us and if you weren't in exactly the right spot, she was going to hit the floor with the ball.

"The second game Midland started hitting at us, and we were digging up their hits. We just ran out of substitutions."

"All in all," coach Grimmett said, "a lot of positive things happened."

Stephanie Fambro paced the Lady Tigers with 10 service points, followed by Karri Blackledge's nine, eight by Lynette Sears and seven from Duncan, who also had four kills.

Melody Sargent contributed three points from the line, Joellen King had a pair of points to go with her four kills and Melissa Hernandez scored one.

Snyder holds a 9-11 season record.

The Snyder JV squad handed Lee a 15-8, 15-9 loss Tuesday.

Leading scorers for SHS were Lindsey Daniell with seven, Angela Cox, who served a perfect 10-for-10, with five, Dian Jones with five, including an ace, and Bianca Rocha, who slammed an ace, also had five.

Snyder's JV moves to 16-4 on the year.

Varsity, JV and freshmen spikers from SHS will travel to Bronte Saturday for a non-district match with the Lady Longhorns. Matches begin at 1 p.m.

Snyder splits spike matches

Snyder's seventh grade B volleyball squad handed Colorado City a 15-1, 15-8 loss Monday, behind MVP Mysti Curry's 12 straight points, eight from Julie Vaca, Priscilla Tavarez with five, Daysha Weaver's two and one from Lisa McNair.

Kristy Bollinger was tabbed the match's defensive MVP.

Colorado City A defeated Snyder in the late match Monday, 11-15, 18-16, 8-15.

Amanda Huff had 11 points from the service line to pace Snyder. Brooke French scored 10, Erin Maytubby managed seven, Halea Huestis smacked four, Mary Higby popped two and Katy Walker and Crystal Lee each rapped one.

The Snyder seventh grade A team won the consolation bracket title at Saturday's Seminole Tournament.

After an opening game loss to host Seminole, 9-15, 11-15, Snyder earned a spot in the consolation game by beating Jal, N.M., 13-15, 15-5, 16-14. The Lady Tigers dropped Andrews in the title game, 15-7, 15-10.

The seventh graders will be back on the court Mon. Oct. 5 at Colorado City. Matches begin at 5 p.m.

The only Super Bowl team unable to score a touchdown was Miami, a 24-3 loser to Dallas in 1972.

8th graders sweep C-City

Snyder's eighth grade volleyball team swept Colorado City in two matches Monday. The SJHS A team won, 7-15, 15-10, 15-8, while the B squad took a 15-7, 15-5 win from C-City.

Raechelle Wemken scored nine service points to lead Snyder A. Darla Blackwell had eight, Keri Kemp smacked five, Lisha Leatherwood scored four, Shawn Purcell and Devon Reed each lifted three, Monie Pena punched two and Joanie Wemken, Sha Marricle and Sam Trevino knocked one apiece.

Leatherwood, Raechelle Wemken, Blackwell and Kemp were named match MVPs.

Most Valuable Player Sarah Knowles led the B team's attack with seven points Monday. Elyse Merritt had six followed by four from Shauna Huddleston, Shelly York's three and two each from Keri Nachlinger, Angie Rodriguez, Bianca Sims, Defensive MVP Maribeth Dillaha and Dotty Vanderpool.

Snyder's eighth grade A team was 1-2 in its appearance at Saturday's Seminole Tournament.

The Lady Tigers beat host Seminole, 15-7, 15-10, before losing to Lamesa, 12-15, 15-12, 9-15, and Andrews, 11-15, 15-12, 7-15.

Snyder's next outing is an Oct. 5 rematch with Colorado City there. Matches begin at 5 p.m.

Richardson leads SHS awardees' list

Senior linebacker-guard Charles Richardson leads this week's list of Snyder Tigers football players earning awards for accomplishments in Friday's 14-6 win over Big Spring.

"Charles had a great game," said SHS head football coach David Baugh. "It was probably the best game he's had."

Richardson, who made 10½ tackles against the Steers, claimed defensive awards for two interceptions, a pair of tackles behind the line of scrimmage, and two passes knocked down.

In addition, he claimed the week's Big Hit Award.

On offense, the SHS senior notched 15 knockdowns and had a pair of pins, that is, pinning an opposing tackler on his back after a block.

The weekly coaches' awards were handed out Tuesday at a team meeting.

Richardson's interceptions were part of a five-theft night that set a school record.

Also nabbing steals were Michael Fields with two and Barretta Collins with one.

Besides stealing five passes, Snyder's defense limited the high-powered Big Spring passing attack to just nine yards.

Other defensive awardees include Emiliano Chaidez, Brad Hart, Wayland Harrison and Collins for tackles for losses, and Fields and Chaidez for passes knocked down.

Todd Iglehart was also cited as the Tigers' leading tackler with 11.

The list of offensive award winners starts with tailback Ben Wilson who gained 146 yards on 15 carries Friday night. Wilson, as well as all his offensive linemen will receive a helmet decal for his 100-yard rushing performance.

The offensive line of the Tigers posted 118 knockdowns against Big Spring, its second-highest total of the year. Besides Richardson's 15, Jimmy Henry had 17, Iglehart had 16, Hart had 15, Brian Lickey had 11, tight end Jason Greene had nine and fullback Wayland Harrison had eight.

Linemen need 10 knockdowns in a game for an award and backs and receivers need seven.

Henry also was credited with seven drives Friday. A drive is defined by the coaches as pushing an opposing tackler at least five yards past the line of scrimmage. Five are required for a citation.

Hart added six and Lickey had five.

Henry, who has turned into one of the Tigers' steadiest linemen, also scored two pins.

Quarterback Matt Cave and wingback Michael Fields each won Great Fake Awards.

Kicker J. Parker won awards for three kickoffs into the end zone, as well as three consecutive successful PAT kicks, going back to the Wylie game two weeks ago.

Holder Jim Pat Griffin and long snapper Lickey also won awards for the extra points.

Other special teams winners featured Hart, who was recognized for excellent punt coverage, and Wilson, who blocked Big Spring's only extra-point attempt.

U.S. Senate passes tax bill

Negotiators try to avoid tax increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators are looking for a few billion dollars to expand Individual Retirement Accounts and build up the inner cities without raising taxes.

President Bush has told Republicans that as much as he wants to offer incentives for saving and improving blighted areas, he will veto any bill that increases taxes.

The Senate on Tuesday night approved a $35 billion catchall tax bill with those provisions and a lot more — including an extension of two increases on high-income taxpayers that Bush signed in 1990 and has been apologizing for in his re-election campaign.

The bill, passed by a strong, bipartisan vote of 70-29, now goes to a Senate-House conference committee that will begin work Thursday on finding a compromise between the measure and a $17 billion version passed by the House in July.

The tax legislation is only one of several major issues standing in the way of adjournment of the 102nd Congress early next week.

The House today was considering whether to override Bush's 32nd veto. The president rejected a bill requiring large employers to provide up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for any worker who needs the time because of the birth of a child or family medical emergency.

The Senate voted to override the veto — the first time that has happened in Bush's presidency — but backers acknowledged they had little chance of gaining the needed two-thirds majority in the House.

In the Senate, conservatives showed in a series of test votes they had no chance of blocking ratification of a nuclear arms-reduction treaty between the United States and the former Soviet Union. Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., is leading the opposition, insisting Russia might be able to modernize its weapons under the treaty.

But Democratic efforts to renew the post-Watergate law that authorized independent counsels to investigate allegations of government wrongdoing were abandoned under threat of a Republican filibuster.

Senate begins trial of Brazilian president

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — As the cheers and fireworks faded, Brazilians celebrating the fall of scandal-tainted President Fernando Collor de Mello turned today to the task of getting the paralyzed nation moving again.

The impeachment of Collor late Tuesday by the lower house of Congress was celebrated through the night and hailed as a watershed for Latin American democracy.

Collor was ousted after weeks of huge demonstrations against his government. In a sign of political maturity in Brazil, a political crisis had led to something other than a military coup.

Today, Congress began formal steps to strip the 43-year-old Collor of his powers and install his replacment, Vice President Itamar Franco. Senate President Mauro Benevides said Franco could take over by Friday.

Collor's 25-member Cabinet quit after the vote Tuesday, but pledged to stay on as a transition team, at the president's request. Today, Franco met with candidates for his Cabinet.

The Chamber of Deputies voted 441-38 to impeach Collor for allegedly taking $6.5 million in "undue benefits" from a slush fund operated by his former campaign treasurer.

Collor said through a spokesman that he would not quit voluntarily, and go only if the Senate found him guilty.

A 21-member commission named by the Senate is to review the lower house's action, and vote to accept or reject the request for a Senate trial, which is part of the impeachment proceedings.

If the president is convicted at trial, Franco remains in power until Collor's term expires Jan. 1, 1995. Collor reassumes full powers if the Senate absolves him or cannot reach a verdict within 180 days.

"The Senate will offer all possible speed ... because this has paralyzed investments in the country," Benevides said.

A two-thirds majority of the 81-member Senate is needed to remove him permanently, but fewer than 10 senators are believed to support Collor.

"It's all finished. The game has ended," Rep. Jose Lourenco, one of Collor's staunchest supporters, said after the lower house vote.

The impeachment of the unpopular president was hailed in today's press.

"Collor Out" read the banner headline in the newspaper O Estado de Sao Paulo.

The half-page headline in the Jornal do Brasil of Rio de Janeiro said simply: "Yes."

Some 100,000 people rallied outside parliament after the man who took office in 1990 on a clean government platform was ousted Tuesday.

"It's the first time I am able to feel proud that I'm a Brazilian," said Virgilio Montesanto, an 18-year-old student who, like many, had painted his face with the national colors, green and yellow.

'Good Samaritan' killer escapes 2nd date of execution

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas death row inmate Danny Ray Harris, dubbed the "Good Samaritan" killer, has escaped execution for a second time after the U.S. Supreme Court issued a stay.

The high court unanimously voted for the stay Tuesday while it decides whether to hear an appeal from Harris, who was convicted of killing a Bryan man nearly 14 years ago.

Harris, 32, faced lethal injection before dawn today for the Dec. 11, 1978, murder of Timothy Merka.

Merka, 27, a Texas A&M University employee, was beaten with a bumper jack and robbed after he stopped to help Harris and his brother, Curtis, and two others who were on the side of the road with a disabled car in rural Brazos County near Mumford.

But less than seven hours before the scheduled execution, the Supreme Court issued the stay late Tuesday.

Million dollar drawings head for small towns

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Lottery says it will hold eight more million-dollar drawings in smaller towns between October and May.

Fourteen drawings have been held around the state weekly since June, with seven participants winning prizes of $10,000 to $1 million.

Comptroller John Sharp said the format of the upcoming drawings will remain the same although the frequency will be reduced.

"Moving now to smaller cities, the Texas Lottery's popular grand prize giveaways will travel to a different Texas town every month for the next eight months," he said Tuesday.

Sharp, whose office oversees the lottery, said the 14 weekly drawings so far have allowed the Texas Lottery to give away more large cash prizes than any other newly created state lottery.

"We'll continue that tradition by taking these monthly drawings to some of the state's smaller towns and cities," he said.

The next drawing is scheduled for Oct. 21 at Zapata.

"The lottery drawings were well received in every city we went to this summer. Now we have a chance to visit with even more Texans," Sharp said.

But some Brownwood officials aren't pleased with the selection of their city. Most Brown County voters had opposed the lottery.

"I think it's a shame, and I'd just as soon they not do it here," said Paul Ellsworth, executive vice president of the Brownwood Chamber of Commerce.

Andy Welch, a spokesman for the comptroller's office, said any lottery ticket which shows the word "entry" three times is eligible for the drawings.

No tickets in the lottery's newest game, "Touchdown," will qualify for the big-dollar prize drawings. But eligible tickets remain from earlier games that included Lone Star Millions, Texas Match Up and Lone Star Millionaire, Welch said.

Lottery director Nora Linares said a random drawing would be held from eligible tickets mailed to lottery headquarters to choose the seven finalists and three alternates for each $1 million drawing.

The schedule for the eight drawings is:

Oct. 21 — Zapata.

November — Sherman-Denison.

December — Brownwood.

January, 1993 — Bryan.

February — Harlingen.

March — New Braunfels-Gruene.

April — Midland-Odessa.

May — Galveston.

Rates

choose a rate method by Dec. 30.

Until a commercial customer has notified the city utility office of the preferable option, the billing will be based on a three-month average.

Water and sanitation rates have not changed for the fiscal year 1993. However, the city has implemented landfill usage fees which begin Thursday.

Automobiles and vans will be charged $1.07 entry fee to the landfill. Pickups will be charged $2.14. Landfill fees will be collected at the landfill gate. The customer must have a copy of the receipt to present to personnel at the actual dumping site.

Fees include a $3.20 charge for a dump truck up to six cubic yards, $6.41 for a dump truck up to 12 cubic yards, $2.67 for trailers up to 8-foot by 8-foot, and $5.07 for trailers over 8-foot by 8-foot, up to 8-foot by 16-foot.

There are also charges for disposal of tires and contaminated wastes. Anyone needing this information may contact the city.

Audit investigation would ever intentionally do anything wrong and certainly would never take anything. I would stake what's left of my reputation on it," said Patterson.

Patterson pointed out that $25,000 of non-tax generated revenue was raised and spent for teaching supplies, office supplies and equipment, student awards, flowers, food and payment to employees.

Trustee Luann Burleson questioned McNair about the use of the funds.

"Would you say that any of the expenditures that Mr. Patterson made, had he gone through the central office requesting these expenditures, would any of these have been denied?"

"No," said McNair. "Money that is generated in the Coke and candy fund is supposed to be used for students and faculty at the junior high and for nothing else."

"Is there any evidence that any of the money was used for personal gain?" said Burleson.

"No."

"By any employee?" Burleson said.

"No," said McNair. "None that I saw."

Trustee Charles Anderson, who had earlier called for further investigation into the audit, said that although the information provided by Patterson and McNair had "some validity" the investigation should go further.

"I really feel the people in the community will not accept this. I believe the community will want a third party to say 'this is all right.'"

Trustee Geraldine Parker noted that board members had received information from a former employee that shed a different cast on the missing deposits and said questions still remain and there are still some discrepancies.

She asked for Moseley's recommendation, which he gave. Burleson followed with a motion to accept Moseley's recommendation that the investigation end.

"I feel like tonight Mr. Patterson has given us, with the help of the staff, teachers and employees of the junior high ... a reasonable explanation of the so-called missing money," said Burleson. "There was never any missing money. There was a whole bunch of missing Cokes and missing candy. And I'm sick of talking about candy and Cokes, bookshelves and student desks. I'm ready to go back to teaching kids."

Her motion was seconded by Trustee Terry Martin.

In a brief discussion prior to the vote, Anderson said there are still too many questions, and too many people who had not been heard.

"Inasmuch as we have not met with any person, none whatsoever, in seeking more information up until tonight, and inasmuch as there were several people who for whatever reason did not even want it to be discussed further, I think it's a big mistake for us to lay it aside at this time."

Burleson, Martin, Glen Clarady and Ann Walton all voted to put the matter to rest. Parker, Anderson and Billy Bob McMullan, board president, voted to continue the investigation.

The vote, while not unanimous, echoed a statement made earlier by Patterson.

"I know there are qustions in people's mind and will continue to be there. But in my opinion, any further investigation would just hurt too many good people and their families unnecessarily. I think this has gotten way out of hand and I hope as a board you'll let us get back to focusing on the education of our children."

Several people spoke prior to the meeting, most challenging the way the issue has been handled by the board. Some urged that the investigation move along and be completed as soon as possible. One speaker, Bob Bell, called the issue "much ado about nothing," and charged that it was a "witch hunt" against Patterson.

How to treat diarrhea, constipation

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: How do you explain Metamucil being prescribed for chronic constipation in one person and for chronic diarrhea in another? I've always thought of it as a laxative.

DEAR READER: Metamucil and similar generic products are not laxatives. They are stool-bulking agents, meaning that the psyllium fiber they contain increase the size of the stool and, because the fiber absorbs water, reduce the hardness of the fecal residue.

Thus, these products often aid elimination in constipated patients, as well as firming the stool in people who tend toward diarrhea. In addition, Metamucil may lower serum cholesterol in some patients.

Although psyllium fiber has been used traditionally to treat people who have difficulty eliminating small, hard bowel movements, it is also useful for patients with other conditions.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please provide the latest information on peripheral neuropathy.

DEAR READER: Peripheral neuropathy simply means that nerves in the upper or lower extremities are not functioning normally. Initially, this causes numbness and tingling (of the hands or feet), which progress to pain and, finally, to weakness.

Any factor affecting a nerve can cause neuropathy. Thus, common causes include:

- direct pressure — from carpal tunnel syndrome or a tightly fitting cast, for example;
- exposure to cold or radiation, with attendant nerve damage;
- poor circulation from blood clots and diabetes;
- drug reactions, especially to barbiturates and sulfa;
- toxic reactions to lead, arsenic and other metals;
- carbon monoxide poisoning;
- nutritional disorders, particularly deficiency of the B vitamins;
- malignancies, which can affect blood proteins, leading to nerve damage.

As you can see from this partial list, the diagnosis of peripheral neuropathy is a challenge that usually involves several medical specialists, such as neurologists and internists.

Treatment depends on the cause. Therefore, there is no "generic" therapy for everybody; each case requires individual attention. Because diabetes is such a common cause of neuropathy, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Diabetes Mellitus." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

New Smithsonian exhibit lets kids confront racism head on WASHINGTON (AP) — A baby-faced girl named Tanisha describes how she fought back the tears after two girls on her school bus laughed and called her a nigger.

"Maybe they thought they were being funny. Maybe they were trying to be mean. Maybe they hated black people," says the young girl with purple ribbons in her hair, whose earnest face fills a small television screen.

Tanisha is one of several children who tell their stories in The Kids Bridge, an interactive exhibit that opens today at the Smithsonian Institution's Experimental Gallery. It's designed to help young people confront issues of racism, prejudice and ethnicity.

In an interactive video program, children can ask Tanisha questions about the school bus incident and describe how it would have made them feel. They can also suggest ways she might face the situation.

"Everybody knows something of how she feels," said Kimberly Camp, the director of the Experimental Gallery. "So it's a very cathartic experience."

To enter The Kids Bridge, children pass under a small bridge, bracketed by smiling, life-size cutouts of a black boy and a Hispanic girl.

"In the United States, we belong to different races, ethnic groups, cultures and religions," reads a large sign.

"In this exhibit you may discover ways you are like people who at first don't seem to be like you at all. And you may find ways to bridge some of your differences."

The Kids Bridge was developed by the Children's Museum in Boston, where it remains a permanent exhibit. The Smithsonian version eventually will travel to cities across the country.

Everywhere in The Kids Bridge, children are given activities to do and questions to answer.

In one area, they're asked to sit down for a moment and fill out a questionnaire about themselves — about where their families come from, who they think is "awesome" and what they'd do to change the world.

In another area, they spin a wheel to find out who shares their ideas.

Under each description like "I have trouble with math," or "I'm sort of shy," the wheel displays photographs of people of all shapes, sizes, races and ages.

In a large model of a city block, children can peer into windows and see models of families celebrating special occasions. There's a Jewish family sitting down to its seder and a group of Muslims kneeling in prayer.

"Hi. Would you like to learn some words in Khmer. It's the language of Cambodia," a teen-age boy calls out from a video screen in a program that offers children the chance to learn a few words in Khmer, Cantonese, Spanish, Haitian Creole and English.

The exhibit emphasizes community, and includes a section on Washington, with photographs of neighborhood life.

Community focus groups helped develop the Boston and the Washington exhibits. When the exhibit goes on the road, each of the sites will add its own sections.

Activists question whether kids' shows are educational

WASHINGTON (AP) — One broadcaster claims that a "Chip 'n Dale" cartoon show in which the chipmunk heroes "stop Chedderhead Charlie from an evil plot" is educational for children because it shows the rewards of team efforts.

Another says a "Yo Yogi!" segment in which "Snag learns that he can capture the bank-robbing cockroach more successfully by using his head, rather than his muscles" fulfills the federal requirement that broadcasters serve educational and informational needs of children under age 16.

But activists trying to improve the quality of children's television said Tuesday that shows like these are not what Congress had in mind when it passed the Children's Television Act that took effect a year ago this week.

Broadcasters are making a joke of the new federal law by claiming cartoon shows like "The Jetsons" educate kids about the 21st century, said Peggy Charren, founder of Action for Children's Television, who was instrumental in getting the law passed.

Rather than creating shows to fit the educational requirements, stations too often are re-defining existing programs as educational, said Kathryn Montgomery of the Center for Media Education, a public advocacy group that studied how well local stations are complying with the law.

The point of the law was to get broadcasters to help more with efforts to improve children's reading and math skills and assist kids' understanding of important events.

Jeff Bowmann of the National Association of Broadcasters said local stations take their programming responsibilities very seriously.

"We are confident the broadcasters are in full compliance," he said.

But Charren and Montgomery said they found the types of shows listed as educational "depressing."

Montgomery said broadcasters were inserting "pro-social" content or "educational moments" into entertainment programs and calling that compliance.

Montgomery's group reviewed the programming lists from 58 stations of various market sizes submitted to the Federal Communications Commission.

One station listed a "Donahue" segment about teen-age strippers and their relationships with their mothers.

Charren said she was not disputing the content of the "Donahue" show, but pointed out that the station aired the show at 9 a.m.

"Are the stations suggesting children should stay home from school to watch it?" she said.

Montgomery said that too often stations aired their educational programming during school hours or when children would typically be asleep, like 5 a.m.

Pat Henry, president of National PTA, said her group was organizing the 27,000 Parent Teacher Associations across the country to monitor local television stations to see if they fulfill their educational responsibilities.

The South African "Homelands"

A group of "independent," semi-autonomous all-black regions within South Africa now loom as a major impediment to a negotiated transition to majority rule.

In the 1960s, South Africa's all-white apartheid government sought to drain potential black political strength by relocating 15 million blacks to new "countries" established within South Africa. A total of 10 such homelands were established in remote regions, with forced resettlement along old tribal lines.

The government intended to deprive the black residents of these homelands, who would technically no longer be South Africans, of the right to vote in any future South African elections. Thus black electoral power would be dissipated. No country outside South Africa has recognized any of the homelands as independent states.

These homelands are distinct from the black "townships" established near major urban areas where blacks are required to live.

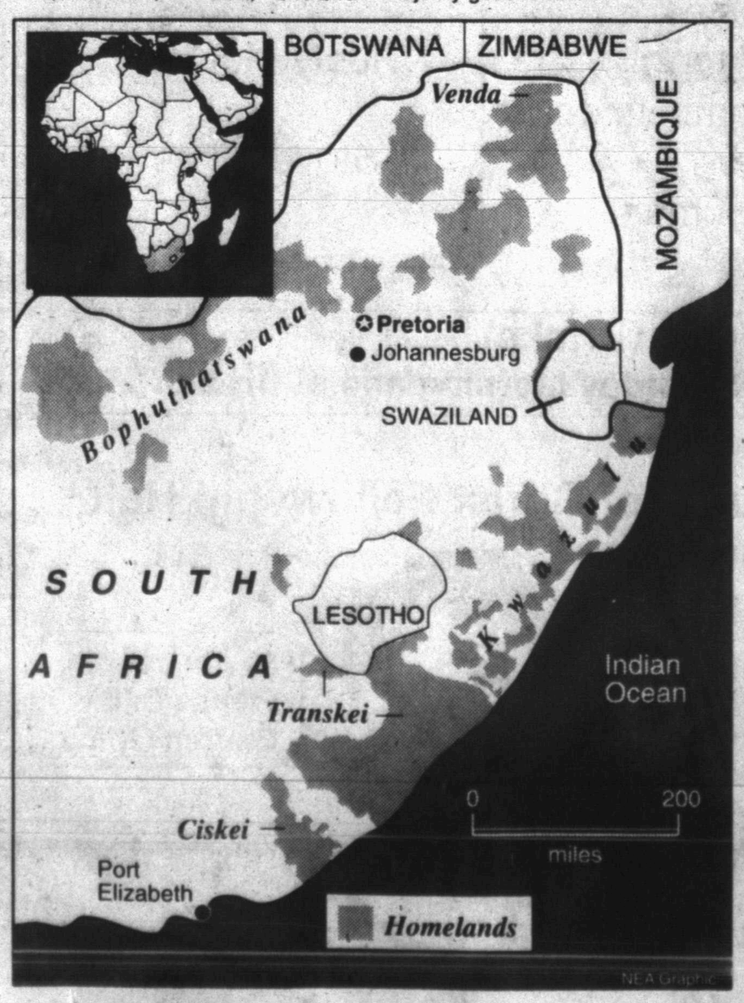

Since the 1960s four of the homelands — Bophuthatswana, Transkei, Ciskei and Venda — have actually become economically semi-independent. They have developed into strong military-dominated governments, although their militaries are limited and under the control of the South African military. The other six homelands — Kangwane, KwaNdebele, KwaZulu, Lebowa, QwaQwa and Gazankulu — remain underdeveloped and completely dependent on South Africa.

The leaders of the four semi-independent homelands are considered allies of the Zulu-based Inkatha political movement. Inkatha, in turn, is the rival of the African National Congress whose power lies in the townships.

The homelands have now become pawns in the violent political struggle between the two organizations that has so far left thousands dead. The ANC wants the homelands abolished and their residents integrated back into South Africa. Inkatha would like to see them remain as politically significant states within a new South Africa.

Recently Ciskei has become the battleground. Of the four semi-independent homelands, its government — headed by Brig. Oupa Gqoro — is considered the weakest, and the most susceptible to overthrow by the ANC. The ANC believes that if it can overthrow Gqoro, Ciskei will simply cease to exist. The other homelands would then follow it out of existence.

A massive ANC march resulted in 28 deaths as Gqoro's troops opened fire on the marchers. The massacre has led to new calls for negotiations between the all-white government and black factions to try to find a formula that can eventually lead to a majority government.

Perot's political style differs from other candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot says he'll "be in it to win" if he revives his independent presidential challenge. But don't expect a Perot race to be anyone's idea of a conventional campaign.

With less than five weeks to go until Election Day, it seems unlikely that the Texas billionaire can mount — or is even interested in mounting — the "world class campaign" he once promised.

Instead, look for more of the same technique that Perot has spent much of the year developing and refining — use of free media through frequent appearances on talk shows.

Perot, who once suggested he might spend $100 million of his own money on a campaign, is expected to supplement his free access to the airwaves with relatively low-budget television commercials.

Perot insiders say he already has 20 to 30 TV spots and a half dozen radio spots in the can, ranging from 30-second ads to 30-minute programs.

Add to that electronic "town halls" and a smattering of personal appearances here and there, and you've probably got the basic Perot campaign.

"It would be the kind of campaign we had before," says Jim Squires, Perot's former media adviser.

"Before," in Squires lexicon, means in the early days of the movement last spring — before Perot hired professionals like Republican Ed Rollins and Democrat Hamilton Jordan to co-manage the campaign that he abruptly abandoned on July 16.

Although Perot has nowhere near the strength in polls that he once commanded, analysts agree he could be a factor in tossup states. A Perot campaign promises to deliver "great political theater," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater suggested sardonically.

Already on the ballot in all 50 states, Perot has said he will decide by Thursday whether to reenter the race, after surveying the mood of his volunteers around the country.

However, he has given broad hints he will get back in the race.

"If the volunteers ask me to go back in, we will be in it to win, not to just hold people's feet to the fire," Perot said Tuesday on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

And interviews with Perot volunteers by The Associated Press on Tuesday showed overwhelming support for a renewed bid.

"He's going to be given such widespread support again that it would be difficult for him to back out," said Jim Watford, a Perot organizer in Indiana.

"By announcing on Monday that he'd let us all know on Thursday, he has in fact succeeded in holding his own convention," said Democratic analyst Ann Lewis. "What's unusual about the Ross Perot convention is that he gets the other candidates to come — which none of us had thought of," Lewis said.

Top-level emissaries from both Bush and Clinton camps came to Dallas on Monday to try to win over Perot supporters.

Asked what kind of campaign Perot would run, the computer-industry tycoon says "Well, we're going to stick strictly to the issues. I want to do everything I can to try to get this campaign refocused on the issues that concern the American people."

Yet, in his early campaigning Perot did not dwell on issues. The detailed economic proposals he now trumpets were only released after his July 16 "withdrawal."

What kind of campaign will Perot run?

"Bizarre," suggested Larry McCarthy, Republican media consultant.

"I guess he'll make a few pages of political history, including commercials that boast of how cheap they are and how unslick they are."

Burt Pines, director of the conservative National Center for Public Policy Research, says Perot is well positioned to capitalize on the anti-establishment fever sweeping the nation.

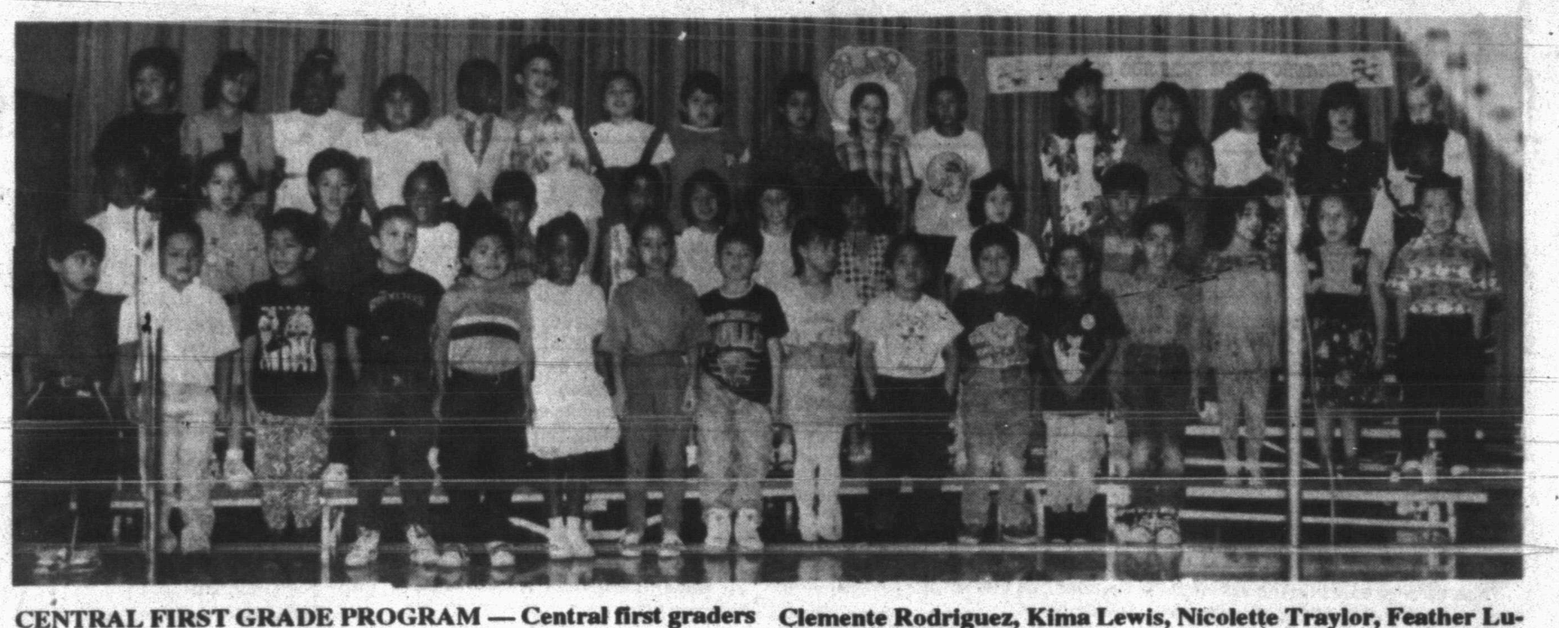

"He's got to say: I've got answers. Clinton and Bush don't. And if you're against Washington, you're for me! That's the message."

Greg Mueller, who was a top aide to former GOP presidential challenger Patrick Buchanan, said Perot "could buy up all the available network advertising time between now and Nov. 3."

"This is one big ego trip," Mueller added.

Although no one can say for sure what Perot will do, Squires said there's one thing he won't do. "He sure wouldn't hire Ed Rollins again."

Rollins quit the day before Perot dropped out and has been blasting the Texan ever since — including writing in a New York Times essay this week that Perot "should quit tampering with our democratic process simply to massage his ego."

Laboratory, others indicted for not revealing data on pesticide testing

AUSTIN (AP) — A U.S. environmental official says he doesn't believe there's a public health risk after the indictment of a lab that conducted tests used in federally registering pesticides.

But Victor Kimm, deputy assistant administrator for the Environmental Protection Agency, said, "We are very, very concerned about the integrity of the system. You can't have a system that relies on data generated by third parties that involves in any way tinkering with established scientific norms."

He said the agency would look to reduce the likelihood of problems.

Kimm's comments came after the U.S. attorney's office announced charges against Craven Laboratories Inc., its president and several former employees for allegedly falsifying and concealing information regarding pesticide residue tests.

"The indictment alleges pesticide manufacturers were defrauded of money paid for the pesticide residue tests and false information was submitted to the EPA for use in setting tolerances and registering pesticides," said Ronald Ederer, U.S. attorney for the Western District of Texas.

The federal grand jury indictment unsealed Tuesday charges Craven Laboratories and its president, Don Allen Craven of Austin, with one count of conspiracy, nine counts of mail fraud, nine counts of making false statements and concealment of material facts, and one count of obstruction of EPA proceedings. All are felony charges.

Craven did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

The indictment also charges Edward Stanley Peterson of Austin, whom it identified as head of the lab's Quality Assurance Unit from 1988 to 1991, with one count of conspiracy, eight counts of mail fraud, nine counts of making false statements and concealment of material facts, and one count of obstruction of EPA proceedings.

Proposed mining park renews old 'park barrel' controversy

HANCOCK, Mich. (AP) — In his youth, Jim Vivian carved a living out of the copper mines — stifling caverns where some men fell hundreds of feet to their deaths.

Despite their danger, the mines gave men like Vivian a chance at a comfortable life and made Michigan's Keeweenaw Peninsula a thriving economic and cultural center before the boom went bust.

Now, at 75, Vivian is among those pushing to turn an abandoned mine into a national park to honor the mining industry.

"Nowhere in the United States do you have a setup like this ... such a complete picture of a lost industry," he said. "It's so vital to our heritage to have this park."

But the proposal has rekindled a debate over what critics call Congress' "park-barrel" approach to designating national parks — with politics, rather than merit, the key issue.

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee last week approved a bill to establish a park, but not without strong objections to the proposal and the process in general.

"We are making parks for people's political convenience, or for domestic economic purposes, but not for purposes for which the national park system was established," said Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo.

Supporters on the peninsula, which juts into Lake Superior in northwestern Michigan, have spent thousands of dollars to preserve the Quincy Mining Co. site near Hancock. It includes a shaft house, where miners descended into the mile-deep pit, and a hoist house, which contained the elevator mechanism.

They say they hope the park will pump life into the region's economy, which never recovered from the loss of the mines. But they contend the park would do much more than that.

Such a site "can tell a rich story of technological advancement, ethnic heritage, the growth of the labor movement and industrial development like nowhere else in the United States," said Rep. Bob Davis, R-Mich., whose district includes the Keeweenaw Peninsula.

Even some supporters of the park criticized the park-designation process.

"I think we must rein in our willy-nilly authorization of parks," said Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Woman dubbed 'Estelle Doe' identified as Maryland woman

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman found unconscious on the side of a freeway five months ago and dubbed "Estelle Doe" by Hermann Hospital officials has been identified as a Maryland woman.

Authorities Tuesday determined that the woman, who has been in a coma since April 28, was Nancy Sue McDonald, 32, of Easton, Md.

The woman's jaw and right leg were fractured and she had a severe head injury form an apparent hit and run accident. She was carrying only a tube of lipstick and a comb.

"I'm on cloud nine," said Hermann Hospital spokeswoman Lisa Fuglaar. "I've felt all along that Estelle, or rather Nancy, knew what was going on around her. I think she's very relieved that we will no longer call her Estelle."

The case was featured Sept. 16 on NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" program. A jailer at the Easton, Md., city jail recognized the woman as a former inmate, who lived in the city, Ms. Fuglaar said.

Ms. Fuglaar contacted the family, and the family called the TV show and was connected to the Missing Persons Clearing House.

Officers discovered that Ms. McDonald had been arrested for hitchhiking in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., four days before she was found in Houston.

Fuglaar said the woman went back to the same Fort Lauderdale truck stop and hitched a ride west as soon as she got out of jail.

Fort Lauderdale police sent Ms. McDonald's picture and fingerprints to Houston to confirm her identity.

Ms. McDonald has been staying in a Houston-area nursing home since she was transferred from the hospital in July. She remains incommunicative.

"She's in the same condition as she was when she left the hospital," said Patty Riddlebarger, also a hospital spokeswoman.

But Ms. Fuglaar and Janine Medley, Ms. McDonald's court-appointed guardian, are convinced the woman is aware of her surroundings. She said the woman nodded when asked if Nancy Sue McDonald was her name and nodded again when asked if she was from Maryland.

"She responded to her name, which just absolutely amazed me," Ms. Medley said. "I got a brief nod out of her, when I called her by name, and she seemed real peaceful this afternoon."

Ms. Medley said she spoke to the woman's stepmother Tuesday, but the family hasn't made plans on when they will pick up Ms. McDonald.

"I can't say what the next step is," Ms. Medley said. "The first step was a big one, so we have to digest that first. I am just ecstatic. This is what we were shooting for, and we've done it!"
