Springtime Means House Cleaning Time and house cleaning time means storing more things away in the attic or the garage—things that will probably never be used again but are just too valuable to throw away.

Instead of putting them away out of sight this year why not place a small "FOR SALE" advertisement in the Herald Classified column and rid yourself of them for once and for all.

Legion Show A Success

"What Price Glory" Here Monday and Tuesday; Packed House
at Every Performance

"What Price Glory," the great war comedy, brought to Perryton under the auspices of the American Legion, was exhibited at the American Theatre on Monday and Tuesday nights to capacity crowds. Everyone that saw the picture was carried away with the realism of the many scenes.

This picture comes nearer portraying life in France during the World War than any picture ever made. The advance ticket sale was in charge of the American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. W. D. Tenney directing the sales campaign for that organization. Approximately a third of the gross proceeds from the picture was obtained from the advance ticket sales. The Legion and the Auxiliary netted $95.00 from the showing of this wonderful film.

The rain on last Thursday night measured .23 of an inch according to the government gauge kept by Attorney Jack Allen. Very little moisture was reported from the south part of the county. MONDAY AND RUNNING A-
HEAD OF SCHEDULE
IN GOOD SHAPE

Irving "Speed" Wallace who left here on Wednesday of last week, on a 1500 mile one man "bunion derby", was at Oberlin, Kansas on Monday. Oberlin is near the north line of Kansas.

A card mailed on Friday after leaving Perryton from Garden City, Kansas said that he had developed nice blistered feet and a couple of shin splints without any difficulty. "Speed" also stated that if the end of the run comes as easy as the blistered feet and the shin splints it will be easy.

H. Clay Evans, trainer of Wallace, wired the Herald from Oberlin on Monday as follows: "Speed" Wallace arrived here from Perryton, Texas after passing through Oklahoma and most of Kansas, in splendid physical condition although he suffered much from blistered feet and shin splints. Small Blaze Monday

Department Extinguishes Fire
at W. M. Glasgow Residence Monday

The fire department was called to the residence of W. M. Glasgow Monday afternoon to put out a fire which had started in the partition wall behind the kitchen range.

The range was very close to the wall and the heat from the stove pipe ignited the lathes in the wall. The fire was put out in a few minutes by the use of chemicals and a small garden hose, it being unnecessary to turn the water in the regular fire hose.

The damage to the building, which is owned by Jno. N. Stump, was slight. It was covered by insurance. Mr. and Mrs. Glasgow will suffer some loss to furniture and household effects which were damaged in being removed hurriedly from the house. Building Golf Course

New Links Will Be Located on Jines Springs Ranch
Sporty Course

A force of men are now building a new course for the Perryton Golf Club. The new links will be one of the sportiest courses to be found in this part of the southwest. There will be an abundance of natural hazards and traps. The grounds are located on the Jines Springs ranch on Wolf Creek just east of the state highway.

R. T. Shindler, M. R. Coffee and R. P. Hurn directed the laying out of the new course. Plans are under consideration for the building of a shelter house. Perryton golfers are looking forward with much anticipation to the completion of the new nine hole course. Abe Green and Miles Edwards went out Tuesday afternoon. No report was made by Mr. Green as to his score but he did say that he lost two pounds of excess weight.

The present course in the west part of town will be abandoned as it has been found impossible to maintain properly. A long term lease has been taken on the Jines land and playing will be limited to actual club members. One of the many advantages of the new location is the fact that it is located but a short distance from the Jines Springs swimming pool and picnic grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Black and children visited with Mrs. Black's sister Mrs. Jesse Stump and family and attended the special program given at the Dunkard church, Waka, Sunday evening.

T. L. Andrews of the Magnolia Petroleum Company, Amarillo was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dodson Sunday.

TWO MORE GET RESULTS FROM HERALD WANT ADS

Almost every day, some one comes into our office to tell us of the wonderful results that they have obtained from the use of the Herald classified department. Just the other day, Harvey Wilson, owner of the Plainview Dairy, advertised that he wanted to purchase a five barrel water tank. Mr. Wilson says that the paper was hardly off the press before he had several calls. He found the tank that he wanted and the price reasonable. And the little three line local in the Herald cost him but 30c.

J. A. Jones, proprietor of the Jones Furniture Store, advertised some used well casing and pipe in last week's paper. Mr. Jones says that he disposed of the pipe at once and that he had a number of calls from the advertisement.

CHAPTER IV

Daylight made clear two facts: the sun had struck in such a way that it would be impossible to get off; the island uninhabited. As the explanatory boat round a spur of reef that covered the lagoon, opened out, the largest island from the sea, Palmyra burst into an exclamation of light.

She turned to John and Van. "It pretty," she said, "but—cruel." She felt a first little shiver of realization. "There is nothing upon it, shelter, no food." Van gave her a haggard look. "Id," he said, "there's not a drop of water. When we're used at we bring ashore. . . ."

Thurston whirled upon him. "Don't!" he cried. "Don't dare tell us that. We'll filter salt water through this sand or rig a condenser with junk from the wreck."

Palmyra had not been conscious of Thurston's leadership. All hours after the catastrophe, attitude was typical of them all, haps even of Thurston himself. ere had been something to do; stronger nature had asserted it. And the ship's company, ascending thus automatically, with reely any registered sense of nge, paid him its highest comment.

he had not thought to wonder Thurston, rather than her fine, had been chosen. He had a reputation for efficiency in handling a. Van had had neither occasion nor opportunity.

Palmyra, through her glasses, saw three men got into this boat, e seamen. The third, who had reconnoitering from the cross-trees, appeared to be a white man.

She watched them as they pulled rapidly through the passage and across the lagoon. Then in astonishment, she lowered the binoculars to stare at Van Buren Rutger.

He was dancing over the coral clinkers like a musical comedy buffoon.

"By the Great God Cash!" he cried. "If it isn't li'l old Pirate Burke. Almost from the moment Ponape Burke came running up the sands Palmyra perceived a difference.

Was it that the ridiculous habiliments of the Rainbow had given way to the starched white of the tropical ship's master?

Or was it that she missed the obtrusive humility? No longer a show-away, he spoke to Mrs. Crawford as one master of craft to another; a full note of equality.

Perhaps, after all, the fact might be no more than a juvenile sort of vanity in himself as master of that swift sail; vanity bubbling over at unexpectedly finding its audience. And he must have had some vague hope of such a reunion as this. For he was saying now that, on the Rainbow, he'd withheld the fact he had a vessel of his own lying-up at Honolulu; withheld it on the chance of "surprising 'em somewhere out here."

There could be no question of his fond pride in that fast craft. And he had seen . . .

He interrupted himself with that oddly un-adult mirth of his.

Had they seen her name? Oh, they'd never guess when they did see They'd never guess in a thousand years. Pigeon of Noah.

Van seized his hand with impulsive warmth. "Why then this must be . . . Why, Noah, I didn't recognize you now you've shaved."

Burke guffawed delightedly. "I sure will feel like Noah," he said, "a-taking you all on the Ark, two by two."

He turned, presently, to the pile of salvaged stores and gear. The Pigeon, as was evident, could stow only the more valuable part. The rest must be left under canvas and sent for.

Details were arranged. Burke would get aboard at once to take charge on the schooner. The yacht's launch, with three of her own men, would tow Burke's boat out, both were unloading at the Lupe-a-Noa. Thurston would get his other boats into the water, sort over the supplies.

"We'll stow the very best first," said Burke in conclusion, "and then see what space we got left for second rate cargo."

The launch hove a line to the Pigeon's boat and one of the native boys stood, ready to carry his master out.

Now, however, Palmyra unable to satisfy a youthful poignant curiosity at long distance through her binoculars, spoke up eagerly. "Oh, Captain Burke, do please take me with you! I'd just love to be first aboard."

"Me, too," cried Constance. The man was pleased, flattered.

"But—" he hesitated awkwardly—"the boat's heavy loaded and there won't be no room aboard while we're taking cargo. So I better invite only one this trip." He winked at Thurston. "And Miss Tree she asked first, and seeing as how she was the best student I had for my South Sea lectures, seems as if she had ought t'be first t'lay aboard a genuine South Sea trader."

Thurston acquiesced. But as Burke was being carried down to the boats, John turned to Johannsen, acting mate, and said: "You yourself be one of our three men to go aboard and—stay."

The big sailor gave him a look to see if the order had more than routine significance, then lumbered after Burke.

In the boat the girl's mind was gradually brought back to the something in Burke's manner which she had not been able to analyze. For now it was so noticeable upon him that he was either constrained, absent or too painstakingly voluble.

"And how is Olive?" she asked in an awkward interval. "He's with you, of course?"

Ponape Burke assented. "Sort of in charge aboard," he explained. "I ain't got a mate. Still talking about you; yer name and yer—red hair."

The boat rounded the stern and then the girl looked up to find—as if his eyes never ceased to follow—the grinning stare of the man Olive fixed upon her just as it had faded out at Honolulu.

His great naked body rose above the rail and thick bare arm came extending itself down toward her, inexorably.

The square fingers closed and her own hand was swallowed, disappeared in that grip to the wrist. There came a pull, as if the arm were to follow the hand in, and then Palmyra found herself on deck and standing free.

Johannsen had already clambered to the deck.

"We gota t'keep four boats moving," Burke explained. "One pulling ashore empty, one loading there, one coming out with cargo, one discharging here. Each o'er boats' crews'll bring me a load and take back an empty at once. L'll clear the boat y'leave. So no, you Rainbow boys, t'start her off, pass up the stuff in my own boat and take her ashore, while my kanakas tackle the launch."

The girl's voice rose in surprise: "Oh, but they're not going already?"

Burke looked, grinning, from her to the naked savages of his crew. "Sort o' wild like, eh?" he asked.

But Johannsen reassured her: "I'm ordered to stay, miss."

Burke shot him a glance. "Sure."

Then to the other two: "Yohannsen'll tinker up the motor so, next trip, the launch won't have t'be pulled in."

A minute later the boat had cast off and the sailors were settling to their work. Johannsen, watching them, stood negligently at the rail.

"Handle her gently, boys," called Burke. "She's getting old."

The boat was now clear by perhaps ten fathoms.

Suddenly Ponape Burke, with an agility unexpected in that plump body, leaped forward and lunged at the unsuspecting Johannsen's back.

The next second the sailor was in the water.

Burke whirled, whipped out an order sprang to the wheel. The kanakas worked like mad. Another order and the sails filled, the deck listed down and the Pigeon of Noah was under way.

The man at the wheel burst into that tittering laugh of his, now strained, false, sharp-edged with excitement, exultation.

"Remember, girl?" he cried. "Below on the Rainbow—night black? Wanted t'scare 'em a bit, says you? Pirates, bucket o' blood?" his laugh rose into a crow of triumph. "Well, kid, what about this here? Give 'em a hell of a startle, eh Palmy?"

As the Lupe-a-Noa filled away, the girl ran to the rail and sent over the water a frantic cry.

In the boat the two sailors sat, rigid, their oars poised. The red face of Johannsen emerged from the sea, dripping, blank with incredulity, convulsed with anger. Ponape Burke's strategy had deprived them of the launch in which they could have overhauled the schooner.

Ashore, the castaways stood perplexed, alarmed. Palmyra's action, rather than her voice, threw them into panic. They pointed, shouted, ran here and there, futile, surd.

To Van Buren Rutger rushed the girl's mother with something in her hands. It was a rifle. As one of his accomplishments, Van had won trophies on the range. But now, confronted by that violence his training had taught him never touched the life of a gentleman, he faltered, palsied in fear of wounding the girl herself.

Then John Thurston snatched the rifle. There was a flash and a bullet struck the Lupe-a-Noa, shattering the glass on the binnacle. A second flash, and Burke himself staggered back. But before the schooner could fall off, he clutched the wheel again with one hand. As his left arm hung the spot of blood, spreading slowly on the white cotton, was like some brilliant blossom.

Burke belched his rage. He had swung the vessel over so that Palmyra, all unaware stood in the line of fire. Thurston could not shoot again.

At this triumph, Burke regained his good humor. The wound had proved unimportant. "John's the only man in that bunch," he conceded amiably. "If he was stealing my girl I'd give him more than a sore arm."

Palmyra was desperate. Behind her, her hand closed on an iron belaying pin. "You—You brute!" she cried. "Turn—this—vessel—Turn it back instantly!"

She jerked the pin from its socket; took a step toward him, her eyes aflame. "You go back to that island . . ."

From behind a hand closed on her wrist. Olive, grinning, took the belaying pin from her fingers, as if they had been a baby's, and returned it to the rack.

Palmyra sank against the cabin, helpless.

Not by accident had the Pigeon of Noah risen from the sea upon the scene of their disaster. Back in the days before Honolulu this spider of a Burke had spun his web. He had talked of the atolls in the terms of a paradise to behold. He had convinced Pederson that, to take advantage of prevailing winds and current, he must lay his course from Honolulu first to the northern Gilberts—Butaritari or Apalang—and thence make north and west into the Marshalls and the Carolines.

Burke had, followed, then, holding back the fast sailing Lupe-a-Noa to match the yacht's pace. Fortune had favored.

Informed as to the lagoons they would make, their order, he had meant to outsaill them to an anchorage and, lying there unsuspected, to seize the girl at some favorable moment ashore. And then, the fleet Pigeon away with none in all those wild seas save the fat old Rainbow to pursue, what could have been more easy?

A sob of self-pity shook the girl though even now she did not, in her innocence, comprehend the depth of his infamy.

The man himself, leaning over the wheel sought, with an honest concern, to soothe her. Even she realized that he was moved by a real earnestness of emotion, conviction.

He gripped his hand upon the wheel in an excess of disdain.

"Cry yer eyes out for yer mother. That can't be helped. But the rest o' them dicky birds?" He snorted in derision. "Why, they . . . Y'think now you'll miss 'em. But wait. Tomorrow, next day. You'll be laughing, too; laughing at all of 'em—at Van. And then . . ."

He spoke with the impressiveness of certitude. "Then you'll be thanking me."

He leered at her humorously. Her hands clenched until the sharp nails brought the blood.

"Don't blame me!" he cried in a sudden flare of emotion. "Don't blame me. Blame yourself. I fought agin it—right along. Didn't I warn you? Warn y'how you'd set a poor starved devil like me a-fire? But you? Y'just had t'keep hanging around: you who was like, like God's daughter. Hanging around and hanging around 'till y'had me fair wild."

The flame of that fire leaped into his eyes.

"I swore then I'd have you. Lucky for yer folks I saw how t'trap y'on here. For, if need was, I'd of killed every soul of 'em in cold blood."

She shrank in loathing.

Burke was silent, conquering that evil flame of passion.

Then shortly: "Original Noah," the man jeered; "he went it blind. But me—I know our mountain top, every inch o'it. And, girl," he warned, "when the Ark does hit dry land, make no mistake. You'll never see ary one o'er folks again. For you, they've perished off the face o' the earth. That flood's made a clean sweep. In all creation there's only you—and me."

Exultation was in his gaze; obscure, intimidating.

"Come, girl, y'shall be a queen."

The Livestock Situation.

The entire live stock industry is interested in watching the results of an experiment being conducted by Vilhelmur Stefanson, noted Arctic explorer, who is attempting to subsist on a strictly fresh meat diet for six months. Physicians are keeping close watch on his physical condition and with the experiment well under way, the explorer is not only failing to show any injurious effects from his diet but is showing every sign of good health.

As a matter of fact, the effort of Stefanson to exist on a diet consisting entirely of meat is not an experiment with him, as he has lived on nothing else but meat on his hazardous trips into the frozen wastes on other occasions. But in this instance, the test is being made under scientific observation in the Bellevue Hospital in New York under the auspices of the Russel Sage Institution of Pathology.

From a medical standpoint, the experiment is naturally of keen interest. For instance, "scurvy" is unknown among the Eskimos of the far North and it is known that they have nothing to eat except meat for long periods at a time. Disease is very infrequent among these people, according to Stefanson, who adds that in the far North, death usually comes as a result of old age or accident. Diseases common to the so-called civilized world are not known in that latitude.

The explorer's diet consists of steak, roast beef, tongue, beef broth, brain and marrow, with liver once a week. The ration consists of 15 ounces of lean meat and 5 ounces of fat.

From the standpoint of the live stock industry, such an experiment is of immense value. Due to the fact that all observations are made by scientists and doctors of wide repute, the results will prove important in off-setting much of the anti-meat propaganda which has been broadcast by faddists and vegetarians. Well meaning physicians no doubt have unwittingly injured the cowman's pocketbook many times by advising patients to refrain from eating meat. The success of Stefanson's meat diet will the propaganda be highly satisfactory to many people who like meat but have been frightened into doing without because of the propaganda of firms advertising substitutes. It is interesting to note that the famous boat crew of the University of California is on a meat diet. The athletes are being fed a pound and a half of porterhouse steak or rib roast at each meal. It is the contention of the trainer that meat builds the brain and brawn and both of these qualities are quite essential to the production of a winning boat crew as well as the healthfulness and success of the average individual.

There is a very decided opinion developing among those in the live stock and meat industry that more facts concerning the value of meat in the diet should be broadcast to the public. In some parts of the country, strong newspaper campaigns are proving to be of immense benefit. That this campaign is proving valuable may be realized when it is seen that the per capita consumption of both pork and lamb is rapidly increasing. Beef producers have been more backward about advertising their products in the press but the success of the pork and lamb interests no doubt will bring about some sort of campaign to stimulate beef consumption.

EXCISE TAX FIGHT RENEWED

100% COOPERATION NEEDED!

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has again tried to stampede congress on the automobile tax question. He appeared before the Senate Finance committee, April 5, and reiterated his stand that Congress will make an irreparable mistake if it does not retain the three per cent war excise tax on passenger automobiles as a permanent, peace-time levy, states V. G. Hill, secretary and manager of the Panhandle Auto club, Amarillo.

He told members of the committee that the reductions voted by the House are more than the treasury will stand, that the Senate must replace certain taxes eliminated by the house bill, and that if the Senate will only put the automobile back at the full rate, the baffling problem of making an anticipated surplus of $212,000,000 take care of the demand for a $290,000,000 tax cut by the House, could be largely solved.

Furthermore, he stated that "The insistent demand for the repeal of this tax does not come from the automobile purchasers, but from the manufacturers and dealers." This is a direct challenge to every motor car owner in this country, and it is now up to the motorist to convince the Senate that Mr. Mellon's statement is not correct, and that every motor car owner is vitally interested in the repeal of the war excise tax.

This is the second time in his Congress that Secretary Mellon has challenged the right of automobile owners to reasonable relief from their hangerover war excise tax. In the first skirmish, which occurred in the House, Mr. Mellon was badly beaten. What the Senate will do depends upon your efforts.

"Have your senators definitely pledged their support to repeal the automobile tax? Whether they have or not, please renew your contacts with them at once and urge that they do everything they can to have the motor levy taken off now. Then strengthen your demands by having persons and local organizations of importance do likewise," suggests Mr. Hill. "We are near the goal in our five-year fight to rid the motorist of the war tax. Let's strike a little harder—and claim the victory!"

One of the Whippo boys is a member of this organiza- tion. They have won first place for the last three years. FOOD FOR ANGELS

It is utterly impossible to successfully practice the culinary art or to become proficient in the cooking of delicious pastry dishes without liberal use of eggs. It is utterly foolish to attempt to use egg substitutes in a false effort to gain economy because where eggs are sacrificed not only is the delicious, peculiar and distinctive flavor of the product missing, but a greater significance is the fact that the health-giving properties supplied by eggs to the particular product in which they are used cannot be supplied in any other way.

Angel Cake represents the acme of perfection in the use of eggs in cooking. It is the master-piece of the bakers art. No product of the oven has the texture, the quality, the delicious flavor of a well mixed and well cooked Angel Cake. It is rightly named for it is "Food for Angels". Now is the time to give to the Angel Cake a regular place in your weekly menu.

Here are three cake receipts which are well worth the interest and effort of every housewife in this broad land of ours. Their frequent use not only insures wholesome, nutritious diet for the family but they provide digestible nutrients and protective food properties at relatively little cost.

Take the whites of 12 eggs, add a pinch of salt and beat thoroughly, add 1/4 of a teaspoonful of Cream-of-Tartar and beat very, very stiff. Have 1 1/2 cups of granulated sugar well sifted and add gradually. Add vanilla as desired. Measure 1 and 1-3 cups of flour after sifting four or five times and fold in. Bake in a moderate oven from thirty-five to fifty minutes in an ungreased angel cake tin.

GOLD CAKE

Gold Cake is the Companion of Angel Cake—Rich bright yellow in color—made from the yolks of eggs left from making the Angel Cake. It carries with it the same appetizing properties and even additional health-giving properties through the high vitamin content of egg yolks.

Take 1 and 1-3 cups sugar and 1-2 cup of butter. Cream together well. Add yolks of 12 eggs well beaten and 2-3 of a cup of milk, 2 cups of flour and 2 teaspoonful of baking powder. Flavor to suit. Bake in a moderate oven.

SUNSHINE CAKE

In Sunshine Cake we have a delicious appetizing, health-giving pastry which can well be made a regular part of the family diet.

Beat the whites of 6 eggs very stiff. Add one cup of sugar and the well beaten yolks. Fold in 3-4 of a cup of flour to which has been added 1-4 of a teaspoonful of baking powder and 1-4 of a teaspoonful of cream-of-tartar. Flavor to suit. Bake from 45 to 50 minutes in an ungreased angel cake tin. Invert and let cool before removing from tin.

Nutrition experts tell us that a more liberal use of eggs by the average American housewife is an efficient and economical thing to do. Instead of eggs for breakfast alone, let us consider them a basic part of breakfast dinner and supper. Let us see that there is at least one course in every meal in which eggs play a prominent part. Eggs are served in combination with vegetables and meat, always with the idea of providing a balanced daily ration for members of the family and through the use of eggs insuring a diet rich in minerals, rich in vitamins and satisfying to the last extreme.

Let us "EAT MORE EGGS FOR VITAMINS" during National Egg Week" May 1st to 7th next!

FARM STOCK

SWINE AILMENT WORRIES OWNERS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Reports from field stations of the United States Department of Agriculture show that much trouble is being experienced by swine owners through the rather widespread prevalence of necrotic enteritis in hogs, a condition sometimes referred to as necrobacillosis. The ailment is characterized by inflammation of the intestines, causing diarrhea, later an impairment in appetite, unthriftiness, weakness and emaciation. While it may be produced by a specific organism, a similar condition may be induced through the feeding of irritating material, such as ensilage agents in stock food or medicine and in garbage, and the taking in of foreign matter when feeding on wet, dirty ground.

Necrotic enteritis frequently occurs as a complication of hog cholera. In many cases it is entirely overlooked in the diagnosis of the more serious disease, hog cholera. In some cases the ailment found uncomplicated is erroneously diagnosed cholera itself and the simultaneous treatment applied when not indicated. The virus given in connection with serum in the simultaneous treatment for hog cholera, when necrotic enteritis is present, only serves to aggravate the existing conditions in the herd and is a waste of time and material. New centers of cholera infection have been created through such serious errors. Then, again, there may be instances when necrotic enteritis is present, but has not sufficiently developed to make a correct diagnosis possible. However, the result of giving virus is the same—unfavorable.

Necrotic enteritis originates in practically all cases from filthy conditions under which hogs are compelled to live, and so the disease is one that can easily be guarded against through the adoption of sanitary measures in swine raising. Once the ailment has advanced there is not much that can be done in the way of treatment. Rough feed and some so-called stock foods and tonics that may contain irritating ingredients should be avoided. The animals should be kept in clean pasture, if available. The feeding of "eggs on muddy ground" is a dangerous practice. Feeding platforms that can be thoroughly cleansed should be provided in the feed lot.

Pulverized copper sulphate (blue vitriol) added to the drinking water in the proportion of 1 ounce to 25 gallons, is recommended as being of some value.

Find Early Colt Gains Are Always Cheapest

Early gains are the cheapest gains with colts as well as with calves, pigs and lambs. Hence it pays to push the young foal along as rapidly as possible, suggests A. B. Caine of Iowa State college, and to do this he strongly urges getting the colt onto a ration of grain at as early an age as possible.

By supplementing the mare's milk with grain, the colt should be well started when weaning time arrives. Mr. Caine says. Oatmeal is one of the feeds which colts will eat more readily while young, he says. Later, oats, bran and a small amount of corn may be substituted. The colt should be allowed all of the clover or alfalfa hay that it will eat.

Grinding grain for colts generally does not pay, Mr. Caine says, especially if the cost of the feed is increased 10 to 15 per cent thereby.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Much of the loss in fall pigs is due to rickets caused by the absence of direct sunlight.

An unhealthy hog is an unprofitable hog, for it will not consume enough feed to be profitable.

Success in raising lambs depends on the kind of ewes in the flock. The ewes should be thrifty and good milkers.

Feed cribs should be conveniently located in regard to the feed lot. This will mean a saving of time and labor.

Here is a mineral mixture: Ten parts wood ashes, ten of 10 per cent acid phosphate, one of common barrel salt.

Mineral mixtures should not be mixed with the grain or mash for pigs. Let them have it free choice in a self-feeder.

"Alfalfa meal" means ground alfalfa leaves. It doesn't mean ground stems. If you buy it, see that the fiber percentage isn't too high.

Wether lambs sell for higher prices on the market than do ram lambs, and lambs which are docked bring more money than those which are not.

The beef producer who can save $1 on the production of 100 pounds of beef by using modern methods is the one who will make the profit and survive.

When buying ewes or when culling the ewe flock, particular attention should be given to their teeth. "Broken-mouthed" ewes (old ewes that are losing their teeth) will not come through the winter in good condition.

METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday, April 22
Sunday School—10:00 a. m.
Sermon, by Pastor—10:55 a. m.

Junior Meeting—4:00 p. m.

Wednesday, April 25
Mid-week Meeting—8:00 p. m.

Thursday, April 26
Choir rehearsal—8:00 p. m.

The pageant on Sunday night will be a scene showing some of the life in the early days of Methodism, depicting how the old preachers and their families lived. The league is giving some very systematic work to the preparation of the program and it will be worth one's while to see it.

The quarterly conference was not so well attended last week but we had a good meeting. We hope that all the sickness will soon be over and the attendance at the services come up again.

The services on next Sunday will be a continuation of those of last Sunday. Other churches are making the future of their retired ministers more comfortable with large endowments. Can we afford to do less? The Presbyterian U. S. A. with a total superannuate endowment of $13,000,000, set to work to raise $15,000,000 additional. They raised the amount sought with $100,000 over.

The Protestant Episcopal church has on hand about $21,000,000 which pays their retired ministers $1,000 per year. Our retired preachers receive on an average less than $200 per annum.

The Methodist Episcopal has an endowment fund of $19,000,000 and plans to raise more. The Northern Baptist fund totals $16,000,000 and plans are now under way to increase this amount. The Congregational church, with only 1160 claimants, has endowment of $10,000,000.

The Methodist church started in 1924 to raise $10,000,000 for their 1000 retired preachers, but at the present time, we have not raised one-half that much. This includes the incomes from all sources, such as the net income from publishing houses, that part of the benevolent funds and money which has been given or willed to us by wealthy people.

The Superintendent of the Sunday School made a special call for the classes to make their pledges and be ready next Sunday for the payment of their pledge. Several of the classes made their pledge last Sunday.—Reporter.

Why It Will Pay Everyone to Wait for The

New FORD Car

We have received several offers of list price for a Model "A" FORD Tudor that has been driven over 5,000 miles.

How much will your car depreciate after being driven 5,000 miles?

The greatest losses in automobiles are caused from depreciation.

There has not been a stock car selling under $1500 that has out performed the New FORD—We have tried this in Perryton.

There is not a car, regardless of price, that rides as good as the FORD on all roads.

There has never been a four cylinder car built in automobile history that has practically no vibration under all speeds as the New FORD.

No one ever expected to buy an automobile of this kind at such a low price—No manufacturer could sell such a car at the price of the New FORD except the Ford Motor Company.

We all know that if it were not for Mr. Ford we would be paying $1500.00 for such a car as we have today.

Baseball Season Opens

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

Two serving secrets that are time-savers for the home-maker may be summed up in these few words:

Prepare foods beforehand whenever possible, so all the fussy work is done during the "cleaning-up" part of the day. Then when ready to serve, one need only lift the dishes out of the oven or refrigerator and place them on the table.

Escalloped and casserole receipts, meat loaf, custards and tapioca deserts lend themselves well to this scheme.

Another short-cut is offered by the compartment plate. Meat, potatoes, a green vegetable and a salad can be artistically arranged on the plate. Then when dessert is in order there is but one dish to remove from each place. This adds tremendously to the efficiency of a meal, and makes easy, pleasant service for all concerned.

Ham and Chicken en Casserole

In a well-buttered casserole put diced chicken and ham. Mix with cream sauce; cover with grated cheese and crumbs and brown.

For cream sauce use: 2 level tablespoons of butter or margarine, same of flour, 1 cup milk, salt and pepper. Blend as usual.

Try These New Easter Eggs

Amber emerald and rose-colored eggs of jelly are the latest thing in the nest. To make them, "blow" the contents from uncooked eggs and seal one end with paraffin. Dissolve flavored gelatin as usual; when cool pour into egg shells and allow to set. To serve, remove the shell from the filling; garnish with whipped cream and maraschino cherries.

Does Your Oven Scorch Cakes?

If bread, cakes and biscuits have a habit of scorching in your oven, set a small pan of salt under the tins and note the improved baking.

Milk Brightens Silver

The silver will be much brighter if you add a little milk to the water in which it is washed.

When the Pans "Stick"

Never scrape a scorched pan. Just sprinkle baking soda over the spots and set aside for a while. The food will soon loosen up and the pan may be easily cleaned.

For Sparkling Windows

A few drops of vinegar added to the water when washing windows gives a fine brilliance to the glass.

Pictures Invade the Kitchen

Since kitchen and cooking equipment have become so colorful, pictures have come into the kitchen, too. Cheery scenes they are—a sunny road winding over country hills; a glimpse of an old-fashioned garden; a holiday at the beach, perhaps. They help—wonderfully—during working hours.

WHY COMMERCIALIZE THE SCHOOLS OF THE COUNTRY?

Our schools in recent years have become a prey to subtle propaganda on the part of private interests, and it has been an uphill task for superintendents and boards of education to put a check on this encroachment. School authorities are continually confronted with the job of freeing the schools of various promotional projects by outside activities.

Our schools are regarded as one of the finest advertising mediums and the school child—for reasons that are clearly obvious—a most excellent salesman. A multiplicity of local enterprises have come to recognize this fact and it has resulted in a tendency to commercialize the schools where boards of education and school executives have failed or been unable to put up strong resistance. On the other hand, considerable criticism has been heaped on those school officials where they have refused special interests to promote their projects.

One reason for this situation is the growth of "Special Weeks," which in recent years have in varying degrees become a part of the school program. Some of these, such as "American Education Week," have been universally recognized by superintendents, but the tendency for these special weeks to increase has been so persistent that it has been necessary to set the limit.

Then, too, it may be chargeable in part to the World War. During that period the schools were anxious to contribute their bit and the bars were let down to a commendable degree. Since then some difficulty has been experienced in raising those bars again.

The schools are no different in this respect than are other organizations. "The Days" have become so frequent in towns and cities that local authorities have been forced to limit the number of these special tag days per year. School authorities have adopted a similar policy.

It is imperative that our schools be impartial and be conducted solely in the interest of the child. Such a conclusion is sound. Distracting influences should be barred; anything that recognizes the interests of one community group against another should be eliminated; in short, the superintendent and the board of education should shut out anything that bears the mark of commercialism or detracts from the regular school program and such desirable efforts should have the universal approval and backing of the public.

RANCHMEN'S ROUND-UP AT SONORA EXPERIMENT STATION

Announcement is made that the "Ranchmen's Round-Up," an annual meeting at the Ranch Experiment Station near Sonora, will be held this year on August 14 and 15. The coming round-up will be the fourth annual meeting of this character and affords an opportunity for ranchmen and others interested in the livestock experimental work at the station to see the work first-hand and keep in touch with the progress of its development.

The "Ranchmen's Round-Up" has had an attendance each year ranging from two to three thousand people, who came from every section of the state and particularly from the ranching section.

The Ranch Experiment Station is located in the heart of the sheep and goat region of the Southwest. Texas produces 80 per cent of the mohair produced in the United States and more wool than is produced in any other state in the Union. No finer sheep and goat range is to be found in the United States and both the sheep and goat industries in that section have reached a high state of development, which explains the unusual interest shown in the work of the station in the study of range problems. In this section lies a great source of wealth to Texas which is being developed on a sound and permanent basis.

Announcement of the program for both men and women will be made in due time through the press.

NEW YORK PEOPLE NOT SOLIDLY BEHIND AL SMITH

Mrs. James G. Wentz, president and founder of the New York State Women's Republican Club, recently made the following statement in regard to Al Smith.

"The Governor of New York State, Alfred E. Smith and his backers have repeatedly stated that this state was solidly behind him in his ambition to become President of the United States. To refute this and to inform you and your fellow-citizens that Governor Smith never had and never will have this state behind him, we quote the following official election statistics:

The state vote in election of 1924 for Governor
Alfred E. Smith - - - 690,170
Col. Theodore Roosevelt - 1,100,377

Roosevelt majority down to the City of New York 410,407

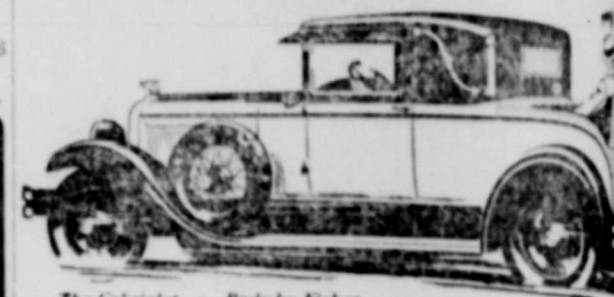

The state vote in election of 1926 for Governor

Alfred E. Smith - - - 648,157
Ogden L. Mills - - - 920,465
Mills majority down to the City of New York 272,308

In the City of New York 1 person in 5 is born on American soil. If we are wise we will limit immigration. Why lose our birthright? Stand by the Quota Law."

THE "MESSIAH"

I have heard of the "Messiah" at Lindsborg since I was a little girl and this Easter, I had the privilege of hearing it. The chorus is composed of five hundred men and women. Some of them have snow white hair and have sung every Easter week since the first Lindsborg Messiah forty-seven years ago.

The songs are all sacred and are the same that were written for the Messiah forty-seven years ago. I listened to them sing for three hours and it seemed to me just about ten minutes. It is just so wonderful. I cannot express it in words. The five hundred voices started and stopped on the same instant. It seemed just like one voice.

The ladies were dressed in white and the men in black. This is the last time the Messiah will be rendered in the old building for a new auditorium is being constructed.

Lindsborg is a very beautiful little town with large trees reaching across the street. The people of the college, town and surrounding country are nearly all of Swedish descent. The morality of the college is known all over Kansas and I think that it speaks well for the people of that community.—Mrs. B. B. Kent.

Mrs. J. M. Grigsby returned Saturday from Canadian where she has been the past three weeks at the bedside of her daughter, Mrs. Tom Carver. Though Mrs. Carver will remain in the hospital for several weeks, she is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Orill and daughter, Oil City, Texas, visited with friends in Perryton over the week end.

Miss Margaret Stevenson, teacher of the McMillen school, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Audie Conley.

Burl Black, who has been attending business college in Dodge City, Kansas, this winter has completed his work and returned to his home near Perryton.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hurter and son, Farnsworth and Mr. and Mrs. George Fletcher and children visited in the J. L. Hurter home, Huntton, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Padgett and son and Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Bruner and daughter, Doris, visited in Oklahoma Sunday with Mrs. Padgett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Partridge.

Escape From Danger
Makes for Pleasure

In escape from dangers of all kinds we find one of the greatest thrills in life. The small child asks to be chased and squeals with delight as she escapes; small boys skate over thin ice; grown men hazard their fortunes by gambling, and women risk their reputations by reading risqué stories—all that they may have the thrill of escaping from something.

The stories of universal appeal, from "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Jack the Giant Killer," up to the highest tragedies, are stories of escape or attempted escape. Even our spiritual struggles are dramatized stories of escape. "The Pilgrim's Progress" is the story of Christian's escape from the City of Destruction, though the interest is sustained by a number of minor escapes, beginning with the Wicket Gate whereon was written "Flee from the wrath to come" and ending with his final escape from the river, which he found deeper or shallower according as his faith grew weaker or stronger.—Thomas Nixon Carver, Harvard Professor of Political Economy, in the Magazine of Business.

Films of Rare Wood
Used for Furniture

The growing scarcity of the more beautiful and valuable woods has made necessary the substitution of other and cheaper kinds. Thus hardly any furniture nowadays is made of solid mahogany, and inferior materials have very generally taken the place of the disappearing "cabinet woods." Indeed, high-grade timber of any kind is now so costly as to prohibit its common use as the solid body of furniture. Manufacturers are resorting more and more to the use of veneers. Articles of furniture, ranging from tables to phonograph and radio cases, have skeletons of cheap wood covered with a thin skin of high quality wood.

Now the skin is not usually more than one-twentieth of an inch thick. A thousand board feet of lumber will produce 10,000 square feet of veneer. Thus a great economy is obtained, and the furniture so made is as attractive as that of solid wood.
