This Means Me

The Office of Defense Transportation advises that non-essential travel for other than vacation purposes must be wholly eliminated, and that vacations should be spent at home or as near home as possible. Director Eastman of the ODT asks the public to "avoid overnight trips, travel on day coaches, and carry box lunches on the trains, so as not to add to the strain on Pullman and dining car facilities—carry as little baggage as possible—be prepared to expect delayed arrivals, crowded conditions and lack of usual travel comforts. The cooperation of employers and of individuals in—minimizing vacation travel—is urgently necessary.

"There is no pleasure in giving such advice as this, and I know that many will find it difficult to realize that there is need for it. If they will think for a moment of what the induction, training, and final embarkation of many millions of service men means in the way of a load upon our railroads and busses, combined with the continued travel of these men on furlough and leave, of service women, and of relatives and friends, plus the extraordinary business travel which the tremendous productive activity of the country requires and if they will also bear in mind that the railroads and bus lines have been given practically no new equipment and have lost the help of the private automobile, I think they will understand what we are up against.

"Many will approve the advice as good for the other fellow, but will regard a personal pleasure trip now and then as a harmless exception. The advice will do no good unless everyone will realize that it 'means me' and applies today as well as tomorrow."

Reducing Production

In stressing the need for a government policy that "will result in maximum food production," John D. Miller, president emeritus of the National Council of Farm Cooperatives, says "price ceiling experiments tracing back to the Roman Empire have a record of uninterrupted failure as a method of preventing inflation or keeping down the cost of living.

"An effective ceiling on any commodity will in time restrict production. A planned economy spells the doom of our system of free enterprise. Rising commodity prices are not the cause, but the result of inflation.

"Inflation should be attacked on two fronts: First, by adopting policies that will result in the greatest possible food production, thus increasing supplies; and, second, by siphoning off buying power through taxation, thus reducing demand."

Mr. Miller described subsidies as higher food prices with the money being paid by the citizens to the government as taxes, and then distributed to the farmers by government. "Farmers resent being placed in a position where they cannot support themselves, but must accept government handouts. Food prices can be so regulated that farmers will receive a living price, and with consumers paying as low a price as is consistent with production cost, transportation, processing and marketing. This was done during World War I and food production rose to the maximum. But now we have price ceilings which have always resulted in decreased food production."

Planned House of Cards

The "planned economy" this nation is living under has promoted high production costs while demanding low prices for consumers. The formula reads well, but it doesn't work. You can't arbitrarily boost the cost of production and hold down the cost of living.

This is being illustrated once more in the falling off of new oil discoveries. Wildcat drilling cannot be carried on with hot air. It takes money—more money than it did before the "war boom." OPA suggests a "government subsidy" money from every taxpayer's pocket, in lieu of a necessary crude oil price increase, to encourage the search for new oil reserves which will soon be desperately needed by this nation.

Petroleum Administrator Ickes has recommended an average increase of 35 cents a barrel, instead of a subsidy. Oil men do not want subsidies—which mean taxpayer—financing of wildcatting. Many producers feel that the subsidy proposal is an attempt to put the government into the oil business.

A subsidy dodges the basic issue of allowing prices that will cover fair production costs. The people pay either way, but there will be less waste and less inflation in production financed with reasonable profits than with production financed with taxation.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Your tires are in good shape, Judge...ought to last you at least another 5,000 miles." "I've been very careful of them, Jim, since I learned how much the government needs rubber. Only drive when I have to...keep her under 35 an hour and have the tires switched around every 1,000 miles." "Me, too, Judge. Pretty tough spot we were put in gettin' our supply of rubber cut off just when we needed it most. But, we'll be gettin' plenty of synthetic rubber real soon. Say, is it true, Judge, that the beverage distilling industry has a part in producing it?" "Yes, a very important part, Jim. That industry's facilities for producing grain alcohol make it possible to include 200,000 tons of rubber from grain in the government's 870,000-ton synthetic rubber program. Pretty important contribution to our war effort, isn't it Jim?" "It certainly is, Judge. Wonder how many people really realize it?"

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Hardest Fighting Still to Come: Byrnes; Chinese Forces Rout Foe on Yangtze; Japs Drive Toward War Capital; Allied Airmen Pound Italian Objectives

NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the newspaper's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Bringing back first-hand knowledge of Axis military technique gained in observations on the North African front, Lieut. Gen. Lesley (left), commander of ground forces, is greeted on his arrival at army headquarters by Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges (center) and Lieut. Gen. Wade H. Haislip. Lieutenant General McNair was wounded in his inspection trip through the battle area.

CHINA: Rout Japs

Five Japanese divisions of 75,000 men were routed as Chinese troops counterattacked along the Yangtze river. Even as the enemy was thrown back, American bombers and Chinese fighters swooped on the Jap air base of Ichang, and 10 tons of explosives were dropped.

The Jap rout came after they had thrust south toward the Yangtze in their drive to the Chinese provisional capital of Chungking, 295 miles to the east. According to the Allied communique, the Chinese armies developed an encircling movement, cut off the Japanese line of retreat, and then chopped up the entrapped units.

Besides raiding Ichang, Allied airmen were active over other sectors of China. Jap warehouses and railroad yards were blasted at Foochow.

GOP: Post-War Committee

So that the next Republican national convention might have the basis for drawing up an appropriate platform dealing with the part America should play in the post-war world's reconstruction, 49 prominent members of the GOP were named to serve on a special committee to study the question.

Announced by National Chairman Harrison Spangler, the committee consists of 5 senators, 12 congressmen, 24 governors and 8 party officials.

According to Spangler, it will be the duty of the committee to chart a program embracing the extent to which this country should commit itself toward co-operating in maintaining world peace. Of equal importance, Spangler said, will be the committee's task of mapping a course for our own domestic reconstruction.

"We must plan for a free and prosperous agriculture; labor conditions which will insure labor its just share; and conditions which will permit industry to expand, grow, develop and produce the things which will add to our standard of living," Spangler declared.

ITALY: Softened Up

Harbors, shipping and airdromes were left in flames as Allied airmen flew in from the east and west and pounded both ends of Italy.

Heavily hit were the port facilities of Naples, on Italy's western shoreline. To the east, the air base at Foggia was raided, with ground planes, a gasoline dump and barracks offering the target.

In all, 150 Flying Fortresses and Liberators participated in the assaults. Despite the fact that fierce fighter opposition was encountered over Naples, the Allies reported no losses.

Meanwhile, other units of the North African air force continued to pound Sardinia, which sprawls in the Tyrrhenian sea west of Italy, and Pantelleria, the tiny island south of Sicily, where the Axis has developed underground hangars.

The Allies announced the loss of but one Lightning in these raids. Although admitting heavy damage from Allied raids, the Italians claimed to have shot down 57 British and American bombers over Pantelleria since May 1.

STOCKS: Trading on the Chicago Stock Exchange dipped to its lowest volume in 22 years during the fiscal year ended April 30. There were 295 memberships outstanding.

Wendell Wilkie called for measures to measure the public's opinion of politicians according to the results of their own teaching.

Farm prices gained 2.5 percent between April 15 and May 15. In feed crops, fruits, poultry and truck produce.

Shipbuilding Stepped Up Some Since Early 1800s

Mr. Henry Kaiser's achievements in ship production make an interesting contrast with the building of British warships a century ago.

A 74-gun ship named Boscaewen was laid down at Woolwich Dockyard in 1811 but not launched until 1844. The 50-gun Worcester was started at Deptford in 1816, reached the christening period in 1831, but remained on the ways until 1843.

Two ships named Royal Sovereign were also in the slow-motion class. The first began at Portsmouth in 1833, and had her name altered to Royal Frederick six years later. Another 20 years went by, with very little work done, before she was renamed again, this time Frederick William. Finally, as a screw ship, she took the water in 1860.

The other Royal Sovereign was started in the same dockyard in 1844. Three years later the Admiralty decided to cancel the work altogether, but they soon changed their minds, and 1857 saw the ship afloat at last.

A 20-gun ship named Valorous was in hand at Pembroke Dockyard for nearly 40 years before she was re-designed as a paddle frigate and launched in 1851.

Indians 'Bargained' Out Homes; Laugh Best

The Osage Indian tribe has the last laugh on the white man. During the 19th century, the Osage were forced and "bargained" out of Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas, retaining only the rocky hills of northern Oklahoma out of their once great domain.

Then came oil, black gold gushing from the Osage hills. Once worth 70 cents an acre, this land has since produced 273 million dollars in gas and oil—more than $120,000 in cash revenue for each Osage Indian.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Improper brake adjustment is a rubber-waster. Have your brakes checked regularly. If one wheel "takes hold" before the others, its rubber carries the full brunt of stopping the car, with resultant excessive rubber wear.

In their search for rubber substitutes, scientists are now probing myrcene, a terpene derivative discovered about fifty years ago. The list of rubber "sources" is growing almost daily.

It is expected that the 1943 harvest of crude rubber in the United States will total 600 tons, all guayule. Normally this country consumed about 600,000 tons of rubber a year.

Morning Coffee Given In Honor Of Mrs. McKay

The home of Mrs. Paul Browning was the scene for a lovely morning coffee on Wednesday, honoring Mrs. Charles McKay.

Decorations in the party rooms were of lovely pink, white and blue spring flowers. In the living room Mrs. J. C. Adams secured the names of the guests at an appointed table.

Throughout the morning, music was provided by Miss Blanche Butler, and Miss Judy Willingham gave a reading presenting the honoree with her gifts.

In the dining room the handsomely covered refreshment table was an attractive picture. The board held a centerpiece of pink carnations and white gladiolas, with a large white stork overlooking the flowers. Mrs. H. R. Hayes presided at the coffee service, assisted by Mrs. H. C. Sullivan and Miss Ethel Virginia Allen. An assortment of dainty pink, blue and white cookies were served to the guests. Approximately seventy friends of the honoree called or sent gifts during the morning.

Assisting Mrs. Paul Browning as hostess were: Mesdames J. C. Adams, H. C. Sullivan, Jim Snoddy, H. R. Hayes, Bill McLean, and Misses Marion Ragsdale, Ethel Virginia Allen and Blanche Butler.

Christian Science Services Sunday

"God the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 13.

The Golden Text is: "The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is safe" (Proverbs 18-10).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And the Lord saith unto Noah, Come thou and all thy house into the ark: for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation" (Genesis 7:1).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Ark. Safety; the idea, or reflection, of Truth, proved to be as immortal as its Principle; the understanding of Spirit, destroying belief in matter" (page 581).

OFF WITH A BANG—The Daily Vacation Bible School. The enrollment for the third morning was 131. We are trusting that we shall continue to have new ones each morning. Only eternity alone will reveal the good that will come from one of the Vacation Bible Schools.

The workers have responded mightily well. Only a little short handed one or two mornings. This shows a mighty fine spirit for these workers to come and spend the mornings with others children. Of course, they are not working, except for the joy of serving, and helping to make better boys and girls.

Our Sunday School attendance was quite a bit off last Sunday. Were you in your place? Did you help our Sunday School attendance to decrease? Or were you in your place and counted one more at the Lord's house on the Lord's day?

The Training Union needs you and you need the information and the inspiration one receives there. Sunday morning the Pastor will speak on the subject, "Making Life Count," Sunday evening on the subject, "God's great Invitation."

You are urged and thrice welcomed to be with us in all of our services each Sunday.

The Lord needs you and can use you in a mighty way, if you will only surrender yourself to him.

Methodists Close Bible School; Thirty Increase

The First Methodist Church closed the Daily Vacation Bible School Sunday morning. The adult classes adjourned 10 minutes early and went to the basement to see some of the hand work and hear some of the Scriptures learned by the children during the week.

In order to conserve the school was held only eight days instead of the regular ten. The full units of work were carefully worked out and presented by the teachers. The first and last days were not given over to enrollment and to picnics as is sometimes done. Each day was filled with the study and learning experiences of the Scriptures and work at hand. In the Junior Division it was the common experience to have each child lead a prayer when called upon.

The Beginners studied "Happy Times In Our Church." The Primary unit was "Our Daily Bread," and the Juniors studied "Followers of Jesus."

103 children and teachers participated throughout the school and many officers had some contact with the school. 24 of the total were from other churches, and 2 were not enrolled in any Church School. This is an increase of 30 in attendance over last year. Many parents have voiced their appreciation to the teachers and workers for the excellent preparation they had made and the fine leadership they gave in the school.

Some new study tables and other equipment were added to the Children's Division in time to be used in the Vacation School.

AMERICAN HEROES

BY LEFF

Hyman Epstein knew that after wounding a man the Japs around Sananada were withholding their fire, using the injured soldier for bait until unarmed medical aides like himself came into range. Yet again and again he crept out under sniper fire to rescue wounded comrades until at last the Japs got him. "That kid was the best," his commander said of determined little Hyman Epstein. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Heins.

Calvary Baptist Church News

Sunday School begins at ten a. m., with all classes studying the 29th chapter of Genesis—"Jacob Meets Rachel at The Well." Would you like to study the Bible book by book and chapter by chapter? Then come Sunday morning with your Bible and begin with us for that is the way we study.

Evening services begin at 7:45 with the young people meeting for their regular program and Bible discussions under the leadership of Mrs. J. L. Barnett and Mr. Rufus Welborn. If you are not in services elsewhere, you are invited to come take part with these busy, happy young people.

Services begin at 8:15 with an old-time song service, followed by the evening message by the pastor. The big 9x3 feet art chart which the pastor used last Sunday night will be used again, to set before the congregation more graphically the prophetic plan of God through the ages. Many have been helped in the understanding of the Bible by these lessons from the chart, and we believe that you will be helped. It gets before you the unified, well-planned purpose of God in world affairs, and His final triumph over Satan and sin.

Don't forget our big outdoor revival meeting planned to begin July 4th, and to continue for two weeks. We shall be expecting to see you there. You are always welcome at the Church with the open Bible and heart.

Ray C. Morrow, Pastor.

A DRAFTEE'S FAREWELL

Poem by L. D. COTHAM

The other day I got a letter
And it had these words to say:
"You are ordered by your draft board
To report without delay,
For your Uncle Sam's in trouble,
As he's in an awful scrap
With a German and a 'Dago,'
And a little yellow Jap."

As my "Uncle" says he needs me,
I'll be leaving right away,
So I'm packing up my baggage,
To be ready any day;
And perchance I do not see you,
Ere I catch the bus or train,
I'll be saying good-bye, fellows!
Till I get back home again.

When we whip that surly German,
Beat the "Dago" to his knees,
Then we'll turn our whole attention
To the little Japanese;
And the licking that we'll give him,
Will be one he won't forget,
And he'll never again betray us
With a sneak attack, I'd bet.

We will fill a date with Hitler,
Mussolini and Tojo,
So will make a trip to Berlin,
Then to Rome and Tokyo;
But it's now farewell, good neighbors!
As my grip I've got to pack;
So just keep the home fires burning.
For I'll soon be coming back.

Your columnist has never been very proficient at games—but I like to play dominoes, anyhow.
My favorite opponent used to be a hotel proprietor in a West Texas town (when I lived out there).
He was a good player and on the rather rare occasions that I would plunk down a rock and score 15 or 20, he would drily remark:
"Blind hog found an acron."
That will give you the general idea as to my ability.

However, I used to mystify acquaintances by informing them that I had such delicate powers of perception that I could tell,
when a domino was face down, which end had the most spots on it, provided it was not a double.
I would spin the domino and explain that the end with the most spots would wobble a little differ-ently; though, of course, since they didn't have such marvelous eyesight, they couldn't see the difference. They would scoff—but I picked the right end every time.

The dominoes had an eagle design on the back and the eagle faced the way that the most spots were.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes on an assignment to Puerto Rico where Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, is stationed as a U. S. Army intelligence officer. On the boat she meets a young Puerto Rican, Miguel Valera, and an engineer named Richard Taussig, of whom she is immediately suspicious. She does not know that he is, in fact, a German agent ordered to destroy Puerto Rico's water supply. When Anne's bags are searched she suspects Taussig. She goes to his hotel room to investigate and is surprised by a man she recognizes as Miguel Valera. Valera is talking to Pete Wilcox.

CHAPTER V

Pete blew a large white ring of cigarette smoke out in front of him and watched it dissolve in the cool silver air. Miguel Valera had been educated in the States—he ought to have learned that you don't discuss a girl with a man you scarcely know. He took a deep breath and said nothing.

"I'm sorry if I've offended you," Miguel Valera said quietly. He put down his glass. "I thought you were a close friend of hers."

"I am."

"In that case, if you will allow me to offer you some advice—Send her back to the States on Wednesday's Clipper."

He got up.

"Good night, Captain Wilcox."

It was almost eleven when Anne got out of the elevator and went over to the desk. There was a note in her mail box from Pete, and a couple of air-mail letters from home.

She went out onto the porch and sat down to read her mail. She must be careful of her skin, her mother said, and not go without a hat. Her father hoped she was having fun and wouldn't fall in love with any damned native. She smiled, put the letters in her bag, and opened Pete's note.

"Anne—You're lurching with me. Same time, same place. Pete."

She got up. As she started to go back into the lobby a big shiny black limousine with a uniformed chauffeur pulled up under the portico. Anne's heart jumped. Miguel Valera was getting out. With him was his father, Don Alvaro. For an instant her impulse was to run. But she couldn't. Miguel had seen her. It was an important moment—something profoundly deep inside her told her it was one of the most important moments of her life. Then he was coming toward her. And she mustn't let him know she knew.

"Good morning! This is awfully nice!"

With the speed of light something so concealed that it was almost imperceptible relaxed behind Miguel Valera's gray-green eyes. He smiled warmly, taking her friendly outstretched hand. Anne's face brightened. She'd done it. He didn't know... and the rest was easy.

"You remember my father?"

"Of course."

She smiled at Don Alvaro, standing aloof and dignified in the archway waiting for his son. He had on the same white drill semi-military uniform—or another like it, because he was spottedly starched and ironed—and the same gray felt hat in his hand.

"Good morning," she said. She didn't know whether it should be Mr. or Senator Don, so she didn't say his name at all.

"Good morning, Senorita."

Don Alvaro bowed with formal courtesy. His eyes meeting hers with X-ray clarity were old and wise and calm. Yet somewhere in them was a veiled shadow of the same subtle resentment she'd felt so sharply and undisguisedly in Graciela's.

She held out her hand simply. As simply, Don Alvaro took it. In the brief instant her eyes were raised to his, calm and trusting as a child's, the heavy load he had carried since his son's return had vanished. He smiled.

"Will you have coffee with us, Senorita?"

Miguel, reaching in his pocket for his lighter, stopped his hand abruptly. He had known his father would like her... he couldn't help it when he once knew her; but he had expected a long uphill climb before more than a truce prevailed. He glanced at his father out of the corner of his eye, not entirely convinced.

"I'd love to," Anne was saying. Wilcox didn't know, he thought, how much it had taken for him to suggest sending her back to the States. He watched her slim flame-tipped body moving easily beside his father's erect firm figure. Independence was a spiritual and physical as well as a social and economic quality. You could spot an American girl anywhere in the world. The way she moved was even more revealing than the way she dressed.

"Just so long as it doesn't get her into trouble," he thought. "She's not half as sophisticated as she looks."

Pete Wilcox sat at his desk at General Headquarters, going through the morning's reports from the Department's under-cover agents in Puerto Rico. It was a curious assortment, but no more curious than the assortment of people who sent it in. Army Intelligence spreads like a sensitive plant over the entire Caribbean area.

He looked at his watch. It would be hours before he saw Anne—if she showed at all. He wished to God she'd stayed at home. There was only one ray of comfort in the immediate present. Tied to his desk with the ball and chain of Army regulations like the prisoners of Old Morro, he got some relief from the fact that Miguel Valera wanted her to go home. It meant at any rate that he wasn't going all out to glamorize her into staying.

And there was one other dropped in passing by the General's aide. Old Iron Lung (namely Colonel Mortimer St. Clair De Voe, Engineer in Charge of Maintenance and Construction of the Caribbean Area) had said to tell the C.O., with his compliments, that he didn't give a blank blank blank if the Eternal Himself sent the Prophet Hezekiah down to Puerto Rico. Nobody was seeing the details of the pumps at Borinquen, or any place else he was in charge of. He would be glad to write the Senate of the United States, individually and collectively, and tell them so by blank.

"What did the General say?" some one had asked.

"The General?" said the aide.

"Oh, the General. The General grinned, and sent Mr. Taussig, plus a copy of the Senate resolution they haven't passed yet for Old Iron Lung's pet project on Tortilla Cay, to the old boy, both with his compliments. So Mr. Taussig is on the Engineer's hands, not ours."

Pete looked down at the papers in front of him. He'd been trying to get up nerve to ask for a week's leave. It wasn't nerve so much, actually, as proper self-control when Colonel Fletcher turned him down. He could hear his "This is the Army, Captain Wilcox, in case you've forgotten." He read absently through the report of a dance-hall girl at a dive on La Marina that was out of bounds for soldiers, put it aside, read another, and started in on a third.

... the heavy load he had carried since his son's return had vanished.

"This man is not a personal enemy to me," he read methodically. "He is of ancient and honorable lineage and his family are all thieves, throat-cutters and swine. He is without principle himself as all his generations before him."

Pete stopped abruptly, not because the tone of the letter was unusual but because of the name he suddenly saw staring up at him from the florid script.

"Miguel Valera seeks to undermine the government. He has been seen by me in conversation with a man who is known to steal a box of dynamite from Isla Grande and dump it in the sea off La Perla when the sailors come so they find nothing. Miguel Valera was seen by me later with an American who is hired by the Viego Rum Company. The American whose name is George raised his glass and drank the toast to the First President of Puerto Rico. I write without bitterness. My grandfather was killed in falling in machinery at Valera Central."

Pete put the letter aside with a scowl. Vindictiveness wasted as much time as stupidity. He went patiently on till he came to the last letter in the pile. It was on cheaper paper than most of them even, and was signed with the initial "D."

"Miguel Valera, son of Senor Alvaro Miguel Valera y Delgado, seen by me this day speaking in back room of bar of La Rosa with Salvatore Vegas. Salvatore steal dynamite from Isla Grande and throw in the sea. The family Salvatore work long time in the sugar mill of Valera. Salvatore of good information of machines."

Her high heels clicked across the bare wood floor of the Club house porch like the sharp tattoo of a savage drum. Pete watched her, his face a grim tight mask. Then he turned abruptly and went out the other way.

"Don't you dare, Peter Wilcox," Her voice was low and quivering. "I won't go. I'll leave San Juan when I'm good and ready and not one minute before. And I hate you! I'd never have believed you could be so contemptible! Good-by."

Her high heels clicked across the bare wood floor of the Club house porch like the sharp tattoo of a savage drum. Pete watched her, his face a grim tight mask. Then he turned abruptly and went out the other way.

"One of the bloodiest battles the Conquistadores ever fought they fought right out there, Miss Heywood," Pete said. He waved his hand out over the rolling green golf course in front of El Morro's Officers Club. "It was in 1625, in case you have your notebook with you. I'll try to supply you with one fact a day. It's usually tourists who supply us with facts, but you don't seem to have your guide book with you."

Anne put down her coffee cup and looked at him across the table.

"Pete," she said evenly. "—What's the matter with you?"

"Who, me?"

"You," she said. "You've been perfectly foul all through lunch, and you know it. What's the matter?"

He took his last cigarette out, wadded the empty package and dropped it into the ash tray in front of him. He could see the warm flush creeping up into her cheeks and her tortoise-shell cat's eyes getting darker... storm warnings flying in the Caribbean.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I suppose it's because I'm worried about you."

Then he could have kicked himself across the graveyard into the Atlantic. That was just the thing he shouldn't have said. He waited for her to flare up and make some stinging retort. But she didn't.

"May I ask why you're worried about me?" she inquired calmly.

Somebody must have told her about counting ten since he'd left New York, he thought.

"You may ask, but I can't tell you," he said quietly. "That's the trouble."

He looked at her sitting there—cool and confident, and a babe in the woods, actually. If he could just take her by the back of the neck, the way you did a kitten—or a Latin woman—and put her in a plane and say "Go home!" everything would be easy. But he couldn't. Nobody could. Or if he could tell her why. His job prevented that. Anyway, it would probably be just the thing that would make her stay... even if she believed him.

"Look, Anne," he said. They were at the far end of the open porch. The boys had cleared empty tables around them. "You know I love you..."

"If it's jealous pique, dear..." He interrupted her calmly. "It isn't. You're probably sick of hearing me say it, so let's skip it. The point is, I like you, too. They're different. And I think you like me."

"Oh, Pete," she began.

He gave her a twisted grin to try to conceal the sudden ache inside him. When her voice was like that it reduced his insides to quivering jelly.

"The point is," he went on unsteadily, "I'm going to ask you to do something and not ask any questions, or try to guess the answers. Just trust your Uncle Pete... just once."

He saw the shadow behind her dark curling lashes and the almost imperceptible lines between her eyebrows. He liked her eyebrows—they were dark and thick so that they accentuated her slim oval face... not thin plucked lines that made her look like a scared siren.

She looked at him a clear steady instant before she said, "You want me to go home, don't you, Pete?"

"Yes. On tomorrow's Clipper. It's full, but I can manage that."

She looked up at him. "Pete," she said. "I know it isn't on account of Miguel. I mean, it isn't because you're jealous of him, and... and like Sue Porter. And if it's Mr. Taussig..."

She hesitated.

"Well, I'm not afraid of him. Maybe I could even... even help you, I mean..."

He stared at her. Without even being aware of it, he had slipped in the connecting link he'd been racking his brain all morning to find for himself. Taussig and his sanitary engineering. Miguel Valera and Salvatore Vegas. And she was already in it... a child playing dolls with a stick of dynamite. He pushed his chair back abruptly.

"You're going home tomorrow, Anne."

Her eyes flashed dark brown and green.

"I am not!"

"You are too. You're a crazy fool. You don't know what you're getting into. This place is a keg of nitroglycerine and you're lighting matches to powder your nose. You're getting on that plane tomorrow morning if I have to tie your hands and feet and put you on it myself. And as for that spic you—"

He stopped abruptly. She was standing on the other side of the table, erect and vibrant as a streak of flame from a blow torch, her eyes sheets of molten gold, her face pale with anger.

"Don't you dare, Peter Wilcox," Her voice was low and quivering. "I won't go. I'll leave San Juan when I'm good and ready and not one minute before. And I hate you! I'd never have believed you could be so contemptible! Good-by."

Her high heels clicked across the bare wood floor of the Club house porch like the sharp tattoo of a savage drum. Pete watched her, his face a grim tight mask. Then he turned abruptly and went out the other way.

GOD'S EXCEEDING GREAT PROMISES

LESSON TEXT—II Peter 1:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—He hath granted unto us His precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature.—II Peter 1:4, R. V.

Growth in grace and in knowledge of Christ are as normal and expected of the child of God as bodily growth of the physical child. Tragic as is the failure of one to develop physically, it is even more distressing and sad in the spiritual realm. Yet it is a common thing in our churches, where only comparatively few believers even come to full stature in Christ, where more have only a partial growth, and some are forever babes in Christ.

God has made perfect provision for us, and has in His Word given plain and explicit instructions on how to gain spiritual development.

I. All Things Provided (vv. 1-4).

In the physical world we are able to provide, at least in some degree, what is needed. We also know where to find mental food. Spiritual provision can come only from God, and we find from these verses that He has provided not just a small portion, or a limited ration, but "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," through the knowledge of Christ.

The "exceeding great and precious promises" of God are the abundant portion of the believer. They are sure promises, based in the altogether dependable Word of God.

God's provision for us in Christ has made it unnecessary to look elsewhere. Here is escape from the world's corruption, the new nature in Christ, faith, grace, peace, power—all in Him.

The opposite is also true, that without Christ men have only the weak and disappointing help of men on which to draw. Of such foolish ones the Lord said through Jeremiah the prophet that they "have committed two evils: They have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water" (Jer. 2:13).

II. All Diligence Required (vv. 5-7).

There is something that the Christian can do to insure his growth in grace. He is to be diligent, that is, have an earnest purpose and zeal to go ahead spiritually. This calls for application and endeavor, just as progress in any other sphere of life, and possibly more.

Faith is the foundation of all such growth and without it there is nothing on which to build. But on it, or better, "in" it, we have all these other Christian graces springing up, as we give "all diligence" to encourage their growth.

Notice the ascending scale. Faith leads to virtue, that is, courageous, resolute Christian character. Then comes knowledge—the intelligent understanding and discernment of truth. This is bound together by temperance, meaning self-control. Next is patience, that steady endurance which keeps going in spite of trial or disappointment.

The sixth note in this octave of graces is godliness, which speaks of piety, true devotion to God, and reverence for His name. Such a believer will love his brethren in all brotherly kindness; and that leads us to the high point of love (the real meaning of "charity," v. 7). Here love for God is obviously in mind, as the crowning grace of the believer.

III. All Eternity Assured (vv. 8-11).

We should look forward to that abundant "entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" spoken of in verse 11. There is such a thing as being saved "so as by fire" (I Cor. 3:15), slipping into heaven with nothing to show for our life as followers of Christ here on earth (read I Cor. 3:12-15).

God does not want for His people such an unseemly entrance upon eternity. Why should we be satisfied so to live that it may be true of us. Saved? Yes, but that is all! Are you satisfied with that prospect? We should note, too, that this growth in grace will show itself in our daily life. It will keep us from being "barren (idle) and unfruitful" (v. 8). The Christian life must not be barren of true service for Christ, nor unfruitful of gracious harvest for Him. We are not on a sort of spiritual joy ride, sitting at ease as we speed on to the heavenly dwelling places.

Works do not save a man. We are justified before God by faith. But our faith is justified before men by our works of righteousness. Fruit grows on the living and healthy tree. Observe that the Christian who lacks these graces (Do you?) is a nearsighted one who lacks both vision and grateful remembrance of God's loving-kindness (v. 9). How many members of our churches need their spiritual memory jogged and their spiritual eyes anointed with God's "eyesalve" (Rev. 3:18).

Promise:

You will be missed . . . but not when hope is small

And I revolt against the tricks of fate,

You will be missed . . . but not when I recall

The awesome shutting of a quiet gate,

Not when the winds come racing down the sky

And there is chill and famine in the air . . .

Not when the heart is desolate and dry . . .

Not when the eyes are mirrors of despair . . .

You will be missed when life is at its best

When every rose has opened to the sun,

You will be missed when I no longer quest . . .

With all goals made and every victory won;

For this is love . . . to share the least delight

And bear alone the terror and the night!

—P. S.

Britishers in Tunisia are splitting their sides over this one. One of the Tommies there lost his bayonet, and rather than face the consequences of admitting the misdeed, he carved out an excellent imitation of the missing weapon. For weeks he went about his duties with the fake concealed in his scabbard, safe from censure so long as his handiwork went undetected. When the inevitable order came to "Fix Bayonets," however, he was undone. He simply stood there, his scabbard untouched.

The sergeant demanded an explanation. "It's a promise I made my father," said the Tommy. "As he lay on his death-bed I told him I would never bare a bayonet on the anniversary of his death."

"That's the damndest fish story I ever heard!" the sergeant thundered. "Lemme see that bayonet!"

"For breaking a solemn promise," said the Tommy as he slowly drew forth the bayonet, "—may the Lord turn it to wood!"

An MGM writer decided he wanted to get into the Army. "I'm serious," he told pals. "I want to be one of the best soldiers."

And this is what happened at the induction center. He remarked that the place was crowded and that it was so stuffy. The psychiatrist heard him and marked down "Claustrophobia."

"Oh, please," said the scrivener, "don't do that, I'm just over-anxious."

The man wrote: "Nervous."

"Oh, look now," said the lad. "I'm not nervous. I was drinking last night."

The man wrote: "Alcoholic."

"But I don't drink much," he interrupted. "I'm all keyed up. To be awake I took benzedrine."

The man wrote: "Drug addict."

The poor guy is back at MGM.

When Larry Lesueur, the CBS correspondent, visited a soldier's hospital in Moscow, he chatted with a wounded man who the doctors said wouldn't be able to fight again. Lesueur asked the soldier what he planned to do and was told that he intended to go back to the front.

"You can't," said Lesueur, "—there are plenty of men to take your place."

"You don't understand," was the Russian's reply. "No one can take another's place in a fight."

A reader requests the origin of the word "racket." It was underlined for "party." In the old days in New York on the lower East Side when mobsters ran a dance or affair for a pal in a jam—they sold tickets to it.

"We're gonna have a racket Friday night," they'd say. Often small-time gangsters would employ that theme to get ready money, with no thought of holding the event. Such cheats were called "racketeers." And when a stranger was being checked, they'd ask: "What's his racket?"

Some of us were gabbing about pungent drama criticism. A Broadway vet recalled Woolcott's slap at a second-rate musical. "The plot," he wrote, "hasn't a leg to stand on and there are chorus girls to match."

Pvt. M. Wilk of "This Is the Army" tells of the bloke who brought his troubles to The Good Will Hour. "Mr. Anthony," he began, "my best friend ran away with my wife. They've been gone a month—and, Mr. Anthony—I miss him!"

Sights You Don't See From a Bus: The elderly lady, who peddles posies on Broadway, wearing the four blue star buttons as proudly as MacArthur wears his four stars . . . The steady customer at the Hickory House who brings his own potatoes . . . The midtowners studying a sign painter near the Follies stage entrance, with all those shapely anked chorines nearby! . . . The West 48th Street block between 5th and 6th where you can buy almost anything—from a hand grenade to a home in the country wholesale.

Seaman 2-c Edward Bankhead, stationed at Farragut, Idaho, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Ensey, the past week.

A soldier in Uncle Sam's army wrote the letter below to his sister, and we yield this space to it:

"Dear Sis:
In writing this letter to you I don't know where to start first. So many things have happened since I wrote last.

"Well, to begin with, I have escaped death at the hand of the enemy in a way so amazing I am still in a daze. You remember I told you when I knew I was going over, I was going armed with the Bible? That Bible is the reason I am here and able to write this letter to all America.
"Here is the story: My buddy and I were sent out on duty with our equipment in the work I told you before was our job. We had just received information—the most important in weeks, when we were discovered by the enemy. I gave my buddy the information we had collected and told him to beat it, and prepared myself to face them. It was the first time I'd been faced with the necessity of pointing my gun at a man and blasting the life from him. I thought fast; then I said, 'Lord's it's your responsibility now.' My buddy had not obeyed my order, he had no such scruples. As I reached for my carbine, a shot from them struck me in the breast and blasted me down.

"Thinking I was dead, my pal jumped for me, grabbed my carbine as well as his own, stood astride my body, blasting away with both guns. He was shot too—his knees with three bullet wounds, but when he finished there was not one of them left. He was amazed when I rolled over and tried to get up. The force of the bullet had stunned me. Dazedly, I wondered why I pulled that little Bible out of my pocket and in utter muteness, looked at the ugly hole in the cover. It had ripped through Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, on through the other books

"Where do you think it stopped? In the middle of Psalm 91, pointing like a finger at these verses: 'A thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee. Only with thine eyes shall thou behold and see the reward of the wicked.' Sis, when I read that verse, it raised me three feet off the ground. I did not know there was such a verse in the Bible. I'd been reading mostly in the New Testament. I read the rest of the chapter. In utter humility I said, 'Thank you, precious God,' and felt like a little boy that escaped the mouth of an enemy of prey. When I got my buddy back to the post, he said, 'Luke, I've had enough. This convinces me. Come on—I want to get right with my God starting NOW. He wouldn't let them tend his wounds. He said nothing matters now but this. He stayed on his knees, his body became numb, he couldn't move, but he wouldn't give up. When the Lord finally came in he moved. That soldier went crazy for God.

"Since I've given my heart to God, and talked with the boys, holding meetings and prayed with them, God has given me 25 souls. Twenty-five of my buddies have prayed and come out for God. God has even given me my General. It took a long time. He was so dignified. But God told me to go after him, and I stuck on his trail until he was grounded and came through. The spirit of God sort of hovered over that tent with a golden haze.

"I tell you, Sis, prayer is going to win this war, not guns alone. God is bringing them in one by one. The whole company will be a company of praying men. God has promised them to me, given me the assurance. Think of it—120 praying men and one general in one regiment! When that happens this unit will be unconquerable. Pray Sis, like you have never prayed before. Tell everyone to pray. Tell all America to go on its knees. Before each decisive victory anywhere over here, sometimes for days, there has been a feeling of praying away—far away. The feeling is so strong, you can hear it. One said, 'Sounded like people praying from some distant place.' So pray every one. It will have to come from afar off. No one prays in this land of utter desolation. God has turned His face away from the horror and destruction men have brought upon themselves. Again, I plead, tell America to pray.

"This war will not end until Nations and people have paid in blood and tears for not trusting God in their hearts, out of their nations, out of their hands.

"Tell them to send Bibles and more Bibles. A Bible will give him confidence that God is with him. I'd like to have this letter broadcast from every radio station in America. Try to get it on the air, in papers, in anything that is printed. Make copies of it. Send it from coast to coast. Tell them that the army wants prayers and Bibles.

"And you complacent, bridge-playing, fox-trotting, cocktail-drinking mothers, why didn't you teach your sons about God, instead of handing him a cocktail glass and a dance program. Get on your knees and ask God to forgive you your sins.

"Then pray for the army. Pray, pray, pray. And you dignified preachers, why didn't you teach your people to pray, to follow God instead of standing, before them in your silken robes and reading them the Ritual. Only atonement from sin can stop the shelling, the killing, the murdering. Even the shells that come whizzing through the air scream only one word—atonement.

"I could go on, but I'm tired, so weary, but in all so happy to see them coming to God, one by one. So tell them to pray, atone for sin and keep praying. When you send things to your boys, send Bibles. They want Bibles.

35 Young People Lead in Candle Lighting Service

Last Sunday night at the First Methodist Church the program was entirely in charge of the Young People and their sponsors. Mrs. O. B. Jordan was assisted by Miss Ordette Cope in presenting a very forceful pageant, which she had written, entitled, "Youth Carries The Light". Thirty-five young people wore robes and filled the choir for the songs. A violin and a vocal solo added to the impressiveness of the service. Eight of the young people had speaking parts in the pageant. At the close of the service, each of the young people accepted the challenge of THE CHURCH to carry the LIGHT OF GOD'S LOVE to a needy world. The Spirit of Youth had their candle lighted by the Spirit of the Church, and then in turn lighted the candles of the entire group of young people.

This service was he second in a series of special services being held each night this week and next Sunday at the First Methodist Church. Services each night at 8:30.

Several Attending Pastor's School At S.M.U. Next Week

Mrs. O. E. Melton plans to go with Rev. and Mrs. DeVore to Dallas Monday to attend the annual session of the Texas Pastor's School. This is one of several schools held in the state and has been having an increasing attendance from year to year.

Some 500 ministers and several hundred laymen and laywomen meet at S.M.U. for 12 days of study and worship together. These Schools have some of the characteristics of the old brush arbor meetings of frontier days. Leading preachers of the nation, from all denominations, are engaged sometimes 3 years in advance, to come and preach, morning, noon and night. Throughout the day classes are held and each one attends classes three hours a day. The Great, new, air conditioned, Fondren library is one of the finest in the South, and is open to all for study and
