Iraq plans pullout

U.S. could raid Iraq if Saudis hit

By Stewart Powell
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The United States prepared Friday to launch a retaliatory raid against Iraq if Iraqi forces building up along the border with Saudi Arabia push beyond Kuwaiti territory, knowledgeable U.S. officials said.

The American preparations — and the unusual public disclosure of prospective U.S. military operations — were part of an escalating campaign by the Bush administration to dissuade Iraqi President Saddam Hussein from expanding his invasion of Kuwait into neighboring Saudi Arabia in the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Late Friday, an Iraqi government spokesman, speaking on a radio broadcast monitored in Cyprus, said Iraq would begin withdrawing its armed forces from Kuwait on Sunday. The spokesman did not detail a timetable for the immediate and complete withdrawal demanded by the United States.

The Iraqi pledge came barely an hour after President Bush stepped up his threatening rhetoric by reiterating that that "all options are open — economic and otherwise."

"I'm not discussing options," Bush said in remarks before flying to the Camp David, Md., presidential retreat. "But I would simply say that the status quo is unacceptable — and further expansion (of the invasion) is even more unacceptable."

Bush indicated the United States, if requested, would defend Saudi Arabia against an Iraqi attack. The "integrity" and "freedom" of Saudi Arabia are "very, very important" to the United States, Bush said.

"If they ask for specific help — it depends obviously on what it is — I would be inclined to help in any way we possibly can," Bush said. "It's that serious."

Bush said an Arab summit in Saudi Arabia on Sunday would not impede unilateral U.S. military action.

Knowledgeable U.S. officials had said the United States is preparing to stage a retaliatory raid on military and economic targets in Iraq in the event of an Iraqi invasion of Saudi Arabia, which sells the United States 1.2 million barrels of oil a day, one-sixth of all American imports.

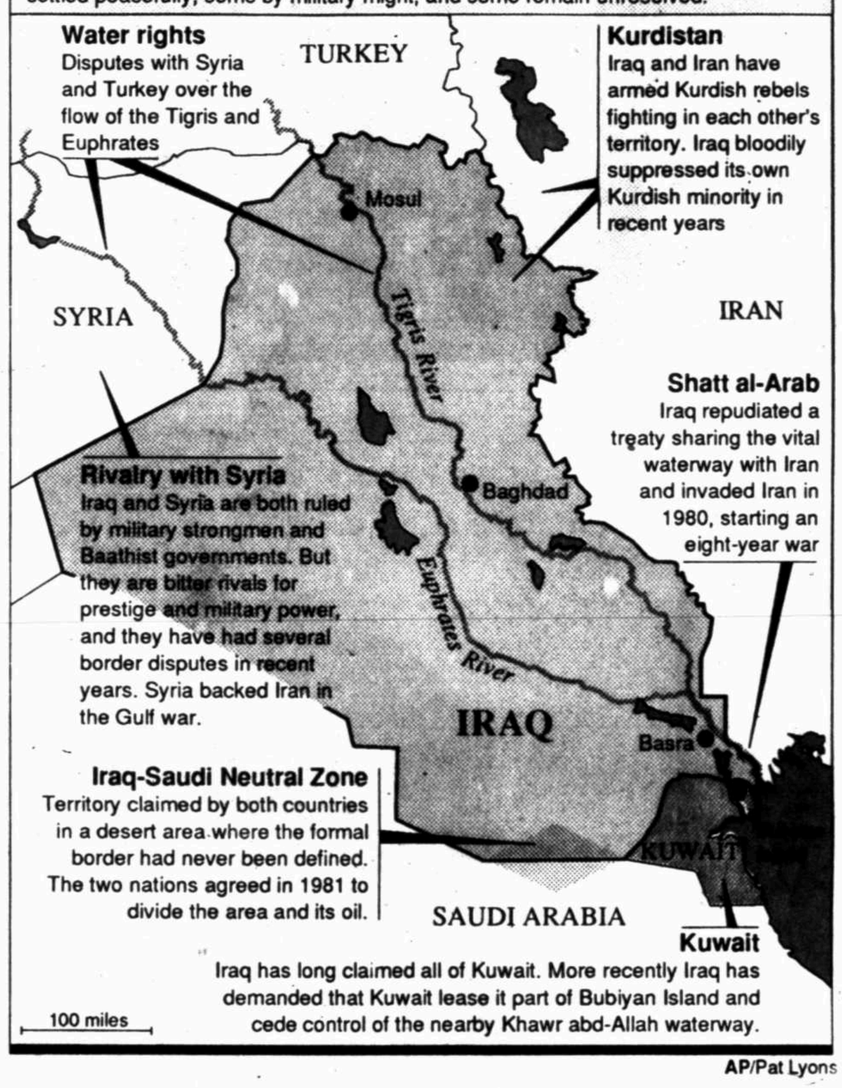

At least two Iraqi military units have moved from positions along the Iranian border to a staging area near the junction of Kuwait, Iraq and Saudi Arabia, House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said.

A senior military officer familiar with intelligence reports said Iraq had augmented its invasion force of 130,000 troops and 350 tanks in Kuwait to add at least 150 tanks by early Friday.

A missile, apparently launched by Iraqi forces, landed on Saudi territory near the convergence of the Saudi, Iraqi, and Kuwaiti borders, according to diplomats in Saudi Arabia.

Unneighborly Iraq

In the years since the revolution that overthrew the Hashemite monarchy in 1958, Iraq has had disputes with neighboring countries on all sides. Some have been settled peacefully, some by military might, and some remain unresolved.

■ Despite a pledge to begin withdrawing its forces from Kuwait on Sunday, Iraq's position near the Saudi Arabian border is drawing the interest of the U.S., the U.N. and neighbors in the Middle East.

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq said Friday it will begin withdrawing troops from Kuwait in two days, but the U.S. State Department said some Iraqi soliders had pushed their advance to within a few miles of the Saudi border.

An Iraqi government spokesman said all troops in Kuwait will be withdrawn according to a timetable, beginning Sunday, according to an official radio broadcast. No time was specified for complete withdrawal.

The government spokesman said the Iraqi troops might stay longer if "something cropped up that threatens Kuwait and Iraq."

Iraq said it invaded Kuwait on Thursday to provide security for a provisional government that had overthrown Kuwait's rulers. The international community dismissed that claim.

In Washington, President Bush warned Iraq not to threaten U.S. "vital interests," or try to add oil-rich Saudi Arabia to its conquest of Kuwait. He said the United States was willing "to help in any way we possibly can" to stop Iraqi aggression. Bush has refused to rule out the use of military force.

A NATO source said the United States had "contingency plans" in case Iraq's president, Saddam Hussein, advanced his forces further through the strategic region. He did not say what those plan were.

In related developments:

■ The Soviet Union and United States issued a rare joint statement demanding that all countries stop arms supplies to Iraq and that Iraq pull out of Kuwait immediately. The Soviet Union, Iraq's main weapons supplier, cut off shipments Thursday.

■ Egypt broke the silence among major Arab nations and harshly condemned the invasion. The Arab League, meeting in Cairo, also denounced the invasion and called for Iraq to withdraw immediately. The Gulf Cooperation Council, which includes Saudi Arabia, similarly criticized the Iraqi attack in a statement issued in Cairo.

■ Jordan's King Hussein met with Saddam in Baghdad, then announced that Arab leaders would gather for a summit Sunday to discuss the crisis. He also urged the United States not to intervene militarily.

■ Saudi sources said there was a good chance Saddam would meet with the ousted Kuwaiti ruler, Sheik Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah, at the summit.

■ U.S. officials sought information on 14 Americans, mostly oil workers, missing in Kuwait who apparently were seized by Iraqi forces. There are about 3,000 Americans in Kuwait.

Industry seems pleased by climbing oil prices

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Eyes were anxiously glued to the television set at a downtown Midland eating establishment noon Friday, awaiting word on the latest oil price.

When it was announced that the futures market had topped $25, the crowd of mostly white-collar oil company workers let out a whoop of joy.

For a change, Midland has reason to whoop. The futures price for West Texas Intermediate closed Friday at $24.49 per barrel — "paper barrels" as they are called in Midland — after opening at $24.49 and soaring as high as $26.25 in volatile trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

At the same time, the posted price or actual price paid for a "wet" barrel of crude climbed to $23.00 per barrel, up $1.25. Since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Thursday the "real" price paid for a barrel of oil bought at the lease has gone up $3.75.

For the Permian Basin, which produces approximately 40 percent of Texas' 1.73 million barrels daily, that translates roughly to an extra $2.6 million daily being pumped into the local economy. If prices go to $30 per barrel — as some predict — the take could get substantially higher.

It is money oil companies will use to buy new equipment, pay wages, drill new wells, retire debt, lease acreage, drill development and wildcat wells and all the other things that keep the Midland economy alive.

However, many Midlanders in the oil business see the higher prices as a mixed blessing.

"Our producers are skeptical of the higher oil prices," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice-president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA).

Ban could inhibit Fina's operation

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — If a boycott of Iraqi crude oil, imposed Thursday by President Bush, has proved a bonus to most of the Permian Basin in higher oil prices, it is troublesome to the Fina Refinery at Big Spring.

"We have refined Iraqi oil in the past, but with the president's ban on oil from that country we will now have to buy from other sources," said Jeff Morris, refinery manager.

However, Morris said the boycott would impose no undue burden or price disadvantage, and he anticipated no difficulty in making up the Iraqi crude.

"We will just have to evaluate the market and make our best purchase," he said.

Morris said the U.S. is currently importing approximately 700,000 barrels daily from Iraq and that a number of refineries would be affected by the boycott, including Fina's refinery at Port Arthur which has a capacity of 200,000 barrels.

Expatriate awaits return to Kuwait

Bob Peek had his bags packed and his goodbyes said early Thursday morning when an item on the news invalidated his airline ticket to Kuwait.

Peek, stranded in Midland after visiting his family on a leave from the Kuwaiti Ministry of Defense, said he'll fly back in a minute if the Iraqis withdraw their troops Sunday or Monday as promised.

So far, however, he has not been able to reach the ministry, the U.S. Embassy or any of his co-workers still in the country.

Mesquite honey may be best in world

PHARR, Texas (AP) — Mesquite honey — it just might be the very best in the world.

That's right. Rio Grande Valley grown, ultra-rare, as clear as peach nectar, smooth and rich to the taste, and becoming harder to find as brush lands are bulldozed into desert.

Chances are you've never tasted pure mesquite honey. At first glance, you know it's different. Extremely pale yellow, almost clear, it doesn't look like what you buy at the store.

And the taste? The texture is incredibly light with a delicately sweet flavor.

Connoisseurs would never think of using maple syrup on pancakes when pure mesquite honey is available — it's that good. Try it on pastries, use it in tea, add it to oatmeal, dab it on muffins, sprinkle a bit on salads ... its uses are almost endless.

Joe Martinez of Pharr has been an aficionado of mesquite honey for a long time. So much so, in fact, that three years ago he decided to place a few bee colonies on his ranch near Alice just to get mesquite honey.

"It's all in the timing," Martinez said when asked how he manages the hives for mesquite honey production.

He noted the honey can be produced only during the time the mesquites are in bloom.

Because of the 1989 Christmas freeze, mesquite blooms were late this year, he said. But he was ready, nonetheless.

When he notices the first hints of spring leaves beginning to appear on his mesquite trees he sets out three colonies — each at a spot designed to keep the bees only on mesquite flowers.

"I do it because I love the honey, and because I believe there are health benefits to eating it," said Martinez. "Actually, I'm more of a naturalist."

With three colonies, Martinez says he is able to produce about 300 pounds of honey each year. However, only a small fraction of that is pure mesquite honey.

"This year the pure stuff came in May instead of April like it usually does, because of the freeze," Martinez said.

He said that he has to watch the hives carefully in order to ensure he takes the mesquite honey out before the bees start to visit other flowering plants.

By June the bees were already attending to other types of plants and the honey was becoming the more traditional gold color.

"By that time you know you don't have the pure mesquite honey anymore. It's still pretty good tasting, but not near as flavorful as the pure stuff," said the South Texas rancher.

What worries Martinez most about the availability of mesquite honey is that, "all the mesquite trees are being root plowed.

"It's the source of the best honey in the world. I think the mesquite is invaluable. We used to have large groves of mesquite and the pure honey was easier to find. Now it's very rare, and it's going to get rarer," he said.

"Store-bought honey is filtered, cooked, and who knows what else," said Martinez. "But I don't do any of that. I tend to my own hives. I know what I'm getting because I'm right there to watch it coming out of the hive, and my honey is uncontaminated. It's worth the trouble as far as I'm concerned."

He said that bees use the sap from mesquite trees as a "propolis" or bonding agent for their hives — yet another function the mesquite has in honey production.

Bulls drilling thrilled driller

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — When dentist Lance Lindenmuth doesn't have his hand in someone's mouth, he thinks it's fun to be thrown from the back of a 2,000-pound bucking bull, or from a mechanical bull in his backyard.

He also skydives.

"I'm the type of person that sees a lot of action in life," said Lindenmuth, 29.

"If you haven't experienced life, if you haven't gotten into it and done some things, you really haven't lived," he said.

He took up bullriding a few months ago just for the thrill of it.

Sudden rainfall brings unexpected surprises

Staff Report

Friday's late afternoon thunderstorm brought misery to some residents and joy to others.

Power outages all over the city left some Midlanders sitting in the dark, according to Mike Blake, spokesperson for TU Electric. Electrical crews were scrambling to attend to downed lines, outages and damaged transformers that had been affected by the storm, Blake said.

Although North Midland received the greatest amount of rain — 2 to 4 inches according to the National Weather Service (NWS) in Midland — power outages weren't concentrated in any one area.

"We have customers with their electricity off all over town," Blake said Friday evening.

"We are scrambling to get everyone's power back on. But, it will probably be the wee hours of the morning before we know the extent of the damage from the storm."

The thunderstorm, which began with a light rain at 3 p.m., formed in northern Midland, according to John Kalina, meteorologist intern with the NWS.

The storm wasn't a result of any front moving in, Kalina said. "It formed in the air mass when warm, moist air clashed with hot, dry air," he said.

Heavy rains, gusty winds and even hail were reported in some sections of Midland. "Hail up to 1-inch in diameter was reported in northwest Midland," Kalina said.

He described the late afternoon thunderstorm, which resulted in flash flood warnings and severe thunderstorm warnings as, "borderline severe."

Flooded streets and drainage ditches made conditions ripe for stalled car and "rain-related" accidents, according to police reports. Reports indicated that 10 minor and three major accidents had occurred by late Friday evening.

A Midland Fire Department spokesperson said lightning had caused "a slew of automatic alarms to malfunction."

Despite problems from the storm, some Midlanders enjoyed wading through water and even motorized skiing over a drainage ditch "lake" created from accumulated water near Solomon Lane.

NWS reports predicted more thunderstorms throughout the weekend.

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms and highs in the mid-90s. Winds will be south and southeast 5-15 mph.

Tonight's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms and lows in the mid-60s.

Sunday's forecast is mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms and highs in the mid 80s.

The record high for Friday was 106, set in 1953. The record low for Friday was 61, set in 1973.

(From 1A)

Peek estimates that about 1.75 million expatriates from most of the world's nations — including some 450 American families — work in Kuwait.

There are only 250,000 Kuwaitis, Peek said.

An American citizen, he had been advising the Kuwaiti government on the Hawk missile system and said he had gotten used to the unpredictability in the Arab state.

Turmoil greeted Peek when he first arrived in Kuwait in 1983. His employer, Raytheon Service Co., the U.S. Embassy and the airport had just been bombed by terrorists.

Through the years he's witnessed more bombings, some at close range. He's also watched Kuwait and Iraq slow-dance to this current show down.

"They've been arguing over the land for years. Kuwait shot down an Iraqi aircraft just prior to the Iran-Iraq war. This is a resumption of that. The war was just a temporary setback," he said.

During the Iran-Iraq war, Peek said Iraqi television broadcast war movies all night long and launched early morning Silkworm attacks on tankers in the Kuwait port.

"If you hit a 55-gallon oil drum with a hammer, it sounded like 70 times that when the Silkworms hit those empty tankers.

"The first couple of times it really shook me up but I finally got to where I just rolled over and went back to sleep."

"We became immune to the fighting," said Peek's wife Evelyn Peek, who worked in Kuwait for nine years before coming to Midland in June. "We were so close to the Iran-Iraq border it was like Midland and Odessa."

Peek watched tensions within Kuwait build earlier this year after the emir, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, dissolved the parliament. He said prominent Kuwaitis demonstrated against the move and the paramilitary moved in to contain dissent.

He doesn't know if revolutionaries staged a coup and invited Iraq, as the invading nation claimed, but said it was possible.

"If they march into Saudi Arabia, that will ruin their claims of helping out the provisional government," he said.

"I think we all thought it was a hoax to get oil prices up."

He doesn't believe the U.S. will send forces into the region any time soon.

"Iraq has 100,000 troops in Kuwait and another 900,000 across the border. It would take a month for the U.S to move that many people around," he said.

Peek said the only tactic that might work would be a strategic air strike against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, similar to the one attempted on Lybia's Moammar Gadafi.

Despite the volatility of the situation, Peek hopes to return to Kuwait soon. He has household goods and a brand-new Mercedes-Benz waiting for him and all his assets are frozen.

"I've never lived anywhere longer than three years before and Evelyn has lived only in the Philippines and Kuwait, so we've got a lot of friends and feelings there.

"It had Pizza Huts, a Dairy Queen, Safeway. ... It was home," he said.

OIL: Price could pump up area economy

(From 1A)

"It's a roulette situation — an oil price based a war. It has no foundation." He adds that, because there are no economic fundamentals supporting current oil prices, they can skyrocket out of sight.

"I wouldn't go out and drill any wells based on this price, but the higher run checks are certainly nice," says Joe Pevehouse, president of Adobe Resources in Midland. For Adobe, which produces about 3,500 barrels daily, the increase in the posted price will mean an extra $13,125 a day.

"A good oil price can make you a lot of money," said Pevehouse, who quickly adds that he had rather have a lower stable oil price than an uncertain high one. "Stability is the key. You can't plan with an unstable oil price."

While flash-in-the-pan higher oil prices may improve the local economics in the short term and make for good conversation, most oilmen would much prefer a steady stable price to extreme lows and highs.

Phil Davis, comptroller for Great Western Drilling Co., said a main concern of his company is to see where prices will settle. "We are looking for oil prices to settle slightly higher than they would have normally."

"Stability doesn't appear likely," he said. "Prices were volatile at $15 and they are still volatile at $25."

Scott Sheffield, president of Parker & Parsley Petroleum, said the run-up in oil prices could be good for the Permian Basin, provided it settles back down at a reasonable price. He thinks prices could "settle" at $25 per barrel, if Iraqi pipelines into Turkey are shut down. Sheffield said that it is typical of markets to overreact for two to three days and then settle back to a lower price.

He also believes that the higher oil prices could lead to a revival for Midland independent oil companies that rely heavily on investment capital and have been nearly paralyzed for lack of it.

"I expect more capital will be attracted by the higher prices. In the last few days since the price run-up, our sale of drilling programs to investors has increased substantially," he noted.

Sheffield explained that many of the major oil companies had pulled their exploration departments out of the Basin, leaving less competition for the independent oilmen. "All we need now is capital," he said.

One of the things Sheffield fears most is that the non-producing states will see the oil companies making money again and will want the government to impose some kind of tax penalty, because the public will be paying higher gasoline prices.

During the Carter administration, when Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries drove oil prices up, Congress reacted to oil company profits — which were termed "obscene" — by enacting the Windfall Profits Tax. Kent Hance, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, said in Midland Tuesday that it was the only time in the history of the United States that a tax had been imposed on profits.

Judge Oscar Mauzy addresses area TSTA gathering in Odessa

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — School reform was in the limelight Friday night when Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) representatives met the state Supreme Court Justice who wrote the opinion on Edgewood vs. Kirby.

Mauzy

Judge Oscar Mauzy, who is a candidate for chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court, spoke to a gathering of 35 TSTA representatives from Region XVIII at the Holiday Centre during TSTA's leadership development seminar.

Although some educators discussed the disparities of funding between rich and poor school districts, Mauzy remained mute on the issue, since Edgewood vs. Kirby is still being challenged.

He said cases like Edgewood vs. Kirby represent the "illuminating process of continued litigation" in the American justice system.

Mauzy, who is endorsed by the TSTA, said he would like to see reform in the judicial process which would end the lengthy delay between trials and appeals. "Justice delayed is justice denied," he said.

Mauzy also said he supported the concept of single-member districts and upgrading the teaching profession as part of school reform.

"But mostly, I am an admirer of educators," Mauzy said. "I considered becoming a professor when I was fresh out of law school. I have always had a profound respect of teachers and I would like to repay the system which has made me so successful."

TSTA lobbyist Marjorie Walls of Austin, said, "Mauzy has always been an education advocate. He carried legislation for us (TSTA) back when he was a senator in Dallas. He is a staunch supporter of reforming the public education system in Texas."

Kay Walling, TSTA member, said "We all need to pull together to make our voices heard in the Legislature."

Local/Area Reports

Robbery

Staff reports

Two men got away with three cases and eight single cans of beer, valued at $43, during an aggravated robbery of a Midland convenience store early Friday morning, Midland police said.

According to police reports, two men entered the 7-Eleven, 809 S. Midkiff Road, about 2:40 a.m., picked up two cases of beer each and attempted to leave.

The clerk, David Holmes, 23, confronted the men and a struggle ensued. Both suspects struck the clerk several times with their fists.

The confrontation ended when one of the suspects pulled out a small pocket knife and threatened to kill Holmes. The suspects then ran out the door.

The suspect with the knife was described as a Hispanic, about 5 feet 2 inches tall, with a thin build, short hair and possibly a pony tail. The second suspect, also Hispanic, was described as about 6 feet tall, and thin.

A vehicle used by the suspects was described as a white two-door compact car.

An investigation is being conducted, police said.

Assault

A 24-year-old woman reported an attemped sexual assault early Friday morning, police said.

According to police, the woman said she was taking a shower about 7 a.m. at The Lakes apartment complex, 516 N. Loop 250, when she noticed movement through the shower door. The woman exited the shower believing the movement was her boyfriend, who had left shortly earlier.

The woman was confronted by an unidentified man — with his pants partially down.

The stranger then approached the woman, who began to scream and scratched the man on the face before he fled out a sliding glass door where he was believed to have entered.

The man was described as a black male between 5 feet 6 inches and 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 175 pounds, with a muscular build, and wearing light blue hospital clothing.

Mosbacher critical of Bullock's ties

Donations from lawyers may show opposition to workers' comp reform

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Rob Mosbacher, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, Friday accused his opponent, State Comptroller Bob Bullock, of accepting more than half a million dollars from personal injury lawyers, thus siding with opponents of worker's compensation reform.

Mosbacher was at Schlemeyer Field Airport in Odessa Friday to attack Bullock's association with workers' compensation reform opposition.

According to Mosbacher, personal injury lawyers are largely responsible for high workers' compensation rates.

"I frankly hold them responsible, and Bullock by association," Mosbacher said.

Bullock has received $502,798 in contributions from personal injury lawyers since 1987, Mosbacher said. More than $260,000 of that amount was collected since January, he added.

Mosbacher said his contention that Bullock is against reform has been strengthened since the Texas Legislature passed a workers' compensation bill last December.

"If he (Bullock) had been for the bill, he would not have accepted it (contributions from personal injury lawyers)," Mosbacher said.

"Everywhere I go in this state, including Midland, the single largest problem confronting big and small businesses is workers' compensation," Mosbacher said.

According to a Bullock campaign aide, a large part of the reform legislation doesn't go into effect until 1993, and making it an issue at this time is premature.

"The real reason Mosbacher is talking about workers' compensation is as a scare tactic," according to a statement by Bullock's campaign office.

"What should really scare people is junior Mosbacher's mismanagement of the Texas welfare agency and his large amount of out-of-state contributions," according to the statement.

It said that sponsors of the reform legislation — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Sen. Robert Glasgow and Sen. John Montford — are strong supporters of Bullock's candidacy.

The two candidates have recently been taking turns accusing each other of selling out to special interests' groups.

In July, Mosbacher said Bullock's campaign is generated by donations from political action committees and powerful lobbyists.

Bullock responded by accusing Mosbacher of using his family's fortune and the influence of his father, U.S. Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher, to gain campaign contributions.

Odessa calls on its third expert in defense of wastewater plants

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The city of Odessa pulled out all the stops in defense of its wastewater reclamation plants in Friday's testimony in 142nd District Court.

Elaborate diagrams and charts and a third expert witness illustrated just how badly the city wants to win the Anderson-Gay vs. Odessa civil trial.

Midland County landowners George Anderson Sr., George Anderson Jr. and Louise Gay claim Odessa's wastewater discharge down Monahans Draw is responsible for the 1985 and 1986 flooding of their property that left it useless.

The Andersons and Mrs. Gay are each seeking more than $100,000 in actual damages.

Lee Wilson, a Santa Fe-based hydrologist with Lee Wilson & Associates, said excessive rainfall caused the draw's high waters, to which Odessa's effluent discharge contributed 0.03 inches — "half the width of a paperclip," he said.

Using a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers statistical model, Wilson said a 10-year flood similar to those caused by heavy rains in 1985 and 1986 would flush 3.4 billion gallons of rainwater down the draw in a day. Such a rainfall would cause waters to rise 4 feet over the banks of the draw.

Odessa releases 5.2 million gallons of effluent daily.

Wilson testified that Odessa's wastewater wouldn't even reach the Anderson and Gay properties because plants and evaporation use it up within 10 to 12 miles of the East Water Reclamation Plant. The plaintiffs' land is 18 miles downstream of the plant.

Wilson demonstrated with maps and overlays that the parts of the properties that flooded are in the flood plain zone drawn up by the United States Geological Service and the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"It was not a huge hurricane-type storm but a whole series of rains in 1985 and spring and summer of 1986 that soaked up the whole watershed," Wilson said.

"Monahans Draw was running for a long time."

Wilson attacked Albuquerque, N.M.-based hydrologist Tim Kelly's theory that the draw was like a flower pot that could only absorb so much water before it was saturated and overflowed.

"It's more like a trench with a garden hose trickling in it," he said. "When it rains, the rainwater soaks into the soil and the hose water has little effect on it."

Drilled samples Wilson took at Farm-to-Market Road 1788 and State Highway 349 showed water at a relatively deep level under the soil, indicating that the soil is not saturated, he said.

"No way can Odessa have an effect on flooding down here (beyond SH 349)."

Wilson also took a chemical "fingerprint" of Odessa's effluent and compared it with one of ground water under the draw.

He said the ground water has far more salt and gypsum than the effluent.

"I don't see any signs of Odessa's water making a difference in the water quality of the draw," he said.

Paul Bohannon asked Wilson if he accepted evidence provided by charts and surveys over testimony of people who have lived on the draw for their whole lives.

Wilson said he had to back up observations of flooding on the draw with "real, physical evidence.

"I have to go with what I can physically explain since I wasn't there," he said.

Jim O'Leary, attorney for the city of Odessa, rested his case after Wilson's testimony.

Judge Pat Baskin recessed the trial until 9 a.m. Monday, when he will give the jury the charge and allow closing arguments.

Baskin also released jurist Lisa Head from the trial so that she could go on a family vacation.

Bluebonnet's Fail says S&L deal saved taxpayers $100 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Arizona insurance company executive accused of getting a sweetheart savings and loan bailout deal in 1988 said Friday that the transaction has already saved taxpayers $100 million.

James M. Fail of Phoenix defended his acquisition of 15 failed S&Ls which he now operates under the name of Bluebonnet Savings Bank, Dallas.

"Bluebonnet is part of the solution to the savings and loan crisis, not part of the problem," he said in testimony scheduled for delivery Monday to a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

"Bluebonnet already has saved the American taxpayer over $100 million as compared with continuing the operations of the 15 insolvent thrifts," he said.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, has sharply criticized the deal between Fail and the now defunct Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Fail, according to Metzenbaum, acquired the thrifts and was awarded government subsidies valued at $1.8 billion after investing only $1,000 of his own money.

Fail borrowed the rest of his initial $70 million investment, half of it from an insurance company he controls, the senator has charged in two investigative hearings.

Metzenbaum also has scrutinized the role of Robert Thompson, a GOP lobbyist and former aide to George Bush when he served as vice president. Thompson represented Fail in his dealings with the bank board.

And the senator has questioned why the bank board did not disqualify Fail as an acquirer because a company he controlled had pleaded guilty to fraud in 1976 in Alabama.

Rebutting the accusations, Fail said "substantially all" of the government assistance "ultimately will go to depositors and creditors of the 15 failed thrifts, paying for mistakes made long before I ever heard of any of those thrifts."

Bluebonnet's profits "do not depend soley on goverment largesse — they depend on managing the institution well," he said.

Bluebonnet has distributed no earnings to its shareholders and as chairman of the institution he receives only an $18,000 annual retainer and a $1,000 fee per meeting, he said.

He said it was "ridiculous" to suggest he acquired Bluebonnet for $1,000. He said he has committed eventually to invest a total of $120 million, has invested $95 million so far and had "pledged substantially all of my business holdings as collateral for personal loans" incurred as part of the committment.

Fail's statement, submitted to Metzenbaum's antitrust subcommittee, was distributed to reporters late Friday afternoon.

"When I acquired Bluebonnet I thought I could contribute to the resolution of the greatest financial disaster to strike this country since the Great Depression," he said. "And I have done so only to be accused of failing to disclose information," he said.

Dallas police chief removed from duty

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Police Chief Mack Vines was removed from duty Friday after a special investigative panel reportedly found possible witness-tampering and perjury in the probe of an officer's controversial firing.

City Manager Jan Hart said Vines and Assistant Chief Greg Holliday were placed on leave indefinitely. The Dallas district attorney's office is looking into the matter, she said.

Ms. Hart made the announcement late Friday after releasing the findings of a special panel reviewing the firing of former Officer Patrick LeMaire.

Long-term spill effect to be 'quiet tragedy'

N.Y. Times News Service

■ Spill estimate adjusted upward/ 10A

GALVESTON — Fewer than 20 seriously oiled shore birds have been found in the wake of the Galveston Bay oil spill.

"I think that the so-called oil spill has been greatly exaggerated," Texas Gov. Bill Clements said after a helicopter tour. "We had difficulty finding any."

But wildlife experts predict the oil will prove deadly to a large number of birds over time.

"It will be a very quiet tragedy, unseen by the media and unknown to most people," said Sandra Hoover, executive director of the Houston Audubon Society.

David Hankla, regional supervisor for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said only the most seriously oiled birds are caught because they are unable to escape those seeking to help them.

The 500,000-gallon oil spill, which has fouled some beaches and marshes and entered the bay food chain, will kill many birds invisibly, Hankla said.

Some birds are only slightly oiled and will ingest the oil by preening their feathers; others will consume it by eating tainted marine life.

"It may not take an hour or two or even a couple of weeks," Hankla said. "But they'll crawl up into the marsh and die. We won't see them. These types of impacts are extremely difficult to document."

The severity of the threat to birds depends on what happened to the oil, Hankla said, noting that federal and state officials still don't know exactly how much leaked, how much has evaporated and how much is still in the bay.

But if the oil has sunk and enters the sediments at the bottom of the bay it can kill organisms at the base of the food chain or enter the food chain, eliminating food for the birds or building up toxins in their bodies.

Such long-term hazards could affect the reproduction of some avian species or impede their ability to migrate, Hankla added.

"Those effects could last a long time in the bay, but it's not a matter of 'Gee, I've got thousands of birds keeling over,'" Hankla said.

Ted Eubanks of the Houston Audubon Society said Thursday that some oil had come ashore on the Bolivar Flats on the Gulf side of the Bolivar Peninsula, threatening many shore birds, including 70 to 100 endangered piping plovers.

"But the Coast Guard won't help us with it because they don't believe it's from the spill," Eubanks said.

Comptroller reports thousands miss out on aid

AUSTIN (AP) — Thousands of needy Texans miss out on assistance because of a tangled state bureaucracy and the federal government's failure to give Texas its fair share of aid money, the comptroller's office reported Friday.

The report said the problem is a double whammy for Texas taxpayers who wind up paying twice for the same aid — once through federal taxes and again through higher state and local taxes.

"When Texans are prevented from getting the federal assistance that is their rightful due, all Texas' taxpayers are shortchanged because they have to pay the bills that the federal government pays in other states," Comptroller Bob Bullock said.

The report is one in a series Bullock's staff is preparing after a three-year review of federal funding of various programs. The comptrollers office says Texas loses about $2.4 billion in federal aid each year because of avoidable problems in the state and federal governments.

According to the report, if Texas received all the federal aid it deserves:

- Another 120,000 low-income Texas women and children could receive medical care.
- About 67,000 more disabled Texans could receive disability payments and qualify for medical aid.
- More than 45,000 low-income pregnant women and children could receive food payments.
- Another 30,000 low-income children could get meals at day care centers.
- Nearly 4,100 Texas students could take part in vocational education classes.

Compounding the problems is a fractured state bureaucracy, under which 16 agencies administer health and human services programs, the report said.

"This confusing and wasteful fragmentation is literally taking food out of children's mouths, and preventing many of Texas' poor, disabled and elderly from obtaining essential medical attention," Bullock said.

"Every day, Texans are suffering because our patchwork bureaucracy is failing to respond to legitimate calls for help," he said.

The report said Texas system of delivering federal aid to citizens has been tinkered with for decades. But the final result "is a tangle that makes it difficult for anyone — even the estate agencies themselves — to determine what federal aid is available and who can qualify for it."

It recommended that Texas monitor other states, particularly how they make different agencies work together; encourage the federal government to support innovative ideas for administering aid, including combining federal and state programs; increase the use of toll-free phone numbers and computer data bases to make it easier for citizens to obtain information about assistance.

"At least 10 states have streamlined the process of applying for aid," the report noted. "People can go one place to apply for a number of programs."

Five slightly injured in Delta evacuation

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Fifteen people suffered scrapes, bumps and sprains Friday during the evacuation of a Delta Airlines jet after a phony bomb threat.

Delta Flight 748 landed safely at 3:42 p.m. at its scheduled stop, Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Passengers slid down emergency chutes, said Marilyn Beauvais of the airport public affairs department. There were 11 crew members and 230 passengers on board.

The passengers were bused to the airport terminal. No bomb was found. Those with injuries were taken to area hospitals as a precaution, said Joe Licitra, district marketing manager for Delta in Dallas.

The Department of Public Safety took bomb-sniffing dogs on the plane and found nothing suspicious, he said.

The bomb threat was received in Los Angeles, where the flight originated at 10:45 a.m., Licitra said. It came in a phone call to the Los Angeles reservations desk about 10 minutes before the plane was to land as scheduled at DFW.

Licitra said the plane, a Boeing 767, was scheduled to be back in service on a flight to Atlanta Friday night.

GULF CONFLICT

Fort Worth service station manager Jim Clayton places numbers on his sign, indicating a five-cent increase in gasoline prices. The cost is rising as suppliers react to renewed conflict in the Middle East.

Higher gasoline prices posted in most areas

Hearst News Service

Higher gasoline prices, which have increased dramatically in some parts of Texas and the nation, jumping as high as 14 cents per gallon, are expected to hit Midland today.

A survey of several local service stations Friday night revealed that most had not yet raised prices, but expected to do so today.

Meanwhile, in Austin, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Friday he would prosecute any gasoline sellers who engage in illegal price gouging in the wake of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Mattox said his consumer protection division was putting together a special task force to investigate what he called "overnight" increase in gasoline prices.

"I began receiving calls last night at my home from people who are angry and suspicious about sudden hikes in gasoline prices. In one day's time, there is no way that Iraq's invasion should translate into higher prices at the pump," Mattox said.

"We will be checking these sudden gasoline price hikes around the state, and if we find illegal price-gouging, we'll prosecute to the fullest extent," he said.

Mattox said any immediate price hikes mean prices are being raised on gasoline that was already in service station pumps before the invasion took place.

The American Automobile Association, in a survey of 1,400 retail gas stations nationwide, found self-service unleaded gasoline selling at an average of $1.12 a gallon, up 4 cents over the past two days.

J. Kay Aldous, national AAA spokesman, said in a news release from the association's Heathrow, Fla., headquarters that he expects retailers to pass on to customers further wholesale price increases over the weekend. He asked gas retailers and motorists to restrain themselves from excessive price increases and panic buying.

Bill Ligon, executive director of the Texas Service Station Association in Austin, said he was unaware of price increases, but he said dealers have little control over the price of gas.

"The only reason the dealer goes up is the supplier raises his wholesale prices," Ligon said. "If the price goes up $3 a barrel, that equates to 7 cents a gallon."

But Mattox, who said he received calls at his home Thursday night from people complaining of gas price increases, said there was no way Iraq's invasion should cause higher prices that same day.

"The prices are going up on gasoline that was already in the pumps at service stations when the invasion occurred, so it appears to us that consumers are simply being gouged," he said.

"While it is reasonable to assume there will be price raising in the future because of this latest twist in the Middle East, it is totally unreasonable to make consumers pay a higher price for oil products that were already here before the invasion," he said.

Mattox said his Consumer Protection Division is putting together a special task force to investigate the overnight hike in gasoline prices.

"We will be checking these sudden gasoline price hikes around the state," he said. "And if we find illegal price gouging, we'll prosecute to the fullest extent."

Kelly Fero, a spokesman for Mattox, said the attorney general's office has received reports from across the state of price increases from 2 to 13 cents. He blamed the higher prices on "unconscionable corporate greed."

Missing oil workers may be in Iraq

By Philip Shenon
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Fourteen American oil workers are missing in Kuwait, and there are reports that at least some of them may have been taken into custody by invading Iraqi troops and moved across the border into Iraq, Bush administration officials said Friday.

"We cannot confirm that the missing Americans are in Iraqi control, but we believe they are," said Richard A. Boucher, a State Department spokesman. "We are continuing to press the government of Iraq for information on their whereabouts."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration was aware of reports "of people being rounded up or Americans being held in one place or another, and at this point we cannot confirm any of those reports."

On Thursday, President Bush warned that the United States would respond in a "very dramatic way" if the missing oil workers or other Americans in Kuwait were harmed.

"A fundamental responsibility of my presidency is protecting American citizens," he said.

On Friday, the State Department advised American civilians remaining in Kuwait and Iraq to leave those countries as quickly as possible.

For the moment, that appears to be impossible for the nearly 3,800 Americans who are said to be in Kuwait.

The nation's international airport was reported to have been bombed by Iraqi jets during Thursday's invasion and has since been closed to commercial traffic.

Administration officials said Iraq had also closed all of Kuwait's land and sea borders.

The State Department said about 500 Americans were in Iraq, of whom about 50 were U.S. diplomats, other government officials and their families.

Asked why American civilians in Iraq were being asked to leave, Boucher said an executive order signed by Bush after the invasion barred Americans from most commerical transactions with the Baghdad government, and that for American business people remaining in Iraq, "there would be very little for them to do there."

Administration officials said several of the missing American workers were employed by Santa Fe International, a California-based oil and gas company that was acquired by the Kuwaiti government in 1981 for $2.5 billion.

Among the Santa Fe workers reported to have disappeared is Donald Whatley, 49, of Shreveport, La., a senior drilling foreman who had returned to Kuwait from Louisiana just this week.

Invasion creating new concerns for families of Lebanon hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait created new worries Friday for the families of Americans held hostage in Lebanon because of a complicated link between the captives and a group of Kuwaiti prisoners.

"What has always frustrated the families is that anything that happens in the Middle East has a ripple effect," said Peggy Say, the sister of Terry Anderson, the longest held of the six U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

Say and others said they are concerned because the fate of 15 prisoners in Kuwait — the so-called Dawa prisoners — are connected to American hostages in Lebanon.

Experts say that Imad Mugniyeh, a Moslem Shiite accused of masterminding American kidnappings in Lebanon, is the brother-in-law of Mustafa Yousef Badreddin, one of the prisoners in Kuwait.

Badreddin and 14 others are serving life sentences in Kuwait for the 1983 bombings of the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait.

Mugniyeh, who operates under cover of the shadowy Islamic Jihad movement, has insisted the American hostages in Lebanon will not be freed until the Kuwaiti prisoners are released.

Iraqi goods, oil seized at ports

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Customs agents seized 479,000 barrels of Iraqi crude oil from one tanker and blocked another offshore, but both cargos apparently will be released since they were bought before an embargo was announced.

The Treasury Department said Friday that oil loaded before President Bush announced a trade embargo Thursday against Iraq and Kuwait may be delivered.

Treasury spokesmen were not available to comment on specifics, but the exception appeared to cover both the cargoes seized in Texas.

The Customs Service, along with the U.S. Coast Guard, seized the oil at the Port of Corpus Christi on Thursday afternoon, hours after President Bush's embargo went into effect at 5 a.m.

The oil was being unloaded from the Hellespont Dignity, sailing under a Swedish flag, at a Coastal Corp. refinery facility, said Patricia McCauley, district Customs director in Houston.The cargo had been unloaded at sea from a Norwegian mother ship, the Berge Banker.

That ship remained in the Gulf of Mexico outside U.S. territorial waters, Ms. McCauley said.

GULF CONFLICT

U.S. forces in Mideast bolstered by third carrier

By Susanne M. Schafer
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The United States is sending a third aircraft carrier and 15,000 sailors and Marines toward the Middle East early next week to bolster its naval armada in the Persian Gulf crisis, Pentagon officials said Friday.

As military strategists and lawmakers debated the dangers of committing U.S. combat troops to a protracted desert war against Iraqi tanks, it was clear that the immediate U.S. response to Iraq's seizure of oil-rich Kuwait was to focus on a show of naval strength.

Officials said 15 naval vessels led by the carrier Saratoga and including a Marine amphibious assault unit will leave East Coast ports on Monday and Tuesday for the Mediterranean.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams refused to link the latest ship movements with the gulf crisis, saying they had been planned for months. Although the Saratoga had been scheduled to relieve the USS Eisenhower, he said, the two carriers might remain together on duty in the Mediterranean for a while.

The Eisenhower was deployed in the region in March. Its Marine amphibious unit has been stationed off the coast of strife-torn Liberia for several weeks.

The carrier Independence already is steaming toward waters outside the Persian Gulf from the Indian Ocean to back up the U.S. Navy's task force of eight warships already stationed inside the gulf.

While the United States is focusing for the time being on naval maneuvers, concerns were expressed at the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill about the implications of sending American troops into battle against Iraq's 5,500 tanks and million-man army.

Even though billions of dollars in U.S. arms have been sold to Saudi Arabia over the years, its 65,000-man army is largely untested on the battlefield. Just last month, the Saudis signed an agreement to buy $3 billion of the U.S. Army's most advance tanks, the M-1A2s, but they aren't scheduled for delivery until the mid-1990s.

Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told NBC the United States could "dominate the gulf from a naval standpoint (and) we can dominate them in the air," but that landing U.S. combat troops "would be a major problem."

Military observers note that most Mideast nations friendly to the United States have refused to allow U.S. bases on their territory.

The closest major ground forces available to the United States are based in Western Europe or on the island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean, a week to 10 days away from the Persian Gulf region by sea.

"We were impotent 10 years ago in the hostage crisis and we're impotent now," said one military analyst, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified.

"We have no infrastructure there to accept any kind of land forces. No way to get water, food, fuel — let alone tanks and trucks — to support a land war," he said.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney met with Bush at the White House on Friday and then reviewed Iraqi military moves and U.S. options with Gen. Colin Powell and other members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The possibility of an Iraqi thrust into Saudi Arabia worried members of Congress. Lawmakers who attended secret briefings on the crisis said the 120,000 Iraqi troops massed along their southern border could easily attack the Saudis next.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley said such a development would raise "the most serious security questions" for the United States and "would call for a direct military response by the United States, Western Europe, maybe even the Soviet Union."

Added Foley: "This would be an action that could not be ignored."

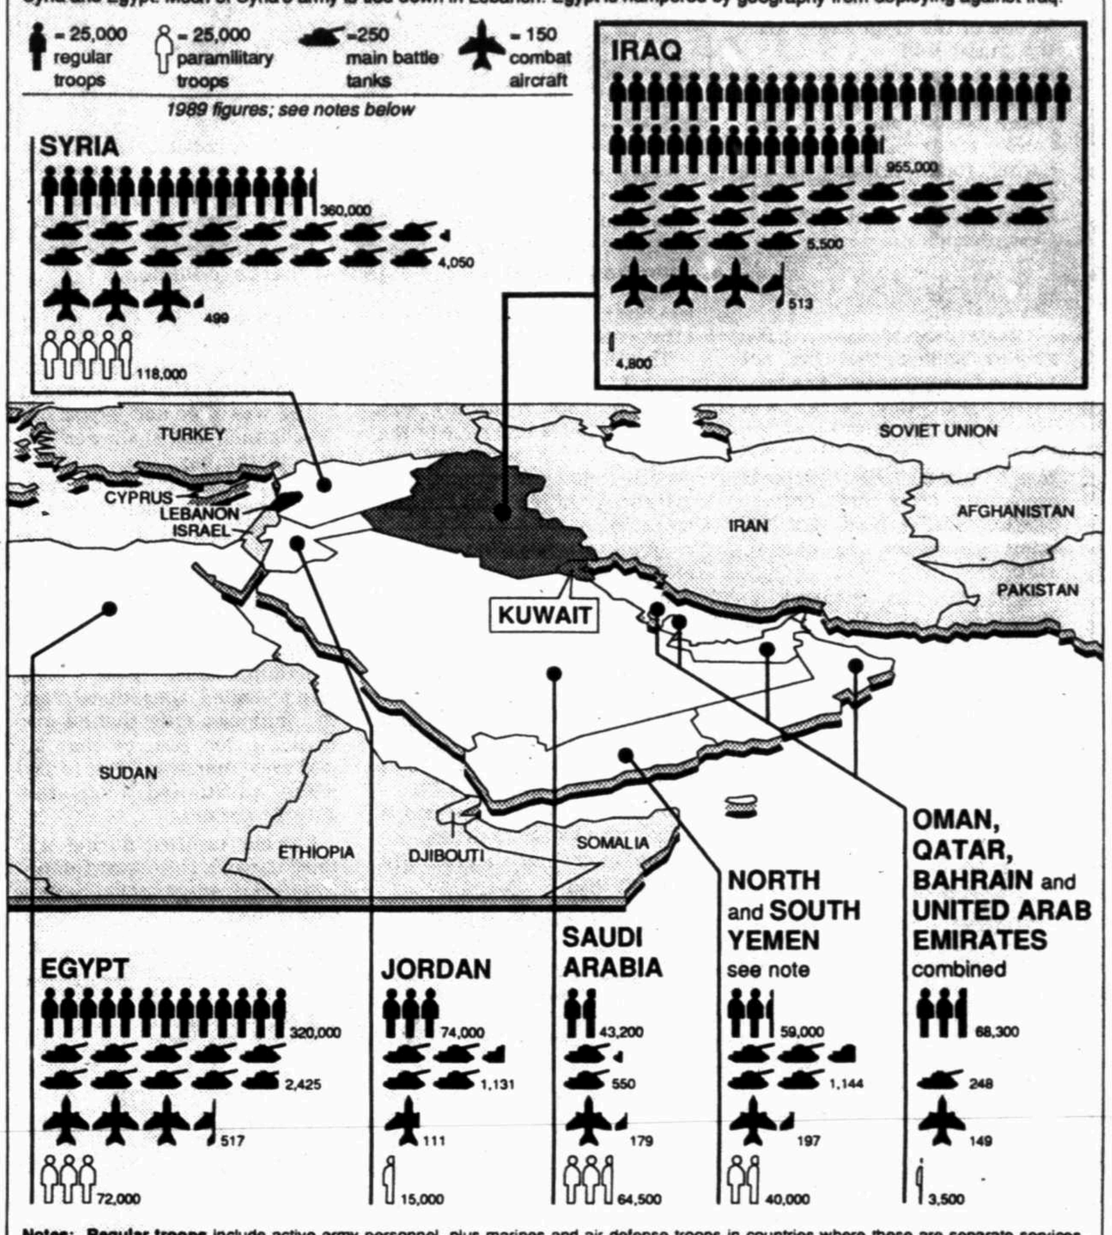

The Saratoga will be accompanied by the guided missile cruiser Philippine Sea, the destroyer Spruance, guided missile destroyer Sampson and frigate Elm R. Montgomery, all based in Mayport, Fla.

Departing Norfolk, Va., will be the battleship Wisconsin, guided missile cruiser Biddle, frigate Thomas C. Hart and destroyer tender Yellowstone. The fast combat support ship Detroit, based in Earle, N.J., will also join the battle group, the Pentagon said.

Those nine ships are scheduled to leave on Tuesday. They will be preceded on Monday by five ships that make up the Marine amphibious ready group.

Iraqi War Machine's Dominance in Arabia

Iraq's military is by far the largest of any Arab state in the region, and it is the only one with significant recent battle experience. Many of its troops must defend its border with Iran. But Iraq still has enough armed might readily available to overwhelm all of the Persian Gulf Arab states, even if they act together. The only Arab armies that could seriously challenge Iraq are those of Syria and Egypt. Much of Syria's army is tied down in Lebanon. Egypt is hampered by geography from deploying against Iraq.

Notes: Regular troops include active army personnel, plus marines and air defense troops in countries where these are separate services. Paramilitary troops include border guards, tribal defense levies, and certain other forces. Combat aircraft excludes helicopters. North and South Yemen merged in 1990; figures shown are the sum of former forces of the two separate countries and probably include significant amounts of obsolete or unserviceable equipment. Figures are from the IISS annual "The Military Balance 1989-1990." The map is not to scale.

U.N. council hears sanction proposal

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States asked the U.N. Security Council on Friday to impose sweeping military, trade and economic sanctions on Iraq for its invasion of Kuwait.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering said the members of the 15-nation council expressed strong interest in applying comprehensive mandatory sanctions.

If approved, it would be the first time since 1967 that the Security Council imposed such wide-ranging sanctions — from arms to trade — upon a state.

It was not known if the entire council was ready to approve such penalties.

"I detect strong interest in sanctions ... and we will be moving rapidly to discussion of a text ... A resolution could be passed in 24 hours," Pickering said after council consultations.

"We want to put teeth into the Security Council's demand Thursday that Iraq withdraw its troops from Kuwait," Pickering said.

The Council on Thursday condemned the invasion, demanded Iraq's immediate and unconditional withdrawal, and called for urgent negotiations between Iraq and Kuwait to resolve their differences.

A U.S. government official, who later briefed reporters on condition of anonymity, said the White House would press for sanctions despite Iraq's announcement late Friday its soldiers would begin leaving Kuwait on Sunday.

He expressed skepticism about Iraq's announcement that it would start a troop pullout.

Consultations continued with the Security Council and other nations in an effort to reach consensus on a resolution imposing sanctions. The measures would be designed to punish Iraq and to force it to withdraw completely and without conditions.

The official said Washington may call for an emergency council meeting this weekend.

This notice concerns 1990 property tax rates for Midland County. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Oil spill estimate rises

SAN LEON (AP) — Coast Guard officials said Friday a barge that collided with a tanker in the Houston Ship Channel may have spilled 700,000 gallons, or nearly all of its cargo, into Galveston Bay.

The Coast Guard has said a half-million gallons of oil spewed into the bay after the accident, while about 200,000 was believed to have remained in one of the cargo tanks after the initial spill.

But the spill estimate was adjusted Friday afternoon to "between 500,000 and 700,000 gallons" after salvage crews earlier found nothing in the once-submerged cargo tank, Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene said.

"It looks like a lot of the oil may have escaped from it," Greene said.

"It could be close to 700,000 gallons (spilled), but I'm not willing to say that yet. The total capacity of that barge was 750,000 gallons. They're telling us they had 716,000 gallons actually on board," Greene said Friday at a press conference at Eagle Point, a local development where oil has washed ashore.

State officials, meanwhile, announced that a ban on fishing in the bay would be partially lifted Saturday in several areas apparently unaffected by the oil and baywide for fin fishing.

The accident occurred a week ago when a tanker collided with two barges in the Houston Ship Channel, causing one barge to nearly sink. Both barges unleashed oil into the seafood-rich bay, threatening sensitive marshes, birds and other wildlife.

Clean-up crews vacuum up oil that washed ashore at Houston Point in Beach City Friday. Officials estimate 500,000 to 700,000 gallons of oil has escaped into the bay following last weekend's tanker/barge collision.

The oil has washed ashore on several beaches. The latest was Houston Point, a marshy area north of the leading edge of the 12-mile oil slick, where oil was reported along an estimated 10 miles of shoreline Friday morning.

Cleanup crews continued scooping oil off the surface Friday, while salvage team worked on the damaged barge. The skimmers have collected about 84,000 gallons of oil.

Oil-eating microbes were poured into a 400-yard stretch of a sandy beach on Pelican Island Thursday afternoon. But Texas Water Commission Chairman B.J. "Buck" Wynne said it would take weeks to determine if the microbes successfully gobbled up the oil.

The spill has halted traffic in the Houston Ship Channel for most of the week. The channel was open to limited traffic Friday morning after the damaged barge was lifted and moved out of channel into shallower waters in the bay.

The Houston pilot who guided the vessel through the Houston Ship Channel last week testified Friday that the helmsman caused the accident when he turned the wrong way.

Raymond Fincher, 48, a Houston Ship Channel pilot for 10 years, denied allegations from the Shinoussa crew that he was traveling too fast, or that he told crew members what to say when questioned about the July 28 accident.

Fincher testified during the third day of a U.S. Coast Guard-National Transportation Safety Board hearing.

STATE IN BRIEF

Pam Faulkner found innocent

AMARILLO (AP) — Jurors late Friday found the daughter of the main defendant in the nation's largest saving and loan fraud trial innocent of charges that she attempted to influence a dismissed juror in the case.

"I knew I was innocent from day one," Pamela Faulkner Tomalin said, tears streaming down her face, after the verdict. "They were trying to get at my father. The only way to hurt him is through his children. I have said this case was blackmail, and I still think it is."

Ms. Tomalin, 27, daughter of Garland developer D.L. "Danny" Faulkner, was accused of influencing Samuel Vera, 28, who was a juror in her father's 1989 thrift fraud trial. Vera was removed from the jury, which nonetheless was deadlocked. A mistrial was declared.

Faulkner and six other men remain accused of conspiring to inflate appraisals and loans for condominium developments in eastern Dallas County. The men were charged with diverting $135 million from the proceeds of more than $700 million in loans from five thrifts in Texas and Arkansas.

New illness confirmed

TEMPLE (AP) — Since March, physicians throughout Texas have reported 149 cases of a mysterious new illness called Palestine Syndrome. The malady mostly strikes children and is characterized by high fever and temporary arthritis.

Dr. Jeffrey W. Jundt, a physician at Scott and White Memorial Hospital who first identified the illness, said Thursday that experts still know little of its origins and are uncertain of how, or if, it can be prevented or cured.

It has not been fatal and victims recover completely, Jundt said, but some patients have been hospitalized as long as six months.

The illness was named after a town about midway between Dallas and Houston where it was first encountered last March.

Hightower praises recall

AUSTIN (AP) — The state agriculture department and two companies said Friday that their joint program to collect an out-of-date pesticide has given nearly $250,000 to cotton farmers and made the environment safer.

The agriculture department, Ciba-Geigy and Nor-Am sponsored nine collection sites in cotton-producing areas of Texas to collect the banned pesticide chlordimeform.

The pesticide was banned by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in 1989 at the request of its manufacturers.

About 100 farmers participated in the collection. Farmers who brought unopened containers to the collection sites were reimbursed by the manufacturers.

Farmers were reimbursed a total of $247,000.

"Farmers have a few extra bucks in their pockets and the chemical companies have gotten rid of several tons of potential problems," Jim Hightower, head of the Texas Agriculture Department.

Drug warehouse found under office in building

NOGALES, Mexico (AP) — A drug warehouse discovered by Mexican police about four miles south of the border may be linked to a drug-smuggling tunnel found earlier between Agua Prieta, Mexico, and Douglas, Ariz., authorities said.

Both were concealed beneath rooms that could be raised by sophisticated hydrolic lifts, according to Mexican federal police.

Mario Alberto Torrijos, head of the Nogales office of the Federal Judicial Police, said the warehouse was discovered Saturday and was raided the next day.

The tunnel, which U.S. officials have said was used to smuggle cocaine, was discovered in May.

The drug warehouse was found beneath a 10,000-square-foot warehouse in Nogales, about 80 miles west of Agua Prieta.

Torrijos said about 15 agents were met with gunfire when they raided the building on Sunday, but no one was wounded.

The men guarding the warehouse escaped, he said.

A statement released in Mexico City by the Mexican Attorney's General Office said two Agua Prieta men were taken into custody in Mexico City in connection with the case, and that a man from the United States and another from Mexico were being sought.

The statement also said officials in Guadalajara, Mexico, had discovered a similar warehouse outfitted with the same kind of hydraulic system.

Because of the similarities between the Nogales and the Agua Prieta hydraulic systems, Mexican police said they are investigating a possible link between the two.

"It's the same method, so we think it could be linked," said Mario Torrijos Rascon, police group chief in Nogales. He estimated that the hydraulic system cost $2 million to build.

The Nogales warehouse was located beneath a 15-foot by 15-foot office, which was lifted about six feet by the hydraulic system. Agents found 5½ tons of marijuana wrapped in 601 plastic packages in one of two storage rooms, Torrijos said.

Officials also seized three shotguns, four automatic weapons, two silencers and two rifles, and found a radio transmitter and scales.

Torrijos said he did not know how long the warehouse had been in operation.

"It could be one, two or three years," he said. "It's the first one of its kind in Nogales."

He said investigators were examining records to determine who owns the warehouse and the property.

The warehouse was surrounded by a concrete block wall that measured 14 feet high in places. The warehouse is about 25 feet high, about 160 feet long and 50 feet wide.

Most of the it was empty except for several hundred rolls of toilet paper, which Torrijos said may have been used to hide the marijuana as it was transported in trucks.

The underground rooms, which have fluorescent lighting, measured 22 feet by 22 feet and 22 feet by 36 feet.

Police found the underground cache on the four-acre Rios Paper Distributing Co. site in Nogales' "Casas Palenque" neighborhood, a mixed housing and industrial area. An informant's tip led to the vault, Torrijos said.

During a tour of the vault on Thursday, Torrijos said he believed the hydraulic system was better engineered than that at the Douglas-Agua Prieta drug tunnel.

"We were at the Agua Prieta tunnel, and when the covers were down, you could still smell the drugs," he said. "When we close this chamber, it is so hermetically sealed you can't smell the marijuana."

Two Germanys agree on Berlin as new capital

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Leaders of both Germanys on Friday urged joint elections two months earlier than planned, and the countries agreed to make Berlin their united capital.

The early election plan ran into immediate objections from the leftist Social Democrats, who form part of the East German coalition government but are the opposition in West Germany.

The Soviets said it could disrupt international talks on German unification.

East Germany's prime minister, Lothar de Maiziere, made the proposal to advance all-German elections from Dec. 2 to Oct. 14.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl welcomed it, saying the earlier vote "corresponds with the wishes of the people in East Germany and also in West Germany." Kohl's comments came in a statement released by his office in Bonn. He was on vacation in Austria.

Under pressure for early unification, De Maiziere said he sought "unity that was as quick as possible, but as good as needed" and hoped early elections would improve the climate for investment.

He said the all-German elections should create "political clarity and with that also economic security."

The Dec. 2 date was informally approved by political groups in both Germanys, and it may take complicated parliamentary maneuvering to move up the vote.

Social Democrats in both Germanys immediately criticized the proposal. Oskar Lafontaine, the Social Democrats' challenger to Kohl in the upcoming election, called the latest proposal a "transparent manipulation attempt" for Kohl and de Maiziere to quickly capitalize on their popularity.

He said the proposal for earlier elections breached an agreement that was reached with the Social Democrats on a Dec. 2 election date.

The East German Social Democrats, de Maiziere's coalition partners, accused the prime minister of "election fraud" and trying to improve the chances of the Christian Democrats, both de Maiziere's and Kohl's party.

1990 Property Tax Rates in Greenwood Ind. School District

This notice concerns 1990 property tax rates for Greenwood Ind. SD. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

	Last year's tax rate:	$1,581,955.15
	Last year's operating taxes	$1,193,404.77
+	Last year's debt taxes	$2,775,359.92
=	Last year's total taxes	$162,530,040.
+	Last year's tax base	$1.7076 / $100
=	Last year's total tax rate
	This year's effective tax rate:
	Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$2,741,857.63
+	This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$166,012,810. $1,65160 /$100
=	This year's effective tax rate
x	1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$1.70114 /$100
	This year's rollback tax rate:

WORLD IN BRIEF

Iran province hit by quakes

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A powerful earthquake jolted Iran's oil-rich province of Khuzestan Thursday, a little more than a month after a devastating earthquake in the north killed 40,000 people.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the tremor struck in mid-afternoon and measured 5.5 on the open-ended Richter scale.

The dispatch said reports of possible damage or loss of life were not immediately available.

Khuzestan is located on the oil-producing belt in southern Iran.

Big Ben's bearing bad

LONDON (AP) — It's not the heat but a faulty bearing that has stopped the clock of Big Ben three times this week, the government said Friday.

The hands of the famous clock on the tower of the Houses of Parliament stopped at 5:11 a.m. Friday, which is about where they snagged on Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Big Ben is the name of the bell that tolls the hours, but the name is informally applied to the clock as well.

Sargent said it apparently was just a coincidence that the clock broke down during the hottest days of the London summer. On Thursday, the temperature reached 97 degrees.

Student leader freed

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — A student who led a 53-day anti-government rally has been freed after six weeks' detention and today denied charges that he incited protesters to violence.

Marian Munteanu, whose beating and detention drew domestic and international protest, was released Thursday night. In an interview in his apartment Friday, he called his time in jail "a nightmare" and pledged to continue working with the student movement.

Munteanu, 28, the president of the Bucharest student union, was a leader of an anti-government rally that police violently dispersed June 13 after 53 days.

The authorities' decision to use force against the peaceful protesters led to angry riots.

Soyuz capsule docks

MOSCOW (AP) — The manned spacecraft Soyuz TM-10 docked with the orbiting Mir space station Friday, two days after it was launched from the Baikonur Space Center in Soviet Central Asia, Tass reported.

Lt. Col. Gennady Manakov, the flight commander, and engineer Gennady Strekalov will spend one week working with the crew, which has been on board since Feb. 11.

Cosmonauts Anatoly Solovyev and Alexander Balandin are scheduled to return to Earth on Aug. 9, following a mission plagued by problems with the spacecraft's thermal insulation and a broken hatch.

Manakov and Strekalov will spend 4½ months in the Mir and will conduct 250 experiments, including the growing of pure crystals to be used as semiconductors and computer chips.

Coach axed

CINCINNATI (AP) — Miami (Ohio) University fired basketball coach Jerry Peirson on Friday for giving one of his players a false grade in a class.
Peirson gave the player, who no longer is at the school, an "A" in his Basketball Theory course even though the player never attended class nor did any coursework.
R.C. Johnson, athletic director of the school in Oxford, Ohio, had recommended that Peirson be suspended without pay for four months, removed from further teaching duties and placed on permanent probation.

Davis set to introduce 8th Raider to HOF

■ Ted Hendricks heads a list new player inductees into the NFL Hall of Fame, while former Dallas coach Tom Landry will be introduced by Roger Staubach.

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Al Davis will step to the podium at the Hall of Fame ceremonies for the eighth time on Saturday.

For the eighth time, the president of the Los Angeles Raiders will be introducing someone else as an inductee, rather than accepting his own enshrinement.

That's a development that galls one of this year's Hall of Famers, Ted Hendricks.

"I guess like the rest of the old Raiders, I wanted to see Al in there before us so he wouldn't have to make all these presentations without already being in the club himself," said Hendricks, who played on three Super Bowl winners as a member of the Raiders and played in eight Pro Bowls.

Davis, also the general partner of the Raiders, will present Hendricks. It will be a record eighth time that Davis — also a former Raiders head coach and a commissioner of the American Football League — has presented a player for induction.

"Basically, we've always respected each other," Hendricks said. "He was always very fair to me in contractual obligations and I performed out on the field. That was all he required. He was fair, but he was also a part of the team. He was there for the practices and he was there for all the games. He runs (the Raiders) like a business."

Hendricks will be inducted along with Kansas City Chiefs defensive tackle Buck Buchanan, Pittsburgh Steelers running back Franco Harris and linebacker Jack Lambert, Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese, San Francisco 49ers offensive tackle Bob St. Clair and Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry.

Davis previously introduced Lance Alworth, Jim Otto, George Blanda, Willie Brown, Gene Upshaw, Fred Biletnikoff and Art Shell.

Hendricks, a free spirit during his playing days with the Baltimore Colts, Green Bay Packers and the Raiders in both Oakland and Los Angeles, said Davis was the only person he considered to introduce him.

"Al's got that mystique for the Silver and Black that he developed himself," Hendricks said. "All he ever was concerned about was winning and I cared about that too. The Raiders believed that statistics don't mean anything, only

Lawyer clarifies letter

Associated Press

NEW YORK — George Steinbrenner's lawyers said Friday that a letter sent to 18 limited partners wasn't an attempt by the New York Yankees owner to defy commissioner Fay Vincent and maintain control of the team.

"That's totally false and unfounded, and heaps unwarranted and unfair criticism on Mr. Steinbrenner," attorney Stephen Kaufman said.

Kaufman and Steinbrenner's tax lawyer, Daniel McCarthy, responded to a New York Daily News report of a letter McCarthy sent to the Yankees' limited partners this week after Vincent barred Steinbrenner from running the club.

The letter asked the limited partners to allow Steinbrenner to remain involved in "all financial, tax and other business purposes" of the Yankees even after he gives up majority interest in the team later this month. Under his agreement with Vincent, Steinbrenner can only participate in "extraordinary financial or business affairs" of the Yankees.

Kaufman and McCarthy said the letter was designed to smooth the transition when Steinbrenner moves from general to limited partner. They said the letter was not an attempt to circumvent Vincent's order, which bars Steinbrenner from controlling the day-to-day operation of the Yankees.

"There was no effort to change the commissioner's understanding with Mr. Steinbrenner, but rather a need for continued compliance with the tax regulations," McCarthy said.

Kaufman has asked the commissioner's office to include the provision on financial and tax matters in the final agreement. But Vincent said Fri-

Luncheon turns ugly

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Hard feelings for the Southeastern Conference and the Arkansas Razorbacks surfaced again on Friday at the Southwest Conference kickoff press luncheon, an annual gala normally devoted to hyping the upcoming football season.

Baylor coach Grant Teaff said tongue-in-cheek he wanted to apologize to the SEC for calling its raid of Arkansas "unethical."

"What I meant to say was I'm now throughly convinced that the Southeastern Conference is the Iraq of the college football scene in America," Teaff said, in a reference to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Thursday.

Teaff's remark brought heavy applause at the sold-out luncheon.

"Well, Arkansas said they were too good for us," Teaff said. "Their coach (Jack Crowe) said they'd finish fifth in the SEC."

JIMMY PATTERSON

From Roseanne to Rose, it's mo' better

The recent spate of sad occurrences in the baseball world has led to several questions. Questions which must be answered. And answered quickly. Like now, for instance.

Patterson

Q: Question No. 1 ... What can be done to assure that Roseanne Barr will never again sing anything in public.

A: As American citizens, we should continue on our present path. Public humiliation and total embarrassment seem to be working quite well. At least it kept her off the streets for a couple of days.

Q: If public humility ceases to work, what then?

A: We could strap her to a chair and force her to watch Arsenio Hall and Andrew Dice Clay until she can take it no longer.

Q: How come she scratched and spit herself after she was done screeching the anthem?

A: Habit.

Q: Any advice for Roseanne?

A: She should keep her day job. No, she needs help with that, too. How 'bout if she walks off the set of her show, gets a job as a receptionist for the National Enquirer, goes into hiding for a few decades and returns to write her memoirs, which she would surely entitle "I'm Better Than You, I Don't Care What You Say or Who You Are Because You're Nobody and I'm Roseanne Barr."

Q: How about some advice for running back Eric Dickerson?

A: Get another job. Anything. Even being a pilot for Eastern would be safer than what's in store for him come the Colts' first game.

Q: Do you think Pete Rose will play on his prison softball team?

A: Yes, that way he'll know just how much to wager.

Q: What's Pete Rose's favorite movie?

A: "Mo' Bettor Blues."

Q: Ahem. Uh, any sequels to "Mo' Better Blues," Spike Lee's latest movie, in the works?

A: Later this year, "Curly Better Blues" arrives at theatres, and next April 1, "Larry Better Blues" makes its debut. Nyuk, nyuk, nyuk.

(A big howdy-do and a round of applause to fellow sports flunkie B. Price for those last two little gems. And I do mean little ... Bill conjured up the priceless laughables while munching out on a box of Mo' Better Cheddars, the cheese crackers with the Mars Blackmon seal of approval.

Q: Any movies coming out for chocolate, marshmallow and Graham cracker lovers?

A: Glad you asked. How 'bout "Smo' Better Blues."

(Having landed a little off the beaten path here, it's should be noted that it's amazing what happens to the sports writer's mind when not one but two local sporting events are washed out by rain as happened Friday. It leaves one with little to do and a lot of time to do it. Waste is a terrible thing to mind, or something like that.)

Q: Speaking of waste, what will become of the Cowboys this season?

A: NFL owners are trying to avert panic that the Cowboys will defect from the league and join the Southwest Conference now that there is an opening.

Q: You mean the Pokes will play a college schedule and everything?

A: Well, with the Hogs' departure from the Southwest Conference and Jerry Jones a Little Rocker, it seems only natural that the team be moved to Arkansas. After all, Arkansas' official state nickname is "The Land of Opportunity." What could mo' better give the Cowboys a positive outlook than such a great state motto like that?

Q: Heard any good jokes lately?

A: Glad you asked. Seems, Texas A&M profs in the school's Department of Sports recently completed a study that showed 95 percent of all short putts don't go in the hole.

Ba-da-bump, and a big pat on the back and snicker for local restaurateur Johnny Orkrasinski for that one.

Say goodnight, Johnny ...

Thunderstorm foils city championship

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

An afternoon thunderstorm that provided a dazzling display of lightning and dumped up to four inches of rain in north Midland did nothing but send the best of the city's golfers home for the day.

The City of Midland Men's Golf Championship was postponed after only one championship flight group finished nine holes Friday. Scores from the first round will be thrown out due to the early rains.

The tournament will remain a 54-hole event for the championship flight only. The first, second, third and senior flights have been abbreviated to 36 holes.

Golfers in the championship flight will play 18 holes beginning at 7:30 a.m. today. Following the completion of the first 18, the top group will be re-paired based on morning scores and will return for nine holes at 2:30 p.m.

"We had us a flood," said Price Courter, Hogan Park's Director of Golf said. Courter also noted the Hogan Park course will drain well, especially since it sits on one of the highest points in Midland.

Courter said the decision to play 27 holes on both Saturday and Sunday was made after a vote was taken among the championship flight participants.

The golfers will likely come back out today, but is not assured that the sun will. The Midland area forecast calls for a 30 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid 80s for Saturday. A 40 percent chance of rain is forecast for both Saturday night and Sunday.

Should rain wash out the entire tournament, it will be rescheduled for next weekend.

Fittipaldi takes another 500-mile race pole

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Emerson Fittipaldi won his fourth straight pole position for a 500-mile race, barely beating Bobby Rahal on Friday in qualifying for the Marlboro 500.

Fittipaldi, the defending CART-PPG Indy-car series champion, made a lap on the two-mile Michigan International Speedway oval at 222.593 mph in a Chevrolet-powered Penske racer.

Rahal's Lola-Chevrolet was next at 221.859, breaking up a possible all-Penske Racing front row.

Danny Sullivan wound up alongside Rahal at 221.764, with prequalifying favorite Rick Mears relegated to the inside of the second row at 220.534.

The pole-winning speed on the hot afternoon was shy of Mears' track record of 223.401, set in 1986.

But Fittipaldi now has won two straight Michigan poles, as well as taking the top qualifying spot in between at the 1989 Pocono 500 and the 1990 Indianapolis 500.

"Just everything has come together the way I want," Fittipaldi said of his superspeedway string. "You have to have the right balance on the car; the right tires; track conditions; popoff valve; everything has to be right."

It apparently was a popoff valve — the device that restricts air flow to the Indy-car turbochargers — that cost Rahal his shot at the pole.

Rahal, who never has started from the pole in a 500-mile race, was disappointed despite his second-place showing after topping everyone in the final prequalifying practice session with a sizzling lap of 226.351.

"I continually had to get off the throttle to get the (popoff) valve to reset," Rahal said. "It was a tough day.

"When you run 226 and you're two miles per hour faster than anyone else, you figure you can run at least 223 again. I guess I was just getting greedy, but it was a real disappointment."

Part of the slowdown from the practice session was the hot track, with the sun shining brightly.

Al Unser Jr., Rahal's teammate, also had popoff valve problems and was fifth at 221.178, followed by Indianapolis 500 winner Arie Luyendyk at 220.717.

Porsche drivers Teo Fabi and John Andretti were next at 220.615 and 220.379, respectively, with Michael Andretti's 220.083 and Eddie Cheever's 219.138 rounding out the top 10.

Hogs hire marketing director

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — A day after the University of Arkansas accepted an invitation to join the Southeastern Conference, the school announced the hiring of its first marketing director to promote men's sports.

Matt Shanklin, 24, was named to fill the newly created post, according to an announcement from the university on Thursday. Mike Ritta was also named to fill the vacant position of director of concessions-merchandising, the news release said.

On Wednesday, the UA Board of Trustees voted to join the SEC, effective July 1, 1991, ending the Razorbacks 76-year membership in the Southwest Conference.

Shanklin, from St. Louis, is a 1988 communications graduate of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Ritta, 26, a Libertyville, Ill., native, fills the vacancy left when John Nauman resigned in July to enter the ministry. The UA announcement said he holds a bachelor's degree in education from Arkansas, and a master's degree in education from Alabama.

SWC: Arkansas players may be targets of opponents

From 1B

Arkansas won the SWC title last year.

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes hinted that greed got the best of the Razorbacks.

"It's the same old deal, the grass is greener on the other side of the fence," Dykes said. "I guess they'll be after me when we go to Fayetteville this year. It doesn't matter. We haven't done that well up there anyway."

However, both Teaff and Dykes said Arkansas should be allowed to go to the Cotton Bowl if it wins the title in its final year of SWC play.

"If they win it, fine," Dykes said. "They're still in the conference."

Teaff said it would be OK with him if Arkansas earned a trip to the Cotton Bowl.

"Let's 'em go if they win the championship," Teaff said.

Teaff announced that Baylor had already replaced Arkansas on the schedule for four years beginning in 1993 by scheduling Penn State.

"It will be home and home," Teaff said. "Penn State's a great attraction."

Arkansas coach Jack Crowe said he looked for other teams "to come at us hard this year. I just hope it's done in a sportsmanship manner."

Crowe added, "I didn't know what to expect when I came here today. I've heard a little of it (SEC talk). I just want everyone to know what no coach or player is happy about leaving the Southwest Conference. It's the will of the people. It's a matter of circumstance."

Arkansas quarterback Quinn Grovey attended the luncheon and said the Hogs might as well have a circle and bullseye painted on their helmets.

LETTER: Young Steinbrenner yet to be approved

From 1B

day that he was leaning against approval.

"Our tax lawyers have not understood the basis for the request, and for the moment, since we don't understand it, we have no intention of accepting the request," Vincent said.

As general partner, Steinbrenner carries a greater legal risk than his limited partners. McCarthy said that for continuity's sake it would be better if Steinbrenner maintained his legal role with the team even after he steps down as general partner.

"He's out as general partner; somebody's got to fill the void," McCarthy said. "What we're trying to do is not change anything. From a tax standpoint, we want to continue as we have in the past."

According to the Daily News, some of the limited partners were upset by the letter they received from McCarthy.

The partners will meet in Cleveland on Wednesday to decide whether to approve young Steinbrenner as the new general partner.

HALL: Raider mystique continues to endure

winning."

One of the Raiders' mottos was "Committed to Excellence." Hendricks said when he joined the team he was told, "You should have been committed a long time ago."

Hendricks, a native of Miami and a graduate of the University of Miami, now is a partner in the development of a golf course in the area. After retiring in 1983, he said membership in the Hall of Fame was a final priority.

"First of all, during your playing days, you think about the possibility of a career-ending injury," Hendricks said. "That diminished toward the end of my career. I also worked toward being All-Pro. After that, I wanted to win Super Bowls. I won three of those, and after accomplishing that, about the only goal left was the Hall of Fame.

"I wanted to go out on top of my game, with class, and not as a second-stringer. We won the Super Bowl and I played in the Pro Bowl my last year. I remember O.J. (Simpson) telling me to go out on top, unlike the way he did, just playing a few plays a game. And John Unitas told me, 'Ted, you'll know when to retire because you'll be so sore after a game that you won't be ready the following week.' It worked out well for me."

Landry will be introduced by the same person he presented for induction in 1985, former Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach.

Drabek's no-hitter shattered with two out in ninth

Associated Press

NL

Doug Drabek's bid for a no-hitter was broken up by Sil Campusano with two outs in the ninth inning Friday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 11-0.

Drabek, a 28-year-old right-hander in his fifth major league season, had allowed just one runner — a two-out walk to John Kruk in the fourth — before Campusano lined a 3-2 pitch to right-center field for a single.

Campusano, who entered the game in the sixth inning as a replacement for center fielder Len Dykstra, was just 9-for-48 this season before the single.

Darren Daulton, the next batter, flied to right to end the game.

At almost the same moment, the New York Yankees broke up a no-hit bid by Cleveland's Tom Candiotti with two out in the bottom of the eighth. Had either no-hitter been completed, it would have been the eighth of the season, a modern record.

Second baseman Jose Lind had preserved the no-hitter with one out in the eighth when he dove to his left to snag Kruk's hard-hitter grounder, then threw from his knees to first for the out. The 36,057 fans in Veterans Stadium gave Lind a rousing ovation.

Drabek (14-4) got 14 ground ball outs, struck out five and walked one as he won his sixth straight start.

Drabek, whose last loss was against St. Louis on June 28, pitched a two-hitter against the Phillies last Sunday in Pittsburgh. He had thrown 13 consecutive no-hit innings before Campusano's single.

It was his first shutout and fourth complete game of the season and his eighth career shutout.

Scott Garrelts of San Francisco had a no-hitter broken up last Sunday by Cincinnati's Paul O'Neill with two outs in the ninth inning.

Pittsburgh had 18 hits, including four by Sid Bream. Andy Van Slyke drove in four runs and Bream three. Bruce Ruffin (6-11) was the loser.

Pittsburgh took a 3-0 lead in the first on Jeff King's two-run triple and Bream's RBI single and made it 5-0 in the third on Van Slyke's RBI single and Don Carman's wild pitch.

Bream hit a two-run homer in the third, his 11th, and Lind's run-scoring single made it 9-0 in the fourth. Van Slyke hit a two-run homer in the fifth, his 12th.

Astros 3, Braves 0

Mike Scott pitched a three-hitter and Ken Oberkfell drove in two runs as the Houston Astros beat the Atlanta Braves.

Scott (9-10), who has four of the Braves' five complete games and both of their shutouts this season, struck out six and walked two. He increased his strikeout total as an Astro to 1,287, moving into fourth place on the club's all-time strikeout list.

The win was Scott's third in his last four outings and gave him 110 wins for Houston, third on the club's career list.

Loser John Smoltz (7-8) gave up two runs, one of them earned, on five hits. He struck out six and walked two in seven innings.

Atlanta's Oddibe McDowell dives safely back into second base as Houston's Rafael Ramirez tags the base after Brave Jeff Treadway lined out to first.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the third after Eric Yelding walked with two outs and moved to second on a single by Bill Doran. Oberkfell then singled to drive in Yelding. Doran scored on the play when center fielder Odibe McDowell mishandled the ball for an error.

The Astros added an insurance run in the eighth on consecutive triples by Doran and Oberkfell.

The shutout continued a string of futility for the Braves, who have scored only one run in their last 18 innings.

Cubs 10, Expos 4

Mark Grace and pitcher Mike Harkey doubled home two runs apiece during a six-run first inning, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a victory over the Montreal Expos.

The loss was the third straight for the Expos and went to starter Mark Gardner (6-6), who retired only three batters. Harkey (10-5) lasted only until the sixth in the 85-degree heat, but Chicago's 17-hit attack was more than enough for the victory.

Jerome Walton opened the Cubs first with a single and Ryne Sandberg walked before Grace doubled them home, extending his hitting streak to 13 games.

Two outs later, Luis Salazar singled to drive in Grace, and Shawon Dunston doubled home Salazar. Joe Girardi was walked intentionally before Harkey doubled in both runners.

A double by Sandberg and a single by Grace finished Gardner in the second inning. Sandberg came home on a single by Dwight Smith and Grace scored on a passed ball, giving Chicago an 8-0 lead.

Harkey did not allow a hit until Jerry Goff homered in the third. Singles by Dave Martinez and Mike Aldrete led to a run in the Montreal sixth before Larry Walker hit his 12th homer to finish Harkey.

Salazar, who also doubled in the fourth inning, led off the sixth with his ninth homer, completing the scoring.

Paul Assenmacher pitched 2 1-3 innings of scoreless relief for the Cubs, allowing one hit.

Padres 3, Reds 2

The Cincinnati Reds' skid continued as Jack Clark doubled home the winning run in the ninth inning to give the San Diego Padres a victory over the National League West leaders.

Cincinnati has lost 10 of its last 12 games to let San Francisco slice away most of an 11-game lead. The Giants entered the night's play 4½ games behind the Reds.

The Reds rallied for a 2-2 tie in the eighth on Chris Sabo's solo homer off Bruce Hurst, but Rob Dibble (4-3) failed to hold it.

Tony Gwynn singled with one out in the ninth and Clark doubled past Sabo at third. Left fielder Billy Hatcher fell down while chasing the ball, letting Gwynn score easily.

Greg Harris (6-5) pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the eighth to get the win. But he needed relief help in the ninth after hitting a battter. Craig Lefferts finished up for his 15th save.

Hurst took a four-hitter and a 2-1 lead into the bottom of the eighth, but Sabo led off with his 21st homer to tie it. It was Sabo's fourth homer in four games and only his second hit in 18 lifetime at-bats against Hurst, who left an 0-2 pitch out over the plate.

The Reds then threatened to take their first lead as Mariano Duncan singled — his third hit — and Hurst threw to second base too late for the force on Barry Larkin's comeback grounder, leaving both runners safe with none out.

Harris relieved and got Eric Davis to ground out, advancing the runners, and pinch-hitter Paul O'Neill was walked intentionally to load the bases. Harris struck out Todd Benzinger and got pinch-hitter Luis Quinones to ground out to end the threat.

Mets 5, Cardinals 4

Gregg Jefferies' run-scoring single capped a three-run ninth inning rally as the New York Mets defeated St. Louis, spoiling the home debut of new Cardinal manager Joe Torre.

Pinch-hitter Alex Trevino, signed by the Mets earlier in the day after being released by Houston, and Dave Magadan also drove in a run apiece in the ninth off Cardinals relief ace Lee Smith (3-3) to help the Mets hold on to their one-game lead in the National League East.

The Mets are 9-2 against the Cardinals, including 4-0 at Busch Stadium, and have won 8 of 11 overall.

Candiotti almost gets one, too

Associated Press

AL

Cleveland's Tom Candiotti was within four outs of a no-hitter when the New York Yankees rallied for four unearned runs in the eighth inning, three on Mel Hall's homer off relief ace Doug Jones, to beat the Indians 6-4 Friday night.

For 7 2-3 innings the Yankees couldn't touch Candiotti's nasty knuckleball. He retired the first two batters in the eighth but walked Steve Sax and Jim Leyritz reached when shortstop Felix Fermin failed to handle his grounder in the hole.

It was scored an error — Cleveland's third of the game — and rookie Oscar Azocar followed with a ground single to center to make it 4-3 and break up Candiotti's bid for what would have been a record eighth no-hitter of the season.

Jones, who has 28 saves, relieved Candiotti (11-7) and Hall hit his first pitch into the upper deck in right field. It was only the third homer allowed by Jones, who has five blown saves. Candiotti had beaten the Yankees six straight times since April 26, 1987.

At Yankee Stadium on July 12, Melido Perez of Chicago pitched a rain-shortened six-inning no-hitter to tie the record for a season.

The last nine-inning no-hitter against the Yankees was by Baltimore's Hoyt Wilhelm on Sept. 20, 1958, at Memorial Stadium. A nine-inning no-hitter by the opposition at Yankee Stadium last occurred on Aug. 25, 1952 by Detroit's Virgil Trucks.

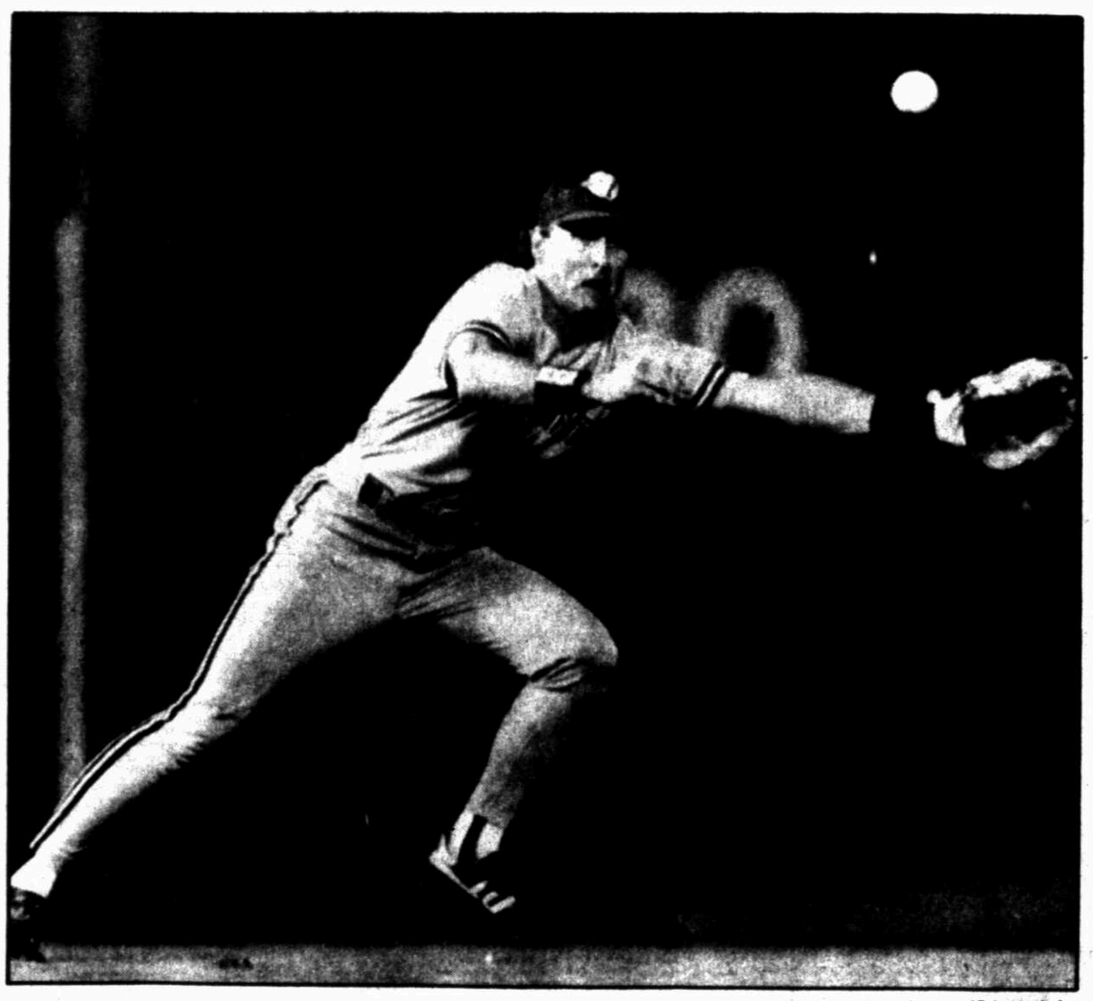

Rangers 9, Blue Jays 1

Jamie Moyer pitched a three-hitter for his first victory since last Sept. 10 and Steve Buechele hit a grand slam to cap a seven-run seventh inning for Texas.

Texas ran its winning streak to five games and 12 of 15 and dropped the Blue Jays 1½ games behind Boston in the American League East.

Moyer (1-3), making only his fifth start, had lost six straight games with an ERA of 6.16 since his last victory. His ERA in July was 6.63 and the Blue Jays shelled him for five runs in three innings last Sunday.

The 27-year-old left-hander walked two, struck out six and retired 14 batters in a row between the third and seventh inning.

Toronto Blue Jay third baseman Kelly Gruber reaches in vain for a ground ball in a 9-1 loss to the Texas Ranger Friday night in Arlington.

Twins 6, Mariners 2

Minnesota's Brian Harper extended his hitting streak to 24 games, longest in the major leagues this season, with a two-run homer and Randy Bush hit a three-run shot in the 13th inning for Minnesota.

Kent Hrbek broke a 2-2 tie with a sacrifice fly off Seattle relief ace Mike Schooler (1-3) before Bush hit his fourth home run of the season.

All four runs in the 13th were unearned because of a dropped throw by Seattle shortstop Jeff Schaefer on a potential double play ball that would have ended the inning.

Rick Aguilera (4-3), the third Minnesota pitcher, got the victory with 3 1-3 scoreless innings.

Red Sox 14, Tigers 5

Ellis Burks hit a three-run homer in Boston's seven-run first inning and Tim Naehring and Tony Pena also homered as Boston notched its fifth consecutive victory.

Every Boston starter had at least one hit and everyone scored at least one run in an 18-hit attack by the American League East leaders, who began play one-half game ahead of Toronto.

Naehring, a shortstop who made his major-league debut on July 15, drove in four runs with a grounder, a double and his second homer. He also had a single. Pena had three RBIs with a single, a solo homer and a grounder.

Staked to a whopping lead, Greg Harris (9-4) got the victory with relief help from Jerry Reed in the sixth. Harris allowed four runs and 11 hits.

Orioles 14, Royals 1

Cal Ripken hit two homers and drove in four runs for Baltimore in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing scuffle.

With the Orioles leading 11-1, Kansas City reliever Steve Crawford hit Brady Anderson in the back with a pitch. Anderson charged the mound and was tackled from behind by catcher Mike Macfarlane.

Players from both dugouts and bullpens converged near the mound. No punches were thrown but several players were thrown to the ground and Anderson was ejected.

In the next inning, Baltimore's John Mitchell was ejected when he threw a pitch behind the back of Kevin Seitzer. Several players again emerged from the dugouts but that was all.

White Sox 6, Brewers 2

Frank Thomas tripled home the tying and lead runs with his first major-league hit, Ivan Calderon hit a three-run homer and Greg Hibbard scattered seven hits for Chicago.

Hibbard (9-5) allowed a sacrifice fly in the second inning and a home run in the eighth as the White Sox beat the Brewers for the 11th time in 13 games.

Murphy traded to Philadelphia Phillies

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Dale Murphy, the leading home run hitter in Atlanta Braves history, was traded to the Philadelphia Phillies Friday night.

Murphy, a two-time Most Valuable Player and the leading home run hitter in Atlanta Braves history, was traded to the Philadelphia Phillies Friday night for pitcher Jeff Parrett and two players to be named later.

The 34-year-old Murphy, 33rd on the all-time home run list with 371, has played his entire 13-year major-league career with the Braves.

"It's time for me to move on," Murphy said. "I'm excited about the future in Philadelphia. I haven't produced like I feel I can in recent years. Maybe with a new direction, I feel I can play a few more years."

Murphy, a seven-time All-Star and the National League's MVP in 1982 and 1983, agreed to a two-year contract extention through the 1992 season.

He is a .270 career hitter but is batting just .232 this year with 17 home runs and 55 RBIs. He did not play Friday night in Atlanta's 3-0 loss to Houston.

"During the game, it was pretty emotional on the bench," Murphy said. "I can't put it into words. I haven't had time to reflect on it yet. It's just a tough time for me."

A player to be named later also will be sent from Atlanta to Philadelphia. Phillies general manager Lee Thomas said was happy to get the power hitter he had been looking for.

"I think Dale Murphy will come in and do what we need," Thomas said in Philadelphia. "I think he has a lot of baseball left in him, and we're very happy to have him."

Murphy hit 30 or more home runs and had at least 100 RBIs in five of six seasons from 1982-87. But his production dropped to 24 home runs and 77 RBIs in 1988.

Bears, Browns open 1990 exhibition season in Canton

Associated Press

The NFL's exhibition season starts this weekend in Tokyo, London and Canton — that's Ohio, not China.

The Chicago Bears and Cleveland Browns open the schedule at Canton Saturday following the enshrinement of seven men into the Hall of Fame. Japan gets its turn Sunday — Saturday night in the United States — with Denver and Seattle, followed by the Los Angeles Raiders and New Orleans at London on Sunday.

The weekend's abbreviated schedule of special games gives the six teams involved a fifth preseason game, one more than the other NFL teams.

"You never know when you might find a productive or even a great player, because coaches got more time to look at him," Browns coach Bud Carson said. "I think that's the biggest advantage of playing the extra preseason game. You can't simulate the true action of a game or the emotions you will get by playing in front of Hall of Fame players on national television."

But Carson's defense is a shadow of its normal self, with starting linebackers Clay Matthews, Mike Johnson and Dave Grayson and starting defensive backs Frank Minnifield and Felix Wright all holdouts.

"With our holdout situation, we're going to give some veterans and a couple of rookies a chance to show us what they can do," Carson said. "We'll know a lot more about a lot of these guys by the end of the Bears game."

The Browns, however, have Bernie Kosar, the sixth-rated quarterback in NFL history, and wide receivers Webster Slaughter and Reggie Langhorne, the team's first pair of 60-reception receivers in one season.

The Bears have an unsettled quarterback situation with Mike Tomczak and Jim Harbaugh. Coach Mike Ditka, from the Hall of Fame class of 1988, is back for his ninth season with an 84-45 career mark, but only 6-10 last year.

The Seahawks and Broncos, meanwhile, are dealing with the usual time problems associated with Far East travel.

"Jet lag is messing with a lot of people," rookie Seattle cornerback Daryl Reed said.

Asked how he would perform, Broncos quarterback John Elway said, "You always like to say 100 percent, but I have a feeling it won't be like that."

Elway has led Denver to three AFC titles in four years and Coach Dan Reeves had the highest winning percentage (.629) of any AFC coach during the 1980s.

But the Broncos have to contend with the psychological blow of yet another blowout loss in the Super Bowl.

Seattle, which has never made the Super Bowl, starts its first season since 1976 without Steve Largent, who retired as the NFL's most prolific receiver.

Tommy Kane, Louis Clark and Paul Skansi are fighting for Largent's spot, while the other wide receiver is Brian Blades, who finished second in the AFC with 77 receptions last year.

In London, Hall of Famers George Blanda, Jim Otto, Fred Biletnikoff and Art Shell joined other former Raiders Daryle Lamonica, Ben Davidson, Jim Plunkett, Raymond Chester and Clem Daniels in the team's touring party.

"Once you wear the silver and black, it's in our blood," Lamonica said. "We bleed silver and black. It means a lot to us as Raider players. It goes deep."

The Saints, a younger franchise than the Raiders by seven seasons, have only one former star with them — ex-quarterback Archie Manning is one of the radio announcers with the team.

Shell, in his first full season as head coach of the Raiders, encourages the emphasis on the tradition of excellence.

Krumrie battles back from injury

Rehabilitation continues after breaking leg in 1989 Super Bowl

Associated Press

When Tim Krumrie broke his leg, America winced.

In the 1989 Super Bowl, the Cincinnati Bengals' nose tackle snapped both bones in his left leg. People with queasy stomachs avoided the replay.

Krumrie rehabilitated the leg well enough to play in every game last season, but the level of his performance didn't meet his satisfaction. Once again, Krumrie reigns as king of the Bengals' weight room.

"There's no comparison with a year ago. ... I think it's entirely all the way back," Krumrie said. "I'm moving just as well as I did before.

"As far as mobility and lateral movement, it all came back really fine.

"It was just a matter of the bone was broken. There was nothing wrong with the ligaments, so there was never any fear I'd never regain it. It was just a matter of how fast."

Krumrie's feeling to the contrary, there was a lot of doubt among Super Bowl viewers who saw his leg flop sickeningly.

"You block it out," he said. "It's a football injury. Football injuries heal."

Krumrie said he's always had a high pain threshold.

"I take a lot of pride in having a lot of endurance, playing the whole game — being able to play the whole game — and not getting tired," he said.

"As far as pain goes, that's part of the game. Playing football, everyone has pain — it's just a matter of how well you can overcome it, I guess."

Bills

Hal Garner, who retired after failing a drug test in 1988, says he's ready to challenge for his old linebacker job with the Buffalo Bills.

"I feel great," Garner said after reporting to the Bills camp at Fredonia State College. "I feel better now than I have in a long time."

Garner was reinstated by the NFL on Thursday following a one-year retirement that came after his second positive drug test. He said little about the circumstances surrounding his first positive test, which led to a four-game suspension in 1988, or his second positive test and subsequent retirement.

"I'm not the type of person who wants to dwell on the past," said Garner, a backup inside linebacker from 1985 to 1988. "All I want to do is look forward to the future."

Garner operated heavy equipment in the desert for a Nevada construction company last year but said he followed the Bills on television from his home in Logan, Utah, and yearned to return to football.

"I found myself sitting down to watch and then I'd get a little depressed," he said. "So back in early December, I started working out again."

As he started to regain strength, Garner said he called the Bills "and told them I was interested in coming back. They said 'fine' and we began the process of my being reinstated."

Patriots

Injuries are starting to interfere with the New England Patriots' practice schedule.

With 22 players sitting out Friday morning's practice, Coach Rod Rust changed his plans for an intrasquad scrimmage Saturday morning.

"We'll be simulating game conditions as they are most appropriate, but it won't be a scrimmage," he said. "We'll still have a portable clock on the field and a crew of officials here, and we'll try to simulate game conditions as best we can. It'll still be a full day's work."

It was the second time Rust altered plans for the week before the Patriots' exhibition debut next Thursday at Montreal against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The New York Giants had been scheduled to visit Bryant College for three days of joint workouts leading to a scrimmage Saturday, but injuries and holdouts forced the Giants to scrap the arrangement.

The Patriots' injury list has mounted as well, but the team has held to the schedule of double-session practices that were to have included the Giants. The Patriots practiced only once a day before this week, and will return to a one-a-day schedule next week.

"Our biggest problem right now is the number of players who aren't working," Rust said. "It's basically physical attrition, which at this point of camp is a legitimate thing and something you expect."

Lions

When the Detroit Lions signed former Pro Bowl cornerback LeRoy Irvin this week, they were hoping he'd eventually become a starter on the right side.

But for the time being, the starting right cornerback job belongs to second-year veteran Ray Crockett. He assumed that role when free agent William Judson underwent knee surgery last weekend.

"I'm not necessarily looking at this like it's my big opportunity," said Crockett, the Lions' fourth-round draft pick out of Baylor in 1989. "With Judson healthy, it's just as good for me because that makes both of us play better.

"But with him being hurt, of course I have to step up to the forefront. I'm still going to have to do the same things and just play the best I can."

The 5-foot-9, 178-pound Crockett played in all 16 games last year, mostly on special teams and in the nickel defense. He had 46 tackles, broke up two passes, intercepted another and recovered one fumble.

Crockett began to shine near the end of the season, getting his first career interception off Tampa Bay's Joe Ferguson during the 15th week. The following week, he matched his season high with six tackles against Atlanta.

"When you come in during your rookie year, your first goal is to make the team," Crockett said. "Then I went from just wanting to play to wanting to be a starter.

"I started playing well toward the end of the season. I got my head on straight and started to do the things they wanted me to do.

Jones comes to terms with Cowboys

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Dallas Cowboys reached agreement with rookie holdout Jimmie Jones Friday afternoon, signing the third-round draft pick to a four-year contract.

Jones entered the 17th day of his holdout Friday before agreeing to terms. The defensive lineman from the University of Miami was due to report late Friday afternoon and was scheduled to join the team for workouts Saturday morning.

Jones said a phone call from Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson, who coached Jones at Miami, also was a factor behind his decision to report.

"Anything he says, I listen to," Jones said. "He was like a father figure to me in college. The only thing I'm behind on is the physical part. I played this same system in college so it's be real easy for me to pick it up."

Owner Jerry Jones said Thursday that the length of Jimmie Jones' holdout was jeopardizing his chances of making the team.

Jerry Jones said the contract Jimmie Jones accepted Friday was close to the offer that has been on the table for the past 10 days.

"We've been real adamant that we wanted a four-year deal, there was incentive items that we dealt with some, but that's pretty much what we've had on the table for some time."

Jimmie Jones said he told his agent, Miami attorney Drew Rosenhaus, on Thursday that he was willing to take what was on the table.

"I wanted to get it done," Jones said. "I told him I wanted a done deal. Get it done today."

First-round draft pick Emmitt Smith, a running back, and second-rounder Alex Wright, a wide receiver, remained unsigned Friday.

Veteran linebacker Jesse Solomon is also a holdout.

McPherson sits out first practice

Associated Press

SAN MARCOS — Newly acquired quarterback Don McPherson worked up a sweat at his first Houston Oilers practice Friday, but it was from the heat not the workout.

"Other than the water on my face, I didn't get wet," McPherson said after the Oilers' afternoon practice on a soggy field. "I've been in this much humidity before, but it wasn't quite this hot. I don't know how you stand it.

"I had fun watching practice today."

With backup quarterback Cody Carlson still a holdout, the Oilers acquired the second-year veteran from Philadelphia on Thursday for an conditional 1991 draft pick.

The 6-1, 193-pound McPherson was limited to about 10 warmup tosses during his first practice and took on role of observer and ease-dropped during huddles.

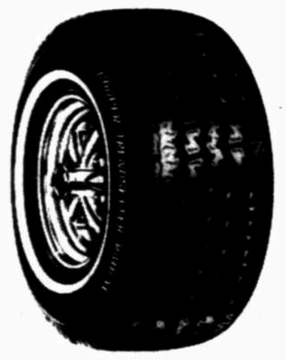

McPherson expects to start taking snaps during Saturday's workout. He said he's excited about the team's new run-and-shoot offense.

Yea to Charlie Hustle's HOF induction, nay on Shoeless Joe Jackson's

By Ira Berkow
N.Y. Times News Service

Jim Palmer and Joe Morgan, two highly deserving and relatively uncontroversial ballplayers, are to be inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame Sunday, but the focus of attention for many remains the moral issues of the candidacy of Pete Rose and Shoeless Joe Jackson.

In the past week, the credentials of Rose — his plaque, if he ever gets one, would surely mention that he was called Charlie Hustle during his 24 years in the game — have been debated in light of his recent prison sentence for tax evasion.

The debate has been a continuation of the arguments set forth after Rose was banned from baseball last August by Commissioner Bart Giamatti for "acts detrimental to baseball."

Those acts included betting with illegal bookies, and, though not stated in writing but expressed verbally by the commissioner, betting on baseball, and possibly on Reds games, when Rose was manager of the team.

And in an article titled, "One Man Out ... Too Long," in the August issue of Gentleman's Quarterly, Wilfrid Sheed writes in support of Jackson's canonization in the Hall.

Jackson was banned by Judge Landis from the game as one of the infamous eight "Black Sox" who, as members of the Chicago White Sox, threw the World Series in 1919.

The belief here is that Rose should be in (he is eligible for election by the Baseball Writers of America next December) and that Jackson, despite Sheed's engaging argument and the sentimental movie, "Field of Dreams," relating to Jackson's ghost returning from that clubhouse in the sky, should remain out.

A fact in Rose's case is that there is no evidence or even the merest suggestion that ballplayer Rose ever gave less than his best, let alone threw a game.

What Rose did off the field, in regard to tax evasion, was a matter between him and the government.

One of the six qualifications on the Hall's ballot says that a player will be judged on "integrity," "sportsmanship," and character." If these would be narrowly applied, a bunch of guys would be thrown out, including Ty Cobb, whose career hits record Rose broke, who is said to have sharpened his spikes in order to cut down infielders when he slid into bases.

Sheed notes that Jackson, whose career batting average is third in history to Cobb and Rogers Hornsby, is still, after 70 years, being punished from entry into an edifice that didn't even exist when he was banished.

And because of the iniquitous reserve clause, which was eliminated in 1975, the underpaid Jackson, as well as the seven others involved in the scandal, "had no room to maneuver," wrote Sheed, "no bargaining power whatsoever. ... Throwing games was the only form of protest available at the time — a primitive kind of do-it-all-yourself strike, in which you used the only thing you had, your baseball skill, to subvert the people who were using you."

Though Jackson hit .375 in the World Series, which his White Sox lost, five games to three, to the underdog Cincinnati Reds, he did admit that he had "a lousy Series."

He also admitted taking $5,000 in bribes, and was miffed that he never got the rest of the $15,000 the gamblers had promised him.

But Jackson denied, as he saw his legend growing through the years, that he had dumped games.

Yet, in testimony to the grand jury Sept. 28, 1920, that was reported by news agencies and appeared in newspapers around the country, he said: "I am the left fielder for the Sox. When a Cincinnati player would bat a ball out in my territory, I'd muff it if I could. But if it would look too much like crooked work to do that I'd be slow and would make a throw to the infield that would be too short.

"My work netted the Cincinnati team several runs that they would never have made if I had been playing on the square."

The argument here is that the Hall of Fame should be reserved for those who never fixed or attempted to fix a game.

Any of the other business about role models off the field is just so much junk and banality.

Meanwhile, Jackson's otherwise lofty records have not been expunged from the record books, nor is he a non-person in the Hall itself.

There are photographs of him, and even a pair of his baseball shoes rest in a glass case, proving that Shoeless Joe was actually Shoeclad Joe.

Jackson may have been an illiterate and sometimes guileless man, but he was not inexperienced.

He was a spiffy dresser, demanded and got a drawing room for road trips that befitted a star, and was 30 and had been in the major leagues for 12 years before the 1919 World Series.

Years later, Eddie Collins, a second baseman on the White Sox whom the gamblers knew they couldn't get to go along with them, accepted none of the several reasons for excusing Jackson and the others.

"They were old enough to know the difference between right and wrong," he said.

Youth baseball coach attacked

Illinois man hospitalized after opposing coach, mob beat him at game

Associated Press

WILLOW SPRINGS Ill. — John Hills was hoping to coach his teen-age baseball team to a victory in a tournament game. What he got was a beating that left him hospitalized Friday, days after the attack.

"I just can't believe something like this would happen," Hills, 46, said as he struggled to sit up in his hospital bed. "My team was in total shock. My son was going crazy."

Hills, of Lockport, was coaching first base for the 13-, 14- and 15-year-old Senior League All-Stars from the Lemont area Monday night when he was attacked by a rival coach and others.

By the time it was over, Hills had several fractured ribs, a broken nose and a grapefruit-sized bruise behind a knee, where he was struck by a bat. He was taken by ambulance to LaGrange Memorial Hospital, about 25 miles southwest of Chicago, where he was listed in satisfactory condition.

The rival coach from the Bridgeview district, George Loy, was handcuffed and taken from the field by Willow Springs police, who charged him with two counts of battery.

A juvenile, also of Bridgeview, was charged in a juvenile petition with one count of battery for allegedly striking Hills with a bat, police said, adding that charges might be filed against another juvenile later.

Loy's telephone number was unlisted and he was unavailable for comment Friday.

But spectators at the game said it was a sorry show.

"I was very upset by it," said Denise Brown, whose son played first base for the Lemont team.

"It's not a good message to these kids. You want them to have good sportsmanship. It always seems the parents cause the problem."

Hills said the trouble began early in the game, when he complained to the umpire that a 16-year-old Bridgeview team coach was calling plays at first base, usurping the authority of the adult umpire.

Later in the game, when Lemont took the lead, Loy threatened to beat Hills.

"He said, 'I'm going to take those glasses off and bash your face in,' " Hills said. "I said, 'It's only a ball game, come on. ...

"I leaned down to pick the scorebook up. The next thing I know, he was on top of me."

As umpires struggled to keep the players on their benches, one Bridgeview youth picked up a bat and struck Hills across the back of the legs, Mrs. Brown said.

"It was very much intentional," she said. "I could see nothing that provoked it."

Hills' 15-year-old son, also named John, the team's catcher, said he was horrified.

"I was like, could somebody help my dad out?" he said. "I couldn't believe he was doing it. It was hard for us just to sit there and watch some guys beat up on my dad."

Bill Dunnett, the Bridgeview team's district administrator, said Friday he had just heard about the incident and didn't know whether action would be taken against the team and coaches. Dunnett said any decision about the attack must be made by Little League officials in Pennsylvania because his district didn't sponsor the tournament. He said the district's rule book did not include a provision on fights breaking out at games.

"I don't know that this violates any rules in the book," Dunnett said. "But everyone's supposed to behave in a gentlemanlike, sportsmanlike conduct. And taking a bat to somebody violates somebody's rules."

A spokesman for Senior League, a division of Little League, based in Williamsport, Pa., said the league would have no comment until it received reports from the district administrators.

Lemont, which was declared winner of the game, was eliminated from the tournament Wednesday night.

Graf advances in Canada

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Steffi Graf was overpowering in both word and deed Friday, routing Soviet Natalia Zvereva 6-0, 6-4 in the quarterfinals of the Player's Challenge Canadian championships.

Graf, ranked No. 1 in the world, took the first set in just 21 minutes. The confident West German said the second set was prolonged only because she was attempting new shots.

"She never had much of a chance," the top seed said. "I never felt I could lose."

In the semifinals, Graf will face No. 7 Nathalie Tauziat, a surprise winner over fourth seed Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, 6-3, 6-2.

As if Zvereva didn't have enough problems just playing Graf, the Soviets favorite racket broke as the did the strings on another.

"I guess I had some very surprising problems in the first set," she said. Maleeva-Fragniere was sluggish following an exhausting three-set victory over Canadian Helen Kelesi Thursday night.

"It took quite much out of me," Maleeva-Fragniere said. "I was tired and quite stiff today."

Maleeva's sister Katerina, seeded third, lost the first set to Naoko Sawamatsu of Japan before winning 6-7 (5-7), 6-2, 6-4, and will face the winner of the Gabriela Sabatini-Jennifer Capriati match later Friday.

Zvereva, ranked No. 12 in the world and a finalist at Jarry Stadium in 1988, said she's suffering from burn-out and homesickness.

"I played Federation Cup last week and I guess I didn't have quite as big a desire to win today," Zvereva said.

"Last week I didn't play well either, but I had that kind of desire to want to stay on the court and fight until the end," she said. "I probably got burned out a little bit."

Gibson nabs LPGA tourney lead

Associated Press

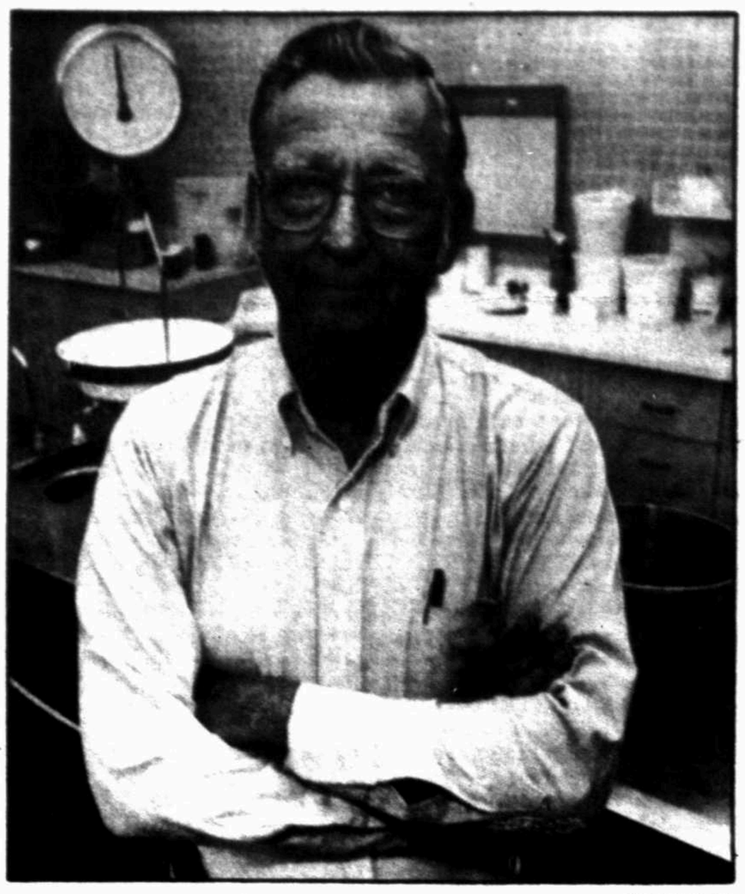

DANVERS, Mass. — Ellie Gibson, who has made only $1,264 in her first 10 months as a golf pro, shot a 4-under-par 68 on Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Dale Eggeling after 36 holes of the Boston Five Classic.

Gibson, who had made the cut in only one of seven previous tournaments this year, was at 6-under 138 after two rounds over the 6,008-yard Tara Ferncroft Country Club course.

Eggeling, the 1980 Boston Five champion, was one shot ahead of 1982 tournament winner Sandra Palmer.

"This is the best I have played all year," Gibson said. "I am a non-exempt player so I don't get into every tournament. But I've played five of the last seven weeks so I'm getting my competitiveness back."

Medical examiner finds people interested in death

AP Laserphoto

Nueces County Medical Examiner Joseph Rupp has written a section on sex-related violent death for a medical examiner guide.

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Dr. Joseph Rupp slumped back in a chair in his cluttered office and contemplated perceptions of his job.

"Nothing interests people like death," Rupp said. "They're afraid of it, but they sure are interested in it."

Every day, corpses are wheeled into Rupp's office. As Nueces County medical examiner, he pokes, prods and explores the bodies. He determines a cause and mode of death. When a death is suspicious, he assists law enforcement officers in the investigation.

Rupp handles some 1,200 cases a year. After 20 years, the doctor said, he's about ready to quit. He has plans to retire before the end of this year.

Since he came to the Coastal Bend in 1970, Rupp has earned a reputation as a lively and knowledgea witness in court, where he can be found poking through holes in a skull to show how a bullet entered or demonstrating on himself how the hands of an attacker could snap a neck.

Douglas Tinker, a local defense attorney, said Rupp's testimony in court can be "devastating" to murder defendants.

"My tactic is not to ask him anything," Tinker said, adding that some defense lawyers make the mistake of allowing Rupp to tell the jury things the defendant would rather they not hear.

"Most of what he does is give his opinion about how someone died," Tinker said. "But if you let him, he'll extend that and give an opinion about how it happened."

An illustration of Tinker's observation came during the defense lawyer's most recent courtroom encounter with Rupp.

In May, Tinker was defending Michael Bryan, accused of killing a man whom Bryan had met in a gay bar.

Tinker successfully objected to having Rupp's comments heard in front of the jury. But the medical examiner testified that the Bryan case matched a pattern of killings where men who do not think they are gay but frequent gay bars wind up killing men who make advances toward them.

The basis of Tinker's defense of Bryan was his client's supposed revulsion to a homosexual advance, which Rupp suggested Bryan welcomed, even encouraged.

Bryan was found guilty of murder and sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Sex-related violent death is a specialty of Rupp's — he wrote the section on the topic in the definitive medical examiner's guide, "The Handbook of Forensic Pathology," released this year.

He said he became a specialist in the gruesome subject while serving as associate medical examiner for Broward County, Fla., in Fort Lauderdale from 1965 to 1970 and before that in Miami.

"While training in Miami, we had a lot of these cases," Rupp said. "Then, in Fort Lauderdale, people began to send cases to me and I gradually got a reputation as an expert in this."

Because of Rupp's considerable expertise in that and other areas, Tinker said the pathologist's testimony carries a great deal of weight with the jury, often to the chagrin of defense lawyers.

But, he said, Rupp is not the handmaiden of the prosecution, either.

"He'll say what he thinks whether it hurts the prosecution or helps," Tinker said. "He's honest, and will tell you what's on his mind."

Rupp's contributions have not always been limited to his profession.

In 1975, during a five-year legal struggle over integration of Corpus Christi schools, Rupp, whose children were all in public school at the time, came up with a plan to improve the racial balance of the schools with a minimal amount of busing.

His plan became known as the "computer plan" because of Rupp's until-then-unheard-of use of a computer to determine the number of students from each school that would have to be transferred.

"It was an idea that was ahead of its time," he said. "It made the school administrators mad, because they had already spent millions of dollars trying to figure out what to do, and here comes someone with a computer."

U.S. District Judge Owen Cox eventually agreed with Rupp, and a version of the computer plan was put into effect for one year.

The late Paul Montemayor, a United Steelworkers of America official who spoke for the plaintiffs in the suit, blasted the plan at the time.

"It's difficult to me to understand the mentality of a federal judge that puts the fate of our district on a computer plan," Montemayor said in 1975. "I'd like to see the prescription that Dr. Rupp gave the judge."

Lately, the medical examiner has found a new hobby — taking old songs from sheet music and entering them on an Apple computer in his office, like an electronic player piano.

To demonstrate, Rupp searched the list of songs on the computer's memory for a familiar tune. He's entered the necessary commands, and the machine, wired to speakers mounted on a wall, began to play.

The music was loud enough to be heard by the secretaries in the outer office, who interrupted Rupp's peaceful reverie with the news that someone has died in a traffic fatality and the investigators wanted an autopsy done that afternoon.

It was business as usual in the medical examiner's office.

Bed & Bath Motel sticks to basics

N.Y. Times News Service

WEATHERFORD, Texas — It's as basic as a motel room can get.

There is a double bed, a chair, a bathroom, two bars of soap, some towels and a Gideon Bible. There is no television or telephone, and the nearest thing to room service is the short walk to the adjacent convenience store.

But it's only $15 a night, and guests who expect to sleep with cockroaches for that price will have to bring their own.

Al Rice, inventor and president of the Bed & Bath Motel, said it fills a need for travelers who just want somewhere to sleep and clean up along the way.

"It just galls me to death to pay $35-$40 for a few hours' sleep," he said. "I knew there had to be a better way."

The working prototype of Rice's "better way" is an eight-unit motel built at the edge of a gas station-convenience store parking lot on Interstate 30, about 25 miles west of Fort Worth.

Guests can check in at the store, or they can use a credit card at the motel room door — an invention for which Rice has sought a patent.

When a customer slides the credit card into the slot, the information on the card's magnetic strip is sent to a computer at a division of McDonnell Douglas Corp. in California. The computer checks the expiration date, the credit limit and whether the card is reported stolen.

If everything is in order, the room door opens. It takes about 15 to 30 seconds. A receipt prints out on the other side of the door, and the credit card becomes the room key for the next 12 hours.

Inside, the 10-by-12-foot, all-white room is designed for efficiency and ease of upkeep, said Rice, who is a chemist by profession.

He has patents pending on the design of the room and a unique system for putting sheets on the bed using plastic pipes run through loops on each end of the sheet held tight with a spring underneath the mattress.

Rice said it takes about 15 minutes to clean each room. The industry standard is 25 to 30 minutes.

Hansen said one of the highest costs of operating a hotel is personnel. Rice figures each Bed & Bath Motel can be operated with just one person to clean and maintain the rooms because most locations will be adjacent to another business that can act as the front desk.

The motel opened in December. Initial reaction was mixed, and Rice said he has heard all the jokes you can imagine about "no-tell motels."

Rice said he has gathered all the information he can about his guests to get a profile of his target market — "and they're people who need to sleep."

The guests, so far, represent 21 states — and 45 percent are repeat customers. About a third of the guests check in after midnight. Rice said he believes many of those customers would either drive tired or sleep in the car rather than pay for a more expensive room.

Cloud seeding, rain dances utilized to replenish aquifer

SCOTT CITY, Kan. (AP) — Home on the range, the skies are not cloudy all day. That's the problem.

Rain falls and rivers flow far more kindly elsewhere than in the High Plains.

But this semi-arid swath from South Dakota to New Mexico has been an irrigated breadbasket producing some 25 percent of the nation's food and fiber since its huge underground sea, the Ogallala Aquifer, began being pumped in earnest 70 years ago.

But what if the well should eventually run dry?

There have been some earth-shaking proposals that challenge Genesis itself, such as pouring Canada's huge northern rivers south of the border. Meanwhile, rainmaking, once the province of tom-toms and flim-flam artists, has actually been working.

Ten years ago in Texas, where wells have "dewatered" as hydrologists delicately put it, they were talking about importing water from Nebraska's mother lode of two-thirds of the aquifer's Great Lakes-size supply.

The cost and realities of interstate politics have stilled such musings.

In the 1960s, Texas was seriously considering capturing the Mississippi River below New Orleans and siphoning and pumping it 800 miles to the Panhandle to irrigate its huge cotton fields. Power to do it would have come from six or so new nuclear generating plants. The prohibitive price kept Ol' Man River where it was.

Several small towns in Kansas and Colorado have dipped straws into Nebraska for domestic water, and dewatered Texans and Jayhawkers have been buying farms in liquid Cornhusker land, but the implications of Sporhase remain, so far, only a cloud on the horizon.

In Kansas Water District No. 1, scientists have been experimenting with cloud seeding to produce rain since 1975.

"People thought it was hocus-pocus, but if it could take some of the stress off our aquifer, we thought it might be worth trying," says district manager Keith Lebbin.

The results have been evaluated independently in 1978, '81 and '88. All confirmed a 9 percent increase over normal rainfall and, more importantly, a 35 percent reduction in hail. The rainfall is equivalent to an inch or inch and a half of precipitation.

"Some people think it's the Lord's work and we shouldn't interfere," says Lebbin, who has four cloud-seeding planes on ready alert during growing season. "But we're not pretending to make rain. We're just trying to maximize what the cloud is doing."

"...IN HIS OWN IMAGE"

"And God created... every living creature that moves" (Gen. 1:21)

Every creature which has ever existed on earth has a conception, unique to its species... lives out a life span in its own environment... and then dies, at which point the physical remains begin an inevitable surrender to the elements. Eventually, decomposition is complete and nothing exists... with one miraculous exception... man.

"And God created man in His own image." (Gen. 1:27)

Someone attempted to preserve these seashells in a shining glass jar. Yet, even this protection is subject to destruction. But, God, in His infinite grace and wisdom endowed man with a unique, indestructible immortality. He gave us a soul... created from His own spiritual image. Thus, though our body also returns to dust, man, having an immortal soul, is capable of experiencing eternal life.

Enter God's House this week. Take your first step on the road to eternity.

Baskin pastors Northridge United Methodist Church, Lamesa, and Mrs. Baskin is the part-time secretary at the church. Baskin, a musician and songwriter, will lead the worship. Mrs. Baskin will share her testimony with the Women's Aglow.

Mrs. Baskin is the former officer and founder of Women's Aglow in College Station.

"She will share how her life was changed forever through the ministry of Women's Aglow," says a release from Aglow.

Baskin is the former assistant pastor at Greenwood United Methodist Church. The Baskins are the parents of three children, Darrell, Deanna and Emily.

Women's Aglow is a non-denominational group. The women meet at 6:30 p.m. for dinner. Cost is $6.50. The meeting begins at 7:15 p.m.

For more information call 682-8386 or 915-756-3688.

Kelview hosts 'Visions'

The vocal ensemble Vision will be hosted by Kelview Heights Baptist Church at 6:30 p.m. Sunday. The touring group represents the Pacific Coast Baptist College of San Dimas, Calif. The Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, invites the public to attend.

St. Nicholas celebrates

St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton, will be celebrating its 34th year with a special service at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

The first service in the church was held Aug. 5, 1956.

Noted guests for this celebration service will be the Rev. Sam B. Hulsey, bishop of Northwest Texas, who will preach and celebrate. Also expected to attend are the Rev. George H. Quarterman, retired bishop of Northwest Texas; and Mrs. Ruth Neal, wife of the church's first vicar and rector, the Rev. Richard F. Neal. Also invited are previous rectors, including the Rev. and Mrs. James L.(Ann) Considine Jr., and the Rev. and Mrs. Joseph H. (Carolyn) Schley.

Charter members and special friends of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church are invited to the celebration.

A reception will follow the service in the Parish Hall.

A groundbreaking for the second Episcopal congregation in Midland was held April 15, 1956, conducted by the Rev. George Morrel, rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church. The combination church-mission hall was a missionary endeavor of Holy Trinity Parish and cost about $25,000.

On June 28, 1956, the congregation officially chose the title of St. Nicholas. Appointed to head the parish were the Rev. Richard F. Neal, vicar; Frank Breckenridge, warden; and G.R. Carter, Frank Shriver, Sidney Orton, Phillip Grant, Ben H. Bland and A.T. Barrett Jr., the Bishop's Committee.

A Woman's Committee was organized and elected as officers were Mrs. Frank Shiver, president; Mrs. S.W. Orton, vice president; Mrs. Alfred Giles, vice president; Mrs. G.R. Carter, secretary; and Mrs. Frank Breckenridge, treasurer.

Sunday the church will be ready, with furnishings built by the congregation. Deacon Claude E. Canterbury, archdeacon and executive secretary of the Missionary District of North Texas, with Neal, read the service for the Opening of a Church and celebrated Holy Communion.

What started as a mission with 194 communicants and 389 baptized members has grown into a parish with 404 communicants and 664 baptized members.

The 8:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. services have been canceled for that day.

Hall 'Woman of Year'

The Macedonia Baptist church held its annual "Woman of the Year" program in July.

Participants for the 1990 year were Mrs. Gail Andrews, Mrs. Angelina Gilbert and Ms. Iris Hall, who was selected as the 1990 Macedonia Woman of the Year.

This annual event is in support of the Lovely Sunset District Baptist Association Encampment grounds, which are used for District meetings, youth retreats, adult retreats and many other worthwhile ministries.

Church schedules vote

The Pulpit Committee of the Alamo Heights Baptist Church will present detailed information about the man the committee plans to recommend to the church as pastor.

Committee members are Ben Taylor, Olivia Padgett, Dean Cope, Virginia Nall and Robert Schlagal.

"Each of these committee members will give some information plus their deep conviction that they have found God's choice for the church," says a release from the church.

The weekend of Aug. 12, the Rev. Ben G. Condray of Waxahachie will visit the church. Toward the close of the evening service, the church will vote on the committee's recommendation.

The church's pastor, the Rev. John S. Rasco, invites all interested persons to all services.

Church honors Pittman

The Rev. Nancy Claire Pittman will preach at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., Sunday at 8:30 and 10:45 a.m. She is a special guest this month as First Christian honors the women of the church during its centennial. First Christian Church is located at 1301 W. Louisiana.

Pittman

An after church coffee for Ms. Pittman will follow the 10:45 a.m. service.

Ms. Pittman is currently enrolled in the graduate program of religious studies at Southern Methodist University, where she is working toward a doctorate in New Testament studies.

A native of Lubbock, Ms. Pittman has been a lifelong member of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). She sang in youth choirs, served as a youth group officer and participated with her family in all other aspects of church life.

After earning her B.A. degree in religion and psychology at Texas Christian University, Ms. Pittman served as Director of Christian Education at First Christian Church in McAllen. She returned to TCU as a student at Brite Divinity School where she received the Master of Divinity degree in May, 1984.

While in seminary, Ms. Pittman was the first recipient of the First Christian Church, Corpus Christi, preaching award. She was ordained into the ministry in 1984 by the Christian Church in the Southwest at South Hills Christian Church in Fort Worth.

Ms. Pittman was employed as assistant to the dean at Brite Divinity School for two years before taking the position of associate minister at Oak Cliff Christian Church in Dallas. She served that congregation for two and one half years. She has also preached in several congregations in the Southwest and in Oklahoma and has spoken at many retreats for youth, women and congregations.

Ms. Pittman has also preached at several regional and national events, including the 1985 Women's Assembly, the 1986 Regional Assembly of the Christian Church in the Southwest and the 1985 national meeting of the Association of Disciples Musicians.

Chapman insists on 'fixed view'

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — The Rev. Dr. Morris H. Chapman puts it bluntly: "For us, not to believe in inerrancy is not to believe in God."

Chapman, new president of the nation's 14.9 million Southern Baptists, says he will follow recent predecessors in appointing to denominational positions only those who believe the Bible is literally without error in all respects — in history and science as well as religion.

For that fixed view, the battle to control the nation's largest Protestant denomination is over: the fundamentalists have won.

So says the polished Chapman, and so say the beaten moderates, who have failed to elect one of their own as president for 12 straight years.

Moderates talk more and more about leaving the convention and founding a new denomination. A meeting is planned soon to discuss options.

"Many of us are ceasing to think of ourselves as Southern Baptists. ... It has become a new denomination," said the Rev. Stan Hastey, executive director of the Southern Baptist Alliance, one moderate group.

Jimmy Allen, head of another, Baptists Committed to the Southern Baptist Convention, suggests that instead of breaking away, moderates will reduce contributions to the denomination and directly fund programs abandoned or cut by fundamentalists.

Support group helps women and priests in relationships

N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — Vicki R. Long's relationships with two Georgia priests, including Archbishop Eugene A. Marino, should not necessarily thrust her into the role of the villain, said a woman who operates a support group and newsletter for women and priests in relationships.

"Most of us are simple women who fall in love with a man who happens to be a priest," said Cathy Grenier of Canadensis, Pa., who is married to a former Catholic priest and operates the Good Tidings support group.

More than 1,000 persons have sought counsel from Good Tidings in the past five years. Mrs. Grenier said they probably represent only a small portion of women and priests in relationships, and reflect a deepening rejection of the Catholic Church's policy of mandatory celibacy.

"Many priests have this problem; some are good priests and some are not," she said. "But (Marino) is a good man. The more this happens the more the church has got to look at why. It has to challenge the church."

While the policy stands, however, it is unfair and simplistic to judge Ms. Long as simply another woman "looking for relationships with priests," Mrs. Grenier said.

"There's also the factor of finding a good man. I'm not speaking of base goodness, but on a spiritual level," she said. "When a woman has a relationship with a priest, he's not just the next guy on her list. He's probably a very good man, and that's probably the first thing that drew her to him."

But the sympathies of some Catholic women in Atlanta lay much more with Archbishop Marino than with Ms. Long.

Richardine Barker's husband, Joseph, was the first black deacon ordained by Archbishop Marino in Atlanta. News of the affair, she said, left her "totally devastated" in a way she has not felt since the assassination of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

But Mrs. Barker believes Ms. Long is more to blame than the archbishop. Ms. Long's involvement with and paternity suit against another priest "kind of tells you what kind of person she is. Yes, she went looking for him (Marino). Yes, she's very demure and 'Oh, I'm so helpless.' It's classic . . ."

Robot spacecraft ready for Venus rendevous

By Lee Siegel
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A bedeviled, beleaguered NASA is hoping the Magellan spacecraft's rendezvous with Venus this month will provide our best look yet at Earth's hellishly hot neighbor.

If all goes according to plan, the $413 million unmanned device, centerpiece of a $744 million mission, will orbit the cloud-shrouded planet on Aug. 10 after a 15-month journey from Earth. And NASA desperately wants everything to go according to plan.

"This thing must succeed because of the Hubble Space Telescope effect and the generally bad impression we've all been getting of how NASA has been conducting its affairs lately," said Steve Saunders, the Magellan project's chief scientist.

But those setbacks — the crippling of the $1.5 billion Hubble observatory due to mirror imperfections and the temporary grounding of the space shuttles due to hydrogen fuel leaks — have not dimmed the agency's enthusiasm for Magellan.

"We've dreamed about the sights we would see. Now it's about to happen," said Phil Allin, a Magellan project official at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Named for 16th century explorer Ferdinand Magellan, the craft's radar will penetrate acid-laden Venusian clouds to make pictures and maps 10 times more detailed than the best previous images.

That will help geologists understand forces that sculpted Venus to create flat lowlands, hilly plains and continent-like highlands capped by peaks such as 35,400-foot Mount Maxwell, which is a mile taller than Earth's Mount Everest.

NASA SAYS Magellan's radar will reveal unprecedented details of the planet's terrain, a landscape shaped by meteorite craters, tens of thousands of volcanoes, and perhaps movements of gargantuan blocks of the planet's crust — a process that may be similar to continental drift on Earth.

The 3.7-ton spacecraft also will look for ancient shorelines and channels to learn if Venus once had oceans and rivers, before its carbon dioxide atmosphere trapped the sun's heat in a runaway "greenhouse effect."

Such global warming makes modern Venus a bone-dry, 900-degree Fahrenheit oven with an atmospheric pressure 90 times greater than Earth's.

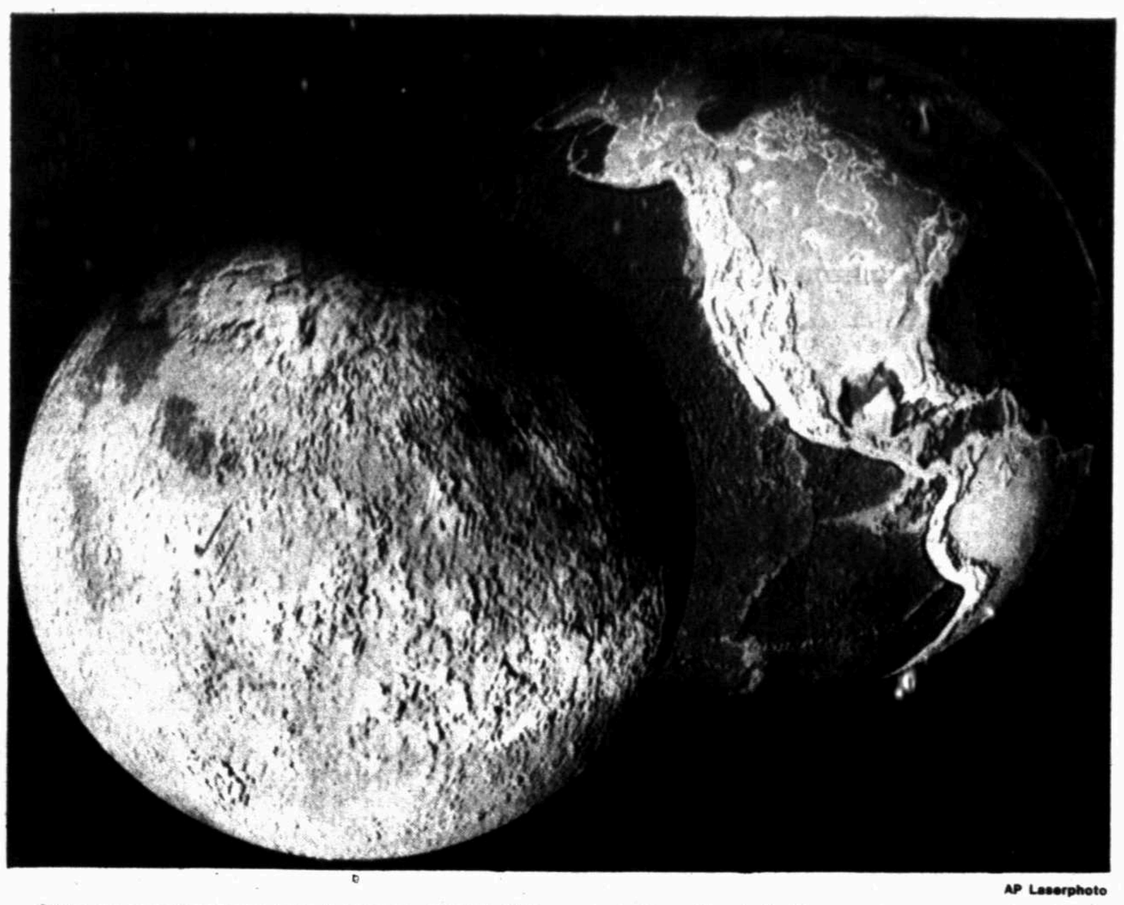

Magellan's mission "is the capstone of the exploration of the inner planets," said Jim Head, a member of the Magellan science team and a geologist at Brown University in Providence, R.I.

"We've seen the surfaces of the moon, Mars, the Earth and Mercury, but Venus always has been obscured by the clouds and we've never gotten a good global view of it."

The 21-foot-long Magellan was released from the cargo bay of space shuttle Atlantis on May 4, 1989, then launched on its roundabout, 806 million-mile voyage by an inertial upper-stage rocket.

AT 11:31 A.M. CDT on Aug. 10, Magellan will fire its solid-fueled Star rocket to slow down and go into a elliptical, nearly polar orbit that ranges from 171 miles to almost 5,000 miles above Venus.

After a few weeks of tests, the spacecraft will bounce radar waves off Venus to make pictures and topographic maps of 70 percent to 90 percent of the surface. Meanwhile, the planet will rotate once on its axis during a single Venusian day, which equals 243 Earth days.

AP Laserphoto

This computer-generated image shows the topographic features of Venus, left, and Earth. The images are derived from combining data from the U.S.'s Pioneer Venus orbiter and the Soviet Venera spacecraft. Dark shades show the lowest elevations and light areas represent higher regions.

"It's going to give us a map of Venus that in many ways is better than anything we have for the whole Earth," where most of the ocean floor hasn't been mapped in detail, Saunders said.

If scientists are lucky, Magellan may tell them if Venusian volcanoes are active, if movements of the planet's crust produce "Venus quakes," and if those movements are more like Earth's drifting continents or like the upward boiling of molten rock that created Hawaii.

Venus is the planet most like Earth in terms of size, density and mass, and also is Earth's nearest neighbor, other than the moon. Yet its clouds prevent the surface from being seen by telescopes or optical cameras aboard orbiting spaceships.

About 20 spacecraft have visited Venus since the early 1960s, some deploying landers that photographed small parts of the surface. Pictures also were made by transmitting radar waves from Earth, and from NASA's Pioneer Venus orbiter in 1978 and the Soviet Union's Venera 15 and 16 orbiters in 1983.

BUT THE BEST radar pictures until now could distinguish only those landscape features wider than about 1¼ miles. Saunders said Magellan's pictures will be roughly 10 times better, capturing features as small as 260 yards, about the length of 2½ football fields.

Magellan will take 3 hours and 11 minutes to orbit Venus once. During each orbit, Magellan will spend 37 minutes as it moves from north to south bouncing radar off a swath of Venus' surface about 10,000 miles long but only 16 miles wide. The information will be stored on two tape recorders.

During the rest of each orbit, Magellan will radio the information back to Earth, where it will be received by 230-foot-wide, dish-shaped antennas at NASA's Deep Space Network stations in California, Spain and Australia.

Computers at Jet Propulsion Laboratory will assemble the data into pictures and topographic maps of each swath. The swaths — nicknamed "noodles" because they are so long and narrow — then will be assembled into pictures covering larger areas of the planet.

"Mapping a whole new planet will return an enormous amount of data that will keep geologists busy for a long time," Saunders said. "If you printed it in books, it would fill a shelf about 10 miles long. It's very humbling."

MAGELLAN'S MAIN 243-day mapping mission will miss the south polar regions. NASA is expected to approve more 243-day mapping cycles. A total of three are needed to map the entire planet.

Cost of the Magellan mission through the first 243-day mapping cycle is $744 million, including the cost of launching the spacecraft from the shuttle, said Bill Dimmer of NASA's comptroller's office in Washington. The spacecraft and its instruments account for $413 million of that total, he said.

Moon found hiding in gap in rings of Saturn

N.Y. Times News Service

Seeing ripples in the outermost major ring of Saturn, scientists predicted where they should find a small but previously unobserved moon whose gravity was causing the disturbance.

They looked through images from the Voyager 2 spacecraft, and there it was: a small, bright object no more than 12 miles wide, the 18th moon to be identified orbiting Saturn.

Scientists at the Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif., said the moon orbits Saturn in a 200-mile-wide clearing, known as Encke's gap, in the "A" ring of icy particles surrounding the planet.

The moon's gravity is believed to be the force sweeping particles aside to cause the gap.

This possibility was first proposed by Dr. Jeffrey Cuzzi, an Ames scientist who studied Saturn's ring structure as disclosed by the Voyager photographs taken in the early 1980s.

A wavy pattern in the ring material on each side of Encke's gap, like motorboat wakes, was interpreted as the result of an unseen moon in the gap.

Then Dr. Mark Showalter, another researcher at Ames, and also at Stanford University, analyzed the disturbance to determine the mass of the unobserved object and its possible position.

Using a computer program to search through 30,000 Voyager images, researchers at the space agency center selected 25 images for detailed examination, and the little satellite turned out to be visible in 11 of these.

They are now searching for a 19th moon, which they suspect to be in a gap between the central and outermost rings.

Dr. David Morrison, chief of space science at Ames, said the achievement was reminiscent of the discovery of Neptune in 1846. Its existence and position were predicted by theorists who observed its gravitational influence on Uranus.

With destruction of city trees comes warmer temperatures

N.Y. Times News Service

Replacing trees with buildings and concrete can contribute to an increase in air pollution, a new study says.

The researchers at the Georgia Institute of Technology said that trees cool down overheated cities and help moderate the production of pollutants that become worse with even slight increases in temperature.

The study is by the same group that found two years ago that in some cases trees can emit as many hydrocarbons, a major component in the pollutant ozone, as other sources, like cars and factories.

But the latest report, to be published in The Journal of Geophysical Research, says that chopping down trees in cities may be more than an aesthetic loss.

The reason is that as cities become more developed and lose their green areas to buildings and concrete — they trap heat.

Atlanta, for example, can be as much as almost 22 degrees Fahrenheit hotter than outlying areas, and over the 15 years studied, the city's average summertime temperature has increased by almost 4 degrees Fahrenheit. At the same time, Atlanta lost 20 percent of its trees.

The researchers said that even small jumps in temperature can significantly increase hydrocarbon emissons, both from trees and other sources, primarily the evaporation of gasoline.

These hydrocarbons mix with nitrogen oxides to form ozone, a key component of smog at ground level. The higher temperatures also speed up the photochemical reactions that form ozone, the study says.

But trees reduce urban temperatures because they evaporate water through pores in their leaves. Trees also do not absorb heat as does concrete, or stifle air flow as do large buildings.

"If our computations are correct, a city that has trees is going to be better off than a city without trees," said Carlos A. Cardelino, a research scientist who wrote the paper with Dr. William L. Chameides, director of the School of Earth and Atmospheric Sciences at Georgia Tech and an author of the 1988 paper.

The 20 percent loss of trees in Atlanta, along with an estimated 50 percent reduction in man-made hydrocarbons because of clean air laws, should have produced a sizable decrease in ozone concentrations, the study says.

But measurements show that ozone has not been reduced, and the researchers calculate that hydrocarbons emissions have increased.

Scientists still gather to ponder questions of origin

By Keay Davidson
Hearst News Service

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — The building blocks of Earth's earliest creatures may have fallen from the sky, scientists said at a conference on the origin of life.

More than a century after Charles Darwin suggested that life began when primeval chemicals mingled in a "warm little pond," researchers are still seeking an answer to the great evolutionist's question: Where did we come from? Perhaps from comets, according to a theory propounded at NASA's Ames Research Center, at the recent Fourth Symposium on Chemical Evolution and the Origin and Evolution of Life.

Billions of years ago, a barrage of comets could have delivered millions of pounds of organic material a year to Earth's surface, say researchers, including noted planetary scientist Carl Sagan of Cornell University, best known as the baritone host of the PBS-TV science show "Cosmos."

But at least one noted investigator is skeptical about Sagan's cometary hypothesis, and argues most of the cometary material would have been destroyed before evolving into even the teeniest critters. Hence life's roots are probably on Earth rather than in the solar system, said Stanley L. Miller of the University of California at San Diego.

Miller's doubts carry a lot of weight because of an experiment he conducted almost 40 years ago while a graduate student at the University of Chicago. Every high school biology and chemistry student learns how Miller, like a latter-day Dr. Frankenstein, mixed chemicals in a flask and exposed them to electrical discharges.

The result: amino acids, the building blocks of proteins, which in turn are major building blocks of all organisms.

In the 1950s, Miller's work made headlines and upset religious fundamentalists because it indicated life could have evolved from simple natural processes. That supported the view that life began eons ago when chemicals formed simple organic molecules in a "warm little pond," then evolved into increasingly complex organisms.

But since then, scientists have debated whether the "warm little pond" was on Earth or, perhaps, elsewhere — say, on the gaseous surface of a comet, or even inside an asteroid where decaying radioactive substances might have provided the warmth.

In a paper presented at the conference, Sagan and three colleagues stressed comets weren't essential to explain the origin of life on Earth.

However, they calculated that comets may well have transported a substantial amount of organic materials to the planet's surface. "A kind of 'balance sheet' for organic production from different sources

Cuomo OK's 'Turn it down!' law

N.Y. Times News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Along with speeding or running a red light, New York drivers can worry about a new transgression that could force their insurance rates to rise: playing the car radio so loud it rattles teeth.

Under a bill signed into law this week by Gov. Mario M. Cuomo, it will be illegal to turn up a car radio so loud that it registers 80 decibels or more from 50 feet away.

Eighty decibels is "really loud," explained Bruce Geiger, an aide to State Sen. Owen H. Johnson, who sponsored the bill in response to complaints from many constituents about music-happy drivers on their way to the beach.

The top penalty for a conviction would be $100 for the first offense, $200 for the second and $500 for the third.

The third violation could also lead to a one-point penalty on an offender's driving record, which would allow insurance companies to raise that person's premiums.

The new law does not apply to hand-held radios, sometimes referred to as "boom boxes," although local noise ordinances in many communities provide penalties for playing those too loud as well.

Reagan sends his best to young victim of bully

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Reagan sent his regards Friday to a 12-year-old Brooklyn boy who was set on fire by a bully earlier this year.

Reagan

"Please know that you're still in our thoughts and prayers," Reagan said in a taped message to David Opont that was broadcast on "CBS This Morning."

"Thank you — a lot," Opont replied emphatically.

The appearance marked Opont's first interview since he was released June 8 from Jamaica Hospital in Queens.

He was given a 50-50 chance of survival after he was attacked on his way to school March 7. During his hospitalization, which included six skin grafts and intensive physical therapy, he received cards, letters, gifts and good wishes from around the nation.

Reagan was among his hospital room visitors. Opont was asked what Reagan's visit had meant to him. "Everything," he replied.

Although Opont still undergoes therapy, "He's coming along quite nicely," said Dr. Craig Rosenberg, director of rehabilitation medicine at Jamaica. "He's an extremely courageous person."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Screenwriter Bruce Joel Rubin remembers dreaming that he would be able to stay in Indiana and still have a successful Hollywood film career.

Those hometown hopes are gone now, but Rubin is thrilled with the success of his critically acclaimed film, Paramount Pictures' "Ghost," and the direction of his career.

"I would have loved to have made films in Bloomington," he reflected from his Southern California office this week. "When I first went out there I had some hopes I could write material from Indiana and ship it off to Hollywood and people would send me checks."

Rubin came to Bloomington in 1974 to be part of the Ashram spiritual center. It was there that he wrote his first screenplay, which later became "Brainstorm," Natalie Wood's last film.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Police arrested the rap duo "Kid 'n Play" for "simulating sex" during a performance.

Christopher L."Play" Martin, 28, and Christopher P."Kid" Reid, 26, were freed after each paid a $550 fine.

Reid called the offending motions Thursday night "a little extra gyration stuff — nothing offensive, we thought."

Christopher Reid, left center, and Christopher Martin, known as the rap group "Kid 'n Play," were arrested Thursday night for alleged sexual explicitness related to their concert performance. The duo opened for a "Public Enemy" rap concert.

They were arrested after performing at the Augusta-Richmond County Civic Center, police said.

"Kid 'n Play" was one of the openers for a concert featuring the rap group "Public Enemy."

No other rappers on the bill were arrested and no fans were involved in the "simulated sex," police said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The bass player for the Kentucky HeadHunters country music band was hospitalized Friday in South Carolina, a spokeswoman said.

Doug Phelps, 29, was undergoing tests for a suspected stomach virus, spokeswoman Kathy Gangwisch said.

As a result of the illness, the five-member band canceled appearances Friday night in Richmond, Va., Saturday night in Charlotte, N.C., and Sunday in Charleston, S.C.

The concerts, headlined by country star Hank Williams Jr., will go on without the Kentucky HeadHunters.

The band has a top-selling country album, "Pickin' on Nashville."

Civil rights bill passes House despite veto threat

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As Congress worked its way closer to a monthlong recess, the House of Representatives on Friday approved a major civil rights bill, despite threats by President Bush to veto the measure, which he contends would lead to job quotas for women and minority members.

The bill is nearly identical to a version passed by the Senate last month, so it is expected to remain largely unchanged in a conference between the chambers.

That would leave Bush a tough political choice of whether to carry out a threatened veto and damage his standing with minorities.

The most comprehensive civil rights legislation since the Voting Rights Act of 1965, the bill seeks to overturn or modify a half-dozen Supreme Court decisions.

In one reversal, the bill would shift the burden of proof back on the employer to show that an employment practice that hurts women or minorities was essential for the business to operate successfully.

The option of providing compensatory and punitive damages, long available to victims of discrimination based on racial grounds, would be broadened to include discrimination based on sex, religion or national origin.

The House also took up a bill Friday aimed at slowing the rising cost of congressional campaigns, including provisions like tax credits and lowered broadcast rates for candidates who limit spending to $550,000 per campaign. It would also limit contributions from political action committees.

House members planned to begin their monthlong recess on Saturday. Earlier Friday they approved a temporary $72 billion increase in the national debt limit. The current limit of $3.123 trillion is due to expire Aug. 15, and the increase is needed to permit the Treasury to continue borrowing in the financial markets through Oct. 2.

The Senate, which must also approve the debt limit extension, is still working its way through scores of amendments to a military program bill and is not expected to adjourn until Saturday.

The House passage of the civil rights measure by a vote of 272-154 was roughly along party lines.

It followed days of fierce lobbying and often impassioned debate Friday between opponents, who argued that it would force employers to adopt hiring and promotion quotas, and proponents, who said that was not the case.

As late as Friday afternoon, White House officials said Bush was devoting much time urging lawmakers to vote for a substitute measure.

NATION

'Truly this will be a day of triumph as great as any victory won on any battlefield.'

—Thomas S. Foley, Speaker of the House

Recalling his own role in landmark civil rights votes as a newly elected congressman in the mid-1960s, Thomas S. Foley, the House speaker, implored lawmakers to make history again by passing the bill. "Truly this will be a day of triumph," he declared, "as great as any victory won on any battlefield."

The battle Friday centered on an amendment, backed by the administration, that its supporters said would assure that the bill did not include hiring quotas.

The amendment, which would have put a ceiling of $100,000 on all job discrimination damages, was defeated by a vote of 238-188.

Seeking to make the measure more palatable to the administration, the House passed two amendments late Thursday night.

One would place a $150,000 ceiling on punitive damages that employers with fewer than 100 employers would have to pay in discrimination cases.

The other would include language underscoring that "nothing" in the law "shall be construed to require an employer to adopt hiring or promotion quotas."

But in a letter to Robert H. Michel, the House Republican leader, that was made public Friday, Bush asserted that the amendments "would not result in a bill I could sign" and would "do nothing to cure the bill's defects."

And the White House issued a statement after Friday's vote which described the measure as "a quota bill that the president will have to veto if it is presented to him."

Still, the president himself did not flatly state that he would veto the bill. The House action Friday will force him to make a tough choice: if he vetoes the measure, siding with conservative and business leaders as well as his own advisers, he could be portrayed as opposed to civil rights.

Drug sting conducted at Barry jurors' hotel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jurors in Mayor Marion Barry's drug and perjury trial spent their first full day of deliberations Friday in the relative calm of the U.S. Courthouse after a wild drug sting at their hotel the night before.

Like a scene from a movie, there were helicopters, search dogs and an escape car ramming police cruisers.

The presiding judge in the Barry case said he was assured by U.S. marshals that "our jurors were oblivious" to the sting, but the mayor's lawyer still said he might ask for a mistrial in connection with it.

The Barry jury has been secretly staying at the hotel in suburban Maryland for the past 6½ weeks. But reporters covering the drug sting story and its aftermath discovered that the jury was there, raising the possibility it would have to be moved.

The jurors, meanwhile, said they would deliberate Saturday in an effort to move toward a verdict as quickly as possible. They began deliberation late Thursday.

Barry is charged with 10 misdemeanor cocaine possession counts, including one in connection with a hotel sting in which the FBI videotaped him smoking from a crack cocaine pipe. He also faces three perjury charges and a misdemeanor conspiracy charge.

The mayor shrugged off questions about the trial Friday, saying only, "I feel fantastic."

He spoke to about 200 teen-agers at a youth forum, then returned to his District Building office for a meeting with top staff members and cabinet officials. It was the first time Barry visited city hall without having to rush back to the federal courthouse since jury selection in his trial began June 4.

Thursday night's unconnected drug sting was aimed at Brian Tribble, a former friend of the late University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias who died in June 1986 of cocaine poisoning, authorities said.

Peter Gruden, special agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration's Washington field office, said he was "pretty sure that it was not known" by the DEA that the Barry jury was sequestered at the hotel.

Tribble was lured to the hotel to purchase cocaine but as authorities moved in he fled, officials said. An associate was taken into custody and faced arraignment on drug possession charges.

Tribble drove off, rammed two police vehicles blocking his escape, drove back to the hotel and fled into a wooded area, said Prince George's County police, who were called in.

Police brought in search dogs and helicopters equipped with infrared lights to search the area but Tribble was still free Friday.

The District of Columbia Police Department also took part in the sting operation, said Lt. Reginald Smith, who added that information on where the jury was staying "was only available on a need to know basis."

The FBI also assisted in the operation.

During a brief court session Friday, Barry lawyer R. Kenneth Mundy said he wanted "a representation on the record" that the jurors weren't made aware of the sting operation of the night before.

Jackson said he was assured they weren't aware of it.

Mundy said someone would have had to ask them a question about the sting in order to make the determination that they hadn't been aware of it.

"They may have been aware there was a commotion," said Jackson.

Mundy was asked later, outside court, whether he might ask for a mistrial because of the incident. "Yes," he said, without elaboration.

Jackson also said he would allow the jury to return piecemeal portions of the verdict, rather than waiting until it reached a conclusion on all 14 charges.

Man survives 3 days in desert

WITTMANN, Ariz. (AP) — A 65-year-old epileptic man stranded in the Arizona desert survived for nearly three days by eating cactus and crawling in search of shade, his daughter-in-law said.

Manuel Cantu of Wittmann became so desperate that he tried to blow up his disabled car with a gunshot to the gas tank in hopes someone would see the fire, said Diane Cantu.

Cantu, who was reported missing Monday, was rescued Thursday after a rancher heard his call for help on a citizens band radio, a spokesman for the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office said.

He was treated for dehydration and sunburn at Phoenix General Hospital and Medical Center but was in good condition Friday, family members said.

"He's a real cowboy in the truest sense," said Diane Cantu. "He's spent a lot of time in the desert, and he knows survival skills."

Cantu left home Monday morning to go target shooting in the surrounding desert, said his daughter-in-law. His car got stuck in sand in a deserted area about 30 miles northwest of Phoenix, where temperatures soared well above 100 degrees this week.

NATION IN BRIEF

Senate rejects more troop cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rebuffed an attempt Friday to cut nearly four times as many U.S. troops as President Bush has proposed to cut in his 1991 military budget.

Despite arguments that the Cold War has ended and the United States faces severe money problems, the Senate rejected an amendment to cut 130,000 troops, including 80,000 in Europe. The vote was 59-40.

In proposing a $307 billion defense bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, Bush called for about 40,000 troops to be cut overall. The Senate Armed Services Committee adopted a $289 billion military budget last month that would cut troop strength by 100,000, including 50,000 in Europe.

The chairman of the Senate Armed Services panel, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., warned that a deeper cut in the nation's 2.1 million military personnel than the total adopted by his committee would force the Pentagon to "send out the pink slips."

In a speech on Thursday, Bush called for a 25 percent reduction in troop strength over five years — about 500,000 through 1995 — but cautioned against drastic reductions in the nation's military.

Marino offered post

ATLANTA (AP) — The breakaway church of George Stallings on Friday said it is recruiting former Archbishop Eugene Marino, who was the highest-ranking black U.S. Roman Catholic until he resigned because of a relationship with a woman.

Church officials said this week that Marino resigned last month after the disclosure of his two-year relationship with a lay minister, Vicki R. Long. The church previously had said Marino left because of a health problem.

Ms. Long, 27, who has filed a monetary claim against the archdiocese for an undisclosed amount, has refused to comment about the relationship.

In Washington, Stallings, the priest who founded the African-American Catholic Congregation, said Marino's resignation proves the "folly" of mandatory celibacy. He asked Marino to join his congregation.

"Roman Catholics intuitively know that Archbishop Marino's dark night of the soul is not a personal failure but a failure ... on the part of the Roman Catholic church to deal realistically with the issue that a call to ordained ministry is not synonymous with celibacy," Stalling said in a statement.

Thatcher tours HQ

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, touring Star Wars headquarters during an outbreak of war in the Persian Gulf, said Friday the project had helped force sweeping changes in the Soviet Union.

Despite the thaw in superpower relations that some claim has rendered the multibillion dollar Strategic Defense Initiative irrelevant, Mrs. Thatcher said Iraq's invasion of Kuwait proved the importance of a strong military.

Trading halted twice

A trader in the Standard & Poor's 500 stock-index futures pit sells Friday at the Mercantile Exchange in Chicago. Trading was halted for two minutes Friday mroning after the futures contracts fell to their limit within the first 10 minutes of trading. Merc rules halted trading for a second time when the near-month contract also fell. The drop in index futures coincided with a plunge in the stock market in response to recent economic news and fears of rising conflict in the Middle East.

Covenant House says evidence confirms misconduct

NEW YORK (AP) — Covenant House said Friday private investigators found extensive evidence confirming sexual misconduct by the Rev. Bruce Ritter, founder of the nation's largest shelter system for young runaways.

Investigators hired by the Covenant House board also questioned some financial dealings by Ritter, the charismatic priest who resigned in February as the organization's president.

But there was "no evidence of any other material financial impropriety or mismanagement," including the handling of hundreds of millions of dollars in contributions, the investigators said in a detailed report.

The Covenant House board said it was issuing the 51-page report in hopes of restoring the credibility of the church-affiliated organization.

"Clearly, mistakes were made. Some corrective measures have been taken and others will be put in place," said an investigation oversight committee.

On Ritter, as well, the board was contrite.

"The report confirms some things that make us very sad," said its chairman, Ralph A. Pfeiffer Jr. "We acknowledge his and our mistakes, and we pledge that we will do all in our power to insure that they will not be repeated."

Covenant House receives more than 90 percent of its income from donors, many of whom have responded in the past to mass-mailed appeals written by Ritter. When the scandal broke and he stepped down, donations suffered.

A restructured board of directors cut the annual budget from $86 million to $72 million and laid off 111 of 420 employees. Some programs were cut back, although Covenant House continues to shelter 25,000 youths annually in 17 dormitories in the United States, Canada and Latin America.

The allegations arose in December when Kevin Lee Kite, 26, a drifter from Texas, accused Ritter of luring him into a sexual relationship. Two other men made similar allegations, and charges of financial improprieties involving loans and contracts followed.

Ritter's Roman Catholic order, the Franciscans, investigated the sex charges and ordered him to leave Covenant House. The Manhattan district attorney investigated and found no criminality.

The Covenant House founder has denied wrongdoing. The private investigators, Kroll Associates, said Ritter refused to speak with them and Franciscan leaders agreed to discuss only limited areas.

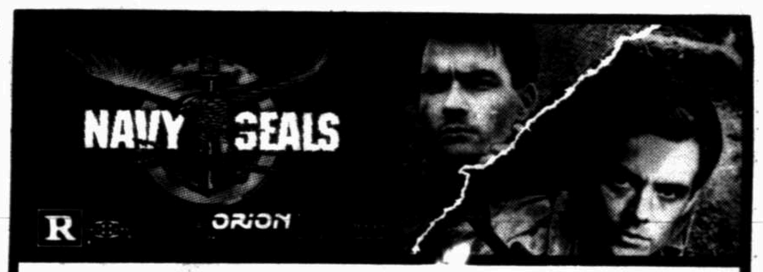

Kroll, whose investigation was led by former Police Commissioner Robert McGuire, said that if Ritter had not resigned he would have to be fired by the board.

Kroll said it interviewed five former residents who said they had sex with Ritter. One resident and four Covenant House workers reported sexual advances by Ritter, and another resident acknowledged having shared a bed with Ritter, but denied sexual activity.

Four other residents were reported to have had sex with Ritter, Kroll said, but one was dead and three could not be located.

"The cumulative evidence ... that Father Ritter engaged in sexual activities with certain residents and made sexual advances toward certain members of the faith community is extensive," the report said.

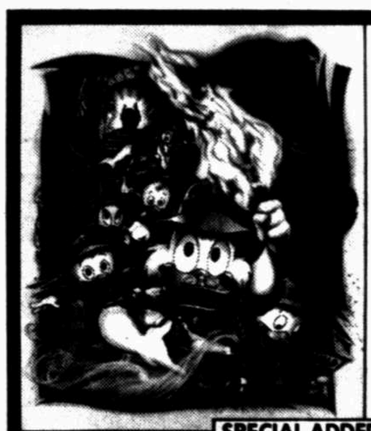

Ritter, 63, founded Covenant House in 1968. He reportedly is living in New Jersey and considering leaving the Franciscan order.

Second, we sell only late model cars. And because we display the price on the window of each car, there's none of the usual haggling over price.

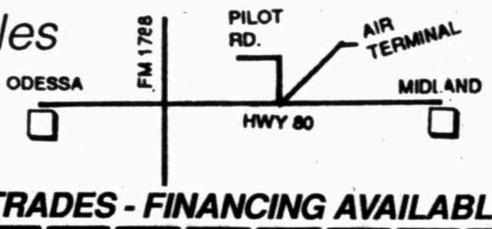

Third, we have a wide variety of cars to choose from. National currently has cars available to sell that were manufactured by General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Nissan, Honda and Toyota.

Additionally as an added convenience National accepts trade-ins and can arrange financing. *Some Restrictions Apply
