Coal Strike End Seen Grudgingly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coal miners, hard up for cash after a 106-day strike, may vote grudgingly for a contract proposal to end their walkout, interviews with more than 100 local United Mine Workers leaders show.

"Everybody's broke in Beckley. They don't know where their next dime is coming from," said Jimmy Bonham, president of UMW Local 1961 in Beckley, W.Va.

"I think it's going to pass. These men are desperate," said Cliff White, president of Local 6271 in Moundsville, W.Va.

"I think they're going to accept the contract, echoed Peter Trbovich, president of Local 688 in Clarksville, Pa. After three months without work, he said, miners will give their support out of "necessity, not because it's a good contract."

Not Unanimous

But support for the pact is not unanimous, with some officials arguing that further negotiations are needed.

"I think we could do better," said Alex Beri, president of Local 6410 in Pennsylvanias.

About 160,000 miners are eligible to vote Friday on the union's latest proposed contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Of 109 UMW local presidents interviewed, 53 said they believed their local rank-and-file memberships would vote in favor of the contract. Twenty-two presidents said their local unions would vote against the pact and 34 either said the outcome was too close to predict or declined to express an opinion.

46 To Vote For

UMW local presidents interviewed represent more than 23,000 of the union's miners. Forty-six of the presidents said they planned to vote for the contract. Forty-one said they would vote against it. The remaining 22 either declined to express an opinion or are retired miners and thus ineligible to vote.

An AP survey conducted before the balloting on the last contract, rejected by a 2-1 margin, showed 24 of 106 union presidents interviewed predicted their memberships would approve the contract. Thirty-five forecast "no votes" and 47 had no prediction.

The new proposal contains industry concessions in a number of areas.

Critical Of Miller

But it didn't give the miners everything they wanted, and support for the new pact appears unenthusiatic. Some local leaders also expressed disgust with their president, Arnold Miller, and what they regard as an inept performance at the bargaining table.

The proposal calls for pay raises of $2.40 an hour over three years for miners who now average $7.80 an hour.

But wages are not the big issue. Fringe benefits are.

Miners still oppose a contract provision calling for company-run health insurance plans for hundreds of thousands of persons who now receive care under an independent union-industry fund.

Pension Plan Hit

They also object to continuing a system that provides recent retirees with higher pensions than those received by men who retired before Jan. 1, 1976, even though the new contract gives older pensioners a better deal than the rejected contract did.

Miners also object — although not as strongly as before — to a proposal calling for them to pay for a portion of their

Justice Department Wants 'Racial Mix' Hiked In Schools

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LUBBOCK'S proposed school integration plan should be changed to ensure a racial mix in primary grades, relieve the "disproportionate burden" on minorities and provide an alternative strategy if Dunbar High's magnet program fails, the U.S. Justice Department said Tuesday.

And even then, the department hinted it may appeal the case to a higher court.

"We believe parts of the school board's plan are legally inadequate and factually unsupported," federal government attorney Steve Clark said in a brief filed with U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

Clark said the department stands ready to back up its objections with expert testimony — testimony Woodward himself had been asked to seek by the Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools.

Parallels CASS Views

In fact, the department's brief closely paralleled many things CASS and other critics of the board's integration plan have been saying. Last weekend those opponents collected about 1,000 signatures on petitions urging the Justice Department to join in the protest.

Woodward told the school board Jan. 27 to draft a plan to desegregate Dunbar High, Struggs Junior High and Wheatley, Iles, Posey, Martin, Sanders, Guadalupe and Mahon elementaries.

At the elementary level, the board's proposal would involve closing Sanders and combining that area with Guadalupe; offering special academic programs and before-and after-school care at Iles to voluntarily attract whites there; and busing students between predominantly white schools and the remaining cited minority elementaries.

Blueprint For Busing

Under the plan, white students would be bused one semester of their elementary careers, while minority students would be bused up to two years. The years minorities would be assigned from their neighborhoods would not be consecutive.

"We object to the high degree of educational instability and to the transportation requirements which minority students would bear under the board's proposal," the Justice Department's brief said.

"It is apparent that the defendants have suggested this complex method of student assignment in an attempt to increase public acceptance and support of the plan by involving a substantial portion of the anglo community.

"Nevertheless, the plan proposed places the burden of desegregation disproportionately on minority children," the brief adds.

The department noted that under the plan, each white child would be assigned from his "home school" for "only 4 1/2 months during his entire elementary career, and would remain at the same school with essentially the same peers for 5 1/2 school years.

"The minority student, however, would never be at the same location for more than a year during the last four years of elementary school."

Frequent Changes Seen

Between third and sixth grade, minorities at the cited elementaries would be required to change schools as many as four times. And, whenever they return to their "home schools," they would find themselves in class with a different group of white students.

"The resulting stacatto pattern of school experiences for minority students violates the rule that the burden of school desegregation must be borne equitably," the Justice Department said.

"Although the board's proposal for the

Carter, Begin See Gloomy Prospects

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter opened critical talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on Tuesday, pledging U.S. commitment to preserving Israel but warning that prospects for a Mideast settlement "have now been clouded over."

Sharing the gloomy assessment in a low-keyed White House ceremony, Begin told Carter, "admittedly these are times of trial" for Israel and the entire region.

The talks began as Israel declared a cease-fire in southern Lebanon. But a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization said, "Israel's declaration of a cease-fire is not enough. What is needed is an unconditional total withdrawal by Israel from the whole of south Lebanon."

Two-Hour Meeting

Carter and Begin talked for about two hours. A White House spokesman, Rex Granum, later said Israeli military occupation of the area, which the United States wants ended promptly, did not come up in the talks.

A White House statement said Carter urged all sides "to make the historic decisions on which peace now depends."

The Palestinian terrorist attack that killed 35 Israelis along the Tel Aviv-Haifa coast road 10 days ago was, Begin said, "a reminder of what the character is of the implacable enemy."

However, Begin said, "We shall overcome."

Strained Relations

The visit, against a backdrop of strained U.S.-Israeli relations, gives Carter a chance to press Begin for concessions in the lagging negotiations with Egypt and for a prompt Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon.

In his remarks, Carter suggested that Israel was secure enough militarily to give ground to the Arabs — a point Begin and his government contest.

"Israel is now militarily and in many other ways strong — stronger than ever before in history," Carter said. "With the strength in physical terms and with the strength of the leadership of Israel rests the prospect of resolution of the difficulties that have so long divided the people of the Middle East."

West Bank Issue

One of the principal points Carter is taking up with Begin is the prime minister's view that Israel is not committed to a withdrawal from the West Bank of the Jordan River under 1967 and 1973 U.N. Security Council resolutions.

"For 10 years the search for peace has been going on under (1967) resolution 242," Carter said, alluding to the U.S. position that Israel was committed to withdrawal on this front.

He condemned the "cowardly and unjustified attack by terrorists on innocent civilians in Israel" and, indirectly referring to Israel's military thrust into southern Lebanon, said it had resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives and made tens of thousands homeless.

"Clouded Over"

His speech reflected the turnaround from the U.S. optimism created by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Jerusalem last November. "The bright days of new opportunity have now been clouded over," Carter said.

Begin later lunched with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. One senior Senate aide, who did not wish to be identified, said afterward, "It was no love feast. He (Begin) was tough."

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., the only member of the Senate who is of Arab extraction and who is a frequent critic of Israeli policy, said Begin "did not deviate one inch from his hard line."

As Begin lunched with senators, some 250 sympathizers of the Palestine Liberation Organization marched across Washington waving flags, banners and placards. They rallied on the west steps of the Capitol and chanted anti-Begin slogans.

Carter and Begin conferred for more than two hours, parted with a handshake and made no statements afterward.

The president saw his guest to a waiting black limousine and waved goodbye to him. They will meet again today.

The subdued welcome for Begin contrasted with Carter's courting of Sadat when the Egyptian leader visited here last month. Those talks were held in a relaxed mood, beginning in the quiet of snow-blanketed Camp David, Md., with Sadat surrounded by members of his and Carter's family. They concluded with Carter's accolade to Sadat as being "the world's foremost peacemaker."

Over the last several months Carter's Mideast policy has caused concern among many of Israel's supporters, in Congress and elsewhere. He has proposed selling Saudi Arabia and Egypt their first batches of U.S. warplanes and pushed Israel for concessions outside the direct negotiations with Egypt.

Palestinians Demand Israeli Withdrawal

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel loosed a fierce artillery barrage on a last Palestinian stronghold near the Litani River Tuesday and then declared a cease-fire in the drive that gained it control of nearly all southern Lebanon in a week of fighting.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said Israel's unilateral decision to stop the fighting was "not enough," and demanded unconditional Israeli withdrawal. A spokesman for guerrilla radicals vowed his forces would keep fighting.

Isolated Gunfire

Observers from Sidon, Lebanon, provincial capital of the south, said three hours after the cease-fire was announced that all seemed quiet except for an isolated report of machine gun fire near the Litani River bridge on the coastal road.

Israel controlled an area up to the Litani River, 18 miles north of the border, excluding the port city of Tyre. The line extends east along the river from the Mediterranean for about 17 miles and then curves north with the river to the village of Hasbaya, about 12 miles from the Israeli border, and east again to Cheba, near the Syrian border.

Cease-Fire Called

Declaration of the cease-fire, effective at 6 p.m. — 10 a.m. CST — came as Prime Minister Menachem Begin met President Carter at the White House in Washington. Carter said prospects for a Mideast settlement "have now been clouded over." He was expected to press Begin for concessions in peace talks with Egypt.

A White House statement issued after the two-hour meeting said Carter urged all sides in the Mideast dispute "to make the historic decisions on which peace now depends." A spokesman said the Lebanese crisis did not come up in the talks, which continue today.

A brief announcement issued in Tel Aviv by an Israeli military spokesman said, "The minister of defense has instructed the chief of general staff to effect a cease-fire along the entire front in Lebanon as of 1800 hours today."

Mahmoud Labadi, official PLO spokesman in Lebanon, said, "Israel's declaration of a cease-fire is not enough. What is needed is an unconditional total withdrawal by Israel from the whole of south Lebanon."

Bassam abu Sharif, a spokesman for Dr. George Habash's radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, called the Israeli decision "absolutely ridiculous" and vowed to wage "a relentless war of attrition until the last Israeli invader is kicked out of south Lebanon."

He also suggested that PFLP fighers would not let U.N. peacekeeping forces stand in the way of raids on Israeli positions.

In Jerusalem, Defense Minister Ezer Weizman said if the Palestinians fired on Israeli positions, Israel might break the cease-fire. He told members of Parliament that Israel would review its presence in south Lebanon in the next 24

Farm Relief Plan Passed By Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a package of farm relief bills Tuesday that government economists say would add at least $100 a year to an average three-person family's food bill.

The bills' chief sponsors, however, said some of the approved measures were contradictory and probably would not work in their current form.

The Senate sponsors said they hoped to reach an acceptable compromise in a conference with House Agriculture Committee, possibly today before Congress takes an Easter recess.

President Carter immediately asked administration officials for an analysis of the economic implications of the measure.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, returning from a meeting with Carter and the president's top economic advisers, was asked if the administration were leaning toward a veto.

"It was never said in so many words, but it was clear that there was little or no sentiment for the ... bill," he said. "I don't know of anybody in the administration who thinks it's a good idea, but there was no veto threat."

Bergland added that he might act to boost the farm economy on his own while Congress is in recess. Howver, the secretary did not elaborate.

Bergland has tried to bring prices up by urging farmers to set aside some acreage and store grain until surpluses are reduced. The stored reserve plan would be killed by the Senate bill, his department said.

After the 67-26 final vote on the package, the measure went to the House. The legislation was attached to a bill regulating raisin marketing that the other chamber already had passed.

In its final form, the bill would:

— Require the Agriculture Department to offer wheat, corn, soybean and cotton farmers an average of $75 an acre

House Okays 70 Retirement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted 391-6 Tuesday to raise the minimum mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70 in most private industry and remove such restrictions altogether for nearly all federal employes.

The legislation — a compromise version worked out by a House-Senate conference committee — now goes back to the Senate, which is expected to send it along to President Carter.

"In many elderly hearts all over the country ... there'll come back a new spirit of youth, a new vitality," said Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., one of the chief sponsors of the legislation and himself 77 years old.

The legislation asserts that "time is not the criterion of competence," Pepper said.

No one spoke against the legislation, although several members criticized some of its exemptions, put in at the Senate's insistence.

The bill would become effective Jan. 1, 1979, but with these exceptions:

—If a collective bargaining agreement providing for retirement at age 65 was in effect by Sept. 1, 1977, the new upper age limit could not apply until Jan. 1, 1980.

—The new age limit would not become effective for tenured college and university faculty members until July 1, 1982.

—High-paid executives still could be forced to retire at age 65 if they were in a "bona fide executive or high policy-making position" for at least two years before retirement and were entitled to a pension of $27,000 or more a year.

The bill also contains a number of technical changes designed to overcome procedural obstacles to those who seek relief under the bill.

Federal government employees generally no longer would be subject to mandatory retirement.

However, there would be some exceptions such as law enforcement and firefighting personnel, air traffic controllers and foreign service personnel.

Battered Women's Shelter Needs Argued

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

CITY COUNCIL candidates may have been reading from the same script Tuesday night when they answered questions posed by a conservative woman's group.

The seven candidates differed little in the views they presented to the approximately 30 people at a forum sponsored by the Women Who Want to be Women.

The men, who are seeking council posts in the April 1 municipal election generally agreed that a moral code cannot be legislated, that full tuition tax credit should not be extended to parents of children attending private schools, that parents have the "ultimate responsibility" for their children, and that elected officials should be responsible to their conscience and to the majority of their constituents.

Differ On One Issue

The only issue that aroused sharp dissension among the candidates was the question of whether there is a need in Lubbock for a battered women's shelter.

Three candidates voiced unequivocal support for such a center, two emphatically rejected the idea and two hedged on an answer.

Mayoral aspirant Robert Kizer joined opponent James Marshall in citing the need for a center to shelter battered women. Place 3 candidate Bob Schmidt agreed with them.

"It's just ridiculous that there's so much rape and abuse to women," Marshall said. Kizer seconded that, saying, "They (abused women) have got to have some place to go."

They added that if no private organization can fund such a center, he believes government should.

Sees Possible Demand

Schmidt seconded the idea of organizing a center supported, if necessary, by public money. He explained that the city "might as well" set up a center before the federal government demands one.

Place 3 candidate M.J. "Bud" Aderton flatly rejected a battered women's center, saying he believes battering to be a "domestic problem."

He added that he did not believe a center is necessary, and said one should not be used as a "referee" on households.

That view was supported by mayoral candidate Leland Kelly, who said he believes spouses "can work out their own problems."

Besides, he added, such a center would cost money.

Two Reserve Opinions

Two other council candidates, place 1 contestant Mike Stevens and place 3 contestant Glad Norman, voiced reserved opinions about a battered women's center.

Stevens said that he had to "say no to the entire question" of a center because he rejects the funding options listed in the question posed to candidates. Those options included city taxes, private welfare and federal taxes.

However, Stevens added, he is "all for anyone who gets battered."

Norman answered the question of battered women's center by quipping that there is a need for a battered men's center. Then, he added, there "possibly is a need for a woman's center." If there were such a center, he said he would favor private welfare funding.

Three council candidates were not present at the forum. They were mayoral candidate Dirk West, Allen Henry, place 1 contestant, and Maria Mercado, place 3 contestant. The three cited prior commitments.

With the exception of Schmidt, the candidates endorsed more home rule and less dependency on federal government funds and control.

Would Accept Funds

Although he acknowledged that it would "bother" him if the federal government gave the city aid for operating expenses, Schmidt added that "we better take our share" of the money available. "As long as the system's there, I say let's take advantage of it," he said.

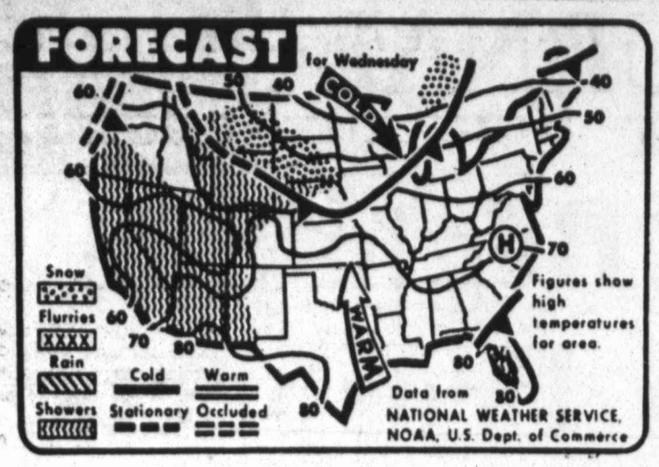

"We brought it on ourselves," he added.

Candidates answered eight questions on a printed form after detailing their qualifications, reasons for seeking office and views on the function of government.

The 1 1/2 hour session was followed by a brief question and answer period.

Ousted Students Must Prove Injury To Collect Damages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 8-0 Tuesday that a student suspended from school without a hearing must prove injury in order to collect substantial damages under federal civil rights law.

At the same time, Justice Lewis Powell's opinion preserved the constitutional right to a hearing by allowing nominal damages regardless of injury — even if the suspensions were justified.

"The law recognizes the importance to organized society that (hearing) rights be scrupulously observed," Powell wrote.

But he said, "It remains true to the principle that substantial damages should be awarded only to compensate actual injury or, in the case of ... punitive damages, to deter or punish malicious deprivation of rights."

In other action the court:

—Ruled 9-0 in a Georgia case that a jury of six members is the minimum states may use for criminal trials.

—By a 6-2 vote softened the rule that illegally seized evidence may not be used against a criminal defendant in either a state or federal court.

The suspension decision came in consolidated cases involving two Chicago boys — Silas Briscoe and Jarius Piphus — summarily suspended for, respectively, wearing an earring and smoking a suspected marijuana cigarette. The earring denoted membership in the "Boss Pimps Disciples" street gang.

Both had argued that mental or emotional distress should be presumed under these circumstances.

But Powell said "Their purpose is to protect persons from injuries to particular interests, and their contours are shaped by the interests they protect."

The cases goes back to U.S. District Court in Chicago and the youths will be entitled to nominal damages of $1 each, if the suspensions are found justified.

In the Georgia jury case, Justice Harry Blackmun, who wrote the leading opinion, said neither the financial benefit nor the more dubious time-saving benefit of having fewer than six jurors would justify the threat to the constitutional guarantee of trial by jury.

The decision reversed the conviction of Claude Ballew of the Paris Art Theater in Atlanta, found guilty by a five-member jury under the state obscenity law, sentenced to a year in prison and fined $2,000 for showing the film "Behind the Green Door."

The Fulton County Criminal Court, where Ballew was tried, is limited to misdemeanors, and jury size now has been increased to six. Only Georgia, Louisiana and Virginia have reduced any juries to five, while several states have provided six-member juries in selected criminal cases.

Twelve-person juries are the rule in federal courts but in a 1970 Florida case the court held that a jury of six does not deny a defendant his right to trial by jury under the 6th Amendment. At that time it did not set a minimum jury size.

Canal Pact Vote Timetable Elusive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to work out a timetable for voting on the second Panama Canal treaty remained stalled Tuesday as the Senate turned its attention to emergency farm legislation.

Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said the prospects for an agreement between Senate leaders and treaty opponents on when to take action on the second treaty were "diminished." Baker did not elaborate.

One treaty, which guarantees that the canal will remain neutral after the United States turns it over to Panama, was approved last Thursday. The second treaty provides for actually turning the canal over to Panama at the end of 1999.

Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., says that unless a schedule for completing work on the treaties is agreed upon this week, the Senate may see its 10-day Easter recess cut in half. The recess is to begin Friday.

The treaty debate is in its sixth week. The Senate still is dealing with the first portion of the second pact, by far the more complicated and technical of the two treaties.

Treaty foes have planned to use the recess to wage a campaign in selected states, aimed at winning over a handful of senators who voted for the first treaty, then have the vote immediately afterward.

However, Senate sources said some insist there should be more debate, even if it means curtailment of the recess.

Sources close to Senate leaders said Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., was raising most objections to the demand for swift action, while most other opponents were in favor of a vote soon after the recess. The sources asked that they not be identified.

Rain (Two Kinds) Possible

Sunny spring days on the South Plains may get a dousing late today from showers triggered by an approaching Canadian cool front, the National Weather Service said Tuesday.

And rain may not be all the region's residents get today. Forecasters were promising gusty, possibly dusty winds in the same sentence as spring's first showers.

Weathermen said days like Tuesday — sunny, warm and not too windy — will return to the region by Saturday, though.

Today, temperatures should still be close to picnic-perfect, reaching the low 70s, although southerly winds will blow at 15 to 20 mph and gust even higher. Low temperatures tonight should be in the lower 40s, rising into the low 60s on Thursday.

Forecasters were calling for a 20 percent chance of showers today and 30 percent tonight. Late Tuesday, a small band of rain near Andrews was moving to the northeast at 15 mph but was not expected to reach the Lubbock area before dissipating.

Scattered showers should continue until late Friday, forecasters said, but on Saturday sunny skies should bring temperatures back into the 70s.

Tuesday most of Texas was under cloudy skies, although temperatures were in the 70s and 80s. Laredo reported the state's warmest reading, 91 degrees, at 4 p.m.

Lubbock's high was 77 degrees, up considerably from a low of 41.

Consumers Hit Hard By Bad Car Repairs, New Auto Styling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost 40 cents of every dollar spent on car repairs are wasted because of faulty — sometimes fraudulent — repair work, poor owner maintenance and new car design, the head of the federal highway safety agency said Tuesday.

Joan Claybrook, administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, told a Senate commerce subcommittee that the total cost was more than $20 billion a year.

"Consumers lose vast amounts of money through industry repair practices that are legal and acceptable, but wasteful," she said.

"We believe that slightly more than half of the $20 billion waste results from fraudulent, incompetent, or unnecessary repairs performed by the repair industry, she said. "The remaining losses appear to be attributable to new car design or a lack of owner understanding of their car's maintenance and repair needs."

She said the $20 billion estimate was probably conservative and was based on surveys by her agency of problems consumers have with their cars.

Chairman Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., called the $20 billion per year figure "staggering."

Claybrook said one of the most widespread methods of wasting consumer dollars is selling package deals, such as telling a car owner he needs a tune-up when there is only one bad spark plug.

"Outright fraud by repair facilities is common but is by no means the only villain," she said. "Large sums are also lost due to incompetent repair industry personnel and equipment. Consumers themselves have some responsibility for losses due to incorrect preventive maintenance policies."

The subcommittee earlier polled state consumer agencies and found that most of those responding named automobile problems as their biggest source of consumer complaints.

Claybrook listed these other causes of consumer loss:

— Unneeded repair because of inadequate diagnosis of the problem.

— Overfrequent preventive maintenance.

— Cars prematurely retired due to inadequate maintenance.

Claybrook said efforts to address this problem are difficult, in part because "there are more than half a million auto repair and service shops throughout the United States. Most are mom-and-pop garages."

She urged that diagnostic inspections in some place other than the repair shop be made available to consumers. Demonstration projects by the highway safety agency have found that a complete car inspection costs about $15 per car. She said the inspections can provide information to consumers so that they will not be at the mercy of the car repair shop.

She cited as an example a diagnostic facility run by the Auto Club of Missouri for more than a decade. In other areas, state governments have agreed with private contractors to conduct diagnostic inspection programs.

However, "even with good information from a diagnostic inspection, the consumer has no guarantee that correct repairs will eventually be made at a fair price ... He simply does not have the tools readily available to fight back," she said.

Floodwaters Recede In Nebraska

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Floodwaters receded on Tuesday after claiming one life, driving 4,000 persons to emergency shelter and causing damage estimated at nearly $250 million in Nebraska's worst floods in 40 years.

"We've gone over the worst part of it," said National Weather Service hydrologist Roy Osugi. "We don't see anything serious unless there's an ice jam, and there's not that much ice anymore."

However, the Weather Service said a flood warning remained in effect in the Platte and Elkhorn river basins to the west and south of Omaha, while some minor flooding was reported along the Missouri near LaPlatte to the south.

Gov. J.J. Exon flew over the flooded areas Saturday, Monday and again Tuesday. He said he would seek a federal disaster declaration and millions of dollars in state emergency funds as soon as figures to support the moves were available.

The preliminary estimate of $250 million was compiled by Douglas County Board Chairman George Buglewicz.

As the worst of the flooding from North Bend to Ashland began to subside, some of the evacuees moved back to their homes. No figures were available, however, on how many were still in the shelters.

New problems arose along the muddy Missouri and in far northeast Nebraska near Niobrara, the town which was moved to high ground several years ago to protect it from perennial floods.

The weather service said the 29 residents of Iske Place, near LaPlatte, were forced to evacuate when water spilled into several homes and cabins.

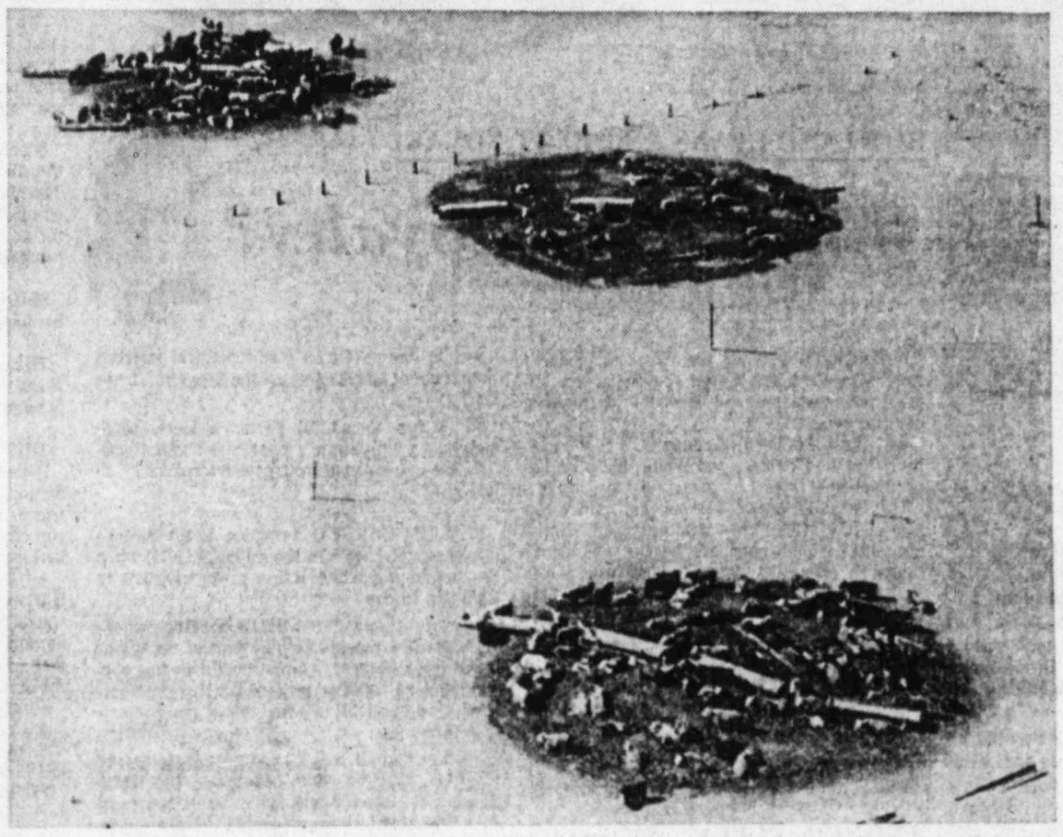

However, the larger communities of Plattsmouth, just below where the swollen Platte River disgorges into the Missouri, Nebraska City and Rulo are on high ground and believed safe from the Missouri, which was reported at or near flood stage along the eastern Nebraska border.

Niobrara State Park Superintendent Don Schulenberg, his assistant, Mike Keeler, and their families were forced to evacuate Monday night as ice gorges forced the Niobrara River to flow over the entire 408-acre park.

Forecasters said similar overflows were possible later in the week, as ice jams and gorges continue moving down the Niobrara from the west.

Social Work Educator Due Here

Dr. Solomon Green, associate dean of the Wurzweiler School of Social Work of Yeshiva University, N.Y., will meet with students, field instructors and social agency officials in Lubbock and Houston March 27-29.

Dr. Green will meet with Mrs. Judy Sokolow, a student, at Lubbock's Family Service Association March 28-29, following his meeting March 27 with student Deborah Siegel of Houston's Jewish Community Center.

Green serves as faculty advisor to the Wurzweiler School's new Block Education Program. The program, now in its second year, is designed to allow student to take their classroom work during the summer at Wurzweiler and engage in field work training at hometown Jewish agencies during the remainder of the year.

More than 150 students across the U.S., and in Canada and Israel have enrolled in the program, which leads to the master of social work degree.

The purpose of his visits, Dr. Green says, is to consult with field workers and students in furthering student progress and also determine the needs of the agencies.

Wurzweiler School of Social Work, the first university-based graduate social work program under Jewish auspices, was established in 1957 and renamed in 1962 to honor the benefaction of the Gustav Wurzweiler Foundation.

No Fallout Peril To United States Seen From Recent Chinese N-Test

WASHINGON (AP) — Small radioactive clouds created by China's recent nuclear explosion will continue floating over the United States through Saturday, the Environmental Protection Agency says.

The agency stressed Tuesday that the clouds are not expected to pose any health hazard.

The breakup of the radioactive mass into smaller units results from the relatively low altitude of the radioactive mass. The clouds are carried by winds at altitudes above 20,000 feet, the agency said.

The lone radioactive cloud created by China's nuclear blast last September traveled at altitudes above 30,000 feet. But officials say that strong low-level winds fractured the cloud from the March 14 blast, breaking it into "patches" which travel at different speeds and different altitudes.

As a result, the agency said, "no single trajectory of the debris path would give the true picture."

The leading edge of the clouds arrived over Alaska, western Canada and the Pacific Northwest Sunday night and crossed the United States on Tuesday.

"Debris traveling across the Pacific Ocean at lower altitudes could result in very small increases in radioactivity over the United States during the next week or longer," the agency said.

The breakup also is expected to lower radiation concentrations found as a result of the blast.

"Radioactivity concentrations in the air and in precipitation are expected to be lower than those measured following the Chinese low-yield nuclear test of September 1977," the EPA said.

The September blast was described as a 20-kiloton explosion. The March explosion was described as "less than 20 kilotons."

The EPA has activated its air and water radiation monitoring network, but no contamination has been found. Small amounts of radioactive debris may have fallen on parts of the Pacific Northwest, Alaska and the eastern half of the United States as a result of recent thundershowers.

However, Deputy Administrator Barbara Blum said, "We do not anticipate any cause for concern during passage of contaminated air over the United States."

House Votes To Extend Debt Ceiling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to extend the present $752 billion national debt ceiling four months past March 31, when the government's extra borrowing authority is due to expire.

The extension to Aug. 1 was approved on a 233-172 vote and sent to the Senate for expected quick action before Congress starts its Easter recess running until April 3, three days past the expiration of the current debt ceiling.

There is a permanent $400 billion lid on how far the government can go into debt. A total of $352 billion has been added to that base over the years through periodic resolutions which have to be extended annually.

The administration estimates the debt will total $774 billion by the end of this year, and the limit thus would have to extended at least over that amount.

The House earlier this month defeated a bill to increase the temporary debt level by $72 billion and extend it for one year through March 31, 1979. Opponents complained of a sharp boost in the debt level.

The House Ways and Means Committee revamped that defeated measure to provide a simple four-month extension with no change in the level.

"The Treasury Department said revenues are still exceeding outlays and the government can continue to operate during that time at the present level," said Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., committee chairman and manager of the bill.

"It would be interesting if we turned this one down too and shake treasury's cookie jar and see how many more billions of taxpayer dollars could be saved," commented Rep. William Ketchum, D-Calif.

"Maybe we could exist at this level to Sept. 31," suggested Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif. "The administration is constantly finding money that it isn't spending."

But Ullman said failure to extend the ceiling beyond March 31 "would terminate all debt financing and put the government in the position of finding a way to pay its obligations."

AN EDITORIAL:

Inflation--Ain't Going Away

ONE OF THE more revealing nationwide surveys in months has just hit the news pages. It has to do with inflation.

Despite the fact that international events are at the boiling point in some areas, the chief worry of most Americans, the latest Louis Harris and Gallup polls show, is the continued rise in the cost of living.

An 82 to 10 per cent margin of those polled by the Harris organization, say they feel more threatened by inflation than by unemployment.

AND, EVEN MORE disconcerting, a substantial 73 percent of the population feels that a year from now things will be worse, not better, on the price picture.

Probably one of the most significant points yet raised in such a survey was almost lost in the results.

It is, of the 1,510 adults studied, a majority —given a choice of getting a pay increase "higher than the cost of living but with no assurance the cost of living was being brought under control," or a pay hike "lower than the rise in the cost of living but with some assurance the cost of living was being brought under control"—opted for the latter!

In other words, the average consumer no longer feels there is any way he can "keep up" with inflation under present conditions.

THE IMPLICATION here is important.

Although not saying so in so much plain language, backers of some sort of wage and price controls can point to the attitude as indication of support for such measures.

The problem of rapidly rising living costs has been compounded the past three months by a number of factors, including bad weather.

But the major contributor to the bad news has been a sharp boost in food costs. And the latest wholesale indicators leave little doubt but that new hikes at the retail counter are in order.

WHAT MAKES this ironic is that in the midst of rising food costs, the American farmer is waging a campaign for higher farm prices, rightly claiming that the producer is getting little of the increase in food costs.

Thus far, the Carter Administration has not come up with any definitive plan to combat the new inflationary spiral. Currently, the inflation rate is running at about a 13.1 per cent annual ratio, far above the 6 per cent "tolerable" level which President Carter pledged would be his goal.

There is still time to combat the problem. But, as long as the administration approves continued unbridled federal spending—such as for government guaranteed jobs—and aids in inflationary-producing labor contracts, then the consumers' fears are justified.

Candidate Carter's campaign pledge may well haunt him. Unfortunately, it will do more than that to millions of wage earners.

AN EDITORIAL:

French Signal Right Turn

THE DECISIVE rejection by French voters of the power bid by the Socialists and Communists may prove to be one of the major developments of the year for Europe, as well as the U.S.

By turning away, at least for the moment, from what many feared was a broad-based swing to the left, French citizens in record numbers opted for a continuation of current policies.

Those include another five years of government-directed capitalism and bullish foreign policy, which it has had since Charles de Gaulle returned to power in 1958.

IT ALSO MEANS that, also for the time being, that efforts by the Socialists and Communists to make sweeping changes in French society were too much for the average Frenchman.

With 85 percent of the nation's 30 million qualified voters going to the polls, the results left President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's center-right coalition with a majority of 85 seats in the National Assembly.

In effect, France has said no to more nationalization of business, greater social benefits for workers and higher taxes for the rich.

FOR U.S. LEADERS, the vote means that the immediate threat of a Communist-Socialist coalition in NATO has been blunted.

In giving lie to pre-election polls that France would turn to the left, the voters voiced their apparent fears that the nation's economic and social structure would be too radically changed.

Actually, the popular vote itself was not as decisive as the National Assembly seat division would indicate. With most votes counted, government candidates chalked up a 50.6 percent margin, while the leftists had 49.4 percent.

IT IS THOSE sobering figures, plus the threat of leftist union work stoppages and possible terrorist activities, that mute the election results.

Any downturn in the economy or unpopular decision in foreign affairs could swing things in the other direction.

The fact is that for the time being, the majority of French voters are not "buying" the far out pie-in-the-sky promises of the Socialists and Communists. And that is a plus point. But, the two leftist forces are still to be reckoned with, not only in France but Italy as well.

ART BUCHWALD:

Miners Can't Dig It Unless You Say 'No'

WASHINGTON—We've been seeing an awful lot of miners on television these nights.

Without taking sides in the dispute, the one thing that comes across is that they're a tough breed and very free spirits.

They don't like to be pushed around by anybody, including the government, the courts, the President of the United States or their own union leaders.

If anyone orders them to do anything, they have no hesitation in telling them to "Stuff it."

It is for this reason that I do not believe invoking the Taft Hartley Act makes any sense in getting the coal miners working again.

It was written to give everyone a cooling-off period in a major labor dispute.

But in the case of the coal miners it's made them hotter than ever, and more determined to hold out against the mine operators.

I BELIEVE President Carter would be much further ahead of the game right now if he had gone on television last Thursday and announced that during the Taft Hartley period no miners would be permitted to go back to work.

He should have said that, as President of the United States, he would see to it that not one ton of coal left any shaft of a union-operated mine, even if he had to use troops.

He also might have said that if the miners attempted to go to work without a contract, he would fine the unions $10,000 a day and ask the courts to hold them in contempt.

Can you just see what would have happened if Carter had said that?

The miners would have been in high dudgeon.

THEY WOULD HAVE met in their union halls where their leaders would have broken the news to them.

"Carter says we can't mine coal unless we have a contract.

"Down with Carter."

"He says he's going to use the Taft Hartley Act to keep us out of the mines instead of going down into them."

"No President of the United States is going to tell us when we can or cannot mine coal. If we want to mine it, we'll mine."

"He says he'll use troops and federal marshals to keep us out."

"Let him try it. We'll break their heads with our pick axes if they won't let us down in the shafts."

"WE'RE SICK AND tired of the government telling us what's good for us. If they don't want us to mine, we'll dig out so much coal they'll choke on it."

"They'll have to build 50 new railroads to haul it all away."

"We'll dump 300 tons on the White House lawn."

"Suppose our union president, Arnold Miller, says we can't go into the mines?"

"Then we'll dump him on the White House lawn with the coal."

"All right then, are we agreed that if the court upholds the President and says we can't mine coal, we all go back to the pits?"

"WE'RE READY now, even before the court acts. Let's go into the mines and show them who is really running this country."

"Any guy who refuses to mine coal gets his tires blown out."

"Are we going back into the mines?"

"YESSSSSS!"

"When?"

"NOWWWWWW!"

"Shout it so they can hear in the Oval Office!"

"NOWWWWWW!"

That's what President Carter should have done. But his problem is he doesn't watch enough television.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

What Price, Loyalty?

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—While Dr. Mark A. Siegel's split with President Carter's even-handed Mideast policy was probably inevitable, a troubling question persists:

Why must this talented young man now be entirely lost to a beleaguered White House in desperate need of talent?

The indistinct answers probe into murky corners of life in the Carter administration: continued suspicion of outsiders by the President's campaign operatives; an ambiguous role played by Vice President Walter Mondale's office; the Democratic party's old "regulars" vs. "reformers" feuding carried on within the walls of the White House.

Wholly apart from the Mideast, Siegel's loss ought to be cause for White House mourning; instead, the enemies he has there have been congratulating themselves that the wicked witch is dead.

That is ironic because Siegel has been more devoted to Jimmy Carter's real political interests than some of Siegel's foes on the Vice President's staff.

So, a few thoughtful Carter insiders, while disagreeing with Siegel's emotional Mideast position, see in his departure a poor reward for loyalty.

BUT UNFOUNDED suspicion about Siegel's loyalty has plagued him since Jan. 21, 1977, when he entered the White House as an assistant to Hamilton Jordan.

As executive director at the Democratic National Committee, Siegel had been part of the Washington establishment, a key strategist for the party "regulars," and a protege of Hubert Humphrey's who urged Humphrey to run against Carter in 1976.

Nor was that all. Siegel knew entirely too many reporters, nearly as bad a stigma at the White House now as in Nixon days. Press secretary Jody Powell unjustly suspected Siegel as a source of embarrassing leaks.

Carter campaign veterans, led by appointments secretary Tim Kraft, refused to accept him.

EARLY LAST YEAR, a reporter who had written critically of the Carter administration (and had not seen Siegel in weeks) bumped into Kraft in a corridor of the Executive Office Building next to the White House.

"Can't you find Mark Siegel's office?" Kraft asked sarcastically.

Like Nixonian predecessors, Siegel feared being seen in restaurants with newsmen not on the Carter friends list.

In truth, Siegel was scrupulously loyal to the President in word and deed.

Furthermore, his political contacts were a rare and essential commodity in the Carter White House—an under-utilized commodity.

Early in 1977, Siegel was assigned the secondary and frustrating task of shepherding the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) through state legislatures.

Gradually, however, he grew closer to Jordan, who convinced Powell of his dependability.

Siegel was given the task of protecting the President's interests at the Democratic National Committee.

THEY NEEDED protection because of the unfortunate choice as Democratic national chairman of former Gov. Kenneth Curtis of Maine, who viewed big-time party politics as a New England town meeting.

This brought Siegel into confrontation with Richard Moe, the Vice President's formidable assistant and an ally of the national committee's "reform" element.

While Siegel was carrying out Jordan's desire for rules changes to make more difficult a 1980 insurgent challenge against Carter, Moe was sympathizing with "reformers" and Chairman Curtis in their crusade for internal democracy within the party.

Curtis was eased out as national chairman, but it was a pyrrhic victory for Siegel.

Angry "reform" members of the national committee were placated by Moe's assurances that Siegel no longer would handle party affairs for the White House.

SIEGEL WAS delighted last autumn when he became White House emissary to the American Jewish community.

In fact, however, considering Carter's courageous peace policy in the Mideast and Siegel's sincere personal commitment to Zionism, trouble was inevitable.

When Siegel went to Jordan March 1 and told him he could no longer defend the Carter Mideast policy to the Jewish community, his intent was to stay on at the White House.

Siegel's enemies are spreading the word that Jordan and the President wanted him out entirely. Siegel declares unequivocally that the decision to resign was entirely his own.

Assuming that Siegel jumped instead of being pushed does not change matters much. The political background doomed Siegel once he opposed the President on the Mideast.

The immediate reward for one year's loyal service in a variety of unpleasant tasks was Carter's uncongenial reference to him over national television as "an employe."

Among some thoughtful souls at the White House, that is cause for sadness and concern.

ANDREW TULLY:

Snow Is No Good

WASHINGTON—As this is written, the first day of spring is just around the corner. Therefore, Washingtonians are bracing themselves for the next snowstorm.

For Washington, this has been another hard winter. It has had 10 snowstorms that buried the city under 22.6 inches of the white stuff. Forecasts of an inch set officials to talking about "snow emergency plans." Any amount over two inches is a disaster.

Under such circumstances, the federal bureaucrat who makes it to work through the falling flakes is hailed as a hero. Government workers are let off early to ensure that they do not disappear under a two-inch drift on their way home.

A MOVING automobile is everybody's enemy, including its driver's. Streets covered with a fine sprinkling of snow are clogged with skidding cars, all fenders bent, all occupants panic stricken.

Osteopaths grow richer treating limbs broken in falls on sidewalks that never feel the rasping caress of a shovel. A bus that is only an hour late gets a medal and a two-day rest in the garage.

Taxicabs disappear; 165 of them were found in Miami in January. There is a black market in rock salt and sand.

Weather forecasters don false beards and slink about furtively to escape the wrath of a citizenry maddened by their wrong guesses. What passes for the city's snow removal agency takes its phones off their hooks.

BREAKFAST IS sheer hell. The morning newspaper is either late or never arrives. One customer called to complain and was told by the circulation department the paper had been duly delivered. "Go look again for it," he was told.

As any ragged reporter can affirm, a newspaper's business office is always right. After a two-hour hunt, the paper was found under a pile of snow beneath the customer's car in the driveway.

Homes with school children especially are wracked with dissent, the air filled with strident voices. That's because classes are cancelled almost from the very moment the first flake falls.

Most parents are ordered to listen to their radios for news of closings. One family is relatively lucky; the school its son attends strongarms a responsible group of parents to phone the bad news to the rest of us. But must they call at 6:15? Why not 7:05?

A FRIEND WHO is headmaster of a private school in Philadelphia announced in February there would be no more snow closings. If there were any justice in politics, Tom Wood would be elected President.

He has saved innumerable marriages threatened by the catastrophic effect of having kids underfoot when they should be harrassing their teachers at a safe distance from home.

This is March and the sidewalk must be shovelled, again. Once more the household head must venture forth on slippery streets, pitting his expertise against other cars, all apparently driven by newly-arrived immigrants from the Sahara Desert. Come, hot, steamy, polluted Fourth of July!

Hardly a day passes but the mail brings word that Joe So And So has been named to head up the Amalgamated Apple Auctioneers for This or That candidate. Frankly, we didn't know there were so many organizations or that they are so politically active.

Too, we wonder if the rank and file of Amalgamated and Woodcarvers Arise agreed to have Joe So and Tom Thumb Whittle speak up for them. And, does the fact that Joe So and Tom Thumb support Old Whatsis Name make any difference to the voters?

WHILE AGREEING that a man, or woman, is known by his or her friends and backers, sometimes they also are known by their enemies.

And in some instances, the latter is a better recommendation than the former!

Perhaps it is impossible, but we would like to see more political campaigns run on Issues rather than Personalities. Of course, a man's past record, and his associates, even his "personality" do tell us something. But, not enough.

While the old-fashioned debate, unfortunately, may be a thing of the past, we would like to hear more candidates say: "This is how I stand on..." and be specific. Far too many candidates try to be "all things to all people." And get away with it.

Sooner or later, we might start getting down to the nitty-gritty. That way, we could go back to The Man Who later, instead of the guy who headed up Amalgamated Apples and the Woodcarvers for an explanation of what happened to all those campaign promises!

Finally, Ole Rip came back carrying a big stick and shaking his head from side to side. "See," the skeptic said, "I knew he couldn't count. He's just been lucky."

ACCORDING TO one of The A-J's Washington correspondents, the government is taking what it hopes is a step in its efforts to halt the illegal alien invasion.

It is making it harder to get a Social Security card.

Through the years, the Social Security card has become sort of an unofficial national identity card. Social Security numbers wind up on just about every computer list there is today, from federal income tax returns to driver license registrations and some store charge accounts.

For aliens, a Social Security card also serves as a kind of work permit and, up until now, was obtainable virtually for the asking.

THIS IS no longer the case.

To prevent "the possible misuse of the Social Security card as an indicator of unlawful status in the United States," the Department of Health, Education and Welfare henceforth is requiring applicants to submit "documentary" evidence of age, identity and citizenship or alien status.

This alone won't solve the illegal alien problem. There is an efficient forged document industry with branch offices along the U.S.-Mexican border, capable of providing an illegal immigrant with anything he might need, our correspondent notes.

Regardless, the government's move is a needed one. It makes no sense to continue a system that makes it so easy for an illegal alien to obtain a Social Security card, and also provide some employers with a ready excuse that they had no way of knowing a worker was in the U.S. under false pretenses.

Actually, knowledgeable observers view the illegal alien problem as one of the gravest now facing the nation, and particularly Texas.

President Carter has suggested amnesty for those now in the U.S. after a certain period. Despite the humanitarian aspects, the problem is complex. Living conditions south of the border, plus protection for those on this side of it is at the crux of the issue. Until we face this double barreled challenge, the problem—and the danger —grows.

Realize there may be a psychological wrinkle here, too, though. Clearly, the chronic job switcher is more apt to be the chronic wife switcher, what?

Determined Dog Makes Long Trek

LAKE CARMEL, N.Y. (AP) — To err is human, but even animals make mistakes when they show they have minds of their own. Such was the case of Buddy, a 7-year-old collie-shepherd who apparently walked more than 1,000 miles trying to find his master.

Buddy was found last December in Putnam County apparently on his way from Grand Prairie, Texas, to Shaftesbury, Vt., according to Sari Whalen of the Putnam County Humane Society.

Mrs. Whalen said Buddy's owner, Elden Hopperstad, 20, had moved from Vermont to attend Bible school in Texas on October 28, 1977, and had left Buddy alone in his new home on that first night in Texas. The dog, apparently shaken up, escaped from the house and took off for Vermont.

He was found, healthy and fed, almost two months later, in Putnam County, which Mrs. Whalen says indicates he was not just wandering aimlessly but somehow knew in which direction to travel to get back to Vermont. She could not explain Buddy's sense of direction, but she said it wasn't an isolated case.

"This happens mostly with cats," she said. "They're not looking for food. It's something else — familiar surroundings."

Buddy was spotted on Dec. 16 by a woman in Garrison who called the Putnam Humane Society and said she had a dog bearing a Vermont license tags. Before the Society could pick him up, Buddy had taken off again and was next seen five days later by a family in Wappingers Falls, 20 miles north of Garrison.

This time, Mrs. Whalen told the finders to tie up the dog, and he was taken to the society's shelter in Lake Carmel, where he was placed in a pen with a six-foot fence. But even that didn't stop Buddy's trek to Vermont, she said. He jumped the fence.

"He was a dog who was really determined," she said. "He was going somewhere."

After another five days, the same family in Wappingers Falls found Buddy again, possibly because a young man in the family resembled Hopperstad, Mrs. Whalen said.

Through the dog tags, Humane Society officials found Hopperstad's mother in North Haven, Conn. Mrs. Hopperstad alerted her son, who could not afford the trip to pick up Buddy. The Humane Society arranged to ship the dog on a free plane ride on Braniff International Airlines Jan. 5.

Dying Deputy's Unarmed Wife Captures Suspect

GORMAN, Calif. (AP) — It was a drama that could have been taken from a television western. A deputy sheriff is shot in a lonely outpost in the Tehachapi Mountains, two young sons rush to the rescue but find him dying and an unarmed wife somehow manages to coax the suspect into a cell.

Authorities were still piecing together what happened Sunday night in Deputy Arthur Pelino's office, 70 miles north of Los Angeles. But indications were that Pelino and a man he arrested earlier that night were alone when a struggle took place and shots rang out.

Johnny Pelino, 8, and his brother, Paul, 14, bolted into the office from the deputy's adjacent three-bedroom ranch house. They found their father dying.

Paul and Johnny went for their mother, Pat. The 47-year-old woman didn't take time to find a weapon. She hurried to her husband's side but it was too late.

Deputies said Pelino, 51 and a 19-year veteran of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, was felled by repeated shots from his own gun. The county coroner's office said Pelino was dead at the scene but would not say how many times Pelino was shot or where the bullets struck him.

Somehow — and even Mrs. Pelino says she doesn't remember exactly — the mother of six got Terry Lynn Zachery, 30, behind bars, sheriff's spokesmen said.

"She just coaxed him into the area of the booking cage, then pushed him inside and was able to slam the door on him," said Deputy Jim Digiovanna, a department spokesman in Los Angeles.

Zachery of North Hollywood was booked for investigation of murder.

Mrs. Pelino was said to have taken the boys to the zoo to get away from Gorman and was not available for interviews Tuesday.

Deputy Carl Walper, Pelino's interim replacement, said Pelino had answered a disturbance call at the Go Lo service station in Gorman earlier Sunday night.

John Inch, an attendant, said, "I called Art and told him this man had come into the station and started yelling wildly at me and my partner."

"I told Art the guy seemed crazy like he was out of his mind on dope or something," Inch said.

Pelino determined there were no outstanding warrants against Zachery before bringing him back to the office and apparently "was having no trouble with him," Walper said. "In fact, he had the guy drive his own car and followed him back to the station," he said.

But inside the booking office the trouble began.

"It seems there was some type of a struggle and he was able to get the gun away from Deputy Pelino," Digiovanna said.

With Zachery in the cage, Mrs. Pelino put out a radio call to the Santa Clarita sheriff's substation, where her husband had been assigned before being transferred eight months ago to Gorman. The California Highway Patrol heard the call and got there first, with the Santa Clarita deputies arriving soon after.

Smuggling End Objective Of Cigarette Tax Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Ways and Means subcommittee considered a bill Tuesday that would equalize state taxes on cigarettes in an effort to stop cigarette smuggling from low tax to high tax states.

Donald C. Lubick of the Treasury Department testified that the federal tax equalization approach is "the most efficient and effective" way to stop smuggling.

But Lubick, acting assistant secretary for tax policy, said his department is not prepared to support any such measure because of the constitutional question of whether the federal government can take over the rights of states to levy taxes.

The subcommittee on miscellaneous revenues measures is mulling several proposed bills that would attempt to stop smugglers, but Rep. Richard T. Schulze, R-Pa., said some states may be responsible for the smuggling problem. He said repeatedly increasing state cigarette taxes creates "an atmosphere for lucrative crime."

He said if the federal government requires equal taxes on cigarettes then maybe it should do the same for liquor. "I don't know where we draw the line," he said.

Under a bill sponsored by Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., an additional 14 cent federal tax would be imposed on each pack of cigarettes with the money going into a trust fund for payment back to states that elect to participate in the program.

States participating in the program would have to reduce their cigarette taxes to no more than 3 cents a pack and eliminate all city cigarette taxes. Federal tax is now 8 cents a pack.

Louis H. Ehrlich Jr., speaking for the National Association of Tobacco Distributors, opposed the tax bills, citing the states' rights argument. He said under the Jones proposal, for example, the states are prevented from raising or lowering cigarette taxes in response to its fiscal needs.

"It is locked into a 3 cent tax rate, or less, no matter how local conditions may be altered or changed," argued Ehrlich.

Toymakers' Byword: Successful Venture Deserves Repeating

DALLAS (AP) — If a pink "Lolly" doll sold well last year, it will be back again this year with a blue "Cholly" companion.

The motto of the toy industry for 1978, as gathered from the 19th annual Dallas toy show, would appear to be: take a success and ride with it for everything it's worth.

An O.J. Simpson doll has rushed for as many dollars in the toy stores as "The Juice" has rushed for yards on the gridiron. It will still be in stock next Christmas, with the addition of a similarly-packaged Julius "Dr. J" Erving doll for basketball fans.

The toy buyers of the Southwest are out in force for the semi-annual event, which runs through Thursday. The show is the first and by some accounts the largest of the regional trade shows that follow New York's February toy fair.

Dave Balthrop, a Hasbro Industries representative, said, "Lead time is tremendously long in toys." The year ends in October, when planning starts for the next Christmas.

A "lift and load" depot did well for one manufacturer last year. An elaborate "lift and load" railroad system is displayed next to it this year.

One specialist in home pinball machines proudly demonstrated his computerized model that keeps four scores in its memory at a time, gives a rundown of the competition after each player finishes, offers double-play bonuses and flashes "tilt" in digital letters.

"They've got a new one coming out," he said. "It has a triple-play bonus. The kicker is it plays a rock and roll song instead of the sound ping-ping-ping of the ball."

UNOBTAINABLE RESERVE

Oil shale in the United States may hold 40 gallons of petroleum to a ton of rock but no one yet knows how to extract it economically or without ruining thousands of square miles of the western U.S. by strip mining. The oil shale holds many times the known American oil reserves of 45.4 billion barrels.

Senator's Divorced Wife Considering Bid For House Seat

ATLANTA (AP) — Would Georgians accept two Talmadges in Congress? wonders Betty Talmadge, who last year was divorced from Sen. Herman Talmadge.

Mrs. Talmadge, 54, told a woman's group Monday night that she would "like to try" to become a candidate for the 6th District congressional seat being vacated by the retirement of Rep. John Flynt of Griffin.

But, she said, her decision hinges on financial support, the political effects of her recent divorce and the public's attitude toward having two Talmadges in Washington.

She said her Aunt Lilly responded to the idea, by saying: "'Now Betty, I don't know if people will want to send two from the same family to Washington."

Asked if she would consider running against her ex-husband, Mrs. Talmadge replied: "Of course not."

Europe's Anti-Terrorist Experts Enter Moro Case

ROME (AP) — A new breed of European cloak and dagger agent has emerged in the hunt for Aldo Moro's kidnappers, underlining a commitment to international cooperation in the war against terrorism and the belief that it cannot be waged by one country alone.

The possibility of a foreign connection in former Premier Moro's abduction has brought in foreign anti-terrorist experts schooled in computers as well as sophisticated weaponry.

Britain dispatched two officers to Italy from the counter-insurgency army unit, the Special Air Services, which has battled terrorism and guerrillas in Europe, Africa and the Far East in recent years.

These SAS men, requested by West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, accompanied the German team that stormed the hijacked Lufthansa airliner in Mogadishu, Somalia, in October and supplied special stun grenades used to immobilize the gunmen before they could shoot their hostages. Last summer, SAS officers helped Dutch authorities plan an assault by marines to free hostages held by Moluccan terrorists.

In the Moro hunt, Germany has sent agents of the federal criminal office which has been seeking the terrorists in last year's slaying of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer. The kidnapping of Moro in a street ambush last Thursday by gunmen who killed his five bodyguards was nearly identical in execution to Schleyer's abduction by members of the Baader-Meinhof group.

Bildzeitung, West Germany's largest newspaper, reported Tuesday that a German doctor convicted of helping criminals may be using drugs to keep Moro under sedation in a "peoples prison" in Italy. The newspaper quoted officials in Rome as saying Dr. Ekkehard von Seckendorff, 37, had been seen in the capital.

Von Seckendorff was convicted in 1974 of supporting a criminal organization and received a one-year suspended sentence. Soon afterward, he disappeared and was believed to have joined the underground, the paper said.

Practical cooperation between Italy and West Germany was worked out during a visit to Bonn in January by Italian Defense Minister Francesco Cossiga.

Reporting to Parliament several weeks before the visit, Cossiga said "the international ties ... of terrorism are clear" and therefore the battle could not be handled as one state's affair. He said Italy was collaborating with member countries of the European Common Market and with "other friendly allied countries."

The full extent of West German cooperation has not been disclosed, but Italian officials said a computer hookup with the federal criminal office in Wiesbaden has been set up enabling Italy to make use of German files on known terrorists, their methods of operation and to help trace weapons.

Moro's kidnap was staged by the Red Brigades, a Marxist urban guerrilla group blamed for industrial sabotage, abductions and murders over the past eight years. While no clear-cut link between the Red Brigades and foreign groups has been established, police are investigating a number of possible connections.

Italian newspapers report that the Red Army Faction of the Baader-Meinhof group may have bought arms in Aosta, in northern Italy near the French border, while the Red Brigades are believed to have offered passports and other documents and "safe houses" to the German terrorists.

The foreign agents are working out of the Viminale Palace, the headquarters of Italy's Interior Ministry in downtown Rome.

U.S. officials said American agents haven't entered the case because no request has been made.

Several newspapers here reported a possible "Libyan connection" and that Israel's crack secret service has joined the manhunt, but the Israel Embassy denied any of its agents are involved.

Kidnapping Penalty Set By Italians

ROME (AP) — The Italian government decreed a penalty of mandatory life imprisonment for killer kidnappers Tuesday in a bid to stem terrorism after the abduction of former Premier Aldo Moro by the Red Brigades.

The cabinet set the term at 30 years if the victim is not killed.

The old penalties for all kidnappers ranged from 20 years to life in prison at the discretion of the judge.

The government is considering increasing the police force and police powers because of spreading urban terrorism.

Proposals to reintroduce the death penalty and impose martial law and curfews drew oppositon from leftists now supporting the Christian Democrat government.

Moro, 61, premier five times since 1963 and Italy's most influential politician, was kidnapped in Rome last Thursday by 12 guerrillas who killed his five bodyguards.

In Turin, defiant Red Brigade leader Renato Curcio and 11 members of the band, on trial on charges of attempting to topple the state through violence, refused to leave jail Tuesday, while in the tension-filled courtroom their lawyers moved to stop the trial.

The 12 sent their three fellow defendants to court as "observers."

Twelve of the 20 court-appointed defense lawyers sought a halt to the trial pending a decision on demands by the defendants, who could get 20 years in prison, to defend themselves.

The move is opposed by the prosecutor and the eight other lawyers who contend the defendants should not be allowed "to manage the trial by themselves."

A decision is expected Wednesday.

The trial has been halted twice in the past two years because of assassinations and threats to jurors.

It resumed Monday in chaos as the defendants loudly boasted that Moro would get a "people's trial" from their comrades.

Police and soldiers fanned out along the coastline west of here Tuesday, conducting house-to-house searches for Moro.

Other searches continued in the ancient hilltop town of Spoleto about 60 miles northeast of Rome and in the Amiata Mountains south of Florence. But an anti-terrorist officer said, "We still stand at point zero."

Police said they still thought Moro was in Rome, but started the search south of Florence when they were tipped that some Red Brigades, were hiding in a cave there.

The cave was empty but one wall was painted with the terrorist band's name and their symbol, a five-pointed star.

Police also intensified roadblocks on the Via Aurelia, the westbound highway connecting Rome to the coast.

Police said they have found three cars used in the kidnapping on the same street on different days. There was newspaper speculation that the cars were left there to mock police.

EARTH HEAT

Geothermal energy literally means "earth-heat" energy, and geothermal areas are those areas where the heat is great enough and close enough to the surface to provide a heat source. In addition, the heat source must be in or near an area of permeable rocks which contain enough water to transfer the heat to the surface — either along fractures or through drill holes.

North-South Road Link Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate subcommittee was urged Tuesday to approve completion of a north-south highway link from Canada to Mexico.

Merle M. Miller of Belleville, Kan., president of the Pan American Highway Association, said there are five interstate highways running east and west across the United States, "but we have no direct routes running north and south ...."

A 300-mile-long interstate highway should be built between Salina, Kan., and Watertown, S.D., to complete the north-south route, Miller told the Senate Public Works transportation subcommittee.

"There is a great need to complete this highway that would span the North American continent," he testified. "It is important not only to tourism but to industry and the economy of this nation."

While neglecting to complete its own north-south route, Miller said, the United States has provided $200 million to help Central and South American nations build their own portion of the Pan Am Highway.

The alternative from Salina northward, U.S. Route 81, is heavily used by truck traffic and "has become a death trap for the unwary," Miller contended.

Flynt Experiences Comfortable Night

ATLANTA (AP) — Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt spent his first full day off a mechanical respirator Tuesday after having a "comfortable night," a spokesman at Emory University Hospital said.

Flynt, who was shot March 6 in Lawrenceville, Ga., during a break in his trial on charges of distributing obscene material, was listed in serious condition.

The hospital said reports on Flynt's condition would be made each morning instead of twice a day as previously.

The hospital said Flynt, whose legs are paralyzed, showed improvement in lung functions and his abdominal wounds continued to heal.

Flynt was placed on the respirator last week to help him breathe as he fought off pneumonia. He was removed from the respirator Monday afternoon.

Flynt's local attorney, Gene Reeves Jr., who was shot at the same time, remained in guarded condition at a Lawrenceville hospital.

Tulsa Zoo Lions To Get New Homes

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Two of the Tulsa zoo lions that haven't had enough room are headed for new homes at Dallas and the third may go to South America.

Three weeks ago officials of the Mohawk Zoo said they might have to put the three to death because new homes could not be found. They said the lions had reached the age they were becoming aggressive to each other and no room was available at the zoo to separate them.

Efforts to give them away had been fruitless previously.

Two of the lions were being shipped today to Lion Country Safari near Dallas where they will live with other lions. They were being accompanied by Dr. Bill Russell, zoo veterinarian, who had said they were deteriorating because they were unable at the Tulsa zoo to carry out their natural sexual and territorial inclinations.

The third lion will remain at the Tulsa zoo pending final acceptance by officials of the La Paz, Colombia, zoo.

Actor Wants Dogs, Cats To Be Equals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dogs should have the same rights as cats, according to actor David Madden, who was fined $50 for not licensing his poodles.

Madden, who played the business manager on "The Partridge Family" television series, will appeal the fine "on the constitutional issue of equal protection," his attorney, Bruce Wolfe, said. Judge Robert Devich stayed the fine Monday pending the appeal.

Political Forum Held In Lynn County

A-J Correspondent

TAHOKA — The plight of the farmer, education and inflation were aired as priority problems during Monday night's political forum here, featuring candidates for the 28th State Senatorial seat and for the 17th District U.S. Congressional seat.

Approximately 50 persons turned out for the event, which was held in the high school auditorium. Each candidate was alloted 10 minutes to speak during the forum, sponsored by the Lynn County Farm Bureau.

The state senatorial candidates, vying for the seat now held by Kent Hance, spoke first. Hance is running for the 19th Congressional seat now held by George Mahon.

Joe Robbins, the lone Republican in the race, said that he felt that the minimum foundation program in the public schools should be financed 100 percent by the state, instead of the current 80 percent by the state and 20 percent by the community.

"We must maintain local control of our schools and give more emphasis to vocational " Democrat Jesse George said.

Concerning teacher salaries, all the candidates maintained that they must be increased to keep good teachers in the schools.

On the farm issue, E.L. Short of Tahoka said that he would strive to bring the leaders of Texas agricultural organizations together to better the interests of farmers.

"And I wouldn't wait until Janurary to begin working on legislation. I would begin working immediately," Short added.

Delwin Jones, along with Short, George and Robbins, emphasized their past service in the state legislature, with Jones saying that he would dedicate himself to killing bills which are not needed.

On other issues, Morris Turner felt a closer relationship was needed between the public and politicians. "Basically, at present, the public tends to mistrust politicains," he maintained.

While Don Workman urged that he would "work" to get rid of federal red tape.

All the state senate hopefuls said they would work to give the senior citizens a break when it comes to property taxes.

Six of the eight candidates for the 17th District Congressional seat, which is being vacated by Omar Burleson, spoke at the forum. All are Democrats.

Concerning the farmer's plight, Charles Stenholm of Stamford said, "If we had had a fair price for our products in 1977, we would have had an additional $337 million dollars in spendable income throughout the 17th district. But, the farmers are being penalized for doing a good job."

He emphasized that "we must tow our own row," adding that the 17th district is one of the few in the state that is still a basically rural district.

Jim Snowden of Tye and formerly of Tahoka said that he was not for 100 percent parity but for 130 percent parity for the farmers.

"But, I feel that the number one issue in this campaign is the moral decay in government," he added.

Crews McCullough of Weatherford said that he felt very close to the farmers problems since "I'm a farmer-rancher myself."

"But, I think the real issue of the campaign is that we need good, honest representation," he said.

While Abilene hopeful Fike Godfrey maintained that the was the only one who has a long-range solution to the farmer-rancher problem. However, he didn't elaborate on the plan, saying that local newspapers should have a copy of his plan.

Godfrey said that he would also seek a free enterprise system.

Commons Panel Urges British Immigration Curbs

LONDON (AP) — An influential Parliament committee Tuesday called on Britain's Labor government to make drastic cuts in immigration and tighten control of immigrants once they enter Britain.

The report by the House of Commons Select Committee on Race Relations and Immigration was certain to fuel a growing political controversy over non-white immigration. It brought immediate protests from white liberals and immigrant groups.

The committee said Britain must not continue to allow the high level of non-white immigration of recent years, which has stirred mounting racial tension in this country.

However, the panel said, "Nothing in this report should give rise to fear in anyone, irrespective of race, color or creed, who has lawfully settled in the United Kingdom. We have patiently sought not to aggravate but to reconcile differences."

Britain should not go back on pledges under which Commonwealth citizens, especially those holding British passports, can come to this country to settle, the report said.

Lord Avebury, spokesman on immigration for the ceptrist Liberal Party, said the report was, "a thoroughly unhelpful document pandering to the worst elements of society which have been trying to whip up hysteria about the trickle of immigrants now arriving in Britain."

Britain has an estimated 1.9 million non-whites, including an estimated 100,000 illegal immigrants.

Although they make up less than 3 percent of the nation's 56 million population, they have become the focus of mounting political opposition and sporadic violence by right wingers opposed to non-white immigration. Opposition primarily is based on economic grounds, much of it from those who claim they take jobs away from native Britons.

The committee report, first of its kind, said the government should make it "unequivocally clear" the current flow of dependants of immigrants coming to Britain should be drastically limited. Critics of immigration law claim this aspect is being widely abused.

"In recent years all over the world there has been an increased tendency for nations to restrict the entry or continued stay of immigrants on grounds of national economic interest or to protect the interests of their own people," the report said.

The report urged the government to "make it unequivocally clear that in the forseeable future there will be no further primary immigration and that such immigration will only be allowed in exceptional individual circumstances."

Alex Lyon, a former Laborite Home Office minister in charge of race relations who was fired for feuding with Prime Minister James Callaghan over immigration policy, said the committee's proposals for internal controls on immigrants might mean identity cards, arbitrary police checks and other actions "wholly alien" to Britain.

The Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants called the report "a gift for racialists." The report by the 10-man committee — five Laborite legislators and five opposition Conservatives — was unanimous and is not binding on Callaghan's government.

However, the committee's views carry considerable weight and with a general election widely predicted for October in which immigration will be a key issue, the government could make some changes in immigration policy.

Callaghan reserved comment. Home Secretary Merlyn Rees, minister in charge of immigration policy, said only: "The government will continue to be guided by the need to maintain a firm and fair immigration control."

Among other recomendations in the 29-point report were a major crackdown on illegal immigration, including legal sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegals at low wages; a total immigration quota, and a deadline after which British passport holders would lose the right to settle here except in exceptional cases. Many Commonwealth citizens hold British passports, which now entitles them to live in Britain.

Oil Spill From Foundered Tanker Increasing

BREST, France (AP) — Millions more gallons of oil poured through new holes in the tanks of the supertanker Amoco Cadiz, raising doubts Tuesday that a plan to pump the shattered ship dry could ever be carried out.

The official French report Tuesday night said all the oil pollution was within three miles of the north Brittany coast and extending some 60 miles east of the wreck into the English channel to the Bay of Lannion.

With more stormy weather on the way, the situation was described as "grim" by a source close to the ship's American owners.

The tanker already has spilled between 20 million and 38 million gallons of its 55-million-gallon cargo along the northwest coast of France, according to Adm. Jacques Coulondres, commander of the anti-pollution efforts here.

Earlier reports put the cargo at nearly 58 million gallons.

A French Navy spokesman said several of the vessel's 15 tanks were breached by Tuesday's rough seas, in addition to four that had broken earlier. There was no reliable estimate how much additional oil the new breaks would release or of how much they still contained.

Next Sunday high spring tides will almost cover the wreck, forcing a halt to any pumping operations that have started by then.

American Oil Co. officials whose subsidiary owns the ship refused to agree or disagree with a claim by the German tug company that attempted to rescue the tanker. The tug company said all possible efforts had been made, but were defeated by the forces of nature.

There have been charges the towing of the disabled ship may have been delayed while the captains of the two vessels haggled over a towing price.

The Bugsier Towing Co. of Hamburg called the reports "unqualified slander" and said the tug helped the disabled ship for two hours without agreeing on a price.

Gale-force winds and waves scouring the beaches were cleaning most of the polluted coast south of the wreck but a huge oil slick was being washed onto the north Brittany coast near Roscoff at the mouth of the English Channel.

It has not been determined what effect, if any, this will have on the region's fishing industry.

Some 25 British and French vessels were spraying oil patches at sea but Coulondres said little could be done to combat the coastal pollution. Chemical dispersants used at sea are banned close in for ecological reasons.

The report said the oil slicks at sea disappeared quickly under waves.

Troops and firemen were being brought from as far as the Riviera and eastern France to help the cleanup, which now is concentrating on pumping oil from the shores into trucks and farm fertilizer trailers.

Amoco officials will say little about the circumstances of the accident. Harry Rinkema, vice president for marine transportation, said, "A great deal of studying has to be done on the weather conditions, the seamanship involved and other factors. It is very delicate from a legal standpoint."

Tourism Calendar Stresses Rodeos

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas lives up to its reputation as a cowboy state in the state highway department's April-September calendar of events.

Of the more than 900 events that are listed, more than 100 are rodeos.

There is much more, the department emphasizes, and, as examples, it cites more than 30 "cookoffs" and more than 20 "fiddlin' frolics."

The Byron Nelson Golf Classic in Dallas and the Colonial National in Fort Worth are major tournaments, the department notes, and Austin's Governor's Cup Sailing Regatta is the state's largest for fresh water yachtsmen.

The calendar is available free from the department's 11 tourist bureaus.

Clerical, Service Jobs High On Prospects List

WASHINGTON (AP) — Job prospects look great for cashiers, receptionists and secretaries in the coming years, but the outlook is less encouraging for historians, mathmeticians and school counselors, the Labor Department said Tuesday.

Potential employment in various occupations through 1985 is assessed in the newest edition of the department's Occupational Outlook Handbook.

Overall, the handbook says, the growth of the economy is expected to create 17 million new jobs by 1985. And 29 million workers will be needed to replace people who die or retire.

The massive handbook, issued every two years, describes various jobs, what qualifications are required, working conditions and earnings, job prospects and chances for advancement.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall noted that a high school education has become the minimum standard for entry into most jobs. And, he said, a four-year college education is no longer the sure ticket to a good job that it once was.

Clerical workers were cited as both the largest and fastest growing occupational group in the nation.

The handbook says jobs for service workers such as chefs, cosmetologists, guards and nurses' aides will also increase rapidly.

The handbook cited an increasing demand for medical care and security. And it said rising levels of income should cause more frequent use of restaurants, beauty salons and leisure services.

Turning to technical fields, the handbook predicts a strong demand for computer workers. And it says growing efforts in energy production, transportation and environmental protection will increase the demand for scientists, engineers and technicians.

The medical professions are expected to grow as the health industry expands, but not all professional jobs are this promising.

Teaching will continue to be overcrowded and competition is expected to intensify from the growing supply of law school graduates.

Among occupations with good growth prospects which do not require a college degree the handbook lists insulation workers, police officers, sub-professional health workers, clerical workers and repairers of a variety of products ranging from automobiles to computers.

Here is a selected list of jobs in the Occupational Outlook Handbook and the employment prospects through 1985. The number listed after each job title is the number of openings expected in that occupation in the United States each year.

Accountants: 51,500 annual openings; increase about average.

Aerospace engineers: 1,500; expected to grow more slowly than average.

Airplane mechanic: 5,200; faster than average growth, good opportunities in general aviation but keen competition for airline jobs.

Assembler: 70,000; faster than average growth in these factory jobs, but economic changes or defense spending may affect opportunities.

Automobile mechanic: 32,000; average increase, job opportunities will be plentiful.

Blue-collar workers supervisor: 79,000; average increase, keen competition for supervisory positions.

Bookkeepers: 95,000; slower than average growth due to increased use of bookkeeping machines and computers. However, job opportunities are expected to be numerous due to heavy turnover.

Carpenters: 67,000; average growth but plentiful job openings.

Cashiers: 92,000; faster than average growth but future prospects could be slowed by widespread use of computer supermarket checkouts.

Chemists: 6,300; average growth and good opportunities except at colleges and universities.

College and university teachers: 17,000; Tough competition for jobs expected with best opportunities at public schools. Persons without a doctorate will find it difficult to secure a post.

Economists: 6,400; keen competition for academic posts but good opportunities in other areas for persons with masters or doctorates.

Emergency medical technicians: 37,000; much faster than normal growth.

Flight attendants: 6,000; increasing air travel should result in more jobs, but competition may be tough.

Geologists: 2,300; faster than average growth as domestic mineral exploration increases.

Health service administrators: 16,000; faster than average growth.

Historians: 900; slow growth and strong competition, particularly for academic jobs.

Industrial machinery repairers: 30,000; much faster than normal growth with more and more machinery in service.

Kindergarten and elementary school teachers: 70,000; declining enrollments will result in ever stronger competition for jobs.

Lawyers: 23,400; faster than average growth but competition will be tough for salaried positions. Starting a practice will be risky with best chance in small towns and suburbs.

Librarians: 8,000; expected to grow but more competition also. Best prospects will be in school and public libraries away from large East and West Coast cities.

Life scientists: 12,000; faster than average growth as spending for medical research increases.

Lithographers: 1,900; faster than average growth with the increase in offset printing.

Local truck drivers: 73,000; faster than average growth with good opportunities for applicants with good driving records.

Long distance truck drivers: 15,400; slow growth with stiff competition.

Machine tool operators: 22,000; opportunities should be plentiful as metalworking industries expand.

Manufacturers' sales workers: 17,600; average increase.

Mathematicians: 1,000; slow growth in demand with strong competition for jobs, especially for teachers. Best chances will be in applied math in government or private industry.

Nursing aides, orderlies and attendants: 83,000; fast growth with most opportunities in nursing homes and other long-term care facilities.

Newspaper reporters: 2,100; slow growth and more journalism graduates are expected to result in keen competition for jobs. Best opportunities for persons with exceptional skill will be in small towns and suburbs.

Plumbers and pipefitters: 30,000; fast growth caring for air conditioners, solar heating equipment and other appliances.

Police officers: 32,500; law enforcement is getting a higher priority and openings will likely rise quickly.

Programmers: 9,700; fast growth as computer use expands.

Receptionists: 38,000; fast growth as business, professional and personal services expand.

Registered nurses: 83,000; faster than average growth with best opportunities in some southern states and inner-city locations.

Retail sales workers: 155,000; slower than normal growth but high turnover should increase opportunities.

School counselors: 1,500; expected to grow more slowly than normal because of declining school enrollments.

Secondary school teachers: 13,000; again declining enrollments will slow growth of jobs and cause keen competition. Best opportunities will be for teachers of vocational subjects.

Secretaries and stenographers: 295,000; skilled persons should find numerous opportunities but increasing use of dictation equipment may limit stenographic openings.

Social workers: 25,000; expanding health and welfare service should result in a fast growth in jobs in this area with best chances for persons with masters and doctorates.

Statisticians: 1,500; expanding use of statistics should result in good openings in this field, especially for persons combining statistics with a field of application, such as economics.

Refugee Relates Events Since Attack On Bus

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Mariam Alawiyeh, 42-year-old Lebanese grandmother, led her 21-member family on a four-day, 60-mile trek from her native village of Aitaroun near the Israeli border to a tent camp in Beirut's Municipal Stadium after the Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon. Here is her day-by-day account which begins after the Palestinian guerrilla March 11 attack on an Israeli tourist bus in which 35 persons were killed.)

By MARIAM ALAWIYEH
As Told To AP Writer Aly Mahmoud

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Wednesday, March 15: The fedayeen (Palestinian guerrillas) who pass through our village are talking about the raid in Israel. We know the Israelis will take revenge, but not in Aitaroun. There are no fedayeen there just the "young ones" (Moslem leftist gunmen). We go about our business. The tobacco grove needs tilling. At 8 a.m., when we are all in the grove, shells begin falling. We run to the house, crouch on the floor and pray.

Three frightful hours pass. Planes are roaring overhead, increasing our terror. Voices in the street are screaming: "Israelis! Israelis! The Israelis are in Aitaroun!"

Ahmed and Abed (her oldest sons, aged 24 and 22) already have left. We must get out too, while there is still time. Hashem (her husband) is in tears. We can't take all the animals with us. "We must at least take the cow," he argues. "The children need milk. The cow is like money in the bank." The cow! The cow! I argue that the cow will slow us down. But he won't change his mind. The cow must come, no matter what. We leave the horse, the donkey and the calf behind.

I lead the way, not knowing what to expect or how close the Israelis are. The going is very slow. There is the cow, our money in the bank. The Israeli planes give us no peace. We scramble for cover each time one passes overhead.

When night comes, we are exhausted. The youngsters are crying. We drop down near a big rock and, gratefully, sleep comes at once.

Thursday, March 16: We are up at 3 a.m. and set off toward Qana (a village 10 miles northwest of Aitaroun). We are going to Tyre, a Mediterranean seaport. If it is safe we may stay. If not, we will go on to Sidon. But, with the cow, we may never get there. At sun-up we milk the cow. The milk is the children's breakfast.

We pass a number of corpses. There are dead goats, too, strewn along 300 meters of road. "Cover the children's eyes," I shout. We pinch our nostrils closed. The smell of death is already strong and dizzying.

Friday, March 17: We reach Qana, finally, just before sunrise. High overhead, the Israeli jets are circling, buzzing like flies. Qana is empty except for a small group of gunmen hiding in the buildings. We stop for much needed rest. But the Israelis won't let us. They start shelling Qana. When it stops, we move on.

The cow stumbles twice. I implore Hashem to leave the animal so that we can reach Shibrine more quickly. But he refuses. "Go on," he tells me. "I'll catch up with you later in Shibrine."

I do as he says. My feet move forward, but my eyes look back until I cannot see Hashem and the cow any longer.

Five hours later, after we reach Shibrine, the gunmen from Qana arrive and tell me they saw the cow dead on the road. And Hashem? No trace of him. What to do? We press on, hoping Hashem is safe. We find rest in an orange groves.

Saturday, March 18: We decide not to stay in Tyre. It is too dangerous. By the time we reach the coastal road north of the city our shoulders are sore from carrying the children. Oranges and bananas from deserted groves still our hunger.

Ahead, Israeli planes are bombing Bourgholieh (five miles north of Tyre). We hide in a plantation until the planes have left.

It is dark when we reach Ghaziye (near Sidon). Up to then we were suspicious of anyone wanting to give us a lift in his car. But now we are so tired we throw caution to the wind when a truck stops and the young driver motions to us to get in.

He turns out to be very kind and our fear quickly fades. We actually fall asleep on the truck.

When we wake up, we discover he has taken us all the way to Beirut's Municipal Stadium. God bless him.

Sunday, March 19: At the stadium we are given a tent that we pitch on the field. We sleep away our fatigue for most of the day. Things are much better for us now. We are given bread and powdered milk. I have a feeling that Hashem will show up any moment.

Monday, March 20: We hear that the government has set up three refugee tent camps in Sidon. I send Ahmed there to look for Hashem. At sunset Ahmed returns with disheartening news: "Father is not there." I can't control my tears. Allah willing, Hashem will survive.

(After establishing a security belt 15 miles into southern Lebanon, the Israelis declared a cease-fire on Tuesday, March 21. There was no further word on the fate of Mrs. Alawiyeh's husband, Hashem.)

Haseloff Murder Trial Delayed Until May 22

LEVELLAND (Special) — The murder trial of an 88-year-old man charged here with the shooting death of his 72-year-old "best friend" has been postponed until May 22, an assistant Hockley County district attorney said Tuesday.

Pre-trial motions in the murder case of E.R. Haseloff of Levelland had been scheduled to begin today in Plains. The case was moved to Yoakum County on a change of venue.

Haseloff is accused of the Feb. 4, 1977, slaying of William Drew Bowman of Levelland.

Authorities claim Haseloff allegedly shot Bowman in a field about six miles northwest of here following a disagreement over a debt Haseloff reportedly owed Bowman.

The shooting took place on a turnrow of the Haseloff farm, according to sheriff's deputies. Investigators recovered a .357-caliber Magnum revolver at the scene.

Friends said the two men had been friends for at least 50 years and worked adjoining farms in Hockley County.

Haseloff was released on $15,000 bond set by 121st Dist. Court Judge M.C. Ledbetter shortly after his arrest.

Haseloff's new trial date means he will go to court the same day attorneys begin jury selection in the murder trial of 17-year-old Ricardo Lopez of Whitharral.

Lopez, charged with the April 7, 1977, murder of Whitharral High School principal Malcolm Omar Tripp, will also be tried in Plains on a change of venue.

Lopez, a Whitharral High student, allegedly shot the principal on the front steps of the school building after a discussion with the man about why Lopez was not in class.

After Tripp fell, Lopez reportedly walked from the school grounds to a nearby convenience store and put a .32-caliber revolver on the counter.

Town Receives 'Foreign' Aid

KINNEY, Minn. (AP) — The "secession" of this town of 600, which last year proclaimed itself the "Republic of Kinney" hardly caused a yawn in Washington, but it brought some "foreign" aid from Duluth.

The Town Council took the tongue-in-cheek action to protest federal red tape in applying for a $186,000 water and sewer grant. Industrialist Jeno Paulucci of Duluth gave the city a new police cruiser and several cases of pizza.

Town Attorney James Randall says Kinney will begin issuing passports next week that will be stamped with the community's slogan: "Filed In Triplicate."

"There won't be any forms to fill out," Randall added.

Steak Sells For $1 Per Pound

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "Steak — $1 a pound." That's what the sign says at Park Provisions in Daytona Beach.

And Corky Osipower at the market says that means shark steak, which is "selling like wildfire."

"Some say the meat tastes like pork. It is very mild," says Osipower. "Every other seafood is more expensive. The next cheapest is king mackerel at $1.75 a pound."

Shopper Mary Willis says she and her husband ate shark meat in New Jersey for years.

"We broiled or baked the meat, but it can be fried," Mrs. Willis said. "It's good with barbecue sauce."

Judge Wins 'Meatball Case'

DETROIT (AP) — According to patrolman Donald Kirkwood, Recorder's Court Judge Justin C. Ravitz was angry last August at having his car halted so 1,000 Ford Motor Co. conventioners could cross a street. The judge, said Ravitz, swore, inched his car close to the crossing crowd, threw his drivers license on the ground and even stationed himself atop his car roof in protest.

Ravitz acted as his own attorney in traffic court Monday, saying he later smiled and acknowledged to the policeman that his actions were wrong, but was ticketed anyway for failure to obey an officer.

Ravitz, who called it a "meatball case" before it got to court, won. "He never ran the stop sign," said jury foreman Jerry Wall.

Easter Baskets Recalled

CHICAGO (AP) — Up to 100,000 Easter baskets were recalled by Sears, Roebuck and Co. Tuesday because they may contain beetles.

There is believed to be no health hazard, Sears said, but the wrapped baskets should be returned to the nearest Sears store.

The baskets, sold in all parts of the country, may contain an insect known as powder-post beetles, said Gar Ingraham, vice president of Sears retail sales. He said the beetles, which thrive on bamboo and other fibrous materials, have been found in the weave of some bamboo baskets.

"While the Easter merchandise is wrapped and not believed to be contaminated, we simply do not want to take any chances, so we are asking our customers to return all Easter baskets purchased from Sears," Ingraham added.

Cambodia Admits Reporters; Stark Story Told

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Cambodia's brand of revolution means a land where money has been abolished, cities deserted, fashion reduced to one black suit issued by the state annually to each person — and where it is hard to get girls to smile, Yugoslav journalists report.

Reporters from this Communist country were the first foreign journalists admitted to Cambodia since the 1975 Communist takeover of the Indochinese nation of 8.5 million persons.

In a story published Tuesday after a two-week visit, Dragoslav Rancic, correspondent of the Belgrade daily Politika, described life on the Leaj Bo co-operative in the southern Takeo province. Its 10,000 residents organized into working brigades come from the now empty city of Takeo.

They are among several million city dwellers ordered into rural areas, leaving behind empty or near-empty cities.

The Khmer Rouge authorities, who have renamed the country Kampuchea, explain the massive resettlement as foiling a U.S. plan aimed at "destroying our revolution."

In an earlier report, Rancic described the capital Phnom Penh, a once bustling city of 2 million persons.

It is now a bureaucratic center with an estimated 20,000 population — the national bank a heap of rubble, the library a storehouse, no public mail system, no cars, and where the eight remaining, mainly Communist, foreign embassies have no telephone linkup with the foreign ministry.

At Leaj Bo, one of the agricultural co-operatives that comprise the basic social and political units of the new society, wrote Rancic, there appeared to be no food shortage.

Explaining that everyone was equal, officials told him the state issues each person with 700 pounds of rice, 14 pounds of salt and a black suit annually.

Co-operatives exchange products at state-determined rates, there is no money in circulation, and the currency, the riel, is used only for "accounting books," Rancic reported.

A question about the price of rice provoked considerable discussion in Khmer, which Rancic did not understand, before being given by officials as three riels for 2.2 pounds. They later altered this to half a riel, he said.

"We were inclined to believe the explanation of our guides that the class enemy in Kampuchea was relatively quickly liquidated," wrote Rancic. "Renegades cannot thrive without sympathizers and sympathizers can hardly exist without money."

Another question which caused some difficulty was what happens when a man has to wash his only suit. Such speculations "can be misinterpreted by the managers, even though it may have been raised with full respect," said Rancic.

Rancic said he met 650 of the Leaj Bo residents in a crowded hall, men and women seated separately. The reporters were not allowed into houses because, said officials, "not everyone has been placed in order."

"We had certain problems in trying to induce the girls to smile while we were taking pictures," Rancic wrote.

The most impressive projects, Rancic reported, were dozens of dams and irrigation systems being built by workers in "mobile brigades." Workers included former Buddhist monks and students from the capital, he said

'Tower' May Be Fair Symbol

ATLANTA (AP) — A 400-foot "power tower" representing one of many types of energy may become the symbol of the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn., the executive engineer for the project's chief architectural firm says.

James O'Kon, an Atlantan who represents McCarty, Bullock and Holsaple Architects, said the eastern Tennessee city plans to host Energy Expo '82 because of a concentration of energy research organizations in the area.

Exposition planners are looking for novel, relatively obscure energy sources as well as nuclear power displays, O'Kon said in an interview.

"We're looking for things to be fresh, for people to come in and say, 'Hey, I never thought of that before,'" he said.

The "power tower" will be topped by a large ball full of water pipes, and a belt of parabolic-shaped mirrors will be placed around the foot of the tower and aimed at the ball, O'Kon said.

The mirrors will concentrate the sun's rays on the ball, the water in the pipes will boil into steam, and it will give instant power to run generators and to heat buildings, he said.

O'Kon, whose Atlanta-based engineering firm designed 14 pavilions for the 1965 New York World's Fair, said the fair, to be built on 110 acres next to the University of Tennessee campus in downtown Knoxville, will house $35 million worth of U.S. government pavilions.

The exposition will also feature pavilions sponsored by the state of Tennessee, and will house other nations' exhibitions in giant halls.

O'Kon said he has been told that many energy-producing nations are "really pushing hard to get spaces" in the exhibition halls.

The rest of the fair will cost about $200 million, including exhibition halls, parking facilities and an amusement park. About $90 million will be spent on highway improvement for access to the fair, and another $25 million on a five-mile cross-town tramway system, O'Kon said.

O'Kon said demolition of old buildings on the 90-acre exposition site will begin by the end of 1978.

"People say, 'Knoxville for a World's Fair?'" O'Kon said.

"But the BIE (Bureau of International Expositions) wants smaller cities ... because they will put all their hopes and energies into the fair."

Chemistry Of Conversion

By DAVID POLING

The pages of church history are filled with those who discovered new life out of sickness and death. The harsh reality of a long illness, the shock of a sudden disability have often been the key to a major spiritual revelation.

For some, conversion is finding spiritual growth out of the defeats and destruction of the body. One of the most vivid illustrations in

Sixth In A Series

Christian history may be found in Ignatius of Loyola. Confirmed to a promising military career, he was severely wounded in 1521. His physical being was broken, he resolved to yield his life to Savior from Galilee. In a dramatic exchange he placed upon a Spanish altar his saber, and took for himself the sackcloth and garments of a religious pilgrim.

For nearly a year Loyola pursued the life of a solitary saint, reflecting on the teachings and ministry of Jesus. Out of his experiences, he developed the Spiritual Exercises and went on, with others to create the Society of Jesus — a holy militia given to the will of God and the direction of the Pope. The Jesuits grew on a worldwide level to exert great influence within the Catholic Church and to be a key force in the Counter-Reformation. It is accurate to conclude, that out of sickness and crippling disability, came a new vision of Christian service, from the life of Loyola who gave himself completely to Christ.

Closer to our own day, John Henry Newman, a name unsurpassed in Catholic educational circles, affirmed that his own spiritual pilgrimmage was punctuated and refined by sickness and death. The loss of his sister and long periods of broken health give himn an extraordinary insight into the spiritual realities of the universe. His great and favored hymn, "Lead, Kingly Light," was forged out of a gasping illness which seemed never to release him. Yet he found God's love and grace to become more personal and powerful, making sorrow and sickness agents of change and surprising evidence of His love.

Conversion continues to happen on the battlefield, the hospital waiting room, the bedside of a loved one in need.

Lettuce Health Hazard For Santiago Citizens

SANTIAGO, CHILE (UPI) — The residents of Chile's capital city have been jolted by the discovery that they are engaged in a vicious cycle with nature — they are polluting the earth and the earth in turn is poisoning the inhabitants.

The problem in this city of four million persons has become so serious that the National Health Service recently recommended that people stop eating lettuce.

In addition, municipal authorities ordered a temporary ban on lettuce planting in the western outskirts because the vegetable was being irrigated with putrid, foul-smelling sewer waters.

Most of the lettuce and other vegetables that are consumed daily in Santiago are grown in that area of the city.

The Health Service said that up to 77 percent of the lettuce trucked and carted into the city from that region was highly contaminated.

The service also ordered the leafy, green vegetable to be struck from the menus to protect 30,000 patients and 60,000 employes in hospitals under its care.

The drastic ban against lettuce came after the Service discovered that typhoid cases increased from 7,469 in 1976 to 12,629 in 1977.

Another 1,070 cases were detected in just the first three weeks of this year.

Hepatitis cases also jumped from 5,192 in 1976 to 8,624 last year with 238 more reported the first three weeks of January, the Service said.

Blame for the surge in the diseases has been placed directly on the waters used to irrigate the crops.

Practically all of Santiago's sewage is dumped into the Mapocho River and another canal that flows past the crops on its way to the Pacific Ocean.

Reporters who visited the lettuce plantations recently said pieces of human excrement could be clearly seen on lettuce that had been watered that day.

Health Service authorities say there are three possible solutions to the problem:

—Construction of a $50 million plant to treat the sewage (but the money is not available for such a large project).

—For housewives to throughly wash the lettuce and other vegetables with chemicals before serving them.

—Simply for the people to stop buying and eating the crops grown in that part of the city.

The first reaction of the city's housewives has apparently been the last option. A spot check of women shopping in open-air markets recently revealed that 60 percent had stopped buying lettuce.

Israeli Cease-Fire Called Not Enough

hours, and perhaps call a meeting of the cabinet.

The PLO earlier had brushed aside Israeli talk of a cease-fire, but observers in Beirut believed the final response would depend on the outcome of Syrian-Lebanese talks underway in Damascus.

During the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war, the Israelis had declared the Litani River a "red line" beyond which Syrian troops, which make up the bulk of the 30,000-man Arab League peacekeeping force sent in to end the civil war, were not to venture.

But Israel's hold over the 500-square-mile area, about 10 percent of Lebanon, seemed tenuous as determined guerrillas fought rear guard battles and world pressure mounted for Israel to withdraw.

Lebanese authorities report at least 1,200 Palestinians and Lebanese have been killed and nearly twice as many wounded. The PLO acknowledges 150 guerrillas killed, but gives no figures on wounded. The guerrillas claim to have killed or wounded 450 Israelis. Israel says it has lost 16 soldiers and two civilians killed in the fighting. Three other soldiers were killed in a traffic accident on the way to the front.

Israeli artillery battered the Kasayma bridge over the Litani River near Tyre until just before the cease-fire and Israeli infantry dug in their armored personnel carriers behind earth bulwarks along the river and relaxed, their invasion apparently complete. The artillery occasionally lobbed shells into suspected guerrilla nests around Tyre, but no return fire could be observed by correspondents there.

Only small bands of guerrillas were seen in the city, once a major supply point for Palestinians in the south.

The Israeli military command has declared it has no intention of occupying Tyre, one of the few areas not physically controlled by its troops in the south, but plans to keep the guerrillas from operating there again. Residents said most of the guerrillas had left Tyre, apparently to regroup in the north.

Lebanese Premier Selim el-Hoss conferred with Syrian President Hafez Assad Tuesday after the Syrian-led Arab hardline front backed the PLO's demand for a total Israeli withdrawal and hinted the four-nation front would help the guerrillas if the Israelis do not pull out.

Arrival Delayed

The expected arrival of an advance party of U.N. peacekeepers ordered to the area Monday by the Security Council was delayed for unexplained reasons. But one qualified source in Beirut said Israel appeared to be delaying clearance for the small reconnaissance force en route from the Sinai through Israel.

A spokesman at U.N. headquarters in New York said troops from the 150-man Iranian detachment now patrolling the buffer zone between Israel and Syria were traveling across Israel and were expected to take up positions in southern Lebanon today. A Western member of the Security Council said French and Norwegian troops would be on their way to Lebanon "within hours."

The troops would be a symbolic U.N. presence until the 4,000-man peacekeeping force can be put together.

Forces On Alert

About 250 U.N. troops from the Swedish battalion stationed in Sinai between Egyptian and Israeli forces were put on alert Tuesday for possible transfer, the U.N. force commander in Egypt said.

U.N. peacekeepers now patrol buffer zones along the Israeli-Syrian frontier on the Golan Heights and the Sinai Desert corridor between Israel and Egypt. The blue-helmeted troops, armed only with light weapons, are under orders "not to use force except in self defense" and to report truce violations to the U.N. secretary-general.

In London, a government spokesman said Britain — in response to a request from U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim — was offering support personnel and its Akrotiri airfield on Cyprus as a staging base for the peace force.

Entry Envisioned

Israel radio said the cease-fire might make possible the entry of the U.N. troops into southern Lebanon within a few days.

Weizman was to meet today with Lt. Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo, commander of the U.N. Mideast forces. Siilasvuo met with Lebanese officials Tuesday in Beirut and said afterward he hoped an arrangement would be reached soon to permit his forces to take up positions.

The Iraqi news agency said the Baghdad government was preparing to dispatch "thousands of volunteers" to aid the guerrillas. Kuwait announced it would convene a meeting of Arab health ministers to coordinate aid to Lebanon's refugees, estimated at about 200,000.

Desegregation Plan Objections Raised

seven named elementary schools promises to achieve school enrollments within the court's guidelines, it places a substantially disproportionate burden with respect to education programs and transportation on minority students."

School officials are expected to refute that allegation. They note that in any given semester, their plan would require busing twice as many whites as minorities.

The school board's plan would keep all white and minority children in their neighborhood schools for kindergarten through grade two. The board presented expert testimony last week to show that young children should not be assigned far from home.

Evidence Labeled "Irrelevant"

But the Justice Department Tuesday labeled that evidence "irrelevant." The department said: "We do not believe that the law is this circuit or the facts of this case permit the defendants' exclusion of grades from the desegregation program. The result of the defendants' plan is, at a minimum, completely segregated grades one through three at Wheatley and one through two at Martin, Posey, Guadalupe and Mahon.

"The objective of a remedial plan is desegregated education, not interracial experience through part-time desegregation."

The department said it would not object to keeping kindergarteners in their own neighborhoods but will insist that all other elementary grades be involved in the integration plan.

"There is substantial evidence that significant educational benefits from desegregated education accrue during the primary grades," the Justice Department brief said.

The brief also said more information is needed on the Iles magnet school proposal.

Struggs' Closing Proposed

Under the school board's plan, Struggs Junior High would be closed, with its students reassigned eventually to a new school proposed south of Loop 289. The Struggs facility would be added to Dunbar as a "magnet complex" to draw white students from other high schools.

The Justice Department commended the school board for its decision to relocate the proposed new junior high from the city's far southwest to a site closer to the Struggs area.

"The temporary reassignment of Struggs pupils to other junior high schools until completion of the new junior high school is burdensome, but necessary due to the board's decision to use the Struggs facility as part of the magnet school program for Dunbar," the department said.

The Dunbar magnet complex "might result in effective desegregation," the department said. But its brief warned the job may be "exceptionally difficult" — because, as students themselves say, few whites may elect to transfer to Dunbar on a voluntary basis.

The Justice Department said more information about the Dunbar magnet should be required. Also, "we believe the court should require the defendants to formulate and present an alternative plan at the high school level which can be put into effect for the coming school year if, as the scool year approaches, the defendants have not demonstrated to the court the likelihood of success for their magnet school proposal."

For example, if pre-registration for fall classes shows few whites will attend Dunbar, the board should have a mandatory assignment plan ready to implement, the Justice Department said.

The department also reiterated its objections to construction of three new elementaries south of Loop 289 until further study is made.

Woodward may want to extend the April 1 deadline he has set for deciding on the school board's plan, the Justice Department said. "Additional time might also provide a further opportunity for that citizen contribution to proposals which is essential to successful implementation of any plan...

"We will be happy to work closely with (school trustees and the judge) if they desire our input," the department said. But by doing so, the department added, "we do not in any way foreclose our right to appeal on any issue."

The department has indicated it may appeal Woodward's Jan. 27 finding that only the nine cited schools here are vestiges of unlawful segregation.

Armored Car Heist Nets $1 Million

ST. JOVITE, Quebec (UPI) — Four hooded gunmen armed with semi-automatic rifles burst into a roadside diner early Tuesday, attacked three armored car security guards as they ate breakfast and escaped with about $1 million in small, unmarked bills and coins.

It was Quebec's fourth major armored car heist in two years.

In a 20-minute operation that police said probably took a year of planning, the four men shot two of the security guards and clubbed the third before fleeing with the money.

Police said the armored truck carried $1 million from toll booths and credit unions in the upper Laurentien Mountains district.

Guards Wounded

One security guard was wounded in the hands, a second in the upper chest and the third was clubbed on the head. They were reported in satisfactory condition in a hospital.

The holdup in the resort community of St. Jovite, 90 miles northwest of Montreal, raised to $5.8 million the total loot stolen in four armored truck robberies in Quebec since 1976.

Police said the gunmen burst into an all-night diner where three guards from L'Alliance Securite, Blindee Division, Quebec, Ltd., were taking a meal break during a regular run from Val d'Or to Montreal.

"Normal procedure is for at least one man to stay locked in the truck," said police Sgt. Gaetan Nadeau. "But obviously this time the crew did not follow the rule."

"Year's Planning"

"This can only be described as a professional operation," a Quebec police spokesman said of the latest robbery. "It is probably the result of at least a year's planning."

The gunmen transferred the money to a gray van that resembled a Hydro-Quebec utility vehicle. The van was abandoned at Lac Leblanc, 18 miles southwest of St. Jovite.

Three other major armored truck company robberies in the past two years remain unsolved.

Brink's Canada was hit twice in 1976, losing $2.8 million in a hijack-robbery in Montreal's financial district March 30 and another $500,000 in a shopping center holdup Dec. 26.

On Feb. 17 of this year, an estimated $1.5 million was taken in an extortion style robbery by a 10-man gang in the Montreal suburb of Longueuil.

This time, he said, "There's a lot of stuff they don't like, but some they can live with. It looks like it will pass. We've been out a long time...

"Our people are in pretty bad shape, about to lose their home, their cars, lose everything they've got. Maybe (we) can live with this."

"Everybody's so tired of being on strike. It's been 3½ months," said Charles Rice, president of Local 1392 in Illinois.

Some opponents of the contract were strongly critical of Miller.

MITCHELL TESTIFIES—Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell testifies Tuesday that he never saw an FBI memo that aides to South Korea's president were involved in payoffs to the Democratic Party. Mitchell Says Korea Memo Not Received

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell testified Tuesday that he never got a 1971 FBI memorandum alerting him that South Koreans were giving hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Democratic Party.

Mitchell, who was Richard M. Nixon's attorney general and who is now on furlough from prison where he is serving sentences for Watergate crimes, told a House subcommittee that he did see another memo in which the FBI contended two congressional aides were linked to the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

House investigators released a Nov. 24, 1971, FBI memorandum to Mitchell, saying that South Korean President Park Chung Hee's aides were directly involved in contributing "several hundred thousand dollars to the Democratic Party."

The investigators also said the Nov. 24 memo was sent to Henry A. Kissinger, who at the time was Nixon's special national security adviser. Kissinger has agreed to testify before the House International Relations' subcommittee later. The panel is investigating alleged Korean attempts to buy influence in Congress.

The November memo was sent to Mitchell and Kissinger by then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, committee investigators said. The memo also said rice millionaire Tongsun Park had made payments to a congressman "acting under Korean Central Intelligence Agency direction."

Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., chairman of the panel, said Kissinger is expected to testify on how much Nixon aides knew about alleged South Korean influence-buying and what they did about it.

Kissinger Action

Gen. Alexander Haig, who was a top aide of Kissinger's at the time, said Tuesday it would "be very inappropriate" for him to comment on whether he knew of Korean payoffs to congressmen at that time. He said he would leave such comments to Kissinger "who I understand did take some action."

Hours later, Haig passed the word through the Pentagon's information office that his remark about Kissinger having taken "some action" referred to 1975 when Kissinger was secretary of state, rather than 1971-72.

Asked about receiving the November memo supposedly sent to the attorney general and to Kissinger, Mitchell told the subcommittee, "I'm sure I would (remember)."

"Would Remember"

After being shown the memo, Mitchell noted, "There is a reference in the memorandum to hundreds of thousands of dollars being transferred by the Koreans to the Democratic Party in connection with an election I had just been through managing on the Republican side.

"There is a reference to a president (Korean President Park) in here and also a reference that a congressman had been bought off," Mitchell said. "I'm sure I would recognize it and remember it."

Mitchell said the memo he did remember receiving from Hoover, dated Sept. 30, 1971, quoted intelligence reports as saying aides to former House Speaker Carl Albert and former Rep. Cornelius E. Gallagher, D-N.J., "are connected" with the KCIA.

Talked To Albert

Mitchell said he took the September memo to Albert, but said Albert defended the aide, Mrs. Suzi Park Thomson, and said he "didn't see any problem." Mrs. Thompson has denied repeatedly that she had KCIA connections.

Mitchell said he did not consult with Gallagher about his aide, Kim Kwang, because Gallagher was then under investigation, presumably for a local political fund violation for which he was later sent to jail.

Mitchell testified he also did not see a third memo from Hoover, saying his initials are on it but were not put there by him.

That memo, dated Feb. 3, 1972, says a congressman "who had previously sought election campaign contributions from President Park" told the president that Tongsun Park should be put in charge of all U.S. lobbying and should be made Seoul's exclusive U.S. rice dealer.

Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., pleaded guilty last week to conspiring in the South Korean lobbying scheme by, among other things, urging Korean officials to make Park the rice dealer for the Seoul government.

Olton Infant Killed, Four Hurt In Wreck

A 9-month-old Olton infant was killed and four other persons, including three of her family, were injured Tuesday following a two-car crash in Hale County about 8 p.m.

Pronounced dead at Methodist Hospital about 10:45 p.m. was Erica Eugene Rodriguez.

The child was an occupant in the Rodriguez' 1970 Ford which was in collision with a 1974 Oldsmobile driven by Jeffrey Dale Jones, 19, of Lubbock, at the US 70 and FM 1070 intersection.

Jones was listed in good condition late Tuesday at Central Plains Hospital in Plainview.

Also injured were Linda Lucy Rodriguez, 21, Elizar Reyes Rodriguez, 1, and Reyes Rodriguez, 25, all of Olton.

The woman had suffered head injuries and abrasions, a Department of PUblic Safety spokesman said, while the child had sustained chest injuries. Rodriguez was taken to Methodist Hospital but was expected to be treated and released, a spokesman said.

Retirement Seen For Eastland

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., president pro tem of the Senate and chairman of the Judiciary Committee, will announce today that he is not seeking re-election, a top member of his staff said Tuesday.

State Rep. Clarence Pierce, a member of Eastland's Mississippi staff, said in Jackson that the 73-year-old senator had changed his mind and would not seek another term.

Eastland declined to comment on the reports that he would not seek re-election but said he would make an announcement about his political plans this morning.

"It is unfortunate that he was not able to announce it to all of the people in Mississippi, which was his intent," Pierce said. "He wanted to speak to all of the people of Mississippi first but somebody apparently leaked it."

To Make Statement

Pierce said he had not spoken to Eastland but had talked with the senator's son and administrative assistant.

"I'm going to make a statement in the morning," Eastland said. "I don't want to disclose what's in it. I don't want to lead you astray."

But rumors were rife all day in Jackson and Washington that Eastland would announce he was not running again. He reportedly taped his statement to the people of Mississippi during the day.

Eastland announced last October, at a time when there was a great deal of speculation that he would retire, that he would seek re-election for his seventh full term.

Eastland's decision came a day after former Gov. Bill Waller, in a harsh attack on Eastland, announced he would challenge the veteran incumbent in the primaries.

"Need 60-Hour Man"

Waller, who served as governor from 1972 until 1976, said, "Don't we need a 60-hour a week man in Washington rather than six-hour a week man.

"I think that one full-time, aggressive U.S. senator can do a lot to get Mississippi off the bottom," Waller said. "Let's end the crisis in Washington. Let's send a new man to work on the problems."

Waller was the third entrant in the Mississippi Democratic senatorial race but considered the strongest. The other two are Robert L. Robinson, former head of the Agricltural and Industrial Board, and Henry J. Kirksey, a black activist.

Gov. Cliff Finch, also a Democrat, has not announced his intentions. But he has called a meeting of supporters April 6, the day before the deadline for filing.

Eastland first entered the Senate on June 30, 1941 to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Sen. Pat Harrison. He served until Sept. 28, 1941 when a elected successor was chosen.

He won election on his own right in 1942 and entered the Senate Jan. 3, 1943. He has more service than any other senator.

If he retires, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., would be in line to head the Judiciary Committee.

Cuba Returns Six Prisoners

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Six Americans who spent up to eight years in Cuban prisons after allegedly hijacking U.S. airliners surrendered to federal authorities and were taken before a federal judge here late Tuesday to face air piracy charges.

U.S. marshals brought the six here by charter airplane from Jamaica, where they had been flown by Cuban officials.

They were taken before U.S. District Judge Howell Melton for appearances on charges originally returned in Tampa, Fla., Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Brooklyn.

The six were identified by Justice Department spokesman Robert Havel in Washington as: Richard D. Witt, indicted for air piracy in Philadelphia in 1970; Garland J. Grant, indicted in Milwaukee in 1971; Angel L. Casado and Rudolfo Rivera-Rios, both indicted in Brooklyn in 1971; and Larry Franklin Brooks, 34, and Nobel Byron Mason III, both indicted in Tampa in 1969.

Melton ordered the six held under $250,000 bail each.

Farm Relief Package Approved By Senate

to idle cropland, a provision that USDA says would take almost 50 million acres more out of production than the 15 million it wants idled without payments. That was the heart of a proposal by Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., Agriculture Committee chairman.

— Allow wheat, feed grain, cotton and soybean farmers to get higher income supplement payments from the Agriculture Department by idling more acreage than the department requires. By idling 50 percent — the bill's maximum — a farmer could obtain the goal of parity set by protesting farmers. Parity is a price that theoretically would give farmers the same favorable balance between farm prices and costs that existed 65 years ago. This provision was the heart of a proposal by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the committee's ranking minority member.

— Boost by about 20 percent both the target prices, on which the income supplements are based, and the price-supporting rates at which the department loans money to growers of wheat, feed-grain, cotton and soybeans.

— Require all imported meats to be labeled as such, with the costs of labeling added on.

Asked about the Senate's decision to combine the Talmadge and Dole bills, Talmadge remarked: "I don't know how they could be wedded."

Meanwhile, Dole said the two measures were "not mutually exclusive" but later conceded that they might be.

He said he insisted on putting the two together because the Democratic leadership was "about to deal me out" in the fast-moving parliamentary maneuvering.

The chief opposition came from Sen. Edmund S. Muskiee, D-Maine, Budget Committee chairman, who grew flushed and angry as he fought against the proposals in the eight-hour debate.

"How in heaven's name do you evaluate the budget costs, the inflationary costs of this three-headed monster?" Muskie shouted. "We haven't got the facts."

Agencies Investigating Billie Sol Estes

FEELINGS EXPRESSED — Don Trull, 40, charged with kidnapping an investments company employee, stands beside a van which was part of the property he purchased from paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes. Trull said when he realized he had been "ripped off" by Estes in the business venture he had the name of the company painted out and his feelings about the matter painted below. Trull's attorneys say they will expose the alleged promotion activities of Estes in violation of the terms of his parole. (AP Laserphoto)

TYLER (AP) — Fifteen years after he defrauded the federal government and 400 individuals of several million dollars, convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes is back in the promoting business, according to several embittered Texans.

The man the U.S. Jaycees once named one of the 10 "Outstanding Young Men of America" is being investigated by the Texas Attorney General's office, the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service.

The probes were sparked by two suitcases full of documents turned over to investigative agencies and The Associated Press by Mississippi developer Don Trull last year.

Trull, a cigar-chomping, self-described gambler, said he shared an Abilene office with Estes in 1976 and took the documents because his "friend of 20 years" persuaded him to buy several sagging properties and then reneged on a million-dollar loan. Trull moved to Tyler, where he continued his efforts to get back his initial investment with Estes.

BILLIE SOL ESTES

Last August, Trull allegedly splashed gasoline inside a Tyler office and held a man hostage, demanding that Estes and Tyler millionaire Billy Pyron come up with $1.6 million.

He was charged with kidnapping, and this week jury selection is underway in Tyler. Estes and 69 others have been subpoenaed to testify, and the defense may be planning, in effect, to try Estes for his alleged business dealings with Trull.

Estes, known for his persuasiveness, so far has refused to comment.

Trull and eight other Abilene, San Angelo and Houston businessmen were interviewed by The AP. Their collective stories and sworn statements weave a complex web of promotional schemes which they say were orchestrated by Estes, including a steam cleaning operation that has attracted state and federal investigations.

Estes, paroled in 1971 after serving six years of a 15-year sentence — and now seeking a presidential pardon — has been barred from any self-employment or promotional activities. Last month, a federal judge ordered him and his wife, Patsy, to pay $45.6 million in back taxes on the millions he received in the 1963 swindle.

When Estes arrived in Pecos, Texas, in 1951, he seemed a plucky, hard-working Horatio Alger character, clutching a beat-up briefcase and appearing for all the world like the typical young man trying to get a toehold on his future.

His first step was to buy a farm on credit. Then he used his silver tongue and knack of finding shortcuts to big money to build a paper empire of cotton, fertilizer and a myriad of other interests that ran into the millions. Estes found opportunities in federal farm programs to pyramid his holdings.

Later, President Kennedy cited Estes' operations as one reason for changes in national farm laws.

By 1954, he was a millionaire. It took nine years before authorities figured out why, and he was convicted of fraud.

Upon his release from prison, Estes told his parole board he was going to work as a truck dispatcher for a Midland-based oil company owned by his friend, Ray Horton.

Last month, Horton agreed to an injunction requiring him to pay three equipment leasing companies $604,545 he and associates received in an alleged fraud scheme involving non-existent or unworkable steam cleaning units.

Several investigators trying to determine whether Estes is linked to the steam cleaning operation are among the 70 witnesses subpoenaed to testify at Trull's kidnapping trial.

Shortly after Trull's arrest, he was given a lie detector examination and questioned about the kidnapping and his allegations against Estes. A high-ranking law enforcement source, who asked to remain anonymous, told The AP:

"According to the polygraph, he hasn't lied to us yet."

New Life Sought By Women's Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Women's Commission, which sponsored last year's National Women's Conference in Houston, is in its final week of existence.

However, behind-the-scenes attempts are continuing to persuade President Carter to name a successor commission. Carter will meet with commission members today and with an estimated 300 persons selected for an interim committee to implement the goals of the Houston meeting and to plan a followup conference.

The president cannot continue the present commission, which is a creation of Congress. But he could create a high-level commission to monitor events concerning women.

Rash Of Vandalism On Cars Reported To Lubbock Police

Car owners may be wishing area school children would give them a spring break following a rash of vandalism reports.

Eight Lubbockites reported damaged windshields to police and the group estimated its aggregate loss at more than $1,000.

Frank Dorn of 2105 56th St. said someone smashed his car's windshield Monday or Tuesday, causing $150 damage, and Richard Cantrell of 5217 45th St. said his car sustained the same amount of damage during that period.

Also reporting criminal mischief incidents were Mark Kinslow of 4604 47th St., Norman Wreyford of 2509 54th St., Wesley Hallmark of 2118 48th St., Richard Steinborn of 4901 49th St., Bob Linton of 2719 33rd St. and Steve Thrasher of 2608 42nd St.

Meanwhile, a city man who tried to comply with a man's request Tuesday for a $5 loan wound up losing all the cash he had in his possession.

Matthew Green of 2510 Weber Drive said the suspect approached his car in the 1300-block of E. 25th St. and asked if he could borrow $5. Green said he removed about $100 from his wallet, then was dumbfounded when the man took his entire roll.

Yet another Good Samaritan may have fallen victim to the unscrupulous in recent days.

Larry Leivas of 6504 Quaker Ave. said he was somewhere at the Canyon Lakes Project Friday when two men told him they were having car trouble. Leivas said he offered the men a ride, then took the pair to the Clovis Road and University Avenue intersection. Later, Leivas said he found his $160 watch missing.

Several shovels, a pair of posthole diggers and a tile scraper were among items stolen from a construction site in the 2800-block of Weber Drive Monday or Tuesday. Jimmy Ray Pharr of Pharr and Pharr Enterprises said the stolen tools were worth about $175.

What should have been a pleasant financial experience turned sour for Renee Johnson of 3333 Toledo Ave. Monday. The woman said someone stole her purse that included an income tax refund check for nearly $250, along with some other cash and her credit cards.

Sheriff's deputies Tuesday were investigating a reported burglary at the J. C. Roberts Liquor Store, located at the intersection of FM 1585 and U.S. 87. Mrs. Roberts said thieves broke through a window at the store Tuesday then made off with 2 cases of liquor and 2 1/2 gallons of rum. The spirits were valued at $184.10, Mrs. Roberts said.

Almost $2,000 worth of musical instruments was recovered shortly after an early morning vehicle break-in Tuesday. However, the suspected burglar managed to escape his would-be-captors minutes later.

Robert Harrison of Alpine told police he noticed the rear window was open and a screen was cut on his van parked in the 2300-block of 9th Street about 3 a.m. When Harrison looked inside the vehicle, he saw a man rummaging through the property.

According to the owner, when he asked the stranger what he was doing, the man ran outside, but Harrison caught up with him and took him to a nearby apartment. While Harrison and a friend went back to see if anything had been taken, the suspect reportedly escaped from another man at the residence.

Reports indicated Harrison found his guitars, valued at $1,970, next to the apartment complex.

In another car burglary, Bryan Ellis Wheeler, a Texas Tech University policeman, of 2801 E. 8th St. said someone stole his badge, $45 cash and some cassette tapes from his vehicle parked in the 2000-block of E. 28th Street Monday.

According to Dewayne Miller of 212-A 37th St., a wedding ring and some camping equipment, altogether valued at $500, was taken by whoever got through a window at his home recently.

An intruder kicked in Larry D. Jones' 2510 Ave. L front door during the past two days and made off with a $250 stereo and a pair of yellow tennis shoes.

Tom Sawyer Dorough, a deliveryman for Hygeia Bottled Water Co., told officers 20 empty 5-gallon water bottles were taken from a truck parked in the 400-block of Avenue U Monday. The haul was valued at $90.

Landing Accident Found Not Serious

DENVER (AP) — A malfunction in the anti-skid system on a Continental Airlines DC-10 here Monday similar to one in Los Angeles March 1 which killed two persons could have happened on any plane of any size, a Continental spokesman said.

Cliff Trainer, a regional manager for Continental, said Tuesday that the accident at Stapleton International Airport which blew four of the 10 tires wasn't serious and added that the plane is "probably already back in the air." There were no injuries.

Trainer said the tires blew on a Houston flight shortly after touchdown when the anti-skid mechanism malfunctioned.

The four tires, he said, "were almost new," were replaced and the anti-skid mechanism repaired, readying the craft for service.

U.S. Cleaning Up Atoll's Radioactive Debris

By SHELLEY BUCK
Pacific News Service

HONOLULU — A multi-million dollar government cleanup of radioactive debris left by 43 nuclear test detonations on the Pacific atoll of Enewetak is proceeding on schedule, despite some concerns over radiation hazards among both civilians and GIs assigned to the project.

As of early March, 461 soldiers from the Honolulu-based 84th Engineering Battalion had been assigned to the project, which involves scraping plutonium-contaminated topsoil off the surface of as many as 11 of the 40 islands on the atoll. The islands were used for nuclear bomb testing throughout the 1950s.

The soldiers must also locate and excavate buried caches of radioactive debris which were bulldozed underground after the test blasts. The first pick-up of contaminated soil was scheduled for mid-March, according to Col. Bill McGee of the Defense Nuclear Agency, which is directing the cleanup.

The most severely radioactive debris and soil will be carted by open trucks and barges to the island of Runit, where it will be mixed with cement and poured into a waterfilled bomb crater called Cactus. The crater will then be capped by 18 inches of cement.

The aim of the three-year project, which began last November, is to make some of the islands safe for habitation by the Enewetakese people, who were moved off the islands in 1947. Congress has appropriated $20 million for the project.

The first 56 of the estimated 450 natives and their children returned last March to the "clean" island of Japtan. But the large number of people still waiting to return (only 142 people were evacuated in 1947) has caused concern about overcrowding and food supplies.

The land mass of the entire atoll totals less than two and one-third square miles. Of that territory, the whole island of Runit will be off-limits for as long as 240,000 years due to severe plutonium contamination, said McGee.

In addition, Ataji Bales, Enewetak's represenative to the Congress of Micronesia, says that two other islands in the atoll simply vanished in a 1952 thermonuclear blast.

The Agency's master plan for the atoll calls for re-setting the people on the two largest islands, and restoring other more contaminated islands for agricultural purposes only. The settlers will "commute" by boats from the habitable islands to the cultivated islands, said McGee.

Much of the replanting of the islands will be directed by the Interior Department's Trust Territories Division, which has allocated $12.4 million for the task. John DeYoung, an Interior official involved in the project, said that local work crews of Enewetakese will carry out the actual work.

However, the safety of crops grown in "low radiation" areas has also raised doubts among some of the returning islanders. Residents of the neighboring Bikini Atoll, who returned to their "cleansed" islands in 1970, have a suit pending in a Hawaii District Court charging that the cleanup there was ineffective. The suit alleges that recent levels of radionuclides among returned Bikinians has been higher than levels considered acceptable by U. S. authorities.

Physicist Roger Ray, the Defense Nuclear Agency official in charge of the Enewetak cleanup, claims that the increased radiation levels among the Bikinians is a result of "eating unapproved foods with a high cesium uptake."

But official assurances of safety fail to convince some civilians and GIs who have worked on the islands. Henry Haag, a civilian photographer who worked on the atoll in 1975 under a government contract to the Matsco Company, claims that work crews were fed from gardens on the islands. Haag says that despite recent revelations about the dangers of low-level radiation, he has never been contacted for a radiological health exam.

Haag also claims that while working on the severely contaminated island of Runit, the site of six nuclear tests, neither he nor his superior, an Air Force colonel, wore any radiological protective covering other than "paper masks." Hag says he was also required to dive into water-filled bomb craters to take samples for analysis.

Haag claims that during his stay on the islands, he never saw a geiger counter of radiological film badge, and was not informed of potential hazards.

"I went over there really blind," he says. "I don't know what it (plutonium) looks like. I thought it would set there and glow or something. Why didn't they tell me it might be dangerous when I went there? They should have told everybody."

According to Col. McGee, the Army is using sophisticated techniques to protect the soldiers against contamination. He says all U.S. personnel are extensively briefed on radiation hazards and are given medical exams before and after work on the atoll. Yet reporters who visited the Runit craters last June were provided only a double-layer paper respirator and knee boots.

A soldier, who asked not to be identified, claimed that he worked on the island of Lujor last year without even a respirator. His job involved clearing undergrowth so that a large, wheeled radiological testing device could move about the island to take readings. He believes that officials in charge of the cleanup "don't care" about the safety of the men doing the work.

Another soldier of the 84th Battalion who expects to be sent to the atoll this spring for a five or six month assignment with no leaves, said he finds the Army's safety assurances "not believable."

And Haag, who has publicized his concerns about the atoll, says he has been contacted by a number of soldiers worried about safety conditions on the islands. They claim they have been given little information about radiation exposure.

The volcanic island of Iceland is roughly the size of Kentucky. Snowfields and glaciers cover more than 13 percent of the area.

'Pruned' Tree Irks Apartment Dwellers

NEW YORK (UPI) — For most people, the first full day of spring is a time for celebrating the end of winter, the advent of warmer weather, and the blossoming of trees.

But in Greenwich Village there is a group of irate tenants for whom the beginning of spring means the weak glare of the sun unshaded by blossoms and unfolding leaves.

A 100-year-old, 75-foot sycamore tree in the backyard of 135 MacDougal St. stands with trunk bare of all but two of its branches — the victim of a "pruning" ordered by the landlord's agent.

"It's insane," said Vivian Goldstein, whose fourth floor apartment overlooks what was once a magnificent example of a species that has flourished in Manhattan since colonial days. "I can't really explain it, but I identify strongly with that tree."

"I wouldn't have believed that I could be very concerned about a tree, but it was a part of me," said Paul Gilbert, public relations agent and a 20-year resident, who rallied his neighbors in an abortive effort to save the tree.

About two weeks ago, workmen appeared and promptly severed ten branches from near the bottom of the tree, Gilbert said.

"I heard someone from the next building yell, 'Tear down the building, but leave that tree alone,'" Gilbert recalled.

Gilbert contacted the agent, Norman Buchbinder, who, he said, told him he would call off the pruning. A week later, five workers removed every branch from the tree but two.

"It looks like a giant telegraph pole with bumps," he said.

Buchbinder explained that because a stone pathway built near the base of the tree had torn up part of its roots, the tree was leaning dangerously toward the apartment building. It has already partially destroyed a wall, he said.

"It's a tall tree and we felt by trimming the branches we could reverse its growth," Buchbinder said. "The other alternative was to take it down completely."

The tenants, however, are dissatified with Buchbinder's explanation. For one thing, they said, the tree could have been straightened by mechanical means. They are also angry because no one notified them of Buchbinder's plans.

"I think the real trauma will set in when we see how much we miss it," said Lois Mapes, who lives in a studio apartment below Gilbert's.

Local Shifting Opinion On Ending Of Strike

CEDAR GROVE, W.Va. (AP) — In United Mine Workers Local 8843, the pendulum of opinion is swinging toward ending the 106-day coal strike.

The huge local, one of the union's largest with 841 voting miners, met Tuesday in the former Methodist Church at nearby Cannelton.

And everybody agreed the meeting was vastly different from the one which preceded the last contract vote, March 5.

"I feel it will go over this time," said Joe Campbell, president of the local, which rejected the earlier proposal by a vote of 312 to 220.

"The contract's not all that good but time is beginning to make a big difference. Also, there's a real question in the minds of some of the men as to what will happen to the union if this contract is voted down."

It was one of hundreds of UMW local meetings across the coalfields this week, at which rank and file members receive copies of the contract and are briefed on its fine print.

The miners vote on Friday.

At Local 8843, even the members who violently oppose this proposal can feel sentiment shifting away from them.

"Yeah, we turned it down last time but there'll be more than 400 of the members of this local that will vote for it this time," said Mike Turley. "I won't be one of them, though. This contract don't take care of the older miners, the men that built our union."

The miners of Local 8843 work for the Cannelton Coal Co., a subsidiary of the Algoma Steel Co., a Canadian firm. They live in the heart of UMW territory, in the land where their forefathers fought long and hard to create the union as an avenue to a better life.

Those days of struggle were recalled Tuesday by several miners who were in a group congregated on the steps outside the local hall.

"I can well recall seeing my daddy come out of the mine," said a middle-aged man. "His clothes would be soaking wet but he still had to walk home. He didn't have a car to ride in like I do."

The topic turned away from the past as one of the young men announced he was considering the purchase of a new truck.

"Haven't had a payday in more than 10 weeks and you're thinking about buying a truck!" exclaimed an older miner. "You've either got a lot of guts or you're crazy, I don't know which."

"I ain't buyin' nothing right now," chimed another. "Not even an old settin' hen."

The declaration of frugality came from Ercil Sanders who, at 41, has spent 16 years in the mine and has a wife and three children to support.

"There's a lot of things in the contract I don't like but I'm gonna vote for it," Sanders added. "A fellow has got to look after his family sometime. One of the troubles with our union is that we've got too many young hippy radicals that don't want to work."

A white-haired miner watched Sanders walk away.

"A lot of the men feel the way he does," the man said. "They're not thinking so much about themselves right now. They're beginning to think about what's best for the union and what's best for their families. There's no doubt about it, a lot of people are hurting. It's been a long time since payday."

Just then, the meeting ended and miners began streaming out of the converted church. Rolled-up copies of the proposed contract protruded from their pockets.

"This was a lot different from the last meeting," said Joe Campbell. "We were in there more than four hours last time, compared to only two hours this time. And this was an orderly meeting. No yelling and screaming like last time. Why, a few of the boys even burned their copies of the contract last time."

He said discussion dealt mainly with pensions and health benefits.

"Overall, however, there wasn't too much discussion," he added. "And most of the talk I heard was positive."

Campbell said he was so sure the proposal would be approved, he was arranging for the local's safety committee to inspect the mine Sunday.

"That's right, we'll be back to work by Monday," said a young miner who had been standing nearby. But he didn't sound pleased.

"I'm not too happy about it," admitted Ernest Gibson. "But I figure this contract is going to pass. For one thing, a lot of people feel different this time and their talk is different. And for another thing, you don't see somebody talking down the contract every time you turn on TV, like they were last time.

"I'm going to vote against it but I don't believe it will do any good. The operators have waited until they've got the price of coal back up and they're ready for us to mine it for them. They've whipped us."

'Serious Crime' Decline Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Serious crime declined in 1977 for the first time in five years, although there was a big upsurge in rapes and an increase in other violence against people, the FBI reported Tuesday.

Overall, the report said, the serious crime rate last year was 4 percent below that registered in 1976.

But the FBI said the number of forcible rapes jumped by 10 percent for the nation as a whole, with all sections of the country and cities of all sizes reporting an increase.

The preliminary report for 1977 showed the number of reported rapes increased 13 percent in the southern and western states, 10 percent in the Northeast and 5 percent in north-central states.

An FBI official, who asked not to be identified, told UPI there was no way to tell from enforcement agency reports whether the rape increases may have resulted partly from more willingness of women to report a crime widely recognized as a stigmatizing, traumatic experience.

The number of crimes against property, such as larceny-theft, burglary and auto theft, declined 5 percent nationwide, the report said. But there were 5 percent more aggravated assaults and 1 percent more murders, and the only decline among the violent crimes was a 4 percent drop in robberies.

The overall decrease was the first recorded since 1972, when the FBI reported an identical decline of 4 percent. There was a 6 percent increase in 1973, 18 percent in 1974 and 10 percent in 1975. The crime rate leveled off in 1976.

As for forcible rape, the FBI said the 1977 increases ranged from 17 percent in cities of 50,000 to 100,000 population to 5 percent in the 10,000 to 25,000 category.

The increases in reported rapes had been slackening since 11 percent increases for 1971 and 1972. The increase dropped to 10 percent in 1973, 8 percent in 1974 and 1 percent in 1975. There was no increase in 1976.

William H. Webster, the new FBI director, expressed concern about the increases in violent crime. In a statement accompanying the report, he said:

"The law enforcement community must take the lead in developing more effective deterrents to such crimes and alert the nation's citizenry to measures they can employ to diminish the opportunity for these criminal acts."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend who has a four-month-old child is constantly sticking a pacifier into its mouth. I mean constantly. I think a child should be allowed to cry a little. This mother even sticks the pacifier in when the baby is sleeping. If it slips out she pushes it back in. Can you please explain to all mothers that this is not good for little ones? — Mrs. J.D.

Pacifiers have their uses, but these are for limited occasions. The sucking can soothe the fussy infant, but your friend may be overdoing things. Yet, infants have wonderful ways of surviving the shortcomings of some parents.

No pacifier should take the place of TLC (tender loving care), such as holding, cuddling, or talking gently. Most infants quiet down in short order with these tactics. I don't see the need for a pacifier during sleep. Warning: Pacifiers should have sufficiently large guards on them so that they cannot be swallowed.

Pacifiers can be used effectively on those occasions when attention cannot be given — on buses, in supermarket checkout lines, and in church. Church comes to mind from a personal experience during the christening of my twin sons years ago. One let out a great howl of displeasure during the minister's comments. A kind lady of the choir came forward to offer a flower. This calmed things momentarily until the boy began tickling me and the clergyman under the nose with it. This scene provoked some noisy rejoicing among the spectators, who were cautioned by the somewhat distracted minister. On this occasion I would have welcomed a pacifier.

If pacifiers must be used, they should be cared for as carefully as one would a bottle nipple; that is, kept clean.

The La Leche League, International, approves the casual use of pacifiers, but certainly not to the extent you mention.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the usual treatment for temporal arteritis? Does this cause actual brain damage? — Mrs. P.E.

This is called "cranial arteritis." Arteritis means inflammation of arteries, in this case the temporal artery (in the temple area). It is most common among those over 50, causing severe headaches.

The common treatment is with corticosteriod drugs, such as coritsone. This must be continued until all vestiges of the inflammation disappear. Because the arteries involved serve head organs like the eyes, untreated it can have lasting effects on them.

The brain itself is usually not affected, but stroke can occur in serious and untreated cases. Forty per cent may have vision loss.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does toasting bread reduce the number of calories in it? — J.S.

This one pops up (pardon the pun) from time to time. No truth in it. All that's lost in toasting is water content.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true that if a woman in menopause took a substantial amount of vitamin E, she probably would be able to take less hormones or none at all? — Mrs. L.H.

This has been claimed but I don't see the connection.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can medicine to reduce heart activity cause dry skin and tiredness? — K.K.

Tiredness possibly, dry skin doubtfully. Both symptoms might be signs of thyroid underfunctioning, however.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does joint pain upon arising in the morning after a night's sleep mean arthritis? — H.K.

It is a classic symptom of arthritis, but it doesn't always have to mean arthritis. There's no reason to speculate. Examination and simple laboratory tests will definitely pinpoint arthritis.

• • •

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. Dr. Thosteson's booklet discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications. For a copy of "How You Can Control Arthritis," write to him at P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Six notrump is easy. Seven notrump, which was bid by Patricia Cayne, playing with her world-class expert husband, Jimmy, was not easy at all.

"How can you bid like that?" growled Jimmy, when dummy was shown.

"You'll make it," said Patricia, and sauntered off to get a cup of coffee.

"Right," Jimmy said to himself. The contract seemed extremely bleak. But Jimmy, as any champion would, formulated a line of play that would at least give him a chance.

At trick one it was crucial that Jimmy win in the correct hand. He had to win the ace of diamonds in dummy or else he would certainly go down. He needed the king of diamonds as an entry to his hand to squeeze West near the end of the hand.

At trick two Jimmy crossed to his king of clubs and played a spade to dummy's jack. The finesse won. He had jumped the first hurdle. "Sure I'll make it," he said, as he led the king and queen of hearts and ran the club suit, discarding the four of diamonds on the fifth club.

He reached his hand with the king of diamonds. Everyone had three cards left. Dummy had the A 4 of spades and the 6 of diamonds, East had the 10 9 of spades and J of hearts, South had the Q 5 of spades and the A of hearts, and West the K 8 of spades and the 10 of diamonds.

Jimmy led the ace of hearts and the defense was finished. If West pitched his diamond then, dummy would take the last two tricks with the ace of spades and the six of diamonds. If West threw the eight of spades, Jimmy would discard dummy's six of diamonds and at trick 12 would gobble up West's now singleton king of spades with the ace and score the grand slam with the queen of spades.

"I made it," Jimmy bubbled to Patricia when she returned for the next hand.

"Of course you did," she said.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's no use for me to diet. I know that now.

All those years when my knees rubbing together whispered "No, no," but there was a "Yes, yes" in my mouth, I fought the battle.

All those years when I lost ten pounds every Monday (five in my neck and five in my bust), I hung in there.

All those years when I embraced cottage cheese as a formal religion, I gave it my all.

But after yesterday, I have to admit, I'm beaten. I'm fighting the battle alone.

It started in the morning when I faced the refrigerator with my hand over my heart and once again pledged allegiance to hunger. I poured myself a glass of buttermilk and tossed it down. I felt virtuous.

At lunch, I threw down a cup of bouillon and pretended celery was wicked.

I had dinner ready to serve by 3:30 in the afternoon. It was well-balanced and would be totally satisfying. Broiled fish, an oil-free salad, asparagus and an apple.

At 4:00 p.m. I looked at the dinner again. It looked pale, so I surrounded it with a fruit salad with cocoanut in it.

At 4:30, with nothing to do, I rolled out a pan of biscuits to pop into the oven.

By 5:00, the asparagus looked naked without a sauce, so I opted for a Hollandaise.

By 5:30, I was furious. How dare my husband be late and force me to obesity? I added whipped potatoes to the meal.

By 5:45, as I stood watching the driveway, I got a horrifying feeling. How could you possibly serve dry whipped potatoes? I added a pan of gravy.

By 6:00, the fish looked terminal. I decided to get my husband's mind off the small main course by giving him a robust appetizer. I rolled out those little butter, and cheese and flour things stuffed with olives and popped them in the oven.

By 6:15, I sliced the apples and covered them with a pie.

At 6:30, my husband walked into the kitchen. "I'm home!" he shouted brightly.

"You animal! You don't care about other people at all. How they look. How they feel themselves. If I go to my grave with pantyhose around my hips, let it be on your conscience!"

He pretended he didn't know what I was talking about.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible©

Matt. 13:47-58, 14:1-9, The Living Bible

47,48 Again, the Kingdom of Heaven can be illustrated by a fisherman—he casts a net into the water and gathers in fish of every kind, valuable and worthless. When the net is full, he drags it up onto the beach and sits down and sorts out the edible ones into crates and throws the others away.

49 That is the way it will be at the end of the world—the angels will come and separate the wicked people from the godly,

50 Casting the wicked into the fire; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

51 Do you understand?" "Yes," they said, "we do."

52 Then He added, "Those experts in Jewish law who are now My disciples have double treasures—from the Old Testament as well as from the New!".

53,54 When Jesus had finished giving these illustrations, He returned to His home town, Nazareth in Galilee, and taught there in the synagogue and astonished everyone with His wisdom and His miracles.

55 "How is this possible?" the people exclaimed. "He's just a carpenter's son, and we know Mary his mother and his brothers—James, Joseph, Simon, and Judas.

56 And His sisters—they all live here. How can He be so great?"

57 And they became angry with Him! Then Jesus told them, "A prophet is honored everywhere except in his own country, and among his own people!"

58 And so He did only a few great miracles there, because of their unbelief.

CHAPTER 14

1 When King Herod heard about Jesus,

2 He said to his men, "This must be John the Baptist, come back to life again. That is why He can do these miracles."

3 For Herod had arrested John and chained him in prison at the demand of his wife Herodias, his brother Philip's ex-wife,

4 Because John had told him it was wrong for him to marry her.

5 He would have killed John but was afraid of a riot, for all the people believed John was a prophet.

6 But at a birthday party for Herod, Herodias' daughter performed a dance that greatly pleased him,

7 So he vowed to give her anything she wanted!

8 Consequently, at her mother's urging, the girl asked for John the Baptist's head on a tray!

9 The king was grieved, but because of his oath, and because he didn't want to back down in front of his guests, he issued the necessary orders.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Readers: I promised to print "at some later date" the original, ungarbled version of the definition of Success as it was written in 1905 by Bessie Anderson Stanley. The author's son, Arthur J. Stanley, Jr., a senior judge of the U. S. district court in Leavenworth, Kansas, has provided documentation from the Kansas State Historical Society that his mother is indeed the author.

When I first printed the essay in 1966, a reader said it was by Ralph Waldo Emerson. Subsequently, 28 people wrote to say they had written it and wanted credit. With pleasure (and a sigh of relief) I set the record straight.

SUCCESS

By Bessie Anderson Stanley

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has enjoyed the truth of pure women, the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world a better place than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a pretty poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given them the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory a benediction.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I have a good friend who bakes some very special cookies and brings them to my home periodically. A great deal of time and effort go into her cookies. (Not to mention her costly ingredients.) Invariably, she puts these divine cookies in a shoebox.

Even though she uses lots of tissue paper packing I can "taste" the shoes before I even put the cookies into my mouth. I don't want to hurt this woman's feelings but I feel I should tell her. Can you suggest a tactful way? — All Boxed In In Columbus

Dear All: Go to the corner hardware store or the Five-and Dime and buy some plastic containers. Or, do you by any chance save the tins from fruitcakes, candy, etc.? Don't wait until your friend brings over another batch of cookies that taste like shoes. Present her with the containers and tell her the truth. She will consider it an act of friendship.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin, Wilma, age 16, lives in Texas. She has written to say she is coming to visit during spring vacation. Wilma is a neat girl, lots of fun and she has a terrific sense of humor, but she weighs as much as my 18-year-old brother who plays on the high school football team.

Mom says I have to fix her up with some dates or I can't go out when she is here. All the guys I know want to see a picture. I'm afraid to show them what she looks like.

I know it isn't fair to prejudge a girl by her looks, but the guys in Lincoln, Nebraska, are funny about blind dates and I'm in one heck of a spot. Suggest something fast! — Texas Problem Of A Cornhusker

Dear Corny: If there's any oil in Wilma's family it wouldn't hurt to mention it. In the meantime, don't try to fix her up with the dudes who have dozens of chicks lusting after them. Pick some of the less-in-demand larger guys. They would probably welcome a fixed-up date.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Buffet Serving Suggestions Given

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I notice that you often give "buffet supper" menus. I'd like to serve buffet style when we have a party because it's easier for me than serving at the table, but my husband says he hates juggling a plate on his knees. Besides, I know he really doesn't like helping himself. What would you do? — DILEMMA.

DEAR DILEMMA: I can sympathize with your husband because I, too, dislike juggling a plate or a tray on my lap. And individual tray-tables are usually too low, too far away or too shaky. The most comfortable way to "serve buffet" is to set places (with place cards) at the dining table and-or small tables and have the help-yourself food on a side table.

As to your husband's dislike of helping himself, there's no reason why you shouldn't "fix" a plate and offer it to him or put it at his place. It's always been appropriate for a man to help a languid lady from a buffet table and bring the plate to her. So in this day of liberation, why can't a woman help a man?

In other words, I'd serve buffet style whenever it made entertaining easy. You may want to show the following excerpt to your husband so he can have a good laugh over it. It's a plea for buffet service made in 1850 by a European traveler after visiting this country.

She wrote that in America at the dining table there is such "an incessant asking and inviting, and selecting and answering" that "there is really no time for the enjoyment of the meal, much less of conversation. Neither is one able to help one's self; but the host or hostess, aunt or uncle, or some other polite person, or ... the servant ... helps you, and you seldom get just what you wish for, or as much or as little as you want, and not on that part of the plate where you wish to have it.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

The day sometimes comes when older folks are in dire need of younger hands and steadier feet to climb up on a chair or ladder to change a light bulb. But they hesitate to ask for what is so minor to the young, yet almost impossible to the old.

When you call on an "old" friend, ask if there are any chores you might perform. How much you will be appreciated and blessed.

I write for two dear old ladies, age 88 and 75. Visitors came and went recently at their home. The light bulbs were burned out and the ladies were too shy to ask for help. There they were, left to ponder their image of "still being able to care for themselves alone." Don't believe it!

Your own much appreciated help over the years makes you one of my very best friends.

I'm an old newshen and I love and appreciate your helpful co mn. -Norma D. True

You must have a heart as big as all outdoors to love and care for those who no longer are able to do everything for themselves.

I'm pleased as punch to be considered one of your best friends. Love you! -Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you have lots of drop-in company? Time is precious. Keep small jobs (set aside) to do just for those visits, such as sewing up a hem, sewing on buttons, cleaning out your sewing box, etc. Good friends should not mind at all.

During the dreary months we "visit" over coffee and bring along lots of handwork to finish. All of us benefit from that. -P.W.

DEAR HELOISE:

This is an easy way to butter corn on the cob.

When the corn has cooked, lift the ears onto a platter. Have an oblong pan ready with the needed amount of margarine or butter already melted over low heat.

Roll ears of corn in the butter and return them to the platter. Wonderful when a lot of people are eating.

This is a neat way to enjoy those good ol' roasting ears. Try it. -Teresa Spear

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a suggestion for a Mother's Day gift.

Ten years before my mother passed away I decided that my birthday was to be my mother's individual Mother's Day.

On the Sunday nearest my birthday I ordered my mother's favorite plant to be delivered to her church to decorate the platform.

After the church services was over she took the plant home to enjoy!

Lucky would be the mother of eight children and each sent her a present on their birthday! -Flora M. Graham

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a lot of costume jewelery, mostly necklaces -chains, strings of beads, etc.

My necklaces were constantly getting tangled in knots in my jewelery case. I was losing a lot of time, also my disposition, trying to get the tangles out.

I solved my problem by buying two men's tie holders and hung them on the inside of my closet doors.

Each tie holder will easily hold two or three necklaces.

Now all I have to do is open the door and take one look to find what I want to wear. No more loss of time and best of all, I keep my good disposition. - Your Admirer

Votes By Area Members Of Congress Recorded

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Mar. 9 thru 16.

HOUSE

HUMPHREY-HAWKINS Rejected, 205 for and 215 agaisnt, an amendment requiring the federal budget to be balanced by 1983. It was proposed to the Humphrey-Hawkins bill (HR 50) which would establish a national goal of "full employment" and set up several government policies and programs to achieve that objective. A final vote on HR 50 was imminent.

This amendment sought to add to HR 50 another national economic goal — a balanced federal budget within five years. It was backed by the Republican leadership, the business community and other voices who thought Humphrey-Hawkins put too much emphasis on federal pump-priming to create jobs.

Rep. John M. Ashbrook (R-Ohio), sponsor of the amendment, said that what its opponents "want to do, and let us be honest about it, is to take the important issue of deficit spepnding and...in effect, pigeonhole it."

Rep. Robert Giamo (D-Conn.), an opponent, called the amendment to "rigid" and said HR 50 must "be directed toward umemployment, inflation, and productiviity, a healthy rate of growth in the economy — in short, all of the things that make a balanced budget possible."

Members voting "yea" favored including a balanced budget as a mandatory goal of Humphrey-Hawkins.

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), James Collins (R-3), Ray Roberts (D-4), Bill Archer (R-7), W.R. Poage (D-11), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Richard White (D-16), Omar Burleson (D-17), George Mahon (D-19), and Bob Gammage (D-22),Manuel Lujan (R-1) and Harold Runnels (D-2) voted "yea."

Reps. Charles Wilson (D-2), Jim Mattox (D-5), Bob Eckhardt (D-8), Jack Brooks (D-9), Jake Pickle (D-10), James Wright (D-12), Jack Hightower (D-13), Barbara Jordan (D-18), Henry Gonzalez (D-20), Abraham Kazen (D-23) and Dale Milford (D-24) voted "nay."

Reps. Olin Teague (D-6), and Robert Kruegar (D-21) and John Young (D-14), did not vote.

'FLEXITIME' Failed, 242 for and 141 against, to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to pass a bill (HR 7814) against, to broaden the use of "flexitime" by federal employes. A two-thirds rather than a short-cut parliamentary procedure that prevented the offering of amendments.

Flexitime allows workers to vary the traditional schedule of five eight-hour days. It provides for combinations such as four ten-hour days, so as to give workers more flexibility in their personal lives. HR 7814 sought to enable the Civil Service Commission to begin a far-year flexitime experiment at some agencies and departments.

Rep. Herbert Harris (Dsaid: "In the working world, we assume an 8-hour, 5-day week is somehow fixed in concrete...We must face the fact that the 40-hour week just does not suit everybody; nor is it always necessaryl. Most of all, it is not sacrosanct."

Rep. Abraham Kazen (D-Tex.), an opponent, said that eventually under flexitime" every federal employe is going to work three or four days a week and the balace of the time will go out in that labor market, which is already highly saturated with unemployment, and get an additional job..."

Members voting "nay" opposed flexitime on its merit or because they objected to the short-cut parliamentearey procedure under which the bill was considered.

Brooks, Wright, Jordan and Gonzalez voted "yea."

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Teague, Archer, Pickle, Poage, Hightower, Young, de la Garza, White, Burleson, Mahon, Kazen, Runnels and Milford voted "nay."

Wilson, Eckhardt, Kruegar, Lujan and Gammage did not vote.

ASSASINATIONS PANEL Failed, 182 for and 189 against, to cut the budget of the House Select Committee on Assassinations and require the panel's continued existence to be justified at hearings conducted by the House Administration Committee. After failure of this motion, the House adopted H Res 956, which approved a 1978 budget of $2.5 million for the committee created to investigate the assasinations of Dr. Martin Luther King and President John F. Kennedy. The committe plans extensive public hearing in the fall and a final report soon theraf-ter.

Rep. Robert Bauman (R-Md.), Sponsor of the motion to curtail the committee, said: "This committee is getting twice the...money that the House just authorized the Judiciary Committee, which has far more current and important activities in which to engage."

Rep. Stewart McKinney (R-Conn.), a committee member and opponent of the motion, said: "I think we will come back to this House and make the House proud to show that for the first time this body has carried forth an investigation in a professional, quiet manner and an investigation that is second to none in either house of Congress."

Members voting "yea" favored requiring the Assasinations Committee to justify itself.

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Teague, Archer, Pickle, Poage, Hightower, de la Garza, White, Gonzalez, Kazen, Runnels and Milford voted "yea."

Wilson, Mattox, Brooks, Wright, Young and Jordan voted "nay."

Eckhardt, Mahon, Kruegar, Lujan and Gammage did not vote.

PANAMA CANAL Consented, 68 for and 32 against, to the neutrality treaty, the first of two Panama Canal treaties to be to be voted on this year by the Senate. A two-thirds majority of those senators present and voting was required to approve the treaty and send it to the President for ratification. House concurrence was not required.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D) voted "yea."

Sens. John Tower (R), Harrison Schmitt (R) and Peter Domenici (R) voted "Nay."

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — I am having difficulty with the Veterans Administration in receiving a judgement on my claim. Before I was honorably discharged from the Air Force on the 27th of March, 1977, I was involved in an accident at Beal Air Force Base, California. At the time of my discharge, after two operations, I still had a cast on my leg and was unable to support myself. I have now moved in with my brother while I'm attending the University of Texas at Austin. I was informed by my VA counselor that it would take 90-120 days to receive a judgment on my disability claim. Three months went by, so I contacted the VA again and was told to wait another 3 months. The second grace period has expired without a reply of any kind. Any help you can lend toward solving this problem would be greatly appreciated. — D. S., Austin

SENATOR BENSEN RESPONDS — The Veterans Administration informs me that you qualify for a 10 precent disability and the expressed regret that you were not informed earlier of your award. Part of the reason the processing was delayed was because your records were tied up with an application you had made for educational benefits, but the fact that you were told to wait for a second 3-month period is contrary to VA policy. Officials are investigating to determine whether disciplinary action is warranted against the counselor who gave you that information.

MESSAGE — I am a retired civilian employee of the Air Force and I have a problem with a claim for travel expenses for my wife and child. In May of 1969 I was transferred from Seville, Spain to San Antonio, but because my wife and child had lost documents necessary to re-enter the U.S. they did not return to this country until February, 1972. On their arrival, 5 years ago, I began processing a claim for re-imbursement for their travel expenses and have heard nothing from the Air Force since except hat they are working on it. As a retiree, the money is getting more important to me daily. The interest alone is over $100. I have almost given up and thrown my hands into the air, but before I do that, I want to try again with your help. Thank you. — D.J., San Antonio

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The Air Force tells me that you were sent a settlement certificate disallowing your claim in June, 1975. Since you have not received it, they are forwarding a copy to you. Under the law they have no choice but to disallow the claim since the maximum time in which dependents can begin allowable travel is two years from the effective date of the employee's transfer, and your wife and child did not begin their travel until nearly 3 years had passed.

Do you have a problem with government? MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON cuts through the red tape to get answers to yor questions about Social Security, veterans benefits, immigration matters and other problems you may have run into your dealings with the Federal Government in Washington. Write MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON, c/o Senator Lloyd Bentsen, U. S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510. Inquiries to MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON are sometimes edited before publication, but the intent and substance of the inquiries are maintained.

HOBBS, N.M. — Sixteen persons have made application for the position of superintendent of the Hobbs Municipal School District, according to Mrs. W.D. Richards, president of the Hobbs Board of Education.

Applicants for the position will be screened by the Hobbs Board of Education through Friday. The applicant selected will fill the position being left vacant by Roger Luginbill, who is retiring June 30. Luginbill came to Hobbs two years ago from Roswell.

Mrs. Richards said each of the five board members will review the applications and rate the candidates.

In fairness to the applicants, Mrs. Richards said names of the candidates will not be made public because of agreements with many of the applicants who submitted their application material to the board.

Mrs. Richards added that there "are some very good candidates in this group of people" and board members are being "very cautious about the choosing of a new superintendent."

That extra energy Popeye gets from spinach is no joke; dietitians say that spinach is exceptionally high in nutritional value. Starting in the 1920s, spinach received much publicity for its wealth of calcium and iron, along with Vitamins A and C. But research has found spinach is rich in oxalic acid, which prevents the calcium from being utilized by the body.

Deadline Set In City Lawsuit

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward Tuesday gave Joseph Lee Green until April 10 to reply to the City of Lubbock's motion for dismissal of Green's police brutality suit.

Green claims in a half-million-dollar damage suit filed against the city that three police officers drugged and beat him after arresting him Feb. 4.

The city Monday filed a motion to dismiss the suit, claiming the statute under which it was filed does not apply to a municipality.

The city also maintains no facts are alleged in Green's suit sufficient to invoke the court's jurisdiction under any other statute not cited by the plaintiff.

And it claims governmental immunity for any acts that may have been committed by individuals.

Green, 19, of 2801 E. 2nd St. claims the police officers used unnecessary force when they arrested him as he was walking along East 2nd Street.

He alleges they drugged him with a shot in the neck and that he did not regain consciousness until he was at the Lubbock County Jail.

The suit says that at the jail the officers dragged him along the floor by the handcuffs which locked his arms behind his back, and that they beat his head on the floor.

Green, who filed the suit as a pauper without an attorney's help, says the alleged beating stopped only when county jail personnel intervened.

Records show he was a patient in a local hospital for several days after the alleged assault.

The alleged incident has been the subject of police department, sheriff department, criminal district attorney's office and Federal Bureau of Investigation probes.

The three officers involved were initially relieved of duty but returned to their jobs after Police Chief J.T. Alley said he found them guilty of no wrongdoing. They maintained they had used necessary force to subdue a violent person who was resisting arrest as a suspect in a reported assault case.

No charges were filed by the district attorney's office against Green in connection with the incident.

Oil Company Reports Large Energy Saving

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co., besides talking about saving fuel, is doing it — enough last year to provide fuel and energy for 90,000 homes, the company said Tuesday.

Use of gas, oil, fuel oil and other forms of energy was cut by the equivalent of 3.9 million barrels of oil in 1977, the company said.

Last year — the fourth year of its energy conservation program — Phillips had its best record, bringing its energy reductions to 16 percent.

"Cumulative savings would provide the total yearly energy needs for the residences of a city with a population of more than one million people," the company statement said.

The biggest reduction in 1977 resulted from installation of new processing units and a change in feedstock at the Plains Butadiene Plant in Borger, Texas. About 15 million cubic feet of natural gas daily was released for other uses.

Energy savings in the four years have resulted from a conservation effort that includes new equipment, improved technology and more efficient operating and maintenance pracices and procedures, Phillips said.

Teachers Union May Soften Dislike For Education Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Federation of Teachers will soften its opposition to creating a separate Department of Education if the new agency is given broad powers, union president Albert Shanker said Tuesday.

"The broader it is, the fewer objections we would have," he told the Senate governmental affairs committee at a hearing on a bill cosponsored by 55 senators to create the new department.

The AFT chief expressed fear that a separate department would aggravate the tendency of "educators at all levels to isolate themselves." The narrower the department, "the greater our fears about isolation," he said.

Most education groups strongly support the bill, whose chief sponsor, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., is the committee chairman and a former secretary of health, education and welfare in the Kennedy administration.

President Carter reiterated last month that he will keep a campaign promise to create the new department, but he has not yet spelled out what its components will be.

Only half the estimated $20 billion a year that the federal government spends on education passes through HEW.

The Veterans Adminstration and the departments of agriculture, labor, defense and housing and urban development all share pieces of the education budget in the form of G.I. funds, school lunches, job training, military schools and loans for college housing.

Ribicoff's bill would combine most of those functions in the new department, but not the VA education programs.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. stirred the wrath of the veterans' lobby last month when he said the VA programs might be in the new department.

Both proponents and critics of a separate department agree that HEW's current educational hierarchy is unwieldy and needs some reorganization.

Illinois Superintendent of Education Joseph M. Cronin complained that his state has to file 36 different plans with three federal departments — HEW, Agriculture and Labor — to qualify for school funds.

"It's really absurd," said Cronin, adding that he has 20 persons on his staff whose main task is to compile these plans.

Msgr. Wilfird H. Paradis testified that the U.S. Catholic Conference's education committee opposes creation of a new department.

He expressed fears that the new department "will further increase federal interference in both public and private education," and be "dominated by public school interest groups."

Billy Defends 1973 Special Gas Allotment

ATLANTA (AP) — President Carter's brother, Billy, says his gas station in Plains, Ga., received special emergency allotments of gasoline during the oil embargo because it was the only station serving motorists in the area, The Atlanta Journal reported Tuesday.

In a telephone interview with The Journal, Carter answered questions about a federal probe into alleged abuses in Georgia's emergency fuel allocation program during the oil embargo in 1973 and 1974.

The St. Petersburg Times reported earlier this month that Billy Carter "kept a two-pump gas station 'alive' — and very profitable with the help of up to 25,000 gallons of emergency state gasoline a month."

The newspaper said federal regulations then forbade commercial stations from receiving gasoline from emergency state stockpiles. But, the newspaper reported, Georgia energy officials ordered American Oil Co. to supply "a total 84,000 gallons of gasoline to Billy Carter between Jan. 7 and May 8, 1974."

Two congressmen asked U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell earlier this month to name an independent prosecutor to investigate allegations that Billy Carter may have received special treatment for his station.

The Journal said Carter confirmed that his Plains station had received allotments of emergency gas but he did not know immediately how much.

"If you want to come down here to Plains I can tell you how much," the paper quoted Carter as saying.

Accused Transmissions Studied

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s own investigation of its automatic transmissions so far has turned up no sign that there's anything wrong with them, the automaker said Tuesday.

A federal agency has said defects in certain Ford automatic transmissions may be linked to 114 accidents and six deaths occurring when the transmissions slipped out of the parking gear into reverse.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is investigating two types of transmissions on 1973-78 Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars and trucks.

"Thus far, our investigation has not revealed that a defect exists in either of the transmissions in question," said John C. Eckhold, director of Ford's automotive safety office.

Eckhold said nearly 9 million vehicles with the two types of transmissions have been built.

"Because of the infrequency of the claimed incidents of malfunction, it is extremely difficult to identify a causal relationship associated with each of these incidents," Eckhold said.

"If, in fact, there is a safety problem with certain Ford transmissions, we are as interested as the government in determining the extent of the problem and what steps should be taken to correct it."

The agency announced its investigation last fall. This week it disclosed that the alleged defect might have caused six deaths and injuries to 39 persons.

The initial probe covered Ford's C-6 transmission, which is on about 5.3 million cars and trucks. Last week, it was expanded to cover the FMX transmission on the rest of the vehicles in question.

The agency said it has not identified a defect in the transmissions but said there appears to be one.

Special Ranks As Silly Saga

NEW YORK (AP) — The Beatles are the object of a "sendup" when four rock musicians calling themselves the Rutles, described as "the pre-fab four," star in "All You Need Is Cash," on NBC.

The 90-minute special tonight follows the Rutles saga from a rathskeller in Hamburg to a breakup with so many lawsuits that "Sig sued himself accidentally."

Silly is the most apt description of the show that Gary Weis, the codirector and photographer, could come up with. "Silly is not the most articulate word," he says, "but this show is a silly look at the scene through those Beatles years.

"It's satire, but it is an absurd kind of view. Eric Idle is a member of Monty Python's Flying Circus, but I don't think the humor here is quite as absurd as Python."

Asked whether fervent Beatles admirers will be offended, Weis says he doesn't think so. "It takes a shot at them but it's not a putdown. It sends them up, as they would say in England. We purposely stayed away from taking anyone on as an individual.

"Oh, there are a few subtle innuendoes, and a couple not so subtle. But it's the real phenomenon of the Beatles we're doing."

Idle, primarily a writer but also a musician and actor, had his own half-hour series for two seasons on BBC, "Rutland Weekend Television." The show was named for Rutland County, the smallest county in England, and in one episode, a Beatles-like rock group called the Rutles, was born.

Idle was invited to appear on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," of which Weis is field producer. He brought a two-minute film of the Rutles and asked Weis if he'd like to be part of an expanded version of the Rutles story. Weis agreed to do the project, to photograph it himself as a documentary.

Not much is made in the special of which Rutle is supposed to be which Beatle — they weren't chosen because they look like the Beatles. But Beatles fans can tell.

Neil Innes is Ron Nasty, the John Lennon character. He wrote the words and music for all the Rutles songs.

Idle hadn't intended to appear as one of the Rutles, but Weis convinced him he should play Dirk McQuickly, the Paul McCartney role.

Some viewers will get more jokes than others, Weis says. Most will know that the title, "All You Need Is Cash," is a takeoff on one of the Beatles' hit songs, "All You Need Is Love," and that "Ouch!" refers to a Beatles movie, "Help!"

And if you don't know the Beatles had a lawyer named Kline, the Rutles' lawyer, Ron Decline, still has a funny name, Weis says.

Like a film made for a movie house — and Weis wants to pull away from TV a bit and get into directing those — this show is a good one to watch with a group of people.

Park Work Set At Childress

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Another recreational facility is planned for construction here as a result of efforts of city officials and a federal grant.

City Manager David Galligan said a work program grant through the Comprehensive Education and Training Assistance Act has been approved to make improvements at Scott Lake. The funding is in the amount of $18,726.

Galligan said the grant will be used to employ 12 Childress High School students and a supervisor to make improvements in the area adjoining the lake, at the city's southern edge. The students are to begin work in June.

Galligan said the improvements include installation of a fence, 12 picnic tables, planting of 45 trees, seeding of the area and construction of a log-type playground and a playing field which "can be used for baseball, football and other sports."

In addition, the road to the lake is to be paved and water lines will be installed in the recreational area.

The city manager explained that the project was started as a benefit to residents living in the south section of town and that the city council agreed to set aside $5,000 in federal revenue sharing funds several months ago for some improvements at the lake.

"However, because of the CETA grant the program has developed into a community effort," Galligan said.

The area now is being cleared of underbrush preparatory to leveling by city crews.

The lake, once a city water source, had fallen into a state of neglect in recent years. It was stocked with catfish and bass about two years ago.

Biographer Solves Enigma Of Montgomery Clift

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It took eight months of persuasion — and an old address book — for author Patricia Bosworth to get cooperation for her biography of Montgomery Clift.

She had spent the time trying to win the confidence of Clift's brother, Brooks. The clincher came when he found not only Miss Bosworth's name in the actor's address book, but also the name of her father, famed Hollywood attorney Bartley Crum.

"It was essential that I have the family's cooperation," said Miss Bosworth, who knew Clift through her father when she was a child.

"I not only wanted to show how he evolved into one of the great actors of the 1950s, but he was an enigma to everyone and I wanted to see if I could break through that. His brother, Brooks, was the key to that. He saved everything."

Clift was a legendary figure on Broadway and in motion pictures. He won acclaim for such movies as "Red River," "From Here to Eternity," "A Place in the Sun" and "The Misfits."

"Montgomery Clift," published by Harcourt, Brace and Jananovich Inc., also penetrates beneath the surface to explore his self doubts and his battle with alcohol and drugs. He was in love with Elizabeth Taylor, but struggled for a clear sexual identity, she writes.

Clift died in 1966 at the age of 45, but Miss Bosworth chronicles the beginning of his death from 1956, when he was disfigured in an automobile accident.

"'Raintree County' was one of his most unsuccessful films," she said. "But it as grotesquely interesting because you see his face before and after the accident. You'll see him in one scene before the accident, then in another after the accident. It was ghoulish."

She said she had known Clift as a child. She said, "I met him at the height of his fame. At the time of 'Red River' and 'The Search.' He was a beautiful looking man, full of energy and curiosity, very mercurial, always asking questions."

She said her father arranged for Clift to travel to Israel and had gotten him into death row at San Quentin when he played the ambitious young killer in "A Place in the Sun." Bartley Crum was also California campaign manager for Wendell Wilkie, Clift's idol, during the 1940 presidential campaign.

Miss Bosworth, a former actress, said, "Montgomery Clift fathered the whole field of inner acting. He was the first actor who seemed obsessed on screen. When Al Pacino and Jack Nicholson play the wild, crazy parts, it doesn't seem so unusual now. But when Montgomery Clift started this eccentricity in the 1950s it was unusual.

"He had an edge to him. I remember Richard Burton saying that he carried with him a sense of danger. He challenged the audience. There was this incredible inner intensity that came out on the screen."

Miss Bosworth said that when she began interviewing people for the book, she got many versions of the same stories.

"For instance, the car accident," she said. "I got six different versions. I only told one, a sort of composite version. You have to weigh the different account. Usually I would use the version where two or more people tell essentially the same story."

She said after she got the cooperation of Brooks Clift, he invited her to his home in Atlanta.

"He opened this room filled with stuff," she recalled. "The costumes from 'Raintree County,' the bugle and duffel bag from 'Here To Eternity.' There were letters, everything. It was a biographer's dream. Monty was a great letter writer and friends saved the letters."

Miss Bosworth appeared on Broadway in "Inherit the Wind" and in the movies in "The Nuns Story."

She said she was in a scene in "Inherit the Wind" when a shoe suddenly flew off and landed in front of Paul Muni, who was playing Clarence Darrow.

"I thought I would be fired," she said. "After the curtain, I was called to Muni's dressing room. He said he wanted me to know he had ordered a new pair of shoes for me. He said an actor should always be prepared with the right wardrobe."

But even while she was acting she was writing. She said, "My husband had the bright idea I should write about what I know — show business. I interviewed Dustin Hoffman when he was an unknown for New York magazine when it was part of the Herald Tribune. The fact that I was published gave me the courage to leave acting."

She wrote for many magazines and at one time was editor of Viva aand managing editor of Harper's Bazaar.

She is now at work on another book, but will say only that it's a biography of a woman.

Old Lyric Lives One Mo' Time

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In its day, the Lyric was a rare theater — black vaudeville for a black audience.

The legendary Bessie Smith sang there. Ma Raicey's powerful voice shook the walls. The comedians Butterbeans and Susie cavorted onstage.

In the 1920s it was the "in" place for uppercrust blacks to go, when the only other places of entertainment they were allowed in were honky tonks and speakeasies.

All that's left of it is the word "LYRIC," inset in blue tile in the cement sidewalk on a corner in the French Quarter. The theater burned in 1927.

Now Vernel Bagneris has conjured up a lively ghost of that day with an entertainment dubbed, "One Mo' Time." Subtitle: "An Evening at the Lyric Theatre — 1926."

Blending backstage and footlights in the same set, "One Mo' Time" ranges from amusingly catty dressing-room talk to rousing performances out in front, most of them musical solos.

Bagneris, 28, is a slender, onetime state-supported artist-in-residence whose acting roles have ranged from God to Jelly Roll Morton. He said the entire hour and a half came out of research.

"Everything in it is from those days — the sex, the racial references, asides about marijuana, known then as 'weed,'" he said. "Young blacks can't believe it came from the '20s. They think all that stuff is new.

"Even our costumes really are from 1926 and we are having trouble with dry rot," he added.

Tunes were lifted from ancient recordings.

"It was hell sifting out the lyrics but once you got it down it was great," Bagneris said. "It makes a black feel good to dig back and find stuff like that. There is a certain pride to be taken in that brilliance, that talent."

With him in "One Mo' Time" are Sylvia "Kuumba" Williams, a plump scene-stealer and also former Louisiana artist-in-residence; Topsy Chatman, whose shimmy in sequins scorches the first three rows, and Thais Clark as a loudmouth, wisecracking mama.

In addition to the cast, a five-piece band is onstage — trumpet, clarinet, tuba, piano, drums. A pair of Swedes who came here to study jazz handled arrangements.

With "One Mo' Time" strung together, Bagneris is wrestling with the question of how best to show it. So far, there have been but two performances: one for prospective customers, another in the city's flashy Theater for the Performing Arts.

Bagneris works out a living in film and stage and prefers a safe, sure thing, not road show travel, hassle and risk. He thinks the show would be a long-run natural as a little bit of history and entertainment for New Orleans convention and tour groups.

Of all the admiring reviews, Bagneris prefers one he got from his grandmother, who well remembers the old Lyric.

"She told me, 'It's just like it was,' " he said.

Peter Verney's Book Details History Of Circus

LONDON (UPI) — Ladiees and gennulmen, preesenting in the center ring, to astonish and amaze you, before your very eyes, a commodious compendium upon the Greatest Show on Earth.

Ladiees and gennulmen: "Here Comes the Circus!"

Peter Verney's engrossing new book of that title is described by its publisher, Paddington Press, as "The Amazing Story of the Magnificent and Stupendous Wonders of the Circus World Throughout the Ages."

"Those great days of the old circus have a magic of their own," Verney says. "The great parades, the wonderful posters, the steam calliope — there is still glamor about the everchanging, neverchanging circus."

Jugglers and acrobats have been performing since time began. "But it is now accepted that Philip Astley is father of the modern circus," Verney says.

Astley began displaying fancy horsemanship in an open London field, passing the hat afterwards. He found standing on a galloping horse was easier when the horse went in circles, and easiest of all when the circle was 42 feet across. The circus ring had been born.

Gradually Astley added other attractions. By 1770 his "Riding School" was completely under cover and "first brought together juggler and ropewalker, clown and curiosity, specacle and p a g e a n t r y, horsemanship and animal mastery" — the beginning of the circus as we know it.

He had rivals almost at once, and the circus's international tradition spread fast.

Astley went to Paris to found the French circushf isilowns, Charles Hughes, first took the circus to Russia. One of Hughes's pupils, John Bill Ricketts, mounted the first full circus in the United States, in Philadelphia in 1792.

In 1816 a rider and ropewalker named Thomas Taplin Cooke shipped a complete circus to America. It consisted of 56 horses and 40 members of the Cooke family — not counting Oceana Cooke who was born en route. The circus alway has been a family affair.

"In 1897," Verney notes, "there were over 200 lineal descendants of Thomas Taplin Cooke, and most of those were involved in the circus in one way or another."

Verney untangles other circus family roots, plus those of shows themselves. Nearly all circuses developed through merger or combination. Barnum merged with Bailey, and Barnum and Bailey merged with Ringling Brothers.

Circuses swelled to gigantic proportions from about 1860 — when England's "Lord" George Sanger invented the three-ring format — until the first world war.

One Sanger show in the 1870's, for instance, displayed a cast of "emus, ostriches, pelicans, kangaroos, reindeer, deer, bulls, buffalo, chamois and mouflan as well as 13 elephants, 52 horses, 200 men, 300 women and 200 children."

The star of that extravaganza, though he did nothing but ride around the ring in a carriage, was Phineas T. Barnum himself.

Childress Firm Reveals Order For New Homes

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — An additional contract for modular homes to be delivered to Algeria has been announced by an official of Lancer Homes.

Ben Woody, president of Lanchart Industries, Inc., said that the company's Lancer Homes division in Childress has been awarded a contract for 57 modular homes in Algeria.

The order, in the amount of $1.8 million, follows an earlier contract for slightly less than 200 modular homes late last year. That order totaled about $5 million.

Woody said the contract is with El Paso Gas Co., Austin-Europe Co. and the Algerian government.

"This repeat business is especially important to us since it demonstrates product acceptance in an overseas market," Woody noted.

The contract calls for delivery of the modular homes within the next three months.

Woody also announced that a new addition to the Lancer plant here is now in operation, with initial production plans calling for manufacture of 20 homes monthly. The 75,000 square-foot plant has a capacity for producing at least 60 modular homes per month.

The official said inclement weather in January and February caused temporary slowdowns in the plant's deliveries, but that Lanchart's prospects for record sales and earnings for this fiscal year continue to appear favorable.

Lancer Homes, located at the city airport, is Childress County's largest industry and manufactures both mobile and modular homes.

RAPS KRUEGER — Joe Christie, candidate for the Democratic Senate nomination, said at an Austin news conference Tuesday that there is "evidence aplenty" that major oil companies control the vote of his primary opponent, U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger. (AP Laserphoto)

Pine Belt Nightmare Nears End

(EDITORS NOTE: For nearly 30 years, people of the lush East Texas Pine Belt lived with the nightmare that one day the oil would be gone. El Dorado would become just so many sleepy, burned-out boom towns. Today, however, the area is experiencing a renaissance of sorts, and the nightmare is nearly over.)

By The Associated Press

"Vision. That's what we got now," boasted the oilman.

"Back in the 30s, everybody was too busy gettin' rich to think very far ahead. But it's changed. We got a mixture of young people with the oldtimers now...We got vision."

The unabashed testimonial comes courtesy of Kilgore native E.K. "Buster" Dickerson, a grandfatherly, self-appointed spokesman for his town and the Pine Belt in general.

Dickerson was here when the derricks stood so thick women used them as clothesline poles. He watched as the wildcatters and the "boomers" — 15,000 of them in a week's time in Kilgore alone — moved in. He watched them leave, too. Those who stayed knew the time would come soon enough when they would have to broaden the area's economic base or die.

Unlike the oil boom, however, the change was not made overnight. It is still under way. Oil, the still-strong natural gas fields and lumber continue to play leading roles in the area's economic structure, which is loosely bounded by Harrison, Smith and Angelina Counties.

Foundries, light manufacturing and a thriving retail community have now been added. There is also a stablized population base and even the potential for a new energy boom from the vast, untouched lignite deposits known here as "brown gold."

"I think the swing started about 10 or 15 years back," said East Texas Chamber of Commerce Director Jim McAuly. "People realized the quantity of oil and gas was not going to be an everlasting thing."

McAuly said the first step was repairing the area's sagging county road system.

"Once the roads were fixed, industry was able to get in here and take a look at our natural resources and then things just started to snowball," he said.

In the past decade, virtually every Pine Belt city of 10,000 or more has boasted a continuous population increase. Single-family building permits are at all-time highs in such seedling communities as Longview, Tyler, Lufkin, Nacogdoches, Marshall, Kilgore and Palestine.

The Longview Standard Metropolitan Statisticial Area (a unit used to measure population and socio-economic growth in an area that includes at least one city of 50,000 or more) has ranked no less than third behind Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston in industrial development the past six years.

Specific reasons for the growth depend on who is doing the talking. Energy experts credit the oil, gas and lignite deposits.

William Kaiser, a University of Texas geologist, wrote for the Longview Morning Journal: "In East Texas, more than 900,000 acres are under lease for lignite exploration with 17 different companies holding at least 5,000 acres each."

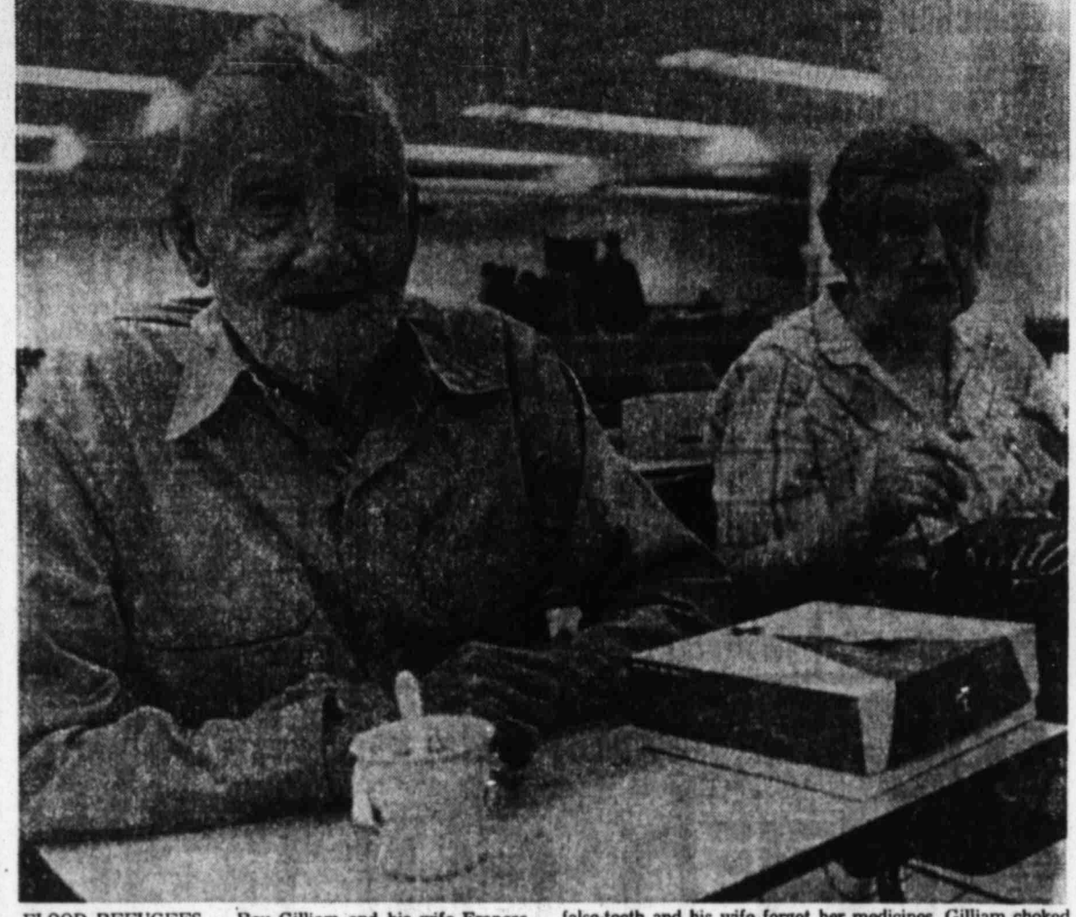

Forestry officials point to the huge Piney Woods tree farms. National forests stretch across 663,830 acres in 12 East Texas counties. The industry flourishes, in part, because of the area's annual 47 inches of rainfall.

City officials brag on their tax rates, abundant surface water supplies and low unemployment, which is about 5.5 percent area-wide.

Another less easily defined reason for the migration appears to be the number of moonlighting farmers who work in industrial plants. Bernard Weinstein, an associate professor at the University of Dallas, said his studies show the labor force in big cities is shrinking.

"Skilled people are getting hard to find," he said. "This is one of the reasons you find these plants and factories in the smaller SMSAs or out by themselves. Farmers, a lot of the smaller, independent ones, can't make a living on the land anymore so they are working part-time in the factories."

Weinstein also cited the Pine Belt's location as yet another attraction. He said the area is ideally located for industries that ship products East to New Orleans, north to Oklahoma and Arkansas and all Texas points.

FLOOD REFUGEES — Roy Gilliam and his wife Frances, have coffee and cookies at a refugee center, after they were rescued from their flood-bound home at Valley, Neb. in an open truck. The 90-year-old Gilliam left in such a hurry, he forgot his false-teeth and his wife forgot her medicines. Gilliam choked back tears as he worried about his 92-year-old brother still in Valley. U.S., Mexico Seek Solution To Gas Pricing Differences

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal energy official said Tuesday he is confident price problems blocking natural gas imports from Mexico can be resolved.

John F. O'Leary, deputy energy secretary, said Mexico is going ahead with construction of the 821-mile line of 48-inch pipe that would link its prolific Reforma producing area with domestic interstate lines in deep South Texas.

"We are not arguing about bringing the gas in here, we are arguing about price," O'Leary said during a question and answer session after speaking at Interpipe '78, an international pipeline technology conference and exhibition.

Six American firms signed a tentative agreement last August with Petroleos Mexicanos but the price dispute caused a memorandum of intent to expire Dec. 31.

"We import a substantial amount of gas from Canada at a current price of $2.16 a thousand cubic feet," O'Leary said.

"The Mexican proposition is that the imports be made at $2.60 and we regard that as almost inevitably triggering the Canadian market."

He said the Department of Energy favors the Mexican imports in principle.

"I am confident we are going to find some ground that is acceptable to the Mexicans and acceptable to us and probably in a time frame that will not in any sense of the word delay the project," he said.

O'Leary said one reason the federal government is not able to move forward with the Mexican project involves some of the national energy proposals now before Congress.

"For us, for example, a $2.60 price at the border at the same time we are proposing $1.75 for domestic gas raises serious questions," he said.

The head of an Oklahoma engineering and design firm told the pipeliners there is a need for major Middle East pipeline projects to transport oil to the Mediterranean Sea for movement to Europe and North America.

M. A. Greenwood, president of the Resource Sciences Corp., Tulsa, Okla., said two major pipelines scheduled for completion by 1981 will not be enough.

"By 1985 there will be a need for an additional 6 million barrels a day of pipeline capacity in the Middle East, which, if built at a cost in the range of $3 to $5 billion, will save the worldwide energy industry approximately $8 billion in 1985," Greenwood said.

Robinson Tells Of Daughter's New Will

HOUSTON (AP) — Oilman Ash Robinson testified in probate court Tuesday he typed his daughter's 1968 will that his grandson, Robert Hill, 17, now contends is a forgery.

Robinson said Joan Robinson Hill was present as he did the typing and said she told him what she wanted in the document. He said several of his daughter's friends told him she wanted the new will because she was afraid her husband, Dr. John Hill, was going to kill her.

The will left her estate, valued at about $300,000, to Robinson.

"Daddy, all this property came from you. I want it to go back to you," Robinson quoted his daughter as saying.

"She told me she knew I would take care of Robert."

Joan Robinson Hill died in 1969 and Hill was charged with murder by medical neglect. A 1972 trial ended in a mistrial and Hill was shot to death in 1972 while awaiting a second trial.

Robert Hill, his grandmother, Myra Hill, and adoptive mother, Connie Hill, later filed a damage suit alleging Robinson masterminded the murder of the plastic surgeon but the oilman was exonerated last year by a civil court jury.

Two women are now serving prison sentences upon conviction on charges of involvement in the kill-for-pay murder. A man who was charged with being the triggerman was shot to death by police in Longview prior to being brought to trial.

Robinson said he typed his daughter's will about two months after she had separated from Hill. He said she told him she was afraid Hill would squander her estate and not take care of her son.

A jury of five men and one woman is hearing the case in the court of Probate Judge William Bear.

Connie Hill, the surgeon's third wife, testified earlier that she and Robert could not afford to move from the Hill mansion in River Oaks because Robinson claims a one-half interest through the will although he has not contributed anything to the $1,300 monthly payments.

"All of the money we have invested would only come back to us in half, rather than in full," she said.

Houston Rally Protests Property Tax Valuations

HOUSTON (AP) — Almost 4,000 northwest Houston residents, holding a rally to protest what they called unfair property tax valuations, cheered wildly when State Rep. Wayne Peveto of Orange encouraged them to file suit to enjoin the city from collecting the tax.

Peveto, who has unsuccessfully sought reform in the state's property tax assessment system, told the crowd it is "blatantly unconstitutional" to revalue one section of the city and not do the same for all other areas.

"I guarantee you, you can tie it up and they can't collect a penny until the situation gets right," Peveto said. "You can bring them to their knees."

Many attending the Monday night rally complained of tax revalutations of up to 400 per cent this year, while other areas, they said, have not been revalued in 20 years.

Mrs. Glenda McKinney, president of the Garden Oaks Civic Club, read a resolution to the crowd, meeting at the Dalmar Fieldhouse, calling for a moratorium on city property tax revalutation until "a more equal and uniform tax assessment plan" is devised.

She said the club will sue the city if 1978 revalutations are not rescinded.

"You have no remedies in the present system," Peveto said. "It's time that people wake up and call for some kind of tax assessment reform."

Peveto has urged the Legislature to set up one agency in each county that would have sole authority to set property valuations.

The Orange lawmaker said appellate courts have ruled that property tax rolls cannot be revalued unless the entire city have been reassessed for a uniform tax.

Houston has embarked on a four-year revalutation program, but Peveto says revaluations should not become effective until the end of that period.

Councilman Jim McKaskle, who lives in Candlelight Estates in northwest Houston, said his home was revalued 130 per cent higher than in 1974 and agreed with the moratorium proposed by the civic club.

"Everyone wants to pay their just and fair share of taxes, but we're paying for other portions of the city," McKaskle said.

McKaskle said he would not sign the city's annual tax report if the city does not change its tax assessment system.

City Tax Assessor-Collector Casey Fannin did not attend the rally but he has defended the northwest area revaluations as reflecting the real estate activity there, and hopes the city will reviw its entire tax roll each year by 1981.

Bob Madison Named As Aide To Reese

Republican congressional candidate Jim Reese has named Bob Madison, a resident of Odessa 13 years, his news secretary.

Madison will work with the news media throughout the 19th Congressional District, work with volunteers in each of the 17 counties and schedule speaking engagements for Reese.

Before joining the Reese campaign, Madison was news director at KMID-TV in Midland and served as Reese's campaign manager in 1976.

Texas Couple Finds 3.25 Carat Diamond

MURFREESBORO, Ark. (AP) — An Irving, Texas, couple found a 3.25 carat clear brown diamond Tuesday at the Crater of Diamonds State Park near Murfreesboro.

A spokesman said the diamond found by Harry and Lila Bruce was worth about $2,000.

It was the couple's first trip to Arkansas.

Persons who wish to hunt for diamonds at the park pay a fee and then keep the diamonds they find.

Rhodesian Black Leaders Sworn In

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Three moderate black leaders were sworn in Tuesday to the four-member executive council that will lead this white-run country to black majority rule.

The other member, Prime Minister Ian Smith, who once swore Rhodesia would never have a black government, watched the simple 45-minute ceremony in the dining room of his official suburban residence, Independence.

Smith, who remains bound by the vows that confirmed him as prime minister last August, did not take the oath.

Smith later called the innauguration of the council "a milestone."

"We've got to be realistic. We live in a changing world. We'll make a go os it," he said.

The black leaders — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Senator Chief Jeremiah Chirau — later met with Smith for three hours.

After the meeting Smith said the final stage in forming the transitional government — the establishment of a second-level ministerial council — could be expected next week.

The ministerial council will have a black and a white jointly heading each of nine ministries.

The executive council will be responsible for drawing up a new constitution and for organizing elections to be held by Dec. 31. After that date Rhodesia will become Zimbabwe — the nationalists name for the country.

The swearing-in ceremony was closed to reporters. "I think one of the parties objected to having too much publicity," one government source said without elaborating.

After the oaths, according to a witness, black Anglican Bishop Patrick Murindagomo led prayers for peace in Rhodesia — a country in its sixth year of war against black nationalist guerrillas opposed to any settlement with Smith.

Guerrilla leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo want the government turned over to them.

Britain and the United States are trying to set up new talks to bring the guerrilla leaders into the new government.

The internal settlement agreement was signed by Smith and the three black moderates March 3. It calls for black majority rule based on universal adult suffrage, but provides safeguards for the white minority.

American U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young arrived in Tanzania Tuesday to seek support for the expanded talks from President Julius Nyerere and will visit President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, in whose country Nkomo's branch of the guerrillas are based.

A Tanzanian official present at Young's meeting with Nyerere said Young gave assurances that the United States and Britain have not given up on their own plan for a Rhodesian settlement, which proposes a major role for the guerrillas in the new Rhodesian government.

"He (Young) told Nyerere that the U.S. position is still that the Anglo-American plan must be the basis of any Rhodesian settlement," the spokesman said.

Britain and the United States have told Salisbury that a settlement without the support of the guerrillas, whom most black African nations support, will not win international backing.

Nyerere praised Young for American restraint in the recent war between Somalia and Ethiopia in the Ogaden region.

The public American role in the fighting was limited to urging a cease-fire and mediation by the Organization of African Unity.

The official said the American decision not to send arms to Somalia "helped solve the problem." Russian-backed Ethiopian and Cuban forces drove Somali forces from the disputed region earlier this month after months of fighting.

Prime Minister Smith was to meet in Salisbury Tuesday night with 31 top American business executives at a private reception. Their names and the reasons for the visit have not been released, but they are known to include George Ball, a former undersecretary of state, and Sol Lifowitz, who helped negotiate the Panama Canal treaties.

The tour is sponsored by Time magazine.

The delegation was expected to arrive by special charter from South Africa after the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration refused permission for their chartered TWA jet to land in Rhodesia.

American planes have been banned from touching down in Rhodesia since the United Nations ordered full economic sanctions against the breakaway British colony in 1968.

House Kills Spending Limit Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, through a parliamentary maneuver, effectively killed on Tuesday a hotly contested proposal to severely restrict the amount of money political parties can pour into congressional campaigns.

By a 209-198 margin, the House refused to accept rules by which it would consider new campaign contribution limits for its members. The action thus killed a hotly contested proposal for public financing of House campaigns.

Republicans had charged that the Democratic-controlled House wanted to neutralize the effect of a huge GOP campaign chest in this year's congressional elections by limiting the amount that political parties can pour into congressional races.

The public financing proposal, which was an amendment to the contributions measure, seems dead unless resurrected by its proponents in some other form.

The vote culminated weeks of partisan bickering over the campaign financing idea. It marked another in a recent series of defeats for the House leadership as it attempted to carry out pledges made by President Carter.

Public financing of congressional campaigns was one of four election law changes he proposed. None has been approved in Congress.

Rep. Abner Mikva, D-Ill., chairman of the liberal Democratic Study Group and a backer of public financing, said he believes Tuesday's vote means there will be no changes in the election laws this year.

"What started out to be a neutral vehicle (for a vote on public financing) turned out to be a very dirty vehicle — a sullied-up vehicle," he said.

The discipline of the Republican side was in sharp contrast to that of the Democrats. Every Republican who voted on the rules was in favor of killing the public financing proposal. Some 140 Republicans thus teamed with 69 dissident Democrats to prevent House consideration of the changes in political financing laws.

The bill would have forced a party to reduce its financial assistance to congressional candidates by 70 per cent, from $50,000 to $15,000.

Even when Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., agreed to let stand the current law on the size of party contributions and assistance, and a group of more than 100 liberal Democrats pledged their votes to this end, Republicans remained determined to kill the financing bill if they could. Thompson is chairman of the House Administration Committee.

The campaign money bill also would have cut in half the sums which political action committees formed by unions, business or ideological groups, could contribute to candidates. The current ceiling is $10,000

But Republicans were most upset about the proposed limits on party contributions and assistance.

Federal Election Committee figures show the GOP has more than $8 million for use in congressional campaigns while the Democratic Party has only about $900,000.

The House Democratic leadership had chosen to use the campaign money bill as a vehicle for a House vote on public financing after an attempt to get a public financing bill through the House Administration Committee failed last year.

The House action was denounced by Fred Wertheimer, senior vice president of Common Cause, the citizen's lobby.

"The House today has missed an historic opportunity," he said.

"During the past few weeks many members have demonstrated their real commitment to changing the present disgraceful system of financing congressional races" Wertheimer said, adding that their efforts were sabotabed by others.

Lost Dog Tears Produce Puppy

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Rep. Stanley "Tuffy" Laffin, who complained that his wife took his dog when she left him, has a new puppy — thanks to the bipartisan efforts of his fellow state legislators.

The cigar-chomping Republican from Westbrook told the Maine House during recent debate about the harp seal hunt: "I remember when my wife left me. I was glad she left, but when I found that she took my puppy, I cried."

A "Committee for Tuffy's Puppy" was formed and on Tuesday, Rep. John Joyce, D-Portland, took the speaker's rostrum to, in his words, "right a great wrong."

Laffin was called forward as Joyce opened a wooden box and pulled out a baby Pekingese.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. A few days ago you wrote that a person is not exempt from income taxes at any age. I am 74, living on Social Security and a small pension. Must I still pay a tax?.

A. I wrote that age alone does not exempt anyone from paying income taxes. However, persons over 65 do enjoy a double exemption. And at any age, income below the lowest tax bracket exempts one from paying income taxes. Since your total income is so small, it's quite likely that you owe no tax. Heartline

HEARTLINE: I have read about the new consumer agency that President Carter is trying to put into the government. Can you tell what (if anything) has been done on this? F.K.

A. The proposed legislation (HR 6805) to establish an Office of Consumer Representation was for all practical purposes killed when the House of Representatives rejected it on February 8 by a vote of 189-227. The rejection of this legislation was a vital blow to the Carter Administration; creation of a consumer office had been a top priority project.

At the same time, the House's rejection of this bill was a major victory for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, the Business Roundtable, and other business oriented groups. The defeat of this bill can be directly attributed to the well-financed lobbying effort of big business.

"The corrupting influence of big business campaign contributions, promised or withdrawn, has never been more clear than in the last few days," charged Ralph Nader. "The lesson of today is that we must redouble our efforts so that Congress responds to the needs of consumers rather than the pressure of big business."

It is highly posible that Nader is very close to being correct in his charges toward the House members and big business. Heartline agrees with him and with the Carter Administration that an Office of Consumer Representation would be a very vital and helpful organization for the American people. However, it seems that this will take a while longer to get.

HEARTLINE: Many years ago I was issued my own Social Security number. I worked very little under Social Security and never did enough to draw Social Security on my own record. However, I am drawing Social Security spouse's benefits on my husband's acount.

Recently, I became eligible for Medicare benefits. When my Medicare card came, it had my husband's number with the letter "B" on it. Why is this? Was I given a new number without knowing it? J.K.

A. No, you were not given a new Social Security number. The number on your Medicare card (your husband's number plus the letter "B") is to be used only for your Medicare claims. This is done because you are eligible for your Social Security benefits and Medicare due to your husband's work record. This is only your claim number.

The Social Security number originally issued to you should be used for any purposes of identification. Use the other (your husband's number plus the letter "B") when you are talking to the Social Security people about your benefit or when you are filing a claim for Medicare.

For people now on the Medicare program or who soon will be turning 65 and going on Medicare, Heartline now has available a brand new 1978 version of "Heartline's Guide to Medicare." This book is still written in easy to understand question and answer form, but the 1978 issue has much more information, including new deductibles for part "A" medical insurance, more items and conditions that Medicare covers, a more concise explanation of reasonable charges, and detailed instructions on how to fill out your Medicare claim form.

You can receive the 1978 Heartline's Guide to Medicare by sending $1.50 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. This book is completely guaranteed and if you are not fully satisfied your money will be cheerfully refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am 59 years old and I am a widow. My only source of income right now is my V.A. widow's benefit. I received this because my husband was in World War II. I have been very sick now for the last year and I have a lot of medical expense. Will the V.A. reimburse me for my medical expenses? T.S.

A. The V.A. does not reimburse medical expenses incurred by widows receiving pension benefits. But an adjustment can be made to the pension payments. If reported medical expenses exceed 5 per cent of your gross income, the V.A. will adjust your account annually. Contact the nearest V.A. office for further information.

Q. I was recently married and have just inherited $21,000. I used $12,500 as down payment on a home. I'd like to invest $3,500 of the remainder for good income and keep $5,000 in saving for emergencies. Would a savings account at 5¼ — 5½ percent be the best place for this money?

Q. I'd vote for the insured savings account as the best place for emergency money and a solid common stock for the $3,500 seeking dividends.

• • •

Q. I plan to retire soon and convert E to H bonds. Will I have to report the interest on the Es? May the accumulated interest be applied to purchase of H bonds?

A. The interest accrued in the E bonds (assuming you did not report that interest annually and include it in your taxable income) will be stamped on the face of the H bond you acquire. The total present value of the E bonds — including all accrued interest — will be applied to the purchase of the H bonds.

• • •

Q. We have E bonds dated back to 1941. Should we keep them as is, or cash them in and put the money into a savings account?

A. If, as I assume, you did not include the interest accrual in your annual income tax reports, you would have to pay taxes on that accumulated gain if you redeemed the bonds now. I would hesitate to cash them all at this time. If you do not need the additional income, keep the bonds as is. If you need income, cash in enough bonds to realize that additional income every year.

• • •

Q. When is hospital bond interest tax exempt?

A. When the bond is issued as a tax-free revenue bond. You can be sure that if the interest is exempt from federal taxes (and perhaps state and local taxes) the offering will say so.

• • •

Q. Since reading a recent column on preferreds, I have worried about my holdings. I'm 76, retired.

A. I don't see why you should worry about a list of preferreds rated all the way from BBB to AAA. Quality is excellent and the average yield of 8.53 percent is good. Since you don't identify the particular issues you have I would say the only cause for concern would be the possibility of a call at a price below the price you paid for the issues. And even then you are being compensated in the form of higher income.

Longhorns Capture NIT, Rout Wolfpack

NEW YORK (AP) — The high-powered trio of Jim Krivacs, Ron Baxter and John Moore led Texas into a gigantic early lead and the fast-breaking Longhorns went on to rout North Carolina State 101-93 Tuesday night to win the National Invitation Tournament.

Rutgers won the third-place consolation game earlier, beating Georgetown 85-72 as James Bailey scored 27 points.

The 17th-ranked Longhorns from the Southwest Conference made sure of their first NIT championship with a first-half blitz behind their three high scorers that mounted to a 17-point lead shortly before the end of the first half.

Krivacs, taking advantage of numerous North Carolina State turnovers, broke away for several easy baskets and scored 17 of his 33 points as Texas raced into a 54-39 lead at intermission.

Baxter had 14 of his 26 points and Moore scored 15 of his 22 to key the first-half surge.

The Wolfpack, from the Atlantic Coast Conference, continued to make mistakes at the start of the second half and the Longhorns' Big Three continued to capitalize. They led the Southwest Conference co-champions into a 24-point advantage at 69-45 with 14:34 left in the game.

The victory for Texas, 26-5, marked the first NIT championship for a Southwest Conference team.

Hawkeye Whitney led North Carolina State, 21-10, with 22 points while Kendal Pinder had 21. Tony Warren added 12 to the Wolfpack's attack.

A crowd of 11,323 witnessed the finals at Madison Square Garden, some 7,000 fewer than attended the semifinals Sunday night.

North Carolina State simply was never in the game. Texas overpowered the ACC team with a race horse offense that provided the Longhorns with a quick 14-4 lead.

The Wolfpack was guilty of six turnovers on its first 12 possessions, allowing Texas to break away early.

With the inside muscle of Baxter, Tyrone Branyan and Gary Goodner controlling the boards, the Longhorns were able to launch several fast-break baskets that left North Carolina State helpless at the other end of the court.

With Krivacs, Baxter and Moore scoring nearly at will, the Longhorns raced away to a 54-37 lead shortly before intermission.

At the start of the second half, the Texas assault continued. Krivacs scored a pair of field goals and Baxter added another basket to trigger the Longhorns into a 64-41 lead with barely three minutes gone in the session.

Clyde Austin, who hit the winning shot in overtime to help North Carolina State beat Georgetown in the semifinals, contributed a pair of free throws and Warren had a basket for the Wolfpack, but a five-point burst by Texas gave the Longhorns their biggest lead of the game at 69-45.

The Longhorns virtually breezed through the 41st NIT, winning by margins of 14, 19 and 20 before taming the Wolfpack with clinical precision.

Bailey scored 17 of his game-high points to power the Scarlet Knights, 24-7, into a runaway 49-24 lead at the half.

Rutgers led by as many as 29 points before the half ended with Georgetown shooting 40 percent and turning the ball over 14 times.

The Hoyas, 23-8, made a brief comeback in the second half, cutting the Rutgers lead to 11 points before the end. But that was as close as they got.

Rutgers had three other players in double figures — Abdel Anderson with 15, Hollis Copeland with 14 and Rodney Duncan with 11.

John Duren paced Georgetown with 23 points while Craig Esherick added 15.

Raiders Sweep Wichita State

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A six-run fifth inning propelled Texas Tech to an 8-3 victory in the opener of a doubleheader Tuesday over Wichita State, and the Raiders then held off a Shocker rally in the final two frames of the second contest to take a 7-5 triumph.

The teams will conclude a six-game series today with another twin bill. It will begin at 1 p.m. at the Tech diamond.

After scoring two runs in the bottom of the third inning and allowing WSU a run in the top of the fourth, the Raiders held a slim 2-1 lead going into the bottom of the fifth.

Catcher Scott Leimgruber, who drilled three hits in three plate appearances in the opener, began the fifth-inning rally with a single, and secondbaseman Johnny Vestal followed with a bunt single to the right of the mound.

Leadoff hitter Rusty Laughlin sacrificed both runners up a base, and designated hitter Mike Farmer slammed a line drive up the middle for a two-run single.

Centerfielder Randy Newton walked, and leftfielder Larry Selby followed with an RBI-single to left-centerfield that scored Farmer and finished Wichita State starter Mitchell Denson.

But reliever Jay Brown had a tough time, too. Craig Noonan grounded out for the inning's second out, scoring Newton, and then Brooks Wallace, John Keller and Leimgruber hit consecutive singles to account for the final two runs of the inning.

Tech, 12-11 for the season, had gotten its two third-inning runs when Leimgruber doubled to left-center to score Keller and then came around himself on Vestal's single.

The Shockers, 7-7-1, scored in the fourth when first baseman Bruce Morrison was hit by a pitch and later crossed the plate on a fielder's choice. Their final two runs came in the seventh on an RBI-single by third baseman Bob Bomerito and Tech pitcher Rick Hall's wild pickoff throw that allowed Mike Davis to score from third base.

Hall raised his record to 3-2 with the victory. He went the first six innings of

Did You Know

Early Lubbock, despite lack of adequate rail facilities, grew faster than most towns, mainly because its town leaders had a spirit of harmonious cooperation. For example: to encourage sales they instituted a "Trades Day" and other special sales events. Merchants such as J.C. Caldwell, G.W. Singer, Sanders, Wolffarth and others issued joint handbills to coax visitors to come to the Hub City. These affairs soon attracted people from miles around. Traditionally Saturday was the day to come to town and shop.

Standout Seniors Named To Squad

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Division I scoring champion Freeman Williams of Portland State, Dave Corzine of DePaul and Raymond Townsend of UCLA were among three players named Tuesday to participate in Sunday's East-West all-star basketball game at Kiel Auditorium.

The 12 noon (CST) contest, involving standout seniors from across the nation, in sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches in conjunction with national NCAA semifinals and finals this weekend at the Checkerdome.

Wallace, Keller and Vestal each went 2-3 at the plate for the Raiders.

Tech jumped a 2-0 lead in the second inning of the second game. Noonan and Wallace led off with walks. Keller than laid down a sacrifice bunt that WSU pitcher Kurt Bradbury threw wildly to first on. It was scored as a three-base error, allowing Noonan and Wallace to score.

Vestal began the two-run fourth with a walk, stole second and third bases and crossed the plate on Newton's sacrifice fly to center field. Laughlin, who had singled, was driven home by Selby's ground single up the middle.

The Raiders upped their lead to 6-0 with a pair of runs in the fifth frame. With one out, Vestal walked and stole second. Laughlin then walked, and the two executed a double steal.

Designated hitter Chuck Johnson then grounded to second baseman Davis, whose throw to the plate was mishandled by catcher Matt Yeager, allowing Vestal to score. Laughlin soon crossed the plate when WSU third baseman Bomerito booted Newton's grounder.

The Shockers came back with two runs in the top of the sixth inning on an RBI-single by rightfielder Bruce Alexander and a balk by Tech pitcher Larry Womble that scored Keith Jones. The Raiders then made the count 7-2 when Laughlin singled in the bottom of the inning to drive in Wallace, who had led off with a base on balls.

Wichita State threatened seriously to at least tie the game in the top of the seventh inning of the seven-inning contest.

Tech starting pitcher Larry Womble had allowed only one hit through the first six innings after being bombed for 10 runs and seven hits in the first inning of Monday's first game. However, he tired in the seventh Tuesday.

Morrison led off with a walk, and designated hitter Larry Groves singled. Kevin Akenson, pinch-hitting for Davis, grounded out second-to-first, but Howard and Yeager ripped back-to-back singles to account for three runs and close the gap to 7-5.

Mark Johnston then relieved Womble and walked pinch-hitter Terry Hayes. However, he then struck out leadoff hitter Keith Jones and got rightfielder Bruce Alexander to ground into a force play at second base to end the game.

Womble improved his record to 2-3 with the victory. He allowed just four hits.

Tech, on the other hand, rapped just six hits, but was aided by 12 walks, three WSU errors and three wild pitches by Shocker hurlers.

Laughlin went 3-4 to lead Tech hitters in the second game, while Selby was 2-4.

Golden Gloves Competition Set

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Detroit's Rick Jester, Knoxville's Bernard Taylor and Chicago's Wayne Lynum top a field of about 350 fighters in the 51st annual Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions that opens tonight.

Jester, Taylor and Lynum are 1977 champions who have returned to defend their crowns in the four-day boxing extravaganza that will feature 32 teams from the United States and Canada and include more than 300 bouts.

Competition opens Wednesday night at the University of New Mexico Arena with 132 first and second round matches in six of the 11 weight classes on tap. First and second round battles in the other five weight classes are slated for Thursday night.

Friday night's card will include quarterfinal action in all 11 weight divisions. The semifinals are set for Saturday with the finals to follow Saturday night.

Although Jester and Lynum are defending champs, their paths to repeat titles could be difficult as both are in very competitive divisions.

Jester is the two-time defending titlist at 178 pounds. But the 6-foot-1½ inch slugger is expected to get a stiff challenge from Philadelphia's Charles Singleton who lost to Jester in the championship bout a year ago.

The 119-pound class may be the best of the tourney with a number of contenders for Lynum's crown. Rocky Lockridge of Las Vegas, Nev., is back to try for a rematch after losing to Lynum in the finals a year ago. Billy Ranelli, who is from Sudbury, Ontario, Canada, but boxes for the Syracuse, N.Y., team, has moved up from 112 where he was national runnerup a year ago. And Davey Armstrong of Tacoma, Wash., who was a silver medalist at Montreal, is on hand.

Taylor, a classy 20-year-old boxer, is the favorite to repeat in the 125-pound class and continue toward his dream of winning a gold medal in the 1980 Olympics.

The possibility of a rematch of last year's heavyweight title clash between Pennsylvania's James Clark and Greg Page of Louisville, Ky., was dashed when Clark elected to go to Cuba with an American team in lieu of fighting in his state's qualifying tourney.

Clark was one of two fighters to claim individual titles in leading Pennsylvania to the team championship in 1977. Curtis Parker took the 156-pound title but has since turned pro.

The defending team champ also suffered another blow Tuesday when it was announced that Marvis Frazier, son of former world heavyweight champ Joe Frazier, won't be able to compete because of a pulled leg muscle.

Knoxville, Detroit, and Fort Worth are given the best shots at unseating the Pennsylvania squad with Miami as the darkhorse.

Knoxville, the 1976 team winner, is headed by Taylor and Johnny Bumpus, last year's 125-pound runnerup to Taylor, who has moved from Las Vegas to Knoxville and is competing at 132.

Detroit, of course, is led by Jester, while Fort Worth is paced by former two-time national champ Ronnie Shields at 139 and 1977 quarterfinalists Parris Flowers at heavyweight and Dan Levario at 125.

Royals Pull Switch On Yankees

By The Associated Press

The Kansas City Royals finally turned the ninth-inning tables on the New York Yankees ... in a game that didn't count.

After losing out to the Yankees in the last two American League playoffs, both times in the final inning of the final game, the Royals got a small — very small — portion of revenge Tuesday when Darrell Porter's two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth gave them an 11-10 exhibition victory over the world champions.

Porter connected off rookie Steve Taylor after the Yankees clipped Al Hrabosky for three runs in the top of the inning.

Ron Guidry, the Yankees' top pitcher a year ago, made his spring outing and was tagged for five runs and the same number of hits in two innings, including a three-run homer by Hal McRae. Cliff Johnson homered twice for New York.

While the Royals finally remembered how to beat the Yankees, the Houston Astros still haven't forgotten how to defeat the Cincinnati Reds. The Astros, who took Cincinnati 13 times in 18 meetings last season, did it again by a 5-1 score, including Bob Watson's two-run homer.

The San Diego Padres made Roger Craig's managerial debut a success, edging the San Francisco Giants 9-8 on Bob Davis' tie-breaking two-run homer in the seventh inning. Craig replaced Alvin Dark, who was fired earlier in the day.

Ron LeFlore slammed a two-run homer off Philadelphia ace Steve Carlton as the Tigers nipped the Phillies 6-5 and the National League champion Los Angeles Dodgers recorded their first success over an NL team, downing the Atlanta Braves 6-1 with the help of five errors.

Ellis Valentine drilled a three-run homer and an RBI single to help the Montreal Expos outslug the Minnesota Twins 10-6 and the Baltimore Orioles got home runs from Ken Singleton and Larry Harlow in beating the Texas Rangers 11-7.

Dave Kingman led a 16-hit attack with a homer and double but the Chicago Cubs needed a two-run ninth-inning rally, capped by Heity Cruz' RBI single, to beat the Cleveland Indians 6-5. Wayne Nordhagen's two-run double highlighted a four-run fourth inning that carried the Chicago White Sox to a 5-4 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Ruppert Jones' seventh-inning homer turned out to be the decisive run as the Seattle Mariners edged the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 and Willie Mays Aikens had a two-run double to pace the California Angels over Cal Poly-Pomona 5-1.

In night games, the St. Louis Cardinals faced the New York Mets and the Boston Red Sox met the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Lemons 'Real Proud' Of Horns

NEW YORK (AP) — Colorful Coach Abe Lemons of Texas admitted he was "real proud" of his Longhorns after they turned back North Carolina State 101-93 Tuesday night to win the National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden.

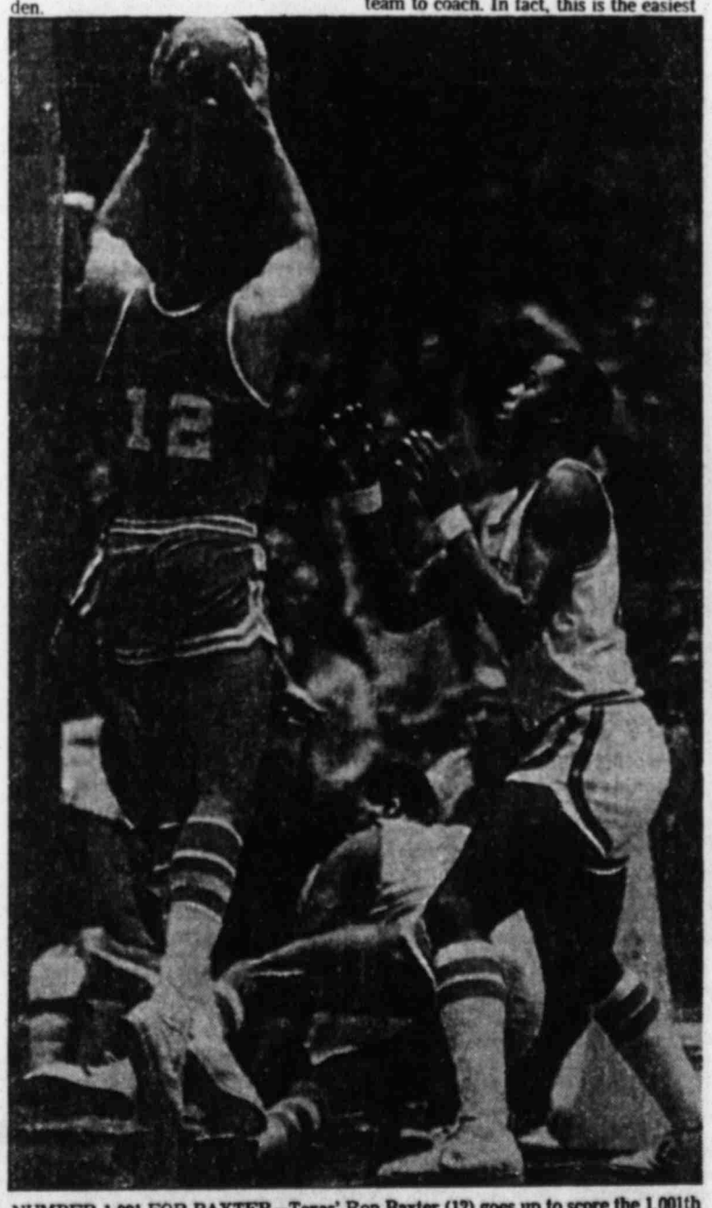

"They're a smart, clever team, and they played a nice little game," Lemons said in praising the way Texas layed offensively and defensively in completely outclassing the Wolfpack.

"They come to play and they're an easy team to coach. In fact, this is the easiest team I ever coached," he said.

"We were picked to finish fifth in the Southwest Conference but we played well all year and finished in a tie for first with Arkansas.

"We beat people with our lineup. No one hurt us bad all year with possibly one exception. The guys do their job.

"In the NIT, we played four good games. North Carolina State played us hard, but it was simply lights out for them," said Lemons.

Kentucky Derby Hopefuls Favored

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Kentucky Derby hopefuls Sensitive Prince and Believe It lead a field of 11 three-year-olds today in the $37,000 Fountain of Youth Stakes at Gulfstream Park.

Unbeaten Sensitive Prince will be after his fifth victory, carrying 112 pounds with Mickey Solomone up. Sensitive Prince set a Gulfstream record for seven furlongs March 8 as he won the Hutcheson Stakes in 1:20 4-5. The Fountain of Youth, at 1 1-16 miles, will be his first test over seven furlongs.

Believe It, ridden by Eddie Maple, will carry top weight of 122. Believe It won his season debut Feb. 15, covering seven furlongs in a non-wagering exhibition race in 1:22 1-5.

Also entered is Galimore, who won six stakes last year but finished a disappointing sixth in the Bahama Stakes Feb. 1.

Peaceful Year Predicted For Netters

HOUSTON (AP) — Millionaire Lamar Hunt, founder of the World Championship Tennis (WCT) tour, Tuesday said 1978 is the year of peace in pro tennis but there are still many problems to be solved.

"It's been a lot easier to sleep this year," said Hunt, here to talk about the $175,000 WCT River Oaks tournament April 17-23. "One happy problem we have is that tennis has become a 12-month sport.

"There are literally too many cities that want to have tournaments. This is a happy problem but often we end up with two minor tournaments instead of one major tournament."

Hunt also said player conduct needed to be dealt with.

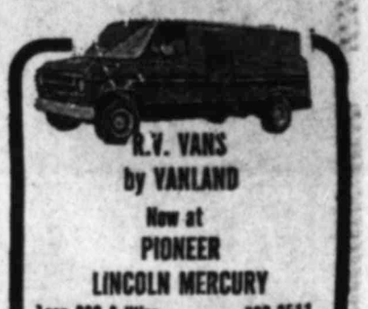

"Some of the obscenities that come from some players are very disfavorable to the game of tennis," Hunt said.

Ironically, part of Hunt's statement was to announce that Australian Ken Rosewall and Romanian Illie Nastase, often criticized for his on-court deportment, would play in the River Oaks tournament.

Hunt said other problems facing tennis include the lack of a single policing body, affluence of the players and players and agents seeking appearance money.

Hunt doesn't see a change in the lack of a policing body. "I don't see any one man or group coming in and dominating tennis," Hunt said.

Pro tennis players aren't as "hungry" as they used to be Hunt said. "There's nothing wrong with them making money but they are more independent now and can split off if they want to," he said.

Padres Release Dark, Name Craig Manager

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — The San Diego Padres fired Alvin Dark as manager Tuesday, telling him the team's players felt he couldn't communicate, and replaced him with pitching coach Roger Craig.

Craig, 47, was originally named interim manager when the firing of Dark was announced Tuesday morning and Padres' vice president Ballard Smith said a successor to Dark would be chosen before the team opens the season April 7.

But at a press conference later Tuesday, Ray Kroc, owner of the National League team, said Craig would be his new manager.

Craig was offered a one-year contract Tuesday night following the Padres' 9-8 exhibition victory over San Francisco.

Dark said he was shocked by the move.

"It was such a quick thing," said the 56-year-old Dark, who had 2 years left on the contract he signed when he took over last May 30, succeeding John McNamara.

The Padres won 48 games and lost 65 under Dark and finished fifth in the NL's West Division with an overall mark of 69-93. In spring exhibition games, they went 5-8 before Dark was told he was out.

Players have complained openly that he called pitches from the bench, changed the lineup frequently and was distant, unlike McNamara, the Padres' manager for 3½ years before being dismissed.

ALVIN DARK

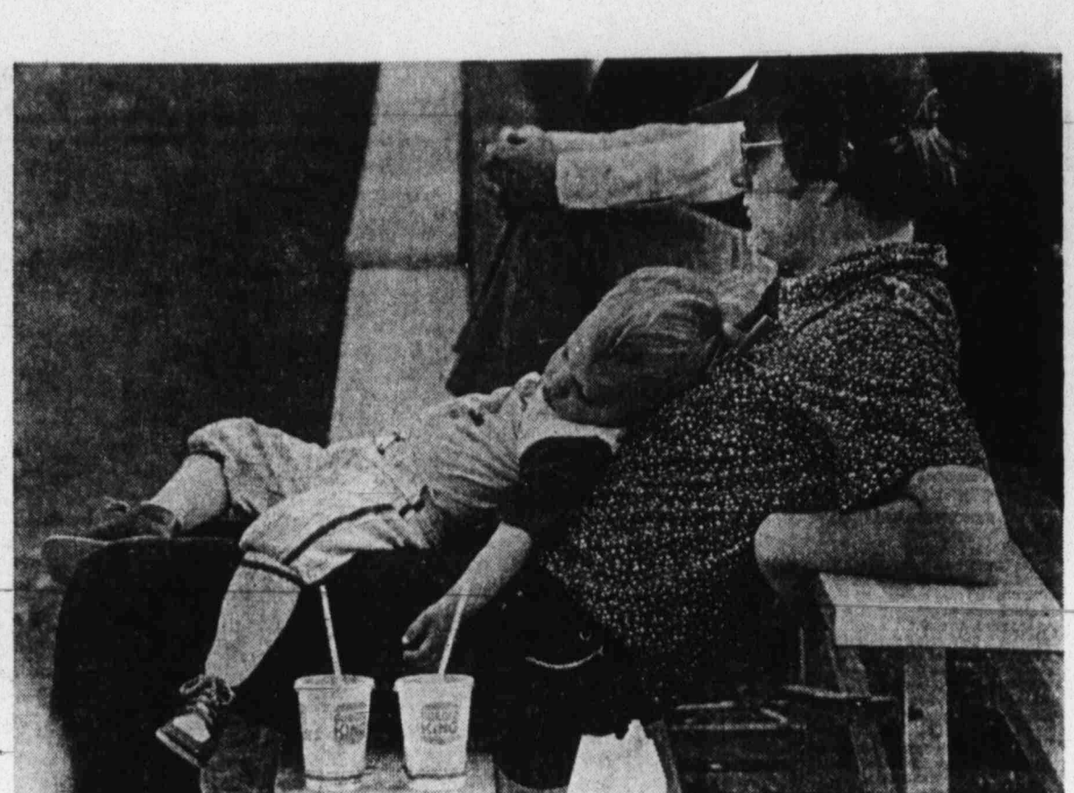

After telling Dark of the decision, Smith said: "Alvin wanted to know the reasons. I explained it had nothing to do with his baseball ability but with his ability to communicate.

"Well, he didn't agree with me. But I thought he had that problem and Bob Fontaine felt very strongly he had that problem. And many others in the organization felt the same way."

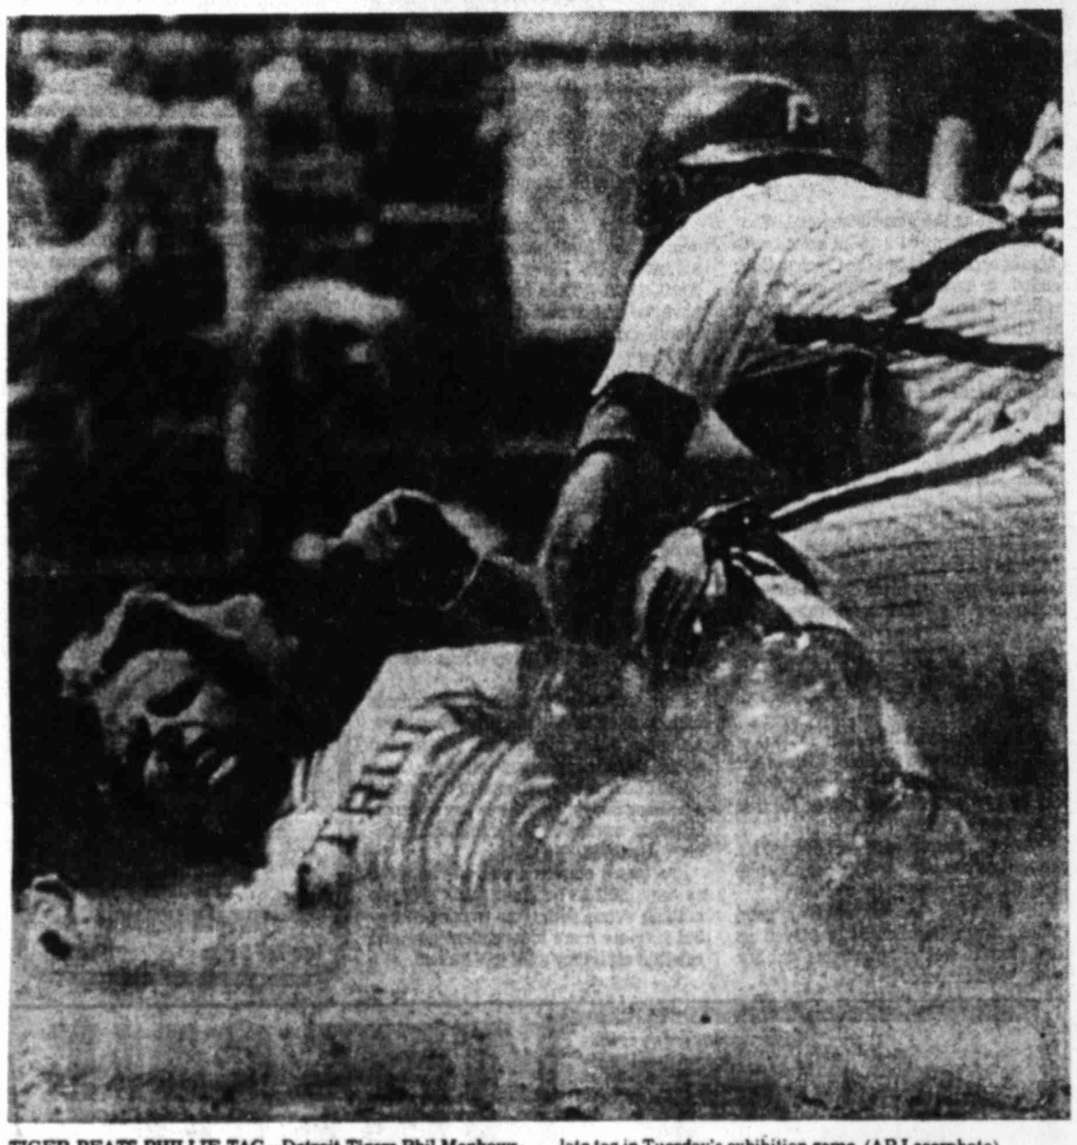

Smith said he and Padres owner Ray Kroc, his father-in-law, agreed Monday on the move and that Fontaine, the Padres' general manager, concurred Monday night. Smith said there was "no further reason to wait any longer."

Smith and Fontaine had dinner Monday night with pitchers Gaylord Perry, the 39-year-old right-hander who pitched for San Francisco when Dark was manager of the Giants in 1962-64, and Mickey Lolich.

Before being hired by the Padres, Dark compiled a 994-954 record over 13 years as manager of the Giants, the Kansas City and Oakland A's and the Cleveland Indians.

McCarver Seeks Own Identity

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Tim McCarver is smart enough to recognize his buddy, Steve Carlton, as a meal ticket, but the fun loving catcher hopes people realize that the Philadelphia Phillies recently gave him a two-year contract for more than coddling Carlton.

"I certainly don't want to disassociate my relationship with Steve," said McCarver after a strenuous training camp workout. "But I do, through my performance last year, hope people realize I can play."

McCarver hit .320 with 6 home runs and 30 RBIs, while catching Carlton and pinchitting. He appeared in 93 games, including all of Carlton's 23 wins and 10 losses.

"I realize that I'm in a unique position in a sense because of my relationship with Steve," McCarver said in that honest, straightforward approach he has to all subjects.

"But I'm not here only because I catch Steve Carlton," McCarver said. "I can play. I feel like I know how to win. I haven't been on too many losing ball clubs. Check the book."

The book shows that McCarver, now 36, has played in three World Series, two National League Championship Series, and has been chosen on two NL All-Star teams. For most of his 17-year major league career, he's been with a contender.

"Winning is contagious. It's habit forming just like losing is," McCarver noted. "I think I've profited from minor league training that I don't think is evident today."

McCarver explained: "In the early sixties when (Eddie) Stanky was our farm director with the Cardinals, we talked about base running an hour a day. There was overstatement and restatement continually pounding (fundamentals) into us.

"We knew what to do when we went on the field," McCarver continued. "We may not have done it, but it wasn't because we didn't know. And I think that's lacking today. So consequently I think there is more of a place for people who know how to play the game."

"There are some people in the major leagues today who don't know how to play the game. They don't know what is essential to win," said McCarver. "And there is a lot more to this game then home runs, and shutouts. The spectacular things in this game are the routine things done routinely, every day, day-in and day out, consistently."

McCarver refused to use this philosophy as an indication that he wanted to coach or manage when his playing career ends.

"I'd like to have more than one way to go when I get out of the game," he said.

Garcia Unconcerned As No. 2 Choice

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — As a boy, Dave Garcia sold newspapers and worked in an East St. Louis factory to support his mother and four sisters after his father died. That, the California Angels' manager said, was the last time he had any real worries.

And that, he also said, is the reason he didn't worry this past winter when Angels owner Gene Autry tried to hire Gene Mauch to run the club.

"I feel like it's his team and he can do whatever he wants to try to improve it," said Garcia, who has spent 40 years in baseball and got his first big-league managing job when he replaced Norm Sherry at the Angels' helm last July.

"I don't blame Mr. Autry for going after Mauch. It's just like me as a manager; I want to put the best people on the field I can find.

"Besides, being his No. 2 choice is not so bad. The runnerup in the Miss America contest is still a pretty girl."

Garcia has been frequently referred to as "Dave Who?" since he got the California job. But although he's been cast as a less-than-charismatic manager, the 57-year-old Garcia is in reality an outgoing, constantly smiling man with a quick wit.

The Angels manager said his lack of temper outbursts probably has had a lot to do with his image.

"My first year as a minor league manager, I was thrown out of eight games in the first two months of the season," Garcia recalled. "The league president called me in and said, 'Young man, you're not going to make it if you don't learn to control your temper.' So I learned to control my temper and now I'm not colorful enough.

"Connie Mack wasn't particularly colorful, nor was Walt Alston. John McGraw, probably the greatest manager of all, was relatively unknown despite all his success."

Asked if he felt any undue pressure to provide a winner, considering Autry's determined drive to improve the club by spending freely for free agents, Garcia smiled slightly. "Why should I worry? Pressure is for managers who know they don't have a chance," he said. "I know every manager in baseball says in the spring that they've got a great chance to win it all, but we really do. If we didn't have good players, then maybe I'd feel pressure.

"And any pressure I might feel in baseball still doesn't compare with being a kid and having to support your family."

Nobodies Can Make This Hall

HILLVILLE, Ohio (AP) — You don't have to be a star to be in Sally Wesselman's Hall of Fame.

"The stuff I collect is stuff that means something to me," said Mrs. Wesselman, describing three rooms in her home filled with bats, baseballs, baseball cards, ballpark seats, helmets and infield dirt.

She's got reminders of Stan Musial, Hank Aaron, Sandy Koufax and other notables of baseball's past. There are also local favorites enshrined, such as the Badin High School baseball team.

There's a bat table made from the bats of 22 players from that team and a sample of the mud major leaguers use to "rub-up" baseballs.

The memorabilia is only an extension of the lifelong infatuation she has had with baseball.

Her father coached the game at a Cincinnati high school, and scouted for several major league teams.

Mrs. Wesselman was quite an athlete herself while she was growing up. Her interest in baseball helped her become the first woman to win a men's varsity letter at Western Hills High School in 1951.

Before the team began state tournament competition that year, the coach insisted that Mrs. Wesselman's name be added to the eligibility list because of her role as student manager. What he really needed was her ability to steal signs from the other teams.

While she was growing up, regular dinner guests at her home included former Reds greats such as Ernie Lombardi and Paul Derringer.

As a child she played catch with the Reds at Crosley Field and she's been every place at Riverfront Stadium including the locker room.

A night out for Mrs. Wessleman now might mean a night to the Roses — that's Reds third baseman Pete Rose and his family. She's also friends with Hall of Famer Waite Hoyt.

She admits that her husband, Lou, puts up with a lot because of her interest in baseball.

"You hear a lot of women complain about being golf widows, but I'm the only guy I know who's a baseball widower," he said. He admits to being somewhat of a convert, although he'll occasionally tease his wife about her devotion to baseball.

"I didn't know she was a girl until she was 26," he joked. "She can still snap off a curve with a hardball. I'd play catch with her, but my hand gets too sore."

Nicklaus Nabs Lead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, a winner in two of his last four tournament appearances and runner-up in the other two, has charged into the lead in the Professional Golf Association money winning race for 1978.

Nicklaus' latest victory, in the Tournament Players Championship which ended Sunday at Jacksonville, Fla., was worth $60,000.

Tom Watson, who did not make the 36-hole cut for the TPC event, dropped to second place with $103,181.

Belanger Provides Baltimore's Defense

MIAMI (AP) — Let's get one thing straight right away: If the Baltimore Orioles paid Mark Belanger for his bat, he'd be making the major league minimum salary.

The Orioles have to depend on other hitters to supply their offense. But when it comes to defense, there are few better shortstops in the business than the long, lean Belanger, starting his 12th season with the Birds.

"Defense is so important," said Belanger. "It's not in the record books and you don't see many statistics on it, but defense wins ball games — quietly."

In the years when Belanger and third baseman Brooks Robinson played next to each other, the left side of the Baltimore infield was like a wall. Hitting a ball in that direction was suicide.

"Brooks could do everything," said Belanger. "Playing alongside him certainly helped me. I never worried about a tough play in the hole."

And Doug DeCinces, Robinson's successor at third base for the Orioles, will tell you that playing alongside Belanger has helped him.

"Doug is following a legend," said the shortstop. "He's handling it well."

There will be 34 candles on Belanger's next birthday cake, but his glove doesn't seem to have lost a bit of its magic. He made just 10 errors in 671 chances last season, a .985 percentage that was the highest of his career and also led the American League.

He has won the Gold Glove as the AL's top defensive shortstop seven times, including the last five years in a row.

"I feel I'm still playing as well as ever," said Belanger. "I don't think I've lost any of my range. But the only way to tell is to have others watch you."

Those who watch him do so with a touch of awe. He remains as fluid and graceful as ever, the cement that holds the Baltimore infield together.

Last season he had a string of 62 straight mistake-proof games, handling 268 chances without an error over that stretch.

The streak started on June 5, two days after Belanger made the last two outs in a game-ending triple play at Kansas City. John Wathen flied to Pat Kelly to start the play, then Freddie Patek was run down and tagged out by Belanger. And when Dave Nelson wandered off third, Belanger sprinted over and tagged him out as well, ending the game.

Belanger shrugs off reports that he has decided to get tough around second base with hard-sliding runners.

"There's no personal vendetta, and I'm not after anybody," he said. "The baserunner's job is to take you out. The shortstop and second baseman expect it. It's part of the game."

'Horns Ponder Quarterbacks

AUSTIN (AP) — Like the storybook prince in "Cinderella," Longhorn Coach Fred Akers has got a glass slipper but nobody apparently wears the right size.

Last year was a different fable. Randy McEachern shucked his "Who's he?" status to lead Texas into the Cotton Bowl after Akers lost his first and second string quarterbacks.

Then, too, there was fullback Earl Campbell. And how much trouble was it to find somebody to just hand the ball to the Heisman Trophy winner and watch him make mincemeat of opposing lines?

But Campbell is awaiting the pro draft and McEachern is hobbled by a knee injury that even Akers conceeds may cancel any hopes of him playing.

A grim reminder that the problem will probably haunt the University of Texas campus well into the fall was this spring's Orange and White game where a skinny freshman named Sam Ansley appeared to be Akers' best bet.

However, the best Ansley could do was complete three of 18 passes for a paltry 34 yards, including three interceptions.

Ansley is backed up by veterans Ted Constanzo and Mark McBath. Jon Aune, another one-time starter, was held out of practice because of a knee injury.

Add to the list a couple of promising rookies who will come along in the fall, Donnie Little and Booger Brooks, and Akers' dance card for this year's ball is filled.

Little, the state's top blue-chipper, said after signing his letter of intent to attend Texas he was confident he would be starting by mid-year.

Chaps Capture No. 2 Rank

Only two of the 13 District VIII baseball teams are above the break-even mark and those teams are ranked 1-2 in this week's poll.

Texas Wesleyan, boasting an 18-8-2 mark, continues as the No. 1 squad, but Lubbock Christian (15-9) moved up a notch to the runner-up spot.

Midwestern (7-7) fell to third, with the University of Dallas (7-13) fourth, followed by Dallas Baptist (5-6), LeTourneau (2-2), Paul Quinn (5-10), Jarvis Christian (4-9-1) and Austin College (3-10).

Houston Seeks Title Assistance From Bergman

COCOA, Fla. (UPI) — Houston Astros newcomer Dave Bergman is fast becoming one of the players the team is depending on to help challenge the Dodgers and Reds in the National League West Division this season.

Begrudgingly acquired from the New York Yankees late last year as the "player to be named later" in the Cliff Johnson deal, Bergman, 24, was given a shot at Houston's leftfield spot this spring.

The rookie from Park Ridge, Ill., has not only made the team but he has won a starting spot ahead of second-year player Terry Puhl, who hit .301 during the last half of the 1977 season.

Bergman, who earned the berth despite not being able to throw until recently because of a sore elbow, still shakes his head at his treatment by the Yankees.

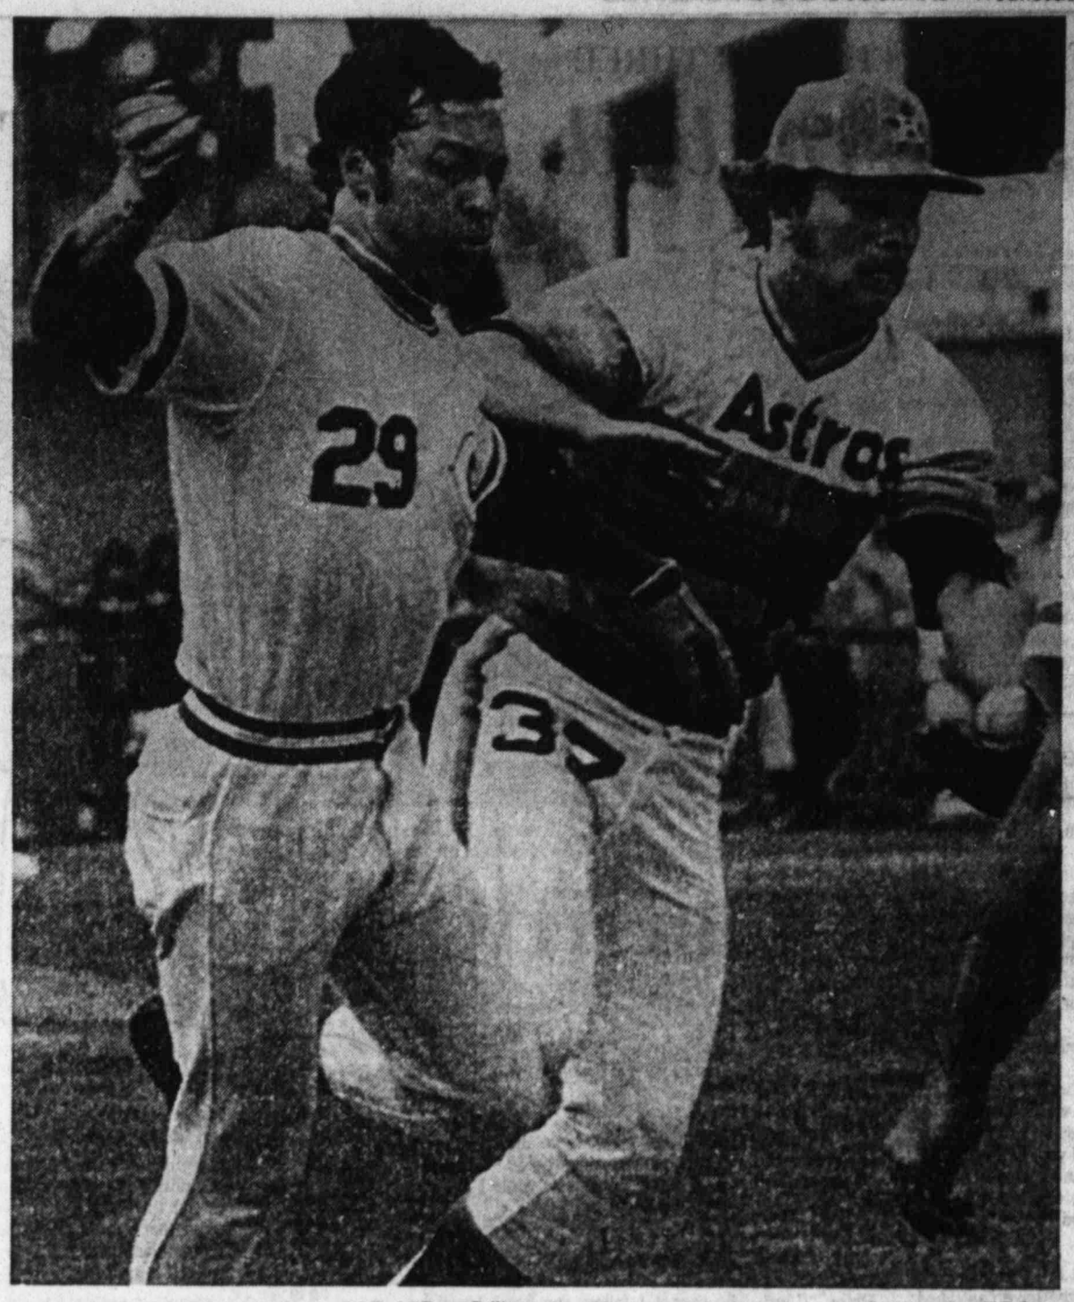

"I kept having good minor league seasons but the Yankees never seemed to want to give me an opportunity," said the 61, 188-pound Bergman, who batted .348, .311, .295 and .312 in his last four years.

Astros manager Bill Virdon is counting on the lefthander to back up Bob Watson at first base. Most of Bergman's experience has been at that position. The rookie also is expected to add some power to a light-hitting lineup and add more speed to what is becoming a fast ballclub. He hit 16 homeruns and stole 29 bases with the Yankee's AAA Syracuse team last season.

Bergman's ability on the basepaths could make the Astros one of the runningest teams in baseball. Last season, Cesar Cedeno stole 61 bases, Jose Cruz stole 44, Enos Cabell stole 42 and Puhl swiped 10 bases in 11 attempts.

Bergman's good showing this spring is understandable considering his disenchantment with the Yankees. Two months before he was officially announced as traded he said, "To be honest with you, I think the Yankees are trying to go back on the deal.

The Yankees balked at sending Bergman to Houston when Cliff Johnson told Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner that he had an ankle injury which the Astros had not told New York about. The problem was resolved, however, and the Yankees released Bergman in November of last year.

DEAD HEAT FOR THE BAG—Cincinnati Reds' Dave Collins (29) and Houston Astros pitcher Tom Dixon reach first base at the same time but Collins was ruled safe after he grounded to first. The Astros beat the Reds 5-1 in exhibition play. (AP Laserphoto)

Ken Norton To Seek Busy Slate

LAS VEGAS Nev. (AP) — World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Ken Norton said Tuesday he would be a "fighting champion" and that there was a chance he would fight the winner of the upcoming Earnie Shavers-Larry Holmes bout.

Norton, who won the title on paper Saturday when the WBC stripped Leon Spinks of its half of the heavyweight crown, also said that he would be willing to fight Spinks for the $200,000 he originally had agreed to.

Norton had a verbal agreement to fight Spinks prior to the Feb. 11 bout in which Spinks narrowly outpointed Muhammad Ali and won the title.

"I feel I don't have to now," Norton said when asked if he would fight Spinks for the $200,000. "But yes, I would take it."

But a Norton-Spinks bout in the near future is unlikely because Spinks' next fight is expected to be a World Boxing Association title defense against Ali, possibly in the fall.

"I'm going to be a fighting champion," Norton said. "I'm looking forward to fighting Leon Spinks and I'm going to do everything possible to see that it's done."

He said that while "I kind of like Spinks ... I think the advice he's being given is the wrong advice."

Shavers, 54-6-1, and the No. 3-ranked WBC contender, meets the fourth-ranked Holmes, 26-0, in a nationally televised fight at Caesars Palace on Saturday. The bout is being billed as a heavyweight elimination contest.

Norton said that there was "a very good chance that I'll fight the winner" at a later date.

Bryant's Moanings For Real This Time

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Football fans usually figure Bear Bryant is shedding crocodile tears when he complains about his Alabama team, but his moanings over the loss of Ozzie Newsome and Johnny Davis are for real.

Newsome, an All-American receiver with sticky fingers, and Davis, a bullish fullback who keyed the Crimson Tide's wishbone attack, are among those Bryant will try to replace during spring practice that starts today.

On the bright side, Alabama has 15 starters back from a team that won the Southeastern Conference title, stomped Ohio State 35-6 in the Sugar Bowl for an 11-1 mark and then finished second to Notre Dame in the national championship voting.

But 25 lettermen are gone as Bryant prepares for his 21st season at Alabama and his 34th as a coach, a remarkable span in which his teams have won 273, lost only 76 and tied 16. His Alabama mark is 192-37-8.

"We're a little better off on defense than we were a year ago," Bryant said, "but we're so thin over-all, and on offense we're not nearly as well off. At some line positions we lost two and three deep."

He said the first priority "is to try and replace the people we lost, particularly the offensive line, our secondary, Terry Jones at middle guard and two great players," Newsome and Davis.

Bryant said that during the first few days of spring drills "we want to try and find our best interior linemen, both on offense and defense, and the same in the secondary. Then maybe we can change some around until we get a full team. We sure won't have a full team to start with."

The team will work four days this week, he said, "hoping to get a day ahead in case of injuries or weather on down the line."

The spring intrasquad game will be played April 22.

WBA Recounts Faith In Titleholder Spinks

PANAMA CITY (AP) — The World Boxing Association said Tuesday it will continue to recognize Leon Spinks as the heavyweight champion.

"We recognize Spinks as the titleholder, and if he chooses to fight Muhammad Ali in his next match, it will not violate any of our rules," said WBA Vice President Rodrigo Sanchez.

On Saturday, the rival World Boxing Council, headquartered in Mexico City, withdrew recognition of Spinks for not complying with its edict that the first title defense be against top contender Ken Norton.

Spinks said he wanted to fight Ali, whom he defeated for the crown in February.

The WBC said it stripped Spinks of the title because he failed to honor a signed commitment to negotiate his first title defense against Norton by March 17. Norton then was declared WBC champion.

"Spinks has chosen to fight Muhammad Ali for his first title defense. Dr. Elias Cordova has sanctioned the fight. I believe it will be sometime in September," Sanchez said.

Cordova is chairman of the WBA championship committee.

Sanchez said that under WBA rules, Spinks is required to meet the top contender within one year of the time he acquires the title.

"In the meantime he can fight any of the top 10 contenders he chooses. Ali is now ranked No. 3," Sanchez said.

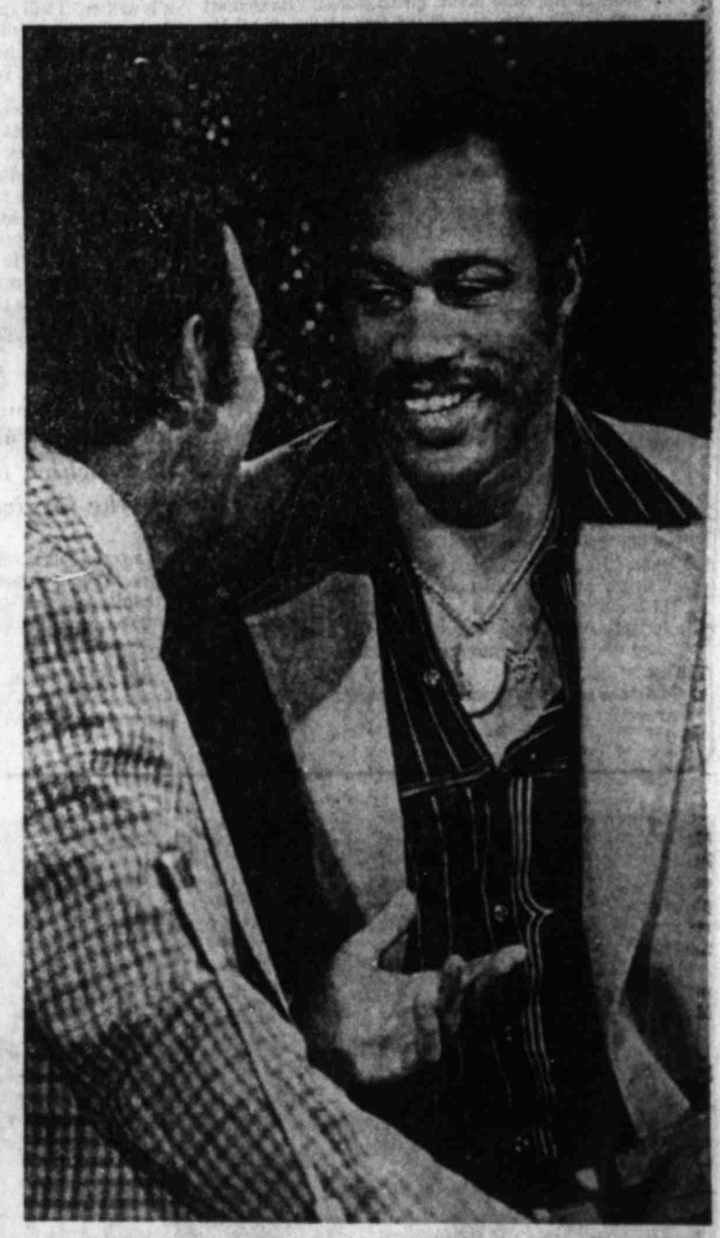

"We believe Leon Spinks is entitled to the crown," Sanchez said.

He said the WBA was not informed beforehand that the WBC planned to withdraw recognition of Spinks.

"We got no information from the WBC about what they were going to do," Sanchez said. "We prefer not to criticize their actions. They are working under different regulations and we assume they are doing what they believe to be right."

The vice president said it was the first time in years the two groups had recognized different heavyweight champions.

"The two organizations generally always recognize the same heavyweight, middleweight and lightweight champions," Sanchez said. The only two fighters currently recognized as champions by both organizations are lightweight Roberto Duran of Panama and middleweight Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia.

THE GREATEST DRAMA: CHAPTER THREE

Apostles Disturbed By Jesus' Farewell Supper

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the third act of a five-act Easter drama. All dialogue is Scriptural, from direct or indirect quotations except minor phrases and some traditional words of stated table graces. Some unattributed comments of disciples are attributed.)

GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

Act III, Scene 1: Nisan 14 (April 7), 30 A.D., sundown, start of Passover. Place: An upstairs chamber in the hewn-stone house of a wealthy Jerusalem widow.

Jesus and his 12 disciples enter the room, carrying their sandals, as women array the low table, lighting candles, laying out vessels. The disciples remove cloaks, but not turban-like kaffiyehs, and recline on couches about the table.

Jesus, however, also pulls off his tunic, remaining clad only in loincloth. The others, startled, watch silently. He fetches a pan, pitcher and cloths from a shelf and kneels before the burly Peter, pouring water into the pan. The others lean forward to see. Jesus lifts one of Peter's feet.

Peter, jerking it back: "Lord, do not wash my feet."

Jesus, waiting: "Afterward you will understand."

Peter, emphatically: "You shall never wash my feet!"

Third In A Series

Jesus, patiently: "If I do not wash you, you have no part of me."

Peter, exuberantly thrusting forth both feet: "Lord, not my feet only but also my hands and my head!"

Jesus, resuming task: "You are clean, but not all of you." He moves from disciple to disciple without further words, bathing and drying their feet, then puts his tunic back on and reclines at the table among them.

Jesus: "Which is greater, one who sits at table, or one who serves?"

The disciples break into simultaneous, uncertain talk about it.

Jesus: "I am among you as one who serves ... A servant is not greater than his master, nor is he who is sent greater than he who sent him ... I have given you an example ... If you know these things, blessed are you if you do them."

The women place a bottle of wine and plates of matzo bread and karpas greens on the table, along with bowls of salt water and a pasty sauce of mashed apples, nuts and wine.

Jesus: "I have earnestly desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer ... You are those who have continued with me in my trials; as my Father appointed a kingdom for me, so do I appoint for you ..."

He picks up the wine bottle, giving thanks, "Blessed art thou, my Father, who creates the fruit of the vine." He pours out a cupful, takes a sip, and passes it to John, reclining next to him.

Jesus: "Take this, and divide it among yourselves ... Drink of it, all of you; for this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many for the forgiveness of sins."

They pass it along, acceding but wondering, each taking a swallow.

Jesus: "I tell you, I shall not drink again of this fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom." He dips parsley in the salt water and eats it, as do the others.

Then he takes up a chunk of bread, giving thanks, "Blessed art thou, my Father, who brings forth bread from the earth." He breaks off a piece, and passes the rest to the others. "Take, eat, this is my body."

Jesus, watching their puzzled compliance, murmurs: "He who ate my bread has lifted his heel against me."

James nudges John, whispering: "Tell us who it is of whom he speaks."

Jesus, overhearing: "Truly, I say to you, one of you will betray me."

Each, in turn, incredulous and distressed, "Is it I, Lord?" "Is it I?" "Is it I, Master?"

Jesus: "He who has dipped his hand in the dish with me will betray me." Several have dipped, making it unclear. "The Son of man goes as it has been determined." He turns to Judas Iscariot. "What you are going to do, do quickly."

Judas, the group treasurer, gets up, shouldering the joint purse.

Matthew, assuming he was sent for purchases: "Buy what we need."

James: "Give something to the poor."

Judas, flushing, exits. The women serve shanks of lamb, roasted eggs, bitter herbs and more matzo bread.

Jesus: "My time is at hand. Yet a little while I am with you ... where I am going you cannot come."

Peter: "Lord, where are you going?"

Jesus: "Where I am going you cannot follow me now; but you shall follow afterward."

Peter: "Lord, why cannot I follow you now? I will lay down my life for you."

Jesus: "You will all fall away because of me this night; for it is written, 'I will strike the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock will be scattered.'"

Peter, slamming the table determinedly: "Though they all fall away because of youn I will never fall away."

Jesus, with resigned smile: "Truly, I say to you, this very night, before the cock crows, you will deny me three times."

Peter, standing up, slapping his chest: "Even if I must die with you, I will not deny you."

Other disciples, in mingled protests: "I will not deny you." "Never." "We will not."

Jesus: "Let not your hearts be troubled; believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many rooms ... And when I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and will take you to myself, that where I am you may be also."

'Take this, and divide it among yourselves ... Drink of it, all of you; for this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many for the forgiveness of sins.'

The group eats silently for several moments, reaching with fingers in common bowls and quaffing wine.

Thomas, quizzically: "Lord, we do not know where you are going; how can we know the way?"

Jesus: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father, but by me. If you had known me, you would have known my Father also; henceforth you know him and have seen him."

Philip, a sudden bright idea dawning on his face: "Lord, show us the Father, and then we will be satisfied."

Jesus, disappointedly: "Have I been with you so long, and yet you do not know me, Philip? ... I do not speak on my own authority, but the Father who dwells in me does his works. Believe me that I am in the Father and the Father in me ... I will give you another Counselor, to be with you for ever, even the Spirit of truth ... He dwells with you, and will be in you.

"I will not leave you desolate; I will come to you. Yet a little while, and the world will see me no more, but you will see me; because I live, you will live also."

Judas (son of James): "Lord, how is it that you will manifest yourself to us, and not to the world?"

Jesus: "I chose you out of the world ... If they persecuted me, they will persecute you. But ... if a man loves me, he will keep my word, and my Father will love him, and we will come to him and make our home with him ...

"The Counselor, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he will teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I have said to you ... He will bear witness to me; and you also are witnesses ... But now I am going to him who sent me.

"I say to you, you will weep and lament, but the world will rejoice. You will be sorrowful, but the sorrow will turn into joy.

"Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid. I go away and I will come to you ... The hour is coming, indeed it has come, when you will be scattered ... and will leave me alone; yet I am not alone ... In the world you have tribulation: But be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

They sit silently a moment, then break into a hymn, the Passover hallel: "O servants of the Lord, praise ... the Lord ... He raises the poor from the dust ... and set me free."

Jesus stands, pulls his woven cloak about himself. "Rise, let us go hence." They exit.

Scene 2: Same evening, second watch (about midnight), with calls of watchmen resounding along Jerusalem's wall towers. Place: A clearing in the woods on the Mount of Olives, across the campfire-dotted valley from the city's eastern wall.

Jesus to his men: "Sit here, while I go yonder and pray. My soul is very sorrowful, even unto death. Remain here, and watch with me." He moves through the trees to an upthrust of limestone and kneels beside it, burying his head in his arms on the rock.

Jesus: "Father, the hour has come." His voice breaks. "Father, if thou art willing remove this cup from me." His body quivers and he throws back his head, great beads of sweat rolling from his face, his eyes staring into the darkness. "Nevertheless, not my will but thine be done.

"I have manifested thy name to men ... Now they know ... and now I am no more in the world, but they are in the world ... . Holy Father, keep them in thy name ... that they may be one, even as we are one ... so that the world may believe ... Sanctify them in thy truth: Thy word is truth. As thou didst send me into the world, so I have sent them into the world."

'I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father, but by me. If you had known me, you would have known my Father also; henceforth you know him and have seen him.'

He gets up slowly, walks back to the others, who are stretched out sleeping. "So could you not watch with me one hour? The spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak." He goes apart and prays again. "My Father, if this cannot pass unless I drink it, thy will be done."

He returns to the sleeping men: "Are you still sleeping and taking your rest?" Flares of torches, the tromp of feet, voices and cracking branches come through the trees. "Rise ... see, my betrayer is at hand."

A detachment of armed Roman soldiers, accompanied by Temple priests and officers, burst into the scene, bearing lanterns and weapons.

Judas Iscariot, scared, eyes darting: "Hail Master!" He kisses Jesus.

Jesus, levelly: "Judas, would you betray the Son of man with a kiss?" He turns to the vilitary commander: "Whom do you seek?"

Tribune: "Jesus of Nazareth."

Jesus: "Have you come out as against a robber, with swords and clubs to capture me? Day after day I sat in the Temple teaching, and you did not seize me. But this is your hour and the power of darkness ... I am he."

Abruptly, Peter and the Zealot draw swords and begin slashing out at the surrounding band, one swipe severing the ear of Malchus, servant of the high priest, who screams with pain as blood bursts forth. The soldiers draw swords and move into the melee.

Jesus to disciples, sternly: "Put your sword back into its place. All who take the sword will perish by the sword." The soldiers have overpowered several disciples, but Jesus protests: "I told you I am he. So if you seek me, let these men go."

Tribune, slapping with his staff: "Not them! Him!" The soldiers swing about and seize Jesus, binding him about his arms with ropes. The disciples, terror-stricken, steal separately away into the dark woods.

Scene 3: The third watch (about 3 a.m.) in an open courtyard of the high priest's house, with sharp voices of interrogation coming from the lighted interior, where Jesus stands bound.

Roman soldiers, Temple officers and servants huddle around a burning charcoal brazier in the courtyard, warming themselves, an uneasy Peter among them, glancing repeatedly and fearfully at the scene inside.

A maidservant, in surprised recognition: "You also were with Jesus the Galilean." She whirls about to others, pointing. "This man also was with him."

Peter, averting his face: "I do not know what you mean. Woman, I do not know him." He edges away to a group near the gateway.

The maid follows: "This man is one of them." A man servant takes up the accusation: "This man was with Jesus of Nazarethm You are one of them."

Peter, cursing: "Man, I am not."

Another bystander: "Certainly you are also one of them, for you are a Galilean. Your accent betrays you."

Peter, swearing furiously: "Man, I do not know what you are saying. I do not know the man."

In the distance, a cock crows the approach of dawn.

Three Mayors Plead With Carter For More Urban Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — A trio of Democratic mayors Tuesday made a plea to President Carter to put more money for financially strapped cities into his urban program, which is scheduled to be unveiled next week.

After the meeting in the Oval Office, the three told reporters they hope they will be able to support the Carter program. "His priorities are not far from ours," said Lee Alexander of Syracuse, N.Y.

Carter met with the three at the request of the National Conference of Democratic Mayors. The delegation included the group's present chairman, Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind.; the past chairman, Henry Maier of Milwaukee, and Alexander, who is chairman of the bipartisan U.S. Conference of Mayors.

They said Carter had told them he still had not decided finally what would be in his urban program. Most proposals under consideration reportedly reshape present urban programs, plus perhaps $2 billion in extra federal spending.

Maier said the group told Carter that even Milwaukee, which has a good credit rating, is experiencing rising costs, disproportionately high joblessness and low income and other problems.

"If this is happening to a city like this we feel that there ought to be...additional funding behind the urban policy," he said.

Although the president made no specific promise of increased federal spending for distressed cities, they said they were encouraged by the way in which he listened to their request.

Alexander said, "We're merely here to make sure that aid does go directly to where the urban policy statement, by its own definition, says it should go; to the urban centers and particularly those in distress."

Hatcher conceded that proposing aid for distressed cities runs the risk of being rejected by senators and Congress members who represent cities that would not receive such aid. "That's a difficult political question, as we pointed out to the president," he said. "But the realistic fact is that that's what is going to have to be done if the policy is going to be meaningful."

Joseph Jenks, a Lynn, Mass., ironmaker, made the first fire engine in the United States in 1654. It consisted of a pump worked by relays of men at the handles, and received its water supply from lines of bucket passers who dumped the water into the cistern.

Amarillo Official Faces Trial

ROSWELL (UPI) — Jury selection began Tuesday in a $4 million federal civil rights suit alleging an assistant district attorney lied to Amarillo police, causing the false arrest of three men and a 4-year-old boy.

The suit, involving four plaintiffs and multiple defendants, is one of two growing from the same incident last June 2. The second suit, seeking $2 million in damages, was filed Monday in the state District Court at Santa Fe.

The attorney for the plaintiffs is Larry Hill of Las Cruces, who also represents a Las Cruces man in another federal civil rights suit for $348,000.

Juries were being selected to hear both federal caes in the same Roswell court Tuesday. No trial date was set for the state case in Santa Fe.

A defendant in all three of the suits is Assistant District Attorney Jay Rosenthal.

The incident that prompted two of the suits stemmed from the arrest at Amarillo of Roswell lawyers Santiago Juarez and Ramon Garcia, their companion Rudy Valadez and Juarez's young son.

The plaintiffs contend they went to Amarillo seeking a police informant for testimony in connection with a case involving clients of Juarez and Garcia who had been arrested on drug charges.

The suit alleges Rosenthal telephoned Amarillo police, telling them Juarez and Garcia were en route to the Texas city for the purpose of killing or bribing the informant, who was identified as Juan Valdez.

Rosenthal did not identify Juarez and Garcia as lawyers, the suit said, and as a result the plaintiffs suffered malicious prosection, assault and battery and "intentional infliction of emotional distress."

Charges against the New Mexico men were dropped following the incident.

In the suits, Juarez and Garcia contend Rosenthal and state police narcotics agent Jesse Franco flew to Amarillo, arriving before the plaintiffs, and were present at the time of the arrest.

The suit said Rosenthal used his office to have the two attorneys detained and keep them from making contact with Valdez, who fled after being informed by Franco that the men were seeking to talk with him.

Valdez was listed as the informant in connection with a number of narcotics cases stemming from the arrests of about 14 persons in the Roswell area in January 1977.

Despite repeated demands by attorneys for the defendants in those cases, the prosecution never produced Valdez to testify in court, saying his whereabouts were unknown. Later, all of the cases were thrown out of court because of the unavailability of the informant.

Rosenthal, Franco and 5th Judicial District Attorney Michael F. McCormick of Carlsbad were named defendants in both suits. State Policeman Vance Adams is a codefendant in the state suit. Named codefendants in the federal suit are the New Mexico State Police, the city of Amarillo, the Amarillo Police Department and a number of individual officers.

The federal suit and the other case filed by Hill on behalf of Alex Gonzales of Las Cruces were expected to come to trial next week following completion of two other cases for which juries also were being selected.

Farmers' Plan To Buy City Water Considered

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — The future of rural water customers now served by the city remains in question as a controversy continues here.

Local interest in the topic surfaced after an announcement by city officials that all water customers outside the city limits were to be turned over to Red River Water Authority.

A delegation of farmers went to City Hall protesting the decision and offered to form neighborhood co-operatives to maintain their own water lines if they would be permitted to purchase water from a master meter inside the city limits. They said they would designate one person responsible for paying the entire monthly water bill, then would read individual meters and pay their bills to that person.

City officials consented to discuss the proposal to determine whether it might be a workable plan.

Meanwhile, Fred Parkey of Wichita Falls, general manager of Red River Water Authority, answered a request by local residents to attend a public meeting here to discuss the authority's water rates. The recent meeting at the Gate City Electric building drew a large crowd.

Parkey noted that he had expected to meet with only a few people and was not prepared for the large gathering he faced. The meeting was frequently interrupted by outeries from the crowd, and Parkey fielded questions.

One Red River customer noted that when the authority began services about 10 years ago, the minimum charge for water was $12 for 10,000 gallons, and that the minimum is now the same amount of money for 1,000 gallons.

"I love the water," the man said, "but the costs are turning it into a monster."

A woman told Parkey she was charged $600 for water one month recently. It was noted that when a leak occurs in a line serving a rural customer, that user is responsible for paying the bill.

Parkey said the authority is a non-profit organization and is operated under the leadership of a board of dirctors appointed by the governor. Morris Higley of Childress recently was named to that board.

Parkey also explained that when the rural water system was launched in Childress County, users were advised that the cost would be high.

FORD CRITICIZES CARTER — Former President Gerald Ford, a Republican, criticized the energy program of Democratic President Carter during a news conference in San Antonio on Tuesday. Ford also addressed the annual meeting of the National Petroleum Refiners Association.(AP Laserphoto)

Ford Raps Carter On Price Controls

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford, declining to commit himself to a 1980 White House campaign, Tuesday criticized President Carter's energy program as insufficient and misdirected.

Ford, who addressed a meeting of the National Petroleum Refiners Association, said the Carter administration "is going down the wrong road when they advocate total regulation" of oil and gas prices.

The former Republican president, at a news conference following his closed speech to the oil refiners, recommended that the energy program he submitted to Congress in January 1975 be given a new look.

"The Carter administration is wrong when they advocate a continuation of control over domestic crude oil prices. I don't believe that is the way for us to stimulate an incentive for greater production of domestic crude oil or new natural gas," Ford said.

"The Carter administration's energy program is basically unsound and insufficient and it could have a serious impact on the future security, economically as well as militarily, for the United States."

Ford said he told the 2,400 oil refiners at the closed luncheon basically the same thing.

He said the energy program of President Carter, a Democrat who defeated Ford in the 1976 election, "was insufficient in its aims and objectives and misdirected as to how to achieve energy self-sufficiency by 1985."

The suntanned Ford said he hasn't made up his mind whether to run for president again in 1980.

"It's much too early to make that decision," he said. "But I am healthy. I won't duck my responsibility and I'll be around one way or another in 1980."

Ford said he has received "considerable encouragement" to make the 1980 race but has told supporters an organized campaign for his nomination would be premature now.

Ford, who also attended two small, closed receptions Tuesday afternoon, said he would be trying to raise money for a Gerald Ford Presidential Library and Museum at one of the receptions.

The other reception was a $100 per person fund-raiser staged by the political action committee of the Sn Antonio Chamber of Commerce. Local officials planned to use the money to support candidates in San Antonio's 1979 municipal elections.

Ford declined to "second guess President Carter" on the president's dealings with Israeli Prime Minister Begin.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

ALTHOUGH PREPARATIONS FOR COTTON planting are well underway, cotton acreage prospects in the 25-county area are still uncertain.

"Changes in the government feed grain and cotton programs are still under consideration in Washington," points out Donald A. Johnson, executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

"And a change or changes in either or both, even at this late date, could have a significant effect on farmer crop selection."

Earlier PCG calculations, based on program announcements made in late 1977, indicated there could be a small increase in 1978. The area had an estimated 3.7 million acres in cotton last year, the largest acreage since the 1950s.

THE USDA'S PLANTING INTENTIONS REPORT early this year placed the intended cotton acreage in Texas at 6.4 million, down only 200,000 acres from 1977.

"Since our information led us to believe there would be more than a reduction of 200,000 acres in other areas of the state, the USDA report appeared at the time to confirm our expectations for the High Plains," Johnson says.

Another planting intentions report, based on a sampling of nearly 3,000 farm operators, will be issued by the USDA April 13.

Johnson believes moisture will be a more important factor than acreage in determining 1978 cotton production on the High Plains.

A FALL AND WINTER MOISTURE SURVEY conducted by Oliver Newton, agricultural meteorologist here, showed that "the top five-foot layer of soil is very dry over all sections of the South Plains."

The survey showed a high percentage of the area needs from five to seven inches of moisture, well above normal, to rewet the soil before planting time.

Snows since the survey was completed have provided one to two inches of moisture over most of the area. But this amount generally is absorbed in the top foot of soil and has little effect on the deeper layers.

"Timely rains could turn the situation around," Newton says. "But based on historical records, assuming current planting intentions of 3.7 million acres, the odds probably are against production from the 25 High Plains counties exceeding a maximum of 1.7 million bales."

HOUSE AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN Thomas Foley, D-Wash., has introduced a bill to raise target prices and loan rates for wheat, corn and cotton.

He is seeking 1978 target prices and loan rates, respectively, of $3.50 and $2.50 a bushel for wheat (up from $3 and $2.25), $2.40 and $2.10 a bushel for corn (from $2.10 and $2), and 60 and 46 cents a pound for cotton (from 52 and 44 cents).

The bill would cover a four-year period. Target prices and loan rates in the later years would rise automatically with increases in the consumer price index and farm production costs. Also included is a voluntary diversion of historical acreage.

Cattle Futures Drop On Chicago Exchange

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Live cattle futures finished 17 to 62 points lower Tuesday led by October which was off 85 points earlier in the session on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Sales were 20,539 cars. The market fell to around its low for the day after an early rise of 10 points in distant April was erased.

Heavier cattle runs and uncertainty ahead of a USDA pig crop report, due after the close of trading, brought pressure as did the possibility of more beef imports this year.

Scale-down buying was attracted by continued strength in beef and steady to higher cash cattle.

Wholesale beef was up one-half to one cent at 77 to 78½ cents per pound, highest since October 1975. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the top at $52 per hundredweight. Omaha topped at $51.

Today, the six markets expect 19,700 head to arrive. Tuesday's slaughter was estimated at 146,000 head.

Hog futures closed 145 points stronger to 40 weaker on sales of 10,887 contracts. Nearby April was up most, climbing 150 points for a time.

December led the later months lower after distant June had beef off 55 points.

The nearby option found support on the discount of futures to cash after prices fell to two-week lows on heavy hog runs and weakness in cash hogs and hams. Aggressive late support also stemmed from covering ahead of the pig crop report.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 1½ cents at 66½ to 72 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, lowest since June. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the top at $47 per hundredweight, cheapest since January.

The day's kill was estimated at 289,000 head. The major terminals expect receipts of 23,500 head today.

USDA reported at total of 44,680,000 hogs and pigs on farms in the 14 major pork producing states as of March 1. Number kept for breeding purposes totaled 6,930,000 head, while the number of hogs available for market was set at 37,750,000 head.

Traders' immediate comments on the report ranged from bullish to extremely bullish. They noted the total was only up 1 percent from a year earlier, compared with expectations of a 6.6 percent increase average guess.

Breeding hogs fell 1 percent against a pre-report average guess of 10.5 percent. Market hogs were 2 percent higher than a year ago, down somewhat from the early guesses of as much as 5.9 percent greater numbers.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed down as much as the daily limit of 200 points in distant May and July, while active nearby contracts were up as many as 187 points in May.

Volume was estimated at 9,138 contracts. The limit move was the fifth in a row.

Selling spilled over from Monday as traders noted heavy hog runs and lower prices along with softness in cash bellies. However, there was late covering ahead to the pig crop report.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off two cents at 71½ to 72½ cents per pound, f.o.b. river, a two-week low.

Tests Show Sunflowers May Be Cheaper Feed

For cattle and other ruminants, sunflowers may provide a cheaper high protein feed than cotton, A Texas Tech animal scientist says.

While cottonseed meal has a higher crude protein level, 41 percent, than sunflower seed meal at 30 percent, the two apparently have equal digestibility, according to Dr. Robert C. Albin, who heads the Department of Animal Science.

Albin, working with graduate students, studied the chemical composition, fiber content, digestibility, nitrogen balance values and roughage replacement value of whole sunflower seed meal in comparison with cottonseed meal and cottonseed hulls in a ruminant finishing ration.

Eight Holsteins were used in the test, replicated four times. Consumptiion of all rations was limited to 15 pounds per head daily, fed in two equal feedings.

He said results indicated that growing-finishing beef cattle can use solvent-extracted sunflower seed meal as efficiently as solvent extracted cottonseed meal when fed on an equal crude protein and crude fiber basis.

In both rations, Albin said, there is no significant difference in digestibility or gross energy or nitrogen retention values.

There must be compensation for the reduced crude protein in sunflower seed meal, he said, and because the sunflower product includes the hulls it is necessary to lower the proportion of cottonseed hulls in the diet when using the sunflower seed meal.

The per unit cost of sunflower protein is cheaper, however, Albin said, than the cottonseed meal protein, and there is an added advantage for growers.

Sunflowers on the Texas High Plains are considered at the minimum to be a 90-day crop. If a grower is hailed out or loses a cotton crop from some other cause early enough in the season, sunflowers can be planted to produce an income, he said.

They are hardy and adaptable, said Albin, although to make money high levels of water are necessary. Dryland sunflower production likely would not pay, in Albin's view.

Whether the sunflower meal is useful with nonruminant livestock will be determined in tests underway at Texas Tech.

Dr. C. Reed Richardson is the principal investigator. Working with him is Robert Beville, graduate student in animal science from Decatur.

AGRICULTURAL MARKETS

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures prices slumped on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday as speculators opted to take their profits after recent sharp increases.

Country grain movement was hampered by floods in Nebraska and farmer sales of soybeans and corn were relatively light, analysts said. But even with relatively little hedge pressure from commercial grain users, speculators dominated the action with their selling.

Senate approval of higher loan and target prices for grains failed to stimulate much demand, except at lower levels. And another reduced estimate of Brazil's soybean production was mostly ignored.

The Agriculture Department's weekly export inspections showed that less wheat was shipped overseas last week. Corn exports, however, were about unchanged at 35.8 million bushels and soybean exports of 16.9 million bushels were considerably above trade expectations.

The department also announced that a private grain exporter had sold 19.7 million bushels of corn to the Soviet Union. But market analysts said that sale already had been covered in the futures market.

March contracts expired at noon. At the close, soybeans were 4½ to 13¾ cents lower, with March contracts quoted at $6.94 a bushel; wheat was 4¼ to 8 cents lower, March $2.84¾; corn was 1 to 2½ cents lower, March $2.42 and oats were 2 to 3¼ cents lower, March $1.33½.

Hog Decline Forecasts Price Gain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are producing fewer hogs than surveys indicated a few months ago, meaning that consumer pork prices will continue relatively high for some time, a government report indicated Tuesday.

The Agriculture Department said that the inventory of hogs and pigs on farms on March 1 in 14 major states was estimated at 44.7 million head, up one percent from a year ago.

But the report also said that fewer than 2.3 million sows gave birth to baby pigs in the first three months of the hog marketing year which began last Dec. 1, down one percent from a year earlier.

Last December 22, based on surveys among producers, the department forecast that farmers in the same 14 states would have about 2.6 million sows farrow this winter.

Further, the new report said that farmers intend to have 2.9 million sows farrow in the March-May quarter, up one percent from a year ago. But in December, the department forecast 3.1 million litters this spring.

The 14 states produce about 85 percent of the nation's pork. Hog prices have been relatively high since last fall and retail pork prices have crept up.

For summer production, the report said that producers in June-August plan to have 2.68 million hogs farrow, two percent less than last summer.

As of March 1, the report said, farmers had 6.9 million hogs kept for breeding, down 1 percent from a year ago. Their hogs for market were put at 37.8 million head, up 2 percent from a year ago.

"The prolonged period of cold winter weather slowed weight gains and the movement of hogs and pigs to market in the major midwestern states," the report said.

Cattle prices also have been higher in recent months and retail beef prices also have risen. Department experts say that retail meat prices overall will continue to edge higher this year.

Premium Discounts Set For New Homes

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — State Farm Fire Casualty Co., the nation's largest insurer of homes, will give premium discounts of up to 14 percent on new homes, the firm announced Tuesday.

The discounts will be 14 percent for houses built in the current year and 2 percent less for each year added to the age of the building.

State Farm said some other insurance companies give discounts on new houses, but that this probably is the first time a sliding scale has been applied to the program.

The discounts will begin April 1 in Illinois and throughout most of the nation by the end of the year, the firm said.

The program is being instituted because fewer claims are made on newer houses, while premimum income on the new buildings usually is higher because they are most often insured for full replacement value, unlike many older houses.

The company said in a statement that about 25 percent of its customers nationally will qualify for some discount. The program will not apply to tenant or condominium policyholders.

Stocks Slip On Big Board

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply Tuesday in what brokers said was partly due to investor skepticism and profit-taking along with some concern that the Carter administration might soon bring stronger pressure on business in an effort to deal with inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 11.00 points to 762.82, giving up most of the 15-point advance it accumulated in the previous three sessions.

Trading was moderately active as 24.41 million shares changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange, down from 28.36 million the previous day.

Brokers suggested a combination of reasons for the sharp falloff. Many pointed to profit-taking by investors who decided to sell on recent price increases, reflecting apparent skepticism about the near term trend of the market.

The Dow blue chip indicator turned down at the start of trading and continued to decline steadily throughout the day.

New York (AP) — Tuesday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

U.N.'s Peace Effort Curbed By Reds' Debts

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Soviet and Chinese refusal to help pay for a new U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon threatens to create more financial woes for the United Nations. It already owes $166 million from previous peacekeeping operations.

Since U.N. peacekeeping began in 1948, the Soviet Union and most of the Eastern European countries have refused to pay for the operations they don't endorse. China disapproves of U.N. peacekeeping activities as a matter of principle and does not pay.

Nor have the Communist countries given a dime to U.N. operations funded exclusively by voluntary contributions such as the 2,500-man contingent in Cyprus.

Some Western nations also have withheld their payments on technical grounds. France, for example, still owes $17 million from the U.N. operation in the Congo which served there from the Belgian Congo's independence in June 1960 until June 1964. France said its troops should have been included in the U.N. force.

The Soviet Union has made clear that it won't pay for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon now being put together to take over from the Israeli forces. Moscow not only objects to the functions of the force but also insists that "the aggressor" — meaning Israel — should pick up the tab.

The 4,000-man contingent is expected to cost $68 million in the first six months of operation.

The latest Soviet refusal is expected to bring the total debt incurred by the Soviet Union and its constituent states of Byelorussia and the Ukraine to nearly $100 million. They now owe $82 million — $10 million from the first U.N. Emergency Force in Sinai 1956-1967, $40 million from the Congo operation 1960-1964 and $32 million from the present UNEF and U.N. Disengagement Observer Force activities in the Middle East.

China's debt, including the money owed by Nationalist China which Peking replaced in 1971, totals more than $37 million.

The refusal of these states to pay their assessed share of the peacekeeping operations created a major political crisis in 1964, when the United States and the Western powers threatened to invoke charter sanctions and take away the voting rights of the financially delinquent nations.

"It's time to bite the bullet and tackle this matter," says a U.N. financial expert who asked not to be identified. "If anything brings down the United Nations, I think the financial tangle will."

President Carter recently made a series of proposals aimed at restoring financial health of the United Nations and strengthening its capacity for peackeeping and peaceful settlement.

He proposed that the United Nations consider the establishment of a $100 million U.N. peacekeeping fund and that the nations of the world earmark and train some of their military forces to serve as a ready reserve for the U.N. peacekeeping missions.

But both the Soviet Union and China strongly oppose these suggestions. The U.N. official said only a major diplomatic effort to induce the Soviet Union and China to alter their views would produce results.

Public School Units Hit Tax Credit Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public education groups launched an offensive Tuesday to counter the effort in Congress to give a tuition tax credit of up to $500 per student to parents of private school children.

The American Association of School Administrators, the National School Boards Association, the American Federation of Teachers, the National PTA and other groups banded together to fight the bill in a National Coalition to Save Public Education.

The tax credit plan has 49 cosponsors in the Senate and was approved 14 to 1 by the Senate Finance Committee on Feb. 23.

The Carter administration opposes the tax credit for elementary, secondary and college tuition. Attorney General Griffin Bell said last week he thinks a tax credit for elementary and secondary schools is unconstitutional.

The coalition members admitted they were caught off guard by the rapid success of the bill in the Finance Committee.

Will Davis of the school board group said the history of court rejections of direct tax aid for parochial schools "has kind of lulled us into a false sense of security about the legislation."

The coalition contended at a news conference that tax credits would undermine support for public education and encourage segregation.

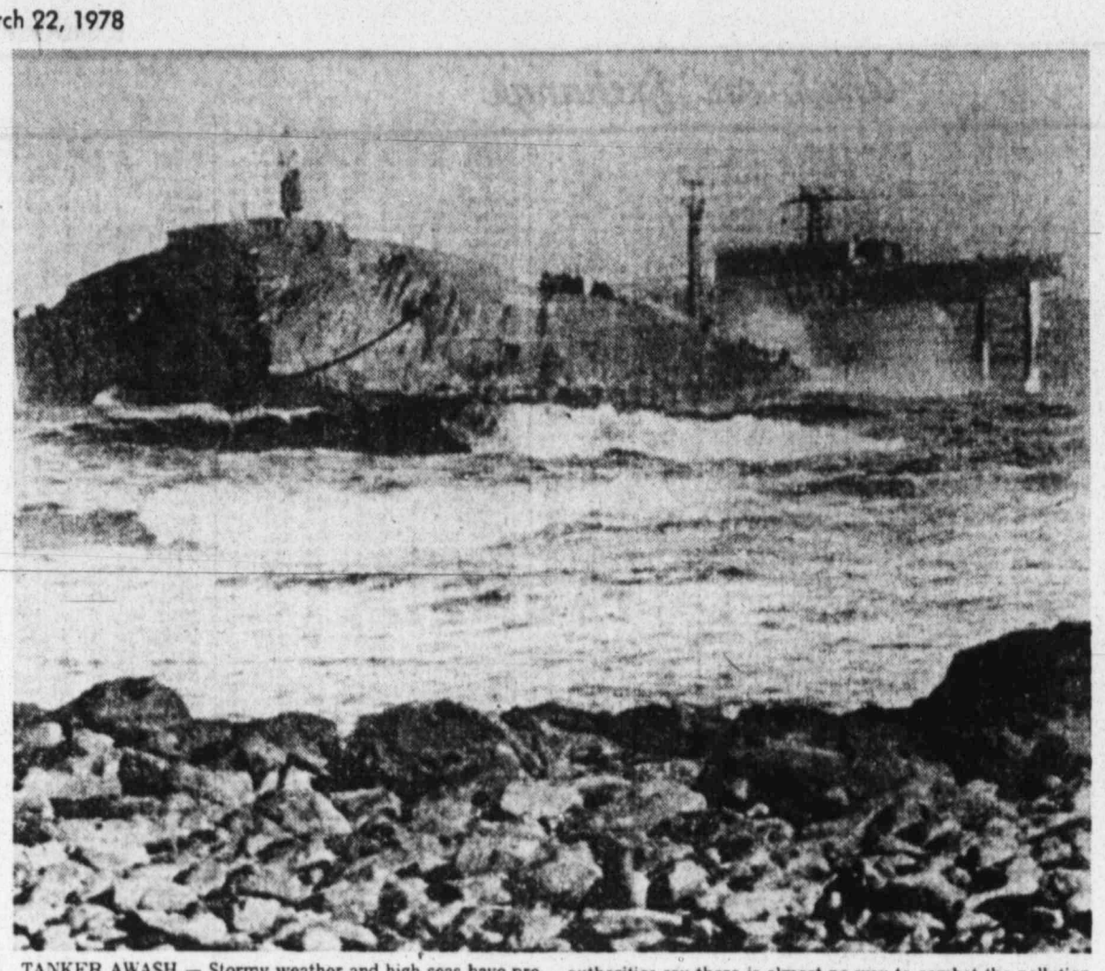

The Carter administration has proposed a $1.46 billion increase in aid to college students as an alternative to the tax credit for higher education. But this plan was rebuffed in the House Monday when Democratic leaders tried to get it onto the floor for a vote. No action is expected until after April 3, when Congress returns from its Easter recess.

The education groups said they would mount a letter-writing and lobbying campaign in the meantime.

Albert Schanker, president of the teacher federation, said, "This isn't tax relief. It's a compulsory private school tax. The public would be forced to put up billions of dollars for schools over which they have no policy control."

Army Officials Reject 'Dud' Theories In Shell Explosion

RILEY, Kan. (UPI) — Army officials said Tuesday the type of 90mm anti-tank shell that exploded in a trailer home, killing two persons and injuring five others, has not been used at Fort Riley since before the Vietnam War.

Vaughn Bolton, Fort Riley public affairs director, rejected theories the shell recently had been shot from a base gunnery range into an area near the trailer but had not exploded. He said the fort's ammunition dumps did not contuin any of the shells.

"There shouldn't be a dud in that area at all," Bolton said. "The 90mm shell is not used in current tanks. It had to have been fired from an M-48 tank, which no longer is organic of an active Army infantry division since before the Vietnam War.

"(Bkt) they're ageless. You find one that's 50 years old — it's still dangerous as all get out."

A soldier told Riley County authorities late Monday the shell was taken from a tank gunnery range and he had dumped it in a ravine. Al Johnson, assistant director of the Riley County police department, said the shell apparently was found in the ravine by one of the two persons it later killed.

"He said he obtained it on the reservation and was responsible for getting it where it was found by the boy," Johnson said Tuesday. "He found it on the (target) range."

The blast killed Spec. 4 Kenneth Phillips, 19, and his 14-year-old brother Timothy, who officials suspect found the shell and dropped it inside his brother's trailer. Five of their relatives were injured.

Johnson refused to release further details on how the shell was retrieved or the identity of the soldier, but said he was not being held by authorities. Johnson said all investigation information would be provided to the Riley County attorney in several days.

Bolton said the tank gunnery range southeast of the both the fort and the town was surrounded by rolls of barbed wire and was patrolled by gaards, and added, "It doesn't make any sense anyone would enter an area like that."

Bolton said military experts and agents of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms bureau identified the high-explosive 90mm shell Tuesday from pieces found after the 4 p.m. Monday explosion.

Terry Schell, ATF group supervisor in Kansas City, said two teams checking into the explosion for criminal violation of federal firearms laws would forward any federal violations to the U.S. attorney for prosecution.

The blast, which lifted the roof and demolished Phillips' single-width trailer and blew out windows in nearby trailers, also injured Phillips' wife and four other members of the family visiting from Portsmouth, Ohio.

Pamela Phillips, seven months pregnant, was listed in good condition Tuesday at Irwin Army Hospital at Fort Riley. Parents Joyce and Eugene remained in serious condition at the University of Kansas Medical Center at Kansas City, Kan.

A sister, Tanya Phillips, 14, was in stable condition at Memorial Hospital at Manhattan, Kan., and Penny Phillips, 16, was treated for burns and released Monday night.

Anti-Stall Device May Save Lives

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — An aerospace engineering profesfor says most light aircraft owners cannot afford the $40,000 system commercial airlines use to combat inflight stalling — a lifelong aviation problem.

So Howard Chevalier is trying to rectify the problem, which accounted for 27 percent of the 693 fatal general aircraft accidents last year.

An inflight stall is often followed by a spin and a quick plummet to the ground.

Chevalier, a professor in the aerospace engineering department at Texas A&M University, has spent 10 years working on his solution.

And he says he is the only person to develop an anti-stall device and prove its feasibility with funding from the National Aeronautics and Space Admincstration.

The former NASA research engineer has developed a simple system that is independent of the craft's control system.

The system consists of a vane or "spoiler" attached to the plane's control surfaces. An attitude sensing device activutes a servomotor which pushes out a small flat plate. As the craft approaches the stall angle, the plate is deployed proportionally to the angle of attack.

This, Chevalier said, stops the plane from reaching the stall attitude by changing the air flow and also puts force on the pilot's stick, alerting the pilot to the situation.

"This device doesn't alter the control system and it doesn't do anything until the pilot reaches the angle of attack," he said.

Chevalier already has tested his device on two planes and said testing will move to the wind tunnel at Langley Research Center in Virginia by May.

He said his objective is to document the feasibility of his system through research supported by NASA with the possibility of offering his findings to general aircraft manufacturers by the end of next year.

Chevalier, a pilot for 30 years and a research engineer for 22, said he began research in the field when his wife asked him why planes had to stall.

He said he answered, "They don't have to."

Last year, 68 percent anticipated higher earnings. The two main worries: inflation and growing government intervention in business.

Professor Runs Store For Fun

POOLVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Standing behind a counter displaying jars of rock candy and an ancient cash register, a bearded 60-year-old man wearing suspenders looks like the classic proprietor of an old village store.

Frank Farnsworth does run the Poolville Country Store here, but only for fun.

Farnsworth is chairman of the economics department at nearby Colgate University and holds a doctorate in economics from Harvard.

Every year, Farnsworth turns his store over to his students to give them a taste of grass roots business that they only talk about in the classroom.

"They run the thing. They take inventory, do the buying, the advertising and set the hours," Farnsworth said.

By running the store for a semester, Farnsworth says the students in his business organization course gain a better understanding of such economic concepts as the elasticity of demand, markup and pricing.

Last semester the students ended up with a $530 profit which they used to buy three benches for the Colgate campus, Farnsworth said.

He bought the store 12 years ago at the urging of his late wife and said he runs it mainly for enjoyment, not profit.

"I've tried to bring it back to what it represented in the last century. It's a village store. You can't run a supermarket in a town of 300 although the previous owner tried," Farnsworth said.

"It has to stand on its two feet, but it's not an opulent earner. If you're going to run a store to make money, you couldn't do it in Pooliville."

After taking over the 143-year-old store, Farnsworth immediately removed the beer cooler and cigarette case. He discovered unsold inventory from the last century in the attic and displays it in the store.

Farnsworth says he does not allow his students to change the store's old-fashioned nature. "No one has pressured us to bring in beer to triple our profits," he said of his students.

The 60-year-old economics professor said the experience of working in his country store also gives his students a different perspective on business.

"We pay homage to the giant corporations, and sometimes we tend to forget that the bulk of our employment comes from the small business," he said.
