American killed by El Salvadoran rebels

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — An American woman traveling with her family was shot and killed when leftist rebels ordered their car to halt but her husbad kept on driving, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The spokesman, Gregory Lagana, said he was "pretty sure" the rebels killed the woman, whom he identified as Linda Louise Cancel, 23, of Culver City, Calif.

Mrs. Cancel, her husband and two children aged 5 years and 18 months were heading east on the Pan American Highway toward the Honduran border early Thursday when rebels ordered them to stop, Lagana said.

The woman's husband kept driving and "several shots were fired from the surrounding hills," Lagana said. One of the shots struck the victim on the right side of her chest, he said.

The family was traveling with a Salvadoran customs agent, Lagana said. The family's destination was Costa Rica where "apparently they were going to live," he said.

He said the other people in the vehicle were not hurt.

The rebels have been waging a civil war against the U.S-backed government for four years. Police said other motorists stopped by the guerrillas on the road reported being asked to pay "war taxes" — money to aid the rebel cause — but the rebels are often known to stop cars only to check passenger's identities and destinations.

Civilians in Santa Rosa de Lima said today that rebels attacked a military patrol on the same highway Thursday morning. They said two soldiers and a civilian were killed.

The embassy spokesman identified the border guard as Modesto Perdomo Osorio, and said the agent had accompanied the family since they crossed the border from Guatemala on Wednesday.

Lagana said Ms. Cancel was riding with her common-law husband, Curtis Hendersen Lewenz, 35, and two children — Lila Reveti Cancel Lewenz, the 18-month-old child of Ms. Cancel and Lewenz, and Christopher Len MacDonal, Ms. Cancel's 5-year-old child by a former marriage.

The family was traveling with many of their belongings in a converted schoolbus with Alabama license plates, Lagana said.

Lagana said travelers may hire a customs officer to accompany them for a $20 fee so they will not have to make complete inventories at the border with Honduras.

Two U.S. consular officers flew by helicopter to give assistance when the embassy heard of the incident and brought the body and the family back to San Salvador.

He said Ms. Cancel's body will be sent back to the United States, probably today.

Lagana said that since last year the State Department has been warning Americans it is dangerous to travel in El Salvador, especially in eastern regions where guerrillas have strongholds.

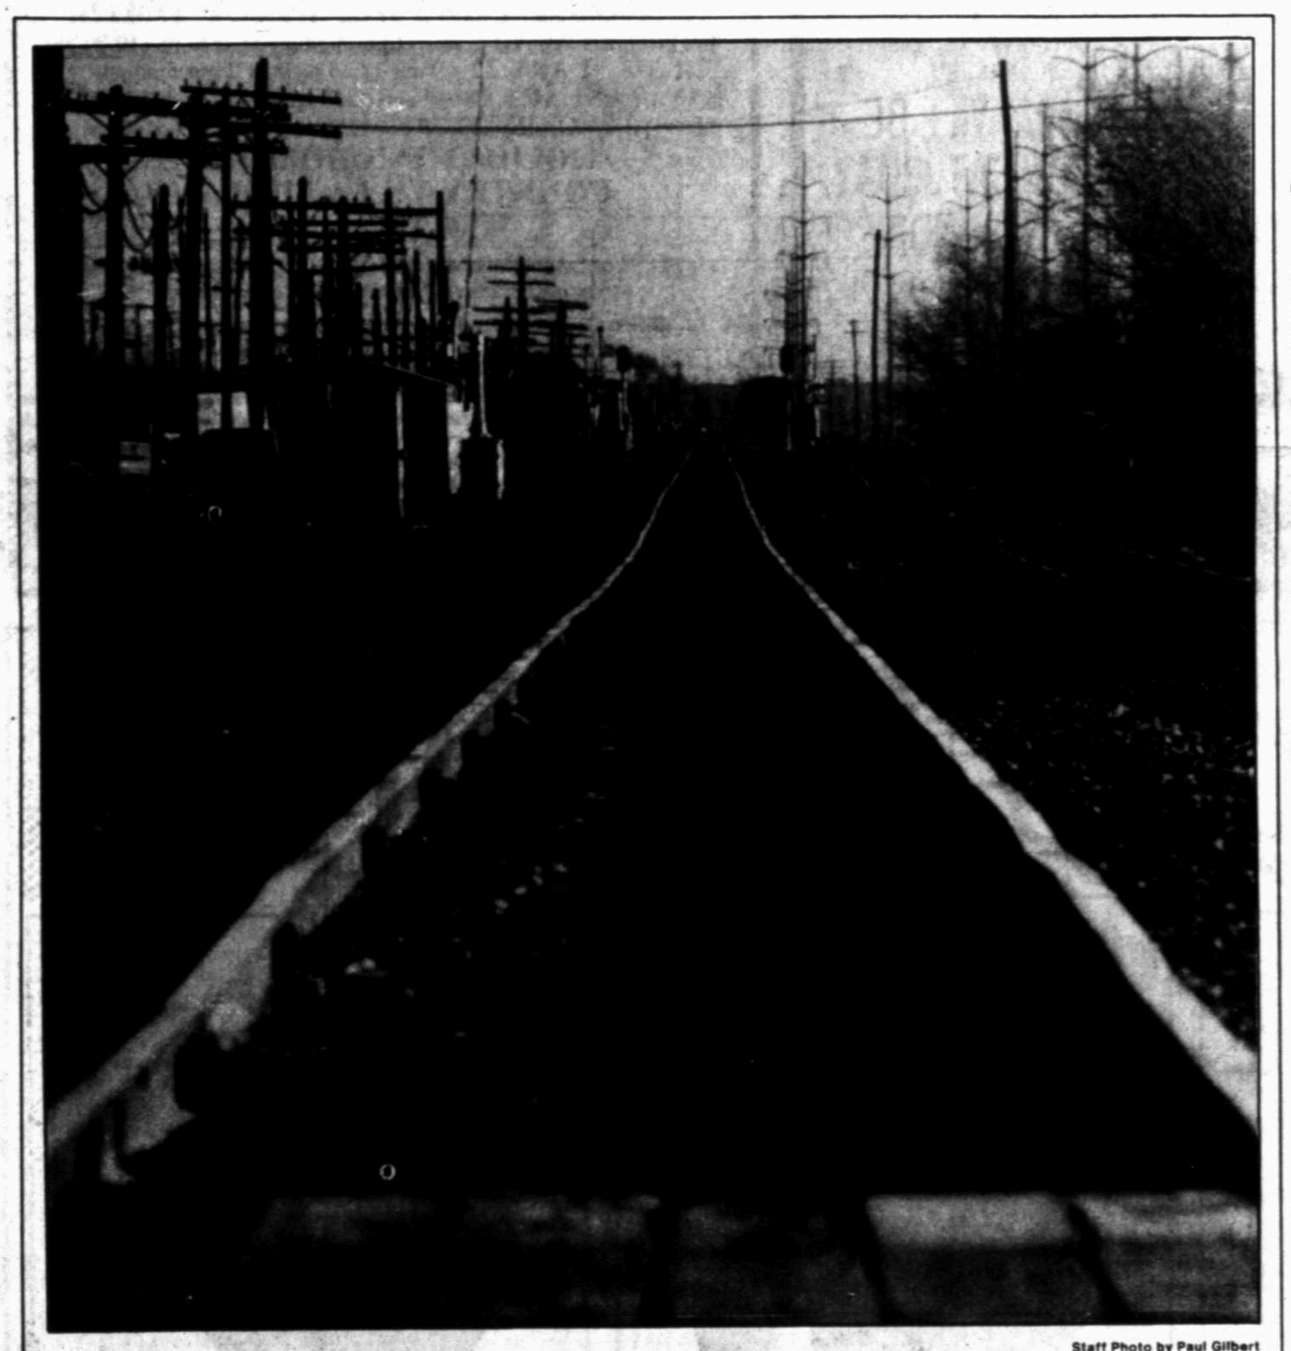

The embassy quoted witnesses interviewed by the consular officers as saying the family and the Salvadoran guard were traveling along the road "when a yellow Toyota vehicle pulled up from behind and the occupants signalled to the family to stop."

Lagana said, "The guard told Mr. Lewenz he should stop but apparently he decided to keep on going until they arrived at a spot where two men — both armed — were standing by the side of the road.

"By then the traffic was slowed down and some vehicles were pulling off to one side of the road. But Lewenz kept on going and sped up. The guard did not speak English and I do not know if Lewenz understood Spanish well.

"But that is when...several shots were fired from the surrounding hills, one of them hitting" Ms. Cancel on the right side, Lagana said.

Lagana said Ms. Cancel died soon after she was hit and Lewenz kept driving 23 miles to El Amatillo, on the Honduran border.

Making tracks

Amtrak will soon test the tracks by sending a train through Midland on its way to El Paso.

Amtrak's run through Midland may lead to West Texas route

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Amtrak will be testing the tracks when it sends a train through Midland on its way to El Paso in early February.

This action comes after a Dallas man initiated a move among West Texas communities, including Midland, to seek service by the nationwide passenger train. Amtrak officials in Dallas indicated to the Midland Chamber of Commerce the Feb. 4 trek is only a test run.

Burt Blanton, a longtime rail lover and business consultant, said the train consisting of a diesel unit, coach and sleeping car will start at Houston on Feb. 2 and spend the night in Dallas. The next day it heads west and stops overnight in Big Spring.

On Saturday morning, it will roll through Midland without stopping, according to Randle Lee, assistant manager with the chamber's Economic Development Department.

"It's a maintenance run to see what condition the tracks are in and to check placement of stations and the time between them," said Lee.

But Amtrak officials in Dallas told Lee they are considering adding service to West Texas "if they determine the tracks are in good condition."

"It'd be great" if Midland could get passenger train service, said Lee. "It would be another alternative we'd have for transportation."

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation must present the proposal to Amtrak in Washington, D.C., he added.

Missouri-Pacific, which owns the rail lines through Midland, recently replaced several of the wooden ties. Willard Schultz, public relations officer in Dallas, said replacing the ties is part of an on-going maintenance program. "That line (through Midland) has always been in good conditin and we try to keep it in shape."

Blanton, 86, who has been in the consulting business for 50 years, began his campaign last fall, seeking support from city and county governments along the rail line from Dallas to El Paso.

Midland City Council in December adopted a resolution supporting the move for Amtrak. That resolution cited a need for the additional transportation, pointing out that passenger service to Midland had been discontinued in 1968 when the population was about 59,000. Today, the population stands at 92,000, a 54.6 percent increase.

The thought of Amtrak running through Midland has sifted up memories of the days when Midland was a major stop for the train — the area's primary form of transporation — as it connected the isolated city on the plains with El Paso and Fort Worth.

C. Winston Barclay with Texas Electric Service Co., pointed out that it was the building of the railroad which was the reason for Midland to exist. As the builders reached the halfway point, they stopped and called it Midland.

"There's certainly a market for it," said Barclay of the possible Amtrak service.

Congress hears report on forces in Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is raising the possibility that United Nations forces may eventually replace American Marines in Lebanon, but it isn't ready to meet demands by some in Congress for an immediate U.S. withdrawal.

"At this point, there are no decisions," House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell told reporters Thursday after Secretary of State George Shultz spent a day on Capitol Hill explaining the administration position on keeping troops in Lebanon.

"We are far from making a decision at all on what to do," said Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

Earlier in the day, the State Department raised the possibility of the United States proposing that U.N. forces replace the Marines and other members of the multinational peacekeeping force.

The U.N. force in Lebanon "may well have a greater role as the situation changes," said deputy spokesman Alan Romberg. At present, the U.N. troops are responsible for the security of southern Lebanon, while the Americans are located near the Beirut airport.

Romberg indicated, however, that there is no imminent plan for the withdrawal of the 1,600 Marines, whose presence in Beirut has drawn increasingly harsh criticism from members of Congress. Some have proposed resolutions to bring the Marines home by April 1.

The Senate Democratic Caucus issued a statement after a closed session on Lebanon saying it remained steadfast in its opposition to the congressional resolution passed last September that authorized the 18-month Marine deployment.

"We continue to oppose giving the administration a blank check for the deployment of our Marines in a situation where the American people have still not been told why our Marines are there, what their mission is supposed to be, and what vital national security interest of the United States is served by the continuting presence of our troops in that country," the statement read.

The Democrats noted that Republican domination of the Senate will prevent any effort to modify the resolution, but "we hope the Republicans will change ... we will continue to pursue every available avenue to persuade the administration of the folly of their present course."

In a hectic series of meetings on Thursday directed at explaining the administration's position on keeping the troops in Lebanon, Shultz met with Baker and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

Shultz then moved on to closed discussions with Republican and Democratic senators, and finished up the day with a second private session, this time with House members of both parties.

Baker said there was "general agreement" that a way had to be found to remove the troops, but no agreement as to how it was to be accomplished.

When asked about the possibility of replacing U.S. troops with a United Nations force, Baker said, "I don't have any problem with that at all, but I'm not ready to propose it."

He said he had "no inherent objection" to U.N. forces taking over the duties of the current multinational force, of which the Marines are a part.

In 1982, the administration considered asking the United Nations to send forces into the Beirut area as an alternative to the multinational force, but officials believed the Soviet Union would veto it.

Group booting Afghan cause

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A group called American Aid for Afghans has launched a drive to donate 2,000 pairs of boots to guerrillas battling Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan, its director says.

Don Weidenweber said Thursday that the group has raised enough money to purchase 1,500 pairs of boots at $20 each and is trying to raise funds for 500 more pairs.

"I'd like to see the U.S. government give the freedom fighters one anti-aircraft missile for every boot we give them," said Weidenweber.

"Incredible as it seems, in a war waged against some of the most sophisticated weaponry in the world, Afghan guerrillas are battling the Soviets with little ordnance, less money, and in their bare feet."

American Aid for Afghans, based in Portland, has about 1,500 paid supporters nationwide, and was formed after the Dec. 27, 1979, Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, Weidenweber said.

He said he'll fly to Pakistan on Feb. 3, where he will buy the boots. He said he will meet with a representative of Afghan guerrilla leader Commander Ahmad S. Massoud in Pakistan and present him with the footwear.

He said he will also donate a radio transmitter and audio tapes of Soviet dissidents. The items will enhance the ongoing effort to bolster the guerrilla cause among the population of Afghanistan and among the Soviet soldiers, Weidenberger said.

Texas governor gives playhouse priority

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he felt his children needed a playroom at the Mansion more than the Texas Film Commission needed some funds appropriated to it by the Legislature.

"They were doing such a good job at the Film Commisson they didn't need that $43,000 and my children were having to play in the terrible weather conditions," White told a Capitol news conference Thursday. "We tried to get some indoor facilities for them."

"I don't think so," Wncy designed to attract film makers to Texas.

Records in the state comptroller's office show that White used his authority on July 26 to take $42,221 from the Film Commission and $75,000 from other parts of his administration to renovate the carriage house behind the Mansion.

The record says $25,000 went to "mansion expense" and the rest was used for administrative expenses.

An aide said only $25,000 actually was transfered from the Film Commission for the playroom.

He said Joel Smith, director of the commission, told him Thursday that "he thought everything was going well and he didn't have any complaint with the budgetary process. I'm going to try to get him some more money."

White said some of the expenses of the renovation came out of his campaign officerholders account.

Turnout low as Filipinos protest vote

The Philippines

Capital: Quezon City [Manila is the de facto capital]
Population: 48.9 million [1981 estimate]
Ethnic groups: Malays are the large majority. Chinese, Americans, and Spanish are minorities
Geography: 115,831 square miles, slightly larger than Nevada
Head of state and head of government: President Ferdinand E. Marcos
Per capita income: $457 [1978]; U.S. $7,854 [1978]
Literacy rate: 85 per cent
Major industries: Food processing, clothing, drugs, paper, appliances
Chief crops: Hemp, copra, sugar, rice, corn, pineapple, tobacco
History: Ancestors of the Malay people of the Philippines probably migrated from Southeast Asia. The archipelago was visited by Magellan in 1521, and the Spanish founded Manila in 1571. The islands, named for King Philip II of Spain, were ceded by Spain to the United States in 1898 after the Spanish-American War. On July 4, 1946, independence was proclaimed in accordance with an act passed by Congress in 1934. A republic was established. A rebellion by Communist-led Huk guerrillas was put down by 1954. President Marcos ruled under martial law from 1972 to January, 1981. In June, in the first election since 1969, Marcos was elected to a new six-year term.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Millions of Filipinos voted today on a proposal to create a vice presidency and three other measures, but turnout was reported as low as 20 percent as many protested by staying home, staging sit-ins or jogging in groups.

National Police Commander Gen. Fidel Ramos said at least nine people were killed, including three communist rebels and two local officials, in scattered election day violence, but he said conditions were generally peaceful.

The constitutional referendum was planned by President Ferdinand E. Marcos' political party as a concession to his long-powerless opposition. But many of those critics were unsatisfied and called for an election boycott to protest Marcos' 18-year rule.

Associated Press monitoring of seven Manila polling places, results from from various provincial precincts checked at random and reports by Manila radio stations showed turnouts ranging from 20 percent to 50 percent.

As more than 80,000 polling places closed across the islands, the chairman of the elections commission, Vicente Santiago, projected a 70 percent turnout and said boycott had failed.

But Solicitor General Estelito Mendoza in a television interview attributed the low turnout in some areas to the fact there were no candidates and that "people believe the 'yes' votes will dominate anyway."

Results were trickling in with "yes" votes ahead in most districts, while in the wealthy Forbes Park residential area of Manila voters were turning down two land-reform measures which critics said could be abused.

The deaths in raids and shootouts occurred in regions south of Manila. Ramos blamed several incidents of ballot-box theft on communist guerrillas out to disrupt the voting.

Marcos declared a two-day national holiday to give voters time to get to their home precincts. Non-voting is punishable by fines and imprisonment.

Official vote totals and results on the four ballot issues are not expected for several days, but all of the issues were expected to pass.

In addition to restoring the office of vice president, which Marcos abolished when he declared martial law in 1972, the measures would reduce the size of national assembly districts, lower the minimum age for the presidency from 50 to 40, and boost urban and rural land-reform programs.

Acid rain study seen as 'setback'

TORONTO (AP) —A Canadian official says President Reagan's decision to study acid rain rather than begin an emissions-control program is a "serious setback" for Canada.

Environment Minister Charles Caccia, in an interview Thursday with th Canadian Press, said enough evidence already exists to justify the start of a program ro limit emissions of sulfur dioxide from factory smokestacks.

American diplomat holds talks with South Africa

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A top U.S. diplomat is here for talks today with South Africa's foreign minister, whose white-minority government has renewed its offer of a cease-fire with guerrillas in neighboring Namibia.

Chester Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, was scheduled to meet Foreign Minster Pik Botha this afternoon at a 17th century wine estate outside Cape Town.

Crocker arrived in South Africa on Thursday night, and the state-guided radio subsequently reported that "it had not been ruled out" that he might also meet Prime Minister P.W. Botha, no relation to the foriegn minister.

Crocker made no statement on arrival.

Four hours before Crocker reached here, the foreign minister's office issued a statement saying South Africa's offer of a one-month cease-fire was still available to the South-West Africa Peoples' Organization.The truce would start Feb. 1.

Based in southern Angola, the guerrilla organization has fought a 17-year bush war to end South Africa's administration of Namibia, also known as South-West Africa.

SWAPO responded to the truce offer with conditions unacceptable to South Africa, including an end to demands that the estimated 25,000 Cuban soldiers in Angola leave. But both sides hinted a cease-fire may be possible.

The brief truce would, presumably, demonstrate good faith on both sides and prepare for future agreements.

On Dec. 6, South Africa invaded southern Angola to smash SWAPO targets and disrupt the annual rainy-season offensive by the guerrillas into northern Namibia.

Today's diplomatic talks, at the Fleur du Cap (Flower of the Cape) wine estate were expected to focus on the disputed territory and other rivalries in the region.

Diplomats made no predictions about the talks, but South African newspapers speculated there might be a breakthrough in the Namibian impasse.

Crocker also is scheduled to visit Zambia, Mozambique and Tanzania, all neighboring states demanding Namibia be granted immediate independence.

Argentine claims photographs

NEW YORK (AP) — An Argentine officer who says he survived the sinking of the light cruiser "General Belgrano" during the Falkland Islands war says he took photos of the foundering ship that appeared around the world. Now he wants the credit.

The naval officer, Martin E. Sgut, filed suit Thursday at U.S. District Court in Manhattan against a group of news organizations that he said used the photos.

"While interned in a hospital after surviving the surprise attack on the battleship, duplicates of the photographs were taken" by an unidentified third party without his knowledge, the suit charges.

The duplicates were sold to Gamma-Liaison, a newsphoto agency, for $10,000, the suit asserts. The agency then licensed use of the photographs to the New York Times, Newsweek and The Associated Press, according to the suit.

China battling 'pollution'

PEKING (AP) — Peking's Communist Party newspaper renewed the drive against "spiritual pollution" Thursday and said it would take years to eliminate decadent Western influence in China.

Diplomats, however, said the purge intellectuals feared might herald a new Cultural Revolution was already waning — its targets narrowed and the rhetoric diminished.

In a 1,000-word front-page editorial, the Peking Daily newspaper said the party would complete its purge of corrupt and unsuitable members in three years. But, it said, "perhaps we need longer to eliminate spiritual pollution."

British union ban protested

LONDON (AP) — Union officials say thousands of civil servants walked off their jobs to protest the government's decision to ban unions from Britain's top secret intelligence-gathering center in southwest England.

In Parliament, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the ban was necessary to ensure the smooth functioning of the Government Communications Headquarters at Cheltenham, which supplies crucial electronic intelligence to Britain, the United States and other NATO allies.

Reagan makes first campaign stop in Atlanta

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is already out on the campaign trail, taking shots at the Democrats who hope to defeat him in November, even though he has not formally announced his candidacy for re-election.

Reagan tried out a key campaign theme during a quick, two-hour stop in Atlanta on Thursday, telling Southern Republican leaders that the Democrats are trying to buy votes with promises. Quoting Democratic President John F. Kennedy, the Republican incumbent said Americans will not respond to those appeals.

Reagan gave another version of a campaign stump speech to a flag-waving, cheering crowd of more than 14,000 gathered for a "non-partisan" rally organized by the Amway Corp. and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

nation

He reminded the Atlanta crowd of the economic troubles under Jimmy Carter's administration, talked of economic recovery under his programs and called for constitutional amendments on school prayer and balancing the federal budget.

The costs of Reagan's trip to Atlanta were paid for by the Reagan-Bush 84 committee, his authorized campaign group. Committee press secretary James Lake, who made the trip, said the costs will run between $35,000 and $50,000.

Returning to Washington Thursday night, Reagan helped the GOP raise $5 million for party coffers by meeting with the party's Eagles — more than 500 people who give $10,000 a year or more to the Republican National Committee. The meeting was closed to press coverage.

While Reagan is already a legal candidate, he will not formally announce his plans until 10:55 p.m. EST Sunday in nationally televised campaign advertisement. Campaign aides have said repeatedly he will announce his candidacy for a second term.

A slight hitch developed as the president started his first campaign trip.

The Marine helicopter that picked him up at the White House made an emergency landing at nearby Anacostia Naval Air Station after a red warning light lit up on the control panel. Reagan switched to another aircraft and went on to Andrews Air Force Base and completed the trip.

With a band playing the country hit song "On the road again," Reagan spent his time Thursday drawing applause with lines certain to be heard in the fall campaign fight with Democrats.

He quoted Kennedy's 1960 inaugural address, where the Democrat told Americans to ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country. Reagan said this year's crop of Democratic hopefuls is pursuing a different course.

"Today we see candidates trying to buy support by telling people what the country will do for them and making promises to interest groups," Reagan told a meeting of Southern Republican leaders.

The charges of excessive promises and damagingly close ties to special interests groups are already being thrown at Democratic front-runner Walter F. Mondale by his Democratic opponents. Reagan showed he will do the same, although he mentioned no Democrat by name.

"Just awhile ago there was the debate up in New Hampshire. There were so many candidates on the platform there were not enough promises to go around," he said.

Trade deficit at record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. foreign trade deficit ballooned to a record $69.4 billion last year, the government reported today, and officials predicted the imbalance this year will be even worse.

The trade deficit in 1983 was 62 percent higher than the record $42.7 billion set just a year earlier.

For December, the deficit narrowed to $6.3 billion from November's $7.4 billion, reflecting a 3.2 percent decline in imports and a 2 percent increase in exports.

But Commerce Department economist David Lund said today that the deficit for this year will continue to worsen. He predicted it will top $100 billion and may hit $110 billion.

The nation's poor trading performance is blamed primarily on two factors. The high value of the dollar makes U.S. exports expensive but imports relatively cheap. And the U.S. economy is growing at a much faster pace than the rest of the world, resulting in brisker American purchases of overseas products while foreign buying of U.S. goods lags behind.

Hunger issue splitting along party lines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are accusing Democrats of partisanship and grandstanding over the hunger issue, while Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says a presidential task force is perpetrating "a cruel joke" on the underfed.

Those claims and counter-claims flew across a congressional hearing room Thursday as senators and congressmen held an unusual joint hearing on the report of President Reagan's Task Force on Food Assistance.

"To put it plainly, the task force report is a cruel joke on millions of our fellow citizens who continue to endure an unacceptable and unfair burden of poverty, hunger and deprivation in this wealthy, well-fed and privileged land," declared Kennedy, D-Mass.

He accused the task force of endorsing "the preconceived view of presidential counselor Edwin Meese, who said he had seen no definitive evidence of hunger."

Kennedy called that "part of a familiar administration strategy to ignore evidence of unfairness and injustice in America. The theme of this report is clear — see no hunger, hear no hunger, speak no hunger."

Rep. Bill Emerson, R-Mo., called Kennedy's statement an "outrageously partisan diatribe."

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., called it "a political statement" and added that "if more statements like this are made, hunger will indeed become a partisan issue." He said members of Congress "should not gain political stature on the backs of the hungry."

With that as a backdrop, members of the 13-member task force defended their work, though several dissented from some recommendations.

"There is hunger in America. But it is an impossible task to quantify it. If hunger could be measured, the necessary statistics would have been gathered long ago," said J. Clayburn LaForce, head of the University of California at Los Angeles Graduate School of Management and chairman of the task force.

"We have tried to advance the discussion on the issue; we believe that in several respects we have. We believe we have made some sound and helpful recommendations. And finally, we hope that some of the questions we have raised will help focus the debate on the efficiency and adequacy of the federal food assistance programs," he said.

Sandra Smoley, chairman of the Sacramento County, Calif., board of supervisors and a task force member, said, "Our task as set forth by President Reagan was to identify the problems in our national network of assistance programs that permit hunger to still exist in America; and to recommend how the problems can be addressed.

"The task force did identify population groups that are not served adequately by the existing programs. And we did make recommendations to address the problems," she said.

She and another task force member, John Driggs, former mayor of Phoenix, Ariz., dissented from two major recommendations of the task force: to make a state's participation in federal food programs optional with the other choice a block grant; and making the states pay more for errors in the food stamp program.

Other witnesses also criticized these proposals, including representatives of the National Governors' Association and the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

"There is no way that a state block grant can assure that anyone in need of assistance will receive it, regardless of the state in which that individual lives," said Mayor Richard H. Fulton of Nashville, Tenn. "We are concerned that, as has occurred with the state block grants enacted two years ago, funds will be spread across the state, rather than targeted to areas and people of special need."

"We are concerned that the block grant approach will signal a departure from the federal commitment to develop a program that will provide flexible resources based on the number of eligible individuals and the cost of a basic food budget," said Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona.

But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said "the present, monolithic programs allow almost no variation. 'Washington knows best' and dictates to the states. That philosophy is embodied in the present statutes, and frankly is increasingly repugnant to the American people — who support decentralization."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Fair skies, warm winds expected

Fair skies and warmer temperatures will greet Midlanders at the beginning of the weekend.

Tonight, temperatures are expected to drop into the lower 30s with westerly winds breezing at 5-10 mph.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, springtime weather is in the forecast for Saturday, with temperatures climbing into the lower 60s and westerly winds picking up at 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 66 was 15 degrees cooler than the record high of 81, set in 1953. The overnight low of 31 was 22 degrees warmer than the record of 9, set in 1948.

Shuttle delayed overnight

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bad weather has set back the space shuttle Columbia's cross-country trip to California by almost two days, but the delay isn't crucial since the orbiter's next mission remains eight months away, officials said.

The jumbo jet hauling the shuttle as a piggyback passenger spent an unscheduled night in San Antonio before taking off at 7:30 a.m. today for a four-hour flight to Edwards Air Force Base.

The shuttle-bearing jet, which took off Thursday morning from Cape Canaveral in Florida, was expected to stop about 1½ hours at Kelly Air Force Base for refueling.

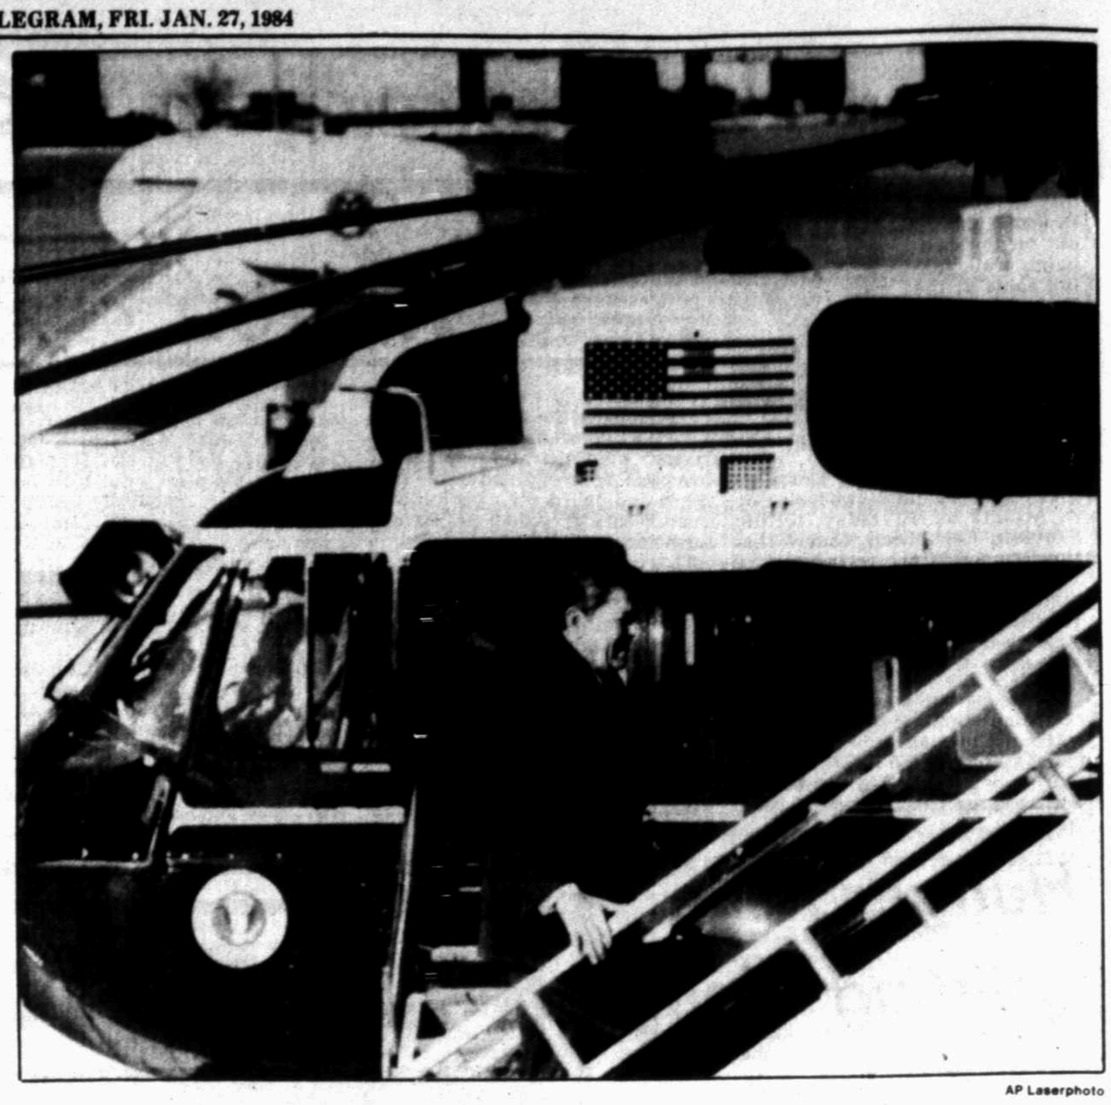

"When they got here, the winds were just too high in California so they decided it was best to wait," Kelly spokesman Bill Turner said. Winds were gusting up to 40 mph near Edwards, he said.

The cross-country trip already had been pushed back a day Wednesday because of rainstorms between Florida and Texas.

Columbia, the nation's first reusable spacecraft, is being ferried to California to be upgraded to the advanced standards of its two sister shuttles, Challenger and Discovery.

The $1 billion orbiter is not scheduled for another mission until Aug. 30 so NASA officials decided to use the lapse to get it refitted at the Rockwell International Corp. plant in Palmdale, Calif.

"With two vehicles in the barn at the Cape, workers need better access to Columbia," NASA information officer Jim Kukowski said in Florida. "It's normal upgrading work."

Kohl says Saudis will still get arms

KIBBUTZ GINOSSAR, Israel (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany indicated today that his government would stand firm on planned arms sales to Saudi Arabia despite Israeli opposition.

"German policy is made in Bonn and not in Israel," Kohl told West German reporters when asked if he would refrain from selling arms to the Saudis.

The chancellor, visiting a collective farm beside the Sea of Galilee, said his government would pursue a balanced approach to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

"Germany has traditional relations with Islamic countries and has very friendly relations with Israel, which gave birth to three major religions," he said.

On Thursday, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told Kohl that Israel questioned the morality of the arms sale to Saudi Arabia. The two countries have not battled for years, but Saudi Arabia is technically at war with Israel and gives financial and political aid to Israel's enemy, the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"The public in Israel would not understand the moral aspect that German weapons would be supplied to an enemy," Shamir's spokesman, Avi Paznar, said the prime minister told Kohl. "It is inconceivable to us that German weapons would again be turned against Jews."

Kohl, who spent the fourth day of a six-day tour visiting holy sites in northern Israel, has been faced with constant reminders of Germany's Nazi past, including demonstrations by survivors of Nazi death camps. His visit is only the second by a German chancellor since the end of World War II.

"Whenever a German politician, especially the chancellor, comes to this country, history is part of his baggage," Kohl said.

Professor's killer 'would do it again'

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — A former doctoral student nearing parole in the hammer murder of a professor who laughed at his wing-tipped shoes defended the crime as "morally and legally correct" and said he would do it again "if the same conditions arose."

"I am absolutely noncommittal on whether I will go back to Stanford and kill again," said Theodore Streleski, 47, due to be paroled on March 23 after serving 5½ years for the killing of Stanford University mathematics professor Karel deLeeuw.

Streleski, in a copyright interview from Soledad Prison published Thursday in the Peninsula Times Tribune, spoke calmly and without hesitation about the fatal beating of deLeeuw on Aug. 18, 1978.

At his trial, Streleski said deLeeuw had blocked his progress toward a degree, refused to give him a fellowship and derided his slow progress toward a doctorate, which he had been working on for 19 years. In addition, he said, the professor once made a joke about his wing-tipped shoes.

He told the newspaper he killed deLeeuw at the professor's office because of the professor's personality and because deLeeuw was associate chairman of the math department.

Streleski said he was eligible to receive a Stanford Ph.D. from 1972 to 1978 but chose to murder deLeeuw instead of accepting the degree to demonstrate his anger at the university.

"I would do it again if the same conditions arose," he said.

Streleski was convicted in May 1979 and sentenced to maximum time in prison then allowed under his diminished-capacity defense — the same defense used by Dan White, paroled earlier this month after serving time for the killing of two San Francisco city officials.

Six months after Streleski's conviction, the Legislature raised the penalty for second-degree murder to 15 years to life in prison.

Heart attacks still striking fear

EDITOR'S NOTE: In laboratories across the United States and elsewhere, researchers are gradually bringing humanity's most feared diseases under control. In Part Four of a 10-part series, AP science writer Paul Raeburn deals with the steady — and sometimes remarkable — progress that has been made.

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

Few things are more frightening than the swift strike of a heart attack. Heart attacks struck an estimated million and a half Americans in 1983, killing some 540,000. More than half of those died before reaching a hospital.

How can doctors possibly treat an ailment that causes death so quickly? The key is to prevent heart attacks from occurring in the first place. And researchers have made steady progress toward that goal.

Large-scale studies done in the 1970s gave scientists a much better understanding of the causes of heart attacks. For example, studies of heart rhythms have helped doctors determine which abnormal rhythms are a sign of trouble, and which are harmless.

"Everyone's got extra beats, and only some should be treated," says Dr. Thomas Graboys, a cardiologist at Harvard Medical School. "In the last 10 years there's been a tremendous emphasis on identifying which beats portend serious rhythm problems."

This is true not only for people who have not had heart attacks, but for those who have survived them, and are therefore at great risk of having another.

"Physicians have become more aware of the certain types of extra beats in people who have had heart attacks," says Graboys. "Everyone's got extra beats and only some should be treated."

There are four and a half million survivors of heart attacks in the United States, according to the American Heart Association. Their prospects have changed considerably with the development of new drugs called beta blockers, intended to prevent second heart attacks.

The drugs are "a real breakthrough," says Dr. William Friedewald, who heads the heart disease prevention program at the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

"Now for the first time we have a therapy that is unequivocally effective in preventing subsequent mortality," he says.

A National Institutes of Health study completed a year ago showed that the drugs, which block certain nerve impulses to the heart, can reduce death from a second heart attack by 25 percent.

Studies are now under way on another class of drugs called calcium-channel blockers, which may also be useful in preventing heart attacks.

The drugs interfere with the ability of muscles to contract, and were originally used to treat the chest pains of angina caused by spasms in the coronary arteries, which supply blood to the heart itself. Now it appears the drugs may, like beta blockers, be useful in preventing heart attacks.

In research of a different kind, doctors have developed a dramatic new therapy to treat heart attacks as they occur.

X-rays are used to locate the blockage in the coronary arteries that is causing the heart attack. A small tube is inserted in an artery in the groin and threaded to the site of the blockage. Immediately a substance called streptokinase is put into the tube.

Remarkably, in many cases the blockage dissolves and the heart attack is over.

According to Dr. William Ganz of the University of California at Los Angeles, streptokinase, which activates clot-dissolving enzymes, must be administered within three hours of the onset of chest pain. But in the future, he says, that time limit may be expanded to six hours.

Dr. Michel Mirowski of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine has tackled the problem of sudden death directly with a small computerized device implanted in the chest that will automatically detect dangerous heart rhythms and deliver a corrective electrical shock.

The device, slightly smaller than a deck of cards, is not a pacemaker. Pacemakers are intended to provide regular electrical impulses to control heartbeat.

Mirowski's device is a defibrillator, a device that operates only when heart rhythms are abnormal. The trick, of course, is identifying which people are likely to have heart attacks.

"We can't always identify these patients in advance," Mirowski says. "But if we can implant the defibrillator in five or even two percent of them, we will save thousands of lives each year."

One of the most interesting findings in heart disease was made earlier this year when researchers announced the results of a major study on heart attack prevention.

The results of the Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trial indicated that Americans have taken warnings about heart disease seriously.

"The American public on their own made some really impressive changes in terms of the risk factors for heart attacks," says Friedewald.

The three most important controllable risk factors are cigarette smoking, high blood pressure and high blood cholesterol. Doctors don't yet know whether exercise will reduce the risk of heart attack, but the opposite seems true: a lack of exercise will increase the risk.

With regard to all the risk factors, the Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trial made one thing clear, Friedewald says: "Lifestyle changes do appear to be associated with reduction in death from coronary heart disease."

Strong winds rock California; Rain falls on Pacific Northwest

By The Associated Press

Strong winds gusting to 70 mph punished Southern California today, knocking out power and whipping up brush fires, while more rain in the Pacific Northwest swelled rivers already over their banks.

About 3 inches of snow fell on parts of Michigan, and rain extended from southeastern North Carolina across South Carolina, Georgia and northern Florida.

Flood warnings were in effect over parts of central Washington and a flash-flood watch continued along the ice-choked Salmon River in northeastern Idaho.

Hurricane-force winds killed three people in California on Thursday, and at least a dozen homes were destroyed or damaged by wind-fed fires.

The National Weather Service forecast for the rest of today and tonight called for strong winds over the northern and southern Rockies and more snow from upper Michigan to eastern North Dakota and from Maine to western New York. Scattered showers and thundershowers were expected from South Carolina to central Florida.

Correction

Three courses being offered at Midland College beginning next week were inadvertantly omitted in Thursday's story.

Microwave Cooking I will be from 6:30-9:30 p.m. Feb. 2. Course includes current information about microwave ovens, features of different models and sample foods. Fee is $8.

Fundamentals of Automotive Service Techniques I will be from 7-10 p.m. Thursdays for six weeks. The course will include automobile service principles and maintenance including lubrication, oil and filter changes, electrical service, exhaust system service, cooling system service and principles of tune-up. $30.

Defensive Driving will be Jan. 30-31 and Feb. 1-2 from 6:30-10:30 p.m. Fee is $20.

Further information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extensions 147 or 216.

Man dies in newspaper box blast

DALLAS (AP) — A bomb exploded inside a coin-operated newspaper machine this morning, killing a man who had opened the box to get a paper, police said.

The identity of the victim, who died at the scene, was withheld pending notification of relatives, police said. He was wearing his bathrobe and was found lying on his side.

"It hit him in the torso," said police Sgt. Carl Dorman.

Police detective Don Ortega said police did not know of any threats and no one has claimed responsbility for the bombing, which occurred at 5:14 a.m. in north Dallas. He declined to say whether investigators had found witnesses to the explosion.

No other injuries were reported, Ortega said. The box was owned by The Dallas Morning News.

Ralph Langer, editor of the News, said the time the box was loaded with newspapers had not "been determined exactly but it was within half an hour" before the explosion.

The person who had loaded the box was "talking to investigators at this time," Langer said.

The box was located near a creek beside the Valley View Trails apartment complex. Debris was scattered more than 60 feet behind the box, including some hanging from a tree.

Newspapers inside the machine were smoldering three hours after the explosion. A Dallas Times Herald machine nearby also was damaged.

Agents from the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms removed the box about 8:45 a.m.

Apartment complex resident Cathy Murray, 25, said the explosion woke her up. "This whole building shook. I woke up and said it felt like an earthquake."

Justice shows humor in Supreme Court

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — The venerable U.S. Supreme Court is made up of "nine prima donnas" who have nicknames such as "the pornographer's friend" and pass World Series scores down the bench, says someone who should know — Justice Harry Blackmun.

During a three-day fellowship at Dartmouth College which ended Thursday, Blackmun treated faculty, students and the public to a rare and humor-filled glimpse of the inner workings of the nation's highest court.

"One of us we call round the conference table 'the warden's friend' because he always votes in favor of the warden and against the poor prisoner who wants to get out," he told an audience Wednesday night.

"We call another one the 'schoolboy's friend' in segregation cases, we call a third 'the pornographer's friend' because he's a First Amendment absolutist.... They could call me 'the alien's (foreigner's) friend' only because of some things I've written. We make fun of each other along those lines."

Blackmun said some of his fellow justices disapproved of his Dartmouth trip, during which he dropped in on classes and participated in informal discussions of government, politics and other subjects.

"We normally don't do this kind of thing," he said. "Some of my colleagues are critical of me for venturing into the open country."

"We're all eccentrics," he added. "We're nine prima donnas. We have eccentricities and we have biases, I suppose, although none of us admits it."

Blackmun told of the white plastic trash cans that have replaced brass spittoons at the bench where the court hears oral arguments and described the cough drops with which the justices are supplied.

"What bothers me is they're always Luden's cough drops," he said. "They're not Smith Brothers. They're not any other kind. I've wondered, there must be some kind of antitrust case in that."

During the World Series, Blackmun said, one justice instructs his clerks to listen to the radio and then passes game scores down the bench — much to the dismay of Chief Justice Warren Burger, who is not a baseball fan.

Blackmun told of watching the late Justice William O. Douglas writing furiously behind a mound of books while court was in session. Blackmun passed him a note asking, "Bill, what are you doing, writing another opinion during the middle of oral arguments?"

"Yes," Douglas wrote back. "This lawyer was done 20 minutes ago, but he didn't know it."

On a serious note, Blackmun, 75, predicted significant changes in the court during the coming four years because of the age of the justices, who now average 69.

"I certainly must assume that in the next presidential term the court will change considerably," he said. "The next election will have a profound effect upon the Supreme Court of the United States."

He also said there is no sense of security in being only one of nine justices. "Don't ever think," he said, "that because there are nine on that court that there is not a very continuing, definite sense of loneliness in the decision-making process."

Blackmun, who worked his way through Harvard with odd jobs such as janitor and milkman, said he has found the Supreme Court to be his most difficult job.

"I thought I worked hard in practice, I thought I worked harder at Mayo (Clinic) when I was there (as clinic counsel). I thought I worked still harder in the court of appeals. But this is the toughest," he said.

"Most of the cases we take are difficult. They involve emotional issues. They tend to keep one awake nights.

"I always fear the April-June crunch when we madly try to get all of the opinions out," he added.

Larger IRA contributions proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will propose that the maximum contribution to Individual Retirement Accounts for married couples with a single wage-earner be boosted to $4,000 annually. The ceiling is now at $2,250.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told the congressional Joint Economic Committee on Thursday the proposal will be contained in the new budget plan that President Reagan submits to Congress next week.

"This places the housewife on a par with those women employed in the marketplace," Regan said.

The total contribution would be exempt from taxes for the year in which the money is deposited but would be taxable when withdrawals start.

Treasury aides said the proposal would cost the Treasury $1.9 billion over three years.

Under current law, a worker may put up to $2,000 a year into an IRA retirement savings plan. Working couples may contribute up to $2,000 each or a total of $4,000.

For couples with only one spouse working, the contribution is limited to a total of $2,250. But the administration's proposal would raise that to the maximum for working couples.

Bearded teacher fired

DERRY, N.H. (AP) — A school which recently fired a teacher who defied its rule banning beards for faculty members has changed its mind about the policy — but not about rehiring the hirsute instructor.

The Pinkerton Academy's Board of Trustees voted to rescind the policy Thursday night as former faculty member Kenneth Johnson looked on from the audience. Afterward, he told reporters he considers his dismissal two weeks ago for beginning to grow a beard "an act of cowardice."

Johnson taught American history at the private school, which also serves as Derry's public high school. He described his challenge of the policy to his students as an exercise in democracy.

Johnson said he has not taken a new job and will challenge his dismissal.

The new policy, approved unanimously by the trustees, will take effect in September. Students have always been allowed to grow beards.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, January 28, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Alan Alda, author Susan Sontag, Yankee outfielder-turned-broadcaster Bill White and Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Joe Beckwith celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Canadian statesman Alexander MacKenzie, explorer Henry Stanley and concert pianist Arthur Rubinstein. Family life brings you good luck in the months ahead. Your financial fortunes improve following a spiritual or emotional change. Say "yes" to new opportunities. A business venture shows steady improvement. Take a young person under your wing. He could be a valuable ally in the future. Someone in authority is preparing to move on. Prove you could take over.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get out of an environment that leaves you depressed. You need to be around people who look on the bright side. Pass on any good news to the rest of the family.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A social event triggers romance. You are finally on the road to true happiness. A prodigal family member returns. No one can believe the transformation that has taken place.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Leave loved one alone and he/she will eventually come around. A shopping expedition pays off handsomely for someone collecting antiques. A charitable cause needs your time more than your money.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You receive money for persevering while others play. The move a roommate or partner wants you to make is premature. Do not be hustled into doing something that goes against your instincts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It can be dangerous to be play games in romance. Get together with someone who makes you laugh. You need to escape from any worries for a day or two.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give a child the benefit of the doubt. An unjust accusation could affect your relationship for a long, long time. Organize your weekend so that you and loved one can relax together.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gear up for a busy weekend. Romance is in full flower. A reduction in spending will reduce domestic tension. Avoid acting on impulse. Channel your energies into constructive projects.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A dream seems to be coming true. Although problems arise, you are able to solve them. A dutiful relative phones. Your patience with a child wins you new devotion and loyalty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Greater romantic compatibility is possible if you choose to stay home this weekend. An undemanding lover gives your life new meaning. To protect your credit rating, pay any overdue bills.

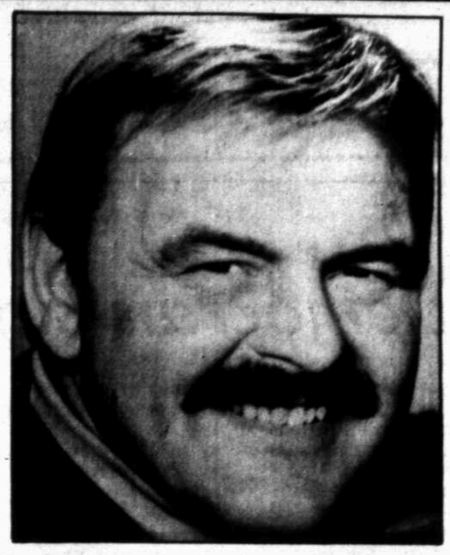

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You derive the most satisfaction from community work when you are a leader. Others look to you for inspiration. Be patient with those who are slow to learn.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): At last you can spend some money on new clothes. The way you look is very important to employer and romantic partner. A relative or friend's encouragement means more than ever.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your style impresses someone influential. New employment opportunities arise. Put your best foot forward. Your talents and social graces are in the spotlight.

Burnett sings with Domingo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After the last echoes of her Tarzan yell reverberated through the Music Center, Carol Burnett said, "I'm teaching Placido to do it. You've no idea how it helps with his singing."

Miss Burnett is only kidding; operatic tenor Placido Domingo does all right on his own. His voice has taken him from La Scala to the Paris Opera to London's Covent Garden.

He stars with Miss Burnett tonight in a CBS special, "Burnett 'Discovers' Domingo." Prior to coming to Los Angeles to tape the special, he opened the centenary season of the Metropolitan Opera in New York with "Les Troyens."

During a rehearsal break, Miss Burnett said, "I should pay for the privilege of hearing him sing. He really has a set of pipes."

Domingo said, "I have done other television programs and the amount of work you do is incredible. In opera you rehearse, then you have time off before you perform. In television you rehearse, you rehearse, you rehearse, then you perform."

On the special, Miss Burnett and Domingo perform together and separately and do a sketch called "A Nightmare at the Opera." They also perform a 10-minute mini-opera spoofing the movie "Algiers." Domingo is the Casbah thief who falls in love with the beautiful woman.

Marty Pasetta, the producer and director, said he and Miss Burnett and producer-writer Kenny Solms flew to Spain in July to talk to Domingo about the special. At the time, he was playing Don Jose in the film version of "Carmen." Domingo also stars in the movie version of "La Traviata."

"We went over the script and the music so that when he arrived here he had all the music memorized," said Pasetta.

The taping of the special was postponed once because Domingo was injured during the filming of "Carmen."

"One thing I have learned," Domingo said, "is that when people don't understand your world they try to put it down. People think, an opera singer! Blaaah! We're not going to do any of that."

Miss Burnett said, "We're doing a mini-opera. Remember 'Algiers?' Placido is Pepe le Moko (the Charles Boyer role) and naturally I'm Hedy Lamarr. We're going to do it operatic style, but it has nothing to do with opera. It's from my favorite opera composer, Cole Porter."

The two stars met a year ago when they were on "The Texaco Star Theater" and did a number together from "Call Me Madam." That was also directed by Pasetta, who suggested the current special.

Lynn Deas of Schenectady, N.Y., and Beth Palmer, Silver Spring, Md., won the Life Master Women's Pairs Championship at the recent Fall North American tournament. Accurate defense on this board gave them a top score and helped them on their way to the title.

Note South's decision to overcall one spade. With unguarded honors in the rounded suits (hearts and clubs), she did not feel that her hand merited a takeout double, followed by a spade bid should partner respond in clubs.

West led a club, and declarer rose with the ace, sacrificing her king, to obtain an entry to the table. The ten of diamonds was covered by the king and taken by the ace, and declarer adopted less than the best line when she elected to continue with the queen and jack of diamonds.

East ruffed the third diamond, cashed the ace-king of hearts, then reverted to a club. Declarer ruffed, and tried to ruff a diamond on the board with the nine of trumps. East overruffed with the jack and continued with clubs. Declarer ruffed with the king.

Those of you who believe that aces were made to capture kings would overruff for down one. But the ace of trumps is sure to take a trick, and West had been watching the spots. She realized that, if she refused to overruff, she would be guaranteed a second trump trick. So she simply sluffed a diamond and sat back to wait for two trumps tricks. Down two was worth all the matchpoints.

All is not well

No, President Reagan's State of the Union address the other evening wasn't everything to everybody. Yes, he probably was using the speech to his advantage in anticipation of announcing his candidacy for re-election. And, no, he didn't address a number of crucial issues, like Lebanon, to the extent they deserved.

But the president covered a lot of ground in a short period of time and he is correct in noting that substantial progress has been made on several major endeavors vital to the national health.

For example:

— Inflation. What was an economic maelstrom three years back has been reduced from 12.4 percent to just 3.3 percent. That means most Americans are not having to pay nearly so much of that "hidden tax."

— Pride and credibility has been restored to the nation's military forces, evidenced most recently by the victorious invasion of Grenada by Marines to prevent a communist takeover.

It's true that more Americans are unemployed today, but the old much-talked goal of full employment isn't really realistic in a time of changing technologies. Ironically, the technological revolution America is now undergoing could mean that in the future even more of this country's men and women will be able to find work. There has been improvement, even in these difficult economic times. Four million Americans found work last year.

Additionally, President Reagan had some important things to say about another subject close to many Americans — abortion. What he said mirrored his appeal for a return to traditional values: "In regard to the unborn child, until it's proven that an unborn child is not a human being, how can we assume that it isn't?"

No, the president's State of the Union address couldn't please everyone because the United States is a nation of diverse people with a multitude of problems and concerns. Those concerns have to continue to be addressed, though.

If Reagan is to be faulted for any oversight in his address, it's for the failure to give even more emphasis to the nation's nagging problems such as unemployment. All is not well on the home front and rarely is. What he did was to note that progress is being made. Is that wrong?

Another View:

Keep on taping

If you are one of the special ones who have a videotape recorder, and you've been feeling slightly guilty every time you use it to keep from missing your favorite soap opera, rest easy.

The Supreme Court, in a ruling notable for its sensible attention to the facts of the matter, has decided that you are not violating the copyrights of people who produce the programs or movies you record — so long as you keep your tapes for private use.

The movie studios that brought the original case had persuaded a federal appeals court that manufacturers of home video recorders were violating the studios' copyrights by enabling viewers to record movies shown on television without having to pay a royalty.

This practice, the movie men contended, would erode their industry's economic base, discourage producers from licensing their programs for television and, in time, deprive the television public of the high-quality material it currently enjoys.

You are entitled to some skepticism about the vulnerability of the movie industry to this latest technological challenge. The industry has managed to weather the far more severe threat posed by the advent of television itself and has already begun to profit from the dramatic growth of pre-recorded video cassettes.

But, the Supreme Court soundly concluded, the way in which home video recorders are typically used threatens no such damage.

Most people do not sit at home piling up libraries of late-late-show recordings with which to distract their families and friends from the alternative of prime-time viewing.

Why should they when, for a fraction of the cost of buying a blank tape, they can rent a licensed copy of any one of thousands of movies?

And if they really can't get enough of "Casablanca," with the price of movie cassettes dropping dramatically as the market grows, they might even buy their own copy — free from either commercial interruption or airwaves interference.

"Time-shifting" is what people do use their recorders for — recording a show televised at an inconvenient time and watching it later. This sort of private use, the court found, falls within the "fair-use" exception to copyright protection, because it "expands public access to freely broadcast television programs."

And since time-shifting is a major legitimate use, the sellers of video recorders are not guilty — even under the stricter standards of patent law — of contributing to copyright infringement.

The extension of the "fair-use" exception to include full-scale reproduction of copyrighted material for personal convenience — rather than limited copying for scholarly or journalistic use — is sure to trouble copyright holders who worry about the intrusions made possible by computers, audio recorders, satellite transmission interceptors and the like.

But as the court suggested, if further protections are needed, the way to provide them is for Congress to revise the laws — not for the courts to find in existing law a justification for banning or taxing a noncommercial activity that Congress never envisioned when it last modernized the copyright law.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1944, the siege of Leningrad by the Nazis was ended.

Five years ago: Ayatollah Khomeini, in exile in France, indicated he was ready to open negotiations with Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar on settling Iran's political crisis.

One year ago: General Motors announced it was calling back more than 21,000 laid-off workers and reopening a plant in Framingham, Mass.

Today's birthdays: Retired Adm. Hyman Rickover is 84 years old. Publisher William Randolph Hearst Jr. is 76. Orchestra leader Skitch Henderson is 66. And actress Donna Reed is 63.

Thought for today: "My experience in government is that when things are non-controversial and beautifully coordinated, there is not much going on." — President John F. Kennedy (1917-1963).

Turkey Run Democrats signal trouble

UTICA, Mich. — Beleaguered Democratic governor James J. Blanchard quietly took up arms against Michigan's tax rebellion Tuesday night by attending a fund-raiser in a suburban private home here and was greeted by pickets demanding his recall from office — symbolizing a nationwide menace to the Democratic Party.

Blanchard came to suburban Macomb County to support State Rep. Mary Ellen Parrott, an underdog in Tuesday's special election for a State Senate vacancy. The seat was one of two whose Democratic occupants were removed in recall elections for supporting the governor's 38 percent tax increase a year ago.

Both seats are expected to be filled Tuesday by Republicans, ending Democratic control of the Senate and promising its passage of a tax rollback. But the young (41) governor could encounter scarier demons. Democrats privately concede enough signatures could be collected to put his recall on the ballot, in which case, "he is a goner" (in the words of one Democratic insider).

Short of terminating Blanchard's political career, the tax rebellion spells big trouble for the 1984 model of the Democratic Party, first seen in Michigan a generation ago. A coalition of organized labor, school teachers and minority groups, it depends on the white workingman's acquiesence in heavy taxation needed to supply social services for the black inner city, which in turn supplies massive voting support for the party.

The white worker's restiveness, reflected in votes for George Wallace in 1972 and Ronald Reagan in 1980, became outright rebellion in 1983 when the newly-elected Blanchard sprung his tax surprise. Widespread rage on the factory floor turned into political activism for a few — especially Dan Powers, a 25-year-old Ford worker who had been active in campaigns of liberal Democrats, most recently Jim Blanchard in 1982.

"In Michigan, 703,000 people were out of work, and I was one of them (he since has been rehired)," Powers told us. "I was madder than hell. All they had for us was higher taxes." Such "mad" Michiganders formed the recall movement, whose populistic nature worries industrialists and establishment Republicans. They would prefer that the tax rebels let the politicians take over now.

Powers and his fellow rebels have no such intention, considering themselves heirs of the Bostonians who threw the king's tea overboard. A third state senator is likely to be recalled, petitions are being circulated against 15 others (in the 38-member Senate) and ouster efforts against House members are beginning. A constitutional amendment on the November ballot would roll back Blanchard's tax hike and require popular approval of future tax increases. Finally, lurking in the background is the attempt to recall the governor.

Anti-tax insurgency would be chilled by a Democratic victory in either of Tuesday's special elections. Consequently, the campaigning visit here by Blanchard for Parrott was welcome news for Democratic activists, particularly since the governor kept arms-length from the recall fights. But he was downbeat about winning this race, saying he was here because "Mary Ellen deserved it" for her steadfast backing of his program.

Actually, Blanchard's strategy is to defuse the tax rebellion rather than crush it. His new budget freezes spending, cuts welfare while increasing education money and gradually rolls back taxes. But operatives for the AFL-CIO and the National Education Association (NEA) believe he is only appeasing the enemy and wish he had started months ago "educating" the public why higher taxes were needed.

Exactly this course is taken by Mary Ellen Parrott, who does not apologize for her tax vote in the House. That delights her opponent: ex-state representative Kirby Holmes, an occasional loser and a frequent winner in ticket-splitting, swing-voting Macomb County. A "movement" conservative who wears Adam Smith neckties and works for the National Tax Limitation Committee, he is waging a one-issue anti-tax campaign.

The Parrott campaign hopes the Democratic-labor apparatus can turn out enough of the faithful to win in a low-turnout special election, but Democratic insiders worry about upwardly-mobile suburbanites. The children of autoworkers who 20 years ago moved from Detroit to Macomb have moved north into the county's more expensive neighborhoods.

While Blanchard considers the turmoil a recurring protest against government, one local Democratic professional contemptuously calls it "our people looking for more take-home pay so they can buy more snowmobiles and motorboats." Candidate Holmes views that syndrome as his party's opportunity: "Without even knowing it, a lot of these life-long Democrats are turning into Republicans."

If so, they are Republicans markedly different from William Milliken, who finished 14 years as governor in 1982. Dan Powers and Kirby Holmes agree there are no substantial policy differences between Bill Milliken and Jim Blanchard. The Michigan Tea Party, while immediately benefitting Republicans, is a rebellion against the bipartisan governing class's conduct in Michigan.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

FHA barricaded road to cheap concrete

WASHINGTON — Most Americans probably don't know the difference between pre-stressed concrete and conventional reinforced concrete. But that difference could save taxpayers billions.

Strangely, the cement industry and the Federal Highway Administration seemed determined to use the expensive spread. Experts' advice has been ignored; Ralph Nader has been vilified for advocating the money-saving pavement; and a federal employee who blew the whistle was reprimanded and told to butt out of the controversy. Here's the story:

Jack Anderson

Pre-stressed concrete has been available for more than a decade. It involves stretching steel reinforcing cables with 30,000 pounds of pressure when concrete highway slabs are poured. The result is a stronger pavement using less concrete and steel.

According to one official's estimate, the government could have saved $1 billion on the last 45,000 miles of the interstate highway system if pre-stressed concrete had been used. Now that extensive repairs are to be made on crumbling older sections of the highway system, the technique could save the taxpayers untold amounts.

Pre-stressed concrete has been used successfully on airport runways and parking garages. A recent report by a panel of state highway officials commissioned by the federal highway agency concluded: "Pre-stressed concrete pavements are competitive ... and provide a viable design alternative to other pavement types. Performance to date would indicate a lower maintenance cost."

Nader, the indefatigable consumer advocate, began crusading for the cheaper, better pavement. He told my associates Indy Badhwar and John Dillon the response reminded him of his fight against the Chevrolet Corvair years ago, when General Motors took extraordinary steps to discredit him.

Nader charged that the cement and construction industries had prevailed on the highway agency to suppress the pre-stressed technology. A leading industry publication called Nader "half cocked" and quoted an agency official describing him as "amateurish."

But Nader's suspicion of a cozy relationship between the highway agency and the private contractors is supported by one shocking development. The FHWA awarded a lucrative contract to study the claim that pre-stressed concrete would use less material. The contract went to the Portland Cement Association.

The highway agency's own project manager for the study, Floyd Stanek, recommended no more than 6 inches of concrete in the pre-stressed method. But not surprisingly, the cement association recommended 8-inch-thick pavement — 33 percent more concrete. Not only that, but the cement association's report stated that Stanek had concurred in the 8-inch recommendation.

"I went through the roof," Stanek recalls. He wrote letters and spoke out against the wasteful 8-inch recommendation. His reward was an official reprimand and orders from his boss, Richard A. McComb, to "stop all your work on ... pre-stressed pavement papers."

Fred Lang, an engineer who invented one of the techniques used in pre-stressing, said: "Everybody can make money by not going to pre-stressed pavement. The cement industry can make more money. The steel industry can sell more steel. Everybody wins ... except the taxpayers and the riding public." Lang, incidentally, said that six inches of concrete is perfectly adequate for pre-stressed pavement.

CHARLEY REESE

'China card' gives Uncle Sam losing hand

Playing the "China card" was a dumb move. That's because the "China card" is a joker. The deal in smooching up to Communist China was to make the Soviet Union nervous, but the Chinese do not really make the Soviet Union nervous.

The Chinese do not make the Soviet Union nervous because the Soviets know there are two mythical hordes inside China. One mythical horde is a Chinese army which could threaten the Soviet Union. It does not exist. The other mythical horde is a horde of customers for Western products. The people are there but they are dead broke. There is only one customer in China, the government, and it is broke, too, but we all know what suckers banks are when it comes to lending money to governments.

Charley Reese

American foreign policy is based primarily on mythology. The mythology is created by these rent-a-brains we call experts. The only thing they are really expert at is guessing what people with fat wallets want to hear. If the Chase Bank wants to do business in China, the rent-a-brains think of reasons why it would be good U.S. policy to let it.

The China myth goes like this: The chinese and the Soviets are irrevocably split over ideology and territorial disputes. Now that Mao tse-tung, that third rate poet and first rate killer, is dead, the new generation of Communist leaders are hungry for capitalism. Besides, a U.S.-China deal is a cheap way to counter Soviet Militay power in the Far East. If we are nice to the Chinese dictators, they will eventually stop being so cruel to their own people.

There is no logical reason to assume the split between the Marxist-Leninists in Moscow and the Marxist-Lenninists in China is irrevocable. They were together longer then they've been apart. They share the same ideology. They share the same values, one of which is hatred for liberty in general and the United States in particular. To argue that Communist China which killed our sons in Korea and Vietnam can make up with imperialists but not with Marxist-Leninists is fruitcake reasoning. The territorial dispute is not that pressing to either side.

It is nothing new for a Communist dictator to discover that a Marxist economy works like a stone swims. Western capitalists have been propping up the Soviet economy since the 1920s. Allowing a peasant a small plot on which to grow vegetables in his spare time is not the same thing as lifting the totalitarian controls over his life. On the subject of subjugation, there is no difference between the Gang of Four and the current gang of Big Brothers.

The folly of using China to counter Soviet military power is easily seen. A Chinese army which can be humiliated by the North Vietnamese Army is not threat to the Soviet Union. The only way China can become a threat to the Soviet Union is to modernize its army but if we do, China will then be a threat to us and our democratic allies. People who sell guns should remember that guns shoot in more than one direction.

The further folly of this ploy is that to gain the dubious friendship of a non-strategic asset, we are sacrificing the genuine friendship of a real strategic asset. Taiwan, not mainland China, sits astride the sea lanes of the Far East like a permanently anchored aircraft carrier, to use General Douglas MacArthur's metaphor. Unless you want to disregard his advice a second time and become involved in Asian land wars, the key to projecting American power in the Far East is the sea, not the Mongolian grasslands. And whoever controls Taiwan can control the sea if they are so inclined.

Doctors unsure of success of operation on 'bubble boy'

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors are uncertain when they will know whether a 12-year-old boy who was given an experimental bone marrow transplant has the germ-fighting cells he needs to leave the sterile plastic bubble where he has lived since birth, a spokesman says.

"This is a very new scientific area. They just don't have the baseline information you would have in a standard treatment," said Gayle McNutt, chief spokesman for Baylor College of Medicine.

The boy, identified only as David, received bone marrow from his 15-year-old sister on Oct. 21. At that time, doctors said they hoped to know within 90 days whether the transplant was successful.

David's physician, Dr. William Shearer, said in a release Thursday that the youth has develped some of the disease-fighting cells but added that it may be "a few months before we are able to make a conclusive report."

David has more of certain type of white blood cell and more immunoglobulin, another component of the immune system, Shearer said.

"While these findings are not conclusive evidence that the treatment was successful, they are encouraging signs," he said.

Before the transplant, the marrow from David's sister was treated to remove T-cells, a type of white blood cell that fights disease. Doctors feared that mature T-cells would attack David's system in a reaction called graft-versus-host disease.

Nurse 'cooly defensive'

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Dr. Kathleen Holland says nurse Genene Jones ran out of explanations when the doctor found two holes in a vial of the drug allegedly used by the nurse to kill a baby.

The Kerrville pediatrician told jurors Thursday that her nurse was "cooly defensive" when confronted with the holes in the bottle's stopper. Ms. Jones was out of explanations, but not out of ideas, she said.

The nurse wanted to throw the bottle away, the doctor testified.

By that time, 10 days after the Sept. 17, 1982, death of 15-month-old Chelsea McClellan, the Kerrville medical community was asking questions. Ms. Holland said the nurse had a plan:

"She said, 'I don't think we should explain (the holes) at all. We thought we lost the vial. Throw it out and tell them we lost it.'"

Ms. Holland spent almost two hours on the stand Thursday as a prosecution witness in Ms. Jones murder trial. Her damaging testimony left the defendant shaking.

Ms. Jones is charged with injecting the young girl with a powerful muscle relaxant that caused her death. It was in a small vial of that drug that the doctor found the holes.

The doctor also testified the nurse, without proper authorization, had ordered the muscle relaxing drug.

Chelsea's first visit to Ms. Holland's office was on Aug. 24, 1982, one day after the office opened. Ms. Jones took Chelsea while her mother, Petti McClellan, talked with the doctor.

The nurse called for her boss when Chelsea had a seizure-like episode. "I had a history of a child who had a history of stopping breathing and who had a seizure in my office. The tests and what had happened didn't fit together."

Prior to Chelsea's next visit, Ms. Jones ordered drugs for the office — including Anectine, a brand-name version of the muscle relaxant she is accused of using to kill the girl.

Ms. Holland said of the Sept. 7 drug order, "half of it I indirectly authorized."

Anectine was ordered to replace a missing bottle, which was never recorded as missing, she added.

Chelsea returned to the office on Sept. 17, only because her older brother had a cold. Ms. Holland said she thought it was a good time for the girl to have two routine immunizations.

The shots were given in another room as Mrs. McClellan held her daughter's arms.

"Genene asked me if I'd come to look at Chelsea," the doctor testified.

The symptoms were similar to the Aug. 24 reaction. Medical experts have testified the symptoms were also like those caused by Anectine.

DA afraid CBS tapes will be erased

DALLAS (AP) — Prosecutors in Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade's office say they want a state district judge to prevent CBS News from destroying videotaped interviews, including those never broadcast, in the case of black engineer Lenell Geter.

Prosecutors said Thursday they plan to subpoena the tapes, which were made in preparation for a CBS News "60 Minutes" program on Geter that aired last December.

Wade said "we'd like to look at some of the things they didn't play." He has called the "60 Minutes" telecast "slanted."

MC fights off late rally

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The fans left Langford Chaparral Center Thursday night talking about the fight, but there was a basketball game before the free-for-all. Midland College won the game, 88-74, over Frank Phillips College.

Then, instead of the mundane handshakes after it was over, fists started flying.

This wasn't the typical baseball brawl, some hot words and a few shoves before cooler heads prevailed. Both teams rushed to the scene of hostilities which quickly spread the length of the sidelines on the west side of the coliseum and numbered among its victims one male cheerleader with a knot on the back of his head and a female cheerleader was hit hard enough to draw blood.

IT WAS a violent scenario while it lasted, but fortunately order was restored before the Chaps' 6-11 Teviin Binns could level anybody with the chair he was threatening to wield.

Despite all the action, no one seemed to know what happened once it started. Vernon Coleman vividly recalls how it started, "He (Frank Phillips' Keith Scales) elbowed me in the jaw while I wasn't looking and then he hit me. I got in a couple of shots of my own...." but after that it spread like a grass fire to the other end of the court.

Even more important than the fight or maybe even Midland's win was the 71-67 Odessa College upset of Howard College at Odessa. It was the Hawks first loss and gives OC a 6-2 WJCC record going into Monday's Midland game.

ALMOST LOST in the post-game excitement was the fact that Midland College ended a two-game skid in a curious game in which the Chaps blew out the Plainsmen, 47-25, in the first half and wound up resorting to their four-corner game with 10 minutes left to play when FPC narrowed the gap to nine points.

Actually, it figured to be a close game, despite the fact that FPC brought to Midland a 7-13 overall record and 2-5 Western Junior College Conference mark.

"We lost a lot of games early in the season when we had a bunch of players on suspension and were down to seven or eight," said Coach Jerry Mollar. And the way Mollar uses personnel, that would have been a handicap.

LAST WEEK, FPC beat New Mexico Junior College at Hobbs and then lost to Amarillo College Monday on a shot with two seconds to play, the same way MC had lost to the Badgers four days earlier.

However, Midland drilled home 19 of 30 from the field in the first half and FPC was a dismal 7-of-27. Six-six Jackie Phinnessee was devastating, hitting his first eight shots from the field to score 17 points. Lawrence Chumbley, who was 5-of-6 from the field, scored 11 of his 14 points in the first half.

BINNS, WHO watched much of the first half from the bench after picking up a couple of quick fouls, helped keep the Plainsmen at bay in the second half with 15 of his 21 points. The 6-11 New Yorker was 10 of 11 from the field.

Also pitching in in the second half were Kurt Martin with eight points. and Phinnessee with seven more to wind up with 10 of 13 floor shots, who noted "I gotta work on my free throws," after going 4-of-8 from the line.

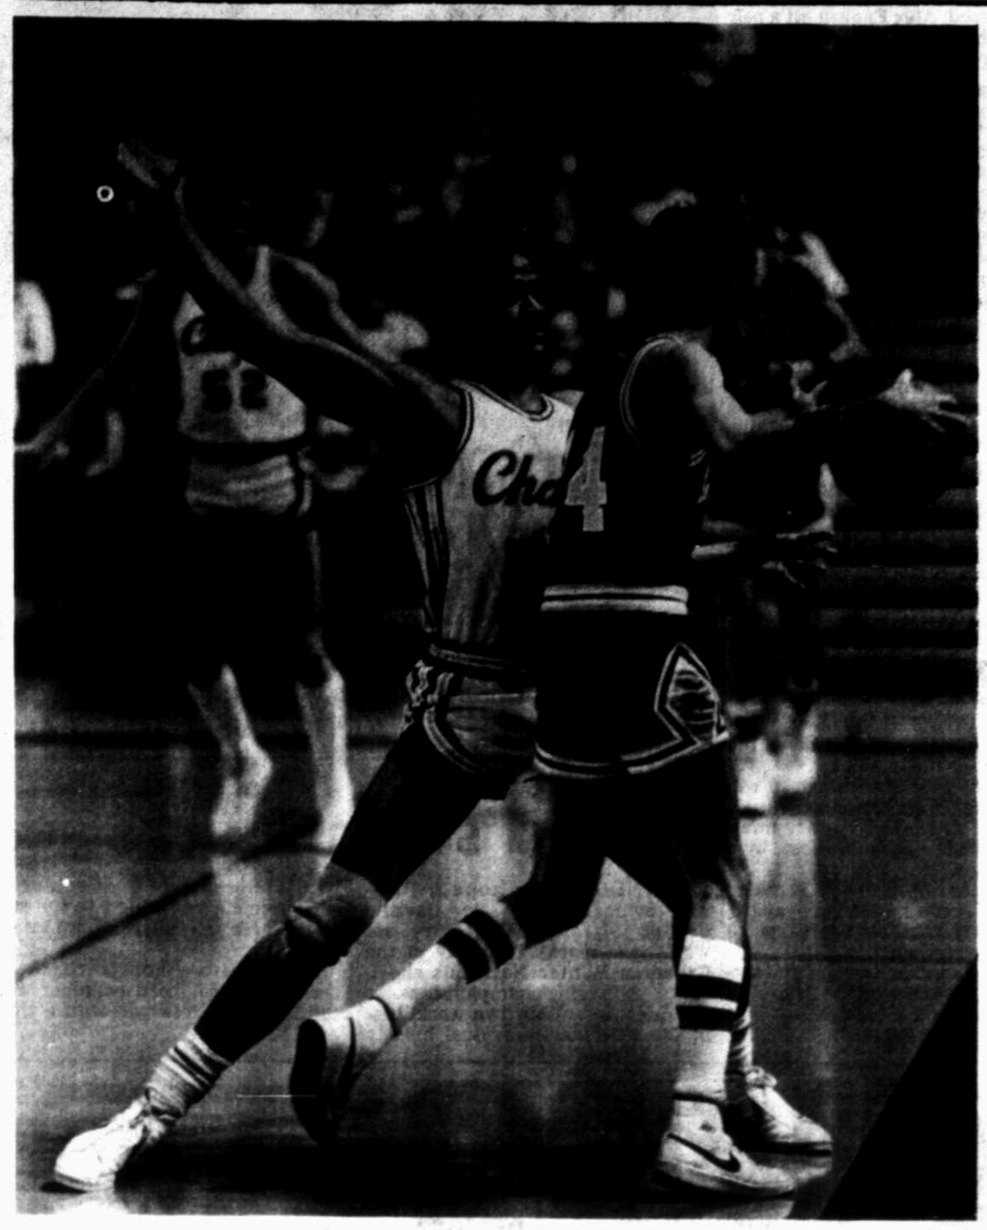

All in all it was a remarkable field goal shooting display by the Chaps, who wound up with 33 of 53, 62 per cent.

The win was MC's 15th in 21 games this season and improved the Chaps WJCC record to 5-3 going into Monday's game against Odessa College.

'Dogs scramble into third, 63-54

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's girls are getting serious about the District 4-5A basketball race. They hit 14 of 25 shots in the second half to down Odessa Permian 63-54 at the MHS gym Thursday night, earning sole possession of third place and a mere step behind second place Midland Lee.

Orvetta Johnson hit 12 of her game high 16 points in the second half as the Bulldogs climbed to 7-3 in the league chase with four games left to play.

PERMIAN AND MHS both went into the game with identical 6-3 loop records. The loser of this one would have trouble keeping playoff dreams alive. The Bulldogs are still dreaming.

Still, this was one that MHS coach Jane Young was worried about for a couple of reasons. MHS lost to Permian in overtime the last time the two teams met and MHS was coming off an emotional upset of cross town rival Midland Lee.

"It's hard to come back and play well after a game like we had against Lee," said Young. "And Permian is a good team. It took us a little while to get going."

Denise Lanz, who scored 14 points, agreed with Coach Young, "I think we were a little flat coming off the Lee game. We started real slow, but Charlotte Hines kept us in the game in the first half."

Hines scored 11 points, nine coming in the first period when the big Bulldog guns of Lanz, Johnson and Terez Robinson were not hitting. Hines hit five-of-five shots from the field, but two early fouls limited her playing time.

HINES' BIG nine-point start gave MHS a 16-10 lead in the first period, but Permian came back to hit nine of 20 shots from the field in the second period to take a 30-29 halftime lead with a balanced scoring effort. Eight Permian players scored in the second period and Mojo held a 24-14 advantage on the boards.

But the Bulldogs could do no wrong in the second half. They won the battle of the boards by a 20-11 margin and they hit 14 of 26 shots from the field. Lanz got six third period points and Johnson got eight fourth period points while Deidra Knapp, who scored 13 points to land in double figures for three straight games, scored eight in the second half.

"We worked our offense and penetrated better in the second half and we waited for the good shot," said Young. "We didn't play too well in the first half, but Permian deserves some of that credit because they were shooting the lights out."

Permian led MHS by a 32-31 margin as late as 4:42 in the third period, but a Knapp basket game the Bulldogs the lead, one which they never lost. MHS led by as many as 10 points, 61-51, with 1:12 left in the game.

JOHNSON HIT only eight of 18 shots on the night while Lanz was seven of 13. Knapp hit seven of eight free throws.

Permian's Laura Bartlett scored 14 points, but hit only five of 17 shots. Jan Carr added 11 points with three of eight from the field and five of six from the line. Permian did not have a good shooting night, hitting only 21 of 57 shots while MHS was 26 of 52 for 50 percent.

The Bulldogs still have a heavy district task to take care of despite the two key victories back-to-back. They have to travel to Big Spring Monday and the Steers are capable of giving any of the 4-5A powers a tussle.

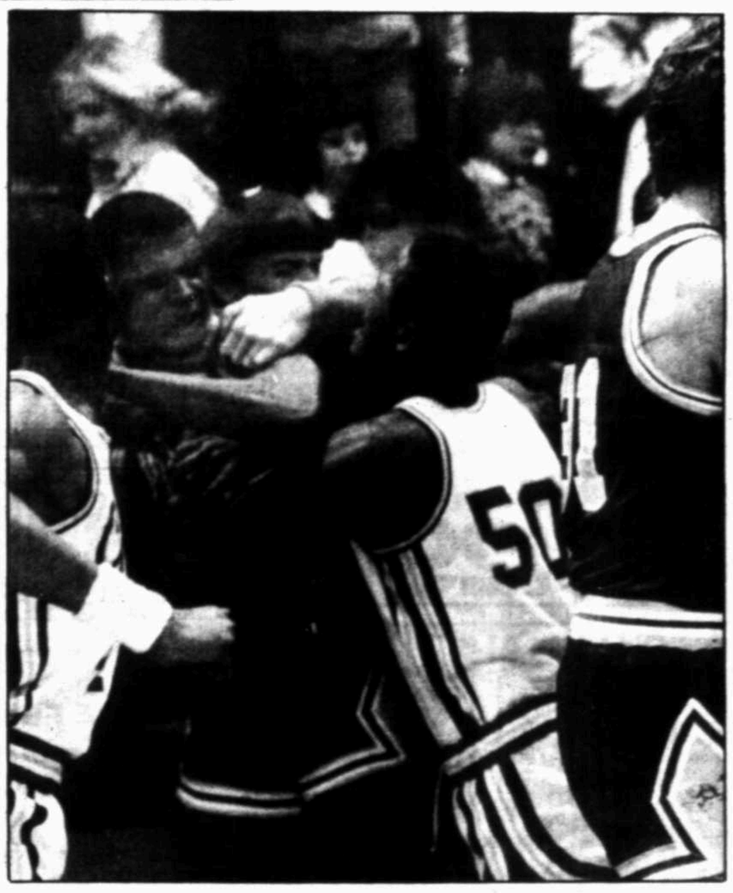

The MHS Bullpups pulled off a 56-43 upset over Permian in the junior varsity game as Laura Martin hit for 13 points and Nodine Hill 10. Permian's Jana Ivy led all scorers with 18 and Leslie Norman had 10 points.

Lady Rebels keep pace, rip OHS

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — It didn't take the Midland Lee Rebels long to get over its Monday loss to Midland High. The Lady Rebels washed away the Odessa High Bronchos here Thursday night, 75-36, keeping a solid hold on second place in the District 4-5A girls chase.

Lee, however, didn't get any good news from league leading San Angelo as the Bobcats climbed to a perfect 10-0 in loop play Thursday with a 60-37 win over Abilene Cooper. Lee is still two games back with with four games left to play. Lee is 8-2.

But against the winless Bronchos, Lee had a field day despite the fact that only one player hit in double figures. But the one that did land in the double digits, did it big. Felicia Farias bombed away for 28 points, hitting 12 shots from the field.

Jeanetta Eaden had nine points and Shelley Armstong eight as Farias stole the show.

Bunny Smith had 12 points for OHS, but the Bronchos never really got in this game. Lee held a meager 12-7 lead after the first period, but erupted for 26 second quarter points for a massive 38-11 halftime margin.

Lee will host San Angelo in a key 8 p.m. district outing Monday at the Lee gym. If Lee can't defeat the Bobcats in this one, they can give up hopes on winning the district title and even a playoff berth would be in jeopardy in view of the fact that Midland High is now coming on strong with a 7-3 league mark.

Shawn Sweeten led San Angelo's romp over Cooper with 19 points while Angela Riggins had 17 for Cooper.

In the only other 4-5A girls outing Thursday, Big Spring survived a 68-64 overtime win over Abilene High with a late fourth quarter surge. Paula Spears had 21 points and Debra Rubio added 19. Trena Jackson had 19 for AHS and Jennifer Wolfe had 18.

4-5A stretch drive begins with MHS-Mojo rematch

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Tonight, the boys District 4-5A basketball race enters the final half of league play, and as the contenders take their places the intensity level has risen.

Under the circumstances, every game is important. Five and possibly six teams have a mathematical chance to land in first or secind place and nab a post-season berth in the state playoffs.

And perhaps the most important first game of the second half is tonight's encounter when Midland High tangles with Odessa Permian in Odessa.

The Panthers have maintained consistency, something that has eluded the other district teams except for co-leader Abilene. But Permian even has the upper hand there, as they beat Abilene already this season.

Mojo has posted wins over district enemies Midland, Midland Lee, Odessa and Abilene. That 76-62 home victory for the Panthers is critical to the league standings. With both Permian and the Eagles tied at 6-1, Permian's defeat of AHS gives them an edge at this point in the year.

For Permian, tonight's contest hosting Midland and the Panther's Tuesday date at Abilene are vital. A pair of wins would virtually lock up a playoff spot, if not the inside track to a district title.

For MHS, the sword is double edged. If the Bulldogs (21-6, 4-3) lose to Permian, their 4-4 district record would be insufficient. MHS would then be faced with a must-win scenario.

"I said all along that I thought on any given night six teams could win," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "The games have really been close all year long."

Stephenson notes that MHS has lost three loop games by a total of only six points. "We've been just a step away in three district ballgames that we lost."

Permian edged MHS in the district opener, 59-54, after the 'Dogs had led throughout. The Panthers are developing as a fourth-quarter keeper. They beat Lee 55-53 on a jumper with two seconds remaining.

Should MHS win, the district standings would again be in turmoil. As 1984 has gone, that is par for the course. The only consistent aspect of the race thus far is its' inconsistency.

STILL, ABILENE and Permian have been steady enough to go 6-1 in the first half.

The Eagles would prefer to avenge their only league setback when Permian visits. Of course, AHS must avoid stumbling against tonight's opponent, Big Spring.

Not many teams have. The Steers have played as if winning meant a trip to the stockyards. Big Spring is 2-21, winless in the district, and any district win the Steers manage will almost certainly ruin someone's year, not only because the race is so close but because the Steers are not very competitive.

San Angelo has been counted on to make a showing, but the sporadic Bobcats have yet to put it all together. The Bobcats have an advantageous home schedule down the stretch, but need to regain their earlier form. After being knocked from the unbeaten ranks by Permian in the third district battle, Angelo has gone 2-2.

Angelo, Lee and MHS are all 4-3 at the midpoint, and all three have to pass Permian or Abilene to get to the playoffs. And, there is the matter of the teams each are tied with.

Central hosts Abilene Cooper, a step behind the tied trio at 3-4. Cooper has one of the loop's better one-two scoring punches with Bob Estes and Joe Melson. They have combined for an average of nearly 30 points per district outing. The Cougars are still entertaining playoff hopes, and a win over the Bobcats would be a positive step towards that goal.

AS FOR Midland Lee, the Rebels have emerged from a 1-3 start to win three in a row. "We only won that many all last year," reminds Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "We're happy."

Happy, but not satisfied. Winning has only seemed to increase Lee's thirst for success. After losing that heart-breaker at Permian, the Rebs have been the loop's best unit.

'Jekyll and Hyde' Knicks nix D.C.

By The Associated Press

The New York Knicks continue to be an up-and-down team, but this time they were too far up to go down.

Bernard King scored 27 points and Bill Cartwright added 21 as the Knicks, who usually play their best against the National Basketball Association's top teams and leave something to be desired against the also-rans, took command early and coasted to a 104-97 victory over the struggling Washington Bullets Thursday night.

"We're a Jekyll and Hyde team," said Coach Hubie Brown, whose Knicks closed to within 4½ games of second-place Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division.

The Knicks led by as many as 24 points in the first half, but allowed the Bullets to cut the gap to five points twice in the final 1:32."In the first half we were perfect, but in the end we played dumb basketball," Brown said. "We missed free throws, threw the ball away, and did a lot of silly things."

After Washington scored the game's initial four points, New York responded with a 17-4 scoring streak to take the lead for good. The Knicks made 15 of 22 shots for a 33-20 lead after one period. Washington, which got 26 points from Jeff Ruland, lost for the 10th time in its last 12 games.

"Playing consistently has been our problem all year," said King, who scored 18 points in the first half. "We'll do good against the better teams and then let down the next game against a team we should beat. I hope this is the start of something good. This was a very important win."

Jazz 125, Nets 115

Adrian Dantley scored 39 points, Rickey Green 18 and John Drew 16 as Utah won its 15th straight game at the Salt Palace. After leading 68-58 at the half, the Jazz got its fast break going early in the third quarter for an 81-62 lead with 9:30 to go in the period.

Lakers 131, Rockets 102

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 26 points paced Los Angles, which also got 23 from James Worthy and 20 from Jamaal Wilkes and took a half-game lead over Portland in the Pacific Division.The loss snapped the Rockets' five-game winning streak as rookie star Ralph Sampson was held to 16 points on 8-for-24 shooting. Lewis Lloyd led Houston with 20 points.

SuperSonics 114, Kings 106

Jack Sikma scored 31 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead Seattle. The Sonics led 53-52 at halftime and outscored Kansas City 28-14 for an 81-66 lead with 3:38 remaining in the third quarter. The Kings tied the score 91-91 with 7:27 remaining, but Gus Williams hit two baskets and Sikma added another.Williams scored 22 points, including 18 in the second half. LaSalle Thompson led the Kings with 23 points and a game-high 20 rebounds.

Nuggets 126, Bulls 125

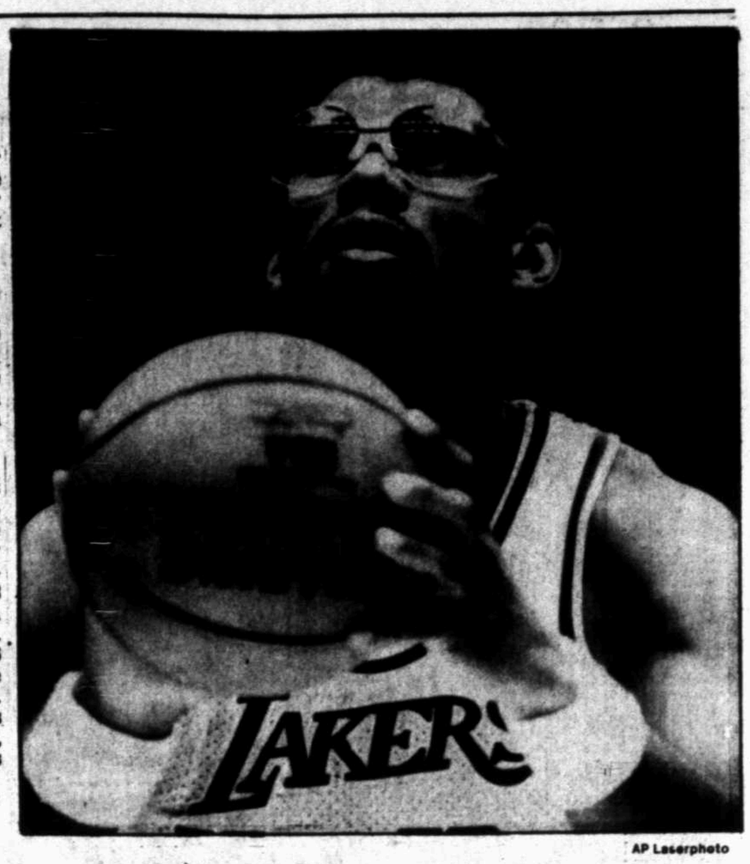

Denver snapped a 12-game losing streak on the road as Kiki Vandeweghe broke a 119-119 tie with a 15-foot shot and added a clutch free throw in the final seconds of play. Vandeweghe scored 13 of his 26 points in the final quarter, while Dan Issel had a season-high 37 points for the Nuggets. David Greenwood and Orlando Woolridge led Chicago with 32 and 24, respectively. After Vandeweghe gave the Nuggets the lead for good, Alex English hit a pair of free throws with 42 seconds left for a four-point bulge.

Spurs 123, Warriors 116

San Antonio scored eight of the final 10 points to defeat Golden State behind George Gervin's 39 points. Artis Gilmore added 21 and Mike Mitchell 20 for the Spurs, while Joe Barry Carroll had 24 and Don Collins 20 for the Warriors and John Lucas had 14 assists.

Clippers 119, Suns 101

Ricky Pierce scored 12 of his 18 points in the third quarter to help San Diego overtake Phoenix. The Clippers trailed 79-69 midway through the third period, but outscored the Suns 22-4 to take a 91-83 lead and Phoenix didn't threaten seriously in the final 12 minutes. Michael Brooks had 10 of his 16 points in the third period as the Clippers outscored the Suns 36-20. Terry Cummings led the Clippers with 24 points and 11 rebounds, while Norm Nixon added 20 points and 11 assists.

Lendl, McEnroe roll at Pro Indoor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top seed Ivan Lendl and No. 2 seed and defending champion John McEnroe scored decisive third-round victories Thursday in the $375,000 U.S. Pro Indoor tennis tournament.

Lendl served 10 aces and allowed Tim Gullikson only 18 points in a 43-minute match that the Czech won 6-1, 6-2.

Wimbledon champion McEnroe beat 15th-seeded Scott Davis by an identical score in a match that took 20 minutes longer than Lendl's.

Third-seeded Yannick Noah and eighth-seeded Eliot Teltscher also won Thursday night matches.

Earlier Thursday, second-year pro Brad Gilbert upset ninth-seeded Johan Kriek. No. 4 seed Jimmy Arias, No. 11 seed Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia and unseeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland were also victorious.

Gullikson, after winning the second game of the first set, lost the next five, taking only seven points in the set.

Lendl swept the first four games of the second set and four games later ended the contest with a service ace down the middle.

McEnroe swept the first four games of his match and took the first set with a service that Davis backhanded into the net.

McEnroe broke Davis' service in the opening game of the second set and then held service for a 2-0 lead. After Davis took the third game, McEnroe surged ahead to 5-1.

Davis staved off four match points and forced McEnroe into errors in taking the seventh game.

McEnroe won the match when Davis hit a backhand shot down the line and over the baseline.

Noah, the first Frenchman to win the French Open championship in 37 years, defeated countryman Henri Leconte, the No. 16 seed, by a 7-6, 6-3 score.

In the contest between France's first and second ranking players, Noah took the first set tiebreaker 7-3 on the third set point.

The only service break of the second set came in the eighth game.

Teltscher took a hard-earned win over Eric Korita 7-6, 6-1.

World swim marks set

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Alex Baumann and Victor Davis, a pair of 19-year-old Canadians, set world best marks Thursday at the Canadian Winter Nationals short-course swimming championships.

Baumann beat his own world best in the 400-meter individual medley with a clocking of four minutes, 10.67 seconds, knocking two full seconds off his previous standard he set in 1981.

Less than one hour earlier, the Czechoslovakian-born swimmer won the 100-meter freestyle with a time of 50.32 seconds.

Ponies edge Frogs, 61-59

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Southern Methodist had the "Wright" answer to Texas Christian's suffocating matchup zone.

Carl Wright produced the clutch baskets, scored 20 points, doled out six assists, and hauled down six rebounds as the Mustangs survived the Horned Frogs 61-59 in a Southwest Conference thriller Thursday night.

"Carl Wright is just a gifted athlete," said a relieved SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "He's a big play player.

"He's got a heart as big as his chest. He makes more great plays by accident than I could ever design for him."

It was only the third time SMU had beaten TCU in their last nine meetings.

SMU moved into a tie with Texas Tech for third place in the SWC standings with a 4-2 record. The Mustangs are 16-4 for the season.

TCU dropped to 8-10 overall and 1-6 in SWC play.

Wright had a basket and a free throw to provide the winning edge in the final minute against the six-point underdog Horned Frogs, who held seven-foot Jon Koncak to just 12 points.

"It was close," said Wright. "They had a good team from last year and we knew they had a good team this year.

"We got a little tight. I'm just glad we got away with a win."

TCU led 36-28 at halftime and Tracy Mitchell missed an off-balance 15-foot shot at the buzzer that would have sent the game into overtime.

In was only the third time all season SMU had trailed at halftime.

"We made some adjustments at half but the main thing was we just came out and played harder.

Mitchell scored a game-high 21 points while Dennis Nutt added 16 for the losers. Nutt also missed twice in the final minute on long corner shots.

"This was a tough loss," said Mitchell. "We played Koncak tough just like those big guys from Houston and Arkansas. We can stop those guys but we can't put it together at the end. The ball doesn't bounce our way."

TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said, "I really feel sorry for our team. They played hard enough to win. We've played every good team in the league and we've played them tough."

He said the Frogs were too young to be tough at the end of the game.

"One thing that kinda hurts us is that we're a young basketball team and we're not in very good shape right now," he said. "You throw into that the emotions of a tight game and the physical and mental fatigue and it just tires us out. It tends to hurt us at the end of the game."

SWC action resumes tonight with Arkansas, tied with Houston atop the SWC standings with a 6-0 ledger, hosting Rice.

In games Saturday, Texas is at SMU at 2 p.m., Texas A&M is at Texas Tech in a 2:10 p.m. regionally televised game, and Houston is at Baylor in a 7:10 p.m. regionally televised game.

Hanika drops Houston Slims

HOUSTON (AP) — Sylvia Hanika, the world's 10th-ranked tennis player, has withdrawn from the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Houston because of an ear infection, it was announced Thursday.

Hanika was the No. 7 seed in the tournament, which begins Monday.

She was forced to withdraw from a tennis tournament in Washington earlier this month because of the same problem.

From Babe to Bowls: Grimsley steps down

EDITOR'S NOTE: Will Grimsley is retiring after a half-century of covering the biggest stories in sports, the last 41 years with The Associated Press. This is the final edition of his column, Grimsley's Sports World.

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

They say that sometimes just before a man dies, his whole life flashes before his eyes.

This old horse ain't ready to check it in just yet, but his vehicle is — this word-worn conveyance of fractured prose, dangling participles and split infinitives. It's back to the barn, with an occasional romp on the open road.

How do you squeeze into one column 50 years of memories — 32 World Series, XV Super Bowls, 13 Olympics, 25 Kentucky Derbies, as many Wimbledons and Masters and almost as many Indy 500s, plus ring wars from Joe Louis to Smokin' Joe's kid, Marvis, golf from Bob Jones to Jack Nicklaus and tennis from Big Bill Tilden to John McEnroe?

Well, if they can engrave the Lord's Prayer on the head of a pin, we can try.

Who could forget the great Babe Ruth holding up an exhibition game to answer a lot of stupid questions by a fuzz-faced rookie reporter in 1935? "Who's your favorite actress?" "What's your favorite cereal?" "Hobby?" The answers were Janet Gaynor, Post Toasties and fishing and hunting.

Or crusty old Joe McCarthy, the Yankee manager, at the same time telling the reporter: "You don't know much about baseball, do you, kid? Have a seat. Get out your pencil. I'll ask and answer the questions."

Later, watching the great Babe Didrikson Zaharias, the world's greatest woman athlete of all time, wan and drawn from terminal cancer, winning her third U.S. Open golf championship in 1954, paving the way for such later stars as Billie Jean King, Janet Guthrie, Peggy Fleming and Chris Evert Lloyd. The Babe died shortly afterward.

Then, there's the end of the greatest winning streak in golf history — in Memphis, fall of 1945, Lord Byron Nelson, beaten out by an amateur, Fred Haas, after 19 tour victories, 11 in a row, with the lowest scoring average ever. Highly nervous, he lost his lunch before the final round.

Jackie Robinson, standing in the catacombs of Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium during the 1972 World Series, being asked for an autograph by a wide-eyed tyke. "Son, I can't even see the ball," the half-blind former Dodger replied, but he laboriously scrawled his name anyway. It was his last public appearance. A couple of weeks later he died. Sports' Martin Luther King. He broke the racial barrier.

The Soviet Union's first Olympics at Helsinki, 1952. Americans were dazed when the hammer-and-sickle Soviet rowers invited their Yankee counterparts behind the Iron Curtain to their quarters for lunch. It unfroze the cold war.

Oct. 8, 1956. Don Larsen of the Yankees hurls the first perfect game in World Series history. It looked so easy, it tended to boredom. Some people got up and left the stadium before it ended.

The tragedy of Bobby Jones. He had conquered the golf world by the time he was 28. He originated and hosted the Masters before a lingering illness took its toll. He set a gentlemanly standard for the game.

Dwight Eisenhower, the general who helped save democracy and later was president, playing a golf exhibition in Merion, Pa., for the Blood Fund. "Where can I get some practice balls?" a flustered Ike asked. Nobody heard. Everybody was over at another area watching Arnold Palmer.

The black power salute by medalists John Carlos and Tommie Smith in the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City, followed by a threatened walkout of black athletes — their way of marching on Montgomery. America's greatest Olympian, the late Jesse Owens, who had been spurned by Hitler after winning four gold medals in the 1936 Olympics, cooled the passions.

A black man himself, a great patriot, Owens scoffed at the suggestion that nationalism should be erased from the Games. "You might as well hold the Olympics in somebody's backyard," he said.

The Munich horror of 1972 — a 24-hour vigil while world leaders sought to compromise with terrorists who invaded the Olympic Village. Hope exploded in a burst of rifle fire and exploding grenades that left 11 Israelis and the five terrorists dead. The event emphasized the Olympics as a political and ideological battleground.

Citation's 32-length triumph in the Belmont in 1948 to complete horse racing's Triple Crown. We sneaked a look over the shoulder of a famed writer who froze with these words in the typewriter: "Citation, by Fantasy out of All-Reason ..."

"Reggie! Reggie! Reggie!" A yell for each home run by Reggie Jackson in the final game of the 1977 World Series, won by the Yankees over the Dodgers. Never a more electrifying moment.

If there was one, it was the "Thrilla in Manila," the knockdown, dragout war between Muhammad Ali and Smokin' Joe Frazier, maybe the greatest heavyweight fight of all time. "It felt like death," said Ali, the winner. It was the greatest moment for both. Both should have quit there.

Sports are a microcosm of society — big business, hype, kids' games, good guys, bad guys, the misfits and the born-agains with a wide range between. As a group, tennis players are the most spoiled (except the Aussies), golfers the classiest, superb role models in Palmer, Nicklaus and Watson.

Overall, the men and women who perform in the nation's play pen are a marvelous breed, honed by disappointment, disillusionment and discipline.

They've given us a lot of excitement, some laughter and anguish. We wouldn't have swapped this life for the world.

Fifth COM meet starts

The City of Midland Swim Team is hosting its fifth annual Winter Invitational Friday through Saturday at the COM Pool.

Around 350 swimmers from all over West Texas and New Mexico are competing in the United States Swimming open Invitational. Swimmers as young as age five up to age 18 are entered, 58 from the Midland area alone.

Swimmers attending come from El Paso, Amarillo, Lubbock, Odessa, San Angelo, Monahans, Carlsbad and Hobbs, N.M., and surrounding areas.

The five year old entered is Midlander Craig Kieffer. According to COM coach Paul Bridgers, the young swimmers even surpass efforts of older athletes because of the open event. "The 13-14 year-old girls will have faster times than a lot of the high school girls did last week (when COM hosted the MHS Invitational)," said Bridgers. "And we have a really good group of eight and under and ten and under swimmers."

The age divisions range from eight and under, ten and under, 11-12, 13-14, and the Senior division.

In the Senior competition, Midland's David Hartman will be gunning for a continued good showing after a record-setting time in the MHS Invitational. Hartman is entered in ten events.

A total of around 122 events is scheduled for the three-day meet. Friday's competition begins at the COM Pool, 3003 North A, at 5:30. Saturday and Sunday, events begin at 9:00 a.m, with the older divisions scheduled tentatively for 1:00 p.m.

Woolf testifies in Sims case

DETROIT (AP) — The Houston Gamblers say they will call their own expert sports agent to counter Robert Woolf, who testified on behalf of Detroit Lions All-Pro running back Billy Sims in his bid to break a contract with the United States Football League team.

Woolf, a well-known Boston sports attorney, testifed Thursday in the U.S. District Court trial of a lawsuit filed by Sims to break his contract with the USFL expansion team.

Sims has signed contracts with both the Gamblers and the National Football League Lions, but has said he prefers to stay in Detroit.

Woolf, who has negotiated more than 1,800 contracts for 400 athletes in virtually every sport in America, testified Thursday that Houston co-owner Jerry Argovitz had a clear conflict of interest when he continued to act as Sims' agent after becoming co-owner of the Gamblers

Houston attorney Stephen D. Susman conceded that Sims' lawyers had scored heavily with Woolf. The Gamblers' attorney said, however, that he intended to call his own expert witness — Cleveland sports agent Greg Lustig — next week.

The contract tug-of-war over Sims was scheduled to continue today before Judge Robert E. DeMascio in U.S. District Court and Elbert Hatchett, the running back's lawyer, promised to put the plaintiff on the stand.

"Billy's next," Hatchett told reporters.

At issue is whether Sims, the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner out of Oklahoma, will remain with the Lions or play for the Gamblers.

Hatchett got Argovitz to admit a day earlier during testimony that he failed to notify the Lions when Sims was getting ready to sign his July 1 contract with the Gamblers — thus letting pass an opportunity to perhaps drive the running back's price up even higher.

The man Susman really wants, however, is Sims.

"I think it's time they call Billy," Susman said, lighting up a cigar in the corridor. "Bet you a dollar they don't. But, I think it'll be important to hear Billy's story in his own words instead of through Elbert Hatchett."

Before his testimony, Woolf was permitted to study a packet of material related to the case.

The material included letters in early June between Lions attorney Frederick C. Nash and Argovitz, an offer from Argovitz to the Lions which defined a comprehensive offer, a copy of the July 1 contract Sims signed with the Gamblers, a July 8 letter from Nash to Argovitz and the Dec. 16 contract Sims signed with the Lions.

Marvin Smith, Hatchett's partner, asked Woolf if the evidence indicated the Lions had been dragging their feet — as Argovitz claimed — in negotiations prior to the time Sims signed with the Gamblers.

"It looks to me like the Lions made a bona fide offer," Woolf replied. "It's obvious (from copies of the correspondence) they are coming together. They were quite far apart, then by June 22 they are quite close together and appear almost in agreement.

"What they asked is almost what the Lions offered."

In earlier testimony, Argovitz disclosed that he collected a $3,800 finder's fee in return for investing $156,000 of Sims' money in two Houston building projects in 1981. He also collected a $175,000 signing fee from Sims after the contract was reached with the Gamblers.

Woolf said he considered both of those actions to be a conflict of interest.

"Ordinarily, a fee is not taken from the client until the client has earned the money," Woolf testified. "I would say it is frowned upon. It's possible the player would get hurt and not even earn his money. I would say it's abnormal."

In cross examination, Mark Wawro, one of three Gamblers' attorneys on the case, noted that Woolf had settled out of court a few years ago when goalie Andy Brown had sued him for misrepresentation after the folding of the World Hockey League.

Testimony has shown that Argovitz invested $2 million in borrowed money to help finance the Gamblers and is responsible for 30 pecent of a $1.5-million letter of credit issued to the Houston team by a Texas bank. Argovitz is being paid $275,000 a year as president of the Gamblers, plus 5 percent of the net proceeds from the franchise.

Kong gonged in N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Kingman, who twice led the National League in home runs, is being shunned as trade-bait and is about to be released by the New York Mets, a club official said Thursday.

"Unless someone changes his mind and calls me up, I guess we'll have to release him," said Mets General Manager Frank Cashen.

Cashen told the New York Times:"We have exhausted all avenues to trade him ... He will not return with the Mets this season." Kingman has two years remaining on his contract.

Kingman, 35, who spent most of last season on the bench after being replaced, hit 48 home runs for the Chicago Cubs in 1948 and 37 for the Mets in 1982, both league-leading figures.

Lobos eye date with UTEP

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It is being billed as the biggest game in six years for the University of New Mexico basketball program, but Lobo Coach Gary Colson now knows there will be life for his squad after Saturday night's collision with nationally ranked University of Texas-El Paso.

Colson, who started this season fighting for his job, has orchestrated one of the nation's most impressive turnarounds with a program that five years ago was virtually demolished by a recruiting scandal and subsequent probation from the NCAA.

The Lobos, 16-4 overall, Saturday night take on a UTEP team that is 17-1 and ranked No. 8 in the nation. At stake will be the lead in the Western Athletic Conference. The Miners lead the WAC with a 5-1 mark, with New Mexico a half game back at 4-1.

New Mexico, having clinched its first winning season since the 1978-79 season with a trio of road wins last week, has now won 15 of its last 17 games after opening the season with back-to-back losses in the Great Alaska Shootout tournament.

A win over Coach Don Haskins' talented Miners Saturday would give New Mexico its second win this season over a team ranked in the top 10. In December the Lobos stunned then No. 7 ranked UCLA 65-60 at Pauley Pavilion. The Lobos also beat PAC 10 leader Washington earlier in the season.

And while New Mexico can move a step closer towards a post-season tournament bid with a victory over the Miners, Colson is confident the program is again on solid footing.

"We felt all along that we were going the job we were hired to do, and your inner feelings can't change," Colson said this week.

With this year's success story, Colson has apparently silenced his critics, who made him their target following four successive losing seasons.

The Miners-Lobos showdown is completely sold out and even standing room only tickets disappeared quickly earlier this week. More than 18,000 will watch the two conference frontrunners. Not since the 1977-78 season, when New Mexico posted a school record 24-4 mark and was ranked fourth in the nation, has a game generated such interest among Lobo fans.

Deep in depth, UTEP features one of the quickest teams in the West. The Miners are led by senior forward Fred Reynolds and center Dave Feitl. Although the individual statistics are not that impressive — Reynolds is the scoring leader with a 10.8 per game average — the Miners have won consistently with a balanced attack and traditional Haskins-style defense.

"They play with great composure," said Colson. "There has been so much hype for this game, I just hope it hasn't been too much. We have to be able to keep from being too high."

Like UTEP, the Lobos have employed an equal opportunity offense this season. Senior point guard Phil Smith leads in scoring with a 16-point average. Forward Tim Garrett averages 15 points a game while Alan Dolensky, the other forward, has a 14.8 scoring average.

Steelers upset over lease

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers want to break their 40-year lease at Three Rivers Stadium, but a city official says the move is a ploy to kick out the new Maulers of the rival United States Football League.

The Steelers filed suit in Common Pleas Court Thursday against the Pittsburgh Stadium Authority, operator of the 50,000-seat, publicly-owned stadium, charging the city breached the Steelers' "promise of exclusivity" at the ballpark.

George Whitmer, authority executive director, said the suit "really comes down to a question between the Steelers and the Maulers and the (National Football League) and the USFL."

Steelers President Dan Rooney says his team does not want to leave the stadium or prevent the new Pittsburgh Maulers from opening their first nine-game home season there on March 11.

"We're saying that our lease was an exclusive lease and that was the exchange for the 40 years . . . They (the Maulers) got a more favorable lease. We're saying our lease is breached," Rooney said.

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan Panthers General Manager Vince Lombardi says signing Coach Jim Stanley to a new multi-year contract will help insure the United States Football League team keeps its winning ways.

Stanley, who guided the Panthers to the first-ever USFL title last season, said he signed the new multi-year contract with the team on Thursday, although no details were disclosed.

Lombardi said he and Stanley ironed out the details of his contract in negotiations this week.

Stanley, whose current contract was to expire after this season, said he was satisfied by the new contract.

"I think it's a very workable contract," he said. "Anytime you have a contract, it's got to be a good deal for both sides, or it's not very good. But we have a good working relationship."

NHL suspends Messier

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Mark Messier says he had no axe to grind when he clubbed Vancouver Canuck forward Thomas Gradin on the helmet last week, but the Edmonton Oiler winger will pay a stiff penalty for his ill-timed blow nonetheless.

Messier was handed a six-game suspension Thursday after Brian O'Neill, National Hockey League executive vice-president, who saw tapes of the Jan. 18 incident at Northlands Coliseum and then heard Messier's side of the story at a hearing Wednesday in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Since Messier has been out for three games awaiting O'Neill's ruling, he will miss both weekend games in Edmonton — against New Jersey tonight and against Los Angeles Saturday as well as next Friday's home date against Calgary.

He will be allowed to play in next Tuesday's All-Star Game at the Meadowlands because it's an exhibition contest rather than a league game and will rejoin the club Feb. 5 for a game against the Washington Capitals at Landover, Md.

"In reaching my decision, it's noticed that Mark Messier hasn't had a previous record of such incidents," said O'Neill, "but it's my judgment that he swung at his opponent while looking directly at him.

"All players are on notice that they will be held responsible for their indiscriminate swinging of sticks at opponents."

Two other players — Claude Loiselle and Bob Hoffmeyer — received six-game suspensions for much the same thing earlier this season. Loiselle hit Bobby Clarke and Hoffmeyer belted Brian Bellows.

Messier took his sentence hard, although he jokingly told teammates Wednesday after his hearing with O'Neill that "he was going back to Palm Springs and he'd see them in two months."

"I thought last night (in Vancouver) would be the last game I missed," said Messier. "Never in the world did I think I'd get six games.

"He asked me at all times during the hearing to say what I felt, to express my feeling. He wanted to know what I thought the severity of the blow was.

"The film didn't do anything for me (it showed Messier hitting Gradin with a one-handed smack on the helmet) but I know how hard I hit him. I told him it was a glancing blow."

Gradin was helped off the ice with a minute left in the game and apparently had a minor concussion. He played the next game in Winnipeg.

"We had a medical report right away that said there was nothing wrong with him (Gradin)," said Glen Sather, Oiler head coach and general manager, who brought the report and Messier's penalty record (only one slashing minor this year) as defense for his player.

But O'Neill looked at the act itself and made a ruling based on intent.

"After watching the film, I thought he'd get six or maybe 10 games," said Sather.

Sugar returns Feb. 25

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Saying he was "happy to be back in the sport I love," Sugar Ray Leonard has made it official: he will fight Kevin Howard of Philadelphia in the Worcester Centrum Feb. 25.

"I feel I'm not just a fighter, I'm an entertainer and I like to put on a good show," Leonard told 1,000 cheering fans on Thursday. "And I think Feb. 25 against Kevin Howard will definitely be a great show. Hopefully he'll cooperate."

"I've been training now for approximately two weeks," he said. "My weight is great. I weigh about 150 pounds and I look forward to coming here."

The 10-round bout will be the first for the former world welterwight champion since he announced his retirement Nov. 9, 1982, because of a detached retina suffered during training for a defense against Roger Stafford.

In choosing the Centrum for his comeback, Leonard returns to New England, were he fought six of his first 17 professional bouts — in Hartford and New Haven, Conn., Providence, R.I., Portland, Maine, and Springfield, Mass.

The bout, which will be televised on HBO, should bring Leonard slightly more than $3 million. Tickets cost between $10 and $300.

The last time Leonard appeared in the Centrum was as a color commentator for the Marvelous Marvin Hagler-Tony Sibson middleweight bout last February.

And he said Thursday that he's looking forward to meeting Hagler in the ring for the middleweight championship "two or three years down the road. I am not going to rush myself."

"Marvelous Marvin Hagler is a true significant and great champion and I respect him greatly," Leonard said. "I'm sure you've read and heard that we've been making verbal assaults on one another. And we're really friends. But when the date comes about, it will be one of the greatest fights in the history of boxing."

Meanwhile, Leonard said he plans to fight once every three months and predicted he would regain his welterweight crown by next autumn.

The 27-year-old Leonard was catapulted to national fame by his performance at the Montreal Olyumpics in 1976, where he captured a gold medal.

He won the WBC welterweight title from Wilfred Benitez in 1979, but lost it to Robert Duran the next year.

Lewis tops 77th Millrose field

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Lewis, competing less but enjoying it more, leads a field of the best United States long jumpers into tonight's 77th Wanamaker Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

Lewis led a 1-2-3 American sweep in the long jump in last year's World Track and Field Championships at Helsinki, Finland, as Jason Grimes won the silver medal and Mike Conley took the bronze medal. Those three were scheduled to compete tonight, but Conley was a late withdrawal because of injury.

In addition, the field will include Larry Myricks, the 1979 World Cup champion, and two of the nation's other leading jumpers, Ralph Spry and Vesco Bradley.

"Those are about the top six in the country," Lewis noted.

The best, of course, is the 22-year-old Lewis of Willingboro, N.J.

He is the world champion. He owns the best jump ever at sea level, 28 feet, 10¼ inches. He owns the best jump indoors, 28-1. He owns the best long jump series ever — indoor or outdoors — with five jumps over 27 feet in last year's Millrose Games. He is the indoor and outdoor national champion. And he is ranked No. 1 in the world.

This is his first long jump competition of the season. He plans to compete in the event only twice more indoors this year, in the Vitalis-Olympic Invitational Feb. 11 at East Rutherford, N.J. and in the Michelob Invitational Feb. 17 at San Diego.

Lewis, also the world's top-ranked 100-meter runner, plans to sprint no more than three times during the indoor season. He finished second to Australia's Paul Narracott in the 60-meter dash at Osaka, Japan Jan. 16. He will sprint again Feb. 4 in the Dallas Times Herald Invitational and might double in the 60 and long jump at the Olympic Invitational.

Committee hears testimony about leasing state land

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

The State Senate's special committee on state properties was in Midland Thursday to hear testimony from West Texans about proposed changes in laws governing the leasing of state-owned land.

The committee has been studying the management of Texas public lands and properties to find cost-effective ways to increase the state's return on its oil, gas, mineral and/or surface leases.

The committee is trying to determine if the state is receiving the best use and price for its leases. The committee was primarily interested in discussing the problems associated with the Relinquishment Act, mineral leasing, grazing and other surface leases, and access to mineral lands in West Texas.

Because any changes that are made in these laws would have a direct affect on the oil industry and land owners of this area, the committee wanted to come to Midland to listen to the views of West Texans.

THE STATE OWNS about 14 million acres of land across the state; much of it is in the Trans-Pecos and Permian Basin areas.

Martin Allday, a Midland attorney, was the first witness to testify before the committee. Allday, representing several area ranchers, said the Relinquishment Act, which gives land owners (surface owners) no say in the leasing and access of the land's hard mineral (sulfur, molybdenum, ect.) rights, was not workable in his opinion and based on his experience.

Allday said the problem is that state-owned land usually exists within the confines of ranches and/or farms and is surrounded by other land owned by the same surface owner.

Allday said in the land owners' viewpoint, the method of leasing and operating mineral-classified land for oil, gas and soft minerals presents few problems.

"THE SURFACE owner, when approached by a prospective leasee will usually take steps to determine what the going price is for comparable acreage near it. This system works well. The land owner and the state are married to one another. What is good for the goose is good for the gander."

Because of the sharing situation, Allday said, the land owner will be willing to provide the necessary access to land which can be vital to the development. However, leasing hard minerals, he said, presents many problems.

"The situation with leasing of hard rock minerals is not working. It needs fixing. As presently structured," Allday told the committee, "I believe that until and unless the surface owner is involved in the negotiation for actual leasing of mineral-classified land or hard rock minerals, as agent for the state, in the same or similar manner that now exists with respect for oil and gas and soft minerals, it will remain a problem."

Mining hard rock minerals, which requires stripping the land, Allday said, demands cooperation from the surface owner. He hopes appropriate legislation is passed so mineral owners will not be allowed to force themselves on surface owners' land without their approval and cooperation, he added.

"THE LAND OWNERS, if involved, could and would perhaps be willing to work with leasees if they have some say-so about their land — where the roads need to go, re-sodding requirements. The land owner needs to have a piece of the action if his ranch is to be subjected to a lease for hard rock minerals," Allday said.

George Finley, a lawyer from Kermit, told committee members he was opposed to giving mineral owners the right of ingress and egress (the right to enter and exit at will).

The land owner, he said, has, in some cases, had no input about how these mineral owners approach particular leases across other lands.

"The mineral owner has the right of the minerals but he does not have the right to access any other land unless he has dealt with the land owner and then only on approved routes."

FINLEY ALSO SAID he had seen many cases where mineral owners had gone into areas without the approval of the land owner and "did what they pleased."

Drawing from "first-hand experience," Finley said with the unrestricted right of ingress and egress, many mineral owners will use it to their advantage.

"With ingress and egress, you are giving someone the right to go anywhere on the land. We can't give oil companies this right," Finley said.

The committee will present their recommendations to the 69th Legislature when it meets next year.

MEMBERS OF THE committee include Sen. Ed Howard, chairman; Rep. Tip Hall, vice chairman; Sen. Ray Farabee; Rep. Joe Hanna; Sen Grant Jones; Rep. Pete Laney; Sen. Bill Sims; Rep. Wayne Peveto; and Gary Mauro, General Land Office commissioner.

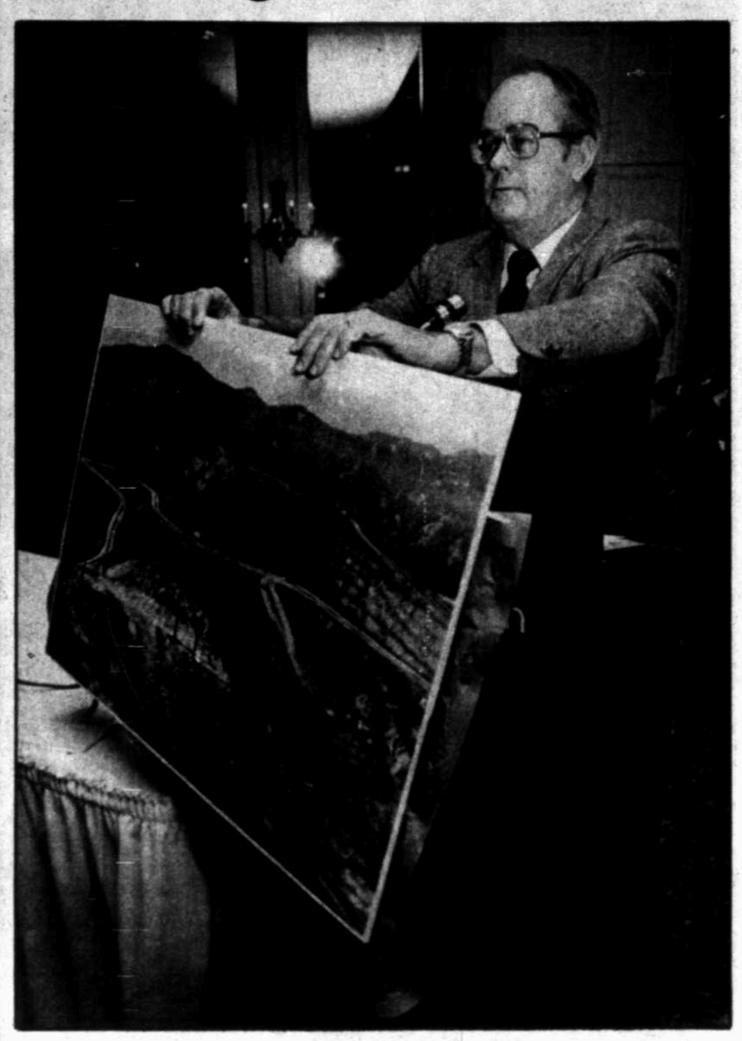

Other members include Homer Foerster, executive director of the State Purchasing and General Services Commission; Edwin L. Cox Jr., chairman of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission; and James Crowson, general counsel for The University of Texas System.

Getty family attempting to overturn trust provisions

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Getty family members, having agreed after weeks of squabbling to sell their interest in Getty Oil Co. to Texaco Inc., are attempting to overturn provisions of the family trust and reach agreement on how to share the $4 billion cash they will receive from the sale, attorneys involved in the negotiations said Thursday.

The discussions, which began even before the Getty family agreed Monday to drop attempts to hold up Texaco's takeover in return for an additional $100 million for the trust, could result in a settlement that would dilute Gordon P. Getty's sole control over the family inheritance.

Under the provisions of the trust, which was established by oil billionaire J. Paul Getty and his mother in 1934, investment of the proceeds from any sale of the trust's Getty Oil stock was restricted to bonds of seven nations, and no more than 25 percent of the total could be invested in bonds of one country.

Until now, however, the investment provision has not come into play because the trust's principal asset was its 40.2 percent stake in Los Angeles-based Getty Oil.

That restriction is potentially so cumbersome, one attorney joked, that the Getty family "could throw a nation's credit market into confusion if it weren't careful."

If the negotiations succeed, they could signal the end of more than a half century of legal and financial disputes among warring family members that have pitted father against son, brother against brother, and even unborn future heirs against living family members.

"We have a lot more faith that the family is going to work out its differences now," one attorney said. "There was never any assumption we could solve all the family problems, but we have succeeded in having people sit down and talk about it."

The meetings began in earnest last week after attorneys for three Getty grandchildren mounted a seemingly quixotic challenge to Texaco's takeover of the Los Angeles-based oil company.

"To most people, we just came out of left field," said Kenneth Heitz, who represents three young Getty heirs who currently receive no income from the family trust.

As an alternative to the Texaco takeover, Heitz persuaded Houston-based Pennzoil Co. to resurrect its offer for Getty by matching Texaco's higher bid. The Pennzoil proposal, which would have kept Getty alive as a private company, was considered preferable because it would have maintained the trust's assets for future generations in an continuing concern.

When Superior Court Judge Richard P. Byrne surprisingly accepted the petition to hold up the Texaco takeover, however, the White Plains, N.Y.-based oil giant moved quickly to "lock up the deal," one attorney said.

Shortly after a secret meeting last Friday in which most Getty family representatives expressed support for the insurgent effort against Texaco, Alfred C. DeCrane, Texaco's president, flew here by corporate jet to meet with family members to defuse the plan.

By 2 a.m. Monday morning, Texaco had agreed to boost by $3 a share its original offer of $125 a share for Getty, culminating a marathon round of meetings that began Saturday afternoon and continued virtually non-stop into the courtroom halls Monday afternoon.

Texaco's Decrane was so "obsessed with closing the deal," one attorney said, that even after all the family attorneys had agreed to adjourn shortly before dawn for some much-needed sleep, he "pounded on the desk," and "really, at that point, held it all together by the sheer force of his will."

DPCC withdrawing Dr Pepper bid

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Castle & Cooke announced Thursday that DPCC, an investor's group it formed to acquire Dr Pepper Co., withdrew its $24 a share buyout proposal because it was unable to verify the financial information upon which the offer was based.

In a prepared statement, Castle & Cooke said DPCC "reached this decision reluctantly, but did so because the information DPCC obtained as a result of the due diligence afforded to it by Dr Pepper was insufficient to permit DPCC's lenders ... to verify the financial assumption on which the $24 per share offer was based."

Dallas-based Dr Pepper, the nation's third-largest soft drink maker, accepted a buyout bid of $513 million in November from the New York investment firm of Forstmann Little & Co, rejecting Castle & Cooke's $580 million bid as too conditional.

Castle & Cooke was allowed to look at documents about Dr Pepper's finances and structure, but was not allowed to ask for additional information under the terms of a previous agreement between the companies.

In a statement released Thursday, Castle & Cooke said representatives of DPCC met Wednesday with Dr Pepper to discuss the possibility of changing the agreement between the companies.

The result, the statement said, was that "...DPCC has no reason to believe that Dr Pepper would change its position. The DPCC spokesman also said DPCC does not now know whether further due diligence would support a new offer. In the face of this uncertainty, DPCC has concluded that it is inappropriate to continue the existing offer."

Dr Pepper spokesman Jim Ball said the company had not been notified of DPCC's decision and had no comment.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 253 taxable funds)		38	8.75	8.82

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 253 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased by $516.5 million to $161.4 billion for the week ended January 25, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 8.75% from 8.78%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.82% from 8.81%. The taxable funds' average maturity remained at 38 days for the second week.

William E. Donoghue says, "Yields on money funds remained largely unchanged this week. Assets of the taxable and tax-free money funds rose for the third consecutive week. This week's $517 million increase in taxable fund assets occurred primarily in institutional funds. Assets increases in tax-free funds were mainly in retail funds.

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, g - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability.

Report says official passed confidential bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before the government auctioned more than 1 billion tons of federally owned coal, an Interior Department official passed confidential bid information to a coal company lawyer, according to a published report.

The Washington Post reported today that department official David Russell told a lawyer for Texas Energy Services Inc. the minimum amount the agency would accept as a bid for a coal lease.

The newspaper quoted sworn statements in a report to the Interior Department's inspector general. More than a month before the auction, Russell passed the information to Brent Kunz, lawyer who represented the Cheyenne, Wyo. company, the Post said.

The inspector general referred his report to the Justice Department, which concluded in November that the case did not warrant criminal prosecution, the newspaper said.

Interior Secretary William P. Clark removed Russell from his job last month as director of the Minerals Management Service. Russell's removal was part of a departmental shake-up of former top deputies to ex-Secretary James Watt.

The Post said Russell is quoted in the report as denying that he passed the information to Kunz and that Russell says he has "no idea" why Kunz claims Russell did so.

The newspaper report says Russell volunteered the information on a tract sought by Texas Energy and two others, without mentioning that it was confidential, the Post said. The tract in the Powder River Basin of Wyoming was put on the auction block in April 1982.

The story did not say whether the company actually bid on the tract or whether the bid, if made, was successful.

Dollar mixed; Gold static

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in early foreign trading today. Gold bullion prices were static.

European currency dealers said most investors were staying on the sidelines ahead of reports later today on the U.S. December trade deficit and weekly money supply growth.

They said the reports could indicate future trends in U.S. interest rates, the key factor in determining the dollar's value.

In Tokyo, the dollar edged up to 234.25 Japanese yen from 234.12 yen Thursday. Last Friday, the dollar closed at 233.50 yen.

Later in London, the British pound eased to $1.4051, from late Thursday's rate of $1.4059.

Other dollar rates in Europe compared with late Thursday included:

—2.8130 West German marks, down from 2.8142.

—2.2409 Swiss francs, up from 2.2395.

—8.61025 French francs, down from 8.6112.

—3.1655 Dutch guilders, unchanged.

—1,714.75 Italian lire, up from 1,711.25.

—1.24715 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2464.

The value of gold bullion was almost unchanged from late Thursday.

London's five main bullion dealers fixed a recommended morning gold price of $366.65 an ounce. Gold opened in London at $366.70 and closed Thursday at $367.

In Zurich, the precious metal was bid at $366.40, down 40 cents from Thursday.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold shed 65 cents to finish at a bid of $368.67.

Silver was quoted in London at $8.11 an ounce, down from $8.160 dollars Thursday.

What everyone in business should know about changes in telephone service.

Now that the Bell System has split up and Southwestern Bell Telephone is an independent company, there will be changes in the way we do business together. Here's a quick look at some of those changes.

TELEPHONE EQUIPMENT

The telephone equipment you once leased from Southwestern Bell Telephone has become the property of AT&T. You can continue to lease this equipment but your lease will now be through AT&T.

Of course, you still have the option of purchasing new equipment from a variety of suppliers.

In fact, Southwestern Bell Corporation has formed a new subsidiary—Southwestern Bell Telecom—to market telecommunications equipment.

REPAIR SERVICE

If you need to have your telecommunications equipment repaired, you should contact the source who provided it.

Call AT&T for repairs of equipment you lease through them or purchased from a Bell company prior to 1984. If your purchased equipment is out of warranty, you will incur a charge for repairs.

Southwestern Bell Telecom provides repair service for the equipment you obtain from them.

For repair of equipment obtained from a company other than Bell, contact the original manufacturer or retailer.

Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to repair your telephone line at no charge.

LONG DISTANCE

Southwestern Bell Telephone will provide long distance service within your surrounding area. (We call it Local Access and Transport Area, or LATA.) But long distance service outside this area will be provided by the long distance company of your choice.

BILLING

In most cases you will still receive one monthly bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone for services previously provided by the Bell System. But, charges will be listed separately. Equipment charges will be on one page, long distance calls placed through Southwestern Bell Telephone on another and long distance provided by other companies on yet another.*

YELLOW PAGES

Yellow Pages advertising is now handled by Southwestern Bell Publications. Your business will continue to be listed by us in the White Pages. A Southwestern Bell Publications representative will contact you regarding your listings and advertising in the Yellow Pages.

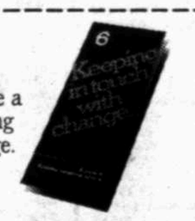

LOCAL SERVICE

Southwestern Bell Telephone is still your company for local service, so please continue to call us first when you want to establish service. We're also your company for local services like Touch-Tone, Custom Calling Services, local data networks, ESSX-30 and Centrex.

Southwestern Bell Telephone also will continue to offer the mobile phone service we offer today. In addition, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems will offer new cellular mobile phone service.

We want you to know about these and other changes in your telephone service. That's why we're offering a special booklet called "Keeping in touch with change. A guide to business telephone service." Just clip the coupon below and send in for your free copy today.

*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

Ector County cuts $934,000 from budget

Staff Photo by Paul Gilbert

Sue Tolleson, head of the Ector County Library circulation department, is one of the employees whose job is in danger following commissioners' decision Thursday to cut two supervisors from the staff. Budget cuts totaling $934,000 were made in response to the Jan. 21 rollback.

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Rather than "simply putting a band-aid on a festering sore," Ector County Commissioners followed County Judge Jan Fisher's lead in cutting $934,000 from the 1984 budget in places that will have long-term effects on county services.

Hardest hit was indigent health care. Commissioners took $500,000 from the fund used to pay medical bills of the county's paupers, which Ms. Fisher said would not be needed to cover 1984 costs.

Another position was dropped from the Presidential Museum, leaving the building to be run until Oct. 1 by a curator and secretary. Once supported privately, commissioners indicated the museum will be "phased out," with the community being called on to take up its management next year.

The Ector County Library will operate with four fewer employees than planned. Two positions were cut in previous budget sessions which sheared $1.86 million from the $14 million budget, with another two dropped as commissioners made cuts forced by the Jan. 21 rollback.

Commissioners want two supervisors cut from the library staff, taking its work force from 38 to 34 and dropping its payroll $40,000. The judge noted that cutting only clerks would leave the department "with lots of chiefs and not a lot of Indians."

"The level of service may be affected, but I feel the people know that," said Ms. Fisher. Voters overwhelmingly approved rollback of the county's tax rate which takes $880,000 from their coffers. Another $30,000 in cuts were made to balance costs of the election, redoing the tax roll and sending refund checks to property owners.

Officials at the county's hospital suggested to Ms. Fisher that indigent care costs could be held down, with restrictions for qualifying for free medical care likely to be more tightly enforced. While the county had expected to spend $2.3 million during economic hard times, the county judge said slightly over $1 million of the $1.5 million budgeted is projected to be spent for charity care in 1984.

"Half our problem is solved right there," said Ms. Fisher after commissioners agreed to drop $500,000 from indigent health care in their first move of the emergency session. She supported cutting services not required by state law, but the sheriff's department lost two positions and $152,000 was dropped from Farm-To-Market, Lateral Road fund. (Roads and law enforcement are services the county is legally bound to provide its residents.)

While Sheriff Bob Brookshire gave up 13 positions in the two cutbacks, he has not lost that number of men. Six of 11 cut in November were not filled, and investigator and jailer positions dropped Thursday were vacant.

Because the county must follow state jail standards, Brookshire will make moves in the sheriff's department to offset the loss of manpower. Originally budgeted 78 people, Brookshire will have 69 to provide law enforcement to county residents. The jail workforce drops from 33 to 29.

Department heads listened in the audience and occasionally added input. Commissioner Willie Hammond was not present for the meeting.

Parks and Recreation, already cut 13 positions and likely to be taken over by the city during the next year, lost an administrative assistant and area supervisor and $54,500 earmarked for machinery and improvements.

Commissioners approve payment of attorney fees

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners approved payment of court-appointed attorney fees Thursday — withdrawing complaints that district judges were awarding too much to lawyers that represent poor clients.

Commissioners withheld payment of $8,000 in fees for indigent defense during Monday's regular meeting; they asked for written justification of what they considered high lawyer bills.

Commissioner Bryan Henderson wondered why the county was paying local attorney Bill Bowden Jr. $2,000 to defend Clifford Yates, convicted in December 1983 of molesting his 12-year-old niece. Payment of this and other attorney's fees was withheld until Thursday's special session called to discuss budget cuts.

District judges set the fees for lawyers they appoint to defend those accused of a crime who cannot afford to pay for their defense. Unless commissioners have a reasonable cause to question the judges' decision, they have no legal authority to stop payment of these fees.

"We've ordered them to pay them," said District Judge Gene Ater after the commissioners withheld payment Monday. "If they don't pay them, they're going to get sued by the lawyers."

Court orders are issued by the judges and give the county no choice but to pay the fees the judges feel are justified. Fees for cases that go to trial, such as Bowden's, are accompanied by affidavits outlining their work and expenses from the case.

"They're getting quite high," said County Judge Jan Fisher Monday. "The amount paid is more than the county feels is necessary."

The county budgeted $150,000 for court-appointed attorney fees for fiscal year 1984, $40,000 more than in 1983. Through Jan. 19, the county had already spent $72,000 and expects to go over budget for the year.

The court followed the judges' suggestion and approved appointment of three attorneys from the bar association to study the cost of indigent defense to the county. Judge Fisher said the attorneys would look at contracting with local attorneys for the service and forming a public defender's office.

While the commissioners questioned Bowden's $2,000 payment, District Judge Joe Connally set this fee below what the attorney wanted. Bowden's affidavit asked for $3,480 for expenses for investigation and attorney fees.

Bowden listed 43.5 hours of work at $80 per hour. Had he been hired by Yates, the attorney said he would have charged $10,000-$15,000, since the case went to trial and included pre-trial hearings over changing venue to San Angelo.

"I can assure you that none of the attorneys are getting rich off court appointments up here," said Bowden. "I'm out here starving with the rest of the people with business being what it is in Midland and Odessa."

Insisting he understood the county's financial dilemma, Bowden said "They need to understand my economic plight."

"This issue is not like the parks," said Bowden, emphasizing that the county must provide those that cannot afford private attorneys with court-appointed legal counsel.

"They can't avoid this by just burying their heads in the sand and saying 'We're not going to pay the attorneys,'" said Bowden.

With the costs of indigent defense likely to force the financially strapped county to overrun their budget, the findings of the three-attorney study will probably be used to find an alternative to the present system.

Searchers resume hunt for body

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Searchers today were to resume trying to recover the body of a man buried since Saturday by a landslide in the Amistad National Recreational Area near Langtry.

The body of civilian Air Force employee Edgar Joe Dorroh, buried under 150 tons of rock, was located Monday morning by two dogs from the Midland Police Department's Canine division. But recovery has been thwarted by subsequent landslides and the dangerous terrain.

Canine officers Richard Edens and Sgt. Ed Nicks, along with their dogs Rowdy and Casey, arrived at the scene about 9 a.m. Monday. "We were out there approximately 20 minutes when Rowdy gave us the first indication of where the body was," said Nicks, who handles Casey and who heads up the canine unit.

The area was marked off and rescuers attempted to dig out the body, but another landslide obliterated the site. Nicks and Edens returned Tuesday and the dogs re-pinpointed Dorroh's body.

This time, coordinates were drawn in case another landslide occurred and high pressure water pumps — linked to hoses running from the nearby Rio Grande — were used to try and expose the body. But the 45-degree slope diminished the pressure and the tactic had to be abandoned.

"There's some satisfaction in that we know where to look," said assistant park superintendant Don Goldman . "But there's a great deal of frustration in that we can't do anything about it.

"Picture digging a hole in it. Everything would sink right on top of wherever you dig. Frankly, we don't know what we're going to do.

"What these guys (Nicks and Edens) did for us was priceless. They got us on the right track and we're eternally grateful. They worked under extremely dangerous conditions."

Members of the rescue party were hooked to a block and tackle as they worked to locate and uncover the body. The block and tackle was tied to a huge boulder above the site and the dogs were tethered to their handlers.

Six people held the other end of the rope to yank searchers out of the way if another landslide developed.

Dorroh and 30-year-old Colleen Stephens, both of San Antonio, were hiking in the remote area about noon Saturday. They were climbing a canyon slope to explore an abandoned, 100-year-old railroad tunnel when the slide buried Dorroh, according to Nicks.

Ms. Stephens had reached the top and Dorroh, a mechanical engineer at Kelly Air Force Base, was behind her as the slide began. "She said she saw him running, but lost sight of him in the dust," recalled Nicks.

He and Edens returned to Midland Wednesday.

Nicks said the National Park Ranger Service first called the San Antonio police department to obtain search dogs, but their "canines don't do that type of work".

Rangers then sought Midland's help after being told by San Antonio authorities and an Air Force dog handler that "we've got the best dogs in the state," Nicks added, recalling that Rowdy took second-place honors in last June's statewide police olympics at San Angelo.

"I'm real pleased that our dogs have that kind of reputation throughout the state. I'm also pleased that chief Gideon let us go down there to assist another agency. That, to me, is what law enforcement is all about — helping people."

High pressure pumping equipment was to be taken to the top of the canyon today in an attempt to flush out Dorroh's body, which may never be recovered, according to Goldman. "Nobody wants to give up, but obviously we can't do this forever."

Two of the "best dogs in the state" were used when Casey, left, and Rowdy, were called in Monday to track down the body of a man buried under 150 tons of rock near Langtry. They were accompanied by their handlers, from left, Sgt. Ed Nicks and Richard Edens.

Andrews chamber honors couple for years of community service

Louie and Marcella Cure

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ANDREWS — Retiring manager of Andrews County Chamber of Commerce Louie A. Cure and his wife Marcella were named co-recipients of the 1983 community service award Thursday night at the 31st annual CC banquet at Andrews Civic Center.

The award is given, said James Roberts, to someone "who has added quality to our lives. The community service award of this chamber is given either for outstanding service in a one-year effort or as recognition for many, many years of service. Tonight, we honor the latter."

Workers of a community are of two types, said Roberts, "those out front who are leading, tugging, pulling and enjoy a generous share of the limelight, and then there are those who wear out the shoe leather and work quietly, effectively, efficiently, pushing from behind without a great deal or credit or fanfare," said Roberts. "It is significant that both of our honorees tonight are pushers."

The Cures, he said, have "provided the tools, the background, the means which others have used to function successfully in leadership roles." Louie Cure, he said, has served Andrews "without interruption 27 years and at one time or another has provided vital services for every person in this room. Leaders have come and gone; all have relied heavily on the work performed daily" by him.

The last year in Andrews has witnessed "lots of peaks and valleys," noted Roberts, "and through it all the chamber has remained a model of stability."

"It's been a very successful year for the chamber of commerce," said retiring CC president James Pennington. "We've had many activities and projects."

MMH comes out ahead despite fewer number of patient days

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

After wrestling with a new federal reimbursement system since Oct. 1, Midland Memorial Hospital has come out ahead in another round, despite a decrease in the number of patients seeking medical attention and the number of days they stay.

During the month of December, 842 patients were admitted to the hospital, although 924 were budgeted, according to financial figures presented at a regular meeting of trustees and directors Thursday.

The number of days patients were in the hospital during December was 544 below what was expected, bringing the year-to-date figure to 1,025 patient days below budget.

About 100 patients less than expected were admitted to the hospital for the year to date, although the figure represents an increase of 88 patients admitted from the same time last year.

However, according to MMH Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson, total operating revenue from patient care was $90,000 over the budgeted figure, bringing the total amount of revenues over expenses for the month of December to $38,000, excluding non-operating income from investments and contributions.

The number of Medicare patients admitted to the hospital met the budgeted figure for the month, but the number of Medicare patient days, which affects reimbursements to the hospital from the federal government, was down by 55 days.

The prospective payment system, which puts a cap on the reimbursements a hospital may receive for treatment of Medicare patients, was based on data collected two years ago, according to Peterson.

With a 7½ percent increase in the number of admissions, discharges and patient days over the last two years, Peterson said the average costs increased at a lower rate than expected when the new payment system went into effect at the beginning of the fiscal year, Oct. 1.

"Today's fixed costs are spread over a greater population than they were when the costs were estimated," he said.

A 6½ percent contractual allowance was budgeted when the prospective payment system went into effect. Because of the success with the system, the contractual allowance was reduced to 3 percent of gross revenues.

"We're anticipating it will be significantly less than what it was under the old system," Peterson said. "We are encouraged, but we're watching it closely."

Tax assessor cites experience in re-election bid

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Shuffield

Frances Shuffield, Midland County's tax assessor-collector since 1981, cited her experience and expertise in the tax field in announcing her bid for re-election to another four-year term of office.

"I've been in this profession for a long time," said Ms. Shuffield. "I feel I know the job; I feel I have the qualifications for the job."

She is seeking the Republican Party nomination to the office in the May 5 primary elections.

Ms. Shuffield noted the primary functions of her office:

— Serving "the people courteously, politely and efficiently. I do not like to be discourteous to people."

— Keeping the "flow of (tax) money into the county, state and Greenwood school district. That's the lifeline of this thing."

Ms. Shuffield, who has logged 27 years of experience in the county tax assessing-collecting field, views herself as a troubleshooter. If something is amiss, "I try to correct it...The people know you are going to help them where possible."

In her job, Ms. Shuffield collects almost $20 million in revenue: $7.4 million for Midland County government, an additional $2.5 million for the Greenwood Independent School District, and another $10 million in highway license fees, motor vehicle sales and user tax, title fees and beer and liquor license fees.

"We work hard," she said of her 26-member staff. "It's a hard-working staff most of the time."

The "most enjoyable" phase of her work, she said, is "meeting with the people."

"In working with them, you feel like you have constant contact with the pulse of the community. You meet people in all walks of life," she said. Ms. Shuffield said she finds much reward and satisfaction in helping "solve their problems."

Ms. Shuffield worked in the Travis County tax office in Austin from 1956 until 1966, when she became chief deputy to Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Elmo Linebarger. When Linebarger announced his retirement in 1980, Ms. Shuffield sought the office; she was unopposed.

She holds certifications as a certified Texas assessor, registered professional appraiser, registered professional assessor and as a registered Texas assessor-collector.

Ms. Shuffield holds memberships in the Texas Assessor-Collectors Association of Texas, Texas Association of Assessing Officers and Institute of Certified Texas Assessors.

In 1981, she was appointed by then Texas Gov. Bill Clements to the six-member Board of Tax Professional Examiners. She currently is secretary-treasurer of that body. The board certifies people in the field of assessing, collecting and appraising in Texas; sets up and develops examinations in those fields and considers cases of alleged misconduct and unfair practices by people in the assessing, collecting and appraising work.

"We have to explore complaints and every possibility," she said. "We're a quasi-judicial body in a sense." If an assessor, tax collector or appraiser is determined to have violated rules of conduct, the board can bar him from assessing, appraisal or collecting taxes.

The board ensures that appraisers, assessors and collectors "stay within the lines and realms of the law."

Constable pledges to continue 'outstanding job'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

McGinnis

Midland County Constable Tom McGinnis, who pledged he will continue doing an "outstanding job," today announced his candidacy for re-election to the post he has held since 1981.

McGinnis, 47, is seeking the Republican Party's nomination to the constable's office in the May 5 primary elections. He has been in law enforcement at the federal, county and city levels for 25 years.

Since he took office in 1981, McGinnis noted that his workforce has doubled to four deputies, his budget has increased by about 125 percent, and "The production and workload have increased probably by 500 percent."

"We have the only working constable's office in West Texas," McGinnis said. Elsewhere in West Texas, the constable posts often exist only in name and the law-enforcement duties are carried out by the sheriff and police departments. "Back in East Texas, from Abilene on back, there are lots of (working) constables," he said. "But there's no more out here."

The constable has statewide criminal jurisdiction and countywide civil jurisdiction, he said.

"The duties of the constable's office are primarily to serve civil citations and warrants from the justice of the peace offices," he said. "We also serve civil papers for federal, (state) district, county and justice of the peace courts."

In addition, the constable and his deputies make re-arrests for misdemeanor probation violations and serve misdemeanor warrants issued by the justice of the peace courts.

Since he has been in office, McGinnis has set up a rabies control program. Last year, he noted, rabies reached almost epizootic proportions.

McGinnis began his law-enforcement career as a policeman in Philadelphia, Pa., and then was a U.S. Border Patrol officer for 12 years in Falfurrias, Alpine and El Centro, Calif. He was a criminal investigator for former Midland County Sheriff Ed "Big Ed" Darnell and later was chief of Patrol and Warrant Division for Sheriff Dallas Smith. Prior to his election as constable in 1980, he was a deputy to Midland County Constable Jack Merritt, who died in office in 1980 at age 76. McGinnis holds an associate degree in law enforcement from Midland College and was a frogman in the U.S. Navy.

McGinnis said as constable he intends to "continue serving the people to the best of my ability and knowledge."

Andrews chamber honors couple for community service

Incoming president Ira Adams shared the feelings he has developed in the two years he has lived in the city.

"There was just something special to me about this place," he said. "In the summer of 1981 I got the chance to come here and live and work. Shortly after moving to Andrews, it didn't take me too long to figure out what made this community special. My first week here, one day around town, I heard the fire siren go off, and I saw people from all walks of life...drop what they were doing and head for the fire station. Not long after that there was an annual Mustang barbecue...and I was invited by the Mesquite Burners to help prepare and serve the food. When I got there I was really amazed at the number of volunteer workers.

"Later that year I attended a United Way meeting. The United Way was kind of flat on its back and there was even discussion of whether or not to have a campaign fund or just completely drop it for that year. I saw Roy Butler take over as president and organize a full board of directors...and last year we were one of the few oil economy-related cities that surpassed their campaign goal for 1984. That first year here it seemed like everywhere I went I saw people involved, people giving of their time, their energy and their money to make this a better place to live and to ensure a better quality of life for all."

Adams said he saw people getting involved because they cared about the community.

While noting that the quote did not originate with him, the new president told the chamber members there are three kinds of people: "People that make things happen, people that see things happen, and people that wonder what happened. With your help and involvement this year, I believe that we can make things happen for Andrews."

Featured speaker Dr. W.C. Newberry of Southwest Texas State University took a humorous look at supposed intellectualism and "creeping tension" and turned serious when he discussed one of the greatest tensions of all — that "caused by the realization that we are not what we ought to be, that...we are not living up to our potential."

To combat this, he said, a person should always remember the fallacy of the philosophy, "If you sit still, you won't get any older."

Often, he said, he counsels students or businessmen who discuss changing majors or professions but shrug it off by a comment such as, "I'll be 24 by then...or 50." The truth of the matter is, said Newberry, a person is going to get to be that age anyway, so why not make the switch if it's important?

"If there's a personal project you want to start, start it," he said. "If there's something in life you want to go after, go after it now. If you want to become something, become it now."

MMH comes out ahead despite fewer patient days

Helping the situation was an increase in revenues from ancillary services during December. Peterson cited increases in the respiratory, physical and occupational therapy departments, lab and blood bank and radiology.

A new CT Scanner (computed tomography whole body scanner), which began operating in the radiology department this month, was used by 109 patients through Thursday, according to MMH President Ray Branson. Another 51 patients already are scheduled for scans through Feb. 8.

"It's not totally unexpected to start off with a bang like this," Branson said. "The results of these scans are significantly better and the resolution is incredibly better."

The $1.2 million machine was purchased through junior revenue lien bonds to replace an outdated scanner.

In other action, trustees and directors were told the three-year-old 77-bed expansion and renovation project is finally reaching the last stages of preparation.

According to Jim May, chairman of the building committee, architectural drawings are due back from Austin the week of Feb. 20. Following printing, they should be available by Feb. 24, with a tentative date set Feb. 27 for advertising for bids. Other tentative dates include receiving bids April 2, awarding them April 9 and completion and signing of the documents by April 16.

"Then, believe it or not, we hope we can break ground the week of April 30," May said.

Bullock proposes school finance plan

AUSTIN (AP) — El Paso and Ysleta school districts would be the big winners, and Dallas and Richardson schools would be the big losers if lawmakers adopt a new public school finance plan proposed by State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock, who has said he wants to run for governor in 1986, has proposed taking state funds away from wealthy school districts and giving the money to poor ones.

"None of this has to cost any more than we are paying today," Bullock said. "It just needs to be better managed."

He released figures Thursday showing how much money each district would gain or lose if his plan were adopted. Bullock says his suggestion would give more state education money to 52 percent of the state's public school students even if the Legislature did not increase spending from current levels.

Who really shot down Red Baron?

Baron Manfred von Richthofen, the "Red Baron" German flying ace, was shot down and killed April 21, 1918, during World War I. There was some controversy over who actually shot him down. Capt. Roy Brown of Canada was given credit initially and later awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. However, some witnesses maintained that the baron was felled by Australian ground forces.

Man wants to sue in water dispute

LAS CRUCES (AP) — Water users in Dona Ana County should file a class-action lawsuit against El Paso's Public Service Board because of an unresolved three-year-old dispute over water rights in southern New Mexico, says Las Cruces businessman Jim Ikard.

Ikard, who Thursday completed his term as president of the Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, said the water dispute between El Paso and New Mexico is harming the "health, welfare and economic development of Dona Ana County."

"I personally think the time may be appropriate for the...water users and aggrieved industrial concerns to join in a class-action suit against the Public Service Board of El Paso for actions detrimental to the health, welfare and economic development in Dona Ana County over the past three years," Ikard said.

John Phelan, the new president of the Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, said Thursday the chamber would not be involved in any class-action lawsuit because it is not a water user.

El Paso filed a lawsuit in federal court in September 1980 to overturn New Mexico's ground water embargo. The city also applied for 326 wells south of Las Cruces to provide its water needs beyond 1995.

A January 1983 U.S. District Judge Howard Bratton declared New Mexico's law in violation of the Constitution's interstate commerce clause. But in December, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals voided the decision and returned it so the district could consider the lawsuit in light of a new state law the 1983 Legislature passed.

Ector County pares budget

November cuts claimed all recreation staff, absorbing the supervisor into the parks department. Commissioners dropped $500,000 from what had been a $2 million budget in 1982 and 1983.

Jurors will receive $6 per day, the state minimum. By cutting the jury checks from $10, the county expects to save $40,000 by Oct. 1.

Browning Thompson, an insurance company retained by the county for $600 per month, was dropped — saving $4,800 over the eight months remaining in the fiscal year.

Emphasizing "it will rise up again," Ms. Fisher said "you're simply putting a band-aid on a festering sore" by cutting salaries and keeping employees. She stressed that saving jobs supported "quantity over quality," backing the personnel cuts.

Survivors include her husband; a son, Stephen Smith of Midland; her mother, Blanche McDowell of De Soto; and a sister, Virginia Bloxham of De Soto.

UTPB extends registration deadline to Monday, Jan. 30

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Late registration for the spring quarter at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin has been extended to Monday, Jan. 30.

Registrar Robert Warmann said the extension from Friday to Monday came about as a result of recent changes allowing the use of VISA and Mastercharge to pay school fees.

"We developed the plan during the past semester, but as we continued registration, we discovered many students were not aware of the change," he said.

State legislation passed prior to the fall semester removed the requirement that students enrolling at UTPB have at last 60 hours of college credit prior to registration.

Over 400 courses are listed in the spring class schedule. For more information, call 563-2400.

DEAR ABBY

Son nursed in unhealthy situation

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I just returned from visiting my sister in Hawaii. She has two children, Sonny, 6, and Girlie, who is nearly 3.

The first day we were there, we were all sitting around talking when Sonny walked over to his mother, unbuttoned her blouse and began to nurse! Sis acted as though it was nothing unusual; in fact, she was very cooperative while that 6-year-old boy stood there nursing!

I almost fell out of the chair! Later I asked Sis privately why she hadn't weaned the boy long ago, and she said she had, but after Girlie was born, Sonny became jealous, so to keep him quiet she started giving him her breast after she finished nursing Girlie, and now she couldn't break him of it.

When I told her I thought it was psychologically unhealthy for the boy, she became defensive and insisted there was nothing wrong with keeping him "happy" this way.

Abby, my sister is an intelligent, educated woman. I would like your opinion. — MAINLAND VISITOR

DEAR VISITOR: I agree with you. It is a very unhealthy situation.

There is a strong possibility that your sister resumed nursing Sonny not only to pacify him and alleviate his jealousy, but also to fill an unconscious need in herself to be needed.

In any case, it is imperative that your sister discuss this with her doctor. And the sooner, the better.

DEAR ABBY: I know I did a foolish and dishonest thing, but it's too late now and I'm in terrible trouble.

Two years ago I married a man who was divorced and had three grown children. He's 45 and I'm 36. We agreed that we would have no children.

I wanted just one child from him so I cheated and went off the pill and became pregnant immediately. When I told him, he hit the ceiling. He has given me a choice — him or the baby. Abby, I want this child, but I love my husband and don't want to lose him.

I thought he would change his mind about having another child once I got pregnant, but he's firm in his decision and now I'm in a terrible position. Please help me. — IMPOSSIBLE DECISION

DEAR IMPOSSIBLE: In order to make a decision you can live with you need professional counseling with a therapist who will hear both you and your husband out. Please don't make any decision until you get this kind of help. And urge your husband to go with you.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

'Hearing ear' dogs serve deaf

Copley News Service

Six months ago, they were a couple of mutts picked up on the streets of San Francisco, awaiting disposal in an animal shelter.

Today, October and Shadow are the most important elements in the lives of two deaf women. They serve as the women's ears.

October, an alert friendly bloodhound mix, belongs to Michelle, 25, of Santee, Calif., an aide in a special education class who has been deaf since birth.

Shadow, a frisky 6 pounds of Australian shepherd mix and perpetual motion, belongs to Laurayne, a 63-year-old Chula Vista, Calif., housewife who lost both her husband and family dog in 1982. October and Shadow are about a year old.

The women and the dogs were brought together recently by the Hearing Dog Program operated by the San Francisco Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

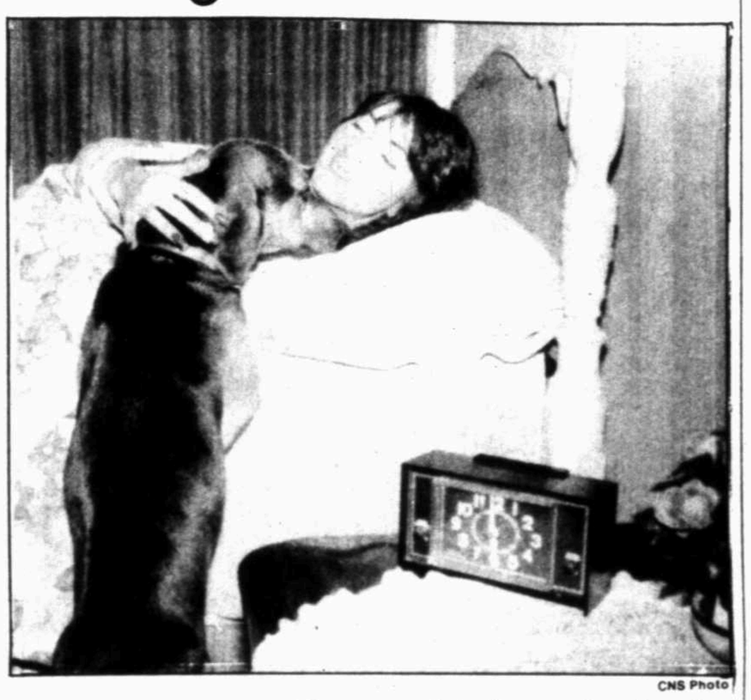

(The women are identified by first name only because beneficiaries of the program in the past have been harassed.)

Since its inception in 1978, the program has placed more than 170 dogs with deaf persons throughout California, and the highly trained animals have, in effect, become the ears of their new owners.

The dogs are trained to alert their owners to ringing telephones, doorbells, knocks on the door, alarm clocks, smoke alarms, oven timers, baby cries, tea kettles and other warning or signal devices. The dogs also are trained to warn of prowlers or strangers.

"A dog's hearing is so acute, he can differentiate between telephone rings," said Mel Robles, head trainer for the program. "For instance, Shadow will answer Laurayne's phone here, but if we were in your office and the phone rang, he wouldn't pay a bit of attention to it."

To illustrate Shadow's alertness, he rang the kitchen telephone with a remote-control device. Both dogs (October and Michelle also are being trained using Laurayne's phone) tore into the kitchen, listened to one more ring and streaked back into the living room to nudge their mistresses into action.

CNS Photo

October, a "hearing ear" dog, responds to the morning alarm for its master, Michelle.

As the two women headed toward the phone, the dogs preceded them, jumping excitedly in front of the instrument until Michelle lifted the receiver. They then sat quietly, awaiting the inevitable tidbit that accompanies the praise for doing their job.

"They know what they're doing, but we don't sometimes," said Laurayne. "That's why (Robles) is here — to train us. The dogs already are trained, and they're so smart."

She said her late husband and their dog were her "connection to the outside world. Now, when my friends come to see me, they often leave because I can't hear the doorbell. But it won't be that way now."

Robles said the dogs receive obedience training in San Francisco before their specialty training begins. The placement training is primarily for the new owners and for testing the compatibility of dog and person.

Robles said the dogs are provided free to people who qualify for the program. Those interested in further information or applications, he said, can get them by writing to the Hearing Dog Program, San Francisco SPCA, 2500 16th St., San Francisco, Calif. 94103.

He said it takes about $2,500 to place a dog, and all expenses are met through contributions to the San Francisco SPCA. Donations can be specified for the Hearing Dog Program.

Tips make painting easier

Associated Press

Painting of any kind requires a decision on the kind of paint to be used, the choice of color and whether to use a roller or a brush.

These days, latex paint and rollers are the most popular selections among do-it-yourselfers, chiefly because the cleanup job is easier with latex, requiring water, while the roller covers large surfaces faster. But you should at least give some thought to oil-based or alkyd paint and a brush, especially to get different effects. Alkyds, for which non-water soivents must be used, are great for durability and have excellent hiding strength. Like oil-based paint, used less often indoors, alkyds need a primer for most surfaces, especially wallboards.

When choosing a paint, remember that a glossy one is more washable, which is why it is used so much in kitchens and bathrooms. But many semigloss and flat paints have been formulated in recent years to take a considerable amount of washing.

Some other painting tips:

Do the ceiling first, then the walls ... always paint from a dry area into a wet one ... wait until the ceiling and walls are dry before doing the trim and woodwork ... do not use masking tape with latex paint ... remove all light pieces from the room being painted.

AT WORK

Career advice offered

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D

Q. I own a resale shop and received an announcement from the Small Business Administration announcing the Women's Conference and your name was listed as one of the speakers.

Due to limited finances I could not attend. Could you please share with me any information from the conference? I am especially interested in finding a lending institution that would help me build up my business and my credit rating.

A. There were many suggestions at the conference from the SBA and from women entrepreneurs. Those pertinent to you are:

See the manager of a bank or find one that has lent money to women before. Many women reported more success from a women's bank. Explain your situation, and be sure to suggest a solution at the same time.

Contact SCORE. A few got good advice from this group of retired executives, but they had to search for the most appropriate ones.

Talk to several accountants; try to find women professionals who have experience in helping people rebuild their businesses as well as their credit ratings.

Get to know other women business owners and ask for their advice.

Take heart. You have courage enough to risk this resale business in the first place. Don't give up before you look at where you make your errors. If they are correctable before you start again, great. But you may need to learn much more before you start; think of working for some already established resale business and learn on the job.

That's the way businessmen have learned about marketing, advertising, inventory and sales — not to mention capitalizaion and credit.

If at first you don't succeed, try, try again — but each time a different way.

Q. I am 39 years old and would like to get involved in historic preservation. I am an avid history and trivia buff.

While I have been an accountant for an oil company, I would prefer not to pursue this career anymore. I am an accomplished public-speaker-member of Toastmasters International — and enjoy giving speeches. Any ideas?

A. You might try combining some interests to eventually get to historic preservation. Call on your friends at Toastmasters and colleagues at your oil company for leads.

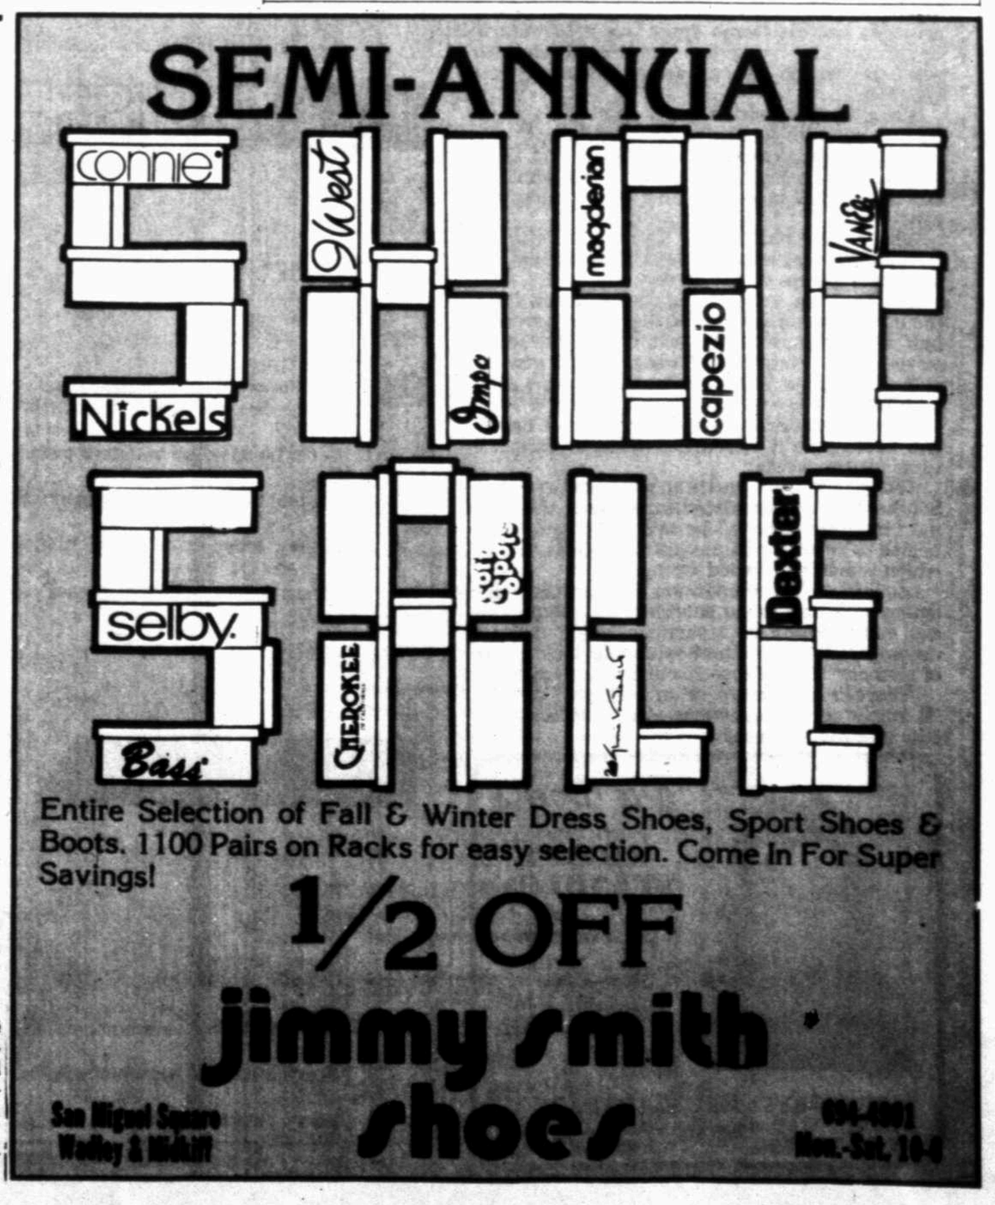

Most cities have voluntary groups to support historic preservation. Begin by volunteering on their board, bringing them your accounting expertise and offer to give lectures for them.

Q. I am a legal administrator for a law firm of five attorneys. I'd like to move to a larger firm where I will have greater responsibility, challenge and growth. I am also interested in getting my master's in business administration.

I'm afraid to move because I have a good job and am comfortable. What do you suggest?

A. Take the necessary next steps despite your fear. Definitely start your MBA program and use the assigned projects and papers to study the largest, most prestigious law firms.

'Women's work' considered excuse for dead-end job

Hearst Feature Service

BURBANK, Calif. — There is a place called the green room in a back corner of Lockheed Corp.'s facility, where row upon row of women under bright fluorescent lights manipulate what seems to be tangles of wire. It is a job that both the company and the employees themselves say requires the small and nimble hands of women.

But this is no back room sweat shop of the 1890s. The average wage in the green room is between $11 and $12 an hour — the same salary earned by most other unionized workers throughout the aerospace industry, according to Neil Vandercook, spokesman for Lodge 727 of the International Association of Machinists.

However, some women's organizations, disturbed by the idea of "women's work," say the so-called need for "small and nimble hands" is just an excuse — that the women have actually been locked into dead-end jobs with little opportunity for advancement.

Despite the good wages, green room supervisor Bob Cole said the assembly of avionics systems — the black boxes of tangled multi-colored wires that connect and control an aircraft's electronic equipment — has not attracted men, but has always been done almost exclusively by women, not only at Lockheed, but at other aerospace firms such as Northrop, Rockwell International and Litton.

The work, say the women, is tedious and meticulous, and often requires the aid of large desk-mounted magnifying glasses like those used by jewelers.

Most of the work consists of wrapping minuscule wires around a sea of copper posts, threading the tiny wires through narrow openings and soldering connections on index card-sized circuit boards.

"In the last 10 years, maybe three men have worked assembling avionics here, but they didn't stay long," said Cole. "Women are just more adept at fine work. The complexity of this work takes a lot of patience and small hands."

But Ellenor Zebbs, project director for Advocates for Women in Hayward, Calif., said "small hands and nimble fingers" is basically a story the women have been told over the years and now believe to be true. She said the phrase is actually an excuse to keep women in lower-paid jobs and away from advancement.

"Dexterity is possibly a factor," said Zebbs. "But the other side of it is that companies pay lower wages for assembly work than they do for technicians doing the testing of the assembled work."

Green room supervisor Frank Reale said the supervisory jobs are about evenly split between men and women. But he admits that the electronic systems technicians and research people, who earn about $14 an hour, are predominantly male.

Zebbs concedes that Lockheed is ahead of the game on the issue of comparable pay for comparable work. Women there earn about the same wages as men doing similar jobs, while non-union assembly workers at many electronics firms earn an average of $5 an hour.

The average seniority among the women at Lockheed's green room is about 12 years, but often extends as high as 25 years. "And it is because of the higher seniority that you find more traditional male/female division," said one Lockheed official. "It's just a reflection of what was going on 20 years ago when many of these people came in."

Eleanor Hoskins, executive director of the Career Planning Center in Los Angeles, defends the green room women.

"I would think any woman earning $11 or $12 an hour, and especially those that may be a head of household, would want to stay there rather than take a higher-risk position with a lower starting wage but that may have the potential for advancement," said Hoskins. "That risk is a serious consideration. These women may not have the personal opportunity to take that chance, even though it makes career sense."

Sugar substitute raises questions among critics

Copley News Service

SPRINGFIELD — Although NutraSweet has been a success story for G.D. Searle & Co., recent criticism has cast some doubt about its future. Critics say the sweetener can decompose into products which cause harmful neurological symptoms.

NutraSweet is Searle's brand name for a white powder with the generic name "aspartame."

In approving NutraSweet, the Food and Drug Administration conducted more than 100 studies on the safety of aspartame and its decomposition products.

While Searle and the FDA say aspartame is safe for human consumption, several scientists and consumer groups do not agree.

Rod Leonard, executive director of the Community Nutrition Institute, says studies show one-half of aspartame content will decompose when stored at 86 degrees for 12 weeks and 75 percent will disintegrate in 24 weeks at the same temperature.

He said one-third of aspartame in cola drinks will decompose if stored at 104-degree temperatures for two weeks.

"Those are not unusual temperatures for Southern states or Midwestern states in the summer, in storage sheds," he said. "The compound begins to revert to its natural substances, one of which is methanol (wood alcohol)."

Leonard said decomposition into methanol and amino acids can cause neurological problems, as can consumption of aspartame which has not decomposed. He said these symptoms include loss of memory, slurred speech and blurred vision.

"There is apparently brain damage," he said. "It raises serious questions about the scientific data that the FDA used."

Planning grants awarded to hard-hit Valley areas

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, reacting to protests by South Texas farmworkers, contended his administration has done more to help growers and farmworkers in the Rio Grande Valley than that of any previous governor.

White told a Capitol news conference Thursday that $407,240 in planning grants have been awarded to 14 cities and six counties through the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

"Although these planning grant funds cannot be completely dedicated to the Valley area, we have worked to expedite grants for projects that will benefit those communities now suffering from severe unemployment and economic hardship," White said.

"I feel that although our resources are limited, we have accomplished much more in directing assistance to the area, than any previous administration," he said.

White said those receiving the grants include the city of Mercedes and Zavala County.

Other cities receiving grants were Alvarado, De Soto, Athens, Domino, Sweetwater, Gonzales, Leonard, La Marque, Plainview, Lorenzo, Manor, Rosebud, and Eagle Lake, plus Polk, Victoria, Harrison, Uvalde and Sabine counties.

The two-day freeze in the Valley over the Christmas weekend destroyed the $30 million citrus crop and most of the winter vegetables in fields where thousands of workers are normally employed.

'Overwhelming' flu strikes schools without warning

AUSTIN (AP) — A sudden, "overwhelming" flu has struck Texas, with some schools reduced to 80 percent attendance because of the virus, says a state health official.

"What is unique is the very suddenness with which it has occurred," said Jeff Taylor, an epidemiologist with the Texas Department of Health.

"Last week, Jan. 15, there was nothing, and then within seven to 10 days, it seems that everybody's sick. It was very sudden, very overwhelming," Taylor said Thursday.

"I haven't seen (school) absentee levels like this in over two years," he said.

In schools districts in Tarrant and surrounding counties, some schools have experienced absentee rates as high as 22 percent to 25 percent.

Officials in the Bridgeport Independent School District, northwest of Fort Worth, even considered shutting down the schools.

TRL president lays out 'bottom line'

AUSTIN (AP) — The president of the Texas Research League has given oil and gas producers a "bottom line" on Texas finances — reduce the growth of state expenses or get ready for higher taxes.

"The bottom line," Jared Hazleton said, "is that the state faces severe pressures for additional public expenditures and little prospect for generating surplus revenues to pay for the additional spending.

"Texas faces critical fiscal choices over the next few years. We must either find ways of reducing the growth in state expenditures, or we must face the prospect of higher taxes."

The president of the privately financed research group said Thursday the economic recovery in Texas may be slower than the nation as a whole "due to the unique influence of the oil and gas sector and the continuing problems in Mexico."

Hazleton noted in a speech to the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association that the state comptroller had forecast that the state would have a $15 million surplus in August 1985.

Hazleton also said the "state faces beginning the next biennium, 1986-87, more than $1 billion in the hole."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Chronic snoring a cause for concern

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 11-year-old son snores, and my pediatrician says he thinks it might be a good idea to have his tonsils and adenoids checked. I would not like him to have his tonsils and adenoids out, and I'd like to know if you think it's a good idea. — Mrs. B.O., Chicago

Dear Mrs. O.: It seems to me that you are leaping to a conclusion that is not supported by the information contained in your letter. From what you write, it appears that your pediatrician wants to try to determine the reason for your son's snoring. He has not suggested at this point that it would be advisable to have his tonsils or adenoids removed.

Dr. Philip R. Westbrook, of the Mayo Clinic, notes that children who snore should not automatically have their tonsils or adenoids removed. On the other hand, chronic snoring is a cause for concern and should not ignored.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am in the menopause and I think I am getting the hot flushes I heard so much about from my mother. However, I am not sure because they aren't like the ones my friends describe. Are hot flushes different among different women? — Mrs. B.A., Springfield, Mo.

Dear Mrs. A.: Hot flushes are usually experienced over the chest, neck and face. They are usually accompanied by a blushing of the skin and perspiration. Some women have them only rarely, while others may have them hourly. Moreover, the feeling may last for seconds or for several minutes.

As you can see, there is no single pattern for the hot flushes of the menopause.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I sometimes hear about people who are in their sixties and seventies who are still sexually active. What I would like to know is how long this can continue. — Mark, Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Dear Mark: According to Dr. William H. Masters, of the Masters & Johnson Institute in St. Louis, men and women who are in good health should be able to remain sexually active as long as they live. This does not mean that a person will function sexually the same at age 70 as he or she did at age 30. But age itself should not rule out a satisfying sexual experience.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please explain why patients who have diabetes are more likely to have to have an amputation. — Mrs. D.L., Valparaiso, Ind.

Dear Mrs. L.: Dr. John Harrelson, of the Duke University Medical Center, explains that diabetic patients have poor circulation and often lose feeling in their feet. Because of the reduced circulation and sensation, they may not be aware of tissue damage and the condition therefore goes untreated. Some of these patients subsequently develop ulcers and this can lead to gangrene and a need for amputation.

For Alexander, Rochester, N.Y.: Hypertension is generally termed "essential" when it cannot be attributed to a specific cause.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Multimillionaire dies of heart failure

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Justin Dart, a multimillionaire industrialist and a one-time member of President Reagan's "kitchen cabinet," died of heart failure Thursday at age 76.

Dart joined United Rexall Drugs in Boston at age 34 and the following year became its president. He moved the company to Los Angeles and turned it into Dart Industries. In 1980, he merged Dart Industries with Kraft Inc., producer of foodstuffs. Chicago-based Dart & Kraft Inc. is the nation's 27th largest industrial firm.

Shakespeare man of the year

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — The county's Citizen of the Year is a man who needs no introduction, who was — in his own words — "a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy."

Forsooth, we joke not, it's William Shakespeare.

Each year The Anniston Star honors a citizen who has done the most for Calhoun County.

In choosing the bard, who died more than 367 years ago, the newspaper said Shakespeare is responsible for 100 jobs in the county and an enterprise expected to generate $50,000 in city sales taxes this year, as well as much attention from around the state.

Since Shakespeare couldn't be on hand himself, accepting in his behalf Thursday night was Martin Platt, artistic director of the Alabama Shakespeare Festival since it began 12 years ago.

"I've known him for a long time," Platt said. "If he could be here, he would certainly have waxed eloquent about how happy he is to be accepted in a world so different from the world he lived in."

The honor annually goes to a person who has done the most to help the town philanthropically, industrially and culturally.

"One reason we decided to honor Mr. Shakespeare this year," Waddle said, "is that a permanent theater for the Alabama State Theater is being built in Montgomery and although the summer festival is expected to continue in Anniston, this is the last year we could give the award to a hometown boy."

Reagan to carry torch

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan's oldest son will be one of the 10,000 Americans who will carry the Olympic torch during a 12,000-mile relay to Los Angeles, an Olympics spokesman said.

Michael Reagan will pay $3,000 to participate in the "Youth Legacy Kilometer," said Steve Montiel of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

The president's son volunteered to run in the relay, which is expected to raise thousands of dollars for various youth groups, at a leadership meeting of the Orange County Task Force for the Olympic Torch Run, said Diane Dailacis, co-chairwoman of the Task Force.

Reagan is no stranger to Olympic fund raising. He has raised $750,000 to support Olympic athletes by racing his power boat, the "711 Special," said Dailacis.

Any individual, corporation, group or business can buy a kilometer for $3,000, Montiel said. Ten thousand kilometers have been reserved for the fund-raiser, with 2,000 of them already committed, he added.

It makes you feel good about American moviemaking. Entertainment means style, energy, talent working at full incandescence. By these criteria 'SILKWOOD' is not only a powerful film, it's a compelling entertainment in both senses of the word. A movie that shouldn't be missed."

Cranston trying for third

CARROLL, Iowa (AP) — Television lights flooded the stage of the Holy Spirit School gymnasium and reporters crowded the bleachers as former Vice President Walter F. Mondale spoke at the annual dinner of Carroll County Democrats.

When Mondale finished, Sen. Alan Cranston rose to speak.

With a loud clatter, the television crews packed their equipment and the reporters stampeded for a waiting press bus to accompany Mondale to his next stop.

That left the Carroll County Democrats and exactly two reporters — no floodlights, no crowded press section.

The California senator insists such incidents don't discourage him, but they do throw into sharp relief the state of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Front-runner Mondale, with his silver-streaked shock of hair, his Secret Service agents and his ever-present press entourage, projects an aura of success.

THE LANKY Cranston, with his jokes about his baldness, his meager retinue and his earnest warnings about the arms race, comes across as a man trying for third place.

That, in fact, is exactly what he says he is doing. Over and over, on his most recent tour of Iowa, he told audiences that his objective is to win a "clear" third in the state's Feb. 20 precinct caucuses and in New Hampshire's presidential primary on Feb. 28.

That, he argues, would put him in a better position to overtake the more conservative Glenn in later primaries and then go head-to-head with his fellow liberal Mondale.

Sergio Bendixen, Cranston's campaign manager, concedes "it will be difficult in Iowa ... and even more difficult in New Hampshire" for Cranston to emerge in a "clear fashion" as the winner among the second-tier candidates.

Aides to the other candidates concede that Cranston has an excellent state organization, headed by John Law, a former executive director of the Iowa Democratic Party.

"IN SPITE of the organization, Cranston is still an unknown quantity here," says Chuck Gifford, political director of the United Auto Workers, which supports Mondale. "That is awfully hard to overcome on a personal basis."

On a flight from Des Moines to Council Bluffs, he tells a reporter he is not disturbed by the relative lack of press attention. Of the Carroll County meeting, he says, "I was there for the Iowans."

AT A meeting room in the Raccoon Valley Bank in Adel, Cranston sits on a table, his legs spread, his feet not quite reaching the floor, and answers questions.

Yes, he says, he will make "major efforts to make significant cuts in aspects of military spending."

No, he says, he does not see "evidence of any significant progress in dealing with the underlying problems of the economy."

In a vacant storefront building in Council Bluffs, rented for a month for use as a phone bank, he spends two hours telephoning potential contributors around the country.

"Forgive me for being so bold as to immediately get to the subject of money, but I am going to need it," he tells one.

To another, he says, "We may be able to overtake John Glenn, if not here, then later. He is beginning to fade, I think."
