In Brief

Dalton denies

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Navy Secretary John H. Dalton said today he didn't hide his leadership of a failed savings and loan nor did he ask he Senate Armed Services Committee to keep it quiet during his confirmation hearings.

The New York Times reported today that most senators did not know of his relationship with the Seguin Savings Association Seguin in Texas when the Senate voted unanimously to confirm Dalton, of San Antonio, as Navy secretary last year.

The thrift failed in 1989 at a cost to taxpayers of $100 million, the newspaper said. In a $3.8 million settlement of possible civil charges, federal regulators claimed Dalton had violated state and federal laws, committed "gross negligence" as Sequin's president, chief executive officer and chairman of the loan committee and board of directors, the Times said.

Democrats tout revamped plan for health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying they had "listened to America," Democratic leaders are pledging major changes in President Clinton's unpopular plan for health reform as Congress points toward a summer showdown on legislation to provide insurance for all.

"Our plans will be less bureaucratic, more voluntary and will be phased in over a longer period of time," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said following a meeting Thursday evening with the president, Hillary Rodham Clinton and top White House aides.

"We're going to suggest different approaches to achieve the same objectives" as Clinton outlined last fall, he added.

Said House Speaker Thomas Foley:

"We believe we are proposing legislation that can receive majority support in the House and Senate." Votes are expected in August.

Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos said the president was in agreement, "ready to go and ready to fight."

None of the participants provided detailed specifics of the changes that are still in the drafting stage.

On the most controversial of provisions, Foley said the House will vote on a requirement for businesses to pay for some portion of insurance coverage for workers.

Mitchell made no such pledge, but when asked whether the so-called employer mandate would be excluded in his bill, he said, "It should not sound that way because that's not the way it is."

Clinton proposed employers pay 80 percent of the cost of insuring workers and their families. The House bill is likely to provide additional protection for small firms and give them more time to comply; in private meetings, Mitchell has broached the idea of workers paying 50 percent of the cost of insuring workers, but not their families, an approach that key moderate Democrats find more appealing.

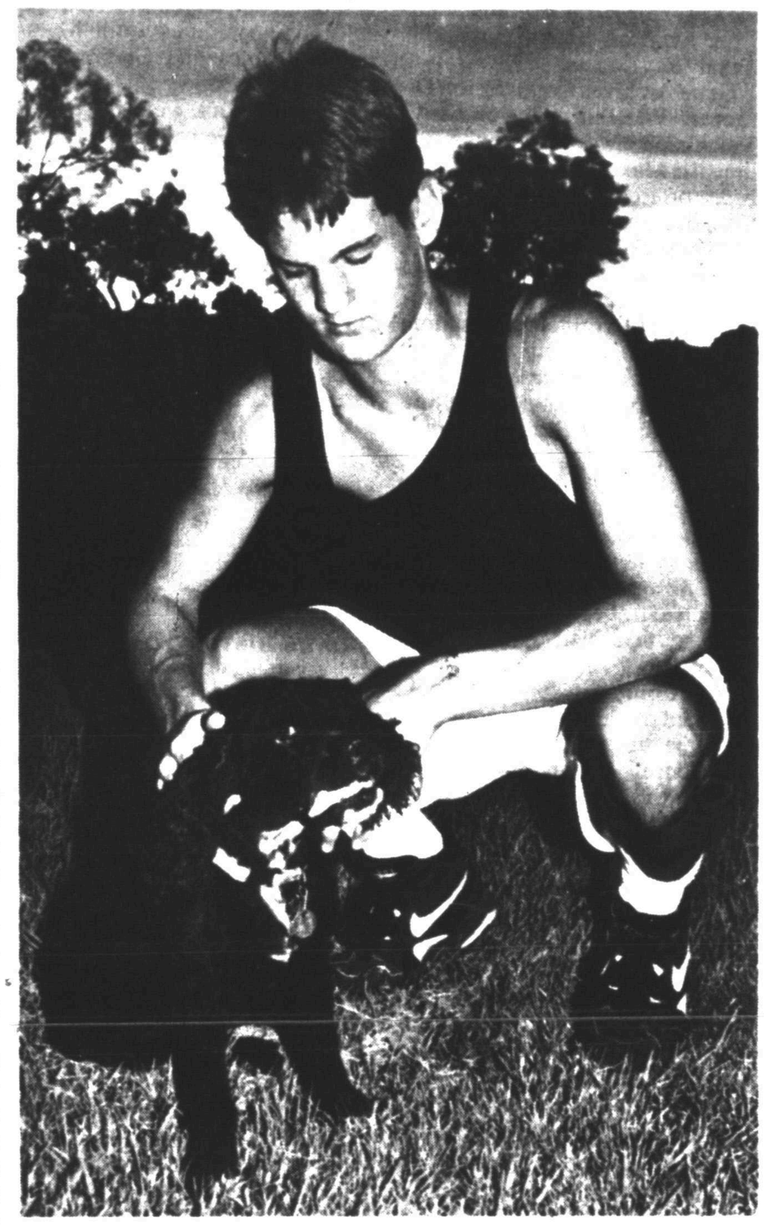

"We've listened to America; we've listened to Republicans as well as Democrats," Mitchell said.

The change in course came as Mrs. Clinton was preparing to fly to Portland, Ore., today to join the "Health Security Express," a bus caravan designed to promote health reform.

In the Capitol, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., arranged a hearing at which the chief executive of Pizza Hut, Allen Huston, was defending his company's policy of not paying for coverage for workers, even though it does so in Europe. Kennedy also asked the heads of McDonald's and Pepsico to appear, but it was uncertain whether they would comply.

The businesses say the requirements imposed by Europeans contribute to "unemployment, stagnant economics and high tax rates."

The Oval Office meeting marked a turning point in Congress' long-running health reform debate, and came near the end of a tumultuous week in which Clinton said coverage of about 95 percent of all Americans would meet his test of universal care. He has since said he was misunderstood, and he's holding fast to his call for everyone to be guaranteed coverage.

Nuclear talks to resume

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The United States and North Korea will resume talks aimed at ending a 16-month nuclear standoff on the Korean peninsula on Aug. 5, the North announced today.

The agreement on the Geneva talks, which were suspended after the death of North Korean President Kim Il Sung, was reached after discussions at the United Nations.

In another sign of easing tensions, South Korea announced today it will lift an order that put its 650,000-member military on high alert because of Kim's death.

Defense Ministry officials cited the absence of unusual troop movements in the North. South Korea had ordered the alert because it feared instability in the North after Kim's death.

White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said on Thursday the date for resumed talks had not been set because the agreement still had to be confirmed by both governments. U.S. sources in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they were expected to resume in early August.

North Korea's official news agency, through a Foreign Ministry statement, announced today the talks would be held Aug. 5.

The date was agreed on during Thursday's low-level talks, the Korea Central News Agency said.

North Korea denies it is developing nuclear weapons. But it has refused for 16 months to permit international inspections to verify its claims.

In two days of talks with South Korean officials in Seoul, Assistant Secretary of State Robert Gallucci, the lead U.S. coordinator on North Korean policy, reaffirmed the need for Pyongyang to remove doubts about the nature of its nuclear agenda.

Both sides agreed on improving ties with the Communist country if it proves that it has not been developing nuclear weapons.

Gallucci arrived in Tokyo today on the second leg of regional consultations on North Korea's nuclear problems.

DCOS approves purchases, reviews facts book proposal

Development Corporation of Snyder board members on Thursday approved purchase of a label printer and an answering machine and gave the go-ahead to work up a new community facts book.

The board rejected a request to hold quarterly meetings.

In a workshop following the meeting, the board reviewed a rough draft of a client presentation book and a DCOS operating guide.

Doug Hutchinson, DCOS executive director, asked that staff be allowed to work up development and cost for a new community facts book. The book would be designed so that pages could be added, allowing it to be tailored to a specific client.

The previous facts book on Snyder is outdated — it was written in 1989 — and cannot be expanded, Hutchinson noted.

Board members directed Hutchinson to pursue the idea, and to return with more definite plans and costs at a future meeting.

DCOS board members approved the purchase of a label printer and software for $289. Previous approval had been given on April 25; however, the printer at that time was estimated at $250. On Thursday, Hutchinson told the board that the $250 printer did not meet specifications.

The board also approved the purchase of an answering machine for $79.99.

In other business, the board approved $500 to co-sponsor the Discover Snyder Workshop, which began this morning at

Cactus & Crude tour to end here

The finish line for this year's Cactus & Crude bike tour will be in front of National Guard Armory on the southern edge of Towle Park.

Bicyclists participating in the Fina-sponsored event are expected to reach the finish line from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Approximately 100 area residents attended an airplane stunt-flying exhibition this morning at Winston Airfield that provided advance publicity for the events on Sunday. Today's performance featured a Fina Oil and Chemical airplane and lasted about 15 minutes.

Charlie Jirik, a pilot for Fina Oil and Chemical in Dallas, piloted the stunt-flying performance, with Randy Seaton, vice president of Reef Chemical Co. Inc. in Snyder, serving as his sole passenger.

The tour and race, proceeds from which will benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, is scheduled to begin at the Claydesta Center in Midland at 7 a.m. Saturday.

This year marks the first time in the six-year history of the tour that Snyder will serve as the host city for the finish line. In prior years, the "Cactus & Crude" bike tour and race concluded in Post.

Approximately 120 bicyclists and an additional group of about 130 support-staff members and relatives of the bicyclists are expected to participate in this year's tour.

The Snyder-based Nowsco Well Service, Inc. plans to provide a free lunch here Sunday for bike tour participants, their families and support staff.

Also as part of the bike-tour-related events, the music band "The Shades" of Midland-Odessa is scheduled to perform from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at Towle Park. The concert will be free and open to the public.

Jordan, Israel...

Old foes tread peace path

SOUTH SHUNEH, Jordan (AP) — For many Jordanians, the Israelis standing on the roof of the Dead Sea Spa hotel here appeared to be dancing. Few knew their swaying movements were part of Jewish prayers.

A Jordanian army officer helped an elderly Israeli journalist into a helicopter, a small act but an example of direct contact that would have been unthinkable only a week ago.

Everything has changed now.

The historic visit Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres paid to the kingdom on Wednesday, and King Hussein's upcoming summit with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Washington have changed yesterday's enemies to today's friends.

Negotiators wound up a week of peace talks Thursday by discussing a proposed free-trade zone and agreeing on a plan to develop a desert valley along their border. The plan is expected to be presented at Monday's summit.

Few Jordanians had ever dealt with Israelis until this week's dramatic events, which set Jordan and the Jewish state on a solid course toward peace after 46 years of conflict.

For them, Israelis were the ultimate enemies, a ruthless people born to oppress the Arabs and grab their land.

But if anything, the session here attended by Peres, Jordanian Prime Minister Abdul Salam Majali and Secretary of State Warren Christopher was more like a meeting of future in-laws at a marriage reception than an encounter between foes.

Majali himself set the party in motion by warmly welcoming Peres and escorting him around by hand. The only gesture missing was a warm embrace and the traditional Middle Eastern kiss on the cheek.

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Granbury works hard to keep its original look, but you could hardly blame a couple of law enforcement officers from taking a second look.

The Hood County News had this account:

The Opera House asked an antique gun collector if they could borrow some of his guns for the Opera's scheduled run of "Annie Get Your Gun."

The dealer, also a Granbury city councilman, obliged and left his guns with Opera staffers in the Opera lobby. Workers didn't want to disturb the rehearsal so they wanted the guns carried outside and around the corner.

Another worker volunteered to help. Off they walked down one of the city's main streets, loaded with enough weapons to silence a full battalion.

As they were rounding the Nutshell Eatery, two police officers who were eating lunch happened to notice the two saunter by. Not surprisingly, the officers became suspicious and followed the gun-toting duo.

"Excuse me," one of the officers said, "Could you tell me what ya'll are doing?"

"Sure," replied one of the quick-witted culprits, "We're transporting firearms."

They quickly disarmed the situation by telling officers they were merely temporary couriers for the upcoming Opera production.

Exchange for Alamo flag could prove precarious with Mexico

AUSTIN (AP) — A state senator is trying to help Texans remember the Alamo. But it won't be an easy task.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, is laying the groundwork to recover a battle flag seized by Mexican troops at the 1836 Battle of the Alamo.

For years, the government in Mexico has rebuffed American attempts to reclaim the flag.

But Truan hopes improved relations tied to the North American Free Trade Agreement and three Mexican flags seized by Texas troops at the Battle of San Jacinto will produce an exchange.

He is not holding his breath, however.

"My opinion is that they may want to continue to have the Texas flag for historic reasons and national pride," Truan said. "This is a very sensitive discussion and ought not to be taken as just a casual exchange.

"To them, they have a flag that was captured at the Alamo, where they were victorious. And these three flags we have were taken when they were defeated."

On Thursday, the Texas State Library and Archives Commission voted unanimously to endorse Truan's plan to initiate steps aimed at exchanging the Texas flag, which is on display in Mexico City, for the three flags taken from Mexican troops during the Texas Revolution.

State Archives Commission Director William Gooch says Truan's plan would mark the first time the Mexican government has been offered something in exchange for the flag.

"They have tried this before," Gooch said. "We tried to borrow the flag and Mexico wouldn't relinquish it. But this is the first time I have seen anything where we have in print that there is the possibility of exchanging something they own for something we own."

"The (Texas) flag has importance because it's 150-some-odd years old," Gooch said. "It's a valuable artifact. But the significance of it lies in that it was a flag taken from the Alamo at the time Texas had its beginning in 1836."

Truan, chairman of the Senate Committee on International Trade, Commerce and Technology, said the idea was raised during a meeting he had with Mexican Consul Armando Beteta of Corpus Christi on other commerce matters.

Beteta was out of his office Thursday, and a secretary said he couldn't be reached for comment.

Measuring 45-by-34 inches, the blue "Alamo flag" is made of crude cotton, trimmed in gold and embroidered with a picture of an eagle with a banner in its beak, saying, "God and Liberty."

The banner is also emblazoned with the words "1st Company of Texan Volunteers from New Orleans."

Mexico has shown an increased interest in the return of the three flags it lost during the Texas Revolution. Texans confiscated the colors of battalions from Matamoros, Toluca and Guerrero on April 21, 1836.

The battalions were under the command of Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, who defeated Texans under command of Lt. Col. William Barrett Travis at the Alamo on March 6, 1836.

The Legislature would have to approve any exchange, which likely wouldn't occur before January because of presidential elections in Mexico.

Eating right for diverticulitis

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from acute diverticulitis. Am I stuck forever eating bland and tasteless foods? Do you have any thoughts about my diet and foods I should avoid to prevent a recurrence of this condition?

DEAR READER: Diverticulitis is a common condition, characterized by repeated episodes of infection in the wall of the colon. When these areas become inflamed, pain and fever develop; there may be intestinal bleeding, too. The affliction is diagnosed by colon X-rays (or colonoscopy) and is treated with antibiotics.

There is no unanimous consensus about the role of diet in preventing diverticulitis. Obviously, large portions of indigestible foods, such as salads and nuts, are best avoided. But many authorities do not prohibit moderate amounts of these edibles, providing these foods don't consistently cause symptoms.

In addition, some experts advise against eating fruits with small seeds (strawberries, raisins and the like) on the theory that such indigestible seeds may trigger an attack or infection. This recommendation is far from universal, however.

I really don't see a compelling reason why you should be restricted to a "bland and tasteless" diet. This seems a bit unnecessary to me. Nonetheless, I don't want to give advice that runs counter to what your doctor has told you, so perhaps you should check with him about this specific point.

My patients with diverticulitis appear to do quite well on a healthful, well-balanced diet that goes easy on fiber. But I don't restrict spices, and I certainly don't recommend ground or pureed food. Perhaps a dietitian can spruce up your diet; ask your doctor to refer you to one.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Diverticular Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

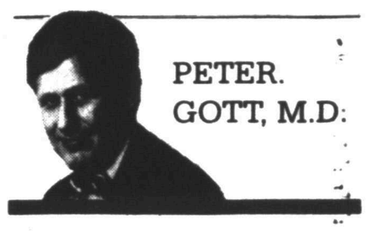

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've suffered from mouth sores for most of my life, as has my 91-year-old mother. Several doctors have indicated this is viral-based and there is no cure and little in the way of prevention or relief. I do use Zovirax, swish with peroxide and use Aspergum. What are your thoughts on the effect of tension precipitating this problem?

DEAR READER: Tension and stress clearly do play a role in activating viral (herpes) and non-viral (canker sores) mouth ulcers. In most instances, these ulcers are contagious during the time that they are present and active.

You may wish to investigate the stress relation by undergoing counseling. Meanwhile, the program of therapy that you have adopted should also help.

Democrats advise...

Keeping values is important

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — This master class was intended as a lesson in the dark heart of the city, a black hole of greed, indifference and self-importance.

But perhaps more than that it was a crash course in the contradictions of trying to make good and do good at the same time; of embracing some temptations while trying to resist others.

Dozens of eager young Democrats streamed into an elegant Capitol Hill backyard one night this week for a fund-raiser featuring two Democratic folk heroes: James Carville and Paul Begala, the political consultants pivotal to President Clinton's White House win.

The late afternoon sun shone, the beer flowed and the barbecued ribs were plentiful. But the rhetoric was decidedly un-festive.

"This place eats people up. ... It devours generations of young people that have come before you, and made them like everybody else in Washington," Carville said. He compared it to when he was a little boy and his uncle asked him to go upstairs and stop a pillow fight between his cousins.

"What happened when I got up to the top of the steps? I picked up a pillow and started whacking one of my cousins with it," he said. "That's what happens when people come to Washington."

As the young people pressed close in the humid air, Begala picked up on the theme. At the top of the stairs, he said, make sure "you have the same values, the same vision, the same priorities as you had when you were at the bottom of the stairs."

But life can be complicated, and Carville acknowledged as much after repeatedly warning against the lure of big bucks.

"I'm not saying look at me, how great thou art, because frankly I sold my book rights for a lot of money," he told the twenty-somethings with a laugh.

In fact Carville and his wife — the fiercely Republican Mary Matalin — received an advance in the neighborhood of $1 million for their upcoming he-said, she-said account of the 1992 presidential campaign.

Carville managed in the end to find a comforting message for the ambitious, hard-driving bunch of entry-level candidates and operatives. "You can have a lot of freedom in life and still stand for the right things," he reassured them.

It's Begala's advice that may pose the challenge: "Just keep thinking about who you are, where you came from and why you're here."

Eisner recovers from surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Eisner returned home from the hospital days after undergoing quadruple heart bypass surgery.

The 52-year-old Walt Disney Co. chairman left Cedars-Sinai Medical Center Thursday. Doctors said he recovered quickly because of his relatively young age and good health.

"He's walking. He's fine. He's made a remarkable recovery," said hospital spokesman Ron Wise.

Eisner had the operation Saturday after complaining of pain a day earlier. Doctors said he didn't have a heart attack, but they found coronary blockages severe enough to warrant immediate surgery.

Dear Abby

Parents Who Plan Ahead Help Preserve Their Family's Past

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1994 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In a world where many marriages no longer last a lifetime and divorce is common, a few words of advice may help prevent much heartache for those we love the most.

Parents who have remarried and have adult children would be doing their children a kindness if:

1. They have written plans for their funeral, and have made provisions for its costs.

2. They have discussed in advance the passing on of heirlooms, pictures, etc. Parents might want to consider having copies made of family photos for all the children. It is wise to go through the household and make written instructions stating who should have what.

3. Parents took the time to write a family and/or personal history for their children and grandchildren.

Copies of all of the above should be given to the current spouse, the children and a lawyer. This will protect both the spouse and the children.

Abby, we don't like to think about death or look at the negative possibilities that can result from it, but thinking ahead can prevent untold difficulties. I know! My father lies in an unmarked grave because his fourth (and last) wife refused to pay for the $6,000 funeral that she had arranged. My father's children and his sister were asked to leave the memorial service early, so "the family" could be alone with the deceased.

By the way, until that time, our relationship with my father and all of his wives was fairly civil. After the funeral, his last wife purchased a new Cadillac, sold his house, and took everything to another state, leaving no forwarding address.

LIVE AND LEARN

DEAR LIVE AND LEARN: Your letter provides one of the strongest arguments in favor of prenuptial agreements that I have ever seen. It is a wake-up call for anyone who has been previously married and is contemplating remarriage. Before tying the knot, see a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: We have a lovely home, and our garden is protected by a high thorny fence that has not prevented invasion of our privacy by literally hundreds of helicopter flights. Many swoop at rooftop-level within a few feet of our pool.

Helicopters are constantly flying over our residential areas and beaches as though they own all the airspace above the earth. The roar of their rotors is deafening! Low-flying helicopters have destroyed our quality of life, not to mention our freedom to backstroke au naturel in our own pool.

I suppose there is nothing you can do about this, but I just had to let off some steam.

NO PRIVACY IN PALOS VERDES, CALIF.

DEAR NO PRIVACY: Not all helicopter pilots flying overhead are out for joyrides. Some are surveying the area in pursuit of someone who is evading the law.

Helicopter pilots have located lost hikers and rescued accident victims to transport them to hospitals.

Georgia begins to regroup from floods

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — The Lawson family's backyard garden of green beans and peppers has disappeared. Inside their brick home, the walls are sodden and the hardwood floors have buckled. A moldy stench permeates their neighborhood.

"If it was just the water [illegible] from a swimming pool, that would be one thing. But this smells like somewhere between a muddy river and a cow pasture," said Ben Lawson.

Lawson and his wife Mary, however, consider themselves lucky. After two weeks of record flooding, recovery elsewhere could take years.

Floodwaters from the Flint and Ocmulgee rivers killed 31 people and destroyed hundreds of bridges and roads after Tropical Storm Alberto dumped nearly two feet of rain over central and southwest Georgia.

About 25,000 people fled their homes and more than 400,000 acres of crops were inundated after the flooding began July 5.

Official estimates have not been tabulated, but hundreds of millions of dollars in damages have already been reported. Forty-six counties were declared national disaster areas.

The catastrophe lingers:

— Forty-one roads on the state highway system remained closed Thursday, down from a high of 160.

— Officials were looking for caskets that were washed out of cemeteries. Remains from 360 re[illegible] have been refrigerated until they can be identified and reburied.

— An apartment complex and several dozen houses were still under water in Albany. About 400 mobile homes were being sent for emergency housing.

— Macon's 155,000 residents probably will remain without safe tap water for a few more days. The city's water treatment plant was flooded July 6. Some service was restored Tuesday, but the system was immediately overloaded and had to be shut down.

The Lawsons, professors at Albany State College, live about half a mile from the Flint River. They have no idea yet how much it will cost to repair their house. At the very least, their floors, carpets and walls will have to be replaced.

"It's an inconvenience — that's the mildest euphemism — and since insurance probably doesn't cover everything, it's costly," Lawson said.

The Lawsons moved their 2,000 books, Mrs. Lawson's paintings and family photos to the second floor. Their furniture went to a friend's house, where the Lawsons are still living.

Every house on their street has a pile of soaked carpets, appliances and furniture outside. The neighborhood is filled with the buzz of saws and the sounds of hammers bashing soggy wallboard.

Police manned a checkpoint at one corner to keep trespassers out. Volunteers driving an American Red Cross van handed out food and iced tea to residents and workers.

In Albany and surrounding Dougherty County alone, a regional planning agency estimates damage of $500 million to roads, bridges and other public property. The estimate does not include damage to businesses or 8,500 homes and apartments.

At Albany State College, where 28 of 31 buildings were waterlogged, damage may cost $50 million to repair. Summer classes resumed Thursday at makeshift sites around town. In the fall, the 3,600 students will attend classes in trailers.

After spending $15 million, A&M nixes building plans

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M appeared on the verge today of scrapping construction of a $120 million utility plant, the largest capital project in the university's history.

An estimated $15 million has already been spent in the initial phase of the project, and a Dallas company has already billed as much as $2 million in consultant fees, A&M board chairwoman Mary Nan West said Thursday.

The proposed construction of a cogeneration project, as well as efforts to privatize some operations at the state's second-largest university, has been part of an expansive state and federal investigation since last September.

On Thursday, the parent Texas A&M University System announced that it would be conducting an audit of the project.

Regents were expected today to uphold an administrative decision to stop negotiations to build a cogeneration plant, which was designed to provide A&M's utility needs through the year 2012.

A&M administrators broke off negotiations last month with Tenneco Power Generation Co. to build the plant after independent auditors declared the project "substantially flawed."

The project had come under sharp attack recently from consultants, who question its necessity, and by regents.

Regent Billy Clayton, a former Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, said the original consultant contract in 1992 was for $25,000 and approved by the university's legal department.

"The next time we heard about it, the contract had reached $2 million without additional approval from legal," Clayton said.

"That gives me some heartburn," he said. "I'm a consultant, and I can't make that kind of money. I don't think anyone completely understands this, and that's the amazing thing."

Ernst & Young Utilities Consulting questioned the need for the plant, as did a former chancellor of the university system, and criticized the university for failing to accurately assess its financial risk from the project. And among other points, Ernst & Young faulted A&M's process of selecting a developer for the project.

The findings tracked allegations raised more than a year ago by an unsuccessful bidder, the City of College Station, which accused A&M of giving an unfair advantage to developer Tenneco and its subcontractor, Brown & Root.

A&M hired Brown & Root in 1992 to help draft its request for project proposals and then chose Tenneco and Brown & Root.

Ms. West said it appears that the first phase of the plant, which amounted to laying pipelines, is justified. However, the huge plant, which would have been built in the second stage, may not be needed at all.

Texas A&M has operated a cogeneration plant for at least 50 years. Documents prepared by A&M physical plant director Joe Sugg say two consultants' studies in 1990 and 1992 pushed the concept of a new plant, which would take fuel — in this case, largely gas — and convert it to electricity and steam to power other utilities.

Texas could get up to $200 million in collider settlement

DALLAS (AP) — Texas and the U.S. Department of Energy could be close to a settlement in the dismantling of the super collider, according to a report in today's editions of The Dallas Morning News.

Congressional sources told The News that attorneys for the state and the Energy Department are ready to sign a deal that would resolve Texas' claims concerning the more than $400 million it had invested in the high-energy physics project, the newspaper reports.

Last October, Congress canceled the $11 billion, 53-mile underground atom smasher, which was under construction near Waxahachie south of Dallas.

Gov. Ann Richards and a bipartisan group of the Texas congressional delegation were expected to announce the deal today, which could mean between $100 million and $200 million in cash for the state for the final shutdown of the project.

Part of the deal being discussed would include cash reimbursements of up to $200 million for Texas, which also would get to keep the linear accelerator, all the land and the magnet development laboratory. Texas also would get the buildings, equipment and other facilities at the site and provisions for leasing them back to the federal government.

Sources told the newspaper that the proposed settlement, which still must be approved by the Energy Department and the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, would give the Energy Department liability for the already completed 14 miles of tunnel. Ownership of the tunnel was a key sticking point in the negotiations.

FDA seeks six-month ban on raw oysters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raw, unshucked oysters like the kind at seafood bars may become harder to find from April through October because of health concerns.

The Food and Drug Administration says it may urge Florida, Louisiana and Texas to impose an annual six-month ban on raw, unshucked oysters harvested off their coasts and require warning labels for the shucked ones.

In a letter this week to the Interstate Shellfish Sanitation Conference, a group of state regulators and industry representatives, the FDA suggested the ban as a way to guard against a form of bacteria that can be deadly to people with liver disease or weakened immune systems.

Oysters from the three Gulf Coast states are marketed throughout the country. Those harvested from April through October, however, may contain vibrio vulnificus bacteria that the government estimates claim 15 lives a year.

Alcoholics with damaged livers are vulnerable. So are people on chemotherapy, as well as those with AIDS, diabetes, liver disease, certain blood disorders or low stomach acid.

If adopted by the conference at its annual meeting next month in Takoma, Wash., the ban would allow for the sale of only shucked oysters from Gulf Coast waters during the warm months. And the containers would have to be labeled warning that the oysters should be eaten fully cooked.

For the ban to be approved, it would have to be formally proposed at the conference with FDA backing, and that hasn't occurred yet.

"We hope that this year's conference will consider our recommendation and adopt effective controls," Thomas J. Billy, director of the FDA's Office of Seafood, said in the letter. "The actions of the conference will determine what additional steps FDA may consider in our mutual goal of shellfish safety."

Caroline Smith DeWaal, director of food safety for the private Center for Science in the Public Interest, called the letter "a huge shift for the agency." DeWaal's group obtained the letter and distributed it to the news media.

Early indications are that the industry will fight the notion.

The proposal seems "rather far-reaching in terms of restricting the use of a product by people for which it has no particular risk," said Lee J. Weddig, executive of the National Fisheries Institute.

Narcotics officer accused of selling crack cocaine

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A nine-year veteran of the San Antonio Police Department has been suspended without pay following his arrest Thursday on charges he sold crack cocaine.

Detective Daniel Falcon, a 33-year-old narcotics officer, was arrested without incident and appeared before U.S. Magistrate Nancy S. Nowak on charges of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute crack cocaine and aiding and abetting in the distribution of crack cocaine.

According to a sealed indictment returned Wednesday naming Falcon, both incidents occurred June 28.

Police department investigators conducted the probe into Falcon, then forwarded their findings to federal prosecutors.

Police Chief William O. Gibson said he could not discuss details of the case, but said that Falcon had a clean record with the department before his arrest.

"He always appeared to be a very hard-working officer, very clean-cut," Gibson said.

Falcon, who was released from custody after posting bond, is scheduled to be arraigned Aug. 1, where he will enter his first plea in the case.

"MARGARET IS LIKE A LUMP IN MY OATMEAL"

Peete adapting to role as Dallas' backup QB

AUSTIN (AP) — Rodney Peete is still adapting to a new offense, but he says he likes his prospects as backup to the Dallas Cowboys' all-pro quarterback, Troy Aikman.

"It's a different role, but there [illegible] face reality and I had to do that," said Peete, who was the Detroit Lions' starting quarterback until he was injured in the third game of last season.

In the last four games of the season, Peete was the designated third starter for the Lions.

Peete started 47 games for the Lions and passed for over 1,000 yards in each of his five seasons. He is a 57 percent passer in the NFL with 38 touchdown passes to 57 interceptions.

"Obviously I'd like to start somewhere, but I think this could eventually be a good situation for me," said Peete, who signed a one-year free agent contract for $500,000.

The last two backups to Aikman, Steve Beuerlein and Bernie Kosar, have been snapped up by other NFL teams.

Can a quarterback from the run-and-shoot adjust to a more structured offense?

"I think Rodney Peete will be an excellent player for us," coach Barry Switzer said. "He is someone we can depend on if Troy gets hurt. We feel comfortable with him back there. He struggled a little at times but that's to be expected in a new offense."

Rodney has had his problems with the Dallas offense in early training camp. He suffered an interception in the Blue-White scrimmage. The timing hasn't been there.

"It's a tough thing getting used to the terminology and running a new offense. I have to get to the point [illegible] reaction instead of a thought. And I am slowly, but surely, getting to that point," Peete said.

"If and when I get the call, I don't want to let anyone down," he added.

Munchak blames weak knees for retirement from football

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It was a training camp arrival like no other for guard Mike Munchak.

Munchak showed up wearing a suit with his wife and two daughters to announce that after 12 years, nine knee surgeries and nine Pro Bowl elections, it was time to retire.

At 34, Munchak felt he could have played another year but the pain in his knees told him, no.

"I wanted to be able to run and play basketball with my kids in five years," he said. "I guess I won't be doing any skiing or playing full court basketball.

"That was one of the considerations in deciding not to push the knees any more."

Munchak will remain with the Oilers as assistant to football operations, working with the offensive line on a day-to-day basis.

"What I'll miss the most is the camaraderie of the offensive line," Munchak said. "When you walk away from football, you never have that again. Offensive lineman have to stick together.

"So, I'll remember those times when we weren't winning but we were still busting our butts trying to win."

The Oilers will retire Munchak's No. 63 jersey on Nov. 6 during halftime of the Oilers game in the Astrodome against Pittsburgh. Munchak is the fourth Oiler to have his jersey retired following Elvin Bethea (65), Earl Campbell (34) and Jim Norton (43).

Munchak was the Oilers' No. 1 draft choice out of Penn State in 1982. The Oilers didn't make the playoffs until 1987, when they started a string of seven straight appearances.

The first playoff victory against Seattle in 1987 is especially memorable for Munchak.

"I remember winning the game in overtime and the place was sold out," Munchak said. "I walked off the field with Bruce (Matthews) and Dean (Steinkuhler) and after five years, we felt like we were finally on to something."

He was so respected that last season he suited up and played in 13 games without practicing during the week.

Over his career, Munchak endured nine knee surgeries, most on his left knee. He also had arthroscopic elbow surgery in 1989 and suffered a neck strain at the end of the 1992 season.

He's had shoulder injuries and he suffered a broken ankle in his rookie year.

Despite the injuries, Munchak managed to play in 159 games, fifth on the club's all-time list.

"It happened so often that we came to think of him playing hurt as normal, but it wasn't normal," said Matthews, Munchak's close friend and business partner.

Munchak agonized through last season. He'd rehab his knees through the week, go through a light practice on Friday and on most Sundays he'd manage to get into the lineup.

"If I can develop into half the player Mike was, over his career, I'll be happy," said John Flannery, who will replace Munchak. "It's an honor to try to fill his position but don't ask me to replace his knees, I just have one good one left."

Second-year left tackle Brad Hopkins likely will miss Munchak the most on the field.

"He was such a tenacious player and he was like a surgeon on the field with all the tools and skills," Hopkins said. "But this is life. In college, players graduate, in the pros they retire.

"I loved having him out there with me. I wouldn't be nearly as far along without his help. Even when he wasn't in the game, he was helping me on the sidelines."

Tennessee rookies feel pinch of NFL's salary restrictions

by The Associated Press

Heath Shuler and Cory Fleming might be able to sell themselves as an act in the NFL. They certainly haven't had much luck as individuals.

Shuler, Tennessee's multitalented quarterback who left school a year early to join the NFL, remains inactive while his agent and the Washington Redskins dither over money. As a high draft choice, Shuler would figure to get a huge contract, but the salary cap changes all that.

Fleming, Shuler's favorite target and Tennessee's career leader in touchdown catches, became a salary cap victim on Thursday when the San Francisco 49ers surrendered their rights to the third-round draft pick. It was simply a matter of numbers, since Fleming was asking for $250,000, but San Francisco, sorely strapped by money limits, was reportedly offering only $125,000.

"The negotiations didn't work out and we had depth at receiver," San Francisco coach George Seifert said, adding that the move gives Fleming a chance to catch on with another team.

That's easier said than done, however. Ask New Orleans linebacker Sam Mills.

He's one of the top men in the league at his craft, yet he's making nothing like he hoped to be making this season, thanks to the cap.

He was a free agent, but got no realistic offers.

"I guess that's what the market has to offer me. That's what my value is," Mills said. "So often we look to see what your value as an athlete is out there in the free agent market. It didn't have as much to offer as I thought it would."

When July 15 came and went, Mills' rights belonged to the Saints, who were offering him the flat 10 percent raise required. He'll be making a shade over $1 million.

Redskins

While Shuler remained a stranger, second-round pick Tre Johnson reached agreement on a contract and was expected in camp today.

Chiefs

Kansas City has taken "go deep" to an extreme in scheduling. Before wrapping up training on Aug. 20 at River Falls, Wis., the Chiefs will hustle back home for the debut of Arrowhead Stadium's new grass field, travel to Tokyo for an exhibition against Minnesota and head for Washington for a practice game with the Redskins.

Giants

Vikings

David Palmer, the do-everything threat from Alabama, worked out with the team for the first time Thursday, mostly as a kick return specialist. Palmer, a second-round draft choice, was the last Vikings player to sign a contract.

Eagles

Rookie enthusiasm gave Philadelphia a scare on Thursday when free-agent defensive back Jamie Mendez laid a hard hit on wide receiver Fred Barnett, returning from reconstructive knee surgery. Barnett caught a pass from quarterback Randall Cunningham over the middle. When he turned around, Mendez was there waiting for him.

"I thought he knocked my leg off," Barnett said. "Somebody has to tell these young guys it's just training camp."

Falcons

Safety Scott Case, an 11-year veteran, signed a one-year contract believed worth $250,000.

Seahawks

Defensive end Natu Tuatagaloa didn't respond to Seattle's offer of a one-year contract for $162,000, and the Seahawks virtually wrote him off. Tuatagaloa started 15 games for Seattle last season.

Molitor lifts Jays past Texas

TORONTO (AP) — As he gets older, Paul Molitor seems to be getting better.

Molitor, one month shy of 38, is hitting .345 with 11 homers, 62 RBIs and 18 stolen bases without being caught.

Toronto Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said Molitor's experience has helped him become a more complete player.

"He's got great instincts along with great talent. He knows how to play this game. He's a low maintenance kind of guy who plays hard," Gaston said Thursday night after Molitor homered twice, drove in four runs and scored four more to lead Toronto to its fifth straight win, 9-3 over the Texas Rangers.

"I'm not really a home run hitter. I just try to find a good swing, maintain it and be consistent," said Molitor, who hit a two-run shot to center in the seventh inning to make it 7-3.

He added another two-run homer in the eighth off Matt Whiteside.

Molitor scored the go-ahead run for the Blue Jays in the fifth, reaching base on a fielder's choice, going to second on a walk and taking third on a wild pitch that bounced just a few feet from catcher Junior Ortiz. He scored on John Olerud's sacrifice fly, making the score 4-3.

"We can generate some things with our speed," Molitor said. "In the past it's kept us out of slumps. It's something we have to get back to in the second half of the season."

Toronto will also need good pitching to climb out of fourth place in the AL East. Pitching like that supplied by Pat Hentgen, who gave up three runs on eight hits in 6 2-3 innings for the win. He Rusty Greer hit a pair of solo home runs in a losing effort, including an inside-the-park homer in the second that gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead.

"It's all luck," Greer said on his shallow fly ball to left the Darnell Coles dove for and missed. "I got jammed on the pitch and what happened was nothing but luck."

Tim Leary (1-1) went 6 1-3 innings, allowing seven runs on seven hits. Leary is 1-10 lifetime against Toronto.

Astros thump Pirates 13-6

HOUSTON (AP) — The way Pete Harnisch was pitching, he didn't need much in the way of runs from the Houston Astros.

But the hits were indeed there, and the combination worked for a 13-6 victory Thursday night over Pittsburgh.

Harnisch (7-4) won his fifth consecutive game as he went seven innings, striking out four and scattering five hits. After starting off 2-4 this year, he's unbeaten since coming off the disabled list due to a shoulder injury in June. ing as well now as any time last year. My changeup is better and my slider is better. And the way my arm has felt, I've been able to go harder.

"Our offense has been tremendous. When you hold this team to under five runs, you're doing an unbelievable job. The way we are running the bases aggressively and hitting home runs is great."

The Astros have scored an average of 6.75 runs a game since the All-Star break. They've played the Pirates five times in that span, racking up a total of 39 runs in those games alone.

"It's going to happen once and a while," Collins said. "Were a team that can score five or six runs a game, but I don't think of us as having a high-powered offense.

"We have a good offensive club. Big hits are the key to opening up high-scoring games, but you think of teams like the Tigers or the Rangers as high-scoring teams because they have guys who get a lot of three-run home runs."

Pirates starter Zane Smith slipped to 9-8 as he lasted only 3 2/3 innings and gave up nine runs, six of them earned. "It was one of those nights he just didn't have anything," Leyland said.

"That happens a few times a year and tonight was one of them. But Zane Smith is the least of my problems."

Lowrance finishes fourth with 240

ABILENE — For the second straight day, Snyder's Brooke Lowrance shaved three shots off her previous round.

Lowrance, who wound up with a fourth-place 240 at the 54-hole Todd Moore Memorial Junior Golf Tournament, fired a 77 on Thursday, following a Wednesday 80 and an opening-round 83 on Tuesday.

Lowrance, three-time Snyder High School and District 2-4A medalist, trailed third-place April de Vries of Abilene by a single stroke. Stacy Rambin of Tulsa was the tournament champion. Rambin shot a 74 on Thursday to wind up with a 230.

Dumas' Jamie McInturff was second at 237.

The champion in the boys' division of the tournament was Amarillo's Ty Cox. Cox finished with a 207 after shooting a 69 on the final day of play.

Johnson gets JTL tourney win

In Thursday's report of Snyder's games at the District Junior Teenage League Baseball Tournament in Sweetwater, credit was given to Gene Pollard as the winning pitcher in an 18-8 Snyder victory in Game One.

The winner was actually Jeremiah Johnson. Johnson, who started and lasted four innings, combined with reliever John Border to strike out six, walk just three and scatter a dozen hits against eventual tourney champs Sweetwater.

Snyder finished second at the tournament, falling to Sweetwater, 10-2, in Wednesday's finale.

Commissioner predicts '94 will be banner year

by The Associated Press

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue is convinced that once the 1994 season begins, all the griping about the salary cap will stop.

"By opening day, the cohesion and continuity of teams will be striking and the carping will end," said Tagliabue, who two months ago felt it necessary to order club executives to stop their public complaining about the $34.6 million cap, in use for the first time this season.

The season that begins Sept. 4 will be the NFL's 75th. And Tagliabue, as he does every year, predicted it would be "our best yet."

He predicted, for example, the end of the 9-6 field-goal contest of the kind that predominated early last season. And he suggested that once teams become used to free agency and the salary cap, there will be less movement.

"We don't want to be a league that started barnstorming around the country with George Halas and Red Grange, then ended up after 75 or 80 years with another type of barnstorming," Tagliabue said Thursday in a national conference call.

The NFL instituted a number of changes in the offseason in an effort to increase scoring — particularly touchdowns. The most dramatic was the 2-point conversion.

But Tagliabue said that he believes the more subtle changes — such as a crackdown on illegal chucking on receivers, a deeper alignment for the offensive line and more stringent enforcement of rushing the passer rules — will have an even more dramatic effect.

As for the salary cap, he said most coaches are satisfied with the system.

Perhaps, but not entirely.

"I'd love for Jerry Jones to be able to spend all the money he'd like to on players," Barry Switzer, the new Dallas coach, said Thursday. "But we have the system as it is, and I guess we'll have to live with it."

Dallas is one of those teams that could be hurt by the system. While the team that won two straight Super Bowls under Jimmy Johnson has retained most of its starters — linebacker Ken Norton was the most notable loss — it doesn't have the depth it's had over the last two seasons, meaning an injury to any number of starters could hurt.

Clinton orders expanded airlift operation to help Rwandans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton today announced an "immediate, massive increase" in the U.S. effort to confront hunger and plague among Rwandan refugees, ordering a round-the-clock military airlift of supplies and medicine.

"The flow of refugees across Rwanda's borders has now created what could be the world's worst humanitarian crisis in a generation," Clinton said.

Clinton said he was told the crisis was claiming one life per minute.

He put a pricetag of $100 million on the expanded relief efforts. Clinton on Thursday announced $41.5 million in aid will be added to $144 million that had been pledged earlier.

Private aid experts have charged that the administration failed to recognize the magnitude of the Rwandan crisis.

The administration's new efforts include establishment of an "airlift hub" in neighboring Uganda that U.S. military forces will use as a staging area for the 24-hour shipment of supplies to the 1.7 million Rwandans who have flooded into Zaire.

Clinton also called for a "full contingent" of United Nations peacekeepers to be sent to Rwanda to provide security for civilians who want to return to their homeland.

Shuttle's landing postponed

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Rain off the Florida coast today kept Columbia and its menagerie of sea creatures and bugs in orbit an extra day and made shuttle endurance champs out of seven astronauts.

The offshore storms violated NASA flight rules by encroaching within 341/2 miles of Cape Canaveral, Fla., thwarting plans to touch down at the landing strip there. The crew was told to try again Saturday morning.

"The good news is you all are 'go' for the new space shuttle flight duration record. The bad news is ... we're going to wave you off for the day," Mission Control's Charlie Precourt told the astronauts.

The delay means Columbia will remain in orbit at least 18 hours longer than the previous shuttle endurance record of 14 days, 121/2 minutes, set by another crew aboard Columbia last year. This crew sailed past that record at midday.

"We're just tickled to death to pass the baton and that trophy to you guys," said Mission Control's Bill McArthur, who flew on the previous record-setter.

Earlier, Precourt informed shuttle commander Robert Cabana that one of three navigational units was again exhibiting abnormal readings. The shuttle needs only one of the units to land, but NASA requires that it have two good backups.

The shuttle was packed up and ready to land with its cargo of fruit flies, sea urchins, jellyfish, mating Medaka and newborn newts.

Columbia was launched two weeks ago jam-packed with 82 experiments involving more than 200 scientists from around the world.

Chief mission scientist Robert Snyder was the only researcher to end the mission empty-handed. His experiment in separating particles with an electrical field was thwarted by equipment problems.

Jail inmate rushed to emergency room

A 33-year-old Scurry County Jail inmate was being treated for self-inflicted wounds to his wrists this morning at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Sheriff Keith Collier said that the inmate, Clemente Gamboa, was arrested Thursday evening for fleeing to elude and disregarding a stop sign. He was taken before Justice of the Peace Wanda Rushing this morning at about 8:40 and a hold was placed on his bond for felony probation revocation.

According to the sheriff, Gamboa apparently cut his wrists with a piece of metal this morning after he was returned to the jail. He was discovered about 10:30 and Snyder EMS took him to the emergency room.

A Cogdell Memorial Hospital spokesperson refused to release any information concerning Gamboa's condition.

Western Texas College. The chamber of commerce also contributed $500 and the college is permitting free use of its Science Lecture Hall for the event.

Following regular business, which included approval of bills and previous minutes, the board briefly reviewed two rough-draft publications.

The first was a client presentation book, which outlines to business prospects all programs available to help them. The second is a DCOS guide, which outlines all tools available to the board, including local incentives as well as state and federal programs.

Hutchinson asked board members to take their time in reviewing the books, and noted that information could be added or deleted.

Present for Thursday's meeting were DCOS board members John Fagin, Miller Robinson and Bill Seale. Roy Baze and Dan Cotton were absent.

Public opinion sought

EL PASO (AP) — Members of the new Border Environmental Cooperation Commission say they will be eager to hear the public's concerns and ideas as they seek out environmental cleanup projects on the border.

The agency was established under the North American Free Trade Agreement's environmental side accord with public participation in mind, new commission appointee Peter Silva said.

'It gives more ways to get the public involved in environmental review in border projects,'' said Silva, deputy director of the San Diego water utility.

The commission, which includes representatives from the United States and Mexico, will recommend environmental cleanup projects on both sides of the border.

The commission will take on proposals that are already developed and simply need funding. The panel also will support local, state and private efforts to prepare, develop, implement and finance environmental projects.

North American Development Bank of San Antonio, which also was set up under a NAFTA side agreement, will act on the panel's recommendations when it determines which projects to fund.

The rules for public input have not yet been established.

But another new appointee, Lynda Taylor, said the commission needs to get the word to people who live on the border and who work with border programs that BECC will help them.

''I'm anxious for the public to know ... proposals for cleanup will be accepted by the commission,'' said Taylor of the Southwest Research and Information Center in Albuquerque.

The United States and Mexico each have five members on the commission, which will be based across the border from El Paso in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Three are appointed members, one slot goes to each nation's top environmental official and one each to the U.S. and Mexico's representatives on the International Boundary and Water Commission.

Besides Taylor and Silva, President Clinton on Wednesday also appointed Ignacio Garza, chairman of the Texas Parks and Wildlife board, to the commission.

Final million drawing held in 'Lotto'

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A 47-year-old bread deliveryman from Van Horn is the final winner in the Texas Lottery's series of $1 million drawings.

''I really couldn't see myself getting $1 million,'' David McBirnie said. ''It's going to have to sink in a little bit. From the very beginning I could not see myself here with this.''

McBirnie was one of seven finalists in Thursday's drawing, the 30th and final one.

The Texas Lottery began the drawings two years ago to generate excitement about the game. Finalists for each drawing were chosen from lottery players who scratched off the word ''entry'' from a lottery ticket.

The Texas Lottery still will feature instant winnings from scratch-off tickets and the bigger money Lotto.

McBirnie's six children, wife and mother rushed to the stage in San Marcos after he opened a mock safe with a message inside declaring him the winner.

McBirnie 47, a Vietnam veteran who was awarded a Purple Heart, said he will ask his wife, Adela, for help in figuring out how to spend the windfall.

''It's only fair. Every time I brought home my paycheck, it was never enough to pay all the bills,'' he said.

Also in Thursday's drawing, Sara Rempel of Seminole won $50,000; Nelly Moreno of Plainview, $25,000; Jorge Arias of Grand Prairie and Willie D. Harvey of Houston, $15,000 each; and Fred Parker of Dallas and Elsie J. Marak of Ennis, $10,000 each.

Russian revolutionary Vladimir I. Lenin was born in 1870 and died in 1924.

New study casts doubt on cholesterol as the heart disease culprit

HOUSTON (AP) — Data collected by one of the world's foremost heart surgeons could send theories about heart disease into a tailspin.

A preliminary study by Dr. Michael DeBakey suggests that genetic damage and not cholesterol may be the leading cause of atherosclerosis, the disease that causes recurring artery blockages.

The Houston Post reported Thursday that DeBakey presented the preliminary results of his findings to a Glasgow, Scotland, symposium this week.

DeBakey, who serves as chancellor at Houston's Baylor College of Medicine, was traveling and unavailable to comment further on the study Thursday, a spokeswoman said.

The Post reported that the findings were based on data from 4,000 patients over four decades.

Baylor spokeswoman Julie Fix said she did not know if DeBakey's preliminary findings had been submitted to any medical journal for publication.

According to The Post, the study shows cholesterol may only be a secondary cause of atherosclerosis.

DeBakey's data shows one-third of all recurring blockages of arteries don't involve easily identifiable risk factors such as diet, smoking, gender, age or hypertension, the newspaper said.

''It's an interesting release,'' the American Heart Association said. ''The association believes risk factors interact with many things. But it's not likely that one, single gene will ever be found to be the cause of heart disease. There are probably dozens and dozens of genes that contribute to the disease.''

Cholesterol traditionally has been considered a leading risk factor for atherosclerosis, which is blamed for more deaths in the United States than any other single condition.

Christopher White, director of interventional cardiology with the Health Care International Medical Center in Scotland, said DeBakey's preliminary findings floored researchers gathered at the conference.

''It was a news flash,'' White said.

If further research backs up DeBakey's preliminary results, decades of conventional wisdom regarding heart disease could be overturned.

White told The Post DeBakey's research was presented at the symposium because it was a relatively small gathering of prominent vascular surgeons.

He also cautioned that the results were very preliminary.

''I think Dr. DeBakey would be the first to admit it,'' White said. ''And I think he was looking for feedback. The data is very new, and it does run counter to a lot of accepted tenets.

''But he's a world leader. He doesn't take these positions lightly. I think he believes he's got a unique insight into vascular disease.''

The conference was sponsored by the Health Care International Medical Center, which is the first private, university-affiliated teaching hospital in the European Community.

Ex-Houston health spa tycoon jailed in passport fraud case

HOUSTON (AP) — They met on the ski slopes and fell in love 17 years ago — a Houston health spa tycoon and a California pre-med student and part-time model.

But their romance soured and he fled the country after hired gunmen attacked her in a 1980 shooting outside a Houston doughnut shop, leaving her paralyzed from the waist down.

Now, Richard Minns is in federal custody in Texas on passport fraud charges, while his ex-girlfriend still is waiting for him to pay a $32 million civil judgment.

Minns, founder of the President & First Lady Health Club chain, is to appear in a Dallas federal court today, several days after he was arrested at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport when his flight to Canada made a scheduled stop and he disembarked.

Federal prosecutors said Thursday they will ask that Minns, now 64, be held without bond until he is tried in Houston.

Although never charged in the shooting of Barbra Piotrowski, now using the name Janni Smith, Minns sold his business interests and left the country more than 12 years ago.

The story of the couple's affair-gone-awry was chronicled in the 1991 book, ''Sleeping With the Devil,'' by former trial lawyer Suzanne Finstad.

Ms. Smith, 41, filed a lawsuit against Minns accusing him of masterminding the shooting and in 1987 won a default judgment when he failed to respond.

Minns appealed in absentia. A civil jury in 1991 concluded Minns was responsible for the attack, and a judge ordered him to pay his former lover $32 million, plus interest. She has never collected any money from the judgment, which is being appealed.

Ms. Smith now runs a rehabilitation center with her husband.

''It (the arrest) took me completely by surprise,'' Ms. Smith said.

She and Minns met in Aspen in 1977, and she moved to Houston to be with him. Minns' wife filed for divorce the next year.

After living together off and on for more than three years, Ms. Smith walked out on him in early 1980 and took the furniture. He had her jailed for theft, and she countered with a palimony lawsuit.

Then, on Oct. 20, 1980, two men caught her alone in her car and shot her four times in the back. Four men were eventually convicted in the murder-for-hire scheme and sent to prison.

In March 1993, an eight-count unsealed indictment was returned against Minns accusing him of obtaining a series of U.S. passports under false identities, falsely claiming U.S. citizenship and unlawfully attempting to obtain documentary evidence of U.S. citizenship.

Minns is accused of using two aliases in illegally getting passports. If convicted on all counts, he would face up to 38 years in prison and fines up to $2 million.

Michael Ware, Minns' Fort Worth attorney, on Thursday declined to comment about the charges against his client. He did say he would fight the government's attempt to have Minns jailed without bond.

''Right now, I don't want to prejudice the case or try it in the media,'' Ware said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Eric Nichols said Minns was arrested when he got off an American Air-

Border Patrol seizes cocaine

LA PALOMA (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents have made their largest seizure of cocaine this year on the Texas side of the Rio Grande — 1,238 pounds worth an estimated $39 million.

The seizure occurred at 10 p.m. Wednesday at the Rio Grande levee within a mile of the community of La Paloma, about 29 miles northwest of Harlingen.

The agents were patrolling the riverbank when they detained six men described as undocumented Mexican nationals.

The men were suspected of being ''mules'' for the cocaine because about 100 yards away, the agents found eight burlap sacks containing smaller packages of the white powder on the river side of the levee, said Ernesto Castro, assistant agent in charge of the Border Patrol's Harlingen station.

Nine sacks already had been loaded onto a pickup truck north of the levee, placed inside a large box used for hauling harvested okra, Castro said.

The cocaine ''looked like it just had been crossed and was getting ready to be moved to another location,'' said Gary Olenkiewicz, the group supervisor for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's Brownsville office.

A trained dog detected the scent of narcotics on the men's clothing, but Olenkiewicz said the U.S. Attorney's Office in Brownsville advised him that not enough evidence existed to charge them.

The six men accepted the option of ''voluntary departure'' status rather than wait for formal deportation proceedings. They were back in Mexico by Thursday afternoon, Castro said.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE HARD LIFE OF THE MESSENGER

MESSENGERS IN BIBLICAL TIMES WERE IMPORTANT PERSONAGES. THEY CARRIED DICTATES OF KINGS, GENERALS, AND STATESMEN, WITH GREAT DISPATCH ALTHOUGH THEIRS WAS NOT A JOB TO BE SOUGHT AFTER. THEIR TRAVELS WERE HAZARDOUS, THEIR HOURS WERE LONG, AND VERY OFTEN THEIR WORK WENT UNAPPRECIATED. IN FACT, IF THEY HAPPENED TO BE BEARERS OF EVIL TIDINGS THEIR OWN LIVES COULD BE ENDANGERED DUE TO THE FACT THAT OFTEN THE RECIPIENTS OF THE BAD NEWS WOULD ORDER THE DEATH OF THE MESSENGER WHO BROUGHT SUCH UNPLEASANT TIDINGS. ALSO, IT WAS NOT UNCOMMON FOR GROUPS OF MEN TO IMPEDE THE PROGRESS OF A MESSENGER TO KEEP THE COMMUNICATIONS FROM BEING DELIVERED FOR POLITICAL REASONS. MORE THAN ONE HAPLESS COURIER FELL VICTIM TO A ROADSIDE AMBUSCADE RESULTING IN CONFIDENTIAL MISSIVES FALLING INTO THE WRONG HANDS.
