Crosbyton Newspaper Merges With Floyd County Publishing Company

Publisher of the Floyd County Hesperian and Lockney Beacon, Wendell Tooley, this week announced the merger of the Crosbyton Review with the Floyd County Publishing Company. With the merger comes a change in editors at Crosbyton, Floydada and Tulia.

Tooley has purchased the Tulia Herald from veteran newspaperman H.M. Baggarly and will take over as editor-publisher of that newspaper next week. Baggarly is retiring from the newspaper business.

Editor-publisher of the Crosbyton Review, Jim Reynolds, will become editor-publisher of the Floyd County Hesperian.

Not affected in the changes is Jim Huggins, who remains editor of the Lockney Beacon.

Both Tooley and Reynolds are "returning home" as Tooley is a Kress High School graduate in Swisher County and Reynolds is a Lockney High School graduate in Floyd County.

Tooley will be selling his home south of Floydada and will move to Tulia as soon as he can find a house there.

Reynolds has been publisher of the Crosbyton Review for the past 6½ years and prior to that was a partner with his father and served as editor of The Lockney Beacon. Born in Tulia, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Reynolds of Lockney.

His wife, the former Beth McLaughlin, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McLaughlin of Plainview and formerly of Providence Community. The Reynolds are parents of two children, Randy, a student at Western Texas College in Snyder, and Rhonda, a Crosbyton High School senior.

The couple plans to move to Floydada following their daughter's graduation.

"Beth and I look forward to becoming a part of Floydada and joining you in helping make Floydada and Lockney continue to grow and improve. We will not feel like strangers because we have many friends and relatives in Floyd County."

"The Floyd County newspapers have for many years been regarded as strong publications and we look forward to being associated with them. We appreciate this opportunity afforded by Wendell and Mary Tom, who are longtime friends and business associates."

Reynolds says The Lockney Beacon staff will remain the same and no changes are anticipated in that publication.

A Tulia native, Reynolds moved to Lockney in 1950 and was graduated from Lockney High School in 1955. He attended Texas Tech University, took courses at Wayland College and was graduated from a business college.

After editing The Lockney Beacon, Reynolds and his family moved to Crosbyton in August 1972. They have owned and operated The Crosbyton Review since that time.

The future Hesperian and Beacon publisher has been the recipient of approximately 40 state and regional press awards. Highlights have been receiving the "Community Service Awards" in 1976, presented by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce during a West Texas Press Association convention, and three general excellence awards.

He has served two terms on the Texas Press Association board of directors and has been a director of both the West Texas Press Association and the Panhandle Press Association.

Contest chairman of the West Texas Press Association last year, he was elected in August as second vice president of the WTPA.

Reynolds has been a director of both the Lockney and Crosbyton Chambers of Commerce and has been president and vice president of the Crosbyton C of C. He was chosen as Crosbyton's "Man of the Year" for 1976.

He has been a member of the District

Jim Reynolds

2-T2, Lions International, governor's cabinet for four years and was a member of the committee which made arrangements to bring the Coaches All-American Football Game to Lubbock. Proceeds from that project were used to help establish a West Texas kidney foundation, a gymnasium at Girlstown, and other endeavors.

In Crosbyton, Reynolds has received awards from the Girl Scouts, 4-H, FFA, and other organizations.

The Reynolds are members of the First Baptist Church in Crosbyton. He is a deacon.

Hale was the first at the wreck scene and said the accident happened about 6:20 p.m.

Justice of the Peace H.E. Porter pronounced Henry dead at the scene of the accident and his wife died a few moments after a Caprock Hospital ambulance had taken her into the Caprock Hospital in Floydada.

Officers surmised that the pickup was going at a high rate of speed and the right front tire blew out causing the pickup to roll over 6½ times. It was travelling west and rolled down the south barrow ditch.

Henry was thrown out about the fifth roll over and Mrs. Henry was thrown some 57 feet past the pickup when it came to rest on its top.

Services are pending for the couple at

Life Success Depends On Self Image

Success in today's world depends on a strong sense of self-worth, says a family life education specialist.

Two skills create self-worth: the ability to accept being the person you are and to feel good about yourself, Dorothy Taylor explains.

Miss Taylor is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

SELF-IMAGE—A TWO-WAY MIRROR

How a person sees himself mainly depends on how others see him, respond to him, feel about him and interact with him.

Likewise, his self-image greatly determines how he approaches others or responds to them.

FAMILY TEACHES SELF-WORTH

People learn self-worth—they are born knowing nothing about their own worth.

Parents—and other family members—teach children self-worth.

Self-esteem starts with the parents' own self concept.

Parents with high self-esteem usually have little difficulty finding good things about their children.

Below are guidelines for teaching—and for learning—self-worth:

--be genuinely interested and concerned about each individual.

--accept a person without condition.

--recognize one's successes, even little ones.

--give sincere praise

--be open, warm and affectionate

--show a person that you like being with him, that he is missed during an absence

--recognize the special interests, skills, talents—and attitudes of every person

--be fair and be consistent.

AVOID SELF-IMAGE 'HURTS'

A child's self-image suffers when parents or adults set standards too high to reach, when they ridicule or when they compare and criticize.

Likewise, parents hurt a child's self-image further when they harp on failures and mistakes, when they dominate, neglect or over-praise.

Alpha Sigma Upsilon Meets

Alpha Sigma Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met Tuesday December 19 in the home of Ilene Kendrick.

The chapter has received a thank you note from the Day Care Center for their Christmas Party and gifts.

The next meeting will be at Gaya Hale's house January 2, 1979 at 7 p.m. Pledge training will also be at her house beginning at 6:30 p.m. that same day.

Some of the upcoming socials were discussed. Hostesses are to check with the Country Squire about show dates and times for the month of January and will report on them at the next meeting. Also, the Country Club will be contacted to see if it will be available in February for our Sweetheart Ball.

Ilene Kendrick will check on the needs of a family in town whose house burned recently and find out where items can be delivered.

Alpha Mu Delta's volleyball tournament will be sometime in March and members are to be thinking about whether or not they would like to enter.

A committee for "First Lady of the Year" was appointed and will work with Alpha Mu Delta's committee. This is to be held March 11, 1979.

Several door prizes were given by hostess Ilene Kendrick, who served fruit, pizza, macaroni balls and soft drinks to Lynn Daniel, Audrey Thomas, Gaya Hale and June McGaugh.

Bullocks Honored

Employers and employees at City Auto enjoyed a Christmas party and gift exchange Friday December 22. The occasion also provided the scene for a celebration honoring the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Bullock.

A beautifully decorated cake made by Mrs. Leroy Burns was served along with coffee and punch, and the couple was presented an anniversary gift.

Benjamin Paul is the new son of Grant and Dortha Outlaw Jr. of Littlefield. He was born in Lubbock December 18 and weighed eight pounds at birth. He has two brothers.

Wall Groupings Create Interest

COLLEGE STATION — Create an interesting wall grouping by combining several small unrelated objects, suggests a housing and home furnishings specialist, Sue Young.

Select accessories the right size and shape for the space the grouping will occupy.

Also, it should harmonize with the room furnishings so it appears to "belong to the room setting."

Mrs. Young is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Locate the center of interest at eye level, she recommends.

Of course, eye level depends on location—people will view the grouping while standing in a hallway and while sitting in a living room.

As a rule, in a living room the lower edge of picture frames which hang over a sofa should come within six to eight inches of the sofa top, the specialist continues.

Place groupings over or near a piece of furniture unless it is large or important enough to stand alone.

Relate the grouping to architectural and furniture lines.

Arrange pictures or objects so they form at least one vertical and one horizontal line (see artwork).

Add variety to the grouping by including several geometric shapes in the arrangement—too much sameness leads to monotony, Mrs. Young adds.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John Walters of Floydada and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Grant Outlaw Sr. of Lubbock. Benjamin is the Walters' third grandchild.

Becomings - By Duffy

Quiet moments of reflection on holidays gone by gently touch the strings of memory—memories whose specific data is lost forever in the amnesia of childhood, yet memories which when gently tugged by a fleeting connection, cause tender and not so tender emotional responses to surface. It is at these times that we experience the bitter-sweet sorrow for lost selves. We may cry for the loss of the "child", that spontaneous creature we once were with sugar plums and sparklers alive in our heads....the "Eden" which dwells buried deeply in each of our unconscious.

For the loss of the dreams of adolescence and the intense meanings we attributed to the quite ordinary—to those we loved, to aspirations of the future and our accomplishments, to the idealism which desired only goodness and love for all who live....For the loss of the fleeting years of young parenthood and the small children upon whose personalities we left lasting marks, both good and bad engravings....For the loss of opportunities presented yet neglected....

Yet these reflections are also a vital part of the basis for "real" living....the emotive responses of childhood do remain with us when the facts behind the memory are past....Our inner child, our loving parent and our humanistic inner being.... The person each of us is today is a combination of our inherent past selves, our acquired past selves, and the present experiencing which makes up now. The inner memory, the very present child is yet alive, and this affords to us the capacity to experience, not just vicariously but in the now; anew and alive....a new hope....a new year.

Alpha and Omega....Be what you are meant to be and be happy. Happy New Year.

NEWS 'N' NOTES

(by Sharon Hillis)

FIBER IN THE DIET Grandma called it "roughage," but today we call it "fiber," says Sharon Hillis, COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT.

Fiber is found in fruits, vegetables, bread, cereals, nuts, dried beans and peas. It's needed in the diet to help move food through the digestive tract.

Fiber is a complex compound that makes up plant cell walls. Cellulose-type material like the fibrous part of celery is fiber, but other parts of celery also contain fiber.

In fact, most fibers are gelatinous rather than stringy—for example the fiber from potatoes and avocados. Foods that contain the most fiber are whole-grain cereals—especially the bran.

High-fiber foods contain B-vitamins, vitamins A and C and trace minerals.

In addition, high-fiber foods are generally lower in calories than other foods such as meat.

To get the amounts of fiber needed daily, eat four servings of foods from the fruit-vegetable group and four servings from the bread-cereal group—using nuts, beans and peas occasionally as alternates for meats.

However, avoid excessive amounts of high-fiber foods such as bran in the diet.

Many plants materials from which fiber is obtained—such as wheat bran—are also high in phytic acid, which can result in poor absorption of calcium, iron and other trace minerals.

4-H'ers Prepare To Meet 21st Century Food Needs

Between now and the year 2000 the world must learn to produce as much food as it has learned to produce since the beginning of time, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. By the turn of the century there will be an estimated two mouths every one mouth being fed today.

Supplying enough food and fiber to meet future needs will not be an easy job. It will require more and better research and technology, more efficient use of land and energy, and improved crop protection methods, points out Birch Lobban, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

This is where the 4-H program comes into play. Young people in the national 4-H agricultural program, supported by International Harvester Company, may one day play a key role in helping to feed the world of the 21st Century. Many of these 4-H members may decide to apply 4-H training and experience in choosing careers in agriculture, a broad and dynamic industry that employs directly or indirectly almost a third of the U.S. labor force.

The 4-H agricultural program is conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service for boys and girls 9-19. It encourages 4-H'ers to "learn by doing" the skills and practices that make for more efficient, profitable farming. 4-H agricultural projects and activities range from animals and poultry to plants and soils; energy, machines and equipment; and ecology and natural resources. Young people enroll in one or more of these areas to gain experience and keep up to date on new and improved practices.

Program members are eligible for awards donated by International Harvester and arranged by the National 4-H Council, a nonprofit educational organization serving 4-H. Four members per county may earn medals of honor, and one 4-H'er in each state can win an expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago. Six national winners receive $1,000 scholarships. Winners are chosen by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Earl Campbell

In 1977, when the University of Texas defeated traditional rival Oklahoma by a score of 13 to 6, it was Earl Campbell, the Texas half-back, who scored the winning touchdown. He twisted and fought for every one of the 123 yards which made him the day's leading ground-gainer. The senior All-American was on everyone's list for the Heisman Trophy.

Publicity is a key factor in determining the Heisman winner, and the TV and radio broadcasters were ready as the jubilant Texas team poured into the locker room. Texas had just unseated powerful Oklahoma, the team that appeared up to that game destined to become the 1977 national champions.

In applying for credit, a creditor should not ask: --about the applicant's plans for having or raising children.

Becomings

By Duffy

Quiet moments of reflection on holidays gone by gently touch the strings of memory—memories whose specific data is lost forever in the amnesia of childhood, yet memories which when gently nudged by a fleeting connection, cause tender and not so tender emotional responses to surface. It is at these times that we experience the bitter-sweet sorrow for lost selves. We may cry for the loss of the "child," that spontaneous creature who once were with sugar plums and sparklers alive in our heads...the "Eden" which dwells buried deeply in each of our unconscious.

For the loss of the dreams of adolescence and the intense meanings we attributed to the quite ordinary—to those we loved, to aspirations of the future and our accomplishments, to the idealism which desired only goodness and love for all who live...For the loss of the fleeting years of young parenthood and the small children upon whose personalities we left lasting marks, both good and bad, opportunities presented yet neglected.

Yet these reflections are also a vital part of the human condition. The emotional responses of childhood remain with us when we are past...Our inner child, our loving parent and our humanistic inner being...Today is a combination of all these things. The person each of us is, the present experiencing which makes up now, the inner child is yet alive, and this affords to us the capacity for experience, not just vicariously but in the now; anew and alive...a new hope...a new year.

Alpha and Omega...Be what you are meant to be and be happy. Happy New Year.

NEWS 'N' NOTES

(by Sharon Hillis)

FIBER IN THE DIET
Grandma called it "roughage," but today we call it "fiber," says Sharon Hillis, COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT.

Fiber is found in fruits, vegetables, bread, cereals, nuts, dried beans and peas. It's needed in the diet to help move food through the digestive tract.

Fiber is a complex compound that makes up plant cell walls. Cellulose-type material like the fibrous part of celery is fiber, but other parts of celery also contain fiber.

In fact, most fibers are gelatinous rather than stringy—for example the fiber from potatoes and avocados. Foods that contain the most fiber are whole-grain cereals—especially the bran.

High-fiber foods contain B-vitamins, vitamins A and C, and trace minerals.

In addition, high-fiber foods are generally lower in calories than other foods such as meat.

To get the amounts of fiber needed daily, eat four servings of foods from the fruit-vegetable group and four servings from the bread-cereal group—using nuts, beans and peas occasionally as alternates for meats.

However, avoid excessive amounts of high-fiber foods such as bran in the diet.

Many plants materials from which fiber is obtained—such as wheat bran—are also high in phytic acid, which can result in poor absorption of calcium, iron and other trace minerals.

"Where is Earl Campbell?" reporters asked. "He's in the shower," a player volunteered. The reporters passed the time talking with the excited players. Finally, Campbell came out fully dressed. He politely answered a few questions and then excused himself. "Earl, where are you going?" a teammate yelled.

Earl smiled. "My mom came up for the game, she's waiting outside for me right now. I want to visit with her before we have to leave." And that was that. No campaigning, no grandstanding, no useless words. Earl Campbell showed he was a man who let his actions speak for themselves. And they did. He won the Heisman Trophy as the best college football player in America that year.

We don't all try for the Heisman Trophy, but we can learn from Earl Campbell that giving honor is superior to receiving it.

Entertaining Ideas

Wrap up something exotic for special guests—Curry Chicken. Two delectable differences make this dish so extraordinary: the creamy white sauce combining apples, raisins and tantalizing spices; and the main ingredient—Original Recipe Kentucky Fried Chicken. The entrée is a favorite of Colonel Sanders, and a sure-winner on your table too!

CURRY CHICKEN

1 medium apple, chopped
1/4 cup seedless raisins
3/4 cup milk
2 tsp. curry powder

Dove Hunt January 6-14

LUBBOCK — Texas hunters will have another chance to bag mourning doves during the winter dove season set for Jan. 6-14 in north Texas and Jan. 6-21 in South Texas.

Wintering populations of the fast-flying doves can be found in many areas of the state particularly in wooded or brushy regions with available food such as grain, weed seed, or remnants of sunflower crops.

Shooting hours will be from 30 minutes before sunrise to sunset and a daily bag limit of 10 doves with a possession limit of 20 doves will be in effect in both zones.

Most upland hunters harvest winter doves while hunting quail. These sportsmen must have their shotguns plugged to a three shell capacity if they hunt dove. The plug is not required for quail hunters in Texas.

Additional information is available on the mourning dove hunting leaflet on display at license vendors and Texas Parks and Wildlife Department offices.

ATTRACTING BIRDS TO YOUR HOME

LUBBOCK — You probably already know about man-made bird attractors such as feeders, birdbaths, birdhouses, nesting shelves, and resting areas, but if you would like to make your property more attractive to wildlife and enhance the beauty of your property, a few natural attractors would be in order.

Birds have simple needs as they look for places to feed, sing, court, nest, rest, and hide. Birds also like a variety of plantings such as an intermingling of species, sizes, and shapes of plants. Give birds a choice of places for their activities from tall trees to low shrubs and flowers.

Birds are good neighbors as their songs, color, and lively activities add much to the joys of suburban or country life. They also help to control insects that attack flowers, lawns, gardens, and people.

A study of plants already on your property will tell you if additional plantings are in order. Many common shade trees and landscape shrubs yield little or no food for birds.

Autumn olive, cherry, crabapple, or good fruit-bearing shrubs are helpful additions. Yards and border areas can be improved by adding junipers, cedars, and other evergreens that provide winter shelter so vital in northwestern Texas.

A few species of plants for birds, beauty and protection include: dogwood, use by some 47 varieties of birds; firethorn (pyracantha), used by at least 17 species of birds; sunflower, used by over 52 species of birds; sumac, used by 36 species of birds.

Planning these plants into your landscape can also provide living screens eliminating highway noises, or unpleasant views. In crowded areas, they can offer privacy for backyard activities.

Many West Texas species of birds prefer open spaces of grasses and fields. In odd corners, or unused spaces, try planting native grasses which will protect the soil, birds and mammals in the area.

Adequate cover in winter is critical in the Panhandle and South Plains. A few of the mentioned shrubs and evergreens will provide a warm, safe place to rest when the cold winds blow or the snow is heavy.

Living hedges or fences of honeysuckle, dogwood, or autumn-olive can replace a wire fence between property and provide protection to houses from the elements while furnishing habitat for birds.

A check with your local Audubon club, Soil Conservation Service, or the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist in your county will supply more ideas for attracting birds to your property or improving the existing plants already growing.

Fragrance! No well-dressed woman should be without it.

Whether you wear your scent in the form of perfume, toilet water, cologne, perfume oil or solid perfume, realize that fragrances traditionally have been divided into several different categories. Read all about it and you're on your way to choosing the scents that are right for you, right for gifts:

1. Single florals feature one note like carnation or rose.
2. Fruity blends include the popular lemon fragrance.
3. Floral bouquets are just that, a beautiful blending.
4. Modern blends seem crisp, bright and sparkling.
5. Oriental scents can be laced with musk or amber.
6. Forest blends may be woody, mossy, leafy.

Discipline, How To Teach It

COLLEGE STATION — Using inner controls for acceptable behavior is discipline at its finest, says a family life education specialist.

It is especially fine when parents and teachers show children how, according to Dorothy Taylor.

Miss Taylor is with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

PARENTS TEACH FIRST
Parents can start teaching discipline to very young children, she advises.

Three skills are basic to learning discipline—concentration, memory and decision-making, Miss Taylor says.

When a child is about teaching concentration skills. Read a few lines from children's books as often as possible and increase the length as he gets older.

Once a child learns to talk, teach him simple verses—to memorize.

He needs this, because he will do memory work in school—math, English, definitions.

Also, give a child choices—he learns to reason and make wise decisions throughout life.

PARENTS, TEACHERS: WORK AS TEAM

Discipline—and a child's use of it for a more satisfying life—is also at its finest when parents and teachers have the same goals for children.

Miss Taylor says. However, there are areas in which schools and parents differ, she adds.

When parents and schools can reconcile their conflicting roles, then the home and the school can complement each other and benefit their mutual interest—children, the specialist stresses.

Researchers report the following areas as those in which some parents and schools differ:

- Attitudes about people
- Must play with certain children vs. must play with all children.
- Property

The school is special, so take care of it vs. I paid taxes for that school, so use everything freely.

- Importance of self
- Every child is worthy vs. that kid never does anything right.
- Tasks

Every child should learn to work and be proud vs. adults should do for children.

- Time, schedules, routines

Pace yourself and enjoy life vs. there is a time and a place for everything.

- Success and failure

Succeed at all costs to bring honor vs. learn from failure and function at your own level.

- Pride

You represent us vs. when you satisfy yourself, be proud.

UT police honored

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — The only college police force in the state to be cited at the 1978 Texas Crime Prevention Conference was that of The University of Texas at Austin.

UT Austin's Crime Prevention Unit was judged the third most outstanding unit of its kind, behind those of El Paso and Odessa.

The UT unit has helped keep campus crime significantly below the national average through a wide range of programs such as slide shows on personal security ("Lady Take Warning"), an escort service for students traveling the campus alone at night, crime-alerting posters in dormitories and crime-prevention workshops.

Rural responders

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — Before an ambulance can reach the scene of a medical emergency in a rural area, a nearby person with special training can often save a life until professional help arrives.

In 1978-79, The University of Texas will offer six courses to train 240 Travis County residents in how to respond to dire emergencies such as heart stoppage or severe bleeding, when every second counts.

Those completing the 42-hour course will be designated as Emergency Care Attendants. Dr. Demetri Vacalis of the UT Physical and Health Education Department devised the course in cooperation with the Travis County Emergency Medical Service part of individual farmers could well be the number one priority on agriculture's current agenda of challenges.

This is one of the major conclusions presented today at the National Farm Summit in a report presented by Dr. John Kramer, Associate Dean of the Georgetown University School of Law and Chairman of the Summit Task Force on "Agriculture's Role in Government Decision."

The report outlines a series of steps farmers and farm groups might take to increase their input and upgrade the quality of decisions coming out of Washington.

The ideas were developed as part of an overall Summit process underway for much of the past year. A total of five task forces have been at work during this period. Draft reports from each are being presented at the Summit which is sponsored by the Agriculture Council of America and Texas A&M University.

Sponsors of the Summit are seeking further input this week from a broad cross-section of groups including farmers and ranchers, farm and commodity organizations, agribusiness, the financial community, agricultural economists, and USDA, Congressional and Administration spokesmen.

The report strongly emphasized that agriculture must work harder to form, issue-oriented internal and external coalitions, and by doing this can "significantly increase overall impact."

In forming such coalitions, Kramer said farm groups must downplay a traditional tendency to deal with problems in an "us" versus "them" context. He said the coalitions must avoid philosophical differences and concentrate on specific problems which can be carefully defined.

Kramer called for development of "an open-ended agricultural coalition that meets regularly in Washington, D.C. on a formal and informal basis, excluding no active participant in the food production system. The object would not necessarily be to forge a lobby binding everyone to promote particular programs and policies... rather the focus would be on exchanging points of view and opening a dialogue with the executive and legislative branches well in advance of the need to take positions and testify."

The report concludes that "the old-line, established farm organizations are going to have to be willing to work with new groups, however brash their tactics may seem."

On another major question, the report outlined ways to upgrade the Secretary of Agriculture's standing in the Cabinet and strengthen the farmer's voice within USDA. The report described USDA as "a stepister in the household of the cabinet, downgraded and ignored in decision-making by more potent agencies like State and Treasury and rarely listened to at the level of the White House...."

"The most important step USDA could take to assure that it is no longer brushed aside as a pseudo-lobbyist for a minority point of view is consciously and publicly to broaden the nature of the Department to encompass issues relating to food and nutrition. The USDA would do more to enhance its White House standing and secure recognition if it attempted to parallel the coalition efforts of farmers by expanding its concept of its mission. The more public interests it serves, the more effective it will be," the report concludes.

"Whether USDA changes its name," Kramer notes, "it has to change its approach."

Meal Monday

In some Scottish communities there is a tradition of a "Meal Monday" at the beginning of the year called "Meal Monday". The name goes back to the old days when the universities in the Highlands were taking with them a oatmeal and a barrel of herring.

It was the tradition of the Highlands that, no matter how poor the family, one son must be sent to university so that he could qualify as a minister.

The oatmeal and the herring were to keep the student going through the sea journey, his diet for the voyage would be mainly p and fish.

The Scottish Lowlands became accustomed to Highland students living with their bag and their barrel, and the name "Meal Monday" came.

The report concludes that "the old-line, established farm organizations are going to have to be willing to work with new groups, however brash their tactics may seem."

On another major question, the report outlined ways to upgrade the Secretary of Agriculture's standing in the cabinet and strengthen the farmer's voice within USDA. The report described USDA as "a stepchild in the White House, a stepchild in the cabinet, a stepchild in the House, a stepchild in the Senate, a stepchild in the courts, a stepchild in the media, a stepchild in the public mind."

"The most important step USDA could take to assure that it is no longer brushed aside as a pseudo-lobbyist is to make a conscious and public effort to broaden the nature of the Department to encompass issues relating to food and nutrition. The USDA would do more to enhance its House standing and secure recognition if it attempted to parallel the coalition efforts of farmers by expanding its concept of its mission. The more public interests it serves, the more effective it will be," the report concludes.

"Whether USDA changes its name," Kramer notes, "it has to change its approach."

Meal Monday

In some Scottish Universities there is a traditional holiday at the beginning of the year called "Meal Monday." The name goes back to the old days when students from the Highlands went to the universities in the south, taking with them a bag of oatmeal and a barrel of salt herring.

It was the tradition in the Highlands that, no matter how poor the family, at least one son must be sent to the university so that he could qualify as a minister or a teacher.

The oatmeal and the herring were to keep the student going through the session, so that his diet for months would be mainly porridge and fish.

The Scottish Lowland students became accustomed to seeing Highland students arriving with their bag of meal and their barrel, and that was how "Meal Monday" got its name.

SCHOOLS FIGHT INFLATION

MANY SCHOOLS are seeking ways to shore up money-wasting energy leaks.

America's public schools are working to cut costs by keeping closer tabs on their use of energy, a hefty item in the school budget.

Since the estimated cost of energy for each student this school year is $57, nearly triple the $20 cost only five years ago, many schools are cutting back educational programs—some are even eliminating music or intramural sports—to make up for the extra $37. Caught in a squeeze between rising energy prices and the relatively fixed appropriations most taxpayers allow their school systems, many school administrators are looking for ways to save energy at the same time they try to maintain high-quality education.

Most homeowners after the embargo of 1973 found they could cut fuel consumption one-third by adding insulation, caulking doors and windows and turning down thermostats, but schools were not so lucky. More than half of those still in use were built between 1955 and 1965 to accommodate the postwar baby boom. Energy was cheap then and the compelling need was rapid construction at lowest possible cost. Energy efficiency took a back seat. Many schools can reduce their energy consumption by one-fourth or more.

NEWS OF HEALTH

Each year some 70,000 Americans are hospitalized with severe burns.

A GROWING NUMBER of burn centers across the country are soothing suffering.

Some of these people are fortunate enough to receive the excellent, expert care a burn center offers. A burn center deals with meticulous details in transportation, care, equipment, staff support, training and research. Burn centers in the Philadelphia area thrive, thanks to the help of companies such as the Sun Company that will donate $25,000 annually for the next three years. Patients at these centers are helped by special equipment and a large number of nurses.

The ratio of nurses to patients is one to two, compared with one to eight in a general hospital. Sophisticated equipment monitors the patients' vital functions around the clock, beds that can tilt 360° and heat shields above the patients help keep them as comfortable as possible.

You can help keep victims of minor burns comfortable if you give the right treatment right away. Today doctors do not recommend greasing a burn. Instead, they say you should immerse a minor first-degree burn in cold water to lower the skin temperature and relieve the sting. Any serious burn should be brought to a doctor's attention at once.

Summit Calls For Reduction In World Trade Barriers

College Station, Texas -- Major barriers to freer world trade currently include the drive of developing countries for self-sufficiency, income support for higher cost of production crops in developed countries and chronic instability of markets.

This viewpoint was presented by Dr. Tim Josling of the Stanford University Food Research Institute, Chairman of the International Trade Task Force of the National Farm Summit. The ideas were developed as part of an overall Summit process underway for much of the past year. A total of five task forces have been at work during this period. Draft reports from each are being presented at the Summit which is sponsored by the Agriculture Council of America and Texas A&M University.

The sponsors of the Summit are seeking further input this week from a broad cross-section of groups including farmers and ranchers, farm and commodity organizations, agribusiness, agricultural economists, and U.S. Department of Agriculture, Congressional and Administration spokesmen and representatives of prominent U.S. trading partners.

Josling told the audience participating in the conference at Texas A&M University that "It is clearly in the long-run interest of all countries that world's agricultural resources be utilized in a way that minimizes the cost of providing essential food-stuffs."

"The Task Force identified two requirements for restoring and maintaining confidence in the freer trade system: 1) a system where imports are available at all times and countries can afford to buy; and 2) increased stability of world prices."

"The first requires improved credit, food insurance, and food aid arrangements. Bilateral trade agreements such as the U.S. has with Russia and Japan run counter to free trade objectives. The second can only be realistically achieved by allowing prices and stocks to adjust in response to the world market condition."

Josling emphasized that in saying this, the Task Force took a position against international commodity agreements designed to raise or lower world prices.

"Such price-band proposals have superficial appeal by appearing to act directly on prices. The danger, however, is that they tend to alleviate symptoms above cause. With unresponsive international prices, stocks would not adjust nor consumption be allocated," Josling declared.

The Task Force expressed optimism about future growth in international trade and inherent pressures to maintain more open markets. This optimism was particularly strong with respect to feed grains resulting from expanded animal production abroad.

"Increased dependence on export markets, however, creates some difficult choices and problems for the U.S. Export earnings and therefore domestic prices and incomes are and will continue to be unstable," Josling said.

A recent pattern of crop export expansion is expected to continue, and even though animal exports are also expanding, the overall growth pattern "will require continuous structural adjustment in U.S. agriculture," the report concludes.

"The question of attitudes toward imports raises some difficult problems and must be squarely faced. Attempts to artificially constrain imports have tended to weaken the competitiveness of agriculture as a whole, and encourage resource use patterns which have had to be sustained by a continuation of government intervention and market control. Price supports in import-type goods should be reviewed in terms of their competitive nature," Josling emphasized.

The Task Force report emphasized the need for consistency between domestic and international farm programs. "Unless inflation is controlled in the future, target prices are destined to rise along with farm costs. This will bring pressure on loan rates, risking loss of competitiveness in world markets."

Solutions Must Change With Farm Problem

College Station, Texas -- The farm problem has changed, therefore the solutions to the problem also must change.

This was the basic message of the Task Force in charge of drawing overall conclusion from the National Farm Summit, Dr. Ronald D. Knutson, Professor of Agricultural Policy and Extension Service Economist at Texas A&M University, said here Dec. 6.

Knutson, chairman of the Summit Review Committee, said new dimensions of the problem include a tighter world supply-demand situation, unprecedented inflation, questions of family farm survival and nutrition issues.

"In the past, the main problem confronting agriculture was that of low prices, while today it is inflation. Rapid inflation has put the farmer in an increasingly high risk position. Farmers, particularly young farmers, are increasingly in a win-or-lose-all risk position."

The tighter world supply-demand situation also increases risk of production shortfalls, and this makes production control programs less attractive, Knutson said.

"The key to agricultural policy thus becomes one of developing programs which--lessening risk of production shortfalls--do not take away the price, profit, and production incentives provided by the market system."

The ability of the family farm to survive and complete can no longer be taken for granted, Knutson emphasized.

"The farm income problem is today centered on middle tier farmers with sales ranging between $20,000 and $100,000. While these farms are as efficient as their larger scale counterparts, their asset costs per dollar of investment in the farm operation is twice as high. In the process, the proportion of U.S. agricultural production of farms that are not classified as family farms has increased to 30 percent."

Nutrition policy is also a new issue, Knutson said.

"It is one which sparked great controversy. Mounting evidence of the relation between diet, chemicals, food additives and health makes producers and firms that serve agriculture very nervous. Currently the biggest impact is on the uncertainty created by government decisions and information."

"In the longer run, however, major impacts upon particular sectors such as livestock and dairy could result. Mechanisms for input into policy decisions must be developed which represent agriculture not as a biased advocate but as realistically attempting to solve problems in a cost and benefit context," the A&M economist said.

The Task Force analyzed solutions in terms of alternatives.

Alternatives considered fell into the categories of transferring costs to domestic consumers in terms of higher prices, to foreign consumers, to producers and to government.

In seeking solutions, Knutson said, "If inflation is to be brought under control, priorities will have to be established on government expenditures. Serious consideration will have to be given in agriculture--and in other sectors of the economy--as to where priorities really lie."

Middle-Sized Family Farm Policy Needs Cited

College Station, Texas -- Future farm programs must be designed to deal with the problems of the middle sized family unit which is now threatened as a viable economic entity.

This is one of the major conclusions presented today at the National Farm Summit by a task force on Farm Commodity Prices and Income presented by Dr. Luther Tweeten of Oklahoma State University.

"Farm policy must recognize that agriculture and returns to agriculture differ by size and type of farm. Tailoring one program to suit all of farming would be a straightjacket...farming is not a uniformly low equity, low income or low rate of return industry."

To deal with the problems of the middle size family farm, the Task Force recommended further moves toward direct government payments without production controls, more credit assistance to new producers entering agriculture and more efforts at rural job creation through private industry incentives.

While generally endorsing the market orientation and flexibility of the 1977 farm bill, the Task Force had several recommendations for improvement.

These include more stringent payment limits, less emphasis on set-aside, increased flexibility in milk price support adjustment, increased coordination of credit programs and an improved "all risk, all commodity" insurance program as a substitute for the present crop insurance and disaster payments programs. "The farm price and income problem is centered on the middle size family farm having over $20,000 but under $100,000 in sales. These farms have as low--or nearly as low costs--as their larger-than-family farm counterparts," he said.

"Unlike large farms which tend to have high net farm income and small farms which have high off-farm income, many moderate size farms do not have sufficient net income required to take advantage of accelerated depreciation, investment tax credits, and other federal income tax provisions," Tweeten said.

To support this contention, his Task Force report pointed out that "larger-than-family farms, accounting for 5 percent of the farms and 30 percent of the farm output in 1976, constitute a growing threat to family farms."

"Price supports designed to make small farms viable but applied across the board are likely to give large farms a competitive advantage and ultimately undermine the small farm," the report emphasized.

"The major problems of commercial agriculture--regardless of size of farm--are inflation and instability," said Tweeten.

The solution to the inflation problem, according to the Task Force, lies in greater governmental monetary and fiscal restraint. Commodity reserves, direct producer payments, and improved risk insurance programs were suggested as desirable means of dealing with the problem of instability of farm prices and income.

Inflation--Agriculture's Number One Problem

College Station, Texas -- Inflation has now become agriculture's number one economic problem and unless it is brought under control, producer-consumer confidence in the U.S. food system will be seriously threatened.

This is one of the major conclusions presented today at the National Farm Summit in a task force report on Resource Allocation and Production Costs for U.S. Agriculture. The report was drafted by Dr. Emery Castle of Washington, D.C., who is Vice President of Resources for the Future, an organization that conducts economic research on major issues.

To control inflation the Task Force recommended greater restraint in government spending and a program which would limit wage increases to productivity gains and provide for mandatory indexing of prices and costs.

Major resource problems facing agriculture were cited as chronic inflation, inadequate market information, tax inequities, rapidly rising land values and land use planning.

To deal with problems of non-competitive pricing, the Task Force recommended improvements in information. Particular information needs concerned prices in input markets, the terms of contracts, weather and pest information.

A major change in tax policy which tied taxes to real income--as opposed to property, sales or actual income--was recommended.

Different tax rates on different sources of income were cited as a major source of resource investment and allocation distortions in agriculture.

"A fundamental problem of resource allocation and production costs in U.S. agriculture is our failure to distinguish between those factors resulting in fundamental changes in the social environment affecting agriculture and those forces causing transitory changes," Castle declared.

He said the history of U.S. agriculture is replete with examples of government responding to short run, transitory phenomena in such a way as to make long run adjustment more difficult.

The Task Force suggested increased educational programs in land use planning as a means of reaching a consensus on land use control. Members also recommended a removal of the 160-acre limitation on the use of water from federal irrigation projects.

the development of alliances within the food and agriculture community. Flexibilities must exist to include interests broader than the traditional agricultural establishment, such as consumer groups, environmentalists and organized labor. Such alliances, while politically appealing, also run risks," Knutson said.

TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE THE NEW YEAR

Tw was the night before New Years, New Year's Eve as they say. And out in the country, at the end of the day, Just countin' his troubles was Papa, forlorn. From losses on cotton, from losses on corn. With Christmas behind him but bills yet to come. His heart was unhappy, his face it was glum. Though the children were happy, the wife, contented. The cost had been high, Papa Santa lamented.

When all of a sudden, in a lightning-like flash, Papa had him a thought, unrelated to cash! He remembered the egg nog, how weak it had seemed. Meaning leftover spirits, and oh how he beamed! He looked through the kitchen, in cabinet and freezer. And on through the bedroom, in haste, not at leisure. In search of that something, that post-Christmas balm. That could solve all his problems, restore all his calm.

And there in a drawer, under feminine trapping. That beautiful bottle lay quietly napping. (His foxy little wife, herself with a thirst. Had thought all the time he'd look there first!) Away went his worry, his joy filled the house. Out came the bottle, in came the spouse. They toasted the children, they toasted each other. It's even been rumored he toasted her mother!

There were dances, embraces and kisses galore. And some might surmise there was even more! But bills were forgotten, hope reigned supreme. And Papa and Mama, tipsy and serene. Saw all troubles vanish, saw failures grow small. As together they sang:

Hunting Accidents Caused By People

LUBBOCK -- Even though the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is holding its breath and crossing its fingers, it seems as though the total number of hunting injuries and fatalities will be near the 1977 mark.

"We totaled 80 accidents and 17 fatalities in 1977 and as of Dec. 14, we have already tallied 65 accidents and 14 fatalities this year," said Theron D. Carroll, hunter safety coordinator.

"If reports keep coming in from the field as they have been lately, 1978 will be comparable with last year," continued Carroll.

Hunting accidents in the Panhandle and South Plains have not occurred or are not reported so far and the P&WD is hoping the trend will continue with no injuries or fatalities.

The extreme cold experienced by opening-day pheasant hunters is no excuse to hunt alcoholic beverages in an attempt to keep warm.

Even though the subject of drinking these liquids feels warm, scientific evidence shows that the beverage actually lowers the body temperature.

Not only is the consuming hunter lulled into believing he or she is warm, but the reflexes necessary to operate in the field and make sound judgement as to the target are inhibited by the alcoholic effect on the body.

Keeping the muzzle pointed in a safe direction at all times will also increase you and your hunting companions chances of a safe hunting season.

Cotton Prices Lower

High Plains Cotton prices were $8.50 to $10.75 per bale lower the week ended December 21, according to Paul R. Dickson, Area Director at USDA's Marketing Services Office in Lubbock.

Growers sold mixed lots of mostly grades 42 and better, staples 30 - 33, mikes 35 - 49 around 55.90 cents per pound. New crop lots of mostly grades 43 and 53, staples 30 and 31, mikes 35 - 49 brought about $1.25 cents Dickson said.

Gins paid growers $115 to $130 per ton for cottonseed. High Plains Marketing Services Offices graded 246,000 samples this week bringing this season's total to 929,000. This compares to 2,623,000 graded by December 22 last year.

Predominant High Plains grades 41 to 19 percent, grade 51 accounted for 14 percent, grade 42 amounted to 13 percent and grade 52 and 13 percent. Eighteen percent were reduced one grade because of bark, according to USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

Staple lengths were mostly staple 31 to 30 percent, staple 32 was 38 percent, and staple 33 accounted for 13 percent.

1978, A Good Year For Texas Anglers

LUBBOCK -- The right bait at the right time plus good growing conditions for Texas fish have produced six new records this year according to the Texas State Fish Record Committee of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Micronaire was mostly in the desirable 35 - 49 range at 70 percent of the total. Thirty percent was lower.

Breaking strength averaged 85,000 pounds per square inch.

The striped bass record has been broken twice since Jan. 6th with the current 32 lb. 12 oz. fish caught from Lake Texoma on Nov. 20.

The new hybrid white-striped bass record is 11 lbs. 8 1/2 oz. and was caught April 2 at Lake Nasworthy near San Angelo.

A 66 lb. blue catfish holds the present record after being submitted to the record committee last spring.

A Wichita Falls man caught a 31 lb. freshwater drum at Lake Arrowhead on May 4 breaking the old record by nearly 6 lbs.

A record redear sunfish weighing 3 lbs. 4 ozs. was landed by a Seguin angler at a Guadalupe county farm pond on April 23, and a Borger angler caught a 10 lb. 14 oz. walleye from Lake Meredith on April 12th.

Texas anglers catching large fish should first have them weighed before filleting the fish for supper. Use certified Texas Agriculture scales and have a witness to the weighing.

The P&WD is expecting more fish records to fall in 1979 with several of the 1978 record fish to be topped by persistent anglers across the state.

More information about the Texas record fish program is available at most license vendors and all P&WD offices.

Deer Study Underway

ABILENE -- A recent check by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department personnel at a local Abilene meat locker handling deer has furnished some interesting facts about the Taylor county deer herd.

"We checked one hundred buck deer harvested in Taylor county since the season opened Nov. 18 and 58 percent of these deer were 1 1/2 years of age," said Don Davis, P&WD wildlife biologist.

"Another 39 percent were from 2 1/2 to 4 1/2 years of age and only one buck was 6 1/2 years old," Davis continued. When the Taylor county study is compared to other regions of the state, it is apparent that the deer herd consists of mainly young deer with few trophy animals available for the deer hunter to harvest.

A comparison of the Taylor county deer herd which has a 12 percent trophy buck population is quite low when South Texas deer herds are compared of a 30 percent trophy buck population.

There can be several reasons for this condition in Taylor county. First, a heavy crop of fawns were produced in 1977 which were 1 1/2 years old this fall when harvested by hunters. Second, the hunting pressure is heavy in several areas of Taylor county.

Most deer hunters are looking for a trophy buck to harvest first. If none are found, the hunters will harvest younger deer as they did this fall.

Another factor in the study indicated a 30 percent drop in the overall deer population this summer. Record drought conditions were experienced in the area and the dry condition could have affected the antler growth since 38 percent of the 1 1/2-year-old bucks were classed as spikes.

Normally, an average white-tailed buck should have four points during his second year. Only one of the young bucks checked at the meat locker had eight points. Spike buck studies indicate genetic background and nutritional intake affect antler growth.

An average white-tailed buck with a below-normal intake of food could develop spike antlers. This same buck should grow normal antlers if ample food is available during the spring and summer which is the critical period.

However, when a white-tailed buck has plenty of food and still only produces spike antlers, it is apparent that genetic background and not available food supplies are the cause of the inferior antler growth.

When these deer studies are completed by the P&WD, recommendations will be made on the length of the deer season and harvest of bucks in Taylor county.

When Kathy Prays

When Kathy prays I can almost hear angel wings flutter. Her simple conversations with God are so full of trust and confidence, I feel as though I am standing at the doorstep of heaven.

After prayers, I tuck her into bed, turn out the light and go downstairs. And I find myself continuing the conversation she has started. My prayer is always the same . . . that as she grows, and her needs and wishes change, my little girl will continue to develop her understanding and love of God.

How grateful I am for my church. It has been a constant source of inspiration for my own religious growth. I know it will be ready to help me answer Kathy's questions. It is wonderful to know that I do not have to tackle the religious education of my daughter alone.

Attend your church. Let it help you as you guide your child's religious thinking.

Bankers School To Deal With Agricultural Loans

COLLEGE STATION — A special session on making agricultural loans will be one of the highlights of the 27th Farm and Ranch Credit School for Commercial Bankers Feb. 12-13 at Texas A&M University's Rudder Center.

Since different agricultural enterprises require specific analysis and consideration, four major loan areas will be examined at the school, points out Dr. Dick Trimble, the school's general chairman. These are crops and machinery, cow-calf operation, feedlot, and dairy loans. Texas bankers who are experienced in making these types of loans will conduct each of the sessions.

In light of the recent National Farm Summit held at Texas A&M University, a special feature of the school will be a presentation of current policy issues in agriculture, says Trimble, an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Dr. Ron Knutson, Extension economist in agricultural policy, will act as moderator to this important aspect of agriculture. Joining Knutson will be a panel of highly qualified policy analysts providing additional insight into how policy decisions may affect commercial bankers.

The school will be kicked off with a session on examining sources of funds for small agricultural banks. Discussions will include how city banks can assist country banks in providing loan funds, and how country banks can acquire additional loan funds in their own area, notes Trimble.

Rounding out the school for commercial bankers will be sessions dealing with crop, livestock and money market outlook information as well as new concepts in marketing agricultural products.

The school is planned for bankers by the Agricultural and Rural Affairs Section of the Texas Bankers' Association. It is sponsored by the TBA, Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

In conjunction with the school, an Agricultural Credit Analysis Workshop will begin the afternoon of Feb.

14 and will continue through the morning of Feb. 16. The workshop will deal with preparing financial statements, analyzing and reconciling farm records, and preparing cash flow projections. Case problems will also be studied and solved, points out Trimble.

Running concurrently with this workshop will be a special three-day Commodity Hedging Session. This session will investigate the mechanics of hedging, hedging decision guides, and what bankers should know about living with a hedged loan.

Trimble invites Texans who are concerned with agricultural financing to attend the credit school and either of the two workshops. For registration information, write to him at Room 10 Agriculture Building, Texas A&M University, College Station, Tex. 77843 or call 713-845-8011.
