Contra aid vote 'must be reversed'

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, suffering a major foreign policy setback when the House rejected his plan to send military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, vowed "to come back again and again" until the congressional battle is won.

Reagan called Thursday's vote "a dark day for freedom," and said, "This vote must be reversed" after the House defeated, 222-210, his hotly contested request for $100 million in lethal and non-lethal aid to the insurgents trying to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua.

The Senate will begin debate on the package next week, and the House will vote April 15 on alternative proposals. Reagan is expected to eventually win some aid for the rebels.

Reagan, continuing an intense lobbying campaign for his package, which calls for $30 million in nonlethal aid and $70 million in military assistance for the Contra rebels, was scheduled to deliver a speech today at the White House to advocates of rebel aid.

In addition, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan and former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane were made available for appearances on television.

The president, in a written statement, told Congress: "You have my solemn determination to come back again and again, until this battle is won, until freedom is given the chance it deserves in Nicaragua."

He said that as of today, "I will begin to press in the Senate — and then back again in the House — for the real and effective asistance for Nicaragua's freedom fighters which was denied them today, and which those brave men and women deserve."

Arguing that Americans "have begun to awaken to the danger emerging on their doorstep," Reagan said, "And one day, in the not too distant future, that awareness will come home to the House of Representatives.

"We are gaining ground, we are winning converts," Reagan said. "The next battle will bring us the victory this just and good cause rightly deserves."

Over the past three weeks, Reagan delivered numerous speeches and talked with more than 130 House and Senate members in a search of votes, according to a White House count.

Critics of his plan said White House strategy backfired when Reagan and White House communications director Patrick Buchanan questioned the patriotism of their opponents.

House Majority Whip Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Reagan's defeat "shows Congress resented attempts by the administration to question the patriotism (of aid opponents). That was scandalous. That was unfortunate and classically ineffective."

The president had suggested that a vote against aid for the Contras was tantamount to support for the Nicaraguan government. Buchanan said that with the vote, "The Democratic Party will reveal whether it stands with Ronald Reagan and the resistance — or Daniel Ortega and the communists."

Defending the tough talk, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "Our rhetoric, our statements are the president's words."

"It's the way the president feels," Speakes said. "We feel it's an important issue. We feel that this simply presents the issue the way it is. I don't consider this inflammatory rhetoric."

OPEC recruiting production cuts

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC opened a new round of talks today with five independent oil producing nations to negotiate production cuts that could help the cartel reverse the collapse of world oil prices.

The discussions, following five days of mostly fruitless deliberations, could prove a turning point in OPEC's desperate drive to unite behind a common strategy aimed at pushing up prices.

OPEC refused to say how much production the non-OPEC countries would be asked to cut, but sources on Thursday put the figure at about 500,000 barrels a day, or nearly 15 percent of their combined production.

It remained unclear today whether any of the five non-cartel members — Mexico, Malaysia, Egypt, Oman and Angola — was ready to accept the OPEC proposal.

Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto told reporters that three OPEC oil ministers, whom he did not name, were continuing the talks with the five non-OPEC nations.

"We are on difficult terrain — lots of treacherous rapids, deep ravines, even quicksand," Subroto said. "We are confident that we can negotiate the terrain, but it's going to be a slow and maybe rather cautious trip."

Sources close to the talks, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, and Algeria were meeting with the non-OPEC countries.

Kuwait and other key nations in the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have said they stand little chance of ending the price slide unless they win cooperation from outside their ranks.

Malaysian officials said they were not authorized by their government to make any formal deals at this meeting.

"We just came to listen," said Datuk Rastam Hadi, who was leading the Malaysian delegation.

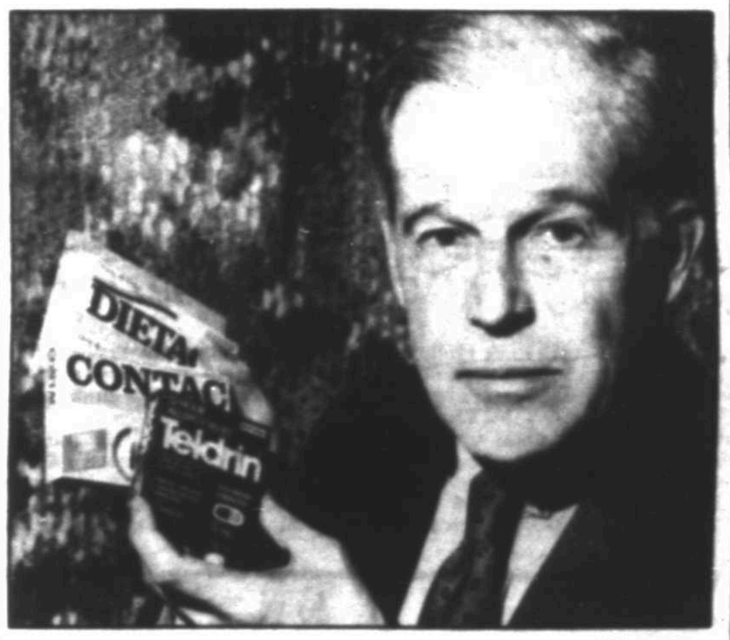

Mexico and Egypt already have seen their output fall as a result of turmoil in the oil market. Mexico's huge foreign debt of nearly $100 billion gives it little room for more oil sacrifices.

More importantly, it appeared increasingly unlikely that the OPEC members could agree on the size and distribution of cuts in their own production.

During the course of their closed-door talks in a Geneva hotel, which began Sunday, OPEC leaders concluded their best chance for reversing the recent price plunge was to cut their production. But they have been unable to agree how much to cut and how the reductions should be shared.

The very decision to reduce OPEC's production was a retreat from its declaration of last December that it would not cut output unless Britain and other non-OPEC producers agreed to do the same.

Britain and most other major producers — including Norway, the Soviet Union, the United States and China — refused even to negotiate with OPEC.

TRC members dismissed from pipeline suit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton on Thursday dismissed Jim Nugent and other Texas Railroad Commission members from the controversial All American Pipeline lawsuit.

All American, which is constructing a 30-inch pipeline for moving heavy, sulphur-laden offshore crude oil from California to Texas for refining, had sued the Railroad Commission and Travis and Hays Counties.

"They (All American) are suing on something that may happen sometime in the future," said Bob Ozer, assistant to the Texas Attorney General. "We haven't done anything wrong."

Ozer today said All American was concerned that the Railroad Commission "might make a decision (on pipeline safety) that could only be made by the federal government. "But the Railroad Commission hasn't even made a decision yet. They (All American) had no reason to bring this lawsuit."

Remaining in the suit are the Commissioners' Courts of Travis County and Hays County, which are concerned about the safety of pipeline and its passing over the Edwards Aquifer, which supplies water to the Austin area. Those counties and environmentalists apparently are trying to bar the pipeline from passing over the aquifer but otherwise are not objecting to the pipeline.

The pipeline, which is to be completed in early 1987, daily is to funnel 500,000 barrels of the heated oil which Exxon U.S.A. discovered in the Outer Continental Shelf off the California Pacific coast. The oil is under federal land.

All American President Roger Williams of Wichita, Kan., said the oil is so heavy that it must be heated in ocean-going U.S. flag ships and then heated in the pipeline before it will flow.

Environmentalists in Travis County and adjoining Hays County are fearful that the segmented pipeline, which is being inspected, insulated and double jointed in Corpus Christi, may leak and contaminate the Edwards Aquifer. From Corpus Christi, construction material is being shipped by rail to construction sites.

All American is buying steel pipe from several countries, including Japan, Belgium, France, Canada, Germany, and the United States. The United States is supplying some steel, Williams said.

In Texas, the pipeline has reached near McCamey in Upton County south of Midland.

Williams said there is no existing pipeline large enough to carry the 500,000-barrel-a-day volume.

"There are no east-to-west crude-oil pipelines which can handle this quantity of oil," he said. The pipeline carrying Alaskan North Slop oil only can carrying 50,000 barrels a day.

"The Texas refineries can handle great quantities of this (heavy) oil," which also is high in metals, Williams said. California refineries cannot, he said.

The oil would be shipped to Webster, south of Houston, for distribution to refineries in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Development of the pipeline is crucial to national security and to the nation's economy.

The steel pipe exceeds U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) and American Petroleum Institute (API) standards, he said.

"We do not have any hydrogen sulfide (H2S) in any of the oil that is out there now," he said. "The stuff is pretty bad."

Apparently there is an move afield to force All American to get a Texas Railroad Commission permit to build the line in Texas.

The pipeline is to flow oil from north of Santa Barbara, Calif., to Bakersfield, Calif., to south of Phoenix, Ariz., north of El Paso to Wink, McCamey and then to Webster in the Houston area.

Drug firm pulls capsule products

By PETE BROWN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — SmithKline Beckman Corp. asked that three of its products be removed from shelves nationwide after drugs that had been tampered with were found in two cities.

Officials said they knew of no motive for the latest incident involving popular, over-the-counter drugs.

Health officials in several states issued warnings Thursday and stores began pulling Contac, Dietac and Teldrin capsules from shelves after SmithKline and the Food and Drug Administration announced the contamination.

Cyanide and rat poison were mentioned in telephone threats against stores in Orlando, Fla.; Houston; St. Louis and Chicago, said Bruce Brown, an FDA spokesman in Washington. SmithKline President Henry Wendt said tests so far have revealed only flour and cornstarch in products from Texas and Florida.

Tests on samples from St. Louis and Chicago were under way, Brown said.

"We've found no poisonous substances, and we have no reports of injury and no consumer complaints," Wendt said in an interview today on the "CBS Morning News."

"But we do know that our products have been tampered with in at least two cities, Orlando and Houston, and we have very specific threats from an anonymous telephone caller that poisonous substances have been added, that there's a threat to the public.... There's no explanation of motive."

FDA Commissioner Frank Young, during the same interview, said there was not enough evidence to support a recall. "We'll continue to look at it day by day," he said.

Air traffic controller indicted for erasing tape

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An air controller at Midland Regional Airport was indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury in Midland for erasing a Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) tape recording which "reflected" the controller's "commission of an operational error."

Indicted was Thomas Odin Eliason, who is charged on two counts: erasing the recorded transmissions on Jan. 20 and with lying to an FAA review board inquiring into "the possible operational error."

Eliason, who is in his early 20s, was suspended from his air controller's duties after the January incident and was shifted to an administrative post.

However, U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith in a hearing in Magistrate's Court late Thursday ordered Eliason to "stay away" and "not interfere in anyway with the FAA."

Smith released Eliason under a personal-recognizance bond by which the defendant promises to make court appearances.

"You are released to your own good judgment," Smith said.

Eliason has been employed by the FAA for three years.

He has yet be be arraigned to enter a plea of "not guilty" or "guilty."

Eliason has retained Midland lawyer Barry Beck to represent him in the case. The case would be tried in U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court.

TEC processes number of initial claims

Most area unemployment oilfied related, source says

From Staff Reports

The Midland office of the Texas Employment Commission handled 630 initial claims last month, the highest number ever handled in the office's history in a one month period, according to Bob Burke, office manager.

Burke said almost all claims for the previous two months have been related to the drop in the price of oil.

Midland and Odessa were both hit hard. Midland's unemployment is at 7.8 percent which means 4,000 of the civilian labor force are unemployed. That represents an increase of 2.3 percent over January unemployment rates. In January, 2,800 were looking for work.

"The companies affected are generally energy-related and most of the claims we are seeing are a result of layoffs from those companies," Burke said. "Other industries have not yet been affected but we are starting to see the transportation industry affected a little bit and the trade industry has slowed, but that is mostly a seasonal type thing."

Statewide, unemployment is at 8.8 percent, higher than the national figure of 7.8 percent. Austin has the lowest unemployment rate in Texas at 5.4 percent, with McAllen on the other end at 22.7 percent.

In the state, Midland ranks 12th lowest while Odessa is 17th.

Odessa's unemployment jumped to 9.3 percent this month, with 5,600 people out of work there.

Although the total picture looks gloomy, Burke feels that the way out of it could come rather quickly. "The good thing is that we've had such dramatic downturn, we can also have dramatic upturn if oil prices stabilize," he added.

Shuttle panel views film showing flames

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential commission investigating the Challenger accident saw a riveting, split-second action film today that showed a bright flame growing ever larger from the right booster rocket until it triggered the explosion of the space shuttle's fuel-full tank.

At the same time, the commission was told that a large section of the suspect booster rocket, fished from the Atlantic Monday, showed "the external surface is darkened and blistered."

Air Force Col. Edward O'Connor, leader of NASA's salvage team, told the commission that the piece probably came from a failed joint on the bottom end of the booster rocket. But, he said, it was from the opposite side of the seam from the point where the failure is believed to have occurred.

Dan Germany, head of NASA'a accident photo analysis team, said the 14.5 minute reel was produced with film from 14 cameras at different locations.

But commission member Albert Wheelon brought out that cold weather on launch morning, Jan. 28, caused the failure of 11 other cameras, including two which Germany conceded "would have provided an excellent view of the area in question."

Germany's aide, Charles Stevenson, said "We think cold weather probably contributed to film breakage we have on the two critical cameras."

The temperature overnight on launch day was 24 degrees, and cold is suspected of having somehow caused the booster rocket seam to fail.

Germany said unexpected gray smoke was first seen near that booster joint at 0.678 seconds after the rocket was ignited.

"It starts in a light shade and grows darker," he said. The smoke continued at an estimated 3 puffs per second until about 2.2 seconds into the flight and finally disappeared at 2.7 seconds.

Germany said film was examined from six earlier shuttle launches in which safety O-ring seals in the same booster rocket joint had shown damage. "But we have not been able to find any visual evidence of smoke that's duplicative of this," he said.

At 58.788 seconds flame emerged from the booster rocket near where it is attached to the bottom of the external tank. In the ensuing six seconds, the flame flickered, became a well defined plume, and caused a rupture in the liquid hydrogen tank which exploded in a white fireball at 73.327 seconds.

Germany called this "the major structural breakup of the vehicle."

Wayne Littles, associate director of engineering at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, said testing and analysis in the last two weeks has ruled out the main external tank as the cause of the accident. Also ruled out, he said, is a leak in a test port at the suspect booster joint and a failure of the booster rocket's case.

The hearing is the commission's first since March 7, and also the first since the accident aftermath turned into a politically tinged dispute over telephone logs of space agency and White House officials.

There was no indication in advance that the panel would delve into the phone log issue at today's session, although a source close to the commission has said NASA voluntarily turned over to commission investigators the records it has supplied to some members of Congress, including telephone logs.

A source close to the commission has said it has not asked for any telephone logs, but two congressional sources said Rogers told senators in a private meeting last week he would like to see logs from both NASA and the White House to lay the matter to rest.

But the issue intensified on Thursday, as Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C. demanded White House records of any calls between NASA and nine presidential assistants to determine if there was any pressure to launch Challenger on its ill-fated mission.

"Rumors of White House involvement have persisted too long — the time has come to be more open and put this issue to rest once and for all," Hollings wrote to White House counsel Fred Fielding.

Fielding declined comment, saying he had not yet seen Hollings' request. But President Reagan, in an interview with the Baltimore Sun on March 13, denied there was any pressure.

Hollings, who has been a persistent critic of the presidential panel, asked for logs of all incoming and outgoing calls by the nine to or from NASA headquarters, the Kennedy Space Center in Florida and the Johnson Space Center in Houston from midnight Jan. 20 until noon Jan. 28, some 20 minutes after the tragedy.

His list included Donald Regan, the president's chief of staff; Pat Buchanan, director of communications; Larry Speakes, the principal deputy press secretary; Fielding; and Gerald May, the National Security Council staff member assigned to space.

The others are: Al Kingon, secretary to the Cabinet; Richard Davis, associate director for Cabinet affairs; Bentley Elliot, director of speechwriters; and Joshua Gilder, a speechwriter.

Since the accident, there has been persistent speculation that Reagan aides pushed for the launch, despite unusually cold weather at Cape Canaveral, because the president had a paragrpah devoted to the Challenger flight in his State of the Union speech scheduled the evening of Jan. 28.

Section of debris 'probably' from right booster

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The leader of the shuttle recovery team said today a quarter-ton piece of Challenger wreckage recovered this week is "most probably" part of the right solid rocket booster, but it does not contain the section suspected of causing the explosion.

Air Force Col. Edward O'Connor told a presidential investigating commission hearing in Washington that "we have 20 inferential characteristics saying it is the right SRB, but nothing saying it is the left."

However, he said the piece does not have an identification number that positively identifies which booster it came from.

If it is the right, he said, it came from an area of the aft section joint that is 180 degrees away from the point where a puff of smoke and then a tongue of flame were spotted in photographs on launch day.

He said recovery ships have located several other parts of the right SRB on the ocean floor off Cape Canaveral, but none of them appear to be the section suspected of being the source of the Jan. 28 explosion that killed seven astronauts.

O'Connor estimated it would take 2-3 weeks to retrieve "all the significant pieces you're interested in."

The broken and charred 4-by-5-foot part O'Connor discussed was taken into port along with two other larger booster parts Wednesday night by the salvage ship Stena Workhorse.

It was taken to a hangar for examination, and sources close to the investigation said Thursday that engineers were convinced it was from the aft section of the right booster.

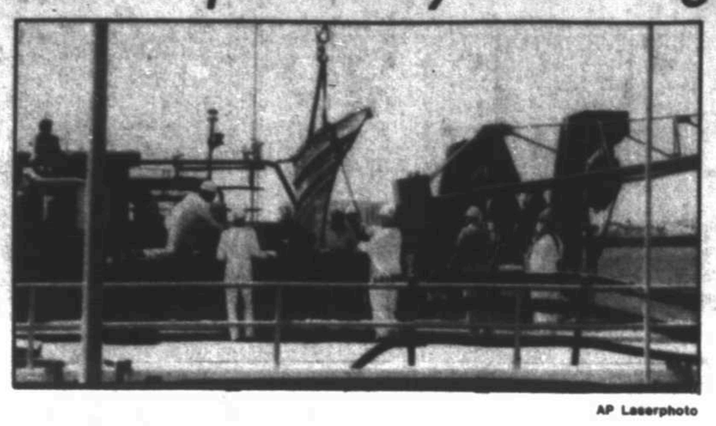

National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers believe the disaster was touched off by a rupture in the joint between the bottom two segments of the booster.

Photographs show a plume of black smoke spewing from the joint on liftoff and a plume of flame shooting from the same area 58 seconds later.

Challenger's huge external fuel tank blew apart 73 seconds after launch, destroying the shuttle.

The USS Preserver on Thursday continued its search for more cabin debris and crew remains. The shattered cabin was located two weeks ago 18 miles northeast of here.

Out of deference to the families, NASA officials have refused to acknowledge that astronaut remains have been recovered.

Jurors in nursing home case request records

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jurors deliberating murder charges against a nursing home chain and four of its employees have asked to review several medical and state investigative records.

Deliberations were to enter their third day today in the state's case against Autumn Hills Convalescent Centers Inc. and the four employees.

They are charged with murder in the Nov. 20, 1978, death of Elnora Breed, 87.

Mrs. Breed died 47 days after she entered an Autumn Hills nursing home in Texas City.

The state has charged Mrs. Breed died of starvation and infection, both the result of nursing neglect.

The defense claims Mrs. Breed died of a recurring cancer.

The individual defendants include Autumn Hills president Robert Gay, 59; vice president Ron Pohlmeyer, 43; nursing consultant Mattie Locke 44; and former Texas City administrator Virginia Wilson, 64.

Court officials said the panel Thursday asked for Mrs. Breed's medical records, state health department inspection reports on the nursing home, in-house financial reports on the corporation, Mrs. Locke's personal notes on her visits to the facility and a resignation letter from former nursing director Cassandra Canlas to Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. Canlas is a defendant in the case but she was granted a separate trial.

"If they don't trust their gut feelings and try to get into all the minute details about who did what to whom and when, then they are going to get hung," said defense attorney Roy Minton.

"Logically, I would think that they have decided that Breed did not die of natural causes," he said.

Judge Don Morgan's instructions to the jury said if the panel finds Mrs. Breed died of natural causes, the defendants must be acquitted.

The judge also told the jury they could find the defendants guilty of involuntary manslaughter.

Assistant attorney general Jim Vollers said of the eight-man, four-woman jury, "I think they've all made up their minds months ago."

Vollers refused to predict the outcome.

"That's the world's biggest guessing game — a jury," he said.

Vollers said he was encouraged by the fact the panel picked Pamela Duran, 29, a former clerk in a nursing home, as the foreman.

"When I heard she had worked in a Catholic nursing home, I knew she had never seen anything like what she saw here," he said.

The trial was moved more than 250 miles west of Texas City because of extensive publicity.

CAPSULES

The incident comes within two months of the death of a woman in Yonkers, N.Y., after she consumed Tylenol capsules tainted with cyanide. No arrests have been made in the case, the second involving Johnson & Johnson since 1982.

When asked if he thought capsules lend themselves more easily to tampering than other forms of medication, Wendt said, "I don't think this is a capsule problem any more than I think it's a Tylenol problem or a Diatac or a Contac problem. I put this in the same category as another act of terrorism against the public at large."

Young said his agency would be making a report to the Senate soon on whether capsules should be withdrawn from the market.

The Dietac, Contac and Teldrin packages had price labels from stores other than the ones in which they were found, and the tampering was so crude as to be "quite obvious to the consumer," Wendt said earlier.

The doctored packages were from the same product lot, he said, suggesting they may have been bought in a third city then placed on the shelves in the two other cities in a sort of "reverse shoplifting."

"The evidence is very clear it was done at the retail level," he said. "The extortionist has cut with a razor, taken the capsules apart, put in foreign material, and then reinserted the capsule back into the film."

The capsules were all manufactured in Philadelphia, where the company is based, officials said.

The FBI was investigating. No arrests have been made.

SmithKline said it asked all retailers to halt sales of the products and advised consumers who have purchased the drugs since March 15 not to use them.

"We have no indication that they contain poisonous substances," Wendt said. "But we have no indication they don't."

Contac is one of the best-selling cold remedies in the United States; Dietac is a diet aid; and Teldrin is an allergy medicine.

"We can always make a recall," Wendt said. "I think it's more important to kind of embargo the situation. We may recall later."

Brown said the threats came in anonymous telephone calls to news media beginning Wednesday.

In New York, ABC-TV said one call was received Wednesday by a secretary to newscaster Peter Jennings. The caller, a man, said he wanted the products off shelves across the country and that he had tainted 25 capsules. He named Orlando and Houston as two cities affected.

He said if the product were not taken off the market, someone would surely be killed, according to ABC spokesman Elise Adde.

A clerk at The Orlando Sentinel received a call Thursday from a man who said cyanide or rat poison had been put in capsules in eight stores in the Orlando area and in Houston stores.

Wendt said SmithKline in Philadelphia had received three or four calls Wednesday and Thursday, apparently from one man, who made no demands.

Salonga robbed of briefcase with Marcos documents

NEW YORK (AP) — A Philippine official in the United States as part of the probe of former President Ferdinand Marcos's holdings was robbed Thursday night of a briefcase containing copies of sensitive papers, police said.

Jovito Salonga, the head of the Commission for Good Government, appointed to investigate alleged corruption under the 20-year Marcos rule, had given a deposition earlier Thursday in federal court.

He and his wife, Lydia, and their daughter, Victoria, were in a Korean restaurant in midtown Manhattan when an Oriental man pointed out five $1 bills under a table to Miss Salonga, said police spokesman Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell.

As she bent to retrieve the bills and her parents turned to watch her, their bags were taken by someone they didn't see, O'Donnell said.

Originally, police reported that a $5 bill was pointed out to Salonga as he entered the restaurant and that an Oriental man snatched the briefcase and pocketbook as Salonga stopped to pick up the bill.

The briefcase contained copies of documents pertaining to the Marcos case, and the family also lost $5,000 in traveler's checks, $2,300 in cash, plane tickets and their passports, O'Donnell said.

VOTE

"I consider it an opportunity to present the message just as it is. We were telling the truth. We think the American people, once they know the truth, will then make their views known."

Sixteen Republicans joined 206 Democrats in opposing Reagan's proposal. Forty-six Democrats, many from southern states, and 164 Republicans voted for the aid.

Before the vote, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., decried the administration's lobbying tactics, likening them to "that dark era of fear" — the McCarthy era of the 1950s. "Americans (have) not only the right but also the duty to speak their minds on questions of national policy without fear, without the dread that their motives and purposes will be questioned," he said.

Senate Republican leaders met with Reagan after the House vote, and agreed with the administration that its tactics were not responsible for the loss.

"I don't think it made any difference," sad Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said, "The White House has argued persuasively and done a good job...(the tough talk) really hasn't hurt our situation."

Lugar said Reagan suggested that a compromise that Reagan offered the House might be incorporated into the legislation considered by the Senate. Under the compromise, delivery of most of the aid would be delayed for 90 days to give another chance for diplomatic efforts to work.

Toes replace young doctor's crushed fingers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Toes have replaced fingers on the crushed right hand of a doctor who was trapped for four days in the rubble of a hospital during last September's massive earthquake in Mexico City.

Dr. Harry J. Buncke, head of the surgical teams that worked for 14 hours Thursday on Dr. Francisco Bucio, 28, said he believes Bucio will be able to hold a scalpel again.

Bucio, a plastic surgeon, lost four fingers when his hand was crushed by rubble. Twenty other doctors were killed when the hospital collapsed in the earthquake.

The members of the operating teams, including Buncke's son, Dr. Greg Buncke, transplanted the second toe from each foot to the hand, placing them where the ring finger and "pinkie" would be.

"He looks good and he's moving around," Buncke said shortly after the operation at the Ralph K. Davies Medical Center.

"There may be problems of keeping circulation going but he's fine, even after receiving several units of blood," said Buncke, director of the center's Institute for Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery.

Three teams of three doctors each took part in the operation. One team concentrated on the hand while the others operated on the feet. Each team was backed by nurses and other medical personnel.

Buncke said more than 100 toe transplants have taken place at the center.

He said some toes, particularly the big toe, "have been higly overrated when we talk about balance and things like that.

"We had a doctor who lost his thumb and we replaced it with the toe and he is now a runner. One patient became the captain of his high school basketball and football teams after a large toe transplant."

Buncke, the Davies microsurgical staff and anesthesiologists donated their services. The hospital costs were taken care of by the center and the Bing Crosby Youth Foundation.

Correction

In the Tuesday, March 4, edition of the Reporter-Telegram, a quote was attributed to the wrong person. The quote incorrectly attributed to Dr. T.J. Grosev, a Midland ophthalmologist, was in reference to plans to open a Sheets-Tolia Eye Clinic in Midland.

The quote read, "It's going to affect the local ophthalmologist. It may take six months to a year before they are firmly established, but they are probably getting referrals already. This will affect everyone in town."

The quote should have been attributed to Dr. Patrick Leung, who was filling in for Grosev while Grosev was out of town.

The indictment carries the board's question's and Eliason's answers.

Question: "Did you amend the clearance to the higher altitude?"

Answer: "Yes."

Question: "What altitude did you reissue?"

Answer: "110."

Question: "What type of separation were you providing between N7FL (aircraft) and the other aircraft?"

Answer: "Vertical and then coarse divergence."

Question: "What altitude was N7FL at when you lost secondary?"

Answer: "At 90, I lost Mode C and the transponder — the whole data block. I reissued 110. He was about five miles north of the VOR."

Question: "Did you reissue FL 230?"

Answer: "Yes, when N7FL crossed the projected path of the overflight."

Fragrance named for Cisneros

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A cosmetics expert has come up with a new manly fragrance called "Henry C" that she hopes will remind its wearers of San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

It took a year of work with a chemist in New York for Grace Hourlet to capture what she described as the essence of Cisneros' personality and charm.

"I had always wanted a men's fragrance from the beginning," she said Wednesday.

"I think my dream has finally come true," she said.

Refugee's son charged in murder of parents

TEXARKANA (AP) — Nearly a decade-long effort by Vietnamese refugee Thuc Van Vu ended happily last fall when his oldest son arrived at Texarkana Municipal Airport.

The reunion ended tragically Thursday.

Texas-side police arrested Nguyen Duc Vu, 23, and charged him with two counts of murder in the shooting deaths of his father and stepmother.

The shooting occurred about 12:20 p.m. on the front porch of the Vu's house, police said, and left friends and relatives stunned.

"At work, somebody call me, say somebody got shot," said Hien Doan, Mrs. Vu's brother who also lived with the slain couple. "I don't know (what happened)."

Vu, 47, and his wife, Bong Doan, 41, are survived by five school-age children: Khanh, 18; Thuy, 16; Xuan, 15; Thang, 12; and Kim, 9.

"They were just a nice, quiet family. They stayed more or less to themselves," said L.B. George, principal of the elementary school across the street from the Vus' house. "As far as being rowdy type of people, they were not that."

Vu was taken into custody without incident at the scene. He was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond in the Bi-State Justice Building jail.

"We believe at this time it is the result of a domestic argument," Detective Sgt. Ronny Sharp said.

After obtaining a search warrant, police discovered in the kitchen a 30-caliber rifle they believe was used in the slayings.

John Hill, who is employed at a nearby automotive shop, said he saw part of the shooting.

"I was going to my pickup, fixing to go to lunch, and I heard one shot," Hill said. "He shot that one on the sidewalk a second time. I watched that one fall. I didn't know about the other one. He shot three more times in the air."

Buddy Hawkins, a Bowie County justice of the peace who pronounced the pair dead at the scene, said Mrs. Vu apparently was shot in the neck and her husband in the chin, with both bullets entering from the front. Their bodies were sent to Dallas for autopsies.

Hawkins said it appeared someone "walked to the door and started shooting."

Routine stop ends in death of Dallas officer, suspect

DALLAS (AP) — A routine stop for a traffic violation ended in the shooting deaths of a Dallas police officer and one of the car's occupants, police said.

Dallas Police Cpl. Gary Blair, 30, died at Methodist Medical Center after being wounded in the leg and neck in a struggle about 5:30 p.m. Thursday in the Oak Cliff area, Assistant Police Chief L.R. Sweet said.

Police identified the other dead man as Andrew Pigg, 28, of Dallas. He died at Methodist Medical Center of gunshot wounds in the chest, Sweet said.

Blair, a five-year veteran of the force, was the father of a 7-year-old daughter, Sweet said.

Police questioned the car's other occupant Thursday night and expected to book him early Friday on capital murder charges, said police Capt. John Holt. He said police believe Pigg fired the shot that killed Blair, but said the other man would be charged with being a principal in the case.

Sweet said the incident began when Blair radioed the dispatcher that he was stopping a car with two occupants for a traffic violation. The cars pulled into the parking lot of the Parc~Regency Apartments.

A few minutes later, Sweet said, Blair radioed the dispatcher on his walkie-talkie and said, "I need assistance immediately."

When officers arrived, Sweet said, they found Blair and Pigg, shot, on the parking lot pavement. The car was still there, but its second occupant was gone.

Holt said Blair carried two pistols, and preliminary investigations indicated that Blair was shot with his primary service revolver and Pigg was shot with the other weapon. Both guns were found at the scene, Sweet said.

Blair was a field training officer, but he was alone at the time. Police Chief Billy Prince said Blair was wearing a bullet-proof vest, but the bullets hit him above and below the protected area.

Holt said the second suspect called police and told them he planned to surrender. He drove to the police station at 10 p.m., and police immediately began questioning him, Holt said.

Prince described Blair as "a very fine, outstanding officer."

Austin mechanic creates his own version of Halley's comet

AUSTIN (AP) — An automobile mechanic tired of searching for a tiny, dim smudge of light in the predawn sky has come up with an artificial substitute for Halley's comet.

W.C. Juni says his comet replica appears bigger and brighter, has a long yellow plume of a tail and is a lot easier to find.

"You can see it all the way from West Oltorf Street," he said.

The 30-year-old Juni constructed a 15-foot string of white and yellow Christmas lights. It and other parts are suspended from a cottonwood tree in the front yard of his house in South Austin.

Juni told the Austin American-Statesman he would rather not mention his street address "to keep from flooding the neighborhood with cars."

Halley's comet has traveled billions of miles to get to Earth. Juni said parts of his comet replica have been all over Houston and still draws appreciative honks from passing cars.

Brokers linked to Marcos-backed real estate deals

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorneys accused several Texas real estate agents Thursday as conspirators in a scheme to bilk the Republic of the Philippines of at least $50 million in fraudulent land deals.

In a federal lawsuit filed in Houston Thursday, attorneys representing the Philippines on behalf of the New York-based Center for Constitutional Rights claimed Texas brokers of being "principal architects" in a series of illegal real estate transactions.

At a Capitol press conference announcing the suit, attorneys estimated that the network illegally obtained at least 6,000 acres of Texas land in Bexar, Tarrant, Nueces, Denton and Harris counties.

The suit alleges the Texas agents knowingly participated in a racketeering network led by deposed Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos that stretched from the Philippines to the Netherlands Antilles, and, finally, to Texas.

"The money, funds, credits and other things of value fraudulently appropriated and/or transported by the defendants exceeded $500 million," the suit states. Real estate properties in Texas, allegedly acquired by the defendants using funds obtained by theft and fraud, exceeded $50 million.

The suit seeks a return of all real estate holdings, a minimum of $500 million in damages — which the courts can triple — and $1 billion in punitive damages.

Austin attorneys Michael Tigar, Pieter Schenkkan and Jay Westbrook initiated the civil suit for the Philippines. Tigar and Westbrook are law professors at the University of Texas, and Schenkkan heads the Austin office of the Vinson & Elkins law firm.

All three men are offering their legal services for free.

Asked why Marcos and his cohorts would choose Texas for their land deals, Schenkkan said, "I assume they thought it was either a good investment or a good place to try to hide the money."

The lawsuit alleges that Marcos "systematically skimmed and converted to his own use and to the use of others money, funds, property and other things of value" owned by the Philippines. Marcos fraudulently obtained most of the booty, the suit continues, in the United States.

"Marcos and his accomplices and co-conspirators have sought to use property holdings in the United States, and specifically the State of Texas, to conceal and facilitate their frauds, swindles and thefts," the suit alleges.

Asked if Marcos might be able to evade the charges by leaving Hawaii for Panama or some other location outside the United States, Schenkkan said, "We don't believe that there is any way he can escape being named as a defendant in this lawsuit. We are confident that he will not be able to escape having to answer at least to the extent of his property in Texas."

Pressed by reporters as to what proof attorneys have of the illegal transactions and a link between Marcos and Texas real estate brokers, Tigar would only say, "That's what courts are for."

"Any of these defendants that wishes to deny this connection-...ought to come on down and get themselves under oath, and then we'll show how the cow ate the cabbage," he added.

Schenkkan said he does not know when the lawsuit will go to court, but said it could be as long as six months.

"Robinson Crusoe woke up one morning and saw footprints on the beach," Tigar concluded. "He didn't have to be real smart to know that there was somebody else on his island.

"If you look at those land records," he told reporters, "I think you're going to find footprints. Now, we've got other evidence in addition to footprints on the beach."

Reagan seeks converts for upcoming Senate Contra aid vote

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of President Reagan's $100 million aid package for Nicaragua's rebels, reeling from a decisive defeat in the House, are hoping to rebuild their lost momentum with a victory next week in the Republican-controlled Senate.

Reagan said the 222-210 defeat Thursday in the Democratic-controlled House was "a dark day for freedom" and vowed to redouble his efforts to bring pressure to bear on Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., echoing many Democrats in both chambers, said the House vote represents a "welcome vindication" of a policy of insisting that the White House "explore every possibility for peace before taking a single additional step down the road to endless war."

Republicans put the best face possible on one of the worst foreign policy setbacks Reagan has suffered in Congress, pointing out that he garnered more votes in favor of his Nicaragua policies than ever before.

"We're gaining converts, and the next battle will bring us victory," Reagan said in a statement.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., predicted a Reagan victory in the Senate, where a vote is expected Tuesday.

And because of promises made by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., Reagan's supporters have a chance to recoup their loss in the House.

NEW HOUSE VOTES, either on the original Reagan aid plan or on alternatives to it, could come as early as April 15.

Although some Democrats said Reagan's formidable powers of persuasion clearly had suffered a dent, most said it was far too early to count him out.

"The speaker gave an opportunity for alternatives," said Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md. "One of those could prevail. I think it's still possible this issue has not died."

"I can't predict the future; one vote at a time," said House Democratic Whip Thomas Foley of Washington.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Reagan might improve his prospects in the Senate if he agreed to insert into the legislation a compromise offer that so far he has only made verbally.

In a bid for votes, Reagan on Wednesday offered to restrict use of the money to "defensive" anti-aircraft weapons, training and logistics for the first 90 days while pressing for a negotiated settlement.

Reagan, however, could drop those restrictions and begin unfettered arms shipments to the Contra rebels if diplomatic progress is not made.

MANY OPPONENTS OF the aid plan — which called for $30 million in non-lethal aid and $70 million in military assistance — contend the Reagan compromise is shot through with so many loopholes and escape hatches as to be unacceptable. House Democratic leaders said they saw no sign that the compromise had changed any positions.

Before the vote, O'Neill compared the administration's lobbying tactics with "that dark era of fear" — the McCarthy era of the 1950s.

"Americans (have) not only the right but also the duty to speak their minds on questions of national policy without fear, without the dread that their motives and purposes will be questioned," he said.

Foley said Reagan's defeat "shows Congress resented attempts by the administration to question the patriotism (of aid opponents). That was scandalous. That was unfortunate and classically ineffective."

But Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., said he "could not find a single vote that we lost" because of the sharp attacks on opponents from White House communications director Patrick Buchanan and other Reagan supporters.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., House Intelligence Committee chairman, said Reagan's plan would have brought the CIA and the Pentagon back into the business of helping the Contras, involved American soldiers as trainers of the rebels and increased chances of "direct U.S. involvement in the war."

O'Neill said that if the United States sends American-trained soldiers into combat with the Sandinistas it will have assumed responsibility for their safety.

"When it comes to the crunch, we will find ourselves with only two options: either to go in ourselves or see our trained contingents face a blood bath," O'Neill said.

U.S., Panama negotiate on Marcos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is still negotiating with Panama in an attempt to get that country to take deposed Philippines President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his wife, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said today.

"We're still talking to Panama about taking the Marcoses there," Regan said on ABC's "Good Morning America." He said "there's still a possibility" Panama will accept the Marcoses.

Asked if the United States is talking to any other country about taking the Marcoses, Regan replied, "Nobody at this particular moment. That's the one that the Marcoses asked us to contact."

Earlier, sources said Marcos, believed eager to leave Hawaii and searching for a permanent home, had been told he would not be welcome in Panama.

A Panamanian official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Thursday that the Central American nation has told the United States that Marcos was not wanted there. The official said the decision came after a meeting between President Eric Arturo Delvalle and other ranking Panamanian officials, and would be formally announced today.

Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Sandra Montenegro said Thursday that Foreign Minister Jorge Abadia told her "apparently there had been an application of that type on Wednesday," and that Panamanian officials were studying the request.

Regan said the United States promised Marcos "safe haven and we're going to abide by that." Asked how long Marcos could stay in this country, Regan replied, "As long as he wants....You've got to remember, why did the president offer him safe haven and medical treatment in the United States? It was to avoid bloodshed in the Philippines....As a result of that, there was no bloodshed. Accordingly we must now live up to our promise."

Both the White House and the State Department had said Marcos expressed interest in going from Hawaii to a third country, but declined to identify any of the several nations they said were under consideration.

Marcos treated treasury like 'private property'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ferdinand Marcos' personal papers, described as "an encyclopedia of corruption," disclose $30 million in bank accounts in Switzerland, France and the Caribbean and his hand-written promise to his wife, Imelda, that she would inherit the Philippines government upon his death.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who Thursday released copies of 2,000 pages of documents taken from Marcos in Hawaii, said they did not contain any overall measure of Marcos' extensive wealth, which has been estimated as high as $10 billion. But he said they catalogue an "encyclopedia of corruption" during Marcos' 20-year reign.

"They provide further evidence that the Marcoses did not distinguish between the public treasury and their private property," Solarz told a news conference. He contended the Marcos government "existed for the sole purpose of plundering the wealth of the country" and brought it to the verge of bankruptcy.

There was mention of complicated real estate transactions, possible kickbacks in business dealings and bank accounts around the world containing millions of dollars. One document, hand-written on presidential stationery but unsigned, referred to $30 million in interest proceeds alone in 1974 and 1975 in several foreign banks.

It said there was $15 million from the Banque de Paris; $10 million from the Swiss Credit Bank; $2 million from Swiss Banking; and $2 million from Grand Cayman, an island in the Caribbean.

There also was mention of certificates of deposit and bankers' acceptances worth about $4 million, two-thirds of which was purchased during the period from Jan. 23 of this year to less than a week before the Marcoses fled the Philippines on Feb. 25.

While it had been widely rumored for years that Marcos planned to turn the government over to his wife in the event of his death, one of the documents, which was hand-written on presidential stationery — apparently by Marcos himself — provided the first confirmation.

Dated Jan. 17, 1975, and bearing Marcos' signature, the document said "the commission succeeding me in the exercise of powers and duties as President in the event of my death or permanent capacity shall be composed of the following: Chairman, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos..."

Titled "Presidential Decree No. 731," it also listed by title six Cabinet officers who would serve as members of the commission under his wife, but only Mrs. Marcos was listed by name. Marcos had been in ill health for some years, and Imelda Marcos already held several high government positions.

Marcos may still consider his chosen line of succession valid, as members of a group of observers to the Philippines election said here this week they believe Marcos considered himself "president-in-exile."

One of the documents refers to receipt of $11.2 million in commissions from the Westinghouse Corp. from 1976-1983, of which $8.5 million was deposited in Switzerland. Another document said $9.9 million from Westinghouse commissions was used to help finance foreign investments in the United States, Switzerland, West Germany and Hong Kong.

There was nothing to indicate that any particular transaction violated either Philippines law or the laws of other countries, although the new Philippines government of Corazon Aquino has alleged gross theft of Philippines wealth by the Marcoses and hopes the documents released Thursday will aid in recovering stolen wealth.

Other documents show "the abuse of Philippine intelligence funds to bankroll some of the world travel of Imelda Marcos," Solarz said. Travel to Kenya, Iraq, New York and other places, which cost more than $1.5 million (described in the document as official trips), were for Marcos as well.

But Solarz said they provided evidence Mrs. Marcos was "using the Philippine intelligence budget as the equivalent of an American Express Gold Card."

One previously publicized document, carrying the notation "strictly confidential," cites political contributions in the United States. A single-page listing dated Feb. 15, 1982, lists contributions of $50,000 to President Reagan; $50,000 to former President Jimmy Carter; $10,000 to Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; and $1,500 to the Carter-Mondale committee, among others.

Solarz said he didn't believe the document was valid.

Firefighter dies in Boston blaze

BOSTON (AP) — A firefighter died early today after being crushed by a tree that fell when the front of a three-story home collapsed in a general-alarm fire that involved seven tenements and injured six people, officials said.

"It was like one big mushroom cloud of flames," said School Committeeman Joseph Casper, who operates a funeral home in the South Boston neighborhood. "If they (firefighters) hadn't got here as quickly as they did, the whole block would have gone."

The firefighter, whose name was withheld, died of multiple injuries at Boston City Hospital, said Chris Catino, a hospital administrator.

The tree also hit another firefighter, breaking a number of his ribs. The fireman, whose name was withheld, was in stable condition at the New England Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Leslie Fuhrer.

Casper said he heard noise on the street and looked out to see flames shooting about 20 feet into the air. "The front wall went down like one of those stage fronts."

He said the tree that fell onto the firefighters was a stump about 20 feet tall from which the top had been cut some time ago.

New York council passes gay rights bill after 15-year defeat

AP Laserphoto

After a gay rights bill passed in New York, 15 years after a similar bill was first introduced, people celebrate Thursday in Greenwich Village's Sheridan Square.

NEW YORK (AP) — The city where the nation's homosexual rights movement started 17 years ago in riots sparked by a police raid on a gay bar has passed anti-discrimination legislation after the failure of seven previous attempts.

The City Council voted 21-14 Thursday to approve the measure banning discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in housing, employment or public accomodations. A violation can result in a $500 fine and a year in jail.

"It's OK to be gay and lesbian in New York!" Joyce Hunter, a leader of the Coalition of Gay and Lesbian Rights, told about 1,000 cheering people who turned out in Greenwich Village later Thursday to celebrate in the neighborhood where the 1969 raid on the Stonewall Inn sparked gay militancy.

New York's first gay rights bill was introduced 15 years ago, the nation's first such measure. It failed in committee five times and was defeated on the council floor a sixth, in 1974. Since 1971, gay rights ordinances have been enacted by Wisconsin, a dozen counties and more than 50 communities.

Mayor Edward I. Koch, who must under the City Charter hold a public hearing before signing the bill into law, said he expected to sign it next week.

"Ultimately, democracy prevailed," Koch said. "That is what is so wonderful about democracy."

The measure was opposed by Roman Catholic Cardinal John J. O'Connor and leaders of the city's large Orthodox Jewish community.

Councilman Noah Dear, whose district is largely Jewish and who led council opposition, vowed to challenge the bill in court and, if necessary, try to take the issue to voters in a referendum.

"Overwhelmingly, the people of the City of New York will defeat the gay rights bill," Dear said.

The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York said in a statement it would try to determine what could be done to overturn the bill.

"Yeah, we won, we won, we won," Buddy Noro, one of 40 supporters, shouted outside City Council chambers. "Thank God, we are free in New York City."

A smaller number of opponents sat quietly.

Hundreds of people gathered in Sheridan Square in the Village to celebrate the vote. People hugged, jumped up and down and applauded exuberant speakers.

"We liberated City Hall today," said Alan Roskoff, a gay Democratic activist. "We liberated New York. This is just the beginning."

Raid fueled push for gay rights

NEW YORK (AP) — The raid on the Stonewall Inn in Greenwich Village in 1969 and the riots that followed are considered by many to have been the birth of the modern gay rights movement.

New York City police raided the homosexual bar on Christopher Street in the heart of the Greenwich Village gay community on June 27, 1969.

Fed up with what they regarded as harassment, the patrons battled police for several hours. The riot, combined with social liberalism that also fueled the black civil rights and feminist movements in the 1960s and '70s, emboldened many homosexuals to "come out of the closet," express their "gay pride" and demand an end to discrimination based on sexual preference or orientation.

Until that time, the majority of Americans viewed homosexuals as mentally diseased. Most homosexuals hid their sexual identities to avoid discrimination, violence, arrest or commitment to mental institutions.

The Stonewall riot was the first act of open rebellion by members of the gay community, and inspired a wave of activism. Gay leaders quickly learned to use coalition politics, trading support with blacks, feminists and other liberal activists and politicians.

INS area chief's remark draws charge of racism

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The head of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's western region has come under fire from Sen. Dennis DeConcini, who accused him of using a derogatory term for Mexican immigrants.

"Maybe he was kidding, but I didn't interpret it that way," DeConcini added Thursday, saying he had overheard INS official Harold Ezell tell a border patrol agent he wanted to "go out and chase some 'wets.'"

DeConcini, D-Ariz., said he had reported the remark to INS Commissioner Alan Nelson and was waiting for Nelson's response before deciding whether to call for Ezell's ouster.

In an interview with The Arizona Republic, Ezell denied he ever used the term "wets" — short for "wetbacks," a derogatory term, and said another controversial statement attributed to him had been taken out of context.

"I don't use the word 'wets,' but I probably said I'm sorry I can't go with you on the line," Ezell said.

Other officials called for his immediate ouster, citing statements in which he called for scrutiny of any welfare applicant who doesn't understand English and compared illegal aliens to wildlife that should be cleaned and cooked.

Ezell has been "pandering to the worst possible racism," state Sen. Alfredo Gutierrez said Thursday in a floor speech, calling on Arizona's federal officeholders and candidates to demand that President Reagan "either restrain Mr. Ezell or send him back to the private sector."

DeConcini said he would not call for Ezell's ouster yet, but believed Nelson should "take action." He said he and aides were on a field trip when they "overheard Mr. Ezell say to one of the Border Patrol officers 'Sorry I don't have time so we can go out and chase some wets.'"

Ezell had angered Hispanics when he was quoted in the Jan. 27 issue of Time magazine as saying that illegal aliens should be prosecuted instead of deported because "if you catch 'em, you ought to clean 'em and fry 'em yourself."

The anger grew when Ezell told a news conference Wednesday that "if there's someone who doesn't know how to communicate in the national language of this country, then they need to be checked out."

"I'm here to serve my country and Ronald Reagan," Ezell told the Republic. "I'll do that to the best of my ability and with as much sensitivity to people as possible."

He also said the Time quote was taken out of context.

Prosecutor disputes sanctuary trial testimony

PHOENIX (AP) — Sanctuary trial prosecutor Donald M. Reno Jr. wants jurors to disregard testimony they heard about conditions in El Salvador and Guatemala and about the 1980 Refuge Act in their deliberations.

But defense lawyers say that doing so would cause a mistrial and dismissal of charges because it would harm the 11 defendants, all charged with conspiring to smuggle Salvadorans and Guatemalans into into the United States.

The debate came Thursday as U.S. District Judge Earl H. Carroll and lawyers considered instructions which Reno had proposed for jurors to be given on the laws applying to charges facing the defendants. Earlier in the day, they had finished going through the last of 51 proposed instructions that the judge had drafted.

Carroll planned to rewrite at least some of the instructions after discussions today of additional instructions offered by the defense.

Reno asked Carroll to include one that would tell the jury to "completely disregard" testimony that he said was conditionally admitted.

The testimony he was referring to was given by more than a dozen Central American government witnesses about conditions in El Salvador and Guatemala, their concern about personal safety if they stayed in El Salvador and Guatemala or were returned to those countries, and their or any defendants' understanding of the Refugee Act.

The prosecutor said Carroll had allowed such testimony only for limited purposes, during defense cross-examination of his witnesses, toward showing an advice-of-counsel defense.

But he said the prosecution had been left hanging because the defense chose not to put on a case.

He said the absence of testimony from lawyers to the effect that they had given defendants advice that they could operate under the Refugee Act meant the jury had heard all sorts of testimony that "was irrelevant" to the case and that should be stricken.

"I feel that I have been hoodwinked on this by the defendants because they now have the best of all possible worlds," the prosecutor said.

Defense attorneys, however, argued that a great deal of testimony had been admitted, some for other reasons.

Defense lawyer James Brosnahan said, "This instruction is really a blunderbuss."

New government in France won't change U.S. policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials say they expect no changes in French policy toward the United States under a newly formed government of conservatives sharing power with Socialist President Francois Mitterrand.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, beginning a one-day trip to France that had been planned long before the French government reorganization, is scheduled to meet today with Mitterrand.

If he sees newly appointed conservative prime minister Jacques Chirac, it will be the new French government's first meeting with a leader of a major foreign country.

Shultz's itinerary had not been finalized as he prepared to leave Washington on Thursday.

Chirac was appointed Thursday in a government shuffle that for the first time under France's 28-year-old constitution will include a president and prime minister from opposing parties. The unprecedented situation was the result of a narrow conservative victory in parliamentary elections Sunday.

A State Department official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said that although the president is socialist and his prime minister conservative, "they are all centrists."

The officials also said it appeared that Mitterrand would "have primacy in foreign policy and remain a unifying force."

While France operates a fiercely independent foreign policy — it has its own nuclear force and has dropped out of the military wing of the NATO alliance — Mitterrand has supported the U.S. negotiating stance with the Soviet Union, shares the Reagan administration mistrust of Kremlin leaders and advocates high levels of defense spending.

France was the first stop on a 10-day European tour that will include stops in Greece and Turkey, where Shultz will try to strengthen U.S. relations.

NATION IN BRIEF

Nancy Reagan's plane slips off Atlanta runway

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan, described as "visibly shaken" when her plane slipped off the runway at an Atlanta airport, has returned safe and sound to the White House.

President Reagan told the first lady in a telephone call after the incident, "I'll be waiting for you."

Mrs. Reagan arrived at Andrews Air Force Base early Thursday evening aboard a small jet from the presidential fleet.

Mrs. Reagan flew to Atlanta Thursday morning to attend a parents' anti-drug abuse conference. She had delivered a speech and was leaving town when the incident occurred.

Her plane, one of the larger planes in the presidential fleet, was taxiing on the runway and making a sharp turn when the right set of wheels slipped off the runway and became mired in the mud.

Judicial nominee disputed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A black lawyer has testified that President Reagan's nominee for a federal judgeship in Alabama called him "boy" when the two worked together in the United States attorney's office in Mobile, Ala.

The testimony Thursday from Thomas Figures was the latest racially derogatory statement attributed to U.S. Attorney Jefferson B. Sessions III by witnesses at his confirmation hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Figures, who resigned last July after seven years as an assistant federal prosecutor in Mobile, told Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., that Sessions and two of his white assistants "regularly" called him "boy."

"If you grew up in the South, and perhaps the border states, you know what that means," Figures said.

After his nomination was announced last fall, Sessions was targeted for defeat by civil rights groups because of his unsuccessful prosecution last year of three Alabama civil rights activists on vote fraud charges.

Teachers in demand

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — Wanted: 400 teachers. Fringe benefits: cheap car loans, restaurant discounts, a summer job and one month's free rent.

Prince George's County, Md., schools, which have the lowest starting teacher's salary in the Washington, D.C., area, are trying to get an edge on the competition for teachers in a seller's market by offering some unusual extras to those who are hired before August 1.

The idea came from businesspeople who have been working with the 103,000-pupil school system the last two years with the belief that strong schools are good for business.

Vital support

There's no doubt that President Reagan has more than his fair share of projects to accomplish before he leaves office in a couple of years and history assigns to him a list of accomplishments and failures.

History is unforgiving in that respect. It won't be any different for any president, even one as popular as Reagan.

The course of future U.S.-Soviet relations, the stability of the economy, the quest for world peace and many other items are vitally important and fully deserving of the President's attention. But so is immigration reform and now that Reagan supposedly has agreed to lend his efforts to getting an immigration reform bill through Congress, that possibility is significantly brighter. In fact, some Congressional observers say chances are better than ever that an immigration reform bill can be enacted this session.

Immigration reform is not a small matter regardless of the other concerns looming on the horizon. And the impact of this nation's immigration policy on the face of the world of the future is undeniable. What the leaders of this nation do — or fail to do — in regard to immigration reform will directly affect life inside and outside the United States' borders in future decades.

Yet to this point, the Congress has been surprisingly unhurried in its approach to the immigration question. Sen. Alan Simpson has been the primary mover in efforts to get something accomplished in recent years, although all his efforts have fallen short of the intended goal for a variety of reasons. Overall, though, there seems to have been a consensus that doing nothing was preferable to enacting a reform bill that was only half a loaf of a real solution or drafting a measure that would create even worse problems than it solved.

One reality can't be avoided, though. The "problem" of no immigration reform hasn't gotten any better. This nation's population is growing daily from illegal aliens who flood in and the Immigration & Naturalization Service, understandably, seems on the verge of throwing in the towel.

Hopefully, that will all change now that Reagan is giving his attention to the problem. It's about time. If the President isn't concerned, how can we expect the Congress to give the topic ample consideration?

Another View:

'Whopper' record

Over the years, Americans have made good-natured allowance for President Reagan's fondness for whoppers. Flustered White House aides routinely amend some of his fanciful statistics and unverifiable anecdotes. But the argument over Nicaragua, and a commitment to support war against it, has gotten ugly enough to require a stricter standard. Reagan in his zeal has heaped catsup and snake oil into the dish of disputation. This time he has evoked corrections even from the government of Brazil, an eminent New York rabbi and his own drug enforcement agency — surely a record for a single speech.

Does it matter? Politicians pleading a case are not under oath, and in this administration, lie detectors tend to be reserved for those who leak truths. When the House votes today on aiding the contras, it is unlikely to be swayed by presidential blarney. The facts about the Sandinistas are unpleasant enough and well known, as are the pervasive doubts about the "contra" army.

But what may matter in the vote is the spreading fear that Reagan's overstatements prefigure a dirty November campaign in which anyone's reservations about the wisdom of his policy will be attacked as a craven surrender to Communism.

It matters, too, that Americans treated to a presidential lecture on threats to their security retain some confidence in the quality of the information that reaches the White House. Of the millions who heard Reagan describe the "desecrating and firebombing" of Managua's only synagogue, how many will catch up with the correction? According to Rabbi Balfour Brickner of the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue, the building was abandoned during street fighting in 1978, a year before the Sandinistas seized power. The rabbi's own investigation in Nicaragua failed to sustain Reagan's charge of virulent anti-Semitism.

Also suspect now is Reagan's assertion that Nicaragua's ministers are big-time drug peddlers. If true, that is news to the Drug Enforcement Administration, which says it is unable to confirm rumors that the president presented as fact — complete with photographic evidence. And the government of Brazil says it cannot understand what Reagan had in mind when he pointed to a map showing Brazil tinted red and accused the Sandinistas of training Brazilian revolutionaries. The State Department agrees that there is no guerrilla movement in Brazil.

The fire in Nicaragua is real enough without ringing these false alarms. No one doubts the depth and sincerity of Reagan's loathing for Leninist tyrannies, or the perplexities of fixing a sensible course in Central America. But the first requirement of a realistic policy is respect for the rules of evidence. When fibs and rumors are paraded as truths, discourse is doubly polluted — the credulous believe what their president says and skeptics grow to distrust him even when he is right.

The worthy St. Augustine, in an essay "On Lying," offered a useful instruction for presidents and lesser mortals: "When regard for truth has been broken down or even slightly weakened, all things will remain doubtful."

In 1804, the French civil code, the "Code Napoleon," was adopted.

In 1918, during World War I, Germany launched the Somme Offensive, hoping to break through the Allied line before American reinforcements could arrive.

In 1945, during World War II, Allied bombers began four days of raids over Germany.

In 1946, the United Nations set up temporary headquarters at Hunter College in New York.

In 1960, some 70 people were killed in Sharpeville, South Africa, when police fired on demonstrators.

In 1963, the Alcatraz federal penitentiary in San Francisco Bay was closed.

In 1965, more than 3,000 civil rights demonstrators led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. began their march from Selma to Montgomery, Ala.

In 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that states may not require one-year residency for voting eligibility.

Ten years ago: The United States ended all operations at its bases in Thailand to prepare for final military withdrawal.

Five years ago: Philippine opposition leaders held a rally in Manila, vowing before a crowd of more than 5,000 to topple President Ferdinand E. Marcos from power.

One year ago: Police in South Africa fired into a crowd of blacks, killing 17. A Lebanese cameraman and soundman working for CBS were killed in South Lebanon, allegedly by Israeli forces. President Reagan told a news conference it was "high time" for a superpower summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

JACK ANDERSON

First Amendment rights expensive

WASHINGTON — A citizen files false arrest charges against a police department and loses; the city sues him for damages.

Jack Anderson

Protesters demonstrate peacefully against construction of a nuclear power plant; the county sues them for "interference."

A man writes to President Reagan opposing a candidate for U.S. attorney; when the nomination falls through, the letter writer is sued for libel by the would-be nominee.

These cases are part of an ominous trend in our litigious society: lawsuits filed against citizens who exercise their constitutionally guaranteed right "to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

What's particularly alarming about this trend is the growing number of suits that are filed by officials or employees of government agencies, according to Professor George Pring of the University of Denver Law School. Pring heads the school's "intimidation lawsuit project," which has documented nearly 100 cases of legal actions brought against citizens engaged in discussion of public issues at various levels of government.

In none of the cases studied did the plaintiff win any money. But even when they lose, the intimidators win — by punishing the defendants with costly legal fees, and by "chilling" future complaints or criticism as word spreads that it's dangerous to cross the plantiffs. Here are some of the cases Pring cites in his study:

— John Miner, a deputy sheriff in Maryland, arrested Joseph Novotny on a drunken-driving charge. He also charged him with battery after Novotny spit in the deputy's face. Two days later, Novotny complained of police brutality. Miner was cleared of the charge — and sued Novotny for defamation, intentional infliction of emotional distress and abuse of process. The courts dismissed the case on First Amendment grounds.

— Two citizens invited to testify at a city council meeting in the Midwest charged that a certain police officer had been writing false speeding tickets to meet a quota. The officer sued them for $1.5 million; the case is still being fought.

— Richard Bozek filed false arrest charges against the city of Long Beach, Calif., and two of its police officers. He lost his case. The city then sued Bozek to recover its legal expenses. The state supreme court dismissed the city's case, stating that "the bringing of suits against the government is absolutely privileged."

Even when government officials and employees have the best of motives, such legal response to citizens' complaints will undeniably make others reluctant to bring charges against police officers. This was acknowledged by a member of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers several years ago when he said: "Where we have struck back, the number of police brutality complaints dropped sharply."

— San Luis Obispo County, Calif., sued a number of nuclear power protesters for nearly $3 million when their peaceful demonstrations delayed opening of a power plant. Pring, who filed a friend-of-the-court brief in the case, said it is typical of the trend toward intimidation lawsuits.

— A man sent two invective-filled letters to the president, opposing the nomination of a U.S. attorney. The prospective nominee sued for libel when he failed to get the nomination. The Supreme Court dismissed the case.

FUDDLE FACTORY: Penny-wise and pound foolish, Congress axed a modest $1 million FBI budget request that would have been used to identify and expel Soviet diplomatic personnel engaged in electronic eavesdropping on government agencies' telephones. Meanwhile, the Pentagon this month has ordered 500,000 "secure telephone units" — scramblers — for a cool $1 billion. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who pushed in vain for the FBI's $1 million, says that scrambler phones merely treat the symptoms of the electronic espionage problem.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: State Department cables reveal a two-year effort by Iran to win acceptance of its claims that Iraq has used poison gas against Iranian troops. At one point, officials in Tehran shipped out by diplomatic pouch videocassettes containing gruesome evidence of chemical warfare. "Throughout the narration, the camera focuses on the wounds of the (Iranian) soldiers," one cable reports. The videocassettes apparently were intended for use by Iranian diplomats to gain sympathy for Iran in the war that Iraq started almost six years ago.

GEORGE F. WILL

Thatcher's success isn't safety

LONDON — Perhaps a droll Providence, casting around for some new chastening lesson for mankind, contrived the career of Margaret Thatcher to illustrate how little lasting safety there is in success. American Republicans should be taking notes.

George F. Will

The Labor Party, like the Democratic Party, is showing signs of having learned something. Labor may have learned that the public occasionally wants things from a socialist party, but rarely wants socialism, or even for socialism to be defined.

Shortly before joining the 1970s exodus from Labor, a former Member of Parliament recalled advice he once received. When any argument about policy becomes too confused or contentious, just say, "We must have a socialist housing (or medical, or education, or whatever) policy." But do not be specific. A major figure in the great 1945 Labor Government said socialism is whatever Labor governments do. But it is what Labor governments have said they were going to do that has caused alarm.

Today, however, Labor is expelling extremists, showing aggressive lack of interest in the traditional talk about nationalizing the "commanding heights" of the economy, and speaking of socialism as a vague ethical impulse. Labor's leader, Neil Kinnock, is a socialist who would rather be prime minister than be ideologically pure. He has the thing that saves socialists from socialism: ambition.

He does talk obligatory rot about unilateral disarmament, but that passion is necessary for his domestic tranquillity, his wife being eager to ban the bomb. However, even feminism has muddied socialism's ideological waters by challenging the traditional understanding of socialism as (in one analyst's words) "male, manual and muscular."

Labor's new temperateness is a tribute to two rivals, Thatcher and the LiberalSocial Democrat Alliance.

Thatcher has (to use the jargon the Left likes) given the proletariat false consciousness. She has tempted them onto the path to petit bourgeois consumerism: They want to own things — houses, cars — more than they want additional collective purchases of welfare-state benefits. They think more in terms of personal satisfactions than social equality.

Kinnock is respecting this reality. And the Alliance, to which some important Laborites defected, is poised to benefit from a recurrence of Labor's usual out-of-power reflex toward rhetorical radicalism.

Thatcher once said she aimed at "killing socialism." A measure of her success is the increasing plausibility of Labor as a party of government. There is an analagous danger for Republicans in Reagan's success in shifting America's political center, and with it the Democratic Party, rightward.

Considered as a party man, Reagan is the most important Republican since McKinley. He has changed, at least through two elections, the composition of the party by his ability to draw blue-collar and ethnic voters. Thatcher has changed the tone and, to some extent, the composition of her party through two elections. As one analyst puts it, she decided that, after generations of collectivism, the conservative mission is not to conserve what is best in British society but to change what is worst. The party's ethos is no longer that of the big businessman with a social conscience, but of the small businessman with social grievances such as inflation, unions, welfare-ism, taxation.

Kinnock is prospering by being militantly nice. The leaders of the Alliance have elevated affability and professional reasonableness to the status of political philosophy. They have decided the country is weary of Thatcher: sharp words and sharp edges.

It is said that for centuries Britain has sought unity in manners rather than ideas. Thatcher, who describes herself as a "conviction politician," takes ideas seriously, and in a divisive manner.

She is divisive in that she correctly thinks that some polarization is a consequence of leadership. In this she resembles Reagan. The resemblance ends abruptly with the matter of personal manner.

I know of no episode of Reagan being rude to a colleague. There are many stories of Thatcher's wounding tartness. She is a workaholic and is weary, and fatigue does not give anyone a less jagged disposition.

Her forcefulness has increased what a former colleague calls "the grovel count" among her current colleagues, many of whom complain that she is brusque, peremptory and given to lecturing. But those traits have always been as conspicuous and as politically successful as Reagan's charm. Charm, however, wears better during a second term.

A former close associate says, "She is the only person I know who I have never heard say, 'I wonder whether....'" Perhaps today she wonders whether, in the natural rhythm of democracy, victories revitalize the vanquished, and whether character traits that produce highly personal victories also produce powerful reactions against them.

JAMES RESTON

Dealing with Gorbachev essential

WASHINGTON — Mikhail Gorbachev has now completed his first year as general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party in Moscow, and Washington is still trying to figure him out.

James Reston

The Reagan administration is increasingly suspicious of him because he's playing their own propaganda game. The president complained in his first four years in the White House that he didn't know who was in charge in Moscow — "nobody answers the phone," he said — but now Gorbachev is on radio and television almost as much as Dan Rather.

He started his second year at the Communist Party Congress, where his five-and-a-half-hour speech apparently stunned his audience into sleepy acquiescence.

In any event, it produced considerable perplexity in Washington and convinced many U.S. officials that (1) they were hearing the same old song from a better singer and (2) that the world, with all its other torments, cannot be left to the mercy of people who make five-hour speeches.

And yet, it may be a little early for Washington to assume that it knows where Gorbachev is going. The chances are, considering all his problems, that even he doesn't know where he's going, or where the collective leadership in Moscow will let him go.

For years after the last World War, the so-called Soviet "experts" around here thought the personality and character of the general secretary in Moscow made a vast difference — Stalin on the one hand and Khrushchev on the other, for example — but then, faced with a few old men in the Kremlin, the popular notion in Washington was that the so-called "leader" made no difference and was merely an instrument of the state.

That's what's beginning to be said here about Gorbachev, and it may be right, but the truth is that nobody knows.

What we do know is that for a while there, President Reagan and Gorbachev were talking about the central questions of world affairs: the control of nuclear weapons on Earth and in outer space, the control of terrorism and the need for world trade.

But suddenly, before they can even agree on when and where to keep their promise to meet again, the focus of U.S.-Soviet relations has switched to Nicaragua, of all places, and the White House is telling the country that a "Red Tide" may threaten San Diego unless the Congress coughs up the money for the Nicaraguan "freedom fighters."

You have to wonder about these two guys. They have some things in common. Not being able to settle their problems at home, they blame them on their problems abroad. They want to settle everything — Gorbachev with his proposal to get rid of all nuclear weapons by the end of the century, Reagan with his "Star Wars" defense in outer space — before they have settled anything.

For beginners, they might even talk about a deal to cool it in both Afghanistan and Central America and let the folks there settle their problems without U.S. or Soviet interference. But apparently that's too sensible.

Instead, Reagan is trying to kick 100 Soviet representatives out of the United Nations, and he is so determined to get $100 million out of the Congress to bring down the Nicaraguan Government that he is vilifying his opponents while calling for their nonpartisan support.

He may be able to scare the Democrats into voting for it or at least part of it, but it's hard to find anybody around here who understands why Reagan and Gorbachev have got tangled up in minor issues just when they were beginning to talk about the main issue of arms control.

It's simply not true that Gorbachev is more or less the same as his predecessors. In that five-hour speech, he was critical of the Communist system as well as of the capitalist. And there's another difference.

At the end of his first year in office, Gorbachev is the only head of a major government in the world today — with the possible exception of Prime Minister Nakasone in Japan — who is young enough, at 55, and secure enough in office to influence world affairs after this decade. All the rest, in the United States, China, Britain, France, West Germany and Italy, for one reason or another are facing retirement.

All the more reason then that Washington is going to have to deal with him on the major issues of world peace, and that Reagan, as a last shot at solving major questions, shouldn't be concentrating on getting $100 million for Nicaragua. In a pinch, he could have got that much out of Ferdinand Marcos's baggage in Hawaii.

Warmer days due

From Staff and Wire Reports

Saturday, residents of the Basin can expect sunny skies and warmer temperatures as the National Weather Service is predicting a high in the upper 70s.

Tonight, under fair skies, the low will be near the 40 degree mark with light and variable winds. Saturday winds will become southerly at 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 64 was 25 degrees below the record high set in 1934. This morning's low was very near the record low of 27 set in 1965. During the early hours the mercury fell to 28 degrees.

STATE

A large high-pressure system today brought clear skies across most of Texas and cool springtime temperatures that prompted the National Weather Service to post freeze warnings.

The system, stretching from the Great Lakes into the Lone Star State, produced early-morning readings in the 30s and 40s across Texas, except for Gulf coastal waters. Some scattered high clouds covered the Panhandle and northeast.

Extreme readings were Marfa with 23 degrees and a mild 59 degrees at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

Winds were westerly at 10 mph across the northern High Plains, and northerly at less than 10 mph in the eastern third of Texas. Otherwise, a light and variable wind was common.

The weather service posted a freeze warning tonight for eastern sections of North Texas. It should be sunny and clear through tonight across the Lone Star State.

NATION

A blast of Canadian air dropped the wind chill in New England to as much as 30 below zero today and pushed into the South.

Northern winds that extended from the southern Plains across the eastern third of the nation sent the cold air into the Southeast.

Temperatures in the single digits to teens prevailed across the northeastern quarter of the nation while temperatures dropped to around freezing early today in Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

Wind chills between 15 below zero and 30 below were common across New England.

Light rain was scattered across northern and central sections of the Florida Peninsula and along the coast of the Carolinas while snow-showers lingered near the Great Lakes.

NEW ORLEANS — Heavy overnight rains flooded portions of the Lakewood course and forced a one-day postponement of first-round play in the PGA USF&G Tournament. The round was rescheduled for Friday. Another single round will be played Saturday, with a double round of 36 holes scheduled to complete the tournament Sunday.

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Dale Douglass used a hole-in-one and an eagle to grab the first-round lead in the Vintage Invitational PGA senior tournament with a 5-under-par 67.

Tardy Oil Can does job

Associated Press

Oil Can Boyd was worth waiting for.

Not only was the Boston pitcher's spring debut delayed almost two weeks by a noncontagious viral hepatitis infection, including a week of hospital tests in New England, but he was 1½ hours late for Thursday's starting assignment.

The Boston players were supposed to be in uniform and on the field by 10 a.m. but Boyd didn't arrive until 11:34, explaining that his wife was ill. He was on the mound in time, however, and hurled three scoreless innings, allowing two hits, walking one and striking out two, in the Red Sox' 10-9 10-inning loss to the Detroit Tigers.

Doug Baker drove in four runs with four hits, including a homer and a tie-breaking infield single in the 10th inning. Boston built a 7-0 lead in the first three innings against Dan Petry, who had allowed only one run in three previous outings.

Pirates 3, Royals 0

Pittsburgh got solo home runs from Steve Kemp, Bill Almon and Mike Diaz while Bob Walk, Jeff Zaske and Jim Winn stopped Kansas City on five singles. Walk yielded all the Kansas City hits in 5 2-3 innings. The shutout was the third in four days for the Royals, who have scored three runs in their last 36 innings.

Phillies 7, Dodgers 6

Luis Aguayo's two-run double highlighted a three-run ninth against Ken Howell. John Russell hit a three-run homer off Rick Honeycutt but Phillies starter Steve Carlton allowed a run in the first inning, then left suffering muscle spasms in his back.

Cardinals 3, Mets 2

Clint Hurdle's bases-loaded single in the top of the 13th inning drove in the winning run after three straight walks by Mets reliever Doug Sisk. St. Louis, blanked on three hits over the first eight innings by Ron Darling, Randy Niemann and Roger McDowell, tied the score with two in the ninth against McDowell on Willie McGee's single, Jack Clark's double and Terry Pendleton's two-out single.

Misfortune teaches Perry perseverance

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Suffering temporary paralysis from an auto wreck, then breaking a wrist in an unrelated accident would be reason enough for any athlete to chalk up it up as a bad year.

But misfortune has taught Sam Perry of Midland High the art of perseverance, and this weekend, the Bulldog swimmer will make his pitch for his first UIL state championship.

"I've spent so much time working for this, I don't want to end up failing because of a setback," Perry said. "But when I wasn't able to walk after the accident last summer, I thought I would be out a year but I really wasn't thinking the worst.

"But when I broke my arm, I really thought that would set me back."

As it turned out, neither mishap could shake the competitor out of Perry. Six weeks after the pickup in which he was riding rolled over, Perry was swimming in, and winning, the state Texas Age Group Swimmers 200 backstroke title.

"SOME PEOPLE thought it would take so long for him to come back...We didn't know if he was going to be able to swim anymore," said Jesse Marsh, Perry's coach at MHS. "Some kids that would wither 'em. But Sam was back and in the water within two weeks."

Because of his refusal to know when to quit, Perry was named Age Group Swimmer of the Month in the March issue of Swimming World magazine.

And this week, Perry, a junior on the MHS swim team, is one of the favorites in the 100 backstroke at the meet Friday and Saturday in Austin. Perry will also swim the 200 IM. Midland Lee's Alan Reed in the 500 free, and Jane Marker in the 100 breaststroke will also swim in Austin this weekend.

SEC wonders where others went

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Last year it was known as the "Big East Invitational" with Villanova, Georgetown and St. John's in the Final Four. This season the Southeastern Conference is the league that's showing off in the NCAA basketball tournament.

No less than three SEC teams were still alive in the Final Eight following Thursday night's results which featured third-ranked Kentucky's 68-63 victory over SEC colleague Alabama and LSU's 70-64 upset of No. 6 Georgia Tech in the Southeast Regionals, and Auburn's 70-63 shocker over No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas in the West.

Louisville, the nation's seventh-ranked basketball team, beat No.8 North Carolina 94-79 in the other West semfinal in Houston.

"I wish they'd placed us in different regions," said Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton, who had called the Southeast Regional in Atlanta the "SEC Invitational."

"If we were in four different regions, there would be a chance we could play the SEC tournament in Dallas," said Sutton.

THE NCAA playoffs continue tonight with semifinals in the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J., and the Midwest at Kansas City.

Men's NCAA

Top-ranked Duke plays DePaul and Navy takes on surprising Cleveland State in the East Regionals at New Jersey's Meadowlands. Also tonight, in the Midwest Regional semifinals at the Kemper Arena in Kansas City, North Carolina State plays Iowa State and Kansas faces Michigan State.

Kenny Walker scored 22 points and James Blackmon hit two key baskets in a second-half burst as Kentucky continued its mastery of Alabama. It was the 14th straight victory for the Wildcats and their fourth this season over Alabama in advancing to Saturday's regional finals against LSU.

Alabama fought back from a 12-0 spurt in the first half to close to within 38-36 on a driving basket by Terry Coner with 14:43 left in the game. Kentucky then went on a 10-3 burst to build a 48-39 lead and the Crimson Tide was never able to get closer than seven points until the final 30 seconds of play.

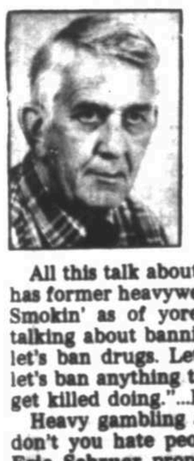

"The big key was offensive rebounding," Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said. "Every time it looked like we might come back they got a big putback."

DON REDDEN scored 27 points and Derrick Taylor added 23 as LSU upset Georgia Tech to create an all-Southeastern Conference final in the Southeast Regional.

LSU's defense forced two turnovers which helped overcome a 56-52 Yellow Jackets lead. Combined with sharpshooting efforts from Taylor and Redden, the Tigers earned a fourth meeting with Kentucky.

Tom Hammonds was forced into a turnover which resulted in a Redden jumper which put the Tigers ahead to stay at 60-56 with 3:30 left.

Ban talk has Frazier Smokin'

All this talk about banning boxing has former heavyweight Joe Frazier Smokin' as of yore. "Everybody is talking about banning boxing. Well, let's ban drugs. Let's ban fast cars. let's ban anything that someone can get killed doing."...I with you, Joe....

Heavy gambling at the MRT, and don't you hate people who renege. Eric Schruer proposed the bet before the NCAA tourney, 'I'll give you the ACC against the Big Ten," huffed the Michigan State alumn. After last week's disasterous first and second round, Eric said what he meant was the Big Ten and Big Eight. The retaliation, "Give me the ACC and SEC and I'll give you the Big 10, Big East, Ivy League, Pac-10, Colonial, Southern and Dakota Territory conferences, plus Navy and Cleveland State."

Now, after the shouting has died down, I don't know what he has agreed to, or even the stakes, until after this week's results...somehow I think he planned it that way....

Lethargic North Carolina State won its first two tournament games, but didn't look like a team that really cared either time...No one is more distressed than Coach Jim Valvano, who is working the sidelines like the opposition is Houston and Akeem Olajuwon in the finals...."I split my pants in the first game (Iowa); I lost my jacket the second game; I should be naked by the time the regional finals come around."...

Ronald Stephens, the Midland Lee grid assistant who is doubling as golf coach this spring, played his college ball at Sul Ross State in Alpine, back in the days when the Lobos were a force in the Lone Star Conference. Stephens graduated from SRSU the year before it won the LSC and came to Midland for the NAIA semifinal against Linfield, Ore., in the mid-1960s.

Linfield rallied to pull out a harrowing decision in the final moments, after SR dominated the action for most of four periods, and then went on to win the national title. "We've looked at the game films of that game many times since and still can't understand how we lost," Stephens laments.

Stephens also was a member of the 1960 San Angelo team, "that lost to Midland 7-0, a defeat that cost us the district title."...

Everybody who saw the game in Fort Worth last week figured San Jacinto won its third NJCAA basketball title in four years when it beat Midland College, although it still must make it official at Hutchinson, Kan., this week.

However, when Coach Paul Stueckler's Midland Lee team lost to Amarillo in bi-district, the Rebels had no inkling that they were playing for the state championship. Amarillo, of course, was the surprise of the season, knocking off Fort Worth Dunbar in Region I here and then winning state the next weekend at Austin....

Since his "discovery" in the NBA Slam Dunk contest at the all-star game in Dallas, former MC cager Spud Webb has been a prime mover in the Atlanta Hawks' offense with 11.4 points and 7.8 assists a game. Before, in a limited duty role, he averaged 5.9 points and three assists a game....

Buffalo Coach Hank Bullough on drugs, "We (players and clubs) should be partners in this. You help me; I help you. Listen, I had nine linebackers in Cincinnati and seven of them didn't even drink beer." And what kind of a fantasy world has been Hank been living in?....

Nicholls State (La.) is ready to drop its golf program because of the Louisiana budget crisis. That's too bad. If memory serves, former Midlander Alan Pursley, now pro at Andrews CC, went to Nicholls on a golf scholarship...

Good news for Midland Angels pitchers due to return to the Texas League this season. Billy Joe Ribodoux was given the first base job by Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger even before spring training began. The only way he can lose it is to play himself out of the position. El Paso slugger Ribodoux wore out Midland pitching last season....

According to Skiing magazine, Purgatory is one of the toughest ski areas to reach in the U.S. Surprising, but they describe the perilous journey over Red Mountain and Molas passes in the winter, which means they are coming in from Grand Junction and Denver. Makes you glad to be a Texan, doesn't it?...

A reader upset that a recent column referred to the University of Texas being located, naturally, in El Paso. "Sir, don't you know there are branches at Arlington and San Antonio, and I think there might be one at Austin." Learn something new every day....

Ex-TSN columnist Bisher not one to hold grudge

By FURMAN BISHER
Cox News Service

ATLANTA — Far be it from me to carry a grudge. March 17 is more than St. Paddy's Day, it is also the birthday of The Sporting News. So when the agency man walked into my office, bearing a packet of clips and surveys and a cheerful countenance, and suggested that I might want to join in the celebration of TSN's 100th, I said why not.

He hadn't heard the news. He had the decency to blush at the reminder that TSN had swept out four old columnists last summer, though assured that this one didn't leave weeping and snarling. (One wrote a column damning the act, another sued.)

What the editors' decision seemed to reveal was a confusion between history and nostalgia. History is what got us here. Nostalgia is what flows over midnight beers at the tavern.

"Those who seemed to have reached maturity and are on the downswing," is how those unconditionally released were described. That makes me one of the all-time late bloomers. My children are going to be disturbed to learn that their old man barely reached his maturity in time to be pronounced in his dotage.

WHATEVER the reason, it's a right that comes with the territory and worth defending. Heaven knows money wasn't the reason I wrote for The Sporting News. It was more a camaraderie that developed through the years, but which had become one- dimensional.

It started with a little item filed from High Point, N.C., when a $2.50 check would buy dinner and a movie for two. It carried my name at the bottom, my very own signature in The Sporting News. Gosh! For the next 45 years or so I felt obligated to this generous publication.

Wherever I went in the Pacific during World War II, The Sporting News followed me. This gruff little man, J.G. Taylor Spink, had it sent to me. After the shooting was over, he offered me a job. It was the wiser decision that I didn't go to St. Louis, for I would probably have been lost in the dusty clutter of that grimy little building at the corner of Tenth and Olive.

But I kept on writing for him. It was pretty big stuff around bush league dugouts to be a real, live Sporting News correspondent.

It was "The Bible of Baseball" then, no doubt an ecclesiastical adaptation of John Galsworthy Taylor Spink himself. What it grew and thrived on, and was subsidized by for a long time, was baseball. It seems to be trying to get a divorce now, a quiet one, nothing messy, now that the family has been raised and moved on.

HORRORS, they're even hinting that the major league box scores go next, desecretion to those of us who grew up on box scores even from the Three-Eye League, and when the San Francisco Bay area had not two, but three teams. (Psst: That's nostalgia.)

What it proposes to become the Bible of next is something that disturbs the next of kin. The survey in the packet George Goodwin brought by assures the publisher not to worry. The readership is young, about 34. (Some are.) Well-educated. (Some are.) Have good jobs. (Some are retired.) And are affluent, but does this mean they don't care to read box scores any more, or give a hoot about how things are going down in Peoria, Pulaski or Pawtucket any more?

You see, so many of us think Sporting News, we think baseball, or vice versa. They have become inexorably intertwined over these 100 years. TSN does things for and with baseball no other publication does. There are lots of other places you can go and get the rest of sports and games, and who's doing what in drugs and what's new in tennis or drag racing.

A HUNDRED years is a pretty good while to be in business and still going. The Spinks are long gone, J.G. Taylor to his reward, C.C. Johnson, his son, to retirement — they had a way with the alphabet — and a corporation does the publishing now, complete with an agency in the field. Some of the pieces in the delivered packet included a byline quite familiar and pages from issues in the old type, which I don't find offensive, but I'm told the 34-year-old reader does.

One last observation in passing. TSN's television salesman still wears a baseball suit, a pitcher with a name you'll recognize, Tom Seaver. What direction it takes, so long as it doesn't make a left turn from baseball, I can only wish TSN another happy hundred years. My part of it was fun.

Midland runners make mass invasion of Snyder

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With Odessa Permian owning two West Texas Relay titles and heading west to El Paso this weekend, the rest of District 4-5A travels to Snyder's Canyon Reef Relays Saturday to lick a few wounds while hoping the title bug will strike again.

All four of Midland's track teams are headed for Snyder Saturday with preliminaries and field events in the four division meet scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Finals are set for 2 p.m.

The Midland Lee and Midland High boys will be competing against all of the 4-5A teams except Permian and Hereford, Lubbock High, Lubbock Monterey and Plainview will round out the 5A field.

In the girls 5A division, MHS and Lee will compete against the same teams with the addition of Amarillo Palo Duro.

Lee's Mike Garza owns the best 3200 (9:51.61) and 1600 (4:27.4) times in West Texas and if he approaches those times, he will own two more records.

However, Lee's Quintus Hampton, the leading hurdler with a 14.0 in the highs and a 37.62 in the intermediates, will not compete in this meet in order to be eligible for the remainder of the track season. He has already competed in one more meet than the rest of his team, an indoor meet out of state.

That could be a big blow to the Rebels and ruins a rematch with San Angelo's Charlie Good, who beat Hampton in the highs last weekend.

Midland High's Anthony Adkison has won two times in a row and his 10.3 is a West Texas best. He will be in a big dual with Abilene's Erik Petty, a 10.6 runner.

Lee's Brad Cooper, unbeaten in the 400, has a 48.58 this year while MHS' Tyrone Oliver follows with a 49.26. Lee and MHS are below 3:23 in the 1600 relay as is Odessa High and the Canyon Reef 5A record of 3:25.84 is sure to fall.

The Lee and MHS girls each have individuals with West Texas bests. MHS' Ethel Edwards, a junior, owns the best 200 with a 25.17 and the best 400 with a 58.36, but she will be back in the 200 this week after running the 400 only one time last weekend — in record time in the West Texas Relays.

Lee's Roz Eaden's 36-11½ in the triple jump is a best and that jump gave her a victory in that event last weekend in Odessa.

Lee's Tami Woodberry leads all girls in the 100 hurdles with a 15.32.

Other Tall City athletes will be trying to move to the top of the heap this weekend because all four teams will have an open week next weekend prior to the San Angelo Relays. All four teams will take the week off during spring break.

NCAA

"Hammonds just made a mistake. He wasn't really looking," Taylor said. "And I got it from him."

Auburn's Chuck Person scored 17 of his 25 points in the second half and rallied the unranked Tigers over Nevada-Las Vegas.

Person, who hit only 4 of 11 shots from the field in the first half, scored Auburn's first three baskets of the second half and led a charge that gave the Tigers, who trailed by as many as 14 points in the first half, their first lead of the second half, 50-49, with 7:57 left in the game.

Auburn, advancing to its farthest point in NCAA play, took the lead for good at 56-55 with 3:55 to play on a side jumper by Person. Nevada-Las Vegas' Anthony Jones, who scored 16 points, missed three free throws over the final 2:44 as the Runnin' Rebels couldn't mount a last-minute charge.

"I was a little timid in the first half because my shot wasn't falling, but my teammates kept encouraging me to shoot it and I did," Person said. "We wore them down in the second half and that's where our conditioning came in. We're a very hungry team and we want to be the first Auburn team to get to the Final Four."

BILLY THOMPSON scored 24 points and Herbert Crook contributed some deadly free-throw shooting to lift Louisville over North Carolina. It was Louisville's first victory since 1929 over North Carolina, third-place finisher in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season.

Louisville outscored North Carolina 16-4 to start the second half to take a 59-47 lead but the Tar Heels rallied behind Joe Wolf to tie the score 71-71.

Thompson scored two baskets and Crook, who had 20 points, got hot at the free-throw line, making six straight to help the Cardinals pull away at the end.

Eackles' 35 paces San Jacinto

Men's JuCo

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Ledell Eackles scored a game-most 35 points Thursday night as undefeated San Jacinto, Texas, moved into the semifinals with a 102-79 victory over Wabash Valley, Ill., in the National Junior College Athletic Association men's basketball tournament.

San Jacinto, now 35-0, will play a semifinal game Friday night against Hutchinson, Kan., a 75-72 winner over Ellsworth, Iowa, in another quarterfinal game Thursday night.

In losers' bracket action Thursday, Allegany, Md., slipped by Westark, Ark., 86-85; Brunswick, Ga., rolled over Madison, Wis., 95-65; and Copiah-Lincoln, Miss., nudged Erie, N.Y., 68-65.

Eackles scored 22 points in the first half, which ended with San Jacinto ahead 54-32. Tyrone Shaw and Michael Porter each added 16.

Wabash Valley, which fell to 29-9 with its first loss in the tournament, was led by Bengi Frazier with 23 points and Norton Ellison with 21.

San Jacinto tied the school record for consecutive victories with its 35th straight win and tied the school's record of 21 100-point games recorded in a single season.

In the other quarterfinal contest, Tyrone Jones scored 24 points, including two free throws in the final seconds, as Hutchinson defeated Ellsworth. The home squad went eight-for-eight at the free throw line in the final 1:45.

Hutchinson, 30-6, led 59-50 midway through the final period before Ellsworth narrowed the margin to one, 69-68, with 1:34 to go. Todd Christian then hit two free throws and Jones added two more, and Ellsworth never threatened again.

Derrick Shelton scored 23 points for Ellsworth, which fell to 29-7 with its first loss of the tournament.

Wayne Fenzel sank a basket with five seconds left in overtime as Allegany edged Westark in the losers' bracket game.

Westark goes home with a 25-10 record while Allegany, 37-3, stays alive in losers' bracket play.

Early in the second half, Allegany held a 50-38 lead, but Westark went on a 13-2 tear to pull to within 52-51 with 11:30 remaining.

The game was tied five more times before Allegany's Rodney Peters connected on a 12-foot jumper at the buzzer to knot the score at 78-78 and send the game into five minutes of overtime.

Rudy Archer's 19 points paced Allegany, while Charles Baker dumped in a game-high 22points for Westark.

Brunswick, 23-8, raced to a 43-21 halftime edge as Madison hit only 5 of 19 field goals in the first half. Four Brunswick players scored in double digits, Vernon Zimmerman poured in 23, Gary Campbell scored 15, Ralph Aiken pitched in 13 and Scott Reid had 10.

Madison, which ends its season at 21-14, was paced by Tom Gheif's 15 points.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

Saturday, March 22, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Financial obligations which have been worrisome in the past will soon be paid off. Learn from previous mistakes the importance of a budget. With the arrival of fall a chance for new jobs, promotions or an increase in income becomes reality. It is time to put the inventive ideas you created in the past into action now. Procrastination will mean the loss of a golden opportunity. Get your personal life in order and romance will prove more satisfying.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Star Trek's" William Shatner, pantomimist Marcel Marceau, composer Stephen Sondheim, Chico Marx, actor Karl Malden and actress May Britt.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Complete shopping and household chores early in the day, leaving the afternoon for hobbies or sports activities. Evening social functions prove enjoyable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): To avoid expensive legal entanglements consult lawyers on questionable matters. Work on a new budget with your mate to try to improve your personal financial situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not allow friends to talk you into get-rich-quick schemes as you must avoid speculation or extravagant spending. A candid talk with your mate helps set new, important priorities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): As financial pressures ease you will have more time to think things over. Do not get involved in anything that may include your savings. Make an extra effort to please your mate tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Check the bottom line on your budget before going shopping even for bargains. Romance is the only thing on your mind. A trip with your mate may mend emotional fences. Enjoy friends as well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Getting together with associates at work on a social basis is a good idea today. It will help improve the office atmosphere, provided you do not become intimate friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Seek expert advice regarding financial problems. Your mate will be supportive in curbing spending. Getting involved in an exercise or sports program will make you look better and feel better about yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Use the day wisely to finish off some chores around the house. Keep your mind off financial matters and do not lend anyone money today. A quiet evening is best spent with loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Write letters to individuals who have the influence to back a pet project. Center your attention today around your family and your home. Mail brings good news from loved ones living abroad.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seeking cooperation from contacts in other cities proves vital in finalizing important transactions. Try combining business with pleasure this evening. Diplomacy may be the key.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Whether you are young or old, married or single, you appear to be on the right track in both your professional and personal life. Resist painting the town red; it could affect your savings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not listen to financial advice given by a friend. Social affairs may prove extravagant. If you are in the middle of an emotional situation with your mate, say what is on your mind.

When deciding which way to take a two-way finesse, there are many factors to take into account. You might be able to obtain a count of the high-card points or distribution as a clue to which defender is most likely to hold the missing key card. You might have to take it one way because of entry probolems, or to keep the danger hand off lead. Today's hand shows yet another reason to take it one way rather than the other.

The auction was short and sweet. With 11 high-card points, a balanced hand and no four-card major, North had an easy raise to the no trump game.

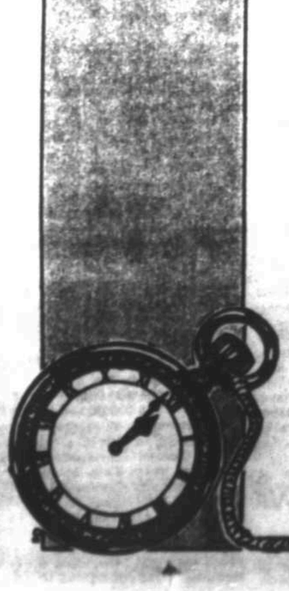

West led his fourth-best heart, and declarer made the technically correct play of the king from dummy. (We will see in a moment why that is the correct play.) With six fast tricks available outside of the diamond suit, declarer needed only three tricks from that suit for his contract. Which way should he take the finesse?

Obviously, there is no safe way to take the finesse. No matter which defender would gain the lead, there were four heart tricks available for the taking. However, if East were to get on lead, a heart return would be automatic. If West were to win the queen, he would not know that the defenders could cash four heart tricks.

At trick two declarer led a diamond to his nine and West's queen. That worthy had an immediate decision to make. Assume that South had the guarded queen of hearts and the king rather than the ace of clubs. In that case, to defeat the contract West would have to shift to a club so his partner could gain the lead to play a heart through declarer's presumed guarded queen.

After some thought, West decided that it was better to play East for the ace of clubs than for five hearts. The contract rolled home with an overtrick.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Soviet girl on U.S. peace tour

CHICAGO (AP) — An 11-year-old Soviet girl whose U.S. tour recalls the international journey for peace of Samantha Smith began her visit by telling the adults and children who greeted her, "I hope we will be friends."

Lycheva

Katya Lycheva set foot on American soil for the first time Thursday night at O'Hare International Airport and was met by Star Rowe, 10, of San Francisco, who gave her 10 white roses and said in well-rehearsed Russian: "Welcome to our country. We will work together for peace."

The fifth-grader was accompanied by her mother, an interpreter, the general secretary of the Soviet Peace Committee, and Patricia Montandon, the executive director of the U.S.-based Children as the Peacemakers Foundation, the sponsor of Katya's trip.

Katya, who had just completed the 18-hour journey from her home in Moscow, was beginning a two-week trip that will include visits to New York, Washington, Houston and Los Angeles.

Her Chicago visit was to include breakfast today at a hotel, lunch with sixth-graders and a chat with Mayor Harold Washington.

Ferguson

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew's fiancee, Sarah Ferguson, returned to her job as a sales executive Thursday shielded by armed guards and police road blocks that snarled central London traffic.

Miss Ferguson, 26, smiled and flashed her ruby-and-diamond engagement ring before hurrying to her sixth floor office at an art publishing company in the city's Mayfair district, one day after her engagement was announced.

"I'm working very hard, I'm very busy," she told one reporter who telephoned. "I will be working as long as is practicable."

Miss Ferguson took Wednesday off when, after weeks of speculation, Buckingham Palace announced her engagement to Andrew, Queen Elizabeth II's second son. He is fourth in line to the throne, after his older brother, Prince Charles, and Charles' two sons.

The security men who accompanied her Thursday and the melee of photographers and bystanders outside her office underlined the problems presented by the princess-to-be's decision to continue her career even after the wedding.

Diana, the princess of Wales, gave up her job as a kindergarten teacher in 1981 as soon as her engagement to Charles was announced.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan declined to meet with Yelena Bonner, wife of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, for fear of upsetting efforts to win freedom for others, according to a published report.

Albert Brashear, a White House spokesman, said the president would not have refused to meet Mrs. Bonner, as reported in today's editions of The Washington Post. Brashear also said he knew of no meeting between the wife of Sakharov, a Nobel-prize winning physicist who has been in internal exile in the provincial city of Gorky since 1979, and a White House official.

"The president personally would not have rejected such a meeting request for fear of upsetting future prospects. His record is clear and he certainly stands firmly on the side of those whose rights have been suppressed," Brashear said Thursday night.

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Elizabeth Taylor has signed a contract to do a book. It won't be a kiss-and-tell autobiography and it won't be a diet or exercise manual. The superstar has signed with G.P. Putnam Sons and Berkley Press for an undisclosed sum for her personal view of women's attitudes toward weight gain and loss and the ways in which they affect a woman's image and self esteem. This could be a new trend; self-analysis of the stars. A hardback edition is expected out next year.

Taylor was quoted by her publishers as saying "It has been many years since I wrote a book and I'm thrilled and excited about this new endeavor. I wrote my first book when I was 12-years-old entitled 'Nibbles and Me.' " It was published in 1946. Her second book, "Elizabeth Taylor, An Informal Memoir" was published in 1964. By contract, Taylor will travel and appear on the various television talk shows to promote the book.

Sullivan

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — ABC-TV anchor Kathleen Sullivan and architect Ralph Michael Kiner, son of former baseball great Ralph Kiner, have taken out a marriage license in the Riverside County clerk's office.

Kiner and Ms. Sullivan, both 32, applied for the license Monday. The wedding is set for April 13 in La Quinta and will be the first for both.

Ms. Sullivan co-anchors "World News This Morning" and anchors "World News Saturday" for ABC from Washington.

M. Reagan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Reagan is the latest presidential offspring to take up acting.

"I played the part of a state party chairman," Reagan, 41, the president's elder son, said of his acting debut Thursday on CBS' "Capitol," the daytime soap opera set in the Washington world of politics and power.

The show taped at CBS Television City will be broadcast April 3.

Reagan's half-brother, Ron Reagan Jr., recently made a guest appearance on "Saturday Night Live." Half-sister Patti Davis has made TV appearances and first lady Nancy Reagan was an Academy Award-winning actress and appeared with the president, himself a former actor, in "Hellcats of the Navy."

McMahon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Ed McMahon, the chuckling television sidekick on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" and co-host of "TV Bloopers & Practical Jokes," has been honored with a star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

The McMahon star, next to one dedicated to W.C. Fields, was the 1,824th implanted at Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street.

McMahon arrived for the ceremony Thursday in a wagon drawn by the Clydesdale horses that are a trademark of Budweiser. McMahon has been the beer company's official spokesman for 21 years.

McMahon had asked for the spot alongside Fields.

Perry

LAST WEEK in Dallas, Perry, who was aiming his sights on the UIL meet, was touched out in defense of his 200 backstroke title at the spring TAGS meet. But the Houston swimmer who beat him, seeded No. 1 this weekend, was shaved and rested for the meet. That's something Perry has been saving for this weekend.

"I wanted to peak at State this year," Perry said. "It was my decision to save it for the state meet. Hopefully I can make a name for myself at state this year, then next year I'll be looking for a scholarship, hopefully to SMU."

"The TAGS meet was good for me, because I know how many others had to peak at Regional meets — that gives me a good advantage," Perry said. "When I shave, I feel like I'm going to do good. It's mainly mental, I just think it's going to bring my time down a lot."

IN THE process, Perry could become the first Midland High state swimming champion since Tommy Hart in the 100 butterfly in 1972. Marsh says he is also a shoo-in to break the school record set of 55.46 by Andrew Jordan.

"That record is sure to fall," Marsh said. "He'll get in the preliminaries on Friday, he shouldn't have any problem with that."

Perry is again hoping to qualify for the Junior National Championships this year and improve on his 22nd place finish in the 200 back last year in Portland, Ore. While at the state meet this week, Perry will swim a timed trial in the 200 back, an event the UIL does not have in its meet, in hopes of qualifying for the national competition in Grand Forks, N.D.

Though he is certainly one of the favorites for the state title in the 100 back, misfortune and mishap seems to follow him like a shadow. In qualifying for the state meet at the Regional tournament, Perry overcame a flu bug to win the Region I title.

If Perry can keep healthy in the next two days, the rest of the field in the 100 backstroke may be left wondering what the MHS swimmer can do in lucky year.

"Better than ever"

'Dallas' movie turns back the clock

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Now that you've had nearly eight years to get acquainted with those tumultuous Texas tycoons on "Dallas," creator David Jacobs will take you back to how it all began.

Back when Jock Ewing and Digger Barnes were struggling oil wildcatters and courting the same girl, Eleanor "Miss Ellie" Southworth. Back when a guy with a dusty old pickup, a sixth sense for finding oil or a scheme for getting leases could become a millionaire overnight.

Jacobs tells of the early days in a rowdy adventure story that's a departure from the soap opera format of the hit CBS series. "Dallas: The Early Years" will be broadcast Sunday night.

"Before I created 'Dallas' I had a history about how Jock and Miss Ellie and Digger met," he said. "So when the idea of doing a film came up I wanted to do something in the past, but I was probably the only one. They had a writer who went through a lot of stuff, but when he suggested a 'pre-quel' I said if anybody does one it'll be me."

CBS agreed to the movie three years ago, but Jacobs got sidetracked for a while when he created the series "Berenger's" and was occupied by other matters.

THE MOVIE, WHICH spans the decades from 1930 through the 1950s, stars David Grant as Digger, Dale Midkiff as Jock, Molly Hagen as Miss Ellie, David Wilson as Jason Ewing and Hoyt Axton as Miss Ellie's father, Aaron Southworth. Kevin Wixted plays J.R. as a youth.

In the popular "Dallas" series, the late Jim Davis played Jock, Barbara Bel Geddes and the late Donna Reed have played Miss Ellie, and David Wayne and Keenan Wynn played Digger.

"I knew the story of Jock and Miss Ellie and Digger and their triangle, and how Digger always resented Jock," Jacobs said. "What I didn't have was a story. I had relationships. I quite deliberately came up with a new story."

Jacobs, who had been to Texas only once before creating the series, visited the state for the movie. "Texas is one of the few places in this country you can go and feel the difference," he said. "I loved it in Fort Worth, where we did some of the filming. I sampled every chili place in town."

JACOBS ACTUALLY CAME up with "Knots Landing" first, but while CBS liked the idea it wanted something richer, sexier and more sensational. That's when he came up with "Dallas," and later when "Knots Landing" came on the two were tied together by making Ted Shackelford's character a Ewing.

"The movie has lots of action," he said. "That's one of the things I wanted to persuade CBS to do, although it goes against the rules. I knew we had to go for the 'Dallas' audience, but it's really a man's action-adventure movie. It's about two wildcatters.

"The secret of success in the oil business is acquiring leases. Jock had a way of getting leases and Digger had a sixth sense for oil. Everyone knows Digger is a down-and-out drunkard, but in this story he's a strong character. It's his picture more than anyone else's.

" 'Dallas' viewers know him as a loser, but I made him the luckiest man in the world. He wins at cards but he gives it all to a hooker. He buys a car for cash and wrecks it after he forgets to get insurance. He's lucky and very self-destructive. I had a lot of fun with him."

In "Dallas: The Early Years," Marjie Rynearson and Hoyt Axton portray Aaron and Barbara Southworth, left. The young Ewing family includes Ryan Beadle, as Bobby, counterclockwise from lower left, Joel Allen as Gary, Dale Midkiff as Jock, Molly Hagan as Miss Ellie Southworth Ewing and Kevin Wixted as J.R.

"I knew we had to go for the 'Dallas' audience, but it's really a man's action-adventure movie. It's about two wildcatters."
— David Jacobs, creator, 'Dallas: The Early Years'

Jacobs doesn't agree with a recent statement by Bud Grant, president of CBS Entertainment, that the serial is a dying form on television. But he is worried that the networks can make it a self-fulfilling prophecy.

"I THINK THE other networks have killed the serial," he said. "They insisted on making them serials from the beginning. That's a lot to ask of an audience. With 'Dallas' and 'Knots Landing' we started with stories that ended each week but kept the problem open. What made 'Dallas' different from most television shows is that the adversaries were in place.

"I think the serial, although I prefer to call them sagas, are the form best suited for television. Shows like 'Dallas,' 'Dynasty,' 'Falcon Crest.' They have an epic quality that lends itself to television."

Texan Quaid to portray LBJ

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Randy Quaid, known for his satiric portrayal of President Reagan on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," will play the late President Lyndon Baines Johnson in the NBC movie "LBJ."

Quaid will portray Johnson when he was the 28-year-old protege of Texas Congressman Sam Rayburn and courting "Lady Bird" Taylor, the daughter of wealthy Texan "Mr. Boss" Taylor.

The movie ends when Johnson takes the oath of office aboard Air Force One in Dallas after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tommy Chong, the taller half of the Cheech & Chong comedy team, has signed with Embassy Television to create a half-hour comedy pilot.

Chong, who will work with producer Howard Brown, will write and direct the pilot for CBS.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — The Disney Channel has acquired the rights to 18 Shirley Temple movies made between 1934-40 and will color them by computer for broadcast on cable TV beginning in September.

Among the movies are "Baby, Take a Bow," "Bright Eyes," "Captain January," "Heidi," "The Little Colonel" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Miss Temple, who retired from films as a young adult, is a former U.S. representative to the United Nations.

Cosby breaks Radio City records

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cosby, who's made show biz history in the past, has set the biggest box office gross in the history of Radio City Music Hall.

He broke all records in the 54 years of the concert hall with a gross of $2.8 million for a 15-show run in January, February and earlier this month.

He surpassed Mr. Showman himself, Liberace, who grossed $2.4 million during a 21-show run last April.

"Achieving the top box office award has become very competitve," said Ellen Shiebelhuth, director of public relations. "The first award was given to Barry Manilow in 1984...Chances are, Liberace might regain the title when he returns to the Hall in October."

Dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar edged lower against all major currencies except the Canadian dollar in light European trading early today. Gold bullion prices rose slightly.

Currency traders said market participants were reluctant to take large positions ahead of the weekend. Closure of Japanese markets today for a holiday added to the market's lethargy, they said.

Continued speculation that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries might be on the verge of agreement on cutting oil production continued to prop up the British pound.

The pound was quoted at $1.4978, up from $1.4865 late Thursday.

Other midmorning dollar rates compared with late Thursday:

-2.2500 West German marks, down from 2.2520

-1.8865 Swiss francs, down from 1.8890

-6.9225 French francs, down from 6.9300

-2.5400 Dutch guilders, down from 2.5420

-1,529.50 Italian lire, down from 1,533.25

-1.40175 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3940

The dollar was quoted at 176.05 Japanese yen in London, down from 176.80 yen in Tokyo Thursday.

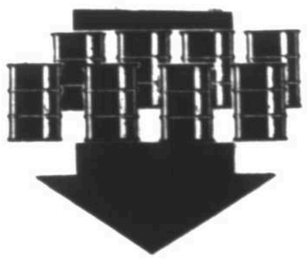

London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $351.35 a troy ounce, up from $350.00 late Thursday.

Gold was bid at $351.10 in Zurich, up from $351.00.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, the metal closed at a bid of $351.16, up from $350.62.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.76 an ounce, up from $5.74.

Dow Jones passes 1,800 level

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Wall Street passed another milestone Thursday when the Dow Jones industrial average closed above the 1,800 level for the first time and passed its third hundred-point marker this year.

The index of 30 blue-chip stocks rose 16.29 points, to 1,804.24. It has been hitting records with such regularity that many stock market professionals no longer get excited.

"We've had so many of these centennial numbers that it's old hat," said William LeFevre, vice president of investment strategy for Purcell, Graham & Co. "There's a numbness."

For one thing, the professionals say, the Dow has risen more than 500 points since September. And, they add, the cause of the most recent portion of the gain is unclear.

The financial community is clearly happy about falling interest rates and encouraged that the nation's economy is growing slowly enough to permit the Federal Reserve to loosen credit even more. But market watchers suspect that much of the gain Thursday, and perhaps during the past week or so, is related more to Friday's expiration of stock index futures, index options and individual stock options.

"Basically this was a very professional market," said Richard E. Meyer, senior trader at Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., referring to the buying programs being executed Thursday in advance of Friday's triple expiration.

Jacques Theriot, senior vice president of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., said traders were apprehensive Thursday because of the index expirations. "It might be a rather interesting day," he said.

Most professionals agreed that Friday's session could be very volatile. There were even rumors that the Securities and Exchange Commission planned to increase its surveillance of the trading floor.

It took the Dow, which began its meteoric rise exactly six months ago, just 15 trading days to go from 1,700 to 1,800. The index made the leap from 1,600 to 1,700 in the 14 session before Feb. 27. In both cases, it took 21 calendar days to reach the new mark.

Volume Thursday, however, was far from memorable. Only 148 million shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange, slightly fewer than the moderately heavy session on Wednesday, when 150 million shares changed hands.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.56, to 136.13, and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 0.94, to 236.54. Both were just shy of records reached last Friday.

On the Big Board, 925 issues rose in price and 720 fell, and the average share improved by 16 cents.

While the gain in the Dow was sizable, it was caused mainly by sharp increases in the prices of four of the index's 30 issues.

Merck gained 4¾, to 166; Philip Morris rose 2⅞, to 123½; General Motors gained 1⅜, to 86, and Minnesota Mining rose 2⅜, to 106⅝. Together the four accounted for nearly 11 points of the Dow's 16-point improvement Thursday.

Of those stocks, moreover, only G.M., which is being helped by the weakness of the dollar, rose for a fundamental reason, according to LeFevre. The others, traders said, rose for no apparent reason.

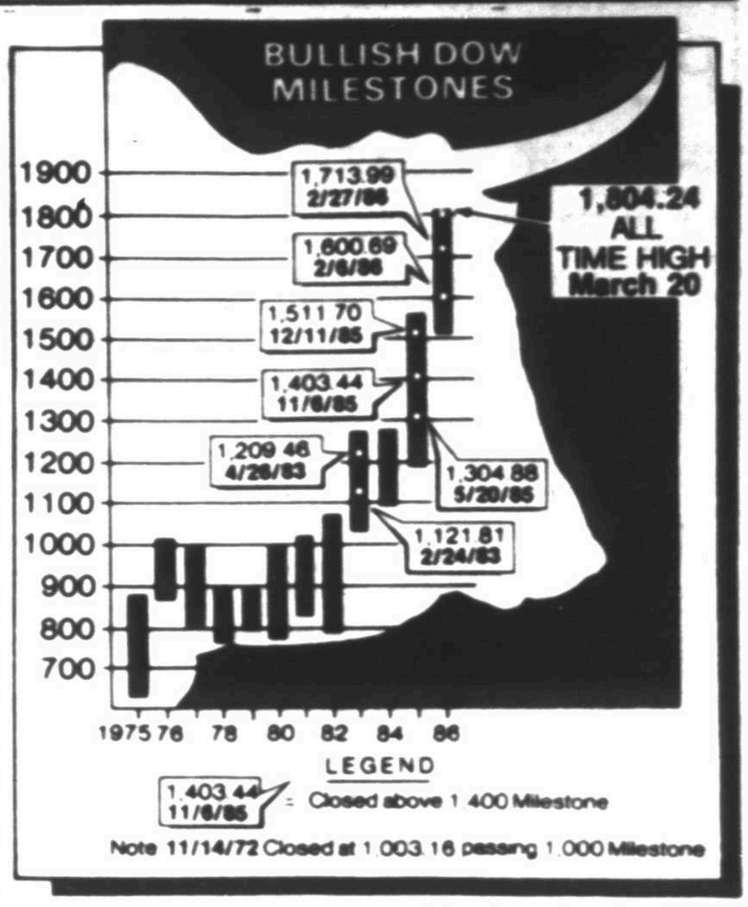

Other auto stocks were also strong, with Ford gaining 4, to 80, and Chrysler rising 2, to 45⅜. Part of the excitement may have been caused by Ann Knight, an auto analyst with Paine Webber, who Thursday morning reissued a report outlining what the car makers would be worth if they spun off credit operations.

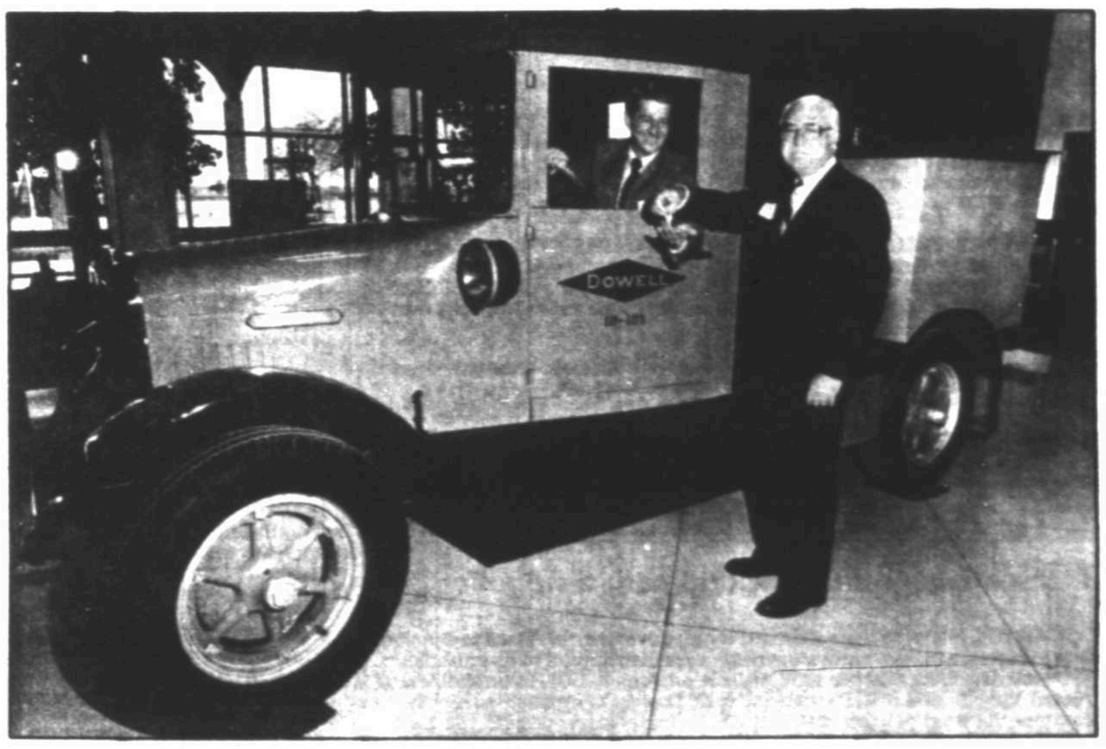

Canadian Pacific was the volume leader, rising ¾, to 14⅝, on consolidated turnover of more than 3.5 million shares. The company said it could not account for the rise. Traders said there was a rumor that Seagram might be interested in Canadian Pacific. The reports could not be confirmed.

Separately, Seagram rose ⅛, to 55, despite reporting sharply lower profits for the year. The big losers Thursday were Polaroid, down 3¼, to 65. Digital Equipment, off 3, to 157⅞. Capital Cities, down 5, to 234, and Telex, off 5, to 58.

Vestron rose 2⅛, to 12⅛, a 21 percent improvement. An analyst at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette reportedly recommended the stock.

Eli Lilly rose 2⅝, to 69¾, for its second consecutive big gain. Investors are excited about the prospects of the new drug Prozac. American Medical International, however, fell ⅛, to 22. The stock had been rising lately on a rumor that Aetna Life and Casualty might make a bid, but Wall Street analysts consider that unlikely. But investment industry sources say Morgan Stanley & Co. and Universal Health Services have had an eye on American Medical.

Dowell-Schlumberger Vice President, Winton Wahl, presents the keys to the firm's number one pumper, to Russ Ramsland, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, where the antique which still runs will go on permanent display. The vehicle has been stored in Tulsa and was recently moved to Midland.

Antique pump truck donated to Museum

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

On a cold day in March of 1932, a spanking new International truck backed up to Pure Oil Company's No. 6 Fox, near Midland and poured ten gallons of hydrochloric acid down the failing oil well giving birth to a new industry and a new oil field company.

The only equipment used in the process were a garden hose and a pair of rubber gloves, but immediately production in the well jumped from three barrels per day to 31 and oil well stimulation or acidizing was born.

A new company name was also added to the oilfield list of pioneers — Dowell. Remembering that event 54 years ago, Winton W. Wahl, Dowell-Schlumberger vice president for industry relations in Houston, Thursday presented the keys to Dowell's No. 1 Pumper to Russ Ramsland, president Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, where it will go on permanent display.

The 1932 Model A4 International acidizing truck from Dowell-Schlumberger, except for the metal tanks, is identical to the one used on first acidizing job in the Permian Basin. The truck was put into service in 1933 in the Kansas oil fields as part of the oil well stimulation service. The original truck was a '32 model equipped with a wooden tank 36 inches in diameter and 12 feet long. It carried two gallons of arsenic acid mixed with water and hydrochloric acid.

"Wooden tanks were needed in the early days," said Wahl, "because the acid would eat up metal. Dowell's claim to fame was the discovery of an inhibitor that allowed the acid to be used in oil wells without eating up all the tubing."

Dow researchers John Grebe and Ross Sanford considered the acidizing process to be a successful means of stimulating wells and increasing production. Dow immediately filed applications for patents, with one being issued on Sept. 13, 1932. Dowell, Inc., a new subsidiary, was formed under the laws of Michgan on Nov. 10, 1932.

Later, the addition of the pumping unit provided pressure to help penetrate plugged formations and improve the flow of crude oil.

Dowell has become quite diversified since those early days, having merged with Schlumberger in 1984. The company now maintains one of the largest and most modern research facilities in the oil well service industry.

Other Dowell-Schlumberger representatives present at the dedication were: Ed Gee, division manager, and Ken Buckles, division sales representative.

Area geologists to host meeting

From Staff Reports

The West Texas Geological Society will host its monthly luncheon meeting on March 25 at 11:30 am at the Midland Center, 105 N. Main, Midland.

The featured speaker will be Robbie Gries, consulting geologist. She will speak on "San Juan Sag Cretaceous Rocks in a Volcanic-Covered Basin, South Central Colorado."

The San Juan Sag is a foreland basin formerly adjacent to and west of the Laramide northern Sangre de Cristo Uplift. Latest Laramide wrench faulting and Miocene rifting split this bounding uplift and formed the San Luis Basin adjacent to and east of the Sag. Concurrent volcanism concealed the San Juan Sag with over 10,000 ft. of intermediate-type volcanic deposits and its presence remained in doubt until oil occurrences in the volcanic rocks encouraged exploration for the underlying sedimentary rocks.

Recent drilling through the volcanic field has revealed the presence of Eocene clastic sediments, the Cretaceous Lewis, Mancos and Dakota formations and Jurassic Morrison and Junction Creek Formations. Additionally, oil and gas shows were found and production established as a result of drilling in 1984. New seismic acquisitions reveal numerous large anticlines that are yet to be tested, and show promise with the downdip shows and oil occurrences above them in the volcanics.

Robbie Gries

Gries received her BS degree in geology from Colorado State University and her MA degree from the University of Texas, Austin in 1970. She has been a consulting geologist in Denver since 1980. Prior to that times she was a geologist with Texaco, Inc. and Reserve Oil.

Cost of the luncheon meeting is $7.00.

Governor tours steel plant, promises retraining funds

LONE STAR, Texas (AP) — The way Lone Star Steel employee Robert Knox figures it, Gov. Mark White's visit to the beleaguered mill probably was political. But Knox says he was still glad White made the trip.

"I didn't vote for him last time, may not vote for him next time, but he's right in what he said today," Knox said during White's Thursday visit.

What White said was that Lone Star's problems are President Reagan's fault. The Northeast Texas mill, which makes steel pipe for oil field use, this week announced the layoffs of half its 4,000 workers.

"We're glad to see somebody, at least in our state, recognizes the dilemma we're in," Don Qualls, a vice president of a United Steelworkers Union local, said of White's visit.

Asked if the trip seemed politically motivated, Knox said, "I'm sure that got some consideration, but I believe he's sincere in his feelings about the jobs and the people involved here."

White said steelworkers collecting their final paychecks this week are the victims of a "foreign invasion" against which Reagan has mounted no defense. Lone Star Chairman William Howard Beasley III told White the jobs here were lost to "unchecked illegal foreign imports" and the declining price of oil.

White agreed, saying, "This mill has been the victim of a foreign invasion, a bombardment, that has impacted its employment, its profitability and its production. Through the failure of trade policies, we see the same result. I'm hopeful to see this administration change and start enforcing with vigor those frayed laws."

The governor's trip was billed as an effort to show his sympathy for the workers and his support for Lone Star's efforts to become what Beasley called an "even leaner and meaner company."

"Today my heart goes out to the 2,000 workers and their families who have lost the security of a paycheck," White said, adding that his office has put together a $324,000 program to help retrain Lone Star workers.

White blamed Reagan for failing to battle foreign steel "dumped" in the United States at below-cost prices and for resisting calls for an import fee on foreign oil.

Gramm offers new incentives as way to help ailing petroleum industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government should admit it cannot "work miracles" for the oil industry, says Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who has suggested a program of deregulation and tax incentives to help the oil industry and the banks that back it.

Gramm, a Republican, offered his program Thursday, countering calls by others, including his Democratic Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, for an oil import fee to stabilize prices, which have dropped 50 percent on the world market — to less than $15 a barrel — since December when OPEC lifted production controls on its members.

"Nothing is going to compensate for $30 (per barrel) oil," Gramm told a news conference. "Despite the claims of government that we work miracles, the truth is, there is nothing we can do that will produce the impact on the industry that oil prices doubling will produce."

Instead, Gramm suggested a program that would allow out-of-state banks and holding companies to acquire troubled Texas banks, deregulate natural gas, repeal the Windfall Profits Tax and retain energy producers' exemptions slated for elimination under pending tax overhaul legislation.

"My view is there's a crisis in Texas," Gramm said. "The crisis was borne out of the collapse of oil prices. It has passed through the industry, decimating the service company, the supplier, the independent, and now it threatens the financial structure of the entire state, and therefore the economy of the entire state, and I think we need some bold action to try to use the strength of the regulatory agencies to try to assure that this does not become a financial panic that could hurt the economy of the whole state far beyond just the oil industry."

Gramm also proposed other banking changes that back steps already taken by government regulators — allowing restructuring of loans and providing for "capital forebearance," or a loosening of requirements for the amount of capital a bank must have.

Gramm said loosened capital requirements would help "maybe 10" of the estimated 60 banks expected to fail this year if things don't change, but he said it would prevent other banks from getting into the same danger.

"While everybody's been wringing their hands and pounding the table, the only thing that has been done that in any way helps the energy industry has been the reform of the regulatory process with regard to energy banks," Gramm said. "That is the only concrete action taken anywhere that clearly will help."

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Transco Exploration declares cash distribution

HOUSTON (SWN) For the eleventh consecutive quarter, Transco Exploration Partners, Ltd. will make a quarterly cash distribution to its unitholders. TXP will distribute $.59 per unit, payable on June 2, 1986, to unitholders of record May 2, 1986. "TXP's current cash flow is more than sufficient to continue its level of cash distributions to unitholders, despite the recent decline in oil and gas prices," noted John H. Lollar, President and Chief Operating Officer of Transco Exploration Company, managing general partner of TXP.

Howell announces formation of new unit

HOUSTON (SWN) Howell Corp. announced the recent formation of a new wholly-owned operating unit, Howell Gas Management Company (HGM). HGM purchases natural gas from independent producers, arranges for the transportation of purchased gas through both intra and interstate pipeline systems, administers producer contracts and identifies and markets gas to end user customers, all on a contract basis. The new company will also install and operate field gathering pipeline systems in support of natural gas purchases.

The Company also announced the election of Harvey L. Petter as President of Howell Gas Management Company. Petter served for the past three years as the Gas Marketing Manager of Howell Petroleum Corporation, the Company's oil and gas exploration and production unit. His prior experience in the natural gas business includes nine years with Ashland Exploration, Inc. and two years with Wainoco Oil and Gas Company.

Lear Petroleum reports $92 million loss

DALLAS (SWN) Lear Petroleum Partners reported a loss of $92.8 million for 1985. Contributing to the loss were $86.8 million of non-cash charges, $83.2 million of which related to a book value write-down of the Partnership's oil and gas properties, $1.8 million for uncollectible accounts receivable, $1.1 million for losses on office leases resulting from the closing of three division offices, and $.7 million for inventory price declines. Excluding these items, the net loss from operations for 1985 would have been $6.0 million.

Revenues for the Partnership in 1985 were $49.8 million. Working capital provided by operations (cash flow) in 1985 was reported at $22.7 million. Adjusting for the foregoing non-cash charges, working capital in 1985 would have been $25.5 million. Capital expenditures for LPP in 1985 totaled $23.9 million, while cash distributions to LPP's public Limited Partners totaled $1.2 million.

The predecessor to the Partnership reported a loss of $11.7 million on revenues of $71.4 million in 1984. Working capital provided by operations was $23.1 million in 1984.

The 1985 loss from operations for the Partnership primarily reflected lower natural gas and crude oil prices and lower production levels resulting from natural gas curtailments.

Texas association chairman addresses RRC

AUSTIN (SWN) The chairman of Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association, Richard C. Hudson, told the Railroad Commission's annual "state-of-the-industry" hearing Wednesday that he believes the quickest and best way for the petroleum industry to recover from its present recession is for it to be free of government controls, regulations, and entitlement programs.

Hudson, a Houston independent operator, said that he understands and symphathizes with those oil men and elected public officials who think that an import fee is a means to subsidize domestic oil prices.

"But, I believe that if we invite the federal government back into our industry, never again will we be able to prosper in a free market, " said Hudson.

"Asking the federal government to bail us out, prop us up, and then run our business is not the answer to our dilemma. Rather let us ask the Congress to continue the depletion allowance for independent operators, as well as the expensing of intangible drilling costs, " Hudson said adding that both of these tax laws are vital to domestic production.

"Times are tough. And they may get tougher. But, rather than seeking a short-term solution – with its obvious long-term, negative consequences – we should be striving for a long-term solution. That, of course, can best be accomplished with the complete decontrol of natural gas and the continuance of a free market for crude oil," Hudson said.

He noted that the activity level and vitality of the petroleum industry "is directly related to price. Until we see higher, stable prices, we cannot expect our industry to turn around."

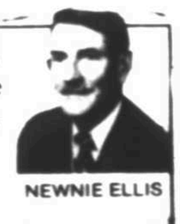

Howell Corp. announces 1985 earnings

HOUSTON (SWN) Howell Corp. announced 1985 audited net earnings of $3,543,000 or $0.74 per share on revenues of $106,997,000. For 1984, the Company earned $3,688,000 or $0.77 per share on revenues of $121,695,000.

1985 earnings were composed of $4,182,000 or $0.87 per share from continuing operations and a loss of $639,000 or $0.13 per share from discontinued operations for net earnings of $0.74 per share. In 1984 Howell's earnings were $0.77 per share composed of $2,834,000 or $0.59 per share from continuing operations and $854,000 or $0.18 per share from discontinued operations. Continuing operations includes $0.42 per share from a non-recurring gain associated with the termination of the federal government's crude oil "entitlements" program.

On the basis of continuing operations, Howell Corporation's earnings have improved by 47 percent, from $0.59 per share in 1984 to $0.87 per share in 1985. This was accomplished even though revenues fell by 12 percent to $106,997,000 in 1985. Working capital from continuing operations increased 14 percent, from $3.61 per share in 1984 to $4.11 per share in 1985.

For the fourth quarter of 1985, earnings were $833,000 or $0.17 per share, composed of $923,000 or $0.19 per share from continuing operations and a loss of $90,000 or $0.02 per share from discontinued operations. In the final quarter of 1984, the Company earned $586,000 or $0.12 per share from continuing operations and $7,000 from discontinued operations. Revenue for the last three months of 1985 was $28,483,000 compared to 1984 period revenue of $28,564,000.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Taxable portion of profit from fund easily calculated

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am puzzled about how to calculate the tax on the redemption of mutual fund shares.

Last year, I redeemed my entire holdings of a mutual fund, which had been in effect for 18 years. During that time, I had reinvested all dividends and capital gains distributions to buy more shares. Each year, I paid the appropriate income tax on the year's dividends and capital gains distributions.

When I redeemed all my shares last year, I had an overall profit. I know I must report that profit as a capital gain. But how do I calculate it on my 1985 income tax return, taking into account that I already have paid taxes on my reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions?

Doyle

A. Your profit was the difference between the amount of money your received when you redeemed your mutual fund shares and your "basis" for those shares.

Your basis was the total amount you paid for those shares — the money you paid in, plus all reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions.

Let's say you originally invested $1,000 in that mutual fund and, from time to time, put another $2,000 into the fund to purchase more shares. Let's say that, over the 18 years, you reinvested $1,500 dividends and $2,500 capital gains distributions to buy still more shares. That made your basis $7,000.

Now, let's strike a happy note and say you received $15,000 when you redeemed all the shares you accumulated. You had a profit of $8,000, which you are required to report on Schedule D of your federal income tax return.

If all the shares were purchased more than six months before you redeemed them, the entire profit was a long-term capital gain — only 40 percent of which is taxable.

However, if some of the shares were acquired through reinvestment of dividends and/or capital gains within six months of the date on which you redeemed, the profit on those shares was a short-term capital gain — all of which is subject to full income tax.

If the latter was the case, you have to report both long-term and short-term capital gains on the Schedule D you file with your 1985 Form 1040.

• • •

Q. I redeemed mutual fund shares last year. In January 1986, the fund sent me a Form 1099-B, listing the total amount I received from the redemption — $9,862. But that form does not disclose the price I paid for the shares I redeemed. That price basis actually was $3,250.

When I file my income tax return, what's to prevent me from listing, say, $9,000 as my basis, thereby reducing my tax bite?

A. Two things — your innate honesty and, perhaps more important, fear of getting nabbed by the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS gets copies of all "information returns," including 1099-Bs, to feed into its computers. Granted, each 1099-B lists only the proceeds from the sale of stocks or bonds or from the redemption of mutual fund shares. So, the IRS has no quick way of learning the profit from each transaction.

Nonetheless, if your return is audited, the revenooers will want proof of the price you paid for the fund shares you redeemed. If you're caught cheating, you'll be nailed to the wall.

• • •

Q. My redemption of all my mutual fund shares was processed on the day the fund's shares went ex-dividend. I therefore missed out on the dividend and my redemption was at a lower net asset value per share. Do I have any hope of recovering the value of this "lost dividend?"

A. Certainly. The value of a mutual fund's shares automatically drops by the amount of the dividend on the ex-dividend date. The dividend is paid on some later date — usually within a month.

You should receive a check for the dividend on the shares you owned. I wouldn't be surprised if that check arrived between the time you wrote your letter and this column is printed.

Lead Phasedown

On January 1 the lead content in leaded gasoline was reduced to 0.1 gram per gallon. Will the 0.1 gram per gallon limit damage engine valves in older cars and farm vehicles?

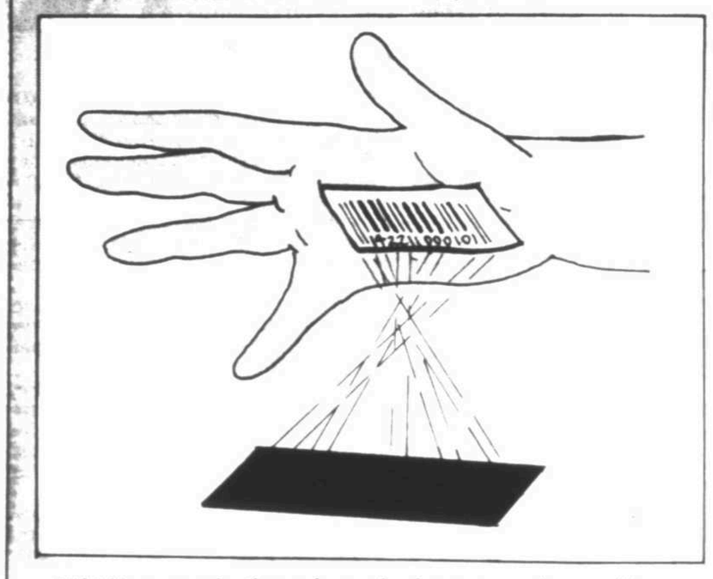

According to the API, refiners will have more difficulties in meeting the further reduced lead limit, expecially when certain credits allowed by the Environmental Protection Agency can no longer be used after the end of 1987. As a result, it will cost refiners more to produce gasoline. These costs, which may be passed on to consumers, will vary by company and by region of the country.

On the question of whether the 0.1 gram per gallon limit will damage engine valves in older cars and farm vehicles, experts disagree. EPA intends to study this issure further.

Under the new lead phasedown rules, refiners' costs are expected to increase over the next two years as "banked lead credits" are used up. Under the rules issued by the EPA, refiners have been allowed to build up lead credits if they produced gasoline with less lead than permitted. The credits can be used by the refiner to meet the reduced lead limits during the traansition period to the new lower limits or can be traded to another refiner. In either case, credits may not be used after December 31, 1987, when the 0.1 gram per gallon will be strictly enforced.

Refiners' costs are expected to rise as they begin to cut the amount of lead in gasoline to meet new EPA standards.

Whisking goods through a checkout can give cashiers a pinched nerve, according to a rehabilitatin physician.

Cashier Malady

That deft flick of the wrist that supermarket cashiers use to run packages over electronic pricing machines may take a painful toll in pinched nerves, says one rehabilitation physician.

Playing medical detective, Dr. Jacqueline J. Wertsch of the Mdical College of Wisconsin traced the cause of one supermarket cashier's painful wrist to a pinched nerve caused by the one-step motion the woman used to run items over the laser that reads the bar code printed on the package. "We analyzed how she moved goods over the pricing machine and trained her to do it in a differeht way, using a two-step procedure," Wertsch said. The pinches nerve was corrected surgically and the cashier was able to resume her job.

Beta Bust

Owners of Beta-format videocassette recorders are starting to feel like owners of eight-track tape collections when the rest of the world went for cassettes. Once hailed as the wave of the future in home video, Beta apparently is now being trounced by the rival VHS format.

VHS models, whose costs have tumbled well below $300, in general cost less and play longer than Beta, though Beta offers a better picture.

New Mexico firm sues over drilling contract

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The attorney for a Mobil Corp. subsidiary denies that his firm backed out of a drilling agreement and contracted instead with a company headed at the time by a New Mexico state senator.

Harrell Feldt, an lawyer for Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico, said the subsidiary filed a response early this week denying allegations made in a lawsuit filed by Houston attorney John McDowell on behalf of Worth Petroleum Co. of Fort Worth.

McDowell said Wednesday the $20 million lawsuit contends Mobil Producing agreed in 1984 to grant Worth the right to drill for oil on Eddy County property Mobil Producing leases from the federal government.

McDowell said that instead, Mobil Producing awarded the drilling rights to Challenger Energy Inc., whose president at the time was Sen. Budd Hebert, R-Eddy-Chaves.

"We had an agreement with Mobil and at the last minute they farmed it out to Challenger for reasons known only to Mobil," McDowell said. "The agreement was reiterated and repeated many times."

Hebert, who sponsored a bill in the 1985 Legislature that would have led to billions of dollars in sales from a pipeline owned partly by Mobil-affiliated companies, was unavailable for comment Wednesday on the lawsuit. Hebert's daughter, speaking from the family home in Artesia, said he would be out of town until at least Saturday.

McDowell said he filed the lawsuit in late January in Texas District Court seeking $20 million in actual damages and $100 million in punitive damages. The damages are based on estimates of the oil reserves at the site, which has been producing oil since August 1984 and has been called one of the most productive new discoveries in the state.

The Albuquerque Journal reported that Challenger obtained the Mobil Producing drilling agreement in July 1984, resulting in the first wells drilled by Challenger.

In the following 1985 legislative session, Hebert sponsored legislation that would have led to about $6 billion in sales from a carbon dioxide pipeline partly owned by Mobil Cortez Pipeline, a subsidiary of Mobil Producing.

The legislation would have given a 12-year tax break to companies using carbon dioxide for recovering hard-to-get oil from maturing oil wells. The bill died in the final hours of a legislative filibuster after passing both the House and Senate in some form.

Hebert said at the time there was no connection between his decision to sponsor the legislation and the drilling agreement with Mobil Producing.

A secretary at the offices of Challenger said Hebert sold his interest in the partnership in early January.

PBPA calls for changes to gas rules

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association has produced a resolution on proposed gas rules to be presented Tuesday as testimony at upcoming Railroad Commission hearings on proposed rules changes.

In the resolution, PBPA commends the Texas Railroad Commission for its efforts to clarify rules relating to ratable production, transportation and purchasing of natural gas in the state, adding that there is a definite need to expand rule 3.34 to more clearly detail the rights and obligations of natural gas producers, natural gas pipelines and purchasrers.

The resolution, prepared by the natural gas committee of PBPA, recommends a comprehensive definition of "market demand" when it is used to determine the amounts of natural gas to be taken by natural gas purchasers and pipelines. It further states that market demand be comprised of the combined total of sales and usage by a purchaser, along with that of any subsidiaries, inter-related entities or special marketing programs which use the same pipeline facilities. The Association has taken the position that such units of corporations or "shadow companies" only served to confuse the issue of ratable production.

The Association also called for a statement of priorities which would outline the order of sources and types of natural gas which could be curtailed. It specifically states that casinghead gas be preserved in the final category for curtailment, to be curtailed only after all other categories had been totally curtailed. PBPA spokesmen said this would be necessary to prevent some wells from being shut-in resulting in the physical and economic waste of declining oil reserves and production.

Flight attendants say TWA mailed harassing letters

NEW YORK (AP) — Two weeks after Trans World Airlines flight attendants went on strike, both sides remain far apart, but the airline predicted near-normal operations by this weekend, and the union accused TWA chairman Carl C. Icahn of spreading misinformation and harassing strikers through the mail.

Icahn said in a telephone interview on Thursday that he informed the strikers by mail that new hires would be permanently assigned.

GOVERNOR

"This administration has practically broken the bank building a military machine that will not have any fuel," White added.

"Look in the faces of these workers and their families and understand, please, Mr. President, we need help," he said.

Jack Golden of Houston, a district official for the steelworkers union, said, "My union is not opposed to foreign imports. All we ask for is a fair field to play on.

"It seems we've got a six-man football team going up against a team of 11," he said.

The governor took a driving and walking tour of the plant. It was, for the most part, a quiet day at the mill. Lone Star is still in business and White and Beasley said it will stay in business.

"Make no mistake about it," said Beasley, "we are not here today to bury this mill or this company. We are here to downsize our operation into an even leaner and meaner company."

Midlander gets life sentence for murder

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 25-year-old Midland man described as "mildly mentally retarded" was sentenced to life in prison Thursday for the 1982 murder of Wylie Wilson.

Elroy McKee, 207 W. Nobles, was also sentenced to 20 years for robbery by the 238th District Court jury which had found him guilty on both counts Wednesday.

But prosecutors said McKee could be eligible for parole in eight years.

The eight-woman, four-man jury deliberated about three hours before giving McKee the maximum sentences on both charges, as requested by Midland District Attorney Al Schorre.

Rather than showing remorse, McKee "sat up in the jail and bragged about it — how he was going to beat the rap," Schorre said during punishment arguments.

Defense attorney Jeffrey Hinkley asked the jury to show compassion.

"I ask you please not to take revenge upon Elroy," Hinkley said.

But Assistant District Attorney David Rosado reminded the jurors that McKee had been given probation for a previous burglary conviction, and was then sent to prison after being arrested for burglary of a vehicle.

Being mildly retarded is no excuse for committing murder, Rosado said. Despite the efforts of his special-education teacher and his family to help him, McKee "has chosen — and he has the ability to choose — a different road to follow."

McKee, who had spent the entire four-day trial staring at his lap, had been given tranquilizers by a doctor to calm him down for the courtroom proceedings, according to Schorre.

The defendant did react, however, when his mother took the stand Thursday. McKee didn't look up, but he cried quietly as Elnora McKee described him as a loving son.

"I don't know how much he understands what's going on," she said.

McKee did not testify in the trial.

He and his fraternal twin brother Leroy were arrested in August after the Midland Sheriff's Office reopened the long-unsolved case. According to a statement McKee gave sheriff's investigators, Wilson was killed during a robbery the night of June 9, 1982.

The 45-year-old Wilson was a salesman for Aladdin House Furniture, 3504 W. Wall. According to McKee's statement, Wilson was a frequent visitor to the Kingsway Motel, 3801 W. Wall, where the McKees lived.

Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish met with school employees Thursday to discuss budget cuts he will recommend in light of a shortfall in state funds.

MC will 'save every single penny' it can, Parrish says

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland College officials have announced plans to search for ways to cut spending in the wake of an estimated $1.3 billion shortfall in state funds.

Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish said, during a meeting with college employees Thursday, that he will recommend that the school join Texas' 48 other junior colleges in implementing salary, promotion and hiring freezes, travel restrictions, and fewer new program offerings.

"Starting today, we will do what we can to save every single penny in this year's program, he told the more than 200 college faculty, administrators and staff in attendance.

Junior colleges are local units of government rather than state agencies, and because they are funded differently, they were not included in the governor's request to trim 13 percent from agency budgets.

However, Parrish said the college does receive state funding and should do its "duty" to help out.

Although Parrish said he would not recommend cuts in salaries or personnel, he advised his colleagues not to expect increases in salaries in 1986-87.

"I wouldn't sit here and expect one cent increase in salaries next year. We're seeing every penny in salaries we're going to see," he said.

Parrish said he does not know how much the college will be able to cut, but added that "nothing is sacred — not taxes, not tuition and fees."

The Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees last August lowered the Midland College tax rate for the second time in two years and increased tuition last June by $4 per semester hour.

He also will recommend the college make cuts in contractual services, travel expenses and purchasing, Parrish said.

He asked for suggestions from vice presidents, deans, department chairmen and faculty to help determine where cuts can be made without affecting the quality of instruction.

"Nothing is sacred. We will look at every program on campus," said Parrish. "The direction we take will be long-term and won't be things that will permanently damage this institution. We're not going to cut a program that's taken us 15 years to build."

Parrish and other members of the Texas Public Community and Junior College Association met in Austin earlier this week to discuss their situation in light of the state's shortfall.

The Legislature appropriated about $10 million to the Midland Junior College District for the 1986 and 1987 fiscal years based on its enrollment count. However, those funds can be used only for instructional programs and instruction-related services.

On the average, Parrish said Midland College receives about 51 percent of its funds from the state.

The college also receives money from local taxes, tuition, student fees, federal funds and private sources.

Health agencies wait for 'final blow'

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

While state agency budget cuts requested by Gov. Mark White have not yet been felt at the local level, public health proponents believe it's only a matter of time before the 13 percent reductions hit home.

"Everyone is waiting and seeing what the final blow will be," said Jim Davis of the Midland City/County Health Department. The department receives both funding and directives from the Texas Department of Health which announced last week it would comply with White's request.

A representative with the Texas Department of Human Services indicated that budget cuts would be felt there as well, although it was too early to tell what the effect might be.

Ann Bradford, local regional director of the TDHS, provided a copy of a letter from Commissioner Marlin Johnston to White, which stated the department "would do its utmost to comply."

"We understand the severity of the situation faced by the State of Texas and support you in your call for each state agency and university to achieve a 13 percent reduction in general revenue spending for the biennium," said Johnston.

TDH Commissioner Robert Bernstein and Board of Health Chairman, Dr. Ron J. Anderson responded last week by declaring the agency would trim the budget, but not without serious consequences, according to an Associated Press report.

"We have met the state target of $19 million this budget year and $19.5 million for the next budget year," said Anderson. "But those dollars were used to target the programs for the poorest of the poor in the state."

Bernstein said programs such as early childhood intervention and adult health care face cuts and maternal and child clinics will be consolidated as a result of the general revenue paring.

"We are a state agency — one of the few that met the target," he said. "We are one of the few, but it was not without pain."

Bernstein added the austerity cuts ordered by White will especially hurt many residents of South and West Texas, with the most damage to people who live at or below the federally determined poverty level.

"We are not dealing with sacred cows here, but important health issues," said Anderson. "When you don't fund these programs, people die."

Locally, however, it remains to be seen what the effect of the cuts will be, although preliminary action such as hiring freezes have already been implemented.

"There has been a freeze on hiring since the governor's request," said Davis. "What we're doing now is replacing from within the department when there's a vacancy."

Davis indicated Midland's health department would be affected in other ways as well.

"The cuts could affect the pre-natal clinic to some degree," he said. "There is a lot of local financial support, but some of the funding is through the state."

Supplies also have been restricted, he added.

"We've been told we'll get no more supplies for the lab than what we asked for last year," he said.

Similar measures, including hiring freezes and program cutbacks, are being taken at the TDHS, according to Johnston's letter to the governor.

Johnston and Bernstein warned the governor of the consequences of the budget reductions.

"We have carefully analyzed all avenues for attaining a 13 percent reduction...which would amount...to more than $245 million," said Johnston. "...The real adverse impact would be more than twice that amount because of the loss of federal matching funds. We cannot reach that level of reduction without carving away critical, life-sustaining services to people, primarily the fragile elderly and vulnerable children.

Steps already taken by the TDHS include a moratorium on contracting for new nursing bed programs and stricter reimbursement policies on vendor drug programs.

"At this point, we do not propose any further program cuts," said Johnston. "To do so would raise the specter of denying life-sustaining services for destitute and infirm elderly people and needy children. Those we would have to consider would include rollbacks in (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) grants, elimination of Indigent Health Care and cuts in Nursing Home and Vendor Drug programs."

Bernstein, too, was protective of program cutting, highlighting the TDH's hiring freeze as a major budget cutback.

"I would say we did our share with the reduction in personnel," he said. The TDH was budgeted for a projected 4,947 employees by December but will have hired only 4,692.

Bernstein added "virtually every program has been affected," but no services, as yet, have been eliminated.

The budget cuts would mean a loss of $36 million for the TDH and $245 million for the TDHS.

Milsap will always be 'a country boy'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Ronnie Milsap

"I hear comments like 'He's not country anymore,' but I'll always be a country boy," Ronnie Milsap said during a Thursday telephone interview from his hotel room in Phoenix, Ariz. "But there's no reason the country boy can't sing other things once in a while."

The four-time Grammy Award winner, who has also received seven Country Music Association awards, including one for entertainer of the year in 1977, will perform at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Chaparral Center. When Milsap was here in March of 1982, his concert drew the largest reserved seating crowd in the history of the center to that date. His recent winning of his fourth Grammy for country male vocal performer makes him the holder of more Grammys in that category than any other person.

"I've just been in this business a long time," Milsap says when the subject of his numerous awards is brought up. "If you keep hanging in there something good is going to happen to you."

Milsap had just finished taping Solid Gold in Los Angeles.

"Yesterday we did 'Happy, Happy Birthday, Baby' with the dancers and '50s' clothes and candles and the whole thing. I sang a small medley (including 'There's No Gettin' Over Me' and 'Smokey Mountain Rain') of some of my songs with Dionne Warwick."

"Lost in the Fifties Tonight" was a "huge success" for Milsap so he has continued that theme in cutting his single "Happy, Happy Birthday, Baby," a popular song in rock 'n' roll which was first recorded in 1957 by The Tune Weavers.

Over the winter he had been busy doing his usual — cutting a new album — "Lost in the Fifties Tonight." This album revisits the '50s by incorporating songs off Milsap's "Greatest Hits Volume 2," Motown selections such as "Heard it Through the Grapevine" and "Money," new material, his newest single "Happy, Happy Birthday, Baby," and the No. 1 Billboard country song for 1985, Milsap's "Lost in the Fifties Tonight." This album in particular forms a bridge from where "I was to where I'm going." He has plans in the making for several videos off this album.

He doesn't like to tour much in the winter because "it's too cold, icy and dangerous — all those buses and 30 something people on tour." He admits that what he takes two months to do could possibly be done in two weeks, but the additional time allows him the opportunity to coordinate new ideas and really enjoy cutting an album. The formula works. This is his 18th for RCA.

"I'm just very lucky that over the years that I've survived four or five different presidents at RCA and changes in country music. Growing up in the Smokey Mountains, I don't guess there's anyone who understands country music better."

Country music deserves, Milsap says, "The best we can give it. Country fans have seen so much on television these days and they pay good money to come to these shows that they deserve a comparable production. Country music is past the days of hay bales on the stage."

Ticket price for Milsap's Midland show, which includes Reba McEntire opening the concert, is $13.50. Tickets may be purchased at Endless Horizons and Chaparral Center. Milsap's shows incorporate extensive lighting, special effects and costuming.

"I love to dress up; it's part of my feeling about the stage and the show and my feeling for the fans. It's kind of like going to church; it deserves the best I can give it."

He laughs as he recalls his early days.

"When I was first getting started in this business, I got into the rhinestone business in 1974...I'd walk across the stage and the effect would be terrible, awesome and gaudy."

Judge will rule on disputed 'settlement' in revolver lawsuit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Just as the jury in the $22-million federal civil lawsuit was returning its verdict Thursday afternoon, plaintiff's attorney Windle Turley of Dallas jumped up, asked U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton to hold back the jury, and announced he would accept an out-of-court settlement.

The jury had deliberated about 35 minutes. And Turley apparently sensed that the four-man, two-woman jury was awarding his clients nothing and had found no defects in a .22-caliber High Standard revolver which Turley claimed accidentally discharged three years ago and left an Odessa boy, Eric Scott Hogan, then 7, partially paralyzed. The boy's uncle, Clare Anderegg, was showing the pistol to his nephew when it fired.

"I never made an offer for settlement," responded Austin lawyer Peter Ferraro, who represented the defendant, High Standard Inc., which manufactured the firearm. "I think I could make an offer of $600,000 if you would settle the case."

"I accept it," announced Turley, who appeared eager to close the case.

"It's not an offer," countered a miffed Ferraro. "It's a condition."

The exchange between Turley and Ferraro was rapid.

Ferraro said that about two days earlier, he and Turley had discussed an out-of-court settlement but said Turley would not accept anything less than $1 million or $650,000.

TURLEY apparently changed his mind the moment the U.S. deputy marshal rapped on the courtroom door in announcing that the jury had reached a verdict.

Bunton immediately ordered the jury's verdict sealed.

"I want that jury gone," the judge said.

The six jurors filed into the courtroom. The judge silently read the verdict, and thanked the jurors for their services in the four-day trial.

"This was a most difficult case," he said, and was a "hard case" in which to make a decision. "This has been a very well-tried lawsuit." The judge said the lawyers did an "exceptional job" in trying the case.

After the jury left, the haggling between the lawyers continued.

Turley said that "the night before," Ferraro had offered a $600,000 settlement for his clients, Eric Hogan, now 10, and his mother, 31-year-old Koria Anderegg of Odessa.

"I advised him that we could not do so (accept the offer) at that time," Turley said. "There has never been a withdrawal," he insisted.

Turley earned a reputation as a successful plaintiff's lawyer in cases stemming from airplane crashes and is involved in litigation arising from the fatal 1985 crash of Delta Flight 191 at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport. In recent years, he has taken on the firearms industry in products-liability suits.

Ferraro told the judge that Turley moments earlier had "walked over here and said 'We accept your offer' at the knock on the door" just as the jurors were to file into the courtroom to report their verdict. Ferraro said the offer, which Turley previously had rejected, was not a continuing proposal.

ODESSA ATTORNEY Jack Tidwell, who represented Outdoor Sports Headquarters Inc., alleged distributor of the High Standard handgun, said Turley on Tuesday told him that "he would get back with me" in negotiating a settlement "but did not."

"He has never tried to settle this case with me," said Tidwell.

Ferraro insisted that Turley had rejected his $500,000-settlement proposal early into the trial of the lawsuit. "So, it was never offered," he said.

Bunton said next week he would rule on the validity and timeliness of the alleged settlement and would decide if it was a continuing offer, as Turley maintains.

"I very much dislike that we've had this bad turn of events," the judge said. "It's a matter of semantics. They (lawyers) did try a good case," which ended up as a "bad deal."

As soon as the judge adjourned the case, Turley fled the courtroom in preparing his return to Dallas.

Tidwell was irked over Turley's apparently spontaneous decision to "settle" the case the moment the jury had reach a verdict.

"That's nothing but Windle Turley's cry-baby horse manure," Tidwell said.

"I adopt Jack Tidwell's interpretation of the matter," Ferraro said. "I concur."

THE DEFENSE lawyers said Turley was seeking about a $6-million settlement but that they initially had discussed a $500,000 settlement.

Later, Turley said that the defense lawyers had "made me an offer, and I accepted." He said he has had "big cases" in which the jury was "out only a short time" and returned with "large" damages.

Turley claimed that there was "no question" about on-going negotiations. "We were continuing to negotiate, and I accepted the offer."

In his closing arguments, Tidwell told the jurors that "what this case is about is money."

"Mr. Turley wants beaucoup of money for himself and his clients," Tidwell said. "We're talking about a boat-load of money or none."

Nevertheless, Tidwell said anyone who "has no sympathy" for Eric, a quadriplegic, "would hardly be alive."

"He (Eric) is a delightful young man who has had a terrible tragedy."

Tidwell said that the double-action .22-caliber High Standard pistol was "a reasonably safe old gun" and was not defective in its triggering and firing mechanisms.

The revolver had discharged on Feb. 26, 1983, when Eric's uncle, Clare Anderegg, then in his early 20s, was showing the loaded pistol to his nephew. Anderegg said that the pistol had fired, as he was lowering the hammer from the full-cocked position by pulling the trigger. He said his thumb slipped off the hammer and that he was not pointing the pistol at Eric.

Tidwell said "thank goodness" Clare Anderegg was not handling his .357-magnum Colt Python pistol at the time. "Eric Hogan would not be alive."

FERRARO TOLD the jurors that "my heart goes out to this boy," and "your heart does, too."

But he said blaming the accident on the quality of the firearm is like blaming an automobile accident on the car and not the driver: The mishap occurred "because you were driving a Chevrolet rather than a Mercedes-Benz."

"It's no high-dollar gun," Ferraro said of the High Standard pistol. "It's not a low-dollar gun."

The jurors were allowed to examine and handle the trial's exhibits, which included the High Standard revolver.

Turley faulted the pistol's mechanism and its "narrow" hammer spur. The pistol, which was designed in the 1950s, is patterned after the Colt Peacemaker, which the U.S. Army adopted in 1873 in taming the American West.

"This replicates a gun from the last century," Turley said, for the purpose of the salability of its "classical" Western design in the 20th Century."

Turley noted that Eric today is "locked in his stroller" and "soon" would be confined permanently to a wheelchair.

"He will never walk across a room and ask a pretty girl to dance with him," he said.

MILSAP

At the same time in his career, Milsap was taking the money he earned from such hits as "Daydreams About Night Things" and "It Was Almost Like a Song," and reinvesting it back into what he was doing. Today, Milsap has his own recording studio, publishing company and talent agency which serves him as well as other artists.

"I felt like I would never have the flexibility or longevity without people around me and some companies around me that could be part of the business and could help me if I needed special material."

His foresight came from belief in himself and his talent. "I believed in myself enough in those early days that I've really invested what I have in what I do. It's the only way to continue to come out with quality products and come out in the business."

His early musical training has been invaluable in his career. He didn't appreciate it then, but he does now.

As a student at Grover Morehead School for the Blind in Raleigh, N.C., Milsap, who has been blind since birth, would frustrate his teachers by using the time they weren't listening to play such traditional selections from his performing repertoire as "Great Balls of Fire," "Orange Blossom Special" and "Tutti Frutti."

"The only music the school allowed us to play was classical. When I was studying violin and cello and piano, they kept telling me I'd really appreciate classical training one of these days. At the time, I didn't understand the value of it. Unfortunately, I do today. I wish I'd taken more advantage of it. I had eight years of that training and I'm sure some of it had an impact on me. When I'm working in production, I wouldn't take anything for that training."

Today, Milsap has an appreciation for music, whether it is classical, blues, jazz or country, and he mixes "it all together."

He says he is among the fortunate.

"I'm still in here doing what I love to do...I love the music, and I love the chance to play and sing. It was always my big dream since I was a kid and that great love for it still persists today."

As much as he enjoys creating albums and the accompanying videos, his first love is performing live.

"Playing live is the greatest part of this business. We get feedback from the audience and feel that love and electricity." He has a "real fascination with live performances" because "you're really working from scratch each night. The audience doesn't care if you got a standing ovation the night before. You have to start over from scratch. It's a real challenge, and it certainly helps if you have a few hits along the way so people know a little about you when you get there."

In 1984, a tally of Milsap's "few hits" added up to 24 No. 1 singles, six gold and one double platinum album. This consistent winner, who actually cut his first single in the mid-1960s, has never been satisfied with keeping the same stage show for longer than six to eight months and is always challenged to come up with new records and pieces that will work into his live show as well as over the radio and on videos.

His pace hasn't slowed. His future includes implementing his plans to become an international artist. Thus, he is more, not less, involved with the music business.

MURDER

Noticing his custom-made jewelry and late-model sports car, the McKees and two other men decided to rob Wilson, according to Elroy McKee's statement. One of the other men beat the furniture salesman to death with a blunt instrument, and they dumped his body out in rural Midland, the statement said.

Wilson's body was found the next morning in a pasture near County Road 160 and Farm to Market Road 1379 southeast of Midland, according to Sheriff's Office reports. His Datsun 280ZX was found in the Kingsway parking lot.

Hinkley had been expected to bring evidence that McKee was not mentally competent enough to waive his right against self-incrimination, but prosecutors never introduced the statement into evidence.

Instead, the jury heard testimony from four former Midland County jail inmates who said McKee had bragged about the murder to other prisoners and talked about avoiding a conviction by pleading mental incompetence.

Also testifying against McKee was his sister-in-law, Patricia McKee, who is separated from McKee's brother, Leroy. She said the McKee brothers and two other men came back to her Kingsway Motel apartment that night with blood on their clothes.

Elroy McKee talked about having killed someone for his jewelry, Ms. McKee said. Prosecutors showed her photographs of jewelry similar to items owned by Wilson, and she identified the items as the jewelry Elroy McKee tried to sell her that night.

Leroy McKee is to be tried separately.

"We're very disappointed," Hinkley said after sentence was pronounced by Judge Vann Culp. "I would anticipate the filing of a motion for a new trial."

Schorre said his office was looking for two other men who investigators believe were involved in the murder.

"We're still hunting for them, and we're going to get them," he said.

McKee was not charged with capital murder because "there was insufficient evidence to show that he was actually the one that dealt the fatal blow," Schorre said.

For the same reason, said Rosado, McKee was not indicted for using a deadly weapon in the commission of the crime. That would have required that he serve at least 20 years before being eligible for parole.

Neither the murder weapon nor Wilson's jewelry was ever recovered. No physical evidence, such as fingerprints, was introduced to link McKee to the murder, Hinkley told the jury during closing arguments.

McKee remains in county jail, where he has been held in lieu of a $100,000 bond since his August arrest.

'Esteem Machine' wins state health agency award

From Staff Reports

The Texas Department of Public Health has selected a local group to receive a 1985 Texas Community Health Program Award. The "Esteem Machine," a teen theater group sponsored by Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, was presented the award by Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas Commissioner of Health, at Saturday's meeting of the State Health Board in Dallas.

The local program and four others will be submitted to the Secretary of Health and Human Services to compete for national awards. In addition to Planned Parenthood's "Esteem Machine," awards were also presented to Mesa Petroleum of Amarillo for "Mesa Physical Fitness Program;" New Car Dealers of Metropolitan Dallas for "Don't Buck the Odds — Buckle Up!"; Harris County Medical Society and Shell Foundation for "Health Adventure"; and for a series of public service announcements produced by the Department of Health, "Sex — The Best of Families Talk About It."

Since its debut in July, 1985, the "Esteem Machine" has reached nearly 2,000 parents and teens with theatrical presentations of issues such as teen pregnancy, teen suicide, parent/child communication, and many more. According to Planned Parenthood executive director, Dana Frazee, "The Esteem Machine is the most significant outreach program we've ever had. We are extremely proud of these young volunteers."

More teen volunteers will be added to the "Esteem Machine" troupe after tryouts to be held April 19 and 21. For more information, call Tricia Shelton at Planned Parenthood offices in Midland, 687-1016, or the executive offices of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, 563-2530.

United Way moves to Wall Street offices

From Staff Reports

United Way of Midland is moving its offices from 109 North Main to 1209 W. Wall.

To lower United Way administrative costs, two local foundations in Midland provided funds to help the organization buy a building for its new location. In the new location, United Way will operate at lower cost and can provide more needed funds to local agencies because it won't be paying rent every month, said Jerri McAlpin of United Way.

The Wall Street location will house the general United Way operations as well as the Loaned Executive Program during the campaign. Because of the shortage of space in the United Way office last year, the Loaned Executives were housed at 1201 W. Texas, a donated facility.

The new location will be dedicated in the next few weeks with an open house for all volunteers and contributors planned.

ACS offers services, equipment

From Staff Reports

Loaned equipment, rehabilitation programs and counseling are among the free services offered to Midlanders by the local American Cancer Society office.

Equipment such as hospital beds, wheelchairs, commode chairs and walkers are available as well as expendable items including dressings, hospital gowns, bed pads and pillows.

Depending on the location, the society offices also offers rehabilitation programs including Reach to Recovery for mastectomies, esophageal speech lessons for laryngectomies, ostomy rehabilitation and related patient and family support groups.

"Many people are unaware of all the services we can provide right here in this town," said Rhonda Sawyer, Service/Rehabilitation chairman.

Many volunteers, some who are former cancer patients, work in the rehabilitation programs.

About $18,487 worth of services has been used since September for Midland patients, Ms. Sawyer said.

For more information about the cancer society contact Ms. Sawyer at 683-6374.

Fire heavily damages mobile home

From Staff Reports

A mobile home in Greenwood was heavily damaged Thursday by a fire apparently caused by an electric blanket, according to Midland Fire Department reports.

The fire in the mobile home, owned by Tami Wade at 21 Dusty Lane, was reported about 12:30 p.m. No injuries were reported, but Ms. Wade's dog was killed. The fire, which started in a bedroom, was extinguished with about 1,500 gallons of water, reports said.

In other reports, a $500 television belonging to Melissa Ann Ramos, 1714 S. Harrison, was taken in a Thursday burglary of her home, according to Midland Police Department reports.

Odessa restaurant employee abducted, robbed

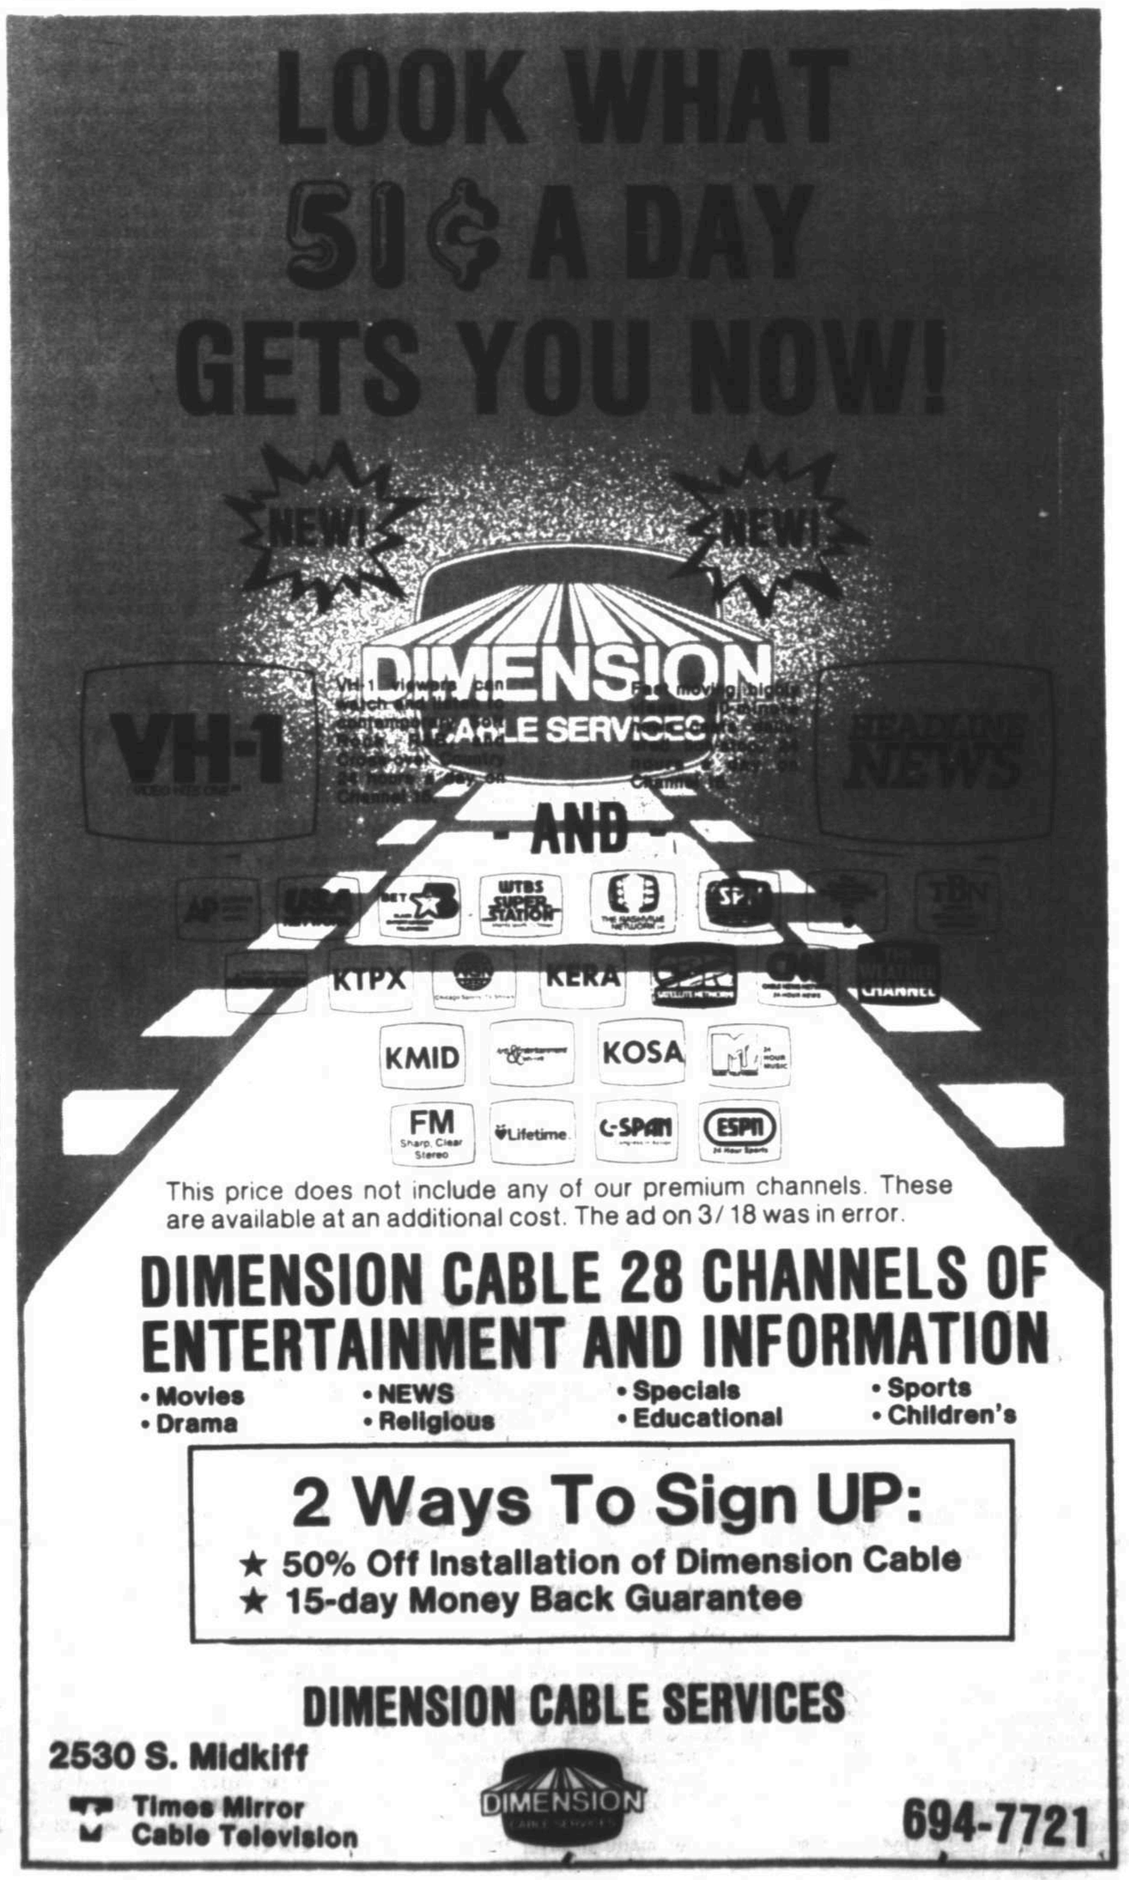

From Staff Reports

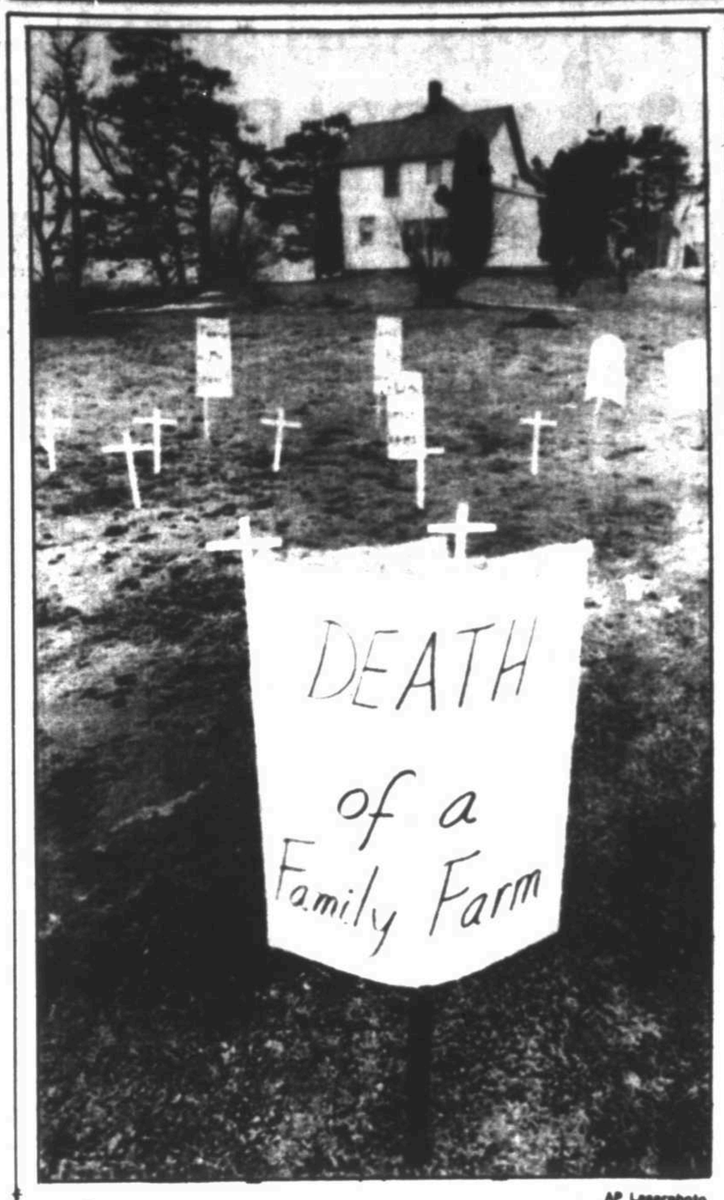

ODESSA — A 22-year-old Godfather's Pizza employee was abducted and robbed as she left the restaurant at 3613 E. 42nd St. about midnight Thursday, according to Odessa police.

Dawn Atkins told investigating officers she had just left the restaurant when she was approached by a man she described as about 5-feet 6-inches tall, weighing about 225 pounds, who displayed a dark-colored revolver stuffed in the waistband of his blue jeans, according to police spokesman John McAhon.

The young woman said the man forced her into her car, made her drive to MBank at East 42nd Street and Grandview Avenue as if she were going to make a deposit, then made her drive to an alley in the 4000-block of East 37th Street where he jumped out of the car and fled with about $400, said McAhon.

The woman said the man was wearing a blue baseball cap, blue jeans, a dark leather-type jacket and tennis shoes.

Failed family farms are symbolized by crosses in a farmyard near Lancaster, Wis. The Wisconsin Farm Unity Alliance held a rally nearby after a credit association called off an auction of foreclosed farm machinery when the group said it would demonstrate against the sale.

Threats by farm group halt foreclosure sale

LANCASTER, Wis. (AP) — A Production Credit Association auction of repossessed farm machinery this week was canceled after a farm group threatened to halt the sale.

Dan Gordon, president of the PCA, said the possible confrontation with the Wisconsin Farm Unity Alliance, a statewide farm activist group, led to the move to halt Tuesday's sale.

"We were worried about the safety of the people attending the auction, particularly the bidders," Gordon said.

Gordon said no new date had been set for the auction, and "there may not be one."

The farm alliance said late last week it planned to disrupt the auction scheduled on a PCA-owned site north of Lancaster.

Tom Saunders, an alliance spokesman, said the confrontation would have been a form of "non-violent, civil disobedience."

Insect-resistant garden cucumber may find itself in sweet pickle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have come up with a home-garden cucumber that maintains its sweet disposition while it fights off insects and plant diseases.

The Agriculture Department says the cucumber — County Fair 83 — was developed by the Agricultural Research Service and the University of Nebraska.

Clinton E. Peterson, ARS horticulturist at Madison, Wis., said in a report released Wednesday that County Fair differs in size and color from standard commercial processing varieties and is suited for both salad and homemade pickles.

Peterson, who directed the breeding and testing of the new cucumber, said County Fair "does not become bitter even under severe stress caused by plant disease, drought or inadequate soil nutrients." And this helps ward off cucumber beetles that like to munch on vines having a bitter taste.

The new cucumber also is resistant to scab, cucumber mosaic virus, powdery mildew, down mildew, anthracnose, angular leaf spot and fusarium wilt.

Peterson said the new cucumbers are a little more than three inches long when they reach one inch in diameter. That is longer than standard commercial pickling varieties and too short for use as commecial fresh market slicer types. Neither do they have the tough skin needed for shipment.

Compost energizes garden soil

Adding plenty of organic matter to your soil is one of the keys to a successful garden. Organic matter improves the drainage and aeration of clay soils and helps sandy soils hold water and nutrients.

Spread a two- to four-inch layer of peat moss, hay, compost, leaves, manure or shredded newspapers over the garden surface. Add the recommended rate of fertilizer (to make it part of the soil mix) and work in the compost to a depth of six to eight inches. Many gardeners prefer a shovel or spading fork to work the ground, but others prefer rototillers. Here are some tips to make the tilling job easier:

- Till when soil is fairly dry and friable. Tilling wet soil leaves behind large clods and causes mud to cling to tiller blades, thus upsetting the tiller's balance.
- Leave an untilled row between passes since wide turns are easier to make than "about faces." This also keeps the machine from pulling itself and you toward the next row.
- Reduce engine speed when breaking new ground or tilling heavy clay soils, so the tiller will dig better and bounce less.
- Set the brake stake half the desired depth when tilling ground the first time. Then set it to full depth and go over the ground a second time.

Fertilize fruit trees one to two weeks before bud breaks in the spring. Use a complete fertilizer (16-8-8, etc.) at the rate of two pounds per inch trunk diameter, ammonium sulfate at 1.5 pounds per inch of trunk and ammonium nitrate at one pound per inch of trunk. Place the complete fertilizer in six to eight deep holes punched within the tree's dripline. Ammonium sulfate and nitrate may be scattered within the dripline and thoroughly watered in.

A slow trickle of water for a long period of time (24-36 hours) provides the deep watering fruit trees need in summer heat. Prune each dormant season by thinning out branches and twiggy growth in the central portion of the tree.

Fruit trees in the home yard are subject to attack by insects and diseases from the time growth starts until leaves start to fall. Therefore, it is essential to have a pesticide on the fruit trees before pests attack. To grow acceptable fruit on trees that are reasonably free of disease and insect damage, home gardeners should follow a spray schedule, available by calling or visiting the county Extension office.

Alfalfa weevils spreading in county

The alfalfa weevil is the most serious alfalfa pest in the United States, costing farmers from $400 million to $1 billion a year. The feeding of the adults and larvae, or young, of the weevil can seriously lower yields, as well as the nutritional value of the crop, and destroy new seedlings.

Alfalfa weevils appear throughout the growing season in Midland County fields. Weevil larvae are more abundant during March, April and May. Peak activity usually occurs between March 25th and April 28th.

The adult female weevil lays several hundred eggs in clusters of two to 25 inside alfalfa stems. The eggs are laid in spring, but in mild weather some may be laid in fall or winter.

Inside the stems, development continues during periods of mild weather, and the eggs hatch in early spring. The larvae feed for three to four weeks — in the tips of the plants at first, and later on the foliage — lowering quality and quantity of the crop.

Alfalfa weevil activity is increasing in the area. Sweep net samples taken Wednesday indicate 7 to 25 larvae per sweep are present in area fields. Feeding damage in terminals ranges from 20 percent to 65 percent. Start checking your fields to avoid extreme damage to your first cutting.

As of Wednesday, alfalfa had not started actively growing and the larvae were extremely small. You may want to postpone insecticide treatments until the alfalfa starts active growth and larvae grow larger.

If larvae numbers are high enough to reach the economic threshold, one or two properly timed applications should give control. Treatments should be applied in alfalfa 2 to 6 inches tall when two or more larvae are found per plant or when 30 to 50 percent of the plant terminals show weevil feeding damage.

Richard Minzenmayer is Midland County Extension Agent for Entomology.

Ortega calls Nicaragua next Vietnam

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega says the House of Representative's rejection of a bill to provide $100 million in aid to Contra rebels does not mean an end to the war, but "the beginning of the Vietnamization of the conflict."

"We are threatened," Ortega said in a nationally broadcast news conference with Nicaraguan journalists late Thursday.

"We have insisted that these discussions are illegal and immoral, that they go against international public opinion and normal diplomatic relations," he said.

"A vote against does not signify that the war has ended," Ortega said, adding that the "revolutionary bands" continue fighting and "have increased their actions in recent days to demonstrate they exist, but the reality is they are being beaten."

U.S.-backed Contra rebels attacked a power plant transformer station Tuesday in the northern part of the country, leaving large areas without electricity.

"(President) Reagan has spoken of using military advisers. This is the beginning of the Vietnamization of the conflict."

— Daniel Ortega, president of Nicaragua

"(President) Reagan has spoken of using military advisers. This is the beginning of the Vietnamization of the conflict," Ortega said.

He repeated earlier remarks that he would not meet with the Contras, a move the United States has linked to resuming bilateral talks with the leftist Sandinistas that have ruled this Iowa-sized country since July 1979.

The Sandinistas took power after a five-year civil war forced Nicaraguan leader Gen. Anastasio Somoza into exile. Relations with the U.S. since then have been strained due to Nicaragua's military aid to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador and the U.S. support of anti-Sandinista rebels.

Ortega, however, said he would be willing to meet later with Reagan, whom he called, "chief of the Contras."

The Reagan administration claims that the Sandinistas export Marxist-style revolution and could become a "beachhead" for Soviet Communism in Central America.

Meanwhile, pro-government newspapers on Thursday urged Nicaraguans to prepare themselves "to resist and to win" a U.S. invasion.

El Nuevo Diario said, "Whatever the outcome of the vote, the results will be the same: There will be brutal acts of terrorism against Nicaragua and eventually an invasion by the Yankee Marines."

Barricada echoed this with a story headlined: "Alert against a declaration of war."

Life appeared normal in the capital Managua, which suffers from severe shortages of water, electricity, food and fuel. The usual number of military olive-green uniformed men and women crowded at bus stops and markets.

Anti-government demonstrations are banned under a continuing state of emergency and the only opposition newspaper, La Prensa, is prohibited from critically commenting on the issue because of strict censorship.

Opposition leaders told The Associated Press before the vote by the Deomcratic-controlled House that rejection of the Contra aid would not stop the war, which has further crippled the faltering economy. The House defeated the measure 222-210.

Bomb rocks bus stop

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A bomb exploded today by a bus stop in a small town northeast of Tel Aviv, blowing off the hand of an Israeli Arab street cleaner, police said.

Chief Superintendent Arieh Kaplan said police were treating the attack at Kfar Saba, 15 miles northeast of Tel Aviv, as the work of terrorists.

Israel radio identified the wounded man as Ahmad Juma and said the bomb was hidden in a package that exploded when he tried to remove it from the sidewalk. There were no further details.

There have been 11 bomb blasts in Israeli towns since the beginning of the year. Juma was the most seriously wounded of seven casualties.

Homeless protest plight

MEXICO CITY (AP) — About 3,000 people who have been homeless since an earthquake rocked the capital six months ago marched through the city's main streets late Wednesday protesting their plight.

The marchers, identifying themselves as residents of about 200 shelters, called for the resignation of Mayor Ramon Aguirre and for the government to quickly provide housing using money earmarked for payments on Mexico's foreign debt.

The demonstration came amid release of new and conflicting reports on the extent of damage from the quakes, the first and worst of which occurred last Sept. 19 and registered 8.1 on the Richter scale. A second quake, on Sept. 20, registered 7.5 on the scale.

The government newspaper El Nacional on Thursday carried two articles on the problems of the homeless. One noted a city government report, "The Reconstruction of Mexico City Six Months After the Earthquake," which said 37,300 people remain homeless.

The other article quoted the president of the Mexican Red Cross, Alberto Franco Sarmiento, as saying the city lacks about 44,000 housing units for those left homeless by the quakes.

Haitian minister resigns

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Justice Minister Gerard Gourgue, one of the two civilian members of Haiti's six-man governing council, has submitted his resignation, according to the government owned television network.

No reason was given in the brief announcement broadcast late Thursday over National Television.

The announcement came as hundreds of students picketed the National Palace, in the first formal anti-government protest since deposed President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to France Feb. 7.

Gourgue, who was president of the independent Haitian Human Rights League during the Duvalier regime, was widely considered the "conscience" of the civilian-military council. He had pressed for the extradition and prosecution of the ousted president and other members of the fallen regime.

On Wednesday, Gourgue announced that formal extradition procedures had been initiated for the return of the capital's former police chief, Col. Albert Pierre, and former police Sgt. Elois Maitre from Brazil. They have been charged with torture and murder by a military court.

Reagan meets de Cuellar

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — President Reagan will meet Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar at the White House today to discuss the world organization's financial crisis, the United Nations announced Thursday.

A United Nations spokesman said the visit was suggested in January by Vernon A. Walters, the American delegate, when United Nations officials told him that legislation recently passed by Congress would cause serious financial problems for the United Nations and cause the United States to violate its treaty obligations.

Elephants kill five

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Wild elephants trampled a mud hut and killed five people, including three children, police said today.

The incident occurred in Chittagong Hill tracts, 219 miles southeast of Dhaka, at village Thalipara, according to a police spokesman who was reached by telephone.

Chirac backs change, battles hostility

PARIS (AP) — New conservative Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, stepping into an unprecedented period of power-sharing with a Socialist president, immediately announced plans to denationalize industry and push through other measures by decree.

The Gaullist leader also said he intended to change election laws initiated by President Francois Mitterrand's Socialists, which cut into his power base.

Mitterrand appointed Chirac head of government Thursday, four days after legislative elections stripped Socialists of their absolute majority in the National Assembly and gave the main conservative grouping a slim majority.

Chirac's first moments as prime minister were shattered by a powerful bombing in a shopping mall on the Champs Elysee.

Chirac, who retains his post as Paris mayor, inspected the scene of the attack that killed two people and injured 28. It was the latest and the bloodiest since a series of bombings shook Paris early February, sparking an outcry by conservatives who criticized lax security.

Not only is Chirac faced with a ideologically hostile president and a fragile majority, but the lives of at least seven Frenchmen held by Shiite Moslem extremists in Lebanon remain at risk. Their kidnappers demand a change in France's Middle East policy.

Paris officers rescue a man injured in a bomb blast inside the Point Show shopping gallery in downtown Paris Thursday. One person died and 21 were injured. New Prime Minister Jacques Chirac inspected the site after the bombing.

AP Laserphoto

Chirac's ascendency to the premiership, replacing Laurent Fabius, means that for the first time in the 28-year history of the Fifth Republic power will be shared between the right and the left. The left came to power in 1981, ending a 23-year string of conservative governments.

Commentators, stressing the fragility of the new union, say caution and compromise are the keys.

But in his address to the nation, Chirac said he intended to begin implementing immediately a platform stressing the conservative virtues of deregulation, denationalization, lower taxes, reduced public spending, more competition and greater security, but whose main emphasis is bringing down a 10.4 unemployment rate.

"The French people have made their choice. They have elected a new majority to the National Assembly and, in so doing, they have approved a new political course for the country," he said. "France must be governed. It must be governed with clear-sightedness and efficiency."

Chirac then said he would soon seek parliamentary approval to govern by decree to put through the most urgent economic measures, to be presented at the opening session of the Assembly on April 2.

He referred specifically to denationalization of the six major industrial groups, banks and insurance companies taken over after the Socialists came to power and a return to the winner-takes-all electoral system from the proportional system initiated by Mitterrand to conserve Socialist seats.

Chirac inherits a relatively prosperous economy with inflation at its lowest level in more than 20 years, helped along by a falling dollar and falling oil prices.

The Cabinet, appointed by the president on the recommendation of the premier, is balanced between Chirac's neo-Gaullist Rally for the Republic Party and the center-right Union for French Democracy, which ran on a joint platform. The RPR took 19 posts, the UDF 17, and two posts went to unaffiliated ministers.

The Cabinet is to hold its first meeting Saturday with Mitterrand presiding.

Reflecting Chirac's emphasis on economic reform, the Cabinet is headed by Edouard Balladur, minister of state for the Economy, Finance and Privatization, the only minister of state — the senior rank — in the Cabinet.

The new foreign and defense ministers, Jean-Bernard Raimond and Andre Giraud, appeared to be a compromise with Mitterrand.

Leftist group in Lebanon claims responsibility for Paris bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An underground leftist group claimed responsibility today for the bomb explosion that killed two persons and wounded 28 others in Paris and threatened to stage similar bombings in Rome.

The claim came in an Arabic language statement signed by the Committee of Solidarity with Arab Political Prisoners and the Middle East. The statement was passed to a western news agency in Beirut.

It demanded the release of three Arab prisoners jailed in Paris and two others in Rome as the "sole condition to stop our blows."

Driver of car involved in fatal collision legally drunk

AMARILLO (AP) — Tests revealed that the driver of a station wagon involved in an accident in which seven died had a blood-alcohol level two and a half times higher than Texas' legal intoxication mark, officials said.

Investigators are waiting until two survivors of the crash improve before questioning them in an attempt to determine how the eastbound station wagon arrived in the westbound lanes of I-40.

Potter County Justice of the Peace Lewis C. Brazier, acting coroner in the deaths, said Thursday that a blood-alcohol level of .26 was indicated for Linda Johnson Scott, 38, of Fritch, who died from injuries suffered in the two-car crash.

Under Texas law, any person determined to have a blood alcohol level of .10 or higher is considered legally intoxicated.

The tests also were performed on six women killed in the head-on collision, Brazier said. No alcohol consumption was indicated for any of the other victims, all Malaysian students from North Texas State University.

Police rated the Monday night accident the worst in the city's history.

Mrs. Scott was driving a station wagon occupied by her husband eastbound in the westbound lanes of I-40 at the time of the crash, traffic investigators reported. No signs of skid marks were found by officers at the scene.

When the station wagon reached the top of an overpass, the vehicle collided head-on with a westbound two-door sedan occupied by seven women, all Malaysian students from the Denton-based college.

Three of the Malaysian women were dead at the scene; three died later at Northwest Texas Hospital, and one, Noriaili Mohamed-Yunus, 21, was reported in serious condition Thursday night at NWTH.

Mrs. Scott's husband, Donald Wayne Scott, 38, also of Fritch, remained in critical condition at the Amarillo hospital.

Officers at the scene Monday night took beer cans from the station wagon as evidence.

Brazier conducted a preliminary inquest at the crash site Monday night and ordered autopsies performed on all seven victims by Amarillo forensic pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann.

The seven Malaysian women reportedly were on their way to a spring break vacation when their rented two-door sedan collided with the station wagon occupied by the Scotts, police said.

The six dead women were identified as Rosesuzana Othman, 21, the driver; and Salamah Bintimohamed Ismail, 21, Mastura St. Sharif, 21, Hartini St. Sharif, 21, Marina BTE Taha, 21, and Mariah Abubakar, 21.

Their bodies were shipped late Thursday from Amarillo International Airport en route for funerals and burials in Kuala Lumpar, Malaysia. Malaysian authorities from Washington, D.C., came to Amarillo during the week to make arrangements to fly the bodies of the students home.

Malaysia, with a population of about 10 million, lies south of Vietnam in the area of South China Sea on the southeastern edge of Asia.

The Scott Family Fund has been established at Fritch State Bank to help with funeral and medical expenses. Contributions can be made by contacting Judy Scott at the bank in Fritch.

Poll results show most Texans think teachers doing good job

HOUSTON (AP) — Poll results showing that only 4.9 percent of those asked to evaluate teachers believe educators are doing a poor job in the classroom may help boost ailing morale, a teachers' association president says.

And despite claims that teacher testing was needed to increase the public's confidence in educators' abilities, Texas State Teachers Association president Charles Beard said that of 1,000 state residents polled, more than half said they believed teachers were doing an excellent or good job.

The poll follows "a most devastating week for teachers — the week of March 10 when the TECAT test was given," Beard said Thursday, referring to the mandatory competency test taken by educators statewide.

But the poll's results may help increase teachers' morale, which is "probably at the lowest ebb its ever been," he said.

Beard and about 1200 of TSTA's 97,000 members are in Houston for the association's 107th annual convention, which continues through Saturday.

"It's been said by the governor of the state and Ross Perot and by others that teacher testing was absolutely necessary because the public had lost confidence in the teaching profession," Beard said.

Judge's injunction barring testing of Dallas teacher to be appealed

DALLAS (AP) — An assistant attorney general said she will appeal a state district judge's temporary injunction barring the Texas Education Agency from forcing a Dallas auto mechanics teacher to take the state-mandated teacher literacy test.

"I have no doubts how the Texas Supreme Court will deal with the issue," said Leslie McCollom. "I think they will deal with it the same way they dealt with no-pass, no-play."

Judge John Marshall Thursday ruled that Skyline High teacher Freeman Guffey is not required to submit to a test that is not limited to his academic field and his ability to read and write well enough to perform his duties.

Marshall, whose order dealt only with Guffey, declined to declare the state's year-old education reform act unconstitutional. But he said in Guffey's case the TEA had failed to adhere to the requirement teachers be tested in their area of expertise.

"I feel wonderful, great," Guffey, 46, said after Marshall announced his decision. "It's a great beginning."

Bill Kirby, the commissioner of TEA, was disappointed with the decision.

"I am deeply distressed with the ruling by Judge John Marshall today that the state of Texas cannot require as a condition to continue certification that teachers demonstrate that they can read and write until such time as the state also tests the teacher's knowledge in the subject area that they are teaching," Kirby said in a prepared statement.

Used car salesman deals exclusively in 'cream puffs'

HOBE SOUND, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Coney differs from the contemporary used car salesman in that one must pay $1.25 just to look at the "cream puffs" he has for sale.

The difference between Coney's Autoland Inc. and other used car lots is that the 60 to 70 vehicles on display in his museum fall into the antique, classic or special interest categories. The selection may range from a vintage Rolls Royce to a Packard town car from the 1930s or a Crosley three-quarter racer.

Coney and his son, Charles Jr., have either painstakingly restored the vehicles to mint condition or they were well maintained by their previous owners. Most have surprisingly low mileage. And, he says, surprisingly low prices.

"My prices are realistic," says the 70-year-old Coney, who turned his hobby into a full-time business when he moved here in 1967 from Beach Haven, N.J.

Coney is particularly proud of a 1941 Pontiac station wagon with beautifully preserved wooden sides and 47,000 miles.

"This one is really rare in this condition," he says, adding that it has a $16,500 price tag. "You don't leave this one outside" because of the salt air along Florida's coastline.

Another eye-catcher is an immaculate, red-and-black 1931 Ford pickup. He'll let that one go for $12,000.

Coney has found over the years that a casual visitor sometimes becomes a buyer. However, most people think because a vehicle is old it automatically is an antique or classic car.

"It must be 35 years old to be considered an antique, but that doesn't mean it's a classic," he says.

The "classic" designation is given by the Classic Car Club of America to only about 70 makes of automobiles that have earned it. Most classic cars were made between 1925 and World War II and are big cars.

He mentions Duesenberg, Bugatti, Pierce Arrow and Cadillac as some of the makes in the classic category. Lincoln Continentals up to 1948 were the only postwar U.S. cars to earn the classic label.

Special interest cars are usually those that are no longer manufactured and remain outside the classic category. Some of these, Coney said, include Essex, Studebaker and Hudson.

Coney warns that often an individual with a single car to sell asks a higher price than a dealer.

"Every guy with an old car considers himself a dealer. These are people usually dealing in sentiment. My prices are based on desirability and condition."

Many of Coney's vehicles are priced for the individual wanting something special, without costing a fortune.

A 1940 LaSalle goes for $6,500 and he also has aa 1955 Chrysler New Yorker with 36,000 miles,a 1948 MG TC, a 1935 BSA and a 1965 T-Bird convertible with 13,000 miles.

For someone craving an oddity that will stop traffic, Coney has a 1954 Ford pumper truck that's completely restored, with all its equipment operable.

"Some little town that needs a fire truck can have it for $7,500."

His prize, however, is a 1934 Ford roadster with zero miles he keeps in the front showroom.

"I rebuilt that one from the ground up. There are 18,000 new parts in it and I made the roadster body from a four-door sedan that came in from Veracruz, Mexico."

Coney recalls his wife's reaction when he first began buying old cars.

"She would say: 'Why do you need it?' Now, every day she asks me, 'What are you driving today?' "

San Franciscoan reportedly oldest person in the world

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mary "Mamie" McKinney was born the same year as opera superstar Enrico Caruso, and was approaching middle age when Halley's comet passed by the Earth in 1910.

Now 112, she might be the oldest person in the world, say officials of the Guinness Book of World Records.

Her great age is attested to by a baptismal certificate in a musty record book in the Cathedral of the Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church in Sacramento — Mary Elizabeth Wallace, born May 30, 1873, baptized the following Oct. 5.

When Shigechiyo Izumi, previously recognized as the world's oldest person, died Feb. 21 at age 120 in Japan, the Guinness Book named the new title-holder with verifiable documents as Anna Eliza Williams of Wales, born June 2, 1873. That was three days after Mrs. McKinney's birthdate.

Cyd Smith, an assistant editor of the Guinness Book, said he has received a copy of her certificate and that until Guinness gets equally documented proof that someone is older, the editors will recognize Mrs. McKinney as the world's oldest living person.

"We can't be sure she's the person that's going to be in the book," said Smith, adding that three other people in the United States claim being oldest.

Of the business of longevity claims, the Guinness Book itself says, "No single subject is more obscured by vanity, deceit, falsehood and deliberate fraud than the extremes of human longevity."

Mrs. McKinney has outlived her husband, watch-repairman James McKinney, by 40 years.

She has a slight heart murmur, is nearly blind and nearly deaf, but her face lights up with delight as she tells stories of growing up in Oakland in the 1870s, dancing in the theater there, and fleeing to San Francisco's Twin Peaks after the 1906 earthquake.

Marines find one good dog

KITTERY, Maine (AP) — The Marine Corps, often looking for a few good men, was also in the market for one good dog.

He's been found.

Pvt. Smedley, a seven-week-old bulldog, will be sworn in as a Marine on Friday, replacing the late Cpl. H.F. Spike as mascot of the Marine barracks at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard.

Spike died last month of a liver ailment at age 4½, prompting a nationwide search for a replacement.

Smedley, a 10-pound pudgy pup found in Florida, will spend his off-duty hours in the quarters of Capt. and Mrs. Larry Stawicki, until he has matured — and improved his personal hygiene habits — and can assume more responsibilities.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — As spring approaches and a llama's fancy turns to thoughts of love, Sebastian is finding it a little frustrating to be the only one of his kind for miles.

"He's a lovable animal — he just needs a girlfriend now," said Bobbi Tonsfeldt, Sebastian's owner.

Ms. Tonsfeldt is looking for someone to buy the 2½-year-old llama, and she hopes the buyer owns a female of the species.

The 5-foot-tall llama has been an affectionate pet during his two years at Ms. Tonsfeldt's 82-acre farm.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sandy Brown says her white French poodle is a Republican who shares the same Feb. 6 birthday as President Reagan, so it was only fitting the dog should send the president a birthday card.

The dog — named Sandy's Cognac Jock Brown, or Jockey for short — didn't expect anything in return. But the president surprised the canine correspondent and his owner with a warm letter, thanking them for the birthday wishes, Ms. Brown said.

"I was really shocked and excited," said Ms. Brown. "I mean, who would have thought the president of the United States would have taken the time to respond to our card?"

Ear infections may affect learning

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Children who have repeated ear infections in pre-school years show poorer language skills and shorter attention spans later on, according to a seven-year study of 44 youngsters.

Otitis media, or middle-ear infection, is one of the ailments most often seen by pediatricians. The infection occurs most commonly in the first two years, when a child begins to develop language skills.

"We often think of these kinds of transient diseases, like otitis media, as having just a temporary effect on the child, and that once their hearing returns, that they'll be fine" Lynne Feagans, project researcher for the study by the University of North Carolina, said.

"My findings indicate that at least with a lot of otitis media, you're going to have children who are going to have poorer narrative skills and attention in the classroom than children who don't have that history," said Feagans, now professor of human development at Pennsylvania State University.

The study, part of a larger project on day care diseases by the North Carolina researchers, tracked 44 day care children from 3 months to 7 years of age. Nurses examined the children daily, and a doctor was called in if a child was sick.

The infection often includes fluid build-up, which can cause mild to moderate intermittent hearing loss that can last up to nine months after the infection clears, said Feagans.

The research was supported by a grant from the National Institutes of Child Health and Human Development and is the first with such extensive medical information to compare with later language skills, researchers said.

Feagans found that the 13 children who had a lot of ear infections — nine or more bouts in the first three years — had significantly poorer narrative skills at ages 5 and 7 than the other children.

Narrative skills were measured by telling the children stories, asking them to paraphrase the content and then counting how many crucial elements were included in the child's version.

"This ability to tell stories is related to reading. It's the kind of language skill you need in order to do well in school," Feagans said.

In addition, the 13 children had twice as many periods of classroom inattention as the 31 other children studied. "And we know that that is highly correlated to achievement (in school)," Feagans said.

"This habit of not attending may have been created because listening and understanding takes greater effort for children with a hearing loss," Feagans wrote in a chapter for a book on otitis media to be published later this year.

Feagans said her findings may not hold true for all children, since the children in the study were already in high-risk groups for infections — they attended day care and came from low-income families.

"We're looking at high-risk groups, but my feeling is that those groups are very important ones," she said. "When you think about the number of children that are attending day care now, I think parents should realize that their children have a higher risk of getting it and what that could mean."

Simple solutions could include having children checked regularly for ear infections. Teachers could also take care to talk to affected children directly or move them to the front of the class where they could hear more easily.

DEAR ABBY

Humane Society rules questioned

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: On Valentine's Day, my husband and I took our two daughters (5 and 2) for a follow-up appointment at the pediatrician's, and left the office feeling glum. Our 5-year-old had been pleading for a kitten for several months, so we decided to take the advice in your St. Valentine's Day column and adopt a pet. We went to our Humane Society to get a kitten. We learned that the kitten we selected would cost $45, which included initial shots and spaying/neutering at six months of age. We'd just written our last check at the doctor's office, so my husband and I counted our monies and came up with $43.78 cash.

Abby, they let us walk out with two crying girls. We could have given that kitten a perfect home, but being short $1.22 stood in our way.

Is that crazy or am I crazy? — FEELING BAD IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR FEELING: You are not crazy, and I cannot imagine the people at the Humane Society being so insensitive and petty. You failed to indicate in which Birmingham you live. There's one in Alabama, Canada, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Michigan and New Jersey. Please write again and let me know. I'll send the $1.22, and if you don't get your kitten, fur will fly.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Nameless, Please," who was tempted to meet the girl whose voice he'd heard daily on the telephone, brought back some happy memories.

In the spring of 1918, I was working on the switchboard at the local power company. Every day I took the morning report from a young engineer with a very pleasant voice. One day he appeared in person — wanting to find out if I was as sweet as my voice! After we visited a while, he invited me to go out dancing. I was a little hesitant to accept before knowing him better, so he told me I could bring my older sister and he would bring his friend along for her.

I knew at once that this was the man I had been waiting for. That first date led to our marriage four months later. We were happily married for 60 years — until his death.

I thank my lucky stars that he was curious enough to want to meet the girl behind the voice on the telephone. — MRS. J.

P.S. Dear Abby: I typed this letter for my grandmother who just celebrated her 94th birthday. She reads your column every day. — MRS. J.'S GRANDDAUGHTER

DEAR MRS. J. (and her granddaughter): Thanks for a lovely day-brightener.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column signed "Honest" in reference to thigh-reduction surgery (suction lipectomy). I would like to know more about this type of surgery. I need to do something about my thighs. I have dieted and exercised. Both have helped some, but my thighs are disproportionately large. I am so self-conscious about them that I will not wear slacks or a bathing suit.

What kind of doctor does this kind of surgery? — THUNDER THIGHS

DEAR THUNDER THIGHS: A plastic surgeon. But you would be wise to get some recommendations from the county medical association or the American Medical Association to be sure the plastic surgeon is board-certified.

Some people different as night and day

Hearst News Service

Morning people and evening people are separate species.

"When Liz wakes up, she's completely awake and she'll start talking to me right away," says husband David, a confirmed night person. "But it's like she's speaking this language that I can't understand. In the morning I'll sort of watch her lips and try to figure it out."

"Different schedules is a frequent complaint," says John Wright, marriage counselor and the author of "Strategies for Couples." "It can trigger other types of problems," including sexual problems.

Researchers say that the tendency to wakefulness at certain times is in our genes and perhaps in our souls.

"It's more than just when you go to sleep, it's a whole personality configuration," says therapist Loretta Haroian. "The night person wakes up grumpy. He needs his coffee to get him going. Night people are slow starters. Their energy builds throughout the day. Night people love the evening. They might even have a bit of insomnia. Night is when they think their thoughts. The morning person falls asleep on the couch."

Although night people are often accused of such crimes as "sleeping in," the truth of the matter is that in a complex society such as ours, we need both types.

Generally, the relationship between both types is happily symbiotic unless opposing team players happen to share a household. And if one type marries another type, the result can sometimes resemble "War of the Worlds."

When Cheryl married Tom, she admits she knew what she was getting into. He'd almost always worked at night.

"He's a night person. He once worked a 6 a.m. shift, but he didn't like it. It didn't suit him," says Cheryl.

Currently, Tom works a 3 to 11 p.m. shift, while Cheryl works days. They have two small children.

"He's off on Fridays and Saturdays, so we see each other those nights and on the other nights I see him for five or 10 minutes, if he comes home early, and that's it.

Does it put a strain on the marriage?

"Are you kidding?" she says. "There's no time for sex. If you have sex, you almost have to plan for it. I don't feel like waking up in the middle of the night for it."

It's been estimated by people who dare to estimate such things that about 10 percent of the population are "extreme night people" or "extreme day people."

If the couple decides that the night person will try to become more of a day person, Wright suggests, "The morning person should help so that the work load is evenly distributed."

Sometimes no change is possible or even necessary. Rod, a writer, has found that he's most productive at 2 in the morning. Dana, his girlfriend, is usually sound asleep at that time so she can be ready for work at 9 a.m.

"It's OK," says Rod. "In the morning she'll come in and eat her cereal sitting on the bed and we talk for a bit. During the day we talk on the phone a lot and evenings we always try to have dinner together. And then we have our weekends."

Female students urged to resist 'mathophobia'

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Societal conditioning has made women afraid of math, thus relegating them to the lowest paid sectors of the work force, believes Dolores Granito, associate professor of mathematics at the State University of New York at Binghamton.

"Women haven't come far enough to resist the 'remember, you're a girl' pressure that makes them drop out of mathematics courses as soon as their high school requirements are completed," she says.

It's more than "mathophobia," adds Granito, who is using a $50,000 grant from the New York State Education Department to launch a "More Math for More Females" project in nine upstate city, village and rural schools to find out why girls stop taking math.

She also plans to study girls in the Asian-American population to see if their aspirations, and the expectations placed on them, are different from those of Caucasian girls.

On the positive side, Granito thinks her study will prove to be an informative public relations effort that may convince teachers, parents and students to stick with those math courses.

"There are many reasons why girls give up on studying math," Granito says. "My research will attempt to pinpoint a few, including the influence of parents, teachers and friends, the belief that math is a 'male domain,' the lack of female math teachers as role models and the perception that women who study math are less feminine than those who choose courses in the humanities."

'Workaholics' need other interests

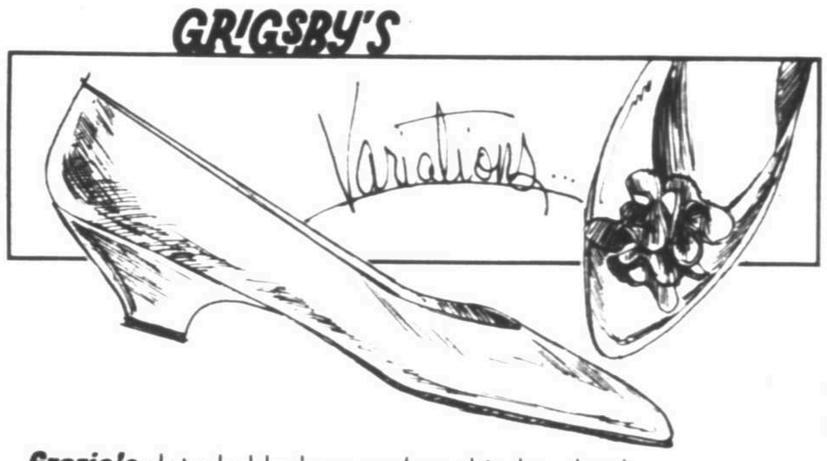

NEW YORK (AP) — The increasing number of women who have fallen into the trap of "marrying their work" should look for payoffs in other activities that equal those achieved in the workplace, advises a clinical psychologist.

Writing in Family Circle magazine, Dr. Judith Kuriansky explains that "workaholicism" is a difficult habit to break because it results in success and good feelings and, unlike other addictions, it is socially acceptable.

While studies indicate that such people tend to be happy and creative, Kuriansky warns that they are at a greater risk of health problems, loss of friends and lack of a balanced personal life.

Independence important for children

Associated Press

As a small child, Linda learned that by acting helpless she could get her parents to do everything for her. Her crying brought whatever she wanted. Her parents, by catering to her demands, were encouraging Linda to be dependent.

In her teen years, Linda went blindly along with anything her crowd did — including using drugs. Now, at 21, Linda continues to pay for her years of dependence. An unplanned pregnancy is forcing Linda to leave college less than a year shy of graduating.

Linda never learned to make smart choices because Mom and Dad always made them for her. What's more, Linda's parents failed to understand that independence takes many forms throughout a person's life.

CHILDREN WHO have been taught a healthy sense of independence can stand up to whatever the world throws at them. You can begin teaching your kids to stand on their own feet earlier than you think, according to the March issue of Better Homes and Gardens.

For a 2-year-old, independence literally means standing up on your own two feet. For the grade school student, independence also means making your own decisions. During adolescence, youngsters begin to find that independence means taking responsibility for those decisions.

Independence rests on a foundation of skills that you must help your child practice every day. For example:

■ Making decisions. Exercising good judgment is what independence is really all about.

■ Working within limits. Healthy independence means being able to stay within boundaries when necessary.

■ Doing a job. Acting responsibly turns independence into a positive force.

■ Influencing others. This is independent thinking put to work.

MASTERING TASKS — and overcoming failure — leads to self-confidence, the key to independence. Even children as young as 2 or 3 benefit from learning to accomplish. They'll let you know (or "no, no, no") when they're ready to try things without your help. Older children, too, need to feel mastery.

What you can do:

■ Look for learning opportunities every day. Stacking blocks or riding a bike — the activity is less important than your willingness to teach it.

■ Praise accomplishment with a hug, a cheer and a smile. Good tries that fail deserve the same.

■ Once a skill is mastered, don't accept backsliding.

Life for parents certainly is simpler when they make all the decisions. But unless kids get to practice simple decisions, they will never learn to make the big ones — like whether to take that first snort of coke.

WHAT CAN you do:

■ Remember even toddlers can make decisions. Two-year-old Jeffrey gets to choose between "meal" and "jooze" (milk and juice to the rest of us) for his midafternoon snack.

■ Guide older children through complex decision. Juanita, 10, is working on a decision about which summer camp to attend. With her parents' help, she has written for information about several camps. She's leaning toward a computer camp, but likes the idea of learning archaeology at a camp run by a local college.

■ Dont' wait until your child leaves home to trust him or her with big decisions. Amy must decide whether to attend college. Her parents insisted she apply to several schools, but the decision on whether to go is hers.

A world without the security of known boundaries is a scary place. Your child may howl when restrictions are first set, but limits relieve him or her of one more thing to worry about. Also, your child gains self-control by learning to act within your limits.

What can you do:

■ Decide whether your child needs physical or spoken limits.

■ Let your child participate in the setting of some limits.

■ Reward staying within limits; don't just punish transgressions.

HAVING A JOB — especially one that is paid in gratitude — is a well-worn road to independence. Every child should be given some chore to do. Regular chores develop responsibility, an inseparable partner to successful independence.

What you can do:

■ Young children should enjoy their jobs. Try to find a good match between child and chore.

■ Older kids should be committed to regular tasks.

■ Good jobs teach responsibility toward others. Caring for younger siblings fits into this category.

We all carry around in our heads an image of ourselves. In large part, this image is a reflection of how others treat us. You can help your children develop a positive self-image by treating them as people worthy of your respect.

What you can do:

■ Talk to your kids — one on one — at least once every day.

■ Let them know you love them unconditionally, when they are bad as well as when they are good.

AT WIT'S END

Discipline unshakeable quality of professional writers

By ERMA BOMBECK

Erma Bombeck

Writing is pure discipline.

That's a fact. Those of us do it for a living are able to retreat into our own silent world of words and play mental roulette with them. Nothing gets through to us. We are unaffected by doorbells, singing birds, blood-curdling screams, weather, laughter, children whining, "I'm telling!" pulsating washers, crashing glass, persistent telephones and slammed doors. Distractions are a luxury. Concentration is our life.

In more than 20 years of writing, there are only two things that will seduce me from my thoughts and compel me to lose my focus.

One of them is the first chip out of my nail polish. It's a small distraction at first. Nothing more than a small part of my nail showing. I type a little... pick a little... type a little... pick a little.

Then I put another nail under the polish and begin to work off a big piece. When it happens, there is euphoria. The typewriter is turned off and I go at it with the vengeance of a shirt maker on piece work. I promise myself that when I get that entire nail clean, I will get back to work. This will not happen.

I'm on a roll and I know it. I also know I will not stop until the entire five nails are picked clean of old polish. Valuable minutes go by as I use every resource I have to get that polish off. I use my teeth to work on the stubborn spots; a letter opener to get near the cuticle. To walk into the bathroom and get polish remover is a sign of weakness. Unless you challenge yourself, how can you expect anyone to have respect for you?

When the polish is gone from an entire hand, the typewriter is switched on and once again you try to cloister youself with your thoughts. But the well-manicured hand twists and displays itself like a seductive hypnotist. You will not be able to concentrate until every nail is undressed. You turn off the typewriter and begin to scrape and scratch. Are you ready for lunch? Of course, you're not ready for lunch. Do you want to talk to your agent? Agent who?

Two coats of polish, plus a base and an overcoat, plus a quick-dry solution will take anywhere from an hour to three hours to pick off, depending on motivation, skill and pressure.

I suppose there are a lot of people out there reading this who are saying why don't you just leave nail polish off in the first place? Then your creativity and discipline would not be in jeopardy. I've thought of that, but it wouldn't matter. You see, there's this other distraction. I've got this peice of hair, right there at the nape of my neck, that is driving me crazy. From the moment I touch it, it seems to grow and grow. Sometimes, I have to turn off the typewriter and stand in front of the mirror and see if it matches the other side. Does it look uneven to you? I'm going to get the scissors and...

The Reduced Payment Method Auto Loan...a Revolution in Auto Financing.

Imagine a revolutionary new car loan that requires a low down payment, that can drastically reduce your monthly payments, and can help you get a far better car for your money than you ever dreamed possible.

That car loan is available today at Subaru of Midland through Subaru Financial Services. It's the new RPM Loan...your first choice in loans to get your first choice in cars.

Here's how it works: We know your new car will still have value at the end of your loan term-say three to four years. So we determine that residual value when you arrange your loan.

We subtract that residual value from the purchase price, and calculate your principal payments on the difference. This means you pay only interest on the residual value, and principal and interest on the rest.

The result? You pay a lot less each month with our RPM Auto Loan than with a conventional car loan.

At the end of your loan term, you have a choice.

At the end of your loan term, there are four options open to you:
1. You can sell the car yourself, pay off the balance of the loan, and pocket the difference.
2. You can return the car, in good condition, to a designated drop-off point.
3. You can keep the car by simply paying back or refinancing the remaining residual value.
4. You can trade in the car and use the equity as a down payment on your next car.

Save on the car you budgeted for, or have more to spend on a better car.

RPM can lower your monthly paymets, with a low down payment. And RPM can help you buy, within your present budget, a far better car than you ever imagined. For complete details and an application, stop by Subaru of Midland, send in the coupon, or call 686-0226.

Please send me complete details and an application for the new Subaru Finance RPM Auto Loan.

SHELBY'S CORNER

Carroll Shelby created the Shelby Cobras that became sports car legends. Before that he was named U.S. "Sports Car Driver Of The Year" three times. Today, he specializes in hot chili, Texas style and hot cars as director of the Chrysler Shelby California Development Center. He welcomes your questions about cars and performance.

HIS CAR OR HIS WIFE? PEDALS TO HEEL AND TOE? NO MORE SUPER-LEADED GAS? INTERCOOLER PLUSES?

Q. I enjoy my car but it tends to stall when I make a sharp right turn with the clutch depressed or transmission in neutral. It doesn't happen on a left turn or when the clutch is engaged. Also, it is a sporty car and my wife complains about the harsh ride. Is is possible to detune the suspension and would higher ratio tires help?

–Harvey F., Brooklyn, NY

A. One of your questions has a simple solution, Harvey. The other may present a difficult choice–your wife or the car. Most likey you need to adjust the carburetor float level to the high limit specification. That should take care of the problem on right turns. Higher profile tires will soften the ride somewhat but you will also have to change to smaller wheels and be sure the tires don't rub against the sheet metal. As you know, a performance car is really a special balance of all its components and systems. Changing the tires an softening the suspension will upset the balance and make it an unhappy hybrid.

Q. We've heard that super-leaded gasoline is on its way out and we have a '67 Camaro we love. Do you know if we can have the engine converted or will another type of gasoline be okay to use?

–Mr. & Mrs. Len S., Burbank, CA

A. You are right about super-leaded going away. After the first of the year the EPA requires that the lead content in automotive gasoline must drop from .5 grams to .1 grams per gallon. Older engines like yours that depend upon lead to lubricate the exhaust valves will be in trouble. Under heavy engine loads and at high rpms, the valves will wear rapidly. Mixing low-lead with high octane unleaded will do no good because it's the lead that is needed. Some racers solve the problem by using aviation fuel, but I'm not sure the EPA approves. We've heard that Phillips Petroleum Company is developing an additive to solve the problem but nothing is out yet and the New Year is drawing close. For more information you can contact the International Society for Vehicle Preservation at P.O. Box 50046, Tuscon, Arizona 85703.

Q. I'm having trouble heel and toeing my 1984 Shelby Charger. I don't have unusually small feet and I can heel and toe other sports cars just fine. Any suggestions about how I can drive this car the way you intended?

–C.V.D., Essex, VT

A. I'll bet you've got a standard accelerator pedal instead of the one designed for heel and toeing, C.V. Measure your pedal. If it isn't close to 3" across, that's the problem. Also, check the distance between the brake pedal. There's no U.S. standard but we stay close to the European requirement so your foot won't get caught between the pedals. With the brake pedal depressed, it should be about 2⅜" apart. If your car's pedals have those measurements, you should have no trouble heel and toeing.

Q. How much horsepower will I get by adding an intercooler to my '85 Daytona? How much does one cost and will it void my 5/50 warranty? P.S., It's an automatic.

–Mal T., Irvine, CA

A. Unless you're really skilled or know someone you trust to play a tune on your car we don't encourage you to add an intercooler to your car, Mal. Not only do you void your warranty, you have to make adjustments throughout the entire power train in order to accommodate the added power. An intercooler alone will add 10 to 20 percent more horsepower and if you adjust the boost you get 24 to 35 more. Aftermarket intercooler kits run between $600 and $1,000. Unless one came out recently, however, I don't think there is one available for automatics.
