Recent Study Reveals What The Exes Are Doing

Studies have been made of Olton High School graduating classes, beginning with the class of 1966, and some interesting facts are disclosed.

Each class has been well represented in colleges and universities across the state with the 60 members of the 1968 class boasting 80 percent enrollment in schools of higher learning following their graduation. That number dropped to 75 percent when the same class enrolled in 1969.

The class of 1966 enrolled 77 percent of their 53 members with the proportion declining to 62 percent in 1967, 59 percent in 1968 and 49 percent in 1969. It is expected, however, that 53 percent of this class will have graduated from college by 1970 or 1971.

Graduates of 1966 have also compiled military records. One was in service in 1966, five in 1967, seven in 1968 and 11 in 1969.

Sixty-seven percent of the class of 1967 enrolled that year in college with 62 percent continuing in 1968 and 47 percent in 1969.

Five 1967 grads had military service that year, seven in 1968 and nine in 1969.

Two members of the class of 1968 entered the military service that year and five were in the service last year.

One member of the 1969 class is in the Navy.

Fifteen of the 22 girls in the 1966 graduating class have married; 10 of the 1967 graduates; nine from the class of 1968 and four of the 1969 class.

Saving Coupons

BY SUE CANNON

I sure am glad that I never throw anything away.

Well, now, that's not exactly true. But I am a great hand at saving coupons off of every item that offers a "good deal".

Among my collections are Betty Crocker coupons, which I am going to get together and donate to Larry Parks, a student at Wayland that has a kidney disease. The story is on the front page so be sure and read it and collect all those coupons that you've been saving for that set of silverware that you don't really need probably. These coupons can actually save a life.

And that's much more important than a set of silverware.

Speaking of saving things... Last week Marcelle Loveless came in here looking for stamps. Not good stamps! Cancelled stamps!

Well, you know where all opened letters go --- right to file 13. So we (mostly just me) started digging into the trash after cancelled stamps after she told me what she wanted them for.

It seems that there is someone in this cruel world that will pay the monetary value of the original stamp for every cancelled one you can come up with --- for cancer society!

I hadn't been fortunate enough to get my boys to carry out the trash that week and so I was really loaded.

But the horrible thing about it all, was that when opening the letters I would usually tear the stamp right smack in two!

Well, we found quite a number for her that weren't too bad and she gladly took them.

But all this week, every time I would start to open a letter I felt like someone was watching me .... just daring me to tear that stamp!

So like a nice little ole lady, I was extra careful and collected her quite a few more stamps.

Now there is another way that you can help someone in need. If you have any cancelled stamps, Marcelle sure would like to have them and so would the American Cancer Society.

NEW PROPERTY

Under the terms of a 20-year lease agreement with the federal government, the University of Texas has acquired full title to the Northwest Austin property occupied by Balcones Research Center. The University reimbursed the government, not in cash, but in educational benefits created by use of the property. Prof. J. Neils Thompson, director of Balcones and of the Structural Mechanics Research Laboratory, was responsible for the establishment of the 400-acre research center in 1946. Once the site of a World War II magnesium plant, the Center now houses activities for a wide range of engineering and science research at UT Austin.

It Happens To Everyone

(Editor's Note: The following item is shared with Enterprise readers by B. C. Cooner. The author is unknown.)

"Lord, Thou knowest better than I know myself that I am growing older and will some day be old. Keep me from getting talkative and particularly from the fatal habit of thinking that I must say something on every subject. Release me from the craving to try to straighten out everybody's affairs.

I ask for grace enough to listen to the tales of others' pains, Help me to endure them with patience. But seal my lips on my own aches, they are increasing, and my love of rehearsing them is becoming sweeter.

Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionaly it is possible that I may be mistaken.

Keep me reasonably sweet; I do not want to be a saint--some of them are so hard to live with. Make me thoughtful, but not moody, helpful, but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom, it seems a pity not to use it all -- but Thou knowest that I want a few friends at the end.

Word Origins

By Mrs. Blanton Martin

Many words in our language evolved from the names of persons. Sideburns, for example, are so called because hair on the sides of his face was the trademark of a famous American general, Ambrose Burnside. The general shaved his chin but left undisturbed the hair in front of his ears. Sometime in the years after the War between the States, an inexplicable semantic shift turned the term "burnsides" into "sideburns". Sideburns were fashionable during the last years of the nineteenth century, and they are again in vogue. They are, of course, the subject of much controversy. The writer of these words happens to like them provided they are not overdone. And General Burnside's sideburns were overdone as you can see from his picture in an encyclopedia.

The word "Dunce" comes, curiously enough, from the name of a very brilliant scholar who lived during the time of the Reformation. John Duns Scotus wrote commentaries on the Bible and on Aristotle. He was a conservative scholar, however, opposed to many changes brought about by the Reformation. He gained quite a following; and, after his death, this group was referred to as "Dunsmen" or "Duncemen". They became more and more opposed to change of any kind, and so they were looked upon as stupid and dull. What a twist of fate that the word "dunce" means a person so very different to the brillant Scotus whose name gave birth to the term.

As you know, I'm sure, a macadam road is a road paved with thin layers of crushed rock. The man who perfected the method was John MacAdam, or McAdam, as it is sometime spelled in accounts of the Scot who did more to improve European roads than any other man. MacAdam made a fortune in this country and, returning to Scotland, spent it in the development of better methods of paving roads.

Finally, consider the term "bloomers". Mrs. Amelia Bloomer more than a hundred years ago campaigned for equal rights for women. Among other things which she promoted was trousers for women. The particular costume that she liked was a pair of loose-fitting trousers drawn in tight at the ankle, topped by a knee-length skirt. Bloomers were not very popular at that time, but some of the older female readers of this article remember having worn knee-length pants, bloomers if you please, on the school playground. Again, during the sixties the term "bloomers" was used to designate certain items of summer playclothes.

An interesting footnote is the fact that Mrs. Bloomer, to the end of her life, denied having designed the first "bloomers". I don't blame her. At least, I shouldn't want to be credited with having thought up the kind of bloomers that I wore as a child.

Everything But The Kitchen Sink

BY MOZELLE TROTTER

It's going to be interesting to see what happens now. Which side is going to win - the longs or the shorts?

I'm talking about the latest "happening with hair".

Will a Beatle - one of the ones who started it all - again change the world's hair fashion? Or is his newest hair-do just a rare exception to the rule? And one that will really get him the UN-notice he proclaims he wants?

I can't remember what they're calling the NEW style but it's the next thing to having your head shaved. Ought to be all fine for the barbering profession but, gee, what would it do for hair stylists?

And it seems that his lady fair had her head done to match. Now, that's about as loyal as you can get!

My better half just needn't expect me to go along with the "his and her" look if HE ever adopts the new style!

Phrenologists would have a field day, wouldn't they? That's even more reason I shan't cut off my hair.

Presumably, one's "mental faculties" (that's what Webster says) can be studied by the bumps on one's skull. Well, I'm just not taking any chances!

As I said, it'll be interesting to see if the new style catches on. Wonder if his fellow Beatles will even copy the caper?

Did you know that there were hairdressers in ancient times? Ancient Egypt had them. Of course they just did the hair of royal families.

Numerous references are made through the Old Testament about cutting or curling hair. The book of Samuel tells how barbers trimmed hair and Ezekiel instructed priests how to cut theirs.

Just as today, styles changed to and fro. At one time in history, the king had his hair cut daily, the high priest every week and an ordinary priest every month.

In New Testament times, the pendulum swung the other way and Paul writes the people of Corinth that long hair for a man is a "shame".

And so it goes. Either side can find support for his cause - from the Bible and many other sources.

The "longs" can quote us numerous famous men who had scads of crowning glory - - from the Father of Our Country to Tiny Tim or Gorgeous George!

I still think it'll be something to see.

SHARING

There is no greater happiness
Than that of sharing life
With all its joys and all its cares
As loving man and wife.
For love gives life new meaning
And has a special way
Of growing stronger, deeper
With every passing day.
Yes, life is so much happier
And brighter when you're sharing
The very special joys that come
With loving ... giving...caring.
