Major construction on the city's Lamesa Road project has begun. City officials overseeing the undertaking, Nancy Vickrey, left, and Keith Stretcher, predict the new thoroughfare will mean economic gain for Midland's east side.

Cooperative effort could pave way for Lamesa Road

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The spirit of cooperation displayed by people like Ray Dorrance reflects what city officials believe will be a key to the ultimate success of the Lamesa Road project.

During their exhaustive purchase of lands needed to widen the thoroughfare, project coordinators offered to buy a parcel of land on Lamesa Road that Dorrance owned.

Dorrance could relate to their circumstance, he explained in a telephone interview Thursday from his home in Tyler. From 1968 until 1972, he was mayor of San Angelo.

"I didn't know that much about the project, but they explained to me it was a form of improvement out there," the former mayor said.

"We put in two main thoroughfares through San Angelo. I know what they're up against. I had no intention to use the lot and I just decided to give it to them."

The project officially kicked off earlier this month when the city began relocating water and sewer lines on a northern stretch of the road.

Buying rights-of-way has been the most complex facet of the multi-million-dollar Lamesa Road project, explained Keith Stretcher, assistant city manager.

To date, titles have changed hands on 126 parcels, most with more than one owner, and the hunt took city officials from coast to coast, Stretcher continued.

Providing right-of-way titles to the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation (TDH) is one part of the city's commitment to the project.

Officials expect the improved Lamesa Road to be a boon to economic development efforts on Midland's east side.

"The infrastructure comes first," said Nancy Vickrey, city code enforcer. Prior to the move there were no adequate streets in the area.

Lamesa Road, once a heavily traveled road to the city of Lamesa, was chosen because it is an eastside artery tying Loop 250 to Interstate 20.

Oil stability, upturn forecast by Bullock

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

ODESSA — Stability and upturn for the oil industry — it was an announcement perfect for Energy Appreciation Week.

Bullock

In town to address area oilmen as part of the week's activities, State Comptroller Bob Bullock said recent stronger oil prices are prompting him to raise his forecast of revenues available to the Texas by $200 million in revenues over the next two years. "Of that, $93 million will come from an improvement in the price of natural gas," he added.

Still, he told the oilmen, his office forecasts that the posted price for West Texas Intermediate will average $16.76 for 1989, $17.13 for 1990 and $18.86 for 1991. Spot prices for natural gas will average $1.54 per thousand cubic foot this year, $1.70 in 1990 and $1.88 in 1991.

He went on to tell his audience at the "Texas State of the Economy" luncheon Wednesday at the Holiday Inn Convention Center that the forecast indicates stability and a slight upturn in the oil and gas industry to him and his staff.

Noting questioning looks from his audience, Bullock explained that he and his research staff meet every couple of months with chief economists and, in many cases, chief operating officers of many of the state's largest companies.

"These people represent the spectrum of Texas industry — oil and gas, utilities, retailers, bankers, manufacturers — the producers and users. We sit down with them in strictest confidence and hold very frank discussions and that's how we arrive at our figures." He acknowledged that the figures may not be right, but he remained confident in them.

Nine men's names added to roster in hall of fame

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Nine individuals who helped shape the domestic oil industry were honored Thursday at the Petroleum Museum's Hall of Fame banquet.

Inducted into the Petroleum Hall of Fame were two family groups and two individuals. Honored families were: the Mabees — John E. Mabee, Guy R. Mabee and Joseph Guy Mabee; and the Weiners — Sam Weiner, Ted Weiner, Stanley Weiner and Charles Weiner. Individuals inducted were Virgil E. "Cottie" Cottingham and Dr. Preston Chiles Coleman.

The nine join 68 others who have been inducted into the Petroleum Hall of Fame since 1972.

Known as the "Father of Texas Tech University," Dr. Preston Coleman was a medical doctor who came to Colorado City in 1883 and became a vital mediator between local ranchers and oilmen. His efforts led to the drilling of the first commercial production in the Permian Basin in the Westbrook Field in 1916. As a civic leader he helped found the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and worked tirelessly to bring a major university to West Texas.

Reallocation critical, mayor says

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Plans for the city's new public safety communications center absolutely hinge on the proposed reallocation of 1982 garage bond funds, Mayor Carroll Thomas said today.

"The City Council has become very concerned" that voters may strike down the reallocation proposal during municipal elections May 6, Thomas stressed at a morning press conference.

Should that occur, plans for computers and radio systems at the new public safety center would be cut short, the mayor said.

Thomas said voters approved — in theory — the transfer of 1982-vintage garage bond funds last September when they passed the $4.3 million public safety bond referendum.

Voters were told funding for the $5.6 million public safety center would be enhanced by the reallocation of the garage bond funds, the mayor said.

Garage employees and other citizens have expressed opposition to the reallocation of the 1982 bonds which now total $750,000.

Opponents of the move say the garage bonds were issued in 1982 to build a new garage and that the promise — or at least renovations — should be upheld.

City officials say major repair work on 1,000 light and heavy vehicles since 1986 has been contracted or "farmed out" to local retail mechanics.

This endeavor precludes the need for a new garage, the mayor explained.

Thomas pledged today city administrators would investigate financing renovations at the garage. Two extra work bays could be built for $50,000 to $100,000, the mayor suggested.

'Stick with baseball,' first lady advises her son, George W. Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Barbara Bush says she has given her son a little bit of motherly advice, telling him to stick with running the Texas Rangers baseball team and not run for governor of Texas.

Mrs. Bush told The Dallas Morning News Thursday that she believes George W. Bush may take her advice.

"I'm rather hoping he won't because everything that happens bad with the administration is (going to be) young George's fault," Mrs. Bush said during a luncheon with eight reporters in the family dining room of the White House.

"I'm hoping, having bought the (Texas) Rangers, he'll get so involved that he won't do it," she said. "When you make a major commitment like that .. I think maybe you won't be running for governor."

Officers continue Reeves County drug roundup

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Law officers were continuing a roundup of suspected cocaine, heroin and marijuana dealers this morning in Reeves County, an area with what one officer describes a "bad" drug problem.

Six persons were in custody by late morning in the roundup, which began at 6:30 a.m. as officers attempted to serve warrants on 18 indictments against 14 individuals issued Thursday by a Reeves County Grand Jury.

Tommy Martinez Jr., was released on bond early today after he posted $25,000 bound, according to Reeves County records. He was charged with delivery of cocaine.

Others arrested were still in custody at the Reeves County Jail, Art Van Dorn, commander of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, said from Pecos.

Van Dorn said the investigation was launched about six months ago when Reeves County and Pecos authorities asked for the task force's help. An undercover officer was dispatched to the area and began working, Van Dorn said.

"Pecos has probably as bad a drug problem as any city its size in the Permian Basin," Van Dorn said. Those indicted Thursday included "some street-level dealers and some big dealers," he said.

Heroin and cocaine are the "drugs of choice" in the Pecos area, the investigator said.

Officers from the Reeves County Sheriff Department, Pecos Police Department, and U.S. Border Patrol assisted in the raid, according to Van Dorn.

"It's going just about the way we thought it would," he said from the Reeves County Sheriff's Office. "Anytime you get around 50 percent on the first run, that is pretty good."

Most of the suspects — many of whom have prior criminal records — should be in custody by the weekend, Van Dorn said.

Elaine Ornelas was charged with delivery of a simulated controlled substance and was being held in lieu of $7,500 bond.

Mark Bellow was charged with delivery of marijuana and was being held in lieu of $15,000, according to Reeves County records.

Two counts of delivery of marijuana were filed against Fred Estorga, who was being held on bonds totaling $30,000.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Fair skies, low in 50s expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be fair tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the lower 50s and winds will be southeasterly 5-15 mph becoming southwesterly by midnight.

Forecasters are expecting mostly sunny skies and cooler temperatures on Saturday with the high reaching near 80 degrees. Winds will be from the southwest at 5-15 mph becoming northeasterly by the afternoon.

Thursday's high of 89 was six degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 95 set on April 27, 1974. The overnight low of 50 was 19 degrees warmer than the record low of 31 set for this date in 1934.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms were expected to continue tonight and Saturday across portions of North Texas and South Texas with forecasters warning of the possibility of severe thunderstorms in central and eastern portions of North Texas.

It will partly to mostly cloudy and slightly cooler statewide through Saturday.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s.

Highs Saturday will be mostly in the 80s.

An upper level disturbance moving across Mexico helped produce showers and thunderstorms across South Texas during the night and early today while a cold front extended from the Red River between Childress and Wichita Falls through the Big Country into the Pecos Valley south of Sanderson.

One of the stronger thunderstorms produced golf ball size hail in the Laredo area during the night.

Early morning temperatures were in the 40s and 50s behind the cold front and in the 60s and 70s over the rest of the state. Extremes ranged from 44 at Dalhart to 76 at Brownsville.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 45 at Amarillo, 62 at Wichita Falls, 70 at Fort Worth and Waco, 68 at Austin, 70 at San Antonio, 74 at Houston, 71 at Corpus Christi, 58 at San Angelo, 46 at Lubbock, 56 at Midland and 48 at El Paso.

NATION

Strong thunderstorms developed over parts of Iowa and Missouri today, while snow continued to pile up in the Rockies.

Storms on Thursday produced scattered tornadoes in Iowa and Nebraska, officials said.

One twister swooped down within 1,000 yards of Bluffs Run greyhound race track in Council Bluffs, Iowa, sending track patrons scrambling for cover, officials said. One man was injured when he was struck in the head by debris and required stitches, a security guard said.

In a separate incident, Jerry Ostendorf, operations chief for the Iowa Office of Disaster Services, said a woman was injured when a mobile home was overturned in Corning, a town in southwestern Iowa.

A security guard at Bluffs Run said he climbed into a ditch as the twister passed overhead.

"I grabbed a pretty sturdy tree in the ditch and I could feel the pressure pulling up on me," said James Wanner, 23, of Council Bluffs. "I felt the hair on my arms standing up. We were pretty scared."

Showers and thunderstorms today were over southeast Nebraska, northeast Kansas, central Illinois, central Indiana, southern Wisconsin and southern Minnesota.

Estimate in 'spitting distance' of balance

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House and Senate state budget conferees Thursday gave a "ho-hum" reaction to news that Comptroller Bob Bullock had upped his two-year revenue estimate by $210 million.

The additional money means that legislators officially have $27.7 billion in general revenue funds to allocate, an increase of $2.2 billion over what Bullock had predicted this past November.

But both houses had anticipated the extra and already found ways to spend it.

Members of the joint committee, charged with hammering out a compromise on state spending levels, were meeting for the first time Thursday on a task they hope to complete by May 15.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the new money still will result in a "tight" state budget.

"It won't have much growth, and it won't have some of the programs that we would all like to put in it," he said.

Rudd chairs the House Appropriations Committee, which developed a budget needing $27.97 billion from general revenue.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan and chairman of the budgetwriting Senate Finance Committee, said he didn't "want to sound ungrateful" for Bullock's estimate increase. "But it's money that we pretty well already spent and counted on."

The Finance Committee called for $27.94 billion in general revenue spending.

With the comptroller's estimate relatively close to both House and Senate spending levels, the conferees are "within spitting distance" of a balanced budget, said Deputy Comptroller Tony Proffitt, who helped prepare the latest estimate.

But that hasn't stopped members from thinking what could be accomplished if only Gov. Bill Clements would relent on his stand against new taxes.

What they have in mind is a proposed 7-cents-per-package cigarette tax hike that would produce $166 million in new state money and an additional $274 million in federal matching funds.

"As long as the governor insists ... I know we don't have the votes to override it," said Caperton, who held out hope for "continuing the dialogue" with Clements.

Another conference committee member, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, was even more emphatic, saying people would be "outraged" if they knew how many federal dollars the state is giving up.

The question of where to find more money is at the heart of a second funding question to which Parker and other conferees will have to find a solution.

That is, while the Senate budget calls for Texas voters to decide whether bonds should be sold to build new prisons and fund capital improvements, the House makes allowence for those expenses from general revenue.

Parker is "betwixt and between" on the issue. He says he abhors putting the state in debt without knowing how the money will be paid back.

Still, "bonding frees up some money that we can spend on some critically essential areas," he said, including mental health, public education equity and state employee pay raises.

Surveying other differences between the House and Senate budgets, Parker predicted a second bone of contention in higher education.

Within that area, the House emphasized myriad "special items" to benefit individual colleges across the state. But the Senate emphasized percentage increases in broad program categories.

Parker was optimistic that Lamar University would remain out of the fray because both houses allocated money for its special wants — expanded nursing programs at all three campuses and a new Minority Scholars Institute.

But he pledged to fight for Senate-endorsed funding increases such as faculty pay raises amounting to 14 percent over two years. The House budget set pay raises at about half that amount.

A resident of Midland and San Angelo, Virgil Cottingham helped enact and enforce the Texas Railroad Commission conservation rules that are credited with saving the state's major reservoirs from over-production. He joined the Railroad Commission in 1931 and was responsible for enforcing proration in the East Texas Field.

He later left the Commission, moved to Midland, and became head of the North Basin Pools Engineering Committee which was charged with the proration of 8,000 wells in West Texas. He was also a charter member of the West Texas Geological Society.

"I have never met the Mabees until tonight, but I have heard about them all my life," said Charles Weiner, as portraits were being taken of the occasion.

The Mabees are indeed well-known throughout the oil industry, not only for their civic generosity, but for their dedication and contributions to the business.

The Mabee legacy was started by John Mabee, who left the mule trading business in Oklahoma to trade oil leases. One 20-acre lease near Burkburnett brought him two gushers.

He later entered the contract drilling business and his became one of the largest drilling firms in the U.S. A 57,000-acre ranch, purchased in 1932, later became the source of extensive oil production in Andrews and Martin counties.

Guy Mabee left the family farm to join his uncle, John, as a driller. He later purchased John Mabee's production company and operated it in Midland with the assistance of his Joseph Guy Mabee, who spent 15 years as a toolpusher in the family drilling business during the Snyder and Spraberry booms.

The Weiner family was led by Sam "Skipper" Weiner who came to the Pennsylvania coal mines as an immigrant from Latvia and later moved to Corsicana in 1898. Following a tour of the El Dorado, Ark. he moved to Wink, where he and his son Ted formed Westerly Supply Co. with Buck Strum. Later they drilled the first commercial production in the Royalty Field and from there went on to drill over 100 major discoveries in the Permian Basin, including the Tex-Harvey field which was Midland County's first production.

In 1943, Ted was joined in the oil business by his brothers Stanley and Charles. The company is Texas Crude, which is still run by Charles Weiner. Sam died in 1958, Stanley in 1969 and Ted in 1979.

Members are elected to the Petroleum Hall of Fame by a committee which reviews nominations of those who have substantially contributed to the oil industry and others who have set worthy examples for those in the industry.

The newest Hall of Fame members were inducted by Bill Collyns, chairman of the Petroleum Hall of Fame committee. All are deceased except Joe Mabee, Guy Mabee and Charles Weiner.

Attendees to the banquet were treated to a video presentation on the lives of the inductees, written by Ed Rowland and Betty Orbeck of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum staff and produced by KMID-TV.

He cited opportunities for economic growth in such areas as enhanced oil recovery. "The Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas estimates there are 75 million barrels of oil in this Basin waiting for enhanced recovery," he noted. He added that the enhanced oil recovery tax incentive developed by Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp and the comptroller's staff now making its way through the Legislature would be a benefit to this area and the state.

He also mentioned legislation addressing natural gas severance tax payments and the problem producers have carrying the tax burdens while waiting for payment from purchasers.

"Neither of these pieces of legislation will 'make or break' the Texas oil and gas industry, but they show a spirit, a willingness on the part of the state that says 'we appreciate the oil and gas industry, we care for and about this industry. You are important to us,'" Bullock said.

As recently as 1981, oil and gas accounted for over 25 percent of all the economic activity in Texas, a figure that has fallen to 15 percent, he noted. Five years ago, oil and gas brought in almost 25 percent of all state tax revenue; now the figures is 8 percent.

"Never in our lifetime will any other industry play as prominent a role as oil and gas plays in Texas' economy. You're the largest private employer in the state. You built our schools; the petroleum by-products you produced built our highways; your tax monies maintained city and county governments and built our university systems."

Now, as the state's economy continues to expand and remold itself to rely on exports, electronics and paper and pulp as well as oil and gas, Bullock said Texans and Permian Basiners have been forced to learn new ways of doing business.

He cited as one example of the area's efforts to adapt and diversify the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"What other part of the country, suffering tough times, would have the vision, would have raised the money to build such a Center?" he asked. "Personally, I know of no other part of Texas. But you did, with the leadership of Cy Wagner and Jack Brown. And your building that center says more about your future than any forecast I could ever deliver."

ROAD

"Lots of people realized the importance of the project," Stretcher said. "Other groups helped take away the fear of what some might have seen as an adversarial project."

"When you put in a major street like that the traffic counts go up and it increases business activity," Ms. Vickrey explained citing similar heavily traveled — and heavily shopped — intersections such as Loop 250 and Midkiff Road and Wadley Avenue and Garfield Road.

A September 1988 study by the Eastside Economic Development Task Force showed the Lamesa Road area residents want more ladies', children's and men's clothing stores, shoe stores, drug stores and carry-out restaurants.

Residents surveyed responded that they don't want to see more liquor stores, laundromats, radio /video stores or jewelry stores built.

The two city officials have worn many hats as the project has neared fruition.

Stretcher and Ms. Vickrey found themselves consoling homeowners who had to move from a residence where they had lived for as long as 50 years.

"Nancy and I met with groups in homes with as few as three or four people," the former city attorney continued.

The two found themselves chauffeuring residents through the city in search of a new home and expediting the city's and state's promise to help pay moving expenses.

Local Realtors and Jo Wallace, a secretary in the city's legal department, also have been of invaluable assistance to the two, they concurred.

In defining her job of keeping Phase I rights-of-way files in order, Ms. Wallace echoed the sentiments felt by Stretcher and Ms. Vickrey about the project: "I didn't have much spare time.

"But it was quite a challenge."

Renovation plans — now nearly four years old — are divided into three parts:

- Phase I — conversion of Lamesa Road between Mississippi Avenue and Interstate 20 to a four-lane thoroughfare and construction of an interstate exit;
- Phase II — conversion of Lamesa Road between Wadley Avenue and Loop 250 to a four-lane thoroughfare; and
- Phase III — future upgrading of the road between Mississippi and Wadley avenues, where four lanes already exist.

In Phase I and II, a fifth lane for left turns also will be constructed.

The TDH will reconstruct the road and help fund moving expenses for some relocated Lamesa Road homeowners.

In addition to relocating sewer and water lines, the city must construct curbs, gutters and sidewalks and also contribute to funding moving-related expenses of homeowners.

Phase I contracts are expected to be awarded by the state next month and construction should begin in July.

Officials have yet to begin buying right-of-ways for project's Phase II, which is expected to take less time to complete, Stretcher added.

Contracts should be awarded on Phase II — reconstruction of the road between Wadley Avenue and Loop 250 — by late spring 1990, he predicted.

The federal funds financing the first two phases likely won't be available for the third until at least 1992, Stretcher said.

Shuttle to launch interplanetary probe

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis was readied today for launch, carrying a robot craft toward a voyage to Venus, the cloud-shrouded planet that has been an abiding mystery to scientists.

Lennard Fisk, NASA's chief scientist, said the launch of the explorer craft Magellan will mark "a resurgence of America's planetary program."

The last American probe sent to deep space was dispatched in 1978.

Atlantis was scheduled to lift off at 2:24 p.m. EDT with five astronauts aboard, heading to orbit on a four-day mission 184 miles above Earth.

Launch pad workers completed fueling early this morning and prepared to awaken the five crew members. After breakfast, the astronauts were to don their bright orange launch suits and be driven to the spacecraft.

Magellan is to be released from Atlantis' cargo bay six hours after launch and sent streaking on a 15-month, 806 million-mile unmanned trip of its own.

Mission specialists Mary Cleave and Mark Lee will operate remote controls that propel Magellan from the shuttle's cargo bay. Atlantis is commanded by David M. Walker. The other crew members are pilot Ronald Grabe and mission specialist Norman Thagard.

Preparations moved smoothly since the countdown began Tuesday. A launch control commentator announced "all conditions look good" for launch time weather in Florida and at an emergency landing site in Spain. Engineers in the launch firing room checked spacecraft systems and officials reported no problems.

"We're ready to go fly," Richard Truly, NASA's space flight chief and the agency's administrator-designate, said at a Thursday news conference.

The liftoff opportunity, dictated by Magellan's path to Venus and lighting conditions at emergency landing sites, lasts only 23 minutes, one of the shortest launch windows in shuttle history.

After its release from the shuttle, Magellan's own rocket will send it out of Earth orbit. Over the next 15 months, the craft will fly around the sun 1½ times before settling into an orbit of Venus in August 1990.

Venus has intrigued humans as long as they've looked heavenward and marveled at the universe. The planet, the familiar "star" of the morning or evening, appears just before dawn or just after sunset as a brilliant, unblinking point of light. Its brightness in the nighttime sky is rivaled only by the moon.

Venus is Earth's nearest neighbor, with an orbit 25.7 million miles away, and the two often are considered to be sister planets since they are about the same size.

GARAGE

However, the mayor isn't promising the renovations during the next fiscal year, which will begin Oct. 1, 1989.

The mayor said the bonds must be transferred during regular municipal elections and that the city doesn't renovate its facilities with bond money.

Money to fund the garage renovations would come from the general operating budget.

The city didn't ask for the total amount needed to fund the new public safety center in the September bond election because other money — such as the garage funds — was available.

"We asked for the least amount of money ... and we assumed they understood the issue," Thomas said.

The mayor continued that he didn't expect opposition to the reallocation because it is not a "new situation."

Absentee voting for the May 6 municipal election will continue through May 2, City Secretary Bill Clanton said.

MOTHER

Bush conceded that his mother had expressed her opinion about his possible bid for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1990, but he said he is not convinced he will heed the advice.

"For 42 years, she has given me her opinion," Bush said in a telephone interview. "I have listened to it — sometimes. I still love my mother, and I appreciate her advice, but that's all it is, advice."

"I view this as an expression of love and worry and concern about her little boy," said Bush, 42. "I don't know what I'm going to do yet."

The First Lady also said that she is now a fan of the Texas Rangers and plans to throw out the first ball at a game at Arlington Stadium May 4 and will be bringing her son and his family one of the family dog Millie's six puppies. The puppy, she said, will be named Rangerette.

Reagan sinks from limelight

WASHINGTON (AP) — When organizers at Arizona State University invited Ronald Reagan to give a speech last month, fewer than one-fourth of the 10,000 tickets were sold in advance and the former president agreed to waive his $50,000 fee.

Reagan

Reagan, who commanded vast audiences until he left office in January ago, is now out of the limelight, retired into the select club of former presidents that includes Gerald Ford, Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter.

Occasionally, the former president pops back into the news. Both President Bush and Vice President Quayle visited him this week in Southern California. And his name came up more negatively in repeated references during the Iran-Contra trial of former White House aide Oliver North.

Would one have expected a less reclusive retirement given Reagan's popularity during his two-term tenure?

Probably not, agree president watchers. They differ, however, on whether it's the nature of the man or the nature of the system which is responsible.

"It's not unusual and not at all atypical historically for a former president to slip from sight," said Stephen Hess, a presidential scholar at the Brookings Institution, an independent think tank.

The advent of a new president is accompanied by a flurry of media attention and public curiosity, Hess said, and the former White House occupant generally just drifts away from power, Hess said.

Reagan, 78, works in his offices atop a Los Angeles skyscraper, say his aides. He writes speeches on such favorite topics as the need for a line-item veto, a balanced budget amendment and an end to the two-term limit for presidents. He has joined the board of the conservative magazine National Review and also is planning to write his memoirs.

Reagan has been virtually mum on the presidency of his successor, and he is rarely mentioned in Washington.

One way for former presidents to step back into the limelight is to take a shot at their predecessor. Thus, Jimmy Carter made the news in 1981 when he criticized Reagan's budget proposal for placing too much emphasis on defense spending and not enough on domestic programs.

"But most ex-presidents are obliging and they stay out of the hair of the current occupant of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue," said Benjamin Ginsberg, a professor of government at Cornell University.

Bush also has been careful to avoid criticism of his predecessor. Last month, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu admonished aides to refrain from unfavorable comparisons of Reagan and Bush.

Some former presidents have made a comeback several years later, returning to vogue once a historical perspective of their presidency has been established. Such was the case with Harry Truman, who left office in 1953 an unpopular leader but was seen in a far more favorable light in the 1960s and until he died in 1972.

Presidents who cannot bear the obscurity of retirement are rare. Theodore Roosevelt didn't want to be an ex-president so he ran against fellow Republican William Howard Taft in 1912. His run split the Republican vote, and gave Democrat Woodrow Wilson the White House.

"Reagan is not about to upstage Bush," said Tom Korologos, a lobbyist and Reagan friend who once served the Nixon and Ford administrations as a legislative aide. "Reagan did more for Bush than any other president has done for his VP, and now he knows it's time to get out of the picture," he said.

Congressmen push to deny pay raise to senior judges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five congressmen put a trio of leading judges on notice: the pay raise so vigorously sought by federal judges may well depend on denying it to senior judges who do no judicial work.

"Pay raises should be reserved for those who work," said Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., chairman of the House courts subcommittee.

His message was echoed by four Republican and Democratic colleagues at a hearing Thursday. They were taken aback by testimony from the judicial leaders, who are seeking a 30 percent pay raise for all federal judges.

U.S. Circuit Judge Frank Coffin depicted a federal bench demoralized over the loss of a 51 percent pay raise earlier this year, but he displayed no willingness to compromise in response to complaints over pay that members of Congress hear when they go home to the voters.

"I have never seen so many judges at all levels, in all courts, and in all parts of the country so disheartened as I do today," Coffin said. "Ours is a lunar landscape with all of the stark and ominous silhouettes that the term implies."

He called Feb. 7, the day Congress defeated the pay raise, "Black Tuesday."

But Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., replied, "Many voters in my district do not regard it as Black Tuesday, and I'm one of them."

Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., said, "One catalyst for that defeat was the front page story in most of the nation's newspapers that former Chief Justice Warren Burger" and other senior judges who do no judicial work would get the raise.

He said he went to four town meetings in his district at that time "and I heard about that 50 times if I heard about it once."

Then he offered the three judges what he called "a little bit of friendly advice: the senior judge situation must be resolved if you want a pay raise...And I've not seen much in the way of constructive suggestions from you."

Rep. George Sangmeister, D-Ill., said he too was peppered with objections at town meetings after the news stories.

"I was faced with the Burger question," Sangmeister said. "And I was not able to defend that."

Earlier this year, The Associated Press reported previously unpublished federal figures from 1987 that showed that 20 percent of 306 senior federal judges did no judicial work. These include Burger, who since he stepped down has spent his time chairing the celebration of the bicentennials of the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

An Associated Press survey of all senior judges in February and March of this year found that 17 percent of 277 senior judges did no judicial work. The AP survey credited judges for dormant cases still on their dockets.

Coffin and his colleagues told the subcommittee it would be unfair to deprive non-working senior judges of pay raises by, as Coffin put it, "suddenly changing the rules after a lifetime."

Housing program accused of 'feathering financial nest'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An investigation into a $225 million federal housing program shows it was used during the Reagan years "to feather the financial nest" of former administration officials and other prominent Republicans, the House Banking Committee chairman says.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, said he will hold hearings on the report by the inspector general of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which suggested favoritism and cronyism in awarding federal housing renovation contracts.

The report, released this week, documented how former Reagan administration figures and other Republicans raked in handsome profits on consulting contracts to rehabilitate subsidized apartments for the poor.

The consultants included President Reagan's first interior secretary, James Watt; the late John Mitchell, attorney general under President Nixon; former Republican Sen. Ed Brooke of Massachusetts, and former Kentucky Gov. Louis Nunn, also a Republican.

Other consultants included former top HUD officials under Reagan-era Secretary Samuel Pierce, with one charging fees of $1.3 million. Still other former officials under Pierce participated as developers in projects to renovate subsidized housing for the poor, benefited by the HUD contracts.

Inspector General Paul Adams drew a comparison with the Pentagon procurement scandal, with former government officials drawing big fees as consultants to developers seeking government contracts.

But Adams said he had found no evidence that active HUD officials had been involved in influence-peddling and made no charges of criminal activity.

The rehab program is a $225 million a year endeavor that survived in Congress despite efforts by the Reagan administration to kill it. Through it, developers win contracts to acquire and receive HUD guarantees of subsidized rents for 15 years.

"It is indeed ironic that a program that the Reagan administration had sought to terminate for six years was misused to feather the financial nest of HUD and administration favorites," Gonzalez said Thursday.

He praised the action by HUD Secretary Jack Kemp, who ordered a halt to 35 pending awards worth $100 million and audits of existing contracts.

Adams said that while he had found no illegality in HUD's Moderate Rehabilitation Program, contracts were distributed in ways that suggested favoritism and use of insider information.

Money for over half the units audited went to just 10 states, which by HUD formulas were entitled to just 16 percent.

Adams said he had turned over the 700-page investigative report to the FBI and Justice Department.

Adams said in a memo to Kemp that developers and local public housing agencies "were led to believe the consultants enjoyed a special relationship with persons making recommendations and decisions."

Congressman calls for harsher penalties for juveniles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The juvenile justice system is too soft on the kind of brutal, senseless crimes committed by a gang of youths who beat and gang-raped a 28-year-old woman in New York's Central Park last week, a congressman says.

"What we're saying is, If you're going to do big-boy crime, you're going to do big-boy time," Rep. Chuck Douglas, R-N.H., said at a news conference Thursday in which he called for harsher penalties for violent juvenile offenders.

Douglas, a former state Supreme Court justice, was joined by members of the Republican Research Committee Task Force on Crime to discuss how the attack April 19 in Central Park highlights the need for changing the juvenile justice system.

"I can tell you that we have a juvenile justice system that is modeled basically for the middle class," Douglas said. "The children of folks like us, the children of the middle class who may get into trouble with shoplifting at a young age, they may throw a rock through a window, that's where the juvenile justice system works.

"But the system does not work, and it's no deterrent, and it's no protection and shouldn't be for the kinds of kids who did what happened in Central Park."

But according to news accounts, the youths suspected of committing the Central Park assault were average city kids. Teachers called them good students, and one principal said of two of the boys: "They come from homes of parents who care, parents who are as shocked as we are."

Four of the suspects lived in a building with a doorman, one played tuba in the school band, another was described by teachers and classmates as a talented artist.

The congressmen said they were unhappy that in many states youngsters who commit violent crimes such as rape, armed robbery, murder or attempted murder get little more than a slap on the wrist.

The task force is hoping by the end of the year to create model state legislation "that would cause the most violent of juvenile offenders to receive the full punishment for their actions if they're convicted," said Schiff, a former district attorney. The task force would strongly urge states to pass the model legislation, he said.

Scientists call fusion experiments 'bunk'

Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The scientific community is fast approaching a consensus on claims about "fusion in a test tube": it's bunk.

Despite intensive efforts at many national laboratories, virtually all American researchers have failed to detect the extraordinary emissions of heat claimed by Utah scientists last month.

"My guess is the whole thing will go away before long," said John Schiffer, a researcher at Illinois' Argonne National Laboratory.

Yet "cold" fusion enjoyed its brightest moment in the sun Wednesday when a tiny circle of enthusiasts told a Congressional committee they may have tapped into a history-making source of energy.

It's possible "an entirely new and unexpected source of energy has been uncovered," testified Stanford materials scientist Robert A. Huggins before the House Science Committee.

University of Utah chemist Stanley Pons told congressmen how he and researcher Martin Fleischmann of England developed "cold" fusion: a table-top nuclear reactor that, they say, generates immense energy by fusing or combining large numbers of atomic nuclei. Previously scientists thought this was impossible except at extremely high temperatures.

Last week Huggins said he and his Stanford colleagues had successfully replicated at least part of the Pons-Fleischmann experiment. The Stanford gizmo supposedly emitted 20 percent to 40 percent more heat than it originally contained over a two-day period, Huggins said.

Several foreign institutions also claim to have had some successes.

But the Congressional committee also heard the strongly skeptical views of scientists from Oak Ridge National Laboratory, Princeton University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Other experts told the Hearst Newspapers that they had tried — and failed — to replicate the Pons and Fleischmann experiment.

"The bottom line is zippo," said Bob Schwabach, a spokesperson for Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois. Argonne researcher John Schiffer agreed: "All the results I'm aware of have been negative."

Researchers have also come up empty-handed at Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island. At MIT's plasma fusion laboratory, "We have not seen a measurable (fusion) effect of any kind," said lab director Ronald R. Parker.

It's the same story at the nation's top magnetic fusion lab, Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory in New Jersey. "We haven't seen any neutrons or heat from any of (our experimental) setups," said spokesperson Anthony DeMeo.

"Most of the people that have done this experiment so far haven't seen a thing — and that includes major government laboratories," said Stephen Dean, head of Fusion Power Associates of Gaithersburg, Md., the Washington lobby for the nation's fusion research laboratories.

What, then, is the explanation for Pons and Fleischmann's startling finding?

"The most likely one is, 'A mistake,' " Schiffer replied drily. "My guess is the whole thing will go away before long."

A big blow came Tuesday, when Pons and Fleischmann lost a one-time backer — a scientific team at Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

Earlier this month, Georgia Tech scientists announced they had detected neutrons. They sheepishly withdrew the claim the next day, blaming faulty equipment. On Tuesday, they acknowledged they couldn't detect excess neutrons at all.

Women more likely to get financial help

WASHINGTON (AP) — American women are more likely to need anti-poverty assistance than men, as they struggle to raise children on their own and cope with leaner times in old age, a Census Bureau report shows.

More than one woman in five — 20.5 percent — received help from some major benefits program during a 32-month study reported on by the Bureau on Thursday.

During the same period the public assistance programs aided 15.8 percent of men in the nation, somewhat less than one out of six.

John M. McNeil of the Bureau's Housing and Household Economic Statistics Division said that the difference in need is largely the result of women raising children without a husband present and the preponderance of women in the older age groups.

When marriages break up women more often obtain custody of the children, and those families more often lapse into poverty, McNeil said in a telephone interview. In addition, a growing number of single women are raising families of their own, he noted.

As of 1987, the bureau said, 34.3 percent of families with a female householder fell below the poverty level. By comparison, 12.5 percent of families with a male householder and no wife, and only 6.0 percent of married couples fell below the poverty level.

The analysis showed that more than two-thirds of people living in a female-headed household with no husband present throughout the study period received anti-poverty benefits — 67.1 percent.

The study found that 18.3 percent of all Americans received benefits from at least one of six programs studied. Included were general assistance, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income, Medicaid, federal food stamps and federal and state rent assistance.

Benefits were more likely to go to minorities, to the very young and to people who had not finished high school, according to the report which covered the period from late 1983 to early 1986.

"One of the more important findings was that the likelihood of receiving benefits was very closely tied to the number of months in which income fell below the poverty level," McNeil said. "So, in that sense, the programs appear to be providing benefits to those who need them the most."

This was the first long-term look at recipients of benefits done by the Bureau, and thus no past rates were available for comparison, McNeil said. The study will be repeated in the future, he said.

Nearly half of black Americans obtained help from one or more programs during the period, at 48.5 percent, the study said. By comparison, the rate was 34.2 percent for Hispanics and 13.9 percent for white Americans.

Blacks also were longer-term recipients of help, averaging 11.2 months of benefits during the study period. Hispanics averaged 7.4 months of benefits while it was 2.6 months for white recipients.

Overall, women recipients averaged 4.4 months of benefits, compared with 3.0 months for men.

By age, people under age 18 were the leading group receiving benefits at 26.6 percent — and the subgroup under age 6 managed a 30.1 percent rate.

Programs benefited 19.9 percent of people aged 18 to 24, while in the 25 to 44 group the rate was 14.7 percent. For people aged 65 and over the rate was 17.9.

Father's actions renew ethical questions

CHICAGO (AP) — A man who kept hospital workers at bay with a gun while tearfully removing his comatose son from life support systems and letting him die dramatized an ethical "issue waiting to happen," a law professor says.

Linares

Rudy Linares, 23, is charged with first-degree murder and on Thursday was ordered to undergo a psychiatric examination by a judge who called his case "an extraordinary situation surrounded by extraordinary circumstances."

"I want to know if he is any danger to himself or anyone else," said Cook County Judge Robert Bastone, before setting another hearing for May 18.

Linares, free on $75,000 personal recognizance bond, refused to talk to reporters.

Defense lawyer Richard Scholz said Linares, who told police, "I did it because I love my son," will plead innocent.

Cook County State's Attorney Cecil Partee confirmed his intention to prosecute Linares, but suggested there could be "a compassionate kind of justice."

Partee said he could understand the emotions that a parent feels at seeing the suffering of an incurably ill child.

"But we must be reasonable and say, I think, that under no circumstances does any person have the right to take the life of another," he said during the Thursday taping of a radio show to be aired Sunday.

Richard Epstein, a University of Chicago law professor and fellow at the school's Center for Medical Ethics, said that charging Linares with murder was wrong and called the case an "issue waiting to happen."

"Doctors have an exaggerated sense of the sacred nature of life," Epstein said. "It seems to me he should have been able to write a letter to the hospital saying, 'Please turn off the respirator. Very truly yours.'"

Other ethicists also expressed sympathy for the father of two other children, who along with his wife had asked months ago for life support to be withdrawn from their 16-month old son, Samuel. The parents had been refused.

The boy had been unconscious and not expected to recover since August, when he swallowed a balloon at a birthday party.

Weapons found in raid on capital motel

WASHINGTON (AP) — City police and federal agents seized 20 weapons, including a grenade launcher, and arrested six people in a raid on a motel in the capital's northeast section early today.

A Nazi flag was found in one of two cars with Texas license plates searched during the raid, said John Kelso, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI's Washington field office.

The investigation started Thursday afternoon when a suburban Dallas woman called the FBI's Dallas field office to report that her son had been kidnapped. The unidentified woman said the man, who had been missing two weeks, instructed her to wire him $1,000 here or "some harm would come to him," according to Kelso.

FBI agents traced the man to the motel and quickly determined that he hadn't been kidnapped, Kelso said.

"Apparently they may have been low on funds and this may have been an effort by him to get some additional funds," Kelso said. "It's unfortunate that he would involve his mother."

FBI agents discovered the hotel rooms contained automatic weapons and notified city police, the Secret Service and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the FBI official said.

Kelso said authorities were still trying to determine why the suspects were at the Econolodge, where they had been staying for several days and what they were planning to do with the weapons.

Charges and releases of the remaining suspects' identities were pending.

The weapons seized included a grenade launcher attached to a rifle, some zip guns, several pistols, silencers, and a variety of other semi-automatic and automatic arms, said police Capt. Philip A. O'Donnell.

"They're very destructive sort of weapons," said Kelso. "They have the power to kill people or to inflict serious bodily injury."

Six children aged 7 to 15 were found in the motel rooms and taken into protective custody, Kelso said.

Report reveals Iraq downed Egyptian jet

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Iraqi soldier shot down an Egyptian jet fighter by mistake last week as it descended to land in Baghdad for an air show, a published report here said.

The two Egyptian fliers ejected safely before the plane crashed, The Washington Post reported in Friday's editions.

The Iraqi government had invited Egypt to fly its home-built Alpha fighter-bomber to Baghdad for the air show, but apparently word of the invitation had not reached the soldier who, armed with shoulder-fired missile, downed the unfamiliar jet, the Post said.

The newspaper cited secret intelligence reports making the rounds of U.S. government offices here as the source of the story.

The Alpha jet was developed by French and German aircraft firms. Egypt has purchased Alpha kits from France and assembles the fighter-bomber in a plant south of Cairo. The jet has a top speed of 600 mph.

Drug works on growth cells

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers for a Michigan pharmaceutical company say the anti-baldness drug minoxidil appears to stimulate the genes that make hair grow.

Minoxidil "not only affects growing cells, but affects cells that make hair-shaft protein," Vincent Groppi Jr., a research with the Upjohn Co. of Kalamazoo, Mich., said Wednesday. "Minoxidil affects gene activity that affects the growth of the (hair) shaft."

Knowledge gained from study of minoxidil's effects on genes could have implications for research into genetically based diseases, such as sickle-cell anemia, said Allen Buhl, also an Upjohn researcher.

Marketed by Upjohn under the trade-name Rogaine, minoxidil was originally developed for use internally to control blood pressure. The Food and Drug Administration last year approved the drug for use externally as a treatment for baldness.

Publisher won't be in fair

NEW YORK (AP) — McGraw-Hill Inc. says it will not participate in a book fair next month in Iran because of the "unfolding politicalization" of the event.

The company announced its decision Thursday, one day after another U.S. publisher that had planned to exhibit its books at the fair, John Wiley & Sons, a major producer of technical and scientific books, announced it would pull out of the event.

The two publishers were criticized by the Authors' Guild and by the publisher of Salman Rushdie. Iran's leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, issued his death threat against the British author, saying Rushdie's novel "Satanic Verses" is blasphemous.

Washington party planned

NEW YORK (AP) — Red, white and blue will be the rage this weekend as the 200th anniversary of George Washington's inauguration is celebrated with a flotilla of ships, a fireworks display and a parade led by President Bush.

Washington's swearing-in as the first president was watched by some 20,000, just 10,000 fewer than the city's population in 1789. More than 2 million are expected to gather to watch the bicentennial events.

The highlight will be the inaugural commemoration at Federal Hall on Sunday, marking the moment when Washington put his hand to the Bible and swore to "faithfully execute the office of president of the United States."

Bush will speak at the ceremony — which falls on his 101st day in office. And a white-haired Philadelphian, William Sommerfield, will play the part of Washington and deliver part of the first president's inaugural address.

Noriega accused of fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush accused the Panamanian government of setting up "systematic fraud" for next week's presidential elections and said "the days of rule by dictatorship in Latin America are over."

Bush, in a statement released during his visit Thursday to Clearwater, Fla., also said the United States would "not recognize fraudulent election results engineered by (Panamanian strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio) Noriega."

Fusion power will be necessary to survive in 21st century

By PAUL RECER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The year is 2089 and fusion power plants are energizing the world, bringing the benefits of virtually unlimited electricity to countries everywhere.

Earth's sky is crystalline blue, purged of the gases and gunk that soured the atmosphere above whole continents a century before when fossil fuels were the main energy of civilization.

Concerns about the greenhouse effect and problems of acid rain are now only academic curiosities. An atmosphere once choked with the combustion gases of fossil fuels is slowly cleaning itself. And life is returning to lakes and streams that previously were acid-filled.

Such is the world that scientists and engineers envision with the advent of fusion, the process by which atoms are fused together to release energy.

Their visions are not just wishful thinking, but goals that must be achieved, according to some experts, because the age of fossil fuels is expected to start drawing to a close within only a few decades. And when fossil fuels are gone or become impractically expensive, something must be ready to take their place.

"The most likely thing will be fusion," said Harold P. Furth, director of the Princeton University plasma physics laboratory. "The present projections are that by the year 2040 or 2050, there will be a divergence between the energy required for a growing population and the energy available from fossil fuels, easily obtainable uranium and other sources.

"There will be quite a calamity unless something new is ready," he added.

The "cold fusion" process announced last month by the University of Utah is still controversial and unproven. But Furth and others believe a fusion process based on compressing deuterium plasma and heating it to 100 million degrees can be developed within two decades or less.

Thousands of researchers working at both federal and university laboratories are moving closer and closer to the point where the fusion fires will ignite and burn, powered by deuterium or hydrogen, chemicals easily extracted from seawater.

Most experts believe the fusion future lies with the high-pressure "hot" process, but they would welcome convincing proof that Utah's cold, room-temperature fusion works because it possibly could be developed more quickly.

Eric Storm, a fusion research project leader at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory in California, said that researchers could have a fusion-fired power plant operating by the year 2020 if the industrial nations of the world would commit the resources.

"Fusion is the energy source that nature prefers. It's the one that drives the sun and the stars," said Storm. "And nature is efficient."

"We could have fusion in just 15 years or so," said Stephen Dean, president of the Fusion Power Association, a non-profit education foundation, "but the government hasn't put a high priority on it so it will take 30 years or more."

Dean said an investment by the federal government of $1 billion a year for 15 years would bring fusion power to reality, but he said that isn't likely to happen "until there's an economic incentive."

Most experts believe there will be a slow phase-out of fossil fuels as they become more expensive, and that the 21st century eventually evolve into an all-fusion civilization.

Some of the fusion of that era will be from manmade plants on Earth. But the experts also believe there will be a more efficient use of solar radiation, the energy created by the natural fusion process of the sun.

Once that time comes, according to scientists' visions, oil spills will be obscure footnotes in history texts or just quaint memories recalled by centenarians who lounge in the bright sunlight of a pollution-free sky. Petroleum, expensive and becoming rare, will seldom be used for fuel, and coal even less often.

A fusion-driven world could have automobiles and trucks running on nearly silent electric engines, leaving in their wake only eddies of clean air — not the rank clouds that trailed vehicles of an earlier, gasoline-burning age.

Some engines could operate on hydrogen, a fuel extracted from seawater by the use of the plentiful electric power.

In this scenario, fusion power plants, easily licensed and fueled by a chemical extracted from seawater, would dot the landscape on continents around the globe.

The "cold fusion" process announced last month by the University of Utah is still controversial and unproven. But Harold P. Furth, director of the Princeton University plasma physics laboratory, and others believe a fusion process based on compressing deuterium plasma and heating it to 100 million degrees can be developed within two decades or less.

Shortage of medicine, beds damaging Banglasesh relief

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Lack of medicine and a shortage of hospital beds hampered treatment today of the victims of a tornado that pounded Bangladesh, leaving hundreds of people dead and thousands injured, doctors said.

The Relief Ministry says at least 600 people were killed and 12,000 injured Wednesday as the tornado swept through the Manikganj area, 25 miles northwest of Dhaka.

But local newspapers said the toll could reach 1,000. The pro-government Janata newspaper quoted officials as saying bodies were being uncovered in the rubble of devastated houses and that several hundred of the injured were in critical condition.

Doctors at the Dhaka Medical College, speaking on condition of anonymity, said an acute shortage of medicine and hospital beds was impeding treatment to the injured.

They said at least 1,000 people were brought to the hospital on Wednesday with broken limbs and head injuries. "We could only admit 225 of them," one doctor said. "The rest were given emergency treatment and released. Many of them did not get proper medicine."

AP

"This is a terrible scene," said Mostafa Jala Mohiuddin, a doctor at the medical college. "I have never seen so many injured people flooding the hospital at a time."

The tornado left at least 400 people missing, including 200 fishermen who had taken their boats on the Padma River, officials at the Relief Ministry said.

Chinese students claiming 'victory'

BEIJING (AP) — Students at universities in Beijing vowed today to continue their 5-day class boycott and wall posters at several schools proclaimed victory, a day after more than 150,000 of them and their supporters marched triumphantly for democracy.

"The strike must go on," read a new poster at Beijing Normal University.

"We must persist until final victory," read another at People's University.

The government announced Thursday that it was willing to talk with students about their demands for greater freedom. But student leaders rejected the government's stipulation that talks be conducted through official student groups.

Protesters at most schools have rejected the groups as non-democratic and formed their own student unions. The government has denounced the unions as illegal.

Student leaders from several schools met today to discuss strategy.

"We talked about the march but didn't come to any decisions," said one leader at Beijing Normal University who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Right now we are savoring this victory. We have made the Communist Party bend."

Wang Dan, a student leader at Beijing University, said student leaders hoped the talks would be held soon and wanted to meet with Premier Li Peng.

"He is the leader of the government and he should hear all the views of the citizens," he said.

Newspapers throughout China carried a Xinhua News Agency story on the protest that said only about 30,000 students participated in Thursday's march.

But the 20-mile march through the streets of Beijing drew more than 150,000 students, workers and city residents who called for a free press and political reforms. It was Communist China's largest protest in modern times and lasted 15 hours.

The march was sparked by an editorial Wednesday in the People's Daily, which called the student movement a "chaotic disturbance" and accused the students of being unpatriotic.

Protesters who led the march carried a poster that said: "Uphold the righteous leaders of the party."

Today's Xinhua report was significant because it did not accuse the students of calling for the overthrow of the government. Most students say they only want the leaders to do their job better and respect human rights.

The television news today broadcast the first tape of the march. The report also repeated a warning that the protest was illegal and that organizers were breaking the law.

The People's Daily, the official newspaper of the Communist Party, published an overview of the previous two weeks of protests in an apparent attempt to pacify angry students.

The article denied that students had been beaten in Beijing last week when they staged a sit-in at the gates of the Communist Party headquarters. An Associated Press reporter saw police hit six students.

The article also attempted to dispel a rumor that a female student had been killed in the protest. The woman, it said, was hit by a car as she returned from the demonstration. Many students believe police killed her, although it appeared the newspaper's account was correct.

During Thursday's march, tens of thousands of Beijing residents escorted the students on bicycles and on foot, and tried to shield them from soldiers and police.

"We're opening a road for them," said one worker, after he helped push through a line of officers.

Police had issued harsh warnings against marches, but the security forces were unarmed and they gave up after pushing matches failed to stop the advancing demonstrators.

The march was the most dramatic action yet by Beijing students in their campaign for sweeping democratic reforms.

The protest began after the death of ousted Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang on April 15. Hu was removed from his post in 1987 after the party accused him of failing to crack down on pro-democracy demonstrations in late 1986.

Last week's protests culminated Saturday with a huge rally at Tiananmen Square, the symbolic political center of China.

At People's University today, one student said he went to class but found no one there.

"I thought everything was going to end after yesterday but now I see the movement is still going strong," he said.

Students have said they plan another march May 4, the 70th anniversary of China's first student movement for democracy. The movement grew out of students' opposition to Japan's territorial advances in China after World War I but developed into a quest for broader political goals, including democracy.

Child abuse still a crying shame

Only ten years ago abused and troubled children were labeled 'hidden children', living silently behind closed doors," notes a booklet on child abuse from Permian Basin CAPP (Child Abuse Prevention Program). "Today this is no longer the case. The plight of the troubled child has entered the consciousness of middle America ...."

Yes, Americans are waking up to the sad horror that is child abuse in all its ugly forms. But, as Permian Basin CAPP has been reminding Midlanders throughout this month, Child Abuse Prevention Month, the horror doesn't go away at the end of a month during which the effort has been made to make individuals aware of the problem.

In fact, according to information in the booklet called "Children, Choices and Change," the problem could be significantly larger than the statistics indicate. In 1986, for example, there were an estimated 419,000 Texas children reported as being at risk of being abused, neglected or both. Over 71,000 cases were investigated and 61,156 of them were confirmed. That means, say officials, that 83% of the cases — or nearly 348,000 Texas children in danger of being abused — were never even brought to the attention of authorities who could provide protective services.

Neglect cases constituted 51% of the reports to Texas Protective Services for Families and Children, including physical abuse cases estimated at 21 percent, sexual abuse 11% and emotion abuse 13%. Yet all those cases reported meant that authorities could become involved and protect the children. Potentially hundreds of thousands of cases are never reported and children live on in fear and danger. And some die.

If people would only become involved when they suspect cases of abuse the problem could be properly confronted. Child abuse remains a crying shame.

Rural teacher's drug course tough

WASHINGTON — Imagine a world where police dogs routinely sniff through high school lockers in search of cocaine and where seductive beer commercials are banned from the airwaves. Picture a world where kids are required to take a course in manners and parents are required to chaperone school dances.

Jack Anderson

That's a world on its way to ending teenage addiction, according to one small-town school teacher speaking from the front lines of the war on drugs.

Greg Wood teaches and coaches athletics in the Delmar School District in Delaware. When his senator, Democrat Joe Biden, came to town recently, Wood drew up an anti-drug manifesto and gave it to Biden.

With the crack epidemic turning inner-city streets into battlefields, why are the suggestions coming from a rural teacher? Because drugs, particularly crack, know no city boundaries. Crack has spread from the urban ghetto to rural Main Street. In towns where everyone knows everyone else's business, parents are suddenly finding that they don't know where their children are.

Wood's ideas are tough. They could raise warning bells in the halls of the American Civil Liberties Union. But they are the kinds of solutions that would tickle the fancy of a shape-up-or-ship-out guy like federal drug czar William Bennett. Here are some of Wood's ideas:

■ Ban all television commercials for alcohol. The brewers would call it censorship, but we think children see too much of the romance of drinking before they understand the responsibility. "Tell me how many reasonable adults are walking around with Spuds MacKenzie T-shirts," Wood said. "But there are a lot of kids walking around with them."

■ Raise the minimum driving age from 16 to 17. Advocates of this position say it would cut down on the number of drunk-driving deaths and teach kids that driving is a privilege, not a right.

■ Require kids to participate in after-school activities — sports, clubs, community work, whatever suits their interests.

(BU) Allow drug-sniffing dogs to patrol the schools. Drugs can be hidden from the eye of a teacher, but not from the nose of a dog.

■ Require all parents to chaperone at least two school events per year. We think this would be a real eye-opener for parents who have been too busy to notice that the old sock hop isn't what it used to be.

■ Require all sophomores, juniors and seniors to take at least one class on drug use and abuse. Make it a graduation requirement.

■ Teach a manners course in elementary schools and make attendance mandatory.

■ Establish reward systems for kids who meet the high expectations of the school. Promise them higher grades or coveted privileges.

■ Tax alcohol sales heavily and give that money to the states to pay for prevention and treatment programs. Make the manufacturers share the responsibility for addiction.

■ Restructure schools to make them far more interesting. "The plain truth is that our schools are boring for many students," Wood said. "Put an emphasis on research, experimentation and creativity. Get our students out of the little rows and into the libraries and labs and onto the fields of competition and cooperation."

Sen. Biden liked Wood's ideas, but Wood admits his peers aren't universally enamored with his approach. But his list demonstrates the extreme measures that desperate teachers and parents think may be necessary to combat the drug epidemic.

Wood says many people simply don't understand how bad the problem has become. "The teacher sees the hangovers on Monday and the lack of homework because they're out partying during the week," Wood told our associate Scott Sleek. "Anyone in this day and time who thinks their son and daughter leaves the house and doesn't drink is just naive."

CAPITALISTIC COMRADES — Mikhail Gorbachev is quietly maneuvering to put the Soviet Union into the Western economic orbit. U.S. intelligence reports from the Soviet Union suggest that he also plans to switch from a communist to a modified capitalist system.

Gorbachev is approaching the task gingerly, with a pause every step of the way to test the pulse of Kremlin resistance.

According to the intelligence reports, Gorbachev is listening to a group of Western economic advisers who are telling him that the only way he can pull the Soviet economy out of the mire is to adopt capitalist methods.

The Soviet leader has already made quiet overtures to London, Paris and Bonn about making the Soviet Union an economic partner with Western Europe. That would require severe adjustments inside the Soviet Union. Those changes would be hard to impose on the bureaucracy and hard to sell to the Soviet people. Both camps are expecting immediate economic benefits from Gorbachev's reforms. But Gorbachev's Western advisers tell him the transition will be slow and difficult.

New York outraged by gang's attack

NEW YORK — It is the most shocking assault here since the brutal killing of Kitty Genovese 25 years ago. Genovese died after being stalked and stabbed by a vicious killer who repeatedly knifed her during a half-hour street struggle. Some 40 people witnessed the crime but not one helped the young woman.

Jack Casserly

Now, in this violence-swamped city, eight teenagers are accused of raping and beating a 28-year-old woman so horribly in Central Park that she is virtually unrecognizable and in a coma. The young woman, a Wall Street investment banker, was attacked as she jogged in the park. She was left for dead, vomiting blood into a mud puddle, after one attacker hit her with a lead pipe. Four hours later, passersby found the jogger fighting for her life. A detective described the battered woman, a Wellesley graduate:

"Imagine someone in the worst car accident you ever saw. Then, double it."

The young assailants, described as a Harlem teenage wolf pack, were arrested after allegedly bragging, "She wasn't nothin'." Traces of blood and semen were found on five of the suspects.

After being jailed, police said all but one of the eight showed no remorse. They howled with laughter much of the night, joked about the obscene mugging, and were indifferent to the woman's terrifying ordeal. Doctors now report the victim has severe brain damage and may never function normally again.

The chilling laughter sent shock waves up to the statehouse in Albany where Gov. Mario Cuomo, one of the nation's most outspoken opponents of the death penalty, finally admitted something more had to be done about New York City lawlessness:

"The people are angry and frightened. My mother is; my family is ... This is the ultimate shriek of alarm that says none of us is safe — not even behind the most secure doors in Manhattan."

Cuomo lamely called for a tougher fight against crime. He blamed TV and movie violence. Mayor Ed Koch called for the death penalty. He insisted on the right to sentence juveniles as adults in cases such as this. But he saw no wide social blame.

John Cardinal O'Connor, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, visited the bedside of the comatose young woman, who is a Catholic. He called for public prayer for the victim. The cardinal differed with Koch, saying all of New York society was to blame for the crime. He appeared to be attacking the long liberal political and social ethic here.

The suspects are being held without bail. One has been freed because he is only 13 years old, but police may re-arrest him. He and the others will be charged with murder if the young woman dies.

The young men told neighbors they were out "wilding" — a new street term here for going berserk. It is said to have been taken from a Los Angeles' rock 'n' roll song glorifying street violence.

The conviction that "no one is safe" in this city is finally getting through to most New Yorkers. Many have long believed the battle against drugs here is hopeless. They have even accepted that this is a robbery-prone, sex-obsessed, broken-family society. Not even St. Patrick's Cathedral is safe — a murder and various demonstrations took place inside last year. Nor are hospitals, where a woman physician was recently strangled to death. But this act of savagery and the lurid boasting of the suspected killers — plus the Central Park location — has caused millions of New Yorkers to conclude that crime is out of control. And many are deeply worried that they may be the next victims.

The moral and social indifference of this city toward victims of crime is finally being seen for what it is — a society where anything goes. Where money, on one side, and violence, on the other, are the distinguishing marks of a polarized community of rich and poor, and sometimes black and white.

The crime comes at the very time when New York celebrates the 200th anniversary of George Washington's inauguration here as the nation's first president. But what we really are witnessing is the moral decay and social disintegration of this city.

"All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." John 6:37

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Politicians should be from out of this world!

A story in the papers said certain blacks in Chicago were quite alarmed that a white man, Richard Daley Jr., has been elected mayor of the city.

Their reaction seemed to be that now that a white man has taken over down at City Hall, Chicago blacks can expect to be rounded up, put in chains and sent out to work on the Dan Ryan Expressway while a bunch of white guys named Billy Earl, Buck and Bobby Clyde use shotguns to see to it they don't loaf or talk back.

Lewis Grizzard

Of course, many whites have had the same reaction when blacks have been elected mayor. How, whites ask, can a city remain progressive and safe to live in with a black as mayor?

This sort of thing doesn't manifest itself in only municipal politics. We've even seen it on the presidential level now.

■ Jesse Jackson for president? My God, the republic wouldn't last a week.

■ Jesse didn't get the nomination. It's obviously the work of white racists.

There must be a way to halt such devisiveness in our electoral process, and I may have thought of it.

We need to make a law saying only green people can hold public office.

That way whites and blacks can't vote along color lines and they might even find themselves working for the same candidate. How refreshing.

I realize there are also red people and brown people and yellow people, but you get the same sort of fear and suspicion when somebody like that runs.

But when you think about it — and I have — there aren't any stereotypes of green people nor any animosities toward them. And green people have no documented history of discriminating against others who aren't their kind.

The primary reason for that, of course, is there aren't any green people on our planet. One occasionally sees a person who appears to be green, but that is just somebody who is suffering from a hangover, the flu, a stomach disorder or has painted his or her face green for a St. Patrick's Day parade or a Notre Dame football game.

But there might be green people on other planets. We all have dealt with the fantasy of little green people from Mars. We spent billions on our space program, and now there's a real reason to spend even more.

This country should make a vigorous effort to begin exploring space to find green people to bring back to be our politicians.

These people likely would be highly intelligent and could learn our governmental system quickly. We could stress to them the fact we believe, at least in theory, that all of us are created equal, so green people should consider all of us the same.

"Our colors may be many," we could tell them, "but we're all in the same rainbow."

I'm serious here. A green president would see only Americans, not white Americans or African-Americans or Eskimos. A green mayor wouldn't court simply the white business power complex while ignoring a coalition of black ministers and former civil rights heavies.

A green Supreme Court could debate minority business partnerships without any preconceived notion or deep-seated prejudices.

A green sheriff could distribute justice equally. A green city council would have no reasons to conspire against any particular group of citizens.

And Jesse Jackson could go back to preaching.

And George Bush would have plenty of time for hunting and fishing.

And Richard Daley Jr. could get a job selling programs at Cubs games.

If any green people from outer space read this, let me know if there is any interest on your part, and as long as you don't try to get in our country clubs, we should get along quite well.

CHARLEY REESE

Genocide in Tibet should spark outrage

It's true, as American liberals sometimes say, that the United States cuddles up to dictators. Take the dictators of Red China, for example, who have been busily committing genocide in Tibet.

Charley Reese

Yet most Americans, particularly those who lust for trade, are gaga over the Han dictators. Apparently the thought of one billion customers is enough to derange even ordinarily sensible people. Actually, however, there is in China only one customer — the government and it is by far not the most credit-worthy buyer on the world scene.

Despite rhetoric to the contrary, the United States pursues what it supposes to be a pragmatic foreign policy. The human rights posturing is merely for public consumption, a sop to editorial writers and sandal-wearers. Unfortunately for those of us who want a pragmatic foreign policy based on U.S. interests, Washington usually defines U.S. interests as whatever is good for the global bankers and industrialists.

What has been and is happening to Tibet is a far worse crime against humanity than mere denial of a vote in South Africa, for example. The French writer, Maurice Revel, has pointed out that since China invaded and seized Tibet in 1950, 80 percent of the population has been killed or forced out of the country.

John F. Avedon, in a recent book, "Tibet Today," listed the following Chinese atrocities:

■ 1.2 million Tibetans dead — one-sixth of the population.

■ 6,254 monasteries destroyed, their art and statuary either melted into bullion or sold for foreign exchange on the Hong Kong and Tokyo markets.

■ 60 percent of Tibet's voluminous philosophic, historic and biographic literature burned. (Don't you liberals hate book-burners?)

■ The nation cut to pieces, with two-thirds of its original territory appended to Chinese provinces.

■ Amdo, previously Tibet's northeastern province, now called Chinghai, converted into the planet's largest gulag capable of interring up to 10 million prisoners.

■ One out of 10 Tibetans imprisoned at the close of the '70s are still in prison — about 100,000.

■ Over a quarter-million Chinese troops have enforced two decades of political re-education meetings, 14 hours of daily labor, no freedom of movement, no education or health services to speak of, and two five-year periods of nationwide famine.

■ Tibetan forests have been devastated and the country's wildlife obliterated.

The world, of course, chooses to ignore these atrocities, the chief characteristics of the Western democracies in the late 20th century being greed and cowardice.

The Chinese are moving masses of their own people into Tibet, and Tibet, as a nation, is probably done for. The United States, which cannot even deal decisively with terrorists or keep faith with democratic Chinese on Taiwan, is not likely to do anything except utter the ritual tut-tut whenever some new atrocity accidentally finds its way into the press.

Therefore it is up to individual Americans to let their own congressmen and senators know that they do not condone genocide, that they expect U.S. law to be applied to the Chinese trade, that they are not so stupid as to suppose that a totalitarian government that, out of desperation, opens its economy a smidgen has become democratic.

China, under its present government, is our enemy and the enemy of all people who wish to live free. You would think what passes for U.S. foreign policy experts would have learned from World War II that allying oneself with a snake to fight another snake leaves you with one, even stronger snake, after the war.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, April 28, the 118th day of 1989. There are 247 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Two hundred years ago, on April 28th, 1789, there was a mutiny on the "Bounty" as the crew of the British ship set Captain William Bligh and 18 sailors adrift in a launch in the South Pacific.

On this date:

In 1758, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, was born in Westmoreland County, Virginia.

In 1788, Maryland became the seventh state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1941, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that blacks traveling on railroad cars were entitled to the same level of quality and service given white passengers.

In 1945, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and his mistress, both of whom had tried to flee advancing Allied forces, were captured and executed by Italian partisans.

In 1947, a six-man expedition sailed from Peru aboard a balsa wood raft named the "Kon-Tiki" on a 101-day journey that would take them across the Pacific Ocean to Polynesia.

In 1952, war with Japan officially ended as a treaty that had been signed by the United States and 47 other nations took effect.

In 1958, Vice President Richard M. Nixon began a goodwill tour of Latin America as he and his wife, Pat, arrived in Montevideo, Uruguay.

Most TEAMS scores up; Third-graders' down

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Midland fifth-, seventh- and ninth-graders displayed increased mastery over last year on the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test, while third-grade performance dropped, district figures released Thursday show.

Of the 5,972 Midland Independent School District students who took the TEAMS in February, 70.6 percent passed the three — math, reading and writing — sections.

Grade-by-grade district-wide, the percentage of students passing all three TEAMS sections went from 75 percent to 71 percent in third grade, 73 percent to 74 percent in fifth grade, 71 percent to 77 percent in seventh grade and 67 percent to 74 percent in ninth grade.

For all MISD third-graders, mastery dropped from 94 percent to 93 percent in math, 86 percent to 82 percent in reading and 82 percent to 78 percent in writing.

"We don't know yet why the scores at that grade level dropped," Maridell Fryar, executive director of instructional services, said Thursday. "We'll be looking at those programs to see if we need to make changes."

Third-graders in some Midland Independent School District schools showed dramatic drops in mastery, while three schools posted perfection in math.

De Zavala Elementary School's third-grade reading results plummeted from 95 percent to 58 percent, marking the lowest reading scores for that campus posted since TEAMS was administered in 1986, when the third graders showed 63 percent reading mastery.

Only 53 percent of Travis Elementary School third-graders passed the writing section, showing an 18 point drop in percentage points from last year. Milam Elementary School's reading scores for that grade level also dropped, going from 85 percent mastery to 68 percent.

Larry Lusby, executive director of computer and special services, said he doesn't see the drop in third-grade scores as being statistically significant. In fact, Lusby said the decrease almost could be expected because last year's third-graders did so well.

"I'm disappointed but I'm not alarmed that we're headed in the wrong direction," Lusby said.

From 1987 to 1988, the pupils went from 86 percent to 94 percent in math, 79 percent to 86 percent in reading and 75 percent to 82 percent in writing.

"Basically we outdid ourselves (last year) at the third-grade level," Lusby said.

In contrast to the lower scores, Fannin, Long and Henderson elementary school third-graders this year showed perfect mastery in math, and Pease Elementary School pupils in that grade improved from 83 percent to 98 percent in the subject.

Fryar said factors such as smaller enrollment could drastically affect TEAMS scores. One or two students failing TEAMS could have a dramatic effect on a primary grade level's overall passing percentage, she said.

"Overall, we're pleased with the results at the upper levels, where it's harder to make an impact on the students who are behind," Fryar said. "The older students get in school, the more difficult remediation is."

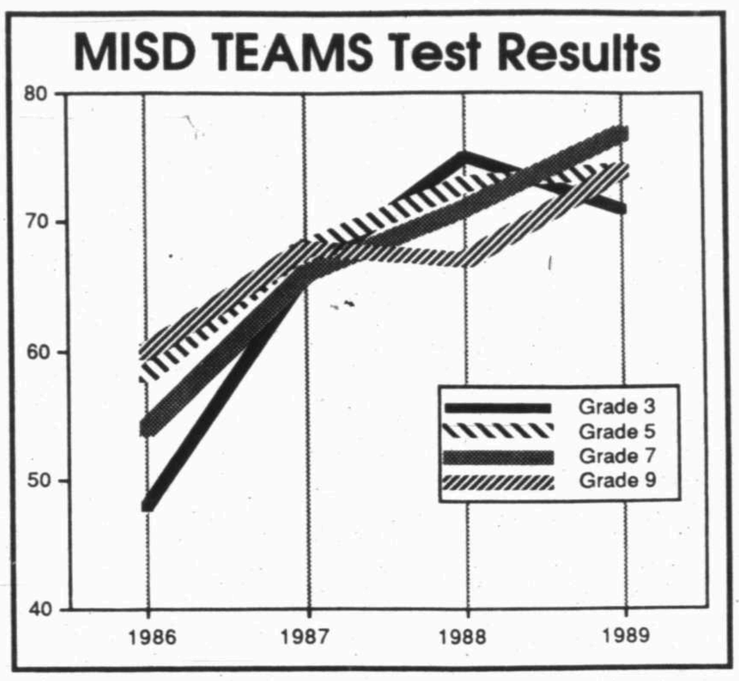

Midland and Lee Freshman High School ninth-graders showed improved mastery on all three sections, while Goddard Junior High School seventh-graders showed the only decrease at that grade level on a TEAMS section. The Goddard pupils went from 94 percent to 89 percent in math and 90 percent to 88 percent in reading but increased from 83 percent to 84 percent in writing.

Seventh-grade results at other junior high schools on the three sections either increased or remained stable, with San Jacinto Junior High showing the most significant improvement in math by going from 72 percent to 84 percent mastery. Overall, MISD seventh-graders stayed at 92 percent in math, went from 85 percent to 88 percent in reading and 77 percent to 83 percent in writing.

Fifth-graders overall went from 87 percent to 90 percent in math, 86 percent to 83 percent in reading and matched last year's writing mastery at 82 percent.

Scharbauer Elementary School fifth-graders showed dramatic improvement in math, going from 79 percent mastery to 91 percent, while Rusk Elementary School pupils at that grade went from 85 percent to 71 percent in writing.

All grade levels have shown improvement on TEAMS overall since 1986, when only 48 percent of third-graders, 58 percent of fifth-graders, 54 percent of seventh-graders and 60 percent of ninth-graders passed all three sections.

'M-PALs' act as friends in need

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

The problems can range from students contemplating suicide, wanting to drop out of school or simply having the irresistible urge to launch a paper wad at a classmate.

That's when "M-PALs," a group of specially trained Midland Independent School District high schoolers, can step in and make a difference just by being a good friend and mentor.

The MISD Peer Assistance Leadership Program course is offered at Midland and Lee high schools. Forty-five students have enrolled at both schools in this, the program's first year.

Trained in class to handle problems including academics, substance abuse and emotional distress, the students work with their peers and assist newcomers from outside Midland who are making the transition to all MISD schools at every grade level.

The students, after six weeks of training, travel around the district during their M-PALs class hour and help other students.

"The little kids listen and respond better to older teen-agers, sometimes more than they do their parents," said Betty Brown, who teaches the semester-long M-PALs course at Midland High School. "It helps students have a more positive attitude about school.

"I think the success rate of the students we have been with is good."

To become an M-PAL, a high schooler is interviewed by the teacher and a counselor, Ms. Brown said.

"It's very much a cross section of kids at Midland High School," she said of her students.

Shari Laidley, who teaches the course at Lee High School, said she can see the impact M-PALs has had on those it assists.

"We're not going to make a huge impact on the whole school, but if we help one person, it's worth it," Ms. Laidley said. "At some schools every time some students see a counselor they say, 'When are our pals coming?' "

In one case, M-PALs helped stop a student from trying suicide, she said. In numerous other cases the group has convinced at-risk students to try harder in school and not drop out, she said. At the elementary level, an M-PAL may counsel a child about his delinquent classroom behavior, she said.

The group also counsels pregnant teen mothers and makes visits to MISD's alternative education and learning-disabled units.

MHS junior Aly Aldridge, 16, is in her second semester as an M-PAL. She said she tries to get students serious about their schoolwork and teaches them the importance of an education.

Court likely to rule by July on county's request to join suit

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A federal appeals court has streamlined procedures to accommodate Midland County's request to join a lawsuit challenging judicial districts in 15 counties.

In granting Midland County an expedited appeal this week, the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans cut in half the amount of time given lawyers to file briefs in the case, County Attorney Mark Dettman said Thursday.

"All briefs must be filed before the end of May," Dettman said, adding that a decision by the three-justice panel should be rendered before the trial begins in July in federal court in Midland.

Because the majority of plaintiffs in the original case live in Midland, Dettman has said he believes Midland County is in the "best position to give the court the necessary evidence."

Earlier, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton rejected the county attorney's request to join the lawsuit filed by the League of United Latin American Citizens.

During a hearing last February in Austin, Bunton ruled that Midland County had no legal status in the case, but allowed district judges from Dallas, Houston and Austin to intervene in the case as individuals.

He also allowed intervention of black former judges from Dallas and Houston, who were appointed to unexpired terms but lost in their bids to be elected.

Dettman said none of Midland County's three state district judges — Vann Culp, Pat Baskin and Dean Rucker — have expressed an interest in joining the case as individuals.

Bunton has set a July 11 trial date in the case that could order single-member districts in 15 counties with 170 judges targeted by LULAC as well as black and Hispanic plaintiffs who filed the suit in Midland.

He also suggested that if changes are needed in the judicial districts to make them comply with the Voting Rights Act, they would be made in time for the 1990 elections.

Accused molester's bail carries strict condition

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 46-year-old Midland man accused of molesting seven young girls was released Thursday after his bond was reduced on the condition he stay away from the alleged victims, District Attorney Al Schorre said today.

Donald Allen Turner, 2204 Lindora Way, posted $70,000 and was released from the Midland County Jail Thursday afternoon, according to county records. He had been held on bonds totaling $175,000 on three charges of aggravated sexual assault of a child and four counts of indecency with a child, according to Midland police.

The bond on each count was lowered to $10,000 by 238th District Judge Vann Culp, Schorre said.

Turner's attorney, Paul Williams, could not be reached for comment on the case.

"I think it was reduced to a level that is consistent with other people charged with similar offenses," Schorre said. "Our main interest was if it (the bond) was going to be reduced, he not be allowed to go around the children that were the alleged victims of these offenses."

According to the agreement, Turner "may not communicate with the alleged victim of the offense, or go near a residence, school, or other locations frequented by the alleged victim."

The cases will be presented to the 238th District Court grand jury "in the very near future," Schorre said.

Early this week, investigators said officers were still pursuing leads in the case and said additional charges could be filed.

This morning, Schorre declined to anticipate further charges.

"The investigation is continuing," the prosecutor said.

Turner, a geologist with a Midland exploration firm, was arrested at his downtown office Monday. Through attorney Williams, he has denied the charges.

Police allege Turner assaulted several girls in his backyard swimming pool after he had invited them to play "games."

The youngest of the alleged victims is 7, and the oldest is 12, according to police.

MMH's no-smoking policy burns up some hospital visitors

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

If 35 years of smoking cigarettes has damaged 61-year-old William Ellsworth's health, it wasn't obvious Thursday as he sat in Midland Memorial Hospital's cafeteria.

But Ellsworth, visiting his hospitalized brother, had trouble extinguishing his anger when told that the few remaining spaces in the hospital where smokers can light up will become fresh-air areas on May 15, hospital directors unanimously decided Thursday.

The use of tobacco products will be prohibited in all Midland Memorial facilities, including Clearview Hospital, Allison Cancer Center, Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion and even outside the buildings under overhangs.

But upon doctor's approval, patients in private rooms will be allowed to use tobacco.

Employees who violate the policy can face severe punishment. For the first offense, the employee receives a written warning, while the second carries a three-day suspension without pay. The third offense means termination.

Punishment for non-employees is a more lenient. If an employee's warning doesn't make the visitor extinguish the cigarette, a security guard will be called.

"We think it's a responsibility we have to this community to set a proper example," Ray Branson, hospital president, said about the policy. "We're also responding to numerous requests from physicians and members of the community who access the hospital.

"It's to promote a more healthy lifestyle image for our employees."

Branson said he isn't sure how liberally doctors will allow patients to smoke in private rooms.

Since last year, when the hospital restricted smoking areas, only three tobacco use areas have remained: the emergency-room waiting area, a portion of the cafeteria and the critical-care unit waiting room.

About a year ago employees were told the entire hospital and all its related buildings would become tobacco-free. The hospital made a $295 smoking cessation class available. If the program participants quit smoking for a year, then they got half their money back.

Senate approves bill to boost counseling for at-risk children

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Children would get more counseling to identify emotional problems and steer them away from drug abuse under a bill approved by the Senate Thursday.

Senate Bill 1668 by Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, provides for increased counseling for abused children, drug abuse prevention efforts, identification of emotionally disturbed children and cooperation between juvenile authorities, school districts and law enforcement agencies.

The bill, which goes to the House of Representatives, requires courts to give priority to truancy complaints and provides for courts to order parents to do community service as a condition of probation for failing to see their children attend school.

At a cost of $1.9 million a year, the bill would establish a pilot program in 16 school districts to counsel abused children and calls for the Texas Education Agency and the Texas Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse to cooperate on an interagency program for substance abuse prevention.

The Department of Human Services would work with school districts to publicize pre-kindergarten programs and each school district would be required to designate a professional to determine if a child referred to special education was emotionally disturbed.

The bill grew from recommendations of the Senate Select Committee on Juvenile Justice, which addressed ways to coordinate state and local agencies involved with the juvenile justice system.

In other action Thursday the Senate tentatively approved Senate Bill 1639 that would designate the Texas Department of Agriculture as a central filing place for liens on agricultural products, although one critic called it a "banker protection bill."

Immigrant now hero to his people

DALLAS (AP) — Khung Ly Lim understands hunger. There were times when, living under communist rule in his native Cambodia, he and his family were forced to catch snakes, rats and mice to eat.

"My father once put five little mice in his mouth and swallowed them," Khung recalls. "He didn't chew them, he just swallowed them. I put my hand here, on his stomach, and I could feel them running around in there.

"I asked him, 'Why did you do that?' and he just said, 'Because I am hungry.' "

Lim, now 24 and married, works and lives in Dallas and doesn't have to worry about his family getting enough to eat anymore. But there are other Cambodian refugees, newly arrived in Dallas, who still harbor that fear. Frequently they turn to Lim for help.

As a public service officer who works out of the East Dallas Storefront police station on Peak Street near Bryan Street, Lim serves officially as an interpreter and a bridge between his countrymen and American authorities represented by the police department.

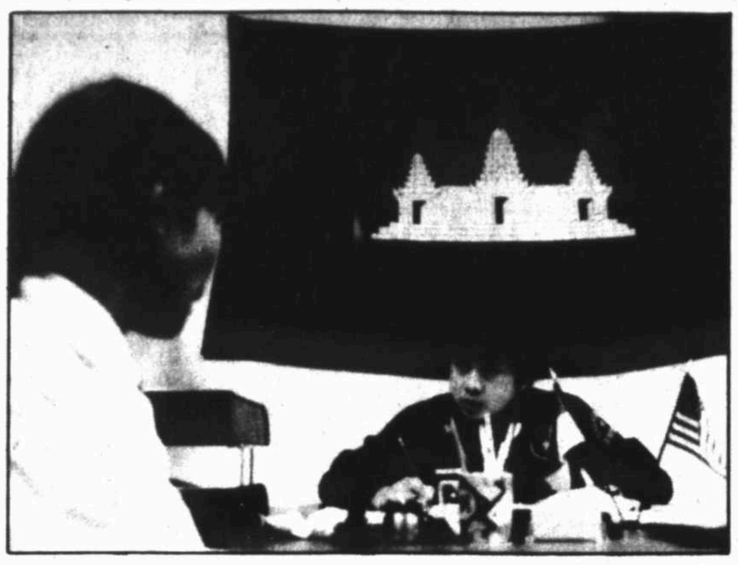

Unofficially, he helps Cambodian families find food, clothes, furniture and medical assistance and helps them to understand American laws, procedures and customs.

Their fear of uniforms and guns makes them distrustful of police officers.

"In Cambodia, If you see someone with a gun and uniform come to your house, the next day you will be gone," Lim explained.

"And they don't complain if the apartment roof leaks, if their plumbing backs up or if their children hurt their feet on the exposed nails in the floor. In Cambodia," he said, "if you complain you are killed.

"They do not speak English, so it is very difficult for them."

Khung Ly Lim, right, a public service officer, helps a Cambodian woman at the East Dallas Storefront police station. Lim serves officially as an interpreter and a bridge between his countrymen and American authorities, such as the police department.

Lim, with his father, sister and brother, fled Cambodia in 1979 when Vietnam invaded. At one point Lim, then a teen-ager, crossed a mine field carrying his ill father on his back. He left his mother behind, buried in a blanket in a Cambodian forest. She had died of starvation.

Refugee camps in Thailand were a horror better forgotten, but Lim recalls the deprivation and dehumanizing months too well: Little food, no medicine. His family was permitted one bucket of water per day for drinking, cooking, washing and bathing.

In 1981 the International Rescue Committee, a global agency that helps refugees resettle, helped him come to Dallas. He got a job washing dishes at a seafood restaurant. At night he studied English in the family's small apartment.

"Each night I would write down a new phrase on a piece of paper, and then I would sit in bed and read it and repeat it over and over until I had memorized it," Lim said.

His improved English helped him get a succession of better jobs, but every time he looked at his neighborhood he saw more Cambodians who had nothing.

"I wanted to help them," he said.

Five months ago he became a public service officer, and as such he works closely with the police, especially Cpl. Ron Cowart, at the storefront.

"He is considered something of a hero in the Cambodian community," Cowart said.

Lim has helped organize athletic teams and has led a drive that has created Boy Scout, Explorer Scout and Girl Scout troops with nearly 50 members. At night he takes English and criminal justice courses at El Centro College.

"My ambition," he says with much pride, "is to be a police officer. And my philosophy is to help people who need help."

Rural health care bill would aid hospitals, lawmaker says

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Omnibus rural health care legislation tentatively approved by the House Thursday may not resurrect the 38 Texas hospitals closed over the last three years. But it may keep others open, the measure's author said.

Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, a doctor whose Leon County hospital was the latest of those closed, hopes remedies recommended by the act will "stop the bleeding" in rural health care.

Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring, called it "an extremely important issue for West Texas."

"Virtually every hospital in my district is a small rural hospital that's having financial problems," he said. "Hopefully, this will be enough to keep them in business."

Most controversial among the remedies is a limit of $250,000 on civil liability damages that can be awarded in suits stemming from Medicaid or other state-sponsored child deliveries.

Other provisions would require a higher proof standard — that of "gross negligence" — in medical emergency malpractice cases and allow doctors found liable for $100,000 or more to make structured, periodic payments instead of payments in a lump sum.

At least one member, Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, decried during debate the attempt to "shield" doctors from medical malpractice suits.

That the liability changes would affect all hospitals, not just those in rural areas, was an additional concern that prompted an unsuccessful attempt to limit the changes to counties with populations less than 30,000.

McKinney acknowledged the bill's effect has "some overflow" to urban settings, but added that city hospitals have some problems similar to rural ones.

"The time to solve a problem is when you have a chance to solve it," he said.

Several members said they had trouble supporting the liability aspects of the bill but voted for approval anyway because of the necessity for action.

"The problem comes down to either we change the law or we don't have rural medical care," said Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont.

Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, had problems with the $250,000 cap on liability judgments and voted in favor of removing it in unsuccessful amendment tallies, he said.

However, he voted in favor of the bill itself hoping that Senate will remove the cap.

SENATE

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, said the bill requires buyers of grain or livestock to make sure no lender has a claim on the product, instead of requiring bankers to police their loans. "We're shifting the burden to the purchaser of agricultural products," he said.

Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, sponsor of the bill, said the bill would give the state a federally approved central filing place buyers could check to see if their is a lien on farm products they plan to buy. Without the bill, he said, farmers and ranchers might find it hard to get credit, since federal law would restrict lenders' abilities to enforce the liens.

The bill passed 19-9, but failed to get the four-fifths majority needed under Senate rules to pass the bill without a three-day delay.

The Senate also approved the nominations of Carroll M. Thomas of Midland County to the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations for a term to expire Sept. 1, 1993, and John Ben Shepperd of Ector County to the Texas State Library and Archives Commission to a term to expire Sept. 28, 1993.

Senate panel clears ways for AIDS bills

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Senate committee Thursday cleared the way for three bills dealing with criminal aspects of the AIDS virus so the full Senate can decide which — if any — of the bills it wants to approve.

The Senate Criminal Justice Committee on a 5-0 vote approved the suggestion of Sen. Ted Lyons, chairman of the subcommittee that reviewed the AIDS-related bills, to "let 'em all roll on out" to let the full Senate take its pick from the three.

The bills include Senate Bill 163 by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, that would make it a criminal offense to intentionally expose someone to the AIDS virus. The bill also would provide for the testing of those arrested for prostitution or drug abuse, activities which are at high risk of spreading the deadly virus, and it would allow city and county jailers to test inmates.

Senate Bill 375 by Sen. J.E. Buster Brown, R-Lake Jackson, would allow testing of "high risk" inmates in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Senate Bill 649 by Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, would provide for hearings to establish whether tests should be ordered for people suspected of having AIDS.

With time running out on the 71st session, Lyons said, he believed it was better to give the bill sponsors the opportunity to run with the bills. "My position is, if they get the votes to get it out they can let the Senate decide," Lyon said.

Sen. Temple Dickson, D-Sweetwater, also on the Criminal Justice Committee, agreed. "The issues involved with AIDS are worthy of a floor debate," Dickson said.

After the committee action, Glen Maxey, spokesman for the Lesbian-Gay Rights Lobby of Texas, said he was comfortable with the judgment of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate and will decide which of the bill sponsors to recognize.

"We've seen too much demagoguery on the AIDS issue," Maxey said. Of the three bills, Maxey said he would sign off on Washington's bill, although he added that compromises in that version "opens the door for abuse."

Parker's bill, which had the support of law enforcement lobbyists, remained the most objectionable to civil rights lobbyists, Maxey said.

Under Parker's bill, Maxey said, someone with AIDS could be prosecuted for spitting on someone else, although Maxey said AIDS cannot be transmitted by saliva. "To make it a third degree felony to spit on somebody is totally ridiculous," he said.

Folk-tale seminar scheduled for Saturday at UTPB lounge

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

North Carolina professional storytellers Barbara Freeman and Connie Regan-Blake will conduct a "Tell Me A Tale" folk tale seminar Saturday in the Student Lounge of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa.

"Storytelling is how human beings pass down what they believe," said Dr. Laura Smith, UTPB associate professor of education. "That's not philosophy. That's just the way it is. Story-telling came before reading."

The Asheville, N.C., folk-tellers will relate tales and explain the art of storytelling from 10:30 a.m. to noon Saturday. However, body of the seminar will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Fee for the seminar is $5 for students and $10 for non-students.

At 7:30 p.m. Saturday, the folk-tellers will appear in concert.

"They have been telling stories professionally since 1975," Smith said, "and were founding members of National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling."

Most of the folk-tellers' stories come from their native Southeast, said Smith.

"And many of their stories were handed down by people in their own families." Their storytelling has taken them across the United States, to Europe and to the Orient.

"In storytelling, you have to picture what it (the setting, characters, action, moods) looks like," said Smith. In that respect, partaking of storytelling is similar to reading and listening to radio dramas, story readings and other programs.

Fissures haven't stopped Hudspeth dump site's study

EL PASO (AP) — Faults and fissures around a possible radioactive dump site in Hudspeth County haven't deterred state officials from continuing to study the area.

Local opponents contend the cracks in the earth portend a powerful earthquake that would allow radioactive waste to escape into the underground water supply. But the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority believes the risk is minimal.

"We agree on about 85 percent of the data," said Rick Jacobi, the authority's general manager. "What we disagree on is the interpretation of the data."

The authority has until Jan. 1, 1993, to build a low-level radiation dump where mildly radioactive items such as contaminated tools and hospital gowns would be stored for thousands of years.

One site is under study near Fort Hancock, about 50 miles east of El Paso. Opponents to the dump say the authority already has made up its mind — before all the results are in.

The chief opponent is El Paso County, which hired geologists who say strong earthquakes are possible at the site. Jacobi agrees the site indeed is earthquake-prone.

"We disagree on the intensity of the possible earthquake and what effect it would have on the site," Jacobi said after a meeting in Austin Wednesday with dump opponents. "We don't think the intensity is enough to make us look elsewhere."

Jacobi said the authority plans to submit its permit application to the state health department late this year.

Mark Turnbough, director of special projects for the Rio Grande Council of Governments, said the council will submit a report to the health department detailing why the site should be rejected.

Sue Ristom, a 35-year smoker and a secretary in the hospital public relations department for 2½ years, said she had no trouble living with last year's restrictions and will survive the new policy.

"It's not a problem for me," Ms. Ristom, 55, said. "I can go an eight-hour day without smoking, but there are some people I don't think can.

"I do believe that a hospital, of all places, should be a smoke-free environment, but I still feel smokers need some place to smoke."

She said the hospital should create at least one area for smokers besides the parking lot.

"And it should not be not just for employees but for visitors who are here to stay with a patient for a long period and are under stress," Ms. Ristom said. "They need some place to smoke."

Ellsworth was more unreserved in expressing his distaste for the upcoming restrictions.

"I think they're messing with people's rights," said Ellsworth, a farmer. "I think it's a person's individual business. If they want to smoke, they should be allowed to smoke."

Laurie Johnson, hospital spokesperson, said that by implementing the policy, Midland Memorial is simply practicing what it preaches.

"We're not doing this to be bad guys," Johnson said. "The mission of Midland Memorial is to keep people as healthy as possible."

She also tries to get them to set long-range goals, she said.

Ms. Laidley said the course also helps M-PAL students better themselves emotionally and academically.

"They're learning life skills and communication," she said. "This is something that will help them all their lives."

Pilot injured in Thursday plane crash

JASPER (AP) — The pilot of a single-engine plane was injured Thursday after his craft apparently hit trees in East Texas woodland, authorities said.

The unidentified man was in stable condition at an area hospital the Jasper County sheriff's office said. The crash occurred at about 6:15 a.m. and crews were hampered in their rescue by thick brush, sheriff's officers said.

Crews from the Jasper Volunteer Fire Department, sheriff's department and other volunteers cut a swath through the wooded area to the wreckage off U.S. Highway 63. The path was needed to get a stretcher to the victim.

Firefighters at the crash site said the aircraft was flying south when it apparently hit large trees.

Freddie Miller, a Jasper police officer, said the pilot's name and hometown have not yet been released.

Yeutter renews parts of last year's drought assistance

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the Agriculture Department's federal aid programs of last year have been kicked into gear to help farmers through the 1989 version of drought and privation.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter announced on Wednesday the reactivation of some of the key parts of last year's drought assistance package, including permission to graze livestock and cut hay from land set aside for conservation use under 1989 crop programs. Those include programs for wheat, feed grains, rice and cotton.

The emergency measures will apply to Kansas and other states where drought has hurt 1989 crop prospects and in counties where farmers meet eligibility standards.

"Rain is what these states need, but I can't guarantee that," Yeutter said. "However, I trust the assistance we are able to provide will help."

Livestock and poultry producers also will be able to buy surplus grain owned by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. at half price. In a related program, CCC will help pay feed cost for farmers who must purchase more than usual amounts of feed for livestock.

Yeutter said he had directed the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to respond within 24 hours to requests from the agency's state offices for drought aid.

The emergency measures, he said, will "have the potential" to make substantially more acres available to farmers for haying and grazing this year and thus help stem any forced livestock liquidations.

Yeutter said he had also instructed the Farmers Home Administration to sell hay at reasonable cost and take bids for livestock grazing on farmers taken over by the agency in counties where the emergency grazing of set-aside acres has been approved.

Kelly Shipp, Yeutter's press secretary, said the aid package is essentially the same as USDA made available during the 1988 drought, which spread by summer throughout most of the nation and cut last year's harvests sharply.

Asked if there were significant changes from what was offered last year, Shipp said, "Not really, it's pretty straightforward."

Shipp said that while Kansas is expected to benefit greatly from the emergency assistance, farmers in a number of other states are also expected to be eligible, including Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas. Others are expected to qualify, too, she said.

Yeutter also announced that a 1989 USDA drought task force has been established, headed by Undersecretary Richard T. Crowder, who oversees international affairs and commodity programs.

The action followed Yeutter's visit April 14 to the hard-hit winter wheat drought area, with Sens. Robert Dole and Nancy Kassebaum, Rep. Pat Roberts, all Kansas Republicans, and Gov. Mike Hayden.

In a letter to Hayden, Yeutter said he had no authority to extend to 1989 wheat producers the broader relief provisions in last year's $3.9 billion Disaster Assistance Act, a move that had been sought by the governor.

The 1988 law included disaster payments to farmers who lost at least 35 percent of their normal crop production.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., applauded Yeutter's decision but said it was "unfortunate it took him this long to respond."

"It doesn't go far enough but at least it's a recognition that there are people who need help," said Glickman, "and from here we can proceed to provide more help to them."

Lower prices for spices reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of importing pepper and other spices favored by Americans as food seasonings has tumbled sharply, but it's still nothing to sneeze at, says the Agriculture Department.

Last year's import bill was $349.4 million for 191,545 metric tons of assorted spices, ranging from allspice and anise to turmeric and vanilla beans. That was down from a record $438.6 million and 208,694 tons in 1987.

"It's not an indication that the trend in spice consumption is being reversed," says Rex Dull of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service. "Rather, it was a technical correction...primarily involving pepper imports."

Pepper is the biggest item on the U.S. list of spice imports. Most is black pepper but there is a substantial amount of white. In 1988, unground black pepper imports were valued at $95.2 million for 26,939 tons, compared with $147.8 million for 31,372 tons in 1987.

Indonesia was the biggest supplier last year, followed by India and Brazil.

Some relief for the pepper supply was provided in January by the Food and Drug Administration when it eased an 18-month-old policy of automatic detention of shipments from India until those had been checked for possible salmonella contamination. The Indian government can now certify that pepper meets FDA standards.

Dull, who works in the agency's horticultural and tropical products division, said in a recent telephone interview that for several years global pepper supplies were tight and prices high.

In 1987, for example, the price of Indonesian black pepper was a 12-month average of just over $2.37 per pound delivered to New York City. Indian black pepper was almost as high.

"There was anticipation that the supply would improve and prices come down," Dull said. "Prices did come down in part of 1988, but there was fear that drought would reduce India's harvest and they came back up late in the year."

Spraying necessary to protect crops

With a good fruit crop in the making, growers need to take precautions against insect and disease problems.

Timely spraying is necessary to assure that the fruit crop develops to maturity, reasonably free of blemishes. This means a diligent, season-long effort.

Here are spraying guidelines for various fruit crops.

Kiker

■ Peaches, plums, nectarines and apricots: Main pests are the plum curculio which causes wormy fruit, and catfacing insects (stink bugs and leaf-footed plant bugs), which cause misshapen fruit and oozing puncture wounds.

Scab is the chief disease problem. It causes freckle-like spots that are unsightly but that do not affect fruit quality.

To control these problems, spray every 10-14 days with a mix of diazinon 25 percent EC (2 tsp. per gal.) and benomyl 50 percent WP (1 tsp. per gal.).

■ Apples and pears: Black rot is a major disease problem on apples, and spraying with Captan must begin even before blooming. The problem is characterized by brownish-black spots that begin small and quickly expand. Fruit becomes brown and mushy beneath the spots.

Insect pests are the same as those attacking peaches, plus aphids and the coddling moth, all of which cause damage early in the season. The codling moth is the major cause of wormy apples.

Another problem with apples is cork spot, which is caused by calcium deficiency. The disorder shows as small greenish depressions on the fruit surface, with the fruit beneath the depression becoming brown, firm and corky. The problem is associated with early season water stress, excessive tree vigor and poor nutrition. Deep watering plus mulching will help reduce the problem. In serious cases, apply at least three sprays of calcium chloride or calcium nitrate at 10-14 day intervals beginning two weeks after bloom.

For a good apple spray, mix Captan (3 tsp. per gal.), diazinon 25 percent ED (2 tsp. per gal.) and calcium after bloom. Spray the mix every 10-14 days in April and May. Omit the calcium if cork spot has not been a problem.

The same spray mix for apples can be used for pears, but many pear trees also have a serious problem with fire blight, a bacterial disease. Spray pear trees with a fire blight problem with Kocide 101 or Agristrep at weekly intervals through the bloom period. Trees that have had a severe problem with fire blight should be destroyed since they can infect other nearby pear and apple trees.

Fruit growers can get more detailed information on controlling diseases and insects from the publication, "Homeowners Fruit and Nut Spray Schedule," which is available at the county extension office.

Texas farmland values decline by five percent

AUSTIN (SWN) — The slide in farmland values continued in Texas in 1989, dropping five percent from last year to $443 per acre. Nationwide, farmland values rose six percent to $597 — still 27 percent below the $823 per acre peak of 1982.

"The good news is that the depression in our nation's farm economy appears to have bottomed out after the castastrophic farm policies of the past eight years," said Jim Hightower, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture. "The bad news is that Texas — along with over half a million family farmers and ranchers nationwide who were pushed off the land during the decade, is not part of the recovery. Since 1982 the number of farmers and ranchers under 35 has dropped by over 22 percent, a net loss of 103,000 young farmers, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. We now face the challenge of rebuilding and strengthening our independent family farm system of agriculture, rather than letting corporate industrial agriculture fill the vacuum."

Statewide, farmland values are 32 percent below the peak of $652 per acre in 1985. Credit use by farmers and ranchers remains low, with just 31 percent of Texas farmers and ranchers reporting they will make a loan application in 1989. That contrasts sharply with four years ago, when 49 percent were seeking credit.

It indicates a still-cautious attitude among operators, as well as a decreasing number of start-ups by younger operators who traditionally have to borrow money to purchase land and equipment to get started in agriculture. The results are from the Survey of Agricultural Financial Conditions conducted by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service as a cooperative function of the Texas Department of Agriculture and U.S. Department of Agriculture. The survey group was sampled by region to be resentative of Texas producers. A sample of 6,250 farmers and ranchers was selected.

Hofheinz's choice of Connally surprises his liberal backers

HOUSTON (AP) — Fred Hofheinz surprised Houston political observers and left his liberal backers bewildered when he decided to name former Texas Gov. John Connally as chairman of his mayoral campaign.

Formal announcement of the appointment was to be made today, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Hofheinz, a Democrat and Houston mayor from 1974-1977, was a Texas campaign leader for Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Democratic presidential bid when Connally sought the Republican presidential nomination in 1980.

Partisan politics should have nothing to do with the non-partisan Nov. 17 mayoral race, Hofheinz said. He said Connally, whom he has known "for most of my life," simply is interested in helping bring new leadership to the city.

Hofheinz will be trying to unseat four-term incumbent Mayor Kathy Whitmire in the mayoral election.

Democratic National Committee member Billie Carr, a Hofheinz backer and liberal leader, told the newspaper the selection of Connally has upset some of Hofheinz' liberal supporters.

"I think the initial shock is going to hurt him (among liberals)," Ms. Carr said.

Leland defends Ethiopia's role in food relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Mickey Leland is defending Ethiopia's role in efforts to deliver emergency food relief to thousands of starving people in rebel-held southern Sudan.

Leland, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, acknowledged Ethiopia wasn't working with United Nations' relief efforts, but claimed the Soviet-backed country was taking other steps to help get food across the border before the rainy season arrives in May and makes roads impassable.

"Recognition of Ethiopia's cooperation in the urgent humanitarian mission to save the people of southern Sudan is imperative to future efforts towards establishing peace throughout the Horn of Africa," Leland told a news conference Thursday.

Leland, a Houston Democrat, said some news reports have unfairly painted Ethiopia as a "villain" in the emergency relief effort to supply food to Sudanese people caught in the country's civil war.

Leland said 5,000 to 7,000 metric tons of food is en route to Sudan under a joint relief program of private, voluntary and church organizations headquartered in the capital of Addis Ababa.

Roughly 120 trucks are needed for the joint-relief effort separate from the UN's mission, and Leland said Ethiopia is providing at least half those vehicles.

In an interview, Leland said Ethiopian Jews are being allowed to leave Ethiopia and rejoin families from whom they have been split since a secret airlift to Israel was halted.

Leland said Ethiopian President Mengistu Haile Mariam assured him at a meeting in Addis Ababa last month that the Ethiopians would allow the Jewish exodus to continue.

Mengistu, a protege of the Soviet Union, is hoping his good ties with Leland and other liberal Democrats will help him improve strained relations with the U.S. administration and benefit his impoverished government.

Leland said Mengistu assured him he is committed to "family reunification" and that the issue is "a project we can work on mutually." Leland said he traveled to Israel from his African trip and told Israeli authorities of Mengistu's promises.

"There are families who are being reunited," Leland said. "The Ethiopian government has been forthcoming about allowing families to be reunified and I expect more of that will be realized as time goes on."

Leland said he did not ask Mengistu how many Jews were getting out, although more than 10,000 Jews remain in Ethiopia.

Between November 1984 and the first days of 1985, an estimated 7,000 Ethiopian Jews were secretly airlifted to Israel, joining about 6,000 who had made their way to Israel earlier, before Ethiopia imposed emigration restrictions.

The airlift was facilitated by an arrangement reached by then-vice president George Bush with Sudan.

Texas now has most prisoners on death row

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — When the barred door covered with a heavy mesh screen slammed shut behind convicted killer Martin Vega, his introduction to the steamy row of identical cells known simply as J-23 gave Texas the distinction of having the largest death row in the nation.

Vega

Vega, whose white prison suit bears an orange tag with his name and the number "DR 932," is the 300th person to now call the Texas death row home, Texas Department of Corrections statistics this week show.

Florida, which in recent years has held the largest number of convicted killers awaiting execution, this week has 299 death row inmates, according to Paula Tully of the Florida Department of Corrections.

"It's a pretty good indication that the people of Texas support the death penalty if they keep sending people there," said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Texas also leads the nation in the number of people put to death since the U.S. Supreme Court in 1976 allowed capital punishment to resume. Thirty men have been given lethal injection at the Walls Unit in Huntsville, starting with Charlie Brooks in late 1982.

The population growth on death row has been remarkably steady since Excell White, convicted of a grocer's slaying, on Aug. 26, 1974, reopened the exclusive section of the Ellis I Unit about 90 miles north of Houston.

By the time Brooks became the first inmate to ever be put to death by injection in December 1982, Texas had 130 others awaiting the same fate.

During the early 1980s, death row grew by about two per month. As the pace of executions quickened, so did the number of people awaiting death. In 1986, 43 new inmates joined the ranks as 10 were executed. Another 36 came the next year, and the three-per-month average continues now.

As death row in Texas has grown — it now incorporates five prison wings — the number of executions has fallen. Only three were put to death last year in Texas and just one so far in 1989 as attorneys for inmates have won Supreme Court review of cases.

"The way it's growing, they can dedicate half the farm to death row in the next five years, unless they do away with the death penalty," says Jim Beathard, awaiting execution for a killing spree in which three members of a Trinity County family died in 1984.

Jim Vanderbilt, who has been on the row since 1976 and is among the most senior of all inmates, fears a legal breakthrough will trigger many executions.

"The water is building up behind the dam," Vanderbilt says. "And if they let the dam overflow or if they remove the dam, then there's going to be a flood."

For Vega, 42, a self-described jack-of-all-trades who was convicted in February of the 1985 slaying of his wife's former husband in what authorities said was an attempt to collect the man's insurance, the move to death row marked his fourth trip to the Texas prison system. Included among his terms was a two-year stint for robbery that kept him behind bars for just one week before he was released.

Death row, he says, is different.

"It's a title we have and under that title we're supposed to be dangerous," he said in an interview this week. "But Lord knows a lot of people here are not dangerous. I'm not saying all — but some.

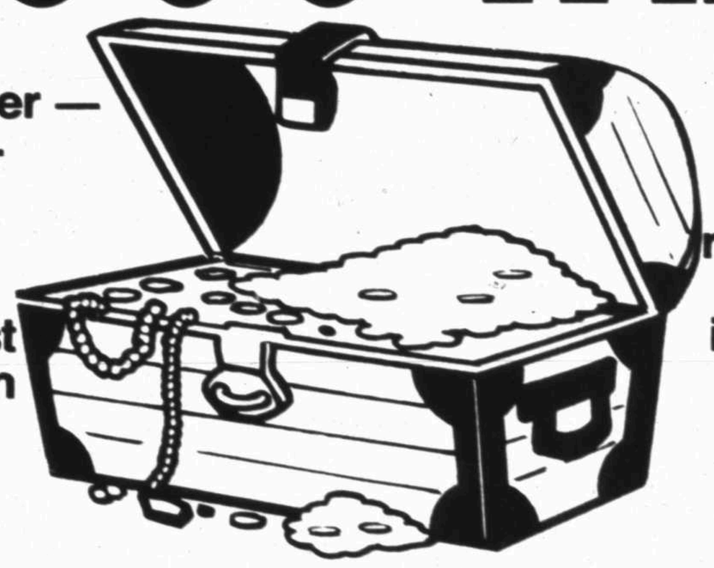

"It's like two different worlds," he said, asked to compare general population with the row. "We're segregated. Everywhere we go, we're handcuffed. Before we leave our cells, we're handcuffed and strip searched."

Vega, from Luling, says he misses "freedom, my family, women, money, breathing the fresh air and just being able to raise my hands and say 'I'm free!' "

But the Texas prison system, mandated by federal court orders this decade to clean up its act in areas of prison conditions and inmate rights, is a much better place now, Vega says.

Furr's Announces $25,000 Winner!

Rose Hunter of Midland is $25,000 richer — thanks to Furr's Supermarkets and incredibly good luck! More than 250,000 entries in the Hidden Treasure contest were mixed together on Wednesday and Mrs. Hunter's name was drawn from that pile.

She and her husband were just sitting down to play a hand or two of cards when the phone rang with the good news. "Oh, my gosh!" was her initial reaction. And when we asked her how she might spend the money, she said, "I've always wanted to go to Hawaii."

Rose was one of a quarter of a million Furr's shoppers from cities and towns all across West Texas and Eastern New Mexico who entered the Hidden Treasure Grand Prize Drawing. She collected three sets of Bag O' Gold letters and her winning entry was dated March 19. Congratulations, Rose! And all of us at Furr's hope you enjoy that trip to Hawaii!

Taste test of beer brands falls flat, students claim

HOUSTON (AP) — A pair of University of Houston seniors had no trouble finding volunteers for research on their honors thesis, but some of the subjects were surprised to learn that they couldn't discern between cheap and expensive domestic beers.

"We figured that college students are experts on beer drinking and they would determine the difference in the five brands of domestic beer we tested," said Aristotle Economon, who shared the project with his brother, Andrew. "But, statistically, people couldn't tell the difference."

The "free beer" fliers posted around campus drew a predictable crowd, and 265 students volunteered for the project.

The sample was pared down to 191 students who said they drank five or more beers each week, and each participant was given three-ounce sample cups of five different brands of U.S. beer to measure for body, aftertaste, sweetness, bitterness and strength.

Five major U.S. brewers each donated 20 cases of beer, as well as several hundred promotional key chains, posters and buttons.

Economon, who said he does not drink beer, got mixed reactions from the test subjects.

"Some people would say, 'This is great, I can buy cheap beer and get just as good a product,'" he said. "But other people said, 'This is B.S.,' because people are very loyal to their brand of beer."

In fact, when the students were given several names of beers and asked to rank them, they gave high marks to the more expensive brews, contrary to the test results, Economon said.

He would not reveal the brand names of beers tested, but said they ranged in price from $1.60 to $3.20 a six-pack, and attributed the students' answers to effective beer advertisements.

UH Honors Program Director Ted Estess said he was doubtful of the project when they first presented the idea for their marketing test.

"But as it turned out, there were things to be learned," Estess said. "It was not only an interesting project, but a good piece of work."

Murdered student's mother outraged by inmate extortion try

GALVESTON (AP) — The mother of a college student whose mutilated body was found in a grave in northern Mexico says she was outraged to find that inmates in the Galveston County Jail were able to carry out an extortion plot against her family.

Helen Kilroy's comments came Thursday following the arrests of two jail inmates and three others for attempting to extort $10,000 from the family while it was trying to find Mark Kilroy, her son who vanished while on a spring break outing in South Texas.

"We were absolutely shocked that people who are in prison for a good reason are able to call out and terrorize innocent people," said Helen Kilroy. "We were really shocked that people can be terrorized from inside our jails."

Two inmates were arrested Thursday on charges accusing them of using jail telephones to call Kilroy's parents in nearby Santa Fe to carry out the extortion attempt. Three other people were arrested and a third is being sought, authorities say.

Santa Fe Police Chief Mike Barry said that at one point in the scheme, a caller vowed to cut off the missing student's fingers and mail them to the family if police arrested or followed people to whom the Kilroys delivered ransom money.

The body of Kilroy, a University of Texas junior, mutilated in a human sacrifice ritual by Mexican drug smugglers, authorities say, was found in a shallow grave near Matamoros, Mexico, on April 11, one week after the extortion attempt allegedly began.

Robert George Miller and Wilton Joseph Smith, were arrested in the County Jail Thursday morning, and officers also arrested three alleged accomplices at a La Marque residence. Both men were being held on burglary charges at the time of the alleged extortion plot, officers said.

Police had determined Miller's and Smith's involvement in the scheme on their own but learned the others' identities from inmates in the jail who had heard the plan unfolding.

All five suspects were charged with attempted robbery of the Kilroys and ordered held in lieu of $20,000 bonds.

Police arrested Elmer Ranferi Corado, 24, his wife Becky Ria Smith Corado, 24, and Mardoquro Zamora Gonzalez, 36, at the La Marque residence, Barry said.

Another female was being sought, he said.

Man arrested in connection with four murders

FORT WORTH (AP) — An Azle man has been arrested in connection with the stabbing and mutilation deaths of four people in 1985 and 1986 and is being questioned about other unsolved slayings, authorities say.

Ricky Lee Green, 28, was arrested Thursday after information about the slayings surfaced through Crime Stoppers programs in Amarillo, Austin and Fort Worth and officers obtained a statement from his estranged wife.

The victims include a television advertising executive, a 16-year-old boy, a 27-year-old Fort Worth woman and an unidentified woman whose body was found in Wise County, police said.

Green had been considered a suspect in one of the slayings for some time, but officers said the cases came together when Green's estranged wife told homicide detectives that Green had described killing three people in 1985 and one in 1986.

The woman told police she had kept her husband's secrets for several years because she was afraid of him, but decided to shed the burden Wednesday, Fort Worth Detective Roger SoRelle said.

Green was being held in the Tarrant County Jail today in lieu of $1.25 million bond, according to jail Sgt. William Kaesler.

Green has given officers statements in four slayings and is being questioned about others, police said.

"It is definitely one of our main concerns that there might be more bodies," said Fort Worth homicide Lt. T.C. Swan.

Swann identified the victims as Steven Fefferman, 28, an advertising executive with KXAS-TV, Jeffrey L. Davis, 16, of Fort Worth, Sandra Lorraine Bailey, 27, of Fort Worth, and a woman identified only as "Betty Jo."

Fefferman was found in December 1986, bound to the posts of his bed with neckties. He had been stabbed several times with kitchen knives and had been mutilated. His home had been ransacked and money had been stolen, police said.

Davis' decomposed body was found in April 1985.

Challenger widows upset by film plans

HOUSTON (AP) — Several widows of crew members aboard the Challenger space shuttle say they are upset about plans by ABC to make a three-hour television movie about the accident.

Loran Onizuka, widow of Challenger astronaut Ellison Onizuka, and Jane Smith, widow of Challenger pilot Michael Smith, and their attorney have talked to George Englund, executive producer and writer of the ABC drama, in an effort to get him to drop the project.

Englund, however, said the project to tell the story of the seven astronauts who died in the accident Jan. 28, 1986, will continue.

"The families suffered an immeasurable concussion, but in public. In my heart, I've tried to understand their feeling," he said. "The most honorable thing I can say is that my hopes and wishes are that it will be accurate."

But Mrs. Onizuka said, "They ought to let them be."

"Why do we have to relive this? Why don't they leave it alone? If it is going to be done at all, it should be done as a very serious documentary," added Mrs. Smith.

Cheryl McNair, widow of Challenger astronaut Ronald McNair, said the movie "just doesn't seem necessary at this time."

Englund said the cast has not been selected and a start date has not been set. But he hopes to film the entire movie in the Johnson Space Center vicinity south of Houston.

'Freedom of verse' restored

HUFFMAN (AP) — A school committee is lifting a ban imposed on a children's poem after a parent complained the poem promoted suicide.

Huffman Independent School District Superintendent Douglass Shands said Thursday a review by him, two librarians and a principal determined the poem "Little Abigail and the Beautiful Pony" should not be removed from library shelves or from classrooms.

The poem is included in the book "Light in the Attic" by award-winning author Shel Silverstein.

"We agreed the book should be available and that parents have the right to complain if they don't like something," Shands said.

The poem tells of a girl who dies after refusing to eat or sleep when her parents won't buy her a "sad-eyed" pony she saw. Silverstein illustrated the poem with drawings of the girl's parents grieving over her body.

Parent Barbara McGaugh complained after reading the poem to her 8-year-old daughter, who brought a copy home from school. Her complaint spurred the poem's ban from second-grade classes.

Indictment names ex-player

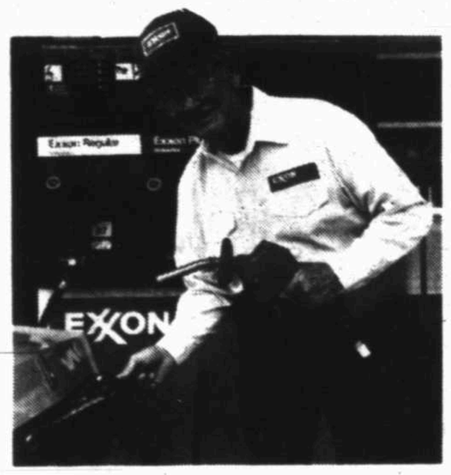

HOUSTON (AP) — Two men, including a former pro football player, are accused in a federal indictment of conspiring to violate immigration laws through a landscaping business.

Anthony L. Hutchison, formerly with the Buffalo Bills, and Stanley Evans were arrested Thursday and appeared before U.S. Magistrate H. Lingo Platter, who set their bonds at $50,000 each. They were released on $10,000 personal recognizance, said Fredia Khan, a magistrate's clerk.

The indictment, unsealed Thursday, charges Hutchison with one conspiracy count, five counts of unlawfully using identification documents and a count of concealing, harboring and shielding illegal aliens.

Most Exxon stations are privately-owned small businesses.

The oil spill in Alaska was not their fault.

There's been talk lately about boycotting Exxon stations.

Obviously, that's not going to help clean up the Alaskan oil spill.

But it is going to hurt a lot of small businessmen in your community—and their families and employees.

They have nothing to do with the accident in Alaska, but they're taking the brunt of the anger. And they stand to lose income at the same time.

Truth is, it's not their fault at all. We at Exxon Corporation recognize our responsibility, and we are doing everything in our power to clean up the spill.

So please, don't blame your Exxon dealers. They've worked hard for your business for many years. They don't deserve to lose it over something which is not their fault.

Fourteen soccer fans convicted

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Fourteen British soccer fans were convicted of involuntary manslaughter and sentenced today to three years in prison for their roles in the 1985 riot that killed 39 people at Heysel Stadium.

The 14 fans also were ordered to each pay fines of $1,538. Ten other fans were acquitted and left the court after their verdicts were announced.

The three-judge panel that rendered today's verdicts suspended 1½ years of each sentence, and defense lawyers said those convicted probably will not have to spend more than a year in jail.

All have been jailed for six months during the prolonged court proceedings.

In addition to the 39 deaths, more than 500 fans were injured when Liverpool fans rioted at Belgium's Heysel Stadium just prior to 1985 European soccer championship final between Liverpool and Juventus Turin of Italy.

Belgian authorities had requested the extradition of 26 Britons based on videotapes and pictures showing British fans tearing down the flimsy fence separating them from Italian supporters.

The invasion of the stands caused a panic during which victims were trampled to death as they tried to flee.

Pontiff flies to Africa

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II left Friday on his fifth African tour for Madagascar, where violent protests against the government of President Didier Ratsiraka the last week have left five people dead.

The pontiff's special Alitalia Boeing 747 left Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport at 8 a.m. for a nine-hour flight to Madagascar's capital, Antananarivo.

It is the first stop on a nine-day trip that also will take the pope to the French island of Reunion in the Indian Ocean, and to Zambia and Malawi. It is the 41st foreign pilgrimage of John Paul's 10½-year papacy.

In all, the pope will deliver 36 speeches and travel 13,500 miles during his trip. He is scheduled to return to Rome on May 6.

Africa is the continent where Roman Catholicism is growing fastest. The Vatican says it has 75 million followers in Africa.

Quayle visits Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle, acting like a political candidate on a whistlestop tour of Australia, quaffed beer at a local pub, hit tennis balls with underprivileged children and mingled with crowds in two cities today.

Obviously enjoying himself on the third day of his trip, Quayle paid a surprise visit to the wood-paneled pub at the Lord Nelson Brewery Hotel where his brief stop stunned the clientele.

"I couldn't believe it," said Kim Ivey, a banker who was drinking at the bar with friends in mid-afternoon. "We were standing here and he walked up and said, 'Hi. I'm Dan Quayle.'"

Quayle, sipping a glass of Hahn beer, chatted with the young women behind the bar, joked with proprietor Blair Hayden about his golfing tie and suggested two patrons attend a black-tie dinner at which he's the guest of honor.

He called the beer — which is Australia's national drink — good, but added, "It has a bite."

Was it failed attack?

JERUSALEM (AP) — A car driven by a Palestinian blew up today on a busy shopping street near Jerusalem's police headquarters, and authorities said the explosion may have been a terrorist attack that failed.

The driver was badly burned, but no other injuries were reported.

In the West Bank, masked attackers shot and killed a Palestinian in the crowded main square in Nablus. Arab reports said the victim was accused of collaborating with Israel.

Eleven other Palestinians were shot and wounded in clashes with army troops and Jewish settlers in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to the Arab reports.

The army confirmed the incident in Nablus but said it was investigating the circumstances. Military spokesmen said the army was checking reports of other injuries.

Cease-fire takes effect

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seven weeks of fierce fighting between Christian and Moslem forces stopped today under a cease-fire called by the Arab League.

But an apparent disagreement over a key provision of the truce regarding blockades of the country's ports threatened to undermine the cease-fire.

The latest round of fighting in Lebanon's 14-year civil war began on March 8 and has killed 273 people and wounded 993, according to police.

The 22-member Arab League worked out the cease-fire plan Thursday during a meeting in Tunisia and promised to dispatch Arab observers to monitor the truce. Three previous cease-fires sponsored by the league have collapsed.

Perestroika opposed

MOSCOW (AP) — Many Communist Party officials are unprepared or unwilling to accept the swift changes wrought by the political reforms of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the party newspaper Pravda said today.

The editorial followed by one day the newspaper's publication of startling admissions of failure made by party officials at a meeting of the policy-making Central Committee on Tuesday.

Some baby food reports 'false alarms'

LONDON (AP) — Police investigating 220 reports of contaminated baby food said today two of them were extortion attempts against the H.J. Heinz Co. and the rest probably were false alarms or hoaxes.

A U.S. executive of the Pittsburgh-based food giant was in London to help investigate the threats. The company said it would change packaging of baby food to prevent future tampering.

A 14-month-old boy became the fourth victim of contamination when he was hospitalized in Manchester and found to have glass in his stomach, the hospital said today.

Two mothers cut their fingers on glass in baby food, and a 9-month-old girl cut herself when she bit on a razor blade in baby yogurt.

Scotland Yard said it believes several demands for up to $1.7 million from H.J. Heinz and Co. apparently were made by one man connected with two cases of contamination.

The statement added, "It is thought likely the vast majority will prove to have no connection with the inquiry.

"They are far more likely to have been malicious hoaxes by mischief makers, false alarms by members of the public or deliberate contamination of jars and cans in cases unconnected with the inquiry."

A London newspaper, The Independent, said several people have been arrested after allegedly making false claims in a bid to gain refunds.

Glass shards, razor blades, pins, needles and caustic soda have been reported found in baby food, and in one case powdered milk, in Ireland and Britain. The tampering reports began April 7.

Ted Smyth, director of corporate affairs at Heinz's headquarters in Pittsburgh, flew into London on Thursday night and said Heinz is "determined to do everything possible to help the police catch them."

Asked about British news reports that some unidentified companies had paid a total of $850,000 to extortionists, Smyth said:

"We are determined not to pay blackmail money to the thugs who are doing this. It would only encourage other blackmailers."

Consumers bidding up prices for organically grown foods

By PAMELA WARD

AUSTIN (AP) — Were it not for the higher prices and the colossal size of supermarkets, their aisles wide enough to negotiate Winnebagos, this might be 1939. Those were the pre-pesticide days when farmers planted, then prayed, and when consumers didn't consider apples forbidden fruit.

Then came the World War II years, the atomic bomb and chemical warfare for crops. Progress.

Now we want to give it back.

Consumers are stampeding the stores in search of pesticide-free turnips and tangerines. Supermarket buyers appeal to brokers for what consumers want. Distributors talk to the farmers, who, dizzy with visions of increased profits, are switching to organic farming faster than grasshoppers hop.

"I've got to refill the (organic produce) shelf," Carlos Gil, produce manager of an Austin H.E.B. market said last week. "The shoppers about cleaned us out last night."

Consumers who scoffed for two decades at Whole Foods groupies and Wheatsville health-nuts, now are thinking twice about perfect-complexion fruits and vegetables. Did chemicals make them that way? If we buy this stuff, will it kill us? "60 Minutes" says apples contain Alar. Tom Brokaw tells us Chilean fruit is laced with cyanide.

Shoppers are praying to the gods of natural foods bins. Give us organic, keep us free from pesticides. And the H.E.B.s, the Simon Davids, the Tom Thumbs, Safeways and Fresh-Plus — most of the mainstream outlets — knowing we've changed our ways, knowing we'll pay the price of absolution, give us what we want:

Organic produce. It isn't always perfect in appearance, but it is said to taste as good or better. Lopsided lemons, discolored cantaloupes, oranges that look more scar-kissed than Sunkist. Nature is not always pretty.

"We could sell three times what we have to our existing customers," said Art Beaudet, assistant produce buyer for Texas Health Distributors, which brokers trailer-loads of mostly California-grown organic produce. "There is a huge demand, but supply hasn't increased yet. And now all these Johnny-come-latelys want it. We're getting calls from all the chain stores."

"There is enormous growth in the numbers of farms converting" to organic methods, said John Matthews, president of the new Texas Organic Growers Association. "On the consumer side, the demand has just exploded. For the farmers, there is good money to be made for the next eight or nine years until the farms catch up with the demand."

Three of five Fresh-Plus Grocery stores in Austin began carrying organic selections four months ago. Selection is limited. Availability is a problem. Vic Mendez, merchandise buyer for the stores, said Fresh-Plus made the decision to stock the chemical-free produce because "the trend is going that way."

H.E.B. began stocking it, Gil said, "because our customers asked for it, and we give our customers what they want."

Simon David Store and Tom Thumb Supermarkets also began offering the alternative produce within the last year. Safeway stores carry some organic produce, depending on location. It is the store manager's decision.

Almost all organic produce now comes from California, including 90 percent of the organic produce sold in Texas. Store managers are looking forward to the Texas produce season, in hopes they can increase their supply. "I think we'll get a better product," Mendez said. "With California, we never know what we're going to get."

Matthews said many Texas farmers are eager to switch to organic farming methods, but information on how to succeed is limited.

Matthews, a Hutto farmer, and other association board members are crisscrossing the Lone Star State, meeting with farmers who want to cash in on the booming organic business. Last week, it was Abilene. "We're more or less acting as extension agents, giving farmers a starting place."

Matthews estimated only 800 acres of crops are being grown organically now in Texas. "That is just a fraction of a drop in a bucket" of crop acreage, he said.

Beaudet said only one Texas organic farmer produces enough to send loaded 18-wheelers out of state. The Valley citrus farmer, who has sold to Texas Health Distributors for years, tells Beaudet he is getting calls from major grocery chains, each outbidding the other in hopes of getting his crops. Most are truck-farm size operations; only a handful are farming organic in the Travis County area.

Less than a year ago, the Texas Department of Agriculture announced a certification program for organic produce — the only state to offer a multilevel certification system intended as a consumer guarantee of authenticity. About 40 farmers have become certified — some of them, however, are in the transitional phase of going from conventional to organic methods. Ten times as many applications are pending.

Produce from Texas organic-certified farms will carry green and yellow Texas Department of Agriculture stickers. Produce from farms in the process of converting will carry purple stickers. A field must be free from pesticides for three years before produce can win the green-and-yellow stickers.

In California, farmers can be certified by a voluntary farmers' organization. Their produce, however, can be declared organic in the first year after switching a field.

The Texas Agriculture Department also will certify distributors and stores, which must adhere to rules for record-keeping. Before the program, said Dan Kelly, the department's policy analyst, "anyone could call their product organic. It's buyer beware. So, this program is an attempt to give the consumer the best possible product."

Organic farmers are trading chemicals for insect-eating insects and soap-based bug-sprays.

FAMILY MATTERS

Children need instructions on restaurant behavior

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: It seems like every time we have gone out to eat recently there have been people in the restaurant with small crying children. We have been next to young parents who try to "reason" with a child that couldn't have been more than 18 months old. We have been next to parents that just ignore the crying and continue to eat. We sat behind a family with three very young children that let two of the children constantly throw things into our booth and hit on me.

Now, Mr. May, I have raised my children and when I was raising my children I would have never permitted that kind of behavior. I don't blame the children, I blame the parents for not taking care of their children. What's wrong with these parents? Don't they know how disturbing it is for everyone else in the restaurant when children are screaming or misbehaving? My husband says that they just don't care.

I know that it's really not any of my business, but are there some things that you could suggest that parents could do when they eat out? It ruins our meal to have to sit in silence while all of this is going on. I really do like children, but I think that they should behave when they are out. STRESSED

DEAR STRESSED: Everyone — the child, the parents and the other patrons — suffers when a child misbehaves in a restaurant. Parents have the responsibility to control their child's behavior, but too often parents assume no one else is being disturbed. Perhaps they are used to such behavior or perhaps, as your husband suggests, they don't care if they are disturbing others. But perhaps many parents — especially first-time parents — don't really know how to prepare a young child for a visit to a restaurant.

First, they should consider the restaurant. Young children and infants don't wait very well, so the establishment should serve food quickly. My mother-in-law taught us the value of small toys (cars, animals that roll, etc.) that were only available to the child when they went out to eat. Coloring books and pencils or crayons also help pass the time.

Parents should consider the time of day they visit the restaurant. Children usually have a different eating schedule than adults. The preferable time would be the child's normal eating time or a little earlier.

Some foods are more "finger" appropriate than others (for example, cheese pizza or chicken parts). Before selecting the restaurant, parents should consider what foods served there are appropriate for the child.

Eating out can be an important socializing activity for a child, but it can also be a very negative one if not conducted in an appropriate manner. So parents, plan ahead — and then you can relax and enjoy your meal too.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: I strongly encourage you and your family to seek professional help. You cannot continue to keep your daughter a prisoner in your home. Her behavior is approaching extreme. Teens tend to escalate what works. Many of them seem to have a real talent for disturbing parents in the most effective manner.

Adolescence is a time for renegotiating the parent-child bond, and that is the challenge. A parent's goal is to have the teen walk away from the home, not run away. Growing up inevitably involves some form of separation, but we want to accomplish that separation without alienation. The acceptance of this necessary change is a vital part of maturing; for teens and parents.

It is possible to separate without alienation. I encourage you to seek professional advice to identify ways that might work. You cannot continue to run a prison.

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

'Information anxiety' is data dilemma's disease

By JUDIE GLAVE

NEW YORK (AP) — If barometric pressure has you baffled, if the Dow Jones average has you dizzy, if you're likely to lie about having read that 550-page report still sitting on your desk, you've got it bad, pal — INFORMATION ANXIETY.

Though it sounds like a Mel Brooks satire, author Richard Saul Wurman believes thousands, perhaps millions, suffer from the condition.

"It's saying, 'I just can't keep up.' It's that feeling of pressure," said Wurman. "You know it, I know it. Admit it, everyone does," says the fast-talking author of "Information Anxiety" (Doubleday, $19.95).

"It's that feeling that Jerry Smith down the street can put together the bicycle and you don't know how; that THEY can program their VCR to record things 14 days ahead of time and you can't ... that he's read the big, fat report sitting in your box and you can't because it just doesn't make any sense, so you have to lie and say, 'Oh yeah, that was a pretty good report.' "

That, says Wurman, is what society's latest high-tech malady has done — turned humans into masses of lying, quivering jelly brains, too afraid to admit they don't know, or don't understand.

Wurman argues that information anxiety is a result of the societal demand that everyone become a well-rounded cultural being, coupled with the fact that much of the information being dispersed does not really inform.

"It's just stuff, or data, and I refer to it as the non-information explosion."

Wurman blames the education system. He says schools teach that "it's better to say, 'I know' than 'I don't know.' It's better to answer a question than ask a question. ... A longer report is a better report."

His new book is aimed at calming anxiety sufferers by providing such down-to-earth, common-sense ideas as:

■ Allow that pile of periodicals stack up so high before ripping out individual articles of interest, thereby, reducing a preponderant pile to small stacks of what Wurman calls "interest shards." The idea: less to look at, less anxiety.

■ Make a list of terms you use or hear often, but don't really understand (barometric pressure, the Dow Jones industrial average) and make a point to learn what they mean, one at a time.

■ Never nod your head at something you don't understand. Practice saying, "I don't understand," in front of a mirror. The sooner you admit you don't know, the sooner you can actually learn.

The book, admits Wurman, is full of a lot of things that people always knew, but having them written in a book "gives it the kind of justification to say it out loud for the first time."

Wurman, who has an office in San Francisco and a loft-office in Manhattan, is an architect by training but is better known as an architect of information.

"I realize how ignorant I am," he said. "I'm more knowledgeable about my ignorance than perhaps anybody I know."

"When I don't understand things, I often do a book about them," says the 53-year-old writer, who has turned his thirst for knowledge into a thriving business.

The result has been 26 "Access" books that include guides to the 1984 Olympics, medical terms and his latest, a guide to The Wall Street Journal, which walks readers through a jungle of financial jargon.

He also is responsible for revamping the Pacific Bell Yellow Pages, listing goods and services other than alphabetically — by neighborhood and category, for example.

Though pessimistic about ending information anxiety, Wurman believes that within a decade the nation's data dilemma will spawn a new, multi-billion dollar industry: the understanding business.

"Newspapers will begin hiring people not just to style their newspapers but to make them understandable," he said. "Some bold news program on television will do that, and we'll actually have a weather map that you can understand.

"And business reports won't talk about M1s, M2s and M3s, which everybody thinks are bus lines. It will be information that people can use."

Because he understands this, he's gotten a jump on the competition and created a new business venture, The Understanding Business.

Now that's using common sense, which is what Wurman says his books, his business and his life is all about.

"I already told you," he says smiling, "I'm not that smart."

Misunderstanding can destroy marriages

By BARBARA FITZSIMMONS
Copley News Service

A conversation over dinner:

STEVE: Honey, guess what — I got tickets to the game Saturday night, so we'll be able to go. (This is really special and I'd like to share it with her.)

LUCY: What about the candlelight dinner we had planned? (How could he forget something so important?)

STEVE: Oh, c'mon, we can eat any time; these tickets were hard to get. (She doesn't care about what I'm interested in. I hope she doesn't start whining now.)

LUCY: But, I thought we had decided to spend some intimate time together. (He isn't interested in the relationship anymore.)

STEVE: Don't start in on me. I just wanted to have fun. (She's a wet blanket.)

LUCY: Go have fun by yourself. (He doesn't love me. I should divorce him.)

The English poet Shelley once wrote, "A system could not well have been devised more studiously hostile to human happiness than marriage."

Steve and Lucy would probably agree with that assessment. Their honeymoon long over, they have entered a marital stage in which even the simplest conversations carry undertones of pain and anger.

During courtship, they agreed on everything. Now they are bickering their way to divorce court.

THE IMAGINARY Steve and Lucy have a communication problem common among married couples, says Dr. Raymond Fidaleo, director of cognitive therapy at a California hospital.

For one thing, they withhold vital information from each other. If Steve had told Lucy how much he wanted her to go to the game initially, their interaction might have taken a different twist.

For another, Fidaleo says, they distort the information they receive, giving themselves negative messages that aren't based on reality (much of what is in parentheses).

"The mind is like a computer, and sometimes we run false programs through it," he said. "Or, we misinterpret data."

One solution, Fidaleo believes, is cognitive therapy, a treatment based on reversing negative thinking. Pioneered by psychiatrist Aaron Beck at the University of Pennsylvania in the mid-1960s, cognitive therapy has been used successfully as a treatment for depressed individuals.

More recently, however, Beck and other therapists such as Fidaleo have started using it to treat depressed marriages as well.

They believe individuals become depressed by building a distorted, negative image of themselves. Couples get into trouble by building a distorted, negative image of their partners and the marriage itself.

"Couples can overcome their difficulties if they recognize first that much of their disappointment, frustration and anger stems not from basic incompatibility," Beck writes in his new book, "Love Is Never Enough" (Harper & Row). It comes instead "from unfortunate misunderstandings that result from faulty communications and biased interpretations of each other's behavior."

In other words, says Fidaleo, the partner you adored before marriage is probably still the same person; it is your perception of him or her that has changed.

IN COGNITIVE therapy, couples are asked to become aware of their self-talk, then consciously turn around distorted thoughts.

"It's important to help them see each other in a more realistic light," Fidaleo said. "That allows them to build up good feelings about each other."

Husband and wife are also asked to consider the unspoken expectations and rules they have brought into the marriage.

For instance, a man may believe he should be the major breadwinner in the house, though he never tells his wife. When she starts making more money than he does, he boils over. She doesn't know why.

A woman, on the other hand, may expect her husband to do half of the household chores, though she never tells him. When he doesn't hold up his end at home, she feels betrayed. He doesn't know why.

Fidaleo calls these silent expectations "the shoulds," and he advises couples to lower some, get rid of others, and, at the very least, say them out loud to each other.

Take, for example, the imaginary Joe and Janet. In Fidaleo's scenario, Joe is working full time and attending school nights because he believes he should get a promotion so he can support his family better. Joe has not told Janet this, however.

Janet feels Joe should spend more time with her, if he really loves her; she wonders if he is attending school just to get away from her.

JANET: I'd really like to go to the movies with you Thursday night.

JOE: I can't, I have too much homework. (She knows I've got to do well so I can get that new job and we can buy a new house.)

JANET: You never pay attention to me anymore. (I wonder if he even loves me.)

JOE: I'm doing the best I can. (She never gives me any credit.)

IN COGNITIVE therapy, Joe and Janet would be asked to reconsider their "shoulds." Then, they might be advised to think of things they would enjoy doing together and make some plans. Finally, they would be asked to clean up their negative thinking about each other.

Fidaleo said cognitive therapy differs from traditional marriage counseling in that the cognitive therapist generally does not seek deep, hidden meanings for problems. Rather, he goes straight to work with practical solutions. Homework is a regular part of the therapy.

Fidaleo said he rarely sees a marriage that can't be saved if both partners are willing to make improvements.

"We present problems as problems and give the couple tools to work with to solve their problems," he said. "We help them to build up good feelings about each other. Once they get good feelings going, they are able to work together."

'Three Cs' minimize frustration

Copley News Service

Do the daily demands for your time leave you feeling frustrated?

Are you neglecting your wife, your kids or your career in order to fit everything in?

Then quit prioritizing and make everyone and every task in your life of equal importance.

In order to accomplish such a feat, psychiatrist Mark Goulston says you must master the three C's of quality time — concern, curiosity and confidence.

To make each moment the best it can be, show concern by letting your loved ones talk. Be curious and ask intelligent questions that prove you're interested. And, finally, show your confidence in that person by giving him or her your full and unconditional support.

Goulston says even if you only have a few minutes, expressing the three C's will convince whomever you're with that he or she is important.

Teenagers communicate over telephone

By Dr. LAWRENCE KUTNER
New York Times News Service

Three years ago Henry J. Miller, the director of information technology and services at the University of Rochester, had some trouble with his home telephone. Although he was in charge of installing a new 12,500-line telephone system at the university, his friends and co-workers said they would almost always receive a busy signal when they called him at home.

He quickly traced the problem to its source: his two teen-age daughters.

Adolescents seem to have a natural affinity for telephones. Several studies have shown that teen-agers use telephones differently than both younger children and adults.

Child development experts say there appears to be more to telephone use than what parents often perceive as idle jabbering.

"Adults may use the phone to call a stranger or someone they haven't seen for a long time," said Dr. James Youniss, director of the Youth Research Center at Catholic University in Washington. "Teen-agers call the very people they've been with all day."

He recalled how his three teen-age daughters would return from a school dance and immediately call their friends to recount in great detail what had happened less than an hour earlier.

"They were, in effect, asking 'Did you see this event the way I saw it? Is my perception accurate?' They really needed to share their experiences and to see if they were interpreting the world in the same way as their friends," Youniss continued.

That pattern of teen-age conversations is supported by studies of what adolescents talk about during face-to-face discussions.

"Adolescents always talk about themselves, no matter what you ask them to talk about," said Dr. John M. Gottman, a developmental psychologist at the University of Washington in Seattle who has been studying children's conversations.

"Adolescents are constantly trying to figure out who they are, who they should be and how they compare with others," he said. "This pervades their conversations."

Part of the increase in telephone use by teen-agers can be attributed to a general increase in the amount of time they spend in all types of talking.

Younger children spend much of their time outside of school playing, and little time sitting and talking. By age 13 or 14, that pattern of activities begins to change.

"During early adolescence they have a greater need to talk with someone their own age who's going through the same experiences," said Dr. Duane Buhrmester, a developmental psychologist at the University of California at Los Angeles who has been studying intimacy in adolescence.

"They also have the cognitive ability to talk about abstract issues," he said. Those new and more sophisticated thinking skills make talking much more interesting and attractive."

Marcela Raffaelli, a graduate student in psychology at the University of Chicago who has been studying communication among adolescents, said: "We found that the amount of time girls spend talking goes from eight hours per week among fifth and sixth graders to 16 hours per week among ninth graders. For boys the same age, it increases from six hours per week to seven and a half hours per week."

Researchers are uncertain of why girls talk on the telephone more than boys do.

The telephone provides teen-agers with an important combination of intimacy and privacy. It allows them to test new areas of adult behavior without risking as much embarrassment as they would in person.

"When they're doing face-to-face interactions they have to manage their facial expressions and gestures much more than they do over the telephone," Buhrmester said. "Those are among the most difficult things to control."

That mixture of intimacy and privacy can be helpful to shy teen-agers.

Parents set rules for phone use

New York Times News Service

Developmental psychologists offer several suggestions to help parents handle their adolescents' increasing use of the telephone.

- Help teen-agers understand that telephone use is a privilege, not a right. "When our daughters' grades went down, we imposed restrictions on their use of the phone," said Henry J. Miller, whose work at the University of Rochester includes responsibility for its telephone system. "It's been very effective. They really value their time on the telephone."
- Set limits on lengths of calls and hours for telephone use, but make sure they're realistic. Teen-agers often benefit greatly from conversations that parents sometimes see as trivial. "We had a rule with our daughters that after 9:30 they couldn't call," said Dr. James Youniss, director of the Youth Research Center at Catholic University in Washington. "We didn't want to give in by getting another line because we thought they should learn how to cooperate with the rest of the family."
- Set up a system for paying the telephone bill, especially long-distance charges. Will your children have to pay for all their long-distance calls, or only for those that aren't made to relatives? Will they be able to use the telephone on "credit" from you? What happens if they can't pay their contribution when it's due? Having partial responsibility for a monthly telephone bill is an excellent way to ease teen-agers into the autonomy they'll need when they leave home.
- If you arrange for a separate telephone line for your children, set up clear rules for its use. Many parents find that their children's friends quickly learn to call the parents' phone number if the children's line is busy, leading to a resurrection of the problem that made the family pay for the extra line in the first place.

DEAR ABBY

Love triangle has degree of surprise for woman

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I met this terrific guy last summer and it was love at first sight for both of us. (I'll call him Mark.) Mark was living with his girlfriend, "Lisa," her 2-year-old son and her mother. (The baby isn't Mark's.) I am not the type to have anything to do with a guy who's involved in another relationship, but Mark didn't tell me about Lisa until later. By then it was too late.

When Lisa found out about Mark and me, she kicked him out. We were very happy together until Lisa started calling him, and he decided to go back to her.

Now, here's the part I need help on. Lisa and I have become very good friends. She's really a neat gal and I don't want to lose her friendship. How can I keep her friendship without seeing Mark? They have no phone, so in order to talk to Lisa and see Lisa's son (whom I adore), I have to go over to their house.

I hate to do this because every time I look at Mark, I die inside. There is nothing going on between us anymore, but I still have a soft spot in my heart for him, and I can't blame him for loving Lisa. She is the most wonderful friend I have ever had.

Please tell me what to do. — MIXED-UP IN FLORIDA

DEAR MIXED-UP: Losing a lover is painful, but it's not fatal. The price for maintaining your friendship with Lisa and her son is not only having to "see" Mark, but also having to put your feelings for him into perspective and go on with your life. (It won't be easy.)

Please get counseling to help you understand why you're still carrying the torch for this fickle fellow.

DEAR ABBY: You have made some good suggestions for conserving water — shut the faucet off when brushing your teeth and shaving, etc.

I have another suggestion that could save thousands — maybe millions — of gallons of water a week. Every first-class hotel I've stayed in changes its sheets and pillow cases EVERY DAY! This is unnecessary. When people are home they don't change their bed linen every day. They put fresh sheets on their beds once a week — twice a week, if they're really fussy.

What do you think, Abby? — CONSERVATIVE IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR CONSERVATIVE: While a daily change of bed linen may seem extravagant, it's a well-established policy for which hotel guests pay handsomely. It also ensures the ultimate in cleanliness, which all travelers appreciate.

Lakers open title defense with victory over Portland

Associated Press

It's the playoffs, time for the infirm and aging to stand tall. Time for the Los Angeles Lakers to take charge.

"I believe this team truly steps up to another level in the playoffs; they're used to winning, they're addicted to it," Lakers coach Pat Riley said Thursday night after the two-time NBA champions beat the Portland Trail Blazers 128-108 in their best-of-5 series opener. "I think this team's been written off, but they haven't written themselves off.

"People say this team is old, senile, finished. We can't let those things affect us."

They didn't let anything the Blazers did affect them. Magic Johnson had 30 points and 16 assists, Byron Scott chipped in with 29 points and Mychal Thompson came off the bench to score 20.

"Riley said he really wanted a lot from me, both offensively and defensively, because I'm a veteran now," Scott said, "and I felt like I delivered."

The Lakers are trying to become the first team to deliver three consecutive NBA championships since Boston in 1964-66.

"We came in prepared and focused," Riley said. "We were coming off winning seven of our last eight and five in a row (to end the regular season). We just continued that."

The Lakers took control early. Whenever Portland rallied, Los Angeles suddenly would spurt away again.

Los Angeles, 5-0 during the regular season against the Trail Blazers, is 19-3 at home versus Portland in the decade.

Clyde Drexler paced Portland with 30 points and Jerome Kersey added 23.

Warriors 123, Jazz 119

Golden State was the only road team to win.

Chris Mullin scored 41 points, including 18 in the third period, for the Warriors.

Rookie Mitch Richmond, averaging 22.7 points against the Jazz, finished with 30. Richmond was 8-for-34 in his last two games but was 13-for-21 Thursday.

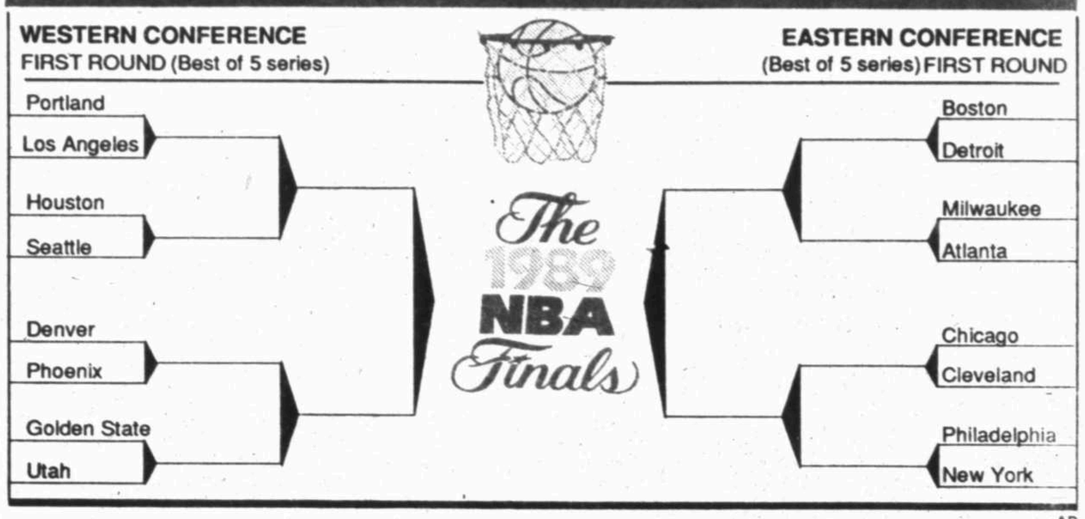

Mullin shot 7-for-11 from the field in the third quarter, including 1-for-2 from 3-point range and made all three free throws.

"We didn't want to take the ball inside to Mark Eaton," Mullin said of Utah's 7-foot-4 center. "We have to take the outside shot. When we hit them, we look like geniuses."

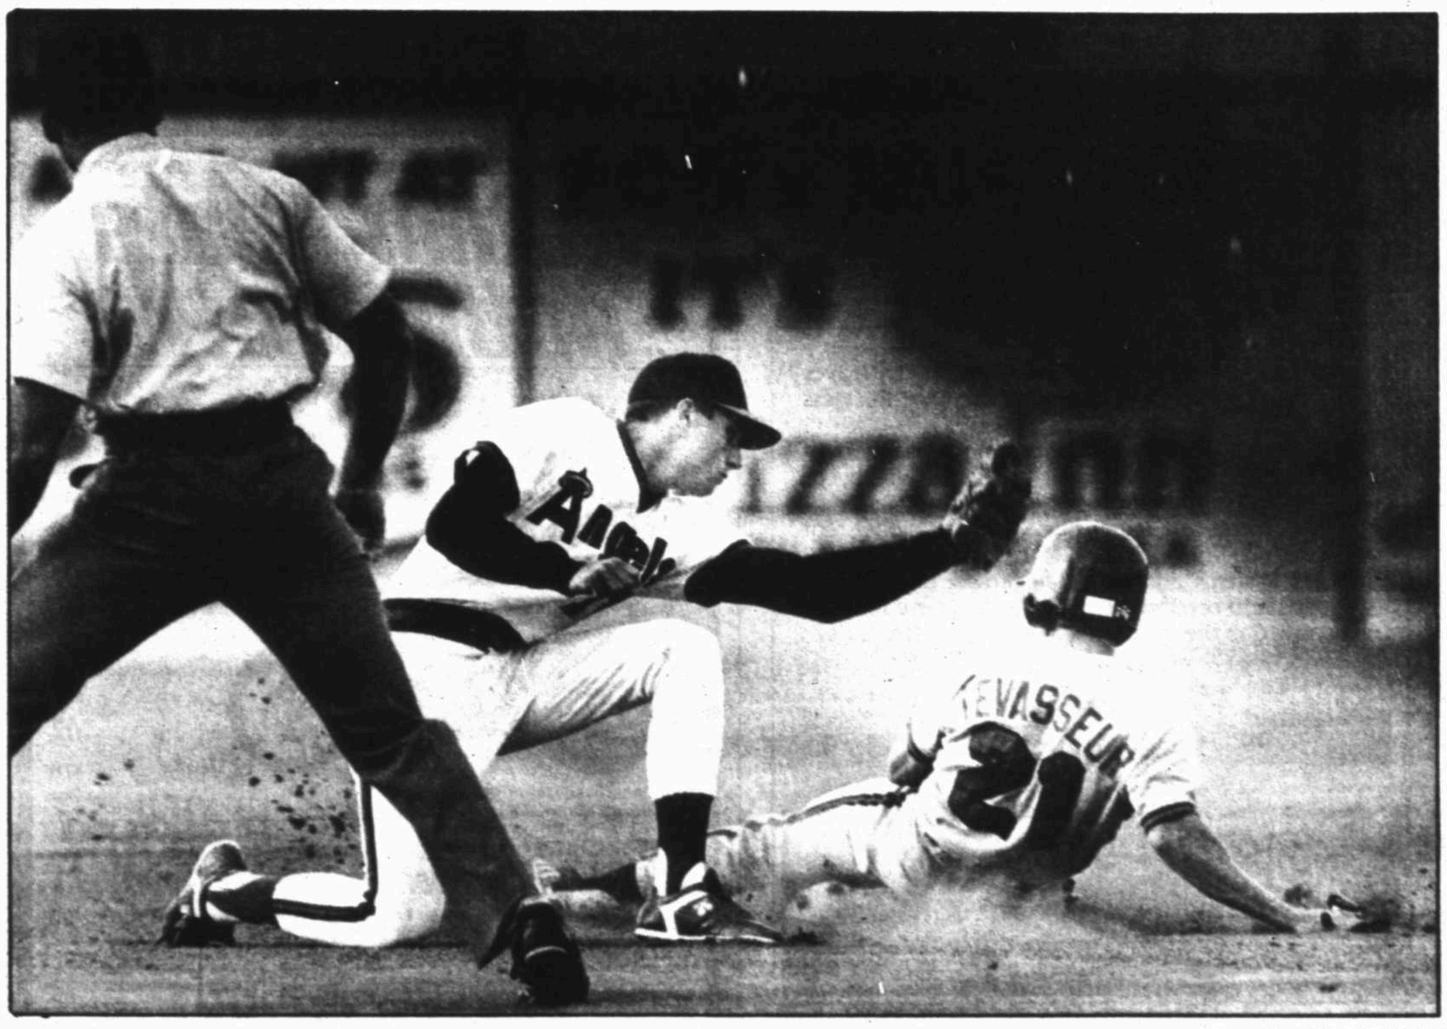

John Stockton led Utah with 30 points. Karl Malone, who entered the game as the NBA's second-leading scorer at 29.1, finished with 22. He was scoreless in the first quarter and had only six in the first half.

Wichita's Tom Levasseur (21) slides under the tag by Midland Angel shortstop Gary DiSarcina at second base Thursday at Angel Stadium, but Midland pulled out the win to take a four-game lead in the Texas League West.

Angels lead West by four games

Peters' 10th inning single nails Wichita

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Reed Peters singled in the 10th inning to drive home Everett Graham from second base to give Midland's Angels a 6-5 win over Wichita's Wranglers and a four-game lead in the Texas League West at Angels Stadium Thursday night.

Midland made it look tougher than it actually was, yet, at the same time, rallied to tie and win a game that it maybe should have lost.

Blame it on a 10-game 7-3 road trip and the trainer, or maybe the fact that The Chicken appears tonight at Angel Stadium and the Haloes Thursday were like kids on Christmas Eve.

"I felt sluggish tonight and there wasn't the usual excitement in the dugout," said centerfielder Mark Doran.

MANAGER Max Oliveras, however, will take a win any way he can get it and "in this one, they showed me a lot of character. Sam Joseph, our trainer, left the team to return to school to earn his certification. He may not play, but it was like losing one of the family."

Character? That's what Roberto Hernandez showed when he was sent out to the mound with the desperation plea from his manager, "You've got to give us six or seven good innings. We have only two people in the bullpen tonight."

Hernandez was wild, five walks, as many as he had issued in 16⅔ previous innings, and a pitch into the dirt allowed Charlie Hillemann to score from third with the run that made 3-2 in the fifth. Then, in the sixth, Paul Faries tripled home one run and scored on Mike Basso's two-out squeeze bunt.

HERNANDEZ hung tough, although the way Wichita's Omar Oliveres, the 20-year old who won 16 games and completed 10 in A ball last year, was going, 5-2 looked like money in the bank.

Hernandez gave Max two more shutout innings and Midland rallied for three runs in the seventh to tie on Hedi Vargas' clutch, two-out double to the angle in right center.

"I didn't hit it quite in the right spot," said Vargas, but it sounded like a bass drum when Hillemann crashed into the fence in game, but futile pursuit. When Hillemann came to, he had to leave the game for a precautionary exam.

"Oliveres is a good young pitcher," said Vargas, "I never hit against him, but I know him. We played on the same team in Winter ball in Puerto Rico.

"Since then he has added a split-finger fastball, but all he showed me tonight was the fast ball and slider."

That was a mistake. Vargas went 3-for-4 with two RBI. In fact, Vargas, Chris Cron and Jeff Barnes accounted for nine of Midland's 12 hits. Crone went 4-for-4.

IT WAS a walk to Peters, Barns' single to short center, Cron's run-scoring looper over short and Vargas' two-run boomer off the wall that tied it in the seventh.

Brown's hopes fade; Andrews advances

From Staff Reports

Region I Golf

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee's Beau Brown shot a 77 at the Elm Grove course in Lubbock Thursday in the first round of the Class 5A Region I golf tournament, but is eight strokes off the leading pace of Denton's Brandon Knight, the Region I defending champion. Things went much better for Andrews in the 4A tournament in Brownwood.

Brown must finish in the top two to advance to the state meet, but that will be a tough chore in the final round today.

"Just to give you an indication of the type of golf that is being played here, there is 84 golfers here and 49 shot between 69 and 79," said Lee golf coach Ronnie Stephens. "Beau didn't shoot a bad game, but the wind was blowing 30 or 40 miles and hour and the fairways here are horrendous. Beau had two birdies, one bogey and three double bogeys. He played well for 15 holes."

District 4-5A champion Ben Bangert of Odessa Permian didn't fare much better with a 76. The surprise of the district came from San Angelo's Shawn Bishop, who had a 73.

Wichita Fall Rider leads in the team chase with a 292 while Lancefield has a 296. San Angelo is in sixth place with a 304 while Permian is seventh with a 310.

In girls play, Lewisville Marcus leads with a 352, but San Angelo (374) and Odessa Permian (377) are duking it out for second place and the other Austin berth. Sherman's Kari Hunter leads the medalist race with an 80 while San Angelo's Lisa Baulch and Permian's Denise Morales are in a four-way tie for second with 83.

Meanwhile, Andrews won two state team berths in Brownwood with the girls winning the 4A region title with a 696-734 margin over Belton behind the two-day score of 167 by Lisa McQuatters, which was good for second place in the medalist race. Other Andrews girls were April King, 179; Niki Martin, 176; Jen Galloway, 181; and Melissa Brown, 184.

The Andrews boys finished second to Pampa by one stroke, 625-626. Andrews' Gym Bice fired a two-day 151 to finish third in the medalist race behind Wichita Falls Hirschi's Jason Ashlock (147) and Brownwood's Matt Preston (150).

Other Andrews scores were Chad Campbell, 164; Guy Hester, 157; Chris McQuatters, 162; and Brinson Hammond, 163.

Flyers get unexpected scoring from veteran

NHL Playoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers got some help from an unexpected source to force a seventh game with the Pittsburgh Penguins for the NHL Patrick Division title.

It was no surprise when Philadelphia's Tim Kerr scored the first two goals of the game Thursday night as the Flyers beat the Penguins 6-2 to tie the best-of-7 series at three games apiece.

"He's the guy we look to score the big goals," Flyers coach Paul Holmgren said. "He did that tonight."

But Holmgren's tone left no doubt he was more than a little surprised at the player who scored goals three and five — Derrick Smith.

Smith, a fifth-year NHL veteran, came into this season's playoffs with eight post-season goals in 56 games. He had never scored two playoff goals in a game.

"Derrick has to work a lot harder for goals," Holmgren said. "I'm glad to see it pay off. He's an excellent forechecker."

THE FLYERS beat the Penguins after enduring a hockey nightmare in Tuesday's 10-7 loss in Game 5. Mario Lemieux, the league's top scorer, tied NHL records with five goals and eight points for Pittsburgh.

The Flyers' only solace was a four-goal rally in the final period.

Philadelphia picked up where it left off, taking the lead just 4:28 into Game 6 and never looking back.

Hextall, working behind a relentless defense, faced only 22 shots, three in the final period. The Flyers shot 38 times at Tom Barrasso. In addition to holding Lemieux to two shots, the Flyers limited all-star defenseman Paul Coffey to two shots.

"We certainly played a lot better than the last game and we really needed it," Hextall said. "Holmgren just told us to go back to work, go back to work from start to finish."

Smith said he could see the difference between the two nights from the beginning of Game 6.

"The big difference was that everybody was pumped up tonight," he said. "I could tell before the game that everybody was prepared to play.

"We will have to prepare the same way for Saturday. There is no seventh-game advantage. I don't care whether we play it there or here.

"We have to keep the puck away from Mario. Our forechecking wore them down, and that will be a key Saturday, forechecking."

Pittsburgh coach Gene Ubriaco said his team "just couldn't get it in gear. They played better than we did."

Ubriaco said the Flyers' fourth and fifth goals, turning a 3-2 lead into a 5-2 margin, "really hurt." The Penguins never recovered.

Friday's Question: Which position yielded the most players during the recent NFL draft.

Thursday's Answer: Ted Williams homered in his final career at-bat against Baltimore Sept. 28, 1960.

Peters shoots for national record

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — Tim Moore's national record of 50 consecutive victories as a high school pitcher from 1977-80 is just now being submitted to the National Federation of State High School Association.

But after Brenham's Jon Peters pitches tonight against A&M Consolidated, it may be only good enough for second place.

Peters tied Moore's record last Friday with a 3-1 victory over Katy Taylor and will have Moore's support when he goes for the record.

"I hope Jon gets it, I wish him all the luck in the world," Moore said. "I didn't get much recognition for it until last year. I'm sorry it came at Jon's expense."

Moore, now 27 and a management trainee at Carolina Freight Centers in Kings Mountain, N.C., will be in the stands at Firemen's Field tonight.

Moore didn't know his record was a national mark until last year when stories started appearing about Peters setting the national record of 34 straight victories.

The National Federation of State High School Associations listed the national record at 33 victories by Mike Pill of West Covina, Calif.

But a Sports Illustrated story enlightened Moore of the record he'd set eight years earlier.

"I really didn't know anything about it," Moore said. "Then I got a phone call one night and a guy told me about the Peters story.

"I didn't know what he was talking about. I looked through Faces in the Crowd. Then I saw the story and I thought 'Oh, Lord.'"

Moore's first reaction was to remain quiet and allow Peters to keep the record.

"I didn't want to say anything, I was going to keep quiet," Moore said. "I'd have hated for that to have been me and then someone come along and say 'you don't have the record.'"

But Moore's 50 victories were listed in the North Carolina state record book and soon the word was out.

Peters' forte has been control. He didn't walk a batter in tying the record and he's never walked more than four batters in any game during his streak.

Peters was 13-0 as a freshman, 15-0 as a sophomore and 14-0 as a junior, leading Brenham to state Class 4A titles each year.

He has four no-hitters, including back to back hitless victories this season.

He's 8-0 going into Friday night's game with 88 strikeouts and five earned runs in 51 innings. His earned run average is 0.69.

Peters, a senior who has agreed to attend Texas A&M next fall, is within reach of the state record for total career victories held by Duncanville's Keith Creel, won had 55 victories in 1974-77.

The national record for total career victories is 61 by Steve Streater, Sylva Webster, N.C., in 1974-77.

Peters will finish second in the state for career strikeouts behind David Clyde of Houston Weschester who had 842 total strikeouts in 1970-73.

Peters had 554 strikeouts prior to Friday night's game.

Moore never pitched after high school. He lost the final two games of his career and finished 50-2.

He walked on at Clemson and didn't make the team but remained as a student to get his degree rather than accept offers from smaller schools.

Yanks' John sweats win over KC

Associated Press

Even after 288 career victories, Tommy John never takes a win for granted.

John allowed two runs in eight-plus innings but needed Dave Righetti to get out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth as the New York Yankees beat the Kansas City Royals 3-2 Thursday night.

"My stomach was churning and my palms were sweaty," John said. "I felt like I was just an inch away from having a great game go down the drain."

John, who will be 46 on May 22, allowed seven hits, walked two and struck out five as the Yankees snapped Kansas City's five-game winning streak.

But things got a little shaky in the ninth.

John took a four-hitter and a 3-1 lead into the inning, but Kevin Seitzer led off with a double and scored on Jim Eisenreich's single. Danny Tartabull then followed with a single to chase John with none out.

AL Roundup

Righetti relieved and Pat Tabler moved the runners up with a sacrifice bunt. After pinch-hitter Bill Buckner was intentionally walked, George Brett pinch hit and lofted a short fly to left field that failed to advance the runners.

"When George popped up I went, 'Whew.' But then of all the hitters they have, I hate to see Frank White."

Righetti then got White to hit a forceout grounder to short to end the game for his third save.

"He's been in that spot for 50 years," John said of White. "Almost as long as I have, and that's when Frank White shines. That's when Frank White is a gamer. You aren't going to strike him out if you make a good pitch.

"It's a good thing I'm not a reliever. I'd be a blithering mess. I was pacing in the dugout."

John, 2-3, and 18-7 lifetime against the Royals, walked Willie Wilson with two out in the sixth and Seitzer followed with an RBI double to cut the Yankees' lead to 3-1.

The Yankees scored two runs in the fourth on Stan Jefferson's RBI grounder and Alvaro Esinoza's run-scoring single. Don Mattingly added an RBI single in the fifth.

Athletics 9, Orioles 4

Mark McGwire hit two home runs as Oakland rallied to beat visiting Baltimore.

The Athletics came back from an early 3-0 deficit and then broke a 3-3 tie with six runs on eight hits in the seventh inning.

Todd Burns, 1-0, allowed one run on three hits over 4⅔ innings in relief of Curt Young to get the victory.

McGwire, playing his second game after missing 14 games due to a lower-back injury, had his first multi-homer game since Sept. 15, 1987, at Texas.

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 1

Fred McGriff drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a triple, leading Toronto past Seattle at the Kingdome to spoil Mike Dunne's pitching debut with the Mariners. McGriff leads the AL with seven homers.

Mariners rookie Ken Griffey Jr. had his streak of eight hits in eight straight at-bats end when he walked in the second inning. The walk extended Griffey's streak of reaching base to 11 straight times, but that ended when he struck out in the fifth. His 8-for-8 streak tied the club record.

Mike Flanagan, 1-1, allowed seven hits in 8⅓ innings and lost a shutout in the ninth when Jeffrey Leonard and Dave Valle hit consecutive doubles with one out. Duane Ward got the last two outs.

Angels 10, Tigers 3

Claudell Washington drove in four runs with a homer and single as California routed visiting Detroit.

Washington's two-run homer in the fifth inning off Charles Hudson, 0-1, snapped a 3-3 tie. He added a single with the bases loaded in the sixth to give California a 7-3 lead.

Bert Blyleven, 3-1, pitched 6⅓ innings and allowed eight hits for the victory. Bob McClure pitched the final 2⅔ innings.

The Tigers scored three runs in the top of the first as Lou Whitaker hit a two-run homer and Alan Trammell hit the next pitch for his first home run.

White Sox 3, Red Sox 1

Ozzie Guillen's triple scored Steve Lyons with two outs in the 16th inning, as Chicago beat Boston 3-1 at Fenway Park in the Red Sox' longest game in nearly eight years.

With one out in the 16th, catcher Ron Karkovice beat out a bunt. Lyons forced Karkovice at second, but Guillen followed with his fourth hit in eight at-bats to beat Mike Smithson, 0-2. Dave Gallagher added an insurance run with a single.

Donn Pall, 1-0, who shut out the Red Sox for four innings, got his first major league victory.

The game, which lasted five hours, nine minutes, was Boston's longest since Sept. 3, 1981 when a contest with Seattle was suspended after 20 innings.

Tech moves into position for SWC tourney

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech has captured five of its last six SWC baseball contests to advance from 0-9 in round-robin play to 5-10.

Coach Larry Hays' crew is in position to challenge for the fourth position in the May 17-19 SWC tournament as it hosts Rice Friday and Saturday in a three-game series at Lubbock.

Martinez' grand slam produces Padre sweep

Associated Press

Former Midland Cub Carmelo Martinez tried to hit a home run and all that approach got him was two quick strikes.

He forgot about the home run, concentrated on making contact and immediately hit his second career grand slam.

It keyed a five-run fifth inning Thursday that helped the San Diego Padres to an 8-1 victory and three-game sweep of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Martinez swung hard at two split-fingered fastballs from rookie reliever Logan Easley.

"They were good pitches," Martinez said. "I looked bad on them."

With the bases loaded and nobody out, Easley went for the kill on 0-2, figuring he might be able to get a strikeout. Instead, Martinez lined the pitch into the left field seats for his third home run of the season.

"It's a funny game," Martinez said. "When you try to hit them, it doesn't happen. I shortened up a little and tried to make contact. I knew I hit it good. I've been waiting this whole series to hit a ball hard."

The Padres swept a three-game series in Pittsburgh for the first time since Aug. 1-3, 1980. They won the first two games with great pitching and just enough offense.

They appeared headed for another close decision until the eighth.

"This game was just what the doctor ordered," said winning pitcher Ed Whitson, 3-2.

The Padres set their season high for runs with six in the last three innings.

They broke the tie in the seventh when Whitson walked and went to second on starter Neal Heaton's wild pitch. Randy Ready grounded a single up the middle to score Whitson.

Morris Madden gave up singles to Tony Gwynn and Jack Clark in the eighth and Easley relieved. Benito Santiago grounded a pitch back to Easley, but the Pirates botched the rundown play between third and home to load the bases.

That gave Martinez the opportunity he'd been waiting for.

"We've been winning, but we haven't been scoring a lot of runs," Martinez said. "This is a good feeling to do this. A lot of people expect us to score a lot of runs and we haven't been doing it. Maybe we needed this game to get us going."

The Padres are 7-3 on their longest road trip of the season. They'll conclude the 13-game trip with weekend games in Chicago.

NL Roundup

The Pirates are struggling with three starters on the disabled list. First baseman Sid Bream and catcher Mike LaValliere are already out and center fielder Andy Van Slyke officially joined them on the disabled list earlier Thursday.

Van Slyke has missed 10 games with a pulled muscle in his rib cage. The Pirates have now had seven players on the disabled list since the end of spring training, matching their 1988 total.

That's one reason usually fiery Manager Jim Leyland has maintained his composure in the face of the Padres sweep. The Pirates hadn't lose a three-game home series since they dropped games to the Philadelphia Phillies, July 28-30, 1987.

In his previous three seasons, Leyland has closed the clubhouse door for some lively meetings. He didn't after Thursday's loss.

"The worst thing a manager can do is ask his people to do too much," Leyland said. "We're not at full strength now. The worst thing you can do is make the situation worse by panicking. We just have to stay loose and work out of this."

Cubs 1, Dodgers 0

Chicago snapped a nine-game losing streak to Los Angeles at Wrigley Field as Greg Maddux pitched a five-hitter to beat Orel Hershiser.

Maddux, 1-3, struck out six for his fifth career shutout. Hershiser, 3-2, pitched seven innings, allowing three hits.

Gary Varsho, who entered the game with an .091 average, tripled off the right-field wall in the fifth inning to drive in Maddux, who had singled with two outs.

Cardinals 10, Giants 1

Scott Terry won his third straight game and went 3-for-3 with a three-run homer as St. Louis defeated visiting San Francisco.

Terry hit his first major-league home run off Joe Price in the sixth inning after singles by Jose Oquendo and Tony Pena. Terry also doubled and singled to pace a 15-hit attack.

Terry, 3-1, retired 12 of the first 13 batters and didn't allow a hit until Kevin Mitchell tripled with two out in the fourth. Terry gave up eight hits over eight innings with Dan Quisenberry pitching the ninth.

SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to a fast-paced life with the kind of opportunities you love. You will have more time to pursue those special activities that can bring extra cash and new prestige. Teamwork is the key to success in June. Family ties will affect almost everything you do because that is the way you like it.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: legendary newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst, "Saturday Night Live" player Nora Dunn, NFL coach George Allen, jazz pianist-composer Duke Ellington, longtime Japanese Emperor Hirohito, actress Celeste Holm, conductor Zubin Mehta, golfer Johnny Miller, actress Kate Mulgrew, director Fred Zinnemann, poet Rod McKuen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Give some thought to developing new leadership techniques. The way you cope with a problem will determine the future of a relationship. Loved one may make more demands than you can handle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You deserve to have a carefree day. Welcome the chance to work on a hobby or write overdue letters. See what you can do to build cash reserves. Investment opportunities deserve careful scrutiny.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Responsibilities should be shared fairly this weekend so that everyone can have a good time. You may want to go out and enjoy yourself this evening. Be sure loved one knows your plans.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Time and faith will make a love relationship more fulfilling. Refuse to put up with any bullying. An overly possessive attitude can destroy romance. Give love room to grow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make this your kind of day without spending a lot of money. Love is in the air! Romance can be everything you ever wanted. You feel good about yourself again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Fight a tendency to give in to feelings of greed or jealousy. Do not confide your thoughts to people you do not really know. Travel enjoys favorable influences. Pack a bag!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not get involved with someone spreading gossip or you could sully your own reputation. The best prescription for happiness is spending time with people you enjoy being with.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your reserve and integrity will take you a long way today. Outdoor pursuits boost your spirits and your health. Cook something special for your dinner. A great evening to pamper yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be holding yourself back from success without realizing it. You get a unique opportunity to meet someone special. Put your best foot forward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Your day will gain momentum as it goes along. You face up to a challenge and are stronger for doing so. Focus on developing your creative talents. Influential people want to help.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have special insights into a family matter. Use your knowledge to find a solution that will help many people. Do whatever is necessary to cut everyday expenses.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Choose projects that will improve your appearance and your image. Do not be afraid to take a leadership role in church or community affairs. Standing up for your beliefs wins you new admirers.

Opening lead: Three of ♠

Except for a young lady from Bulgaria, no declarer in the semifinals of the World Team Championships succeeded in making five diamonds after a low spade lead. Try your luck at it. We'll even show you all the cards.

South's bid of five diamonds was a reasonable shot. She hoped her partner would produce another high card in the red suits rather than the king of spades.

West's spade lead went to the ten and ace. Declarer popped up with the ace on the heart shift, ruffed a club and cashed the king of spades for a heart discard. A heart ruff was followed by another club ruff, and a heart was trumped with the jack.

Declarer ruffed her remaining low club and cashed the ace of diamonds, reducing the hand to this position:

	NORTH ♠ J ♡ 10 8 7 ◇ — ♣ —
WEST ♠ Q 6 ♡ — ◇ — ♣ Q J		EAST ♠ 9 8 ♡ — ◇ K 9 ♣ —
	SOUTH ♠ — ♡ — ◇ Q 8

♠ A K

Declarer simply led winning hearts from dummy, and East was forced to bow the knee. There was no way he could make more than his king of diamonds. Try it if you don't believe us.

WATCHES

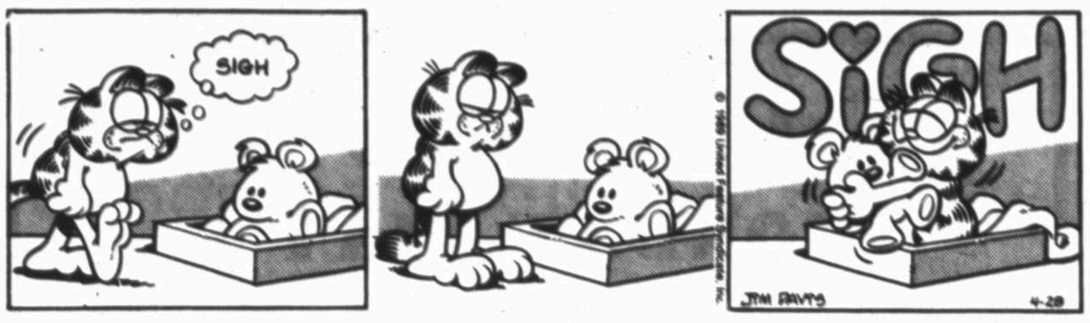

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Fantastic dreams of taking home all of a record $115 million jackpot from Pennsylvania's Super 7 lottery slipped away as 14 winning tickets turned up in an initial computer scan of wagers.

Lottery Executive Director Jim Scroggins said each of the 14 tickets will be worth $317,524.67 in annual payments over the next 26 years. If one person had won the jackpot, it would have been worth $4.4 million a year.

Still, the first two groups of apparent winners were happy Thursday to claim just a share, even if the money won't bring early retirements.

"It's better than nothing," said Gregory G. Samsa, of Warren, Ohio, who served as spokesman for a group of 14 workers from the Harbison-Walker brick factory in Windham, Ohio.

If their ticket is validated, possibly early next week, each of the 14 will get $22,680 a year before taxes for 26 years.

Alverto Handel, 65, of Portage, Pa.; her son, Jim, 39, a coal miner from Summerhill, Pa.; and daughter, Nancy Williams, 34, a library technician at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., also presented a ticket for validation.

More winners were expected at lottery headquarters today — exactly one year after a bogus winning ticket for a $15.2 million jackpot was turned in and a check for nearly $470,000 was issued by lottery officials.

An employee of the lottery's computer contractor who had access to the system produced the fake ticket and an accomplice turned it in. Lottery officials discovered the scheme several days later and recovered the money. Both men received jail terms after pleading guilty. The lottery has since beefed up its validation process, which can take days to complete.

A second set of computers must also validate the jackpot and the number of winning tickets before both become official, Scroggins said.

Reports circulated Thursday that winners from northwestern and southwestern Pennsylvania as well as New Jersey were set to claim shares of this week's jackpot. A family from New Jersey told reporters they had a winning ticket, and neighbors of two Erie County couples in northwestern Pennsylvania said the four share a ticket that is also a winner.

"Just fine, no problem," Mrs. Williams said when asked about having to share the jackpot.

Mrs. Williams came up with six of the numbers from a computer palm reader she had tried in an open air market during a Bahamas vacation with her husband, Charles, in March. Her mother provided the seventh number.

She was at a bowling alley near her Fort Montgomery, N.Y., home when her mother called her.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Roy Acuff, the 85-year-old "king of country music," would like to continue performing despite an earlier announcement that he's considering retiring, the general manager of the Grand Ole Opry says.

Acuff, best known for "The Wabash Cannonball," was honored earlier this week with a special humanitarian award at The Nashville Networks' Viewers' Choice Awards.

"I seem to be a burden on other people," the fiddler-singer said after receiving the award. "I have to be helped through the crowd like a baby. I have to be treated like a baby."

But Hal Durham, Opry general manager, said Acuff has told him he wants to remain on stage where he has performed for presidents and plumbers alike.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Lena Horne says she'd like to get married again, but doubts she can find a good match.

"The women's movement came a little late in my life," Ms. Horne, 71, says in the Sunday issue of Parade magazine.

"I find many women who don't have the need I do. They want to be independent, see somebody when they feel like it, maybe — but otherwise, a man is not convenient in their lives.

"I envy that, but I would like to be married," said Ms. Horne, whose husband, bandleader-arranger Lennie Hayton, died in 1971 after 24 years of marriage.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Marc Daniels, who directed the first 38 episodes of the "I Love Lucy" television series, has died at age 77.

Daniels died Sunday of congestive heart failure at St. John's Medical Center, three days before the death of Lucille Ball, star of the landmark comedy series. Miss Ball died of a ruptured abdominal aorta Wednesday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles.

Daniels and cinematographer Karl Freund pioneered the use of three cameras rather than one in filming "I Love Lucy," one of the most popular shows in television history. The system, implemented at the urging of the late Desi Arnaz, then Miss Ball's husband and co-star, allows a show to be filmed continuously and in sequence as though it were a stage play.

As a result, a show can be filmed in front of a live audience. The three-camera setup is still widely used.

Daniels worked on such other hit shows as "Gunsmoke," "Bonanza," "Star Trek," and "Hogan's Heroes."

He recalled in a 1977 interview that he left "Lucy" in 1952 after only one season to take another job that paid more.

"Maybe it was a stupid thing to do," he said. "But then we didn't know we were creating history. "We were just doing a show."

"This didn't go Karl's way," Utah coach Jerry Sloan said. "He'll play well next time. That will happen — you won't be perfect all the time."

Hawks 100, Bucks 92

Although Milwaukee slowed the tempo to its liking, it wasn't enough because Dominique Wilkins and Glenn Rivers got their rhythm with seven points each in the final 6:34. Atlanta is 7-0 against Milwaukee this season.

Rivers broke a 79-79 tie by hitting a free throw and referee Wally Rooney gave Bucks assistant coach Frank Hamblen a technical foul before Rivers could shoot his second free throw.

Reggie Theus made the technical shot and Rivers then added his second free throw, giving the Hawks an 82-79 lead.

Wilkins finished with 28 points and Moses Malone had 23. Jay Humphries scored 20 points to lead the Bucks.

"This game truly was a struggle, for us and them," Rivers said. "It was a war. They slowed the game to their style and you can't count on them missing all those free throws. We got kind of lucky."

Knicks 102, 76ers 96

Philadelphia, which won four of six games against the Knicks this season and the last two at New York, had its chances in the playoff opener. But the Knicks got a season-high 34 points from Gerald Wilkins and Patrick Ewing had 26.

The Knicks trailed 92-91 after rookie Hersey Hawkins' layup with 3:11 left, his only basket of the game. Ewing drove into the lane for the field goal that put the Knicks ahead for good. Wilkins, whose previous season high was 30 points on Nov. 15 at Houston, then made it 95-92 with a jumper with 2:08 left.

But Philadelphia was within a point and the shot clock was running down when Mark Jackson hit a 30-footer with 16 seconds left to clinch it.

"I realized the clock was winding down and they were swarming all over me," Jackson said. "So I got into my rhythm and just let go. I practice these shots every day but they do not come out as picture-perfect as this one."

Ron Anderson led the 76ers with 26 points, while Charles Barkley had 22 and Maurice Cheeks 19 and 16 assists.

"I didn't think the shot had a chance," Anderson said of Jackson's 3-pointer. "I don't think he thought it had a chance, either. He said his prayers before he shot it."

Tonight, it's Boston at Detroit, Seattle at Houston, Chicago at Cleveland and Denver at Phoenix.

But Peters supplied the decider in the 10th as Mark Doran beat out a hot shot off third baseman Dave Hollins' glove to lead off and moved to second on John Orton's sacrifice. Gary DiSarcina was purposely passed by Jim Lewis, who had relieved Oliveres to start the ninth, and Peters drilled his liner a few yards inside the line to left.

"He (Lewis) got behind and had to come to me," Peters said, admitting that up until then, it had been a long night at the plate.

DORAN FELT he might have been overly aggressive in the fourth when he came in fast on Hollins' sinking liner to center. "The ball just hopped over my shoulder and the "single" not only plated a run, but went for three bases.

"But that's just the way I play. I've always been aggressive."

Craig Cooper's sac fly got Hollins home to tie it at 2.

Midland's two runs in the second came on singles by Cron, Vargas and Everett Graham and Doran's RBI grounder to short.

Patience pays for Purtzer

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Patience, a difficult commodity to come by for Tom Purtzer, is starting to pay off.

"I've had to struggle with it all my career. But I've had good patience the last couple of days," the 37-year-old veteran said Thursday after taking a share of the second-round lead in the $1.25 million Las Vegas Invitational.

Purtzer birdied his last hole at the Las Vegas Country Club course to finish with a 66 and tie Billy Glasson for the lead after 36 holes of the five-day, 90-hole tournament.

Glasson, winner of the Doral Open earlier this year, shot 67 at the Desert Inn, one of three courses used for the first three days of the event, and also completed two rounds in 132, 12 under par.

"You have to consider this like the first round. You've played well, but there's still 54 holes to go," said Scott Hoch, tied with Dr. Gil Morgan at 133.

Hoch, who lost a playoff for the Masters title when he missed a two-foot putt earlier this month, shot a 64 despite missing twice from four feet at Spanish Trail.

"If I'd had a good putting day, there's no telling what I could have shot," Hoch said. "But, hey, I shoot 64 and you can't complain about that."

Morgan birdied six of his first eight holes at the Las Vegas Country Club and admitted he was thinking about the possibility of shooting in the 50s when he stood on the ninth tee.

"At that point, it was possible," he said. But he played the back in 33 and finished with a 63 that ranked as the best round of the tournament.

Gene Sauers, winner of the Hawaiian Open earlier this year, was alone at 134 after a 69 at Las Vegas.

At 135 were Dan Pohl, Robert Wrenn, Robin Freeman, David Peoples, Chris Perry, Brad Bryant, Rick Pearson and Steve Pate.

People, Perry and Pate shot 69, Bryant and Pearson 68 and Freeman 66, all at Las Vegas. Pohl shot 66 and Pearson 68, both at Desert Inn. Wrenn shot 66 at Spanish Trail.

Hale Irwin, the 44-year-old veteran who shared the first-round lead, shot 74 at Las Vegas for a 139 total.

Snead, Goalby lead Legends

AUSTIN (AP) — A month short of his 77th birthday, Sam Snead was scheduled to play in today's second round of the Legends of Golf tournament after injuring his back en route to a six-under-par 64 with teammate Bob Goalby.

"We played on blood and guts today, I'll tell you that," Goalby said of the team's performance Thursday in the opening round of the two-man, better ball event.

"For the guy to play like he was hurting, he deserves a lot of credit," Goalby said.

Snead birdied the par-five first hole of the 6,367-yard Onion Creek Club course and the par-four 12th, while Goalby made four other birdies in their round.

Goalby said Snead's back has been sore for some time, noting that Snead had withdrawn after four holes at this year's Masters.

Panhandle finals Texas Eastern buyout

HOUSTON (AP) — Panhandle Eastern Corp. completed its $3.2 billion buyout of Texas Eastern Corp., putting an end to a hostile takeover attempt for Texas Eastern from Coastal Corp.

Thursday's announcement of the merger of Panhandle Eastern and Texas Eastern will result in the nation's second-largest pipeline company in terms of miles at 27,000. Houston-based Enron Corp. is the largest with 38,000 miles of pipe.

Panhandle Eastern has access to large mid-continent supplies of natural gas, including Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and the Gulf of Mexico, and also operates a large liquefied natural gas facility in Lake Charles, La.

The company also has connections to Canadian gas through the Northern Border Pipeline while Texas Eastern has access to the rapidly growing New England natural gas market.

Panhandle Eastern said it has accepted payment for about 81 percent of outstanding Texas Eastern shares.

Preliminary results indicate that about 57 million Texas Eastern shares were validly tendered and not withdrawn prior to the midnight Wednesday expiration of Panhandle Eastern's tender offer, of which 14.4 million shares were tendered pursuant to notices of guaranteed delivery.

The company expects that about 85.6 percent of the tendered shares will be purchased on a pro-rata basis in the tender offer. However, the exact percentage will not be known until final results of the tender offer are computed, which the company expects to be completed by May 8. Shares accepted for payment will be paid for promptly after that time.

Panhandle Eastern's offer included provisions to buy up to 80 percent of Texas Eastern's 60.8 million outstanding shares and a stock exchange at the same $53-per-share value for the remaining shares.

The battle for Texas Eastern began Jan. 16 when Coastal announced its surprise takeover bid. But the Panhandle Eastern board rejected the $2.6 billion offer as too low, signing the merger agreement with Panhandle Eastern instead on Feb. 21.

All three natural gas companies are based in Houston.

Coastal spokesman Robert W. Wells said the company would tender its 2.5 million shares of Texas Eastern common stock.

Panhandle Eastern reported assets of $3 billion and operating revenues of $1.3 billion in 1988.

About 500 jobs to be lost

HOUSTON (AP) — About 500 corporate staff and other headquarters office jobs will be eliminated after Panhandle Eastern Corp. completes its acquisition of Texas Eastern Corp., Panhandle Eastern Chairman Robert D. Hunsucker said.

The cutbacks are needed to reduce operating costs of the combined organization, and affect more than 20 percent of both companies' Houston-based work force, Hunsucker said Wednesday.

Panhandle Eastern began buying shares of Texas Eastern stock Thursday after the Federal Trade Commission cleared the way for the two Houston-based natural gas companies to proceed with their corporate merger.

The combination of the two pipeline companies will create a 27,000-mile system, the nation's second-largest in total miles.

Panhandle Eastern agreed to pay $53 a share in cash for 48.5 million Texas Eastern common shares, or 80 percent of outstanding stock, and exchange the remaining shares at the same price.

Deep discounter tries Midland

Tuesday Morning opens four times a year

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Movies like "Rocky Horror Picture Show" and bands like "Grateful Dead" have developed "cult" followings, though they may get little public exposure.

The same goes for a chain of deep discount gift stores called Tuesday Morning, which opened a store in Midland Thursday.

"We've kind of an underground store," notes Jack Phelps, vice president and director of stores for the Dallas-based chain. "In the early days, we became known by word-of-mouth."

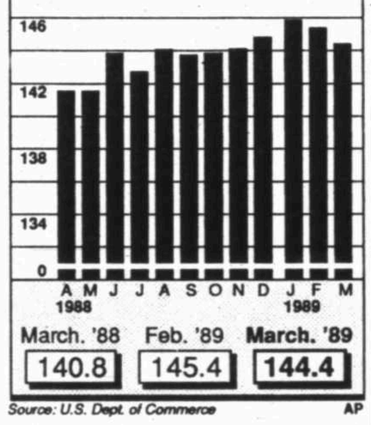

Founded in 1972 by Lloyd Ross, who had always wanted his own company named after a day of the week, he chose Tuesday Morning because it's "the first positive day of the week." His company doesn't operate like other retail operations.

For one thing, the store is open only four times a year, during peak retail selling seasons. In 1989, the stores will open from February 16 to March 19, April 27 to June 18, August 17 to September 24, and from October 26 to December 31.

Indicator index off .7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge plunged 0.7 percent in March, the second straight decline and the biggest drop in eight months, the Commerce Department said today.

It was the first time the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, which dropped 0.3 percent in February, had posted back-to-back declines since it fell for five straight months from September 1987 through January 1988, the months surrounding the October stock market crash.

While many analysts feared that the nation was headed for a recession after the market collapse, the economy rebounded with vigor and the record peacetime expansion is now in its seventh year.

Retirement counselor lends advice

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Andrew "Andy" Cooper III's job begins where others end.

His well-rewarded, full-time job is helping retirees live comfortably and securely by conservatively investing their retirement funds.

"The primary objective of retirement is to be comfortable," said Cooper, the 42-year-old chief of the Cooper Network, a nationwide affiliation of brokers who watch over and invest retirees' funds, such as stocks, pensions, savings, and profit-sharing interests.

And to reach that ideal "comfortable" state, Cooper's objective for the retirees, typically corporate managers is "to re-create the (pay) check" while not chipping away at the capital.

"They retire with substantial pools of capital," Cooper said Thursday in Midland just before he was to give an educational seminar sponsored by Shearson Lehman Hutton. "And they don't have to accommodate much risk."

A client's account under his Network's management may be as low as $100,000 but averages $300,000 to $400,000.

"A lot of our clients, particularly here in Midland, already retire with a substantial amount of their money in stock — (from) companies like Unocal, Chevron, Texaco or Mobil," Cooper said.

Cooper, who is one of the foremost authorities in retirement investments, last year moved his San Francisco-based Cooper Network to Shearson Lehman Hutton from Dean Witter Reynolds "only because we thought we could do a much better job."

In Midland, many retirement accounts may be in the $40,000-to-$600,000 range, said W. Keith Wood, a Shearson Lehman Hutton broker-vice president in Midland.

"The reason it's high, Midland is the white-collar of the management of the oil industry, and their salaries are typically higher," Wood noted. Others who also have managed well come from the working class.

"The wealth of this community comes from long-term application to occupations and to hard work," said Wood.

And when they reach retirement age, their objective is to "enjoy the fruit of their labors," noted Wood.

"It's important that the fruit do the work for them," Wood said. "That's the source of their revenue." Cooper's management concept is to maintain the "integrity of those dollars," Wood said.

Governor signs plastic law

AUSTIN (SWN) — Gov. Bill Clements has signed into law a plastic container coding bill which will encourage increased recycling of plastics and create a new industry in Texas.

"The new law to code plastic containers will ease sorting and recovery of high-value plastics, opening the door for a whole new business opportunity – recycling plastics," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who proposed the bill.

Senate Bill 444 by Sen. Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria, was passed unanimously in the Senate last month and given overwhelming approval in the House of Representatives.

Hance: Bush speech on target

AUSTIN (SWN) — Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance said Thursday that President Bush's speech Wednesday was "right on target, and offers a much needed boost to the energy industry in Texas." In his address to a joint session of the Texas Legislature, President Bush focused on the importance of the oil and gas industry to the Texas economy. Commissioner Hance said he was more optimistic than ever before after hearing the President reinforce his commitment to the energy industry.

Hance

"This President recognizes that energy is the cornerstone of our economy, and his goals and methodology will provide a shot in the arm to our ailing independent producers in Texas" Hance said. Hance said the tax incentives which Bush proposed coupled with sustained oil price stability should spur additional exploration and drilling activity once again. Hance praised Bush for his statement that dependence upon foreign oil is a national security threat. "I have been greatly concerned over our growing dependence upon foreign oil and am heartened that the President is making this a priority," Hance said. In addition, the President pledged to continue pushing for complete decontrol of natural gas. Hance indicated he now believes that with Bush's support, deregulation of natural gas will pass the Congress. "This will provide great incentive and opportunity for Texas natural gas producers" Hance said.

The U.S. has become increasingly dependent upon foreign sources of oil and gas, and has imported almost fifty percent of it's crude oil needs in recent months. Hance pointed out that our drilling rig count is extremely low and that the United States today produces one million fewer barrels of oil than it did just three short years ago. While U.S. production is dropping, the nation's energy consumption continues to increase. Chairman Hance concluded by saying "the way to solve the import problem is to strengthen our domestic energy industry, and to formulate a national energy plan designed to meet our nation's future energy needs."

Dollar stable in thin trading

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was stable in thin European trading today as the market settled down before a long holiday weekend.

Gold prices were lower.

Traders said they expected the dollar to stay in a narrow trading range unless the U.S. index of leading indicators, the only significant economic news to be announced today, provided surprising news.

Most traders expected the index to show a drop in March of about 0.5 percent, following a decline of 0.3 percent in February.

In London, one British pound cost $1.6922, more expensive for buyers than $1.6905 late Thursday.

Other dollar rates in Europe compared with late Thursday:

—1.8763 West German marks, up from 1.8756

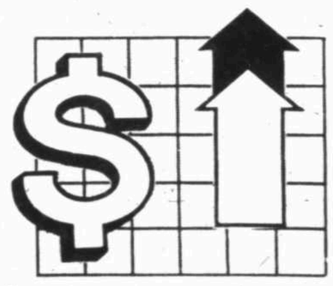

—1.6625 Swiss francs, up from 1.6585

—6.3440 French francs, down from 6.3455

—2.1155 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1150

—1,373.25 Italian lire, down from 1,373.50

—1.1895 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1940

Earlier, the dollar rose in Tokyo to 132.49 Japanese yen from 132.05 yen at Thursday's close. Later, in London, the dollar edged up further to 132.70 yen.

Gold fell in Zurich to $380.50 a troy ounce, from $384.25 late Thursday.

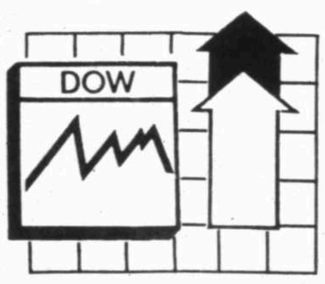

In London, the metal opened at $381.50 a troy ounce, down from a $384.25 late Thursday. At mid-morning, the city's bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $381.30.

Silver bullion dipped in London to $5.63 a troy ounce, down from $5.76 bid late Thursday.

Stocks set new post-crash high

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied Thursday in buying ascribed to hopes for favorable news on the inflation outlook.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 29.88 points to 2,418.99, a new high since the crash in October, 1987. Its previous recovery peak had been 2,409.46 last Friday.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,021 up, 485 down and 459 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 191.17 million shares, up from 146.09 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 226.18 million shares.

House panel wants thrifts to pay more

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking Committee voted to make savings and loan owners put nearly $13 billion more of their own money at risk as the price for a $90 billion federal bailout but gave them 3½ more years than President Bush wants to do it.

Eleven Republicans on Thursday joined all but four Democrats in a 36-15 vote to delay until January 1995 the June 1991 deadline that Bush had proposed for S&Ls to come up with 3 percent "hard cash" capital — or $3 for every $100 they lend.

Separately, federal regulators took over four more insolvent S&Ls in three states, bringing the total under government control to 220 in 32 states.

Eastern leases 14 jets to Pan Am

MIAMI (AP) — Strikebound Eastern Airlines, three days after outlining a plan for cutting $1.8 billion in assets, announced a deal to lease 14 Boeing 727-200 planes to rival Pan American World Airways.

The $96.6 million, 5-year lease announced Thursday gives Pan Am an option to extend the lease or buy the planes at a price to be negotiated.

The agreement must be approved by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York, which has had oversight of such deals since Eastern filed March 9 for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization.

RJR Nabisco relocating to Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — RJR Nabisco Inc. will move its headquarters to the metropolitan New York area from Atlanta, the food and tobacco giant announced shortly after shareholders approved the record $24.53 billion buyout of the company by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.

RJR Nabisco said Thursday its new chairman, Louis Gerstner Jr., sent a letter to employees saying relocations could begin by early summer and would be completed by the end of the year.

Some existing corporate functions may be reassigned to RJR Nabisco's operating companies.

Aunt Jemima getting updated look

CHICAGO (AP) — Aunt Jemima, the robust matriarch of pancake products, is getting a new hairdo in her first makeover in 20 years, but her reassuring smile will stay the same, officials at Quaker Oats Co. said.

Quaker said Thursday it is trading her headband for soft, curly, gray-streaked hair and pearl earrings in a bid to update the 100-year-old trademark. Aunt Jemima also was given a new lace collar.

INDEX

Analysts said the latest negative signals from the leading index are in line with signs that the U.S. economy is losing steam and with widespread expectations that the slowdown will become more pronounced as the year progresses.

The debate among economists is whether the end result will be an outright recession or a so-called "soft landing," in which growth slows just enough to relieve inflationary pressures without bringing a halt to the expansion.

The economy expanded at a strong 3.5 percent annual rate during the first three months of the year, but the growth in the gross national product was a more modest 3 percent, discounting a statistical quirk reflecting the bounce back from last year's drought.

That was down somewhat from the drought-adjusted 3.5 percent pace for the final quarter of 1988. Monthly reports on the economy's performance in February and March suggested a progressive weakening during the first quarter.

"The underlying growth rate in the economy is much below last year and the risks of a recession certainly are higher," said economist Sandra Shaber of the Futures Group in Washington. "To be a prudent planner, you have to take those risks into account."

March's decline in the leading index, which is designed to predict economic activity six to nine months into the future, was the biggest falloff since a 0.8 percent drop last July.

Personal savings continue to mount

New York Times News Service

Americans continued in March to add tens of billions of dollars to their personal savings, the Commerce Department reported Thursday — thereby challenging the notion that the nation knows only how to spend, not save.

The March report provided the latest evidence that Americans may have reversed their habit of spending nearly all their income.

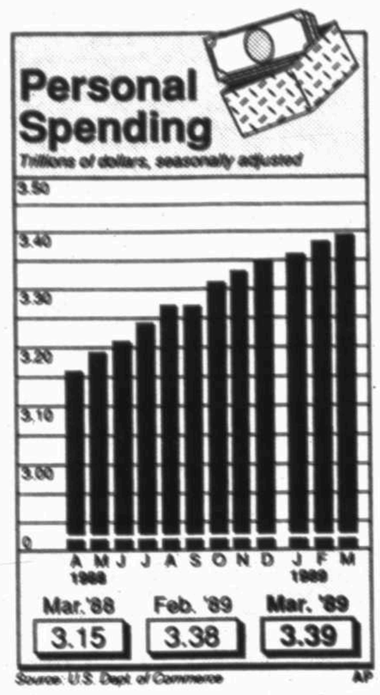

The report showed that income grew at nearly four times the rate of consumer spending, and that savings therefore moved up smartly.

Since 1987 — the low point of the last two decades — the savings rate has risen steadily and, in the first quarter of 1989, it began to approach levels more characteristic of the 1970s.

"We've seen a turning around," said James J. O'Leary, an economist at the United States Trust Co. "Americans are becoming more savings minded, and the question now is whether they'll sustain the savings."

The statistics themselves do not answer this question. The savings increase reflects a slowdown in consumer buying, one that is partly a result of rising interest rates in the last year that has discouraged borrowing for large purchases.

Some economists say that if rates were to decline, the spending might resume. But others argue that the huge consumer outlays earlier in this decade are not likely to be matched again soon.

Newspaper executives more optimistic

New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — Representatives of some of the nation's largest newspaper companies expressed guarded optimism on Thursday that advertising sales would increase and profits would be solid for the rest of 1989 after a sluggish first quarter.

The projections were made at the annual John Morton Forum, at which public newspaper companies make presentations to media analysts from various financial institutions. John Morton is a newspaper specialist for Lynch, Jones & Ryan, a Washington brokerage firm.

Though the outlook varied from company to company, a common thread was intense cost consciousness. For example, P. Anthony Ridder, president of the newspaper division of Knight-Ridder Inc., said the company's papers had been instructed to make whatever expense cuts necessary to meet budgets.

The executives expressed confidence in the future of newspapers. Evidence of this confidence is the capital investment of hundreds of millions of dollars that some newspapers are making in presses and other improvements despite the current squeeze on advertising.

Industry leaders said that although newspapers were still the nation's leading outlet for advertising expenditures, advertising revenues were growing more slowly than they did in the mid-1980s, largely because of increased competition, consolidation in the ownership of big advertisers like department stores and depressed economic conditions, especially in some parts of Texas and the Northeast.

Over all, spending on newspaper advertising grew about 6 percent in 1988 and is expected to grow by about the same amount in 1989, according to the Newspaper Advertising Bureau.

Advertising sales vary greatly by newspaper. Peter R. Kann, publisher of The Wall Street Journal, said advertising linage was off 11 percent in the first quarter, largely because of a decline in financial-services advertising that began with the stock market crash in October 1987.

Bush budget focuses on military

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Bush administration's effort to reduce the budget deficit, seen as a source of national economic weakness, is coming to focus on cutting military spending, with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney leading the attack on the budget.

This week Cheney proposed $10 billion in cuts, spread widely among the services. These would result from delaying production of the B-2 Stealth bomber for a year; trimming funds for the Strategic Defense Initiative; eliminating 60 of the Navy's F-14D fighters; dropping one attack submarine and retiring the aircraft carrier Coral Sea; reducing Army troops by 8,000; canceling the Marine Corps' Osprey aircraft; suspending 80 percent of the Pentagon's financing for the development of a National Aerospace Plane, and other cuts.

This is, in effect, the Chinese torture of a thousand cuts. Inevitably, many members of Congress are complaining about cuts they fear will hurt industries and jobs in their districts. Yet the warm reception Cheney got from the House Armed Services Committee suggests that much of what he is proposing will go through.

But the question many military experts are asking is whether Cheney's politically astute way of spreading a limited amount of pain among the services and congressional districts adds up to a strategy that will best serve the nation's strategic and economic interests in the longer run.

No consensus exists among the experts and former Defense officials on how to cut the military budget more deeply without impairing American or Western security.

John F. Lehman Jr., who as Navy secretary during the Reagan years championed building to a 600-ship Navy, now proposes to save money by shifting about one-third of active forces and their equipment to reserve status.

Richard A. Stubbing, who worked on the military and intelligence budget for 20 years and is now a professor at Duke University, regards the Lehman proposal with profound skepticism.

He contends that the largest area for potential savings, without weakening forces, is in military procurement. He has spelled the needed reforms out in a book, "The Defense Game," just published by Harper & Row.

Stubbing notes that Robert Costello, the Pentagon's top procurement official, has made public his view that the Defense Department wastes 20 to 30 cents of every dollar it spends. That would be $50 billion a year — an estimate that Stubbing regards as conservative.

ADVICE

Cooper brings a fresh air to this (investment) thing," Wood said. It's obviously marketed. At the same time, it's built on service — building a relationship with his clients."

And that relationship is designed for "comfort and security."

Wood likened Cooper's expertise to that of a physician.

"The doctor takes care of the physical side, and we try to help that person take care of the financial side," Wood said. "It does have a humanitarian need. That's one part that drives a lot of us into this business. That's a big part of what drives him."

Cooper is driven by a passion.

"Money is not the main motivation," said Cooper. "I don't have time to spend it. I don't have the lifestyle."

To him, the business has "become a passion," he said. "It's a lot of fun. The real fun is meeting people and getting more people involved in it." And the growth of the program is addicting.

"That's where it really becomes enjoyable," Cooper said. "It's not so much the portfolio growing as people enjoying their retirement.

"Our responsibility is not to make them a fortune," said Cooper. "That's hardly it."

"They are less interested in an extra percentage point or having it grow substantially than they are in having it safe as to return on their principal," said Cooper, whose confident but unassuming demeanor seems to match his conservative-investment philosophy.

Cooper noted that his clients' "circumstances dictate what you should be doing" with their investment portfolios.

"They are no longer working. They are not getting paid by the company anymore. They don't want to go back to work for another 35 years, ... so they are safety-conscious.

"It's truly a different stage in their life. With people living as long as they are nowadays and being as healthy as they are in their older age, they might very well be retired as as long as they worked for the company."

Cooper works with his sister and brother, David, an articulate, intelligent investment consultant whom Cooper calls "the pick of the litter" in the Cooper clan. The Wall Street Journal reported in 1988 that Cooper and his brother in 1987 generated $6 million in revenues for their management expertise and got 40 percent of the revenue. In 1987, according to another source, Cooper's Network managed about $700 million in assets at Dean Witter and generated $12 million to $13 million in revenue.

Investments for retirees can be done is a "down-right dull fashion to get 9½, 10 percent interest very conservatively," Cooper said. "And if somebody tell them they can get 17 percent, the education they need is that the difference between 9½ and 17 is not merely 7½. It's called 'risk.'

"People who retire are looking for someone to trust," Cooper said. "Someone who is objective. Someone who is a seer. Someone who is honest."

BUYOUT

For the first quarter of 1989, the company reported profits of $33 million, down 69 percent from $106.9 million in the same period a year ago. The decrease was blamed on a decline in the earnings of its gas transmission operations. Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. and Trunkline Gas Co.

Texas Eastern, with $5 billion in assets, is involved in natural gas and petroleum products, pipeline and international oil and gas exploration and production. It also refines and markets petroleum products at wholesale and is involved in real estate projects.

For the first quarter of 1989, the company posted a 97 percent increase in earnings partly because of an $11.6 million settlement in a pipeline project. The company had earnings of $57.5 million for the quarter.

During Panhandle Eastern's stockholder meeting Wednesday, Chairman Robert D. Hunsucker said about 500 corporate staff and other headquarters office jobs would be eliminated after the merger.

The cutbacks are needed to reduce operating costs of the combined organization, and affect more than 20 percent of both companies' work force, Hunsucker said.

Panhandle Eastern began buying shares of Texas Eastern stock Thursday after the Federal Trade Commission cleared the way for the two companies to proceed with their corporate merger.

DISCOUNT

Labor costs are lower because each store only has one full-time employee — the manager. As many as 12 sales clerks will be hired during the selling months, while only four or five will remain to help with inventory and stocking merchandise while the store is closed.

The chain also places its stores in less high-traffic areas, such as strip centers or warehouse areas where retail space is less expensive. Because overhead is kept so low, Phelps says the Midland store "can make money with annual sales as low as $400,000. I expect this store will make $600,000 to $800,000, though."

What sets Tuesday Morning apart from other deep discounters like Pick and Save is that the chain concentrates on first-quality gift items at 50 to 80 percent off retail price. "We are the only people in the world doing what we do," Phelps claims. "We're the only ones who discount gift items."

This gives Tuesday Morning its own little niche, apart from the other deep discounters, and apart from other retailers like Neiman-Marcus, Bloomingdales or Dillards. "I don't think we have them quaking in their boots that we're here," he observes. "Sure, we may take away some of their business, but because our scope is so narrow, we won't really have that much of an impact."

Because the company buys merchandise that could be found in Bloomingdales, Neiman-Marcus, Macy's or Dillards, Phelps says his target customer "has to know that $200 for a piece of Hartman luggage is a bargain. We don't have to tell them about Anne Klein clutches or Perry Ellis scarves are worth."

The prototypical Tuesday Morning customer is female 25 years-old and up, a professional or married to a professional, college educated and medium to upper income.

The strength of the business is its mailing list, which currently contains 1.8 million names. It was the mailing list that prompted the company to place a store in Midland. "The main reason we're here is we have over 200 names from Midland, people who've driven to El Paso or Dallas to shop at our stores," Phelps says. "People said we were crazy to put a store in Midland, the demographics weren't there. But I know people will drive to Midland from a 50-mile radius to shop."

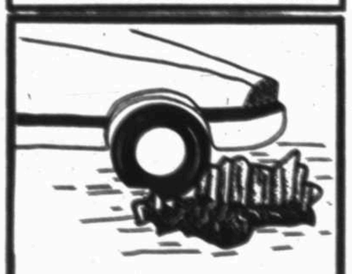

If the mailing list is Tuesday Morning's strength, its backbone is direct advertising. Customers on the list are notified three days in advance before the store opens, and know to arrive early to get the best bargains. The chain also advertises heavily. Phelps estimates the company spends 5 to 6 percent of gross revenues in advertising yearly.

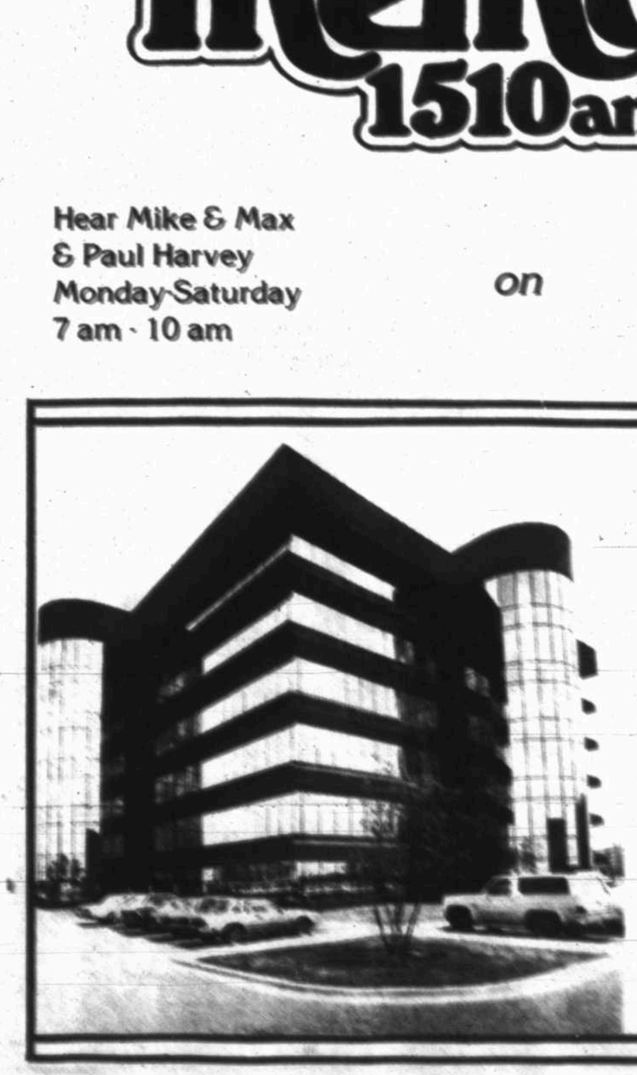

Despite the Tall City's battered economy, he remains confident opening here is a good choice. After all, he points out, "Midlanders still like fine things."

American Home Week to be celebrated

Local Realtors join nationwide effort

Kay Sutton

Realtors across the nation will be celebrating American Home Week April 30 through May 6. Governor Clements has declared this week as American Home Week, declaring that "American Home Week celebrates freedom to own private property, the importance of protecting the rights accompanying this ownership, and the awareness of the value of improving such property.

Each year, members of the National Association of Realtors call attention to the importance of private property rights by celebrating this week."

"In celebration of American Home Week, the Midland Board of Realtors, Inc. is joining the National Association of Realtors in the theme of "Creating a Nation of Neighbors," explained Kay Sutton, Midland Board of Realtors president.

"Many of the Realtors in Midland are banning together in a variety of ways — the Clean Midland Campaign, Christmas in April, American Heart Association teleparty and a Las Vegas Night — to celebrate this week in Midland."

To kick off the events leading up to American Home Week, Midland Realtors answered the telephone for the Clean Midland Campaign, of Keep Midland Beautiful, from April 3-14.

"This program enables Midland residents to call and request items they want to have removed from their property," said Pat Bernard, chairman of American Home Week. "This includes almost everything, from tree limbs to old appliances and approximately 800 calls were made this year."

On April 8, Midland Realtors joined in the Keep Midland Beautiful "Glad Bag-A-Thon" by helping with trash pick up along the railroad right-of-way along Highway 80 at Front Street and Main.

Donations of money, toilet items, sweatsuits and stuffed animals for the Victim Assistance Program were made to the Midland district attorney's office from many Midland Realtors.

"The donations go to innocent victims of violent crime who are in need of assistance with medical expenses or wages, which are lost due to victimization. They are given emotional support and are able to have questions about their case or the criminal justice system answered. Referrals are also made to assisting agencies when needed," stated Sutton.

Christmas in April will again find Midland Realtors painting and repairing a house at 711 S. Tilden on April 29. The improvements made to the home will include painting, adding storm doors, repairing plumbing problems and cleaning up the debris and mowing the lawn.

On May 2-4, Realtors will join in an American Heart Association teleparty, manning 10 telephone lines for donations for three hours each evening.

"All donations from the teleparty will go toward the research dedication to the prevention of premature death and disability from cardiovascular diseases, including heart attack and stroke," stated Bernard.

On May 6, from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., MBR members, in conjunction with Allison Cancer Clinic, will be in the community booth at Midland Park Mall. Realtors will help with voter registration, distribute American Heart Association literature and providing a free blood pressure screening.

American Home Week activities in Midland will end on a very positive note with a Las Vegas Night Party on May 13. All monies received from the event will go to the Narressa Clark Medical Trust Fund Account.

Narressa suffers from a life threatening disease called cavernous transformation of the portal veins. Narressa is the 6-year-old daughter of an affiliate member of the Midland Board of Realtors, Inc., Malcom Clark and his wife Lenora.

Dave Perkins of KODM will be the celebrity personality for the evening, and will host the auction which will raise additional money for Narressa.

The Midland Board of Realtors, Inc. urges all Realtors and affiliate members to be involved in the American Home Week activities and celebrate our private property rights.

Homeowners are still protected by private property rights

"No person shall be...deprived of life, liberty or property with out due process of law." These words from the Bill of Rights guarantee the security of homeownership, as do the basic rights to own, transfer and use real property.

Today, however, many laws and judicial decisions are more protective of public interest, often at the expense of private property rights.

These laws were enacted for many different reasons and the degree of erosion of private property rights that results from them also varies.

Resistance to the infringement of private property rights was instrumental in the founding of America. Through the years excessive government interference — whether intentional or not — has eroded the rights inherent in private property ownership.

In honor of American Home Week, April 30-May 6, the Midland Board of Realtors offers the following information in private property rights and encourages the citizens of Midland to join on the celebration of these right, as well as recognizing that with property rights comes the responsibility to protect them.

The concept of private property rights evolved from English common law which, to a large degree, was patterned after ancient Roman laws and has stood the test of time and courts. They believed that the acquisition, possession and protection of property was an essential, natural and inalienable right.

The American Revolutionary War took place, in part, because the colonist found that certain acts of Parliament were infringing on private property rights.

The full rights of ownership we enjoy today include the basic right to possess, control, enjoy and dispose of real property. The property must be sold, traded, given away, or willed to someone. The owner is free to use the home him or herself, rent it or allow someone else to use it.

However, we do not always have the absolute right to exercise these rights as freely as we may wish. Just as most property is subject to some limitations, so are property rights controlled by some necessary restrictions. These restrictions may be thought of as "protections" that enhance property and safeguard its value.

American property rights and privileges are limited or restricted by four powers of government's rights to tax property based upon assessed value of the property and the annual tax rate in the district.

The power of eminent domain is taking private property in the public interest. "Just compensation" is required when property is so appropriated.

Police power is the right of the government to regulate property for the protection of the public's safety, health, morals and general welfare. Zoning laws, housing restrictions, building codes and subdivision controls are examples of regulations based upon the police power of government.

The fourth power, escheat, is the right to have ownership of property returned to the state when the owner dies without a will or known heirs.

Today, government bodies and quasi-government organizations still take some rights from private property owners with benefit of due process of law and many times without just compensation.

"All residents should be aware of local government regulations affecting private property," said Kay Sutton, president of the Midland Board of Realtors.

"You can do so by attending city council meetings and becoming familiar with local property issues such as zoning actions, taxation, and the enforcement of regulations that affect private property owners," she added.

The Midland Board of Realtors also encourages you to check out political candidates for their positions on private property rights and exercise your right to vote.

According to Sutton, "The importance of private property rights lie in being aware of the preciousness of those rights and in the recognition of the need for their preservation and protection."

Carmen Eiker, June Martin, Susan Bettertom and Nelda Abernathy, left, are making phone solicitations for the American Heart Association teleparty May 6-9.

Real estate sales should be handled by Realtors

Just as every copier is not a Xerox, and not every tissue is a Kleenex, everyone handling real estate transactions is not a Realtor.

Ask a friend: What is a Realtor? Most people will answer "a person in the real estate business" — which is only partly true.

A Realtor is a professional in the real estate business who subscribes to a strict code of ethics as a member of the local board of Realtors, the Texas Association of Realtors and the National Association of Realtors. The term Realtor is an established, registered trademark. Both the home buyer and seller can have confidence in those who have earned the right to use the trademark because only a person who has qualified for membership may do so.

But most important, if your transaction are conducted with Realtors, you will know that they are pledged to strict business conduct in their relations with each other and their relations with the public.

Buying or selling a home, land, investment or business property can be a trying and frustrating experience. Most people are not experts on property value, financing, nor are they aware of the latest developments in real estate contracts. Realtors are specially trained to do this job for you. Here are just a few of the services they provide:

- Expertise on property values.
- Experience in the best way to expose your property to customers.
- Effective sales techniques which stress the strongest qualities about your property.
- Knowledge about which financing terms are available.
- Advice on preparing the property for sale and suggesting improvements which are not costly, but would be most helpful.
- Wider exposure for the property if the Realtor is a member of the local board's Multiple Listing Service.

As a member of the Midland Board of Realtors, Inc., a Realtor is the best professional because of experience and ethics, as well as continuous education on real estate matters.

Permian Basin Home Builders to host '89 Parade of Homes

The 1989 Parade of Homes is an effort of the Permian Basin Home Builders Association to educate the public on the building industry and the important role home building lends to the local economy, according to James Rasnick, PBHBA President.

"This year's parade was made possible through the joint efforts of six dedicated builders and the support of Texas American Bank" Rasnick said.

"Home building is like the oil industry in many ways. We are at the mercy of high interest rates and an economic downturn. Home builders like oil professionals have to be flexible and adjust themselves to various trends and changes within their market".

"Promotional opportunities such as the Parade of Homes allows home builders and subcontractors the opportunity to stimulate interest in new construction as well as highlighting new innovative elements in the building industry. The PBHBA's sole purpose is to unite local building professionals in order to maintain quality and high standards in new construction in our area" Rasnick reported.

According to national statistics, new home construction accounts for 10-to-12 percent of the local economy. Each time a new home is constructed the local economy benefits through the cost of materials, the property, labor and equipment. Additionally, each home will stimulate $3000 in business through new or expanded schooling, churches, road and highway improvements, community facilities and the expansion of utilities. Another $1000 is generated by service industries which include the commissions paid to real estate brokers, closing costs, land surveyor fees and real estate transfer taxes paid by both state and federal governments.

Jim Rasnick

As President of PBHBA, Rasnick says, "The question that I am asked the most has to do with the reason new homes sell so well. I think the reason for this is due to the building industry continually upgrades the quality on newly constructed homes — through expanded knowledge, the development of higher quality building materials, more efficient equipment recognized through various research projects and last but not least, public demand."

"Higher ceilings are now aiding more open designs in new construction. Better street appeal is due to higher pitch roofs, expensive front doors and the elaborate brick work going into new homes. This greater appeal means a faster resale for the owners."

Additional improvements include lower maintenance 100 percent brick construction, metal garage doors, aluminum windows and clad door systems. All these reduce maintenance and provide for a better warranty program on the newly constructed home, Rasnick concluded.

Suggestions given for relocating families

There's little doubt that Americans are on the move. Whether moving from an apartment to a home, apartment to apartment or home to home, moving is no simple matter. With careful planning, however, your transition can be facilitated in an organized and efficient manner allowing you the peace of mind you need to prepare to settle into your home. The following moving tips are provided by the Midland Board of Realtors.

Planning should begin at least one month in advance. Confirm with your real estate agent your closing date before scheduling your moving date. If you are renting, confirm your move-in date. Make a list of all records that must be transferred to a new location, such as children's school records, financial and medical records, and plan accordingly.

Whether moving two blocks or 2,000 miles, decide what must go with you. This may be a good time for a serious cleaning of the closets or the basement where you've been storing your "valuables." It can be expensive and time-consuming to move things you really don't need, or worse, to find that there's no place to put them in your new home. If you are disposing of a large number of items, consider holding a garage or moving sale to offset some of your moving expenses. If you're donating items to charitable organizations, ask for a receipt for tax purposes.

Send change of address cards, available free at the post office, to magazine publishers and organizations with which you are affiliated. Most magazines request four to six weeks notice. Provide change of address notice on credit card bills and leave forwarding instructions with the post office. Let your friends and neighbors know of your new address. This also is a good time to request help you may need with packing and moving. If you are moving yourself, schedule a moving party, providing pizza and beverages for anyone who can help.

Take inventory of borrowed ore lent items. Return what is not yours and retrieve your items. Mailing that hedge trimmer across miles to its owner will be expensive as well as a nightmare to package. Dispose of flammable liquids such as gasoline or oil. Is there gasoline in your lawn mover?

Two weeks before you move, contact your local utility companies to advise of a date to disconnect service. Arrange for utility service in your new home. Clear up outstanding accounts, particularly if you are leaving the area. Plan carefully for the transfer of checking and savings accounts. Open an account in advance in your new community so you have access to money but make sure your old account stays open until all checks have cleared.

If you are driving a distance, service your car before you move. Car problems are in an unfamiliar community can be troublesome. This is also a good time to make appointments with doctors and dentists, arranging for a final check-up and discussion of potential problems of which to advise a new doctor.

Begin packing early, particularly those items seldom used. If you have hired a moving company, request boxes and packing paper. A local grocery or drug store is a good source for boxes for the do-it-yourselfer mover. Ask for boxes in advance. Smaller stores may receive shipments only once a week and will only give boxes away if you are there at a specified time to pick them up. Collect both larger and smaller boxes, keeping in mind that filling a larger box with books or records will make moving them difficult, at best. Photocopy paper boxes make excellent moving boxes because of their strength and well-fitting lids. If you do not have access to such boxes, check with friends. Large offices empty these boxes on a daily basis.

Have plenty of packing supplies handy. Save old newspaper for packing material. For delicate items, you may went to purchase special packing boxes or materials to ensure safe moving. Wardrobe boxes may be purchased for hanging clothes at many trailer rental locations.

Be creative in your packing, particularly with odd-sized or fragile items. For example, move mattresses with old sheets on them as a protection from dirt. An antique floor lamp rolled up in a rug, or a crystal decanter packed in the middle of bath towels adds increased protection.

Of course, creative packing can lead to confusion when unpacking. Make sure all boxes are clearly labeled with their contents. Make boxes "fragile" which have breakable items. For those items too precious to risk damaging, move by hand.

Make a list of items to pack separately; items needed on the road (maps, prescription medicines, toys for children); items needed to settle in (cleaning supplies, light bulbs, tools); and those items you will need within the first few days of arrival (food and utensils for the first meals). Pack a suitcase which you could live out of if should it become necessary. Keep important papers, such as medical records and insurance policies in one place where they can be retrieved quickly if needed!

Anticipate the worst possible weather for the season and plan accordingly. Check with a local greenhouse for advice on moving specific houseplants. Finally, don't pack possessions without cleaning them. There is no sense in moving household dirt, and you're more likely to have the energy for cleaning at the beginning of the move, rather than after you've arrived.

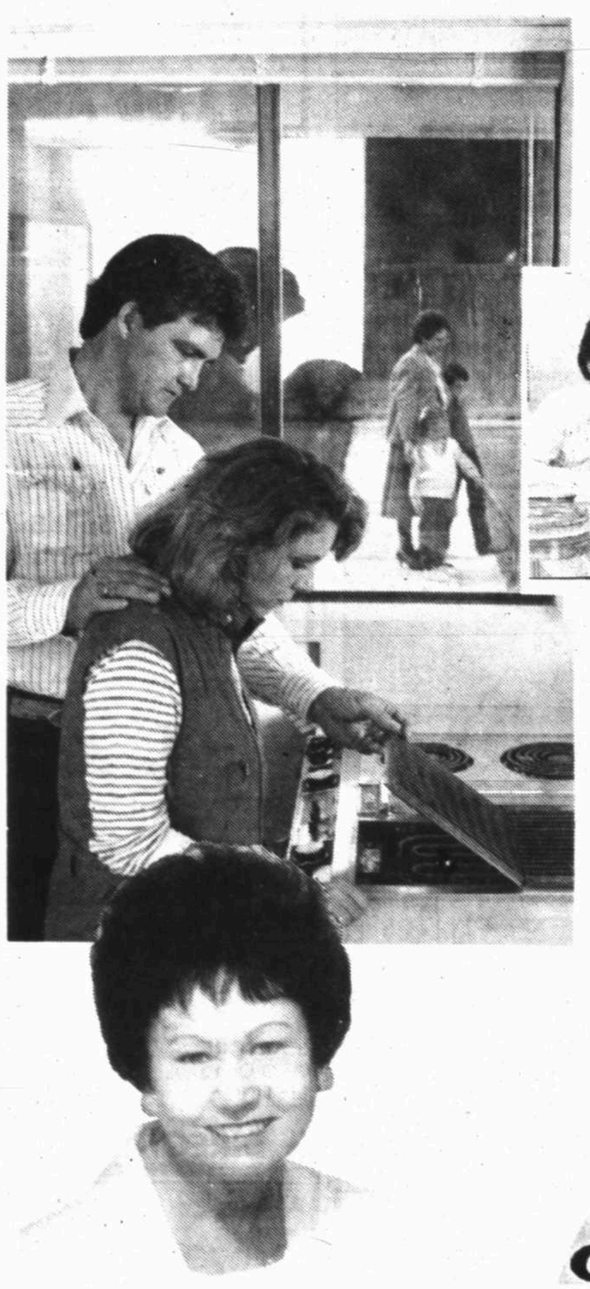

Contact your real estate agent or new landlord to determine if there are local ordinances for large deliveries. If you are moving into an apartment, ask about service entrances or elevator rules.

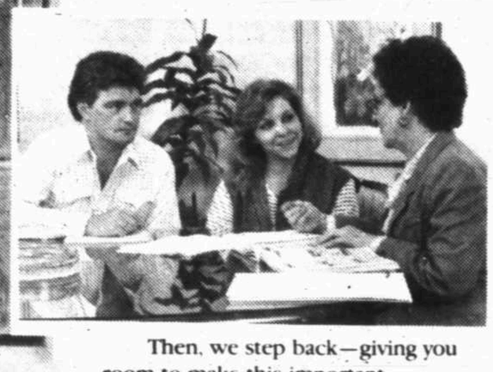

Keep careful records of all your moving expenses as they are incurred. Some may be tax deductible.

The moving day has finally arrived. Make sure someone is home to meet the mover and point out items to be loaded onto the truck. If you are handling your own move, organize loading to maximize space in the truck and to ensure that the heavy box of books does not get loaded on top of your china. Friends are wonderful for hoisting those boxes, but you, or someone who is familiar with your possessions, should oversee the loading process.
