Local Firm Builds New Aluminum Boat

Casparly & Wendell, marine equipment operators, received delivery Friday of what is reported to be the world's largest all-aluminum crew boat.

Named after the famous Kentucky Derby winner, Citation, the boat measures 95 feet in length and 22 feet in width and weighs 160,000 pounds.

It seats 40 passengers and cruises 25 miles an hour.

Breoux's Bay Craft of Loreauville, La., built the boat, and Stewart & Stevenson Services designed and installed the engines and electrical system.

Stewart & Stevenson's branch office at Corpus Christi, headed by N. N. Elkins, initiated the sale.

Elkins said the carrying capacity and speed of the crew boat are expected to help reduce the cost of transportation between port and offshore oil and gas installations.

"Rigs now operating 100 miles or more off coastlines are continually faced with soaring time and distance costs," he said.

The boat has living quarters for 13 persons, an all-electric galley and eight tons of air conditioning. It has 16 individual aircraft reclining seats and other furniture to seat 40 persons comfortably, Elkins said.

Providing the power are a pair of tandem 12V-71N General Motors engines delivering a total of 2,000 horsepower and two 20-kilowatt generators.

The "N" feature of the engines designates needle valve injection, a patented fuel injection system for efficient use of fuel in all power ranges, Elkins said.

The hull bottom and sides are three-fourths and five-eighths of an inch thick, and the bulkheads three-eighths of an inch all aluminum. The vessel has maximum draft of 4.5 feet.

Citation is Casparly & Wendell's ninth vessel named for famous race horses.

Pirates Tackle Tough Panthers Here Friday

The Aransas County Pirates will take on the Aransas Pass Panthers here, Friday night at 7:30 p.m., in one of the toughest 30AA District games the local boys will have this year.

The Panthers will be going into the game with a conference record of two wins and one loss while the Pirates are undefeated in conference play. The Panthers lost their opening game to Bishop, 8 to 16, but defeated Flour Bluff 39-6 and Gregory-Portland 47-7. The Pirates have beaten Tuloso Midway 36-0 and West Oso 30-0.

John Brightwell, Panther coach said: "The Pirates are a good, well coached ball club. They are aggressive and have better than average speed."

"As far as we're concerned," said Coach Dave Segler, "the outcome of Friday night's game with the Aransas Pass Panthers carries our chances of the district championship with it. If we win, we're on the way. If we don't, we're more or less had it. Everything we have done this year has been pointed towards this game."

"We feel like we can play them a good game. They've got a real fine ball club, with a couple of speedsters, their quarterback, John Brightwell, who weighs 175, and their right half, Slidell Harvey, who weighs 180. Our problem defensively is that we'll have to stop them and contain the Panther passing attack."

"We're in good shape, and there's not much more you can say. When you've got a hard ball game ahead, all you can do is get after it."

Aransas County In 30-0 Victory

A sharply paced and synchronized attack by the Aransas County High School Pirates was too much for the West Oso Bears here Friday night in a District 30-AA game. The Pirates scored in every quarter to win their second district tilt 30-0.

Culminating a 70 yard drive, halfback Joe Hugenberg smashed over from the 3 for the first touchdown. In the second quarter, Larry Iles, the Pirates' kicking specialist, booted a 32 yard field goal from a difficult angle. Moments later Halfback Hugh Morrison gambled into the clear on a 29 yard touchdown scamper and Iles kicked for the extra point to make the score at intermission, 16-0.

Morrison tallied the third six-pointer in the third quarter by plunging through center for three yards. Andy Everett, guard, booted the extra point.

With 23 seconds remaining in the last quarter, Rudy Nava rammed over for a touchdown from the 6. Iles kicked the extra point. The Bears made only one serious threat, getting as far as the Pirate 6 in the last quarter before being pushed back. Sammy Hill was the leading ground gainer for the Bears. Everett played an outstanding defensive game for the victors, who noched their second district win against no losses.

Bids Sought On Library Building

Sealed bids will be received until 9:30 a.m., Nov. 9, on construction of a new building in which to house the rapidly-expanding Aransas County Public Library, according to an announcement made today by County Judge John D. Wendell.

Plans and specifications may be obtained by bidders at the office of Lynn A. Evans, 307 Bevely Building, Corpus Christi, Judge Wendell said. Evans is the architect of the building, and another Corpus Christi firm, Miller and Gregory, are consulting engineers for the project, which culminates planning that began more than five years ago, when the library was a collection of donated books and the library was a store building lent by Arthur Bracht.

Since then, the book collection has grown to nearly 12,000 volumes, housed at present in the Aransas County Courthouse, and open from three to five days a week, depending on the season of the year.

The new building will be placed on the unoccupied corner of the central courthouse square. The courthouse occupies the eastern half of the block; the jail occupies the southwestern quarter, and the library will occupy the northwestern corner, opposite the Church of Christ.

Plans call for a building 87 feet long by 40 wide, giving a total of approximately 3500 square feet of floor space, Judge Wendell said.

The building is divided into a 24x40 foot reading area, to the left as one enters facing the check out counter. To the right is the area where the book stacks will be concentrated in a room 35x56 feet, and plans call for facilities to care for between 18,000 and 20,000 books at the present time. However, there is a room for additional shelving, in case it becomes needed.

As patrons enter, Judge Wendell said, they will be facing the checkout counter, and behind this will be an office and work room, and sanitary facilities for use of library patrons.

The building will be of masonry, concrete, steel and aluminum, and will conform in architectural style to the other two buildings now on block, i.e., the courthouse and jail. It will be air-conditioned throughout.

Members of the library board expressed themselves as delighted with the plans for the new building, and are busily laying plans for the move from the courthouse to the library, when the latter building is completed around the first of the year.

During the month of September librarian Val Jean Eaton, assisted by ladies of the library board and auxiliary, and by the junior high school students, prepared and shelved nearly 300 books. During October, she has been continuing to prepare new and donated books for use as rapidly as possible.

Among those either shelved or almost ready are nearly 100 new books, covering every subject from cooking to children's tales, ten or fifteen new books on the best seller list, and approximately 150 non-fiction books that have been donated to the library but had not been catalogued and prepared for lending.

Mrs. Eaton reports that the drive for return of long-overdue books has progressed as well as can be expected, with much aid being given and time expended by Mrs. S. F. Jackson and Mrs. Gladys Gibson, and that the recently installed system of overdue notices has been particularly effective in reducing losses from this source.

Engineers Told To Start Water Survey

Preliminary Survey Should Be Complete Within Ninety Days, Says District's Engineer as He Outlines Work to Be Done

At a called meeting, following voter approval of $70,000 in bonds to furnish funds for surveys necessary to determine a source of permanent water for the county's rapidly-growing population, commissioners of the Aransas County Conservation and Reclamation District authorized Lockwood, Andrews and Newnam, consulting engineers, to proceed with the first phase of the work, at a cost not to exceed $5,000.

Homer C. Innis, vice president of the company and head of its

Big Margin Carries Water Survey Bond Election Saturday

The voters of Aransas County approved the $70,000 in water survey bonds requested in last Saturday's election by a big majority in a comparatively light turnout, the final count being 205 for the proposition and only 67 against.

Votes by precincts were as follows: Precinct 1A, 5 for and 5 against; Precinct 1, 37 for and 21 against; Precinct 2, 67 for and 22 against; Precinct 3, 87 for and 17 against; and in Precinct 4, the vote was 9 for and 2 against.

Only a small portion of the bonds will be sold at this time, to defray the preliminary portion of the survey. If and when other data are needed, further bonds will be sold, according to commissioners of the Aransas County Conservation and Reclamation District.

Carla Suit Gets Ruling From Court

Austin — An Aransas County district court's ruling in an insurance case involving from Hurricane Carla damage was affirmed Wednesday by the State Supreme Court when it turned down an appeal by Paul Cox of Fulton Beach.

Cox brought suit against Queen Insurance Co. of America, claiming its refusal to pay for damages to his pier and beach house caused by Sept. 11, 1961, hurricane. He claimed he was insured for direct loss resulting from "wind-storm, hurricane or hail," but the trial jury found that the damages were caused by "combined wind and water," and the trial ruled for Queen.

Cox appealed to the Fourth Court of Civil Appeals in San Antonio, which cited Queen Insurance Company's language: "... unless specifically named herein, this company shall not be liable for loss caused by snowstorm, tidal wave, high water, or overflow, whether driven by wind or not."

In an opinion written by Judge Jack Pope on July 10, 1963, the Fourth Court stated, "It is settled Texas law that when there are two concurrent causes of damages—one of which is excluded by the contract—there is no coverage."

The appellate court upheld the trial court's ruling, and the supreme court backed this decision.

BOND PURCHASES REACH 133.7% OF COUNTY QUOTA

ROTARIANS HEAR COMMANDER PARRY

Rotarians heard Commander L. C. Parry of Chase Field, Beville, discuss sea power in world affairs. The program was sponsored by J. Fred Frundrett.

Visitors were Emory Brown, Aransas Pass, C. F. McSpadden, Corpus Christi; R. Z. Glass, of Formosa; D. C. Brown, Corpus Christi; and Dr. G. M. Pattillo.

Corpus Christi office, said that this should be completed within the next 90 days, barring unforeseen complications and outlined the work to be done.

First, he said, all published reports dealing with state wide plans would be reviewed in relationship to Aransas County needs, along with various river basin plans, such as those of the Nueces, Guadalupe, San Antonio and other similar authorities, as well as regional plans that might have some bearing on the situation in this area.

At the same time, the engineer said, an investigation would be made to determine, as far as possible, the immediate and long-range needs of the county for water and for supply and distribution facilities and the most feasible source from which this supply can be drawn.

Following these determinations, Innis said, a report will be prepared detailing those sources available and the most feasible solutions for development of dependable water supplies to maintain the expected population growth over the next four or five decades.

Considerable discussion then ensued commissioners as to the next step, following this preliminary survey. It was suggested that possibilities of tie-ins with the Guadalupe and San Antonio river authorities be thoroughly investigated, as well as those of Refugio County and the San Patricio Municipal Water District.

Innis stated that, following preliminary conferences with these people, the engineers will prepare preliminary studies, directly related to and part of any preliminary design work being considered. Such studies, he said would necessarily include preliminary layouts, sketches and preliminary recommendations and cost estimates on which to base whatever revenue bonds might be needed for completion of any work decided upon.

In addition, he said, earnings and expense statements would have to be furnished to the attorney general's office, in case such a revenue issue may be found advisable at some later date, and the scope of soil and foundation borings and any other special surveys be delineated. Also, he said, there would be some field topographic and related surveys.

Innis was also authorized to prepare a preliminary plan for the Texas Water Commission's approval, as required by the statute setting up the the Conservation and Reclamation District, and to represent the District in appearances before the Texas Water Commission or other regulatory agencies when necessary.

At this time, Innis said, no firm recommendation can be made as to a possible source of the water, and a detailed investigation of the type outlined would be the only means by which information can be obtained, on which to base future actions of the District. The Commissioners agreed with him.

THRILLS AND SPILLS OF HYDROPLANE RACE DESCRIBED IN STORY

The thrills and spills of hydroplane racing of the sort proposed for Little Bay have been graphically described this month in the "Plymouth Traveler" a magazine issued by the Chrysler Corporation to promote travel. It makes exciting reading.

"The checked flag goes down," it says, "and the 'thunderboats' leap forward in the water of the Detroit River and throw up cascading roostertails of water. Some say that hydro racing is the hairiest of all sports and that the Detroit Gold Cup Race is the Grand Prix of hydro racing. Crowds line the banks of the river as the 3500-pounds to 10,000-25-foot monsters roar by.

"At 60 miles per hour the boats rise out of the water and ride on these surfaces, two forward pontoons (called sponsons) and the blade of the after propeller; at 130 miles per hour the thunderboat rises even higher, balanced aloft by screaming air and the vertical edges of the sponsons. At 160 miles per hour the boat skims the brute waves, almost flying, yet a creature of the river, a thing of agonizing beauty—beautiful because the auto city (Detroit) loves speed, motion, grace; agonizing because the race rides a fierce rooster tail of water, in which engines may blow up, boats disintegrate, even leap sickeningly through the air to their doom.

"Detroit is the Silver Cup of the Gold Cup, and the home of the International Tug Boat Race in which the doughty workhorses of the river compete against each other for the privilege of tying the visitor's broom to the winners' funnel."

Mrs. Martha Mundine, noble grand, presided at the meeting. There were 15 members present.

Mrs. E. V. Ebert gave a report on the school of instruction, held in Portland, last Monday night and told this lodge the chairs they will fill at the "called meeting" to be held here Friday night, Nov. 1, when the president of the Rebekah Assembly will make her official visit to this district.

It was good to have Mrs. Virginia McKinney and Mrs. Neva Sorenson back in lodge.

Mrs. T. C. Kelly invited all branches of the IOOF Order and their families and special friends to a "Hobo" party at the Kelly home on Market Street, Wednesday, Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m. Bring a regular hobo sack lunch and have a good time. Mrs. Kelly said anyone coming "dressed up" would be fined, only hobo garb accepted fee.

The lodge sent money to the IOOF homes at Ennis and Corsicana, to help pay for the birthday parties held in each home every month.

Miss Katie Lee Clarke and her committee served German chocolate cake and cold drinks at the social hour.

Mrs. J. W. Townsend is now in a local rest home.

Col. John Wood
One of Rockport's Founding Fathers

As part of the historical material on early Rockport that the Pilot has been making available for its readers, the biography of Colonel John Wood, by A. W. Billingsley is given here:

Colonel John Woodland Wood was born Sept. 16, 1816, of a noble and wealthy family in Stoutenburg (now Hyde Park, New York) which was founded by his grandfather, Jacobus Van Stoutenburg, from whom he no doubt gained some inspiration for his own efforts in such developments. He was a direct descendant of John Howland of New Bedford and Boston, Mass., who established a great whaling and industrial fortune. An ancestor, Pieter Van Stoutenburg, was the first Treasurer of the Dutch Amsterdam Colony. His grandfather, Major Richard DeCantillon, was a prominent figure in the American Revolution.

Colonel Wood came to Texas in 1835 on the Brig Matawankeag as a member of the New York Volunteer Battalion under Colonel Edwin H. Stanley and Edwin Morehouse. He fought in the Texas Revolution under the command of General Thomas J. Rusk. He was personally detailed, after San Jacinto, to assemble the bones of the martyred Texans, and to prepare for the solemn task of the burial of the charred remains of the massacred Texans at Goliad.

He started his ranching operations and land acquisitions in the area as early as 1836, and his brand "JW" was first registered in Refugio County in 1838, and thereafter, in 1840 in Victoria. In 1842 he started using "N" and "NC" brands, (for his wife, Nancy Clark.) He later became quartermaster of the Texas Army stationed at Victoria, and while stationed with General Zachary Taylor's army at Live Oak Peninsula in 1846, he explored the possibilities of a deep water port near what was known as Rocky Point and Aransas Bay.

While Colonel Wood had been ranching and marketing cattle, horses and mules before, in 1840 he set up his first large ranch headquarters near the present town of Edna. He married Nancy Anna Clark in Victoria in 1842.

Colonel Powers, the empresario of the Refugio Colony, enlisted the aid of Mrs. Wood's brothers, Henry, John and A. William Clark, in procuring colonists from New York to meet the empresario. The Clark brothers were Powers' colonists. The mother of the Clarks was a sister of Francis Welder, and Henry Clark was a partner in the cattle business with the Welders. As early as 1842 the three Clark brothers were experienced frontier fighters and were with Sam Houston at the battle of San Jacinto.

Colonel Wood moved his ranch headquarters to San Patricio in 1843. He distinguished himself as a soldier, gentleman, Indian fighter, cattleman, trail driver, and developer of the territory's richest lands, and was co-founder of the town sites of St. Marys and Rockport.

He entered into a number of land acquisitions and development partnerships. One of the most famous and successful of these was the Wood and Driscoll Land and Cattle Co., composed of himself and brothers, Jeremiah O. Driscoll and Robert Driscoll.

The Driscolls and Colonel Wood had an understanding with regard to acquisitions of land in various areas of Texas, the principal acquisitions of which were made in what was originally Refugio County. It was understood that each would buy land in the other's territory when possible, and transfers and repayment of purchase price would be made among them at future times.

The activities of this partnership resulted in the acquisition by the owners of some of the largest ownerships of the most fertile land in the state.

Another of Wood's partnerships was with Joseph F. Smith. While not as profitable as others he entered, the Smith and Wood partnership was probably the most historically significant to the people of the area since the towns of St. Marys and Rockport arose out of this association.

Joseph F. Smith conceived his plan for the city of St. Marys on Copano Bay probably around 1839 or 1840. His unsuccessful efforts to procure the necessary land from Colonel James Powers led to Smith's vehement and vengeful litigation against the Powers family to break the empresarios' hold on land granted to them by the Republic of Mexico.

In 1847 Wood made a trip to New York to receive the first of a series of inheritances which were estimated to be around $60,000.00 which he eventually converted into more land, cattle and real estate developments. He personally brought the first inheritance, consisting of gold to Texas by boat, stored in wooden kegs. On Sept. 25, 1849, Wood moved to what was then known as Black Point on Copano Bay and traded his brother-in-law, A. William Clark, 1200 stock cattle and a slave for his first acreage in this area. While remaining friendly with both Colonel Powers and Joseph F. Smith in their litigation, he promised Smith that he would advance funds necessary for development of St. Marys in exchange for a partnership with Smith in the development of the townsite in the event that Smith should ever acquire good land titles which would make the venture possible.

In 1936 the courts of Texas decided the litigation in favor of Smith and against Colonel Powers. The laying out and development of St. Marys was a dream and idea of Smith, not Colonel Wood. Colonel Wood, from the time he was in camp with General Zachary's forces at Live Oak Peninsula, felt that Aransas Bay at a point near "Rocky Point" was the best location for a harbor and was much closer to the open shallow water reefs of Copano Bay, as well as its distance from the Gulf, with the advent of deeper draft ships, doomed St. Marys as a deep water port. However, he had promised Smith financial aid in the development of his townsite, and while he favored Aransas Bay, as was his character, he kept his promise and went into the founding of St. Marys.

Colonel Wood's brother, Captain Richard DeCantillon Wood, master of a whaling fleet, on Nov. 10, 1860, along with the entire crew of the Ship Superior of New Bedford, Mass., was massacred by cannibal natives off Treasury in the Solomon Islands of the Pacific Ocean.

During the Civil War Wood served as a colonel in the Confederate Coast Guard, and his raiding activities of Yankee possessions on the coastal waters and vessels further accentuated in his mind the value of a shipping port in Aransas Bay. It was during this time that Wood conceived the idea of acquiring all of St. Joseph Island from the various divergent interests that had arisen by virtue of the old townsite that had been situated on the island before the Civil War.

Immediately after the end of the Civil War, Colonel Wood took a more determined interest in the Aransas Bay area, and while he commenced the effort to acquire all of St. Joseph Island as a Wood and Driscoll project, this was ultimately abandoned because the partners and their efforts to acquire land were too well known, and the asking price of the outstanding interests was too high at the time.

The entire island was ultimately acquired in the name of Captain Samuel B. Allyn of Boston, Mass., who was closely related to the Wood family. While Samuel B. Allyn began making acquisitions of the outstanding interests in St. Joseph Island as early as 1868, and the cattle partnership of Wood and Allyn, composed of R. H. Wood and Captain Allyn, was formed that year, and while ranching operations were started on the island then, the title to St. Joseph Island was not finally settled until around 1875. At that time Wood and Allyn had placed Captain C. C. Heath of Corpus Christi as a tenant in technical possession of the entire island, and the litigation settling title in Captain Allyn was culminated successfully.

Thereafter, the island was operated until 1909 as a co-partnership by Wood and Allyn, at which time R. H. Wood and his two sons, Will W. Wood and Tobias R. Wood, became the exclusive owners of this island ranch. Allyn's right on the west side of the island was named for Captain Allyn by R. H. Wood since many of the early charts outlining the bight resembled Allyn's profile.

In 1866 Richard H. Wood, son of Colonel Wood, with the permission of Joseph F. Smith, constructed a rambling frame dwelling at what is now known as the corner of Cornwall and North Magnolia in Rockport. Since the shipping facilities at St. Marys were destroyed by the Yankees, and the danger and difficulty to large vessels in navigating the dangerous shoals of Copano Bay were always a factor, Colonel John H. Wood and his son, Richard H. Wood, in partnership with James M. Doughty, built the first cattle pens at Rockport in 1866. Actually this was a Wood and Driscoll enterprise in the beginning, although the Driscolls relinquished any interest in this enterprise before Rockport was founded.

Colonel Wood was interested in a townsite at Rocky Point and Aransas Bay, but he was not willing to shoulder the responsibility of laying out the entire townsite by himself, or even in partnership with Joseph F. Smith. Before 1850

Colonel Wood had perhaps become the largest cattleman in the area, and his cattle, estimated at times to be in excess of 50,000 head ranged over a half million acres of land. Many of the later cattle barons of Texas, such as the O'Connors, Driscolls, Shanghai Pierce, and others, acquired their first and original breeding stock from him.

Colonel Wood's need for shipping facilities caused him and his son, Richard H. Wood, to look for better harbor facilities long prior to the Civil War. He has even become interested in perhaps locating a new cattle shipping port on the southern tip of St. Joseph Island, nearest the pass to the Gulf, but the means of getting the cattle to the island and other causeway and transportation problems caused him to settle on Rocky Point on Aransas Bay as the ideal location.

Following the Civil War, Joseph F. Smith was discouraged and embittered with the outcome of the war and the decline of St. Marys. It was not difficult for Wood to prevail upon himself to part with enough of his land on Live Oak Peninsula to lay out the Rockport townsite.

In 1867 J. M. Mathis, an aggressive and ambitious rancher, had come to the coastal area and had gone in on a cattle venture with James M. Doughty. Under the agreement between Doughty and Mathis, and Smith and Wood, the former group would lay out and develop the south one-half of the proposed townsite, and Joseph F. Smith and Colonel Wood would lay out the northern portion on 640 acres of land, all of which Smith owned and which he would make available for the undertaking.

While it is unquestioned that T. H. Mathis, J. M. Doughty, Joseph F. Smith and Colonel John H. Wood are considered the founders of the town, and it is unquestioned that they put up the necessary land and money, it is doubted that without the inspiration, promotional zeal and energies and salesmanship of J. M. Mathis and Richard N. Wood, present day Rockport would have been developed as early as 1867. Actually the platting and promoting of Rockport was a joint effort of these six men. R. H. Wood and J. M. Doughty, together, first conducted a cattle business on Aransas Bay, and with Colonel Wood, built the first commercial cattle pens and wharf near Rocky Point in 1866, and R. H. Wood built his first home in Rockport around that time.

When T. H. Mathis and his cousin, J. M. Mathis, came to Rockport in 1867, they acquired R. H. Wood's interest in the properties originally built by Wood and Doughty.

In 1868 Colonel Wood and Smith built another large cattle shipping wharf into Aransas Bay. Thereafter in 1869 the original Wood and Doughty shipping pens and wharf were acquired by the great land and cattle firm of Coleman, Mathis and Fulton who enlarged the wharf and dockage and deepened Aransas Bay at this point so that large deep draft vessels could be accommodated.

By prearranged agreement between the six founders, the present City of Rockport was platted and laid out in two divisions, "Doughty and Mathis" being the south one-half of the proposed townsite, and "Smith and Wood," the north or other one-half thereof.

In 1868 the first meat canneries were located in the Aransas Bay Area, and the development of Rockport by Doughty, Mathis, Smith and Wood gained impetus. On April 26, 1869, Milan Maynard was appointed government meat inspector for the Rockport district canning industry. Several months later Richard H. Wood replaced him.

During the period of time from 1867 until 1876 General Juan Cortina, the red robber of the Rio Grande, and his bandits carried away many of Colonel Wood's cattle as he shipped through Rockport. During this period of time he lost thousands of head of cattle, horses and mules through Mexican live stock thefts.

Until 1877 Colonel Wood lived principally at his home in St. Marys, although he spent considerable time at his Bonnie View Ranch headquarters. In 1877 Colonel Wood built his palatial mansion, (now a hotel), at St. Marys which he later gave to his son, Tobias DeCantillon Wood. Shortly prior to 1900 he moved in the former Richard H. Wood residence after the latter had built his spacious home in Rockport.

Around 1900 Colonel E. H. R. Green, the only son of the famous woman financier of Wall Street, Hetty Howland Green, relatives of Sam B. Allyn and Colonel Wood through the Howland family, made wide-spread investments in the area, and with permission of Wood and Allyn, built a club house near Aransas Pass on St. Joseph Island. Colonel Green also brought the first gasoline powered boat to the coast, and Mrs. Green owned Tarpion Inn on Mustang Island.

Colonel Wood died in Rockport on January 16, 1904. He was buried in Victoria, Texas. The town of Woodsboro was named for him and his son, Tobias DeCantillon Wood.

It appeared for a while after its founding that Rockport would become one of the great ports of the country and that the memory of its founders would live in the reflected glory of those who advanced and developed that they had begun. However, fate the elements and hard luck almost doomed Rockport to the fate of St. Marys whose founders, as such, are no more than a matter of passing historical interest.

It was in that year that politics and the claimed lack of fresh water cost Rockport the great port to Corpus Christi. The same year fire destroyed the famous Del Mar Hotel, and in September of 1919 the most devastating hurricane of recorded history struck this city a devastating and almost mortal blow. Events of 1919 almost wiped out the dreams and accomplishments of Colonel Wood and the other three founders, Joseph F. Smith, T. H. Mathis and James M. Doughty, and only time can tell whether or not Rockport can meet the expectations of its original planners.
