Eradication office to be located here

Benefit to local economy expected to exceed $6 million over several years

The last of seven district offices in the 19-county Rolling Plains Central Boll Weevil Eradication Zone has been established in Snyder, it has been confirmed.

Foundation officials had been considering Snyder as as site for several months, but just this week signed a contract to that effect.

The former Howard Gray Motors building will serve as the district office, housing storage and office space for approximately 50 full-time and temporary employees, said Frank Myers, executive director of the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation, Inc.

The office will serve as the staging area for boll weevil eradication operations on approximately 100,000 acres of cotton.

"The outstanding cooperation of the community and the local development corporation makes it possible to save growers money by spending funds on eradication of the boll weevil instead of administrative costs," Myers said.

In May, the Board of County Development voted to support the eradication program by funding monthly leases of $500 for the former Howard Gray Motors building and $250 for the parking lot, both for three years, plus $15,024.90 in renovations. Total cost is $42,024.90.

"I think this will make an immediate impact," board member Mark McCormick said at that time, citing the eradication program directors' promise of hiring local people as employees as well as economic benefits to local businesses.

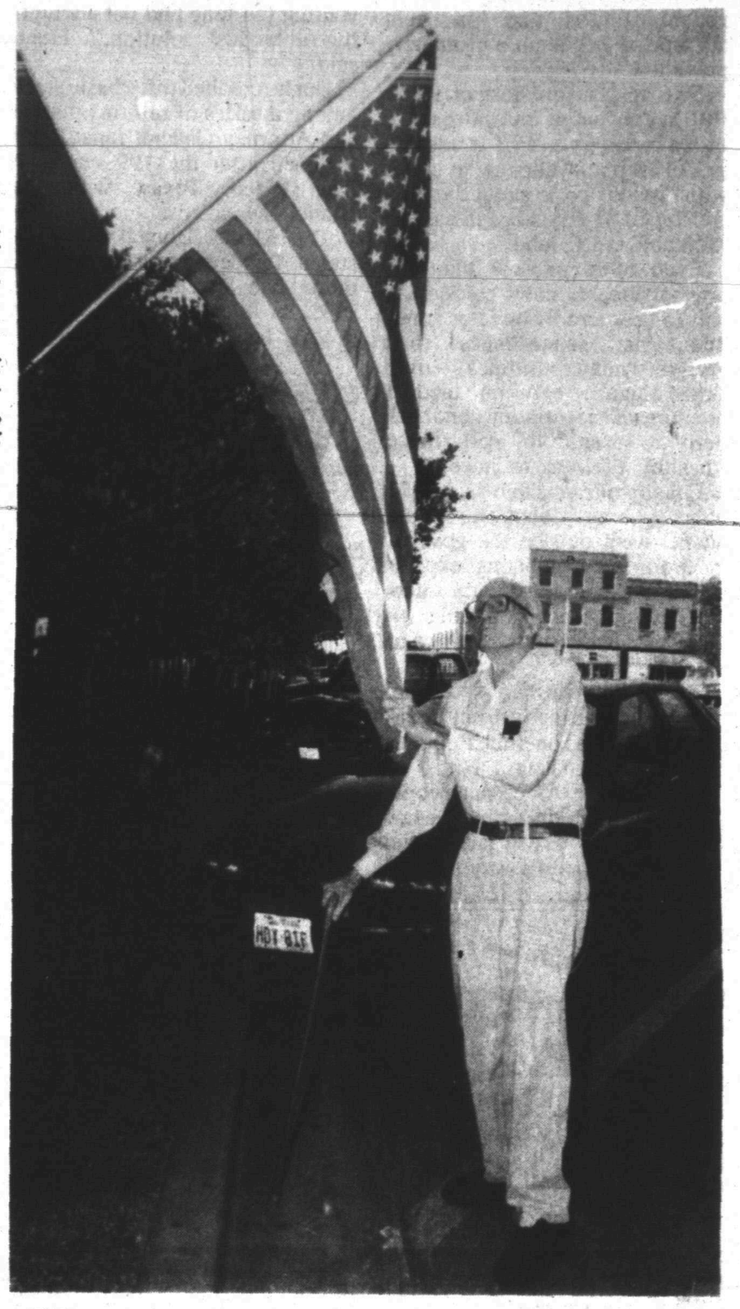

Information provided by the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundations, Inc. estimates that salaries for the first year locally would amount to $255,000, increasing to $616,000 the second year. The office will be maintained three to four years, depending on the need.

The officials estimate that more than $6 million will be spent here over a four-year period.

"Historically, boll weevil eradication offers a 12-to-1 return on an investment," Myers said. "For every dollar spent on eradication, $12 are returned to the local economy.

Ricky Waltzl is the supervisor in this district, which encompasses all or portions of Scurry, Borden, Mitchell and Fisher counties.

Other district offices are located in Stamford, Rotan, Haskell, Colorado City, Munday and Merkel. The zone headquarters is located in Stamford.

Think More Rain!

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: Rain — or lack of it — is the subject of writers all across the state. Russell Skiles, in the Lamesa Press-Reporter, says Lamesa City Manager Paul Feazelle was contacted by a man in Florida stating he represented a Tibetan Buddist monk who had heard of West Texas' plight on CNN.

The man said he had previous success with divine intervention and offered to assist in making something happen to break the drought — with the understanding that his efforts would not also bring flooding or violent weather.

If a Buddist monk can do it, we say turn him loos

It's dry all over the state. It was reported that at Lake Amistad, near Del Rio, fishermen had to carry their small boat across some 150 yards of dry ground to reach the bottom of the Pecos River boat ramp.

Some fishermen are keeping their "dry" humor about the current situation.

Fishermen are no longer having to use their fancy electric gear to find fish. Instead, they can now track schools of fish by the dust they kick up.

Think More Rain!

Leland DeBusk, in Granbury's Hood County News, got a call from a reader who said the newspaper should be out on the "lake" to shoot an unusual picture.

The caller said he saw a 60-pound yellow cat trying to hitch a ride at the East Pearl Street lake bridge. The fish had to borrow a ladder to get on the bridge.

There is also a confirmed report of Rangers patrolling the lake who got their pickup stuck in a sand dune.

Granbury is trying to capitalize on the dry conditions. Reportedly, chamber of commerce officials have been in contact with NASA to promote the dry lake bed as the perfect place to land the space shuttle.

Another good thing, the newspaper is now able to retrieve news racks that have previously been stolen, broken into, and then tossed into the lake.

Search committee tabs ACU grad to take helm as Westerners coach

Anthony Portley, an assistant women's coach at Quincy University who has strong ties to West Texas, is a selection committee's choice to head up the basketball program at Western Texas College.

Formal approval is expected Monday night, when WTC trustees meet in special session.

Athletic Director Milton Ham, who headed up the committee, said Portley will be an asset to Western Texas.

"He's an outstanding young man. I think he's going to do a very good job for us," he said.

Portley graduated from Greenville High School and Abilene Christian University, where he played on the Wildcats' basketball team.

Following graduation, he was an assistant basketball, football and track coach at Big Spring High School. In 1992, he was named head women's basketball coach at Ranger Junior College and took the team to its first regional tournament appearance in 10 years.

Portley coached as an assistant at West Texas A&M University from 1993 until last year, when he joined the staff at Quincy University in Quincy, Ill.

His wife, Vickie, played basketball at Odessa College and Tarleton State University. They have one young son, Deshon.

"I was very impressed with him before," said Ham. "He's quiet, reserved and he runs a well-coached, disciplined program."

Portley was selected from a list of five finalists, interviewed over the past two weeks. He replaces Brenda Nichols, who last month announced that she was resigning to take over another junior college program in Florida.

Ham said a date for Portley to begin his duties has not been selected. The WTC athletic director and men's golf coach said WTC has eight players signed for the 1996-97 season — three returning sophomores and five freshmen.

He said Portley indicated he may have some players in mind as well.

Snyder school board OKs personnel moves

The resignation of 10 teachers was formally approved by trustees of the Snyder Independent School District last night as they conducted their regular monthly board meeting.

Four teachers at the high school had previously submitted letters of resignation, including journalism instructor Diane Arnold, math instructor George Adams and Wallace Combest, industrial technology teacher. Trustees also gave formal approval of the resignation of girl's basketball coach Steve Qualls, who will be coaching next year at Denison.

The resignations of five junior high school instructors were formally approved. They are Darlene Beard, homemaking; Bobbie Combest, English; Connie Huddleston, math; Brenda Logan; science; and Chris Wigington, science.

The resignation of LaFon Daniel, West Elementary sixth grade instructor, was also accepted.

Trustees also gave formal approval of the hiring of four teachers. Those approved were Rexanne Clark, junior high special education and art teacher; Christy Smith, for an English, reading and coaching position at the junior high; Rick Archer, girl's basketball coach and history instructor at high school; and Terry Leatherwood, industrial technology teacher at the high school.

In other action, trustees approved the renewal of the food service contract with Aramark and renewed the workers' compensation plan.

Supt. Gayle Lomax said the contract with Aramark is identical to the existing contract. The district is required only to bid its food service contract every five years and the contract with Aramark is two years old.

Lomax said the administration is satisfied with the performance of the food service company and recommended that the contract be renewed.

Regular elementary student lunches will be 90 cents and remain $1 at the junior high and high school. Regular student breakfasts will be 50 cents on all campuses.

Aramark's food service director Kenny Alexander gave trustees a brief financial report from the recently completed school year.

Alexander said while the total of the meals served dropped from 514,510 to 514,405 — a decrease of 105 meals overall — total cash sales increased from $250,771 to $254,163. Overall, total income was up from $745,302 to $757,806.

The district's workers' compensation plan contract was renewed with Claims Adminstrative Services of Tyler.

McNair said the district is in a pool of some 130 school districts and by doing so, it saves the district some $150,000 in workers' compensation insurance costs.

Board president Charles Anderson presided and trustees in attendance were Luann Burleson, Richard Chambers, Mark McCormick, Geraldine Parker and Janet Stribling. Trustee Glenn Clarady was absemt.

Freemen surrender peacefully

JORDAN, Mont. (AP) — With hugs and prayers, the Freemen traded their pastoral refuge on the windswept Montana plains for cramped jail cells, planning to carry their antigovernment crusade to the courtroom.

The group's 16 remaining members surrendered to the FBI and left their ranch Thursday night, ending the longest armed siege in modern U.S. history and avoiding the bloodshed of Waco and Ruby Ridge. The siege at the remote ranch the group called Justus Township lasted 81 days.

They came out in their own vehicles, meeting the FBI at the compound entrance. Some hugged before being patted down and escorted, unhandcuffed, to transport vans. Others formed a circle holding hands and bowed their heads in prayer.

As two vans and a sedan carrying the Freemen left the 960-acre ranch for Billings and the Yellowstone County Jail, an FBI agent in a following vehicle waved an American flag out the window, an apparent gesture of triumph.

And a few minutes later, a half dozen FBI agents drove to "sentry hill," where Freemen lookouts had peered at them for more than 11 weeks. One of the agents climbed onto the trailer parked there and hauled down a Confederate battle flag the extremists had hoisted earlier in

Scientists believe HIV elimination within sight

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the world's leading AIDS researchers and physicians have begun talking optimistically about the possibility of eliminating HIV from infected people.

Recent tests of existing and new treatments on tens of thousands of infected patients appear to have left them with no detectable signs of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, the researchers say.

"If you had asked me in January, 'Can you eradicate HIV infection?' I would have laughed in your face," Dr. Julio Montaner of the University of British Columbia was quoted as saying today in Newsday.

"But now we've been able to demonstrate that we can effectively suppress viral production. That is leading to a dramatic change in how we think of this disease," he said.

The clinical trials were discussed Thursday in Washington, D.C., at a conference held by the medical journal Antiviral Therapy and the University of Amsterdam.

Scientists cited three factors for their optimism:

—The development of a new class of anti-HIV drugs, three of which were licensed by the government earlier this year.

FBI patience policy led to Freemen arrests

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Louis J. Freeh attributes the safe arrest of the Montana Freemen to reforms in the bureau that "put patience above the risk of bloodshed" after its bloody Waco and Ruby Ridge sieges.

"We tried a fundamentally different approach," Freeh said. "A strategy from day one of patient, honest and persistent attempts at negotiation ultimately prevailed."

The 46-year-old former street FBI agent, judge and prosecutor called reporters to FBI headquarters at 10 p.m. Thursday to speak with obvious pride about the just-concluded 81-day siege in eastern Montana ranch land.

Even more unusual than the hour of Freeh's news conference was to hear an FBI director admit that his subordinates had disagreed numerous times — over "the balance between tactical pressure and negotiating continuation" — and to call those "healthy frictions to have."

Equally rare was to hear an FBI director brag about how the bureau went outside the government for help, enlisting experts and 45 different third-party intermediaries in the negotiations — many of them vocal past critics of the FBI.

Before he finished speaking, praise was pouring in from President Clinton and onetime Republican critics on Capitol Hill.

"I think the American people can take great comfort that the law was enforced," Freeh said. "And that it was done in a way that did not do harm to anyone."

He said there were no deals to drop or reduce any federal charges or to give the Freemen any special public forum to preach their anti-government doctrine. He called it "a very powerful message for anyone who would consider violating the law."

"I know some criticized us for waiting too long and not attempting a tactical solution," Freeh said.

But he credited three basic steps among a series of reforms that he and Attorney General Janet Reno imposed after the 1993 debacle near Waco, Texas, with the Branch Davidians.

The 51-day Branch Davidian standoff ended in a fire that killed more than 80 cult members. In 1992, white separatist Randy Weaver held federal agents at bay at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, for 11 days in a siege that began with the killing of his son and a federal marshal. Weaver's wife was killed by an FBI sniper.

The first new principle Freeh cited was: The FBI "reaction must be commensurate with the facts as we know them."

"In Montana, no shots had been fired, no subject was injured ... two Freemen leaders had been arrested by the FBI without incident. The charges against those who were on the ranch are not for committing violent acts," Freeh said.

As a result, Freeh said, "The prudent thing was to put patience above the risk of bloodshed."

Second, "We wanted to give equal seats at the table to both the tactical operators and negotiators. That was not the case at either Waco or Ruby Ridge, which I think was a distinct disadvantage for the government," Freeh said.

As a result, "there were frictions between the tactical experts and the negotiating experts, but actually that was contemplated when the attorney general established this model," he added.

Third, the FBI needed to go outside government to seek experts and others who might help peacefully solve a crisis. Alan Stone, a Harvard professor who reviewed the Waco incident, had criticized the bureau for using too many military-style tactics and for not using intermediaries who shared the outlook of those under siege.

This time, Freeh said, 45 separate third-party intermediaries were used, including former Green Beret Col. James "Bo" Gritz and others who have never been reluctant to criticize the bureau. The FBI agents in Montana wore civilian clothes rather than the black, military-style uniforms seen at Ruby Ridge and Waco and established moving roadblocks rather than a tight military perimeter.

Reno, who was on business in California on Thursday, said "this episode was the first real test of the reforms the Department of Justice has instituted for resolving crisis situations."

At a White House state dinner, Clinton expressed pride in the FBI's handling of the episode. "We will all say a little prayer tonight for this peaceful settlement of a difficult situation."

Rep. Bill McCollum, chairman of a House panel that looked into Waco and Ruby Ridge, said, "They were much more patient here. I think what we saw in Waco was a jump to judgment early on. ... I don't think that was a valid judgment at all. ...

"There was no harm to the public by the situation remaining static for a long period of time, so I think the FBI learned a lot," the Florida Republican said on CNN.

Freeh said he thought the Freemen surrendered because their energy and resources were dwindling — "they realized that the FBI was not going away" — and because of "a growing trust between them and the FBI."

"We never broke a promise to them. We never told them something that was not true," he said. "We told them before things happened that they were going happen."

Montana rancher helped end standoff

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Negotiating with the holed-up Freemen was no more tense than chatting with friends after Thanksgiving dinner, says one standoff insider — even though the hosts packed sidearms.

Both sides mulled over cattle prices, horses and winter's mud — but the Freemen also railed at the illegitimacy of American government and boasted of their willingness to die for the cause.

Then, as spring deepened with no show of anticipated support from like-minded militants and the FBI bristled with armored vehicles and cut off the power, the Freemen's resolve weakened, the lead negotiator told The Associated Press.

The standoff ended Thursday when the 16 adult Freemen members remaining left their refuge and were taken to Billings in a sedan and two vans. Fourteen of them face criminal charges, including circulating millions of dollars in bogus checks and threatening to kill a federal judge. They were expected to appear in federal court today after a night in jail.

"They began to understand that time was getting very short," that federal agents would not go away and that most of their demands would not be met, said Karl Ohs, a state legislator who negotiated 19 times with Freemen leaders through the 81-day standoff.

Also key to ending the siege was the gradual preeminence on the Freemen negotiating team of Edwin Clark. The local rancher held more moderate views than the others Ohs dealt with, all extremists from outside the area — Dale Jacobi and Rodney Skurdal of Montana and Russell Landers of North Carolina.

"Edwin Clark became more assertive," Ohs said, and was most willing to compromise on early Freemen demands — especially the insistence that their alleged misdeeds be judged by a grand jury of Freemen sympathizers.

Clark also had strong emotional reasons to reach a settlement — his family had owned the foreclosed-upon farm where the Freemen took refuge, and the tightening FBI noose increased his concern for his 21-year-old son, Casey, and parents, Ralph and Kay Clark, all of whom were at the 960-acre compound.

"Edwin just decided that if he was going to get this thing resolved, he had to take charge," Ohs said.

Ohs, a 49-year-old rancher and first-term Republican representative from the mountains of southwestern Montana, spoke to the AP on Wednesday, on condition his remarks would not be published until after the siege ended.

He said he was asked to help negotiate because of old ties to Val Stanton, who briefly lived at the compound. Her father had worked for him as a ranch hand, and Ohs said he considered Val a second daughter as she grew up with his four children.

Ohs spoke openly but cautiously with the AP, aware he needed to retain the Freemen's trust for his new role as custodian of a truckload of documents the group feared the FBI would destroy. The Freemen say the papers, gathered from all over the country, prove government misconduct.

Ohs said he never lost hope the stalemate would end peacefully.

"I just didn't see anything here that anyone needed to die for," he said in recalling the many times Freemen leaders told him they were prepared to sacrifice their lives.

"They said, 'If that's what it takes to get this message out, we're prepared to do that.'"

But Ohs isn't so sure.

"Whether they really thought they would have to, I don't know," he said. "It's easy to say if you really don't think you're going to have to."

Ohs had no doubts, however, that the Freemen were fully prepared to wait out the FBI. They'd stored hundreds of bushels of wheat and had easy access to wild game, livestock and fish ponds on their property.

"They made it clear that they could stay for two years, and I believe they could — probably not real comfortably," Ohs said.

He said Freemen members were always clean and showed little indication their predicament was wearing on them. Those he spoke with expressed anxiety, anger or disgust over their situation only occasionally. Through the miserable days of the waning winter, they joked about reporters getting stuck on muddy roads or standing in the snow and rain waiting for something to happen.

Members spent their days poring over law books, many of which were part of their extensive CD-ROM library, looking for information to buttress their views on the illegitimacy of government, particularly the criminal justice system.

"If you're a fanatic about something, it's easy to sit and read law all day," Ohs said. "It's everything you think about. It's all you think about."

Most of his negotiating sessions, he said, were dominated by the Freemen arguing why their views were correct and the existing government system was wrong.

Once, when the talk became heated and other Freemen drew close, one negotiator told the others to leave and not to intimidate Ohs, he said.

"I never felt threatened in any way," Ohs added. "We had an unwritten law not to be confrontational with one another."

At the beginning, he said, the Freemen believed other groups sharing their philosophy would rally in support and compel the FBI to abandon its siege.

"I know they were very aware of what the world was making of them and their sympathizers," he said. "One of their motivations for hanging tough was that they felt responsible for a lot of people who feel the same way."

But as time wore on and supporters never materialized, the Freemen began to lose heart.

Ohs said the Freemen seldom spoke in front of him about the small army of FBI agents watching their every move, whom they called "the guys out there."

But they realized the patience of "the guys out there" was wearing thin when helicopters and armored personnel carriers appeared on the perimeter May 31 and their electricity was cut June 3.

Ohs, who was briefed daily by the FBI, said agents were ready to end the standoff by force if this final agreement had fallen through.

Agents "always wanted to work it out peacefully, but ultimately, if they had tried everything that they could come up with and it couldn't be worked out peacefully, I think they were prepared to move in," Ohs said.

"And I think that time was drawing near. We were out of options."

Better to Lose Wedding Costs Than to Gain Abusive Spouse

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from the girl who got stuck with the $155 bridesmaid dress, I had to write.

When I was young (too young), I got engaged to a man I hadn't known very long. My parents were paying for the wedding and the attendants were paying for their own gowns and tuxedo rentals.

During the month before the wedding, my fiance began to show his true colors. He drank heavily and became physically and verbally abusive. I knew I should have called the wedding off, but I was worried about all the money my parents were spending on the wedding, so I foolishly kept quiet and went through with it. Big mistake!

Two years later, when I finally got the courage to leave him, my friends and family told they would not have minded losing the money if it saved me from the hell I endured while being married to this abusive man.

Real friends forgive each other.

MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MINNEAPOLIS: Thank you for a letter that may save many women from making the mistake you made. This also applies to men. If either the bride or groom has second thoughts about their feelings, it would be far better to call the wedding off. While it may cause the other party to be upset, in the long run, it would be far better for all concerned.

DEAR ABBY: I saw the letter from "Worried in California," whose 14-year-old daughter was driven home from baby sitting by a drunk parent.

I grew up in New Orleans and was told at an early age that if I ever needed a ride home for any reason — but especially alcohol — at any time of day or night, to call home and one of my parents would come and get me with no questions asked. Mom gave me a quarter, which I carried with me whenever I went out. As I was leaving, I would hear, "Have a good time. Do you have your quarter?"

Only once did I have to call home, not because of alcohol, but when a date turned abusive. He took my purse and refused to give it back, but I still had my quarter — in my shoe.

Abby, please continue to advise parents to tell their children never to get into a car with a driver who has been drinking. Our children are irreplaceable.

C.L. DOWN SOUTH

DEAR C.L.: Be assured I will continue to harp on that theme until my typewriter falls apart. Thanks for an excellent letter.

DEAR ABBY: "Frustrated With Papa Hoarder," whose father refuses to throw away anything, should get him to a mental health professional who is skilled in diagnosing and treating obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD).

Her father's failure to handle his affairs is probably not due to incompetence, but to the overwhelming fear of throwing away something important; therefore, he keeps everything. His senseless saving of stacks of printed matter and refusal to accept help in discarding them could be symptoms of obsessive-compulsive disorder, a problem that affects 5 million Americans and is quite treatable.

To obtain referral for treatment and information on OCD, "Frustrated With Papa Hoarder" can contact the OCD Foundation, P.O. Box 70, Milford, Conn. 06460-0070.

Don't let arthritis defeat you

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from crippling arthritis, and my only fear is that I might live to be 100 years old. This is no bright prospect, since I don't have any family. Is there any help for my condition?

DEAR READER: There is certainly help for your arthritis but not for your fear of longevity. A long life is largely governed by the genes, although some of my oldest patients have remarked that the secret to living a long time is to stay away from doctors. I won't comment except to say that it's hard to argue with success.

New to your arthritis. You need to know what kind you have, because the cause governs the treatment. For example, plain old arthritis — the kind we all develop as our joints age and wear out — often responds to heat, rest, moderate daily exercise (such as walking or swimming), and over-the-counter analgesics (such as aspirin, ibuprofen and others).

Chronic inflammatory arthritis (rheumatoid arthritis, lupus and so forth) usually requires prescription anti-inflammatory drugs (Voltaren, Feldene, Motrin, and others) and may have to be treated with prednisone steroids, if pain and handicap are severe.

Gout is treated with medicine such as Indocin and Zyloprim, Lyme disease with antibiotics, and the arthritis of psoriasis with methotrexate.

Thus, as you can see, there is much that can be done for your symptoms, once the cause of your arthritis is diagnosed.

Check with your family doctor, who can supervise the initial testing and treatment and refer you, if necessary, to an arthritis specialist.

To give you further information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Understanding Osteoarthritis" and "Managing Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title(s).

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm familiar with the regular colostomy where a patient has a bag, but I've never heard of a tube before. Please explain this.

DEAR READER: I cannot, because I'm not aware of it.

When a person has bowel surgery, allowances may have to be made for evacuation. The situation may be temporary or permanent. But the problem is the same: what to do with the intestinal contents that are expelled.

The traditional method — and the only one that I'm familiar with — is a colostomy. The bowel is attached to a hole in the abdominal wall, and the feces is expelled into a plastic bag, which is periodically emptied.

I can see how a short tube might facilitate the removal of waste, but I can't understand how the material could be stored. Therefore, I'm unable to comment on your question. If any physician-readers can contribute to this topic, I'd be grateful.

Documents reveal evidence tying suspect to Unabomber

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Even before federal agents searched Theodore Kaczynski's mountain cabin for evidence, DNA tests of saliva found on two letters had already linked him to the Unabomber, according to court documents.

Investigators had concluded that the genetic content of saliva on a postage stamp for a Unabomber letter last June was similar to DNA found on a letter Kaczynski sent to his brother, David, the documents show.

An FBI investigation in the two months before agents searched the cabin and arrested Kaczynski on April 3 also found common phrases and misspellings between his writing and documents penned by the person blamed for killing three people and injuring 23 during an 18-year bombing spree.

U.S. District Judge Charles C. Lovell released the documents Thursday in response to a request by several news organizations in April.

Lovell said the documents should be made public now that the Kaczynski investigation is complete. Even so, anonymous Justice Department sources had disclosed much of the information over the past three months.

Authorities have not yet charged Kaczynski, 55, in any of the Unabomber attacks. He remains jailed in Helena on a charge of illegally possessing bomb components as investigators continue to gather more evidence.

Working with documents that David Kaczynski provided, the FBI found 160 similarities between the 35,000-word Unabomber manifesto published last September and a 1971 essay written by Theodore Kaczynski.

For example, in the earlier essay Kaczynski wrote: "Direct physical control of the emotions via electrodes and 'chemitrodes' inserted in the brain." The 1995 Unabomber manifesto includes this similar sentence: "It presumably would be impractical for all people to have electrodes inserted in their heads."

Both Kaczynski and the Unabomber spelled analyze as "analyse," used "wilfully" rather than willfully, and spelled license as "licence."

U.S. grants asylum to woman fearful of genital mutilation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman who said she would "go anywhere" except back to her West African homeland because she feared having her genitals cut off is the first person to win U.S. asylum on the basis of female genital mutilation.

The Board of Immigration Appeals broke with Immigration and Naturalization Service policy Thursday to grant asylum to 19-year-old Fauziya Kasinga, of Togo, who says her family planned to force her to submit to female genital mutilation.

"We find that female genital mutilation can be the basis for a grant of asylum," the 12-member appeals board said, adding that Kasinga has a well-founded fear of country-wide persecution.

Board members disagreed about guidelines for granting asylum based on female genital mutilation in the future and declined to speculate about future cases, the decision said.

Previously, immigration judges could only grant asylum to women who could show they would be mutilated if they returned to their countries and could prove that local authorities would not protect them.

Women would not qualify for asylum if they had already been mutilated or if they face only "social and economic hardship" and community ostracism if they refused to submit to the procedure.

The appeals board, which oversees and sets standards for the nation's 179 immigration judges, rejected INS policy and argued that "this level of harm can constitute persecution."

Kasinga arrived in the United States in December 1994 and was detained in jails, often with criminals until last month when the appeals board took up her case.

She told immigration authorities an aunt who had custody of her was insisting that she undergo the procedure as part of an arranged marriage to an older man, who like Kasinga, belonged to the Tchamba Kunsuntu tribe, which practices female genital mutilation.

In August 1995, Philadelphia immigration Judge Donald Ferlise denied her request for asylum, saying he didn't believe her story and that female genital mutilation wasn't persecution because it was done to her peers.

Grammer to sing

NEW YORK (AP) — When Kelsey Grammer isn't listening, he'll be singing.

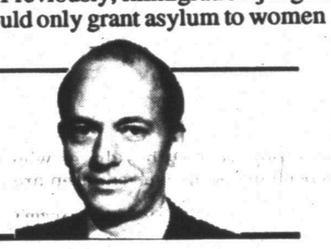

The psychiatrist from NBC's "Frasier" is scheduled to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" at baseball's All-Star game in Philadelphia on July 9.

The game will be televised on NBC.

An evening match

By Phillip Alder

On the evening of March 7, I went to the Moreton Bridge Club. We had a delicious dinner before playing a short four-team match. I was partnering Tony Jackman, who helped to coordinate my trip. Two weeks later, he won the Queensland trials with Khokan Bagchi.

We had a poor first match, but were saved by our teammates, Claire Jackman (Tony's wife) and Trish Tritton. Then we hit our stride, doing well in the last two matches. Aided by more good results from our teammates, we won comfortably.

There were several interesting deals, including this one.

In our auction, Jackman's rebid of two no-trump was game-forcing.

Against four hearts, the "normal" opening lead is the club queen. This defeats the contract easily, East-West getting two heart and two club tricks. And that is how our teammates started the defense. When the declarer misguessed diamonds too, he finished two down.

Against me, though, West led the diamond eight: two, three, jack. I played a spade to dummy's king and cashed the ace, discarding one of my clubs. Then I led a heart to the queen. After winning with the king, West strangely returned the spade 10. Worried that she had started with a singleton diamond, I played low from the dummy and, when East contributed the nine, I discarded my second club to cut the defenders' communications (A scissors coup). I ruffed the club switch, cashed the heart ace and continued with the heart 10. A moment later I drew West's last trump and ran the diamonds for plus 420. This gave our team 11 international matchpoints.

Montana State riders highlight rodeo action

Jackson, competing in bull riding, and Bowers, participating in saddle bronc, turned in rides worth 72 and 76 points, respectively, to highlight Thursday's men's competition.

Fortunes weren't so good for Western Texas' Tona Wright, who entered Thursday's third go-round as the women's all-around leader.

Wright had a strong performance with a time of 3.80 in the breakaway, but a five-second penalty in the barrel race for knocking over a barrel dropped her out of the event's top ten.

Wright still tops the all-around standings following Thursdays' performance.

Montana State is leading the men's team competition with 425 points, followed by Fort Scott Community College with 335 points.

Western Texas leads the women's team standings with 180 points. Vernon (Texas) Community College is second with 170.

Western Montana's Ron Schnek improved his standing in steer wrestling, with a time of 4.8 seconds for the CNFR's third fastest takedown thus far. Wyoming's Todd Suhn leads the event average with a total of 18.2 seconds after three gos.

Wyoming's Wendy Harvey and Southeast Oklahoma State's Caryn Standifer and Tachana McCurley had Thursday's best rides in the breakaway with times of 3.30 seconds.

Lynn Wiebe of Central Wyoming had the fastest time in the goat tying, 7.80 seconds. Washington State's Karen Moser-Young leads the event with a combined time of 24.10 seconds after three gos.

Jerome Schneeberger of Murray State leads the calf roping average after the third go with a total of 34 seconds, with Vernon's Trevor Brazile close behind.

Fort Scott's T.C. Holloway leads the saddle bronc average after scoring a 72 Thursday. Holloway has a total of 148 points at the end of the second go.

Other event leaders include Panhandle State's Andy Boldon and Blue Benjamin in team roping with a total of 22 seconds after the third go. Standifer leads the barrel race with 44.15 seconds after three gos and Southwest Oklahoma's Andrew Akin in bull riding, who has 159 points after the third go.

Red Sox outlast Rangers in 10

BOSTON (AP) — Alex Delgado is a baseball nomad, playing nine different positions in eight different minor-league cities in the Boston system. Now he has made the most memorable trip of his undistinguished career.

From home plate to first base.

The rookie lined a single to left in the 10th inning for his second major-league hit and first RBI Thursday night, giving the Red Sox an 8-7 victory over Texas.

It was the fifth time the Rangers, who lead the AL West, lost the lead to the Red Sox, who have the third-worst record in baseball.

"I don't have enough time to explain all of the different ways we lost," Texas manager Johnny Oates said, "but we did a lot of things that were not conducive to winning baseball."

The Rangers' generosity once they got the lead was just one oddity on a night of strange happenings.

Boston shortstop John Valentin misplayed three balls without getting an error, then threw out two runners at home in the ninth and homered to tie the game 7-7 in the 10th.

Texas reliever Mike Henneman (0-4) was one out away from his 19th save in the bottom of the ninth, then allowed back-to-back RBI doubles by Mike Stanley and Reggie Jefferson that tied the score 6-6.

"This is a proud night," Red Sox manager Kevin Kennedy said. "Both teams can hit. You keep fighting and it ended up our way. It was a very emotional win."

The strangest development might have been Delgado's evolution from marginal big-leaguer to hero on a team that also got homers from regulars Jose Canseco and Troy O'Leary and eight strong innings from Roger Clemens, who left with the score 4-4.

"Who knows where he can go from here?" Kennedy said of Delgado, who was 1-for-6 in the majors before Thursday. "With the game on the line, he gets his first RBI at Fenway Park. He'll remember that."

Braves win in first round of tourney

The Snyder Braves squeaked out a 1-0 win over Colorado City Thursday in the first round of the Little League county tournament in the majors division at Logan Field.

The Braves got base hits from Nathan Smith, Chance Greenwood and Michael Pendleton. Smith scored the winning run.

Next up for the Braves will be the Albany Reds. The Reds took a 6-3 win away from the Coleman Rangers. The Braves-Reds game will be at 7:30 tonight at Logan Field.

As long as the Braves continue to win in the single elimination tournament, they will get to play in Snyder.

Snyder's number two team, the White Sox, were not as lucky in the majors division. Playing in Clyde, the White Sox were knocked out by Clyde, 7-5. The White Sox got behind, 7-1, but was able to cut the lead to 7-5 with four runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Nicholas Landes and Clay Williams each had two singles. Shay Franks added a base hit. Scoring for the White Sox were Landes, Williams, Cole McLeod, T.J. Jones and Zach Rollins.

In the minor league county tournament, the Snyder Cardinals were defeated by Abilene Northern 9-8.

Focus on basketball makes Bulls happy

SEATTLE (AP) — Few are talking about the Chicago Bulls' place in history. Or about Phil Jackson's possible retirement to Montana. Or about Michael Jordan's pending free-agency. Or about Dennis Rodman's mind games.

The subject is basketball once more, and that makes the Bulls happy.

Tonight, Chicago again will try to wrap up its fourth NBA title in six years. And unlike Wednesday, when the Bulls didn't respond well to the distractions — or to the outstanding play of the Seattle SuperSonics — they insist they will be ready.

The two days off between Games 3 and 4 gave players, media and fans all too much time to think, analyze and plan. Before Game 4, Steve Kerr said, "there was terrible karma" for his Bulls.

"People were bringing boxes of (NBA champion) t-shirts into the locker room," he said. "We were rehearsing the trophy ceremony. We were making public-service announcements to avoid violence back in Chicago. All the questions I was being asked dealt with our place in history.

"Nobody wanted to talk about winning the fourth game. It was extremely distracting."

And the Sonics took advantage, playing by far their best game of the series, winning 107-86 and avoiding a sweep. Another victory tonight will send the teams back to Chicago for Game 6 on Sunday.

"I heard they were getting their parade ready. Well, now they've got to clean it up," Gary Payton said. "I hope if they get prepared again, we can get 'em to have to clean it up again."

Said Hersey Hawkins: "When they were already printing t-shirts, we thought, 'We might as well have fun.' We were very loose."

Jordan said that every year at the NBA Finals, there is too much stink about the preparations being made in anticipation of a team winning the title.

"The league has to get ready," Jordan said. "That's one of the things (the Sonics) will learn if they ever get in that position."

Bonds goes 4-for-5 in win over Astros

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After a long absence, Barry Bonds' home-run trot made a return appearance.

Bonds capped a 4-for-5 performance with his first homer in more than a month, and the San Francisco Giants held off the Houston Astros 12-8 Thursday after nearly blowing a 9-0 lead.

"It's nice to see Barry Bonds heating up," San Francisco manager Dusty Baker said. "He got four hits and hit his first home run since May 11. It's been a long time since he trotted. We definitely needed it."

San Francisco, leading 9-0 after the second inning, had to withstand a six-run fifth by the Astros that included a pinch-hit grand slam by Sean Berry.

Bonds' homer, a two-run shot, came in the eighth off Dean Hartgraves and was the first since he hit his then-major league leading 17th homer at Pittsburgh. The 102 at-bat homerless string was the longest of his career, eclipsing a 92 at-bat stretch from Aug. 26 to Sept. 25, 1989.

"It was nice to see him get that home run and get the monkey off his back," teammate Mark Carreon said.

Bonds was not around to speak after the game. He dressed and left before reporters were allowed into the clubhouse.

There was no question his teammates were glad to see him provide some insurance after Houston turned a blowout into a close game.

"I think Barry is one of the keys because if we get Barry going, this team can score a lot of runs," said Stan Javier, who had a run-scoring double after the Astros had pulled within a run.

"Everybody goes through a spell, but I was happy to see him hit that home run. That can turn everything around."

More educational TV for children advocated

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than a year, President Clinton's top TV regulator has said the government must require stations to air more educational shows for children.

Two days ago while fund-raising in Hollywood, Clinton called on the industry to do it voluntarily.

SPECIAL DONATION — Capt. J.D. Smith of the Price Daniel Unit is shown giving Susan Compere, Area 14 Special Olympics director, a donation check for $6,671. Texas Department of Corrections Units in Area 14 raised $35,445 during six weeks of fund-raising activities. Area 14 includes units in Abilene, Brownwood, Breckenridge, Colorado City and Snyder. Smith is the coordinator for Snyder fund-raising. (SDN Staff Photo)

Mixed signals on a hot Hollywood issue? Federal Communications Commission Chairman Reed Hundt insists no.

"You need to write the rule, and you need to spark a willingness to really comply with the spirit as well as the letter of it,' Hundt said Thursday.

Others, though, see a Clinton administration skillfully playing both sides — nudging the industry with calls for cooperation while pushing it along with the still-strong threat of a requirement.

"This was not a softening," said children's TV activist Peggy Charren, who noted that Clinton has spoken favorably in the past of a government mandate. "This was a help (to getting) a three-hour requirement."

A White House official agreed, saying: "We're not talking about volunteerism in lieu of an FCC rule."

The goal is to "get the industry in line behind a proposal that would provide for three hours of TV at times when kids are watching — after 7 in the morning," said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The rule that Hundt wants written would require broadcasters to air at least three hours of children's educational shows each week to get their TV station license renewed.

Hundt says he still plans to press the FCC to adopt the three-hour minimum standard, before a summit where Clinton will try to persuade the TV industry to do it voluntarily.

The summit, to take place before the end of July, should spark broadcasters' willingness to comply, Hundt said.

Clinton proposed the summit Tuesday on a California trip and urged the industry to voluntarily air three hours of educational programs — just as the industry has voluntarily agreed to set up a system rating TV shows for sex and violence.

"If we can control by ratings, give parents the power to deal with what their children are watching on television, surely, surely, we can agree to increase the content of children's television that goes to education," Clinton said. "... It wouldn't hurt to have at least three hours a week."

The broadcasting industry opposes a government three-hour requirement. The industry also had been opposed to rating its programs, but ended up pledging to do that, in part to avert stricter proposals.

"We still don't believe government-mandated hours or standards for programming is appropriate or needed," said Walt Wurfel, spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters.

But of the summit, Wurfel said: "There may be a voluntary way of approaching this."

Broadcasters also note, wryly, that the definition of mandatory and voluntary can be slippery.

Hundt's definition? "If they want to volunteer to have us write a minimum standard of three, that's OK with me." But, he added: "It has to be written. That's the mistake the FCC made before. We didn't write it down and then the reality slipped into fiction."

As a condition of license renewal, Congress in 1990 said that broadcasters must show they have served children's educational needs.

In 1992, some TV stations told the FCC they had met those needs and listed, in documents to the agency, such shows as "The Jetsons" and "Leave It to Beaver" reruns.

In the past, Clinton has spoken strongly about the need for a requirement.

In a 1995 letter to Hundt, Clinton wrote: "I believe the public interest should require broadcasters to air at least three hours per week, and preferably more, of quality children's programming at reasonable time of day."

Meanwhile, some groups that push for more educational children's TV say they don't care if the agreement is voluntary or mandatory as long as it's in an enforceable federal rule.

Kicking attack on kitten latest in series of pet deaths

VICTORIA (AP) — Four-year-old Andrew Garcia used to spend his time after school with his favorite playmate — an orange-and-white kitten named Dyner.

But then the 3-month-old kitten vanished. Virginia Garcia told her son and the younger of her two daughters that Dyner ran away. The truth, she fears, is more than a 4- or 7-year-old should have to hear.

Four teen-agers allegedly kicked the tiny animal to death early Tuesday.

"One guy was seen drop-kicking the cat like you would drop-kick a football," police Capt. Bill Pratka told The Victoria Advocate.

The kitten's death was the latest in a recent series of animal-cruelty incidents in the Victoria area.

Four piglets were shot to death and stolen in the last two weeks from a Calhoun County pen. Earlier this spring, several members of the East Bernard High School baseball team were accused of beating a cat to death with baseball bats.

Pratka said a 13-year-old boy who lives across the street from the Garcias' home told police what happened to the kitten.

Shortly after 12:30 a.m. Tuesday, a red pickup truck parked. Its four occupants got out and kicked the kitten around until it was dead, he said.

Based on information provided by the 13-year-old and others, police have identified the suspects as four teen-agers, age 16 through 19. No arrests have been made. A conviction on a cruelty to animals charge could bring up to a year in jail and a $4,000 fine.

Virginia Garcia, whose children have lost a puppy and another cat to thieves in the last two years, said she is determined to see the animal's killers punished.

"I don't want them to get away with it, because if they can do it to a cat, then they can do it to another person and think they can get away with it," she said.

THE EVIL OF BLASPHEMY!

BLASPHEMY, THE INTENTIONAL REVILING AND CURSING OF GOD OR THE KING, WHO WAS GOD'S REPRESENTATIVE, WAS PUNISHABLE BY MANDATORY DEATH IN BIBLE TIMES! UNDER THE OLD MOSAIC LAW, DEATH WAS ACCOMPLISHED BY STONING THE MISCREANT! (LEV. 24:16) IN THE OLD TESTAMENT, THERE IS ONLY ONE ACCOUNT OF A CASE OF BLASPHEMY--AND THAT INVOLVED A MAN WHO WAS ONLY PART ISRAELITE, FOR HIS FATHER WAS AN EGYPTIAN (LEV. 24:10-16) THERE WERE SAFEGUARDS IN THE LAW SO THAT ONE COULDN'T BE WRONGLY CHARGED OF THIS CRIME. BLASPHEMY HAD TO BE WITNESSED BY MORE THAN ONE ACCUSER! NEVERTHELESS, FALSE ACCUSATIONS WERE MADE AGAINST NABOTH IN THE OLD TESTAMENT (I KINGS 21:1-13) AND STEPHEN IN THE NEW TESTAMENT (ACTS 6:8-14) AND JESUS OF NAZARETH ON MANY OCCASIONS (MATT. 9:3, 26:65-66) (JOHN 10:36) IN THE CASES OF NABOTH AND STEPHEN, THE VILLAINOUS FALSE ACCUSERS WERE SUCCESSFUL IN THEIR CLAIMS AND BOTH MEN WERE PUT TO DEATH BY STONING! IN THE CASE OF JESUS, ALTHOUGH THE PRIESTS AND THE PHARISEES AND SADDUCEES CHARGED HIM WITH BLASPHEMY, AND ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS LARGE CROWDS PICKED UP STONES, INTENDING TO KILL HIM, HE ALWAYS ESCAPED THIS FATE--"THAT THE SCRIPTURES MIGHT BE FULFILLED"!

THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS

Committee seeks answers from Hillary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton allegedly dismissed a warning that a loan transaction might be improper, and the Senate Whitewater Committee now wants her to answer questions about it in writing.

With the White House saying the committee was engaging in a final act of "desperation," Republicans zeroed in Thursday on an April 7, 1986, conversation Mrs. Clinton had with the loan department head of Madison Guaranty, the savings and loan at the heart of the Whitewater affair.

Republicans say the evidence indicates the loan transaction Mrs. Clinton discussed with S&L executive Don Denton may have been designed to hide real estate commissions in a land deal that regulators have called a "sham."

The commissions were paid to businessman Seth Ward, the father-in-law of Webster Hubbell, who at the time was Mrs. Clinton's partner at the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock, Ark.

Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole, at a campaign rally in Birmingham, Ala., made a rare Whitewater dig at the Clintons, referring to reports that FBI background files were turned over to the White House.

"When I read about the FBI files and that nobody in the White House knew that they were there, funny how they got there. They didn't know how the other papers got there either in Whitewater," he said. "Why don't we just have a little investigation. Let the people decide."

The transaction Mrs. Clinton discussed with Denton involved a $400,000 loan from Madison Guaranty to Ward. He never repaid the money, but simply turned back to the S&L 22 acres used to secure the loan.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., the Whitewater Committee chairman, said Denton's sworn interview with the inspector general's office of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. amounted to "important new evidence" that "sheds new light on the nature and extent of Mrs. Clinton's work" for Madison Guaranty.

But White House spokesman Mark Fabiani described the Republican request for written answers from Mrs. Clinton "an act of utter, complete desperation by Senator D'Amato's failed Whitewater committee." The panel goes out of business Monday after 14 months of hearings.

The Clintons' personal attorney, David Kendall, said federal regulators already had concluded that Mrs. Clinton did nothing improper regarding the so-called Castle Grande real estate transaction.

Scientists

—Successful tests to combine different families of HIV drugs in a "cocktail" that assaults the virus' ability to reproduce.

—Tests that allow doctors to measure precisely the amount of HIV present in a patient's blood.

Scientists believe treating patients early with the mixture of HIV drugs may be reducing the virus to a level that a still-intact immune system can handle.

The Wall Street Journal reported today that even cautious physicians are astonished by recent developments.

"It now appears, at the very least, we may finally have the tools to turn (AIDS) into a long-term manageable and treatable disease, much like hypertension and diabetes," said Roy Gullick, research physician at New York University Medical School.

Between 650,000 and 900,000 Americans are infected with HIV; almost 60,000 have been treated with the new drugs, none for more than two years.

Surrender

Fourteen Freemen spent the night in jail and were expected to appear in federal court today. They face charges including circulating millions of dollars in bogus checks and threatening to kill a federal judge.

The two people not facing charges, wives of Freemen members, accompanied the group on the 3½-hour trip to Billings. It was not clear where the women went after arriving at the jail.

Since March, a total of 633 federal agents rotated in and out of the standoff, working 12-hour shifts, said FBI Agent Thomas T. Kubic, the local FBI commander. There were up to 150 in the Jordan area at any one time.

FBI Director Louis J. Freeh lauded the policy of "patience and resoluteness" that he credited for the outcome.

"The message that comes out of this is very clear to everybody — if you break the law, the United States government will enforce the law. It will do it fairly but firmly," Freeh said this morning on NBC's "Today" show.

"Nobody got any deals on any charges," he said.

President Clinton told a state dinner: "We will all say a little prayer tonight for this peaceful settlement of a difficult situation."

The final surrender negotiations began early in the morning, but dragged on until evening. Kubic said the delay was because the Freemen were cataloging the "evidence" they say proves their grievances against the government, which they have called a "corporate prostitute."

Authorities seeking criminal involvement in ValuJet crash

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal investigators are exploring whether crimes were committed in the crash of a ValuJet plane that was carrying an illegal cargo of hazardous oxygen canisters.

ValuJet Airlines acknowledged the investigation, which was reported Thursday in Business Week magazine.

The magazine said that preliminary targets of the probe were ValuJet and SabreTech Inc., a maintenance contractor that acknowledged mistakenly labeling a box containing oxygen canisters as "empty" when they were in fact full.

Authorities suspect the May 11 crash of ValuJet Flight 592 into the Florida Everglades was caused by the canisters catching fire. All 110 people on board the DC-9 were killed.
