Old Faithful complex gutted in 'firestorm'

Associated Press

Two Montana men who refused to evacuate before flames engulfed their home were missing today, and a "firestorm" gutted 17 buildings near Old Faithful geyser in Yellowstone National Park, authorities said.

Wildfires also forced the evacuations of 50 homes in the Shoshone National Forest in Wyoming east of Yellowstone and two dozen homes and a Boy Scout camp near Boulder and Golden, Colo. Fire crews continued to protect two Montana towns near Yellowstone from a huge fire, and battled blazes in Idaho, California, Oregon, Washington and Utah.

In northwest Montana along the North Fork of the Flathead River, one man and possibly his brother may have been caught in the onrushing flames after refusing an evacuation order, said Pam Virdell, a Flathead National Forest spokeswoman.

A man shouted for firefighters to help get his brother out of a cabin, which then erupted in flames, said Dan Black, editor of the Kalispell Inter Lake newspaper, who was at the scene. The man then ran into the forest toward another dwelling moments before fire broke out there, Black said.

Florida rains keep residents away

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — More rain along Florida's coast today kept at least 1,000 evacuated residents wondering when they could return to homes swamped by a four-day torrent that swept away a motorist and left a toddler drowned.

"We have to make sure everything is OK before we let people back in," Red Cross spokeswoman Rita Dralus said. "There are water mocassins and there are gators because ponds have overflowed, and electricity and water definitely don't mix."

The National Guard was placed on alert as residents bailed out from the 9 to 15 inches of rain that has fallen along the state's central Gulf Coast since Sunday, turning streets into rivers and spilling sewage into living rooms.

It is the area's heaviest rain in a decade, surpassing the deluge that accompanied Hurricane Elena in 1985.

"We just cannot handle all that rain," said George Parks, Manatee County's drainage superintendant. "It's the worst we've had in the 11 years I've been here."

Robert Porter, a disptacher for the Midland Police Department, uses a computer-aided dispatch system that was activated two years ago. The city wants to purchase a similar system for fire and emergency medical services as part of a $5.5 million public safety bond issue. The package goes to voters Sept. 17.

Public safety funds part of package

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a four-part series on the upcoming city bond election, slated for Sept. 17. This installment deals with the public safety issue.

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

The Midland Police Department took a small step into the future when it installed a computer-aided dispatch system two years ago.

Small, because despite the enormous advantages of CAD, a computer is only as good as the signal system it's tied into — namely repeater stations built in the late 1960s.

In short, CAD was a square peg in a round hole — a mismatch of technologies.

BONDS
Part 4

That's just one of the problems that Midland safety forces face as they prepare to enter the 1990s; and why police, fire and emergency medical services claim they are in immediate need of state-of-the-art equipment.

Because the city's budget is hardly equipped to address those concerns, officials here are seeking voter approval on a $4.3 million bond issue for public safety.

The latter is part of a four-part $17.4 million package that Midlanders will have an opportunity to vote on separately Sept. 17.

City Manager Fred Poe says approval of the single issue will cost an owner of a valuated $100,000 home 75 cents a month or $8.90 cents a year.

Public safety forces are seeking $2.5 million for a digital trunking communications system; $1.15 million for additional electronic equipment, including a CAD system for the fire department as well as a systems consultant; $1 million ($700,000 of which is a carryover from a pervious bond election that must be reallocated) for a centralized communication center; and $350,000 for the purchase of mobile data terminals.

Police Chief Richard Czech says digital trunking is a technology that's long overdue — particularly in Midland, where competing on-air pollution has created an impossible situation for his force.

"This city runs on a band of 150 megahertz," says Czech. "Often times there's a lot of garbage (from other communities) that bleed over into our frequency."

Parker held at Leavenworth

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The convicted kidnapper of June Gilkerson is serving two consecutive life sentences at the high-security Leavenworth, Kan., Penitentiary, a government spokeswoman confirmed Wednesday.

Kenneth Wayne Parker arrived at the Kansas facility September 3, U.S. Bureau of Prisons spokeswoman Kathryn Johnson said.

Meanwhile, Parker's convicted accomplice in the kidnapping plot, 22-year-old David Alderink, has settled into his job at a prison in the hilly farming community of Midway, 20 miles northwest of Huntsville in east Texas, according to the chief spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections.

Parker left the federal section of the city jail August 16, two months to the day after he was convicted of conspiracy to kidnap Ms. Gilkerson and 25-year-old Susan Lindsay, according to Midland deputy U.S. Marshal Gail Boggs.

He was transferred to a holding facility at El Reno, Okla., and was held there until his transfer to Leavenworth, 25 miles north of Kansas City, Ms. Johnson said.

Leavenworth, which was opened in 1906 as the nation's first federal prison, is one of three penitentiaries designated as a security level "5." The facilities are rated from a security level of "1," such as the prison camp in Big Spring, to the only level "6" facility, the U.S. Penitentiary in Marion, Ill.

Jeff Duncan, executive assistant to the warden at Leavenworth, said Parker is immersed in a week-long "admissions and orientation" process at the facility, which he described as "walled and maximum-security."

"We have some single, and some double cells," Duncan said.

Rocket motors destroyed

KARNACK, Texas (AP) — Workers at the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant today prepared to destroy two rocket motors from Pershing nuclear missiles in static firings to be observed by Vice President George Bush and a team of Soviet inspectors.

"This is the first elimination of such U.S. missiles under the INF treaty anywhere, worldwide," said Susan Franklin, Washington spokeswoman for the On-site Inspection Agency, established to implement inspection provisions of the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty between the two superpowers.

Hundreds of people, including the Soviet team and reporters, were gathering at the plant for the motor eliminations.

A small group of Michael Dukakis presidential supporters and other protesters, one of whom carried a sign saying Texans for a Sane Demilitarization, lined the drive to the plant's front gate.

Weather permitting, workers planned a 50-second burn of one Pershing II motor at 10 a.m. CDT, followed 15 minutes later by a 40-second burning of a lighter Pershing 1A, said Longhorn spokeswoman Joann Roberts.

Bush, who was to arrive at Gregg County Airport at 8:30 a.m., planned brief remarks at the 8,500-acre plant at 10:30 a.m., said Mark Sanders, the vice president's spokesman in Austin.

The vice president also was scheduled to attend an afternoon media reception in Tyler, about 60 miles west of the plant, along with a "Tyler Welcomes the Next President" rally.

"The Soviets watch the motors' static firing to eliminate the rocket propellant in the motor," said Dave Harris of Karnack, a civilian employee with the U.S. Army's Redstone Arsenal.

Motors, in the static firings, are bolted into a concrete and steel structure, ignited and allowed to burn up all their fuel.

"We must then physically disable the rocket motor so the motor casing could not be reloaded and reused again," he said. "We're going to do that in a car crusher, squash them in a car crusher."

The Soviets arrived Wednesday afternoon at Gregg County Airport. The treaty allows up to 20 such observers at each elimination inspection.

"There's a cast of thousands behind this thing, including many ambassadors, with people from New York to Russia," said Ms. Roberts. "It's exciting."

Ms. Franklin said that about nine more rocket motors were scheduled to be eliminated at Longhorn in the following week.

Officials also will destroy Pershings and their launchers at Pueblo Depot Activity near Pueblo, Colo.

More Pershing launchers will be destroyed at Equipment Maintenance Center at Hausen, Frankfort, West Germany.

The treaty terms also provide for destruction of ground-launched cruise missiles, or GLCMs, and their launchers at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base near Tucson, Ariz., said Ms. Franklin.

Pilot knew 'we're not gonna make it'

DALLAS (AP) — The captain of Delta Flight 1141 exclaimed "We're not gonna make it!" 11 seconds before the jet crashed on takeoff, the cockpit recording shows.

The pilots discovered their aircraft was in serious trouble about 21 seconds before the plane struck the ground, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The plane crashed at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport Aug. 31 while taking off for Salt Lake City. The Boeing 727 exploded and broke apart upon impact, killing 13 of the 108 people on board. The pilots were injured but survived.

The partial transcript, obtained Wednesday by the newspaper, shows that approximately nine seconds after what appeared to be a normal takeoff, a cockpit alarm indicated the jet was not able to gather enough speed to stay aloft.

A second later, Capt. Larry Davis said, "Something's wrong. Ohhh." One of the final entries on the transcript appears to be a scream.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators said last week that the cockpit recording indicates there were two compressor stalls, or disruptions of air flow, one each in two of the engines. The transcript, however, notes five possible compressor stalls within six seconds, a set of two followed within seconds by three more, the newspaper reported.

After the first two stalls were noted, co-pilot Carey Kirkland said, "Engine failure."

Just after the three possible stalls were noted, someone in the cockpit said, "We got an engine failure."

Three seconds later, Davis said, "We're not gunna make it."

At that point, someone attempted to communicate something to the tower, saying only, "Eleven-forty one's ..."

Davis then exclaimed, "Full power!"

Kirkland followed with unintelligible words just a fraction of a second before what is believed to be the sound of impact is heard on the recording.

The recording then ends with a possible scream.

NTSB investigators say they have not been able to determine whether any compressor stalls actually occurred. The engines are to be tested at the Pratt & Whitney manufacturing plant in Hartford, Conn.

One NTSB investigator, who asked not to be named, told the newspaper it is possible for engines to experience several quick, successive stalls.

Lee Dickinson Jr., a member of the NTSB board, said, "I don't know that we can even identify that there were indeed stalls."

The significance of the stalls, and more importantly what caused them, is the key element in the investigation into the cause of the crash.

NTSB spokesman Mike Benson declined in Washington to comment on the partial transcript obtained by the newspaper.

It will be months before investigators pinpoint the cause of the crash, but two primary suspects have emerged. They are wing flaps, desinged to give the plane lift, and engine problems during the flight.

However, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that friends of Davis said he told them the plane suffered an engine failure.

One friend, M.J. Hamilton, quoted the pilot as saying: "I had an engine failure. I put the throttle forward and it wouldn't fly."

The transcript reveals that flight engineer Steven Judd and co-pilot Kirkland went through a standard preparation checklist.

Kirkland told Judd that the flaps were extended in the correct position for normal takeoff during the checklist less than a minute before the plane received permission for takeoff.

Davis is recuperating in hospital from back and head injuries suffered in the crash and has not spoken with NTSB investigators yet. He underwent surgery Tuesday to repair compound fractures in his cheekbone and has been fitted with a back brace for a broken vertebra.

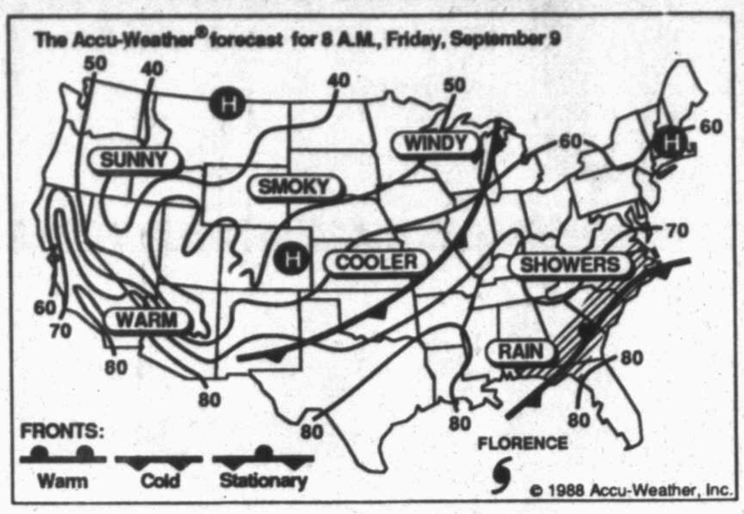
WEATHER SUMMARY



Clear skies anticipated

Midlanders can expect clear skies tonight, with the low in the lower 60s and winds out of the south at 5-15 m.p.h., according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Friday will be sunny, with the high in the mid-90s and southeast winds at 5-15 m.p.h.

Wednesday's high of 90 was nine degrees lower than the record high of 99 set for that date in 1930. The overnight low of 58 was three degrees warmer than the record low of 55 set for this date in 1957.

STATE

Slightly warmer temperatrues are forecast across Texas through Friday, but forecasts don't indicate a return to the triple-digit readings recorded across the state last month.

Skies will remain clear statewide.

Lows tonight will be in the 50s in the mountains of Southwest Texas and in the Panhandle and in the 60s over the rest of the state.

Highs Friday will be mostly in the 90s except along the coast where readings will be in the 80s.

A trough of low pressure extended early today from the northwest corner of the Panhandle to the southeast corner of New Mexico and a ridge of high pressure was located along the coast.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s, ranging from the 50s in portions of West Texas to the low to mid 70s along the coast in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 50 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 75 at Abilene.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 61 at Amarillo, 67 at Wichita Falls, 69 at Fort Worth, 67 at Waco, 68 at Austin, 70 at San Antonio, 60 at Houston, 66 at Brownsville and San Angelo, 62 at Lubbock, 61 at Midland and 56 at El Paso.

NATION

Smoke from Western forest fires darkened skies over northern Wyoming and south central Montana today and showers fell in northeast Florida, but the weather was fair in much of the rest of the nation.

Skies were cloudy over the central Plains.

A low-temperature record for Sept. 7 was set before midnight Wednesday in Monroe, La., where it was 54 degrees, 5 degrees lower than the 1950 mark.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from the central Atlantic Coast to central Florida and sunny skies over the rest of the nation, with strong, gusty winds from the upper Mississippi Valley to the northern Rockies.

High temperatures were predicted in the 60s in North Dakota, the 70s from New England to New Jersey, the Applachians, the Ohio Valley, the Great Lakes, the northern Plains, the northern Rockies and Washington state; the 90s in the southern half of the Plains, and from southern Oregon to Nevada; near 110 degrees in the desert Southwest; and in the 80s around the rest of the country.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 39 degrees at Havre, Mont., to 89 degrees at Blythe, Calif.

BOND

And that, according to Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor, has created a dangerous situation, not just for officers, but for residents as well, who might find themselves in an emergency situation.

Trunked communication system

The City of Midland has proposed installation of a digital trunked communication system to allieviate overcrowded frequencies that now exist on the VHF-high band.

Faced with a growing police communications problem, the Federal Communication Commission opened the next available band at 800 megahertz, thus virtually eliminating competing frequencies by requiring five or more to be trunked.

Trunking is not new, according to Midland Police Sgt. Jim Reynolds. "The telephone company has been using it for years to handle the load of telephone calls that they are required to process."

Instead of a "dedicated" line, each user group in a trunk system of frequencies is assigned a computerized number which is automatically routed to the first available opening in the spectrum, thus keeping the lines essentially clean.

Trunking also would eliminate a second problem — dead spots. According to police, Midland is full of spots where patrols are unable to communicate with dispatchers until their units are in certain positions. "It (trunking) would clear up about 99 percent of our problem," says Czech.

Currently, the department makes use of a three-repeater system. One — located at Midland International Airport — was recently purchased. But according to Reynolds, the remaining "tube-type stations" are down much of the time.

"We have systems (for the city) like this all over town in some stage of disrepair," says Reynolds. Under the proposed plan, Midland would purchase five new repeaters to service the entire city — not just police — to make more efficient use of the spectrum.

Computer aid for fire services

Unlike its counterpart, the fire department still relies chiefly on archaic paper, pencils, and filing — a dispatch/management system, that Chief James Roberts says fits snuggly into the 1950s.

Under the proposed issue, the city would purchase a computer-aided dispatch system for the fire department, allowing it to inventory, track hazardous chemicals and medical histories; design pre-fire plans for apartments and buildings as well as file reports, schedule work hours and training sessions.

In addition to fire, the police CAD system — installed in 1986 — already is encountering problems. According to Czech, the department's mainframe is no longer capable of doing the job.

"We're 99 percent full at all times. It's a dated machine that's constantly bogging down on us. Right now its been down for four days," said Czech two weeks ago.

Because of the amount of information that is processed, the department must purge a lot of its data on the weekend — usually a straight 21-hour period.

Part of the bond issue would address that problem, according to McGregor, who said the city already is pursuing bids on the project, contingent on voter passage.

If public safety is approved, the CAD systems of police and fire would be combined into a centralized dispatch network that would include emergency medical services, 911 response and, possibly, the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

Centralized center

To make the most of its CAD systems and to improve its response time as well as develop an emergency management team for the first time, the City of Midland has proposed acquisition of a 10,000 square foot building to house its dispatching units.

According to McGregor, the city wants to spend $1 million on an existing structure and hire an architectural and computer consultant to pull the units together under one roof.

The building, also would open new room for the police department, which no longer can operate from its East Texas Avenue facility.

Czech says the current department building is too small, overcrowded and full of mechanical nightmares from faulty plumbing to electrical maladies.

"Not a week goes by that something doesn't happen...the city owns what, 12 to 15 buildings? We (the department) take up 50 percent of their maintenance budget," he said.

On previous occasions, Czech has complained that the station must contend with seeping sewage waste from the upstairs jail — sewage that has been known to run through the ceiling onto expensive computer equipment.

He's also cited working conditions, where detectives are crowded together in one interrogation room when rape victims have been brought in. "You just can't talk to victims when they're (detectives) all together like that," he said.

McGregor said once a suitable building is located, the city plans to house every computerized operation at the location. That would include data processing and finance.

"We've looked at a number of them already," said McGregor. "We just want to make it clear that we're not planning to build."

Under its five year plan, Czech previously estimated the department would need between 48,000 to 50,000 additional square feet. According to city officials, the department already is in immediate need of at least 6,000 square feet.

Terminal roads

As part of the final package, both police and fire departments are seeking portable data terminals that can be installed in patrol cars, fire trucks and emergency care vehicles.

Mobile Data Terminals would eliminate the need for on-air calls and give safety officers immediate information on everything from criminal backgrounds to on-site storage of hazardous chemicals.

MDTs operate much like a teleprompters used in television, but instead of scripts, safety officers can fetch and retrieve information from their vehicles, rather than maintain a crutch on dispatchers.

In the case of police, a given officer is on direct retrieval with the Department of Public Safety in Austin, allowing him to independently run spot checks on plates and licenses.

"What we've found is that use of these (terminals) has boosted arrests by 30 to 40 percent in other cities," said Czech. "For example, an officer can drive through a lot and run plates on stolen cars in a speedy manner."

For the fire department, Chief Roberts says the terminals will allow his crews to exchange information on building layout or retrieve information on a hazardous chemical spill scene from Chemtrac — a national clearinghouse.

"We'll no longer have to go to a book to determine how we'll handle it," says Roberts. "That information will be either available from Chemtrac or through our own (CAD) data base."

Roberts says the combination CAD/MDTs is a major plus for his department — a department that, up to now, has been dependent on pre-1960 radio equipment.

The chief also makes no bones about the fact that it has become more difficult to find spare parts.

In the case of one fire engine unit, Roberts pulled out a radio set still operating on vacuum tubes. "We're at the point right that if something isn't done, we won't be able to find spare parts."

Deputy City Manager McGregor says all the equipment being sought is "demonstrated technology" that's not being experimented with at the expense of taxpayers.

Added Roberts: "These tools would certainly help us."

PARKER

About 1,500 of the inmates at Leavenworth are in the maximum-security penitentiary, while another 400 are housed in an adjacent minimum security camp.

Nearly 500 staff members oversee the inmate population, Duncan said.

At Leavenworth, Parker, a 42-year-old native Midlander, will join the five percent of the estimated 43,000 inmates in the federal system who have been assigned to a security level "5" facility.

According to the Bureau of Prisons, the classifications are based on "an objective assessment of their propensity for involvement in serious rule infractions, especially violence and escape. A higher security level rating represents a greater risk of involvement in serious misconduct."

After a four-day trial, Parker on June 16 was convicted of two counts of conspiracy to commit kidnapping. One of the victims, Ms. Gilkerson, disappeared Nov. 8, 1986 and has never been located. The plot against Ms. Lindsay was abandoned by Parker and Alderink and she was not harmed, according to trial testimony.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton sentenced the former Vietnam veteran to two life terms, and he ordered they be served consecutively. According to attorneys, Parker will be 102 years old before he is eligible for parole.

Parker also joins the one percent of federal prisoners who are serving time for kidnapping convictions, and the 10 percent serving sentences over 10 years, according to the prisons bureau.

After his orientation is over, Parker will be assigned a job in one of the six prison factories, and may also be eligible for some type of vocational training, according to Duncan.

Parker will be allowed 24 hours of visits per month, according to the rules of the prison.

Tom Morgan, Parker's court-appointed attorney, said he was not surprised by the assignment.

"It is not a surprise," Morgan said. "And I will be in touch with him periodically. I very much look forward to the appeal and round two.

"The matter is far from over."

Morgan said he will also meet regularly with members of Parker's family to discuss the appeal.

The attorney said "it could've been worse" when asked about Leavenworth's tough security classification.

B.G. Johnson, the Midland police detective who led the investigation, said he was satisified with Parker's assignment.

"I think any of them will serve the purpose," Johnson said.

Wayne Speck, the assistant U.S. Attorney from San Antonio who prosecuted Parker in Midland federal court, declined comment on the assignment.

Alderink, who pleaded guilty Feburary 1 to aggravated kidnapping in exchange for a 20-year state prison sentence, was the prosecution's star witness in Parkers' trial. After he testified, he was transferred to the state prison Diagnostic Unit in Hunstville. From there, he was assigned to the Ferguson Unit in Midway, according to TDC spokesman Charlie Brown.

Formerly a facility for first-time offenders ages 17 to 21, the red-bricked Ferguson is one of the older units in the prison system and now houses "all types of offenders," Brown said.

Since the crime Alderink pleaded guilty to was aggravated, he will have to serve "a flat third" of the 20 years, or between six and seven years before he is eligible for "good time," which is credited for good behavior.

Alderink, a Michigan native, has a parole review scheduled for February 1994, but "that doesn't mean at all that he will get out then. They (Board of Pardons and Paroles) have to bring them up anyway," Brown said.

While he awaits his first hearing, Alderink has been assigned a job as an orderly, the spokesman said.

"He is assigned to do work around the cells, whatever the staff needs," Brown said.

Alderink is allowed two visits per month.

Although the two kidnappers are behind bars and investigators have said they believe Ms. Gilkerson was killed shortly after her abduction, the case remains open.

"It is still an active case, and we are still looking for her," Johnson said. "We are still hoping if anyone knows anything that they will contact us."

During the trial in federal court, Alderink testified he saw Parker bind Ms. Gilkerson on a northwest Midland County road and drive away with her. Johnson was asked if he would consider a visit to Leavenworth, to ask Parker if he could reveal what happened to the woman.

"He (Parker) will have someone assigned to speak for him, and I would have to contact the spokesman," Johnson said. "He would have to agree to talk to me. But as long as the appeals are pending I wouldn't be able to."

If and when Parker's appeals are denied, which may take years, the detective said a meeting with him would "be discussed.

"We would consider that very strongly."

FIRES

Forest officials could not confirm whether anybody perished because "things were happening so fast," Virdell said.

Although federal officials have called this the worst fire season in 30 years, no direct fatalities have been attributed to the blazes, which have charred 3.65 million acres, an area larger than Connecticut.

Last month, a helicopter involved in battling a blaze in Wyoming's Bighorn National Forest crashed after losing power, killing a passenger, a Bureau of Land Management technician.

The northwest Montana blaze, discovered Tuesday, expanded to an estimated 7,500 acres by early today and moved into Glacier National Park, where it burned a ranger station complex and numerous cabins.

Four hikers near the park's Lower Quartz Lake were rescued by helicopter Wednesday afternoon after flames cut off their escape route and they drove their vehicle into the lake to save it.

More than 100 people who live in the area were evacuated, and two park campgrounds were evacuated.

At Yellowstone, tourist Ken Miller of Denver was one of more than 100 visitors who left the Old Faithful area in a convoy led by rangers Wednesday night as embers from the nearby 165,000-acre North Fork fire descended.

"I've been coming up here a long time," said Miller. "Thank God I've got a lot of pictures of the way the park was, because I'll never see it like that again."

The fire is one of 13 major blazes covering more than 1 million acres in and around the 2.2 million-acre park.

Earlier, flames destroyed two cabins in the complex's southern end, while embers carried by the winds ignited 14 guest cabins and a utility shed at the main part of the complex, said Fire Commander Denny Bungarz.

But because the fire exhausted fuel as it passed through, officials did not expect to see similar damaging flames again.

About 200 firefighters protected other structures, including the historic Old Faithful Inn, where a sprinkler line on the roof was activated.

Overnight visitors to Old Faithful were asked to leave Wednesday morning. It was the first-ever evacuation of the most popular tourist attraction at the 116-year-old park in Wyoming's northwest corner.

But park officials admitted day visitors until late Wednesday afternoon, when stiff winds whipped up a blaze on the area's southern border and blew embers into the complex, igniting roofs of buildings.

"When that firestorm went through there, we had to move our people out of there," said Bungarz. "When you can feel the heat inside your car, it's time to move."

East of Yellowstone, Shoshone forest officials evacuated at least 50 ranches and summer homes.

FLOODS

The rain fell from a near-stationary cold front hovering across the central Florida peninsula. The National Weather Service predicted that 4 more inches could fall today before the front slowly moved northeast.

Showers and thunderstorms were also predicted today for southern Georgia and coastal South Carolina, but no other flood warnings were issued.

Almost all low-lying areas were flooded in 10 Tampa Bay-area counties. Most rivers were either flooded or forecast to reach flood stage.

In Tampa, divers were still searching for James Edward Mercer, 45, who disappeared in floodwaters after a car stalled in a drainage ditch and began to float. Three passengers were rescued by passersby.

Witnesses saw Mercer surface in the murky water, his arms flailing, but he was towed under by the strong current before rescuers could reach him, said Tampa police spokesman Steve Cole.

"I feel certain that he is deceased, but we haven't found him," police Lt. Mary Williams said late Wednesday.

In New Port Richey, 2-year-old Matthew Rehm wandered behind his home and drowned in a rain-swelled canal, authorities said.

At least 1,000 people in the region evacuated their homes, with ome staying in shelters and others taking refuge in motels or with friends in less-soaked areas.

The 350 people spending Wednesday night in Manatee County's three Red Cross shelters were told they would not be allowed to return home until emergency officials declared the flood-damaged areas safe.

Nursing assistant Guy Hardin, 32, grabbed a blanket and a toothbrush and spent Wednesday night in a Red Cross shelter at Manatee Community College after his Bradenton duplex was flooded out.

Bush, Dukakis stress concern for Israel

Associated Press

Presidential rivals George Bush and Michael Dukakis stressed their concern for Israel while sharply criticizing each other, with Bush saying Dukakis waffles on creation of a Palestinian state and Dukakis accusing the Republican ticket of supporting the sale of arms to Israel's foes.

Both candidates made their cases Wednesday as advocates of Israel while addressing the convention in Baltimore of B'nai B'rith, the Jewish service organization.

Bush went from his appearance to view the destruction today of Pershing II missile engines in Marshall, Texas, as part of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range nuclear weapons.

"Strength works better than weakness if you want to get both peace and security," Bush told the B'nai B'rith audience.

Dukakis planned today to address the same national American Legion convention in Louisville that on Wednesday heard Bush deride him for trying to "cancel and delay our strategic modernization with what amounts to an undeclared unilateral freeze."

Bush told B'nai B'rith that he opposes creation of a Palestinian state but believes Palestinians "must be involved at every step" in the peace negotiations with Israel.

The Republican vice president charged Dukakis lacks a clear stand on creation of a Palestinian state, saying: "Anyone who has trouble making up his mind on this issue, or who proposes to leave it open, just doesn't understand the dangers to Israel and to the United States; just doesn't understand the very real threats that continue to exist."

Dukakis, answering that he would "never recognize a unilateral declaration of a Palestinian state or government in exile," went on to criticize Bush and running mate Dan Quayle for supporting arms sales to Arab countries that are potential threats to Israel.

"We will not sell weapons that would threaten the security of Israel to any nation," the Democratic nominee said, after reading off a list of weapons sales to Arab countries with the support of Bush and Quayle.

Bush received a boost in the latest ABC News-Washington Post poll, which showed the Republican candidate ahead of Dukakis 51 percent to 43 percent.

The survey of 1,104 likely voters was conducted Aug. 31 to Sept. 6 and had a margin of error of 3.5 points.

The Post cautioned that the results may be unusual because many people were away from their homes during the Labor Day holiday. Dukakis spokesman Dayton Duncan said the candidate always believed it would be a tight race.

In an apparent effort to defuse Democratic claims that he is insensitive to the concerns of working people, Bush told Knight-Ridder newspapers that he will soon propose boosting the minimum wage.

The administration opposes an increase, and campaign sources said Bush was expected to link his proposal with a call for a training wage, below the regular minimum wage, to cover new hires and teen-agers.

Top Bush aides were linked in published and broadcast reports to lobbying activity for the Bahamas and Prime Minister Lynden Pindling, who has been under investigation in this country because of alleged drug activities.

The reports centered on a 20-page contract proposal in which the lobbying firm of Black, Manafort & Stone said it could create a "back-channel relationship" with the administration and counter criticism by the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Campaign manager Lee Atwater, senior adviser Charles Black and scheduler Paul J. Manafort were named in the proposal. The firm charged $800,000 for the lobbying activity from April 1985 to September 1986.

Bush at the time was head of a drug-enforcement effort that included investigations of Pindling. Bush spokesman Mark Goodin characterized the contract language as "salesman's hyperbole."

In another report, the weekly Washington Jewish Week reported today that the 88-member ethnic coalition created by Bush last month includes a "small minority of apparent extremists" such as anti-Semites and people who believe the Holocaust never occurred.

Goodin told the newspaper the campaign will look into the allegations and take any necessary action.

Dukakis was receiving an expected endorsement today from the 1.9 million-member National Education Association.

Quayle, tending to Senate duties Wednesday, was damned with faint praise by Senate minority leader and former presidential candidate Bob Dole.

Dole said he thought Quayle was "becoming an asset" to the Republican ticket, and he put the stress on "becoming."

For Bush, Wednesday, Sept. 7, 1988, may not exactly live in infamy but is at least a likely entry in the political blunder hall of fame.

Explaining how he wrongly told the American Legion crowd that Sept. 7 was the anniversary of the 1941 Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor that brought America into World War II, instead of the Dec. 7 date Franklin Roosevelt declared would live in infamy, Bush said:

"I wanted to work Pearl Harbor in and just got carried away."

Dole: Quayle 'becoming' asset to GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Dan Quayle got a warm welcome from his colleagues his first day back on the job since becoming George Bush's running mate, but the message from Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole was mixed at best.

Dole praised Quayle as "a rising young star in our party" at a Capitol reception Wednesday, but later he stopped short of calling Quayle an asset to the Republican ticket when pressed by reporters.

"I think he's becoming an asset," Dole said. Did that mean the senator thought Quayle had achieved that status yet, he was asked. "Becoming," Dole repeated.

Quayle, who travels to Chicago today for a speech on defense and foreign policy issues, told his GOP colleagues, "I can't wait to get back out there" on the campaign trail. There were cheers from the senators as Quayle spoke, some of them calling out, "Hear, Hear!"

"No matter what happens in this election, the people who know me best and the people I am closest to are the people right here in this room," Quayle said. "I hope you never forget. Believe me, I'll never forget."

Quayle said he would return to Washington for key Senate votes as he was needed.

"I know you've been on a roller coaster ride," Dole said as he welcomed the Indiana senator back after a summer recess in which Quayle became the party's vice presidential nominee.

Since his nomination, Quayle has been dogged by controversies over his military service, personal life and academic record, and some in his own party have expressed skepticism about whether the 41-year-old senator should be on the ticket.

Dole, a onetime presidential hopeful who was on George Bush's short list of vice presidential prospects, has himself expressed reservations about Quayle. Dole said recently that people of his generation might have problems with allegations that Quayle used his wealthy family's influence to get into the National Guard during the Vietnam War.

Senate to force vote on textile import curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is preparing to act on proposed new limits on textile, apparel and shoe imports, giving little heed to complaints that it is reverting to protectionism.

"The textile and apparel industries will be extinct in a few years unless the flooding of our markets is stopped," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said Wednesday as the Senate voted 68-29 to force action on the long-standing issue.

The Senate voted to limit debate, giving opponents of the proposed restrictions no more than 30 hours to express their objections. As a result, action on the bill is expected by Friday at the latest.

Senate allies of the textile and apparel industries were in command of the debate at all times. Critics, who say U.S. manufacturers are exaggerating their problems to win special treatment, were reduced to giving their adversaries a futile, daylong tongue-lashing.

"You are being absolutely shameless," declared Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who opposes the measure.

Under the bill, this year's textile and apparel imports would be frozen at 1987 levels and growth would be limited to 1 percent annually in succeeding years. Non-rubber footwear imports would be capped at 1987 levels.

The president would be authorized to compensate countries hurt by the restrictions by negotiating tariff cuts.

Textile-state lawmakers and their free-trade critics butted heads over just how much the industry is earning.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., told the Senate that before-taxes earnings of U.S. textile companies zoomed 26 percent last year. That brought Thurmond rushing to the floor with figures suggesting a 12 percent drop in profits thus far this year.

Prospects for the bill remain clouded despite the Senate's action. The House has passed a differing version and it is unclear whether compromise can be reached in the month remaining before lawmakers adjourn. A veto also is a possibility.

President Reagan vetoed a similar bill in 1985 and the administration is suggesting that the same fate may await the latest version.

A wave of Asian textile and apparel imports jolted U.S. manufacturers in the early 1980s and they have been seeking congressional import curbs ever since.

Textile and apparel companies as well as their allies in the shoe industry and a variety of labor unions say such restrictions are needed to salvage jobs in an industry whose very existence they claim is threatened by foreign competition.

Humphrey's remarks about working mother stirs criticism

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Republican Sen. Gordon Humphrey has triggered a controversy in a GOP congressional race by saying that a woman candidate should not be running because she has two small children.

About two dozen supporters of Betty Tamposi denounced Humphrey outside the Statehouse on Wednesday and characterized his remarks, made in an interview in Wednesday's The Union Leader of Manchester, as silly, insulting and irresponsible.

Mrs. Tamposi, a millionaire officer in her father's real estate company, is married and has two daughters, ages 22 months and 4. They are cared for by a nanny.

State Sen. George Freese said Humphrey "should be apologizing to Betty Tamposi for such remarks. They are below-the-belt comments and a personal attack on Betty's credibility and excellent reputation."

"I don't retract a word of it," Humphrey said. "It's self-evident that you cannot work 12 to 14 hours a day in Congress and have time left over for a child."

"It's difficult enough being a father of a young child and a member of Congress, as I am," said Humphrey, who has a 3-year-old son. "For the mother, who in our society is the primary care giver, working 10-12 hours a day makes it impossible to give the nurturing the child would need."

Death penalty may be added to drug bill

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is considering dozens of amendments to a $2 billion anti-drug bill, including a proposal for an "ultimate weapon" against drug killers — the death penalty.

Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., predicted overwhelming approval today of his capital punishment amendment.

"The mood among the public and the House" hasn't changed much since the chamber voted 296-112 for a similar proposal he sponsored in 1986, he said.

Capital punishment, which Gekas referred to as the "ultimate weapon," never became part of a 1986 drug fighting bill because the Senate refused to go along.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, is in support of the Gekas amendment.

"More than 37,000 people died last year because of drug dealing, so it's high time Congress took steps to make the punishment fit the crime," Smith said Wednesday afternoon.

The representative believes it is "essential" that Congress approve the parts of the bill that will improve drug abuse prevention education efforts for youth and provide treatment of addicts against the "ravages of narcotics.

"But for those programs to work, we must first hold the users of illegal drugs accountable for their actions," Smith maintained.

"As Congress begins debate on the comprehensive drug fighting bill, it appears clear that we must tilt any balanced approach to combating drugs toward stiffer and stiffer enforcement measures...including the death penalty.

"We must make sure the punishment for the drug kingpin is sure, swift and certain," Midland's congressional representative said.

Prospects appear brighter for Gekas this time, because the Senate voted 65-29 last June to allow the death penalty for drug dealers and "kingpins."

In all, three dozen amendments to the drug bill will be considered before the House completes the legislation, probably next week. The Senate will begin consideration soon of its own drug bill.

Controversial House amendments would: deny student loans and other federal benefits to convicted drug users; admit illegally seized evidence in court if police acted in "good faith" during a search; and withhold federal highway money from states that refuse to revoke or suspend drivers' licenses of convicted drug users.

As the House conducted a generally mild-mannered debate on the 375-page bill Wednesday, policemen-turned-lobbyists roamed through lawmakers' offices to present their views on a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchasers.

They were not all on the same side in debating this provision of the drug bill, which includes an optional background check on the purchaser during the week-long delay.

Rank-and-file officers supporting the waiting period are part of a coalition of law enforcement organizations and gun control groups. The coalition has set up shop in a House Judiciary Committee basement hearing room in the Rayburn Office Building across the street from the Capitol.

Other policemen are lobbying for the National Rifle Association, which opposes the waiting period and virtually any form of gun control that affects the general population.

The Gekas proposal on the death penalty would permit — but not require — a judge to impose the death sentence on anyone convicted of intentionally killing someone during a drug felony.

Most federal death penalty provisions are not enforceable because, unlike some state laws, they were never brought into compliance with Supreme Court guidelines on capital punishment.

Heckling degrades political functions

For both Republican presidential nominee George Bush and Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis, Tuesday was one of "those days." It was not a day to be seeking the nation's highest political office.

Bush was booed by shipyard workers in Portland, Ore. as he touted the economic recovery of the last six years.

Meanwhile, Dukakis' speech to a crowd in Niles Township, Ill. was disrupted by anti-abortion activists who touched off shoving matches and fistfights with those there to hear the governor.

Heated debate is one thing, but fistfights and schoolyard name-calling are another thing altogether.

No one ever claimed that the political trail was an easy one or without difficulty, but no politician running for president of the United States should be subjected to so much humiliation or decadence. After all, Bush and Dukakis have climbed to the top of their political parties and that's no mean accomplishment.

Americans take their politics seriously, which is good. But while attaching the proper importance to the quest for this office, it's easy to lose perspective of how to approach the political contenders. Each has a "game plan" for the nation and believes his way is right for the country.

Those attending candidate appearances may or may not agree with what a candidate proposes for the future and, because of the high emotions generated by a political campaign, may lose sight of the fact that this is, after all, only a political contest, and forget to conduct themselves in proper fashion.

That's obviously what happened in both of Tuesday's outings. But what was accomplished? Neither of the candidates was moved from his political course. Yet the fact that the quality of the campaigns was diminished will linger with this political race in the months to come.

Involvement in politics is important and political campaigns can be enhanced with active participation of a constructive nature by people from all walks of life. Problems at all levels of society can be revealed, discussed and, hopefully, eventually addressed through the governmental process. But fistfights and name-calling should be reserved for barroom brawls — not political functions.

With less of what happened Tuesday and more frank discussion of the needs of the nation, the political process and the electorate both will be better off.

Communications vital

The passage of the "Public Safety" bond issue on Sept. 17 is vital to the future of Midland. Our police and fire departments are trying to service our community with communications equipment that is not only outdated, but quite frequently is inoperative. As citizens, we sometimes take for granted how important this equipment is — not only to our officers and fire fighters, but to those of us who may fall victim to an emergency or crisis.

Recently, a mock disaster was staged at Midland International Airport in an effort to test and evaluate the response capabilities of our emergency personnel. This exercise pointed out the limited communications capabilities and the resulting problems that were experienced by our emergency forces responding.

Some of our neighboring communities have not been as fortunate as Midland. It has not been that long since a tornado destroyed Saragosa and another one left a path of destruction through Sweetwater. The recent crash of Delta flight 1141 reminds me of how vulnerable we are to emergencies and disasters. I wonder how many Boeing 727's fly in and out of our airport each day?

We all hope that we never see a disaster like this in Midland. However, it would be foolish on our part, as responsible citizens, if we didn't take steps to be prepared — just in case.

I know that our police officers' and firefighters' lives (as well as the citizens whom they deal with daily) depend on their ability to communicate with each other. Let's show our support and our concern for their safety. Please vote "For" Proposition #4 (Public Safety) on Sept. 16.

Radio system needed

I would like to speak for several Midland residents in regard to the bond election for the communications system. I have lived in Midland all my life, and I can not believe anyone would vote against this issue. The people who vote against this issue are the ones who are not aware of the communications problems the city has.

I know for a fact that we have several patrol cars that are equipped with radios that are 15-20 years old. The portable radios that people see the officers carrying on their gunbelts will not transmit 80-90% of the time inside a building or residence. If the officer is in need of assistance, the officer prays the radio works.

I strongly believe that if the communications system is not passed and the city has to continue to rely on the outdated system, we are going to endanger a resident or police officer's life. The economy is bad and if anyone has felt the economic crunch, the police department has. It's bad that the city has to raise the taxes to renew the communications system, but we are talking about improvement of the protection of life and property.

I am a member of the S.W.A.T. team of the Midland Police Department. The S.W.A.T. has handled several drug raids, felony arrests, and barricaded subjects. The S.W.A.T. team has not yet handled a situation in which there were no communications problems. Every day I put on a police uniform and endanger my life to protect lives and property in this city, but one of these days I may not be able to do my job because of the old communications system.

Pickup times unrealistic

The attitude which the mayor and city council have set forth in regard to passenger pickup and delivery time allotted at the Midland International Airport is in my estimation totally unrealistic. It is not possible for an individual traveling alone to park his automobile near the baggage pickup area and retrieve his baggage in the allotted time of five minutes. Two members of my family have received tickets in the last month while trying to pick up their baggage in the allotted time.

The period of time between aircraft arrival and when the baggage appears on the carousel is quite inconsistent, therefore compounding the problem of baggage retrieval. Furthermore, the officers assigned to the airport seem to be a bit overzealous in administering their duties and delight in issuing tickets.

Midland International Airport users do not deserve this kind of treatment.

Farmers gouge buyers

As they share a $4 billion dollar handout from the U.S. government, the "drought-stricken" farmers gouge food prices.

Again the tax-paying consumers are the recipients of a "double whammy!"

Humane society finances questioned

WASHINGTON — Protecting animals from abuse is the urgent business of the Humane Society of the United States. An internal dispute over a financial scandal is equally pressing business.

Jack Anderson

In the past nine months, the board of directors of the national Humane Society in Washington has hired two law firms to conduct independent investigations of its finances. Both probes revealed that the two top officers of the nonprofit charity receive significant compensation in addition to their salaries. One of those investigations concluded that some of the perqs going to the two men were not approved by the full board.

The law firm of Harmon and Weiss concluded that "excessive compensation payments" which were not authorized by the Humane Society's full board, "threaten the status of (the society) as a charity under the federal tax law and appear to constitute a wasting of its assets." The second report, by attorney Jacob A. Stein agreed that mistakes were made, but said they were not criminal and did not threaten the society's tax-free status.

Our associate, Jim Lynch, reviewed the reports of the two law firms.

The Humane Society's IRS forms for 1987 indicated that President John Hoyt received $95,000 and Vice President-Treasurer Paul Irwin received $80,000 from the organization for their services. But those IRS filings failed to include other benefits to Hoyt and Irwin.

Over the past four years, Hoyt and Irwin have also received money from two affiliates of the Humane Society — the National Association for the Advancement of Humane Education and the National Humane Education Center — without the knowledge of the Humane Society's full board.

Since 1985, the NHEC, which is controlled by the Humane Society, has paid Hoyt $55,000 and Irwin $38,000. The NAAHE, a division of the Humane Society, paid Irwin $10,000 over the past two years.

Those payments, according to the investigations, involved transfers between various bank accounts by Irwin, the treasurer.

Stein reported, "The reason for channeling of the payments through the two corporations is that the salaries of Mr. Hoyt and Mr. Irwin were to be concealed from other organizations. The problem with it all is that it was concealed from the full board of (the Humane Society.)"

When the payments appeared on the 1987 IRS Form 990, they were not credited to Hoyt or Irwin, but rather called "payments to annuitants." The board never approved them.

The Humane Society also pays $12,822 a year in insurance premiums for Hoyt and $9,635 for Irwin. The insurance premiums and other benefits boosted Hoyt's compensation to $139,622 and Irwin's to $114,325 last year, according to the Stein report.

But those figures do not include two other financial transactions that we reported on in an earlier column. In May 1987, the Humane Society bought Hoyt's house for $310,000, and now allows him to live there rent-free. The Humane Society's IRS filing said the rent was worth $600 a month, but the Harmon and Weiss report placed the rental value between $2,500 and $3,000 a month.

Irwin wrote himself $85,000 in checks in October 1987 to finance a lease and improvements on property along the Maine coast. The Harmon report concluded that since the Humane Society never received any interest in the property, the $85,000 should have been listed in the society's tax filings as part of Irwin's compensation.

In communications to their board and the investigating law firms, Hoyt and Irwin have maintained that they did nothing wrong. Neither responded to our repeated requests for interviews.

HIGH COST OF WAR — If the American military is recruited to take a major role in the war on drugs, expect a multi-billion-dollar price tag. The Pentagon estimates it will need $6.2 billion a year for the proper planes and ships to intercept drug smugglers and $14 billion to buy 64 AWACs (Airborne Warning and Control System) aircraft. The Pentagon also says the shift to an aggressive war on drugs would take 90 infantry battalions, 50 helicopter companies, 54,000 troops, 1,280 planes and 160 cruisers and destroyers.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Last month the National Geographic Society took Americans to task for their ignorance of the map. Not enough of us could find the Persian Gulf. Now, the Centers for Disease Control are upset because only 6 percent of adults know what their cholesterol level is. "Not only should you know your number, but you should know what it means," a CDC cholesterol specialist scolded. Our ancestors were content to simply be alive. Then somebody decided we had to memorize the number of calories in a Big Mac. Soon healthy people were expected to know their resting heart rates and their blood pressure. Now, cholesterol numbers. Life is beginning to look like a final exam.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 8, the 252nd day of 1988. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1892, an early version of "The Pledge of Allegiance" appeared in "The Youth's Companion." The original pledge went: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

On this date:

In 1565, a Spanish expedition established the first permanent European settlement in North America at what is now St. Augustine, Fla.

In 1664, the Dutch surrendered New Amsterdam to the British, who renamed it New York.

In 1900, Galveston, Texas, was struck by a hurricane that killed about 6,000 people.

In 1920, New York-to-San Francisco air mail service was inaugurated.

In 1921, Margaret Gorman of Washington was crowned the first Miss America in Atlantic City, N. J.

In 1930, the comic strip "Blondie" first appeared.

Dukakis keeps talking as his lead withers

WASHINGTON — Michael Dukakis' difficulties derive from the fact that he is saying little and is saying it gratingly. Suddenly Democrats are looking at him squiggle-eyed, wondering what they have hitched their wagon to. What worries seasoned Democrats is how quickly Dukakis' lead was lost, and under such a light assault.

George F. Will

Peter Hart's polling tells the story:

Among Southern whites, Bush's lead has gone from 14 points in July to 31 in early September. If that holds, Dukakis will get few Southern electoral votes. As long as it holds, Bush will not need to spend much time or money in the South — time and money being two great and scarce resources of any candidate.

Among Catholics, independents and white-collar and sales people, Dukakis' leads have become Bush leads. In California, Dukakis' lead has shrunk to three points. That means Dukakis is behind because on Election Day in California Republicans usually run four to six points better than the last poll. Republicans there are better at getting out their voters, including absentee voters. New Jersey is another state which, like California, has gone Republican ever since the 1964 anti-Goldwater landslide, and Dukakis is behind there by 10 points.

Rarely if ever has anyone done as much with as little as Bush did in August. He gave a good speech at the convention, but that is the least you should expect from a man in his third decade in public life, and who had weeks to rehearse what was written for him by an accomplished writer. Then Bush beat Dukakis about the head and shoulders with the Pledge of Allegiance and furloughs for killers. Then Bush pledged devotion to the future purity of Boston harbor, and — poof! — Dukakis' 17-point lead was gone.

Actually, the polls were moving against Dukakis before the Republican National Convention. The bounce Dukakis got from his convention was remarkably short-lived. Why? In the last half of the primary season Dukakis was, in the eyes of many Democratic voters, less Dukakis than Mr. Not Jesse Jackson. Furthermore, Dukakis' manner is not wearing well.

The staccato cadences of his clipped sentences suggest irritation. He seems impatient to rush to the end of whatever he is saying because he considers the subject too obvious to detain any clever person. His tone is at once annoyed and complacent, that of a self-satisfied scold.

His manner seems related to a frame of mind, and fundamental ideas. If, he says, the Reagan administration is a rotting fish, and if its foreign policy is not just mistaken but "criminal," then the case for Dukakis is as self-evident as Dukakis' tone suggests.

Since the Republican convention the campaign has resembled (in the words of a Democratic consultant) a tennis match in which only one side gets to serve. Now we will see if Dukakis can break Bush's service. Dukakis cannot do so by harping on Iran-contra or Noriega. Any votes that will be won on those issues have long since been won. And if the election comes down to a question of foreign policy, Bush will win.

Assuming Dukakis can change the subject to domestic issues, then the race will be close, at least in terms of popular votes. The last two elections between non-incumbents, 1960 and 1968, were close. Elections following landslides (e.g., 1960, 1968, 1976) usually are.

However, the Electoral College probably will function as it should, exaggerating the decisiveness of the national decision. Such constructive distortion is the work of the state-by-state winner-take-all custom. (It is not a constitutional principle and Maine does not abide by it.) In 1960, Kennedy beat Nixon in the popular vote 49.72 percent to 49.55, but 303 to 219 in electoral votes. In 1968, Nixon beat Humphrey 43.42 to 42.92, but won the electoral vote 301 to 191 (with George Wallace winning some). In 1976, Carter beat Ford 50.1 to 48, but won the electoral vote 297 to 240.

Dukakis will be buried beneath an electoral-vote landslide unless he puts a populist and nationalist edge of passion on his economic message. If he does, he will be accused (he already has been, a bit) of borrowing the themes of a former rival, Richard Gephardt, who would have been harder for Bush to handle. But that accusation is more bearable than defeat, and borrowed passions are better than Dukakis' sole passion so far, his admiration of his own competence.

ART BUCHWALD

Long-awaited visitor is genuinely electrifying

I was playing tennis when I was called off the court by my wife. She said excitedly over the phone, "The electrician is coming in an hour."

"He's been saying that for a month. Why should we believe him now?"

"Because he initiated the call. I know he'll be here. It is a feeling I have."

Art Buchwald

When I arrived at the house, my wife was dusting the furniture and fixing the flowers. "You better shower," she told me, "and put on a shirt and tie. I don't want him to think we can't afford him."

"But he's only an electrician," I protested.

"He's more than that. He is the key to our entire fuse box problem. Something has been blowing every electric appliance in this house, and I'm not going to take it anymore."

I showered and put on my best dress shirt and Italian silk tie, plus the blue blazer that I save for British royalty and American workmen.

My wife was chilling a bottle of wine. "I hope he likes Pouilly Fuisse."

"He wouldn't be in the wall socket business if he didn't," I said.

"I don't know why we couldn't get another electrician when he didn't show up last month."

"You can't find an electrician because they're a dying breed. Most of them won't even let you leave a message on their telephone answering machines." She put powder on her nose. "I hope he likes us."

"What difference does it make if he likes us or not?" I said.

"If he doesn't like us he'll walk out the door and put a curse on our fuse box forever. Now, as soon as he comes in, take him into the living room and make him comfortable. I've put pictures of the children out on all the tables. I want him to know we believe in the family just in case he's a Republican. Now, above all, do not discuss politics with him. I don't want to lose an electrician over the prayer in school issue."

"What do you discuss with an electrician?" I asked.

"Benjamin Franklin. After all, he was the father of electricity. Then there is Thomas Edison. Electricians think Edison is the cat's meow."

"I could talk to him about the stock market," I said. "I understand anyone who is a licensed electrician automatically becomes a member of the Fortune 500."

My wife said, "I'm so nervous. It's so long since I met a man who worked with pliers."

"Be your natural self," I told her. "An electrician puts on his pants one leg at a time, just like a plumber."

"I'd feel so much better if I had cleaned the cellar."

"You're worrying too much. I wouldn't be surprised if after he knocks off the bottle of Pouilly Fuisse he goes right down, tears the fuse box off the wall and finds the short in no time."

"I only hope you're right. I guess we should consider it an honor that he would even stop at our house," she said. "Do you think we should call the Larrimores? They have been waiting for an electrician for four years."

"That would be rubbing it in. Besides I'm not sure they would know how to behave in front of a licensed electrician. For all we know they would fall to their knees and make damn fools of themselves."

Space shuttle astronauts rehearse launch countdown

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts completed a practice countdown aboard their spaceship today, the last major test before they lift off in as little as three weeks on the first shuttle mission in more than 2½ years.

The space agency plans next Wednesday to announce a launch date after assessing the countdown test and other factors.

"Everything appears to have gone quite well," said launch control commentator Hugh Harris as the test concluded at 10:34 a.m., 34 minutes behind schedule because of minor communications problems between the craft and control center.

The countdown clock was halted at six seconds before the mock liftoff to simulate an engine problem and give the launch team practice in making the vehicle safe and restarting the count.

Harris said that had this been an actual launch attempt, the effort would have been delayed because winds of about 19 mph were too high. Because it was a practice, launch director Bob Sieck gave the go-ahead to complete the count.

Commander Rick Hauck and his four crewmates, wearing new partial pressure suits, switched dials, tested communications, monitored systems and followed all procedures scheduled during the final two hours of an actual countdown.

"It all looks clean; it all looks good," Hauck said after an inspection of Discovery on Tuesday. "We're going to be ready to fly."

The other crewmen are pilot Dick Covey and mission specialists George Nelson, Mike Lounge and Dave Hilmers.

On most previous shuttle launches, the astronauts wore flight coveralls. The partial pressure suits, to be worn on launch and re-entry, would be necessary in case of trouble during an emergency landing attempt and the crew had to bail out by blowing an explosive hatch, sliding down a telescoping pole and parachuting to Earth.

The emergency escape system has been added since the Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger explosion that killed the seven-member crew and grounded the shuttle fleet. It would not help in a Challenger-type accident in which the vehicle blew apart 73 seconds after liftoff.

The practice countdown concludes three days of training here for the astronauts, after which they return to their base at the Johnson Space Center in Houston to await a launch day announcement next week.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is aiming for a liftoff in the last week in September, but has deferred setting a firm date until Sept. 14, following a two-day flight readiness review here.

Hauck said he and Lounge would represent the crew at the review.

American experts say Soviet space mission called 'pure propaganda'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A space mission that endangered two cosmonauts was hastily organized for "pure propaganda" reasons and the crewmen were lucky to escape with their lives, according to an American expert on the Soviet space program.

James Oberg said Soyuz TM-5, with an Afghan crewman aboard, was rushed into space a year ahead of schedule to assure that it flew before Soviet troops completed withdrawal from Afghanistan.

"They asked for this trouble by throwing this mission together for pure propaganda," said Oberg, a space engineer and author of several books on the Soviet space program.

The craft landed safely Wednesday after a tense 24 hours in which malfunctions threatened to leave the cosmonauts marooned in orbit.

In a telephone interview, Oberg said he believes the cosmonauts "were seconds away from death" when a de-orbit rocket engine shut down prematurely left the Soyuz TM-5 in an orbit 155 miles above the Earth. Had the rocket fired for only a minute longer, he said, the craft could have fallen through the atmosphere and burned.

Nicholas Johnson, another U.S. space expert, agreed that the Soyuz mission was organized quickly, but he doubts the rush was related to the malfunction.

"It (the mission) was accelerated and there is every reason to believe it was politically motivated," said Johnson, who works for Teledyne Brown engineering in Colorado Springs, Colo., a major space contractor. "But that had absolutely no impact on the problem that occurred on the spacecraft."

Soyuz TM-5, commanded by veteran cosmonaut Vladimir Lyakhov and with Abdul Ahad Mohmand of Afghanistan on board, undocked from the Mir space station early Tuesday on what was expected to be a three-hour flight back to Earth. But the craft's braking rocket failed to fire on time and then, seven minutes later, fired automatically for three seconds.

Two orbits later, the rocket fired again, but shut down after about 60 seconds. This left the craft in a 155-mile orbit.

A third attempt was successful and the Soyuz landed safely and on target in the Soviet province of Kazakhstan.

Oberg said that based on Soviet public discussions and on tracking data collected by the U.S. Space Command in Colorado Springs, he believes the problem was caused by some type of computer "software glitch."

"The lighting at the de-orbit burn was not standard, and had never been followed in the four previous TM flights," said Oberg. "The TM is a completely re-engineered spacecraft with new computers, new software, new guidance."

He said the Soyuz TM aligns itself for the braking rocket firing by taking readings with a guidance sensor on the Earth's horizon. On the four earlier flights, these readings were taken as the Soyuz TM craft were approaching sunrise. For Soyuz TM-5, said Oberg, the readings were taken after sunset, in the darkness.

Oberg said he believes the "fault detection" system in the computer was "falsely rejecting the data" from the sensor.

"The computer disbelieved the data," he said. In the first attempt, the machine failed to fire the rocket until it received acceptable data. This came seven minutes too late, and the cosmonauts manually turned off the rocket after three seconds. Two orbits later, the computer turned the rocket on and it fired for about 60 seconds, Oberg said, before it again automatically halted the rocket engine.

"The cutoff of that burn was lucky for them," he said. "It was a life-saving accident."

Johnson disagreed with Oberg's assessment.

"I give the Soviets credit enough to program the computer in such a manner that it would not shut down" and leave the craft in "a hazardous position," Johnson said.

But Oberg said that "all of the Soviet statements are consistent with this scenario."

NATION IN BRIEF

Couple sues hospital for getting wrong baby

BALTIMORE (AP) — A couple have charged in a lawsuit that a Florida hospital exchanged their healthy baby for a congenitally ill one a decade ago to facilitate an adoption.

Ernest and Regina I. Twigg said blood tests and sophisticated tissuetesting at a Johns Hopkins University immunogenetics laboratory in Baltimore prove that the child they raised for nearly 10 years was not theirs.

The child, Ariena Twigg, died of a congenital heart illness in August.

The Twiggs on Wednesday filed a $100 million suit against Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula, Fla., three physicians and a nurse, accusing them of fraud and negligence.

The suit charges that the defendants swapped ID bracelets and altered hospital records to exchange the babies.

In papers filed in U.S. District Court in Tampa, Fla., the couple alleges that hospital records show their daughter was born healthy in 1978 with O-positive blood. But before leaving the hospital, Mrs. Twiggs said the child was diagnosed as having a severe heart defect that proved fatal.

Skipper warned of airliner

WASHINGTON (AP) — The skipper of the USS Vincennes was warned that a plane approaching the ship July 3 might be a commercial airliner, but he ordered the ship's missiles fired in the mistaken belief it was an Iranian F-14, Navy investigators told Congress today.

The warning was called out by one of the officers in the confusion of the combat center on the Vincennes, the investigators said. Capt. Will C. Rogers waved his hand in acknowledgement of the warning.

But other factors, most of them human errors by crew members made under stress, led Rogers to erroneously conclude that the plane approaching his ship was an Iranian military jet that had just taken off from a military-civilian airfield at Bandar Abbas.

Iran Air Flight 655, which had flown out of the same airfield, was shot down by two missiles from the Vincennes in the Strait of Hormuz, killing all 292 persons aboard.

Rear Adm. William M. Fogarty, head of the Navy investigating team, said his probe had turned up a number of mistakes by the Vincennes crew.

Crash kills two, injures 12

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — A van carrying a group of Mexicans from Tijuana to Los Angeles overturned and burst into flames after being struck by a truck, leaving two dead and 12 others injured, authorities said.

The crash occurred Wednesday on Interstate 5 nearly 20 miles north of San Diego.

"The van was apparently moving very slowly and the truck forced the van into the guard rail," said California Highway Patrol spokeswoman Katie Nielsen.

The dead and injured were aboard the van, she said.

Lotto winner picked numbers from newspaper

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A 63-year-old real estate agent who "always needs money" randomly picked numbers from the front page of a newspaper to beat the 14 million-to-1 odds for Florida's Lotto, winning a U.S. record $55 million.

Sheelah Ryan, 63, said Wednesday her winning six-number combination — 3, 5, 19, 20, 27 and 35 — was drawn from the first six numbers she saw in The Orlando Sentinel last week. She then bought her ticket near her home in central Florida's Winter Springs.

Twice earlier, Ms. Ryan said she had $4 winners in Florida's 8-month-old lottery. Since then, she bought five tickets each week but was stunned when she watched Saturday's drawing on television and realized she was rich.

"I just kept saying 'Oh, my God!'" she told a room packed with journalists as she was introduced at the Florida Lottery Department offices.

Her first call was to her lawyer. "She told me not to leave the house," Ms. Ryan said, calling Wednesday a day of firsts.

Sheelah Ryan

"Today I had my first plane ride. It is not that I'm afraid. I never had a reason to fly before," she said. "This is my first press conference. And this is the first time I ever won $55 million."

The prize was the largest single lottery jackpot in U.S. history. The odds of winning were estimated by lottery officials at 14 million to 1.

Previously, the largest single jackpot was Pennsylvania's $46 million that went to Donald R. Woomer Sr. and Linda K. Despot, a couple from Hollidaysburg, Pa., last October. Two individual ticket-buyers divided a $51.4 million California lottery jackpot in June.

Publicity from Florida's jackpot spurred a buying frenzy before Saturday night's drawing here and in Illinois and New York, lottery officials in those states said.

Saturday night's prizes in New York and Illinois totaled $44 million, bringing the night's take for the three states to nearly $100 million.

The winner of the New York lottery's second largest prize, $23 million, was a 29-year-old truck driver who also presented his ticket Wednesday, then announced his retirement, kissed his wife and forecast a rosy future.

"Right now we're just going to stick with the simple things," said Anthony Valentino of Port Chester. "Maybe a house, a couple of cars. Put money away for my son. Maybe another baby. That's about it."

In Illinois, four ticket-buyers split a $21 million jackpot. As of Wednesday afternoon, only one of the four had come forward.

Florida's new winner said she didn't know if she'd keep her job or what she would buy when the state next week hands over the first installment of $2,767,361 — minus 20 percent that goes to the Internal Revenue Service. She will receive 19 other slightly smaller payments.

"I've always been middle class and the middle class always needs money," said the New York native, who moved to Florida in 1975.

"I can buy an awful lot of things now," said Ms. Ryan, who is single, has no children but has a brother and nephews in New York. "I'm overwhelmed."

Before Ms. Ryan claimed her prize, dozens of people claimed they had the winning ticket.

Affinity From Thomasville

A simple, straight-forward style for the contemporary bedroom.

Scandinavian settlers in America brought with them an appreciation for subtlety in the design of their furniture as well as function as an art form. Smooth, straight lines reign where heavy ornamentation once ruled. Thomasville celebrates the merging of Scandinavian and Amerian influences in the reation of Affinity, a bedroom and occasional collection.

Affinity presents deep texture of red oak solids and knotty oak veneers, hand-rubbed to a soft patina with a speial finish called "Flax," a rich honey tone. Fingertip pulls are hidden beneath the handsome molding that frames each door and drawer, maintaining the integrity of the straight lines.

Bring Affinity into your home and discover for yourself the Scandinavian appreciation for true simplicity.

Texas State Teachers Association Vice President Ollie Besteiro at a press conference Wednesday said the public is pleased with the job local educators are doing.

TSTA official says teachers get high marks

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A Texas teachers' union official told area teachers Wednesday to fight for a hand in their district's decision-making processes and to keep their chins up.

Ollie Besteiro, vice president of the 95,000 member Texas State Teachers Association, swept through Midland-Odessa with a message of inspiration and the results of a public poll on their profession.

"Walk tall and teach proudly, because people here believe you are doing a very good job and that you are caring, well-informed and hard working and deserve a pay raise," Ms. Besteiro said Wednesday.

The statement was based on a TSTA poll conducted last month among 1,000 adults, of whom 65 percent of the persons polled in the Midland-Odessa area thought teachers do an "excellent" or "good" job.

When queried on whether teachers here deserve a pay raise, 78 percent responded positively, according to the poll.

Teachers in Midland-Odessa received pay raises this past summer, but still are lacking in an area Ms. Besteiro believes may be more important than money.

Almost 79 percent of the people polled locally said teachers should have a say in the educational policies made by the district.

Dubbed the "missing ingredient" in the educational system today, the TSTA vice president said school boards "have no input from the person delivering the program.

"Teachers have no say. Standing up for three minutes before the school board is not what we call input," Ms. Besteiro said.

Midland's and Odessa's TSTA representative said teachers locally have more influence with school boards than teachers in smaller, surrounding towns.

Added Alma Marshall, the local TSTA representative: "Teacher morale in Midland-Odessa is better this year than in the last two years."

Factors contributing to the upsurge in morale include the pay raises the Midland and Ector county school districts gave teachers this year and the construction of new elementary facilities in both cities.

Ms. Bestiero said teachers often find themselves the scapegoat for "all the ills of society."

How can that be true, she asked rhetorically, if teachers have no say in policy implementation?

Furthermore, teachers and parents "must be equal" in their efforts to keep students in educational and emotional check, she said.

Sheriff's department's grounded chopper to be replaced

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Delivery of a U.S. government surplus helicopter means Sheriff Gary Painter's burglary surveillance program will soon be airborne.

The sheriff's department is getting the helicopter to replace one that was destroyed last spring in a cattle roundup, an aide to U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Wednesday.

The General Services Administration is expected to sign over title to the TH-55 helicopter and another grounded aircraft for spare parts in the next few weeks, Larry Neal, the senator's spokesman, said.

"My understanding is that it's an old aircraft, one that is no longer manufactured," he said. 'It's been in storage for a long time."

Gramm said the helicopter will be available to Midland as long as it is used for crime prevention programs, surveillance and rescue operations.

The sheriff's department contacted Gramm in May seeking surplus federal helicopters to assist in its war against drugs in Midland County and along the West Texas/Mexico drug corridor.

Sheriff's deputies had operated a 1976 Hughes 269-C helicopter through the first three months of the year until the aircraft was grounded last spring.

The chopper, which was hovering about four feet over a mesquite field, went down after an angry cow charged the aircraft, hooked his horns in one of the skids causing it to waggle.

When the pilot lost control of the helicopter, a rotor blade hit the ground and the machine overturned coming to rest on its top. Painter said the $80,000 aircraft hasn't been used since.

The sheriff didn't expect the federal government to respond so quickly to his request for a new chopper.

"It's kind of a surprise to hear that we're getting one this fast," he said.

Painter's department recorded a 48 percent reduction in burglary offenses with the helicopter during the first quarter of the year as compared with the first three months of last year.

"When we had it up flying steady we saw a marked decline (in burglaries), he said. "Since we lost the other one we've noticed a slight increase. I think we lost the footing we had."

Odessa man acquitted of fraud

LOS LUNAS, N.M. (AP) — A Valencia County jury has acquitted an Odessa chiropractor accused of fraud charges linked to the 1983 failure of State Savings and Loan Association of Clovis.

The jury acquitted Joe "Doc" Boyd on Wednesday after seven hours of deliberations. The trial lasted three weeks and the defense presented no witnesses.

Boyd was charged with fraud, embezzlement, securities fraud and conspiracy in an indictment issued nearly five years ago.

Prosecutors alleged Boyd violated criminal laws by setting up a business that sold worthless vacation promissory notes to the savings and loan when it was financially strapped in early 1983. Prosecutors alleged $25,000 was embezzled by selling the notes.

The association was declared insolvent and placed into receivership by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board on Nov. 3, 1983.

Boyd was indicted in what authorities alleged was a scheme to take over the failing association and then fraudulently prop it up in order to milk it of assets far in excess of its worth.

The state Attorney General's Office originally sought criminal charges against Boyd and five other men stemming from the financial collapse of the association.

The case against three of the six defendants was dismissed in 1984. Charges against Boyd, Hollis Grissom and now-deceased W.W. "Doc" Taylor of Dallas were thrown out twice on legal technicalities but later reinstated.

Midlander Edward Rodriguez adds to the junkpile at the city's landfill, located about six miles east of Midland off the Garden City Highway. The City Council next Tuesday is expected to approve funds to expand the dump site.

Council expected to expand landfill

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Just plain rubbish.

That's what Midlanders deposit by the hundreds of tons each day at the city-operated landfill located off Garden City Highway.

In fact, so many tons of garbage are dumped here that city officials are expected to award a $300,000 excavation contract to expand this oasis of ruin by some 20 to 60 acres.

"We're estimating it will last us about three years," said City Manager Fred Poe, who indicated the city is eager to award the project to a private contractor.

That's because the city can't afford to replace two self-loading land scrapers at a cost of $230,000 each. One of the scrapers was damaged when a city operator accidentally overturned the machine off an emabankment in June.

Four months earlier, a second unit was put out of service when another operator attempted to grade over a fire that burned the engine, according to Public Works Director Fred Baker.

Both machines were scheduled to be replaced, but according to Baker, the city decided it was cheaper to farm out the excavation rather than come up with $500,000 to buy two new units.

Baker said a third scaper is still operational at the site and a backup unit for grading applications was rebuilt using parts from the remaining two scrapers.

When excavation work is completed, city officials estimate the fill will be expanded by some 330,000 cubic yards. The dump, which has been operational since 1985, has enough existing space to last four months.

Panel to decide if dogs should be destroyed

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A three-member animal control panel is expected to meet "early next week" to determine if two large dogs that attacked at 11-year-old boy and his 43-year-old father Sept. 2 are vicious and should be destroyed, says Dr. Henry Thom, director of the city's animal control program.

Thom said today, however, the panel may have difficulty identifying which two of six dogs owned by Dr. Albert F. Recio, 2740 Bainbridge Drive, were responsible for the attack that seriously injured Bob Peters and his son, Brian, 2741 Bainbridge Drive.

The head of the city animal control program said it is very difficult to tell the dogs apart and, due to the confusion surrounding the incident that occurred last Friday night and the fact the dogs apparently returned home after the attack, there appears to be some question as to which of the dogs left the Recio home and attacked the Peters boy and his father.

Thom said he has named Dr. Michael McCulloch, president of the local veterinarian association, and John Martin, president of the West Texas Kennel Club, to the animal control panel. Thom, who will head the panel, said he expects the group will meet early next week if Recio waves the required 10-day notification period.

In connection with the attack, Recio was being cited under city animal control ordinances for not having his animals vaccinated, registered for city licenses, violating the city leash law and keeping more animals than the four allowed under the law, Thom said.

Fred Belis, animal control shelter supervisor, said he and other animal control personnel seized six of eight dogs that were in the Recio house the night of the attack. Four of the dogs, he said, were Great Danes and two dogs that were cross bred between a bull mastiff and a Great Dane.

Belis described the dogs as "huge," each weighing about 150 pounds.

According to Odessa Police Sgt. Jon Hubbs, the Peters boy was playing near his home when one or two dogs apparently crashed through a plate-glass picture window in Recio's homeand attacked the 11 year old.

The boy tried to get away by climbing on top of the family car, but one dog apparently caught him and dragged him off the vehicle.

When the father heard screams and went to his son's aid, one of the dogs attacked the man, biting him on the left leg, Huff said.

The boy was bitten several times on the head, face and body. Both he and his father were taken to Medical Center Hospital for treatment.

The boy was released from the hospital Tuesday, but his father remained hospitalized this morning.

ED TODD

It's flattering being compared to hero or legend

Todd

Every now and then, compliments come with a whack.

The other day in an instance of levity in the Midland County Commissioners' Courtroom, olde Ed Todd, who occasionally beholds himself as the mystical Edwardo Todlinsky of legendary notoriety in Alpine country, turned into a little sideshow.

Midland County's premier clerk, Rosenelle Cherry, observed that the beardless Ed Todd in some aspects resembled Mark Twain.

Floyd Jarnagin, county auditor and somewhat of a sage who sometimes is persuaded to tell the commissioners how the cow eats the cabbage and is not bashful about volunteering his views on county affairs, considered that. He suggested the resemblance might be that of Dr. Red Duke, the not-so-country but folksy physician-surgeon who offers practical panaceas over the boob tube.

Then, a lawyer offered his two-bits on the propositions.

"I had rather he perform surgery on me than write a story about me," mused Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre.

Schorre, who is not unaware of the good and bad of press coverage, quickly added a disclaimer: "I'm joking."

Bill Harral, the county's flying consulting engineer who was gracing the jury's box, offered a tidbit on the Mark Twain aspect.

"Yes," Harral considered amid a smile, "but can he write like him?"

Well, that's just all right. I truly enjoyed the exchange. Who is not flattered to be identified in some fashion with a person or quality of some note or virtue? Something positive. A hero. A legend. A great talent.

Dr. Norman L. "Brownie" McNeil, former president of Sul Ross State University, a good friend of Lyndon and Lady Bird Johnson and quite a singer, folklorist and linguist, had graced me with the Edwardo Todlinsky name back in the early 1970s when I was on his payroll in trying to say a good word about the Alpine college and its environs.

And since then, I've grown attached to the pseudonym, which, in my mind's-eye, gives me a romantic twist. With a name like that, can I not do "things" forbidden by ordinary humans? I become more than I am, such as the womanizing Don Juan, which certainly escapes me. I am more likely to be pegged as a Don Quixote, who desperately tries to be a knightly hero but can't tell fact from fiction — a windmill from a giant or a herd of sheep from an army.

Meanwhile, while the world and I are discerning fact from fiction, all is well. No pitiful Sad Sacks here, my friends. And let us have none of this moaning the blues. Charge life and live. Hear! Hear!

Edwardo Todlinsky is a writer, so be it, for The Midland Reporter-Telegram.

U.S.S.R. may have lost craft bound for Mars

HOUSTON (AP) — The Soviet Union may have lost a multimillion-dollar unmanned space probe headed for Mars because control of the mission was switched from one center to another for political reasons, according to a published report.

The Houston Chronicle, in a copyright story today from Moscow, blames the loss of the Phobus I spacecraft on a computer-programming error.

"We have our fingers crossed," Mikhail Marov, described by the Chronicle as a top Soviet space scientist, said Wednesday.

The Soviets have not announced the problem although the loss of the Phobus became apparent Sept. 2, the newspaper said.

Marov said the computer-program error resulted when control of the launch was changed from one base to another in the Moscow suburb of Kalaningrad.

Two Soviet officials said the change of mission control was made for the benefit of politicians in Moscow who wanted to experience the launch from the mission-control room.

During the switch, a flight controller apparently inserted an erroneous computer program that left the craft unable to receive the radio control signal from Earth that controls proper deployment of its solar panels, the Chronicle said.

Officials quoted by the newspaper said the computer error was discovered when the solar panels were deployed in the wrong position and the satellite was unable to draw power from the sun.

The Chronicle said while the government has not acknowledged a problem, space scientists revealed details Wednesday during conversations at the Institute of Space Research of the Soviet Academy of Sciences in Moscow.

The $150 million Phobos I, which remains operating on a small battery, was launched July 7 and is one of two spacecraft aimed at the Martian moon Phobos. Phobos II, launched July 12, also is en route and is unaffected by the computer error.

The two unmanned satellites were planned to return vital scientific data to Earth and to gather information that may one day lead to the manned exploration of Mars.

U.S. space officials are lending the Deep Space Tracking Network and the expertise of Jet Propulsion Laboratory to assist in navigation and the collection of images and scientific data by the probes, the Chronicle said.

Ray Amorose, manager of the network, said the Soviets have told NASA they are having a problem communicating with Phobos I but have not requested help.

The two Soviet orbiters are scheduled to swoop within 160 feet of Phobos, a tiny, potato-shaped moon a mere 43 miles by 30 miles in size.

Patients use art to communicate feelings

By SCOTT REEDER

GALVESTON (AP) — The woman quickly begins to draw a picture of a house. The drawing reveals more than a door, windows and a chimney. It also reveals glimpses of the woman's innermost being.

Art therapy is a new form of treatment for psychiatric patients at St. Mary's Hospital. Art therapist Michelle Ellis said having patients draw and paint provides a new method for them to communicate their thoughts and feelings.

Art also is an excellent diagnostic tool to find different mental disorders, Ms. Ellis said.

People with schizophrenia, a mental disorder marked with bizarre and sometimes delusional behavior, tend to draw highly disorganized sketches that are rich in symbols, Ms. Ellis said.

For example, a schizophrenic might draw a picture of the sun in the shape of an eye or turn a simple window pane into a cross, she said.

The eye might symbolize the person's paranoia at being watched and the cross could be indicative of the person's extreme religious nature, Ms. Ellis said. A person who is depressed will tend to draw in only one color, Ms. Ellis said.

By monitoring a person's drawings, a therapist can track his or her progress in treatments, Ms. Ellis said. Under successful medication and counseling, a depressed person often begins drawing colorful pictures, she said.

In many ways, art is a less restrictive way for a therapist to communicate with a patient than talking, Ms. Ellis said. By drawing a picture, the patient is leaving solid evidence of his depression for both him and the therapist to discuss.

The main purpose of art therapy is to establish better communications between the therapist and the patient, Ms. Ellis said. Discussing a patient's art is a roundabout way of talking about many of the problems the person is facing, she said.

It is much easier for a patient to deny having a problem when he is just talking to a therapist about the problem, Ms. Ellis said.

"Art makes the feelings more concrete," she said.

Psychiatrists prescribe art therapy to patients as part of a total health program, she said. It is not an appropriate treatment for some patients, Ms. Ellis said.

Man convicted of attempted murder

From Staff Reports

A 24-year-old Midland man was sentenced to five years in state prison late Wednesday after a state district court jury found him guilty of attempted murder.

Jimmy Lee Reed on Wednesday was convicted of the March 6 shooting of Anthony L. Anderson of Midland, who was wounded at Washington Park.

Police said the shooting occurred after dozens of people gathered at the park. Reed, who testified in his own defense, told jurors he was "terrified" that he was going to be hurt "or killed" when he got out of his car at the park with a loaded handgun.

Reed said he fired the gun into the ground three times, and only later after he contacted police did he find out someone had been wounded in the shooting.

The defendant said he had several confrontations with a group of men who he said fired bullets at his car and threatened him. The shooting followed one of the confrontations, Reed told his attorney Tom Parker.

The jury, which began hearing evidence in the case on August 30 in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court, took about 90 minutes to find Reed guilty of attempted murder.

Man jailed on assault charges

From Staff Reports

A 22-year-old man remains in the county jail on attempted murder and aggravated sexual assault charges in connection with the July 31 attack of a 17-year-old youth, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said Wednesday.

Reinaldo Martinez, P.O. Box 303, Loving, N.M., was being held in lieu of $100,000 which was set by 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin.

According to Painter, Martinez had been wanted for the crime since officers pieced together what happened.

The sheriff said Martinez, the 17-year-old girl, and several people were riding around in a car when they drove to the south end of Cottonflat Road. After they stopped, Martinez allegedly hit another man with a tire tool and sexually assaulted the girl near the car.

"We tried to find him (Martinez), and got a warrant issued, but he had already left," Painter said.

Last week, Mexican authorities picked Martinez up and he was turned over to the El Paso County Sherifff's office before his return here, Painter said.

Stone Age people had healthy diets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — People of the Stone Age could teach modern man about good nutrition.

Dr. Dee Graham of Del Monte USA says prehistoric man consumed more fruits and vegetables and ate meat that contained less fat, all prescriptions for a healthy diet.

They also worked to obtain food, getting more exercise in the process. Americans today are encouraged to eat less fat, more fruits and vegetables and to get more exercise.

Wife sentenced in husband's murder

LIBERTY (AP) — Jurors deliberated about three hours before sentencing a woman to 25 years in prison for fatally shooting her husband while he slept.

Brenda Whitmire, 27, was sentenced late Tuesday for the March 29, 1987, murder of her husband, Jimmy Whitmire, 39, an oil field worker.

Witnesses testifying in the trial in State District Judge W.G. "Dub" Woods court said that Mrs. Whitmire, manager of a video rental store, had repeatedly talked of killing her husband. Her boss also said that she told him she had decided to kill her husband after lacing his food with cold medicine to make him drowsy.

Deputy Attorney General Steve Westheimer said he was unsure what effect the verdict would have on the prosecution of Grissom, the association's former president. Grisson's trial on a fraud charge is scheduled to begin Oct. 3.

"We'll evealute the remaining case in light of the jury's verdict," Westheimer said Wednesday.

Defense attorney Paul Kennedy of Albuquerque said Boyd was gratified but not surprised by the verdict.

"My client felt all along that it (the case) was strictly a business transaction that should never have been in the criminal courts," Kennedy said. "He feels justified by virtue of the jury's verdict."

PUC denies proposal to run new power line through Big Bend park

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission Wednesday denied a proposal to run a new power line through the desert north of the Big Bend National Park.

The three-member commission unanimously adopted a preliminary report by two of its hearings examiners that recommended the PUC turn down Rio Grande Electric Cooperative's plan to build a new transmission line from Alpine to Persimmon Gap.

The hearings examiners cited serious environmental, aesthetic and financial concerns in their report. The examiners also said electricity demand did not warrant a larger transmission line.

Ernest Casstevens, an Austin lawyer representing Rio Grande, said the co-op likely will ask the commission to reconsider its decision. He also did not rule out a possible appeal to state district court.

"The action by the commission was arbitrary and capricious," Casstevens said after the vote. "The line is overloaded now based on demand, so obviously something has to be done."

Claiming that the current 54-mile line won't meet projected power demand, the co-op wanted to spend $5.1 million to replace it. The co-op also said the line, built in 1953, had deteriorated so much that it was causing numerous power outages.

Rio Grande proposed using 92-foot-tall steel poles three times wider than the existing 45-foot-tall wooden ones. According to its proposal, the first 30 miles of the line would follow the existing route, but the final 24 miles would run along a new path through the desert.

The PUC hearings examiners cited numerous environmental problems the new line would cause. Their report also said the co-op's decision to stop regular maintenance on the line in 1980 is the main cause of the current service problems.

The report said the co-op's projected 4.4 percent annual growth in electrical demand was too high. It also said the new line would have a significant impact on the financial health of Rio Grande, which owes more than $30 million in loans.

Casstevens disputed the findings in the PUC report. He said the co-op had met all federal environmental regulations. He also said the co-op stopped maintaining the line in 1980 because its directors knew it would soon become obsolete.

"This line has got to be replaced because its capacity is being exceeded," Casstevens said.

Several environmentalists spoke in opposition to the proposed transmission line. Ken Kramer of the Sierra Club's Lone Star Chapter said Wednesday's hearing marked the first time his group had become involved in such a PUC proceeding.

"We are involved because we are appalled by the lack of environmental concern shown by the applicant in attempting to pursue this line," he said.

Commission Chairman Marta Greytok said one of her main concerns was that the co-op failed to maintain the existing power line during the last eight years.

Newly appointed Commissioner William Cassin said he reluctantly agreed with the decision to deny the new transmission line. "Something needs to be done very quickly to maintain reliable power out there," he said.

But Baker said the city decided to expand immediately rather than wait for rain and other inclement weather to set in.

Three contractors have reportedly bid on the project, but Poe said the city is interested in saving money and might look at someone willing to service the dump in between regular jobs.

In fact, the city sanitation fund boasted one of the largest percentage increases just prior to council raised taxes primarily because of the needed expansion.

City officials estimate landfill operation costs will run Midland about $840,000 during the next fiscal year, which includes the $300,000 for expansion.

Because of the amount of garbage generated, Baker said the city must expand the current 420-acre site every three years. "This seems to be the best workable time frame," he said.

The city's decision to expand the dump will not require additional pollution monitoring devices, despite new regulations established two weeks ago by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Baker said Midland already has eight ground water wells in place along the perimeter and conducts yearly two detailed chemical profiles of the area. In addition, the site reportedly is located in an area that has little if any groundwater to pollute.

De la Garza questions whether commission can cure border's ills

STATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Ron Coleman says a Southwest Border Regional Commission will give the nation's most economically depressed area the clout it needs in Congress to fight for its share of the federal dollar and end a "legacy of long-term neglect."

But another Texas congressman who also represents a stretch of U.S.-Mexico border is questioning the need for another commission to address the region's complex and myriad problems.

"We've had about five commissions and task forces...the Southwest Border Regional Commission, ambassador this, ambassador that...and the first thing they do is send an anthropologist to measure our heads. Sometimes it gets frustrating," Rep. Kika de la Garza testified Wednesday.

"We've got a peculiar situation on the border because of an accident of geography and history as it relates to economics," de la Garza told a House panel considering Coleman's bill to establish a commission patterned after the Appalachian Regional Commission of the 1960s.

Coleman's proposed commission would include state and federal officials representing Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California, who would review and approve applications to fund housing, health, water resources, vocational and technical education, and sewage treatment.

De la Garza argued the border's complex problems will persist as long as the United States is a magnet to Mexico's poor in search of a better life, and until the states fail to get tough on the developers of unincorporated communities called colonias who do not put in roads, running water or sewerage connections.

"Until the states provide the infrastructure for controlling the situation...we could dump all the money in the world and the situation would not be corrected," said de la Garza, who like Coleman represents a district dotted with colonias.

De la Garza said Mexico's cooperation would be vital to the plan's success, such as stopping the dumping of raw sewage into the Rio Grande and the creation of jobs in the country's interior that would stem migration to the United States.

And federal programs can and do put money into the region, de la Garza, a Mission Democrat and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, told the House Banking Committee's subcommittee on housing and community development.

But Coleman argued Mexico's problems were no reason not to try to improve conditions in colonias and to help the region's economic development, and questioned whether current programs were adequate.

"I tried to craft...something that was do-able in the United States," Coleman said, adding said. "I wanted to do the things we could affect....I want to use current programs in existence, but I want to know why they haven't helped, why they haven't worked. What's holding them back? We've got a good deal to address here."

UT enrollment up

AUSTIN (AP) — The fall enrollment at the University of Texas at Austin has been estimated at 49,500, which would be an all-time high, it was announced Wednesday, the second day of classes

Dr. Ronald Brown, vice president for student affairs, said the official enrollment will not be available until the 12th class day.

Last fall's enrollment was 47,743.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Follow through on an idea for a book or article, or get involved in something else creative. New public recognition could set off a series of events that will enrich you for years to come. Close relationships are more positive now and point you toward a better-balanced life. Good health depends on both following medical advice and using your head. Do not ignore warning signals.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Kansas politician Alf Landon, Cubs outfielder Jerry Mumphrey, film producer Joseph E. Levine, oddsmaker Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder, actors Cliff Robertson and Tom Wopat, singer Otis Redding, fried chicken king Colonel Harland Sanders, actor Topol.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put new ideas in motion and follow up next week. You get a long-overdue break. Delays may complicate travel plans, making you miss an appointment. Alert others to the possibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Too much of a good thing could have a negative effect on a relationship. A budding romance needs to be nurtured with affection and patience. Travel will change your outlook. Welcome new experiences.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Change your mind now and you will be complicating the lives of others. Make whatever arrangements are necessary to pay all your bills. Answer mail promptly or miss a golden opportunity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be carrying secrecy too far. Fill in parents on your weekend plans. Your love life features some minor irritations but is still rewarding. Stock options could bring you unusual returns.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good ideas flood your mind. Promote the ones that will produce money for you. Make a list before going shopping and stick to it. "Bargains" are no such thing if you do not need them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may have to spend some money whether you want to or not. New peace of mind is part of the picture. Old friends are there when you need them. Do not postpone a checkup.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The first step toward a lasting relationship is developing better communication between you and partner. Education is a top priority. Let children know what is at stake and they will do their best.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Count on parents to give you a helpful boost. Needed cash is on the way. Fresh air and more sleep is all you need to feel better. Give school a fair chance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It may be time to think about pulling up stakes and moving to a new location. Friendly forces help you in a money matter. A close relationship needs to be reassessed. Travel is favored.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An elegant gift will be prized by you. Additions to your wardrobe help build your self-confidence. You always seem to work harder than anyone else! You need rest, too. Put work aside tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A child needs a sponsor like you. Think about it. A change of scene lightens your mood. You feel greater enthusiasm for a new project. An inexpensive excursion will be lots of fun.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take care of a private matter quietly. If you need time off, ask for it. Cash a check quickly or it might bounce. Luck accompanies you to a sports event. Have fun!

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

It is the care paid to little things that sets apart the expert from the average player. This hand from a team-of-four event highlights what we mean.

Whether or not North should open the bidding is debatable. Regardless, the final contract would have been the same, and is unassailable. Note that North's jump to four spades as a passed hand is not preemptive, but shows a good hand.

At both tables West led the jack of hearts. One declarer won in dummy and led a trump. When East discarded a heart, declarer realized that he had two trump losers, so he had to hold his minor-suit losses to one trick. Since East rated to have length in the minors, declarer won the ace of spades, crossed to the ace of diamonds and tried the finesse. Unlucky.

He won the heart return, crossed to the ace of clubs and finessed the jack. More tough luck. Since he still had to give up two trump tricks, he went down one trick.

Sitting South at the other table was a very good player. He won the first heart trick in hand, crossed to the king of hearts and led a trump. When East failed to follow, declarer inserted the ten. West scored his jack, but found that he was endplayed in three suits. He chose to exit with a diamond. (No other return would have been better.) Declarer's ten won, and the king and ace were cashed. Ace of spades and another forced West back on lead, and he was again endplayed. A club would relieve declarer of a guess in that suit, and a red-suit return would allow declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a club from the other. Making four spades with an overtrick!

'You have the right to be free,' singer tells Budapest crowd at Amnesty concert

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Bruce Springsteen, Peter Gabriel, Sting and other top performers entertained 81,000 people in an eight-hour concert organized by Amnesty International that mixed music and politics.

"You have the right to be free," folk singer Tracy Chapman told the capacity crowd at Nep Stadium, many of whom came from across the Soviet bloc for Tuesday night's concert. "Tell the government to support your rights."

Gabriel

Gabriel, speaking in Hungarian he learned for the concert, urged Romania to respect the rights of ethnic Hungarians.

A song by Sting, "Set Them Free," dedicated to children in South African jails, was especially well received.

Springsteen, who played for nearly two hours, was joined by spectators in singing his opening number, "Born In The U.S.A."

The concert was the only Soviet bloc stop on the six-week global tour, and was unusual because it was sponsored by a Western human rights group. Western governments and organizations, including Amnesty International, have accused East bloc countries of rights violations.

Spectators included Soviet government spokesman Gennady Gerasimov and Janos Berecz, chief ideologist of the Hungarian Communist Party and a member of the ruling Politburo.

NEUMUENSTER, West Germany (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl presented American composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein with an award in recognition of his outstanding musical accomplishments.

Bernstein, who celebrated his 70th birthday last month, and the Vienna Philharmonic orchestra are the first recipients of the newly-created Johannes Brahms Prize, intended for musicians who spread appreciation and understanding for the 19th-century German composer's work.

"Hardly another artist of our time has managed to fill so many people with enthusiasm for music, to awaken curiosity about unfamiliar works and deepen understanding for the familiar," Kohl said of Bernstein while presenting the award Wednesday.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo turned into a crimefighter as he helped police capture a man who allegedly stole tokens from a subway station.

"It happened very, very suddenly," Cuomo said after Wednesday's excitement. "We joined the chase."

Cuomo

Cuomo was in Harlem on his way to a school to promote school construction legislation when he and two state troopers in his car spotted police officers chasing a man with a bag of tokens around his neck.

Cuomo said his driver, Trooper Mary Ellen Fitzpatrick, tried to cut the man off with the car. When he kept running, she and Cuomo hopped out and chased him.

Fitzpatrick, dressed in a business suit, kicked off her shoes and ran in her stockings.

"I maintain — she differs with me — that I beat her down the block," Cuomo joked.

The man ran into a store, where a police officer stopped him. He was charged with tampering, larceny and resisting arrest.

The man had been seen tampering with a turnstile at a subway station and collecting tokens from passengers, said transit police spokesman Al O'Leary.

Top British singer Sting, left, performs with Bruce Springsteen and Laszlo Foldes, leader of Hungary's "Hobo Blues Band," at Nep Stadium in Budapest, Hungary.

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Australian pop group INXS won five trophies at the fifth annual MTV Awards for its "Need You Tonight-Mediate" video, and Prince and the British group Squeeze won two each.

INXS won best video, best group video, best editing in a video and best breakthrough video for technical innovation. It also won a viewer's choice award, voted on by MTV audience during the week by calling a special telephone number.

Wednesday night's show with Arsenio Hall as host was broadcast live on MTV from the Universal Amphitheater and has been sold in syndication for rebroadcast on non-cable channels.

INXS, whose "Need You Tonight" video includes a rich overlay of images of the band performing, had the most nominations, eight, followed by five for former Beatle George Harrison, who was blanked.

Backstage, INXS lead singer Michael Hutchence said the group, which formed in Sydney in 1977, does not consider videos first when writing music.

Prince's clip of a concert performance of "U Got The Look" won best male video and best concert video. The purple master from Minnesota was in England and did not pick up his trophies.

Squeeze's "Hourglass" video won technical awards for best art direction and best special effects.

Suzanne Vega's "Luka," a song about child abuse, won best female video.

Los Lobos' "La Bamba," from the movie of that name about the short life of 1950s rock star Ritchie Valens, won best video from a movie.

Rock veterans Pink Floyd's "Learning to Fly" won best concept video. George Michael's "Father Figure" won best direction, while Sting's "We'll Be Together" won best cinematography.

Pop superstar Michael Jackson, whose "Thriller" and "Beat It" helped MTV take off when it started in 1983, was given a Video Vanguard award for career achievement.

The nominees for this year were selected from 644 videos broadcast on MTV from May 2, 1987, to April 1, 1988.

Car seized because woman bought pipes

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston-area woman thinks the U.S. Custom Service carried the "Zero Tolerance" program a bit too far when they seized her automobile at the border because a friend had purchased two 50-cent pipes on a shopping trip into Mexico.

"It's appalling," Teresa Miller, 27, a clerical worker at a suburban Pasadena law office, said Wednesday. "I'm an American citizen, and I should have rights. First off, they (the pipes) were not even mine."

Miller's 1985 Nissan Sentra was seized Sunday afternoon at the U.S. port of entry at Progreso after Miller and her friend, Valerie Cantrell, returned from Nuevo Progreso, Mexico.

Progreso is between Brownsville and McAllen.

Ms. Cantrell, 23, who also does clerical work at the law office, said the onyx pipes were among "several knickknacks" that she purchased during the one-day trip to the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Ms. Cantrell emphasized that neither she nor Ms. Miller use drugs and she planned to give the pipes to a girlfriend, who collects pipes "along with her egg collection and a lot of other junk."

A U.S. Customs Service spokesman in Houston confirmed that no drugs were found on the women or in the car, but said the car was seized beause of the discovery of "paraphernalia."

The seizure stems from the administration's Zero Tolerance policy that is designed to curtail the demand for drugs, spokesman Charles Conroy said.

Conroy said the seizure was based on federal laws that prohibit the importation of paraphernalia and aiding unlawful importation.

"I told them they couldn't do it (seize the car)," Miller told the Houston Chronicle. "I said, 'I have my legal rights.' They (Customs officer) told me, no, I didn't, I had no rights at that time."

One officer asked the women if they had any onyx products before officers saw the pipes, Ms. Cantrell said. She said she offered to give the pipes to them.

"The whole point is that we did not have any drugs," Ms. Cantrell said. "We had no pot or nothing. I do not smoke and neither does my friend, so they had no reason."

"I told them they couldn't do it (seize the car). I said, 'I have my legal rights.' They (Customs officer) told me, no, I didn't, I had no rights at that time."
— Teresa Miller of Pasadena

Ms. Cantrell said the officer told them "to take everything out of it (the car) that we wanted, because we probably wouldn't see it again."

The seizure is being appealed.

The women said they were told that the car, on which Ms. Miller still owes $5,800, would be put up for auction in Laredo if the appeal is turned down.

Ms. Miller, who is married and has no children, said she contacted U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's office and other congressional representatives for help.

Chris Peacock, a spokesman for Bentsen in Washington, D.C., said the matter is being looked into. He added that about five complaints had been received in the last month about seizures along the Texas border.

A total of 474 vehicles have been seized through June in the Customs Service's southwest region, comprised of Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico, since the Zero Tolerance policy went into effect on March 21, Conroy said.

The women have also asked for help from the American Civil Liberties Union.

"I think it's probably the most ridiculous case I've heard about under this so-called Zero Tolerance program, which is essentially the Reagan administration's way of trying to look like they're being tough on drugs without really doing anything about the drug traffic," said ACLU attorney Bruce Griffiths of Houston.

"This is the first time I've heard of one (case) where somebody was not possessing any drug at all," Griffiths said.

Co-chairs named for Dukakis' state campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — Twelve Texans — from conservative Democrats to more liberal party stalwarts — announced Wednesday they will serve as state co-chairs for the Dukakis presidential campaign.

"I'm one of those Reagan Democrats who is coming home to my party," said John Mobley of Austin, a member of the Texas A&M Board of Regents. "Somebody has got to put this nation's house in order, and I happen to think that Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen can do that job, and do it well."

Mobley ran the first U.S. Senate campaign of Bentsen, senator from Texas and Democratic vice presidential candidate.

Former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan told a news conference the campaign should turn on issues and predicted Dukakis-Bentsen would beat the GOP ticket of George Bush and Dan Quayle in Texas.

Democrats have criticized Republicans for making an issue of patriotism, after Dukakis as Massachusetts governor vetoed a bill on constitutional grounds that would have required the Pledge of Allegiance in schools.

"This campaign must not turn on photo opportunities and non-issues about who can wave more red, white and blue flags and drop more balloons than anybody else," said Ms. Jordan, a co-chairperson. "This campaign cannot turn on who is the biggest or highest or strongest patriot."

"This campaign, Michael Dukakis says, is about the future, and I believe him," she said.

Also announced as co-chairpersons were Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi; Sen. John Montford of Lubbock; Lyndon Olson Jr., former chairman of the State Board of Insurance; Dallas attorney Kathryn Cain; U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston; Maria Berriozabel, a member of the San Antonio City Council; Ben Love of Houston, chairman of Texas Commerce Bank Shares; Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner of Alice; Austin attorney Joe Kilgore; and Hidalgo County Clerk Billy Leo.

The 12 will serve as steering committee for the campaign, with Railroad Commissioner John Sharp as its chairman.

Ms. Cain said the Democratic ticket would attract women because of support for issues like day care and pay equity.

"While Bush and his running mate, Dan Quayle, have been condescending at best to women, Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen have been providing some real leadership on issues of importance to women," she said. "Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen can give women, too, an equal shot at the American dream."

Montford, who noted that he represents a conservative area of the state, said he "agonized" over the decision to support Dukakis. In discussing it, he said, "I'm tired of going-out-of-business sales. I'm tired of stacked rigs...I'm tired of farm auctions. I'm tired of the biggest event in town being an FDIC auction."

Truan mocked Bush's promise in accepting his party's presidential nomination to create 30 million jobs in the next eight years.

Men accused of conspiracy to steal helicopter engines

Associated Press

Three Texas men and a man from Nebraska have been accused of conspiracy to steal helicopter engines from the federal government and possession of stolen government property.

Raymond Kovic, Clem McClane Jr. and William E. Felts from Texas and Marvin Kottman from Nebraska will be arraigned Tuesday before a federal magistrate in Corpus Christi.

The indictment alleges that the four conspired Dec. 1, 1985 to obtain the property. Kottman also is accused of possessing 10 stolen helicopter engines on March 19, 1986.

He will plead innocent at the arraignment, according to his attorney, Clarence Mock of Oakland, Neb.

Federal agents armed with a search warrant seized items from Kottman's farm near West Point in April 1986. Authorities declined to say what type of property was seized, but said the seizure was related to an investigation into the theft of military helicopter parts.

Mock said Kottman refurbishes engines and one of the sources of engines is government surplus.

Cave occupation continues

AUSTIN (AP) — Environmental activists chanted "Texas Earth First!" Wednesday as they continued a 10-day occupation of a shallow cave system northwest of Austin.

The protesters have demanded protection from the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service for the caves and several species in them under the Endangered Species Act.

The federal agency has proposed legal protection for five species of cave-adapted spiders and beetles known from no other caves in the world, the protesters said. But until the proposal is finalized, they said, the species and their cave habitat are being destroyed by urban development in the area near Lake Travis.

"This place is a one-of-a-kind biological resource which must be protected for science, for future generations, and for the earth," said Barbara Dugelby, spokesperson for the protesters.

Drug convictions upheld

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin appeals court Wednesday affirmed drug delivery convictions in two cases involving a police officer who enrolled in high school under a false name in an undercover investigation.

In September 1986, Austin police officer Beth Young enrolled in high school under the name Betty Kay Brown in hopes of learning the identity of people selling drugs to students at school, according to a 3rd Court of Appeals opinion.

In December of that year, the opinion said, Betty Jean Stockton sold Ms. Young methamphetamine. In October 1986, according to an indictment, Lee Roy McMullin Jr. delivered cocaine to Ms. Young.

Education center receives grant

From Staff Reports

The West Texas Rural Health Education Center has received a federal grant award of $415,487 for 1988-89.

Area Health Education Center (AHEC) programs are national projects regulated by the Department of Health and Human Services and funded through a school of medicine.

The long range goal of the AHEC is to improve the distribution, supply, quality, utilization and efficiency of personnel in the health services delivery system.

Delivery of healthcare services in rural areas will become even more of a problem by the year 2,000 according to a recent report in the New England Journal of Medicine. One possible solution is the extension of continuing education and clinical support provided to existing healthcare professionals, medical students and residents through community practice settings.

In the past, AHEC has contributed to improving the education support system in the area.

Future programs will introduce specialized training in identification of potential child abuse victims and of women who are possible high-risk pregnancy patients from outlying communities, faculty support for a masters-level nurse practitioners program, development of a physical therapy assistant certification at Odessa College and a second annual health career exploration event for high school students.

The West Texas Rural Health Education Center is a cooperative program of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center funded through the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

It serves a 34-county area in the Permian Basin and a 48-county area in West Texas.

Odessa opthalmologist to test new lens

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Opthalmologist John H. Sheets was the first eye surgeon in the world to implant a revolutionary new lens design for cataract patients and is one of just a handful of doctors nationwide chosen to test the new lens, the 3M Corp. has announced.

The new lens, developed by 3M, is surgically implanted in the eye and is designed to minimize the chance that a person will need bifocals or any eyeglasses after surgery. Impressive preliminary clinical data about the new lens was presented recently at a symposium in Copenhagen.

Sheets first performed the surgery on Nov. 13, 1987, in Odessa, and has implanted 16 of the lenses to date.

Cataracts are a clouding of the lens of the eye that can eventually lead to blindness. They are caused by chemical changes in the lens, most often brought on the process of aging.

Currently 3.3 million Americans are visually impaired due to cataracts; the majority of these individuals are over 60-years-old. Cataracts can also be caused by eye injuries, systemic disease (such as diabetes), inflammation of the eye or certain medications.

In the past, the treatment of cataracts called for the surgical removal of the natural lens and then fitting the patient with either cataract eyeglasses or contact lenses. These treatments resulted in distortion of the patient's vision.

Locally, Sheets is helping to evaluate the 3M lens as part of the Federal Drug Administration approval process. For more information about the lens and other developments in opthalmology, contact Susan Hammons at (915) 367-7241.

Changing diet advised before using cholesterol-reducing drugs

DALLAS (AP) — Doctors may be too quick to prescribe powerful new cholesterol-reducing drugs with unknown long-term effects when exercise, change of diet or more proven drugs might do as well, specialists say.

"There is a general suspicion that some of the drugs that control cholesterol are overprescribed, when diet and weight loss alone may suffice," said Dr. James Willerson, professor of medicine and chief of cardiology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School.

If exercise and diet don't work in four to six months, drugs ranging from the proven, like bile acid resins and niacin, to the new, like gemfibrozil and lovastatin can be useful, said Dr. Wayne Peters, an assistant professor at the University of Colorado School of Medicine.

Lovastatin lowers the blood's low-density lipoprotein, which delivers the cholesterol that builds up in the arteries. Gemfibrozil increases the levels of high-density lipoprotein, which carries cholesterol away to be destroyed.

The two drugs "are so easy to take, so impressive in their effects on lowering cholesterol, that many physicians start out with them first, which is not an NIH recommendation," Peters said recently in Dallas.

The National Institutes of Health has designated colestipol, cholestyramine and nicotinic acid, or niacin, as drugs of first choice. The first two are bile bile acid resins, which have been been available for more than 20 years.

"The two newer drugs can also be considered," said Peters, an assistant professor of medicine and preventative medicine and biometrics who addresses doctors' groups and consumers on cholesterol-lowering drugs.

"But most cholesterol experts think they should only be considered after patients are using niacin and bile resins in small doses."

Lovastatin "is very effective in lowering the LDL component," he said. "It is quite well tolerated, a pill like gemfibrozil. But the longest it was used in humans is five years. We have really no idea what the long-term safety record will be.

"Practicing physicians are overprescribing that medicine without giving patients an informed choice...'Do you want a little inconvenience but we know it's safe, or would you rather choose convenience and a question mark as far as Lovastatin safety.'"

Lovastatin was approved in 1987 by the Food and Drug Administration.

It can be very effective, Willerson said. "Lovastatin is a very important medication, but the newer cholesterol-fighting drugs are very powerful, and it is important to be aware of what the options are."

"I think there are some problems in that area," said Dr. Donald Hunninghake, director of the University of Minnesota Heart Disease Prevention Clinic and author of the National Cholesterol Education Program's adult drug therapy guidelines. "These come from many different areas.

JAMES HUMPHREYS, MD

Changes in Medicare program most significant since 1965

Humphreys

Both houses of Congress approved legislation in June which produced the most significant changes to the Medicare program since its enactment in 1965.

The changes, which were designed to protect the approximately 32 million Medicare beneficiaries from catastrophic illness, was signed into law recently by President Ronald Reagan.

Proponents of the legislation say it addresses the concerns about high prescription drug costs, large doctor bills and long hospital stays. Opponents charge that recipients will be taxed for the benefit of a relative few and that the legislation does not address the biggest concern, the costs associated with long hospital stays. Opponents charge that recipients will be taxed for the benefit of a relative few, and that the legislation does not address the biggest concern, the costs associated with long-term care.

The principle changes in the Medicare program resulting from this recent legislation are as follows:

■ Hospital days — Beginning in 1989, days of hospitalization will be unlimited after an annual deductible of $564 is paid. This is a significant change from current provisions for 60 "free" days and 30 partially covered days. Hospital stays extending beyond 90 days can be partially covered only by use of lifetime reserve days, which cannot be replaced.

Fortunately a hospital stay beyond 60 days is rare. When one occurs, however, it can cause financial disaster for a Medicare recipient who does not have supplemental insurance.

■ Skilled Nursing Care — The number of days covered is increased from 100 to 150 days, and the requirement for three days of prior hospitalization is eliminated.

■ Hospice Coverage — The 210-day coverage is eliminated.

■ Home Health Care — Coverage is extended to 38 consecutive days.

■ "Respite" Service — For those requiring skilled care at home, 80 hours of coverage is allowed for a substitute care-giver.

■ Prescription Medication — Beginning in 1991, Medicare will commence coverage of prescription medications other than those administered intravenously and anti-rejection drugs. After a $600 deductible is paid in 1991, Medicare will cover 50 percent of the cost of prescription medications. The coverage percentage rises to 60 percent in 1992 and 80 percent in 1993, but the deductible will rise annually as well.

■ Part A Premium — For those who are not eligible for Part A coverage and wish to purchase it, the monthly premium is reduced from $234 to $158 per month starting in 1989.

■ Part B Expense Limitation — Obligation for deductible and co-payment expenses for services covered by Part B will not exceed $1,370 annually. This cap does not apply to "excessive" charges billed by physicians who do not take assignment on claims, or expenses nonallowed services.

■ "Spouse Impoverishment" Provision — Under current law the healthy spouse of a nursing home resident is required to "spend down" to poverty level before Medicaid will contribute for the nursing home expenses. The new provision will allow the spouse to keep at least $12,000 in liquid assets and a monthly income of $768 (122 percent of poverty level), an amount which will increase annually up to 150 percent of the poverty level.

■ Medicaid Payment of Medicare Premiums — Medicaid will be required to pay Medicare premiums, deductibles and copayments for the elderly and disabled whose incomes are below poverty level.

■ Mammography Screening — Free mammography screening will be provided for female Medicare beneficiaries at intervals determined by age.

The costs of the catastrophic coverage bill is estimated to be $31 billion over the next five years, and will be financed through program enrollees. Payment by the beneficiaries for this coverage will be by two methods:

■ An increase in the monthly Part B premium of $4 in 1989 rising to $10.20 in 19.93. This increase is in addition to the increases in the premium which were scheduled prior to the enactment of this legislation; and

■ An additional income tax levy of $22.50 for each $150 of income tax liability in 1989. The premium rises to $42 for each $150 tax liability in 1993, but there is a cap on this amount which rises annually as well. For example, a beneficiary who owes $6,000 in federal income tax in 1989 should be assessed an additional $900 ($6,000 divided by $150 times $22.50), but actually will owe only $800 because that is the cap amount for 1989.

Provisions of the catastrophic illness bill do not eliminate all the potential setbacks attendant to the financial aspects of illness, but do minimize several of them. Supplemental insurance policies purchased to fill gaps in Medicare coverage may now overlap some of these new provisions, so those who have such policies would do well to review them and alter their coverage as needed.

Dr. James Humphreys is Executive Director of the Midland City-County Health Department.

Exercising women may have bone loss

New York Times News Service

One of the nagging doubts created by the exercise boom is the possibility that all this rushing about in the name of fitness might turn out to be harmful many years from now.

That might seem unlikely, given the care with which most modern medical research is conducted.

After all, the evidence seems persuasive that becoming aerobically fit has a number of positive health benefits, particularly in staving off heart disease.

However, no one in good conscience can be smug about the most serious negative effect of too much exercise.

We are speaking of the women who exercise so much that their menstrual cycles shut down, a condition known as amenorrhea.

Research is showing that such women almost immediately begin experiencing a wasting away of their bones that apparently cannot be reversed if the amenorrhea persists long enough.

Doctors now usually speak of irreversible bone loss if the amenorrhea persists for five years or more.

Estimates of the incidence of athletic amenorrhea vary widely.

Some studies of young dancers have found incidence levels ranging from 19 percent to 44 percent.

Incidence levels in studies of college runners have varied widely, the high being about 25 percent.

The amount of exercise can vary from individual to individual, but most experts speak of women who run more than 30 miles a week.

Other factors can also be involved, including weight loss and stress.

The bone loss is a result of disturbances in the female endocrine system marked by a deficiency of estrogen, normally seen in women entering menopause.

What makes this potentially grave for young women hooked on the thrill of the long run is that they are risking osteoporosis later in life, a condition that causes fragile bones that fracture easily.

The "dowager's hump," in which a deformity of the upper spine develops, is a common result of osteoporosis.

Fractures among the elderly, particularly a fractured hip and the rapid decline to death that can result, is a fate that may await the determined female runner 40 or 50 years down the road.

"I think you could have a possible population of women 40 years or so from now who could have a real problem," said Dr. Christopher E. Cann, a professor of radiology at the University of California at San Francisco.

His group was the first to write in the medical literature about the bone loss problem four years ago.

"If you don't prevent the bone loss, it appears to be permanent," he said.

One preventive option is to take estrogen, one of the therapies for menopausal women.

Most young women shy away from this possibility, and rightly so, because estrogen replacement opens up the possibility of side effects.

Little is known about side effects in young women, but in menopausal women estrogen replacement therapy has been associated with endometrail and breast cancer, although the validity of research findings about this remain highly controversial.

The latest work by Cann's group has found that significantly increasing daily calcium intake can replace some of the lost bone in female athletes who exercise at high levels.

The researchers studied 220 female athletes between the ages of 20 and 45, measuring their spinal bone loss with CT scans.

But coupled with a natural bone loss of 1 percent a year due to aging, a woman could have a 40 percent loss by middle age, a serious loss.

Moreover, women in the study whose menstrual cycles had returned to normal after a period of amenorrhea 10 to 15 years earlier, still had a bone loss of about 12 percent, remaining from those earlier years.

The San Francisco researchers found that consuming about 1,500 milligrams of calcium daily over the two-year life of the study, either through increased consumption of dairy products or use of calcium supplements, augmented bone replacement about 3 percent.

"So if you lost 20 percent and you are replacing 3 percent, that's a good start," Cann said.

A new study by a Seattle team this year reported finding increased levels of the hormone glucocorticoid among a group of women in their 20s who ran about 30 miles a week.

The study did not seek to specifically relate the higher levels of glucocorticoid to stress in the lives of the women with amenorrhea.

But the researchers noted in their paper, published in the Annals of Internal Medicine, that the increased glucocorticoid levels might be "perhaps due to the marked physical and emotional stress that a rigorous training life style entails."

An obvious therapy, particularly if the amenorrhea has only recently begun, is to induce the menstrual cycle to start up again by cutting back on exercise.

One of the intriguing bits of medical lore about amenorrhea and exercise is the reluctance that some young women have solving their problem early by cutting back on exercise.

Rubin advances in group

From Staff Reports

Harold Rubin, senior vice president of operations at Midland Memorial Hospital, was advanced to membership status in the American College of Healthcare Executives at its 54th convocation ceremony held Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, at the New Orleans Hilton Riverside and Towers.

Rubin joined MMH in 1985 and is responsible for ancillary, nursing and clinical services. During his tenure, he has organized the A.M. Admit Surgery Program, the Breast Screening Service and the Testing and Diagnostic Center.

In addition, he has implemented a hospital-wide staffing-to-workload system and coordinated the implementation of the mobile lithotripsy services and the Sports Medicine Program.

Rubin is a graduate of the University of Michigan with a doctor of pharmacy degree. He received a bachelor of science degree in pharmacy from the University of Oklahoma.

The American College of Healthcare Executives is a Chicago-based international professional society representing more than 22,000 healthcare executives.

Kozak joins orthopedics organization

From Staff Reports

HOUSTON — Dr. Jeffrey Alan Kozak, a graduate of Lee High School in Midland, has joined the Fondren Orthopedic Group here, specializing in spinal surgery.

Kozak

Kozak completed a year's spinal surgery fellowship in London this past June, working with renowned spinal surgeon John P. O'Brien at the London Clinic, as well as other surgeons in France and Germany.

He is the son of Midlanders Dan and Marjorie Kozak and a 1974 honor graduate of LHS. He graduated cum laude from Duke University in 1978 and receiving degrees in biomedical and electrical engineering.

Kozak graduated with a doctor of medicine degree from Baylor College of Medicine in Houston in 1982. He was then accepted into the five-year intership and residency programs in orthopedics at the Baylor College of Medicine Affiliated Hospitals in the Texas Medical Center.

Kozak and his wife, Lee Ann, have one daughter, Ashley Elizabeth, 2½, and newborn twins, Travis Michael and Daniel Fletcher, born last month in Houston.

X-Ray X-Press available at games

From Staff Reports

Midland Memorial Hospital is once again providing the X-Ray X-Press at all high school games at Memorial Stadium in Midland.

X-Ray X-Press, under the medical direction of Dr. Thurston Dean, allows injured players to be x-rayed at the field house and then processed film to be returned to Dr. Dean immediately.

Therefore, if the player is able to return to the game, he may do so with a minimum of lost playing time.

X-ray technician Wayne Gist will be on the field during all of the 1988 games. Gist, who originated the idea, has arranged to have portable x-ray equipment for the fieldhouse. The equipment was made available through the Midland Memorial Foundation.

The X-Ray X-Press provides Midland with a service that is very limited for high school programs. As always, if an iinjury is determined to be serious by Dr. Dean, the player will be transported to Midland Memorial Hospital by ambulance.

West Texas Pathology accredited

From Staff Reports

The laboratory at the West Texas Pathology Laboratory of Midland has been awarded a two-year accreditation by the College of American Pathologists (CAP), based on results of a recent on-site inspection.

West Texas Pathology, under the direction of Chief Technician Doug Schultz, is the only laboratory in Midland to be so awarded.

The CAP accrediation program is one of the few recognized by the federal government as requiring adherence to standards equal to, or more stringent, than the government's own.

The inspection itself is one of the most rigorous a laboratory can experience and may require up to a year of advance preparation by the staff.

ANDREWS — Mustang Bowl will host two undefeated teams Friday night who haven't given up a touchdown this year, but Andrews coach W.T. Stapler insists that his Class 4A Mustangs aren't ready for the kind of test they face against the Midland High Bulldogs.

"Normally, when you have your program going, you like to go up against a 5A team, but we're just not at that point yet," Stapler said of his youthful corps of Mustangs, who will have seven juniors and two sophomores in the starting lineup. "We will have less than 30 kids suited up for the game and we just don't have the numbers to play a game like this.

"We've really been hurt by the economy, losing seven or eight kids who moved away who probably could start for us."

Midland High is coming off a dazzling 34-0 romp over Lubbock Monterey in a game that showed the Bulldogs own a potent passing attack. Andrews defeated a good Class 3A Frenship team, 18-0, as running back Michael Hernandez scored three times to become one of the state's leading scorers in Class 4A.

Stapler, who formed state playoff powers at Sweetwater, doesn't see MHS as just a 5A team on the schedule. He feels the Bulldogs possess the material of a strong team.

"Midland High is a legitmate contender in District 4-5A," notes Stapler. "They have two good quarterbacks, a great running back in (Dwane) Roberts and anytime you have those kind of skill people, you are going to be good.

"We won't see a defensive secondary any better than the one they have all year, but then again, we only throw about five times a game. I've heard they are worried over there about their linebackers, but I don't see a major problem. Maybe they haven't been tested, but they've looked good to me."

Friday's date with the Mustangs is one of only three road trips the Bulldogs face this year and MHS coach Doug McCutchen is hoping last year's road performance has carryover value.

"Anytime you go out of town, you are a little concerned, but we did win all four of our road games last year," said McCutchen.

McCutchen isn't taking the Mustangs lightly, however.

"I was impressed with the way Andrews responded to the Frenship game. They looked so much better than they did in their two scrimmages. They are very aggressive on defense and really get people around the football. They are larger than last year with defensive ends weighing at 235 and 210. Ronnie Seals (defensive end) looks like a college prospect to me and Joe Don Finley is a running back and a good defensive safety. Finley is one of the top discus throwers in the state, so you know what kind of athlete he is."

McCutchen admittedly was surprised by his team's showing against Monterey.

"I was surprised that we were able to execute offensively as well as we did. That was probably the best opening game we've had since I've been at Midland High," said McCutchen. "We're much farther along in the passing game than anytime in the past, but we have a lot of experience back in that area and we should be farther along."

MHS quarterback Russell Page completed nine of 13 passes for 139 yards and a touchdown against Monterey while backup quarterback Jason Stone passed for 48 more yards and scored two rushing TDs. Roberts led the balanced attack with 83 yards rushing.

Both teams gave up less than 200 yards of total offense in the openers last week, but the Andrews offense generated just over 200 yards, not much more than MHS had in passing yards alone. That worries Stapler.

"Our kids played about as well as they could against Frenship. I thought we played good defense, but I don't think we prepared our kids offensively and Frenship was ready defensively. We are limited in what we can do offensively. The kids give us everything they have, but when your fastest back runs a 4.8, you are limited," said Stapler.

Even though the non-conference contest has no bearing on the state playoffs, McCutchen sees this game as an important one for his Bulldogs.

"We play three Wishbone teams this year (Wichita Falls Rider and Midland Lee the others) and this gives us a chance to play against it early. The more you see it, the better you get defending against it."

Metcalf suspension upheld

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Longhorn tailback Eric Metcalf had hoped for a Heisman-type performance for all to see in Texas' football opener against Brigham Young tonight.

But a ruling by the NCAA on Wednesday turned Metcalf from a player into a spectator for the nationally televised game.

Metcalf, a senior who ran for 1,925 all-purpose yards last year, learned Wednesday of his ineligibility, due to a minor rules infraction reported by UT to the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"I was shocked because after we had talked to everyone (NCAA people), and while we were waiting for a decision, (I felt) that I had a good chance of being able to play this week," Metcalf said.

"But as soon as they came on the phone and said I wasn't going to be able to play, I was shocked."

Metcalf said he accepted money from the UT athletic department to pay for summer school this year, then did not attend either summer session.

Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said, "It was a minor mistake and the money was paid back to the university out of his own pocket. Still, it is a violation. We turn in all violations to the NCAA and will continue to do so."

Metcalf, in an interview with KVUE-TV in Austin, said on June 1 the UT athletic department gave him a $760 check for one session of summer school. He decided he would not go to the first session, then in mid-July he decided he would not go to the second session.

On July 13, Metcalf was told by the athletic department to pay the money back. He says he finished paying the money back Sept. 1

Metcalf was contacted by reporters Wednesday on campus near the football dormitory. He was with Texas' 1977 Heisman Trophy winner, Earl Campbell, a special assistant to the UT vice president of student affairs.

Metcalf said, "I feel that we're both (Metcalf and the athletic department) to blame for this. They said I could have the money so I took the money. If I wouldn't have taken the money, there would be no problem. If they wouldn't have given me the money, there would be no problem.

"It's a two-way street."

Upon deplaning at Salt Lake City International Airport on Wednesday, Coach David McWilliams said, "I'm disappointed for Eric. I think the penalty is a little stiffer than it should be."

He said Metcalf's absence from the BYU game would probably hurt his quest for the Heisman Trophy. "I hope they won't use that against him, but I am not going to sit here and say it doesn't hurt because it does," McWilliams said.

He has touted Metcalf, a 5-foot-9-inch 178-pounder, for the trophy.

Martina Navratilova, no longer a threat at this year's Open.

Zina zings Martina

By RICK WARNER

NEW YORK (AP) — In Las Vegas, 21 is a winning number.

Wednesday, Zina Garrison struck it rich with No. 22.

Garrison snapped a 21-match losing streak against Martina Navratilova and moved into her first U.S. Open semifinal with a 6-4, 6-7 (3-7), 7-5 victory at the National Tennis Center.

"I've been working my butt off," Garrison said, "and I believe if you work hard, good things will come out of it."

Maybe the best thing to come out of Garrison's upset of the two-time defending champion was the knowledge that she can maintain her balance in a rollercoaster match against a great player.

Garrison, the 11th seed, appeared ready to crash after blowing a 5-0 lead in the second set and letting Navratilova off the hook while serving for the match at 5-4 in the final set.

But the 24-year-old from Houston displayed a mental toughness that has been lacking in the past, breaking right back and serving out the match.

"It's been something I've been working on all year," she said. "I've been trying to stay positive whether I win or lose."

Navratilova, who is used to playing against the best, was impressed by Garrison.

"She played the very best match of her life," Navratilova said. "I'm happy for Zina because she's come close a few times against me and I've always turned her back. It's just too bad for me that it had to happen here."

Before last year's Open, Garrison and her doubles partner, Lori McNeil, were usually lumped together as the top black players on the women's tour. But after McNeil beat Garrison in a tight three-setter and then upset Chris Evert in the quarterfinals, Garrison was shunted into the background and the friends had a falling out.

"We have gone our totally separate ways," Garrison said. "It helped my personality because I'm able to be myself more. I feel more comfortable with myself."

Cranes, Badgers regroup together

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Area Football

Birds of a feather flock together, so they say. If that adage indeed has merit, and if statistics from the first week of the 1988 football season are any indication — then Friday's night game between Crane and McCamey could be a match made in heaven (who said that?).

Both the Golden Cranes and Badgers suffered through tough offensive performances in their season openers last week. Crane was held to 74 yards total offense in a 28-0 loss to highly-regarded Reagan County, while McCamey struggled to 99 yards offense in a 27-6 thrashing by Kermit.

In other area matchups Friday, Reagan County travels to Greenwood; Big Spring hosts Lubbock Estacado; Rankin is off to Forsan; Andrews entertains Midland High; Stanton goes out to Coahoma; and Iraan visits Eldorado.

Saturday, Lamesa travels to Roswell, N.M. for a game with New Mexico Military Institute.

Both McCamey coach Danny Wilhelm and Crane mentor Johnny Burleson said their respective defenses had to stay on the field much too long last Friday.

"I guess that happens when you play a good team," Wilhelm said. "Kermit's probably the top 3A team in West Texas."

The Badgers trailed only 7-6 at halftime, but Kermit all-state candidate Billy Thompson ran wild in the second half despite leg cramps brought on by the high humidity.

"We only had five plays from scrimmage in the second half," Wilhelm said. "Our offense just didn't perform, and it's just a matter of time before a back like Billy Ray Thompson will break loose."

Wilhelm expects a different offensive orientation from Crane, however.

"Crane will throw the ball," Wilhelm said. "We've had to spend a little more time on pass defense."

Despite Wilhelm's glowing endorsement, Crane quarterback Rodney Lane completed only four of 12 passes for 30 yards against Reagan County. However, Lane may benefit from changes in the McCamey secondary caused by an injury to starting strong safety Daniel Flores.

Chris Phillips moves from free to strong safety for the Crane game, while sophomore Stephen Terry will step in at free safety. Terry, a 170-pounder, will also open at tailback — Flores' usual offensive position.

Flores may be out for an extended period with a possible fractured leg, while guard Joel Lashaway may be out for the season, depending on the results of arthroscopic knee surgery this week.

Ironically, Lashaway had a great game against Kermit, Wilhelm said.

As for Crane, Burleson said the defense must be given some rest this week.

Tyson's foster mother calls story 'despicable'

By JOHN NELSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The woman who raised Mike Tyson through his teens called it "some sort of soap opera." Her foster son did not try to kill himself. He couldn't do such a thing.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, called the idea "outrageous," and said the story was "a pack of falsehoods and untruths — despicable lies."

Again, Cayton was portrayed as a villain, the heavy, with one hand over his heart, the other in Mike Tyson's pocket.

Enter Donald Trump, who helped Tyson in his lawsuit against Cayton, Trump's public relations man, Howard Rubenstein, lawyers Peter Parcher and Steven Hayes, the heavyweight champion's actress-bride since February, Robin Givens, and her mother, Ruth Roper.

"White knights," Cayton said. "They've known him for a few months and, out of the clear blue, suddenly they're the people with the knowledge of Tyson's problems. I've been working with Mike, solving his problems since he was 14 ... and now Bill Cayton, who has protected and taken care of Mike for eight years, is worried only about making money on Mike.

"It's deplorable. Not true."

This, the latest chapter in the soap opera of Mike Tyson, began on Sunday. Tyson, 22, was staying in his room at Camille Ewald's house in Catskill, N.Y., where he had lived since he was 13 — seven years before he became heavyweight champion of the world.

On a cool, rainy evening, he got into his silver BMW, which was parked on the grass in front of Ewald's house, and drove it into a tree, knocking himself unconscious for a half hour and forcing a second postponement of his title defense against Frank Bruno.

Friday's game really big for Neuse

Patterson

To hear Dan Neuse talk about it, it would be somewhat like a Mayberry-Mt. Pilot football game. Or it'd be like Tom Cruise playing pool alongside Paul Newman in "The Color of Money."

What it is, is Friday night's Midland Lee-Del Rio football game at Memorial Stadium.

And while it may be just another Friday for the local folks, to Del Rio fans it's the game of a lifetime.

Del Rio is a smaller town (pop. 34,401), snug up against the Rio Grande. "A hundred miles from anything in whatever direction you go," Neuse, head coach of the Del Rio Rams, said.

For the past ten years, they've had almost nothing but a losing football team in Del Rio. Last year, the Rams went 6-4, their first winning season since '78. Del Rio has had a hard time of it, bunched up with numerous San Antonio football powerhouses in District 24-5A.

And to hear Dan Neuse tell it, Friday night's game with Midland Lee is a breakthrough, the like's of which have never been seen before.

"Gosh, it's just an honor ... we really feel good about playing Lee. It means a lot to our community. The kids in Del Rio need to be exposed to the outside world."

Or as Barney Fife used to say, "Oh Andy this is big. This is really big."

AND JUST how much does this game mean to the folks in Del Rio?

Dee Dee Turner, sports editor at the Del Rio News Herald, said the school district has "hired five Greyhound buses" to make the six-hour trip.

Superintendent Sam Evins has even agreed to let the band and pep squad make the trip, something that is not done all that often for Del Rio's non-district games.

Neuse, in his third year as head coach of Del Rio, can hardly hold back his enthusiasm when talking about Midland football.

"You go anywhere around the country," Neuse said, "and you pull in any fillin' station and people know about Midland football. Midland's not famous for oil. Oh, they might know about the little girl in the well, but Midland is known across the country for its football."

NEUSE SAID he pulled in a fillin' station in California and, to hear him tell it, there the attendants were, talking about Midland football.

Turner, who started at the Herald only two weeks ago, said that's just Neuse talking up the game for the sake of his team.

But, she said, " it'll be a big test for his boys."

Evins played down the importance of Friday's game, sounding very 'superintend-ing.'

"We want to enjoy going to Midland Lee and we want Lee to enjoy coming to Del Rio (next season). It's good for our team to play teams other than the ones in San Antonio."

And from Neuse: "Del Rio hasn't had the kind of tradition (as Midland has). I wouldn't want to play Lee every week. Once a year's plenty. If we can play with 'em at all, we'll feel like we've accomplished something. Especially if we can do it without getting hurt or killed or something.

"It really means a lot to our community."

The 133-foot New Zealand yacht, runner-up by 18-minutes in first leg of America's Cup.

New Zealanders upset with loss

By DENNIS GEORGATOS

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dennis Conner's country-mile victory in the first America's Cup race reduced the New Zealand challenger yacht to a ship of "fools," the angry Kiwi tactician says.

"We go out on the track and we're treated like fools, because we go out there and we sail around the track as fast as we could in our boat and we have a boat ahead of us making a mockery of the race," says Peter Lester, New Zealand's tactician and alternate helmsman.

"I must say I have lost a lot of respect for the Stars & Stripes organization," Lester said at an acrimonious Wednesday night news conference, shortly after Conner's dual-hulled catamaran breezed to an 18-minute, 15-second victory over the Kiwis' monohull challenger in the opening of a best-of-three series. The next race is scheduled for Friday.

Lester, New Zealand skipper David Barnes and Bruce Farr, designer of the challenger, all claimed Conner held back his arrow-hulled flier by deliberately sailing the Stars & Stripes catamaran below its potential over the 40-mile windward-leeward course.

They contended the catamaran should have beaten them by an hour or more had it been sailed to its potential.

Asked if he "dogged it," Conner replied, "I'm sailing a cat. Somebody else is sailing a dog."

The crews' bitter exchange added gasoline to the fire smoldering between the two camps since New Zealand Challenge chairman Michael Fay sprang his unorthodox challenge on the San Diego Yacht Club in July 1987 and then prevailed in court over the defenders to get it validated.

A second court fight ensued when the SDYC took the unprecedented step in Cup competition of replying with a 60-foot-catamaran with a revolutionary hard-wing sail. Fay's attempt to oust the cat as an allegedly illegal defender resulted in a July 25 court order to race first and protest later. Regardless of the series' outcome, Fay has said he will return to court to protest the issue of the catamaran, which he says is unfair and unsportsmanlike because it does not "match" his 133-foot monohull and that the dual-hulled vessel is inherently faster.

"We'd like to win this next race as soon as possible and get on to an America's Cup that the whole rest of the world would like to see," Conner said. "Enough of all this shenanigans from New Zealand."

Unlike past Cup competitions, which had been held in 12-meter yachts since 1958, all other competitors were excluded from the current event because the two sides could not agree to terms that would allow their entry.

Conner, who is one win away from tying skipper Charley Barr's three Cup victories, had said repeatedly that assuming he was in the lead he would sail the cat conservatively. He said that would be the smart thing to do because winning was the bottom line.

New commish unveiled today

MONTREAL (AP) — A. Bartlett Giamatti, who earned a reputation as "the dean of discipline" during his short tenure as National League president, is expected to be named baseball's new commissioner.

Giamatti has long been considered Peter Ueberroth's likely successor and the formal announcement was to come this afternoon at the end of a regularly scheduled owners meeting.

Ueberroth supported Giamatti's election and so do several other influential owners, including Bud Selig of Milwaukee and Fred Wilpon of the New York Mets, who had been appointed by the owners to report on the selection process.

Ueberroth did not want to drag out the choosing of his successor. Prior to this week's meeting, he told owners that if they were in agreement on Giamatti, they should dispense with the formalties and elect him now.

Giamatti, 50, would become baseball's seventh commissioner when Ueberroth's term ends Dec. 31, 1989. Ueberroth, who took office in October 1984, repeatedly said he would be a one-term commissioner but recently agreed to help for one year in the transition process.

Baseball is expected to go through difficult negotiations on a new Basic Agreement between players and owners and on a television pact before the 1990 season. There has been talk of a strike or lockout interrupting the season.

Owners wanted an experienced negotiator, and Giamatti filled that role while serving as Yale University's president for eight years. Giamatti retired from the position in June 1986, was elected NL president the same month and officially took office in December.

Giamatti has made his presence known, often taking tough action against baseball improprieties.

He suspended Pete Rose for 30 days earlier this season after the Cincinnati manager bumped umpire Dave Pallone, a penalty that was strongly criticized by many as too harsh. But Giamatti insisted law and order was necessary and refused to bend to pressure to lighten the sentence.

Last year, Giamatti suspended Kevin Gross for scuffing a baseball and Billy Hatcher for corking a bat. Those penalties were not challenged.

Giamatti was said to be the driving force behind this year's crackdown on balks, which threatened to disfigure the game early in the season. Giamatti, however, said he was not the main proponent.

LA Rams' White suspended again

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Charles White made one of sport's more remarkable comebacks when he beat a cocaine problem last season and went on to lead the NFL in rushing.

But the Los Angeles Rams' running back found himself in new difficulty Wednesday when the NFL announced he was being suspended for 30 days for violating its substance abuse policy.

The substance — White said and the Rams confirmed — was alcohol.

White claimed he didn't realize he could be suspended for drinking.

Because of his previous problems with cocaine, he was subject to suspension for using alcohol under the league's substance abuse policy. Under the policy, players who have never had a substance-abuse problem cannot be suspended for using alcohol.

"I was surprised because my thing (earlier) was drug-related," White said Wednesday evening by telephone from his home. "I didn't know it (the NFL policy) pertained to alcohol. I just had a few beers after practice.

"But I was taught at re-hab that alcohol is a reason people go back (to drugs). It's nobody's fault but mine.

"I just want to say to all NFL players who have a problem that even alcohol is something to be worried about."

White has been undergoing drug tests three times a week since he was arrested near the Rams' training camp in August, 1987 for being "under the influence of a foreign substance."

The substance later was revealed to be cocaine. White went through a drug rehabilitation program and had the charges dropped.

That incident was a relapse of a cocaine problem White had during the early years of his NFL career while he was a member of the Cleveland Browns. He was drafted by the Browns in 1980.

Rams coach John Robinson, who coached White at Southern Cal and later gave him a chance to salvage his pro career with Los Angeles after the Browns had released him, said the latest development is a "crushing-type situation."

"I think he was caught by surprise," Robinson said. "He told me he had had a few drinks and told the nurse when he went in for his test.

"Obviously, he's disappointed."

However, Garrison hopes that someday she and McNeil can be friends again because "this is just a game and our friendship shouldn't be on the line just because of a game."

After last year's disappointment at the Open, Garrison went into this year's tournament with special motivation.

"Naturally, you think about last year," she said. "I was on the edge of beating Lori and I didn't, then she went on and did so well."

Next up for Garrison is fifth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini, who holds a 5-2 lead in their series. Sabatini has won three of their four matches this year, but Garrison won their only Grand Slam meeting at Wimbledon.

"It's kind of weird," Garrison said. "I've seen Gaby every day at the tournament. I was kind of thinking that maybe I'd eventually meet her. Now it's going to happen."

Garrison has been in six semifinals this year, but has yet to play a final. After her gutty performance against Navratilova, though, she is feeling confident.

"I've been down in a couple of matches this tournament and come back up," Garrison said. "I've been keeping my composure."

Whiteside wins again

From Staff Reports

Reigning city champion Steve Whiteside continued his local winning streak with a runaway win in the Green Tree Country Club championship recently.

Whiteside also won the GTCC title in 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1985, before sitting out the last two seasons. The former Texas A&M standout won by five shots over second-place Alan Williams.

The tourney was marked with two holes-in-one, the first ever in the golfing careers of Dale Daniel and Glen Harbert.

Daniel aced the 201-yard #12 with a five-iron on Saturday, playing with Kurtis Reese, Jim Pritchett and Chuck Davis.

Harbert used a seven-iron to ace #16 on Monday. His witnesses on the 148-yard hole were Max Combs, Don Haynes and Jim Eastup.

Donnelly named to SMU squad

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — Former Midland Lee student Degen Donnelly has been named to the varsity soccer team at Southern Methodist University.

Donnelly, who decided to walk-on this fall, missed the season opener against Texas Christian Monday, but will be eligible to participate in the game against Metro State in Denver Saturday. SMU will be at home against Colorado College at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 16.

Donnelly did not have the benefit of playing high school soccer, but did play as part of the Midland Soccer Association. The two local high schools now have soccer.

MCC tourney goes to Cook

From Staff Reports

Mike Cook won the Division I title at Midland Country Club's recent Low Net Tournament. Cook finished with a three-round total of 215.5.

Clem Barnes took the Division II championship.

David Koch shot a 71 on Monday for the low last round in Division I, while G.W. Brock's 74 took similar honors in Division II.

Division I

Mike Cook 215.5; W.C. Hubbard 217; Joe Nobles, Will Hall, 217.5; Chris Huff 219.

Division II

Clem Barnes 220.5; Craig Johnson 221.5; Joe Stickney 230; Charles Grimes 232; John Oschner 235; King Hughes 236.

KQIP's Swedberg retains fight title

From Staff Reports

KQIP news and sports director Chuck Swedberg kayoed John Calderone of El Paso in the second round recently to retain his Texas super heavyweight kick boxing title. It was the first loss for Calderone, now 14-1.

Swedberg is currently ranked No. 14 in the United States by the World Karate League. A fight with a top 10 U.S. contender is planned for in the near future.

Swedberg is a member of the Universal Society of Martial Artists. The society was formed in 1964 and is based in Ventura, Calif.

OWLS

"We have to make some first downs," he said. "We'll go in and try to establish some offense.

"Our defense played as good as they can play — they were just on the field too long."

Reagan County didn't get their second touchdown until only 13 seconds were left in the first half, and were then held scoreless in the third quarter before tailback Leonard Castillo scored his second touchdown with 5:43 left in the game.

The Owls defeated Greenwood 50-12 last season and Greenwood was drubbed 28-6 by Denver City last week. But Owl mentor Ronnie Reeger doesn't think that combination of facts precludes a serious Ranger challenge.

"I think our kids understand that last year doesn't count," he said. "We were a lof stronger than they were in the past, but that's not the case now.

"They have as much speed as we do in the skill positions," Reeger said.

The Owls are also plagued with injuries in their defensive backfield. Cornerback Tye McGregor and safety Sean Moore are definitely out for the Green-wood game, while corner Ricky Subia may finally be available after missing three weeks with a dislocated elbow.

Greenwood coach Bob Purser blamed critical mistakes for his team's demise against Denver City.

"They certainly were a better football team last week, but we weren't that far off," Purser said.

The Rangers played Denver City almost a dead heat in the second half after spotting the South Plains school a 21-0 halftime lead. Nevertheless, Greenwood was outgained 332-128.

Purser pronounced the quarterbacking debut of senior Randy Donnell a success despite low offensive output.

"He did probably better than we expected," Purser said. Donnell created the only Ranger touchdown against Denver City with a seven-yard pass to tight end Tom Marvin in the third quarter.

Purser also praised the play of senior defensive tackle Garry Popham and two-way ends Marvin and Sean Holcomb.

Mehaffey fires ace

From Staff Reports

Jay Mehaffey shot a hole-in-one Monday at Mission Country Club's No. 8 hole. Mehaffey used a 3½ wood on the 185-yard, par-3. His feat was witnessed by J.B. Phillips, John Goodman and Doug Schultz.

The ace was Mehaffey's first ever.

Bank profits nearing record levels

Failures also high, with over half in Texas

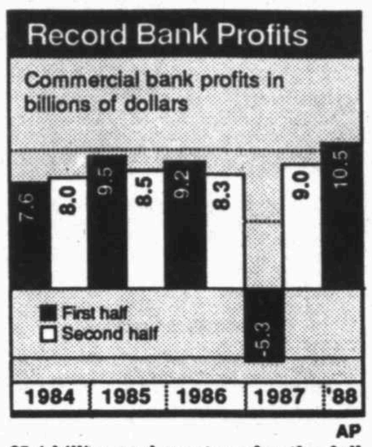
WASHINGTON (AP) — Profits at the nation's commercial banks are soaring toward record levels this year after hitting bottom in 1987 when big banks wrote off billions in Third World loans, the government says.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Wednesday that 13,403 banks reported $10.5 billion in earnings for the six months ending June 30. That is the biggest six-month profit since the agency began keeping track in 1934, topping the $9.7 billion in net income for the second and third quarters of 1985.

"We think ... we will see record profits for the year if the economy continues on its current level," said FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman, whose agency insures commercial bank deposits up to $100,000.

The most profitable year for banking was 1985, when the industry posted earnings of $18.1 billion.

In the first half of 1987, banks lost $5.4 billion and went on for the full year to post the weakest earnings since the Depression, $3.7 billion.



The poor performance was almost entirely attributable to huge reserves set aside by the largest banks for expected losses on loans to Third World countries.

Banks haven't seen the need to build those reserves further this year and are thus earning strong profits. They set aside only $916 million on foreign loans in the first six months of this year, compared with $16.4 billion in the same period a year ago.

But even as industrywide earnings are climbing, the number of bank failures also seems certain to set a post-Depression record.

More than half of the failures have been in Texas, a state still reeling from the worldwide depression in the oil industry and the resulting slump in Southwestern real estate prices.

Texas banks lost $2.9 billion in the first half, with $2.3 billion of that attributable to a single institution: First RepublicBank Corp. of Dallas, which has since been rescued with $4 billion in federal money. Elsewhere in the oil-dependent Southwest, banks earned modest profits.

Seidman said he hoped that the condition of banks in Texas would improve now that so many have been closed or merged with healthier institutions. At the end of August, 173 banks had failed or required government assistance to stay open. Ninety-seven of those — including 42 First RepublicBank subsidiaries — were in Texas.

Seidman said failures would continue at the same rate this year, setting a post-Depression record, but then decline next year.

In the Midwest, battered earlier in the decade by farm bank failures, the profitability of most banks has been restored. In the first half, just 7 percent of banks in Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota lost money, compared with nearly double that amount a year ago.

Texas gas producers court California buyers

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Some 40 Houston pipeline companies and gas producers Tuesday courted energy envoys from California, visiting Houston as part of a campaign organized to find new markets for Texas gas.

State Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, accompanied by executives of Southern California Edison, one of the state's largest energy buyers, said California is in dire need of additional energy resources, and Texas could help fill the need.

California's population is expected to grow from 26 million people to 37 million by 2005, he said. Energy needs and energy use in California will parallel that growth."

But in order to fulfill California's natural gas appetite in the coming years, Brown said, additional pipeline capacity will have to be built.

Michael Peevy, executive vice president of Southern California Edison, said meetings planned with Texas pipelines and producers this week in Houston, Dallas and Amarillo came at an auspicious" time, since California gas users are currently under curtailment because of inadequate supplies.

Peevy said natural gas is the energy of choice today because it burns cleanly, and environmental concerns are a major issue in California.

Canada has been a reliable, low cost supplier of natural gas to California in the past, conceded John Sharp, Texas Railroad Commissioner and organizer of the visit, but it has an advantage in that the government, not private owners, can adjust the price up or down.

Congressmen criticize latest thrift bailout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the House Banking Committee today criticized regulators' use of promissory notes to rescue insolvent savings institutions as a "shell game" designed to push the problem into the next administration.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates the nation's 3,000 savings institutions, has pledged more than $12 billion over the last three weeks to rescue or close 48 savings institutions, including 21 in Texas and 14 in Oklahoma, states hard hit by the depression in the oil industry.

However, much of the assistance has been in the form of interest-bearing notes, which will obligate the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. to billions of dollars in payments a year for the next decade.

The plan "seems to be nothing more than a massive shell game in which insolvent institutions are reshuffled, the names changed, and little if any real capital injected, resulting in thinly capitalized weak institutions," said Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y.

"Many of these institutions will ultimately have to be bailed out again at even greater cost to the taxpayer," he said.

Schumer said the bank board's strategy would "postpone the day on which the bill for this crisis becomes due until long after the members of the current administration have left Washington and are sitting on a beach somewhere."

However, Bank Board Chairman M. Danny Wall, who is asking Congress to put the full faith and credit of the U.S. government behind the notes, said the notes, because they are tax free and carry a low interest rate, are the most effective way to close down insolvent thrift institutions that are draining the industry's health.

SEC: Drexel, Boesky had secret pact

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government sued Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. and the head of its high-risk junk bond business, alleging they secretly schemed with convicted inside-trader Ivan Boesky to violate securities laws.

Wednesday's civil complaint by the Securities and Exchange Commission seeks an estimated $100 million, according to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

It followed months of guessing about whether the government had built an extensive case against the Wall Street firm on evidence turned up during the nearly 2-year-old Boesky scandal, which resulted in his imprisonment.

The SEC's complaint accuses Drexel and Michael Milken, head of Drexel's pioneering junk bond operation, of engaging in an arrangement with Boesky that included insider trading, stock manipulation and fraud that benefited Boesky and Drexel at the expense of Drexel clients. Junk bonds, which offer high yields but are highly risky, are often used to finance corporate takeovers.

Former analyst pleads guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — A key figure in what federal prosecutors call Wall Street's second-biggest insider trading scandal has pleaded guilty to criminal charges amid indications that others may be charged.

Stephen Sui-Kuan Wang Jr., a 24-year-old former junior analyst with the venerable firm Morgan Stanley & Co., pleaded guilty Wednesday in U.S. District Court to the first criminal charges leveled in the case.

Wang, who was free on $250,000 bond, also agreed to plead guilty to a criminal charge in connection with a separate, previously undisclosed insider trading scheme he undertook when he first began working for Morgan Stanley in June 1986, authorities said.

Petroleum Museum opening new pumping unit exhibit

From Staff Reports

Ribbon cutting ceremonies for the Petroleum Museum's Development of the Modern Pumping Unit exhibit are scheduled for Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. The public is invited.

A barbecue lunch will top off the ceremonies that will honor the many individuals and companies involved in the project, including the late Marshall R. Young, whose company donated much of the time and equipment to comlete the project.

The ceremonies will also begin the museum's 13th anniversary celebration. Reservations are required for the lunch.

Nearly three-quarters of domestic oil production is lifted with sucker-rod actuated pumps. The new exhibit shows 18 different machines used to raise and lower the rod strings.

Early-day shallow wells were pumped with underpull jacks cperated by pull rods from a central power house; or small, beam counterbalanced individual pump units.

As wells were drilled deeper, the pumping units were made larger with longer surface stroke length. Also, more counterbalance was necessary to relieve the gear-reducer of some of the weight of the longer sucker rod strings.

A variety of styles and mechanical ingenuity are shown in the exhibit: some date back to the 1920s; others are still being manufactured today.

All the equipment and much of the installation service was donated to the museum; donors are recognized on the descriptive plaques near each unit.

Saturday Sept. 17, the museum's birthday celebration will continue with "family day" activities. Admission fees are reduced to $1 for all visitors; birthday cake will be served all day; "This Land" will be shown at 10 a.m., noon and 2 p.m.; and a slide presentation, "The Great Bronze Age of China," will be shown at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

Insurance survey finds big automobiles safer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The likelihood of injury from a car accident ranges widely among different car models, but for the most part safety increases with automobile size, according to an insurance industry report.

The report on injury claims involving 207 popular models shows that small cars have by far the highest injury loss records, while station wagons and large cars often afford the greatest protection.

According to the insurance group, the Mercedes-Benz SDL-SEL sedan, which is equipped with a driver-side airbag, had the best safety record with injury losses that were 58 percent lower than the average for all cars. Close behind was the Pontiac Safari station wagon.

The least safe car was the 4-door Chevrolet Spectrum which had injury losses that were 78 percent above average, followed by the 4-door Chevrolet Sprint and 4-door Hyundai Excel, both of which had losses 67 percent above average, the report said.

Of the 10 cars with the best injury loss record, nine were categorized as "large" cars including five station wagons and vans. The Saab 9000 was the only "mid-size" car in the top 10 vehicles, ranking fifth best with injury losses 51 percent lower than average.

The 10 vehicles with the worst injury loss record were all in the small sedan or small sports car category.

Exceptions to the general trend that small cars afford the least protection include another Saab model, the Saab 900, as well as the Volkswagen Vanagon, the Toyota van, Porsche 944 coupe and Mercedes Benz 380-560 SL convertible. All are in the "small" category but had better than average injury loss records.

But except for the Saab 900, all 60 of the "small" sedan models had higher injury losses than average.

The report by the Highway Loss Data Institute, an insurance industry research group, covered 1985-87 model cars, but spokesmen said the findings can be used as a guide for later model vehicles as well.

"The loss experience of most cars is consistent from one model year to another," said Brian O'Neill, the institute's president.

The report said the results were adjusted to take into account various "non-vehicle factors" such as types and ages of drivers that might be associated with particular vehicles.

Best, worst cars listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the cars ranked as having "substantially better" and "substantially worse" injury loss records, according to the Highway Loss Data Institute, an insurance industry research group.

These vehicles have injury loss records of at least 30 percent greater or 30 percent less than the average for the 207 vehicles examined.

Vehicles with the best injury loss record:

Mercedes SDL-SEL Series	42
Pontiac Safari wagon	44
Buick Electra wagon	48
BMW 735i	50
Saab 9000	51
Buick LeSabre wagon	52

Oil prices begin rebound

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices began to bounce back from the week's earlier slide in morning trading.

Contracts for October delivery opened 13 cents higher and maintained that range through mid-morning on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Wednesday the contracts slipped 8 cents to put the total drop in the last four trading sessions at $1.05. Wednesday's close was the lowest price level seen since October 1986 as traders remained skeptical about OPEC's ability to cease its overproduction.

There was no fresh news to account for the decline, but traders said confidence was lacking after Tuesday's plunge in prices.

"The market was still so shell-shocked from yesterday that there was a tremendous reluctance to buy," said Jerry Samuels, a vice president at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

On the NYMEX, the October contract for WTI, opened at $14.29 after ending Wednesday's trade at $14.16. By late morning, the contract price remained more than a dime above the close at $14.27.

Crude prices were last lower on Oct. 29, 1986, when they reached $13.73 per barrel. The following day the price leaped to $15.04 a barrel.

Futures contracts for refined oil products traded on the exchange were mixed. Wholesale unleaded gasoline for October delivery rose 0.06 cent a gallon to 42.59 cents, while wholesale heating oil for October fell 0.08 cent at 41.63.

Rumors circulated Wednesday that Saudi Arabia had agreed to long-term volume discounts on oil sold to Japan, but the reports were unsubstantiated and only added to a general skepticism about cooperation within the Organzation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said Michael Hiley, a vice president at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

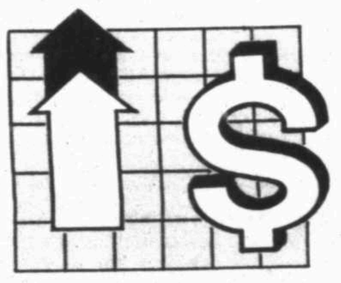
Dollar inches up awaiting data

LONDON (AP) — The dollar inched up on European markets today after closing slightly down in Tokyo in what dealers said were technical fluctuations anticipating the next batch of U.S. economic data. Gold improved.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.10 yen to a closing 134.20. Later, in London, it was quoted at 133.80 yen.

"It seems that the dollar has hit its lowest level," said a dealer with the Bank of Tokyo. "Some institutional investors have already started buying more dollars."



Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Wednesday:

—1.8498 West German marks, up from 1.8435

—1.5615 Swiss francs, up from 1.5545

—6.3040 French francs, up from 6.2795

—2.0852 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0810

—1,383.25 Italian lire, up from 1,376.50

—1.2388 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2392

In London, the British pound fell to $1.6980, compared with $1.7060 Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $427.15 a troy ounce, up from $426.70 bid late Wednesday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $428.00.

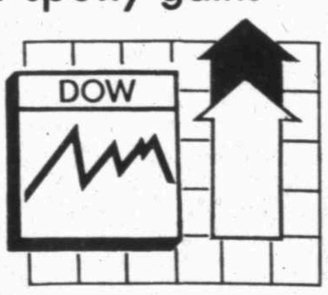
"We're still entrenched in a range between $425 and $430," said a London bullion dealer.

In Zurich, the bid price was $428.15, up from $427.50 bid late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose 0.32 to close at a bid $430.51.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.57 a troy ounce, up from Wednesday's $6.52.

Stocks settle for spotty gains



NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market settled for some small and spotty gains Wednesday after an early advance faded.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 10 points in the early going, closed with a 0.53 gain at 2,065.79.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 825 up, 642 down and 489 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 139.59 million shares, against 122.25 million in the previous session.

Recent weakness in oil prices kept the pressure on energy issues. Atlantic Richfield dropped 1 to 80¼; Mobil ⅛ to 42⅝; Amoco 1¼ to 73; Exxon ⅞ to 45¾, and Chevron ¼ to 44¼.

In the oil field service and drilling group, Schlumberger fell 1⅜ to 31⅛ and Baker Hughes was down ⅛ at 13⅛.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $3.50 billion, or 0.13 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .18 to 150.38.

Paperwork manipulation trims trade gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has come up with a paperwork way to reduce the reported U.S. trade deficit by about $3 billion before the election, but officials denied that the accounting change was politically motivated.

Commerce Under Secretary Robert Ortner said Wednesday the change made more sense economically.

The new procedures will change how merchandise imports get counted each month.

Shareholders approve TWA privatization

Icahn

NEW YORK (AP) — Shareholders of Trans World Airlines Inc. overwhelmingly have approved Chairman Carl C. Icahn's proposal to buy their shares and take the nation's seventh-largest airline private.

But opposition to the move mounted Wednesday among TWA employees as the 3,300-member pilots union sued Icahn in New York State Supreme Court to block the privatization.

Airline industry analysts estimate the Icahn bid puts a value of around $40 a share, or $304.8 million, on the TWA shares that Icahn doesn't already own. TWA stock closed at $36.75 on the New York Stock Exchange, up 37½ cents a share.

High-tech job rescue comes under question

WASHINGTON (AP) — The belief that the United States' economic standing in the world will be rescued by emerging high-technology industries is being questioned by a prestigious study group which said the country is fast losing its dominance in many of these fields.

The Council on Competitiveness recommended Wednesday a major effort on the part of government, industry and schools to reverse the trend.

Presidio Oil to purchase properties from Standard

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

Presidio Oil Co. of Denver has agreed to buy oil and gas properties in the Mid-Continent, Rocky Mountain and Gulf Coast areas from Standard Oil Production Co. in a mostly cash deal worth $55 million.

Presidio will purchase 170 oil and gas fields with proved producing reserves of 6 million barrels of oil, 22 billion cubic feet of gas, other proved non-producing reserves, probable reserves and about 30,000 net non-producing leased acres.

The purchase is expected to close Oct. 4.

Standard Oil Production, a subsidiary of BP America of Cleveland that has most of its operations in Houston, will receive $53.74 million in cash, subject to certain production adjustments until the closing date, and 850,000 shares of Presidio Class A common stock.

The stock transfer will give Standard's parent company, BP America Inc., an ownership interest of less than 10 percent, a Presidio spokesman said.

"This purchase represents an other important step in our acquisition program," said Presidio Chairman George P. Giard Jr. "It will more than triple our oil reserves and add significantly to our natural gas reserves in areas where we already have substantial oil and gas operations."

The purchase is the second ma jor acquisition Presidio, an independent oil and gas company, has made this summer. In early August it purchased various oil and gas properties in Louisiana for $40 million from the King Ranch. Last year it spent $92 million to acquire properties from Petroleum Development Corp. and Kaiser Energy Inc.

The sale allows Standard Oil Production to focus on its main areas of strength "while retaining a strong base for strategic development in the continental United States," said Chief Executive Officer E. John P. Browne.

Tenneco restarts methanol plant idle for six years

HOUSTON (AP) — A Tenneco Oil Co. methanol plant idled six years ago by economic restraints has been reopened with the prospects of improved market conditions, the company announced.

The Pasadena plant uses natural gas feedstock and has an annual production capacity of 125 million gallons. Initial feed went into the plant July 31 and the plant is now running at full capacity, officials said.

Tenneco spokesman Joseph M. Macrum said the plant is among those holdings that would be included in the intended sale of Tenneco's petroleum exploration and production, along with processing and marketing operations.

Macrum said Houston-based Tenneco Inc. has not yet received a bid for its Tenneco Oil Co.

"There has been some significant interest from some prospective bidders," he said, adding that a Sept. 30 deadline has been set for those potential bids.

Transco to expand gas deliveries

HOUSTON (SWN) — Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., a subsidiary of Transco Energy Co., has filed an application with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to implement its plan to provide additional firm transportation service for up to 167 million cubic feet per day (MMcf/d) of natural gas to meet peak winter requirements for five large utility customers and approximately 21 other customers and municipalities in TGPL's southeastern market area.

The plan calls for a $60 million expansion of TGPL's existing pipeline facilities in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and North and South Carolina. More than 27 miles of large-diameter pipeline looping and 47,000 horsepower of compression will be added to TGPL's system to meet these customer commitments. If approved by the FERC on a timely basis, construction on the project could begin in the spring of 1989, with service expected to start by the 1989-90 winter heating season.

UT to manage gas research project

AUSTIN (AP) — The Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin, in cooperation with the Gas Research Institute in Chicago, has been named project manager of a three-year, $22.5 million program to recover additional natural gas in Texas.

The research effort will focus on South Texas and East Texas or the Permian Basin, according to a statement from UT-Austin.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Interest offsets extra dividends on margin buys

By BILL DOYLE

Q. From the little I understand about it, buying stock on margin appears to be an easy way to increase my income. If I buy on margin, I have to pay only half the purchase price. I assume I then collect dividends on twice as many shares as I paid for.

For example, if XYZ stock is trading at $100 a share and I buy 200 shares on margin, I pay the broker only $10,000. Do I or don't I get the dividends from 200 shares?

Doyle

A. You do, but you don't get to keep all that dividend money. You'll have to pay all or part of it — most likely, more than the dividends on 100 shares — to your brokerage firm.

You have missed one major factor about margin trading — interest expenses.

When you buy on margin, you put up only 50 percent of the price at you purchase the stock, plus brokerage commission. In your example, you would pay a commission on 200 shares.

You can do that, because you borrow the rest of the money — $10,000, in this case — through the brokerage. In order to buy stock on margin for you, the brokerage borrows money from a bank. The brokerage pays interest on its bank borrowing — and charges you slightly higher interest.

Unless XYZ stock pays a tremendously high dividend, the interest you pay will more than offset the additional dividends you get by buying on margin.

Q. If I buy stock on margin, what rate of interest will I pay on the money I borrow through the broker?

A. Brokerages generally charge interest on "debit balances" — money customers owe on margin accounts — at least one-half of 1 percent higher than the interest the brokerages pay the banks.

Lately, the "call money rate," as it's known, on bank loans to brokerages secured by stocks as collateral has been running about 9.25 to 9.375 percent.

So you can expect to pay about 10 percent or higher on money you owe a brokerage. You might pay a good deal more. Each brokerage sets its own interest rate.

Q. I read that, prior to the 1929 "market crash," stocks could be bought with very little money down. Who sets the present 50 percent requirement?

A. Congress gave the Federal Reserve Board authority to set minimum margin requirements in securities reform legislation following the '29 crash. Back in the '20s, many speculators bought stocks with 20 percent — sometimes less — down. When the market prices of their stocks fell, they were wiped out.

The Fed began setting the margin requirement in 1934. Since then, it has never been below 40 percent. From January 1946 to February 1947, it was 100 percent — meaning no one could buy on margin. It's been 50 percent since 1974.

Q. Assume I buy stock on 50 percent margin and its market price drops. At what point will the broker demand more money or, worse yet, sell me out?

A. When the stock's price drops one-third — perhaps, sooner.

Under New York Stock Exchange rules, a brokerage must make a "margin call" — ask for more collateral — when the amount you would have left if the stock is sold and the loan from the broker is paid falls to less than 25 percent of the stock's value.

Here's an example.

You buy 100 shares at $60 a share on 50 percent margin. You borrow $3,000 through the brokerage and have $3,000 equity in the account.

The stock falls to $40. You still owe the brokerage $3,000 and you have $1,000 equity — exactly 25 percent of the stock's value.

Right then, the broker is required to make a margin call for more cash or securities. If the stock goes even a fraction lower, your stock will be sold. The loan is paid off. You get what's left.

In practice, many brokerages issue margin calls sooner.

McCamey bank sold to investors

From Staff Reports

McCamey Financial Corp., formed by Gary Edmiston, Curtis Thomas, Floyd Covill and Claude Thorp, have purchased controlling interest in Security State Bank of McCamey.

The purchase was made from C.W. Brown for an undisclosed amount and received approval from the Federal Reserve Bank in July.

The acquisition was completed Aug. 11 after lengthy negotiations and final regulatory approval. Edmiston, president of the bank since 1979, stated that few changes are anticipated in the operations and management of the bank. He will continue to manage the bank as president and chief executive officer.

The bank remains a locally-owned and operated institution and no changes in the board of directors is anticipated in the near future. The current board consists of Curtis Thomas, Floyd Covill, Eugene Covill, Claud Thorp, C.W. Brown and Gary Edmiston.

Chamber survey: Economy tops list

From Staff Reports

Economic development and diversification remains the top priority concern of members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, according to the chamber's annual membership survey.

The annual survey, sent to over 1,800 chamber members in July, ranked economic diversification as the top priority of the organization and the number one community need by an overwhelming majority. Over 85 percent of all respondents listed economic development programs, including attracting new business and retaining or expanding existing firms as "most important" to Midland.

Second on the list of priorities was the promotion of Midland's image, considered an integral part of efforts to develop the local economy.

Other components of the chamber's diversification efforts that ranked high among members were support for local education, legislative action related to the business climate, air transportation, tourism and convention promotion, retail development, long-range planning, and streets and highways.

The "single most important" community need or problem identified by members, in order of frequency of response, was economic development, maintaining quality of education, streets and highways, and oil price fluctuation. Other problem areas ranked in the top ten were "keeping dollars at home," capital formation for small business, drug abuse, and taxation.

Respondents said the chamber's top priorities for action in the coming year should be economic development and diversification, visitor promotion, attraction of retirees, new small business attraction, education, air service and general promotion of Midland.

Results of the membership survey, along with input from volunteer committees, other agencies and organizations, and planning sessions, go into the planning of the 1988-89 program of work for the chamber. Specific goals and objectives of the organization for 1988-89 will be adopted by the board of directors at its September meeting.

GUILTY

U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani, who outlined the charges at a news conference, said Wang was cooperating with the government and that the investigation was continuing, an indication that others may be charged.

U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy set sentencing for Oct. 19. Wang faces up to 15 years in prison and $750,000 in fines for the three fraud counts against him.

Prosecutors charged Wang with using his position at Morgan Stanley to steal market-sensitive information about pending takeovers and other confidential matters in which the firm played a role.

The government alleged Wang peddled the information starting in June 1987 to Taiwanese businessman Fred C. Lee, who allegedly used it to make at least $19 million in profitable stock trades in more than 14 companies and shared about $200,000 with Wang.

EOR conference to be held in Abilene

From Staff Reports

An Improved Oil Recovery conference has been scheduled for Sept. 11-13 in Abilene. The conference will begin Sunday afternoon with a reception at Fairway Oaks Country Club for U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, state, local and Department of Energy representatives, and independent producers.

Sponsored by the Department of Energy, the seminar will emphasize applying enhanced oil recovery techniques to independent operators in this region. Representatives of the West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association, North Texas Oil & Gas Association, National Stripper Well Association, Society of Petroleum Engineers and Independent Petroleum Association of America will present the program with Hardin-Simmons University/Fairleigh Dickinson Research Center.

The program includes an enhanced oil recovery short course by Dr. Larry Lake of the University of Texas, Austin, a panel discussion on economic incentives and their application to EOR, an updated talk on EPA oil and gas waste regulations, and presentations on such topics as horizontal drainhole drilling, CO_2 recovery methods, chemical recovery methods, and water production control.

According to the Texas Railroad Commission, Texas has 10,968 active oil companies and 2,511 are located in TRC District 7B in West Central Texas.

Successfully applying enhanced techniques to a few wells in this area might not only make a tremendous improvement in the district's economy, but could also be picked up by other operators eager to avoid abandonment and increase their oil production.

Because most of the cost of producing oil is paid out before production begins, the incremental cost to produce additional oil is relatively small by comparison. Implementing cost-effective production technologies in West Texas appears to be a solution to economic instability, the seminar sponsors say.

BAILOUT

Wall said his agency had $10.1 billion in the notes outstanding at the end of August and said by the end of this month it will have spent billions more to resolve the cases of 65 more ailing thrifts.

Rep. Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the committee, was particularly critical of the $2 billion rescue earlier this week of American Savings and Loan Association in Stockton, Calif.

The Robert M. Bass Group, the investment arm of a Fort Worth, Texas, billionaire, is spending $550 million and getting $2 billion in assistance from FSLIC to acquire American.

Part of the deal allows Bass to use $1.5 billion of American's funds for merchant banking activities such as acquisitions of commercial companies.

"Frankly, I am concerned when notes ... are utilized to promote risky ventures such as merchant bank subsidiaries," St Germain said, warning thatr, "the industry as a whole can be expected to take this as a green light to again reach for the riskier operations."

The Bass group has been an active player in corporate takeover battles in recent years. It is currently pushing a $1.75 billion offer for Macmillan Inc., a publishing company.

DREXEL

Drexel's chief executive officer, Frederick H. Joseph, reiterated the company's longstanding claim that it would be absolved of any charges. Milken also again denied any wrongdoing.

"For the past 22 months I have been the subject of a shadow trial of systematic leaks and innuendo based upon false accusations," Milken said in a statement. "No one likes to be sued, but I welcome the opportunity to have at long last a full and open hearing of the allegations in an unbiased forum."

The SEC said it would seek to have the defendants — three companies and six individuals, including Miami industrialist Victor Posner — surrender profits made from illegal stock trades. The lawsuit also sought from Drexel, Milken and Cary J. Maultasch, another Drexel employee, civil penalties of three times those profits.

The agency offered no specific amount, but Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said the SEC was seeking $100 million. In addition, all the defendants could be barred from the securities business.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, whose office successfully prosecuted Boesky and other Wall Street investors for using secret information to make stock transactions, declined to comment on whether Drexel or any of the other defendants faced criminal charges.

Boesky, who is serving a three-year federal prison term, was forced to surrender a record $100 million in penalties and illegal trading profits.

Drexel and Milken had an arrangement with Boesky involving at least 16 series of illegal securities transactions, the lawsuit said.

Under that agreement, Boesky-controlled companies secretly bought, sold or held securities for Drexel or individual defendants while Drexel sometimes reciprocated with secret transactions for Boesky, the lawsuit said.

The SEC also alleged that Drexel and Boesky employees kept secret, off-the-books records as part of the arrangement.

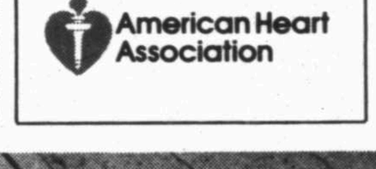
It also said Drexel and Milken traded in securities using confidential information misappropriated from Drexel's own clients.

In 1985, Drexel allegedly made $1.23 million in profits using inside information on a pending merger between Lorimar and Telepictures and allegedly avoided $1.78 million in losses the following year after learning privileged information from Viacom International about a buyout proposal.

Federal law bars corporate executives, investment bankers and others with access to confidential corporate information from using it to trade in securities.

In addition to Posner, Milken and Maultasch, a senior equity trader at Drexel's New York headquarters, other defendants are Milken's brother, Lowell J. Milken of Los Angeles, and Pamela Monzert of Santa Monica, Calif., both Drexel employees; Drexel's parent corporation, Drexel Burnham Lambert Group; Posner's Pennsylvania Engineering Corp. of Pittsburgh; and Posner's son Steven N. Posner.

Go ahead and run it.



Maybe there's a car coming and maybe there isn't. Fortunately, most people figure the risk isn't worth the chance.
But with a heart attack, it doesn't work that way.
Most people ignore the signals. Or chalk it up to indigestion. Or wait to see what happens next.
Every year 350,000 heart attack victims die before they reach the hospital.
If you feel an uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing or pain in the center of your chest that lasts for two minutes or longer, you may be having a heart attack. In some cases, the sensation may spread to the shoulders, neck or arms—and be accompanied by sweating, dizziness, fainting, nausea or shortness of breath.
The important thing is to call your local emergency medical service or ask someone to drive you to a hospital emergency room.
If you ignore the signs of a heart attack, you'll have no one to blame.
Not even yourself.

Modern Plastic Surgery

LIPOSUCTION TECHNIQUE

The object of liposuction, the suction method of reducing excess fat, is not to remove entire areas of fat. To do so would invite the skin to collapse against muscle tissue. The result would be an uneven, dimpled texturing of the body contour. Removal of large areas of fat would also create gaps in the circulatory system. Instead, proper liposuction technique involves tunneling the suction wand in an even manner throughout the targeted fatty area. This creates a "Swiss-cheese effect" that allows the small, consistently-placed cavities to collapse in an even manner. The integrity of large blood vessels and nerves is retained, while the fat in the suctioned area is evenly reduced.

It has been reported that since 1984, liposuction has surpassed face lifts, nose jobs, and breast augmentation in popularity. General anesthesia is usually required but the patient seldom needs to be hospitalized. Contact a member of the ASPRS for further information on liposuction. PERMIAN PLASTIC SURGICAL CENTER is a member of the ASPRS. Liposuction, fat transfers, collagen therapy, and scar revisions are performed. For further inquiries, please contact our office at 848 Central in Odessa, 335-8711, 563-3110.

HINT:
A major factor in determining the outcome of liposuction surgery is the elasticity of overlying skin.

LET'S DO LUNCH

Dining is adventure at Round House restaurant

By THE OFFICE GOURMET

ROUND HOUSE DEPOT & OYSTER BAR

WHERE: 3720 North Edwards (across from the Midlander at Big Spring and Corporate Dr.), six minutes from Big Spring and Wall, ample parking, 684-4676.
Hours: 11 a.m.-2 p.m. and 5-10 p.m. Mon.-Fri. (open to 11 p.m. Fridays), 5-11 p.m. Sat., 11 a.m.-10 p.m. Sun.
PAYMENT: American Express, MasterCard and Visa are accepted.

The bustle of the patrons keeping busy schedules is immediately evident at this "train station" restaurant. In the "waiting room," authentic benches sit across from a quaint grill-front ticket office. Next to it stands an antique phone booth under an old "Bell Telephone" bubble-light sign.

The conductor (hostess) may lead guests to the Club Car, the Orient Express (the smoking section — without Inspector Poirot), or the "pullman car" beyond Pennsylvania Station for dining, and it appears most everyone "arrives" at their destination in a very jovial mood.

This creative train-yard decor is further enhanced by the smoking-car-type overstuffed chairs placed at some tables which complement the upright period oak chairs at others.

During my visit, the porters (waitpersons) cheerfulily explained the very extensive menu which far surpasses the usual dining car fare: a variety of fresh fish plates, hearty open-face sandwiches, innovative burgers, chicken-catfish-or shrimp baskets, steaks, plus a complete all-you-can-eat hot or salad buffet located at the center round-house oyster bar. Speaking of fresh oysters on the half shell, they are always available for 25 cents each.

Although the burgers and roast beef were overdone and a bit dry, the catfish jambalaya was magnificent. The tender pieces of fish were enveloped in a chunky green pepper-onion-to-mato sauce. The charboiled shrimp K-bob served on a bed of rice was crisp and zesty, and the accompanying Round House corn — a superb creamed whole kernel corn like grandma used to make — completes the dish. There was a great temptation to gorge on the delectable light-as-a-feather cheese rolls. A final indulgence was the homey egg sweet; a fluffy banana pecan pudding.

This better-than-average new approach restaurant should be commended for its daring innovations and a "trip" to the Round House Depot is recommended. A plan to be "all aboard" for the Wednesday Mexican buffet is just the ticket.

Prices at the Round House Depot range from $2.95-$18.95 for entrees.

Classic cars can be rented

Associated Press

You don't have to be a classic car collector to drive off in a '57 Chevy convertible, according to an article in a recent issue of Popular Mechanics, you can rent your time machine from National Car Rental's California Classics program.

Although there are old car rental operations of a local nature here and there around the country, the size and scope of the National plan eclipses anything previously attempted.

The plan was designed to stimulate membership in the rental firm's Emerald Club, a frequent renter program similar in concept to the airline bonus plans.

The original California Classics fleet began a year ago at National's Los Angeles International Airport facility.

The fleet started out as a mixture of coupes and convertibles from the golden era of American automobiles — the '50s and '60s — but it has since been purified to an all-convertible collection.

It includes a number of two-seat Thunderbirds (1954-57), late '50s Corvette roadsters, several Chevy Bel Airs, a rare '54 Buick Wildcat and three '59 Cadillacs.

Last December National established a fleet of British roadsters at its San Francisco airport headquarters.

It includes some cars that are rare by any standards. Foremost among them is a 1937 MG-TA roadster, forerunner of the MGs that more or less launched the sports car era in America.

A note of caution — take a good look at what you are renting before you leave the lot. Many of the cars have developed one or more of the idosyncrasies one associates with old age in automobiles.

National makes no bones about the fact that these are old cars and nothing produces automotive infirmities so effectively as age. A quick checkover will tell you if the car's basic systems are working.

Renting one of these dream machines costs $49.95 a day ($59.95 in San Francisco), plus 30 cents a mile, fuel, extra insurance (optional) and the $50 Emerald Club initiation fee.

Warnings, recalls on products issued by CPSC

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has issued more warnings and recalls. Among some of the more recent releases are:

■ A wooden convertible ladder-chair, produced by Maxton Industries/Cox Furniture Inc. of Maxton, N.C., has been recalled because of at least 24 incidents in which the steps split or the hinges pulled away from the wood.

The ladder-chair was available for purchase through three catalogs — Swiss Colony, J.C. Penney and Spiegel. About 4,500 ladder-chairs were purchased between October 1984 and July 1987. Catalog reference numbers are #N7910 7376T (Spiegel's), #3047 (Swiss Colony) and #783-2736 (J.C. Penney). The items carry a warning label which reads: "Safety Precautions. Use with care. 1. Do not exceed 200 lbs. 2. Do not use top step or step directly underneath. 3. When using as ladder rest back against wall or counter top."

Consumers are advised to stop using these items immediately and return them to the place of purchase for a refund.

For more information call Maxton Industries/Cox Furniture Inc. collect at 1-919-844-3501.

■ Sometimes, building a better mousetrap results in a product recall. About 24,000 Electric Mouse Traps (by Hanover House Industries Inc., 340 Poplar Street, Hanover, Pa.) have been voluntarily recalled because of potential electric shock hazard.

The product, imported from Hong Kong by Etna Products Co. of New York City and distributed to catalog houses, including Hanover House, consists of plastic cylinders with inside coils which connect to 110 volt household electric outlets. The bait container above the frame is the primary source of possible electric shock.

The items were sold by catalog for $9.95 each. Consumers should stop using them immediately and contact Hanover House for more information. Call 1-800-621-5800.

■ Avanti strollers, from Peg Perego U.S.A. Inc. of Fort Wayne, Ind., have been involved in at least 13 reported incidents of injuries to babies' mouths. The company is providing free repair kits to prevent these injuries from happening again.

The units involved were sold between Jan. 1-Dec. 15, 1986, and cost about $99 each.

For more information or to receive repair kit and instructions, consumers are advised to call Peg Perego at 1-800-824-4000 or write Peg Perego U.S.A. Inc., 3625 Independence Drive, Fort Wayne, Ind., 46818.

■ In another voluntary repair program, C&T International Inc. of Moonachie, N.J., is providing free modification kits for its mesh-sided, drop-sided playpens, model No. 585 "Circus America."

These playpens have a potential suffocation hazard if an infant is left in the playpen when one of the sides are down; and the drop-side locking system presents a finger-crushing possibility.

The playpens are identified by self-adhesive labels on the floor-board stating: Art 585, CIRCUS AMERICA EX. The playpens are 39x39x33 inches and have removable foam pads on the floor. About 2,500 of these items have been sold since November 1984.

Consumers who wish to have a free modification kit should call 1-800-537-1922. The CPSC advises consumers to remove and discard the plastic feet until the modification kit is received and installed. (If playpen is folded for storage, a child could remove feet and choke on them.)

■ Two possible drowning hazards were reported by the CPSC. One involves childrens' hair becoming entangled in suction fitting drains of spas, hot tubs or whirlpool bathtubs. CPSC advises: 1) install drain covers (ASME/ANSI A112.19.8M-1987); 2) keep long hair away from suction fitting drain covers — wear bathing caps or pin hair up; 3) never allow children to play where it would be possible for long hair to come in contact with these drains; and 4) if drain cover is broken or missing, shut down spa until replacement drain cover is installed.

The other drowning hazard involves babies left alone in bathtubs while sitting in "supporting ring" bathing devises. The CPSC advises parents to never leave infants alone in the tub in one of these bath support rings — not even to answer the door or the telephone.

Consumers may report unsafe products or receive safety information from CPSC by calling 1-800-638-CPSC. Teletypewriting number for hearing impaired is 1-800-638-8270.

BETTER BUSINESS

Ask questions before buying

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Some sales are advertised as "Starving Artist Sales." Other sales are billed as rare opportunities for the deal of a lifetime on carpet or sewing machines or other such products.

What all these sales have in common is that they are typically conducted in hotels or motels by vendors who are on their way to a new location in a day or two.

Before you patronize these operations you should ask yourself: "Have I comparison shopped the prices and the quality of the items being sold?"

Other questions to ask are:

■ "Where will I turn if I find out the merchandise is faulty?"
■ "Where do I go for service."
■ "Is there a warranty?"
■ "Has the product been discontinued by the manufacturer?" If so, will the warranty be honored?

John K. Schmidt is president of the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

Breakfast sausage made from chicken

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Today, there is a lot of concern about eating healthy and many people have found low fat diets the way to go. And now there is a new product that may help lower fat intake at breakfast — chicken sausage.

This new sausage is prepared from a combination of white and dark chicken meat and chicken fat components, or other animal components, and has the potential of providing a low fat breakfast sausage.

Sausage made from a combination of white and dark meat chicken, plus added fat, seems to be an acceptable product.

The new product was discussed at the recent Poultry Science Association meeting at Louisiana State University.

Chicken has not been used extensively as a breakfast sausage product before due to the lack of texture and fat needed for flavor.

Mixing chicken meat and a small portion of fat from other meats creates sausages with adequate flavor, yet they are low in fat content and cost.

Four sausage formulations were evaluated to determine which fat species produced the most desirable sausage product when combined with chicken.

Lean chicken meat was combined with about 10 percent added fat (either chicken, beef, pork or a high oleic acid pork fat) to give a final fat content of 15 percent to 16 percent in all four sausages.

Regular breakfast sausage usually contains about 35 percent to 40 percent fat.

The sausage products were then presented to a consumer taste panel to determine tenderness, juiciness, flavor and overall acceptability.

Sausage containing chicken meat and chicken fat was chosen to be as good as any other treatment.

Also, when chicken fat is used, there is a better ratio of unsaturated fatty acids than with the other mixtures.

The combination of chicken with chicken fat (or other animal fats) created an economical product low in fat and high in taste quality.

Also, the use of chicken dark meat will expand the market base for this product and benefit the poultry industry.

This new chicken sausage may be the entry of poultry meat into the breakfast market.

Marian Farr is Midland County Extension Agent, Home Economics.

DEAR ABBY

Reunions better without spouses

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm chairman of our 30th high school reunion. Yes, we will have a photographer there! One of your letters concerned a reunion organizer in Torrington, Conn., who decided to skip the class picture because the spouses would be bored while the class members were having the picture taken.

That's a pretty dumb excuse — I think most spouses would be bored regardless. I know I'm bored at my spouse's reunions. In my opinion, spouses should not be allowed to attend. We all had our high school sweethearts, and it would be nice to reminisce and have a dance or two — but there sits the spouse, bored and slightly jealous, watching every move.

Abby, is there a tactful way to tell my spouse to get lost that night? Please don't suggest I make a deal and say, "I won't attend yours if you won't attend mine." My spouse insists that I attend hers! — REMINISCING

DEAR REMINISCING: Some spouses wouldn't go to a class reunion if you paid them. Others wouldn't dream of staying away. It takes all kinds. But I know of no "tactful" way to tell a spouse to "get lost" without starting World War III.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from a California reader concerning the casual manner in which the cremated remains of her aunt were sent to her home via regular mail rather than by a more dignified route, I think I can top that.

While dropping off a box of documents to be delivered by a well-known bus company, I noticed on the counter a plastic-foam cooler large enough to hold two six-packs. It obviously had made many trips because the carrier showed signs of wear. I gasped when I read the label on the box. It read: Refrigerated: HUMAN EYEBALLS. I later learned that they were being transported by bus for transplant purposes!

I am well aware of your efforts in this cause, Abby, and I report this to you and your readers merely to point out how commonplace transplants have become.

Please print this. It might make some uptight readers realize that hundreds — perhaps thousands — of donated body parts are in transit daily. — WANTS TO GIVE IN ALBANY, N.Y.

DEAR WANTS: I, too, want to give. And when I go, I plan to take nothing with me that could improve the quality of life for the living. Readers, how about you?

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me how old a person is supposed to be before he's considered a "senior citizen"? I was in a health food store paying for my purchases when the check-out man asked me if I was entitled to a senior citizen's discount. I am 55 and did not consider myself a senior citizen, so I asked him how old must I be to get one. He replied, "55." I was surprised, but gladly took the discount. I always believed 65 was the age! — HAPPILY 55

DEAR HAPPILY: Senior citizenship can be anywhere from 50 on up. When in doubt, ask!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is my problem. He's in his late 60s and retired. He is always in a hurry. We must hurry to get to where we're going. Then hurry home.

He eats like someone is going to take the food away from him. He can shovel in a whole meal in five minutes. He is very impatient. He can't stand to wait in line — in the check-out, to get tickets, to get gas, at stoplights. If we go shopping, it's strictly for the items on our list. I can't stop to look at anything. It's bad enough that he's always in a hurry, but he rushes me, too.

How can I get this man to slow down? He's making a nervous wreck out of me, and it's raising my blood pressure. Why can't we live like retired people and enjoy life?

I'd like to hear from someone else who had this problem and how it was handled. Meanwhile, my blood pressure keeps creeping up, while his is way down. No name, please. Just sign me ... RUSHED TO DEATH

DEAR RUSHED: Perhaps the advice contained in this lovely poem by Wilferd A. Peterson will solve your problem — providing you can get your impatient husband to slow down long enough to read it:

SLOW ME DOWN, LORD
Slow me down, Lord!
Ease the pounding of my heart
By the quieting of my mind.
Steady my harried pace
With a vision of the eternal reach of time.
Give me,
Admidst the confusions of my day,
The calmness of the everlasting hills.
Break the tensions of my nerves
With the soothing music of the sighing streams
That live in my memory.
Help me to know
The magical restoring power of sleep.
Teach me the art
Of taking minute vacations of slowing down to look at a flower;
To chat with an old friend or to make a new one;
to pat a stray dog;
to watch a spider build a web;
to smile at a child;
or to read a few lines from a good book.
Remind me each day
That the race is not always to the swift;
That there is more to life than increasing its speed.
Let me look upward
Into the branches of the towering oak
And know that it grew slowly and well.
Slow me down, Lord,
And inspire me to send my roots deep
Into the soil of life's enduring values
That I may grow toward the stars
Of my greater destiny.

Changes urged

Copley News Service

The National Academy of Sciences is urging the U.S. Department of Agriculture to "trim the fat" and change the way it grades beef.

Currently, beef is weighed and graded before being trimmed of excess fat, which encourages farmers to fatten their cattle several weeks before slaughter. The academy urged the USDA to grade carcasses after they are trimmed. This "hot fat trimming" procedure would remove some incentive to produce grain-fed, fat-laden cattle.

Almost 1 million march in Burma; Mob beheads three

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — About 1 million people, including government officials and intelligence agents, marched in the capital today demanding democracy. Mobs beheaded three people who tried to poison the protesters.

In a Rangoon suburb, security forces shot and injured 17 people to halt looting.

The capital came to a standstill as uniformed state factory workers, Buddhist monks and Catholic nuns, housewives and a group of 200 blind people joined in mass marches and a general strike to demand an end to 26 years of authoritarian rule.

The Soviet Union, China, Japan and other foreign governments evacuated dependents of diplomats and other citizens, diplomats said. An attempt by the United States to do the same was delayed by an airport strike.

Residents said more than 700,000 protesters marched in Mandalay, 350 miles north of Rangoon, and the same number in Monywa, an important trading town 60 miles northwest of Mandalay. About 100,000 marched in Moulmein, the Mon State capital 50 miles southeast of Rangoon.

A Western diplomat in Bangkok said the evacuations were ordered because embassies believed the country was "sliding toward chaos."

"It looks like it's drifting towards a real nasty confrontation," the diplomat said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Factory workers, Buddhist monks, Catholic nuns, students and teachers marched through the capital to press for an end of repressive, one-party rule. Opposition leaders are demanding an interim government to usher in a multiparty system.

Also participating were employees of the Council of State, the Parliament office, the Bureau of Special Investigation, or civilian intelligence, and uniformed officers of the state-owned shipping line. Most held banners identifying their groups.

The protest was the largest in Burma since Aug. 24, when President Maung Maung lifted martial law in the capital and nationwide curfews.

Today's march was largely peaceful, but sources said a mob beat to death two men and a woman who gave poisoned ice water to several demonstrators — including schoolchildren — and then beheaded them.

Demonstrators took the three to a monastery. After they confessed to having been paid $42 each to poison protest authorities mob dragged them outside and beheaded them, hanging their heads on posts at a major junction. It was not clear whether any protesters had been poisoned.

State-run Radio Rangoon said security forces today shot and wounded 17 people.

Wednesday, security forces shot and killed at least five people and arrested dozens accused of looting government buildings and warehouses in the city of 3.5 million.

The deaths brought to 117 the number of protesters reported killed by security forces since last month. Foreign diplomats say the death toll could be in the hundreds.

The diplomat in Bangkok cited reliable reports that in Rangoon and elsewhere the army has been trying to seize all food, fuel, and other essential items to "let the people starve."

He said it commandeered all supplies two weeks ago in Mandalay, the country's second-largest city and a major protest center. He said individual officers had defected from the army but discounted some foreign press reports that large units had joined the protesters.

Waving banners and shouting slogans, the demonstrators today marched to the downtown area, where they filled major streets.

The marchers included the "Union of the Blind" and a newly organized "Housewives Union." Several such "people's organizations" have sprung up recently to challenge the government.

The Catholic clergy sang hymns as they walked.

Diplomatic sources said 37 dependents of Soviet Embassy officials were evacuated Wednesday. The Soviet Union and the United States, with about 50 nationals, have the largest missions in Rangoon.

The sources said China had recalled more than 100 technicians and others would be evacuated.

The Thai, Malay, South Korean and Australian embassies also planned to evacuate dependents and non-essential staff. Israel, Italy, the Philippines and other smaller embassies have evacuated dependents.

The U.S. Embassy had planned to evacuate the first of its up to 100 dependents today, but their commercial flight to Bangkok, Thailand, was canceled due to a strike at Rangoon Airport.

Rivers recede; People still mired in misery

AP Laserphoto

Because floods have wiped out most roads in Bangladesh, these men near Tangail are forced to make their way to market in boats to buy essential commodities which are in short supply. Flooding has reportedly killed about 1300 people and affected more than 30 million others.

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Rivers across this flooded nation receded slightly today, but the change brought little relief to people still boating and wading through murky waters to get food and uncontaminated water.

The death toll from the floods that started June 13 and subsided only to rise with new vengeance on Aug. 27 was 416, according to the government, whose count is generally considered low.

The independent Bengali-language newspaper Khobar today reported 34 new drownings and snakebite deaths, bringing the unofficial toll to 1,301.

The Buriganga and Sitlakhya rivers that wrap around Dhaka on three sides fell between 1½ to 4 inches in the last 24 hours but were still as much as 45 inches above flood level, the flood control center reported.

About three-fourths of Bangladesh, an impoverished low-lying nation of 110 million people, remained under water ranging from a few inches in some areas to at least 10 feet in others.

In Dhaka, a city of 6 million, streets were turned into canals clogged with boats ferrying people to work, to food markets and relief centers and to spigots to get drinking water.

At least half the capital was still under water.

In the Shaymoli neighborhood in northern Dhaka, two young seamstresses waded waist deep in front of the four-story building that houses the small Fairy Fashion Factory where they work.

"Eleven of us are living in the factory because our homes are flooded," said 20-year-old Shamima, who uses only one name. "There has been no electricity for two weeks, so we can't work and we don't know if we'll be paid, but the owner is bringing us food."

She and her friend, 17-year-old Lily, said they waded through the flood each day to buy about five gallons of drinking water for 31 cents. They said the water probably wasn't pure, but it was all they could get. "Most of us have fevers and headaches," Lily said.

Both young women said they had heard about water purification tablets but weren't using any. "No one has given us any, and we don't have enough money to buy any," Lily said.

The government says it is distributing water purification tablets throughout the country, but they are in short supply.

A diplomat from a Western nation that has been trying to buy water tablets for relief distribution reported searching in vain for sufficient quantities in Bangladesh and nearby countries. The diplomat spoke on condition of anonymity.

Of more than two dozen people questioned at random in Shaymoli, only one man — a pharmacy shopkeeper — said he was using them.

The government's health control center reported 16,813 new cases of diarrhea Wednesday, bringing the total of known cases across the country to 119,822 since Aug. 27. At least 83 of the afflicted people died, and their deaths were included in the government's toll of flood victims.

The government says at least 25 million people have lost their homes in the flooding.

Relief camps have been set up in an effort to help people whose homes were washed away or are filled with flood water, but many other people have moved in with relatives, living on rooftops or camping in makeshift shelters on bits of high ground.

U.N. may close next month for lack of cash

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. officials are caught in a maddening situation, sitting on a $7.2 billion nest egg they can't touch while planning to close the world body next month for lack of cash.

Member countries owe the United Nations $602 million in dues. Two-thirds of it is owed by the United States, which has been withholding funds to try to force the world body to implement fiscal reforms.

Undersecretary-General Joseph V. Reed, the top U.S. official at the United Nations, says the organization will be unable to meet its payroll and other fixed expenses by late October if the United States doesn't pay some of its $467 million debt.

Meanwhile, the untouchable pension fund managed by the United Nations since 1949 has grown to a gross value of $7.2 billion, a U.N. official said Wednesday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The United Nations manages the pension fund for its employees and those of 16 related agencies such as UNESCO, the World Health Organization, and the International Labor Organization.

About 43 percent of the fund is invested in stocks; 34 percent in bonds; 11 percent in real estate funds, but not in any actual property; and 12 percent is in short-term investments, said the official.

The investments are spread among 27 different currencies in 44 nations, so the U.N. pension fund won't be sapped by currency fluctuations.

The fund grew at an average rate of 22.3 percent each year for five years while riding the stock market boom, a cycle that went bust last October when the markets crashed. Because of the diversity of the fund, it lost only about 5 percent of its value in the crash, the official said.

About 54,000 participants are paying into the fund, and about 27,000 people are receiving benefits, he said.

While the pension fund is solvent, the U.N. budget is about to go bust.

The United States is assessed one-fourth of the regular U.N. budget, which in 1988 was $876 million. Congress appropriated $144 million this year toward U.N. dues but Washington has paid only $60 million.

The United States began withholding a portion of its dues early in the 1980s due to displeasure over anti-U.S. and anti-Israel rhetoric in the General Assembly, and to save funds at a time when the U.S. budget deficit was growing rapidly.

More recently, funds have been withheld in an effort to force the United Nations to cut its staff by 15 percent, reduce expenses and make personnel changes.

In particular, the United States wants Soviet U.N. staffers converted from temporary contracts to permanent international civil servant status, thus making them independent of the Kremlin's policy goals — at least in theory.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry has said it will transfer some of its U.N. staff to the international civil service, but so far none of its U.N. employees has been reassigned.

Trimming spending in the U.N.'s regular budget is an ongoing battle currently being fought in the U.N.'s key budget committee, the Committee for Programs and Coordination.

Israeli soldiers fire on masked gang, killing one

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops opened fire today on a gang of masked Palestinians who had ambushed their patrol with knives and clubs, killing one assailant and seriously wounding another, the army said.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, meanwhile, troops shot and wounded seven Palestinians, including four teenagers and two 9-year-old girls, Arab hospital officials said.

A general strike was observed in the occupied lands to mark the nine-month anniversary of the Palestinian uprising. Called by pro-PLO underground leaders of the revolt, it was viewed as a key test of their control in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

A rival underground group, the Moslem fundamentalist "Hamas," called the anniversary strike for Friday, underscoring a growing split in the uprising leadership.

In Nablus, 14 Palestinians pleaded innocent today to charges of taking part in a stone-throwing protest that resulted in the death of a 15-year-old Jewish girl April 6.

The defendants are among 20 charged in the death of Tirza Porat, the first Israeli civilian killed in the uprising. Five Israelis and 260 Palestinians have died since the unrest began Dec. 8.

Yaffa Rothchild, the attorney for the defendants, said six of the youths did not appear because military authorities had moved them from the Nablus jail and were unable to locate them for the hearing.

Miss Porat was killed when a group of Jewish settlers she was hiking with confronted Palestinians near the village of Beita, three miles south of Nablus, and then walked into the village. The army and Arab villagers contend Miss Porat was accidentally shot by one of the Israelis.

A political dispute broke out over a U.S. invitation to Foreign Minister Shimon Peres to attend a Middle East peace meeting in Washington Sept. 25.

That will be a month before Israel's election, which pits Peres' Labor Party against Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc. President Reagan will host the meeting between Peres, who supports a U.S. peace plan, and Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid of Egypt.

Shamir, who opposes parts of the U.S. plan, accused Peres of engineering the invitation to influence the Nov. 1 Israeli parliamentary election, which both he and Peres have billed as a historic referendum on how to solve the Arab-Israeli conflict.

"The whole thing is so obvious. It's an election gimmick," Likud member Yitzhak Modai told Israel army radio. "It is unacceptable in the democratic world to involve foreign factors in domestic elections."

Peres dismissed the charges, saying he accepted the U.S. invitation to keep the Middle East peace initiative "alive and well."

Today's fatality occurred in the village of Silat Al Harathiya, in the West Bank's northernmost corner about 55 miles from Jerusalem.

Palestinian witnesses said the clash broke out when a gang of masked Arabs trying to stop Arab workers from going to jobs in Israel turned on an army patrol and attacked troops with stones, knives and clubs.

Hospital officials identified the dead man as Mohammed Ahmed Abdullah Abu Salah, 36, and said he was shot in the head.

Soviet historian says Brezhnev suffered 'clinical death' in '76

MOSCOW (AP) — A well-known Soviet historian says Leonid I. Brezhnev suffered "clinical death" in 1976 and was so weakened for the last six years of his rule that it was difficult for him to perform simple duties or understand what was going on around him.

Roy Medvedev, in an article published in this week's edition of the Moscow News, painted a picture of a leader in such bad health that his aides took over most of his functions.

"Brezhnev had the first serious problems with his health in 1969-1970," Medvedev wrote. "At the beginning of 1976, he had a clinical death. Doctors managed to revive him, but for the next three months he couldn't work, as his speech and abilities to think were impaired."

The Brezhnev era has been under increasing attack lately.

The Moscow News article appeared at the same time Brezhnev's son-in-law, Yuri Churbanov, and eight co-defendants went on trial faced with several charges involving corruption and bribery.

Medvedev, a frequent commentator on Soviet history, also said Brezhnev possessed no outstanding characteristics and was pushed into the country's top leadership job.

Medvedev is the author of "Let History Judge," a celebrated indictment of Josef Stalin's rule. He was expelled from the Communist Party after a letter he wrote appeared in an emigre journal. With his brother Zhores, who lives in London, he also has written a piercing criticism of Stalin's successor, Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Brazilian landowners accused of killing, torturing peasants

LONDON (AP) — More than 1,000 people have died since 1980 in land disputes in northern Brazil, where landowners hire gunmen to abuse or kill peasants, Indians, church workers and trade unionists, Amnesty International said today.

The London-based human rights group chastised Brazilian authorities for not enforcing laws to stem the violence and said it has evidence public servants were themselves involved in some incidents.

Land reform is a deeply divisive issue in Brazil, where 4 percent of the population of 141 million own almost half the arable land.

Amnesty said in the report that although it takes no position on land issues, it was "alarmed at systematic and widespread failure to enforce the rule of law which has led to serious human rights violations in Brazil."

The report accuses authorities of allowing abuses to go virtually unpunished and speaks of "overwhelming evidence that the intimidation and violence of landowners and land speculators is not only sanctioned, but frequently assisted by state authorities."

In an example of official indifference, the report said, a police chief at Goianesiua police station in Para state allegedly told one woman whose husband and son were shot dead in October 1987 that he could not register the crime because he had no pen and paper.

In addition to the deaths of more than 1,000 people in land disputes since 1980, hundreds more were tortured or ill-treated and countless others were forced off their land, the group said.

It said it sent its report to Brazilian authorities in April and discussed its concerns with senior federal government officials in the capital city of Brasilia in June.

The officials acknowledged state action had been inadequate "but did not accept that this called for direct federal intervention," Amnesty said.

The group said evidence suggested most of the killings were carried out by gunmen hired by landowners to terrorize and evict those considered a threat to their interests. Most victims were peasants, native Indians, priests, nuns, church workers, lawyers and trade unionists, it said.

The report quotes the Brazilian Bar Association as saying killings can allegedly be contracted through a "death syndicate" with offices in Imperatriz in Maranhao state. It says police are reported to have been recruited by such syndicates.

"Local police treat these killings so lightly that they often do not bother to register the crimes."

"Even when crimes are recorded, police have failed to collect evidence and ignored routine procedures such as visiting the scene of the crime and interviewing suspects."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mud slide kills at least 76 people

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — A chunk of mountain nearly two miles wide collapsed and caused a mud slide that swept away five remote villages and killed at least 76 people, officials and news reports said today.

Relief operations were hampered by heavy rain and the isolation of the site, Morobe Province. It is about 185 miles north of the capital, Port Moresby. Communications with the area are virtually non-existent.

John Giheno, the minister for state, said the slide occurred Tuesday morning and swept through Mitsing, Malafan, Zumara and Tari villages in the mountainous Kaiapit district.

The Australian Associated Press reported a fifth village, Marafau, was destroyed. It quoted one villager as saying the mudslide turned Marafau into a mass graveyard, which "fell away like a sliced piece of meat."

Case made of murderer's skin sold

KNOWLE, England (AP) — A visiting-card case made from the skin of executed 19th century mass murderer William Burke was bought at auction for $1,785 by a man whose business takes tourists to the scenes of notorious crimes.

"The price was much more than Burke and William Hare, his accomplice, received for all the bodies of their victims, which they sold to anatomists," said Robin Mitchell, who bought the relic in a sale at Knowle in central England.

Burke and Hare, who began as grave-robbers, went on to murder at least 15 people in Edinburgh in 1827 and 1828, a time when medical professors could not get enough bodies for demonstrations to their students.

Burke was hanged in 1829 on the evidence of Hare, who fled the city and disappeared.

Burke's body was flayed after dissection by Edinburgh's medical authorities and part of his skin was used by one of those surgeons to make the ornate case with gold tooling which passed to his descendant — who sold it Wednesday.

Yeats' son disputes grave claim

LONDON (AP) — The son of William Butler Yeats says he has the documentation to disprove a biographer's claim that the poet's bones are in a pauper's grave in France, not in Yeats' grave in Ireland.

English biographer Diana Souhami says Yeats was buried in France in a mass paupers' grave and that when the bones were dug up for transfer to Ireland in 1948, there was no way of telling whose bones they were.

He called her claims "the greatest nonsense" and said, "It is absolutely certain that my father is buried in County Sligo. I have the documentation to prove it," the newspaper said.

Ms. Souhami based her claim Tuesday on a mix-up she said she found in the papers of Yeats' friend, the painter Hannah Gluck. She is working on a biography of the painter, who she said tried for years to convince Yeats' friends of the mistake.

She cited correspondence between Yeats' friends and the keeper of the cemetery in Roquebrun, southern France, saying it was impossible to establish that the remains were the poet's.

The younger Yeats was quoted as saying when his father died in 1939, the body was not put in a pauper's grave but placed in a temporary grave, and its transfer to Ireland was delayed by World War II.

Vietnamese diplomat in hot water

LONDON (AP) — The Foreign Office told Vietnam's ambassador that a Vietnamese diplomat who allegedly waved a gun at protesters outside his embassy must give up his immunity, surrender the weapon and answer police questions.

In a meeting Wednesday, Junior Minister Timothy Eggar told Ambassador Tran Van Hung that unless the diplomat met these and other requests, there would be "the gravest consequences," a Foreign Office statement said.

"The weapon is there, we want it surrendered and we want a waiver of immunity so police can question them," said a Foreign Office spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The Foreign Office statement cited a police report saying a member of the Vietnamese Embassy staff, identified as third secretary Khang Than Nhan, carried a firearm Sunday afternoon.

The ambassador was shown two photographs of Khang at a demonstration Sunday, the statement said, apparently referring to pictures published Wednesday by the Daily Express newspaper.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX INCREASE

The (Greenwood I.S.D.) will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in (1988) by (4.75%) percent. Your individual taxes may increase or decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in the taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on (9-15-88) at (7:30 P.M.). In Greenwood I.S.D. Board Room

FOR the proposal: Ted Benton, James Brooks, Vicky Moody, Don Morgan, Paul Sims, John Underwood, Johnny Womack

AGAINST the proposal:

ABSENT:

The statement above shows the percentage increase the proposed rate represents over the (1.542) tax rate that the unit published on (9-1-88). The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last Year	This Year
Average home value	$47,740	$43,840
General exemptions available (amount available on the average home, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)	$19,320	$13,770
Average taxable value	$28,420	$30,070
Tax rate	1.43/$100	1.615 (proposed)
Tax	406.41	485.63 (proposed)

Under this proposal taxes on the average home would (increase) by $ (79.22) or (19.495%) percent compared with last year's taxes.

Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would (increase) by $ (.185 cents) per $100 of taxable value or (12.95%) percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

INTRODUCING THE NEW BMW 325 SERIES AUTOMOBILES

GOOD THINGS HAPPEN IN THREES

About 20 years ago, BMW gave the world a new motoring concept. That first sports sedan offered a unique combination of automobile personalities. It had the practical seating and cargo advantages of a sedan, but it also had the performance, handling, and spirit of a sports car. BMW has remained true to this concept. Nowhere is this demonstrated better than in the 3-Series for 1989. You are cordially invited to see and test drive the new BMW — good things happen in threes.
