Offshore drilling

The House Appropriations Committee voted Tuesday to restore a moratorium on offshore oil and gas drilling in environmentally sensitive regions of the Pacific and Atlantic oceans. The 33-20 vote, engineered by a bipartisan group of coastal legislators, thwarted efforts to life a 14-year-old ban on exploration and drilling on sections of the outer continental shelf believed to contain roughly a quarter of U.S. offshore oil and gas reserves. Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto looks at his watch before meeting on the trade dispute with U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor in Geneva, Switzerland, Tuesday.

Tensions high; trade talks go to wire

Associated Press

GENEVA — Pushing themselves to the brink of a trade war, the top American and Japanese trade officials talked into the early morning hours today but reported no progress in the dispute over U.S. access to Japan's car market.

Even though there was no word from officials, there were signs elsewhere that Japan's market could open. Car manufacturers from the two nations have announced agreements that appear to indicate at least some opening, and a high-ranking U.S. official met Tuesday with Japanese automakers.

The Clinton administration says that with no agreement by 10:59 p.m. CDT today, it will impose 100 percent tariffs on Toyota's Lexus, Honda's Acura and other Japanese luxury cars. That would price them out of the U.S. market.

The Lexus LS480, for instance, will rise in price from $55,000 to well over $80,000.

U.S. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were serious differences in all the major areas. One official said it would be "very hard" to reach an agreement by the U.S. deadline.

But another U.S. official, who also declined to be named, said some progress had been made.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto held talks Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning, then broke up with plans to resume at 5 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

Lower-level officials remained at the table after the top negotiators

Panel pushes schools bond of $45 million

■ MISD committee suggests community won't swallow $94 million package necessary to meet all district needs; trustees to vote on issue at a later date.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland school-board trustees ought to call a $40 million to $50 million bond election to renovate school buildings, according to a board-appointed committee.

The Facility Needs Advisory Committee presented a proposal to trustees at Tuesday's school-board meeting.

If all needs in the district are met, the committee estimated it will cost $94 million. However, the committee suggested that the community would not approve a bond package of more than $40 million to $50 million.

The bond would fund classroom and athletic facility renovations (such as lockers, playing areas and dressing rooms). It is estimated that a $45 million bond package, financed for 20 years at 6 percent, would result in an increase in property taxes of approximately $5 per month or $60 per year on a home valued at $50,000.

The committee nixed the idea of adding a sports stadium to the bond package. "The committee felt that the stadium issue might best be addressed by a select committee of interested citizens, appointed by the board ... to pursue private support for this project," a recommendation read.

Advisory committee member Ernest Angelo, in a letter, chided trustees for "supporting a (district) pay raise when they had only a vague idea of overall budget or possible bond issue effects on the tax rate."

Some concern was expressed by committee members that new construction projects "may have exceeded community standards for sufficiency or adequacy."

Lubbock plans life without Reese base

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press

LUBBOCK — For rent: 3,953 acres of runways, hangars, dorms and office space. Golf course and bowling alley available. Call City Hall.

But not quite yet.

Reese Air Force Base will continue training U.S. pilots for at least another year or two while military officials arrange its shutdown.

Lubbock leaders, meanwhile, have wasted no time in launching a campaign to revamp Reese for new business.

"We're going to make a great big lemonade out of a very small lemon," U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison said at City Hall last week. "In 10 years we're going to look back and say, 'How could we have been so lucky?' "

Officials in Lubbock seem determined to put a good spin on the decision Thursday by a base-closure commission to target Reese.

That base, source of about 2,500 military and civilian jobs, brings the Lubbock region a $201.2 million economic impact

Speed? Take it to the limit, callers say

From Staff Reports

Cityline Community Pulse

By one of the widest margins since the inception of the Community Pulse Poll, West Texans showed their strong support of raising the speed limit on state highways from the current 55 mph level.

The U.S. Senate recently took the first step toward allowing states to set their own limits on state highways.

Of the 409 callers who answered this week's question, "Should Texas raise its speed limits on state highways?" 388, or 95 percent, were in favor of such an increase. Only 21 callers felt the limit should remain at 55.

"I think 55 mph on West Texas highways is plum ridiculous," an anonymous caller insisted. "It was blown out of proportion when it was first instigated. If some of these people from back east would come here and drive on some of our highways, they would see why 65 would be a safe and prudent speed."

Another anonymous caller voiced his support this way: "The limits we have now are artificially imposed. They were imposed to save gas during the gasoline crunch. That (gas crunch) has passed and we

Shot paramedic keeps lawsuit options open

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A paramedic accidentally shot by a police officer during a training exercise in April has given notification of a possible claim against the city.

City officials were informed of the possible action by Charles A. Hare in a letter received on June 17 from Tim Pletcher, attorney with the Houston law firm of Helm, Pletcher, Bowen & Saunders.

The letter was sent because the Midland city charter requires any notice of claim against the city be made within 60 day of an incident, Pletcher said. "It is simply to protect the rights (Hare) has and insure his options are open to him," he said.

Hare, 35, was shot in the upper right chest with a .40-caliber handgun during a Midland Police Department SWAT training exercise on April 19.

A subsequent police investigation revealed that seven officers had loaded weapons during the training and violated an "unwritten procedure" that banned loaded weapons during SWAT exercises.

The officer who shot Hare — Darin Clements, 25 — received three days off without pay. Earlier this month, a Midland County grand jury opted not to take any action against Clements.

Big government in Cuba begins to shrink

By John Rice
Associated Press

Cuba's government, once an all-present Big Brother, is getting a lot smaller these days — a change forced by an economic crisis and the loss of former allies in the socialist bloc.

HAVANA — In a poor Havana neighborhood, a self-help group builds a religious center and repairs its own houses. Elsewhere, church members gather to discuss democracy.

A journalist files regular reports to the U.S. government's Radio Marti. And Cubans by the hundreds of thousands are leaving state employment to go into business for themselves.

Cuba's government, once an all-present Big Brother, is getting a lot smaller these days — a change forced by an economic crisis and the loss of former allies in the socialist bloc.

The government has legalized private jobs to employ those the state can no longer maintain under severe budget cuts. And Fidel Castro's government is becoming more sensitive to foreign political opinion since inviting in foreign investors to help invigorate the island's economy.

Wherever decreasing state enterprise has left a void, or the government has turned a lenient eye, independent organizations are rushing in.

Some are openly pro-government. Some run along the edge of open opposition. Most say they couldn't care less about politics. But many believe they are profoundly changing the nature of Cuban society.

"They are people who are escaping from the dominion of the government," said Nestor Baguer, president of the Independent Press Agency of Cuba.

"There are all kinds of semi-independent organizations surfacing with either the blessing or the semi-blessing of the state," said sociologist Nelson Valdes, an expert on Cuba from the University of New Mexico.

Some believe that the changes are irreversible and that the economic reforms will lead to greater political freedom.

"I am a fervent advocate of economic liberty," said Baguer. "I believe in the long run economics defeats politics."

Not everyone agrees.

"The repression now is more silent than a year ago," said Elizardo Sanchez, leader of a small Cuban human rights group. "But the government is not reducing the repressive machinery."

He estimates that 2,000 to 5,000 Cubans are in prison for political crimes and some international human rights groups put the number in the hundreds or thousands.

Other countries — China and Iraq, for example — have managed to combine private businesses with tight political control.

The government recently freed several prominent political prisoners in response to an appeal from a French human rights group. But it also recently jailed a Protestant preacher and a noted human rights worker on what critics claim are trumped up charges.

Even so, the opening in Cuba is notable.

The Roman Catholic Church, historically at odds with Castro's government, is encouraging the creation of independent study groups and organizations.

The government is permitting the growth of non-governmental organizations that accept aid from foreign governments or agencies abroad.

The Felix Varela Foundation has published a political study criticizing the Stalinist political model, which Cuba followed for years.

The Group for Integrated Urban Development is encouraging independent neighborhood organizations it hopes will become cooperatives with small-scale industries and housing rehabilitation programs.

One such neighborhood organization, in Havana's Atares neighborhood, has renovated a house for use as center of worship and makes bricks of rubble from demolished buildings to repair homes.

And, significantly, Baguer, head of the independent journalists' group, files regular reports to Radio Marti as well as to the Miami Herald. Such acts until recently would have landed him in prison.

But Baguer said when pro-government street thugs recently broke his arm, government officials sent him to the country's best orthopedic hospital. Officials have not recently interfered with his reporting, he said.

His predecessor, Rolando Indamiro Restano, was recently freed from prison and said he believes Cuba is "beginning an era of toleration."

"Their approach has been that if this is going to have a huge political cost, they are going to be very slow in doing it," Valdes said.

U.S. couple dies in mine explosion while on vacation

CAIRO , Egypt (AP) — An American couple on leave from the U.S. army was killed Tuesday when the off-road vehicle they were riding in hit a mine in the Sinai desert, police said.

Two Egyptians, one a driver and the other a guide, were injured.

Police speculated the mine may have been left over from Israeli-Egyptian wars.

Neither police nor U.S. embassy officials in Cairo would release the victims' names.

The incident occurred 30 miles north of the Red Sea resort of Sharm el-Sheik, said Michael Sternberg, the chief representative in Israel of the multinational force in the Sinai.

He said the Americans were officers posted to Germany but on vacation in Egypt. Police officials, who spoke on condition their names not be used, said the Americans were married.

Last year's 116 make 90s look better

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, a less than 20 percent chance of rain, a high in the mid-90s and south winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 63, Tuesday's high reached 92, compared to the record high for that date of 116 set in 1994. The record low was 61 set in 1968.

STATE

Thunderstorms helped cool temperatures across North Texas on Tuesday. The rest of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies.

Temperatures were in the lower 80s in the Panhandle under clear to partly cloudy skies to lower 90s under mostly cloudy skies along the coast. Del Rio hit 100 degrees.

Southwest winds prevailed in West Texas at 10 miles per hour and southeast winds continued along the coast at 10 to 15 miles per hour. North Texas had southerly winds at 5 to 10 mph.

Showers and a few thunderstorms moved through the Dallas-Fort Worth region late in the afternoon and early in the evening. The storms tracked eastward at 25 to 30 miles an hour.

The North Texas forecast includes a continuing chance of thunderstorms today. Otherwise mostly cloudy in the east and partly cloudy elsewhere. High 90 to 95.

Tonight, partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms. High 90 to 95. Low near 70.

South Texas is expected to be partly cloudy with a chance of rain. Highs in the 80s and 90s. Lows in the upper 60s to lower 70s.

Forecasters said West Texas will be partly to mostly cloudy with a chance of showers and thunderstorms. Highs in the 90s to 103 in the Big Bend. Lows in the 60s.

NATION

Thunderstorms caused severe flash flooding Tuesday in Virginia, and thunderstorms also were scattered over Texas and from Missouri up through the Ohio Valley.

As much as 9 inches of rain fell in four hours in central and northern Virginia, stranding motorists on top of their cars and threatening roads, dams and bridges.

A 3-year-old girl was missing after being swept into a swollen creek in a mountainous area of northern Virginia's Warren County and firefighters had to rescue two people from trees where they had sought shelter from rushing water.

Roads in Virginia's Orange County were flooded and several motorists were trapped in their cars, said Janet Clements, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Emergency Services.

Rain also fell farther north, into southern New York state.

Thunderstorms extended from Missouri up the length of the Ohio Valley, with the strongest storms along the Ohio-Pennsylvania line.

Thunderstorms early in the day in central Ohio knocked out power to an estimated 70,000 customers and caused rural and urban flooding.

The storms poured rain at a rate of an inch per hour for three to four hours, and flash flood watches were posted for most of northern and central Ohio, the National Weather Service said.

Severe thunderstorms developed during the morning in central Texas before dissipating. Storms also developed over the state's Panhandle.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BOND: MISD panel submits $45 million package of Abell Junior High School were mentioned by some members of the committee, attending the meeting, as being "grandiose" and "extravagant."

(From 1A)

Midlander Jeanette Dragisic questioned renovating athletic facilities such as locker rooms, dressing rooms and playing and practice areas to meet Title IX standards.

She said that if the district allowed 47 percent of the bond package to fund instruction and 31 percent to go for athletic upgrades, "taxpayers will not go for 31 percent being for athletic facilities."

Trustees did not comment on the bond issue, which may come up for a vote at a later date.

Angelo also mentioned in his letter to the board that the district should consider pursuing home rule, recently approved by the Legislature.

Midlander John Ladd, a member of Gov. George Bush's Select Task Force on Public Education, spoke to trustees during their dinner break about home rule and charter schools.

"Home rule would get you out of a significant number of state regulations," Ladd told trustees. "But schools would still have federal mandates and would still have to be accountable."

"I think home rule would generate significant interest in an election," Ladd said, suggesting the issue could be paired on the ballot with the possible upcoming bond election.

Trustees said an Associated Press article raised concerns about the value of having home rule.

In that article, Plano Independent School District Superintendent Jim Surratt said, "When you keep all federal regulations and when you mandate all the same financial requirements — equalization and finance — plus the same rules for bilingual education and same athletic rules, when you get through with that list, what's left?"

Ladd said there were plenty of state mandates left.

The Plano ISD superintendent estimated it would cost $250,000 to enact home rule, but did not explain where the money would be spent.

In order for a school district to initiate home rule there must be a petition or a 2/3 trustee vote. Then 25 percent of Midland County registered voters must participate in an election on the issue.

In other reports, trustees heard a presentation on Coleman High School's Principal's Advisory Committee, and Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) test results.

The board voted to allow Alamo Junior High School to expand the study skills/reading program, and to allow San Jacinto Junior High School to have a reading specialist are now left with a relic law, particularly in Texas — with its vast expanses — where 55 mph is ludicrous."

SPEED: Callers overwhelmingly want higher limit

Two callers said they supported passage of such a law to raise limits because it takes people longer to get where they're going these days. One added, "There are safe and courteous drivers on the road today, and we're getting rid of all the drunks, so we should raise it to 75 or even 80."

Another caller said, "It should be raised to 65 because the scenery is so boring out here you could fall asleep from going so slow. If you go faster you'll have less accidents."

Only a couple of callers who voiced comments felt the limit should stay at 55 mph.

"I don't know why they want to go back to something that resulted in so many deaths," one anonymous female caller said. "There have been a lot less traffic-related deaths since it was reduced to 55, and I think it should stay that way."

John Paul Scott said, "The state highways should be a lot faster. Everyone drives that way, and this would just make it legal."

Two respondents called for speed limits to be set depending on certain conditions.

"The highway speed limits should be set according to condition of highways, the number of lanes and the difficulty in maneuvering," according to Lewis Gerber. "Other than that, it'd be a good idea to increase the speed limit."

A caller named Dolores said, "We ought to have 65 during the day and 55 at night, but a lot of it depends on the condition of the car, the driver, the road and the weather."

Some people felt speed limits don't matter that much.

"Seems like everybody now is going over the speed limit anyway, and if you go the speed limit you almost get run over on the major highways," one caller said.

Added James Beatty: "I think the speed limit should be 60 on controlled access roads out in the country, 65 on state highways. More cars should come equipped with cruise controls where they could keep their speeds at the posted speed limits."

REESE: Lubbock plans life without its air base annually. Officials lobbied hard to keep Reese off the Base Closure and Realignment Commission's list.

But since Thursday, leaders here have shifted their efforts to finding ways to cope without Reese.

"Reese was important and we did want to save it," said Quentin Thomas, assistant city manager. "But at some point in time we have to say we fought the good fight."

Thomas is keeping a "wish list" of suggestions for the property about 5 miles west of Lubbock. Ideas include a retirement center, prison, junior college, air-freight hub or assembly plant.

Officials have said the closure will not derail the Air Force's cleanup of groundwater contaminated by an industrial solvent formerly used to clean airplane parts at Reese.

So Thomas expressed confidence that new tenants would move in.

"There's a 100 percent chance — not a chance, a statement of fact — that the people of West Texas are going to rise to the opportunity," he said.

Revamping a military base for business use usually succeeds but can cost up to $20 million, said Mark Somma of the Military Base Conversion and Community Assistance Program at Texas Tech University.

That program began in March 1994 to help Texas cities adjust to inevitable rounds of base closures, Somma said.

"Face up to it right away," he advised. "Recognize it as a challenge and an opportunity, and move forward."

This latest blow to the Lubbock economy brought an acknowledgement last week from Mayor David Langston: "We have suffered a tremendous amount of disappointment over the last several months."

Langston, at his news conference Thursday, mentioned the pullout of American Airlines jet service and the elimination of 400 jobs at Texas Instruments. In January, voters rejected a sales tax for economic development.

But Texas Employment Commission figures released June 20 show Lubbock with the state's fourth-lowest unemployment rate, at 3.9 percent, compared to the Texas average 5.6 percent.

That fact encourages those who believe the Lubbock economy will survive without a military base.

"Lubbock is prosperous," said Lewis Hill, chairman of the economics department at Texas Tech. "It's got a booming health care industry, the employment is high, people are working, making money. And so the Lubbock economy is strong and it is viable."

Hare — who was hospitalized for a few weeks — has remained on the city payroll, received workers compensation and has had his medical bills picked up by the city, officials said.

"I think the city wants to take care of him and do the right thing," said Mayor Bobby Burns.

The possibility of a lawsuit was discussed by the City Council in private during executive session on Tuesday. City officials said they also discussed the situation with Hare.

According to City Attorney Keith Stretcher, the letter "makes allegations of negligence" against the city.

Pletcher said it would be premature and against attorney ethics to discuss what damages Hare might be seeking.

Hare declined to discuss the possible claim with the Reporter-Telegram.

WIRE: Political concerns have raised the stakes were gone, and some sources said the talks were likely to continue right up to the deadline.

Hashimoto was pessimistic heading into Tuesday's negotiations after six days of talks, including two between the nation's top trade officials.

"I have never been optimistic from the start," Hashimoto told reporters as he left his hotel for the evening session with U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor.

At an economic conference in Portland, Ore., President Clinton defended his sanctions threat.

"I am not trying to launch a new era of protectionism," Clinton said. "But we have tried now for two or three decades to open this market."

Exports of cars and auto parts account for half of Japan's $66 billion-a-year trade surplus with the United States.

U.S. automakers sold about 15,000 cars and trucks in Japan last year, while Japanese companies sold more than 3.5 million in this country, Kantor has said.

Private companies appeared to be making more headway than the official negotiators. Japanese carmakers have stepped up production in the United States to avoid import duties, and Chrysler announced Tuesday it was buying a car distributor in Japan to boost its sales there.

Marge Searing, a high-ranking negotiator with the U.S. commerce department met Tuesday in Geneva with Japanese automakers, indicating possible movement in the discussions.

The Clinton administration wants Japanese automakers to agree to buy more U.S. auto parts. Only 2.6 percent of auto parts bought in Japan are foreign-made, compared with 32.5 percent in the United States.

Japan says the U.S. demands violate free trade — even though the World Trade Organization, which mediates such disputes, has criticized Japan for maintaining the world's most-closed auto market.

Japanese officials contend American automakers haven't tried hard enough to win over Japanese consumers.

Both sides, saying their arguments are based on principle, insist they won't back down.

Political concerns at home have raised the stakes.

Hashimoto is regarded as a strong candidate to become Japan's prime minister, and his uncompromising position is popular with voters.

President Clinton is under pressure from Republicans in Congress to stand firm and is also mindful of votes from car workers in key states at next year's presidential election.

Major gets formidable challenger to top seat

LONDON (AP) — John Redwood, known as "Vulcan" for his cold, Spock-like logic, has abandoned Prime Minister John Major's enterprise to run for captain.

Newspaper columnists are enjoying the joke, but the formidably brainy Oxford graduate confronts Major with a serious challenge from the Conservative Party's right wing, which still venerates Margaret Thatcher.

Redwood's campaign expresses the right's frustration at Major's refusal to pledge the English pound won't be sacrificed for a single European currency, his instinct for compromise instead of ideological rigor and the continuing growth of government spending.

"I think on Europe there is a groundswell of opinion in the country, that they want clarity, and I'm offering clarity," Redwood said on BBC TV Tuesday. "I'm saying, right! We don't want to abolish the pound. It would mean a huge transformation in the constitutional position of this country if all the main economic levers were settled by unelected people on the continent of Europe rather than by elected people at home. I don't think the public of Great Britain want that, and I'm not ashamed to say so."

On spending and taxes, Redwood says: "The Conservative Party is the party of low taxation or it is nothing."

Treasury chief Kenneth Clarke, one of Major's main supporters, accuses Redwood of peddling "extreme right-wing simplistic ideology."

But Lady Thatcher, who is formally supporting Major while lavishing praise on Redwood, told The Associated Press in Washington on Monday: "the people are cross with us because we haven't been quite conservative enough."

Redwood, who headed Thatcher's policy unit in 1983-85, is out to duplicate her bold stroke in 1975, when she challenged former Prime Minister Edward Heath for the party leadership. Lightly regarded at first, she did so well on the first ballot among Conservative lawmakers that her campaign proved unstoppable.

Thatcher proved to be a charismatic leader, but there are doubts whether Redwood can excite voters.

"He exudes the passion of a halibut on a fishmonger's slab," wrote Chris Moncrieff, veteran political analyst for Britain's Press Association.

Prince of Qatar deposes father unexpectedly

DOHA, Qatar (AP) — Qatar's crown prince, for years the real power in this wealthy Persian Gulf emirate, seized power from his father unexpectedly Tuesday while the sheik was vacationing in Switzerland.

The dethroning was largely a formality, since Prince Hamad Bin Khalifa al-Thani, 45, already effectively runs the country. But Qatar sealed its 38-mile border with Saudi Arabia and placed two border brigades on alert, diplomats said.

The deposed emir, Sheik Khalifa Bin Hamad al-Thani, 65, who himself grabbed power from a cousin 23 years ago, called the coup unacceptable. He said he would return to his country "whatever the cost."

"I am still their legitimate emir — whether it be for the royal family, the people or for the army," he said from Geneva's Hotel du Rhone.

State-run media proclaimed the peaceful takeover and referred to the son, a longtime defense minister, as "the new emir."

Later Tuesday, Prince Hamad told an emergency Cabinet session that the ouster was necessitated by the nation's "difficult circumstances." He did not elaborate.

The conditions "led me forcefully and with all regret to make up my mind ... and assume the rule of the country as successor to my father, who will remain the cherished father of all," he said.

He indicated the coup would bring no major policy shift. Qatar's new interior and foreign ministers were quickly sent to Saudi Arabia for a meeting with King Fahd.

Meanwhile, Oman, an important ally, and Jordan both sent messages to the new emir that amounted to recognition. Abu Dhabi's crown prince also congratulated Prince Hamad, Qatar's news agency said.

Qatar's population is about 513,000, of which more than two-thirds are Indian, Pakistani, Iranian and Palestinian expatriates. Most indigenous Qataris adhere to the strict Wahhabite school of Islam, which keeps women cloistered and bans alcohol.

People need to give input on I-20 planning

Midland city officials are asking for help in the drive to spur development along the Interstate 20 corridor between Fairgrounds Road and Loop 250 and a public hearing is set for 7 p.m. today at Midland Center to receive that input.

This will be an important meeting and we encourage all interested Midlanders to attend.

The goal of developing Midland as a regional shopping center is not pie-in-the-sky. While north and west Midland are growing and developing rapidly, however, the south and east parts of the community are not, and the city has committed to helping all of Midland develop as a regional center.

In fact, historically Midland has occupied that role since the late-1800's when ranchers from the surrounding counties would occasionally travel to this community to stock up on supplies. Midland was an essential trade center then and could become even more important as a regional center today with the ongoing retail development here.

No community ever flourishes as a center for trade without the dedicated efforts of many of its residents. Cameron Walker, planning and development coordinator, noted that when announcing the public hearing. "We're committed to improving our airport, we've made a commitment to develop Loop 250 and we feel like adding the I-20 corridor is a logical step to becoming a regional center," he said.

The city has made a commitment to this worthwhile project. Now the people of Midland should reciprocate. The best way to start is by attending this evening's meeting in Midland Center to provide the city's leaders with ideas about how to develop along Interstate 20.

U.N. paperwork costs taxpayers millions

UNITED NATIONS — A joke making the rounds here is that given all of the money the United Nations wastes churning out mounds of pointless paperwork, no other organization in the world can make the following boast: printed in six languages and read in none.

Anderson

But the joke is on U.S. taxpayers. One-quarter of the United Nations' multibillion-dollar budget is paid for by Americans, which is why Congress has targeted the United Nations for drastic cutbacks.

Just counting parliamentary documents produced for meetings in New York and Geneva, the U.N. spent $290 million on 2.13 billion printed pages in the last two years. One-quarter of that — more than $72 million — was paid for by the American taxpayer.

So when the largest gathering of heads of state ever meet for the United Nations' 50th anniversary general assembly session this October, the hoopla will be more subdued for Americans who realize they're paying an enormous sum to translate and publish the often interminable speeches in the United Nations' six different official languages.

Currently, 185 nations belong to the United Nations and all their leaders want to talk at this fall's historic occasion. They will take 20 minutes, when five would do. It's a place where small countries can pontificate along with the big boys, so the Mouse Does Roar with a vengeance — and a price.

A U.S. ambassador complained to us that the United Nations has an expensive "obsession with ritual — endless, flowery language. Somebody will say, 'Congratulations to this person.' Fifteen delegations will say the same thing: 'We wish to report our congratulations.' It's all (BS) and everybody knows it. But it goes on."

For a regular general assembly session, more than 200 interpreters are employed. A standard three-hour U.N. meeting costs $5,000 just for the interpreters. Since the United Nations has about 12,000 such meetings a year, the tab for simultaneous oral translation is $60 million.

The United Nations also produces thousands of technical documents that gather dust on shelves around the world. There are over 2,000 copies of a 24-page glossy brochure, "Standards for Eggs-in-Shell," complete with color photographs of every egg imaginable. Sequels include standards for chilled eggs and preserved eggs.

The whole thing is nuts, you say? Well, nuts are addressed in a 130-page booklet, "Standards for Dry and Dried Fruit."

One of the chief causes for the unpopularity of U.N. publications is their lack of timeliness. U.N. newsletters are sometimes published so many months late that upcoming events touted in them have already passed. An audit of the U.N. Environment Program turned up study after study that was up to nine years late.

A 1994 internal audit found the United Nations guilty of "considerable overproduction of publications." And a check of 66 titles in 1992 revealed that "large quantities" were thrown away.

In one visible protest, U.S. delegate Michael Michalski stormed into a May 1991 closed budget committee with three cartons that were overflowing with just-received documents. He formally returned them to the United Nations, which seemed to be "quite comfortable churning out hundreds and hundreds of copies of documents" that it didn't need and therefore sent to the U.S. mission and probably other delegations.

His colleagues were not amused at the breach of protocol. But Michalski's tirade illustrated an evil byproduct of the United Nations' excessive vanity press operations: the fact that the United Nations is one of the world's worst ecology-minded organizations, felling whole forests in order to produce the more than 8 million pages of paper a day that nobody will read.

Such hypocrisy is not surprising to observers who paid close attention to the 1992 earth summit in Brazil. It may have been a high-minded summit to save the earth and its forests, but that doesn't mean the United Nations changed its wasting ways.

An estimated 30 million pieces of paper were used at the 12-day conference including 70,000 pages of U.N. press releases, 150,000 sheets of memos and 300,000 pages of schedules — each day. Some 220 Brazilian garbage men hauled away seven tons of non-recyclable trash from the save-the-planet summit.

The good news for ecologists is that sometimes U.N. reports don't consume paper: They're simply never done. The United Nations spent $2.5 million in 1991 on a look at the Chernobyl nuclear disaster and failed to produce a report. Instead, in typical unapologetic U.N. fashion, the Secretariat came back and asked delegates to authorize another $2.5 million "to write a report explaining why the first report was never issued," according to a source.

ANOTHER VIEW

Supply, demand to set price of water for many

Only when throats are parched, crops are turning brown and plant and animal species are dying do people appreciate just how essential water really is. Perhaps not surprisingly, then, the question of how water from the Edwards Aquifer is to be distributed and conserved continues to be a major bone of contention.

Back in 1993, everything appeared to be coming up roses after the state Legislature passed the Edwards Aquifer Water Management Act. But progress was interrupted when the civil rights division of the Justice Department refused to OK the law. During the 1995 state legislative session, the Clinton administration's concerns were met when the Texas Legislature passed a law providing for a 15-member elected water management authority instead of an appointed panel.

Nonetheless, environmentalist organizations such as the Sierra Club insist that emergency withdrawal measures are still needed. They insist that without special measures, the flow from springs that gush forth aquifer water during peak demand periods will be reduced, thus endangering the environment. As a practical matter, the failure of Texans to meet this challenge could lead the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to impose its own controls.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton has responded by appointing a five-lawyer panel to come up with an independent emergency conservation plan. This is a welcome move. But no one should think it will provide a long-term solution to the basic problem.

Ultimately, the most promising approach is to be found in a greater role for market mechanisms in the distribution of water. As with any other commodity, water has a natural price that will vary according to the law of supply and demand. When those who have more water than they need are allowed to sell to those who want to purchase more water, deals should be allowed.

In truth, no mechanism for distributing and conserving water will yield greater efficiency than one that allows the market to work. The new Edwards Aquifer law fortunately provides for such approaches. Logically, that is where the energies of policymakers, managers and judges should increasingly be focused.

WILLIAM MURCHISION

Clinton covers every campaign contingency

WASHINGTON — My '96 campaign has begun. Running the country, which they won't let me do, now gives way to running for re-election, where I call the shots.

My Grand Strategy is to run above party, to secure the Perot anti-deficit vote, then to scare Democrats into coming along by painting the party in power as extremist.

Safire

My campaign inner circle is in place: strategist Dick Morris and pollster Doug Schoen, my alter ego Gore and his man Jack Quinn, manager Harold Ickes, adman Bob Squier, Gov. Evan Bayh, with Leon Panetta the bridge to government. Hillary's not in the meetings this time.

We're off to a good start. The Senate's Foster rejection was a 10-strike — showed me loyal to the end, and reminded every woman I'm pro-choice and the Republicans are anti-abortion. That wedge splits Republican women away from the party.

And the Supreme Court got me off the hook on the Republican's wedge issue, affirmative action. Come Bastille Day, I'll have a nonracial set-asides policy based on helping poor communities — giving poor white men a break. No rigid numerical hiring goals, no layoffs favoring the unqualified, but extra efforts for women and minorities. Sure it's a straddle — but good glass-ceiling rhetoric will show women I'm with them.

I have the jump on Republicans, and on whoever my Democratic challenger will be, in advertising. My "inoculation" commercials are ready, making me immune on crime by pushing for more cops and fighting the NRA's repeal of my assault weapons ban. If Republicans want to fiddle with the crime bill this summer, they'll have a hard time hitting me on midnight basketball.

I've begun to plant the seeds of "the Republican recession." When Dole-Gingrich took over in January, unemployment and inflation were way down, the economy was booming — now if it all falls apart, it's their fault. That's why I've been saying "yes, but" to spending cuts since the State of the Union, and why I stick to my middle-class tax cut — later, I can blame their extremism for any recession. Or credit my moderation for continued prosperity.

When the budget negotiations get down to the short strokes in October, should I cave or take the "train wreck"? I'll get the best deal I can — eight years, resisting some education cuts — but I won't close down the government. I'm now against bickering and gridlock; so are most people.

I know, Democratic leaders in Congress — Bonior, Kennedy, Obey, the whole rear guard — will keep hollering I've sold out our liberal birthright. But they led the party down the road to its worst defeat.

So I'll deal with the New Democratic Party in the Senate, where John Breaux is the shadow minority leader and Joe Lieberman the whip. (Actually, Newt Gingrich is our whip, and will be in charge of my turnout in '96.) That core of a dozen, with Republican moderates, plus help from organized labor in return for my trade war on Japan, gives us the filibuster power to resist cloture.

But I need a cost-free new idea to steal the legislative spotlight. The Republican weakness is welfare reform, where the teen-age mother cutoff is too cruel and the work requirement costs too much. Maybe there's a way to provide welfare through employers — Republicans would have to buy welfare privatization. And then I could forget the expensive job training and make-work programs, and concentrate on child care direct to kids to free welfare mothers for their first jobs.

That's the new, independent Clinton — the Great Facilitator. At home, balance the budget someday without pain, creative but cheap welfare reform, crime prevention, big push to deport illegal immigrants, save California from offshore drilling. Abroad, Chris sets me up to broker a Mideast deal with Syria, and I keep our boys out of unpopular wars — while charging both political parties here with being isolationist for cutting foreign aid.

Am I euphoric? It's better than being irrelevant and droopy. If it's Dole, I run again as the challenger against the old incumbent; if it's Gingrich, I'm the moderate against the extremist; if it's Wilson — no, the Christian Coalition won't let the Republicans pick Wilson.

I can lick 'em by joining 'em. Now if I only knew what those damnable Whitewater prosecutors were up to ...

On this date:

In 1778, "Molly Pitcher" (Mary Ludwig Hays) carried water to American soldiers at the Revolutionary War Battle of Monmouth, N.J.

In 1836, the fourth president of the United States, James Madison, died in Montpelier, Va.

In 1950, North Korean forces captured Seoul, South Korea.

In 1951, a TV version of the radio program "Amos 'N' Andy" began a two-year run on CBS. (Although criticized for racial stereotyping, it was also the first network TV series to feature an all-black cast).

In 1978, the Supreme Court ordered the University of California Medical College at Davis to admit Allan Bakke, a white man who argued he'd been a victim of reverse racial discrimination.

O.J. surfing is cheaper, better pastime than golf

When people ask me what I do for fun, I reply, "I surf." I surf, not in the ocean, but with a television clicker. TV surfing is now getting more popular than golf and is much cheaper.

You can surf from a chair or from a rug, or from just about anywhere, as long as you point the clicker in the right direction. I ride the airwaves from Channel 2 to Channel 83, and I never know what's coming up next.

Buchwald

The other night I clicked on to see a beautiful girl with long legs in leather pants kicking the hell out of a greasy thug. She clipped him in the jaw with her fist and then knocked his teeth out with a karate chop.

It turned out that she was a former prosecutor from Toledo, Ohio, commenting on the O.J. Simpson trial.

It was television as we have come to know it.

I clicked again and my eyes boggled. It was O.J. Simpson running for a 90-yard touchdown during a Buffalo Bills game.

My son called me from upstairs. "Dad, turn to Channel 45. O.J. is selling Christie Brinkley a salve for arthritis."

"I have him running for a touchdown on Channel 3."

I clicked again. The screen was filled with the sight of O.J. doing exercises on a video selling for $19.95. I called my son, "What have you got?"

"I've got O.J. in handcuffs and now they're showing the DNA that the police collected at the crime scene."

"I've seen that already. I'm surfing toward the upper channels now." I clicked again and yelled, "I've got a boatload of jurors who were kicked out of the trial for signing contracts for books, as well as a tour of Marcia Clark's hairdresser's."

"Dad, Kato's on 'Perry Mason' on Channel 75."

I clicked to 75 but was too late. All I saw were the credits saying, "Kato's clothes have been provided by Brooks Brothers and his hair was styled by Vidal Sassoon."

I cussed myself and clicked. I only saw six L.A. police SWAT members crashing into a house and making everyone lie on their stomachs while they were read their rights.

My son came in loud and clear. "Dad, they're selling footballs autographed by O.J. on the shopping channel."

"Thanks, but I'd rather find the cooking show that O.J. was on before he was arrested."

"Did you know that they have wrestling now featuring an O.J. look-alike?"

"No, I didn't, but I understand that one of O.J.'s lawyers is going to enter a horse in the Belmont Stakes and call him 'Faster Than Hertz.'"

"Dad, are you watching public television?"

"Should I be?"

" 'Masterpiece Theatre' is going to air a series on Judge Ito's life."

Study shows teens' misconceptions about AIDS

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Many teen-agers are afraid of getting AIDS from doctors or other health professionals, according to a survey that found what one researcher called a frightening misconception among youngsters.

Only six of the estimated 1.5 million people who are HIV-infected in the United States are believed to have gotten the virus from a health professional — and all six from the same dentist.

"It surprised all the experts, because the experts did not know that teen-agers had this misconception," said the lead researcher on the survey, Dr. Kenneth R. Ginsburg, a specialist in adolescent medicine at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

The 1993 survey of more than 6,800 ninth-graders in 39 Philadelphia public schools was designed to identify what teens most want in a health-care provider. Proper hand-washing was at the top of the list, followed by using clean instruments, honesty, respect toward teens and overall cleanliness.

After the survey, researchers learned from 215 youngsters in small discussion groups that the preoccupation with cleanliness was related to the fear of acquiring diseases, particularly AIDS.

In seven of the 21 groups, teens immediately said concern about AIDS explained the importance they attached to hand-washing and overall cleanliness. In the 14 other groups, the initial concern was "germs." When asked what kind of germs, youngsters in seven of the 14 groups mentioned the AIDS virus.

"Our findings suggest a pressing need for better public education about the near-zero risk of acquiring HIV through routine health care," the researchers reported in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association. The survey was funded by private and government sources.

'Our findings suggest a pressing need for better public education about the near-zero risk of acquiring HIV through routine health care.'

— Researchers of 1993 survey report in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association

Teens may spurn preventive health care because they are afraid of getting AIDS, Ginsburg said by telephone Monday.

During the discussion groups, Ginsburg said, he told the youngsters that 1.5 million Americans have the AIDS virus, and he asked the teen-agers to estimate how many got infected by health professionals. Most of the youngsters put the number at 100,000 to 250,000, he said.

"That's frightening that they had that perception, when the reality is six," he said.

The best known case, that of Florida dentist Dr. David Acer and patient Kimberly Bergalis, got headlines in 1992. Many of the teens mentioned the case specifically, Ginsburg said.

"The people in this study were 10 to 12 years old during media coverage of that story," Ginsburg said. "What is clear is they ... blew it wildly out of proportion."

Acer infected five patients besides Bergalis, federal officials say, though they don't know how. Acer, Bergalis and four other patients have died.

The findings of the survey cannot be applied to other age groups, nor to suburban or rural teenagers, Ginsburg said.

Teens in the discussion groups readily acknowledged that many adolescents practice unsafe sex, which is far more likely to result in infection with the AIDS virus than will going to a doctor who doesn't wash his hands, Ginsburg said.

The teens admitted they are less rational when deciding whether to have sex than they are when deciding on health care, he said.

Fifty-three percent of U.S. high schoolers are sexually active, and 47 percent of them don't use condoms, according to the latest federal survey on the topic, in 1993. AIDS has been diagnosed in 1,965 teens, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which began counting in 1981.

In an accompanying editorial in JAMA, two researchers not involved in the survey, Dr. Tina L. Cheng of George Washington University School of Medicine and Dr. Jonathan D. Klein of the University of Rochester School of Medicine, said that doctors should take simple stemps to allay youngsters' fears, such as washing their hands in front of them.

Landlord pulls plug on Kevorkian's 'obitorium'

DETROIT (AP) — Jack Kevorkian has begun a new chapter in his quest to put doctors in the suicide business with the opening of an "obitorium," a clinic for helping people end their lives.

However, the first suicide at the new Margo Janus Mercy Clinic — named for Kevorkian's sister, who died of a heart attack — apparently will be its last. The building's owner said Tuesday he has given Kevorkian a month to get out.

"I'm looking at the pressure from authorities, from the media," said Jody Rothermel.

Kevorkian had signed a $500 month-to-month lease on the weathered, building, a former hardware store in suburban Oakland County.

On Monday, Erika Garcellano, a 60-year-old victim of Lou Gehrig's disease who had been living in a Kansas City, Mo., nursing home, died at the "obitorium" in the 24th suicide that Kevorkian has aided or witnessed since 1990.

An autopsy Tuesday found she died of carbon monoxide poisoning, and the county medical examiner's office classified the death as a homicide. That has no direct bearing on whether charges are filed, and the Oakland County prosecutor's office said it was awaiting sheriff's reports before acting.

■ More national news/7B

Because the U.S. Supreme Court recently refused to shield him from prosecution, Kevorkian faces possible murder charges in two earlier deaths and assisted-suicide charges in three others.

Kevorkian's lawyer Geoffrey Fieger has not disclosed details of the woman's death or how the "obitorium" operates, but in most of the suicides in which Kevorkian has taken part, people breathed carbon monoxide from a canister.

Kevorkian, a 67-year-old retired pathologist who lost his medical license over his assisted suicides, has long envisioned the establishment of "obitoriums" across the country.

"I coined the word 'obitorium' ... for the center," Kevorkian wrote in his 1991 book "Prescription Medicide." He called for "suicide centers created specifically for the good of moribund subjects" that offer them "a serene, dignified death."

Such centers would be affiliated with hospices and would provide for the removal of organs for transplant, Kevorkian said.

Kevorkian used his rusted Volkswagen van for his first assisted suicide in 1990 and has used many locations since then, including homes and rented cottages.

His first obitorium is a nearly empty building containing a bunk bed. Sheets are hung over the windows.

Fieger said there is really no bad blood between Kevorkian and his landlord. "Jody is a big supporter of Jack," the lawyer said.

Kevorkian knew it was unlikely he would be able to continue using the building, Fieger said. The building is next to a shuttered restaurant about 40 miles northwest of Detroit.

"If he has to, he'll have a movable clinic," the attorney said.

Kevorkian's whereabouts were unknown Tuesday.

Susan Wolf, a medical ethics expert at the University of Minnesota, said doctor-assisted suicide may have its good points, but Kevorkian does nothing to advance the cause.

"He's the worst advertisement for physician-assisted suicide you could come up with," said Wolf, an associate professor of law and medicine and a member of the school's Center for Biomedical Ethics.

Police charge Myers, former Clinton press secretary, with DUI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White house press secretary Dee Dee Myers faces possible jail time and a $2,000 fine after she was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.

Myers was driving on the wrong side of the street early Tuesday when stopped, according to police, who said the arrest came after she was told to move her double-parked car that was pointed in the wrong direction.

D.C. police spokesman Sydney Bennett said the officer asked Myers to move on, at which point she continued the wrong way on the Northwest Washington street in a popular ethnic restaurant district. The officer stopped her again; she again double-parked facing the wrong way, and was arrested for driving on the wrong side of the street, police said.

Myers was taken into custody and charged with driving under the influence after she recorded a blood alcohol level of 0.01 percent to 0.10 percent, police said. She was released on the promise to appear at a court hearing.

If she is found guilty of the misdemeanor offense, Myers could be fined $2,000 or sentenced to one year in jail.

TU seeks to refund $89 million

■ Since fuel costs were lower than estimated during six-month period in '94-95, officials ask PUC for rebate permission.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Midland TU Electric customers should look for a rebate on their August electric bill, with company officials refunding more than $89 million in "over collections" — the timing is expected to offset high seasonal bills.

Since fuel costs were lower than estimated during a six-month period in 1994-95, on Monday TU officials asked the Texas Public Utilities Commission for permission to refund the overcharged income, said Midland District Manager Luann Morgan.

According to PUC regulations, when actual fuel costs vary substantially below or above approved projections, the utility must file a request with the PUC to refund or surcharge the difference.

Regarding the collections to be refunded the PUC set interest rates on the 1994 monthly balances at 3.27 percent and 4.32 percent on the 1995 collections, Ms. Morgan said.

A residential TU customer using an average 1,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity in August, would receive a credit of $8.62, according to TU officials.

"This rate will be the same for all TU customers," Ms. Morgan said.

The amount of the refund will depend on the amount of electricity used during that time.

The over collection was due to falling natural gas prices, which fell to their lowest point in two years. Increased domestic gas production, increased stockpiles and Canadian imports — coupled with the milder than expected winter of 1994-95 — added to the drop in spot-market gas prices.

"Gas prices continued to decline through May 1995, causing the cumulative balance of over-collected fuel costs to exceed the threshold and trigger a refund," a TU official said.

Since it would be an impossible feat of accounting to refund the overcharges to exactly the same customers that purchased power during the winter, the PUC allows utilities to refund to its current customers through a fixed per-kilowatt-hour rate.

Since 1986, there have been 10 such refunds made, amounting to $685 million. During that time there were also two surcharges added to bills, amounting to $238 million.

If fuel prices were to stabilize at the lower rate, TU has the option of requesting a change in the factor used to calculate fuel charges. "We will carefully monitor the market and, if it appears that a reduction is justified, we will seek an appropriate reduction," the official said.

The PUC is expected to grant the refund request.

Jurors sentence Midlander to 99 years for murder

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

After four hours of deliberating Tuesday, a jury sentenced Rogelio Mireles Jr. to 99 years in prison for the murder of his wife and 15 years for the attempted murder of her father.

Mireles, 21, was found guilty Friday of the Dec. 13, 1993, shooting death of his common-law wife, Catalina "Cathy" Chavez, 18, and for the attempted murder of her father, Jose Chavez.

The victim had left the defendant about a week before she was gunned down, her father said.

Mireles shot and killed Ms. Chavez at her parents' home. Her father tried to catch Mireles, when Mireles turned and began firing at him.

Mireles testified that Chavez pulled a gun on him, so he began firing at him in self defense.

During the punishment phase of the trial, Chavez testified that he had told Mireles he was "gonna get him."

Evidence was presented about Mireles being released on bond with an electronic monitoring device, then disarming the device and fleeing the country to Mexico. Chavez tracked Mireles down in Mexico while working with various law-enforcement agencies.

He said a Lubbock bondsman also was searching in Mexico for Mireles.

Defense attorney David Martinez claimed Mireles fled to Mexico because he was afraid Chavez would kill him.

Chavez testified that had he wanted to kill Mireles he could have done it in Mexico, but he wanted to return him to Midland to stand trial.

A friend of Mireles testified that Mireles told her he had called and threatened to harm Chavez and take his daughter. She also said Mireles was afraid of Chavez.

Testimony conflicted — depending upon which side the witness was testifying for — on whether or not Mireles beat

Mayor honors director of Texas Best with day of her own: Linda Bond Day

From Staff Reports

Mayor Bobby Burns proclaimed Tuesday Linda Bond Day for Midland.

"I am so flattered and so thrilled," said Ms. Bond, executive director of Texas Best, a non-profit organization responsible for several downtown projects including "Summer in the City."

"I'm very grateful to the mayor who's been a very encouraging force in everything we're trying to do downtown," Ms. Bond said.

"I feel so lucky that the revitalization of downtown happened now, when it did," Ms. Bond said. "It seems to be just the perfect time."

The weekly, free Thursday evening "Summer in the City" performances began in 1994, drawing several hundred people to Centennial Plaza for each event.

"Summer in the City has been a wonderful project," Ms. Bond said. "Everyone from the police to the traffic engineer to people with businesses and kids who wanted to Rollerblade — everybody has just pitched in and worked like mad."

This summer, the crowds have much more than doubled for the weekly event that continues through Aug. 10. Each Thursday from 7:30 to 9 p.m., entertainers, artists, children's activities, in-line skating and something unexpected convene at Centennial Plaza — free.

The honor conferred on Ms. Bond, who is a graduate of Midland High School and Texas Tech University, caught her unaware.

"I was really surprised," she said. "They had gotten me to the council chamber under the pretense that I was to give a report to them, so I was wondering what they were going to ask me."

When asked how her day — Linda Bond Day — was going, she said, "It's been great."

Cops Ahead grant to provide 4 new officers

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A federal grant that will pay three-quarters of the cost to have four more police officers on the street has been awarded to Midland.

The Cops Ahead grant, awarded through the U.S. Department of Justice, will provide $300,000 for four officers over the next three years. The grant program was a result of the 1994 federal crime bill.

As a requirement of the grant, the new officers will be assigned to community policing and problem-oriented policing — which concentrate on greater police-citizen interaction in neighborhoods, officials said.

"They will be moving around to different parts of the city where they're needed," said Midland Police Chief Richard Czech.

"We plan on having them very visible working specific problems with the neighborhoods," he said.

For example, working a rash of vandalisms occurring in an area of town — as happened recently — could be assigned to the specially designated officers.

Czech said the new officers will add to the strength of a department with less manpower than other

More than a speed limit reduction on Illinois Avenue in front of Midland Memorial Hospital may be needed to protect pedestrians from motorists.

"This is a bad spot in front of the hospital. I don't know if a 20 mph speed limit is going to do it," said City Council representative Pat Schneider. "I don't want to just reduce it and go on."

On Tuesday, the council unanimously agreed — on the first of two required votes — to create an ordinance that will reduce the speed limit in front of the hospital.

"We've got the flashing lights but the 35 mph speed limit is causing problems," said Gary Saunders, traffic engineering coordinator.

The speed reduction was prompted by citizen complaints of drivers not stopping at the crosswalks and motorists driving too fast, Saunders said.

Ms. Schneider voiced concern whether the change would actually affect traffic to lessen the danger to pedestrians.

Others on the council acknowledged the situation. "It's a main street and it's hard to slow down traffic," Mayor Bobby Burns said.

Ms. Schneider suggested construction of an overhead walkway on the section of Illinois Avenue just before the busy intersection at Andrews Highway.

For now, the city will monitor the situation when the new speed limit is enacted. "I think we need to go ahead and reduce the speed and then look at other options," Saunders advised the council.

The ordinance calls for a 20 mph speed limit from N Street to Andrews Highway. In addi-

Tech student takes first place

From Staff Reports

Shawn Higgins, a Texas Tech student who currently is employed by Rhotenberry Wellen Architects of Midland, recently won first place in the Interior Furnishings category in the second annual Computer Integrated Textile Design Association (CITDA) scholarship competition.

Ms. Higgins entry was part of her work at Texas Tech.

A total of 189 entries from college and universities across the United States and Canada were judged in two categories — interior furnishings and apparel — with a first and second prize awarded in each category. The first place winners received $3,500 and the second place winners received $1,500. CITDA also awarded $1,500 to the academic institutions of the two first place winners.

Ms. Higgins attended the awards presentation, along with Dr. Zane Curry, the Texas Tech professor who entered the project, in Greensboro, N.C.

Requirements of the competition stated that designs had to be computer generated, each category had to be given an end use, printouts had to be used to represent the fabrics, and fabrics had to be presented in a storybook format.

Ms. Chavez.

Several friends said they never saw Mireles mistreat his wife. One friend said she never saw him hurt Ms. Chavez except "just once — she did something wrong and he just slapped her."

Despite the fact that Mireles purchased a gun in "the flats," shot and killed his wife and fled the country after being released on bond, a number of his friends said they thought he was a peaceful person who obeys the law.

One man said he liked hanging around Mireles because he didn't drink or do drugs. He said the marital problems between Mireles and Ms. Chavez were caused by her parents meddling in their marriage.

A woman who at one time worked with Ms. Chavez said Ms. Chavez never told her about problems with her husband, but detailed problems with her parents because they didn't approve of her relationship with Mireles.

Another friend said she couldn't believe Mireles shot and killed Ms. Chavez, adding that she believed it must have been self-defense.

Mireles' mother, Antonia Castro, testified that the victim and defendant's families did not get along because Mrs. Castro's family wanted the pair to get married, but Chavez wouldn't allow it. She said Ms. Chavez was 14 and Mireles was 15 the first time they "ran off and eloped." She said they eloped several times.

During closing arguments, Martinez said Mireles was afraid of Chavez and his family. He also claimed Mireles may have been having an adverse reaction to Vicodin, which he said was prescribed to Mireles after having a tooth pulled that day.

"His life has been in as much anguish as the Chavez family because he gets to think about it in an 8-by-8 cell 24 hours a day.

"This was a crime of passion. ... It was out of character for him. He's a victim just as much as the victim's family," Martinez said.

About a dozen sheriff's deputies were posted inside and outside the courtroom as well as outside the courthouse before the sentence was read. The two families continued to feud during the trial and officials said they wanted to prevent a problem from occurring.

Mireles must spend at least one-half of the time assessed in prison, according to state law.

tion, the speed will be reduced to 30 mph on both sides of that zone: between L and N streets, and between Andrews Highway and Plaza Street.

To alert motorists approaching the 20 mph zone, Saunders said, jiggle bars and road buttons may be placed on the roadway.

Meanwhile, city officials will explore the future possibility of an overhead walkway.

The overhead walkway raised some concern on practicality such as compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act brought up by City Council member Jose Cuevas.

And Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca pointed out cost concerns. The suggestion of an overhead walkway had been discussed in the past with a debate on where funds would come from: the city or the hospital.

The problem at the pedestrian crossing near the hospital isn't new. Several years ago, similar complaints led to the installation of flashing lights on mast arms and additional warning signs.

Pending final approval by the council, the speed reduction should take effect in mid-July.

ADD: Grant to provide 4 new officers comparably sized departments.

Officials anticipate the new police trainees will be enrolled in the police academy by August. Following graduation, the officers will attend a field training program before being assigned, probably, in March.

Four new officers amount to 3 percent of the Police Department's authorized manpower of 153 commissioned officers. Under grant guidelines, the new officers must be in addition to other planned police hirings by the city.

After the three-year period covered by the grant expires, the city will maintain employment of the officers assuming the city continues to grow, Czech said.

Texans to try last-ditch effort to save base

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas congressional delegation is trying to grab a narrow window of opportunity to keep intact Kelly Air Force Base and some 12,000 jobs.

But the effort to undo a controversial decision by the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission may amount to little more than a last-ditch Hail Mary pass.

Sens. Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison, joined by San Antonio-area House members and civic leaders, want President Clinton to weigh in with the independent commission before it's too late.

The Texans' theory is that the commission's final recommendations aren't due to the president until Saturday, meaning that Clinton has several days to ask the commissioners to reconsider their decision to close Kelly's Air Logistics Center and a similar Air Force depot in California.

Doing so would allow Clinton to sidestep the politically touchy issue of whether to reject the commission's list, a move he appears to be weighing. The president has until July 15 to approve the entire list or remand it to the commission. Theoretically, the panel could review all recommendations if the president rejects the list.

"Once you receive the commission's final recommendations, the only options available will be to accept or reject the entire report," the two Republican senators wrote Clinton Tuesday, asking him to direct the Air Force to raise its concerns with the commission. "At that point, a correction will be too late."

White House deputy press secretary Mary Ellen Glynn ruled out any White House contact with the commission. "As the president has said before, the process is not meant to be political and that is the reason it is formulated in such a way so that he either approves the entire list or rejects the entire list," she said.

'Once you receive the commission's final recommendations (for base closings), the only options available will be to accept or reject the entire report. At that point, a correction will be too late.'

— GOP senators letter to Clinton

A commission spokesman said it's highly unlikely the panel would convene again before Saturday. "These are the final recommendations," said spokesman John Earnhardt.

Among the obstacles to another meeting are the seven-day advance notice required before holding a public meeting; and the need to gather a quorum of at least five members. After months of grueling travel, the eight commissioners have dispersed, some going on vacation, Earnhardt said.

The Texans explained their strategy after a meeting with Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald Fogleman. Mrs. Hutchison requested the meeting, attended by the two senators, San Antonio Democratic Reps. Frank Tejeda and Henry B. Gonzalez, San Antonio Mayor Bill Thornton, Bexar County Judge Cyndi Krier and other officials.

The base-closure commission's most controversial decision was its vote to shutter two of the Air Force's five depots, Kelly and McClellan AFB in California, over the Air Force's vigorous protests. The Air Force contends that huge closure costs argue against any depot closures. The commission said the Air Force overstated closure costs and underestimated savings.

Emerging from the meeting, Fogleman ignored a question whether he supports rejection of the commission's list. "The criticality of the depot at Kelly is one that concerns us," he told reporters.

Said Gramm: "Our basic message is we believe for the strategic defense of the country it does not make sense to close Air Logistics Centers."

Mrs. Hutchison said the Air Force remains committed to keeping Kelly and McClellan. "I think they are going to communicate with the president, which I think they should do," she said.

Even as the Texans are trying to undo the commission decision, they also are working to assure jobs for the Kelly workers in the event the depot is shut down.

"My mission is to keep the jobs in San Antonio. My first choice is with the military," Mrs. Hutchison said. Other avenues being explored include luring an industrial prospect to Kelly, civilian reuse of the runways and asking the Air Force to privatize the C-5 transport plane work which only Kelly currently can handle.

Archaeologists seek to uncover clues from past

VICTORIA (AP) — Beside a Guadalupe River feeder creek, a couple of dozen college students dig in the dirt on their hands and knees beneath the hot summer sun.

Meticulously, they comb through clay soil in square sections, marking each dirt layer with colored flags. A few yards away, diggers sift through clumps and use water hoses to inspect every piece of earth.

Welcome to a six-week journey into Texas' past.

An archaeology team of university students and professors is excavating a 4-by-5-meter area in Riverside Park where ancient tools previously have been found. Researchers hope to unearth more artifacts to help them learn about the people who lived here as long ago as 8000 B.C.

"This is the only site of this type that has been systematically dug in Victoria County or anywhere in this region. It'll be more than of just a regional interest if we find what we hope to find," said Tom Hester, one of the University of Texas archaeologists leading the project.

The outcome of the dig could help researchers compare the culture to those of the same period in other parts of the state.

"If we find what we think we're going to find, it will be of tremendous impact because these early cultures along the Coastal Plains are practically unknown," said Hester, who directs the Texas Archaeological Research Laboratory at the University of Texas at Austin.

The excavation, which began June 7, was expected by this week to reach a layer of soil possibly containing ancient artifacts.

Amateur archaeologist Ed Vogt, now 71, discovered the site 17 years ago after the Guadalupe River flooded. Over the years he has searched the surface, finding tools, projectile points and other relics.

The bulk of Vogt's hundreds of artifacts date from 8000 B.C. to 4000 B.C.

Occasionally Vogt climbs into the excavation pit and helps the young students dig. He said he is glad the researchers have joined him.

"It makes me feel great," he said. "Hopefully, we'll know what was here and why it was here."

In 1993, a state archaeology team sent a small crew with a backhoe to the Victoria site to dig a trench and determine if further study was warranted. Like Vogt, the archaeologists found scraping tools and a projectile point.

Some of the artifacts found along the creek have been traced to the Paleo-Indian period of about 8000 B.C. to 6000 B.C., a time characterized by small, highly mobile populations. Still other artifacts range in date from 6000 B.C. until about 700 A.D., a time when plant-gathering began to supplement hunting.

With this project, Hester and his colleagues are integrating archaeology with geology, a growing trend in searches for the relics of ancient people.

Michael Collins, a research associate at the archaeological laboratory who is working on the dig and specializes in early materials and site geology, said understanding the natural terrain helps in understanding artifacts.

Students working on the project also represent Texas A&M University, West Texas A&M University in Canyon, Southwest Texas State University and Idaho State.

Clearly, they're anxious to find something before the dig ends July 12.

"We want to know how it came to be here," said graduate student Keith Prilliman of the University of Texas. "One reason we're digging this site is so little is known about the late Paleo-Indian period in the Coastal Plains."

Dallas liver transplant programs announce merger

DALLAS (AP) — Two of the nation's leading liver transplant centers, including the one treating baseball great Mickey Mantle, will form a partnership.

Baylor University Medical Center and Children's Medical Center, both of Dallas, will form The Dallas Liver Transplant Program to share resources and provide transplant patients the benefits of shared research efforts.

The partnership, which has been in the works for about a year, will create one of the Southwest's largest transplantation programs.

"We have long had the wish and the dream to develop a collaboration," said Dr. Goran Klintmalm, chairman of Baylor's Institute of Transplantation Sciences. "What we have here today are two very strong forces that will join together to provide a more comprehensive service ... than we had before."

Baylor's adult liver transplant program has consistently ranked third in the country. It has performed 1,148 transplants since its inception in 1984.

Mantle received a liver at Baylor earlier this month.

The liver transplant program at Children's Medical Center is the second-largest pediatric program in the nation and is affiliated with the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

It has performed 233 transplants since it began in 1984.

"Through this alliance, all three institutions will be able to enhance the level and scope of care, while managing costs," said George Farr, chief executive officer of Children's

The survival rate after 10 years for patients receiving livers at Baylor is 65 percent, one of the highest in the nation. The 10-year survival rate at Children's is 61 percent.

Attending Tuesday's news conference was Kendra Roman of Lewisville, who 10 years ago was one of the first liver recipients at Children's.

Mrs. Roman said the alliance will help young transplant patients make the transition to an adult transplant program.

Judy Ninman, director of the American Liver Foundation, said Mrs. Roman should serve as a catalyst for people to donate their organs.

"I've seen families stretched to the limit" waiting to find a suitable donor, she said. "The real heroes of this alliance will be the individuals and families who make the decision to donate their organs so that a child may receive a liver and grow to adulthood and have a family."

For a Fourth of July celebration, serve Red, White & Blue Chocolate Cupcakes — a sweet way to celebrate the holiday. The cupcakes are topped with vanilla buttercream frosting, tart blueberries and ripe strawberries. For a special touch: Place a variety of red and blue plastic sparklers, napkins or miniature American flags around the serving trays.

RED, WHITE & BLUE CHOCOLATE CUPCAKES

2 cups sugar
1¾ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup cocoa
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup milk
½ cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup boiling water
1 recipe Vanilla Buttercream Frosting (recipe below)
Fresh blueberries and strawberries

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Line muffin cups, 2½ inches in diameter, with paper bake cups. In large mixer bowl, stir together sugar, flour, cocoa, baking powder, baking soda and salt.

Add eggs, milk, oil and vanilla; beat on medium speed of electric mixer for 2 minutes. Stir in boiling water; batter will be thin. Fill muffin cups ⅔ full with batter. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 22 to 25 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Remove from pan to wire rack. Cool completely.

Prepare Vanilla Buttercream Frosting. Frost cupcakes. Garnish with blueberries and strawberries. Makes about 2½ dozen cupcakes.

FOR THE VANILLA BUTTERCREAM FROSTING: In medium bowl, beat 5 tablespoons softened butter or margarine until creamy. Gradually add 4 cups powdered sugar, ¼ cup milk and 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, beating until of spreading consistency. Makes about 2 cups frosting.

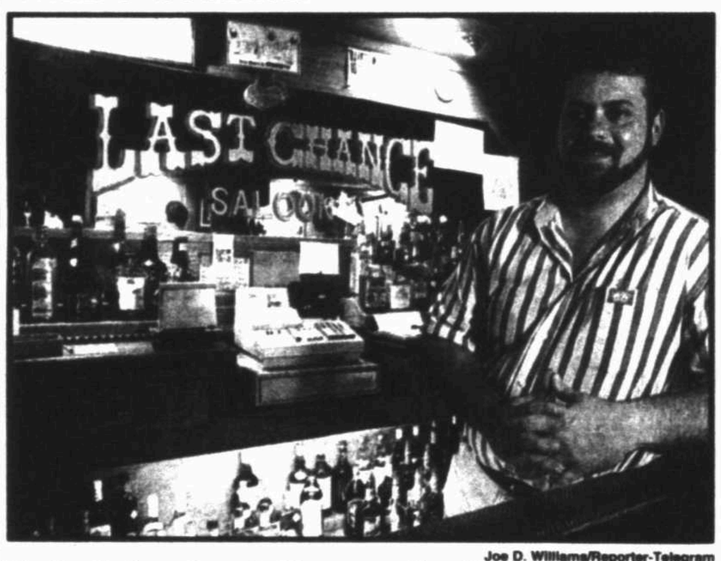
WHAT'S COOKING?



Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Tim Murphy loves to cook at home as well as at the Last Chance Saloon where he leases the kitchen and creates down-home cooking such as burgers and steaks.

Cook whips up down-home fare at work, home

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Tim Murphy, 27, is the youngest of the five children born to Joe Ann and John Murphy — he has two brothers and two sisters. He's also one of the best cooks in the family.

As a child, Murphy said, "I watched my mom cook, but I didn't really get into in until I went to work at Mission Country Club in 1987."

Country club chefs taught him about styling food. "I got into gourmet," he said. "I like the way food is presented."

But when it comes to cooking at home, he's more of a down-home kind of cook, specializing in Tex-Mex dishes such as quesadillas, enchiladas — both red and green — and other regional favorites like ham hock and red beans.

When he's cooking at home, Murphy said, "I like to make a lot of things like ham hock and red beans. They get better the next day." A big batch is "good for a couple of days.

"I like cooking at home," he said. "The more you do, the more you want to do."

He has taken his expertise at cooking and put it to work for him. "I lease the kitchen and do the cooking at Last Chance Saloon." Menu there is just as down-home as at his house, and includes burgers and steaks.

But whenever he has a question about a recipe, he calls the expert. "Any time I have a question I call mom," he said. "She's got the answer."

These are a few of Murphy's favorite recipes:

HAM HOCK AND RED BEANS

Hot peppers, to taste
1 bell pepper, chopped
2 onions, chopped
Ham hock
2 pounds red pinto beans
2 tablespoons chili powder
2 tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced

Combine ingredients. Boil in enough water to just cover beans for about 5 hours, adding water as needed.

NOTE: Before cooking, sort and wash beans well.

MERINGUE COCONUT MACAROONS

3 egg whites
1 cup sugar
2 cups corn flakes
1 cup coconut
1 cup nuts, chopped

Whip egg whites until firm. Gradually add sugar and beat in. Add corn flakes, coconut and nuts. Mix well. Drop onto greased cookie sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes or until lightly browned.

GREEN CHILI ENCHILADAS

1 can cream of mushroom soup
2 cans green enchilada sauce
1 pound lean ground beef
12 corn tortillas
3 cups grated Monterey Jack and/or cheddar cheese
1 onion, chopped
1 can green chilies
Salt and pepper to taste

Brown beef. Add all other ingredients except cheese and onion. Dip tortillas in hot oil to soften. Layer, beginning with softened tortilla, then hot beef mixture and top with onion and cheese. Individual servings can be as many stacked enchiladas as desired. Brown each serving in oven until cheese melts. Salt and pepper to taste.

All-American dessert is great for Fourth of July

Associated Press

After a fun-filled day of picnics and fireworks, serve Patriotic Parfait, the perfect ending to a Fourth of July celebration. Melted white chocolate is combined with sweetened whipped cream and cream cheese to make a rich, fluffy white chocolate mousse. Layer the mousse in tall, elegant glasses with mixed berries. For an extra touch, garnish each parfait with a small American flag just before serving. The parfaits will hold well in the refrigerator for up to six hours.

PATRIOTIC PARFAIT

3 ounces white chocolate, broken into pieces, or ½ cup morsels
1 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons sugar
3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1 cup sliced strawberries or fresh raspberries
1 cup blueberries
Sliced strawberries, if desired

Place chocolate in medium bowl. Bring 1 cup water to boil in medium saucepan; turn off heat and set bowl over saucepan. Let stand until melted, stirring occasionally. Remove from water.

In medium bowl, add cream and beat until soft peaks form. Slowly add sugar; beat just until stiff peaks form. Set aside in refrigerator.

In a separate bowl, beat cream cheese until fluffy. Add melted chocolate in a stream while beating; beat until smooth. Take bowl from refrigerator, stir ¼ of whipped cream into chocolate mixture to lighten. Gently fold in remaining whipping cream.

To assemble parfaits, alternately layer mousse and mixed berries in four parfait glasses. Parfaits may be served immediately or refrigerated up to six hours before serving. Garnish each parfait with sliced strawberries. Makes 4 servings.

Gatherings need recipes to feed a crowd

Associated Press

As fireworks light up the sky this Fourth of July, millions of Americans will light up their backyard grills to celebrate Independence Day. For a hearty meal, serve a menu that will feed a crowd.

Robin Kline, a registered dietitian and director of the Pork Information Bureau in Des Moines, Iowa, says foods like potato salad and coleslaw have roots in other cultures, but they've been claimed as American classics.

This year, Kline says, celebrate the Fourth of July by adding ethnic ingredients and flavors. Hot is "hot," so she suggests spicing up deviled eggs with hot peppers or adding blue cornmeal to traditional corn bread.

SPICY LATIN BACK RIBS

Spicy Latin Rub (recipe below)
Rockets' Red Glare Barbecue Sauce (recipe below)
6 to 8 slabs pork baby back ribs (about 12 pounds total)

Prepare Spicy Latin Rub; set aside. Prepare Rockets' Red Glare Barbecue Sauce; set aside.

Pat ribs with paper towels. Rub Spicy Latin Rub generously over all surfaces of ribs; cover and refrigerate up to 12 hours or cook immediately. Prepare a banked, medium-hot fire in each of two or three kettle-style grills.

Place ribs, not overlapping, over indirect heat on each grill (rib racks may be helpful in expanding grilling space in each grill). Cover grills and roast ribs not directly over coals for 1½ hours, until ribs are very tender. (Or roast ribs on rack in shallow pan in a 350-degree oven for 1½ hours). Remove ribs from grill, wrap securely in heavy aluminum foil. Place foil-wrapped ribs in brown paper bags, close bags and let ribs rest for up to 1 hour. Unwrap ribs, cut into serving-sized portions and serve with Rockets' Red Glare Barbecue Sauce for dipping. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

SPICY LATIN RUB: In large jar with tight-fitting lid, place ½ cup ground cumin, ½ cup chili powder, 4 tablespoons ground coriander, 2 tablespoons cayenne, 4 tablespoons ground black pepper, 2 tablespoons ground cinnamon, 2 tablespoons brown sugar and 1 tablespoon salt. Place lid on jar; shake well until blended thoroughly. Makes 2 cups.

ROCKETS' RED GLARE BARBECUE SAUCE

2 12-ounce bottles chili sauce
2 garlic cloves, minced
⅓ cup ketchup
⅓ cup cider vinegar
⅓ cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
3 tablespoons sherry
2 tablespoons chili powder
2 teaspoons ground cumin
1 teaspoon crushed red pepper

Stir together all ingredients in medium saucepan; bring to a boil and lower heat just to a simmer. Simmer for 20 minutes; stirring occasionally, until mixture is thickened and flavors are nicely blended. Remove to medium bowl or quart-sized jar; cool slightly, cover and refrigerate. Makes 4 cups.

BLACK AND BLUE COLESLAW

1 medium head red cabbage, shredded (6 cups)
½ pound seedless grapes, halved
1 cup chopped parsley
¾ cup mayonnaise (reduced-calorie, if desired)
4 tablespoons crumbled blue cheese
4 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons cider vinegar

In large bowl, toss together cabbage, grapes and parsley. Stir together remaining ingredients, add to slaw; toss well. Cover and chill for at least 2 hours before serving. If desired, sprinkle with additional crumbled blue cheese and garnish with red grapes. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

DR. BILL'S BARBECUED BEANS

8 ounces bacon, diced
1 medium sweet onion, diced
1 red bell pepper, seeded and diced
1 green bell pepper, seeded and diced
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup bottled barbecue sauce
½ teaspoon liquid smoke
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons ground black pepper
⅓ cup maple syrup
⅓ cup light corn syrup
Three 28-ounce cans pork and beans, drained
⅔ cup dark beer or apple juice

In large skillet, fry bacon until lightly browned; remove extra fat from pan and discard. Stir onion and bell peppers into skillet; saute until vegetables are tender, about 3 to 4 minutes.

In large casserole or shallow 3- to 4-quart baking dish, stir together bacon, vegetables and remaining ingredients. Cover and bake in a 350-degree oven for 45 to 60 minutes, until heated through. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

BLUE HEAVEN CORN BREAD

2 cups flour
2 cups blue cornmeal
2 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons baking powder
6 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 cups milk
4 eggs, beaten
½ cup vegetable oil

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Lightly grease two 8-inch square baking pans. In a large bowl, blend dry ingredients well. In medium bowl, beat together milk, eggs and oil. Make a well in dry ingredients; add liquid ingredients and stir together, blending well but not overstirring (some lumps are OK). Divide batter equally between prepared baking pans. Bake in a 425-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes, until tops are nicely browned. Remove from oven and cool for at least 10 minutes before cutting into squares to serve. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

DOUBLE DEVILED EGGS

12 large eggs, hard cooked and peeled
½ cup mayonnaise (reduced-calorie, if desired)
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
½ teaspoon ground white pepper
2 jalapeno peppers, seeded and finely diced (use rubber gloves when handling peppers)
2 tablespoons sweet pickle relish
Fresh cilantro, for garnish

Halve the eggs lengthwise. Remove the yolks and in a small bowl, mash them with the mayonnaise and the mustard. Stir in the remaining ingredients, except the cilantro. Taste for seasoning, adding salt or pepper if desired. Transfer yolk mixture to a quart-sized, self-sealing plastic bag. Snip off a small part of one corner, and use the bag as a pastry bag to pipe the filling into the egg white halves. Place eggs on a serving tray, cover and refrigerate until serving (up to one day). Garnish eggs with fresh cilantro sprigs. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

STARS AND STRIPES SPUD SALAD

4 pounds small new red potatoes, cleaned and halved
8 cloves garlic, peeled
½ cup olive oil
1 tablespoon black pepper
1 teaspoon salt
FOR THE DRESSING:
¾ cup mayonnaise (reduced-calorie, if desired)
3 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
3 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
1 tablespoon mustard seed
8 slices bacon, cooked, drained and crumbled
½ cup diced red onion
½ cup minced green pepper
Salt, to taste
Black pepper, to taste

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Combine potatoes, garlic, olive oil, 1 tablespoon black pepper and the 1 teaspoon salt in a roasting pan; cover with foil. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 15 minutes, uncover and continue to roast for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally, until potatoes are tender and slightly golden brown. Remove from oven, let cool slightly, and cut potatoes into quarters; mash the garlic cloves. Place potato quarters and mashed garlic in serving bowl.

For dressing: In small bowl, combine all ingredients.

Pour dressing over potatoes; toss gently. Taste and adjust seasoning; serve immediately or cover and refrigerate until serving. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

BETSY ROSS BLUEBERRIES

3 pints cleaned raspberries
3 pints cleaned blueberries
1 recipe Creamy Custard Sauce (recipe below)

In large bowl, gently mix together both berries. Portion about ½ cup to ¾ cup berries into individual serving dishes. Top each serving with about ¼ cup Creamy Custard Sauce. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

CREAMY CUSTARD SAUCE: In large saucepan, stir together ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons and 2 teaspoons cornstarch, ¼ teaspoon salt and 1½ cups milk. Cook and stir over medium-high heat until mixture comes to a boil; stir and boil 1 minute. Remove from heat; stir a little cooked custard mixture into 4 beaten eggs; return eggs to saucepan; stir well to blend thoroughly. Stir in ½ cup sour cream and 1 teaspoon vanilla extract; blend well. Remove custard to medium bowl, cover and refrigerate until serving. Makes 3 cups.

NOTE: For extra custard sauce, do not double this recipe but make it twice.

Boxed corn muffins just can't beat mom's

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

Sometimes when I'm cruising up and down the aisles of my favorite supermarket, I'll see a product that catches my fancy and, since I'm just an ordinary impulse shopper, I buy some to check it out. And sometimes when that happens, my coworkers get to share the wealth with me because I bring that product to the office so they can have a sample too. (Of course, we all know that when something is eaten for the sake of such scientific research, there are no calories involved. Right.)

The latest of these "guess what I found at the store" products is something called Bread du Jour Corn Muffins. Each 14.8-ounce box contains eight corn muffins, wrapped in individual servings of two muffins each.

I'm partial to corn muffins, so I had high hopes for this taste test. Warm, buttery corn muffins are the perfect way to start the day, in my opinion.

An eight-muffin box cost $1.99, or roughly 25 cents per muffin.

Label advertising claims the product is: "Hot and Hearty in Minutes — Corn Muffins fresh from your oven.

"The no mess, no hassle way to serve your family the great old fashioned taste of cornbread in virtually no time.

"Bread du Jour Corn Muffins are perfect with soups, stews and chili — when you see how easy they are, you may find that Corn Muffins taste great with nearly every meal.

"Imagine hot, tasty Corn Muffins from your oven to your table in minutes. Simple for you and a great treat your whole family will love."

(Wait a minute! Aren't these people confusing corn muffins with cornbread? Corn muffins are supposed to be sweet, and cornbread is not!

Nutrition label shows that one muffin contains 170 calories with 80 of them from fat. That's almost half.

In the taste test, the testers didn't really agree. Some thought the muffins were too sweet, others thought they weren't sweet enough. I think only one person actually said the muffins' sugar content was perfect.

One thing they did agree on was that the muffins taste just like store-bought, processed muffins. They had a taste of corn meal but weren't grainy enough to even begin to pass for home-made.

Maybe with enough butter and a touch of honey the Bread du Jour Corn Muffins would be better, but they'll never be as good as mom's. Or mine either, for that matter. Seems like it would be just as convenient to make a batch at home when you have time and freeze them for when you don't.

DEAR ABBY

Safe boating is no accident for sailors who think ahead

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last year you published a wonderful letter on boating safety. As a member of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, I would be grateful if you would print it again. Summer is here, and boaters are preparing for another boating season.

As an instructor, I made copies of the letter for my fall and spring public education classes, and it made an impact on many of my students, but your column will reach more members of the boating public than we could ever hope to.

One of the missions of the U.S.C.G. is to promote safe boating through our public education courses and courtesy marine examination programs. For us, the best possible summer would be one with no boating accidents and no tragedies, both of which are all too common during the warm weather months.

Thanks, Abby. And please extend my appreciation to Ms. Halverson, the writer, for sharing her loss so that another life might be saved. — T. BRAGG, U.S.C.G.A., BOSTON

DEAR T. BRAGG: I am pleased to run Ms. Halverson's letter again. The importance of boating safety and the consistent use of life jackets cannot be emphasized too often.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but after reading the letter in your column stressing the importance of life jackets, I had to write.

In August 1990, I lost a wonderful brother. His name was Tobin McAuley. He, his buddy and two girls went sailing off the coast of Mexico. There were no life jackets on the boat.

About a mile and a half from shore, Tobin's buddy and the girls jumped into the ocean to swim. His buddy got leg cramps and called for help. Tobin maneuvered the catamaran as close as he could to his friends. Then the girls swam for the boat, leaving his buddy, so he dove in to try to rescue his friend. The girls didn't know how to sail, and the boat drifted off. There was no way my brother could swim such a long distance back to shore. The girls eventually managed to get the boat to shore, but not in time to save Tobin and his friend — they both drowned. They were 20 and 21 years old.

I'm sure when they left the dock it never crossed their minds that they were in any danger.

Abby, some people don't like to wear life jackets — they think they are a bother and only for sissies. Now my children will miss having known a loving uncle — and all because of a tragic accident that could have been avoided. You may use my name. — ANDREA HALVERSON, DALLAS

DEAR ANDREA: Thank you for writing and giving me permission to use your name. Too bad we [illegible] self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Officials investigate woman's electrocution, link to key card

NEW CARROLLTON, Md. (AP) — Barefoot and soaking wet, Milika Sloan was trying to get back into her hotel room when she slid her electronic key card into the steel door's lock and was electrocuted.

Police were awaiting an engineer's report to determine exactly what happened, but they believe an electrical charge from a faulty air conditioner caused the 18-year-old Cincinnati woman's death.

They don't believe the VingCard electronic key that is used in more than 1 million hotel and motel rooms worldwide was to blame.

"We have concluded the electrical charge was being transmitted from the air conditioner to the door. How that happened we don't know," Sgt. Rick Morris, a spokesman for the Prince George's County police, said Tuesday.

Sloan, who was attending an employment training program for teen-agers at the New Carrollton Ramada Inn in this Washington, D.C., suburb, had just run through the rain from a friend's room nearby when the accident occurred shortly after midnight Friday, Morris said.

Her supervisor heard her scream and found her in the doorway. She died almost instantly.

The VingCard she used to open the door is powered by six 1 1/2-volt batteries and could not have caused her death, said Terry Aasen, vice president of Dallas-based VingCard.

"It has nothing to do with the lock whatsoever. Electricity must have come through the door," Aasen said.

Such cards are in use at about 30 percent of the nation's hotels and motels nationwide because, being reprogrammable after each use, they cut down on thefts from rooms and provide guests with greater security, Aasen said.

Industry officials said this was the first time they had ever heard of anyone being electrocuted while using one.

O.J. prosecutors trace steps of hair evidence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors began Tuesday to weave an intricate web of hair evidence designed to tie O.J. Simpson to two murder victims and the Akita dog whose howls may have signaled a bloody killing in Brentwood.

A police criminalist told jurors that blond hairs, dark hairs and animal hairs were retrieved from a dark blue knit cap found near the slashed bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. Hairs were also taken from a pair of bloody gloves, the witness said.

Prosecutors contend the cap belonged to Simpson and he dropped it as he fled Ms. Simpson's condominium. One of the gloves was found at his estate; the mate was found at the murder scene.

Prosecutor Marcia Clark plans to call an FBI expert to link the hairs to Simpson, his ex-wife and Ms. Simpson's dog, Kato. Clark said in opening statements that incriminating strands of hair also were found on Goldman's shirt and on a bloody glove found at Simpson's estate.

But first, Clark led Los Angeles Police Department criminalist Susan Brockbank and lab technician Denise Lewis through testimony as tedious as any seen in the trial so far. Clearly concerned about impending defense attacks on how the evidence was handled, Clark tried to plug every possible loophole.

The two women, who handled evidence when it arrived at the crime lab, testified to every move they made, from breaking seals on boxes to opening and closing folded pieces of paper known as bindles. They detailed every time they changed their evidence-handling gloves and every piece of paper they spread on the processing table.

■ More national news/1D

"They're trying to be as careful as possible," Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson said of prosecutors. "They're gun-shy. They can anticipate that the defense will claim the evidence was contaminated."

Simpson, charged with the June 12, 1994, murders, took extensive notes during the recitation but barely glanced at the evidence photographs. He appeared to avert his eyes when photos of his ex-wife's black halter dress and her bikini underwear appeared on a 7-foot-high screen.

Lewis, who said this was the first time she had ever testified about a criminal case, quickly met the kind of probing cross-examination the prosecution was trying to head off.

Defense attorney Robert Blasier elicited from her an account of how she came to write a report last January about her evidence handling the previous June but showed it to no one.

"It's my personal information. Nothing happens to it," she said, explaining why she didn't give it to prosecutors until Monday.

"This is the first time I've made a report like this," she said. "It's the only case I've gone to court on."

Blasier also revived the defense theme of sloppy evidence handling, showing through Lewis that clothing and other items packaged by the coroner's office were haphazardly labeled and stored.

In one case, Lewis acknowledged, she opened a bag to find mold growing on Goldman's bloody white shirt. She also identified pictures of evidence bags labeled with such spare designations as "pants, socks," without any other notation to indicate which case they involved.

A bag containing Goldman's shoes also contained a smaller bag labeled merely "hair."

"It didn't say it came from the shoe," Lewis said. "It was just in a separate bag."

"Was that unusual?" Blasier asked.

"Yes," the witness said.

Brockbank told of opening boxes of other evidence and extracting the key items — the cap and bloody gloves — looking for hair and traces of fiber or debris that might be evidence.

The criminalist recalled adding a drop of water to a microscope slide that held hair samples and said when she discarded the slide, "The water had a reddish tinge because all of those hairs were encrusted with blood."

On June 21, Brockbank said, her initial examination of the cap yielded seven blond, lightly pigmented hairs with no roots; four dark brown or black hairs, one with the root intact; and some animal hairs and fibers.

She said two subsequent examinations revealed a total of 38 hairs on the cap, though she didn't give a breakdown of the color of the hairs.

Turbulent air shakes jet, rattles passengers

N.Y. Times News Service

Passengers on an American Airlines flight from Los Angeles to New York on Monday night were thrown to the ceiling and objects were flung around the cabin of the DC-10 when the plane was violently jostled over Wisconsin.

The captain diverted the flight to Chicago, where 17 people were taken to hospitals. Two remained hospitalized late Tuesday, both in good condition.

The plane, American Airlines flight 58 from Los Angeles International to John F. Kennedy International in New York, was mostly empty, with 103 passengers in 237 seats, plus 14 crew members, and was flying through a slightly bumpy area about 25 miles west of Green Bay, Wis., at about 8 p.m. local time, when passengers felt a sudden drop.

Passengers said the plane seemed to go into a sharp dive, but American Airlines officials said the passengers' perceptions were incorrect. Instead, the officials said, a pocket of unexpected turbulence had caused the plane to gain altitude briefly. Federal investigators will review recorded data from the flight.

"All of a sudden, there was a real jerk, like a car hitting you from the back," said Arthur A. Navarro, who was in business class, returning home to Manhattan. "Then, you felt it dive straight down."

Devils end lease

NEWARK, N.J. — The Stanley Cup champion New Jersey Devils served notice Tuesday they are ending their lease July 6, claiming the state sports authority defaulted on the agreement.

The New Jersey Sports & Exposition Authority announced it received the notice in a letter Tuesday, and noted it contradicts a letter received from the team Monday. In the earlier letter the Devils said they intended to terminate their franchise agreement after the 1996-97 season.

Robertson charged

SAN ANTONIO — Former San Antonio Spurs guard Alvin Robertson has been charged with burglary and other charges after an incident involving an ex-girlfriend.

Robertson, 32, was arrested early Monday outside the woman's apartment complex after her apparent refusal to talk with the former player led to an argument, police said.

Police reports indicate Robertson kicked open her front door, broke some furniture and allegedly roughed up the woman before taking her wallet, police said.

The former player left, but then returned and is believed to have set fire to some newspaper in the woman's living room, police said.

Robertson also is accused of struggling with police before his arrest.

Robertson was released on $12,000 bond Tuesday after he was charged with burglary, assaulting a police officer and resisting arrest.

Fox upgraded

INDIANAPOLIS — Driver Stan Fox was upgraded from fair to good condition Tuesday, almost a month after seriously injuring his head during a first-lap crash in the Indianapolis 500.

Fox had a blood clot removed from his brain and was in a coma for five days after the May 28 crash.

She said Fox has been transferred from the hospital's critical care unit to a private room. He is awake most of the day, completely off a respirator that had been used to help him breathe and has smiled and begun mouthing words. He still has not spoken, Hatfield said.

"He's quite alert and beginning to respond more," she said. "I'm sure he knows where he is, but we still don't know what level of recognition he has because he hasn't spoken."

Angels pull one out for Hancock

■ Angels starter finally gets what he deserves as Midland defeats Wichita 7-6 in the series opener.

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

It took a while, but the fates finally smiled on Ryan Hancock again.

After going more than a month without a win, Hancock went 7 1/3 innings and got some defensive support in the ninth inning Tuesday night to beat the Wichita Wranglers 7-6 at Christensen Stadium.

"Sometimes it happens like that. You pitch well and don't get a win and then sometimes you do," said Hancock, who raised his mark to 7-4 this season. "I was going pretty well until the eighth and then it all caved in."

Hancock and the Angels (4-3) took a 7-3 lead into the eighth when the Wranglers (3-4) scored three times to cut the lead to one run. Lino Diaz opened the inning with a single and following a fly out to center field, Wrangers' catcher Sal Fasano took a 1-2 pitch over the left field wall and cut the Angels' lead to 7-5.

"It was a pretty good pitch. He just got down and golfed it out," Hancock said. "You really have to be aggressive in this ball park."

Mike Schooler came on in the eighth and pitched the final 1 2/3 innings for his 10th save of the season, but it didn't come without a fight by the Wranglers.

Schooler was greeted with two singles in the eighth which plated Wichita's sixth run, and needed a great throw by center fielder Michael Wolff to preserve the win.

Mandy Romero smacked the ball to deep center field with one out in the ninth and tried to stretch a single into a double when Wolff took the ball off the wall and fired a strike to second baseman J.D. Ramirez, who tagged out the sliding Romero.

"Mike really helped us out on defense tonight," Angels' manager Mario Mendoza said. "His play there in the ninth inning was the key to the game. He has really been playing well on defense, lately."

The Angels also kept up its recent string of offensive outputs as five players got at least two hits. J.D. Ramirez, hitting out of the No. 9 spot, was 2 for 3 with 3 RBI to lead Midland. Harkrider, George Arias, Steve Hosey and Jovino Carvajal also got two hits for the Angels.

Midland got to Wichita starter Kris Ralston (2-2) early, scoring twice in the second inning. Carvajal and Harkrider got run-scoring singles whick staked Hancock to an early 2-0 lead.

Wichita cut the lead to 2-1 in the fourth when the Angels scored once in the fourth and three more times in the fifth to build the lead to 6-2.

In the fourth, catcher Todd Takayoshi tripled to open the inning and came home on a Martinez sacrifice fly.

Arias led off the fifth with a single and went to second when Wichita center fielder Johnny Damon bobbled the ball. He went to third on an infield single by Leon Glenn and scored on a ground out by designated hitter Pedro Guerrero. Hosey then singled in Glenn and came

Agassi slams Painter

WIMBLEDON, England — Top-seeded Andre Agassi overwhelmed Australian qualifier Andrew Painter in straight sets today to reach the second round at Wimbledon.

Agassi, the 1992 champion, looked sharp as he cruised to a 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 victory in just one hour, 17 minutes.

Painter, a 19-year-old Tasmanian with a world ranking of No. 530, was playing his first match in a tour-level event. It showed.

Painter committed 17 double faults to go with his 13 aces. In one game alone, trailing 5-1 in the first set, he served six double faults and had four aces before holding serve. In the second set, he double-faulted on all four of his serves in the seventh game to fall behind 5-2.

Agassi, looking completely recovered from the hip strain he suffered at the French Open earlier this month, was in complete command as he took the ball early and ripped shots cleanly to all corners of the court.

While Painter struggled just to win a game in the third set, Agassi showed no mercy. On match point, with Painter stranded at the net, Agassi moved up on a short ball and drilled a forehand passing shot close to his body.

When it was over, the darling of the Wimbledon crowds bowed and waved to all corners of the Court One stadium.

Agassi, sporting a goatee and dangling earrings, unveiled a new all-white outfit: knee-length shorts, baggy shirt and a pirate-style bandana over his closely-cropped head — emblazoned with his sponsor Nike's swoosh logo.

Agassi said it was great to be back at Wimbledon.

"I've grown to love it here," he said. "I enjoy being a part of history here ... Every time I come back here, the emotion and the excitement seems to bring out some great tennis."

Agassi was one of seven Wimbledon champions playing today.

Ninth-seeded Michael Stich, the 1991 champion, was ousted in straight sets by Holland's Jacco Eltingh 6-4, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1.

It was the second year in a row that Stich lost his opening match at Wimbledon, and the sixth time in his career he bowed out in the first round of a Grand Slam event.

Stefan Edberg, champion in 1988 and 1990, beat Spain's Oscar Martinez, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

"It's always special to come back to a place where you have won it," said Edberg, seeded No. 13. "It feels you are part of history, part of the tradition, having played here and been a champion."

In women's play, defending champion Conchita Martinez, second-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and No. 5 Mary Pierce all won in straight sets.

Martinez, returning to Centre Court for the first time since she beat Martina Navratilova in last year's final, crushed Asa Carlsson of Sweden 6-1, 6-1, in just 47 minutes.

Sanchez Vicario, mixing her strong baseline game with occasional forays to the net, needed less than an hour to beat Katarina Studenkiova of Slovakia, 6-2, 6-1.

Pierce, making her Wimbledon debut, took 57 minutes to dispose of Sandra Dopfer 6-1, 6-2.

"I was a little bit nervous," Pierce said. "I didn't know what to expect, but it was a great feeling playing here for the first time."

Also winning in straight sets was No. 4 Jana Novotna, who defeated Karin Kschwendt 6-4, 6-4.

In one of the few tightly-contested women's matches, No. 7 Lindsay Davenport overcame Gigi Fernandez 6-2, 4-6, 7-5. Davenport proved too powerful for Fernandez, a surprise semifinalist at Wimbledon last year.

Top-seeded Steffi Graf was set to play 14-year-old Swiss phenom Martina Hingis.

Ford is optimistic about N.Y. Knicks

■ Former Celtics' coach interviews with the New York club while Knicks' situation with Pat Riley worsens.

NEW YORK (AP) — Many people think the New York Knicks are a team on the way down. Chris Ford disagrees.

"I think they're still a very good, very strong team," said Ford, a candidate to succeed Pat Riley as the Knicks' coach. "Their defense is very good. And defense wins."

Ford, who was fired as Boston Celtics' coach last month, has talked with Knicks general manager Ernie Grunfeld about coaching the team next season. Ford met with Grunfeld on Monday after returning from a weekend trip to Bermuda.

Ford, who was 222-188 as Celtics' coach, was pleased with the meeting.

The Celtics will pay Ford more than $800,000 a year for the next two seasons if he doesn't take another NBA job. He would forfeit that salary if he becomes the Knicks' coach.

Former Golden State coach Don Nelson also is being considered for the Knicks' job, which came open when Riley resigned on June 15.

Riley, who quit with a year left on his contract, is reportedly about to sue the Knicks for breach of contract.

According to the New York Times, Riley wants to get out of that final year so he can coach next season without the Knicks giving permission or demanding compensation.

Checketts denied that Riley's contract had been breached and said the Knicks would fight to prevent him from coaching.

Perspective for NBA draft is long term

■ Young, raw talent in today's draft has the NBA thinking ahead.

By Wendy E. Lane
AP Basketball Writer

TORONTO — Even though the calendar says 1995, Wednesday's NBA draft is really a draft for the 21st century.

Among the players likely to be taken in the top five are three 20-year-olds and two 19-year-olds, players who may not be fully developed pros until the year 2000.

Perhaps they'll get there sooner, and a couple may not get there at all. It's hard to tell, say scouts and general managers.

Maryland's would-be junior Joe Smith, the probably top pick, is 19, as is Kevin Garnett, the Chicago high schooler who's trying to become just the fifth player to play in the NBA without appearing in a college game. North Carolina's Jerry Stackhouse and Rasheed Wallace and Alabama's Antonio McDyess are all 20 and turning pro after playing just two seasons in college.

While many kids their age are working minimum-wage summer jobs and spending their free time skateboarding or playing video games, these five are preparing to step into the big-dollar, high-gloss world of the NBA and face on- and off-court demands their peers couldn't imagine.

"It's going to be a challenge for everybody to make an adjustment," Stackhouse said. "Some guys will make the adjustment in training camp. Some guys will take until February."

Or even longer.

But the possibility of waiting for the youngsters to mature hasn't scared off

Texas' teams prepare for today's draft

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks would love to find a big man in Wednesday's NBA draft, even though they realize it's unlikely.

The San Antonio Spurs and Houston Rockets would love to draft anyone who could contribute next year, even though they also know it's unlikely.

That's pretty much the case throughout the NBA going into this year's draft, which is heavy on underclassmen and light on impact players.

Few of the soon-to-be rookies appear to have the apparent pizazz of last year's co-Rookies of the Year, Grant Hill of Detroit and Jason Kidd, who made a 23-victory difference to the Mavericks.

Drafting Kidd with the second-overall pick in last year's draft capped a three-year stretch in which Dallas built its foundation. Jim Jackson was first with the fourth pick in 1992 and Jamal Mashburn went fourth in 1993.

This year, the Mavericks are picking 12th, giving little opportunity that they'll be able to choose an immediate starter.

They also have the 24th pick and hope to find another role player. They used the 19th choice last year to take Tony Dumas, who didn't earn many minutes.

The best chance Dallas has to find an impact player would be making a trade. As bait, player personnel manager Keith Grant is dangling six more first-round picks over the next three years and Roy Tarpley, if anyone would take him and his huge contract.

Most mock drafts have the Mavericks taking Arizona State forward Mario Bennett, a junior from nearby Denton for whom Mashburn has lobbied. Another name on many lists is TCU's Kurt Thomas, who last year became only the third person ever to lead the NCAA in rebounding and scoring.

With their second pick, Dallas likely will look for someone who can fill the lane.

Some of the names to watch here include Kansas' Greg Ostertag, a Duncanville native and a personal favorite of Mavericks owner Donald Carter, or maybe UCLA center George

Swift haunts old club in Rockies 5-1 win

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Bill Swift, making his first appearance against his former club, allowed two hits in seven shutout innings as the Colorado Rockies beat the San Francisco 5-1 Tuesday and sent the Giants to their fifth consecutive loss.

Swift (3-2) struck out six, walked three and didn't allow a runner past second.

Dante Bichette had a pair of RBI singles for the Rockies. Jose Bautista (2-4) allowed five runs and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Expos 3, Braves 0

ATLANTA — Butch Henry and Mel Rojas combined to hand Atlanta its first shutout of the season, leading the Montreal Expos over the Braves.

The loss left the Boston Red Sox as the only in the majors that has not been blanked this year.

Wil Cordero and Moisés Alou hit solo home runs in the first inning, sending the Expos to only their third victory in 13 games. Atlanta had won three in a row.

Henry (3-5) gave up five hits in 8 1-3 innings. Rojas relieved after Marquis Grissom singled with one out in the ninth, and got his 12th save.

Steve Avery (2-5) pitched his second complete game, retiring the last 18 batters. He struck out nine and gave up five hits.

Mets 2, Marlins 0

MIAMI (AP) — Bill Pulsipher earned his first major league victory, striking out nine in 7 1-3 innings and pitching the New York Mets past Florida.

Pulsipher (1-2), hit hard by Houston and Philadelphia in his first two starts, allowed three hits and walked five.

The 21-year-old left-hander, leading the International League in strikeouts when he was promoted, escaped a first-and-third jam in the first inning by retiring Jeff Conine on a popup, striking out Andre Dawson and getting Terry Pendleton on a grounder.

■ NL Roundup

John Franco got Dawson to ground into a double play that ended the eighth, and pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Bobby Witt pitched seven shutout innings, and recently acquired Rob Murphy (0-2) relieved to start the eighth. The Mets scored twice, helped by a walk by Pulsipher and a throwing error.

Reds 12, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Pitcher John Smiley hit his second home run of the season, helping himself win for the sixth time in seven starts, as the Cincinnati Reds beat Philadelphia.

Reggie Sanders hit a three-run homer, his 13th, and Bret Boone and Craig Worthington had solo shots for the Reds.

Smiley (7-1) improved his road record to 5-0. Xavier Hernandez worked the three innings for his third save. The Reds had a 4-2 lead when they broke the game open with a six-run sixth, chasing Michael Mimbs (6-2).

Astros 6, Cardinals 2

HOUSTON — Doug Drabek matched a career-high with 11 strikeouts and won at home for the first time, leading the Houston Astros over St. Louis.

Drabek (4-5) gave up five hits and allowed one run — on a balk — in 7 2-3 innings for his first victory in six decisions at the Astrodome.

Danny Jackson (0-8) lost in his first start since being placed on the disabled list earlier this month because of a lack of stamina. He gave up five runs in the first inning, although two were unearned because of two errors.

Pirates 6, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Denny Neagle hit the first grand slam by a Pittsburgh pitcher in nearly 10 years, and also became the NL's first nine-game winner as the Pirates beat Chicago 6-5.

Neither a 63-minute rain delay in the second inning nor the Cubs could stop Neagle (9-3). He gave up three runs on six hits, walked none and struck out six in seven innings for his fourth straight win.

Neagle connected in the sixth inning for the first slam by a Pirates pitcher since Don Robinson hit one against Warren Brusstar of the Cubs on Sept. 12, 1985. Neagle, who began the game with two hits in 33 at-bats, homered off Jim Bullinger (4-1).

Neagle's slam landed in the basket in left-center field, and broke a 2-2 tie. His previous home run came last July 25 against Willie Banks, then with the Cubs.

Indian bats heat up in 7-1 win over Royals

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Cleveland pushed its league-leading batting average to .292 with 15 hits in a 7-1 victory over Kansas City that stretched the Indians' lead over the second-place Royals to 7 1/2 games in the AL Central.

Eddie Murray had two doubles and a single, leaving him four hits shy of 3,000. Mark Clark, who was called up from Triple A just hours before the game, allowed five hits over eight innings for the Indians. Clark (3-2) was sent down to Buffalo in late May and went 4-0 in five starts.

With two on and two outs in the first, Murray, batting right-handed against Chris Haney (3-2), hit a deep fly to left. As Vince Coleman retreated to the fence, a fan wearing a glove reached over the railing and made a clean catch.

It was ruled a ground rule double and Wayne Kirby scored on the play for a 1-0 lead. Manny Ramirez then singled to left to make it 3-0. Ramirez had three hits and three RBIs.

Rangers 10, Angels 6

ARLINGTON, Texas — Mickey Tettleton homered twice and Ivan Rodriguez had three hits, including a two-run double that drove in the go-ahead run in the fifth, as Texas beat California.

With the victory, the Rangers pulled into a first-place tie with the Angels in the AL West.

Tettleton's 11th and 12th homers were his third two-homer game of the season and seventh of his career.

Rangers starter Bob Tewksbury (6-3) hung on after giving up five runs and seven hits over the first three innings. He allowed two more hits over the next three. Dennis Cook worked the last three innings for first save.

The Rangers rallied with a two-run fifth to take a 6-5 lead. Juan Gonzalez led off with a single, went to second on a groundout and Tettleton walked. That knocked out starter Mike Bielecki (3-5), who has lost five of his last six decisions. He allowed six runs and nine hits.

Rodriguez jumped on the first pitch from reliever Mike Butcher for a two-run double, giving the Rangers their first lead of the game.

■ AL Roundup

They added four runs in the seventh on a two-run double by Otis Nixon and a two-run homer by Will Clark, his eighth.

Tim Salmon of the Angels went 4-for-4 with two solo homers.

Jim Edmonds' first-inning single extended his hitting streak to 21 games, the longest current streak in the majors. He scored on J.T. Snow's two-run double for a 2-0 California lead. The Angels made it 4-0 in the second on a two-run single by Edmonds.

Yankees 7, Tigers 1

NEW YORK — Tony Fernandez hit a three-run homer and three bullpen pitchers worked the full nine innings for New York as it won its sixth straight.

Scott Bankhead, Bob McDonald (1-1) and Joe Ausanio allowed a combined seven hits. New York manager Buck Showalter decided to use his bullpen instead of starting Jack McDowell on three days' rest.

Bankhead, making his first start since 1991, allowed four hits in 3 2-3 innings. Ausanio pitched out of jams in the seventh and eighth for his first career save.

Fernandez homered in the fifth on reliever Joe Boever's first pitch. It was the second of the year for Fernandez, who also had an RBI double in the seventh.

Tigers starter Brian Bohanon (0-1) got his first decision of the year in his 17th appearance. He allowed six hits and four runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Red Sox 6, Blue Jays 5

BOSTON — Bill Haselman hit a broken-bat home run with one out in the 11th inning to hand the Blue Jays their eighth consecutive loss.

Haselman's first homer of the year was the only hit in 4 1-3 innings off reliever Woody Williams (0-2). Derek Lilliquist (2-1) earned the win with a perfect 11th.

Lee Tinsley, Mo Vaughn and Troy O'Leary also homered for Boston — all solo shots — as the Red Sox opened a 5-1 lead. The Blue Jays scored three in the seventh on Angel Martinez' first career homer and tied it in the eighth on John Olerud's RBI single.

Roger Clemens allowed four hits over seven innings and struck out five.

White Sox 8, Twins 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Ray Durham hit a three-run triple as the Chicago White Sox finally gave Jim Abbott run support in an 8-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Durham lined his first career triple off Mark Guthrie with two outs in the seventh as the White Sox extended their season-best winning streak to five games. It was the Twins' 12th loss in their last 13 games at the Metrodome.

Dave Martinez and Ron Karkovice each hit solo homers for Chicago, which lost slugger Frank Thomas with a stiff back midway through the game. Thomas, who entered the game tied for second in the majors with 18 homers, is listed as day-to-day.

Abbott (4-3) pitched six-plus innings — his shortest outing in his last six starts — allowing 10 hits.

Orioles 11, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — John DeSilva won his first major league start and rookie Manny Alexander drove in four runs as the Baltimore Orioles routed the Milwaukee Brewers 11-3 Tuesday night.

Alexander, who had five RBIs in his first 40 games, drove in three on a bases-loaded double in the sixth inning as the Orioles sent Milwaukee to its fifth straight loss. He narrowly missed a three-run homer in the seventh.

Baltimore scored three times in the fifth off Brewers knuckleballer Steve Sparks (3-3) to erase a 2-1 deficit. Alexander and Brady Anderson had RBI singles and Rafael Palmeiro added a sacrifice fly.

Erik Williams' trial keeps going

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — A Collin County grand jury met again Tuesday to review sexual assault allegations against Dallas Cowboys offensive tackle Erik Williams.

Cowboys receiver Michael Irvin appeared before the grand jury for about 15 minutes Tuesday morning.

He was at least the third Cowboys player to be summoned by the grand jury. Cowboys players Charles Haley and Leon Lett testified June 20.

Each was asked 20 questions about what they knew about Williams and his relationship with a 17-year-old girl who accused him and college friend Roderick Carson of Madison, Wis., of sexually assaulting her two months ago in Williams' north Dallas residence.

Some of the questions pertained to how often they had seen Williams with the girl, whether they had ever seen them in a sexual situation, and what the girl had told them about herself and her life.

"My understanding is that if there is a decision, Godwin said.

home on a two-out, RBI single by Ramirez.

"Everybody has been contributing," Mendoza said. "Ramirez doesn't get to play every day, but it's great that every one is producing. We want to keep every one sharp."

Midland's final run came in the seventh. Hosey singled and stole second base, then scored on Ramirez's second hit of the game.

The six-game series continues tonight with a 7 p.m. game. Jeff Schmidt (4-5, 4.39 ERA) is scheduled to pitch for the Angels while Mike Bovee (2-2, 5.01) will be on the mound for Wichita.

the quarterfinals at Wimbledon, said she had worked to adapt her game to the grass surface.

In other early women's matches today, ninth-seeded Anke Huber rallied for a 6-7 (7-5), 6-1, 6-1, win over Tina Krizan of Slovenia.

Unseeded American Chanda Rubin — finalist at last week's Eastbourne tournament — continued her fine run by beating Ludmila Richterova of Slovakia, 6-1, 6-3.

But Lori McNeil, who eliminated Graf in the first round last year, failed to knock out a seeded player in her opening match this time. Although McNeil was favored because of her grass-court expertise, she lost 4-6, 6-0, 6-3, to 14th-seeded Naoko Sawamatsu of Japan.

In early men's matches, sixth-seeded Yevgeny Kafelnikov overpowered Belgium's Filip DeWulf in straight sets 6-3, 7-5, 6-3; while Javier Frana of Argentina ended crowd favorite Henri Leconte's 13th Wimbledon appearance by beating Leconte 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A series of constructive changes will help you make a successful new start. A promise of cooperation boosts your spirits. Do not let unrealistic expectations or someone's chronic dissatisfaction chip away at your confidence. Work and romance link up early in 1996. Be discreet. Travel abroad looks highly rewarding next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Kathy Bates, actress Danielle Brisebois, director Mel Brooks, football player John Elway.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Things are moving in your favor now; additional money becomes available. Those you love are more in tune with your emotions. Say "good-bye" to fears and tears.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Working out a sensitive problem will require great patience. Although domestic life may seem monotonous at times, you are happy to be out of an unpleasant career situation. Evening may bring a welcome visitor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may have to revise your outlook a bit. A period of meditation helps you put things in better perspective. Tempers could flare if others are forced to work overtime. Keep your temper in check.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Although business developments may stall in the morning, an afternoon breakthrough will put you back in the running. Contact influential people and ask them to intercede. An evening exercise session will help you relax.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Taking a dare or an unnecessary risk would be a big mistake. Cultivate a modest and prudent attitude. Luxury purchases should be postponed until you have more money in the bank. Plan inexpensive fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Out-of-town travel may not be part of your plans today. Be flexible. Failing to keep a promise to an important contact will cause lasting regrets. Act responsibly. Go slow in romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your enjoyment of the day is likely to center on a love or business partnership. Promote a new venture to people in a position to help it along. Keep all financial dealings strictly aboveboard.

Opening lead: ?

Last week we initiated a discussion of whether it is right to lead an ace against a slam. Expert opinion has shifted back and forth over the years, but we are not convinced by the current arguments in favor of leading an ace. This hand is from a pair tournament.

Most North-South pairs found it difficult to stay out of slam. With 18 points including two pairs of ace-kings, North made an invitational raise despite having only one trump, and South invariably bid on because of the void in clubs.

The majority of defenders led the ace of clubs, and the play took no time at all. Declarer ruffed and cashed the ace-king of trumps to learn of the loser there. When the ace-king of hearts and a heart ruff revealed that suit could not be established, declarer entered dummy and led the queen of clubs for a ruffing finesse. Whether or not East covered, declarer was able to dispose of the other diamond loser on the clubs, thus losing only one trump trick.

The problems arose when West chose to lead a red suit. After an opening heart salvo, declarer has to get two discards from the heart suit. The a priori odds strongly favor the seven missing cards to break 4-3, or the queen to be inadequately guarded, so the best line is to win the first heart in dummy, ruff a heart and cash the ace and king of trumps. Dummy is reentered with the king of diamonds and a diamond is discarded on the king of hearts. When East discards on this trick, the contract is lost.

With a diamond lead, the slam should be made. Since a critical dummy entry is removed prematurely, trying to ruff out a queen of hearts only twice guarded is against the odds. Best is for declarer to win the diamond, cash the ace-king of trumps and then finesse the jack of hearts. When that holds, declarer discards two diamonds on the high hearts and claims the slam.

Suave, charm, good looks: Why would Hugh Grant pay for sex?

LOS ANGELES — Why would Hugh Grant, the dashing young Englishman who has charmed Hollywood and women everywhere with his bashful grin, pay for sex?

The question had Hollywood atwitter after Grant's arrest early Tuesday as he allegedly indulged in a sex act with a Sunset Boulevard prostitute in his white BMW.

Actor Hugh Grant allegedly indulged in sex with a prostitute.

"Last night I did something completely insane," Grant said in a statement without elaborating. "I have hurt people I love and embarrassed people I work with. For both things I am more sorry than I can ever possibly say."

It would appear that the suave, 34-year-old Grant could have anything he desires: He's got stardom, wealth, good looks and a loyal following after movies that include "Four Weddings and a Funeral," "The Englishman Who Went Up a Hill But Came Down a Mountain" and the upcoming "Nine Months."

His live-in girlfriend is Estee Lauder's new shapely model Elizabeth Hurley, who showed up at this year's Cannes Film Festival in a jaw-droppingly revealing dress. They've been together about eight years.

LOS ANGELES — Larry Hagman, diagnosed with cirrhosis of the liver two years ago, now has a small tumor on the organ.

Larry Hagman now has a small tumor on his liver.

Hagman's spokesman, Richard Grant, refused to say if the tumor is cancerous.

"The tumor has been detected very early in its development and discussions will take place shortly between the actor and his medical advisers as to his therapeutic options," Grant said Tuesday.

In the meantime, the scheming J.R. Ewing of TV's "Dallas" is "well, feeling great," and traveling with his wife, Grant said.

LOS ANGELES — Elizabeth Taylor is back home and starting rehabilitation with her new hip.

Doctors replaced Miss Taylor's left hip in 1994; worn-out cartilage caused bone to grind against bone, keeping her from walking long distances.

NEW YORK — Riddle me this, Batman: What's cheaper than therapy?

Comedy, says Jim Carrey, who plays The Riddler in "Batman Forever."

"People think that I'm this weird guy," the manic, 33-year-old actor said in the July 13 issue of Rolling Stone. "But I'm up there spewing out all my crap, you know. ... I've always thought it was a really healthy thing."

The comedian has also found an outlet in painting.

"I remember my sister coming down to visit me and looking at the paintings on the wall and going, 'Are you OK?'" Carrey said. "And I'd say, 'Yeah, I'm OK — I have an outlet.'"

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Duchess of York gave the royal treatment Tuesday to a young victim of the Oklahoma bombing.

"I've heard you're quite good at throwing a ball," the former Sarah Ferguson said to 22-month-old P.J. Allen during a visit to Children's Hospital.

P.J., released from the hospital only last week, suffered burns, cuts and broken bones in the April 19 bombing.

"Look at you. You're good at walking," the duchess told the boy after his grandfather, Willie Watson, lowered him to the ground.

NEW YORK — For $40,000, an art dealer will get to hear his lyrics put to music by Elton John himself.

The rock star will record the song for Alexander Acevedo, who bid for the privilege at a Sotheby's auction Monday. The auction was held to four AIDS-related organizations.

Other "fantasy lots" on the auction block included an appearance as an extra in Mike Nichols' new movie, "All the Pretty Horses," that went for $7,000, and a walk-on part on "Melrose Place" that went for $10,000.

Prices higher

NEW YORK — Energy prices rebounded Tuesday, ending four days of mostly lower performances, as traders worked out of oversold positions.

West Texas Intermediate for August delivery settled at $17.77 per barrel, up 13 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

There was little fundamental news to move the market, analysts said. This is the time of year when demand for gasoline in particular begins to rise a bit as summer driving increases during and after the Fourth of July.

After the market closed Tuesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported declines in inventories of crude oil and gasoline at the nation's refineries last week. Crude oil supplies fell to 318.9 million barrels from 325.1 million barrels. Gasoline stocks fell 208.6 million barrels from 210.5 million barrels, the API said.

Natural gas prices were also higher, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $1.569 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.9 cents.

Ticketless travel

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines Co. showed off a new hand-held computer Tuesday that would be used by passengers flying ticketless to check their bags at the curb.

Beginning July 15, skycaps at airports in Dallas, Houston and Oakland, Calif., will begin testing the 2-pound computers. The test will spread to 13 of the airline's busiest cities in mid-August, and eventually throughout Southwest's system if all goes well.

The computers will let skycaps check Southwest manifests to confirm a passenger's reservation, then issue a receipt that meets federal regulations for allowing travelers to check bags, said Charles Zug, director of marketing automation and business development for the Dallas-based airline.

Dollar retreats

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mostly lower Tuesday in a quiet finish to a volatile trading day marked by conflicting signals over interest rates and uncertainty over the outcome of the U.S.-Japanese trade talks.

In late New York trading, the dollar fetched 1.3863 German marks, down from 1.3905 late Monday. It also was trading at 84.18 Japanese yen, down from 84.40 late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.1470 Swiss francs, down from 1.1505; 4.8730 French francs, down from 4.8770; 1,623 Italian lire, down from 1,628; and 1.3743 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3728.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5840, down from $1.5849.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK — Stocks fell in volatile trading Tuesday as market players reacted to conflicting reports on the economy and worried about the direction of interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 8.64 points to 4,542.61 after advancing as much as 20 points earlier in the session.

Big Board volume totaled a heavy 346.96 million shares.

While the Nasdaq composite index dropped 7.42 to 919.56, the NYSE's composite index lost 0.73 to 290.75. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index dropped 1.70 to 542.43 and at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 4.19 to 493.30.

Ban on offshore drilling restored

By N.Y. Times News Service

Washington — In a setback for the U.S. oil industry, a House panel did an about-face and voted to keep a 13-year-old ban on oil and gas drilling along most of the nation's coastline.

Opponents of the drilling moratorium are not conceding defeat. They'll likely try to scrap the ban again, when the underlying spending bill moves to the House floor.

Environmentalists cheered the vote.

"We're about a third of the way there," said Andrew Palmer, a spokesman for a group that supports the ban, the American Oceans Campaign. "It's a good start at getting the moratorium through this Congress."

Last week, a subcommittee of the House Appropriations panel voted to scrap the moratorium. But Tuesday, the full committee approved an Interior Department spending bill that retains the ban.

The same legislation addresses a range of other issues. It keeps funding roughly steady for national parks, but slashes cultural outlays and funding for environmental rules. It would eliminate the fledgling National Biological Service, for example, and scrap the funding needed to add plants and animals to the endangered species list.

Conservatives don't like the biological service. They think the government will use it as an excuse to write more environmental rules.

The Interior bill would also phase out all funding for other long-time conservative targets: the National Endowment for the Arts, and for the National Endowment for the Humanities. The phase-out would take place over three years.

The bill would also dismantle a number of federal agencies and programs over the next few years. The list includes the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines and several conservation programs at the Department of Energy.

Overall, the legislation lays out $12 billion for the Interior Department and U.S. cultural agencies in fiscal 1996, which starts Oct. 1. This is about $1.4 billion less than this year's level.

The drilling ban was a lightning rod in the debate.

Most U.S. offshore drilling is currently limited to the central and western Gulf of Mexico. Lifting the moratorium would open drilling in places like Alaska's Bristol Bay, the eastern Gulf, big parts of offshore California, and the Florida Panhandle and Keys.

While oil spills are a rarity at offshore drilling platforms, especially compared with oil-bearing tankers, many environmental groups argue that offshore rigs are a constant threat. They say the platforms also interfere with delicate marine ecosystems.

People from coastal communities also support the moratorium. Drilling rigs tend to spoil ocean views. They also drag down values on beach-front property.

The industry says the ban is big reason why most U.S. oil companies are doing most of their exploration spending overseas.

Russell Luigs, the chairman of Global Marine Inc., one of the biggest oil well drillers, says that lifting the ban would be a win for everyone.

"It certainly would create additional drilling in this country," he said. "The primary beneficiary would be the country itself." Of course, nobody knows for sure how much oil and gas the protected areas hold. Some oil executives say it's probably not all that much.

"Compared to China and Russia and all the other markets it's just not as big," said Gary Owens, chief executive of Input/Output Inc., which collects seismic data useful to drillers. "But it would be a good thing for us (to lift the moratorium) because it would give us another place to play." It could be a moot point. President Clinton has already hinted he'll block any legislation that scraps the moratorium. Another problem: state restrictions could hold back offshore drilling even if Congress allows it.

Managing cash seminar topic

A seminar and product fair has been scheduled for Thursday, targeting businesses that want to more effectively manage their cash, particularly those that have high volume and high amounts of money passing through their accounts.

The Treasury Management Product event is being presented by Texas Commerce Bank and the Small Business Development Center of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. It will be held at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, Highway 191 and FM 1788.

Among topics covered are information reporting; funds transfer direct access; disbursements; account reconciliation; electronic data interchange; consolidated payables; collections and TCB's Lockbox. While most banks offer these products, the products being discussed Thursday are exclusive to Texas Commerce Bank.

The event begins at 9:30 a.m. with a two-hour MicroLink Users Group, a hands-on learning session on information reporting.

From 1:30 to 5 p.m. will be "Treasury Management Solutions That Lead to Success."

Midwest homes more affordable

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half of the 25 most affordable housing markets were found in the Midwest last winter, including Elkhart, Ind., the most affordable of all, a trade group reports.

The National Association of Home Builders said Tuesday that 13 Midwestern cities made the top 25 of its Housing Opportunity Index during the first quarter, from January through March.

"Conditions in the Midwest, including plentiful land and incomes that are not much lower than those in the Northeast, make many cities there very affordable in comparison to other parts of the country," explained Home Builders President Jim Irvine.

But the survey of 179 metropolitan areas found that overall housing affordability dipped a bit because of high interest rates. The study covered 455,000 sales of new and existing homes.

Although fixed-rate mortgages peaked in January, rates for adjustable loans continued to climb, boosting the index rate to 8.15 percent from 7.82 percent in the fourth quarter.

As a result, the group's national opportunity index slipped to 61.2 during the first three months of 1995, down from 62.3 in the final three months of 1994.

Elkhart, a northern Indiana city of 41,000, scored an 86 on the index.

By contrast, San Francisco had a 21 and remained at the bottom of the list, a ranking it has held since the Home Builders began the quarterly surveys in early 1991.

Recycled decking

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro stands behind materials recycled to make a composite board for decking. The material, called ChoiceDek, is made of cedar chips discarded in other manufacturing and recycled plastics. The material doesn't need waterproofing or sealing and won't splinter or crack. Manufactured by Advanced Environmental Recycling Technologies in Junction and distributed by Weyerhauser Building Materials Distribution, the material was used three years ago to build a boardwalk on South Padre Island. The sales and marketing agreement with Weyerhauser will make the product widely and directly available to contractors and consumers through businesses such as lumber dealers.

Consumer confidence continues to decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer faith in the economy plunged in June, suffering the biggest monthly decline in three years, a widely followed national survey reported Tuesday.

It was the third monthly drop in confidence levels and reflected a widespread view that the economy is slowing down, the Conference Board business research group said.

An index calculated from survey results plunged 9.2 points in June to 92.8, the biggest monthly drop since a 10.4-point decline in June 1992.

The survey results came less than a week after Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan himself acknowledged that signs of economic weakness suggested some "increased risk of a modest near-term recession." Nonetheless, Greenspan has left it unclear whether he favors a reduction in interest rates.

The central bank has raised rates seven times since February 1994 as part of an effort to slow the economy and thwart inflation by making it more expensive to borrow and spend.

Although consumer confidence remains relatively high, said Conference Board consumer research director Fabian Linden, "the magnitude of the decline is somewhat disconcerting."

The survey found declines in confidence in both current economic conditions and expectations for the months ahead.

Fewer respondents said jobs were plentiful in June, fewer expect more job opportunities to arise in the next six months and fewer expect their financial condition to improve.

The survey adds to evidence that the economy is weakening, with rising unemployment, a widening trade deficit, fewer orders for factory goods and a relatively weak housing market.

"We've been hearing for quite some months about a slowing of the economy," said Linden. "This has been in the air for quite some time."

The survey is based on responses to questionnaires sent to 5,000 households nationwide.

At last: Atlantis heads for historic rendezvous with Russian Mir

■ Docking, set for early Thursday, to kick off five days of joint research by 10 astronauts.

N.Y. Times News Service

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The space shuttle Atlantis blasted into orbit Tuesday with a crew of five Americans and two Russians on a historic mission to dock with the Russian Mir space station, a linkup meant to inaugurate a new era of East-West cooperation.

The docking is set for early Thursday and will kick off five days of joint research by 10 astronauts in a sprawling orbital complex made up of the 112-foot-long Mir and the 122-foot-long shuttle. A winged American spaceship has never before docked with a Russian craft.

The delicate feat and ones like it are seen as warm-ups for building an East-West space outpost where the onetime foes can work together as orbital partners.

Two decades ago Russians and American astronauts shook hands in orbit during a brief thaw in the Cold War, but the meeting was of little consequence for politics or space development. In contrast, the new phase of cooperation in theory could last decades.

"You can't make this unbelievable transition from pointing weapons at one another to working together without bumps in the road," NASA chief Daniel S. Goldin said in an interview just after the launching. "But the relationship is rock solid. This proves that if you put your mind to something and search for common interests, you can build bridges."

After thunderstorms forced launching postponements on Friday and Saturday, Atlantis roared aloft on time Tuesday at 3:32 p.m., streaking past scattered clouds. The requirement of a precise path for the orbital rendezvous left a 10-minute span for launching.

A principal aim of the mission is to swap Russian crews at the outpost and to pick up Dr. Norman E. Thagard, an American physician-astronaut who flew up to Mir in March in a Russian rocket and has so far spent 105 days on board, easily breaking the previous American space-endurance record of 84 days. His mission, originally to be 90 days long, was extended because of Russian and American launching delays.

"I miss my family," Thagard said in a space-to-ground news conference this month. "I've got three sons and a wife and two cats, and I like them all and I miss them."

The linkup Thursday is to be the first of seven dockings between the shuttle and Mir in the next two years, which are preparatory to the construction from 1997 to 2002 of the big East-West station. Filled with crews of international astronauts, it is expected to be a center of space research for at least a decade.

The flight of Atlantis is the 100th human mission in the American space program, which began in May 1961 with the 15-minute, up-and-down flight of Alan B. Shepard. It is also the 69th flight by the nation's winged reusable spaceships, which first went aloft in 1981.

An orbital practice session for the docking was held in February when the shuttle Discovery closed to within 37 feet of Mir — just short of actual contact but close enough for astronauts and ground managers to gain valuable experience in the difficult job of trying to mate two 100-ton craft speeding around the earth at more than 17,000 mph.

Thursday's docking is scheduled about 9:05 a.m. and is considered tricky. Care is needed to make sure that no damage to Mir is done by inadvertent collisions.

Gill, Hornets reunited

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets, looking to add scoring to their erratic backcourt, reacquired Kendall Gill on Tuesday night in a trade with the Seattle SuperSonics.

The Hornets sent shooting guard Hersey Hawkins and journeyman swingman David Wingate to the Sonics for Gill, whom Charlotte selected No. 5 overall in the 1990 draft.

Gill played three seasons with the Hornets, averaging 20.5 points in 1991-92 before asking to play elsewhere, making him a target for many Charlotte fans.

"Kendall wants to come back to Charlotte," Hornets coach Allan Bristow said Tuesday night at the team's practice gym. "He wants to play here. He misses his teammates. He misses the town. He wants to finish his career here."

Bristow said despite the unpleasant conditions under which Gill left Charlotte, the Hornets were convinced his second stint would be better.

Bristow said much of Gill's previous unhappiness could be attributed to clinical depression, for which he was diagnosed last season. Gill is currently being treated with medication.

"We really are convinced that Kendall has made some giant strides, mostly because they found some medication that works," Bristow said.

Gill, 6-foot-5, can play either guard position, which makes him a valuable commodity on a team that has gotten spotty play at both.

Hawkins, 6-3, did not miss a start in two seasons with the Hornets. He averaged 14.3 points and 3.2 assists this season. But his scoring was inconsistent, especially in this year's playoffs, where the Hornets lost to the Chicago Bulls in the first round.

Muggsy Bogues, the Hornets' 5-3 point guard, is one of the NBA's better ball handlers but he has never been an outside threat.

"We feel like Kendall really raises the talent level of this team," said Bob Bass, Charlotte's new vice president of basketball operations.

Gill averaged 14.1 points in his first season with Seattle, 1993-94. His average slipped to 13.7 points this past season, when he was limited to 73 games because of his depression and a bruised kidney.

Gill, who averaged 29.1 minutes this season at Seattle, said he wanted to play more, something Bristow said the Hornets would gladly oblige.

"We'll give him all the playing time he can handle," Bristow said. "We're trying to make this team better."
