

Mount St. Helens erupts three times during night

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens thundered into its third big blow during the night, shooting a plume of steam, volcanic ash and pebbles 10 miles high and dusting this city and neighboring Portland, Ore., with the heaviest fallout yet.

No deaths or injuries were reported, but, as Friday the 13th dawned, a million people were warned to stay indoors or wear masks if they ventured out. One tiny logging town, pelted with pumice the size of marbles, was evacuated.

Dustings of ash were reported as far north as Seattle and as far south as Salem, Ore., a 200-mile swath. It spread from the Oregon coast east to Pullman, Wash.

At dawn, observers said the ash plume over the crater — shattered by previous eruptions — had all but disappeared. The harmonic tremor that first was recorded when the mountain erupted was diminishing.

"It is diminishing but it has by no means died down," said Bob Norris of the University of Washington's Geophysics Department.

Mayor Connie McReady declared a limited state of emergency in Portland, which lies just across the Columbia River and 40 miles southwest of the volcano, and imposed a speed limit of 15 mph. Winds from the opposite direction at high altitudes carried a light sprinkling of dust 100 miles north to Seattle.

Commuters in Portland struggled to work through a gray, muddy slime following an all-night fallout of ash mixed with rain. Portland International Airport reopened at 6:15 a.m. after being closed most of the night.

"It looks like an atom bomb," an observer in a U.S. Forest Service plane radioed as the volcano exploded Thursday night for the third time in a month. "It's very, very black ... It's still booming, it's really booming."

Scientists said the eruption could become the worst since May 18, when the volcano blanketed six states with ash and claimed the lives of dozens of people.

In Vancouver, the Clark County sheriff's office halted patrols and was making only emergency runs.

There were numerous reports of minor traffic accidents and vehicles stalling after ash clogged their air filters.

Pebbles of pumice up to an inch in diameter were reported falling in Cougar, a tiny logging town 10 miles south of the mountain. Cowlitz County sheriff's deputies said people were being evacuated from the restricted "red zone," an area within a 20-mile radius of the peak.

Grand jury indicts Clayton

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton, one of the most powerful political figures in the state, stood quietly as a U.S. Magistrate set his June 20 arraignment date on racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and fraud charges.

The veteran lawmaker had said he been expecting Thursday's grand jury indictments since he was caught up in the FBI's undercover Brilab investigation last February.

Houston labor official L. G. Moore, a Houston labor union official, and Austin attorneys Randall D. Wood and Donald W. Ray also were named in the six-count indictment.

Rusty Kelly, administrative aide to Clayton, was named as co-conspirator, but not as a defendant.

The indictments came almost five months after the grand jury began hearing witnesses and listening to tape recordings of conversations involving Clayton, Moore, Wood, Ray and FBI informant Joseph Hauser.

The indictment charges that Moore, aided by Wood and Ray, delivered $5,000 to Clayton during a meeting on the $70-million-a-year state employees' insurance plan.

Hauser, while working for the FBI, said he posed as a representative of a national insurance company.

The indictment also charged Clayton with accepting a promise of an additional $600,000 if the state employees' insurance contract was awarded to the insurance company Hauser said he represented.

Clayton, 51, has commented frequently on the pending indictments, but immediately was ordered not to discuss the charges by U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor Jr.

"You are standing next to a man who wanted to be heard by the media," Roy Minton, Clayton's chief attorney, told reporters following his client's appearance before the judge.

Clayton, who said he had planned to give a prepared statement until being told of the gag order, left the federal courthouse without answering any questions.

The three-term Speaker of the House became wealthy by upgrading production at the family farm and by investing in banks. Elected to the House in 1962, he succeeded Price Daniel as speaker in 1974 and was elected to an unprecedented third consecutive term in 1979.

Shortly after that election, he said he would seek a fourth term as speaker, then retire from the House.

A Baptist deacon, Clayton's tenure in the House has been marked by strong conservatism bred in his native West Texas.

The legislator has said he will ask for a speedy trial and will not seek a fourth term if convicted.

Trustees nix Social Security

By DON WOODS

Social Security will not be deducted from Big Spring Independent School District employees paychecks starting next January.

School Board trustees made the determination at their Thursday night meeting.

Two out of three employee referendums showed teachers in favor of getting out of the Social Security system.

Trustees voted unanimously in favor of removing district employees from Social Security. Trustee Charles Beil apologized to employees who wanted to remain in Social Security.

In the most recent referendum employees voted 268 to 217 to remove district employees from the system.

On another item asking trustee decisions on four bids, trustees awarded three contracts.

On the fourth bid, regarding construction of 500 more seats in the grandstand of Blankenship Field, trustees are awaiting further information.

Appropriations for building the stands are included in a $100,000 gift given anonymously for Blankenship's all weather track.

However, estimated cost of additional stands is $8,845 more than expected by trustees.

If bids taken for a storage and rest-room facility June 10 are lower than estimated, the additional money could be used to off-set the over-run on the stadium seating.

School Assistant Superintendent for Business Don Crockett said trustees would "not be laughed at" for building 500 more seats in the stadium because of the popularity in the past of certain track meets.

He anticipated better attendance because of the all-weather track. He said the district would have "a real good AAAA track facility."

Contracts were awarded to Gandy Dairy for milk products, Rainbo for bread and Barber Glass and Mirror for window renovation at College Heights.

Gandy bid 12.75 cents per half pint of low fat milk. Borden's bid 13 cents and Foremost bid 19.5 cents. Gandy's was low bidder on all dairy items.

The school district is required by law to sell low fat milk. Whole milk can also be sold as an option to students.

Rainbo bid 52 per loaf of regular sliced bread. Mrs. Baird's bid a slightly higher .59 per loaf with a five percent discount.

Barber Glass and Mirror bid $32,578.32 for the window renovation. Quality Glass bid $33,910.01, Mid-West Glass and Mirror bid $35,684.32 and Angelo Building Supplies bid $46,000.

Barber Glass will cover 60 percent of the window openings with a half inch thick aggregate rock panel. The panel is composed of rock and sand that will match the color of the building.

The rock panel will be covered in the inside by insulation and dry wall material.

The upper half of windows not covered with the rock paneling will be covered with metal and insulation.

Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test results were presented to trustees by Janice Rosson, secondary coordinator, and Helen Gladden, elementary coordinator. Legislative stipulations require that results be made public through a trustee meeting.

Texas Education Agency has stated there is no standard level of performance with which to compare Big Spring students to.

Grades tested were fifth and ninth. In the fifth grade students fared poorly in geometric terms and figures with only 28 percent mastering the skills.

In interpreting place value, students showed 34 percent mastery. Mrs. Gladden said the score was "incorrect" adding that students may not have understood the terminology used in the test.

Fifth grade students scored 74 percent mastery in word problems and 84 percent mastery in units of measure.

Average score in math was 61.2 percent.

In reading, only 24 percent of the students mastered tests in distinguishing fact and non-fact. Mrs. Gladden said teachers will emphasize the skill in all areas.

Scores of 84 percent and 88 percent were reported in areas of recall of facts and details and using context (See Big Spring, page 2-A, Col. 3)

For Historical Commission dedication

English Earl to visit Big Spring in October

By TOMMY HART

The 11th Earl of Aylesford, who inherited the English peerage title once brought to Howard County by Joseph Heenage Finch, has tentatively accepted an invitation to visit Big Spring the third week in October to take part in the dedication of a Texas Historical Commission marker honoring Finch.

Members of the Howard County Historical Commission, headed by Polly Mays, have been in correspondence with the present earl and are calling on friends to provide air passage to and from Big Spring for the titled Englishman and his wife.

Finch, the seventh Earl of Aylesford, spent the last two years of his life in Big Spring and died here. A close friend and a traveling companion for the then Prince of Wales (later King Edward VII), Finch was attracted to this area by the opportunity to hunt buffalo. The 7th Earl purchased considerable property, including the old Cosmopolitan Hotel, a ranch, and a saloon, during his stay here.

The historical marker will be anchored on the block where Swartz's Ready-To-Wear Shop is now located, at Third and Runnels Streets.

The 11th Earl is operating on a rather tight schedule during that part of October but hopefully can spend three or four days here. He has visited in the United States, though never in this area. His wife has never crossed the Atlantic, however.

The reigning Queen of England, Elizabeth, is planning a visit to the Aylesford estate, Packington Hall, in Coventry, England, sometime the latter part of October or early in November.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Worthy took time to visit the present Earl while on a visit to England about ten years ago and helped the Howard County Historical Commission members make their initial contacts with Aylesford.

Helen Early and Mrs. R.G.B. (Mary Joy) Cowper have done research for the information that will be included on the marker. The marker hopefully will be delivered here no later than Oct. 1. The proposed date for the market ceremony is Saturday, Oct. 18.

Handel is said to have composed part of his celebrated Messiah on the organ which is located in a chapel on the grounds of Packington Hall.

Claire Williams, director of research for the Texas Historical Commission, said that the THC has already approved the application for such a marker.

The present earl is recognized in England by another title, that of Lord-Lieutenant of the County of the West Midlands.

The Seventh Earl of Aylesford was a handsome man, standing 6-4 and looked every inch the nobleman that he was. He graduated with honors from Cambridge, then and now one of the most prestigious universities in the world. He married Edith Williams, a beauty whose father was a member of Parliament.

Finch was a heavy spender, sometimes of money he did not immediately have, and was heavily in debt during his later years.

Houston bank buys revenue bonds totaling $4,500,000

First City National Bank of Houston at 9:30 a.m., today purchased $4,500,000 in Howard County Development Corp., revenue bonds.

This money will be used by Western Container Corp., to purchase equipment and to make leasehold improvements on the 90,000 square foot hangar at the Airport Industrial Park here.

Western Container Corp., will manufacture plastic disposal two-litre Coca-Cola bottles for a group of 20 different Coca-Cola bottles.

A lease between Western Container Corp., and the City of Big Spring was executed by Mayor Clyde Angel of Big Spring, concurrently with this morning's bond issue. Western Container will pay the City of Big Spring $88,800 annually for a period of five years. In addition, there are 19 five-year options available to Western Container.

The lease is so written that it will escalate with the inflation rate.

Western Container President John Dunnagan will hold a press conference in Big Spring next Tuesday to discuss the new plant and its economic impact on the Big Spring community. It is anticipated that the new plant will offer immediate employment to approximately 50 people.

Mayor Clyde Angel, City Attorney Elliott Mitchell and City Secretary Tom Ferguson were in Houston for the signing of the lease on behalf of the city. The committee has been in negotiation with the company about 11 months.

Brown said that Big Spring is one of the smallest communities to successfully apply for the revenue bonds, which were authorized by Texas Industrial Commission only this year.

Howard County citizens will not have total liability for the bonds. Western Container will pay off the bonds, which were offered at an interest rate of 9.75 percent and are tax free. First City National will hold the bonds as an investment.

Clarification is needed regarding the no bill of Johnny Hilario in Thursday's "Indictment" story on page one. Hilario, who was not billed on a burglary charge, has a cousin with the same name who was not involved in the matter.

Digest

Plane lands on street

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — One vehicle was damaged but no one was injured when a small airplane landed in one of Bloomington's busiest and most dangerous intersections, officials said.

Witnesses said the plane touched down Thursday behind a cement truck, skipped over it, clipped the rear of a pickup and traveled several hundred yards before coming to rest.

According to authorities, the plane was carrying five people and was en route to Bloomington from Detroit when it lost oil pressure outside the southern Indiana city, home of Indiana University.

Parents endanger life

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A couple was booked on charges of endangering the welfare of a child after they allegedly cut an intravenous feeding tube and took their son from a hospital, officials said.

Police intercepted the couple's car Thursday and returned the 10-month-old boy, who has meningitis, to the hospital.

Authorities said Willie and Cheryl Johnson apparently feared that treatment for their son would violate their religious beliefs. A family friend said they were members of the Holy Church of God in Christ. Missouri law permits a hospital to treat a seriously ill child without parental consent, according to city officials.

New energy campaign

NEW YORK (AP) — A public service advertising group has a slogan for its new driver-energy awareness campaign — "Keep it up, America."

The Advertising Council, in unveiling the new slogan Thursday, said a survey indicated the average citizen thinks he is doing a lot to save energy, and doesn't want to be "preached to any more."

Les Daly of the U.S. Department of Energy said the department has set a goal of reducing gasoline consumption this year by 16.8 million gallons a day — a saving of $6 billion to consumers.

Nuke plant to reopen

VERNON, Vt. (AP) — Utility officials say they hope to have the Vermont Yankee nuclear plant back on line Saturday following a shutdown to repair a leak of highly radioactive water.

A faulty valve in a main water feed had been leaking water into the plant's containment area for about two weeks. However, said spokesman Steve Stoll, officials considered it insignificant enough to wait for a new check. The plant was shut down until after the check Wednesday.

He said Thursday all the water was contained and "it has presented no hazards at all."

Salvation Army receives

donations totaling $7,000

The local Salvation Army post is finding it has a multitude of friends.

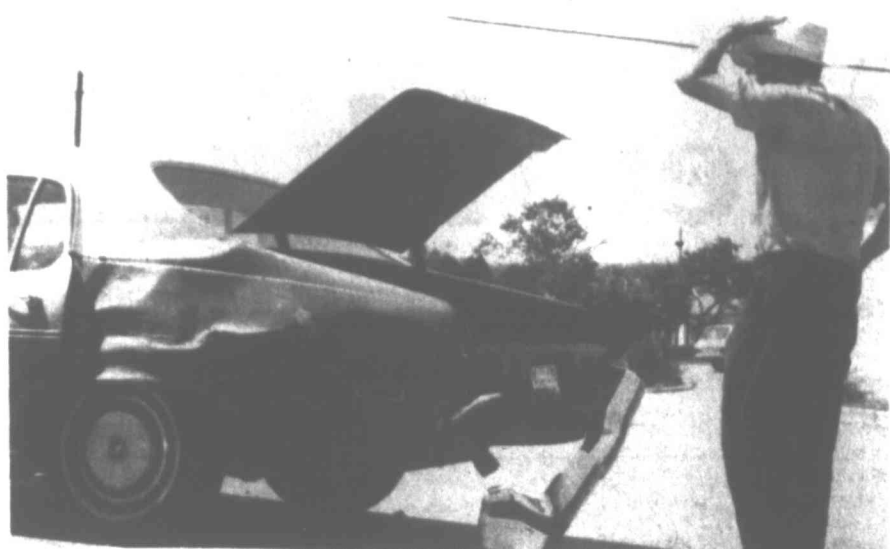

Lt. Bill Thrasher, SA commander here, revealed last week that the local post must come up with $30,000 if it fulfills all its obligations for the remainder of 1980.

To date, $7,000 has been donated toward that amount, including $1,120 acknowledged Tuesday.

The biggest gift was for $300. A local utility firm presented the post with another $150 check. Four others, among the 15 recorded, were for $100 each. Lt. Thrasher said he was especially encouraged by the appeal which went directly to area farmers and ranchers. Where only one gift had been received through last week, nine persons and farm-related firms forwarded checks totaling $655.

Those who would like to help in the campaign should make their checks out directly to the Salvation Army and mail or have it sent to Lt. Bill Thrasher.

Vandals also damaged the pay telephone at the Shade Western Lounge, sometime Thursday. Damage was estimated at $85.33.

Trustees okay payment increase

A $1,711.05 a month increase in payment to the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal Board was authorized by the Big Spring Independent School District trustees Thursday.

"Currently they (the tax appraisal office) have gone through a reorganization," said Assistant Superintendent for Business Don Crockett. The reorganization consisted of the addition of another mapper and an inker.

Also, the past Tax Appraisal Board's accounts were kept by one of the political subdivisions in the county. Recently the city kept the books and the Tax Appraisal Office, which is governed by the Tax Appraisal Board, "lived off the cash flow the city had at the time," explained Crockett.

The increased payments were requested to give the tax appraisal board and the tax appraisal office, how run independent of the city, extra cash for contingencies and two additional salaries. The tax appraisal board has requested the increase for the next three months. The total increase comes to $5,133.15.

Several trustees made the comment that the school board is powerless to deny a requested increase. "There was some reluctance when we discussed this contract and we discussed this very thing," said School Superintendent Lynn Hise.

Two Tax Appraisal Board members are elected by the school board, reminded Board President Carol Hunter, to look out for school board interests.

"Has anyone talked to our representatives about it?" asked Trustee James Matthews. Crockett replied that he had asked Tax Board Chairman Roy Watkins about the increase.

"If it is determined that they are asking for an excessive amount of money," Crockett said, the school board could cut back to its mandatory 33.55 percent allotted contribution.

Matthews suggested at one point that trustees tell Tax Appraisal Board members "we'll stay right where we are" and not pay the increase.

Another large increase can be expected if the Tax Appraisal Board hires outside appraisers to reappraise county property values.

If hired the Tax Appraisal Board budget will include monies for the outside appraiser, tax appraisal office operation, and Pritchard and Abbot mineral property appraisal.

The total budget has been estimated at over $593,000. However, an estimated $350,000 for outside appraisers may be spread out over two years since that is the usual length of time needed for appraisals, explained Crockett.

"Can't you imagine the appraisal firms are in great demand as well as qualified appraisers?" asked Crockett.

The question as using outside appraisers arose when former Chief Appraiser Earl Dean resigned last month.

The payment increase issue arose at Big Spring City Council meeting Tuesday night. City fathers decided to table the request. Pending explanation of the increase.

The Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal Board was mandated into existence by the past state legislature to perform property appraisals for all nine Howard County taxing entities.

FEEDING THE ANIMALS — Three women put out food for stray dogs, as they do in Baltimore alleys at night. The women hope to get close enough to the alley animals to grab them and take them to a farm in Pennsylvania run by Animal Rescue, a group that collects wild animals, tames them and puts them up for adoption.

Beware alley animals

Cat snatching the waifs

LUTHERVILLE, Md. (AP) — A passing cloud hides the moon, deepening the gloom of the dirty Baltimore alley. A shadowy figure emerges from a car, then disappears down the fearful corridor. Suddenly, a plaintive cry: "Here kitty, kitty, kitty."

Alice Arnold and Grace Froelich are on another of their cat-feeding missions. The women prowled under the cover of darkness through about 40 alleys in downtown Baltimore, feeding the alley animals, hoping to get close enough to snatch them up and take them to their New Freedom, Pa., farm.

"We only do a pinch of the city," said Ms. Arnold. "A few of the alleys we have cleaned up. We seldom see strays in them anymore," Ms. Froelich added.

Ms. Arnold, Ms. Froelich and Ann Zipp are the principal workers for Animal Rescue, a group that collects strays, tames them and puts them up for adoption. Many of the strays are among the 150 cats and 25 dogs living on the Pennsylvania farm.

Their adventures begin after inner-city dwellers abandon the streets. The women don't advertise their missions and few people are taken into their confidence. The alleys are code-named for cats they have rescued from them, such as Heidi's alley or Big Boy's alley.

"I don't want anyone to know what alleys I feed because of cruelty (to the animals)," Ms. Arnold said.

Another reason for the secrecy is because people accuse them of feeding the rats.

"There is one big rat that comes out when we yell, 'kitty, kitty,'" said Mrs. Zipp, who houses some of the cats and dogs at her home here. "The first time he ran out, I nearly went up a telephone pole. This animal knows what 'kitty, kitty' means. I've seen rats and cats eating together."

Barring bad weather or breakdowns, the women make the hour-long drive to Baltimore on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays to feed. Each trip uses up 25 pounds of cat food and restaurant scraps for hungry dogs. They depend on donations and lots of coupons to purchase the food.

None of the women has ever been harmed on their nighttime jaunts, although they admit the missions have produced some frightful moments.

Occasionally, a police escort is needed. But Ms. Arnold, who has been feeding Baltimore's four-legged waifs for five years, thinks there's another reason they've been left alone.

"They think I'm crazy," she said.

Weather modification key goals explained

The HIPLEX weather modification program is not so much an attempt to help it rain, but to understand the factors that contribute to clouds that will supply rain.

Dr. James Scoggins, scientific advisor of the HIPLEX (High Plains Experiment) and soon to assume charge of the Texas A&M University meteorology department, gave the Downtown Lions a briefing Wednesday on the program.

Some 40 individuals are included in the Texas portion which is based at Big Spring-Snyder. Two other points are included — Goodland-Colby, Kan. and Miles City, Mont., and the overall outlay for this is around a million dollars a year.

"But if you get just one inch more of rain here a year at the right time, it can mean millions of dollars for farmers, ranchers and the economy," Dr. Scoggins explained. Should some practical means eventually evolve for stimulating precipitation, it would have national and worldwide impact.

Dr. Scoggins pointed out that on Tuesday there was some 200 million tons of moisture in the air up to an altitude of 15,000 feet over the target area from Brownfield, to Post, to Sterling City to Midland. If a storm formed, it likely would take out no more than one to five percent of the total moisture aloft.

Some cloud seeding is done on the project, he said, but it is "calibrated" and not done indiscriminately. The theory is that silver iodide crystals stimulate formation of ice crystals, which release heat in the freezing process, and this heat causes the mass to lift and grow, and the droplets to grow to a mass that will fall out. Dr. Scoggins gave a glimpse of some of the fantastic instrumentation used in the project, including space-age (solar-powered weather stations) technology.

There will be no meeting of the club next Wednesday, but the following day at 7 p.m. (June 17) there will be a ladies night and installation of officers. Wayne Bonner reminded members and the public that there is a trailer at Highland Mall for collection of newsprint.

FRESH WATER FROM AN OLD WELL

HUMILITY

A tired farmer, oppressed by the noonday heat, sat under a walnut tree for some rest, and as he sat there he looked at his pumpkin vines and said to himself, "God is really very foolish and inexperienced. He puts big heavy pumpkins on a frail vine that has so little strength it has to lie on the ground. And then he puts small walnuts on a big tree with branches that can hold a man. Any man could do better than that!"

Just then a breeze dislodged a walnut from the tree under which the farmer sat, and the walnut fell on the critic's head. The old man rubbed his head ruefully and said, "It's a good thing there wasn't a pumpkin up there instead of a walnut."

HEARING CLINIC SHOULD HELP MANY TEXAS RESIDENTS

Simple tests available for hard of hearing

Because Big Spring is going to become the site of a college for the deaf, many of us have become acutely aware that millions of Americans suffer from uncorrected hearing handicaps. Some will never hear because they have problems who can't medically be corrected. There is hope for others but, regrettably, many do not know where to turn for help.

IT SHOULD come as good news that the Speech and Hearing Institute at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston will shortly provide hearing tests for individuals who cannot or will not go to a clinic.

The Institute's new Mobile Audiology Unit is due to become operative this summer, according to Dr. T. Walter Carlin, director. The van will be equipped with four hearing testing booths and will carry sophisticated audiometers (which are machines used to measure hearing).

It will also allow certified audiologists to conduct complete hearing assessments very rapidly, according to Dr. Carlin. He estimates that 40-50 people could be tested during each hour of operation.

Organizations or clubs which want to conduct a 'hearing drive' as a community project will be able to sponsor the van for a set daily fee, according to Dr. Carlin. The group will decide where to do the testing, handle all associated publicity and be on hand the day of the drive to assist with registration for the tests. Carlin suggests that groups might decide to offer free testing to residents of nursing homes, to students or to the general public at a shopping mall.

A CERTIFIED AUDIOLOGIST, a secretary, a driver and a social worker will be on board the van during operation. After testing, the audiologist will make appropriate referrals to physicians or clinics for further testing and treatment.

Groups or companies wanting additional information about the mobile unit should call 792-4500 (AC 713).

A significant number of people are too quick to admit they have hearing problems. For those who concede they are so handicapped and are willing to do something about it, this might be just the thing for them.

Recession politics

Joseph Kraft

Lack of enthusiasm for the candidates gives events the same crucial role in the general election they played in the primaries. One of those events — the biggest probably — is already upon us. But which way will the recession cut? How much will rising unemployment hurt Jimmy Carter?

NORMALLY RECESSION works for the Democrats. They are known as the activist party, ready to pep up the economy at the loss of a job. By contrast, the Republican reputation is for principled opposition to government stimulus of the economy. The last three times the Republicans lost the White House — in 1932, 1960 and 1976 — the Democrats profited by highlighting the issue of unemployment.

Economic conditions, furthermore, have a differential impact on voter turnout. Inflation, by breeding a sense of despair, fosters a low turnout. Unemployment, because it is supposed to be curable, yields higher turnouts. If only because there are so many fewer Republicans in the electorate, high turnout helps the Democrats.

This year, however, several conditions bear heavily against the norm. The sharp rise in unemployment from 6.2 percent in March through 7.8 percent in May with prospects of rising to 8.5 percent at election time is set entirely within the Carter administration. This recession is unambiguously a Carter recession, and it is hard to believe a little of the blame won't rub off adversely at the polls.

The more so because of the Kennedy campaign. Sen. Kennedy pitched his bid for the presidency on proposals for drastic action to meet the twin dangers of recession and inflation. He alone has had the courage to call for the kind of restraint on wages and prices that would make it possible to gun the economy without simultaneously setting in motion anew round of inflation.

To be sure, the nomination is not going to be won for Kennedy for the virtue of his economic proposals. But the deepening recession confirms the senator in his views, and makes him stand even more firmly by his policies. As unemployment rises, he becomes less and less likely to strike a bargain with Jimmy Carter. Apart from unseemly division, moreover, their jostling will shadow the best remedy available to the president for mastering recession politics.

Theoretically the surefire Democratic medicine is a stimulative package sponsored by the president and whipped through the Congress by huge Democratic majorities a month or so before the election. But relations between the Democratic president and the Democratic Congress have rarely been worse. That is the plain meaning of the overwhelming votes in the House and Senate to override the president's veto of the congressional decision to block the proposed oil import fee.

Teenager-doctor communications bad

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a teenager. It all began when I had a cast removed from my right foot. I had two large red lumps on my calf. They gradually spread. When I brought this to my doctor's attention he told me it was "idiopathic erythema nodosum." He said that very rarely can a cause be found. He said there was really nothing he could do. He then told me "not to worry." I went to another doctor and told him what the first one told me. He, too, told me to go home and "not to worry." I worry — a lot. I'm a nervous wreck. Have you ever seen this condition? Please tell me about it — Anon.

Yes, I have seen erythema nodosum, and probably so has every other doctor. It appears as crops of tender, painful, red nodules, mostly on the lower legs. They last one to three weeks and eventually disappear without scars.

The concern is that they are sometimes seen in association with many diseases, such as fungus infections and inflammatory conditions of the intestines. They may also occur with use of some drugs (sulfa or birth control pills). Since your doctor has examined you to make sure you don't have any of that in your background, he called your case "idiopathic." That means there are no illnesses causing it. It doesn't mean it is a mysterious, rare and "incurable" ailment. A large number of cases occur in otherwise healthy adults.

Although bothersome, erythema nodosum is no more than a painful nuisance when there are none of the associated problems found. Hot or cold compresses — whichever gives the greatest relief — can be tried. A few doctors have advised using potassium iodide. But usually rest and patience will see you through this problem. It will not develop into cancer, which I can almost bet is one of your concerns.

So far as I can tell, your worst problem until now has been poor communication between you and your doctors. I cannot relate the symptoms to your old foot cast.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My doctor has been treating me for Hashimoto's disease. He says that antibodies are attacking my blood and my thyroid gland. Explain, please — G.A.L.

Hashimoto's disease is chronic inflammation of the thyroid gland. Just as your doctor says, the cause seems to be that the body begins making antibodies against its own thyroid tissue. Normally, antibodies are made only when the body senses it is being invaded by objects that are not of its own making.

This is the state of affairs. Your body, mistakenly in this case, thinks the gland is a foreign object. Don't ask why. Nobody is sure why, but antibodies are made against it. The destroyed thyroid tissue is eventually replaced by scar tissue if the disease is severe.

The important result is that the gland's thyroid production falls off in time. The person becomes "hypothyroid," and the gland enlarges to form a goiter. The symptoms you mention (deletion from your letter) can be attributed to this process. Your swollen neck, the goiter and the lethargy all result from the low thyroid hormone levels.

As complicated as the process is, treatment is relatively simple: replacement with thyroid hormone which can be taken by mouth.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I'm not interested in religion. I don't see what it has to do with all the problems we face today, like energy and international tensions. — R.C.

DEAR R.C.: I do not agree with your position, and I hope you will reconsider and think through your rejection of God very carefully. In fact, there are several reasons why the very problems you mention should make you turn to God, not away from Him.

In the first place, have you ever asked yourself why there are such enormous problems today? What is the basic problem? The Bible supplies an answer. It tells us that the basic problem is with man himself. Man is self-centered, and by nature becomes greedy, power-hungry and uncaring for his neighbor. The Bible says, "What causes fights and quarrels among you? Don't they come from your desires that battle within you?"

You want something but don't get it. You kill and covet, but you cannot have what you want. You quarrel and fight." (James 4: 1-2). Even secular historians and sociologists admit that our problems could be solved if we could change the nature of man.

But who can do that? Only God! He created us, but we have chosen to leave Him out of our lives and go our own way. Instead of following His perfect plan, we have tried to form our own systems without Him. And we have paid the price. But Christ came to bring forgiveness, and when men and women turn to Him in faith and repentance He also brings a new way of living into our lives. He can help us love, and He can take away the greed and covetousness which cause so many problems. You are obviously a person who is sensitive to the problems our world faces. My prayer is that you would turn to Christ and let Him transform you, and use you to fulfill His will in the world.

Stuck in Muncie

Around the rim

James Werrell

My wife and I and another couple are going to win a trip around the world.

At least we're pretty sure we are. The only thing standing in our way is this little crossword puzzle. The company sponsoring the contest requires that we solve the puzzle before they will throw our names into the hopper with the other contestants. And that could be an elite few.

I DON'T MEAN to imply that the puzzle is too hard for us to complete. It's just that Albert Einstein, Aristophanes, William Shakespeare, Sigmund Freud and Beethoven, putting all their collective intellect together, would get stumped about half way through it.

If working the whole puzzle will get you around the world, we have made it about as far as Muncie, Indiana.

The humiliating thing is that I had considered myself a pretty good crossword puzzle worker. As a pup, I cut my teeth on puzzles in "Boy's Life" and "Highlights," moving swiftly on to "TV Guide" and the Sunday newspaper supplement, in my teen years.

Finally I felt confident enough to tackle the big one, the King-Kong gubstuffer of them all, the Sunday puzzle in the New York Times!

It was a Sunday routine and a group effort in college. Friends would grab a beer and a pencil and gather together to sweat brain cells for a couple of hours.

Angry volcano?

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, an earnest fellow with an air about him of legitimate purpose, is sitting atop a Justice Department that is rumbling like Mount St. Helens in its pre-eruption stage.

I have charged that Justice, far from blind, has been winking at powerful politicians who run afoul of the law. I have cited case after case of selective prosecutions and aborted investigations. Now the Senate Judiciary Committee is investigating more than 20 politically sensitive cases, which appear to have been mishandled.

Even the celebrated ABSCAM investigation has come under fire. This is the FBI's elaborate "sting" operation, which netted eight members of Congress and several other public officials in a phony Arab attempt to buy influence with cash on the barrelhead.

A MONTH AGO, I suggested that the Justice Department seemed more eager to pursue President Carter's opponents than his supporters. I reported that two of the ABSCAM targets, Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., and Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., planned to support Sen. Ted Kennedy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

But in the case of Newark's Mayor Kenneth Gibson, undercover agents met with him in Atlantic City last November. They sounded him out about using his influence to help a phony Arab sheik. He was secretly videotaped handing an FBI operative a card and inviting him to City Hall.

The next month, Gibson endorsed Jimmy Carter for re-election and became one of the big guns in Carter's New Jersey campaign. The compromising tape, meanwhile, was sent to Justice Department headquarters, which never gave the necessary authorization for the agents to proceed with the Gibson investigation.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., is another who was offered a baited hook by the ABSCAM operators. Then last January, he came out for President Carter. The Justice Department seemed to lose interest in pursuing Florio, although the congressman says he simply refused to deal with the "Arabs."

Justice officials ordered the ABSCAM team not to pursue promising leads against at least seven members of Congress. This angered the people at the lower levels who leaked the ABSCAM story to the press, according to sources close to the investigation.

AN INDIGNANT Civiletti ordered

It was the only day of the week that we would welcome the sight of the kid who always raised his hand to answer questions in Economics 202.

BUT, LIKE AN aging athlete, the mental muscles labelled "for crossword puzzles" have grown slack. Maybe it is due to too many years of picking on easy prey: "42 Across — Heeere's... (host of the 'Tonight Show') or '17 Down — Parted the Red Sea and led his children out of Egypt.'"

But even in my prime, I'm not sure I could have dealt with the zingers featured in this "around the world" puzzle. I mean, who, other than the guy's wife, would remember the name of a "famous Austrian contralto from the Fourth Century."

Who, other than the authors of the puzzle, can make head or tail of the clue "Shebangs" (six letters with an "E" somewhere near the end).

It really makes me wonder whether we crossword-workers aren't being taken for a ride. Haven't you noticed that if the puzzle needs a three-letter word with "C" and "X" in it to be complete, the clue is always something like "Dish eaten by Laplanders."

Who is going to dispute that that weird word on 35-Across isn't really the name of a forest in Ecuador? Nobody! They've got us over a barrel.

All I can say is that if they ever want to know "another word for beach umbrella" beginning with "B," I'm ready for them.

an investigation into the press leaks. Now Justice Department officials are trying to pin the blame on the only non-government member of the FBI undercover team, even though they have privately concluded that their own prosecutors were responsible for at least two of the three initial leaks.

The intended scapegoat is Mel Weinberg, the 55-year-old con man who masterminded the ABSCAM caper. Weinberg is furious at this attempt to keep Justice's skirts clean at his expense, sources told my associates Clark Mollenhoff and Gary Cohn.

Weinberg happens to be the government's single most important witness in the upcoming ABSCAM trials. He not only planned the whole "sting" operation; he was present when cash payoffs were made to the politicians in a plush Georgetown town house and other locations.

By attempting to pin the leaks on Weinberg, the Justice Department brass may be sabotaging their own case.

Footnote: A Justice Department spokesman refused to discuss specifics of the investigation.

TABULATING TERRORISTS: The State Department's most recent rundown on terrorist activity in the Middle East names Libya, Iraq, Syria and South Yemen as the most flagrant supporters of international terrorism.

The document has been closely held by the inhabitants of both Foggy Bottom and Capitol Hill. It pinpoints oil-rich Libya as the most effective protector of terrorist groups and individuals, which are identified as primarily affiliated with various extremist Palestinian elements.

"Although the Libyan government claims that it is opposed to terrorists," the State Department summary notes, "it has qualified this by saying that 'freedom fighters' are not terrorists."

The roster of international terrorist strikes supported in one way or another by Libyan strongman Muammar Qaddafi, according to the State Department, includes the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre of Israeli athletes; the hijacking of a Lufthansa plane the same year; the blowing up of a Japanese airliner in 1973; the shootout at the Athens airport in July 1973; a similar attack on the Israeli airline in Rome that September and a Czechoslovakian train hijacking the same month; a British airliner hijacking over Dubai in November 1974; and the kidnapping of OPEC oil ministers in December 1975.

New gas rationing bill put before Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's latest gasoline rationing plan, which would dilute the effects of an emergency oil shortage with a flood of coupons, is forcing Congress to take yet another journey across familiar but slippery ground.

The lawmakers will decide whether to embrace or reject Carter's proposal under rules that give the plan — sent to Capitol Hill Thursday — a much better chance for approval than versions that died there in past years.

Congress has been demanding a gasoline rationing plan for five years, but earlier efforts by Carter and President Ford died in a din of congressional squabbling over which states would benefit most.

If the new proposal is approved — more precisely if Congress fails to reject it — a 20 percent shortfall in U.S. oil supplies would set in motion a vast new bureaucracy in which thousands of workers would distribute billions of coupons to the owners of 153 million vehicles at a federal cost of $2 billion or more a year.

Theoretically, the set-up would spread the shortage fairly among all Americans. It would give extra weight to farmers and others in agriculture, to states whose drivers use their cars a lot in times of fuel plenty, to mass transit and to anyone else who could convince the government he or she deserved special treatment.

Anyone who didn't use all his coupons could sell them to anyone else for whatever the market would bear.

Most senators and representatives, preoccupied with budget and draft registration votes Thursday, gave no quick indication how they would vote on the new plan.

But Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, said chances of defeating it under the new rules would be "slim at best," even if farm-state senators opposed it. And they won't, he implied, since it contains a provision they wanted — taking special farm fuel allocations out of the overall national pot rather than out of each state's share.

HIS OWN MAN — Roberto Goizueta, the 48-year-old native of Cuba who was recently elected president of Coca-Cola, says he has, "always taken a great deal of pride in being my own man."

Zane Donald new president of Big Spring Band Boosters

Zane Donald is the new president of the Big Spring Band Boosters, who held their monthly meeting in the high school band hall Tuesday.

Other officers who will serve during the coming year include Ned Crandall, vice-president; Gordon Myrick, second vice-president; Betty Shankles, secretary; and Martha Beene, treasurer.

Board members are Merle Ringener, Margaret Ray and Cruz Salazar.

The Band Boosters discussed plans for the Gene Lydell Carnival, which they will be sponsoring. The Carnival with many of Lydell's wild rides will arrive in Big Spring on Sunday, June 22, and will operate here from 6 p.m. Monday, June 23, until June 28. The Band Boosters will also have a food booth, coke booths, cake walk booth and will be in charge of tickets booths.

Exact location for the carnival has not been determined, but this will be announced at a later date.

Donald is urging all band parents to participate in anyway possible to make the carnival a success. Contact with the parents will be made by telephone. All parents and band students are needed Sunday, June 22, to assist in setting up the carnival booths and rides.

Plane crashes in Nebraska; 12 of 15 killed

VALLEY, Neb. (AP) — Battered by a violent thunderstorm, an Air Wisconsin plane slammed into a muddy soybean field, killing 12 of the 15 people aboard, authorities said.

One survivor of the late Thursday crash was in "very, very critical" condition early today at St. Joseph Hospital in Omaha, said spokesman Bob Culver.

"It's unbelievable anybody lived long enough to get to the hospital," said Capt. J.P. Wintle of the Douglas County Sheriff's Department.

Flight 965, a twin-engine turboprop plane en route from Minneapolis-St. Paul to Lincoln and Grand Island, hurtled into a ditch and came to rest upside down, with wreckage scattered over two fields. The wings, nose and tail sections were severed from the fuselage.

Eleven people died at the scene, and a twelfth died shortly after reaching Immanuel Hospital in Omaha. Three of the victims were employees of Air Wisconsin.

Ricky Watkins on Dean's list

CANYON — More than 800 West Texas State University students have been listed on the President's List and Dean's List honor rolls for the spring semester.

The 162 freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors and graduate students on the President's List ended the semester with grade point averages of at least 3.85. A 4.0 is an "A."

The Dean's List includes 680 students whose grade point averages ranged from 3.25 to 3.84.

To be eligible for listing on the honor roll, students must be enrolled in at least 12 semester hours.

Among students on the Dean's List is Ricky P. Watkins, senior, a business major, son of Jack Watkins of 1200 Pennsylvania, Big Spring.

Balanced budget adopted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four weeks behind schedule, Congress has adopted a $613.6 billion 1981 balanced budget. But many policymakers believe the deepening recession is already pushing the tentative spending plan back into the red.

Besides projecting the first balanced federal budget in 12 years, the approved spending plan allocates $153.7 billion for defense, $3.2 billion more than President Carter requested. That figure contains the biggest peacetime military increase ever, a jump of $18 billion over the current year.

Partly to pay for that hike, the budget recommends cuts in an array of domestic programs, including public service jobs, food stamps, Saturday mail, mass transit, grants to local police departments, state revenue sharing and urban aid.

Within hours of each other Thursday, the House and Senate approved the budget, ending a long guns-vs.-butter dispute that has blocked action on emergency spending for a wide variety of government programs.

The House, relying almost entirely on Democratic votes, passed the budget 205-195. The Senate, in a bipartisan show of support, then gave it final approval, 61-26. Carter's signature was not required.

The House, which rejected an almost identical budget two weeks ago, reversed itself after Democratic leaders warned that failure to pass a spending plan would be seen as an inability to govern.

"We are running out of time," declared Rep. Robert N. Giaino, D-Conn., House Budget Committee chairman.

Carter and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who opposed the first budget for giving too much to defense and too little to social programs, supported the slightly revised compromise.

The target budget includes unprecedented instructions to congressional committees to report out within three weeks legislation to save $6.4 billion and raise $4.2 billion in new revenues.

Brownies, dads experience camp activities together

The June 6-7 "Brownie-Dad Day Special Overnight" at Camp Boothe Oaks was a unique camp-out for a hundred Brownie Girl Scouts and almost that many dads. Some dads accompanied two daughters while a few were proxy fathers for a second Brownie.

All Brownies attending sold seven or more cases of cookies during the 1980 Cookie Sale, earning the privilege of camping with their fathers at the resident camp of the West Texas Girl Scout Council. The girls slept in canvas platform tents while their dads slept nearby under the starry sky.

All groups participated in a campfire Friday night and spent Saturday hiking, canoeing, playing volleyball, archery, playing games, tying knots, making kerchiefs, sliding down Tarzan's Bluff and visiting Tajar Country Store.

Helping the girls experience a taste of resident camp was Linda Walker, camp staff director; Bud Chase, camp ranger; Kay Willbanks, Michelle Trull, Roselle McAvoy, Martha Bashford, Kim Bennett, Rebecca Burton, Pam Caudill, Deidra Farris, JoAnna Finke, Teresa Franco, Elise Wheat, Dawn Chase, Mary Alice Ramirez, Penny Ramirez, Louise Ward, and Janie Carter.

Volunteers assisting with the events were Pauline Wimmer and Teresa Scarber, Snyder, Lynn Ivey and Jill Willbanks, Big Spring, Amy Bledsoe and Branda Crawford, Abilene, Ed Deaton, Roby and Peggy Sturrock, executive director of the West Texas Girl Scout Council.

The West Texas Girl Scout Council is a participating agency of the United Way.

Flowers symbolize office qualities

The 1980-81 officers of the Business and Professional Women's Club were installed at a dinner meeting at K-Bob's Restaurant, June 10, at 7 p.m.

Marie Affleck was the installing officer. She used a Flower Installation Service, with various colored flowers symbolizing qualities necessary for each officer to have in administering the duties of their respective office and defined the duties of each officer.

The symbols were loyalty, orange; tolerance, purple; understanding, pink; purpose, yellow; courage, red and dedication, white. Officers were asked to pledge these attributes to the membership in administering the club's business. The membership was asked to respond to the officers in like manner.

Officers installed were Louise Nuckolls, president; Wilma Clark, first vice president; Edwina Welch, second vice-president; Marie Affleck, recording secretary; Edith Gay, corresponding secretary and Delphia Gordon, treasurer.

The July 8 meeting will be hosted by the new officers at a place to be announced.

Early detection key to recovery

The Sew and Chatter Club met for the regular meeting June 11 in the Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room, with Mrs. Bill McIlvain as hostess.

The program was presented by Mrs. Sherrie Bordske on breast cancer. Leaflets were distributed on the three step procedure for self-examination, and Mrs. Bordske urged all women to examine themselves at least once a month and have a clinical check-up once a year.

She said that discovering breast cancer in the early stages is the key to complete recovery.

Mrs. McIlvain presided at the business meeting.

Plans were made for the July 9 meeting to be held at the Arts and Craft World in College Park at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Sherry Hodnett will demonstrate how to make silk flowers. The group will then meet at Furr's Cafeteria for a luncheon. Members will meet first at the home of Mrs. Marvin Sewell at 9:30 a.m.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Ruby Rowe, June 25, at 3 p.m.

Fire department is topic of discussion

The Lomax Country Girls Extension Homemakers Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Clyde Ditto. Seven members and five visitors were present.

The program was presented by Mrs. Richard Parker of Knott. She spoke about collecting old glassware and the possibility of it being a valuable antique.

Mrs. Donna Adkins presided over the business meeting. She read a letter from the Big Spring State Hospital thanking the club for the cakes recently donated.

Members discussed plans for a volunteer fire department.

Receiving the "it" gift was Mrs. Ann Shafer.

Convention June 17-21

The Elks Ladies Auxiliary met for their regular monthly meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Lodge. Becky Scott, Vice-President presided over the meeting.

Guys won't date too-tall Chris

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a girl who has problems with guys and it's because I am six feet tall. Many boys like me but they feel intimidated by my height. I get so frustrated with them that I could scream.

I treat all boys short and tall the same so why can't they treat me the same as girls shorter than they are? — Chris, Alameda, Calif.

Chris: I believe it's the old macho bit where the boy must be taller than his date and also the boy is afraid his peers will laugh and joke about his date being taller than he is. This is something that society teaches us males (wrongly) and it is difficult to overcome — difficult but not impossible.

Why won't she believe me? — Robin, Huntsville, Ala.

Robin: I'm sure mother was a bit frustrated. They usually are when trying to get dressed in a hurry in the morning. Why don't you get the necklace fixed and give it to her with a card that says, "I love you, Mother."

I know it will make her feel a lot better and will probably allow you a pass back into her jewelry box.

Dr. Wallace: My parents were killed about a year ago. I'm 15 and was an only child and now live with my mother's sister, her husband and their two sons ages 9 and 11.

These people have been very kind to me and I do love them, but I just can't adjust to my new family. The memory of my mom and dad haunts me so much that I have even contemplated suicide. I have trouble eating and sleeping and my school grades have been very mediocre this last school year. I just don't seem to care for anything anymore. I'm terribly confused and don't know what to do. Can you help me? — Carrie, Springfield, Ohio

Carrie: You do care! That is why you wrote to me. Nothing can or will replace your parents so don't look for a replacement, and get back to living your life. Your tragedy will never leave you, so you must learn to live with it.

Remember, the love shared between your parents and you lasts forever. Whenever you are "down" recall that love. It will sustain, nourish and give you continued growth.

Share the love you have gained with your new family. Love has a way of making everything beautiful.

Dear Abby

"Open-Minded" Husband Letting Brains Fall Out

DEAR ABBY: I suppose you've had dozens of letters like this, but here goes. My wife of 18 years came to me about a month ago and said, "I've been in love with another man for a year and I want to be with him as much as I can, so I'm leaving you."

It turns out the guy is well-heeled, married and has a family. He isn't sure he wants to leave his family, but he can manage to get away from home about three nights a week, so my wife moved into their "love nest," which he provided.

I am now baching it with my teen-age son. My wife comes home every Friday and goes back on Sunday. She says she's not sure what she wants — it's still too soon to know. She claims she still cares for me and isn't sure she wants a divorce, but that she is happiest when she is with this other guy. I have tried to be open-minded about it, but it's tearing me up inside and my ego is down to zero. Any advice?

OPEN-MINDED

DEAR OPEN: Don't be so "open-minded" that your brains fall out. Give "Seesaw, Marjorie Daw" a deadline to decide which man she wants. Tell her you don't want a part-time wife. And whether or not there will be a divorce shall not be decided by her alone, because you may want to be free to fall in love with someone else. And be tough!

DEAR ABBY: I can't understand why my husband, who never thanks me for anything, always says "thank you" after a love session.

Somehow, I can't feel good about it. Am I wrong? We've been happily married almost 50 years.

PITTSBURGH

DEAR PITTSBURGH: Never question his thank-you, just accept and appreciate it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J. IN MODESTO: A very perceptive man once said: "Beauty is a gift. Charm must be cultivated. A beautiful woman is one I notice. A charming woman is one who notices me."

CONFIDENTIAL to those who have sent for Abby's booklets: Please, please be patient. I am literally deluged with orders and am getting them out as quickly as possible.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Gwenn was in kindergarten, and for fun, we'd play "How big?" "How big is the beachball, Gwenn?" Mary would ask. "Two inches!" she'd answer. "How big is Daddy?" "Eighteen inches!" said the thirty-six-inch giant. "How big is that building?" "A mile! No, two miles!"

So it went until Gwenn learned about the standards of length, the inch, foot and mile. Now, at eight, a beachball is "twenty inches." Daddy has grown to "six feet," and that building over there is "about two-hundred feet." Now, Gwenn has a better idea of the "bigness" of our physical world.

But what of spiritual dimensions? Gwenn must learn to gauge problems, worries, hopes and aspirations — lest her troubles seem too big, her dreams too small. She will turn to God's living Word, the Bible — taught in her church. A little girl learned. Will you?

JORDAN ARRIVES NEW YORK — Civil rights leader Vernon Jordan Jr., is carried off a U.S. Air Force plane by paramedics as he arrives at New York's LaGuardia Airport, Thursday from Fort Wayne, Indiana. Jordan was taken by ambulance to New York Hospital in Manhattan to continue his recovery.

House fair-housing law may stand for times sake

WASHINGTON (AP) — House-passed fair-housing legislation, which President Carter calls perhaps the most important civil rights legislation in a decade, is heading to a badly divided Senate beset with timetable troubles caused by the approaching political conventions.

The embryonic Senate version of the House-passed bill won tentative approval from a Senate Judiciary subcommittee Thursday, but that action is contingent upon the panel's staff working out compromises in several areas.

That panel, the subcommittee on the Constitution, has met 10 times on the fair housing enforcement bill but has adjourned eight times for lack of a quorum.

The Republican National Convention in July and the Democratic convention the next month add to the time pressures created by the desire of congressmen to adjourn early so they can begin their reelection campaigns.

So, sources say, the Senate may simply abandon its version and take up the House-passed bill, which, they say, is also more to the liking of the White House and civil rights group than the bill now emerging from the Senate subcommittee.

The fair housing bill, the only major civil rights legislation before Congress this year, is designed to strengthen enforcement of the landmark 1968 fair housing law.

Although the House passage Thursday came on a vote of 310-95, the victory was far from easy. It took a last-minute vote switch to keep the key enforcement provision. That part of the legislation prevailed, 205-204.

House supporters then had to fight off opponents' effort to send the bill back to committee for redrafting with instructions to remove that provision. The supporters, who prevailed on that section, 209-196, contend the legislation is needed because the 1968 act had no effective means of enforcement.

The House-passed legislation would allow the Department of Housing and Urban Development to file complaints of housing discrimination with an administrative law judge in the Justice Department. The law judge would have authority to settle the cases and order appropriate remedies, including fines up to $10,000.

The Justice Department also would have greater latitude in prosecuting cases of alleged discrimination. The bill allows the department to pursue cases of "general interest" rather than only those showing a pattern or practice of discrimination.

Chapmans, McLaughlins attend Rotary's 75th

CHICAGO, Ill. — Cliff Chapman and Ralph McLaughlin of Big Spring were two of approximately 20,000 Rotarians and their guests from some 100 countries who attended Rotary's 75th anniversary convention, June 1-5 in Chicago, where Rotary was founded in 1905.

Chapman and McLaughlin, members of the Rotary Club of Big Spring, were accompanied by their wives.

The convention theme was "Let Service Light the Way" — representing Rotary's concern for the welfare of others. Special presentations and workshops encouraged Rotarians to be more active in helping others in need within their communities and in promoting international understanding.

The story of Rotary's worldwide development, highlighting Rotary service in the Americas, Europe, Africa, the Pacific and Asia, was featured at the special celebratory convention. New activities — including The Rotary Foundation's Grants for the Health, Hunger and Humanity (3-H) Program which is currently funding a nationwide polio immunization project for Philippine children — contrasted with historical reflections.

Speakers at the convention included Rotary International President James L. Bomar, Jr., of Shelbyville, Tennessee, U.S.A.; Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the oral polio vaccine; and John W. Mellor, director of The International Food Policy Research Institute, Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

The U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) presented a special program on the terrestrial impact of space technology. Advances in monitoring and conserving earth's resources, and developments in medicine and industry, were among the examples depicted.

First of the world's service clubs, Rotary International has more than 18,600 Rotary clubs with more than 860,000 members in 154 lands worldwide.

Bible lumped in adult book group in N. Carolina library

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Children whose library cards are restricted because their parents don't want them bringing home "adult" books will no longer be permitted to check out the Bible from the Columbus County Library.

The Bible is included on the library's shelf of "adult" books — not because it is considered too racy, but because it is felt to be too difficult for children to read easily, librarian Amanda Bible said Saturday.

"We didn't change the classification of the Bible," Miss Bible said. "The trustees simply voted to begin a restriction policy which those who were against adult books had demanded."

The policy was adopted after one resident of this rural county of 50,000 people in the southeastern part of the state complained in April because her 12-year-old daughter had checked out the novel "Wife" by Judy Blume.

Miss Blume is a well-known children's writer, but "Wife," her first book written for adults, contains explicit sexual passages.

A number of other county residents, including ministers, had spoken in favor of restricting access to, or banning, some adult books. County commissioners originally voted to take "Wife" off the shelves, but decided to seek an opinion on the matter from the state attorney general's office.

The attorney general suggested that access to the adult books could be limited, and the library trustees then voted to allow parents to choose whether to place a special mark on the library cards of children 17 and younger, forbidding them from checking out books from the adult section. The policy does not prohibit children from reading such books in the library.

Miss Bible said the attorney general's opinion did not address the question of how to classify the books, so the library board decided to continue using its existing classification system. Under that system, books are placed in the adult's or children's section on the basis of reading difficulty, she said.

Elaine Cumbee, the mother who complained, reacted in disbelief Friday when informed by a reporter that the new policy meant the Bible would be restricted. "I think you have been misled," she said. "It would be blasphemy to keep the Bible from children."

Miss Bible said the children with restricted cards can still read the Bible inside the library building and they can check out collections of Bible stories filed on unrestricted shelves.

Children's Film Festival planned

The festival is open to all children between the ages of three and junior high. It will continue every Tuesday through July 8. Films

Civilization depends on belief system

LONDON (AP) — Theologian-scientist Ralph Burhoe of Chicago, accepting the 1980 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion, said a widespread decline of religious belief must be reversed if civilization is to be preserved.

He said this is the conviction of a growing number of scientists.

They're convinced, he said, that a "revitalization of adequate religion is required if our free, prosperous, scientific, technological Western civilization is not shortly to collapse in a hellish period of war, coercive repression, disease, starvation and death brought upon ourselves by the use of scientific technologies without proper wisdom and moral motivation."

Burhoe received the $200,000 prize for his studies concluding that religion has been central to the evolutionary emergence of civilized humanity from lower forms.

range from cartoons to Bible-based films will be shown. The films begin at 1:30 p.m. and continue until 4 p.m.

There will be refreshments served and each child will be given a little memento for attending the session.

Some of the films scheduled to be shown are "Hilary," a story about a boy who seeks vengeance for his lost cockatoo by stealing his Sunday school teacher's pet; "The Return of Luke Jones," tells the story of a young boy who learns that an old man he admires is really a shiftless tramp; "Firestorm," the story of a fireman's son who is responsible for a forest fire; and "A Gift of Tears," relates the story of a grieving little boy and a deaf-mute clown who pantomime the Gospel, an Emmy award winning film.

Some of the other films to be featured will be "Yankee Doodle Cricket," "Beauty and the Beast," "Green Eggs and Ham," and "Captain Noah and his Floating Zoo."

Local Lutherans attend 48th Texas Convention

The 48th Convention of the Texas District of the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod will be held in Houston at the Astro Village Hotel June 20 through 22.

Lay delegate to the convention from St. Paul Lutheran in Rob Haney Suzanne, Rob's wife, will also attend together with Rev. and Mrs. Carroll C. Kohl.

Under the theme, "God Open Doors — Alleluia!" the convention will emphasize the exciting challenges and opportunities of mission work throughout the state. In accord with this emphasis, the synodical representative and keynote speaker will be Dr. Ed Westcott, chairman of Division of Missions and Special Ministries of the LCMS.

Special emphasis will be directed to the "Kick Off Celebration" for the 75th anniversary of the Texas District. This celebration, to be evident throughout the weekend, will be initiated in an impressive manner with Friday evening's 75th Anniversary Celebration and Festival Service in the Grand Ballroom of the Astro-Village Hotel.

The service will feature special music and mass choirs from the Lutheran churches of the greater Houston area.

Plans also call for a special "Lutheran Night at the Dome" on Saturday as the Houston Astros face the Pittsburgh Pirates at the Astrodome.

Sunday morning will feature one of the highlights of every convention, as delegates and visitors gather for worship and the celebration of holy communion.

Faith Rock Fellowship announces service times

The Faith Rock Fellowship wishes to announce initiation of services on Sunday at 3 p.m. and Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

the road.

The evangelists will minister to those who are sick. Faith Rock is affiliated with World Wide Bible Way Fellowship headquartered in Desota, Tex. Dan Hope, president.

Wiley Madewell, pastor, and Jesse E. Manuel, overseer, invite everyone to the services. Madewell may be contacted at 267-5315.

'Voice of Prophecy' voice says he's not a prophet

GLENDAL, Calif. (AP) — The man who has been "The Voice of Prophecy" on radio for 50 years says he's no prophet.

"I don't claim myself to be a prophet," said H.M.S. Richards of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, which finds signs in modern-day events that the Second Coming of Christ is near.

Richards' sermons take the form of history lessons to show that biblical prophecies have come true. "A lot of Bible prophecy is not given so we can predict what will happen, but so we can see what already happened, and get confirmation that the Bible is true," he said. "If it came true historically, then when Jesus gives his wonderful teachings, we ought to believe that, too."

Richards, 85, began his ministry as a tent preacher when he was 17. He came to California during the Depression and has been on the air continuously since 1930, when he gave a 15-minute guest sermon on KNX in Los Angeles.

Richards' program was first called "Tabernacle of the Air." In 1937, he picked up "The Voice of Prophecy" from the introduction to a book on how history has born out certain biblical prophecies.

Richards, whose given names are Harry Marshall Sylvester, got his introduction to radio when future President Warren G. Harding invited him to a demonstration of the new device in 1920.

"He was a senator then and my brother was his driver," said Richards. "I watched him talking to the pilots on the radio and we could hear them talking to each other. I thought it was a miracle."

Before the return of Christ to the world, Richards believes "there has to be preaching of the Gospel to all nations. That's why I think radio is so important. Six days from now, there'll be a million more people in the world than there are right now."

"The Christian church needs to get the Gospel out, not only to reach all the people in the world right now, but fast enough to reach the million being born every six days. That's why the mass media was invented. It wasn't invented to put out pornography or wrestling matches, but to put out God's word."

Richards says he's had to slow down since the early days when he gave his sermons live at 5 a.m. for the East Coast and then came back to do it again for the West Coast at 7 a.m.

Until 1940, when the show went to tape, mispronounced names and sleepy singers' goofs went out unedited to the listeners. Now Richards has a $6 million budget and a staff of researchers to help him.

His son, H.M.S. Richards Jr., gives the daily "Voice of Prophecy" broadcast over 130 North American stations. Father and son share the two Sunday broadcasts played on 700 stations throughout the world.

Another son, Kenneth, is a theologian in "The Voice of Prophecy." Thousand Oaks headquarters office.

Rogers shows roles of sexes

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The president of the Southern Baptist Convention told 4,000 women that "woman is infinitely superior to man — at being a woman — and man is infinitely superior to woman — at being a man."

"Before the Lord Jesus we are all equal, but we are not the same, and anybody with an 'umption of gumption' and a fraction of sense knows that," the Rev. Adrian Rogers told a Mid-Continent Women's Concerns Conference.

Clements wants media to give Clayton fair deal

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements says it would be unfortunate if the news media pre-empted indicted House Speaker Bill Clayton's right to a fair trial on racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and fraud charges. "I'm most sympathetic," Clements said in Amarillo Thursday. "I would remind you that everyone is innocent until proven guilty."

"His trial is yet to come and it would be very unfortunate if the radio, television or news media pre-empted our judicial system."

Clayton was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday along with L.G. Moore, a Houston labor union official, and Austin lawyers Randall B. Wood and Donald W. Ray.

The indictments were the first to come from the FBI's undercover Brilab investigation. Grand jurors five months ago began listening to taped conversations involving Clayton, Moore, Wood, Ray and FBI informant Joseph Hauser.

Clements said he had talked to Clayton Wednesday and knew the indictments were forthcoming.

"I am very sad about it and disappointed. He's a nice human being and has been very helpful to me," said Clements. "We have a fine line of communication that has worked very well."

Grand jurors alleged Clayton accepted $5,000 during a meeting with the other defendants and Hauser in which discussions were held on the $70-million-a-year state employees insurance contract.

The indictments also charged Clayton with accepting a promise of another $500,000 if the contract was awarded to the company Hauser said he represented.

Clayton acknowledged receipt of the $5,000, but said it was a campaign contribution that he put in a safe place until it could be returned.

Whatever the outcome of a trial, the indictments alone may have killed his chances to win an unprecedented fourth term as speaker.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, and Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, are considered the two leading contenders in the speaker's race. Only Bryant currently opposes Clayton.

Clements declined to formally endorse anyone for the speaker's race, but said he opposed Bryant, whom he called "the darling of the liberal element of the Democratic party."

"He doesn't represent what Texas is all about," said Clements, who added that if Lewis wins, that "would suit me fine."

The governor was in Amarillo to attend the Texas State Trap Shooting Tournament, where he took a turn with a shotgun and hit 16 out of 25 clay pigeons. In other matters, Clements said:

He favors rebating to taxpayers as much as possible of an $8 million state surplus expected to be on hand at the end of August. But he declined to specify which of 22 options under consideration would be used to rebate the funds.

The state attorney general should "get on" with a lawsuit against the federal government over the windfall profits tax, which he said would drain billions from the state economy over the next 10 years.

He predicted Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan would carry Texas by 52 percent of the vote in the November general election and said he planned to actively support Reagan's candidacy.

Even if speaker acquitted

Indictment ruins chances

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton's indictment — even if he is acquitted later — ruins his chances for higher office and probably will light new fires of legislative reform.

Many believe Clayton also can forget about an unprecedented fourth term as speaker, even if he is acquitted.

That would leave a 1981 speaker's race in which the two leading contenders are conservative Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, who apparently has Clayton's blessing, and liberal-to-moderate Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas.

Only Bryant now opposes Clayton for the speakership.

One point in Clayton's favor was that he declared well ahead of time that unless a jury acquits him before the 1981 Legislature meets in January, he will quit the speaker's race.

It would be hard for many House members to vote for a speaker who had been indicted — even though acquitted — and then try to explain that to voters, many of whom consider an indictment tantamount to guilt.

That popular assumption is the reason judges take great care to explain to jurors that an indictment is only an accusation and not proof of guilt.

Regardless of the verdict in his trial, Clayton, 51, can be expected to feel heavy pressure from supporters to quit the race and spare them that hard choice.

Merely his implication in the FBI's Brilab (bribery and labor) investigation kills his chances for a statewide elective office such as lieutenant governor, comptroller or even governor.

Clayton's decision to drop out of the speaker's race if his name is not cleared this fall "before it gets too cold" was made with full recall of the tumultuous Sharpstown session in 1971. Speaker Gus Mutscher spent the entire session fending off accusations his influence was bought by banker-promoter Frank Sharp the previous year. Legislation suffered, and wounds from that session were long in healing. Two dozen representatives, mainly loyal Mutscher supporters, were defeated in the next election.

Mutscher later was indicted and convicted and served a probation sentence. He is now county judge in Washington County.

Regardless who becomes speaker in January, there will be new cries for political reform, such as those that followed the Sharpstown scandal.

The 1973 "reform" bills dealt mainly with greater openness in government and with forcing politicians and the organizations that support them to disclose the sources of their money.

This time, however, the reform surge can be expected to attack the speaker's vast array of powers, which some legislators and political analysts regard as the root of the problem.

Similar powers are held by the lieutenant governor, but there is a significant difference. A lieutenant governor is accountable to the voters and must face election every four years. But a speaker is elected by his fellow state representatives and is accountable only to them and to the voters in his district.

Gov. Bill Clements made the point clearly when he said the speaker's race is so important that House candidates should let their voters know before election day whom they support.

The fate of a bill, or categories of bills, often is decided from the moment the speaker appoints House committees and assigns various pieces of legislation to them.

Once a bill is out of committee, the speaker-controlled Calendars Committee decides when — if ever — it reaches the floor. A House member's independence is limited by how badly he wants the speaker's favor in such matters as committee assignments.

A legislator, no matter how talented or dedicated, is limited in influence if assigned to a relatively obscure committee instead of a major one such as Appropriations, Ways and Means, Redistricting or State Affairs.

A speaker retains such control as long as his fellow representatives think he will be back in charge the next session. Meanwhile, a speaker can collect advance commitments of a vote for another term in the job as long as he can put the squeeze on House members' pet legislation.

Because of his influence on legislation, a speaker also holds tremendous sway over state agencies, which depend on the Legislature for their funds, powers and duties.

Hauser's Nov. 8 visit with Clayton, arranged by Houston union leader L.G. Moore, is what led to Clayton's and Moore's indictment Thursday.

Kennedy camp says unity doesn't mean Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of Edward M. Kennedy say President Carter's appeals for party unity are a thinly disguised attempt to force the Massachusetts senator from the race for the Democratic nomination.

"Obviously we will be for party unity when we get the nomination too," said Kennedy aide Steven Schlesinger after the Carter camp voiced repeated appeals for togetherness at the party's platform committee hearings Thursday.

"That's their notion of how to push Kennedy out of the race," said Schlesinger, Kennedy's deputy issues director.

Carter played host to several committee members at the White House Thursday night, saying he is "extremely eager to see rifts healed" but adding that there need be no "fear or consternation" if some disputes are left to the national convention to decide in August.

The hearings, which continue today and Saturday, are the last in a series prior to the drafting of the platform.

Both Carter and Kennedy made presentations through spokesmen to the committee Thursday.

Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's chief domestic adviser, told the 100 members that Kennedy had been one of the president's most loyal supporters in the Congress. "We believe the issues that unite us far outweigh those on which there are differences," he said.

But Schlesinger said that "on the really important issues, there are major differences."

He cited Kennedy's support for wage and price controls and the senator's opposition to the decontrol of oil prices and the renewal of draft registration.

"They are not even close on the key issues," he said.

In their presentations, both candidates favored comprehensive national health insurance, support for the Equal Rights Amendment and aid to Israel.

But they clearly parted company on their approach to the economy, with Carter arguing that his anti-inflation program, stressing spending restraint and voluntary wage and price guidelines, is the best course despite recessionary pressures.

Kennedy, on the other hand, urged adoption of a $12 billion jobs program to combat the recession.

Success story in battle

MISSION, Texas (AP) — Statistics tell the success story of the battle to rid the United States of pesky screwworm flies that prey on livestock.

Last year, there were 90 cases nationwide, confined to Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and California. In 1972, Texas alone recorded 90,990 cases.

The program's record means it will gradually phase out operations in this country and by 1982 it will be confined to Mexico.

"We've been very successful," said Dr. James Novy, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture screwworm laboratory. "The whole objective is to eliminate the screwworm from Mexico to the Guatemala border."

The fly larvae feed off wounds in warm-blooded animals and can weaken or kill livestock if left untreated. Since 1962, the lab here in the lower Rio Grande Valley has grown flies, sterilized them and distributed them from airplanes. Sterile flies mating with wild flies break the insect's life cycle.

The laboratory is located at a former Air Force base, which houses several other USDA programs.

"The original plan was that we would close down here by 1981, but in 1978 we had an outbreak in Arizona, New Mexico and far West Texas which set the program back," Novy said Thursday.

"It's conceivable that we could close by the end of 1981 but it's in the plans to continue to 1982," he said.

Some of the 500 employees will be absorbed by other programs but not all will find government jobs.

In the next two or three months, approximately 100 workers in the plant and distribution section will get pink slips. Only 20 employees will be absorbed into other offices by the end of the year, he said.

Another fly distribution center in Douglas, Ariz., closed in January although aircraft for Mexican flights are maintained there.

The phasing out of American offices means more work will be done in Mexico. The Mexico-United States Commission for Screwworm Eradication is headquartered in Mexico City.

"As the work moves south, we'll open distribution centers deeper in Mexico," Novy said. Programs in Hermosillo and Obregon, both in the northern state of Sonora, are being phased out.

Angelo State University offers windmills course

SAN ANGELO — A short course on windmills will be offered July 14-18 at Angelo State University's Management, Instruction and Research Center.

Sponsored by the Division of Adult and Continuing Education, the week-long session is open to ranchers and farmers who use the windmill as a source of energy.

Enrollment is limited, and interested persons are requested to sign up by June 20. The ACE office is located in the Houston Harte University Center, and the mailing address is ACE, P.O. Box 11022, ASU Station, San Angelo, Texas 76909.

Registration fee is $125 per person and that figure includes lunch, breaks, materials and supplies.

Course instructor is Stan Anderson of Scottsdale, Ariz., a windmill specialist for the Wind Baron Corp. Other windmill manufacturers and distributors have been invited to attend the sessions.

Class participants will erect a tower, install a mill and have ample opportunity to learn how to repair many components of the windmill, according to Don Hale, ACE director.

The course will consist of one-half day classroom and one-half day field work. Also, windmill history, storage and distribution is included in the class outline.

DISQUALIFIED — Seve Ballesteros lines up his last putt in the U.S. Open at Springfield, N.J., Thursday on the 18th green. Ballesteros was disqualified Friday for missing his tee off time because of heavy traffic outside the course.

With record tying rounds of 63

Weiskopf, Nicklaus burn US Open

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf, two Ohio natives, have fought for Buckeye honors since the early 1960s. They're battling again, this time in the U.S. Open.

Nicklaus and Weiskopf each shot a record-tying 7-under par 63 Thursday in the opening round of the 80th Open at Baltusrol, a demanding and long par 70 which can play from 7,013 to 7,076 yard depending on the tee placements.

And, in doing it, Nicklaus, who was four threesomes behind Weiskopf, matched birdies coming to the clubhouse.

"I wasn't conscious of Tom's score until the back nine," said Nicklaus, who explained that he put his whole game together in the round for the first time in a long while.

"Then I saw Tom was 4 under par. When he birdied 13 and we got to 13, Angelo (caddy Angelo Argea) kept saying, 'Answer him.' I never thought much about it but I almost knocked the second shot in the hole."

Each had a bogey early in the round but then fired eight birdies, matching on No. 13, No. 15 and No. 17.

Each had chance for a birdie on the 542-yard, par 5 No. 18 but Weiskopf put his third shot, a pitching wedge, into a sand bunker in front of the green and fortunately came out with a par while Nicklaus missed a 3-foot birdie putt.

"It's kind of unusual to walk off the 18th green in an Open shooting a 63 and being disappointed because you didn't shoot a 62," said Nicklaus. Although Nicklaus and Weiskopf matched the 63 shot by Johnny Miller in 1973 at Oakmont, there were 22 others who shot par 70 or better over Baltusrol's Lower Course.

Many predicted the course would yield few good scores to the field of 156, but it played easier because of rains earlier in the week.

Three strokes behind the leaders at 66 were Mark Hayes, Keith Fergus and Lon Hinkle while at 67 were Ray Floyd, Jay Haas and Calvin Peete.

Floyd, the former PGA and Masters champion who held the early for a couple of hours, put things in perspective when he said: "Any player who feels he has a shot to win the Open feels no pressure during the first or second day. I think the pressure starts in the third and fourth round," he said. "The first couple of rounds are like a 1 1/4-mile horse race. You're jockeying for position. You don't want to get behind but you want to be in there conservative and have a shot Sunday."

Lee Trevino, two-time Open winner whose putter was working in the first round, shot a two-under 68 and joined Mark Lye, Andy North and Isao Aoki of Tokyo who played in the Nicklaus trio.

J.C. Sneed, Mark Reid, Bill Rogers and Curtis Strange were in the group of seven at 69 with relative unknown tour regulars Tommy McGinnis, Patrick McGowan and Jeff Mitchell.

Defending Open champion Hale Irwin, Larry Nelson, who won at Atlanta last week, Peter Jacobsen, Jim Simons and Tim Simpson came in at even par, one many predicted would be a good score by the end of the championship on Sunday.

Tom Watson, the pretournament favorite who has won five times this year, scored a hole-in-one with an 8-iron on the 156-yard par 3 No. 4 but came in with a 71. He joined Bruce Lietzke, Bruce Devlin, John Cook and Terry Dill.

Johnny Miller, Ben Crenshaw, Gene Littler and John Mahaffey had 72s, as did 16 others, including the two low amateurs, Bob Clampett of Carmel, Calif., and Willie Wood of Stillwater, Okla.

Arnold Palmer, who was two under making the turn, David Graham and Hubie

Green were in the pack at 73.

Chi Chi Rodriguez and Lanny Wadkins had 74s, George Burns and Seve Ballesteros, the Masters champion from Spain came home with 75s, while Gary Player and Jerry Pate were well off the pace with 77s.

Weiskopf was ecstatic over his round, which he said was probably the best he had ever shot.

"It's a great feeling," he said. "Other than three missed shots which I hit solidly, it might have been one of the finest rounds of golf that I have ever played. It means that much more when you're playing in an Open championship."

Trevino remains unspoiled by success

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Lee Trevino bounced into the press interview room, clumps of thick raven hair sticking from beneath a white baseball cap — and a spark of fresh excitement swept through the U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"It's hot in here today," he said, immediately breaking the tension. "I told you yesterday I'd have something for you today, and here it is."

What Trevino had was three birdies on the last six holes, including a 40-foot snake on the 16th, for a 68 that put him in the thick of contention going into the climactic week-end.

"I like the heat, I like the pressure," he said. "God willing, if I keep putting this good, I have a chance."

Those words are like bubbling champagne for millions of golf buffs, to whom the loquacious, wisecracking onetime Texas driving range operator and links hustler is a folk hero.

It was here on the hoary

Baltusrol course that the man they call Super Mex first came into prominence, signaling a career that was to include 23 tour victories, two U.S. and two British Opens, the PGA and personal prize earnings in excess of $2 million.

He came up from El Paso with only a few bucks in his jeans, a lot of naivete and gall and no reputation. He stayed at a motor inn just down the pike and nightly walked another mile to eat at a Chinese restaurant because he wasn't allowed in the motel dining room without a jacket. He didn't have one.

Although the tournament became a duel between Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, people quickly got to know the merry Mexican-American, who charmed galleries with his banter and awed purists with his raw shotmaking skill.

He picked up a $6,000 check for fifth and never looked back. He beat out Nicklaus for the Open crown at Rochester, N.Y., in 1968 and repeated the feat in 1971 in a playoff at Merion, Pa.

Success has left the stubby Texan (5-foot-7, 180 pounds) totally unspoiled.

The difference this time, he said, referring to his 1967 venture, is that my caddy is staying at the Union Motor Inn now instead of me. I am staying at the home of a doctor friend."

Trevino explained that he had cured some of his putting ills with a new gadget — a piece of mastic tape that illuminates where the ball is struck.

"I found I was missing the 'sweet spot,'" he explained. "So Wednesday night I went to the garage, took out a hammer and knocked the goose out of my goose-neck blade."

"If this keeps up, maybe lightning will strike again Saturday."

Trevino didn't use the word "lightning" literally. It's something he speaks of in the most reverent tones.

He was honored by golf writers Wednesday with the Ben Hogan Trophy, which goes to a player who overcame great odds.

Ali has court battle today

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A showdown loomed today over a $20 million damage claim against former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, accused of slandering two white men with accusations of racism.

Lawyers in the 5-day-old legal fight were primed for final arguments before the U.S. District Court jury of four women and two men, all white.

Ali, 38, of Chicago, has spent four days slumped in a chair at the defense table, passing the time with elaborate doodles on a paper pad and caressing his new moustache.

He was sued by City Councilman Philip Ciccio and Jake J. DiMaggio, a businessman, who claim Ali's accusations caused them strain and humiliation and subjected them to threats from Ali fans.

Sherman Copelin, a key witness, testified Thursday that he never directly told Ali about his legal troubles — but did complain, while Ali was listening, that he has been hit with a legal "stickup" simply because he was black.

What Copelin referred to as a "stickup" was a lawsuit filed against him and Don Hubbard by Ciccio and DiMaggio, their two white partners in the promotion of the 1978 fight in which Ali took the heavyweight crown from Leon Spinks.

Copelin testified that he told a party group, which included Ali, that the lawsuit "was tantamount to blackmail, that I didn't think it would have been done if we hadn't been black."

Copelin added that he also told the party that "the entire matter was done as a stickup, to embarrass Mr. Hubbard and myself."

As a result, Ali on Sept. 18, 1978 denounced the two white men and accused them of trying to ruin two black promoters.

DiMaggio and Ciccio then sued Ali for $10 million each.

An element of the defense is whether then-champion Ali acted in "reckless disregard" of truth in his outburst, or sincerely and logically thought he was dealing with racial injustice.

Copelin testified Ciccio and DiMaggio did little or nothing to earn their money. He said he raised the $3 million guarantee it took to get the fight contract, and he and Hubbard did all the promotions work.

Mayor Angel proclaims ERA Sportsacular Day

The Bob Griese ERA Sportstacular, with hopes of raising millions of dollars nationally for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, will begin locally at 9:00 a.m. tomorrow morning as Big Spring area athletes compete in a type of track meet that should offer all participants a chance at winning individual prizes.

Youngster aged four-14 are eligible to compete, and there will be a division for each sex in each age group.

There will be 10 events in each division, so a total of 220 first place medals will be awarded. There will also be medals for second and third place winners, as well as other prizes, with probably the biggest award being a bicycle donated by Big Spring Hardware. Other donations from those athletes that raised the most money and achieve success on the field include a bulletin board from Gamco, plenty of ice cream from Baskin Robbins, and the Cinema will offer numerous free passes to their theatre.

The 10-events in the competition includes the 50 and 100-yard dash, the crab race, the sack race, the long jump, the frisbee throw, the soccer kick, the softball throw, sit-ups and reverse running. Athletes are supposed to have sponsors to pledge a penny for each point won during the competition.

50 points will be attained for each event entered, with an additional 25 points for each first place finish, 15 points for second place finishes, and 10 points for each third. Therefore, the maximum amount of points a participant could earn would be 750, which adds up to only $7.50 in tax-free donations to the MDA.

The event, sponsored locally by the ERA-Reeder Realtors, will take place at the Steer Baseball Park across from the YMCA.

Those wishing to enter this afternoon may do so by dropping by Reeder's at 506 East Fourth. A free t-shirt will be given to all participants in the competition.

MAYOR PROCLAIMS SPORTSTACULAR — Big Spring Mayor Clyde Angel proclaims Saturday, June 14 as the "Bob Griese-ERA Sportstacular Day" in Big Spring, as ERA-Reeder sales associates witness the announcement. Angel is displaying a t-shirt which will be presented to every participant in tomorrow morning's affair, which begins at Steer Park at 9:00 a.m. for all young athletes from the age of 4-14. Surrounding Angel from the left are Patti Horton, Janelle Britton, Janell Davis and Jonnie Beasley. Those wishing to enter this afternoon may do so at Reeder's, which is located at 506 East Fourth.

Major League Roundup

Expos farming cultivating parents into first place

Injuries have got the Montreal Expos turned around — in the right direction.

Despite a mounting string of assorted ills, the Expos are currently playing their best baseball of the season, thanks to a solid farm system that keeps turning up fine, young players.

The latest to help the Montreal cause are pitcher Charlie Lea and third baseman Brad Mills, who combined to help the National League East leaders beat the San Diego Padres 9-1 Thursday night for their ninth straight victory.

"All this means is that we've had a good farm system producing for us in the past few years," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams after Lea scattered eight hits over eight innings for his first major league victory and Mills had three singles and three RBIs.

Lea, recalled from the Expos' American Association team in Denver on Wednesday, was a last-minute replacement for David Palmer, who came up with a tender elbow.

"They told me when they called me that I might be pitching for Palmer, so I geared myself up in case I was given the game ball," said Lea.

Mills, called up from the same Denver club last weekend to sub for the injured Larry Parrish, entered the game as a pinch hitter in the fifth inning.

"I'm just trying to do the best I can while I can," said Mills. "I know the ballclub has its own plans and whatever happens will happen."

In other NL games, New York beat Los Angeles 6-5 and Pittsburgh outscored Cincinnati 10-6. In the American League, Detroit whipped Minnesota 8-4; Milwaukee routed Texas 8-1; Baltimore stopped Seattle 4-1 and Boston hammered California 13-2.

The 23-year-old Lea allowed only one extra-base hit in his major league debut, striking out four and walking three. The right-hander lost his shutout in the eighth on Dave Winfield's sacrifice fly.

Mills had a two-run single in the fifth, when the Expos scored four times to put the game out of reach. In addition, Mills singled home a run in the sixth. Jerry White added an inside-the-park homer.

Mets 6, Dodgers 5
Pitchers Dave Goltz and Bob Castillo and shortstop Bill Russell contributed run-scoring throwing errors, helping New York defeat Los Angeles. The Dodgers built a 5-0 lead in the first three innings with Dusty Baker driving in three of the runs with his 14th homer in the third.

But in the fifth, the Mets scored four times with the aid of an errant pick-off throw by Goltz which allowed the first run to come home and a wild throw by Russell which permitted the fourth run to score. In the sixth Castillo's wild throw to third on a bunt by Elliott Maddox allowed the Mets to score two more runs.

Tigers 8, Twins 4
Cham Summers hit a pair of two-run homers and Alan Trammell drove in two runs with a bases-loaded double in the sixth inning to spark Detroit over Minnesota.

"You don't expect that much from a freshman, because it takes experience and consistency. But that's what Stanley has — just like Glance."

"Harvey did a lot here," admits Floyd, one of the hot favorites in the 100-meter dash at the Athletics Congress outdoor track and field championships, which began today at Mount San Antonio College.

"Since everybody compares us, they put me up so high," adds Floyd. "That means I've got to do it (win). I haven't had too much trouble so far."

No, he hasn't. He is 10-0 this season in the 100, including victories in last week's NCAA championships, and the Penn. Florida and Dogwood Relays. He has a best time of 10.07 seconds, at the Quad Conference meet in Austin, Texas, on May 24.

It was the fourth fastest clock ever by a collegian, the sixth fastest by an American, the 13th fastest in the world and it broke three records — the American junior mark, the world junior record and the Auburn mark of 10.11, held by Glance, who was a legend at the school.

When we signed him, we knew he would be a good competitive sprinter, but this has pretty much shocked me," confides Auburn Coach Mel Rosen. "I had hoped he might be an NCAA scorer in his sophomore or junior year."

Auburn's freshman sprint sensation a big surprise

WALNUT, Calif. (AP) — Stanley Floyd, the University of Auburn's precocious freshman, is constantly being compared to Harvey Glance, the greatest sprinter in the school's history.

"Harvey did a lot here," admits Floyd, one of the hot favorites in the 100-meter dash at the Athletics Congress outdoor track and field championships, which began today at Mount San Antonio College.

"Since everybody compares us, they put me up so high," adds Floyd. "That means I've got to do it (win). I haven't had too much trouble so far."

It's a great idea, but it won't work because ...

DALLAS (AP) — So you think you've heard all the excuses? All the reasons why your great idea won't work? Just in case you've missed a few, a Dallas-based insurance company has come up with a tongue-in-cheek list of 60 ready-made ways to say: "Forget it."

They range from a respectful "You're two years ahead of your time" to a scornful "Not that again."

The list is the work of the corporate relations department of the Southland Life Insurance Co., and is one of a series of regular display cards prepared for the 18 elevators in the company's main office. "It's just something to give the employees something to look at in the elevators except the floors," said June Rogan, a Southland communications assistant.

Joe Josephson, vice president for corporate relations, said the material on the cards comes from all over. He said the cards are popular with employees and visitors to the building. "People swipe 'em all the time," he said.

Here are the "Reasons why 'it won't work'":

1. We tried that before.
2. Our place is different.
3. It costs too much.
4. That's beyond our responsibility.
5. That's not my job.
6. We're all too busy to do that.
7. It's too radical a change.
8. We don't have the time.
9. Not enough help.
10. That will make other equipment obsolete.
11. Let's make a market research test of it first.
12. Our office is too small for that.
13. Not practical for operating people.
14. The staff will never buy it.
15. Bring it up in six months.
16. We've never done it before.
17. It's against company policy.
18. Runs up our overhead.
19. We don't have the authority.

20. That's too ivory tower.
21. Let's get back to reality.
22. That's not our problem.
23. Why change it, it's still working o.k.
24. I don't like the idea.
25. You're right, but...
26. You're two years ahead of your time.
27. We're not ready for that.
28. We don't have the money, equipment, room, personnel.
29. It isn't in the budget.
30. Can't teach an old dog new tricks.
31. Good thought, but impractical.
32. Let's hold it in abeyance.
33. Let's give it more thought.
34. Top Management would never go for it.
35. Let's put it in writing.
36. We'll be the laughing stock.
37. Not that again.
38. We'd lose money in the long run.
39. Where'd you dig that one up.
40. We did all right without it.
41. That's what we can expect from the staff.
42. It's never been tried before.
43. Let's shelve it for the time being.
44. Let's form a committee.
45. Has anyone else ever tried it?
46. Customers won't like it.
47. I don't see the connection.
48. It won't work in our company.
49. What you are really saying is...
50. Maybe that will work in your department, but not in mine.
51. The Executive Committee will never go for it.
52. Don't you think we should look into it further before we act?
53. What do they do in our competitor's company?
54. Let's all sleep on it.
55. It can't be done.
56. It's too much trouble to change.
57. It won't pay for itself.
58. I know a fellow who tried it.
59. It's impossible.

Anderson, Reagan 'collusion' to be charged by Demo chief

(Special to The Herald)
WASHINGTON — As part of the Carter campaign's full-court press against Rep. John Anderson's independent candidacy for president, Democratic National Chairman John White next week will claim "clear indication of collusion" between Anderson and the Republicans.

White will issue a statement listing alleged efforts by officials of the campaign for Ronald Reagan, the prospective Republican nominee, and state Republican officials to put Anderson on state ballots. "I agree that a vote for Anderson is a vote for Reagan and have said so for some time," says a statement prepared for White's delivery next week. "But I question whether the best way to help Mr. Reagan is by playing fast and loose with valid state statutes that have by and large served our nation well."

This is merely the latest evidence of intense concern in the Democratic high command over the threat Anderson poses to the president's re-election.

Democratic National Committee lawyers are trying to keep Anderson's name off state ballots, and Carter himself has proclaimed he will participate in no presidential debate that includes Anderson. The next step in the campaign will be claims that Anderson is at heart a conservative Republican undeserving of liberal Democratic votes.

Although there is no evidence of "collusion" between the Anderson and Reagan campaigns, White's view that the Anderson candidacy may help elect a Republican president is shared by Reagan's strategists. White is also correct in claiming that Republican state officials have been far more lenient than Democrats in ruling on Anderson's eligibility.

At issue are the "sore loser" state laws which are supposed to prevent anyone from running in a party primary, as Anderson did in many Republican primaries, and then running in the fall as an independent. Democratic National Committee researchers are compiling instances of Republican state officials violating such statutes.

For example, the Republican secretaries of state in South Dakota and Oregon and the Republican attorney general of Indiana have ruled that Anderson is not affected by "poor loser" statutes.

Mid-July draft registration seems likely for 4 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's draft registration program, winning all-but-final approval from Congress, probably will begin in mid-July. When it ends two weeks later, an estimated 4 million young men will have signed up.

By a vote of 58 to 34, the Senate on Thursday approved spending $13.3 million to renew mandatory registration for the first time since 1975.

The House has passed practically identical legislation, but must act again because of a minor amendment the Senate added. That approval is likely next week.

Then, only a court suit threatened by the American Civil Liberties Union would stand in the way of the stand-by registration program.

The ACLU has said it would argue in court that the program's exclusion of women illegally discriminates against men. Carter had proposed including women, but that was rejected by both the Senate and the House.

As now planned, registration will be carried out over a two-week period at 34,000 post offices across the country. Men born in 1960 will be told to register during the first week; men born in 1961, the next week.

Failure to register is a felony carrying a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Registration opponents predicted that massive numbers of young men would fail to register, either out of ignorance or in defiance.

"I am convinced the president will find it was much easier to convince the Senate to fund draft registration than it will be to get 19- and 20-year-olds to submit to draft registration," said Barry Lynn, head of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft.

Selective Service will send no notices telling young men they must register. Instead, information on when and where to register will go out to more than 7,000 radio stations, 700 television stations and 2,500 daily and weekly newspapers.

"SHARKS ARE FUN" — Wayne State University Biology professor Walter Chavin holds a horn shark which lives in an "artificial ocean," in Chavin's Detroit laboratory. In the last 8 1/2 years Chavin has had as many as 80 sharks at one time, with 18 expected this summer.

Sharks researched The joy of 'Jaws'

DETROIT (AP) — When Walter Chavin came eyeball to eyeball with his first shark 13 years ago, he was as terrified as a beachgoer watching the movie "Jaws."

"I was petrified — I felt like an hors d'oeuvre," Chavin, a Wayne State University biology professor, said of his encounter with a shark while scuba diving off Australia's Great Barrier Reef.

"Out of the corner of my eye I saw a monster. I stopped breathing and backed up into the coral as it swam by me. It looked only as big as a freight train — I thought I was going to die."

Today, Chavin says sharks are "fun."

An 11-foot-long fiberglass mold of a hammerhead shark peers over Chavin's shoulder in his office and a sign on his laboratory door reads: "Be Kind To Animals — Kiss A Shark."

As one of the nation's foremost shark researchers, Chavin spends his vacations chasing the monsters of the deep from the South Pacific to the Red Sea.

"I remember I saw the movie 'Jaws' on a Friday night and then I went diving for sharks on a Saturday afternoon," Chavin recalled with a laugh. "I felt great concern."

Some of Chavin's sharks live in what Wayne State calls the world's only "artificial ocean," a collection of seawater tanks in the basement of an old Buick dealership. Eight sharks live there now.

Before Chavin began keeping sharks at the downtown Detroit college 8 1/2 years ago, he said the experts didn't believe they could be kept so healthy and active in captivity. But as many as 80 sharks at a time have thrived in the unlikely surroundings; 18 are expected this summer.

Marine biologists from around the world have come to the Midwest to view the shark facility, which was built with help from high school students and university maintenance men.

Bloody clash in streets of Tehran Iranian revolution in chaos

By the Associated Press

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution plunged deeper into chaos today after his guardsmen opened fire on tens of thousands of leftists in one of the bloodiest clashes since the shah was ousted 17 months ago. Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said, "The American hostages can go to hell!"

Moslem militants blasted the brawling crowd with tear gas and automatic weapons when it neared the iron gates of the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where at least some of the American hostages are still believed held.

Witnesses said the fighting began when Khomeini supporters, armed with sticks and stones, tried to force their way into a rally of some 100,000 Mujahadeen at Tehran's Amjadiyeh stadium, down the street from the occupied embassy.

Fighting between the two groups quickly spread into the street between the stadium and the embassy. Witnesses said Khomeini's revolutionary guardsmen opened fire in an attempt to disperse the rampaging mobs.

As the crowd swirled near the embassy, Moslem militants within the compound put up sandbag barricades at the gates and others opened fire on the demonstrators from rooftops inside the complex.

Witnesses said most of the injured were hit by gunfire, apparently from the guardsmen and the militants.

Although the militants claim to have dispersed most of their 53 hostages to locations outside Tehran to prevent another U.S. rescue effort, they continue to hold the sprawling embassy compound and U.S. officials believe at least some of the Americans are still inside. The hostages today began their 223rd day in captivity.

The official Pars news agency said "shots fired in the air" during Thursday's fighting left two dead and 10 injured. Leftists claimed about 300 persons were hurt and at least one killed during the three-hour battle between Khomeini loyalists and members of the People's Mujahadeen, or Warriors, Iran's largest leftist opposition group.

Witnesses said the fighting began when Khomeini supporters, armed with sticks and stones, tried to force their way into a rally of some 100,000 Mujahadeen at Tehran's Amjadiyeh stadium, down the street from the occupied embassy.
