Young dealer

HOUSTON — Police believe a 10-year-old boy accused of selling crack cocaine to an undercover officer is the youngest person ever arrested on charges of dealing drugs in the city. The boy was arrested Tuesday after first he, and then a competing 24-year-old woman sold crack to an undercover officer in an unmarked car, police said. Police Sgt. J.W. Collins said the boy's mother watched the transaction from a reputed crack house across the street. The mother was not charged, and the boy was turned over to Harris County juvenile authorities. The woman selling crack also was arrested.

State of Orleans?

BATON ROUGE, La. — It might be called the Free State of Orleans. The House of Representatives has approved a study of New Orleans seceding from the state. Rep. Arthur Morrell, a New Orleans Democrat said he is serious about it. He said the city now sends far more to the state government in taxes and fees than it gets back in state aid. Morrell said the study may even recommend that New Orleans secede not just from Louisiana, but from the United States so it could apply for foreign aid.

Trump proposes

NEW YORK — Donald Trump's love life, already the source of more stories than the Gulf War, reached its logical conclusion Wednesday when he announced on live television his engagement to model-actress Marla Maples. The millionaire developer says he gave Maples a diamond engagement ring Tuesday night, less than a week after Trump publicly dumped her and was linked to Italian supermodel Carla Bruni. Ronald Winston, head of Harry Winston, Inc. jewelers, said Trump picked out a nearly eight-carat emerald-cut gem, set among a row of diamonds. No wedding date was announced.

Ranch hands, from left, Severio Guttierez, Jerry Lee and Harold Merritt set up camp for the chuck-wagon cookoff in the fourth annual Midland Ranch Rodeo.

Ranch hands to show their stuff at local rodeo

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Come sunup, some old cowboys will be at work, and enjoying it, on this national Fourth of July holiday. They will be moving cattle on horseback just to get the stock from one place to another.

Others, the camp cooks, will be fixing the breakfast vittles for riders and other working hands who came to town to help out with today's Midland Ranch Rodeo.

As the sun rises higher into the sky, more folks will be stirring.

And the big to-do begins at 10 a.m. today in and about the Midland County Rodeo Arena grounds, east of downtown Midland.

About that time, cowboys and cowgirls from nine ranches will be competing in ranch rodeo events: wild-cow milking, ranch cutting, calf branding, team roping, and team penning.

Midland rancher Ralph Powell is furnishing stock for the rodeo.

Spectators will see how working cowboys, some on horseback and some on foot,

Yugoslav troops told not to fire

■ Tanks stop short of crossing Croatian or Slovenian borders, official says.

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The Yugoslav crisis appeared to ease late Wednesday as the federal army ordered troops to hold their fire and some units withdrew to barracks. "For tonight .. the crisis is over," a senior Slovene official said.

The official, Information Minister Jelko Kacin, told reporters just after midnight Wednesday that armored convoys that left Belgrade early in the day had made no move to penetrate Croatian or Slovenian territory. Hundreds of tanks were moved close to the Croatian border, however.

Troops already inside Slovenia abandoned all the republic's border posts, and other soldiers withdrew to their bases, Kacin said.

"Everything is as before the attack on Slovenia," Kacin said. "The only difference are human casualties, enormous material damage and an experience that the Slovene people and the world community will not forget."

Scattered fighting flared earlier in the day but no major clashes were reported. At least 25 people died Tuesday in the worst battles in Slovenia since the crisis started last week. Federal troops also shot three civilians in Croatia.

Gen. Andrija Raseta, deputy commander of troops in Slovenia and Croatia, said at a news conference earlier

Jesse Jackson to meet plaintiffs in Dynagen suit

By Ed Todd

Jackson

ODESSA — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, founder of the Rainbow Coalition and twice a Democratic Party presidential contender, will be bringing a new dimension into the Dynagen pollution-cleanup controversy next Thursday, July 11.

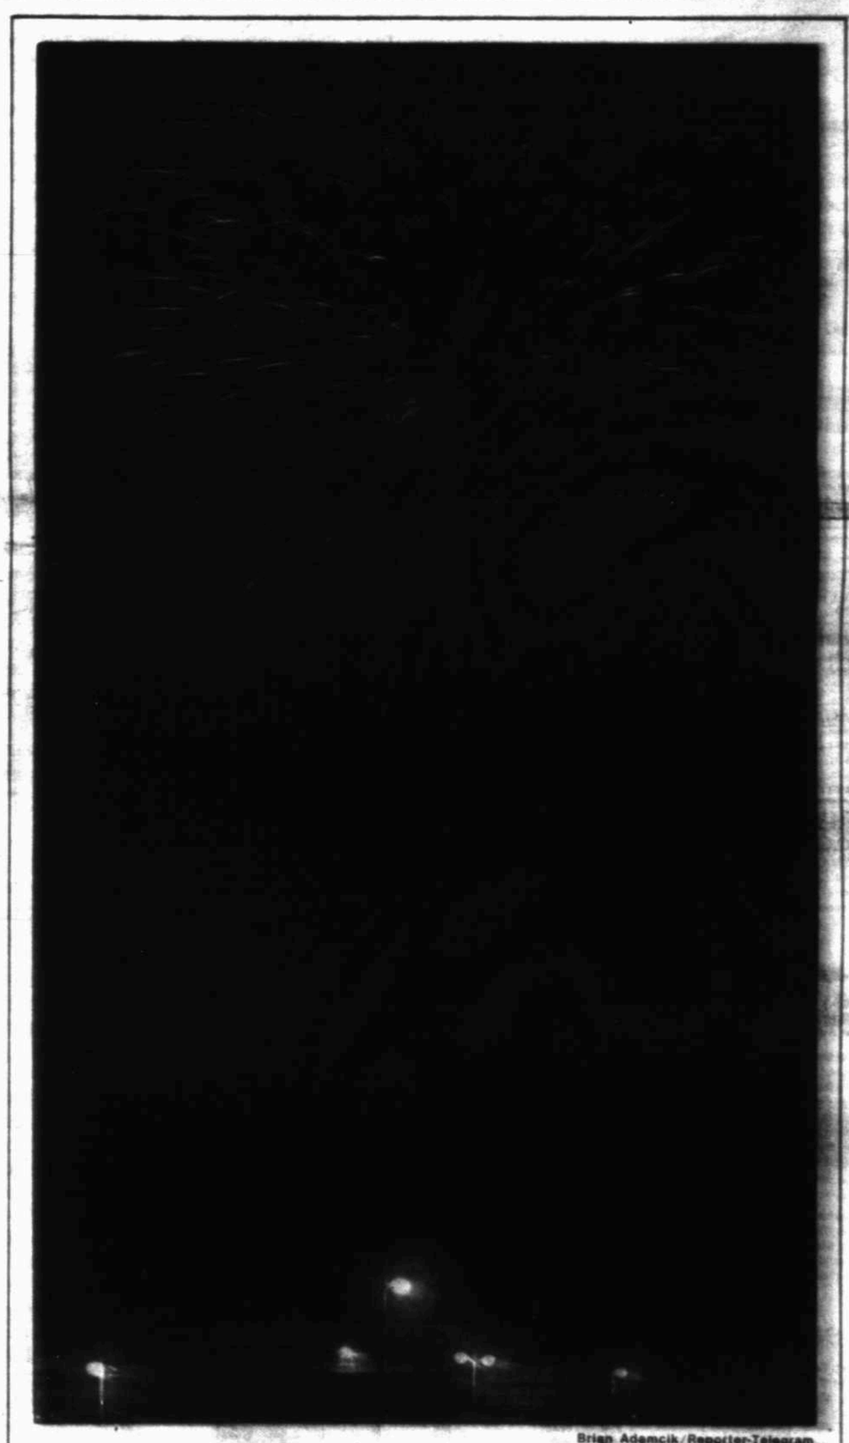

The 49-year-old civil-rights leader was invited to Odessa by NAACP and Democratic Party leaders to meet with plaintiffs in a class-action lawsuit against Dynagen, the petrochemical plant which produces synthetic rubber for General Tire & Rubber Company.

The Akron, Ohio-based and German-owned company is the world's fourth largest tire maker.

Not only will Jackson greet and be greeted by many of the hundreds of plaintiffs in the lawsuit in front of the Dynagen plant, he will be met by many of the 260 Dynagen employees and Dynagen plant manager, Tim Gorman.

"It's not very often," Gorman said on

Headaches' cause baffles physicians

BUSH: Mount Rushmore 50 years old

tall chiseled faces of the four presidents, was finished in 1941 but never formally dedicated because of the death of its sculptor, Gutzon Borglum, and the nation's entry into World War II.

Under a brilliant summer sun, 3,500 people joined Bush in a ceremony at the foot of the memorial. There was plenty of pageantry, with trumpet salutes, crashing cymbals and thundering drums by military bands. Rosemary Clooney led the audience in singing "America the Beautiful."

Bush's visit was the prelude to July Fourth parades and celebrations that the president promised would be a tribute to American troops returning from the Persian Gulf War. Today, he will attend holiday parades in Marshfield, Mo., and Grand Rapids, Mich., before returning to the White House in time to watch the fireworks exploding over the Mall.

Under the granite gaze of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, Bush summoned Americans to devote themselves to the ideals that the four presidents championed: independence, freedom, democracy and equality.

"Today we must build on their beginnings," Bush said. "We must continue to preserve our greatness while pushing back the limits of our imagination.

"We must teach our children the responsibility that comes with freedom," he said. "We must remind them of the endless possibilities of the American dream." Along those lines, he recalled the words Clarence Thomas, who after a childhood of poverty was nominated by Bush for the Supreme Court. "Only in America could this be possible," Thomas had said Monday.

Bush said the nation faces enormous challenges. "But remember, this is America, and here great things are possible.

"Look at the vast sculpture before us," he said, "and you see carved in stone a symbol that evokes the American character, soaring and unafraid."

He said that on the eve of Independence Day, Americans should 'express our undiminished devotion to the ideals of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, ideals as towering and solid as the monument that honors them."

Before leaving the White House earlier in the day, Bush declared at an East Room ceremony honoring U.S. leaders of the gulf war that "Desert Storm marked the end of an era of self doubt and lingering uncertainty about America's staying power and sense of purpose."

At that event, Bush bestowed the Presidential Medal of Freedom upon the Desert Storm commander, Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Colin Powell, Secretary of State James A. Baker III, National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

After the allied victory over Iraq, Bush urged Americans last March to make July Fourth "a day of special celebration for our returning troops ... a holiday they'll never forget." The victory already has been marked with big homecoming parades in Washington, New York and several other cities.

The Mount Rushmore ceremony was moved up a day to accommodate Bush's schedule. He is the fourth president to visit the monument.

Calvin Coolidge took part in a 1927 ceremony marking the start of the Borglum's work. Franklin D. Roosevelt helped dedicate the completion of Jefferson's face in 1936, and Dwight Eisenhower visited the monument in 1953.

It took Borglum and an army of 360 stonecutters 14 years to carve the 60-foot-tall heads. They moved 450,000 tons of rock with hammers, drills and dynamite to complete the work.

Borglum died in early 1941, seven months before the work was completed.

In addition to his dedication of the memorial, Bush's visit gave a boost to a drive to raise the $40 million to repair the hundreds of cracks on the granite visages and improve facilities for the 2 million tourists who visit it each year.

To mark the holiday, Bush also taped a radio address for broadcast on July 4.

"Our view of freedom has changed since we last celebrated Independence Day, for America, the finest, most loving nation on Earth, has been at war. Her sons and daughters stood watch on the parched desert and seas of the Gulf, bearing witness by their presence to the vision that compelled us."

"Throughout the long ordeal America's people stood watch at home, our yellow-ribboned spirit telling that we believed in liberty — believed in ourselves," Bush said.

YUGOSLAVIA: Troops told to hold fire that troops in Slovenia had been ordered not to use their weapons except for self-defense. He said army commanders had pledged to recognize the federal government's authority.

Over the past several days, the army had appeared to be ignoring the orders of Stipe Mesic, chairman of the eight-member collective federal presidency. Mesic, a Croat, has long been at odds with the mostly Serbian high command.

"The army has no reason not to recognize Mesic and the presidency, who have been elected legally," said Raseta.

Kacin said there were no reports of fighting after 2 p.m. He said the federal army seemed at least to have postponed plans to attack while negotiations — brokered by Mesic — proceeded between the warring parties.

A special commission met to work out the withdrawal of troops to their barracks, Kacin said. The delegations were headed by Gen. Raseta and by Dusan Plut, a member of the Slovenian presidency. Kacin characterized the talks as "very difficult."

Slovenian officials said the republic was willing to consider suspending its independence declaration and negotiate control of the border posts.

Kacin earlier had claimed to have a copy of a secret letter from the army with orders for a major new offensive today. The Slovenian president, Milan Kucan, had said "a brutal attack on Slovenia can be expected any time."

The army had come under stinging criticism Wednesday from some European leaders. Germany's foreign minister said the army was "running amok." Italy's foreign minister said his country might reverse its neutral position and side with Croatia and Slovenia if the crackdown didn't end.

In Washington, Secretary of State James A. Baker III warned the conflict could become "a full-fledged civil war" if Yugoslavia's national government was unable to control the army.

The federal army's chief of staff, hard-line Gen. Blagoje Adzic, had ruled out a truce Tuesday.

An earlier attempt at a cease-fire, arranged by the European Community, fell apart. But EC observers arrived Wednesday in Belgrade to help enforce the new truce plan and were to visit Croatia and Slovenia today. EC foreign ministers called an emergency meeting for Friday in the Hague.

Long convoys of troops and 180 tanks left Belgrade headed toward Croatia and Slovenia early Wednesday, but reporters at the Croatian border said none of the units appeared to have left Serbian territory.

The only violence reported Wednesday was shooting near the cities of Ormoz and Maribor near the Austrian border, Slovenian radio said. Austrian police also told the Associated Press tanks were moving near the border, and that one unit broke through a Slovenian barricade.

In Croatia, which like Slovenia declared independence last week, Defense Minister Sime Djodan warned that the federal army's truce announcement could be a ploy. He noted the troop movements from Belgrade, the national capital, early in the day.

Serbian villagers crowded the roads to cheer the passing troops. Serbia, Yugoslavia's biggest republic, strongly opposes the secessionist drives of Slovenia and Croatia.

An AP reporter at the border of Serbia and Croatia said the armored units broke up into small groups clustered in small towns on the Serbian side of the frontier.

He said Croatian units pushed tractors and farm wagons filled with dirt and rocks onto a bridge 25 miles inside Croatia to block the road between Zagreb and Belgrade. Camouflaged guns were set up at the bridge's ends.

Slovenes manning barricades at Vrhnika — southwest of Slovenia's capital, Ljubljana — anxiously monitored radio reports on the tank movements and vowed to fight.

Roads leading to Vrhnika were mined and barricaded with heavy trucks and buses to block federal tanks. One tank was still burning after a failed attempt to break out Tuesday.

Heavy vehicles also blocked main intersections and public buildings in Ljubljana, and nervous Slovene militiamen searched pedestrians and cars, apparently for weapons.

Slovenia and neighboring Croatia, its closest ally, declared their independence June 25. No foreign nation has recognized the secessionist republics.

The fighting began last Thursday, when the army moved to take control of Slovenia's 27 international border crossings.

DYNAGEN: Jackson to meet plaintiffs

(From 1A)

Wednesday, "that a nationally prominent figure comes to picket a little plant in West Texas."

Gorman said that he expects the session with Jackson will be "very, very professional.

"I'm looking forward to meeting him."

Gorman took over as Dynagen's plant manager last year to help rebuild the plant's image and to get the company moving in correcting air-pollution problems often tied to the plant's use of water in making synthetic rubber.

"We're not the bad, bad, bad guys we've been make out to be," Gorman said.

Gorman added he is eager for Jackson to listen to "both sides of the story, because to every story, there are two sides. And we are a good employer."

Dynagen, he noted, is under court order by Judge Tryon Lewis to clean Dynagen's operations that lead to foul-air emissions.

Since the 1980s, neighbors to the plant just outside the south Odessa city limit have complained of foul and obnoxious odors that, some say, have caused illnesses.

"You won't see Judge Lewis saying we're not doing the things we've agreed to do," Gorman said.

In addition to shutting down its incinerator, Dynagen has agreed to clean out 165 acres of smudge-lined solar water-evaporation ponds, to install a wastewater treatment plant, and to make many other corrections, costing into the millions of dollars, to clean up its operation.

Dynagen, which is routinely monitored by investigators of the Texas Air Control Board (TACB) and the Texas Water Commission (TWC), has been cited for violations of the Texas Clean Air Act and for violations of TACB rules and regulations.

In December 1989, the Texas Attorney General, in responding to the TACB citations and citizens complaints, filed a civil lawsuit against Dynagen.

Recently, the TWC agreed to join in the suit but withdrew from the litigation in a move that has been termed "political."

Jackson's introduction into the controversy comes upon the invitation of Gene Collins, president of the Odessa Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and K.T. McLeaish, vice chairman of Texans-for-Jackson's in his1988 campaign for the Democratic Party nomination for president.

"Right now seems the most appropriate time to get him here," Collins said of Jackson's visit next week.

"Even though we are in negotiations (in the class-action lawsuit), the problem has been so political. The Water Commission pulled out of the lawsuit. And we have a serious problem with contamination of underground water."

"Mr. Jackson will be looking over lab reports and findings," Collins said. "He will get to talk with people with emphysema, people who have loved ones who died of cancer and who have been exposed (to Dynagen's pollution), and to see the real side of the story."

The Dynagen story is a "national issue in that General Tire is a major, national corporation," Collins said. "We are going to get national attention, I'm sure. We'll get it from a very unbiased source who has already proven, time and time again, that he is concerned about human suffering."

Ms. McLeaish said Jackson "wants to meet with the plaintiffs and learn a little bit more about what's going on."

Ms. McLeaish, who is a member of the Democratic National Committee, is wife of Odessa environmental attorney Michael McLeaish, who is the plaintiffs' lawyer in the class-action suit against Dynagen.

Jackson, who is living in Washington, D.C., is meeting with NAACP and Rainbow Coalition leaders and followers in Texas in "drumming up support for the '92 Democratic presidential nominee, whoever that may be," Ms. McLeaish said.

control cattle. Ranches represented in the events include the Mabee Ranch, the Parks Ranch, the Lazy Z, the Shannon Ranch, the Bird Ranch, the Texas 10 Ranch, the C (Chicago) Ranch, the Powell Ranch, and the Half Circle C Ranch.

In addition to the five rodeo events, arena shows will include a wild-horse race staged by Eldorado cowboy Brant Ward. Bootscramble and stick-horse races will be staged for children.

Bob Burnes, playing Bandy the Clown, will be pulling off antics in and about the arena.

Rodeo announcer Bud Townsend will be talking about the events and ranches.

Throughout the day, a Bit 'n' Spur Show and a Trade 'n' Craft Show will be held in the Midland County Exhibit Building near the arena.

Admission to the rodeo grounds is $2 per person.

The Ranch Rodeo was organized in 1988 to celebrate the West Texas ranching heritage on Independence Day. This year, the Fourth of July activities have been expanded to take in parts of five days.

On Friday, West Texas mule men will put their mules into action in the arena from 8 a.m. until noon.

Friday at 7 p.m., Angel Gamboa and his troupe of Mexican vaqueros (cowboys) will put on a Charro Roping Exhibition in the arena. The cowboys will demonstrate the techniques used by Mexican cowboys in handling cattle.

On Saturday, team roping will begin at 11 a.m. in the arena. Books open at 10 a.m. Midland stock producer Daryl Skiles is furnishing the steers in the roping.

The Number 5 progressive roping event is to bring in 300 to 400 teams of ropers — headers and heelers — from Abilene to Alpine and from Lubbock to San Angelo.

On Sunday, a Cowboy Church Service and Cowboy Breakfast will be held at Midland's Centennial Plaza.

HEADACHES: Baffling condition most often strikes males

(From 1A)

ized oxygen to red pepper extract and bright lights.

"The pain of cluster headache is one of the most severe pain conditions known to mankind," Dr. Karl Ekbom of the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm told the congress, a gathering of 1,000 headache experts from 43 nations and the largest conference ever on the subject.

"The suffering of the patient is enormous," Ekbom said. "A better treatment is a challenge for all of us."

Cluster headaches affect about 1 percent of the population and about 80 percent of the victims are men. Severe pain is felt on one side of the head, usually in and around the eye.

Attacks last 30-45 minutes and occur several times a day for weeks or months at a time. The pain is so intense sufferers have been known to consider suicide during attacks. Some patients suffer from chronic cluster headaches that can last for years at a time.

Between attacks, "patients live in mortal fear of the next one," said Dr. Ninan Mathew, chairman of the congress' organizing committee. He called clusters "the most excruciating form of headache known."

Standard treatments include drugs such as lithium and ergotamine as well as oxygen inhalation to abort or shorten attacks. Patients also may be advised to control their anger and avoid alcohol, volatile chemicals, excessive exercise and changes in their sleeping habits.

However, about 20 percent of patients don't seem to respond to any of these treatments and surgery may be recommended.

The experts presented a series of reports Wednesday on research into new ways to treat cluster headaches. Several examined the effects of capsaicin, the active ingredient in red pepper.

In one study, headache sufferers got dramatic relief when a capsaicin solution was applied to the nostril on the side of the head where the headache occurred. When it was applied to the other nostril, there was no similar relief.

In another study, patients who had capsaicin ointment applied to their temples were headache-free during days when they normally would have had pain.

Another study found success with use of a pressurized oxygen in cases where normal-pressure oxygen failed. Patients who inhaled the hyperbaric oxygen got pain relief within an average of six minutes.

Mathew said surgery is a last resort. One operation involves using radio frequency waves to heat and destroy the pain-carrying fibers in the brain's trigeminal nerve while leaving other functions of the nerve intact.

President honors his war advisors with Medals of Freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Wednesday bestowed the Presidential Medal of Freedom on Gens. Norman Schwarzkopf and Colin Powell in thanks for their leadership during a the Persian Gulf War.

Bush also gave the Medal of Freedom to three of his top advisers — Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, who professed astonishment when he sprung the award on them during an East Room ceremony.

Bush also conferred the Presidential Citizens Medal on eight key aides who formed the core policy group developing the administration strategy during the Persian Gulf crisis.

Presenting the awards on the eve of July 4, Bush drew a parallel between the Gulf war and the War of Independence.

"Like that early battle, Desert Storm marks another turning point in America's destiny. The young men and women we've welcomed home from the gulf return to a nation far different than the one they left. They come home to a country that is confident and proud, an America that is sure of itself and strong, an America other nations look to for leadership," Bush told the award recipients who gathered with their families and administration officials for the awards ceremony.

Bush said the war gave the United States "a newfound credibility around the world. Desert Storm proved once more that America's strength of character begins in the heart of every individual."

Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was honored in the citation accompanying his medal as "a deft manager and forthright counselor," who "personifies the ideal of the soldier-statesman."

Schwarzkopf, commander of the U.S.-led coalition against Iraq, was cited as one of history's "great commanders."

Baker, Cheney and Scowcroft said they did not know they also would receive medals until Bush announced it at the end of Wednesday's ceremony.

Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater said the president wanted to surprise them.

"The president never told me," Cheney said. "It's a very special award, special coming from this president."

NEA leader flunks Bush on education

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The head of the nation's largest teacher union says George Bush flunks as education president, but says the president has a chance to boost his grade by endorsing a children's "Bill of Rights."

"Children don't vote, but they ought to have rights just like we have," said Keith Geiger, president of the National Education Association. Geiger plans to spell out those rights Thursday in his opening address at the union's annual convention.

The proposed rights, to be unveiled at a ceremony marking the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights, would guarantee adequate health care, nutrition and a sound education for all children, Geiger said in an interview before the start of the four-day gathering of about 8,500 teacher delegates.

Delegates also are likely to consider a resolution opposing an administration-backed plan of voluntary national tests to increase school accountability, Geiger said.

Geiger also left little doubt that he planned to use the convention to launch volleys against the Bush administration's handling of education policy.

"I'm taking some zings at the president and Congress and state legislatures for having priorities other than this," Geiger said.

The 2.1 million-member NEA prides itself on political clout and has consistently been in the Democratic camp in presidential politics.

Asked what grade he would give Bush as an education leader, Geiger said, "I can't pass the president. I'm sorry. He doesn't provide anything but rhetoric."

On April 18, Bush announced a multi-faceted school initiative called "America 2000" aimed at jumpstarting the national education goals agreed upon nearly two years ago at a summit of the president and the 50 governors.

But Geiger said NEA members are angry that Bush has harped on the issues of school choice and national testing while saying little about "school readiness" — ensuring that children arrive at school healthy and ready to learn.

On the issue of choice, Geiger said his union accepts the idea that parents should be free to select among public schools in their own district. But it rejects the Bush proposal to use federal funds to extend choice to private and parochial schools.

"There's just a lot of frustration that the president did his big speech in April, and now it's all boiling down to choice and vouchers and tuition tax credits. Whether it's intended or not, that's what's being discussed," he said.

Bush's argument for choice and testing stems from a belief that accountability, not more money, is the key to better schools. A U.S. Census Bureau report last week found that federal, state and local education spending totaled $286 billion in 1989 — $194 billion of which was for public elementary and secondary education.

The NEA responds that it's unfair to hold schools solely responsible for the poor educational performance of crack babies, children from troubled homes, or kids who haven't had a meal.

Shark attack puts laid-back California surfers on alert

Hearst News Service

DAVENPORT LANDING, Calif. — The beach at Davenport Landing was virtually deserted the day after surfer Eric Larsen barely survived a vicious shark attack. But the lack of surfers from here south to Santa Cruz was more likely due to the thick fog and small waves than any fear of being eaten alive.

There is certainly healthy respect for the fearsome great white, which experts believe was responsible for the attack early Monday on Larsen, 32. But if the waves and visibility were better, you can be assured more wave-jockeys would have been out.

"The odds of being killed are extremely minimal, when you think about it," said surfer Ken Doler, 35, as he prepared to take to the waters off Capitola, a few miles south of Santa Cruz — in prime great white shark territory.

Doler has been surfing these waters for 25 years, and is aware of the Santa Cruz area's position on the southern edge of the so-called "red triangle" of shark attacks — an area that corresponds to the availability of seals, sea lions and other shark food from Oregon down to Ano Nuevo Island.

"It's still more dangerous to ride a motorcycle," Doler said.

If Doler was rather cavalier in his attitude toward the possibility of ending up as a shark entree, 16-year old Tai Bloomer was a trifle more cautious, as he rode a skateboard around tiny Davenport.

"I mean, why push it? The ocean will still be there in a few weeks, and maybe the shark will be gone," said Bloomer.

Larsen was surfing alone when the shark bit his leg, then bit him on the arm. Larsen was able to beat the shark loose with his right arm while pulling his left arm from the shark's mouth, shredding his arm muscles in the process. The shark returned and attacked Larsen's board, dragging the surfer underwater because he was still attached to the board by an ankle tether.

Finally, the shark let loose and Larsen — trailing blood and uncertain whether the shark was in pursuit — managed to paddle a terrifying 150 yards to shore.

Once ashore, he helped direct his rescue by telling the first people on the scene where to apply pressure so he wouldn't bleed to death from his wounds. Paramedics soon arrived and he was taken by helicopter to a hospital where doctors did 10 hours of surgery.

The shark attack was front-page news in Santa Cruz, a town not in a position to absorb any negative events likely to keep away valuable tourist dollars. Ever since the World Series earthquake of 1989, which destroyed much of the Santa Cruz shopping area, the city has been struggling to regain its status as a favored getaway for folks in the San Francisco Bay Area.

But Sandy Nelson of the Hat Company, said the presence of sharks might actually attract tourists.

"I think some people might come down out of curiosity."

Guns N' Roses singer triggers concert riot

MARYLAND HEIGHTS, Mo. (AP) — Axl Rose, lead singer of the heavy metal rock group Guns N' Roses, yelled at security guards to take a camera from a fan before leaping into the crowd and touching off a riot, witnesses said Wednesday.

About 60 people were injured, including 15 police officers, and the new Riverport Amphitheater sustained $200,000 in damage during the hour-long riot Tuesday night, Police Chief Neil Kurlander said at a news conference.

An estimated 3,000 rioters rampaged at the concert attended by 15,400 people, Kurlander said.

Kurlander said 13 adults and two juveniles were arrested on charges including assaulting an officer, resisting arrest, destruction of property and failure to disperse.

Police also were considering filing charges against Rose, who left town shortly after the disturbance. But Kurlander wouldn't speculate on what charges, if any, might be sought. "We're not going to be stampeded into making criminal charges," he said.

Conflicting reports said it was either a video camera or a still camera with flash that angered Rose. All cameras are banned at the theater.

"He was yelling about it and then he said, 'If security's not going to do anything about it, then I will,' and he just dove, like three rows back," said Jason Lester, 29, who was about 20 feet from Rose.

"I couldn't believe he would be so stupid. It was such a dumb thing to do."

Security guards moved in and lifted Rose, who was swinging his arms, back on stage, but the angry singer picked up his cordless microphone, slammed it to stage and stomped off, Lester said.

"Then all hell broke loose," said security guard David Boelhof.

U.S. to sign ban on mining in Antarctic

MOUNT RUSHMORE NATIONAL MEMORIAL, S.D. (AP) — The United States will sign an international agreement for environmental protection of the Antarctic, including a 55-year ban on mining, President Bush said Wednesday.

The agreement was negotiated among 39 nations in Madrid, with the United States the last holdout on signing.

In June, the United States blocked the treaty, saying more time was needed to study the mining ban. That decision forced postponement of a signing ceremony scheduled for June 23, the 30th anniversary of the treaty's enactment in 1961.

The United States was the only one of the Antarctic Treaty's voting members unable to get government approval for the protocol.

An attorney for an environmental group that had strongly urged U.S. participation in the accord said he was pleased at the president's announcement, but disappointed that the mining ban was not permanent.

"This walkout clause would essentially allow any country to walk away from an international ban on mining," said Bruce Manheim, lawyer for the Environmental Defense Fund.

He called the provision "extremely undesirable from both an environmental point of view as well as a political point of view."

The United States in April rejected a proposed permanent ban, saying it failed to safeguard the rights of future generations to modify the prohibition.

In addition to the ban on mining, the accord will protect native species of Antarctic flora and fauna and place limits on tourism, waste disposal and marine pollution.

Bush announced his support for the agreement during a visit to Mount Rushmore on the 50th anniversary of the granite sculpture. The agreement is known as an environmental protection protocol to the existing Antarctic Treaty.

Liberty remains greatest gift

Two hundred fifteen years ago liberty was much on the minds of those in the struggling American colonies. Liberty was not then merely a concept for discussion in the first halls of government, but rather a matter of survival for those living at arm's length from the king of England.

In the two centuries since governments have flourished and died, dictators have arisen to fuel the hatred of freedom-loving people around the world, and societies have progressed or failed largely in relation to the degree of liberty their governments permitted.

Today in much of the world totalitarian government is in a state of collapse. Behind the Iron Curtain millions of people are rejecting the failed Communist system of government in favor of free enterprise and hope. Yet the forces of totalitarianism are still at work, attempting to extinguish the flickering flame of freedom burning there.

What is needed to ensure liberty will take root? Is a partial socialist state the answer or only a path to future governmental oppression? Throughout the centuries, noted leaders have spoken out on the matter of liberty. Their words are instructive during this time of uncertainty.

President Woodrow Wilson cautioned that "The history of liberty is the history of resistance . . . (it is a) history of the limitation of governmental power."

Playwright George Bernard Shaw observed that "Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it."

"In the end more than they wanted freedom," wrote British historian Edward Gibbon, "they wanted security. When the Athenians finally wanted not to give to society but for society to give to them, when the freedom they wished for was freedom from responsibility, then Athens ceased to be free."

Nikolai Lenin, father of the man who started the Communist Party in Russia, recognized the danger inherent in governmental power and the importance of freedom. He said, "While the State exists, there is no freedom. When there is freedom, there will be no State."

French economist, author and statesman Frederic Bastiat urged, "And now that the legislators and do-gooders have so futilely inflicted so many systems upon society, may they finally end where they should have begun; for liberty is an acknowledgment of faith in God and His works."

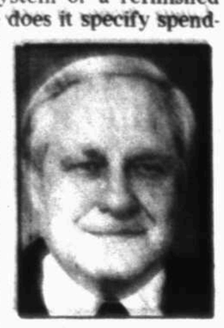

The greatest pronouncement of liberty is contained in the Declaration of Independence in which our forefathers declared, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness."

It was so 215 years ago; it remains so today.

Air Force keeps pet project funding

WASHINGTON — You won't find anything in Congress' budget for the Air Force that mentions a state-of-the-art golf course sprinkler system or a refinished bowling alley. Nowhere does it specify spending $21,000 on inlaid carpets for the officers' club or $772,000 on a skeet-shooting range.

Anderson

But the Air Force feels free to spend the taxpayers' money as it chooses anyway. As a scathing internal audit reveals, Air Force officials routinely ignore congressional wishes on how to spend money. Congress has tried to tighten the purse on military recreation programs and make them pay for themselves, but the Air Force dodges the new rules as easily as it evaded Iraqi anti-aircraft fire.

Instead of complying with the new spending guidelines, the Air Force has kept on funding its pet projects while disguising them in the spending reports as essentials. The Air Force misspent $7.7 million on ill-advised recreational frills over a three-year period, according to the audit report obtained by our associate Jim Lynch.

Almost no base could resist siphoning off funds to improve its golf course. Auditors found more than $1.6 million had been improperly spent on military golf courses. Another $459,500 was doled out for bowling alleys in violation of the spending guidelines.

Myrtle Beach Air Force Base in South Carolina spent almost $600,000 on 21 separate golf course projects. In 1989, base officials even used military prisoners as laborers to maintain the links. The base also blew the wad on lobster cookers, crab traps, bicycles, swim fins, swimming masks, snorkels and badminton sets.

Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio spent $446,068 on golf course projects including a deluxe sprinkler system. Tyndal Air Force Base in Florida spent $313,109 on golf course amenities including a pro shop and score board.

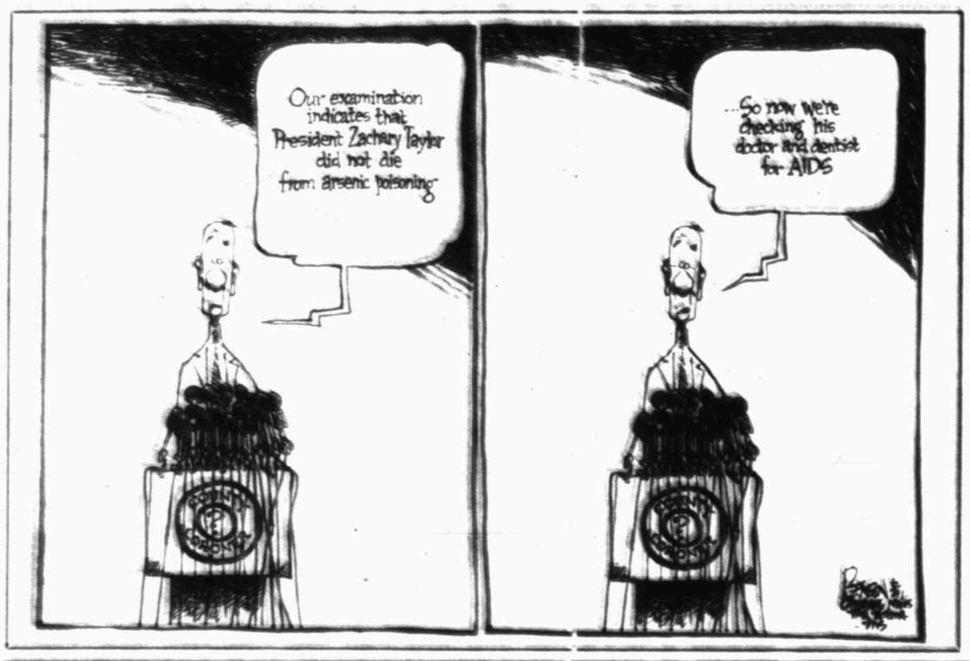

At Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, officials somehow managed to convince themselves that tennis courts fell under the heading of a "mission sustaining facility," and spent $103,775 without alarming anyone.

Officers' clubs loom as a favorite rat hole for pouring money down. At Mildenhall Air Force Base in England, a $70,000 club project mushroomed into a $2.2 million renovation without congressional oversight. The club at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois is undergoing a similar face lift, this one costing $2.4 million. The auditors said that the work "was not accomplished in the most efficient and cost effective sequence." That's an understatement. The new floors and carpet were put in before the ceiling was torn out for a sprinkler system. In one room the decorators chose inlaid carpet that cost $20,823 for a 12-foot-by-18-foot piece. The Air Force explained that the fancy carpet was necessary to "enhance the aviator image." We hope the aviator image holds up longer than the carpet, which is already fading.

In a bit of creative bookkeeping at Tinker Air Force base in Oklahoma, officials tried to use money from the B-2 bomber program to relocate and expand a skeet-shooting club. Only 24 of the 7,000 active duty personnel at Tinker are members of the skeet club, but the base was ready to spend $772,000 on the new club when the auditors arrived.

Air Force base commanders defend their actions saying that the spending guidelines are too vague. Most of them maintain they have done nothing wrong. Sources told us that the Air Force hopes the post-war euphoria and pride in the military will help bury this audit. But the House Armed Services Committee is not likely to turn away from the facts with any misty-eyed patriotism. We have seen an internal Air Force memo expressing concern that the committee is "turning up the heat."

High court reversals uphold Constitution

WASHINGTON — Last week history had a nice symmetry. The day Thurgood Marshall announced his resignation from the Supreme Court, the court announced two decisions, each reversing recent precedents, that framed the coming debate on confirmation of Clarence Thomas.

Will

The court ruled 5-4 that a Michigan law imposing mandatory life sentences without parole for possession of 1.5 or more pounds of cocaine does not violate the Constitution's prohibition of "cruel and unusual" punishments. That amount of cocaine (sufficient for upward of 60,000 doses; a street value of $100,000) is not trivial.

But the sentence, measured against federal sentencing guidelines (10 years for that offense) or other states' practices, may strike many as disproportionate. And in 1983 the court invalidated a mandatory life sentence for the seventh conviction for a nonviolent recidivist (he had passed a bad check worth $100) because, the court said, the ban on cruel and unusual punishments mandates some degree of proportionality — punishment that "fits" the crime.

Last week the court said: The Framers of the Constitution chose not to emulate those state constitutions that in 1787 explicitly mandated a proportionality principle regarding punishment; the "cruel and unusual" language was adopted to prevent legislatures from resorting to particular modes of punishment that are both cruel and unusual; the history of American penology shows that harsh mandatory sentences are not unusual; traditions of federalism allow for states to treat similar cases differently, given different local needs and concerns. And if judges undertake to monitor the proportionality of all sentencing decisions of 50 state legislatures, the judges' discretion will be unguided by standards derived either from history or the Constitution's text.

Marshall dissented.

In the second case decided the day Marshall departed, the court reversed 1987 and 1989 decisions, ruling that at the sentencing stage of a capital case jurors can be presented with evidence about a murdered person's character and the suffering the crime caused his family. The court said simply that in the 1987 and 1989 cases the court erred in wringing from the Eighth Amendment the idea that states are not permitted to decide that "victim impact evidence" helps juries decide the appropriate punishment.

Marshall dissented.

Liberal critics of the court are today expressing a new-found and no doubt evanescent reverence for stare decisis — the doctrine that precedents should be followed. That is a sound general rule; it is not a categorical imperative.

It could only be an ironclad rule if we assumed that the court never makes mistakes or that mistakes should never be corrected. Were all precedents sacred, regardless of the reasoning by which they were reached, there would not have been many of the court rulings most revered by liberals, including Brown v. Board of Education, the school desegregation decision that overturned the 58-year-old separate-but-equal ruling in Plessy v. Ferguson.

Every year the court overturns some precedents. It does because most Justices agree with Felix Frankfurter that "the ultimate touchstone of constitutionality is the Constitution itself and not what we have said about it."

In the Michigan and Tennessee cases the court's conservative majority read the Constitution in a way ("strictly") that caused the court to defer to the discretion of democratic institutions — the Michigan and Tennessee legislatures. Many liberals lament the moderately conservative balance today being struck regarding a perennial conundrum of America's constitutional democracy, that of reconciling constitutional supremacy, and hence judicial review, with majority rule.

Today's liberal laments are puzzling. The more liberal party, the Democratic, controls both houses of Congress and most state legislative chambers. Furthermore, a heavy preponderance of what the court does is statutory, not constitutional interpretation.

Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), a member of the Judiciary Committee that will consider confirmation of Clarence Thomas, has a peculiar, and peculiarly liberal, notion of the court's function. On television last Sunday, after he repeatedly stressed the importance of the court in protecting individual rights, he was asked if community rights, as expressed through state and federal laws, are also due some deference and protection. Leahy replied: "You elect people to make those community rights. The Supreme Court protects individual rights."

Actually, our constitutional dilemma is not so simple. It involves the court on all sides of unending, indeed unendable tensions between many competing values and powers.

The coming debate about Clarence Thomas' confirmation will discomfort some conservatives, too. Some conservatives are flying, intellectually, on automatic pilot, doing well, if not good, by tickling the country's anti-government reflex. They must face the fact that the "strict construction" they praise has the consequence of broadening the reach of government power.

ANOTHER VIEW

'Debt for Nature' offers Brazil hope

The reckless destruction of the Amazon rain forest is surely among the saddest of the world's environmental disasters. Encouraged by past Brazilian governments, cattle ranchers and landless settlers have set fire to huge sections of Rondonia, in western Brazil, fouling the air and laying waste to a precious natural resource.

To the delight of conservationists everywhere, President Fernando Collor de Mello has now agreed to allow foreigners to help save the forest through so-called "debt for nature" swaps. In simplest terms, Brazil would engage in extensive reclamation projects in exchange for forgiveness of part of its massive overseas debt.

This is an extraordinary turnaround. Collor's predecessor, Jose Sarney, made hopeful noises about saving the Amazon but essentially did nothing. And he condemned debt-for-nature swaps as foreign interference.

Under Collor's scheme, foreign governments or environmental groups could purchase each year $100 million in Brazilian debt at a bargain price, say $30 million, from international banks eager to accept 30 cents on the dollar for loans they may never collect anyway. The $30 million would then be forgiven in exchange for Brazil's pledge to spend the original face amount, $100 million, in local currency on conservation projects.

The plan comes not a moment too soon. Last year, more than six million acres of rain forest disappeared. At risk is not only a priceless biological nursery. The fires also account for an estimated 7 percent of the world's annual production of carbon dioxide, the main cause of the feared greenhouse warming of the earth's atmosphere.

Collor is the first Brazilian president to conclude that the battle to save the Amazon is not a challenge to Brazil's sovereignty but a joint struggle to enrich the planet. For that, he deserves the applause of nations everywhere — and their help.

Saudis: Oil slick loosed by Iraq is almost gone

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Saudi Arabia declared victory Wednesday over the black sludge that has dotted its coast the past five months, saying the oil Iraq let loose in the final days of the Gulf War had all but disappeared.

Still, Saudi Arabia and neighboring Bahrain will keep some fiberglass booms afloat around crucial desalination plants and waterside industries as a precautionary measure.

No one knows for sure how much oil spilled into the Persian Gulf when Iraqi troops opened the valves of Kuwait's Sea Island Terminal during the war.

Oil also leaked heavily from tankers off the coastal town of Khafji and from other Kuwaiti and Iraqi oil facilities damaged in the hostilities.

"It's a victory," said Abdul-Wahab al-Dakak of the kingdom's Meteorology and Environmental Protection Administration. "We most certainly have vanquished the slick."

At the height of the war, experts estimated 11 million barrels of oil gushed into the gulf. But later air and sea investigations scaled the figure back to a still-devastating 3.5 million barrels.

The 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill — America's worst — involved about 300,000 barrels.

The oil combat operation was a multinational effort that drew teams from the United States, Japan, the Netherlands, Australia, Germany, Norway and Britain.

Ahmed al-Aamri, another Saudi environmental official, said 2 million barrels of "weathered" oil had been mopped up. In weathered oil, lighter components of the substance have evaporated.

Al-Aamri said the Saudis deployed 21 skimming boats around the clock for stray oil patches.

Much cleanup work remains to be done.

Many beaches and islands remain fouled with oil, and scientists are still trying to assess longterm damage to marine and wildlife.

The slick blackened a 100-mile stretch of Saudi Arabia's 270-mile gulf coastline.

Tar has smothered sea bed life, and the gulf will be plagued for years with tarballs formed when the sunken oil rolls into globules, floats to the surface and gets carried off the tides.

Still, the Saudis are satisfied because most of the oil was kept from their vital desalination, power and industrial plants. Just one small unit at one water plant had to be closed briefly for cleaning, officials said.

Aamri said Saudi workers were folding up booms that had stretched more than 60 miles along the coast, sometimes in four layers, as a first line of defense against the slick.

The World

U.N. reports Iraqi buildup in south

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A U.N. inspection team has reported disturbing evidence of an Iraqi military buildup near a marshy region in southern Iraq where Shiite Muslim refugees have gathered, officials said Wednesday.

The team reported that there were indications that 30,000 to 100,000 Iraqi refugees were cornered in the Howr al-Hammar marshland by the Iraqi military, according to U.N. diplomats.

The situation has prompted Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan — the U.N. secretary-general's envoy for humanitarian aid to the region — to plan an urgent visit there, a U.N. announcement said. He was expected to visit on Monday.

The diplomats, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also said there was evidence that the Iraqi military had built emplacements for heavy machine guns about every 30 miles in the region.

The U.N. diplomats said the Iraqi refugees have no access to fresh drinking water and were forced to drink polluted marsh water. Health conditions were further imperiled by the fact that the refugees, mostly Shiites, were afraid to cook over open fires because smoke could alert the Iraqi army, the diplomats said.

"The mission was perturbed by the substantial military presence in the area," Nadia Younes, spokeswoman for Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, told reporters at a daily briefing.

She declined to elaborate. The team visited southern Iraq last week to investigate conditions in the marshlands. The team was headed by Steffan de Mistura, a U.N. representative for humanitarian affairs in the region.

In Geneva, U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said "the area in question was identified by the special mission as a particularly high risk one in terms of human suffering for the displaced people."

A State Department official said the Bush administration welcomed Prince Sadruddin's plan to visit the region, adding that humanitarian treatment of Iraqi minorities was among the conditions of the cease-fire that ended the Gulf War.

Sadruddin's mission to the marshlands is part of a larger tour by U.N. humanitarian agencies and experts to assess the condition of civilians throughout Iraq.

Texas set to roll out red, white, blue

By Craig Wilson
Associated Press writer

Independence Day will be marked with traditional picnics, parades and fireworks, but a plethora of celebrations honoring Desert Storm and other war veterans also are in the making.

Gov. Ann Richards will narrate Aaron Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" as part of the Capitol Salute to Texas troops in Austin. In Houston, former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros will narrate the same work at Hermann Park's Miller Outdoor Theater with the Houston Symphony.

Richards will join the Austin Symphony Orchestra for a free concert downtown, complete with Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," fireworks and cannons.

They're ready in North Texas at the "Salute to the Troops Parade" in Fort Worth, featuring Bugs Bunny as the grand marshal. Mayor Kay Granger, U.S. Rep. Pete Geren and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm are expected to make speeches. Fireworks will close the gala.

Gramm will then fly to San Antonio for festivities at HemisFair Park. Other Alamo City festivities include fireworks at Randolph Air Force Base, Lackland Air Force Base and Woodlawn Lake.

They'll be hearing songs of freedom in Dallas with a Dallas Wind Symphony concert featuring tunes by John Philip Sousa. Fireworks are expected to light up the sky at a Freedom Fest event at Fair Park.

Out west, Hereford will hold one of its first public July Fourth celebrations in 18 years with a parade

NWS: Sky may put on display

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

It's anyone's guess whether manmade fireworks or Mother Nature's thunder and lightning show will be displayed in Midland skies tonight, when the National Weather Service increases the chance of showers and thunderstorms to 40 percent.

According to the NWS, scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected to be most numerous tonight in the Permian Basin, Southeast Texas, the Panhandle and along the Coastal Plains.

However, relatively calm winds — southeast at 10-15 mph — won't be as likely to extinguish fireworks' fuses.

And even though there's been no rainfall recoreded in Midland so far, last month was wetter than usual, Gary Hancock, spokesperson for the state Climatologist Office at Texas A&M University, said.

"Midland, Del Rio, Lubbock, San Angelo and Abilene all received an unusually large amount of rain last month and

Bunton sentences man to boot camp

■ Given an option, man sentenced in LSD smuggling operation chooses to do time in Pennsylvania boot-camp style prison.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Christopher Davidson, sentenced Tuesday to two years in prison for concealing an LSD smuggling operation from authorities, will spend part of his sentence in a boot-camp style prison in Pennsylvania, officials said Wednesday.

Investigators said Davidson was involved with three other men in an attempt to smuggle "acid" into Midland from Albuquerque, N.M., last September.

Richard Russell, Midland's supervising federal probation officer, said Judge Lucius D. Bunton III gave Davidson the option of spending six months at the Intensive Confinement Center (ICC) in Lewisburg, Pa.

Davidson, in consultation with his attorney, Ray Moudy, agreed late Tuesday afternoon to participate in the program.

Moudy could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

"It's a voluntary thing," Russell said. "The big advantage for the defendant is that he is only in an incarcerated or locked up condition for six months, as opposed to 24 months."

If Davidson successfully completes the six-month ICC program, he will be placed in a halfway house for six months. Then he may be eligible for home confinement for the remainder of his sentence, Russell said.

The ICC program, housed on the grounds of the U.S. Penitentiary in Lewisburg, accepted its first participants in January.

To qualify for the program, offenders must be under 35 years old and be facing at least a 12-month sentence. They must be first-time prison inmates and qualify for minimum-security status.

Once enrolled in the program, participants undergo physical training including military drills. The six-day-a-week, 16-hour-a-day regimen includes academic and vocational classes, counseling and "labor intensive" work assignments, the prison's public information office reported.

"Obviously, one of the concepts of the program is to instill a degree of discipline within the people who participate in it," Russell said. "I think it's going to be a good program."

Russell said "three or four" people have been sentenced to the ICC program in Midland's U.S. District Court.

Among those was Clayton Wade Williams, the son of former gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams Jr.

Williams, 20, was sentenced to the boot camp program Feb. 25 after his conviction on LSD possession charges last December.

Reception honoring J. Evetts Haley set Friday

Staff Writer

Friday will mark a milestone in the life of acclaimed historian J. Evetts Haley and the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library.

As a result, library officials have formulated plans to celebrate Haley's birthday, as well as the 15th anniversary of the library's opening in Midland and the 30th anniversary of the creation of the Nita Stewart Haley Library Trust.

Three events are scheduled Friday, culminating with a 7 p.m. dinner at the Plaza Club, which will feature toasts by Bill Murchison, a columnist for The Dallas Morning News whose articles appear on the opinion pages of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, and B. Byron Price, executive director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, who will serve as master of ceremonies Friday evening.

Activities begin at 11 a.m. with a reception at the Haley Library to honor Western artist Tom Ryan. Ryan, who resides in Midland, is widely known for his Western scenes that depict the contemporary cowboy who still rides the ranges of the West. His work has been displayed in past art shows at the library, and an exhibit of his paintings will hang for one week at the library beginning Friday.

A native of Springfield, Ill., Ryan moved to West Texas in 1967. He has been painting and drawing the American cowboy since the 1950's and his work has graced the covers of 300 books. Ryan's works are held in the collections of the Phoenix Art Museum, National Cowboy Hall of Fame, Tucson Museum of Art, Diamond M Museum and the Cowboy

Senate panel hopes to 'get to bottom' of story of teen's forced commitment

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press writer

SAN ANTONIO — A Live Oak couple told a state Senate subcommittee Wednesday a private psychiatric hospital had their 14-year-old son hauled in against their wishes and kept him from them for nearly a week.

The couple was among several people testifying before the Senate Health Services Subcommittee about emergency apprehensions of mental patients and state laws governing such incidents.

The couple, who voluntarily had admitted their 12-year-old son to Colonial Hills Hospital in San Antonio four days earlier, said people appearing to be law officers came to their home April 12 to apprehend the older boy.

Officers from a private security firm reportedly told the couple the older son needed hospital care because of alleged substance abuse, truancy and other problems. The parents said they had no knowledge of those problems.

> 'I told him (a security officer) I do not live in Nazi Germany. I live in the United States.'
> — Testimony of mother of boy who was involuntarily committed to psychiatric hospital

"I told him (a security officer) I do not live in Nazi Germany. I live in the United States and said I'll do what the heck I want to do," the boy's mother testified.

The parents said they agreed to let the boy go to the hospital for 24 hours after they were told if they did not do so there would be a warrant issued to have him admitted for 28 days.

The youth was held for five days before state Sen. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, who represents the family, obtained a court order for his release.

Tejeda requested the subcommittee hearing because of the case, which was reported by the San Antonio Express-News. State Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, chairs the subcommittee.

Ms. Zaffirini said the Psychiatric Institute of America, the parent company of Colonial Hills, would submit written testimony to the subcommittee.

A call from The Associated Press to Colonial Hills was referred to the hospital administrator, who was not immediately available for comment.

How come working with our genius of the workplace isn't any fun?

Among other things, this is the Computer Age. And I reckon that it may not be the best thing that ever happened to mankind.

It drifts toward laziness.

I've not seen anything particularly good, outside of honest, scientific endeavors, in the computer. The computer is an aid in man's attempt to figure out the universe. That inquiry, surely, is a noble study.

To my notion, the measure of the goodness of a new product is in its benefits to the collective world and to the individual.

More than anything, it seems that computers make way for another way of doing the same old things.

Computer are economics. That's the whole deal. They are replacing mechanical typewriters and cash registers.

Computers, word processors, and all of those printed-circuit machines and their high-math wizardry are just tools of the marketplace.

That's all.

Mostly, computers have taken over this newspaper business. Most everybody, probably including some of the newsboys, have got to have their computers to keep track of whatever they keep track of. Pencil and paper won't do anymore.

Stories are written on these computer terminals that have a boob-tube face and a keyboard that doesn't simplify living.

Worst of all, farmers and ranchers who work directly with the soil and who are proud to get dirt under their fingernails increasing are going to the computer.

Somebody has sold them a bill of goods.

Bankers are putting their trust in computers.

Even some of those high-dollar, sophisticated airplanes, those (jets) without propellers, are computerized. Some of those supersonic, high-performance military jets can't be flown safely without an on-board computer. So, I'd stay off of those rascals. And the reasoning is not without cause. Computers are always going down. They do at businesses and at homes. This ol' backwoods boy had rather not place his safety in the jungled maze of a computer.

In so many respects, the computer and television have taken wonderment out of life. Now, they are marvels of science. The radio is a marvel. Who can explain why radio works? Sure, signals are transmitted through the sky and are received and interpreted. We observe the phenomenon and think nothing about it. But it is a wonderment. And so is television. The computer is an amazing electronic wonder.

But they should not direct our lives. As fast as it is, the computer, after all, only does what humans have programmed it to do. People make mistakes. Computers make mistakes.

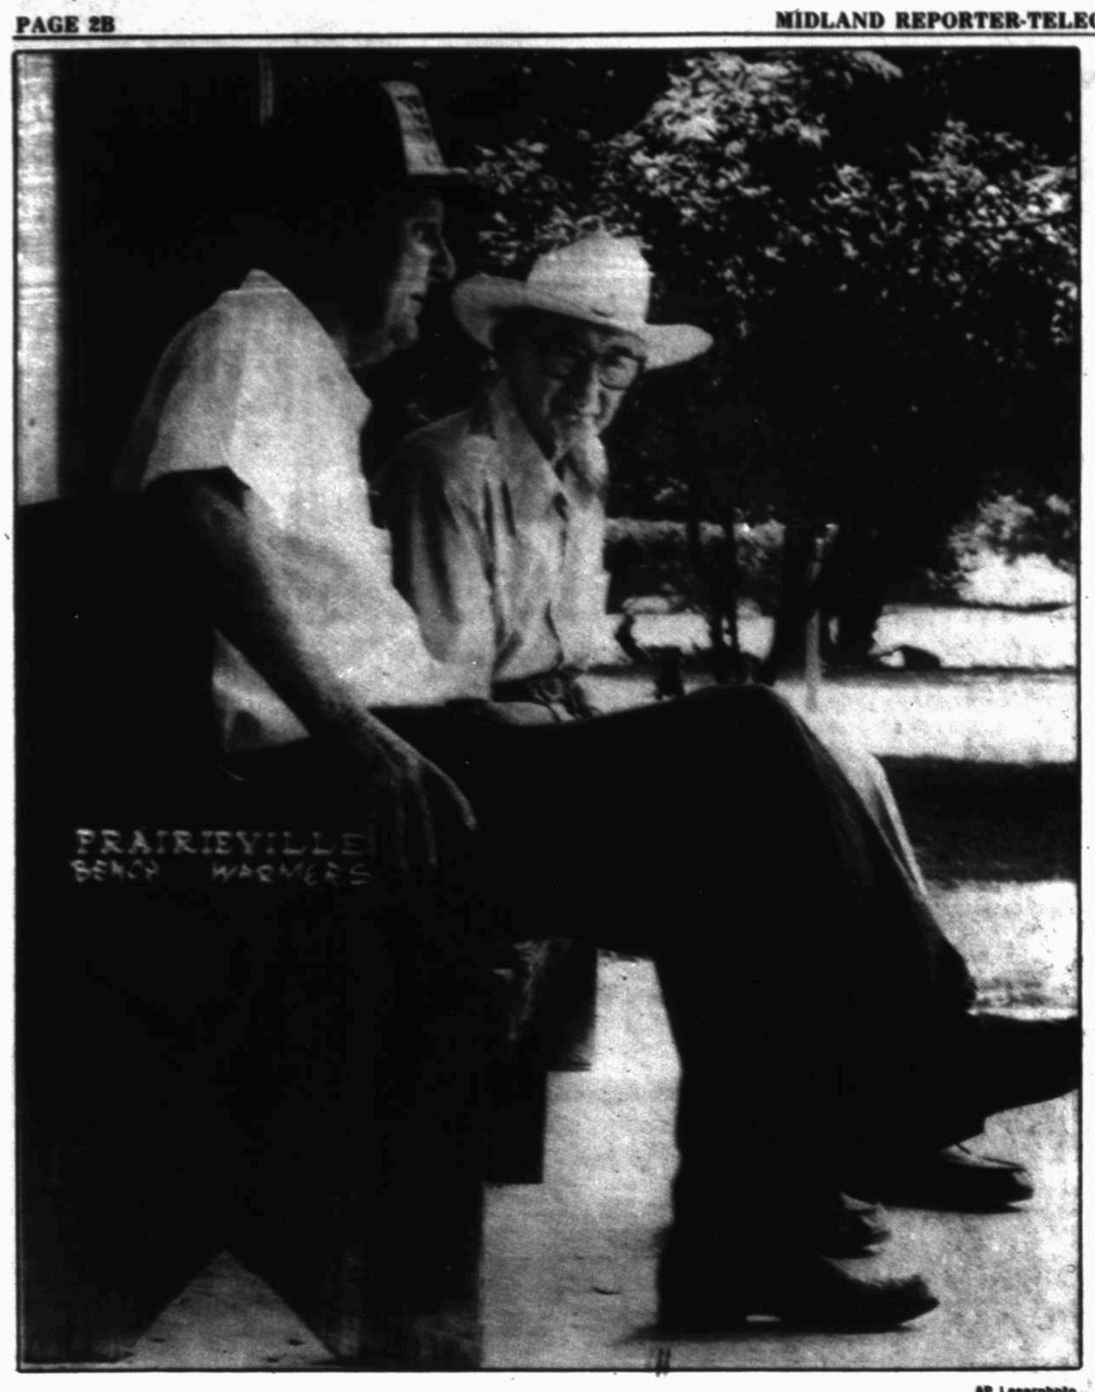

Computers, like the brick-and-mortar world we live in, often separate us from the real world. We don't want to mistake the map for the real thing. Soap operas are not the real world. Letting this fast-paced, computerized world run our lives is not the real world.

The real world is getting dirt under your fingernails, getting a splinter in your finger, feeding the chickens, walking in nature even if it's only in your own backyard, and closely observing and talking with the animals and other living things.

That's living. Take a break from all aspects of this computerized age and feel the sensation of fertile soil and the life it holds and promises.

Bench warmers set a spell in tiny Prairieville, Texas

By Dan Shine
Associated Press writer

PRAIRIEVILLE, Texas — One of the tenets of the Prairieville Bench Warmers Society is that a member must be male and at least 50 years old.

Society members will tell you with a wink that most women who are older than 50 won't admit it, thus securing the status as an all-male group.

But given the topics of conversation, it may be safe to say that most women wouldn't want to be part of this august society. Although members say they discuss serious matters such as politics and religion, one of their more heated debates was over spuds.

"They once got in an argument over whether the potatoes we were carrying were russet potatoes," said Girand Morgan, co-owner of the Prairieville Feed & Grocery Store.

"They finally went into town to buy one," Ms. Morgan said. "They always go places to prove who's right and who's wrong. They're real cute."

Ms. Morgan also is overseer of the bench on which a handful of the men in this Kaufman County town of about 350 park their hindquarters for a few hours each day.

The Prairieville Bench Warmers Society was loosely established around 1895 when the first bench was placed in front of the Prairieville Feed Store.

"Back in the old days, when the men weren't working in the fields they'd sit around the store and whittle some and chew tobacco," said Charles Gordon, 86, a lifelong resident of this community about 50 miles southeast of Dallas. "They'd argue about politics or the Bible. When we were teenagers we'd hang around the store and listen to the old-timers. It was a big deal."

Gordon brought the society official recognition in 1975 when he wrote a letter to the editor of the paper in nearby Mabank, Texas. Instead of signing his name, he signed the letter, "Prairieville Bench Warmers Society."

The official society charter, circa 1975, hangs on the wall of the local store.

Besides the age and gender requirements, bench warmers must be retired or semiretired. They also must sit on the bench an average of two hours a week. Looking at the bench or standing near it does not count, the doctrine states.

Gordon said women never took an interest in the society.

"Women didn't hang around much," he said. "They had quilting clubs in the wintertime, which was kind of the same thing. When they came to the store, they would just do their business and leave."

Ms. Morgan said she and co-owner LaFawn Waits enjoy having the men around. The pair reopened the feed store in 1984, after it had been closed for a few years, and added a grocery.

"The men came out and sat on the bench, even in the years when the store was closed," Ms. Morgan said.

When the two women began renovations, Ms. Morgan said, she sensed that the men were worried the bench would not be part of the new store. But there was no cause for fear.

"We moved in a new bench for them," Ms. Morgan said. "That old bench was pretty ragged."

Five or six men usually gather at the store in the morning and then again at about 4 p.m.

"When we close up at 7:30 p.m., sometimes they're still sitting outside," Ms. Morgan said.

One of Gordon's bench-sitting partners is Mack Farland Sapp, who has lived all his 66 years in Prairieville.

Sapp's family came to town in 1900 and he still owns the family farm, bought in 1908. Gordon's family settled in Prairieville in 1903.

Gordon recalls the flu epidemic of 1918 and 1919, forked cedar posts stuck in the middle of Main Street to tie up horses and roof-raising Friday night dances.

Sapp fondly remembers the blacksmith shop, a racehorse track and shopping in town on Saturday.

But the topic of conversation isn't always nostalgic.

"We talk about one thing or another," Sapp said. "Politics, what's in the news. A lot of times it's gossip. Whatever comes to our minds.

"It's just a general bull session."

The men usually know what's going on around town. And if they don't, they ask. But they don't usually miss out on much, because the store is the center of activity in the town.

Prairieville was settled by Johan Reinert Reiersen in 1847. Reiersen and his aide's writings back to their native Norway spurred a wave of Norwegian immigrants.

Along with the Danish, German, French and Swedish inhabitants, Prairieville had about 80 Norwegian settlers and was the first Norwegian settlement in Texas.

On a wall in the feed store and grocery is an old map of Prairieville. Sketched by hand, it sections off land to families such as the Carlisles, Olsons, Halins and Pearsons.

In the 1850s, the Stagecoach Inn housed the post office and was the station for two stage lines.

Farmers cultivated cotton, corn, hay, peas and tomatoes. The population reached about 200 in the early days.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Fatality

Staff Report

CRANE — One man was killed and three others injured in a one-vehicle accident about one mile north of Crane on U.S. Highway 385 Tuesday evening, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Billy Dean Neel, 27, of Crane, was pronounced dead at Odessa Medical Center Hospital about 11:05 p.m. as a result of the accident, which occurred about 8:30 p.m.

According to reports, Neel was a passenger in a 1988 Ford pickup driven by Elmer Paul Lawrence, also of Crane.

The truck, southbound on U.S. 385, went off the right side of the road, was overcorrected to the left, travelled into the center dividing lane and rolled twice, reports stated.

Lawrence, 24, was taken to Crane Memorial Hospital where he remained in stable condition Wednesday with bruises and lacerations.

Two passengers, Charles Wayne Meurer, 20, and Elmer Bates Ward, 19, were also transported to the Crane hospital where they were treated and released, reports stated.

Robbery report

A 62-year-old woman had her purse robbed early Wednesday morning by a masked man wielding a tire iron, police said.

The woman told police she had pulled into Mr. M's Food Store, 1100 N. Big Spring Street, about 4:40 a.m. and was preparing to go to work when the robbery took place.

A man with a tire iron approached her, demanded and took her purse then ran from the scene. Contents of the purse included credit cards and a checkbook.

The suspect was described as a male, 6 feet tall and 165-170 pounds, who was wearing a dark shirt and pants, and an unknown type of material over his head and face at the time.

Arrest

ODESSA — A 17-year-old man was arrested Wednesday and charged with attempted murder in connection with the stabbing of a 65-year-old man about 11 a.m. that day, police said.

Charlie Hill, who suffered three stab wounds, was in critical condition in the intensive care unit at Medical Center Hospital Wednesday, hospital officials said.

The man arrested in connection with the incident remained in jail pending arraignment.

According to police, Hill, who lives at 1509 E. 23rd Street, became engaged in a fight with another occupant — armed with a baseball bat — at the residence.

A third person, believed to be the man jailed, then became involved stabbing Hill once in the chest and twice in the back, police said.

Fire

ODESSA — Firefighters responded to a major house fire in north Odessa late Wednesday evening, fire officials said.

Four units spent about 45 minutes dousing the fire which began about 5:45 p.m. at 5408 Conley Place, officials said.

No one was injured in the incident.

Cause of the fire was not available late Wednesday, officials said.

NWS: June rainfall totaled 3.5 inches in Midland finished the first half of 1991 with cumulative totals slightly above normal," he said.

In June, Midland received 3.5 inches of rain, compared to the average amount of 1.44 inches.

The rainfall total for the first half of the year in Midland is 6.10 inches, which is slightly higher than the average half year total of 5.84.

Midland's average annual rainfall is 13.70 inches.

"With an exception of an unusually wet June, folks in the western half of the state have experienced somewhat drier-than-normal weather," Hancock said. "The eastern side of the state, though, has literally turned to mud."

According to Hancock, four weather stations — Galveston, Houston, Victoria and Port Arthur — exceeded their average January to June precipitation levels by at least 14.5 inches, and Port Arthur earned distinction as the state's wettest locale halfway through 1991.

The Port Arthur station received 49.10 inches of rain, nearly 26 inches above its norm and only 3.69 inches shy of its average annual rainfall total of 52.79 inches.

The rains last month cooled off the Tall City, a respite from June 1990, which was the hottest summer month last year.

"The average daily maximum temperature in June 1990 was 108," said a spokesperson for the NWS in Midland. "The highest June 1990 temperature was 109 on and the lowest was 64."

By comparison, the high temperature last month was 100 on June 18 and 21. The low temperature was 60 June 7.

Midland's weather the first half of 1991 had few surprises outside of the frequent June thunderstorms, Hancock said.

"Midland entered June with below-normal precipitation totals for 1991 and finished the first half of 1991 with cumulative totals slightly above normal — due to an unusually large amount of rain last month," Hancock says.

HALEY: Acclaimed historian turning 90 Friday

(From 1B)

Artists of America Museum in Kerrville.

Haley, who is celebrating his 90th birthday Friday, will be on hand at the library for a reception from 3-4 p.m. and will greet well-wishers.

The public is invited to attend all three events although reservations are required for the evening dinner. Those wishing to purchase tickets or reserve tables may call the Haley Library at 682-5785. Tickets are $30 each for the prime rib dinner or a table for eight may be reserved for $300.

One of the highlights of the day will be the unveiling of a new book published by the Haley Library. Called "Vintage Reader's Handbook," the book is comprised of selected quotations from Haley's various works chosen by 25 fans and students of the author and collectors of his writings.

The selected quotations range over his entire writing career from the well-known biography on trailblazer Charles Goodnight, "Charles Goodnight: Cowman & Plainsman," to his most controversial book, "A Texan Looks at Lyndon: An Study in Illegitimate Power," and his family history called "Rough Times-Tough Fiber."

The new book, which costs $10 in paperback or $50 in hardback, is on sale at the Haley Library.

Born on July 5, 1901, in Bell County, Haley came to Midland in 1906 with his parents, John A. and Julia Evetts Haley. He remained to become a rancher, noted historian, and prolific writer who, over the span of half a century, wrote more than 25 books and hundreds of magazine and newspaper articles.

In 1976 the historian brought to Midland the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library from Canyon where the author had lived for many years. The library bears the name of his first wife. Contained in the Spanish-style structure are more than 16,000 volumes on the cowboy, ranching and the cattle industry, works of art and Western memorabilia.

Eat your garlic — it's good for your heart, cholesterol, blood pressure and attitude

"Garlic has been a folk medicine for centuries — and with justification." So concludes Dr. David Kritchevsky, a leading researcher at Philadelphia's Wistar Institute, after reviewing 38 medicinal studies on garlic.

Carper

Dr. Kritchevsky notes that nine out of 12 studies on humans show that daily doses of garlic reduced blood cholesterol by 8 percent to 21 percent, usually within a few weeks. In one case, doses as low as 5 grams of crushed fresh garlic per day, about 1½ garlic cloves, reduced cholesterol in six men by 13 percent within three weeks.

Perhaps more important, Dr. Kritchevsky notes that human tests of garlic suggest it fights several heart disease risks at once, including high blood pressure and unwanted blood clots.

There's even evidence it helps counteract the ill-effects on blood of eating fat. In one test subjects fed 3½ ounces of butter, saw their pro-blood clotting factors soar. But when they also got garlic juice, the butter's power to promote clots was greatly diminished.

Still, don't go overboard. Excessive garlic can cause anemia, weight loss, dermatitis and asthma, says Dr. Kritchevsky.

"I take vitamin E"

It's extremely rare: an expert admitting in a prominent nutritional journal that he takes vitamin E supplements. But that's what Max H. Horwitt, St Louis University School of Medicine, did. Furthermore, he noted that about half of the biologists at a recent meeting, raised their hands when asked if they, too, were taking vitamin E.

Why take vitamin megadoses when many experts have told us we get all we need in our food? Do these scientists know something we don't?

Yes, says Dr. Horwitt. He stresses: "I am not taking it as a vitamin. I am taking it as an antioxidant" which he says is quite different. In other words, he is taking vitamin E to help neutralize agents called oxygen-free radicals that destroy cells and have been linked to promoting cancer, heart disease and a score of other diseases. In this case, the vitamin E functions more as a drug than a vitamin.

Dr. Horwitt takes 400 IU (international units) of d-alpha tocopherol every other day. Look for the d-alpha type ("simply ask for natural vitamin E"), he advises. It is more expensive than the synthetic, but more beneficial in the long run, he asserts.

The right diet

The gold-standard for how much of a vitamin or mineral you need is supposed to be the RDA's (recommended dietary allowances). But is this really enough to stave off heart disease and cancer? Apparently not, according to diets recommended by the National Cancer Institute and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Their diets contain far more of certain vitamins and minerals than the RDA's say you need, according to an analysis by Dr. Paul LaChance, a noted food scientist at Rutgers.

For example, the National Cancer Institute's dietary advice calls for about two and a half times more vitamin E, four times more vitamin C, and twice as much folic acid as the RDA's. All of these vitamins, studies show, rank high in the diets of people less likely to develop cancer.

Most striking, the anti-cancer diet, low in fat and high in plant foods, also fights heart disease, points out Dr. LaChance. In fact, the nutrient composition of the two diets is nearly identical. Such a diet "is getting both our No. 1 and No. 2 killers," he says.

In contrast, the RDA's appear too low to protect against such modern chronic diseases.

Exercise is key to permanent weight loss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The most important factor in losing weight permanently is physical exercise, according to many experts.

A University of California study by Dr. Judith S. Stem found that 90 percent of successful dieters exercised regularly.

The reason exercise is so important for weight loss is that it burns calories even when you aren't working out. It does it by increasing your resting metabolic rate.

Study: Everything gives you cancer

Experts volley health, death statistics amid studies

By Vince Kowalick
Los Angeles Daily News

LOS ANGELES — Don't get mad, get married. You'll live longer.

Stay away from electric blankets and bundle up the old-fashioned way. You'll live longer.

And don't eat too much fatty food. Yes, you'll live longer — maybe for only a few months, but longer.

Hey, studies say so.

Don't eat this. Don't drink that. Do more of this, but stop doing that.

Pick a lifestyle, occupation, hobby, haudies, like the weather, have a habit of changing, and chances are that if you wait awhile, a new study will contradict the previous one.

"You hear some of these things and you say, 'Gee, that sounds wierd,' " said Leslie Cushing-Murray, a North Hollywood graphic designer. "But just because someone says it doesn't mean it's necessarily true."

Cushing-Murray wasn't the only one whose eyebrows were raised recently by a study that seemingly flies in the face of everything doctors, nutrition experts and the public have believed for years.

Last week, researchers from the University of California, San Francisco, reported that cutting fat from your diet would only increase your life span by about three or four months.

Cushing-Murray, 38, said she has been reading books about nutrition for years while keeping in shape. And she's not about to start scarfing down the cheeseburgers now.

"I don't believe that study," she said. "I believe if you eat a lot of fat, it's not good for you."

Naturally, many medical experts attacked the study, labeling it either incomplete, inconclusive or just plain damaging in what it suggests.

"It's an unfortunate study because it gives the casual reader of any newspaper who just sees the headline the idea that diet doesn't matter very much," said Dean Ornish, director of the Preventive Medicine Research Institute at UC San Francisco. "One study like this that tells people what they want to hear can offset a thousand studies."

'At first you look at these studies and you have to think, 'Oh boy, maybe that's going to mean me.' But then you also have to realize that studies are studies, figures lie and liars figure. You can't go by that. You have to not really worry about it and live life to the fullest.'

— Scott Goebl, "doomed" left-hander

No problem. A thousand more are sure to follow. Deciding what to believe while sorting through the piles of files is where it can become tricky.

Some well-researched do's and don'ts of the recent past:

In December, researchers at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., reported that people who often explode in hostile rages or bottle their anger over every little thing gone awry may be at greater risk of heart disease than even cigarette smokers.

A study two months earlier at UC San Francisco reported that middle-aged men who are single are twice as likely to die as those who are married.

Over the past six months, after about a decade of research, scientists have been issuing warnings that electromagnetic fields emitted from electric blankets and other small household appliances might cause serious health problems, including cancer.

In April, a congressional study said that adolescents are at a greater risk of accidents, homicides and suicides today than any age group.

Been thinking of moving? Go west — or stay west if you're already there.

According to a study published in January by the American Heart Association, Americans living in the deep South have a greater chance of dying of heart disease than Americans living west of the Mississippi.

By now, everyone knows to avoid secondhand tobacco smoke. But how do you avoid being left-handed?

You guessed it: In April, a pair of psychologists reported that left-handed people — an estimated 10 percent of the population — die an average of nine years sooner than right-handed people.

Scott Goebl, a 28-year-old UCLA graduate student and left-hander, used to consider himself a member of "an exclusive club." But if statistics prove true, suddenly Goebl has one foot — probably his left — in the grave.

"At first you look at these studies and you have to think, 'Oh boy, maybe that's going to mean me,'" Goebl said. "But then you also have to realize that studies are studies, figures lie and liars figure. You can't go by that. You have to not really worry about it and live life to the fullest.

"As far as being left-handed, I'm not going to switch hands because of some study."

That's good advice to live by. According to Rob Coppock, a senior program officer for the National Research Council in Washington, D.C., a person should consider all available information before evaluating any published research.

"John Q. Public needs to take everything and judge it with everything else," Coppock said. "What is the source of this (study)? Has that source been reliable in the past? Are they fair and balanced this time? And what do other organizations say about those studies?"

In 1989, Coppock headed a council committee that published a report on risk management, which examined how issues of health and environmental hazards could be better communicated to the public.

"There is some very complex information being communicated," Coppock said. "Look at saccharin. There is something that has been given permit as a product or has been banned five times based on what health experts said."

The end result often is a confused public.

"The fat study is perceived as conflicting with earlier studies by some people," Ornish of UC San Francisco said. "So these people say, 'These doctors don't know what they are talking about, so I'm not going to change what I eat.' But it's not that the study is wrong, it's that it is incomplete."

John Peters, a USC professor of preventive medicine and director of the School of Medicine's Division of Occupational Health, said the purpose of research is not to ultimately change the public's behavior but to raise questions. The role of researchers is to examine major causes of illness or morbidity — like smoking or occupational hazards — and make the public aware of findings.

"The responsibility of public-health people is to let people know what the risks are and what they can do to avoid them," Peters said. "You can do quite a bit about a lot of things and, as a matter of fact, many Americans have. That's an ongoing testimony to that approach."

Many studies certainly don't warrant having their findings etched in stone. But that shouldn't discourage scientists from continuing to research, Coppock said.

Special legislative session set July 15

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards on Wednesday officially summoned the Legislature to a July 15 special session, where she wants lawmakers to cut waste and consolidate agencies before writing their 1992-93 budget.

The session will open seven weeks before the end of the current two-year budget cycle, on Aug. 31.

Richards said she wasn't worried about winding up in the same boat as Connecticut, where government agencies shut down this week after lawmakers and the governor failed to agree on a budget.

"I have no fear of that at all. I think that the Legislature is ready to move," Richards said.

"I think we're going to be up and running. The whole question is whether or not the Legislature gets bogged down in minutiae. And if that occurs, then we're going to be here for a long time. But the possibility of moving it very quickly is there."

However, Richards also indicated that delay was a possibility. "I said before, I think we're going to be here three weeks or three months," she said.

The Legislature's 140-day regular session ended May 27 without passage of a two-year budget.

State income for 1992-93 is projected to total $52.3 billion, but legislative budget analysts have projected a $4.6 billion deficit if all services are continued at their present levels.

Last week, state Comptroller John Sharp proposed 975 changes — agency mergers, about 1,000 layoffs and programs to attract more federal funds — he said would save and raise $5.2 billion.

Richards endorsed that plan.

"As those cuts and consolidations are achieved, we will move onto the question of actually putting together an appropriations bill and the budget," Richards said.

The governor said some lobbyists and other special interests might be taking potshots at the audit, but she predicted lawmakers would adopt it.

"There may be some specific special interest concerns, and I think that the lobby has already begun to get busy on that. But from the Legislature, I think that they are in agreement and I think they're ready to move," she said.

A top Republican lawmaker blasted Richards, saying she hadn't shown leadership before and now was trying to jump on Sharp's audit bandwagon.

"Ann Richards hasn't even offered her own plan (for a budget) ... She was AWOL on school finance, ethics and virtually every other major issue that confronted the recent legislative session," said Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, who chairs the House Republican Caucus.

"Once the parade for spending cuts and reform got under way, it was only a matter of time before Ann tried to force her way in at the head of the parade," he said.

The governor controls agendas for special sessions. Richards said there were many other topics being discussed but that she would limit the agenda until budget issues were resolved.

Richards said she expected lawmakers to revise the main Texas business tax, corporate franchise tax, which has been under court challenge for years. But that change won't raise lots of extra cash, she said.

Richards, who last week said an income tax wouldn't be needed, also said she will demand improved government efficiency before considering the possibility of any new taxes.

"Everything I heard from the people last year (while campaigning) was that they believed there is too much fat in government, that government needs to be cut. I don't' think you begin talking about taxation ... before you talk about economizing and doing everything you can to save money," she said.

Richards also said she wants lawmakers to give her the power to directly hire and fire the heads of some agencies in a more cabinet-style government.

Currently, most agency directors answer to independent boards and commissions. Board members are appointed by the governor, but their overlapping six-year terms mean each new governor inherits a predecessor's appointees for four years.

"There is agreement generally that people believe there has to be more accountability," Richards said. "It is necessary to wage war in the newspapers and every other way to be able to get an agency to move when you know it is not functioning well."

Richard's office to investigate TABC allegations

HOUSTON (AP) — The enforcement chief at the state's alcoholic beverage agency denies reports that state alcohol laws are being enforced selectively to discriminate against Arabs, Hispanics and blacks.

The Houston Chronicle reported Wednesday that Gov. Ann Richards' staff is investigating recurring complaints that the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission discriminates in its enforcement practices.

Larry Sullivan, TABC chief of enforcement and marketing practices, said the complaints, many of which have come from minority owners of clubs and of bingo halls regulated by the agency, are without merit.

"The allegations are totally false. We want to meet with these people, because we are not selectively enforcing the law," Sullivan said.

But Annette LoVoi, Richards' ombudsman, said, "I've been contacted by an awful lot of people about selective enforcement, whether or not regulation is handled in an even-handed way."

"I cannot attest to whether or not it's selective enforcement," said Glenn Lewis, an attorney for two convenience stores run by Jordanians in Fort Worth. "All I can talk about is the clients I've represented ... and the TABC seems to be riding them for no apparent reason."

Cholera outbreak on border a case of 'when,' not 'if'

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Conditions in substandard El Paso County neighborhoods are identical to those in Peruvian areas that were devastated by a cholera epidemic earlier this year.

"The Pan American Health Organization has issued a statement that it's not a matter of if cholera will hit the border, but when," said Dr. Laurance Nickey, El Paso city-county health director.

Nickey said there is no need to panic because no cholera cases have been reported within hundreds of miles of the U.S.-Mexico border.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: An outsider will play an unusual role in your personal fortunes in the coming months. Think positive about certain changes and be willing to assume additional responsibilities. New financial benefits depend on your dedication to hard work in November. Romantic ties will be tested but survive the challenge. Stay close to home at Christmas. Travel will produce the greatest pleasure and best business results in early spring of 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: trumpeter Louis Armstrong, playwright Neil Simon, advice columnists Dear Abby and Ann Landers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A delay is temporary. Catch up on paperwork and budget-connected tasks. Timely reports and memos play an important role in advancing your career. Build momentum for tackling a major creative project.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Review your travel plans before starting out. Your past relationship with an attractive member of the opposite sex could interfere with a current romance. Watch your step! Avoid temptation at all times.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A strong-willed person makes unreasonable demands. You size up the situation and handle it beautifully. A young person offers excellent business advice — follow it and become richer! Romance is dazzling.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Delays and postponements are annoying but give you more time to prepare an important presentation. The afternoon is profitably spent on activities with which you do not require assistance. Repay favors promptly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work routines may have a difficult time getting off the ground today. Heed your intuition if uncertain how to attain your goals. Body language is very revealing in business negotiations. Pay attention!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Although an influential person offers sound advice, there could be strings attached. Avoid giving the impression you are ultrapossessive in romance or a relationship will never get off the ground. Act confident.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The direct approach will work best now. You win what you want in business or romance. Past mistakes will be forgiven by your loved ones. Vow to do better in the future!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep some funds tucked away and you will have nothing to worry about. New faces and places, friends nearby or far away — each holds strong interest today. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Socializing with influential people could get you valuable inside information. This data could be like money in the bank. Guard it closely. Rearranging your desk and dresser drawers will make you more efficient.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Agreements come together fast today. A long-awaited merger takes place. Romantic partner or people at a distance play a key role in the day's drama. Your love life is on the upswing!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are back on track again. Success beckons. Be on the lookout for the unexpected or unusual, as that is where you will discover the richest rewards. Be less demanding in romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can expect some turbulence today. Higher-ups could rattle you with new demands. Be patient and keep your temper in check.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are real go-getters despite their somewhat dreamy nature. Any work that helps others will appeal greatly to these idealistic Cancerians. A quiet home atmosphere makes these youngsters feel peaceful and happy. Their sense of duty is very strong toward their family, friends and employers. The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

Here's a test of your dummy-play technique. Cover the East-West cards with your thumbs and decide how you would play four spades after a heart lead.

Note that, despite a hand loaded with playing tricks, South had no inclination to look for slam after receiving a spade raise from North. The South hand contained five losers, and to hope that North, who could do no more than make a single raise, would take care of more than two of them would be the height of optimism.

At the table, declarer won the heart in dummy and led a spade to the king. When West showed out, declarer eventually had to concede one trick in each suit for down one.

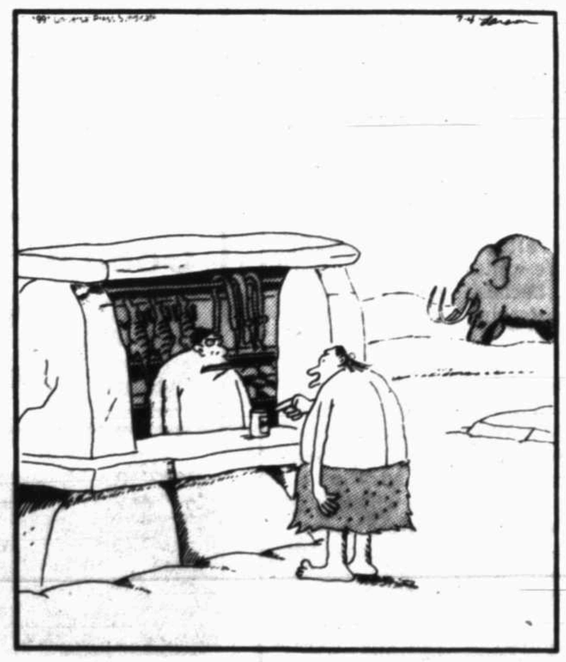

Let's see what would happen if, at trick two, declarer were to lead the deuce of trumps and take an against-the-odds finesse. As the cards lie, the finesse would win and the contract would be home. "That's the play of a result merchant," you would say. Not so. It's a play that guarantees the contract.

Suppose East follows and West wins the queen. The best the defenders can do is to cash their heart trick and shift to clubs. Declarer wins the club, draws the remaining trump and leads a diamond to the king and ace. East perseveres with clubs, but declarer is in charge. After winning the club, South leads the three of spades and overtakes with dummy's five. The club loser goes on the queen of diamonds, and the contract is home, but only just.

At worst, declarer's play gives up an overtrick. At best, it brings home a game that would otherwise have been defeated.

Lee Iacocca an artist? It's all to benefit the Detroit Institute

DETROIT — A funding crisis at the Detroit Institute of Arts has prompted Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca and other local celebrities to create art for art's sake to bring in some bucks.

Iacocca

A brush of commercialism did touch some of the canvases painted for a July 13 auction at the museum.

Iacocca's drawing, "Detroit... Driving the Nation," contains two Chrysler emblems. Detroit Tigers broadcaster Ernie Harwell painted "Baseball Results," a series of smiling and frowning baseball faces.

Other works to be auctioned include pieces from Motown singers Martha Reeves and Mary Wilson, police chief Stanley Knox, and former Detroit Pistons star Dave Bing.

FORT VALLEY, Ga. — Actor Carl Payne, known from "The Cosby Show" as Theo Huxtable's high school buddy Cockroach, likes his current role even though it doesn't reach as wide an audience.

Payne, who made a stop Tuesday at Fort Valley State College to visit teen-agers producing a local talk show, is a member of the cast of the touring gospel musical, "Wicked Ways."

"You can't do something like this in television," said Payne, 22. "I get to do acting and ministering through the play. I'm a strong believer in God and this is a way to get his message across." Payne described himself as a strict African Methodist Episcopalian.

In "Wicked Ways," Payne plays Snap, a minister's son, who hangs out with the wrong crowd and begins dealing drugs. After a series of tragedies he begins to realize his new lifestyle goes against his Christian upbringing.

NEW ORLEANS — Maxim Shostakovich, who quit as music director of the New Orleans Symphony in April because he hadn't been paid the entire season, will be back in the fall to conduct four performances.

No figure was mentioned in Tuesday's announcement, except to say Shostakovich, son of the late Russian composer Dmitri Shostakovich, had been paid.

At the time of his resignation, there were reports that Shostakovich was owed $100,000 for the previous two seasons.

Edwin Lupberger, president of the debt-plagued symphony board, said Shostakovich will carry the new title of principal conductor.

The money to pay Shostakovich came from a $1 million fund-raising program led by Adelaide Benjamin, who donated $500,000, Lupberger said.

Princess Diana spent her 30th birthday alone this week, and the British tabloids are reporting that she and Prince Charles have no plans to celebrate their 10th anniversary, which is July 29. The marriage, said the Daily Star of London, is "in tatters."

Daily Mail gossip columnist Nigel Dempster said the princess had rejected her husband's offer to throw her a birthday party.

The absence of birthday and anniversary merriment will have an obvious impact. "Royal circles are genuinely concerned at the comment this will cause," wrote Dempster.

Only one royal-watcher, Jane Moore of the newspaper Today, seemed unconcerned. "The golden handcuffs may chafe from time to time," she wrote, "but the prince and princess of Wales have settled down happily to a mutually agreed pattern of marriage."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Singer Lee Greenwood gave the shirt off his back to an Army private heading for the Gulf War. Months later, he brought the soldier back on stage at a concert.

Greenwood

Pfc. Macelle Petty, who is stationed at the Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Ala., with the 1st Infantry Division, attended a Greenwood concert in January, only days before she received her orders to report to the Middle East.

"Lee was wearing a black sweatshirt with an American flag on it," Petty said Wednesday. "I said, 'If I have to go to Saudi Arabia, I want to take that shirt with me!' My friends dared me to ask him for it," Petty said.

A note was sent to Greenwood and he read it to the audience.

"He asked me to come up on stage," Petty said. "I was freakin' out! He put his arm around me and sang 'God Bless the U.S.A.' He asked me when I was leaving for Saudi, and I told him it could be any day.

"He took off that shirt right there and gave it to me, and he gave me a hug and a kiss."

Petty celebrated her 22nd birthday in the desert before she returned in April. At an Opryland USA concert last month, Greenwood called Petty up on stage, and again sang "God Bless the U.S.A." That concert is being aired Thursday cable TV's TNN.

Search begins off Pacific island reef for Earhart's plane

By Bob Dart
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — It was 54 years ago Tuesday that Amelia Earhart assessed her dwindling fuel supply, landed her Lockheed Electra on a flat reef fringing an uninhabited Pacific isle, and began "almost a Robinson Crusoe situation."

At least that's the hypothesis that is spurring a high-tech autumn expedition to the isolated atoll of Nikumaroro by The International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery (TIGHAR) to search for the famed aviator's plane more than 1,000 feet deep on the ocean floor.

The historians hope to solve "a mystery that has intrigued, fascinated and baffled the world for half a century," said Richard Gillespie, director for TIGHAR's Earhart Project.

On a 1989 expedition to Nikumaroro, known as Gardner Island when Amelia Earhart disappeared on a 1937 round-the-world flight, a team led by Gillespie found a metal box they believe was used to carry maps on the vanished plane.

A newly discovered photograph of Ms. Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, beside their open-doored plane shows what the explorers believe is the map box inside the cabin. The photo, found last March in the Purdue University archives, is labeled "Darwin, Australia." The pilot and navigator spent a night in Port Darwin, Australia, on June 28, 1937, before heading to New Guinea — the last stop before their disappearance.

The mystery of Amelia Earhart's final flight has intrigued the world and inspired authors for five decades. She missed her destination of Howland Island, the next-to-last scheduled stop on her globe-circling venture, and vanished after losing radio contact with a waiting Coast Guard cutter.

Theories of what happened to her range from a simple crash into the sea after running out of fuel to being taken prisoner by the Japanese as a spy.

"I'm as certain as I can be" without actually finding the plane or the aviators' remains that "we have the answer to the Earhart mystery," Gillespie said Tuesday at a Washington press conference. The non-profit group hopes to find that final evidence during a two-week stay on Nikumaroro island, located about 2,100 miles southwest of Hawaii.

A remote-controlled sonar device will scan the ocean floor for up to half a mile off the flat reef that surrounds the island.

According to the TIGHAR hypothesis, the Earhart plane flew into Nikumaroro at about 10:30 a.m. on July 2, 1937, with only about two hours of fuel left. The tide was low, exposing the flat reef that surrounded the island, and the pilot landed safely on the reef.

Radio signals were reportedly received from the Earhart plane for three days after it disappeared. During this period, Gillespie theorized, the current at high tide gradually pushed the plane seaward until it reached the edge of the reef and sank into the deep surrounding water.

Meanwhile, Ms. Earhart and Noonan took the metal box of maps and other materials off the plane and set up a camp on the island. A U.S. Navy search plane flew over Nikumaroro on July 9, a week after the disappearance, and reported seeing signs of recent habitation but no people, Gillespie recalled.

The island had not been inhabited since 1892, said Gillespie. He believes the surviving aviators set up a camp "in almost a Robinson Crusoe situation."

They could have lived for weeks or even months, he said, but eventually died of thirst because the island has no source of fresh water.

During World War II, a U.S. Coast Guard station was set up on the island. Gillespie said there have been unconfirmed reports that some of the servicemen found a campsite with a device to collect rainwater.

Gillespie concedes that "there is an elusive quality to historical investigation."

Californians' 'lotto ennui' causes slump

By John Flinn
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — It's getting harder these days to work up much excitement for winning a lousy $8 million.

It takes a whopping, obscenely huge, bigger-than-the-gross-national-product-of-Finland lottery jackpot, like April's world record $118.8 million, to get the crowds lining up down at the corner minimart.

Anything less, lottery officials have discovered, is pretty much chump change.

Lotto ennui — the ugly flip side of lottomania — is one of the factors being blamed by California lottery officials for a disturbing and continuing slump in ticket sales. Others are the recession and California's failure to get more "instant win" games on the market.

The lottery is projecting sales of only $2.1 billion for the current fiscal year, about 26 percent less than they originally expected. Projections for next year are an even lower $2 billion.

In an effort to cut costs, lottery officials are laying off 172 workers and slashing next year's advertising budget by more than 20 percent.

Public schools, which get a third of lottery proceeds, are expected to receive $711 million next fiscal year, down about 32 percent from the original forecast of $1.05 billion at the outset of the current year.

Many people think gambling flourishes during tough economic times such as these, but a study by the state lottery shows otherwise. Per-capita lottery spending has been falling for the last three quarters in 15 other states tracked by California officials.

"California is experiencing the same kinds of problems as other lottery states, but because it's so big, the problems are magnified," said Bill Bergman, executive director of the North American Association of State and Provincial Lotteries.

"Everybody wishes they could figure it out."

California lottery sales are also suffering from the lack of "instant win" games in addition to the "Scratcher" series, according to Mike McKinney, an analyst employed by the state lottery.

"Some other states have as many as 13 different games going at once," said McKinney.

Retailers, he said, have resisted adding instant games because of accounting and administrating problems. There have also been legal roadblocks.

"Our research shows that different players react to different kinds of games," he said.

Other states typically show a 17 percent jump in "instant win" ticket sales with the introduction of a new game, McKinney said. However, some of that increase may come at the expense of lotto ticket sales.

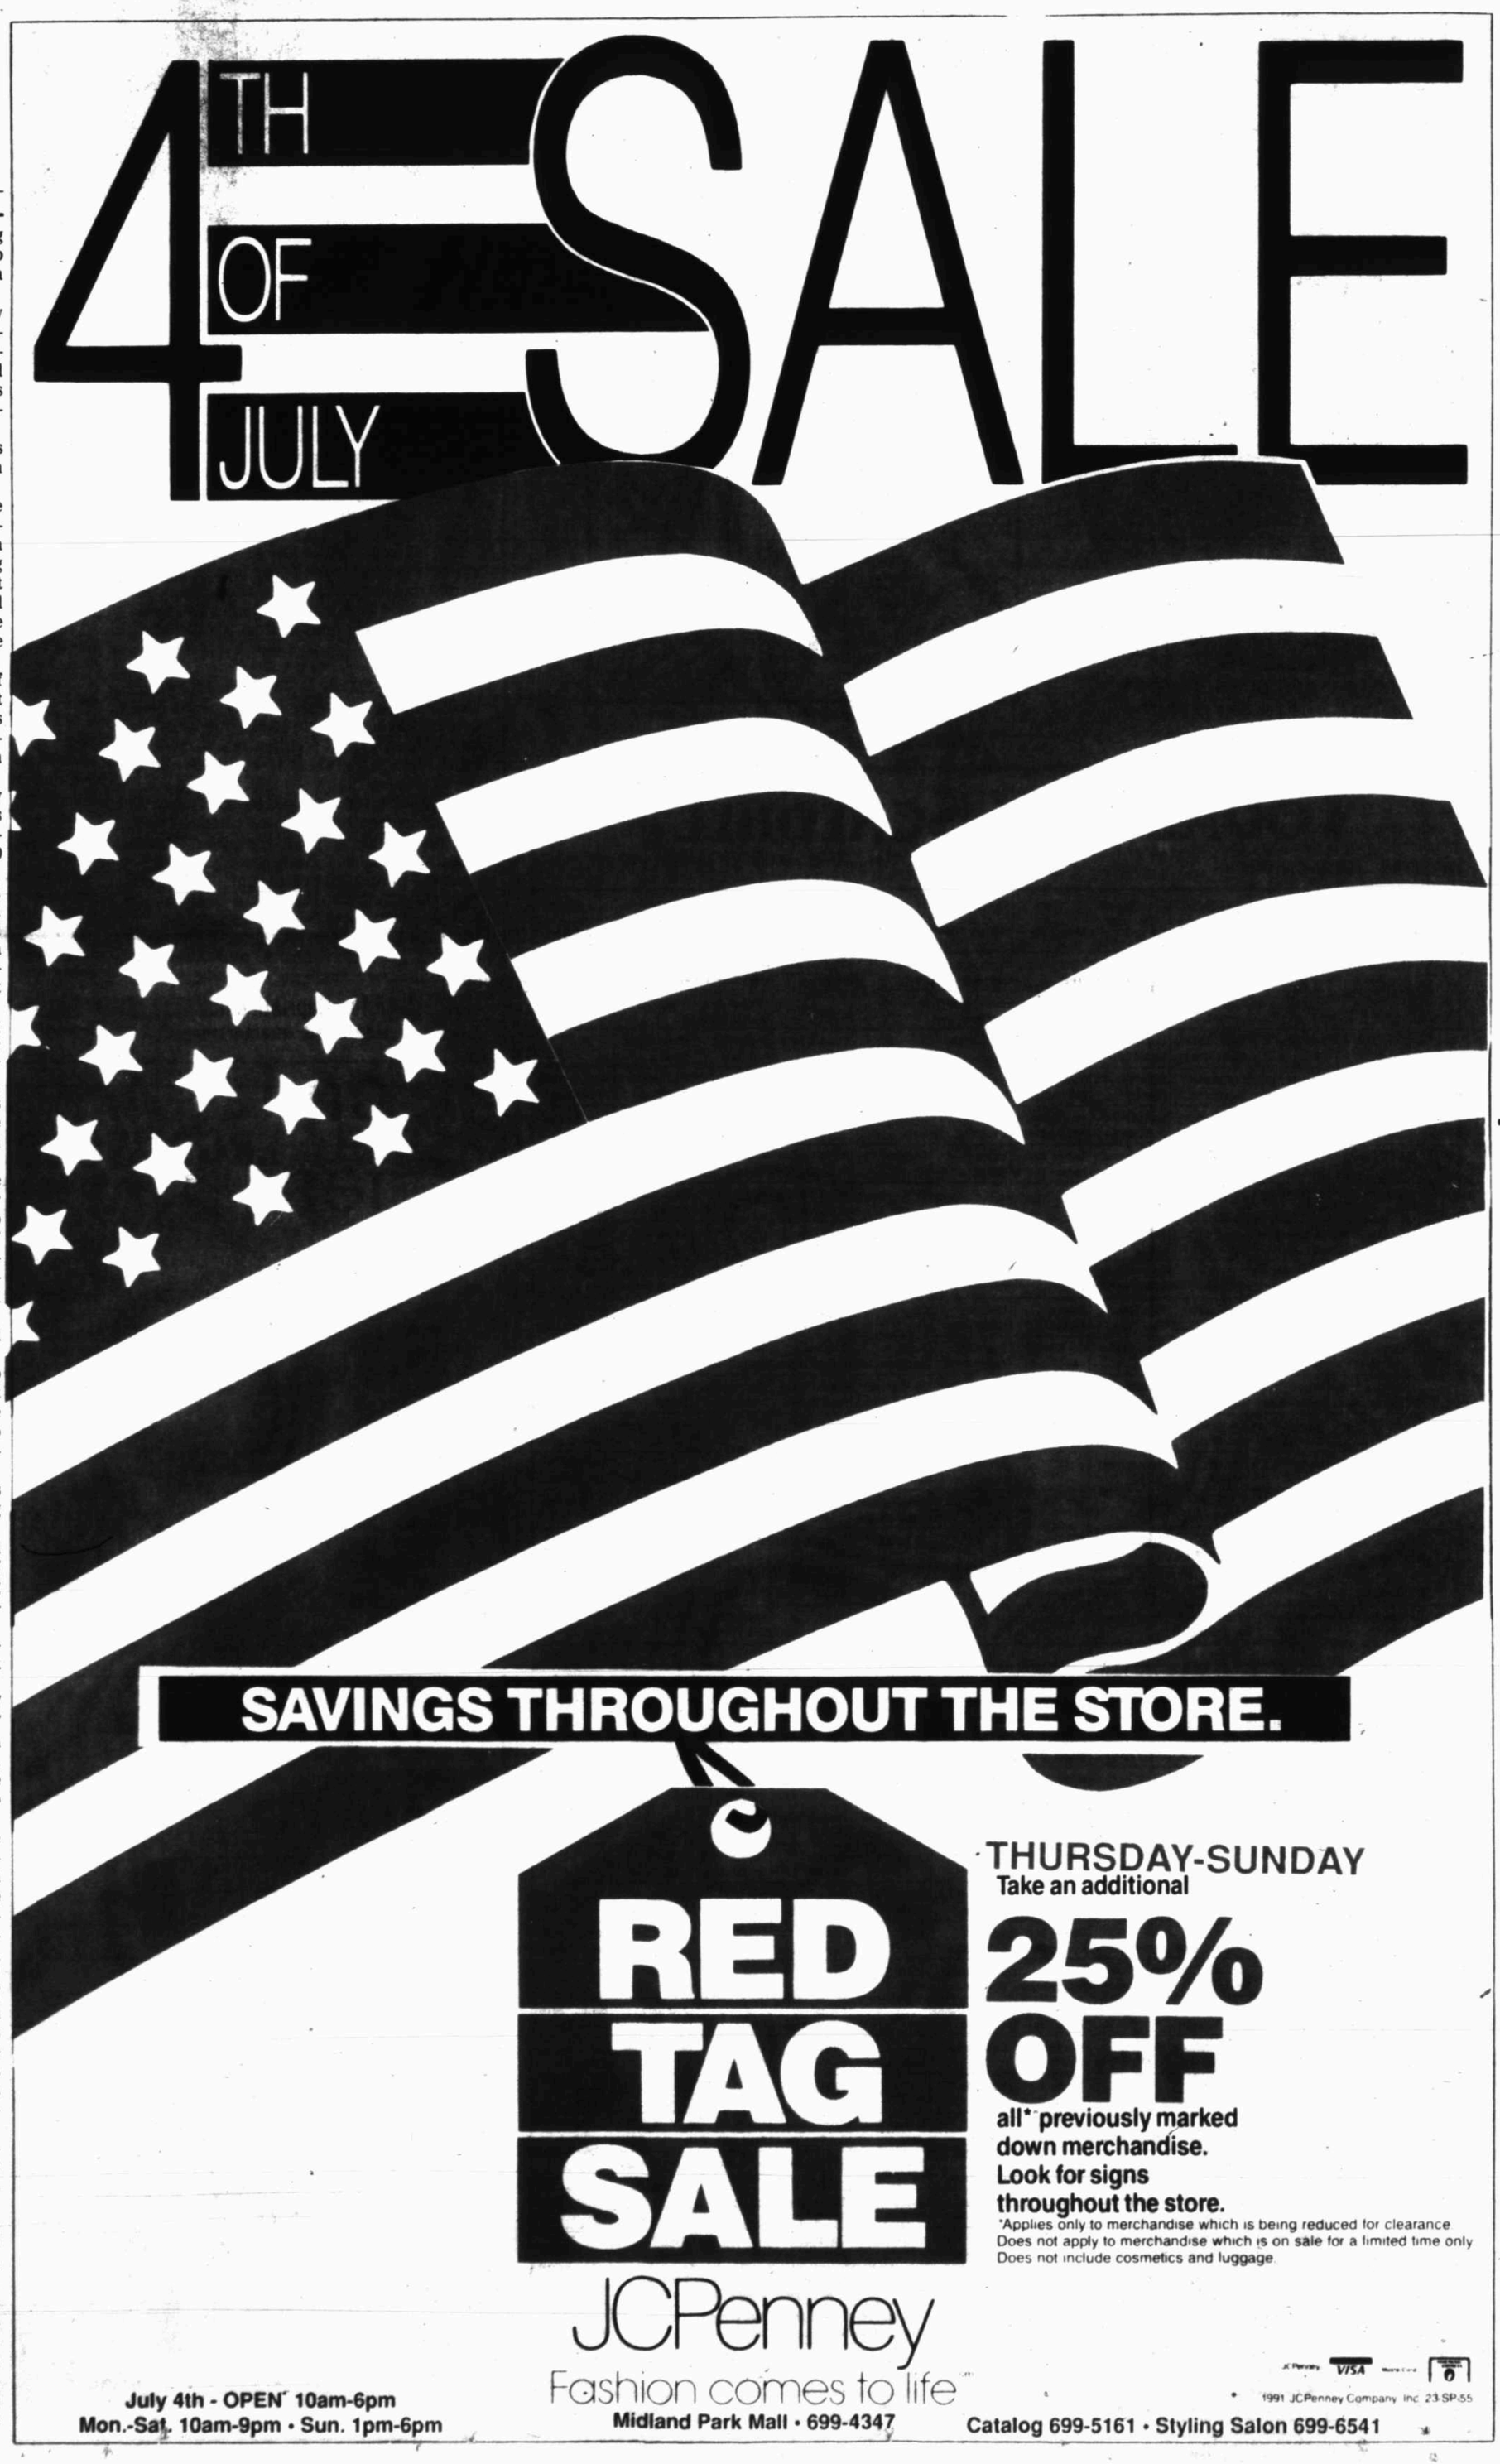

An analysis prepared for state lottery officials found that per-capita lotto sales in the 15 states it tracked fell by 11.3 percent in the second quarter of the current fiscal year. The "driving force" behind lotto sales, the report said, was "the allure of large jackpots."

But in trying to create more of those $60 million or $100 million jackpots, state lottery officials may have killed the golden goose — or at least wounded it, says Mike Orkin, head of the statistics department at Cal State at Hayward, Calif.

By fiddling with the odds, lottery officials drove thousands of players away from the game, Orkin believes.

Those lottomania-producing jackpots come when weeks go by with no winner and the prizes are "rolled over."

To create more of those situations, lottery officials last year reduced the odds of winning by requiring players to pick six numbers from a field of 53, instead of 49. This lowered the odds of winning from 1 in 14 million to 1 in 23 million, according to Orkin.

Capriati throttles Navratilova

Nine-time champion tumbles before Wimbledon's youngest semifinalist

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Jennifer Capriati, so young and winsome with her hair tied in a neat French braid, intimidated the toughest women's champion in Wimbledon history.

Fear gripped Martina Navratilova and broke down her game stroke by stroke until she seemed like an old clunker of a car falling apart.

The fear could be seen in the gulping breaths she took between points to steady her nerves. It was in her eyes and the tight muscles of her shoulders as she served pathetically shallow balls to the boldly charging teen-ager and double-faulted on match point.

It could be heard clearly in her weak, quavering voice even after they left the stadium, a lingering dread that she'd been passed in time as she'd been on the court.

Capriati, 15, became the youngest semifinalist ever at Wimbledon with a 6-4, 7-5 victory Wednesday over the nine-time champion that spanned two days and tested the mettle of both players.

"I was totally focused," Capriati said with gleaming eyes and a broad smile. "I was so anxious to go out there and play my best tennis. I had so much desire in me, that I just didn't think about it.

"No one expected me to win. I had no nerves, and she had everything to lose."

Navratilova, 34, admitted she felt shaken from the start to the embarrassing end, when she pushed her final serve softly into the net.

"When you get older you get more nervous," she said. "It should get easier, but all the other players say the same thing — it gets more difficult. With entertainers it's the same. Take Frank Sinatra. The pressure builds up the older you get. Even though you don't have that many more years left, things mean a lot more."

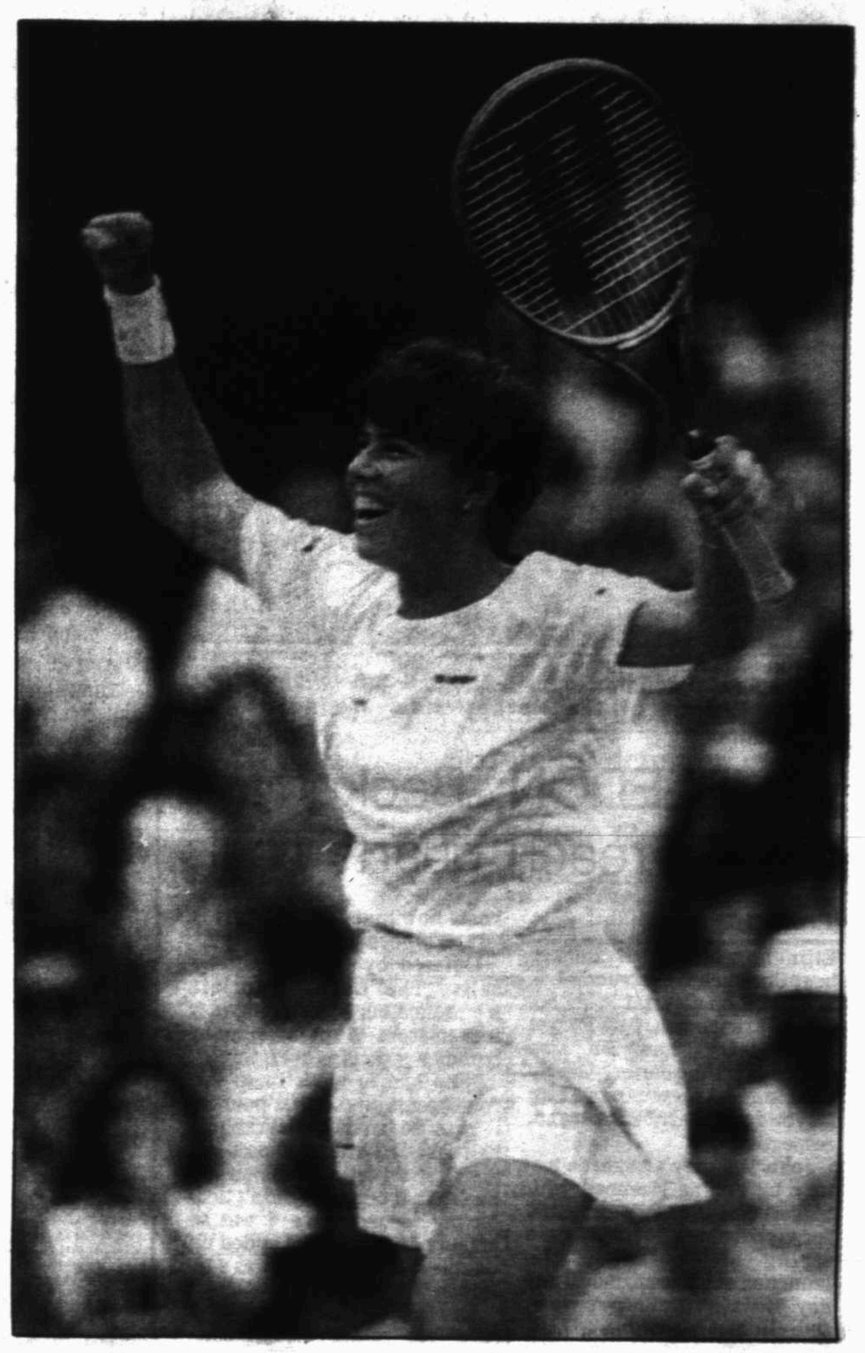

Shortly before they resumed the rain-suspended match at 1 p.m., Capriati down a break at 2-3 in the second set, a tournament official mentioned that Princess Diana would arrive about 1:50 p.m.

"Well, I hope I won't be able to see her," Capriati said with an air of confidence, not wanting to stay around that long and play a third set. "Hopefully, the match will be over."

Capriati finished off the match moments before Diana arrived.

The Princess of Wales watched Andre Agassi reach the men's quarterfinals with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Jacco

McEnroe draws record fine

■ Profanities cost ex-champ $10,000.

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe's wallet took a record $10,000 hit Wednesday and so did his bid to improve his image.

McEnroe was fined by Wimbledon referee Alan Mills for cursing a linesman.

McEnroe, who has sought in recent years to control his temper, directed an angry stream of profanities at the official during his fourth-round loss to Stefan Edberg on Tuesday.

Grand Slam administrator Bill Babock said the $10,000 fine was the largest ever levied against a player for verbal abuse, though bigger fines have been imposed for skipping tournaments and other infractions.

Few fans heard McEnroe when he launched his tirade near the end of the 7-6, 6-1, 6-4 loss. But a TV microphone picked up the outburst and it was broadcast — with the offending words bleeped out — throughout

Search is on for the NBA's fourth-highest paid player

■ Agent for Patrick Ewing claims his client is free to negotiate with other teams because of clause in contract.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even the NBA is wondering who is the fourth player that Patrick Ewing's agent is claiming will be paid more than the New York Knicks' center next season.

Ewing's 10-year contract signed in 1985 contains a clause that allows him to become a restricted free agent after the 1990-91 season if he is not among the four highest-paid players in the NBA. If that occurs, Ewing would be free to negotiate with other teams, with the Knicks retaining the right to match any offer and keep him.

John "Hot Rod" Williams of Cleveland, Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon and Michael Jordan of Chicago are known to have a higher salary than Ewing's scheduled pay of $3,138,000 next season. But a fourth player that Ewing's agent, David Falk, claims is ahead of Ewing is not known.

"I'm not aware of four more highly paid players," said the NBA's general counsel, Gary Bettman. "My understanding is Patrick Ewing's representatives have been asked repeatedly to name the four players and have failed to do so."

Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics will make $7.7 million next season, but almost $5 million of that is a signing bonus, and signing bonuses reportedly are not counted in Ewing's contract to determine if a player's salary is higher than his.

Asked by the New York Times who the players are that he believes are above Ewing on the salary scale, Falk refused, saying, "It will be up for the arbitrator to decide."

Falk did not return phone calls by the Associated Press on Wednesday.

Ewing has filed for arbitration to decide the free-agent issue, and his case will be heard later this month by arbitrator Daniel Collins.

"We believe that the Knicks will prevail in this arbitration," Knicks president Dave Checketts said. "We look forward to the resolution of this matter."

Ewing, who averaged 26.6 points and 11.2 rebounds last season, made more than $4 million in 1990-91 and is scheduled to earn $3,138,000 next season. He would trail Williams, $4 million; Olajuwon, $3,498,000; and Jordan, $3.25 million.

"As of June 1, Patrick is one of the four highest-paid players in the NBA, a fact confirmed by both the NBA and our counsel," Checketts said. "Because he is one of the four highest-paid players in the league, and because he signed a 10-year binding agreement in 1985, both Patrick and the Knicks have an obligation to uphold that agreement."

Checketts said he went to Ewing with an offer for an extension that would have made him the highest-paid player in teams sports. Currently, the top contract belongs to Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens, who agreed to a $21,521,000, 4-year contract for 1992-95, an average of $5,380,250 per season.

"Although we had no obligation to do so, we made Patrick an offer to extend his contract in good faith, well before the June 1 deadline," Checketts said. "The offer would have made Patrick the highest-paid player in all of team sports. Unfortunately, this offer was rejected."

Falk said Ewing rejected the offer because he wants to test his value with other teams.

All-Star Alomars reunited

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Once again, the Alomars are on the same team. This time, it's the best.

Sandy and Roberto Alomar of the American League on Wednesday became the first brothers elected to the All-Star Game's starting lineup since the balloting was returned to the fans in 1970.

Last year, Sandy Jr. of the Cleveland Indians became the first rookie catcher ever voted to the starting team and Roberto was selected as a National League reserve with San Diego. The second baseman's offseason trade to Toronto put both brothers in the same league.

Add their father, Sandy, who was on the AL team in 1970, and the Alomars joined the DiMaggios (Joe, Dom and Vince) as the only family with three All-Star members. They are the seventh brother combination to make the All-Star team, starting with Joe and Vince DiMaggio in 1941.

"It's a big thrill, not just for me and Sandy but for my whole family," Roberto said. "I always dreamed of playing with Sandy in the major leagues and I thought this season I'd only get a chance to play against him. But he was the designated hitter when we played Cleveland, so I never got to steal on him."

Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs was elected the National League second baseman and led all vote-getters with 2,526,747. Sandberg, who currently has a hand injury, got the most votes since Gary Carter of Montreal totaled 2,785,407 in 1982. Seattle outfielder Ken Griffey Jr. paced the AL this year with 2,248,396 votes.

Wranglers edge Angels, 4-3

■ Record Angels Stadium crowd is treated to a rare pitching duel.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Even though the 4,854 fans that set a new Angels Stadium attendance record Wednesday night were probably there for the post-game fireworks, they were treated to something all too rare at the Midland diamond — a 4-3 baseball game.

The Wichita Wranglers were the ones who came out on top though, dampening the crowd's spirits for all of five seconds, and in the process they won the six-game series 4-2.

And while the first five games of the series had seen a combined 91 runs scored in the hitters' paradise known as Angels Stadium, the wind blew in from right field through the first seven innings Wednesday, setting up a duel between two of the teams' best starters.

Todd James, who owns the most wins among Angels pitchers with eight, held the potent Wrangler offense to two hits and no runs through the first four innings.

Wichita's Doug Brocail was almost as effective, though he did give up a first-inning solo home run to Mark Howie, who went 3-for-5 in the game. Brocail (6-3) went on to last seven innings while giving up three runs on seven hits. He struck out five Midland batters but also walked four.

James, on the other hand, gave up but one earned run in his seven innings, striking out five and walking one. But Angel errors in the fifth and seventh innings led to three unearned runs that became James' undoing, sending his season record to 8-4.

The Angels drew first blood for the first time in the series on Howie's homer, which tied him with outfielder Tim Salmon for the team lead with 13 each. Then in the third inning, Brocail found himself in a bases-loaded jam with one out.

Salmon patiently worked the count to 3-1 before taking ball four, sending Reggie Williams home for a 2-0 Midland lead. After that, though, Damion Easley and

Record pace

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers are finally playing well enough to deserve their latest gift from the Arlington Stadium faithful: a record-setting attendance pace.

The Rangers' home attendance should pass 1 million Wednesday night in only the team's 34th home date, the earliest the team has achieved that number.

The most recent record was on the 37th home date in 1989. Tuesday's crowd of 41,172 increased the Rangers season total to 975,296.

As of Wednesday morning, there were about 9,000 tickets remaining for Wednesday night's game against Oakland, which officials expect to be a near-sellout. A sellout crowd Tuesday night watched the Rangers defeat the Oakland Athletics 9-6.

John Schriever, manager of ticket operations, said the number of advanced tickets being sold is higher than ever.

"People are convinced we've got a winner," said George W. Bush, Rangers managing general partner.

The Rangers had a 14-game winning streak in May that helped put them in their current position. Despite a slump in June, the Rangers are now in second place and were only two games behind the Minnesota Twins going into Wednesday's game with the Oakland.

Andre Agassi delights in his 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Jacco Eltingh of the Netherlands, Wednesday at Wimbledon.

WIMBLEDON: Becker and Agassi reach quarterfinals

(From 1C)

Eltingh, while Boris Becker beat Christian Bergstrom 6-4, 6-7, 6-1, 7-6 on Court 1.

Two Frenchmen, Guy Forget and Thierry Champion, also moved into the quarterfinals by beating Americans Tim Mayotte and Derrick Rostagno, respectively.

John McEnroe also made history by getting slammed with biggest fine ever at Wimbledon for verbal abuse — $10,000 for a string of profanities he launched at a linesman on Tuesday. It wasn't McEnroe's worst fine. He got hit with a $17,500 fine and two-month suspension for misconduct and verbal abuse at the 1987 U.S. Open.

But it was the Capriati-Navratilova match, a fascinating duel between a teen-ager and a woman old enough to be her mother, that marked this day as special.

It was as much an abdication by Navratilova as a coronation of Capriati, who moved on to a match with Gabriela Sabatini. Steffi Graf and Mary Joe Fernandez meet in the other semifinal Thursday.

Navratilova succumbed to her nerves and poor serves, and perhaps the burdens of her troubled personal life, as Capriati ripped returns and groundstrokes past her.

Tears formed in Navratilova's eyes as she summed up the emotions she felt leaving Wimbledon so soon after investing so much effort into her bid for a 10th title.

"I hope that the gods are with me so I can come back next year. I'm not hanging it up," she said in a weak voice. "I still feel that I have some really good tennis in me. I just don't know how much of the heart is left. It's been tough."

Unfazed by the woman she calls "The Lege," Capriati frightened her by skipping in 5 feet in front of the baseline to hammer second serves.

"She had to move in so she could get it on the first bounce, it was so short," Navratilova half-joked. "When I didn't get my first serve in, I was on my heels. That certainly didn't help on my second serve. I was so afraid of her return, I ended up double-faulting, which was a total sin."

She hadn't lost before the semifinals at Wimbledon since 1977, when Capriati was 1, and hadn't missed a final since 1981. No one except Graf had beaten her here during that stretch. Yet, she began this match with a case of butterflies that wouldn't quit.

Capriati evened the second set at 4-4 by breaking Navratilova with the help of a little luck. A volley by Navratilova at 30-30 struck the net cord, sat on top one agonizing moment, then fell back on her side. At breakpoint, Navratilova's vaunted volleying skill failed again as she put another forehand volley into the net.

Capriati saved a breakpoint against her in the 11th game with a beautiful backhand lob in the corner that left Navratilova rooted helplessly at the net. The crowd roared, and even Navratilova had to applaud that shot.

"That gave me a lot of confidence to go on and win that game," Capriati said. She was surprised, though, at her own reaction to being within a game of winning.

FINE: John McEnroe's tirade broadcast with censor bleeps

(From 1C)

Britain.

A tape of the incident was sent to Mills.

"Our investigation showed that McEnroe verbally abused an official, a flagrant verbal abuse being shouted directly at the far-side line umpire," said a statement released by Wimbledon.

"The linesperson was so intimidated to the point that he did not report the incident."

There was no penalty assessed during the match and officials did not report any problems after the match. The fine was levied only after Mills and other officials reviewed the tape.

Mills said the $10,000 will be deducted from McEnroe's winnings at Wimbledon. He earned $29,912 by making the fourth round in singles and the second round in doubles.

McEnroe has a long history of run-ins with officials at Wimbledon and other tournaments.

He was fined $6,000 at Wimbledon in 1981 when he referred to an umpire as the "pits of the world" and was fined $500 when he cursed at a Wimbledon spectator in 1983.

The 32-year-old American was thrown out of the 1990 Australian Open and fined $6,500 for cursing at an official and racket abuse during a match against Mikael Pernfors. He was only the second player to be thrown out of a Grand Slam tournament.

But McEnroe has struggled in recent years to improve his image and was rewarded with headlines referring to "Mellow Mac" in British newspapers last week.

He said after the match Tuesday — before the TV tape had been broadcast and presented to Mills — that he was proud of his recent behavior and hoped to control himself even better in the future.

"I feel that now I'm a lot better off in that way," he said. "I feel I've come a long way. If I went backwards to a period where I felt I wasn't in control, I would stop playing."

Despite Wednesday's record fine, McEnroe is not threatened with missing future Grand Slam tournaments such as the U.S. Open in September. There no longer is an automatic suspension for accumulating a large amount of fines.

Braves unleash 17-hit attack against Reds

Associated Press

NL

ATLANTA (AP) — Pinch-hitter Mark Lemke had the decisive hit as the Atlanta Braves matched a season high with 17 hits in a 8-6 victory over the Cincinnati Reds that ended their losing streak at four games.

The Reds, who had 11 hits, tied the game at 5-5 in the top of the sixth inning when Joe Oliver hit a three-run homer off Steve Avery (8-5). Lemke's hit off reliever Don Carman put Atlanta ahead to stay.

Greg Olson got a single off reliever Tim Layana (0-1) with one out to bring on Carman. Pinch-hitter Jeff Treadway beat out an infield hit before Lemke singled to left to score Olson, who had three hits.

The Braves took a 5-2 lead by hammering Tom Browning for 10 hits in four innings, including back-to-back homers by Ron Gant — his 15th — and Jeff Blauser — his sixth — in the third.

Juan Berenguer got his 12th save for Atlanta.

Pirates 11, Cubs 7

CHICAGO (AP) — Andy Van Slyke's two-run homer, his third in the last three games, and a three-run shot by Orlando Merced in a five-run eighth inning Wednesday powered the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 11-7 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The victory was the seventh in the last eight games for the first-place Pirates and went to starter Zane Smith (9-6). Les Lancaster (4-3) was the loser.

Lancaster retired the first 10 Pirates before Jay Bell singled in the fourth and Van Slyke followed with his ninth homer, erasing Chicago's 1-0 lead.

The Cubs trailed only 6-4 going into the eighth inning, but the Pirates scored five runs after two outs, with four of the runs unearned.

Lloyd McClendon made it 7-4 with a pinch-hit homer. Mike LaValliere and Jose Lind reached base on dropped pop-ups by second baseman Jose Vizcaino and first baseman Mark Grace.

Pinch batter Gary Redus followed with an RBI single before Merced homered, a drive of some 450 feet to center field.

Mets 4, Expos 0

The only hits given up by Darling — who did not allow a runner to reach third base — were singles by Dave Martinez in the second and Spike Owen in the eighth. Alejandro Pena pitched a perfect ninth, strking out two.

Kevin McReynolds hit a two-out single off rookie Chris Haney (0-3) in the first.

Surging Yankees add to Cleveland's woes, 3-2

Associated Press

AL

NEW YORK (AP) — Scott Kamieniecki allowed three hits in seven innings and Steve Sax and Roberto Kelly homered Wednesday night to help the surging New York Yankees to a 3-2 victory over the collapsing Cleveland Indians.

The victory was the Yankees' eighth win in the last nine games. Cleveland has lost seven in a row and 12 of its last 13.

Kamieniecki (3-1) walked one and struck out seven. He pitched 6⅓ shutout innings before allowing Albert Belle's homer in the seventh and also gave up Mark Whiten's leadoff homer in the eighth before being replaced by John Habyan.

A's 5, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON — Dave Stewart, who entered the game with a 5.74 ERA, pitched a three-hitter for his first complete game of the season to lead Oakland over Texas.

Stewart (6-4), struggling to find the form that made him a 20-game winner in each of the last four seasons, struck out four and walked two while shutting down the hottest-hitting team in the majors.

Texas, which hit .319 in its previous eight games and had 19 hits against Oakland on Tuesday night, managed only a first-inning double from Rafael Palmeiro, a fourth-inning single from Julio Franco and Ruben Sierra's two-out single in the ninth.

Red Sox 5, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Mike Greenwell and Ellis Burks drove in two runs apiece in a five-run first inning as Boston Red Sox beat Milwaukee to complete a three-game sweep.

The Red Sox, picking up where they left off Tuesday night when they clubbed 22 hits in a 14-4 victory, jumped on Brewers starter Don August (6-4). Greenwell singled in two runs, Burks hit a two-run double and Tony Pena capped the rally with an RBI single.

Tigers 8, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Frank Tanana marked his 38th birthday with another strong outing and Lou Whitaker homered as Detroit beat Baltimore.

Tanana (6-6) gave up seven hits and two runs in seven innings to win consecutive decisions for the first time this season. He has won four of his last five decisions and has a 1.39 ERA over his last seven starts.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 0

TORONTO — Joe Carter hit two home runs and Tom Candiotti won for the first time with Toronto.

Carter hit a two-run homer off Allan Anderson (4-7), a drive just inside the left-field foul pole, in the first inning. In his next at-bat, Carter hit an 0-1 pitch over the fence in left in the third inning for his 19th homer of the season, tying him for the AL lead. He has 21 career homers and 60 RBIs against Minnesota, which has lost seven of its last eight games.

ALL-STARS: A's place three starters on AL squad

(From 1C)

"It's a great honor. It's nice to have the fans' support and be appreciated," Sandberg said. "It gives me a lot more incentive to get back to play. Once the All-Star Game starts, both teams take great pride in the game and want to make a good showing for their leagues. It's a great compliment to be the leading vote-getter."

Roberto Alomar, who beat out Texas' Julio Franco at second base by 951,058 votes, was traded by San Diego along with Joe Carter in December to Toronto for first baseman Fred McGriff and shortstop Tony Fernandez.

The trade has been good to both teams and Roberto has exceeded the Blue Jays' expectations. He is hitting .277 with five homers, 36 RBIs and a major league-leading 25 doubles.

It's been a disappointing season for Sandy Jr. due to a rotator cuff injury. He's hitting only .205 with no homers and four RBIs in 34 games for the lowly Cleveland Indians. The selection was worth a $15,000 bonus to Sandy Jr.

"He's been hurt a lot this season, but a lot of the times the fans know best what a player can do," Roberto said. "They know when he's healthy he's one of the best."

For a brief time at the end of the 1989 season, the Alomars played together on the Padres and Sandy Sr. was a coach.

"My brother brought me to a Little League practice and I started practicing and that's why I started baseball," said Roberto, 23. "That's why I love him so much. If not for my brother I might not be in baseball. To see him in the All-Star game is something I will never forget."

Sandy Jr. beat out 43-year-old Carlton Fisk of the Chicago White Sox at catcher with 1,367,734 votes to 998,340.

"It's quite an accomplishment. It's history," said Sandy Jr., a strapping 6-foot-5, 215 pounds. "We talked about being in the big leagues together — sometime. But we never talked about being in an All-Star game together."

The rest of the AL infield has Mark McGwire of Oakland at first base; Cal Ripken of Baltimore at shortstop; and Wade Boggs of Boston at third.

The AL starting outfield is Griffey Jr., Rickey Henderson of Oakland and teammate Dave Henderson. Ken Griffey Sr. was selected to three All-Star games, the last time in 1980.

The defending AL champion Athletics placed three starters on the team.

The NL starting infield also has some familiar faces with Will Clark of San Francisco at first base; Sandberg at second; Ozzie Smith of St. Louis at shortstop; and Chris Sabo of Cincinnati at third.

The starting NL outfield is Darryl Strawberry of Los Angeles, Andre Dawson of Chicago and Tony Gwynn of San Diego. Gwynn leads the majors with a .359 average. Strawberry, however, has already said he will not be going to the All-Star game in order to rest his injured left shoulder. He led all NL outfielders with 1,393,009 votes followed by Gwynn's 1,381,602.

Strawberry's numbers — .224 average, seven homers and 26 RBIs — are not exactly All-Star caliber, either.

San Diego's Benito Santiago was selected as the NL starting catcher for the second straight season, this time with 1,751,399 votes. He was unable to play in last year's game at Wrigley Field because of an arm injury.

The 62nd All-Star Game is scheduled for Tuesday night at Toronto's SkyDome. Pitchers and reserves will be announced on Thursday. Lou Piniella of Cincinnati will manage the NL squad and Tony La Russa of Oakland the AL.

Sandberg, hitting .300, injured his right hand in Tuesday's game at Wrigley Field and his status is uncertain.

Smith, 36, was elected the NL's starting shortstop for the record ninth consecutive year. He is batting .306 with 29 RBIs and 19 stolen bases. As usual, Smith's defense has been almost perfect.

If it wasn't for Smith, Cincinnati's Barry Larkin certainly would have won a starting spot. Larkin is hitting .313 with 14 homers, 37 RBIs and 15 stolen bases.

SWC athletes of year named

DALLAS (AP) — University of Houston quarterback David Klingler and University of Texas sprinter Carlette Guidry were named Southwest Conference athletes of the year for 1990-91 by members of the news media who cover the conference.

Klingler, a junior from Houston, directed the Cougars to a 10-1 record while leading the nation in total offense with 474.6 yards per game, a NCAA record. He also had 5,221 yards of total offense to set a national mark in '90 and set a NCAA single-season TD passes' record with 54.

In all, Klingler set or tied 33 NCAA game or season records, seven more than the 1989-90 male SWC athlete of the year, former Houston quarterback Andre Ware, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1989. Klingler finished fifth in 1990 Heisman voting and was named to the 1990 GTE-SWC all-academic team.

Cowboys sign 10th-round choice

Associated Press

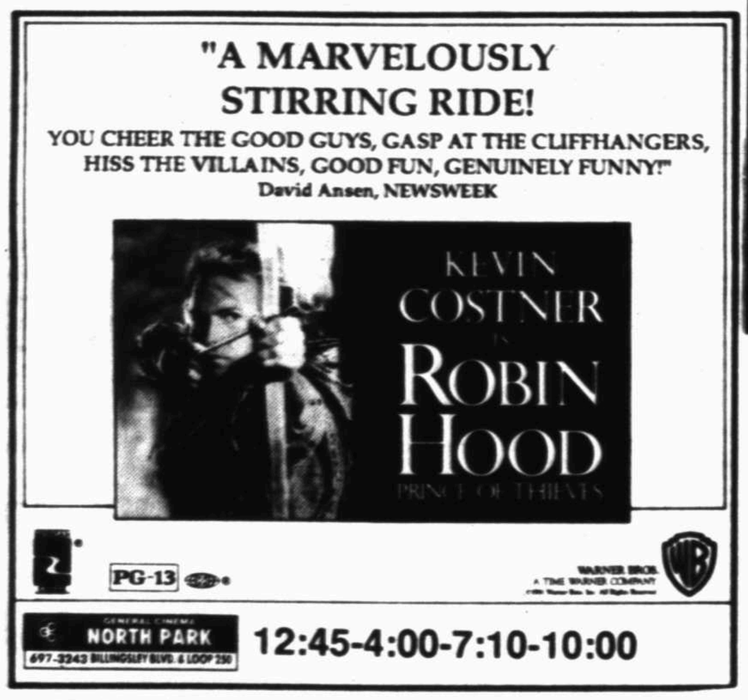

IRVING — Offensive lineman Sean Love, a 10th round draft choice from Penn State University, reached a contract agreement with the Dallas Cowboys.

Love, 6-3 and 285 pounds, is one of five members of the Nittany Lions' offensive line to have been drafted since 1989.

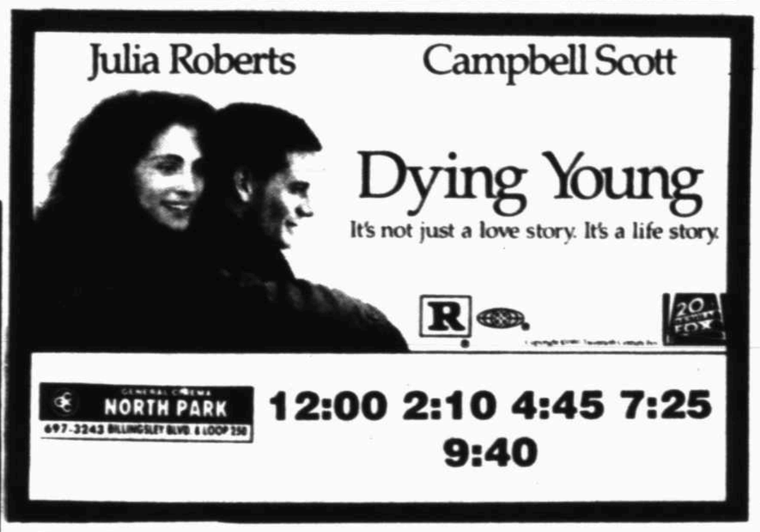

Terms of the deal weren't disclosed.

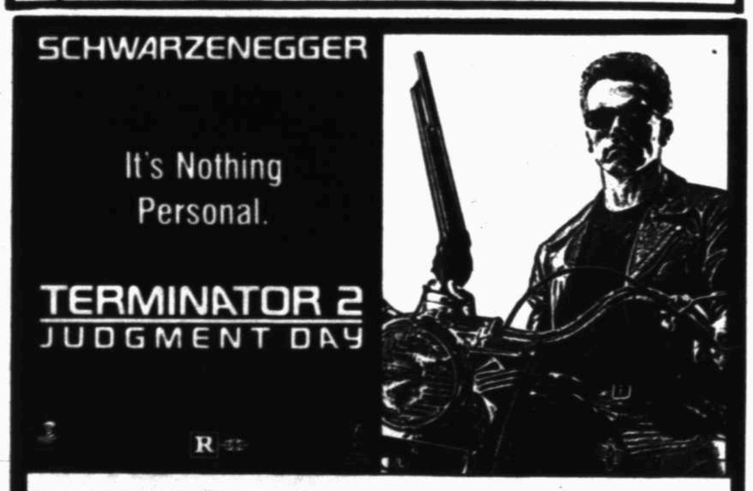

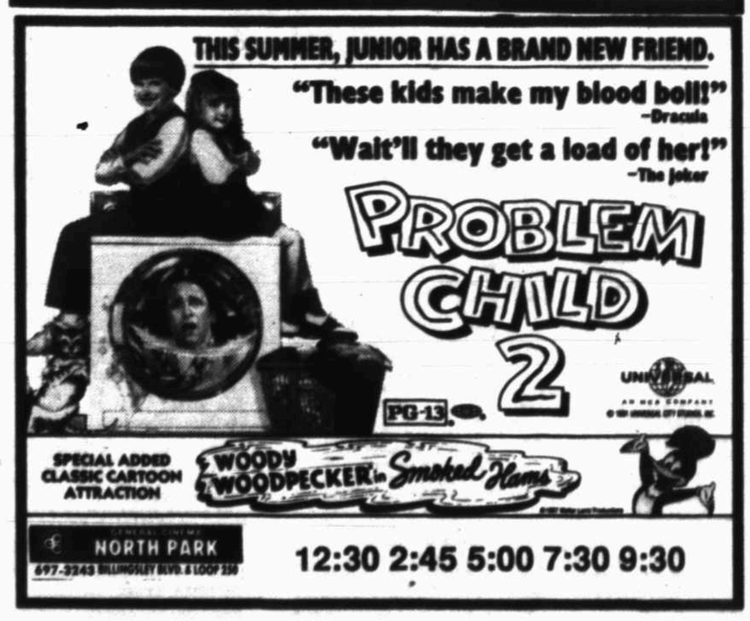

Apple, IBM announce alliance

■ Computer companies agree to swap technologies, develop new machines and make decisions about the industry's future.

By Rick Gladstone

NEW YORK (AP) — Former enemies Apple Computer and IBM joined forces Wednesday in a broad pact to swap prized technologies, develop new machines and seize control of the industry's splintered direction.

The agreement marked the most dramatic example yet of cooperation among rival powers in computing. Industry analysts described it as the business equivalent of a U.S.-Soviet friendship treaty for sharing military secrets.

"This is the most unthinkable alliance that became thinkable in a very short time," said Sam Albert, who heads a computer consulting firm in Scarsdale. "These two companies have matured to the point where the benefits are easily seen by this alliance."

The pact appears to be part of a broader realization among computer companies that users are rebelling against the industry's hodgepodge of incompatible standards and products.

Some experts said an IBM-Apple collaboration could result in an vastly expanded menu of easy-to-use computers, from laptops to large machines, available to consumers and businesses within a few years.

The arrangement also signaled a profound shift in thinking at International Business Machines Corp. and Apple Computer Inc., which together control nearly half the market for personal computers. Historically they have detested and poked fun at each other.

"The significance is that the two most important standard-bearers in the personal computer industry have now hooked up and decided there are certain directions the whole industry should go in," said Paul Gillin, executive editor of Computerworld, a trade weekly in Framingham, Mass.

"They've made a big deal about going in different directions and now have decided the competitive situation is desperate enough so they should both lead the industry in the same direction."

Apple, the brash upstart success story born 15 years ago in a Silicon Valley garage, is best known for its user-friendly Macintosh machines that have become a favorite of personal computer users.

The company's loose informal culture contrasts with the starched-shirt correctness at IBM, the world's largest computer maker, which once dismissed Apple as a minor competitive nuisance that sold machines to schools.

Still, when word leaked a few weeks ago that Apple and IBM were negotiating an alliance, many in the industry weren't that surprised, given the anemic state of the industry.

IBM has been aggressively expanding relationships with other computer companies as part of an effort to become more creative, responsive and profitable. The company has announced ventures recently with Wang Laboratories Inc., Lotus Development Corp. and some smaller technology concerns.

Apple, frustrated in its attempt to break into markets dominated by IBM and other big companies with lucrative commercial clients, also has shown willingness to share its technology if that helps increase sales and profits.

Both companies have been particularly hurt by a slowdown in demand for computers and the broader impacts of the recession that began last year. Both have announced work-force reductions and offered cheaper machines.

"These guys are suffering and they look in the future and it looks bleak," Gillin said.

Apple and IBM disclosed the general principles of their agreement in a statement that described it as a letter of intent to create powerful new systems for the 1990s.

Part of the agreement calls for a joint venture in computer software that will simplify programming industrywide. The software will be based on object-oriented technology, a major change in the way programs are designed, which greatly reduces the commands users must give computers to perform tasks.

The agreement also calls for:

■ Integration of Apple's Macintosh computer design into IBM systems;

Oil prices retreat

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices retreated Wednesday amid signs that gasoline demand remains weak, even as millions of motorists were hitting the roads for the Fourth of July holiday.

Unleaded gasoline took the biggest hit at the New York Mercantile Exchange, with contracts for delivery in August settling at 62.04 cents a gallon, down 1.40 cents.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $20.67 per barrel, down 15 cents.

Natural gas futures were mostly higher Wednesday, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $1.191 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 2.0 cents.

Marketing pact

Diamond Shamrock Refining and Marketing Co. of San Antonio has agreed to sell to Kent Distributors Inc. of Midland its six gasoline and convenience store locations in Odessa and Kermit. In conjunction with the sale, Kent has agreed to market Diamond Shamrock branded gasoline through its existing Kent Kwik convenience stores in the Midland/Odessa area. Under the terms of this agreement, the number of Kent Kwik convenience store locations will increase to 23 marketing Diamond Shamrock branded productions.

The transaction is expected to be closed before September 1.

Gold for current delivery closed at $370.20 a troy ounce on New York's Commodity Exchange, up $2.30 from late Tuesday's close.

New home sales sink 3.3 percent, government says

WASHINGTON (AP) — New home sales sank 3.3 percent in May, the second straight decline, according to a government report on Wednesday which showed the recovery from the housing recession much weaker than first thought.

"We're seeing continued signs of a slow recovery," said economist Kermit Baker of Cahners Economics, a Newton, Mass., forecasting service. "We're going to see a few bumps along the way."

David F. Seiders, an economist with the National Association of Home Builders in Washington, also viewed the report "as part of the process of a gradual up trend" that will include "some ups and downs."

Thomas Holloway, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association in Washington, noted that the housing sector typically leads the overall economy out of recession.

Acme Brick marks 100 years

City of Midland played important role in survival of brick company

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Acme Brick Co. of Fort Worth celebrated its 100th birthday this week, but it might not have celebrated its 20th if not for the city of Midland. As fate would have it, the misfortune of Midland played a major role in the survival of the company.

As Acme Brick Co. historian Edwin Lehr reports, the brick company, which was founded in 1891 near Weatherford, was on the verge of collapse when a company employee learned of the Midland fire of 1910, hopped on a train for Midland, took brick orders and saved the company.

The year 1910 was an extremely difficult year for the brick company, which was beset by labor problems and a shrinking market caused by an economic downturn. The brick factory at Bennett had already ceased production and was on the block.

Walter Bennett, depressed by the death of his father, founder of the company, had left the keys with the company timekeeper J.E. Fender and headed to Fort Worth to find a buyer. A short time later a Texas & Pacific railroad conductor made a stop at the Bennett brick factory and told Fender that the town of Midland had been almost destroyed by fire and was desperate for building materials.

Upon hearing the news, Fender rushed to the bank and borrowed enough funds for a railroad ticket. He grabbed a fast westbound freight train to Midland, and came back a few days later with a pad full of orders that proved the salvation of the company. Fender worked for over 50 years for Acme Brick Co. as sales manager and finally as president.

That was to be the first of a long relationship between the brick company and Midland. Acme brick was used to rebuild after the fire of 1910, and was also used in the building of most of downstown Midland in the 1930s and 1940s.

Acme finally opened a sales office and yard in Midland, at 3020 W. Front Street, in the late 1940s.

Today Acme Brick Co., with a capacity to make 700 million bricks annually, has become the largest brick company in the United States, supplying a majority of the bricks used in Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas and large portions of Louisiana, Missouri, Kansas and Tennessee.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Preferred stock higher on pecking order

By Bill Doyle

Q. The proxy statement and stockholders' annual meeting notice I received from a company in which I own stock contains a long list showing how many shares of company common stock are owned by each member of the company's board of directors and senior officers.

It also states, "None of the directors or officers owns any preferred stock of the company." Why? What is the difference between common and preferred stock?

Doyle

A. A reply to your second question should satisfy the curiosity — perhaps, hostility — of the first.

Both common stock and preferred stock represent corporate ownership. When you have even one share of either type you own part of the company, albeit a minute fraction of 1 percent.

Preferred stock has preference over common in the corporate pecking order. Dividends must be paid on the preferred before any dividends are paid on common. Some companies have one class of common stock and a number of classes of preferred, each with a different dividend.

In an unusual situation when a company is liquidated, preferred gets paid off — usually at par value — before owners of common stock get anything.

Dividends on most preferreds are set when the stock is first issued and never change. The exceptions are participating preferreds, on which dividends can be increased when dividends on common are hiked, and variable-rate preferreds on which dividends float up and down in line with interest rates.

Dividends on common stock, however, can be raised or lowered at any time. Typically, they are hiked when corporate profits increase and cut — or even eliminated — when the company falls on hard financial times.

All this shows that preferred stock is a fixed-income, conservative investment. Owners of common stock, on the other hand, share in the company's fortunes — good or bad. There's nothing wrong with a member of the board of directors owning preferred stock. But, as representatives of the stockholders, who are the company's owners, it's more logical for directors to own common stock.

Q. Are all preferred stocks convertible?

A. No. You have to check each preferred stock issue to learn if it is convertible or not.

When preferred stock has a conversion feature, its owners have the right to exchange that preferred stock for some other security — usually common stock of the same company.

That makes convertible preferred a more attractive investment than straight preferred. While providing steady and fixed dividends, convertible preferred has what is known as an "equity kicker." That's the opportunity to be swapped for common stock, which might rise smartly in market value.

Q. I am in need of more income and my broker advises me to buy cumulative preferred stock. He says, with that type of stock, I will never have to worry about losing the dividends. Is he right?

A. He is, assuming the company that issued the cumulative preferred remains profitable. If it has operating losses, it could omit dividends, first, on its common stock and, later, on its preferred stock.

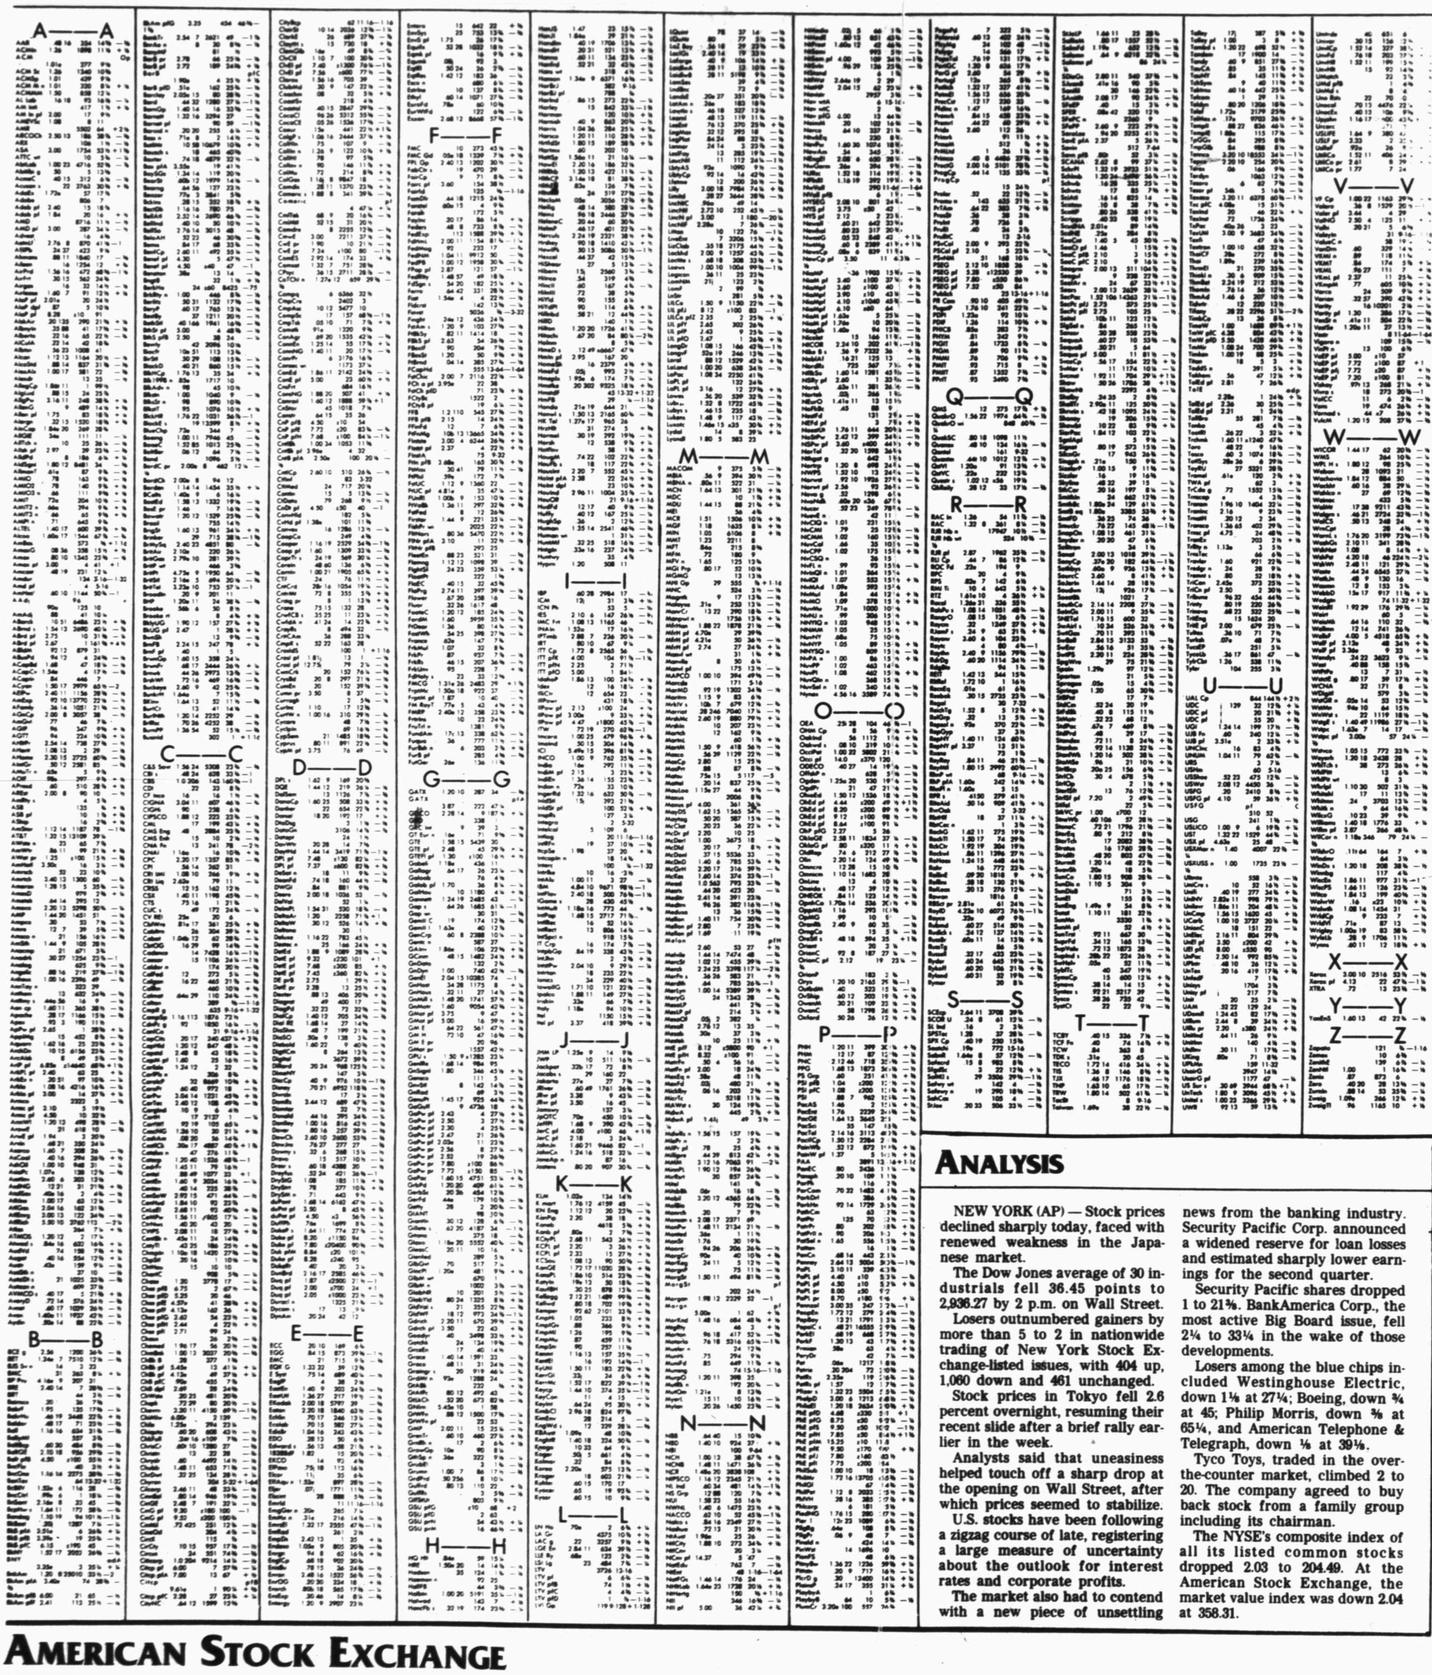

The cumulative feature on the preferred means any and all skipped dividends on that stock accumulate as "arrears" and will have to be made up before dividend payments are resumed on the company's common stock.

There have been cases in which dividends on some cumulative preferreds were not paid for years and the arrears grew like Topsy before finally being paid off. And there have been other cases in which arrears kept piling up and were never squared away.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 36.45 points to 2,936.27 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 5 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 404 up, 1,060 down and 461 unchanged.

Stock prices in Tokyo fell 2.6 percent overnight, resuming their recent slide after a brief rally earlier in the week.

Analysts said that uneasiness helped touch off a sharp drop at the opening on Wall Street, after which prices seemed to stabilize.

U.S. stocks have been following a zigzag course of late, registering a large measure of uncertainty about the outlook for interest rates and corporate profits.

The market also had to contend with a new piece of unsettling news from the banking industry. Security Pacific Corp. announced a widened reserve for loan losses and estimated sharply lower earnings for the second quarter.

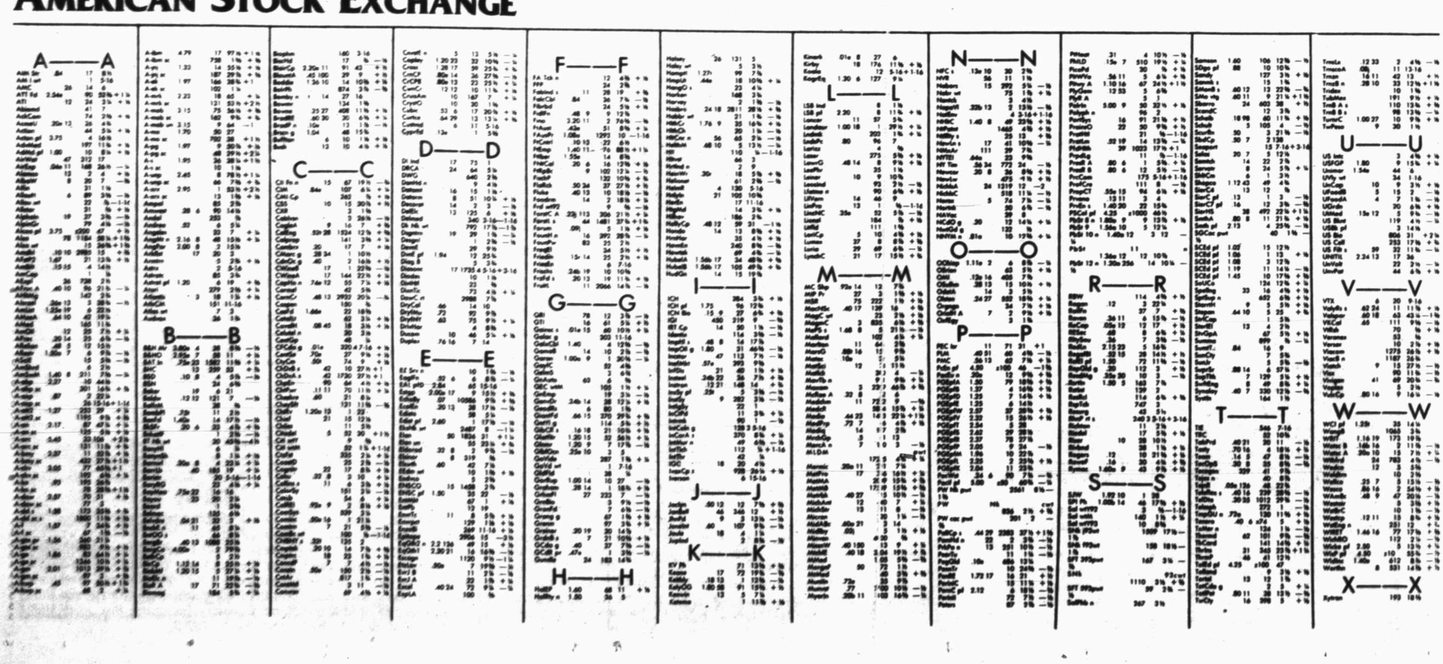

Security Pacific shares dropped 1 to 21⅜. BankAmerica Corp., the most active Big Board issue, fell 2¼ to 33¼ in the wake of those developments.

Losers among the blue chips included Westinghouse Electric, down 1⅛ at 27¼; Boeing, down ¾ at 45; Philip Morris, down ⅜ at 65¼, and American Telephone & Telegraph, down ⅛ at 39⅛.

Tyco Toys, traded in the over-the-counter market, climbed 2 to 20. The company agreed to buy back stock from a family group including its chairman.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 2.03 to 204.49. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.04 at 358.31.

HOMES: Analysts see signs of slow recovery

(From 5C)

"But (for housing growth) to be sustained, the economy needs to show some signs of life which it didn't do in the winter and early spring," he said. "Now it's starting to do so and housing will show some pretty significant improvement."

Most analysts discounted the possibility of a "double dip" recession in which the housing industry sinks back into a hole after a period of recovery.

The Departments of Commerce and of Housing and Urban Development said sales of single-family homes totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 474,000 units, down from 490,000 a month earlier.

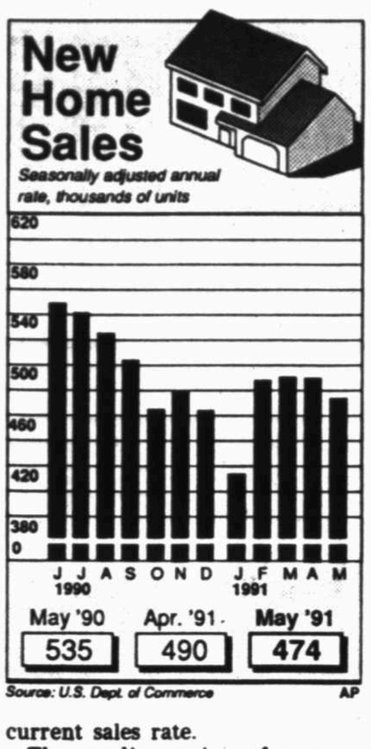

And the departments said their earlier estimates for February, March and April were not as strong as they first reported.

Sales in February rose 17.9 percent rather than the 18.1 percent reported earlier. March sales advanced just 0.6 percent rather than 1.0 percent, and April sales actually fell 0.2 percent rather than climbing 1.2 percent.

Still, analysts maintained their belief the housing recession bottomed in January, when new home sales plummeted 10.8 percent to a 414,000 rate, the lowest since the 1981-82 recession.

January also was the low point for housing starts, which fell that month to an annual rate of 847,000, the lowest since an 843,000 rate in the previous recession.

New home sales for the first five months of the year were 16.1 percent below those of the same period of last year. The seasonally adjusted estimate of new houses for sales at the end of May was 301,000, a 7.8 month supply at the current sales rate.

The median price of a new home in May was $121,900, up 1.6 percent from April. The median price means half of the homes cost more and half cost less.

Regionally, the Midwest posted the only sales gain, up 21.6 percent to an annual rate of 107,000 units. That was nearly twice the 11.1 percent drop a month earlier.

But sales fell 13.0 percent to 187,000 units in the South following a 5.9 percent gain in April. They were down 6.7 percent to 56,000 units in the Northeast, where they soared 30.4 percent a month earlier. And they were off 0.8 percent to 125,000 units in the West on top of a 11.3 percent drop the previous month.

'Pizzabot' gives disabled a hand

ROMNEY, W.Va. (AP) — A temperamental robotic arm programmed to ladle tomato sauce, spread cheese and pop pepperoni onto spinning pizza dough is feeding Charlene Dunlap's dream of supporting herself and her two children.

"It's fantastic. It's really kind of strange. It's a little like a feeling of power. I wish my kids would listen this good," Dunlap said as the robot arm whirred, dipped and dumped to her voice commands.

Dunlap, 23, was in a head-on collision with a log truck in September 1987. The wreck left her right side limp and she must use a wheelchair, but she can type nearly 40 words a minute with her left hand.

She hopes the robot arm, dubbed "pizzabot" by its designers at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Mellon University, will lead to a job with computers.

"I get frustrated a lot, knowing there are things I can't do and want to do," Dunlap said. "But now I know that it may be just a matter of time before somebody will invent something that will allow me to do it."

K.G. Englehardt, founder and director of the university's Center for Human Service Robotics, said the robotic arm, originally designed to make cars, should encourage hiring of the disabled in the $14 billion-a-year pizza industry.

"It will also allow disabled people to become entrepreneurs, to own and operate their own businesses," Englehardt said.

The Fox's Pizza Den shop in Romney has been renovated to accommodate disabled workers, with the robotic arm and other devices, according to Paul Lawrence, director of Hampshire County Special Services Center Inc. The private, non-profit center manages the pizza shop.

"Quadriplegics have an unemployment rate of between 95 and 98 percent, depending on whose figures you use," Englehardt said. "The entire purpose of this project is to take people who often are depending on public assistance for their survival and make them taxpayers.

"It's not just a job for them," Englehardt said. "It gives them a chance to contribute back to society."

The pizzabot was developed with $37,000 in cash and various in-kind contributions. Englehardt estimated it will sell for less than $100,000.

The semicircular pizzabot work station is designed to fit into the typical pizza shop. Nine bins that hold sauce and toppings surround the twisting and turning arm that can grasp and level scoops of cheese or slide a finished pizza pie onto rollers that lead into a continuous oven.

The work station also can accommodate employees in wheelchairs or elderly employees who prefer to sit while working.

COMPUTERS: Apple, IBM announce alliance

(From 5C)

■ The design and application of powerful new computer chips provided by Motorola Inc.;

■ The promotion of software for multimedia technology, a fast-growing segment of computing that mixes sound, video, text and graphics, enabling users to push visual "buttons" on a screen.

Definitive contracts are expected to be signed later this year and further details will be released later, the companies said. Products resulting from the alliance should reach the market during the next two or three years.

Apple's stock rose 87.5 cents a share on the news to $43.125 in nationwide over-the-counter trading. IBM's stock fell $1 a share to $98.125 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Computer industry analysts have said they expect to see more cooperative relationships between computer companies because the industry is maturing and no single company has the resources to develop major products alone.

Some said the Apple-IBM move could hurt the competitive position of other big computer companies because of their combined dominance. The software joint venture, for example, directly threatens Microsoft Corp., the current leader, while the use of the Motorola chip is a challenge to Intel Corp. and Sun Microsystems Inc.

Joseph Krovisky, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington, said the department was evaluating the announcement for possible antitrust implications.

Others said they saw no competitive threat, pointing out that several leaders in the computing field have formed consortiums and alliances to promote industry standards and protect themselves from foreign competition.

"No one company can be equally strong in everything," said Jack E. Brown, a Phoenix-based lawyer who has handled copyright and antitrust matters for several computer makers.

"These companies operate against worldwide competition," Brown said. "The kind of limited cooperation in terms of technology represented here is the kind of thing that's easily tolerated among world players."

Richards rides in car powered by natural gas

AUSTIN (AP) — Although her state trooper bodyguards at first were skeptical, Gov. Ann Richards says riding around in a natural gas-powered car is the only way to go.

Richards on Wednesday showed off the white, four-door 1991 sedan she has been using for the past month. The car was equipped to run on natural gas as well as gasoline.

"It looks the same. It drives the same. The only difference is, it doesn't pollute the same," she said. "There is virtually no difference in this car than other gasoline-powered vehicles."

Richards said promoting natural gas use is good for Texas in two ways: The fuel is less polluting, and Texas has 38 trillion cubic feet — a 60-year supply — of natural gas in its reserves.

"It makes really good economic sense for Texas," she said. "The use of natural gas, of which Texas is the leading producer, will help this nation become less dependent on foreign oil while keeping our air clean."

The governor's auto was converted to natural gas by an Austin company that makes such modifications.

Such a conversion costs about $2,500, and for this car the state paid $1,440 and the company picked up the remainder. In addition, a compressor to refuel the vehicle was installed at the Governor's Mansion compound. Natural gas is cheaper than gasoline, at the equivalent of about 79.9 cents per gallon and gives approximately the same mileage.

Richards said she may ask the Legislature in the future to provide tax breaks or other incentives to help more Texas motorists convert.

The governor said members of the Department of Public Safety security detail who escort and usually drive her initially weren't too sure about the idea of converting the auto to natural gas.

"I think that when I talked to them about the possibility of converting this car to natural gas, they thought, 'Oh, here she comes again with one more of those ideas.' "

"These gentlemen who work with me take my safety pretty seriously, and they were truly concerned that this car was going to have the kind of power that is necessary for us to move quickly ... I have asked each of them who has driven this car, and they can tell virtually no difference at all," she said.

Sunscreens are spreading, but is it enough?

By Torri Minton
N.Y. Times News Service

Sunburns used to be just a part of growing up, like stubbing your toes or slamming your fingers in a door. Painful, but no big deal.

No more. Welcome to the culture of the cover-up.

Don't go out in the midday sun, they say. Wear sunscreen all the time, even to the office, even in your car, even on a cloudy day. Cover up in long-sleeved shirts and a hat and big sunglasses. Beware of reflections.

Otherwise you'll wrinkle up and turn into a witch.

It is time to practice safer sun. You practically have to live in a cave to escape the deadly rays.

There are sunscreens for kids, sunscreens for the city, sunscreens for snowboarding, sunscreens for swimming six hours, sunscreens for fluorescent lights, sunscreens that repel bugs. There are sparkly ones, purple ones, ones that smell like lemon meringue.

A chemistry professor's sun studies may even lead to a "morning-after" drug to repair sunlight damage.

BUT JUST what is really necessary?

Many dermatologists now advise everyone to wear a sunscreen every day. Others say that's overkill.

And now the head of the epidemiology department of the Naval Health Research Center in San Diego says sunscreens are dangerous. He says they may even be contributing to skin cancer.

"It's like the sexual revolution and the pill," says Frank Garland, who is also on the epidemiology faculty of the University of California at San Diego. "Relying on sunscreens produces a false sense of security."

The problem, he says, is that the SPF (sun protection factor) on sunscreens ranks the strength of protection from only the burning UVB sun rays. They do not rank protection from UVA rays, which rarely burn but have been shown to penetrate more deeply into the skin.

"So what you have is a person putting on a sunscreen, believing they are protected," says Garland. Recent lab animal studies showed that exposure to UVA produces the same effects of UVB, it just takes longer, Garland says.

Dermatology associations of three nations disagree with Garland and his associates' views about sunscreens and cancer.

"Although ultraviolet A does cause skin damage and other forms of skin cancer experimentally, no studies have suggested direct relationships between melanoma and ultraviolet A," the American Academy of Dermatology, the Australasian College of Dermatologists and the Canadian Dermatology Association say in a joint statement.

"There is, however, evidence that ultraviolet B is a causative factor in melanoma and that exposure to ultraviolet B injures skin cells."

The Food and Drug Administration is studying UVA rays to figure out whether there can be an SPF-like rating for them as well. A report is expected by the end of the year.

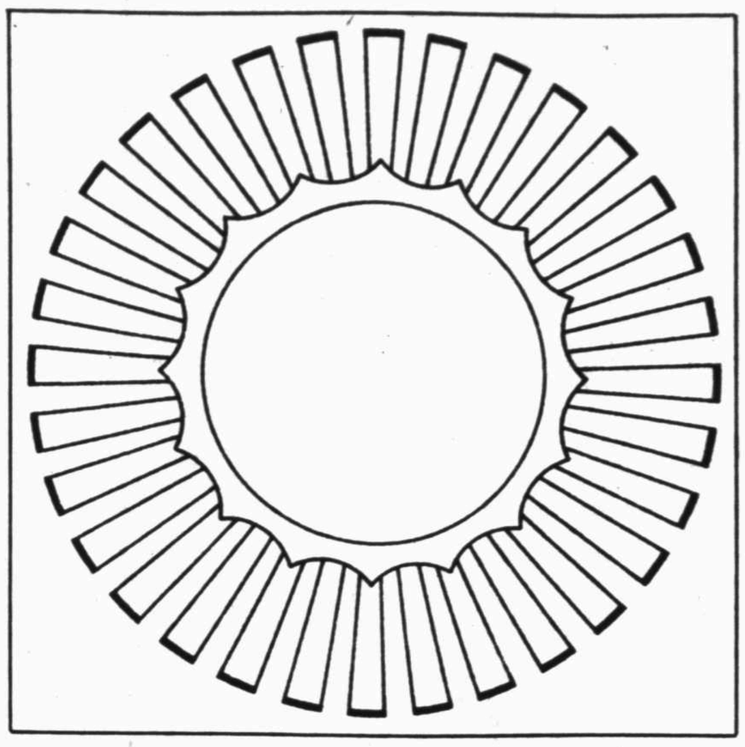

MEANWHILE, THE most life-threatening form of skin cancer, melanoma, is growing faster than any other cancer. It has risen about 7 percent a year over the past 10 years, says the nonprofit Skin Cancer Foundation in New York.

The sun is the cause of more than 90 percent of skin cancers. And there is evidence that one or two bad childhood sunburns can double the chances of developing skin cancer later.

The danger will grow, doctors say, if the ozone keeps shrinking like the hair over an incipient bald spot, exposing our delicate earthly membranes.

"If you look to the future it's very frightening," says a spokesperson for the American Academy of Dermatology.

Business has seen it, and it spells money.

For the past few years there has been a "definite strong trend" to sell sun protection products, says Liz Parks, a reporter for Drug Store News, which follows such things.

Sun-protection supplies are the fastest-growing category — now almost half — of all sun care sales, she says.

John-Stephen Taylor, an associate chemistry professor at Washington University who discovered a new type of DNA damage caused by sunlight, is even doing work that could lead to a better sunscreen or a "morning-after" drug to repair sun damage.

BUT A LOT of it is hype.

Things like makeup and lotion and hair spray tout sunscreen ingredients, but often they don't say how much.

"Don't rely on anything that says it contains a sunscreen unless you can actually see the SPF number," says Dr. Faye Arundell, a Menlo Park dermatologist.

A sunscreen doesn't have to be expensive, and it doesn't have to be a whole lot higher than 15. With an SPF 15 you get 93 percent protection. With an SPF 34 you get 97 percent, not a great jump, says the American Academy of Dermatology.

What's important, says Arundell, is to find something that feels good on your skin so you'll be more likely to use it.

As for fluorescent lights, "we don't worry about them," says Dr. Lucia Tuffanelli, a San Francisco dermatologist. Certain people are sensitive, she says, but otherwise, "fluorescence doesn't do anything to your skin."

So who does need sunscreen? Practically everybody, no matter what your skin type. "Don't be fooled by the fact that you have dark skin," says Tuffanelli.

Purist men who don't like to put things on their skin especially should remember to use it, says Dr. Arundell.

Men have more skin cancer, she says, perhaps because they spend more time outdoors, and because bald spots and short hair exposes their scalps. Malignant melanomas show up six times more on men's ears than on women's, says the Skin Cancer Foundation.

BABIES ARE exceptions. Many sunscreens advise they not be used on babies younger than six months. Their skin absorbs the chemicals too easily.

'Although ultraviolet A does cause skin damage and other forms of skin cancer experimentally, no studies have suggested direct relationships between melanoma and ultraviolet A. There is, however, evidence that ultraviolet B is a causative factor in melanoma and that exposure to ultraviolet B injures skin cells.'

AT WIT'S END

Immigrants helped build country worth living for

By Erma Bombeck

There are only two monuments that have cut through the coldness of bricks and metal to touch me. One is the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C., where I can actually feel the haunting eyes behind those 58,000 names charging me to never forget what war is really all about.

Bombeck

The other, ironically, is not the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor, but the place across from it — Ellis Island, where thousands of immigrants were processed before they entered America.

A few weeks ago in New York, I took a day off to look and to listen to this place that for most of us was our beginning.

As the ferry glided across the harbor, one could almost imagine that it was the turn of the century and we were all seeing America for the very first time. The cast of characters were all there. Most of the tourists on the boat were from other countries and spoke little English. Children ran restlessly through the crowds of people, a group of Japanese tourists slept on long benches, two German women shared a sandwich from a handbag, and a young Scandinavian couple were entwined, oblivious of the crowd.

When Ellis Island appeared, however, there was a scrambling for rail space. The captain announced, "If you lost your lunch, come to the office. Please identify." No one laughed at the double meaning. They were all focused on the large complex that for many held some part of their history.

Like a small, confused army, we wandered aimlessly through the reception room where the newcomers were assigned to immigration offices, medical facilities for physicals, dining rooms for food, rooms for laundry and baths, detention rooms for those who had to stay a while, banks for those who had money to exchange, transportation offices for tickets to new homes and lunch counters to supply them with box lunches for the trip. For the less than 2 percent who had to be turned back, there was a room for deportation.

We filed through four floors of faces on the walls representing every ethnic group you can imagine. We read their diaries, glimpsed their mounds of luggage and sifted through their memorabilia of Bibles, toys, dishes and photo albums to remind them who they once were.

To me, both the Vietnam Memorial and the one on Ellis Island have a lot in common. Dying for a country is the ultimate sacrifice, but living for it is just as courageous. Unless we have been there, it is impossible to imagine the loneliness, the exhaustion, the sheer terror of wondering who would survive.

It seems only fitting on this day when we celebrate America's spirit to remember not only those who died for a way of life, but also those extraordinary people who struggled to build a country worth dying for.

DEAR ABBY

Pillars of church can have feet of clay

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to the Arizona woman whose family was banned from the church was right. You told her to complain to someone higher in the church. However, I hope she had better luck than I had.

Van Buren

I am a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America. The new pastor of my church did not know me, but she refused to speak to me; in effect, she ostracized my children and their terminally ill father from their congregation.

Apparently, my "sin" was providing shelter to another pastor who had two children, no job, no place to live and very little money. When I complained to the bishop, I was told that since I had given the appearance of having "traduced" (defamed or slandered) my marriage vows, my family could be treated whichever way the pastor wanted.

The head of the church refused to comment on the matter, saying this was a local issue, and he chose not to get involved. The local synod council did not respond at all.

Abby, please tell your readers that all clergy are human beings. By definition, 50 percent are below average, and sometimes you hit the bottom 10 percent. If the clergy do not practice what they preach, run — do not walk — to the nearest exit, and let them know why you are running away. — NEW JERSEY

DEAR NEW JERSEY: What an eye-opener my mail has been this week! Most of us were raised to believe that all members of the clergy are somehow closer to God, and therefore superior beings. But, alas, they too are only human.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman who has enjoyed your column in the Tampa Tribune for many years. I am in my mid-30s, stand 5 feet 11 inches, weigh 155 and appear to be as strong as an ox, so because of my size, I am asked to do some jobs you wouldn't ask a professional mover to do without a helper.

I clean houses for a living, and my clients ask, "Would you please move that hutch (fully loaded), or the refrigerator, or the king-size bed, or a huge dresser, and clean behind it today?" This has gone on for 10 years, and until just recently, I never had the right answer to give to these clods until one day it hit me!

Now when I am asked to move the piano or the refrigerator, I ask sweetly, "Do you have enough insurance to cover any injury I may get from moving this?" They get the picture real fast.

When I worked in an office in my early 20s, I was asked to move desks, filing cabinets and haul in boxes that had been delivered. No more! Sign me ... AIN'T NO OX

DEAR AIN'T: Thanks for a great letter as well as a valuable suggestion for big women who, because of their size, are asked to do more than their job descriptions call for.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the elderly gentleman who had been in a nursing home for a year after suffering a stroke and whose family asked what to do about his house and automobile. When they asked him, he had replied, "Let it sit!" They then turned to you, Abby, for wise counsel, and you agreed with the old man.

I think your answer was way off base for the following reasons:

1. After a year, he isn't going anywhere. If he were, it would be to a condo or retirement home in the same city as a relative.

2. After his life savings are gone, in some states his children must pay, and nursing homes are expensive. This is money down the drain that could be used for their own retirement or their children's college education. He lived his life; now you live yours, without guilt.

3. Think of the neighbors. Would you want an empty, unkempt home next to yours?

4. The old man's property will go down in value if it is not cared for.

5. He will never agree to selling his car — so you do it! You will have to endure his endless griping about it, but you will have saved innocent people from harm. Get his doctor's opinion about his medication and his ability to drive. Chances are, the doctor will tell you he shouldn't drive again. (He'll probably put up a fight and continue to gripe.)

6. Get him to sign a living will, so he won't linger in a dreadful condition. — EXPERIENCED

P.S. I am enclosing a poem whose author is unknown to me. It fits this situation very well.

TIME TO GO

Pardon me, doctor, but may I die?
I know your oath requires you to try to keep me alive
So long as my body is warm and there is a breath of life,
But listen, Doc, I've buried my wife,
My children are grown and on their own. My friends are all gone, and I want to go, too.
No mortal man should keep me here
When the call from Him is unmistakably clear
I DESERVE the right to slip quietly away.
My work is done and I am tired,
Your motives are noble but now I pray,
You can read in my eyes what my lips can't say.
Listen to my heart and you'll hear it cry,
Pardon me, Doc, but may I die?

DEAR EXPERIENCED: Thank you for an excellent addition to this space.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Make this holiday a happy one. If you're drinking, don't drive. And if you're driving, don't drink.

P.S. Happy birthday, Sissie!

Charity fashion auction planned

N.Y. Times News Service

They call it Sunday by the Bay, but it's really Seventh Avenue by the Sea. More than 65 fashion houses have donated clothes to the annual charity fashion show and auction to be Sunday at the Grey Dunes estate in Bellport, N.Y.

The place is usually crawling with designers and models who donate their time for a campy fashion show in a big outdoor tent.

Among the items on sale this year: a Jean-Paul Gaultier organza dress with balloon-shade hem; a Romeo Gigli men's khaki three-button suit; a Todd Oldham button dress and 11 slinky stretch Giorgio Sant'Angelo dresses (they were the hot items last year).

The gates open at 11:30 a.m., with the fashion show and auction around 1 p.m. Cocktails and buffet will be served throughout the day. Tickets can be bought by phone from (516) 286-1020) or at the gate; $75 for one, $125 for two. Proceeds go to AIDS care and research.

Tips make swim trunks look better

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Sometimes the difference between a beach dud and a stud is what he's wearing. The men who dare to wear the briefest of bikini trunks have to be extra careful that the small stretch of fabric fits just so.

Greg Parry, designer for Tanline California, a North Hollywood men's swimwear company, has learned in six years of designing that not all bikini briefs are created equal, nor are the men who wear them. He offered fitting suggestions for men who wear bikini briefs or boxers.

- A higher-cut leg on the sides visually extends the length of shorter legs.
- For bodybuilders or others with a well-developed rear end, standard bikini briefs may ride improperly. Parry suggested a contoured or seamed bikini seat.
- A brief with a side seam that actually rests forward of the hip bones usually helps anchor the bikini seat and allows for a more generous cut in back.
- For less developed or flat rear ends, a French-cut bikini, with a less ample rear and a more contoured back, may fit best.
- For slight "love handles," briefs with wider sides come higher up on the waist to camouflage the bulge.
- A "slide bikini," which puts a fabric sling on a drawstring, allows the wearer to adjust the width of the front panel, to adjust tan lines or to effect a more (or less) modest fit.
- If liners interfere with the fit of your swimming trunks, look for unlined trunks to wear with a pair of briefs as your "liner." You can discreetly slip off the trunks later for a tan without leg lines.

War prompts town's parade

Newton to celebrate for first time in 25 years

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — It took a desert war and encouragement from President Bush, but folks in Newton are preparing their first Fourth of July parade in at least 25 years.

They haven't forgotten how to throw a patriotic bash.

There will be a band, 50 to 60 floats, balloons, color guards and lots of red, white and blue.

A real estate company has enlisted the Boy Scouts to help plant 2,000 miniature American flags along the one-mile parade route. The Chamber of Commerce offered about 2,000 free posters reading "Welcome home troops" along with an American flag. Those are all gone.

Much of the hoopla is for the 90 or so Jasper County troops who served in the Persian Gulf War. But it's also to honor other veterans — primarily those who were in Korea and Vietnam — who never got a parade when they came home.

"Without a doubt the Persian Gulf War and the return not too long ago of those service people has spearheaded all this," Mayor Alvin Borchers said.

"But this is going to be a day where we're going to recognize many, many others who haven't been given their due. Maybe it's high time they did," he said.

Vietnam veterans are hurrying to get their float ready.

It's a helicopter, made to one-quarter scale from napkins, chicken wire and wood, in front of a replica of the Vietnam Memorial wall in Washington. The front and rear rotor blades will whirl. Music from the 1960s and '70s will blare from a tape player.

On the float are camouflaged packs, canteens, boots and ammo boxes.

"The helicopters were Vietnam. They got your chow, your water. They lifted you to your different assaults and you got yourself hauled out on them after being wounded," said Bob Wooldridge, who served 19 months and two days with the 173rd Army Airborne.

Townspeople, especially the old timers, are eager. They think 25 years is a long wait for a Fourth of July parade.

"It's about time," 74-year-old Millie Chapman said over lunch at the town cafe. "I think Newton has let things slide too much. They don't have enough of this type of thing for the kids. Kids like parades."

Thursday's parade starts at 9 a.m., followed by speeches, games and activities on the courthouse square and then fireworks — more than $5,000 worth — that evening.

"We decided to do this to welcome home the troops, and President Bush mentioned a few months ago that it would be a good time to have this, so we're doing what we're told," said Rick Baker, executive vice president of the Newton Chamber of Commerce.

Before Operation Desert Storm, Baker said, there wasn't much interest in having an old-fashioned July Fourth parade in the east-central Iowa community of 15,000.

The Maytag Co., the giant appliance maker, decided years ago to schedule its annual two-week shut down to coincide with the holiday. So that's when 3,500 assembly line workers took their vacation, many of them out of town, Baker said.

AP Laserphoto

Randy Robson, 8, adds water grasses to an almost-completed float honoring Vietnam veterans, including Randy's father, that will appear in Newton's parade today.

But the war puffed up the town's patriotic spirit. Gulf War veterans have been treated like heroes in Newton.

Paul Blanchard, 24, who drove a 5,000-gallon fuel truck on the front lines during the war, says he's still being treated as someone special.

"I got a pretty good welcome when I came back home," Blanchard said. "People buy you drinks. I'll probably get pretty well drunk Thursday night."
