Strings, FLES programs could be casualties of magnet schools

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Sometimes progress brings sacrifice and such may be the case with the Midland Independent School District's commitment to have two top shelf magnet schools. Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. has said in the past that in order to fund MISD's magnet programs, two of the district's premier programs might fall by the wayside — the Strings program, an elementary music education program, and Foreign Language in Elementary Schools.

"The superintendent has indicated he would like to abolish the FLES and Strings programs," said MISD board President George Lara. "I would hate to abolish those programs."

FLES is currently offered at nine campuses and serves some 2,100 elementary students, said Marybeth Hughes, foreign language specialist for the district.

"We are trying to teach primary speakers of English (and primary Spanish speak-

Will community come to the aid of arts?

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Over the weekend, some 10,000 Midlanders showed their support for the arts, attending Celebration of the Arts en masse.

"One of the things people comment on throughout Texas is the appreciation that Midlanders have for the fine arts, and that's a tradition I hope will never end," said Linda Bond, executive director of the Arts Assembly of Midland.

Even with so much art appreciation among the community at large, an important fine arts program in the Midland Independent School District could be in danger of extinction or at the least in danger of downsizing.

One possible funding idea for Midland's two proposed magnet schools is to reallocate the budgets of the Strings and FLES programs. FLES is a dual language program teaching approximately 2,100 elementary students to be bilingual. The Strings program serves 1,300 students each year, 800 of whom are elementary students, and teaches them skills and appreciation of stringed instruments and the orchestra.

"I personally feel the Strings department at MISD is an important factor of the quality of life in our community. It can be not only a positive influence in young people's

Sports complex concession stands

City receives one bid from RockHounds

■ The City Council asked 14 concession companies to bid on the football/soccer concessions stand project.

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

When the Scharbauer Sports Complex opens for business in 2002, there may be only one company running the concession stands in both the baseball and football/soccer stadiums.

At Tuesday's City Council meeting, only the Midland RockHounds submitted a proposal to operate the football/soccer concession stands. The bid was opened and council deferred considering the bid until the June 13 council meeting, allowing city management the opportunity to analyze the RockHounds bid in full.

'I don't think our owner is going to want us to talk about specific financial numbers or percentages. Once we're awarded the contract, we'll be at much more liberty to talk about it.'

—Monty Hoppel, general manager of the RockHounds

Although 14 concession companies were asked to bid on the project, city officials said they weren't surprised that only one bid was received.

"I think the RockHounds have such a strong reputation for doing (concessions) that that may have affected the number of bids that came in," Mayor Bobby Burns said. "City staff would want to look at it and see if it's in our best interest or not."

According to Chuck Swallow, director of community services, the successful bidder would not only provide concession service but concession equipment as well.

Local companies that did not bid were either unavailable for comment or chose not to comment.

Deputy City Manager Glen Hackler offered some insight into why there was only one bidder, suggesting some of the smaller local companies did not want to make the necessary sizeable investment in the concession equipment while the large national firms may have considered the contract to be too small to be worth the effort.

Lou Sinos, vice president of operations at the Swanson Corporation, based in Omaha, Neb., said his company competes for bids all over the country but said the company didn't think

Midland teen nearly drowns in apartment swimming pool

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

A 15-year-old Midland boy nearly drowned in an apartment complex swimming pool Tuesday, according to Mary Martindale, a spokeswoman for the apartment complex.

The youth, Quentin Antoine Washington, who, Ms. Martindale said is deaf and mute, was pulled from the pool at the Patio Townhouse Apartments at 1710 N. A St. about 7 p.m.

Broadcast reports said the boy was allegedly dared to swim across the pool. He is not a good swimmer, Ms. Martindale said.

The boy was being watched by an uncle, said Ms. Martindale, and when it was noticed the boy was having trouble staying afloat, he was pulled out of the pool by the uncle, another unidentified adult and a friend of Ms. Martindale.

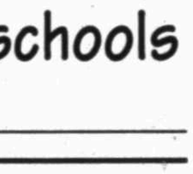

A Midland Police Department dispatcher said officers were

Three lakes that supply city's water reaped little reward from recent rain

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The May 19 rainfall that graced much of West Texas hardly impacted the water levels in the three lakes in the Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD) that supplies the bulk of Midland's water.

"It was a perfect rain for farming and ranching," figured Steve Hofer, Midland's representative on the Big Spring-based CRMWD, "but not a perfect rain for getting runoff into our reservoirs."

The runoff was virtually nil.

"The country was so dry," Hofer said. "We needed a soaking rain to saturate the ground in the watershed and then another rain immediately following that that would run off (into the watershed and into the river and lakes) as opposed to soaking in" to the ground.

This week, the O.H. Ivie Reservoir, which is Midland's

As Israeli security zone collapses, Lebanese guerrillas take over

By Zeina Karam
Associated Press

BINT JBEIL, Lebanon — Jubilant Shiite Muslim guerrillas stepped swiftly Tuesday into the power vacuum left by Israeli-allied militiamen who surrendered or fled southern Lebanon, abandoning tanks and weapons as Israel moved to end two decades of occupation.

Homeward-bound Israeli soldiers honked jeep horns and kissed the ground after crossing the frontier into Israel, where hundreds of panicky militiamen and their families converged in search of asylum.

Israel had set July 7 as the deadline for its withdrawal, but the collapse of its militia allies speeded up the army's exit from the security zone, created in 1985 to protect Israel's northern settlements from cross-border attacks by Lebanese guerrillas. A complete withdrawal was expected within days.

Despite the retreat, fighting continued. Israel sent in Merkava battle tanks to protect its troops as they withdrew from front-line positions and Israeli air force jets rocketed guerrilla positions and destroyed roads into its old enclave. By Tuesday night, the Israeli army had abandoned several front-line positions and pulled armor and artillery from the area of Marjayoun, the town that served as the enclave's capital.

Earlier Tuesday, it also abandoned Bint Jbeil, Israel's second-largest base in Lebanon, and crowds of Lebanese guerrillas and sympathizers surged in to reclaim the village of 4,000.

The scene was repeated in dozens of smaller villages, where hundreds of South Lebanon Army militiamen surrendered en masse or fled with families to Israel, giving the guerrillas unimpeded access to the border. In the east, militiamen abandoned the notorious Khiam prison, leaving 140 inmates to walk free.

In Israel, border residents took to their bomb shelters Tuesday, fearing possible reprisal attacks.

At Fatima Gate, an inland border crossing into Israel, hundreds of militiamen and their families left cars backed up for miles and finished the journey on foot, carrying suitcases crammed with their belongings. Several hundred more fled through the Naqoura border post on the Mediterranean coast.

Among those heading to Israel were the widow and six daughters of the late Maj. Saad Haddad, the first Lebanese military man to publicly ally himself with Israel. Haddad, a renegade from the Lebanese army in the opening years of the 1975-90 civil war, founded the Army of Free Lebanon, forerunner of the South Lebanon Army.

By Tuesday afternoon, about 2,000 Lebanese refugees had entered Israel, most taking refuge in a tent camp on the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee.

Tuesday's withdrawal from Bint Jbeil and dozens of other villages was mostly peaceful — unlike Monday, when six civilians were killed and 19 wounded when Israeli and allied militia gunners opened fire in an attempt to halt the masses streaming back to their hometowns.

However, a Lebanese driver working with the British Broadcasting Corp. was killed when a shell landed beside his car near the border, BBC Middle East correspondent Jeremy Bowen said. It was not immediately known who fired the shell.

Another Lebanese civilian lost a leg when he drove his motorcycle over a land mine outside an abandoned militia position in the village of Baraachit.

In Bint Jbeil, guerrilla fighters and civilians kissed and hugged or waved the flags of the main Shiite guerrilla groups, Hezbollah and Amal. Guerrilla flags fluttered from utility poles and rooftops.

Guerrillas packed trucks with ammunition and mortar guns abandoned by Israeli-allied militiamen. Others drove around in captured armored personnel carriers.

"This is an unforgettable moment," said Hala Ayoub, a 55-year-old woman, as she kissed and hugged her 18-year-old son Fadi in Bint Jbeil's town square.

"The triumph and joy are like we were born today," said Abdul-Nabi Beydoun, a 52-year-old butcher.

Hundreds of Israeli-allied militiamen surrendered and were hauled away in Lebanese army trucks. They are expected to stand trial on charges of collaboration that carry prison terms or even the death penalty.

"It is a beautiful scene to see the collaborators rounded up in humiliation," said Nasser Fakhreddine, a 33-year-old truck driver.

But, he added, some militia members "have been my neighbors for 20 years, and they were forcefully drafted. I hope the government takes this into consideration."

Armed Philippine rebels meet with hostage negotiator

By Jim Gomez
Associated Press

PATIKUL, Philippines — Rebels, some gripping AK-47s, left their mountain hide-out Tuesday to meet a government negotiator to arrange the start of formal talks aimed at freeing 21 Western and Asian hostages.

In informal talks the Abu Sayyaf rebels have asked for as much as $2 million just for an ailing German hostage, Renate Wallert, whose quick release tops the negotiators' agenda.

The rebels are holding three Germans, two French, two Finns, two South Africans, a Lebanese, nine Malaysians and two Filipinos kidnapped from the Malaysian resort island of Sipadan on April 23.

With about 200 police officers standing by, scores of heavily armed Abu Sayyaf rebels in an array of costumes ranging from an American flag T-shirt to camouflage and black masks drove into a small town on the island of Jolo for the meeting.

Residents went inside and shut their windows.

After the hourlong meeting with two rebel commanders, provincial Gov. Abdusakur Tan said talks would begin Thursday.

"It was a very good meeting," Tan said, a pistol at his waist. "We agreed to talk, to begin negotiations. We have bright chances."

Commander Mujid Susukan said the hostages will be released. Asked when, he said, "I don't know."

Commander Robot was positive as well, waving and smiling at the media. We are in search of peace here," he said, clutching an AK-47 rifle.

After their talks, Tan and Robot shook hands, then the rebels pulled away, pumping their fists in the air and shouting, "Allahu Akbar," or "God is great," in Arabic.

Parliament speaker plays down strike on Afghanistan

By Jim Heintz
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russia's parliament speaker on Tuesday played down a Kremlin official's statement that Russia could launch airstrikes against Afghanistan for allegedly signing an agreement to aid Chechen rebels.

Speaker Gennady Seleznyov said he believed that Sergei Yastrzhembsky, the presidential spokesman on the Chechnya conflict, had spoken only "on the spur of the moment," the ITAR-Tass news agency reported. But Yastrzhembsky responded that "personal opinions are not expressed on such issues," the news agency Interfax reported.

On Monday, Yastrzhembsky raised the possibility of strikes against Afghanistan, saying Russian intelligence services had evidence of a Chechen aid deal signed by Afghanistan's ruling Taliban militia and suspected terrorist mastermind Osama bin Laden.

Such attacks would open a new chapter in the 8-month-old Russia-Chechnya conflict. They also would run counter to Moscow's criticism of U.S. attacks on supposed terrorist targets around the world, including a 1998 cruise missile attack on Afghanistan.

Gennady Zyuganov, leader of the Communist Party, criticized Yastrzhembsky's statement as irresponsible, ITAR-Tass said.

In Afghanistan, a Taliban spokesman rejected Yastrzhembsky's accusation and warned Russia the Taliban would retaliate, if attacked.

A firewalker walks across smoldering coals Sunday in the northern village of Aghia Eleni, Greece, about 60 miles northeast of Thessalonik. Each year, the firewalkers open and close the three-day celebrations for the May 21 feast day of Saints Constantine and Helen by walking on glowing embers.

Greek firewalkers find peace in ritual

By Theodora Tongas
Associated Press

AGHIA ELENI, Greece — Golden sparks leapt from a dying bonfire at dusk. A repetitious melody from a drum and lyres rolled on.

Off in an incense-filled room, Aghia Eleni's firewalkers were preparing themselves. Some listened to music. Others began dancing on the hardwood floors with icons they will carry with them.

Then they quietly walked barefoot onto the glowing carpet of coals Tuesday.

The annual Christian Orthodox rite has never been fully sanctioned by church leaders. But this year it took on a deeper symbolism as some Orthodox faithful have felt the nudge of a nation in transition.

The once untouchable link between the state and Greek Orthodox Church is fraying as Greece is forced to conform with European Union rules and other pressures to modernize. In the latest showdown, some religious zealots have vowed to fight a law stripping church affiliation from national identity cards.

Earlier this year, conservatives burned copies of a book they call blasphemous because it contains passages about the possible sexual longings of Jesus Christ. Court hearings are under way on whether to ban the book.

For Aghia Eleni's firewalkers, the confrontations give reason to cling to the old ways as their nation lurches forward.

"Every individual's faith is not expressed in writing," said Tasos Reklos, who has been Aghia Eleni's head firewalker for nearly the past two decades. "It is expressed in living. It is expressed in practice."

Each year, the firewalkers open and close the three-day celebrations for the May 21 feast day of Saints Constantine and Helen in this village of 700 people, 60 miles northeast of the northern port of Thessaloniki.

The ritual, along with the two icons of the saints held during the firewalk, were brought with refugees from the village of Kosti in what is now southern Bulgaria after a population exchange in 1912.

References to firewalking have been traced back to the ancient rites of Dionysus, the Greek god of revelry. But according to Reklos, the beginning of the current tradition is unknown.

Legend holds that at some point in history, voices crying for help were heard coming from a burning church in Kosti. The faithful believe it was a call from the icons, which were rescued.

"Since then we continue to perform the same procedure," he added. "We light a fire and carry the icons through it."

After circling three times around a glowing 10-foot circle, about a dozen firewalkers began to move across the embers. Men rolled up their pants. The sparks flicked against the hem of the women's long skirts.

The ritual also occurs in four other northern Greek villages, all with roots in southern Bulgaria.

"I wonder what they believe in that makes them do it," said Ioannis Stoikos from the nearby town of Serres.

Tribal chiefs back Fiji's president, not rebel gunmen

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Tribal chiefs said Tuesday that they sympathize with the views of gunmen who are holding members of the ethnic Indian-led government hostage, but the chiefs threw their support to Fiji's president, who has condemned the gunmen and demanded the captives' release.

The meeting of the Great Council of Chiefs came on the fifth day of a crisis that began when gunmen — angry that ethnic Indians have power in this majority Fijian nation — stormed parliament and took Prime Minister Mahendra Chaudhry and other leaders hostage.

As the council met, about 60 men continued to hold Chaudhry and at least 20 members of his Cabinet and governing coalition inside the parliament grounds — a complex with lush tropical gardens, swaying palm trees and brightly colored flowers in Suva, the capital. Police conducted a low-key siege outside, manning roadblocks but rarely stopping people who entered the parliament grounds to show their support for the rebels.

George Speight, the rebel leader, has declared himself prime minister and installed what he calls an interim government. But President Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara is not among the hostages, and on Tuesday the chiefs gave Mara their backing to run the government for now.

Although it has little legislative power, the chiefs' council retains moral authority over indigenous Fijians, who for centuries were ruled by hereditary chiefs.

"The chiefs are in support of the president and they do not approve of what Speight has done, although there is a lot of sympathy for the views expressed by his followers," said Sitiveni Rabuka, the council's president.

The chiefs said they would meet Wednesday to consider Speight's main demand — changes to the constitution to entrench indigenous Fijians in power. The chiefs will also decide whether they think Speight should escape prosecution for his role in the uprising, Rabuka said.

SACRIFICE: Strings program one of largest in state

ers) to enhance their dual language and grow up to be truly bilingual adults," Ms. Hughes said.

The program is in its sixth year and based on recent data has been very successful. According to Ms. Hughes, sixth-grade FLES students have the opportunity to take a placement test which, if completed successfully, earns the student a full credit of high school Spanish. In other words, it allows students to begin their high school transcript before they even enter junior high school. Of the current crop of sixth-graders, the first group eligible to take the exit exam, 143 passed the test and earned the credit.

According to Executive Director of Elementary Education Dorsey Rushing, the program budget calls for the equivalent of 8.5 full-time teachers. At an average salary of $35,000, the budget for the program is approximately $300,000.

According to Director of Fine Arts Dan Green, the Strings program has 12 teachers with an approximate budget of $420,000, serving some 1,300 students on an annual basis.

"It's one of the largest programs in the state," Green said.

"Whether or not we as a school district can afford to support those programs is another question. As a school district we are bumping up against the maximum allowable tax rate," said Patricia Maurer, director of gifted and talented programs for the district.

Baressi has been very public in his commitment to make MISD's magnet schools successful, but according to Ms. Maurer, that commitment could carry a hefty price tag. Start-up costs for the proposed computer and technology theme could be very expensive, she said.

Ms. Maurer said she is aware of the costs of magnet schools. The board recently voted to close the Carver Cultural Center, which Ms. Maurer supervises. That action will free up approximately $480,000 for use in magnet schools. "A lot of that money would hopefully be used in the purchase of equipment and employment of specialized staff," Baressi said, adding that if possible, both the FLES and Strings programs will continue as they are. "I'm not sure anything will happen to them at this point, but there is a possibility that we will move those programs to the two magnet schools to assist in the attraction of students.

"I'd certainly like to maintain those programs, but I think the priority would be to get two successful magnet schools. Ultimately that would be a decision of the board."

Adding FLES and Strings to magnet school offerings, while maintaining the programs, would greatly reduce the number of students able to participate. Additionally, there is some indication that MISD is preparing for a time when those programs aren't offered to all students.

According to Ms. Hughes, FLES will continue next year but will not be offered to first- and second-grade students as it has in the past. Students who previously have participated will be offered the program and new students in grades 3-6 will have the opportunity to join for the first time.

One ray of hope, according to Baressi, is that MISD could receive grant money to fund the magnet programs, thus negating the need for the FLES and Strings budgets. However, federal magnet school grants typically only fund programs in their infancy. Eventually, MISD would be responsible for funding the magnets from its own budget and the district would be faced with budget concerns later rather than sooner.

Whatever happens, MISD has until 2001 before it has to make any hard decisions about FLES or Strings. Magnet schools aren't due until August of 2001 and at least for the upcoming school year, both programs will remain intact.

AID: Community partnerships may be needed

lives but it can also make the difference between whether a parent wants to live in this community," Ms. Bond said. "I think it would be a sad day for the arts (if we lose the Strings program)."

Not only could the program's loss affect the arts, it also could affect academics. According to Melissa Hale Burnett, director of development for the Midland Odessa Symphony and Chorale, children exposed to music at an early age develop math and reading skills better than those not exposed to music. She said music students develop higher level logic skills, as well.

"It would be a sad thing to not afford all children an opportunity to experience music," Ms. Burnett said.

The children agree. Heather Hughes, a fifth-grade student at Greathouse isn't interested in art or singing. Strings is the only creative avenue her school offers in which she has an interest.

"I really don't like to do anything else," Ms. Hughes said.

"I'd feel bad because me and my sister (a fellow Strings participant) are planning on doing this together, going places and playing for people," said Kristen Chavez, an 11-year-old at Greathouse.

Ms. Chavez and her 15-year-old sister both play the violin.

Another fifth-grader at Greathouse, Bryan Garza, even has some concern about how canceling the program might affect his academic performance. Since beginning the Strings program, earlier this year, Garza has mastered the TAAS test.

"It's spilled over into their academics," Strings teacher Therese Simmons said.

Whether the program will continue is up in the air. Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. has publicly stated that the Strings budget may be needed to fund the magnet schools. However, he said, the worst case scenario would be that Strings and FLES be included as additional attractions of the magnet schools.

"We've made a commitment to continue both of those programs until we see if the decision has been made to include those in the magnet offerings," said Dorsey Rushing, executive director of secondary education for MISD.

As part of the magnet offerings, Strings would only be able to service the students at that particular magnet school. Ms. Burnett sees that as almost as great a loss as complete cancellation, if all students — particularly economically disadvantaged students — can't participate.

The symphony chorale already partners with MISD in some aspects and works with children through its music academy. "Perhaps we could grow that and take up some of the slack that is going to be created if they go to the magnet school system," Ms. Burnett said.

Ms. Bond agreed that the program is important enough that community partnerships may be needed. "It would be something that would have to be considered but it's not even something we've thought about at this point."

"That (community partnerships) would take care of our problem. I think it's important we offer the Strings program to anybody that wants it," said Dan Green, director of fine arts for the district, and Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale board member. "We need to find a way to offer it to anyone who is interested, I just don't know how we would go about that."

There is some reprieve for the program in that MISD will continue both Strings and FLES for the 2000-2001 school year. What will happen the following year has not yet been determined.

BID: Contract not big enough for some companies

it was cost effective to buy concession equipment as well.

"That is really not our cup of tea as far as getting into the supplying of equipment," Sinos said. "That is too much investment. It would have been different if the concession stands were already there. We were not able to do that."

As a comparison in bid patterns, Hackler said few proposals were submitted when the city sent out requests for proposals for the retail and food court areas at Midland International Airport, before its opening in 1999.

Hackler said numerous companies were contacted but only one company, based in California, bid on the food court area. A Georgia-based company was the sole bidder for the retail space. He said the lofty minimum capital improvements required by the city — $850,000 for the food court and $550,000 for the retail area — may have intimidated more companies from bidding.

Other companies contacted by the city of Midland for sports complex concession services such as Volume Services out of Spartanburg, S.C. and Fine Host Corporation, based in Greenwich, Conn., said the contract wouldn't have been big enough to suit the interests of their respective companies.

"Our average contract is for $2.5 million. We supply football teams like the Baltimore Ravens and Tampa Bay Bucs — teams with attendances of 65,000 to 80,000," said Paul Frascella, senior vice president of business development for Fine Host Corporation.

According to Monty Hoppel, general manager of the RockHounds, after 46 games this season the RockHounds have an average attendance figure of 2,350.

Hoppel said the economies of scale were favorable enough for the organization to bid for the concessions contract.

The RockHounds already are committed to supply the concession services in the baseball stadium of the sports complex. The team will keep all baseball concession revenue, with the city receiving 15 percent of concession revenue from non-RockHounds events held in the baseball stadium.

"We will already have concession equipment in the baseball stadium," Hoppel said. "Down the road, we've always talked about expanding the concession business."

Hoppel said the RockHounds have previous concession experience at Hero's Water World, Ector County Coliseum and Christensen Stadium, current home of the RockHounds.

If they're awarded the contract, the RockHounds would see a lot of the high school football business that has been a staple at Memorial Stadium.

According to Patricia Mouser, food services director for Midland Independent School District (MISD), concession sales at Memorial Stadium generated $40,000 in profit in 1998 and $52,000 in profit in 1999. She said these figures are worksheet numbers, not official records from the district's business office. Official high school football concession numbers from Art Martin, director of business services for MISD, could not be obtained in time for this article.

Hoppel wouldn't say how much money the RockHounds make in concessions at Christensen Stadium annually or what percentage of their business it comprises.

"I don't think our owner is going to want us to talk about specific financial numbers or percentages," Hoppel said. "Once we're awarded the contract, we'll be at much more liberty to talk about it."

In addition, Hoppel said it would be difficult to break down all costs associated with concession sales to get a clear profit figure.

"There are a lot of factors involved. It's related to debt service on the equipment. Obviously, there are some expenses. There are labor and food costs. There are so many factors," Hoppel said.

According to the request for proposal package the proposer would be required to pledge 20 percent of gross revenues to the city, or a minimum of $85,000.

City OKs municipal judges' raises

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Salary increases granted last week to Municipal Judge Robin Smith and Associate Municipal Judge Sharon Hatten by the city manager were approved by City Council on Tuesday.

Smith received an 8.6 percent raise; Ms. Hatten, a 14.7 percent raise.

Smith's salary jumped to $75,684 from $69,684. He also receives $6,600 a year in car allowance.

Ms. Hatten's salary increased $62,352 from $54,348. She receives $5,400 a year in car allowance.

In a May 9 executive session, the council met to discuss the salaries of the two council-appointed judges.

One day later, the raise for each judge received the official approval of City Manager Rick Menchaca.

Documents enacting the raises state the increases were approved by City Council, suggesting a consensus was reached behind closed doors because no open meeting vote was held on the matter.

But on Monday, Keith Stretcher said "An incorrect city document doesn't change the budget ordinance which allows the city manager to give that raise."

RAIN: Water levels continue to drop with drought

primary source of water, was at 51.16 percent capacity. Last week, the 30-square-mile lake was 51.8 percent full.

Lake Ivie, which is about 158-pipeline miles southeast of Midland and near Ballinger, has a storage capacity of 554,340 acre feet.

Lake J.B. Thomas, which is near Snyder, was at 13.15 percent capacity this week. Before the May rain, it was at 13.51 percent, according to CRMWD records.

The E.V. Spence Reservoir near Robert Lee was at 20.2 percent capacity heading into this week but was a 20.21 percent last week.

"It is kind of a sad situation — the lack of rain," Hofer said. "Whenever we do get an inch or two, we kind of get complacent and think, 'Well, it rained a little bit, so we are out of the woods.' "

Not so, Hofer figured.

"Fact is, we are just a little over two inches for the year so far, which is not good. We are way behind" average rainfall.

Midland's average annual rainfall is about 15 inches. Last year's rainfall was about half the average rainfall, and the 1998 rainfall was just over 5 inches.

'What we need to do is pray for rain.'
— Joe Pickle, former CRMWD official

The year 1997, however, was above average but was an anomaly in the continuing drought that started earlier in the 1990s.

However, there was an isolated March 2000 thunderstorm that effected an inflow into Lakes Thomas and Spence, which are northwest of Lake Ivie on the Colorado River watershed.

"We had a lot more water in Spence," Hofer noted. "It almost doubled the content of the lake" and diluted the Spence water that is high in salts.

Joe Pickle, a former CRMWD veteran official and water expert who now lives in Austin, noted that the March "freak thunderstorm" cut the chlorides in Lake Spence in about half.

While Lake Ivie this week was just a bit more than 51 percent capacity, just two years ago the lake was at 90 percent capacity and was at 74 percent capacity a year later.

If the trend were to continue, the lake would at a crisis level within a couple of years, Pickle indicated.

However, Pickle noted that after Lake Ivie was completed in 1990 and ready to take on water, the lake reaped the benefit of heavy winter rains and runoff.

"It just filled up in the next couple of years," said Pickle, who noted that the Midland-Odessa area and the region served by the CRMWD are not now in a water crisis.

However, the region could be "in big trouble" without rain to fuel the watershed and the lakes in the next year or so.

"What we need to do," Pickle said, "is pray for rain."

Iranian hard-liners try squelching election criticism

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian hard-liners, stung by the confirmed victory of reformist candidates, shut down a newly launched newspaper Tuesday, the 19th paper closed in a crackdown that began last month.

State-run radio also warned newspapers that questioning the results of recent parliamentary elections could lead to prosecution, as the feud between reformers and hard-liners over alleged vote tampering deepened in Iran.

The Mellat daily was banned by the hard-line judiciary for "violating press laws," a day after printing its maiden issue Monday, according to Saeed Mortazavi, an editor at the daily. The violation was failing to print a masthead in the first edition.

In the Feb. 18 polls, reformist allies of President Mohammad Khatami won about three-quarters of the 290 seats, seizing control of the powerful parliament from hard-liners for the first time since the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Since the election, the hard-line crackdown has muted the opposition. The Guardian Council, a panel dominated by hard-liners that supervises elections, then threatened to annul the key election results in Tehran, where an initial count indicated reformers won 29 of the 30 votes.

The council on Saturday finally endorsed the Tehran results under pressure from Iran's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, but confirmed only 26 reformist victories. It gave two seats to hard-liners, including one to former president Hashemi Rafsanjani, and annulled two other reformist victories.

The council has alleged widespread ballot fraud and has threatened to prosecute Interior Ministry officials; the ministry and council jointly handled the initial vote count. The council, too, has been accused of vote tampering.

After a three month delay, the finalized Tehran results showed Rafsanjani jumping from No. 30 in votes received — last of those to win seats — to No. 20. In recent days, the few remaining independent newspapers have ridiculed the Guardian Council for moving Rafsanjani up 10 places.

"Baseless charges about the final result of Tehran elections by newspapers will be subject to prosecution," said Tehran radio, which also is controlled by hard-liners.

Rafsanjani is believed to be the hard-liners' choice for the powerful position of house speaker.

A prominent leader of the Islamic Iran Participation Front, the country's largest pro-reform party, has said reformers could block Rafsanjani's entry to the house. Each deputy must be endorsed by two-thirds of the Majlis, or parliament.

"First of all, we should see whether or not Rafsanjani's credentials will be approved in the parliament, let alone his candidacy for the post of speaker," the daily Bahar quoted Mohsen Mirdamadi, a top member of the Participation Front as saying Tuesday. He is one of the potential candidates for the speaker's post.

Deputy Interior Minister Mostafa Tajzadeh, meanwhile, has threatened to sue Ahmad Jannati, head of the Guardian Council, over the fraud allegations against ministry officials.

"If Jannati fails to prove his claims, he will be subject to prosecution," the daily Bayan on Tuesday quoted Tajzadeh as saying.

Hong Kong dealer wants to donate suspected looted antique to China

HONG KONG (AP) — Hoping to end another flap over looted Chinese antiques, a Hong Kong dealer said Tuesday she wants to give Beijing a relic that U.S. authorities charge was stolen from a tomb in China.

Y.C. Chui said she's not convinced the marble sculpture was taken from the 10th century Five Dynasties tomb of Wang Chuzhi in Xiyanchuan, China, but she wants to avoid a dispute that could harm her business or put her at odds with the Chinese government.

Chui said she believes the piece of relief sculpture is later, from the 11th century — with "some differences" from the 10 pieces reported stolen from the tomb in 1994.

Looted antiques have made headlines here since April, when a Chinese state-run company paid more than $4 million in separate Hong Kong auctions to reclaim three 18th century pieces that had been pilfered from China in the 19th century by British and French troops.

China is forming a task force intended to help it recover some 1 million antiques scattered in museums around the world, some of them looted through the centuries, according to an official newspaper in Beijing.

Chui said she had paid more than $141,000 for her relic, with hopes of selling it for about four times that much. But protecting her reputation was worth the financial loss, she said.

"I don't want to be named as a thief," Chui said by telephone from her shop, the M-and-C Gallery. "From the day I bought the piece, I did a lot of examination. I cannot persuade myself this is a piece from the tomb."

U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White in New York filed court papers in March that said the sculpture appeared to have been taken from the grave that is a state-owned cultural site in China. White said the piece should be returned to Chinese authorities and the statue was removed from a Christie's auction in New York.

It is not clear what will happen to the antique, which is still at the center of the U.S. legal proceedings, Chui said.

Chui said she wanted to give the sculpture to the China Poly Group — the same group which bought the other antiques in Hong Kong auctions held by Christie's and Sotheby's.

Under pressure, Cuba releases third dissident

HAVANA (AP) — Cuba's communist government on Tuesday released the third of four well-known dissidents whose sentences drew worldwide criticism and focused a spotlight on the island's human rights record.

Lawyer Rene Gomez Manzano, who was serving a four-year sentence, was freed Tuesday afternoon, his brother Jorge Manzano confirmed in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

As in the case of two other members of the same group liberated earlier this month, it was unclear why the government was freeing Manzano now.

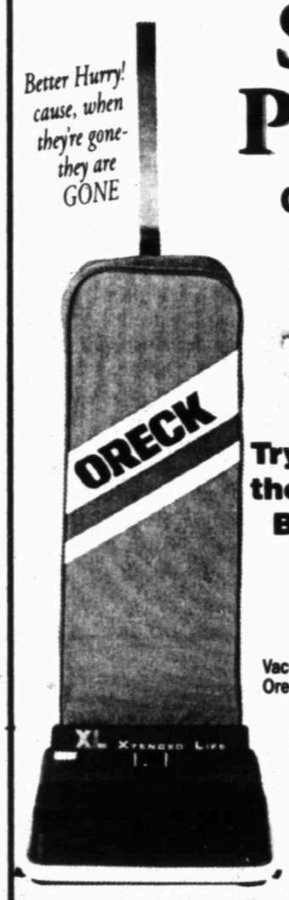

The releases come a month after Cuba was punished by a United Nations censure for human rights abuses. Cuban officials have been enraged by the vote and have lambasted Poland and the Czech Republic, both former socialist allies, for proposing the censure.

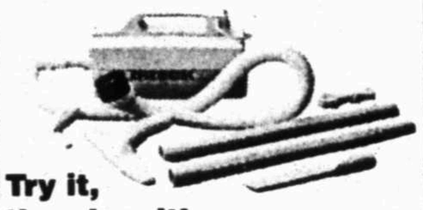

Although the four were jailed in July 1997, the four were not sentenced until March 1999.

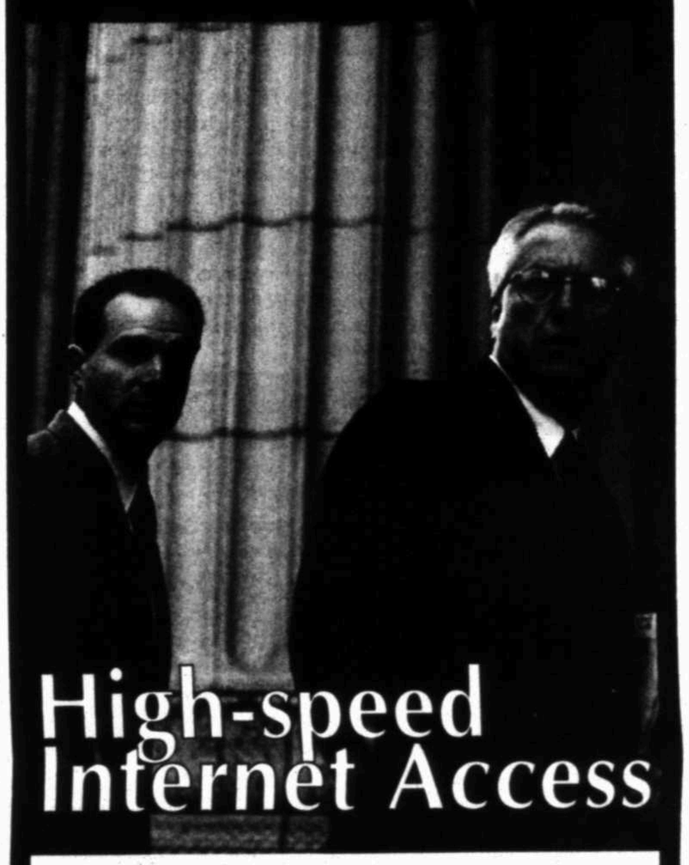

Specificially charged with incitement to sedition, they were arrested after they criticized a Communist Party document that they said did not present solutions to Cuba's severe economic problems, and held several rare news conferences with the foreign media to publicize their complaints.

With booming economy, states cut taxes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Timothy McTighe spent his career in Ohio running companies that build artificial hips and knees. But the semiretired, 49-year-old entrepreneur says he will move permanently from the Cleveland suburbs to Florida unless the state stops taxing inheritances.

"Even though our goal isn't to leave a large estate to our children, we definitely don't have any intentions to leave an estate to the government," McTighe said. Florida does not tax estates.

Prodded by people like McTighe, Ohio lawmakers are considering eliminating the inheritance tax.

Like other legislators around the country, they have been hearing complaints about taxes for years — but feel safe in making big cuts now because the booming economy has yielded large budget surpluses.

States have cut $27.3 billion in taxes over the past six years, according to the National Association of State Budget Officers. By contrast, net reductions of state taxes occurred only twice in the 1980s, totaling $3.1 billion.

Though some urge restraint and warn that the booming economy can't last, tax cuts are back on top of legislative agendas as lawmakers finish up their work for the year.

—Illinois provided $280 million in tax relief to homeowners, giving those who pay both state income taxes and local property taxes on their principal residence rebate checks averaging $125.

—Iowa lawmakers approved a tax "holiday," eliminating the sales tax on clothing for a back-to-school shopping weekend in August.

—Pennsylvania lawmakers passed a $774 million tax-cut package this month, including a $100 property tax rebate check to all homeowners.

But some lawmakers and policy analysts warn that as the stock market wobbles and the Federal Reserve continues to raise interest rates, state governments need to prepare for an inevitable downturn.

"The economy can't stay this good," warned Mike Shoemaker, a Democratic state senator in Ohio who agreed to cut estate taxes but is generally opposed to other tax cuts. "Historically it's never stayed this good this long. So there's reasons for caution."

Many states are trying to have it both ways, and have been splitting surplus money between tax reductions and reserve funds, said Stacey Mazer of the National Association of State Budget Officers.

"They don't want to be in a position where they can't weather a storm when the economy is not quite as good," she said.

The states with the six largest tax reductions in fiscal 2000 were Texas ($1.9 billion), Florida ($834.6 million), Minnesota ($796 million), Michigan ($498 million), Pennsylvania ($407 million) and California ($303 million), according to the budget officers' group.

Not all states had net reductions. A $75 million cut in a tax on employers in Kentucky was accompanied by a new tax on out-of-state phone calls that would raise $89 million. Tennessee's governor has proposed restructuring the state's tax system and enacting a state income tax to deal with a budget shortfall of about $300 million.

Tax cutting in Ohio is especially contentious because of a decade-long court battle over whether the state adequately and fairly funds its schools. Still, Ohio has sliced $1.6 billion in income taxes and millions in other taxes in the past four years.

Lawmakers hoped to push a large package of tax cuts through this spring, including a 5 percent income tax cut. But that effort died when the Ohio Supreme Court declared the state's system for funding education unconstitutional because it relies too much on local property taxes.

Bush says he would work on nuclear arsenal, missile defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two weeks before a U.S.-Russia arms summit, presidential candidate George W. Bush said Tuesday he would slash America's nuclear arsenal to its "lowest possible number consistent with our national security," regardless of whether Moscow went along.

The reductions would be part of a broad national security review that must include a missile-defense system, the Republican Texas governor added. He was flanked by Colin Powell and other former Cold Warriors as he sought to bolster his foreign policy credentials.

Bush offered no details about the size of the possible nuclear cuts or the cost of a missile-defense system. He said he was trying "to demonstrate to Russia that we are no longer enemies."

He met last month with Russia's foreign minister, Igor Ivanov, and said afterward that they had essentially agreed to disagree on the subject of missile defense.

"Russia, our allies and the world need to understand our intentions. America's development of missile defenses is a search for security, not a search for advantage," he said Tuesday at a news conference before beginning a Midwest campaign swing.

Russia's objections to a U.S. missile-defense system date to the bleak days of the Cold War, when President Reagan pushed for a space-based initiative. Bush has said he is willing to scrap the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty to make room for the development of technology that could protect the United States against missile strikes from a growing number of nuclear threats.

The Russians have said they will put all arms control treaties on hold if the United States either violates or withdraws from the 1972 pact, which prohibits national missile defenses.

Al Gore's Democratic presidential campaign said the vice president supported "a more reasonable approach" to national security. Spokesman Doug Hattaway said Gore supports amending, not ending, the ABM treaty to allow for a more limited anti-missile system, and said Bush appears on the verge of backing a "full-blown Star War system" that would be costly and impractical.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Joe Lockhart was asked whether Bush's comments might undercut President Clinton just before his meeting with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

Lockhart responded, "I think people will see this as someone who is trying to make political points, and I'm not sure it will be taken very seriously."

As for reducing nuclear weapons regardless of the Russians' actions, he said that "we're working with the Russians because that makes the most sense, rather than to move and work on a unilateral basis."

Powell, a potential vice presidential candidate or secretary of defense under Bush, commended his fellow Republican for taking "a fresh look at the world." The former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — still a popular political figure — did not mention his disagreement with the governor over the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty; Bush opposed the pact and Powell supported it.

Study: Many G-rated cartoons are violent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Many G-rated animated films — from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Pinocchio" through "Toy Story" and "The Rugrats Movie" — contain a surprising amount of violence, researchers say.

In a study published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, two researchers cited scenes of fisticuffs, sword-fighting, gunplay and other aggressive action.

Hollywood is often criticized for violence in movies for adults, but parents should be aware of what is in G-rated movies, the researchers said.

The survey examined 74 G-rated theatrical films available on video and found that each contained at least one act of violence. At least one character was injured in 46 of the movies, and at least one was killed in half of the films.

The movies averaged 9.5 minutes of violence, with the 1998 King Arthur tale "Quest for Camelot" topping the list with 24 minutes of violence, or almost 30 percent of the movie.

The researchers said they believe their study included every G-rated theatrical feature available on video before last September.

"We were surprised that every single one of them had some act of violence," said Kimberly Thompson, assistant professor of risk analysis at the Harvard School of Public Health. "We're just raising the red flag. It's important for parents to be aware of the violence content in these movies."

Much cartoon violence is slapstick intended for comic effect, whose influence on children's behavior is uncertain, said Fumie Yokota, a Harvard doctoral student in health policy who co-wrote the study.

"It may desensitize kids so much, they think it's OK and no big deal for somebody to be smacked in the head with a hammer," Yokota said.

Many of the movies may send the message that force is an acceptable way to resolve differences, the researchers said.

"Cartoon violence is one of the most likely forms to promote imitation," said Joanne Cantor, a communications professor emeritus at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, who has researched media influence on children. "It normalizes violence and also trivializes violence in a way by focusing not on negative consequences of violence but making it funny."

Thompson and Yokota recommended that the Motion Picture Association of America consider changing its rating system to include more detail on the content of G-rated films.

MPAA chief Jack Valenti said in a statement that the ratings system in place since the late 1960s consistently receives "high approval marks" from parents.

The researchers also advised parents to screen G-rated movies beforehand or watch them with their children so they can discuss the violent content. They noted that Web sites such as Kids-in-Mind and Screenit provide details about violence, sex and other content for many movies.

Judge releases police videos of school shooting

DENVER (AP) — A judge on Tuesday ordered the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office to turn over tapes of police radio communications from the Columbine High School shootings to several families who are suing the agency over its handling of the case.

Jefferson County District Judge R. Brooke Jackson ordered the release of eight tapes, most of which are 90 minutes long. The tapes contain radio transmissions, car-to-car communications and command post communications relating to the April 20, 1999, shootings at Columbine.

Jackson ruled that the tapes must be edited before they are released to delete references to a named suspect who was later cleared, and to remove the addresses of the gunmen's families. He said they must be released as soon as possible.

Time may not be right to turn to voters with school referendum

With graduation right around the corner, we are reminded that our young people are the greatest investment we have to make in the future.

And many Midlanders believe that the best way to maximize the return on that investment is by providing a strong educational system.

In fact, it would be difficult to find many citizens in our community who would disagree with that fundamental philosophy.

In politics, timing is everything. One of the greatest concerns in our community today is the state of our city's economy.

But if ensuring funding for a new Midland High School was easy, the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees and administration might have tackled a bond initiative by now.

Although there has been a great deal of posturing in preparation for a bond initiative for a new Midland High School and renovation to Lee High School, a formal announcement has yet to come from the school board.

In the meantime, the school board is going through the difficult process of finding the most suitable location for a new Midland High School, even though a timeline and amount for a referendum hasn't formally been proposed.

In politics, timing is everything.

And we're wondering if the time is right to introduce a school bond initiative in Midland this year.

One of the greatest concerns in our community today is the state of our city's economy.

We witnessed an exodus of good-paying, oil-related jobs in 1999. In 2000, we've suffered devastating job cuts at Arco Permian and there is fear that our community has not seen the end of the bleeding of high-end petroleum management jobs.

In 1996, roughly 24 percent of the city's electorate turned out and soundly rejected a $110 million bond initiative which would have funded renovations at the two high schools, as well as major projects at the city's elementary schools. A year later, voters returned to the polls and approved a scaled-down $39.5 million referendum to pay for elementary school renovations. Turnout that year was an embarrassing 12 percent.

By contrast, in November 1999 a variety of factions mustered the troops under the banner of a $35 million sports complex, attracted 28 percent of the electorate and scored a victory by a comfortable margin. But the sports complex project has since lost its luster as questions about its true cost to the taxpayers have surfaced.

Our sense is that the mood of the electorate does not favor a multi-million dollar school bond initiative.

While many of us would like to see a new high school built, we also would like to caution the school board not to blow an opportunity with the voters.

Are the voters ready to shoulder heftier property taxes? By not making a commitment to roll up our sleeves and deal with the economic difficulties in our community, aren't we putting the cart before the horse?

We hope the school board will consider these questions as it grapples with the issues surrounding Midland High School.

Nothing can diminish the pride this community feels as this year's graduates step forward to collect their diplomas. We are reminded that the Class of 2000 has been strengthened and nurtured by loving parents and dedicated teachers.

Bricks and mortar, political strategy and good timing are undeniably intertwined with our educational system. At a time such as this, we rely on our school board members to make sound decisions for the long-term future of our educational system.

If Mae was still alive, she'd be teasing cub reporters

Mae West, who would be 106 if alive, is staging an impressive comeback.

"Dirty Blonde," a superb play by and starring Claudia Shear, brings her to life with such zesty insight that the New York Times critic cheered: "Stand up, boys, and take your hats off. Mae West is back on Broadway."

Safire

She is the subject of other plays and articles recalling her battles against bluenoses. A new book about how women achieved power in Hollywood is titled "Is That a Gun in Your Pocket?" the first half of one of West's memorable lines, which concluded with "or are you just happy to see me?"

Why is this subject fit for the Op-Ed page? Because I interviewed the real Mae West, boys, before she had a wrinkle on her face, and well remember the lesson she taught a cub reporter about living up to a legend.

It was 1949; she was in her late 50s, starring on Broadway in "Diamond Lil." Her leading man was not her film discovery Cary Grant, to whom she had famously vamped "Come up and see me sometime," but the actor who also played "Captain Video" on small-screen TV.

My boss at The New York Herald Tribune, the columnist Tex McCrary, thought it would be a kick to send a 19-year-old kid to interview the sex goddess. I was ushered into the ornate hotel suite by her maid, who I presume was named Beulah and could peel grapes.

West, from her reclining position on a chaise longue, looked up at me with an expression of "Have I sunk to this? They're sending the office boy?" Worse, my first question was painfully puerile: What was it like to play opposite the hero of thousands of kids, Captain Video?

She thought about that. Then, coming to a decision, she changed her expression. Batting those long false eyelashes, she looked at the ceiling and murmured, "Mmmm ... suppose you ask Captain Video ... mmmm ... how does it feel to play opposite ... Mae West!"

She had caught the editor's angle, as I had not: Send an innocent to the symbol of sin. She would play along for publicity's sake, presuming her persona would sell more tickets than her person.

I asked why she had turned to her first director, Edward Elsner, to stage her shocking "Sex"; he was famed for directing the actress Maude Adams, no sex symbol.

"I wanted a director that wasn't too young, one that knew all the old tricks, because ... mmmm ... I knew all the new ones.

"The first man I went to said I didn't stick to a formula. He wasn't my man. The second guy just sputtered that my play was immoral and salacious. He wasn't my man, either.

"Ed Elsner directed such sweet things," she recalled, "I didn't think he'd like my play. His glasses were broken when I went to see him, so he couldn't read the script himself. I read it to him.

"He had one of those cruel little smiles," she said, smiling a cruel little smile herself. "He looked like Mephisto. He never laughed once during my reading — just that little, thin smile. I couldn't figure what was going on in his head.

"When I finished the first act, I asked him if he wanted me to go on. He just looked at me long and hard and smiled that cruel little smile and said, 'Miss West, I want you to read ... every ... single ... line of it.'

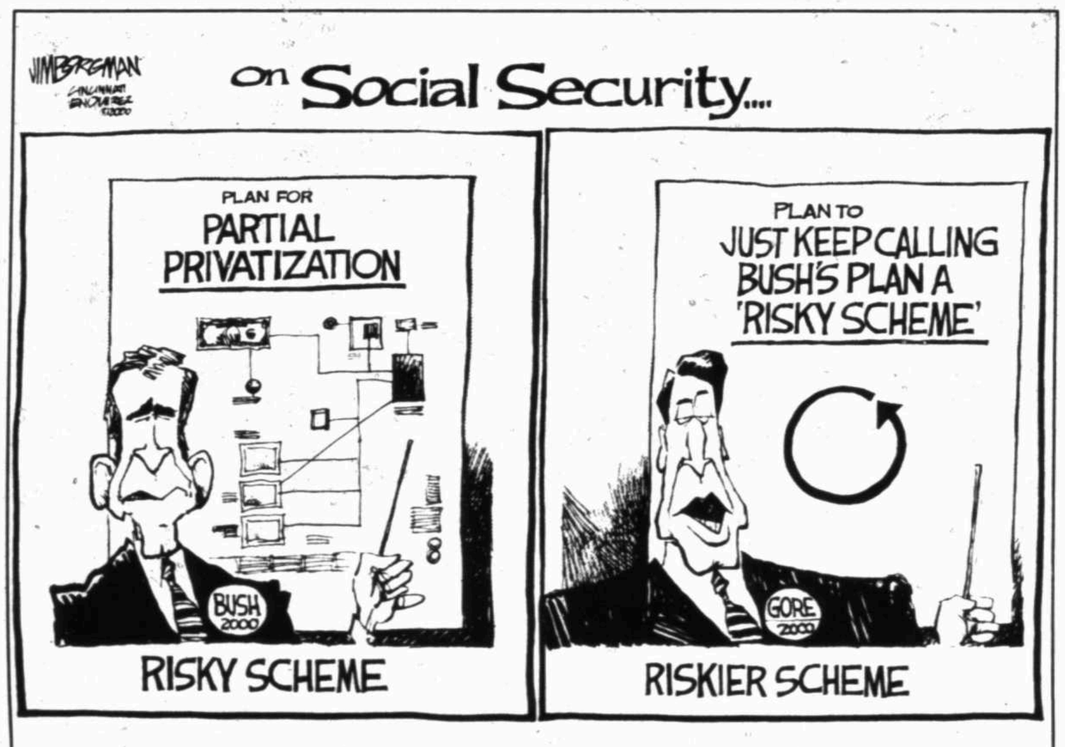

"Right then I knew — this was my man!"

A carefully constructed anecdote, but when delivered by Mae West playing Mae West, devilishly suggestive. She proudly mocked her sexiness even as she exploited men's interest in sex. Unlike glamour girls and sex goddesses before and after, she was nice-tough, good-humored and forthright — which made her invulnerable.

Though she was jailed in 1926 for "corrupting the morals of youth," no scandal touched her personal life. Nor did this mistress of the double entendre stoop to the explicit vulgarity and needless nudity that substitutes for sex appeal today.

As she rose to usher me out, I dared ask if she ever did the shimmy onstage. "In an Ed Wynn show, I did a shimmy. But never" — West reached up to brush an imaginary blond hair off my shoulder, a touch I can feel right now — "never did I do the shimmy shewabble!'

Not all mothers want stronger gun laws

I saw a lot of action at Frieda Bijou's the other day and dropped by to find out if she was serving free coffee.

There were women in the living and dining rooms making banners and flags.

"What's up?"

"We're the Mothers Against Trigger Locks, and we're arranging a counter-demonstration against the Mothers for Stronger Gun Laws."

Buchwald

"I didn't know of your existence," I said.

Frieda replied, "Women who own guns are mothers, too. Our message has to be heard if Charlton Heston's voice means anything to anybody."

"You believe in Charlton Heston?"

"He was the man who gave us chariot racing and the Ten Commandments. Anyone who can open the Red Sea is our leader into the Promised Land."

"I notice you have a large photo of him in the living room."

"That's where our mothers go for inspiration."

I looked at some of the banners and signs. One said, "If you don't like guns, don't have kids."

"That's good," I said.

Another one read, "The Second Amendment is the only thing that will protect your Social Security."

I said, "It will look great on TV. Where are you going to hold your demonstration?"

"On the Mall. We're hoping to get every mother against trigger guards to show up. Our kids can't protect themselves from evil if they have to carry a key around with them every time they go to school."

"Are you sending a message to Congress?"

"I hope so. There are millions of mothers against guns, but we have more mothers with their fingers on the trigger."

I noticed a large banner on the dining room table. It read, "Guns don't kill people -- global warming kills them."

"You seem to have all the bases covered," I said.

"Putting locks on triggers is the last straw. We have a lady in the next room who was attacked in a parking lot. She took out her gun from under her sweater, but the key to the trigger was in the car and she didn't get to use her weapon."

"What happened?"

"She called for the police, who bawled her out because everyone knows when you're carrying a concealed weapon you always wear the key to your trigger lock around your neck."

I wished Frieda luck. She gave me a pamphlet that said, "I want a gal, just like the gal who owns her own .45."

U.S. teachers need financial incentives

What critical American industry defies the principles of capitalism, yet is meant to turn out superior products capable of competing with the output of the world's wealthiest and most efficient industrialized nations?

The answer is education; the products are educated American workers. We are kidding ourselves when we act as if there were no correlation between teacher salaries and the cost of educating a teacher, or between salaries and quality instruction for our young. Altruism is expected to supplant financial incentive -- that cornerstone of capitalism. Students earn, borrow, or are financed by their parents for expensive college educations in the field of education. So is it any wonder that the cost of education has risen far more sharply than teacher salaries over the last 20 years?

Anderson

As high-school students in the '60s, baby boomers were going to improve the lot of the impoverished by joining the Peace Corps. Then they were going to shun crass commercialism, choosing instead to dedicate the balance of their lives to the next generation: They would become teachers.

It was the epitome of altruism, and it failed.

True, teaching is a noble profession, a profession that brings its practitioners respect and self-esteem beyond monetary compensation. But so does the medical profession -- the difference is that for doctors and nurses these extra, personally fulfilling benefits are a bonus, not a substitute for decent wages.

Except, it is said, the source of funds is different: public vs. private. Of course this is only partially true now -- we must not forget Medicare's support of medicine -- and soon it will be even less true, as nationalized medicine becomes a reality. Will we then assume that many of our best and brightest will choose the medical profession even if the pay is brought down to, say, teachers' levels? Or is it more likely that the government will use financial incentives as a means of competing with private enterprise?

The Armed Forces provide a good example. The U.S. government foots the bill for doctors' and nurses' educations, and upon graduation provides them with jobs at military pay plus -- here's that word -- incentive pay. Why? Because the Armed Forces realize that people truly are their most important asset -- a fact not yet realized by the American education system.

Take Fairfax County, Va., home to one of the most highly touted educational systems in the country. Did the county's leaders look to its strength during the last economic downturn by protecting, encouraging and adequately compensating its most precious resource: superb teachers?

No, the county chose instead to undermine that strength by freezing teacher salaries, which was another way of reducing teacher salaries -- because inflation, though low, remains with us.

This all-too-typical solution to budget problems chips away at the very foundation of a successful, competitive society. Cut back on the bloated administrative expenses, even cut back on building expenses — these cuts can be remedied in better times. But if we cut back on the brain trust that our teachers represent, it will take decades to repair the damage. Teachers are to education what doctors are to medicine: their industry's only essential ingredient. Fairfax County and counties throughout the nation made the wrong cuts a decade ago, and we are all paying the price today.

Newspaper: Asbestos found in crayons

SEATTLE (AP) — A newspaper reported Tuesday that two government-certified labs found asbestos in crayons, sending public-health and art-industry officials scrambling to allay concerns about possible health risks.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported that the labs found asbestos in crayons made by Crayola, Prang and Rose Art. Of 40 crayons that were tested from the three major brands, 32 were contaminated above trace levels, the newspaper said.

"We were very surprised to even see any of this in any crayon product at all," said John Harris, director of Lab-Cor, one of the two laboratories the newspaper used for the tests.

The findings do not shed light on whether there is a public health threat, however. Controlled experiments would be required to determine any possible risk from airborne particles, Harris said.

There are no known reports of anyone getting sick from using or making crayons. And asbestos-related illness tends to result from exposure to airborne fibers — usually in an industrial setting.

The manufacturers said they did not believe their products posed risks, but that they were looking into it. Government officials also were investigating.

"We have never heard of this being a problem with crayons before," said spokesman Russ Rader of the Consumer Product Safety Commission in Washington, D.C.

"Our position is that asbestos should not be in any product, and that's what we're telling the companies," Rader said.

Neither the safety commission, the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry in Atlanta nor the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health were aware of any reports of asbestos-related health problems among people who make crayons.

Virtually all asbestos-related illness affects the lungs. Little is known about illness from ingestion, though a federal task force in 1987 said such exposure "should be eliminated whenever possible." It can take decades for disease from asbestos exposure to develop.

Ronald F. Dodson, a longtime asbestos researcher at the University of Texas Health Center in Tyler, noted that "some of us who are a little older had our shot at crayons ... and we've not picked up any correlations (to asbestos-related illness) in youngsters that ate it back then."

He said the risk from asbestos in any context is "correlated with it being fibrous and being free." If the fibers are stable or bound — in wax, for instance — they're "not a problem," Dodson said.

Industry officials — and the industry's Art & Creative Materials Institute, which certifies art supplies for safety — disputed the newspaper's lab findings.

Binney & Smith, which makes Crayolas, is certain its crayons are asbestos free, said spokeswoman Tracey Muldoon Moran at company headquarters in Easton, Pa.

But the newspaper report "is certainly a concern for us," Moran said.

"We truly do not believe our products pose a health hazard, but we have begun to investigate alternatives" to talc, Moran said.

Dixon Ticonderoga, which makes Prang Crayons in Sandusky, Ohio, also takes safety seriously, said Chief Operating Officer Ronald Shaffer at headquarters in Heathrow, Fla.

While its crayons have been certified asbestos free, he told the newspaper the company is working with its talc suppliers, "trying to see what they know is in it."

Rose Art Industries in Livingston, N.J., could not be reached for comment.

Debbie Fanning, executive director of the Art and Creative Materials Institute in Hanson, Mass., was adamant that there is no asbestos in the talc — nonasbestiform tremolite — used in crayons.

"His testing results must be incorrect," she said of the labs used by the newspaper. "In children's materials, we do not allow any ingredients at a level that would be a hazard."

NOTICE

TXU Electric Company (TXU Electric) hereby publishes notice that on or about March 31, 2000, it filed an application for approval of proposed tariffs that are to be effective on January 1, 2002 for its proposed transmission and distribution utilities pursuant to Chapter 39, Subchapter E of the Texas Utilities Code with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (P.U.C.). In addition to its request for approval of the above-referenced application, TXU Electric has requested approval of its estimate of stranded costs and its business separation plan; issuance of a new CCN number for its proposed transmission company; and for any other relief to which it may be entitled.

The primary purpose of this proceeding is to establish tariffs that will set the nonbypassable rates retail electric providers will be charged for delivery of electricity from the retail electric provider to the customer. The rates currently paid by the majority of customers will not change as a result of this proceeding prior to January 1, 2002. This proceeding may also establish other nonbypassable fees.

Affected persons potentially include all customers and classes of customers of TXU Electric and TXU SESCO Company ("TXU SESCO").

On September 1, 1999, amendments to the Texas Utilities Code went into effect which are designed to open the electric industry to competition. To facilitate this transition to competition, the Texas Utilities Code requires that traditional integrated electric utility companies separate their business activities into various component parts. After January 1, 2002, TXU Electric's and TXU SESCO's current customers will generally receive electricity and bills for electricity from a retail electric provider instead of TXU Electric and TXU SESCO.

TXU Electric is specifically seeking to recover, after January 1, 2002, its costs, which include nuclear decommissioning costs, system benefit fees, stranded costs, energy efficiency expenses, restructuring expenses, annual municipal gross receipts taxes, and other costs and a surcharge to recover the costs incurred in connection with regulatory proceedings involving business separation and transmission and distribution utility tariffs.

Persons with questions or who want more information on this matter may contact Chris Schein at TXU Electric, 1601 Bryan Street, Dallas, Texas 75201, 214-812-5338 during normal business hours. A complete copy of the non-confidential portions of TXU Electric's filing may be viewed at 1601 Bryan Street, 32nd Floor, Dallas, Texas 75201.

Persons who wish to participate formally in this proceeding, or wish to express their comments concerning this proceeding, should contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas. The deadline to intervene in this proceeding is July 10, 2000. A request to intervene or a request for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, P.O. Box 13326, Austin, Texas 78711-3326. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission's Office of Customer Protection at (512)936-7120 or toll-free at (888)782-8477. Hearing and speech impaired individuals with text telephones (TTY) may contact the Commission at (512) 936-7136 or use Relay Texas (toll-free) (800)735-2989.

Este anuncio se trata de la aplicación de TXU Electric para aprobación de las tarifas propuestas que entrarán en vigor enero 1, 2000 para sus propuestos servicios públicos de transmisión y distribución. Personas con preguntas o que quieren más información sobre este asunto, pueden ponerse en contacto con Ray Granado en TXU Electric 214/812-4087 ó 1601 Bryan Street, Dallas, TX 75201 durante horas normales de negocio.

Study: Caffeine might help prevent Parkinson's disease

CHICAGO (AP) — An intriguing new study suggests coffee may prevent Parkinson's disease.

How a product that makes people jittery could keep them from getting a disease that gives them tremors is a paradox not examined in the study of 8,004 Japanese-American men in Hawaii.

But the researchers said the benefits are probably due to caffeine — apparently the more, the better — and they suggest some theories about how it might work.

Outside experts said that if the findings hold up, they could lead to ways to treat Parkinson's more effectively or even prevent the disease, a degenerative brain disorder that affects about 1 million Americans.

The study found that men who didn't drink coffee were five times more likely to develop Parkinson's than those who drank the most — 4 1/2 to 5 1/2 6-ounce cups a day. Non-coffee drinkers were two to three times more likely to get the disease than men who drank 4 ounces to four cups a day.

The researchers said it is uncertain whether their results would hold true in women and other ethnic groups.

The study was published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association. It was led by Dr. G. Webster Ross, a neurologist at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Honolulu.

Ross said it is possible that heavy coffee drinkers have a brain composition that may make them resistant to Parkinson's. Previous studies have found low rates of Parkinson's in "thrill-seeking" people who tend to engage in high-risk behavior like smoking and heavy drinking, and heavy coffee drinking also fits that personality profile, he said.

But he also suggested that caffeine may somehow protect against the nerve-cell destruction that causes Parkinson's.

Still, Ross said it is too early to recommend coffee as a treatment.

"Hopefully, this will lead to more basic research on caffeine and its effect on areas of the brain affected by Parkinson's disease," Ross said.

Ross said his study was larger than similar previous research and took into account other factors that could explain the findings, such as cigarette smoking, which has also been linked to a decreased Parkinson's risk.

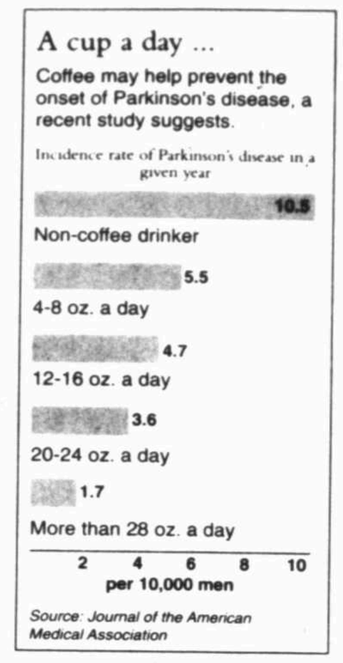

Paul Carvey, director of the neuropharmacology research laboratories at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago, said the study is important because it traced the benefits to caffeine, showing similar results with caffeine-laden foods other than coffee.

Dr. Abraham Lieberman, medical director for the National Parkinson Foundation, called the results "very interesting and very provocative." He said that if caffeine does have benefits, it is unclear whether it can actually prevent Parkinson's or slow its progression.

Parkinson's is usually associated with aging, though it has made headlines recently with actor Michael J. Fox's disclosure that he was diagnosed seven years ago at age 30. Attorney General Janet Reno and Muhammad Ali are among others with Parkinson's.

The disease involves gradual deterioration of nerve cell clusters that make the chemical dopamine, which helps control muscle movements. Ross and colleagues speculated that caffeine might increase dopamine levels.

Symptoms of Parkinson's include hand and head tremors, loss of balance, and stiffness. Dementia and depression also can result.

Gore seeking support from Jews, unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Al Gore suggested to a Jewish lobbying group Tuesday that George W. Bush's father led an administration that tried "to bully Israel."

Gore made the comment one day after President Bush's son, this year's Republican candidate, accused the Clinton administration of being heavy-handed with the Mideast ally.

Campaign 2000

On another topic blending international affairs and U.S. politics, Gore also flew to a union convention in Pittsburgh to show for a second straight day his willingness to stand up to his backers in organized labor on the question of China trade.

"I just want to tell you forthrightly I don't share your views on this particular issue," the Democratic presidential candidate said to several thousand workers at the Service Employees International Union convention.

Gore received a few hisses and loud boos from the union crowd. But the man who introduced him, SEIU president Andy Stern, also revealed that his "purple machine" (so named because of the union's signature purple T-shirts) was helping staff Gore's campaign headquarters in Nashville, Tenn.

Bush has painted Gore as beholden to the unions. Gore aides said the Democrat purposely scheduled speeches to SEIU on Tuesday and to Monday's meeting of the 1.4-million member United Food and Commercial Workers to show Gore's "courage of conviction" on free trade.

In Washington, the presidential rivals both tried to use this week's convention of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee to showcase their command of foreign policy.

Gore reminded some 2,000 AIPAC delegates that he has spoken to the United Nations Security Council, and he said he privately advocated for Israel's full U.N. participation in a January meeting with Secretary-General Kofi Annan.

On another international topic, the vice president said he had met — and will meet again next month — with Iraqi opposition forces in order to "see Saddam Hussein gone."

In the next meeting, Gore said, "I will encourage them to further unite in their efforts against Saddam." He said, "We have made it clear that it is our policy to see Saddam Hussein gone."

Responding to Bush, who faulted the Clinton-Gore team for pressuring Israel to accept peace-process deadlines and timetables, Gore drew a sharp distinction between this administration and "our immediate predecessors."

The Clinton administration, he said, "established a firm new rule and we have followed this rule faithfully — that we must not and would not in any way try to pressure Israel to agree to measures that they themselves would not seek. ..." The end of his sentence was lost in applause.

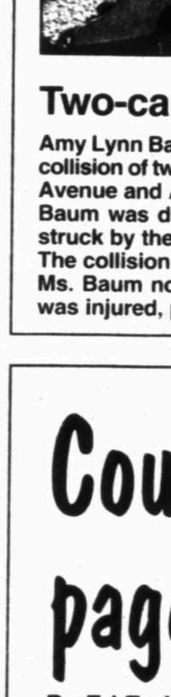

Gore recalled his tenure as a U.S. senator from Tennessee at the time the elder Bush was president.

"In 1991, I vividly remember standing up against a group of administration foreign policy advisers who promoted the insulting concept of linkage, which tried to use loan guarantees as a stick to bully Israel. I stood with you and together we defeated them. We stopped them," Gore said, again to loud applause.

Gore did not address the question of moving the United States Embassy to Jerusalem, something Bush pledged to do immediately if he is elected.

Drug task forces still young, but aggressive

■ Two agencies seize millions in houses, drugs, cash, cars in first fiscal year.

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

Two multi agency drug task forces in the Permian Basin are young as government entities go — so young they soon will be completing their first full fiscal year (June 1, to May 31.)

But the Trans Pecos Drug Task Force, operating out of Pecos, to which the Midland County Sheriff's Office belongs, and the West Texas Narcotics Enforcement Task Force out of Midland, with the Midland Police Department as a cooperating member, are making up for youth with aggressive campaigns against drug trafficking throughout the Permian Basin.

In the past year, for example, the WTNETF has 384 investigations pending and has made 303 arrests.

Some specific seizures in the past year include:

- Marijuana, 2,964 pounds;
- Cocaine, 3.5 pounds;
- Heroin 0.27 pounds;
- Methamphetamines, 26.2 pounds;
- Vehicles, 23;
- Currency, $67,170.39

The street value of drugs seized in the past year by the WTNETF come to $1,700,538, according to task force statistics. Add to that the value of the drugs seized in actions assisted by the task force, $3,592,510, for a total of $5,293,048.

Year-to-date statistics for the Trans Pecos DTF were not immediately available, but figures released at the end of January for six months show that the task force has seized 10 vehicles, three houses, and $107,360 in cash since Aug. 1, 1999.

In addition, the TPDTF worked 216 cases with and arrested 216 suspects.

The task force seized:

- Marijuana, 994.5 pounds worth $565,870;
- Cocaine, 16.9 pounds, worth $157,981;
- LSD, 25 hits worth $175;
- Black tar heroin, 14 grams, worth $3,584
- Psilocybin mushrooms, 6 grams worth $54;
- Methamphetamine, 1.3 pounds worth $14,519.

That's a total of $784,651 in illegal narcotics seizures just for Trans Pecos for six months. With the confiscated cash added, the task force has seized $856,011, not counting the houses and vehicles.

All those seizures come in handy to the operation, according to Gary Richards, commander of the Trans Pecos DTF.

Richards' task force received its grant from the Governor's Office in February 1999. "We went full strength in August of 1999 and we've been going pretty good ever since," said the Alpine native. "We just made our 75/25 funding," he noted.

The task forces are funded by the federal government, administered by the Criminal Justice Division of the Texas Governor's Office through the Texas Narcotics Control Program.

The grant fund program pays for 75 percent of the expenses of the two task forces. In the case of Trans Pecos, the budget comes to $1.05

County librarian turns page on a long career

By Ed Todd

Sandra Wegner, the Midland County Public Library's head librarian, who ushered the library into the Computer Age from the old card-catalog era, is retiring from her role among the stacks.

"The future has always belonged to people who understood the times and who were savvy as to what was going on, who kept up to date with events," Mrs. Wegner said. "And even if you couldn't afford to have information sources, you could still go to your public library and get it for nothing."

At age 61, Mrs. Wegner is to retire from her $43,900-salaried job at the end of July to, as she modestly puts it, "clean up ... 26 years of household dirt." Her retirement is to come a day after her 62nd birthday on July 30.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Wegner noted that "the library has always been the great economic leveler, offering information and culture and education to people who might not be able to afford it as well as to those who can afford it and are wise enough to take advantage of the library."

In her 26 years at the library, Mrs. Wegner has worked for two county librarians, Frances Williams, who hired her in 1974, and John Deats, whom she succeeded 16 years later in mid-1990.

"I was happy to reap the benefits of the work that they had done before me," said Mrs. Wegner, who became assistant librarian in 1985, succeeding Tannie Pate. That year, Mrs. Wegner earned a master's degree in library science from North Texas State University, now the University of North Texas.

"Sandra has such a good analytical mind," said Deats, who is director of Midland College's Fasken Learning Resource Center. "She's very intelligent and has

At its last board meeting, the Midland Independent School District awarded four scholarships to local students. According to Executive Director of Secondary Education Ricardo Torres, each year MISD presents four scholarships to two students from Lee High School and two students from Midland High School.

From Midland High School, Natalie Snow received the $250 Conaway Scholarship and David Lucas earned the $400 MISD board of trustees scholarship. Representing LHS, Diana Loveless earned the $400 scholarship from the board and Andrea Fryrear received the $250 Conaway Scholarship.

Also May 16, Coleman Principal Helen Lackey presented some $10,000 in scholarships to Coleman High School graduates. Ms. Lackey explained that the Bertha Mae Starks Scholarship was established last year to give Coleman graduates the opportunity to seek a post-secondary education.

New York music professor calls on Lamar

By Lynde Hedgpeth
MRT Correspondent

At Lamar Elementary, the halls are alive with the sound of music.

To finish up a year of intense music education in Lamar's kindergarten classes, Donna Brink Fox, of the University of Rochester Eastman School of Music, visited Lamar to evaluate its music curriculum.

Lamar incorporated a daily music lesson into its kindergarten curriculum this year after the school received a $100,000 grant from Texaco to participate in a program that studies the effects of music education on elementary students' learning.

"We're finding that the music experience children are involved in involve a lot of skills in sequencing and orienting," said Dr. Fox, who is director of the music education department at the Eastman School of Music. "Those are exactly the kind of skills the math curriculum is ordering."

Dr. Fox was hired by Texaco to visit the five schools that received grants for the program and comment on the schools' music programs. Lamar is the first of the five Dr. Fox will visit, and she said Lamar is the only elementary school she has known that offers a daily music lesson to kindergartners. Lamar was selected from among 90 national applicants

"I think things are going well," Dr. Fox said. "I'm impressed with the way the teachers are committed to the program."

Lamar has hired Beth Cain, a Midland music specialist, to spend 30 minutes a day teaching its five kindergarten classes music. Her lessons involve singing songs, doing motions and playing various instruments.

Ms. Cain not only taught the kindergarten classes this year, she wrote the music curriculum for the school, and she's

A lesson learned amidst tragedy: Appreciate the simple things

By James Hershberger

Recently, I found myself dupe to an American villain ranking up next to Saddam Hussein and inflation: I was having a bad week. Not just the kind where one or two mishaps fell into my path. If only I could have been so lucky. Rather, I was in the undertow of the kind of week where nothing seems to go right. I was only a point shy of qualifying for the German Honor Society, I had bumped another car with my own, only to have the "victim" pocket the settlement money, and I couldn't seem to find the valor to invite my crush to prom, not to mention a whole sheaf of small inconveniences that had me on edge.

Hershberger

After one particularly frustrating day, I came home from school to receive word that my aunt had died. She had been battling a rare blood disease for several years, during the course of which she had to have her legs amputated. I was saddened by the disheartening news. My old man came home from work that evening, and I was sitting in the living room, prepared to whine to a fresh ear about my misfortunes.

Before I could begin, however, my dad said, "You know, ever since Deborah (my deceased aunt) had her legs removed, she just spent her time in the hospital, in utter shock. But on one of her clear days, she looked at her husband and said, 'All I want most in all the world is to take a walk. I would give anything right now just to be able to take a simple walk.' It's kind of funny, of all the things in the world to wish for, she just wanted to take a walk." In a phrase, the most sobering moment of my life was spoken.

I was familiar with the proverb, "I felt sorry for myself, because I had no shoes, until I met the man who had no feet" all my life. But, it didn't stop me from feeling self-pity when things didn't go my way. I had heard stories such as the one about the guy who was sitting on his porch, after a week much like mine, watching a jogger and his dog tour his block. The man and his mutt stopped, and the guy on the porch, supposing the dog was preparing to do its business in his front yard, rose from his seat to give the jogger a piece of his mind. As he neared him, he realized the jogger was blind. While this story did make me think for a while, it had no real effect on my daily life.

This column is not aimed at those who are like I was. Rather, it is for those who have been humbled by this sort of experience, and packrats, who might save this column to reread the day it happens to them.

I guess it can honestly be said that everyone has it worse than someone else. Who is at the bottom of the chain, I can't quite say. I can say, though, that these tragedies that happen to people we know and love, ought not to be in vain. Winston Churchill once said, "Some see calamity at every opportunity. I see opportunity at every calamity."

I suggest we modify Churchill's advice and find good things not only in our own trials, but in others as well. What would that be? Rather than wallowing in one's own woe-is-me grief when things go wrong, take action to make your situation improve, if for no other reason than out of respect for those who cannot improve their situation.

Granted, not all problems can be easily solved. But, it is wrong for people to not enjoy what they have by overcoming molehills that they see as mountains. Since my aunt's death, I try, though it is difficult at times, to make every bad situation better for myself, and to not let superficial obstacles keep me from enjoying what's important.

In light of this lesson, it's time for me to go outside and take a walk.

Betty Sheeler

Louise Elizabeth Sheeler (Mrs. J.E.R.) died of cancer on May 22, 2000 at her home in Midland, Texas, surrounded by her children, Cookie Wetendorf of Midland, Jim Sheeler of Houston and Ann Holleran of Columbia, Missouri. She is also survived by her brother, Jack Schneider of Lafayette, Louisiana; and her grandchildren, Trey Wetendorf of Midland, Brent Warner Wetendorf of Wichita Falls, Jim Sheeler III of Boulder, Colorado, Cassie Lawrence of New York City, Amy Hunter of Houston, Erin and Meghan Holleran of Columbia, Missouri, Brigid Vincent of St. Petersburg, Florida; and her great-grandchildren, James Sheeler IV of Boulder, Colorado and John Thomas and Christine Elizabeth Lawrence of New York City.

Mrs. Sheeler was born in Slidell, Louisiana on September 25, 1914 to John Joseph and Lillie Schneider. She spent her early years in Slidell and New Orleans. She received a B.S. and a Masters degree in Organic Chemistry from Louisiana State University where she met and married J.E.R. Sheeler of New Orleans. During Mr. Sheeler's long career with Shell Oil Company, they lived in numerous locations in South Louisiana and West Texas, moving to the Odessa/Midland area in 1952. Upon her husband's death in Midland in 1984, Mrs. Sheeler returned to Louisiana to live in the French Quarter in New Orleans and was the sole proprietor of the Royal Mail Service. She loved the French Quarter and was an active member of the Vieux Carre Property Owners Association and a parishioner at St. Louis Cathedral.

In 1995, she moved back to Midland where she resumed her longtime interest in duplicate bridge. A life master and tournament competitor, Mrs. Sheeler played regularly at the Allison Bridge Center and the Midland Country Club.

During her years in the Permian Basin, Mrs. Sheeler was involved in many civic and religious organizations. She served as the Chair of the City of Midland Houston Authority and was a Past President of the League of Women Voters. She volunteered as a certified Ombudsman at Manor Park and was a former member of the Board of Casa de Amigos. She helped pave the way for the establishment of the Midland County Housing Authority and served as its first executive director. She held numerous positions within the Catholic Diocese and with St. Ann's Catholic Church. She was a lifelong member of the Democratic National Committee.

A rosary will be recited at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, May 23, 2000, at Ellis Funeral Home, 801 Andrews Highway, Midland, followed by visitation with the family until 8:30 p.m. There will be a Mass at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, May 24, 2000, at St. Ann's Catholic Church, 1908 W. Texas in Midland. The Reverend Jack Franko, OMI, of Port Isabel, will officiate.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations in Betty Sheeler's memory to the Allison Bridge Center, Casa de Amigos or the organization of your choice.

Dallas names first Hispanic fire chief

DALLAS (AP) — In a nod to minority advocates who've lobbied for more diversity at the city's highest ranks, Dallas announced Tuesday it has named its first Hispanic fire chief.

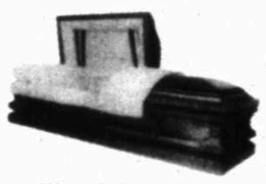

Steve Abraira, 45, will begin his duties July 31, The Dallas Morning News reported Tuesday on its Web site. City fire chief Dodd Miller retired in November.

A 25-year veteran of the Miami Fire Department, Abraira was one of four finalists, including Danny Millaway, the city's acting chief, and Robert Bailey, an assistant fire chief.

Las Vegas Fire Chief Mario Trevino, the only other outside candidate, dropped out of the race last week, according to the newspaper's online edition.

DRUGS: Agencies cooperate in marijuana bust in West Odessa

million for 1999. The member entities of the task forces contribute the remaining 25 percent. For Trans Pecos, that is only $265,000. "The cost is distributed among the entities," said Richards. "We're in for about $32,000 a piece."

Richards said he was pleased because his task force has already covered the allotted cost of the entities through the seizures and a budget surplus. "Because of seizures, the entities won't pay for anything. We're going into the 2001 grant on the plus side. We'll have money left over from this year and we're starting 2001 with a surplus."

That's possible because of seizures like the $228,000 cash taken in Reeves County on May 1 by a task force interdiction officer.

"It will cover the 25 percent required by the entities, plus some additional income," Richards said.

And that's not all. The task force has taken a total of more $340,000 in seizure money. "We didn't even have to spend all the grant money," noted Richards.

Operations will be a little more modest for the new year, which starts next week. The new budget will drop to about $700,000 for 2001. That's because four entities will remain members but not provide personnel. Kermit and Winkler County, and Monahans and Ward County just can't spare personnel this year, he said.

The West Texas Narcotics Enforcement Task Force is the other Permian Basin drug enforcement agency. It started in October 1998 and next week will see the end of the first full year of operations.

The WTNETF is housed in the building near Midland International Airport that once housed the controversial Permian Basin Task Force.

The subject is a touchy one for local law enforcement officer and political leaders.

The Permian Basin Drug Task Force disbanded June 1, 1998 after the Governor's Office claimed the task force's operations involved "financial mismanagement" and "criminal wrongdoing." The case was taken before an Ector County grand jury, which took no action. Subsequently, Gov. George W. Bush announced the establishment and funding of a new task force. The WTNETF, which was to be headed by the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"I hope we have dispelled all the old stories about not working together and all that," Richards said. Richards has been with DPS since 1979 and DPS Narcotics Service for 13 years.

As an example of cooperation between the two, he noted the arrest just Tuesday morning of four suspects in a marijuana bust in West Odessa. Officers seized about 150 to 200 pounds with a street value of about $113,000.

The size of the organizations belies the size of the job and the size of the territories.

The WTNETF operated on a budget of $1.2 million this past year; some $1.05 million for Trans Pecos.

West Texas had 21 employees, including the commander, and two federal agents, while Trans Pecos had nine officers and three administrators — for an area that covers most of West Texas.

The Trans Pecos DTF, for example, includes as members the Reagan County Sheriff's Office, Midland County Sheriff's Office, Andrews County Sheriff's Office, Andrews Police Department, Winkler County Sheriff's Office and Kermit Police Department, Ward County Sheriff's Office and Monahans Police Department, and the Reeves County Sheriff's Office.

The Pecos Police Department, Jeff Davis County Sheriff's Office, Culberson County Sheriff's Office and Loving County Sheriff's Office are members, but don't contribute personnel to the DTF.

Then there is the territory covered by the West Texas Narcotics Enforcement Task Force.

Members of the Marfa Police Department, Brewster County Sheriff's Office, Alpine Police Department, Ft. Stockton Police Department, 83rd Judicial District (which covers six counties), Crane Police Department, Crane County Sheriff's Office, Upton County Sheriff's Office, Ector County Sheriff's Office, Ector County District Attorney's Office, Martin County Sheriff's Office, Howard County Big Spring Police Department, and the 118th Judicial District are participating.

Cooperating members of the WTNETF include Presidio County, Pecos County, Glasscock County and the Midland Police Department.

"I think drug enforcement in West Texas is continuing to be a big challenge and the task forces are stepping up and doing a good job," observed Midland Mayor Bobby Burns. "We have a very low crime rate out here in West Texas and the work they do has a big impact on that along with making it a safe place to live and work."

"We have a good cooperative work agreement," said Midland Police Chief John Urby. "West Texas (NETF) is doing a good job. With the narcotics and the flow of drugs in this area, we need as many people as possible working on that."

Urby emphasized the need for communications between the two task forces, which, he added, is being done. "The only concern we have in law enforcement is safety issues. When you have so many officers working together, you need to have the left hand knowing what the right is doing. It speaks highly of law enforcement in this area that it all works so well together."

Urby explained that the department is a cooperating member but not a full member of West Texas because of budget and staffing considerations. "We are stretched thin, and we just don't have the people to plug into those positions."

Parolee executed for Corsicana liquor store fatal robbery

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — James David Richardson, on death row for gunning down a liquor store owner during a robbery a week before Christmas in 1986, was executed Tuesday.

Richardson, 32, insisted he was only along for the ride with two companions when Gerald Abay was fatally shot in the neck and chest during the holdup at his Gusher Liquor Store near Corsicana, about 50 miles south of Dallas.

His final statement was a lengthy prayer in which he expressed love for his family and asked for forgiveness and repentance.

"Heavenly father, I truly repent, really I do," he said, a tear running from his right eye. "I ask you lift me up, you bring me home, and hold my family safe."

With a sister sobbing and other relatives including his mother also in tears, he made a slight gasp as he continued to pray while the drugs began taking effect.

"Dear heavenly father, please bring me home," he said before becoming unconscious. He was pronounced dead 10 minutes later.

"I've waited half my life for this to be done," Danielle White, Abay's daughter, said after watching Richardson die. White, 25, was 12 when her father was killed.

MUSIC: Cain is helping teachers incorporate music into class

teaching the current kindergarten teachers how to incorporate music into their classes next year, when Ms. Cain will move up to teach music to next year's first graders.

"There's a lot of learning going on, although the kids may not know it," Ms. Cain said.

Studies have shown music education helps students excel in all areas of their academics, said Barbara Mamoulides, a music therapist who consults with Texaco about the Lamar program.

"It engages all parts of the brain when you sing a song," Mrs. Mamoulides said. "One side processes the words, and the other side processes the music. So many brain functions are going that it develops them."

Dr. Fox spent Monday and Tuesday at Lamar observing the kindergarten classes and looking over the music curriculum.

Opening lead: King of ♣

When adversity strikes, going into a depressed state is not the best way to cope with any problem, including those that crop up at the bridge table. Devote your efforts to fighting back.

After receiving a spade raise, South's hand is surely worth a game try. Since there is a possibility that North holds four or five hearts and only three spades, we prefer three hearts to the help-suit game try of three diamonds. North judged that four-card spade support, a doubleton heart and the ace of clubs merited going to game.

With a 2-2 spade split, 10 tricks are cold. Declarer won the first trick with the ace and made the key play of ruffing a club. When the ace and king of trumps did not fell the queen, declarer was now able to fall back on an alternative approach.

The ace and king of hearts were played off, and a third heart was led. If West ruffed, declarer would discard a diamond from dummy and concede only two diamond tricks and a trump. When West discarded a club, declarer ruffed, trumped another club in hand and the remaining heart was led. Again, West could not ruff so the last spade in dummy was put to good use. A club was ruffed with declarer's last trump, and the last three tricks were conceded to the three high diamonds and queen of spades.

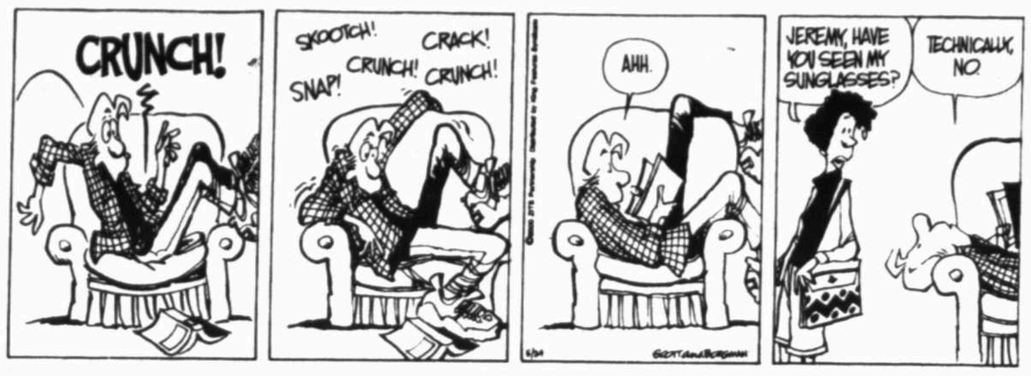

Note that it does not help West to discard two clubs on the hearts. In that event, dummy's fourth club will set up for a diamond discard from the closed

Irving opposed to plastic surgery

NEW YORK — Amy Irving says she's completely opposed to plastic surgery.

"I don't like the look," said the star of the upcoming "Bossa Nova," directed by her longtime Brazilian love, Bruno Barreto.

"In Brazil, they have a hard time finding actresses to play grandmothers because they are all so pulled-back," Irving, 46, said in the latest US Weekly magazine. "It's not the way I want to go. If it comes to having to cut into the side of my face to keep a movie career, I'll give up the movie career."

Her career nearly dried up without her help back in the '80s, after she and director Steven Spielberg divorced. Then Barreto came along with some choice roles and she returned to the theater.

"If you really want to be a big star, you have to play the game all the way, all the time," said the mother of two. "I would rather be watching 'Malcolm in the Middle' with my kids."

LONDON — Oasis guitarist Noel Gallagher is taking his act off the road.

He won't appear in foreign dates on the band's world tour, although he will return for shows in Britain this summer, their management company said Tuesday.

A replacement guitarist has already been found — Matt Deighton, who has played with Paul Weller and Mother Earth.

Gallagher's temporary departure is the latest in a long line of rifts within the band and leaves his brother, lead singer Liam, as the only remaining member of the original lineup.

A spokesman for the band said in a statement: "We're confident we'll hit the ground running" with Deighton on board. He had no further comment.

LAS VEGAS — A man convicted years ago of stalking Jerry Lewis is scheduled back in court June 2 for a preliminary hearing on similar charges.

Gary Benson, 56, of Sheridan, Wyo., is charged with aggravated stalking and violation of an extended protective order. Benson was freed from a Nevada prison in September after completing a six-year sentence for stalking Lewis.

At the time, Benson said he had called Lewis but never threatened him.

He was arrested May 5, a month after the comedian received a signed letter that said: "Dear Jerry. Your dead. Your friend, Gary Benson."

NEW YORK — Wynton Marsalis touted plans Tuesday for the world's first concert halls built especially for jazz, in a 100,000-square-foot complex with a view of Central Park.

"Everything is going to be integrated: the relationship between one space and another, the relationship between the audience and the musicians will be one fluid motion because that's how our music is," Marsalis said of the $103 million jazz center to be built at Columbus Circle. Marsalis will be artistic director.

The new complex is scheduled to open in 2003. It will include a 1,100-seat theater and a 600-seat performance atrium with a dance floor and tables. Musicians will perform in front of a 50-foot window overlooking the park from six floors up.

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan arrived in federal court Tuesday to fight a legal battle over the use of his name on a restaurant and listened calmly as his agent described him as "the most popular human being on the planet."

The basketball superstar gazed out the window of the skyscraper courtroom at the panorama of Lake Michigan as agent David Falk testified that his name was "magic in a bottle" when it came to selling products and therefore was a valuable commodity that had to be carefully guarded.

Falk testified that in marketing Jordan he had gone to corporations such as Coca-Cola and McDonald's — companies that he believed would fit in with his client's "clean-cut, Americana image."

"In keeping with John Kennedy's inaugural, we told them, ask not what Michael Jordan can do for you, ask what you can do for Michael Jordan," Falk told U.S. District Judge James B. Moran.

Jordan is in a court battle with the two restaurant developers who promoted Michael Jordan's restaurant, which has closed and filed for bankruptcy court protection. He wants the court to give him the right to use his name for another restaurant.

Though he was expected to attend the trial, Jordan is not scheduled to testify.

WEGNER: Library enjoys a mostly peaceful environment

a good mind for analysis."

Deats cited Mrs. Wegner's work ethic. "She is a hard worker. She is very loyal."

And in her successor, Mrs. Wegner said that she "would hope it would be somebody who has a vision of what library service is about and someone who will look to the future and be flexible.

"Things are continuing to change," Mrs. Wegner said. "You want to keep the best of the old and, of course, move on to the best of the new."

Of the old, which she renews via research, there is genealogy. It is her flair.

"I enjoyed my association with genealogy in this library the most, and I also enjoyed the period when we were building the addition."

Through genealogy, Mrs. Wegner, a native of Kansas, said that she "had the good fortune of meeting Rosalind Redfern ... , and I became very interested in genealogy myself. So I really did enjoy my job ... cataloging petroleum, genealogy and (making) interlibrary loans."

Mrs. Wegner's personal genealogy is now extended to her and her accountant-husband's sons, Ross and Barry, and to her grandchildren.

Austin Wegner, 11, "loves the computer, and he really enjoys reading books," Mrs. Wegner said. For 8-year-old Sabrina, "Reading is not her passion, yet. She enjoys reading, but she is not like her brother."

The library's genealogy collection is labeled the John & Rosalind Redfern Genealogical Research Center due to the generosity of the Redfern family.

And it was Mrs. Redfern, the Friends of the Library, and Midland County government that blended their funds in the early 1990s to renovate and to expand the downtown library, which was originally completed in 1958.

"We took the library into the 21st century," noted Nicholas "Nick" Taylor, a Midland lawyer who is former chairman of the library's advisory board. "We went online. We eliminated the card-catalog system. We renovated the library and doubled the size" of the old building.

And Mrs. Wegner "was there at the transition and had a major impact" on making the library accessible to and efficacious "for young and old.

"This library is a treasure," Taylor said. "This library is sheer joy."

But it hasn't always been the epitome of convenience, especially among older librarians, in changing times — from the old card-catalogue system to computers and the Internet.

"The computers have really been hard on librarians, (especially) the older librarians, because we had a nice, orderly world of books" among the library's bibliographic collection of about 200,000 volumes and other items. "You could conquer those books. But the computer is a tough act."

Of the older librarians, "some have taken to computers and others have not."

The computers offer the librarians, such as the reference librarians, "so many more ways to find information," Mrs. Wegner said. "Librarians aren't dumb. They figure out what's quick and fast" and often consult the Internet to find answers to patrons' questions.

Since converting to a computerized circulation-system, the library has issued about 60,000 cards to patrons.

On the computer, a patron, for example, can use a key word to summon information on a subject without knowing the author or the exact title that was required under the card-index system.

"I know people love to sort of just flip through the cards and just find things by happenstance," Mrs. Wegner said. "But I totally believe that computers are better for a public library.

"And we all still have the debate: Will the digital information be around or are we still going to be relying on print?

"People used to worry about the paper disintegrating ... and the book wouldn't be around," Mrs. Wegner said. "Now, we can worry also about information being stored in some kind of digital form" and if that mode will "be around, or you won't have the equipment to play it."

There are, however, trials in every era.

"The difficult thing that we had to deal with in 1974 was photocopiers and microfilm readers," Mrs. Wegner recalled. "Well, (26 years later), we still have difficulties with photocopiers, and people still put the film upside down and backwards on microfilm readers. We've just got more difficulty."

And Mrs. Wegner, who manages the library's almost $1.2-million budget, allowed that one of her "most difficult jobs has been keeping this library staffed" with 30 full-time employees.

The level of pay for the county's six professional librarians, those who hold master's degrees in library science, earn in the mid-$20,000s.

"The pay, I'm sure, is as good as the county can afford," Mrs. Wegner said. "The public wants excellence. But we don't always pay the kind of salary that gets excellence."

During her tenure, Mrs. Wegner said that library has enjoyed a mostly peaceful environment free of violence and trauma.

However, "We have had a flasher ... when streaking" was popular, she recalled. And there was a man who was "upsetting folks" by taking their photographs.

Midland County Commissioner Louisa Valencia, who is the Commissioners' Court's liaison to the library, said that Mrs. Wegner has "really been a dedicated employee of the library. Whatever task is needed, Sandra will do it.

"She really has had a great dedication to the library," Mrs. Valencia said. "She has really been an asset to Midland County and the most dedicated person I've ever seen to her department."

O'Hair suspect's brother received guns and knives

AUSTIN (AP) — Two former cell mates testified Tuesday that Gary Karr confessed to helping kidnap atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair and her family in 1995, cutting up their bodies and moving them after they were buried.

Karr's defense attorneys quickly tried to discredit the testimony of the jailhouse witnesses for the prosecution as unreliable. Karr has never made such admissions to federal investigators.

O'Hair, her son Jon Garth Murray and granddaughter Robin Murray O'Hair disappeared from San Antonio in September 1995 with $500,000 in gold coins.

Investigators believe the family was killed and dismembered. Karr, 52, is the only suspect facing charges.

The dramatic late afternoon testimony was the first time a witness said Karr admitted to taking part in the alleged crime.

Jason Cross, who is serving seven years for bank robbery, said Karr told him in 1999 that he helped two other suspects, David Roland Waters and Danny Fry, kidnap the family.

According to Cross, Karr said Waters paid him $30,000 for his help. The family was handcuffed and held in a San Antonio apartment where Waters sexually assaulted Robin Murray O'Hair.

According to Cross, Karr said that after robbing the trio of their gold coins, the suspects killed the O'Hairs and moved the bodies to an Austin storage unit to be dismembered.

Cross said Karr admitted he helped cut up the bodies, and cleaned up the mess with bleach to conceal the crime.

Cross said Karr never explained how the O'Hairs were killed

"He said it was very bloody, very messy," Cross said.

Cross said Karr also admitted to shooting Fry, whose headless and handless body was found in October 1995 in Dallas County.

Kitchen gardens offer flowers, flavor

By Karol Stonger
Associated Press

While dried herbs and spices have long been important to soups and stews, fresh herbs are enhancing the landscape and seasoning foods that previously relied on salt and a high fat content for their flavor.

As herbs grow, books proliferate. Among the more interesting recently published:

■ "Seasoning Savvy: How to Cook With Herbs, Spices, and Other Flavorings" by Alice Arndt.

■ "The Mediterranean Herb Cookbook" by Georgeanne Brennan.

■ "The Edible Asian Garden," by Rosalind Creasy.

■ "The Herbfarm Cookbook," by Jerry Traunfeld.

Arndt is a food historian, lecturer and writer who describes "Seasoning Savvy" as a book about the culinary virtues of herbs and spices, about flavor, and how to use seasonings to achieve the flavors you like. "It is not a cookbook but an adjunct to every cookbook."

She notes that in 1920 Americans on average consumed 12 ounces, or 3/4 pound, of herbs and spices a year. Today, that figure is 3 pounds, with hot spices particularly popular.

Her book, first published last November as a hardcover, describes seasonings from ajowan, available in Indian shops and used in Indian and Ethiopian cooking, to woodruff, used to flavor German May wine. She puts the individual seasonings to use in herb and spice blends, butters, vinegars and oils.

While Arndt is a historian, Creasy is a hands-on cook and gardener. She's a landscape designer, an authority on environment-friendly gardening and a pioneer in the edible landscape movement. Her own gardens near San Francisco are featured in "The Edible Asian Garden."

Because the continent is so large and the climate and terrain so diverse, Creasy limits her focus to Chinese and Southeast Asian cooking. "... Chinese, Thai and Vietnamese food dominate," she says, "because, of all Asian food cultures, they incorporate the greatest array of vegetables and herbs gardeners can grow and enjoy."

Creasy's book is illustrated with her own photos from garden and kitchen. The text ranges from information on where to buy seeds and how to grow them to how to cook with the harvest, herbs and otherwise. Included in a diverse bounty: lemon grass and lime leaf, daikon, a variety of mustards, garlic and yard-long beans.

Brennan is author of several cookbooks, including "Potager: Fresh Garden Cooking in the French Style." She divides her time between homes in Northern California and the Provence region of France, where she teaches seasonal; regional cooking at her own school.

Like Creasy's book, hers provides easy-to-follow instructions for growing, storing and cooking with herbs. Her herb-based sauces, fresh and dried herb mixtures and herb butters, oils and vinegars complement the Mediterranean diet based on vegetables, fruits, grains, fish and olive oil.

Sauces may be made from vegetables or stock (harissa), fish (anchovy sauce) and olives (tapenade) plus olive oil. The sauces sometimes are thickened with nuts, sometimes with cream or yogurt.

Herb butters, which offer a quick burst of flavor, are shaped into logs, wrapped in aluminum foil or waxed paper, chilled and then cut into slabs to melt over vegetables, meats and fish or to use in sautes. Refrigerated butters with green herbs will keep for about a week without losing flavor.

Consider Nasturtium and White Pepper Butter for boiled or steamed potatoes, green beans and grilled or broiled firm-fleshed fish such as halibut and tuna. With a wooden spoon beat together until blended and fluffy: 1/2 cup unsalted butter at room temperature, 1/4 cup chopped fresh nasturtium blossoms and 1 teaspoon freshly ground white pepper. Pack into a mold or shape into a log and cover or wrap with plastic wrap or aluminum foil. Refrigerate until ready to use. (Makes about 1/2 cup.)

Herb mixtures, both fresh and dried, include herbes de Provence for sauces, soups, stews, vegetables and grilled or roasted meats and poultry.

"Recipes for this favorite mix vary widely," Arndt says. She recommends adjusting the mix of these suggested herbs according to what you have on hand and what you like: 1 part rosemary, 1 part lavender, 2 parts basil, 2 parts thyme, 4 parts summer savory, 6 parts tarragon, 6 parts marjoram. "The herbs can be fresh or dried. If possible, use whole leaves, then grind up a small amount of herbes de Provence when you need it."

Brennan's suggestion for the mixture is 2 tablespoons dried winter savory leaves, 1 tablespoon dried rosemary leaves, 1 teaspoon dried lavender blossoms, 3/4 teaspoon dried thyme leaves and 1 dried bay leaf, crumbled together and stored in a glass jar, tin or paper bag in a cool dry place. (Makes about 1/4 cup.)

Traunfeld is a chef and gardener who practices herb-infused cooking at The Herbfarm Restaurant near Seattle. He stresses the use of fresh herbs, and his recipes provide substitutions for those not in season. He also stresses using herbs with some abandon. "Of course you never want to overpower other ingredients, but don't be afraid to allow the herbs to be noticed."

"Most of us learned to cook using measured pinches and teaspoons of dried herbs," he says. But with fresh herbs, "generous snippings and small handfuls are often appropriate."

Rosalind Creasy says Gado-Gado is a classic Indonesian dish with many variations. "I like this one as it contains so many vegetables. It makes a wonderful vegetarian lunch."

GADO-GADO

1 cup chunky peanut butter
3 cloves garlic, minced
3 to 5 chiles, minced
2-inch piece fresh ginger root, grated
1/3 cup soy sauce
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 Kaffir lime leaves, fresh or dried (see note)
1/4 cup fresh lime juice
3 cups yard-long beans, cut in 2-inch lengths
3 medium carrots, julienned
3 cups fresh spinach, loosely packed
3 cups chopped Chinese cabbage
2 cups fresh bean sprouts
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
5 ounces firm tofu
1/2 medium onion, thinly sliced
4 hard-boiled eggs

For the sauce, combine peanut butter, garlic, chiles, ginger, soy sauce, sugar, salt, lime leaves and 2-1/2 cups water in a pot. Bring mixture to a boil and simmer, stirring often, for 30 minutes. Cool, stir in fresh lime juice and reserve.

Meanwhile, bring 2 quarts of salted water to a rolling boil in large pot. Add the long beans and carrots and cook for 2 minutes. Remove them from the cooking water with a slotted spoon, rinse with cold water and set them aside. Bring the water to a boil again and blanch the spinach, Chinese cabbage and bean sprouts for 30 seconds. Drain and set aside.

Heat oil in a frying pan and fry the tofu on all sides until golden brown. Remove and drain on a paper towel and set aside. Add the sliced onions to the same pan and fry over medium heat until golden. Drain them on a paper towel and reserve. Quarter the hard-boiled eggs. Slice the tofu 1/4-inch thick.

In a serving bowl, toss the vegetables with the peanut sauce. Garnish with the sliced tofu, the quartered eggs and fried onions.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

NOTE: For each double kaffir lime leaf you may substitute 1 teaspoon finely grated lime zest or 2 teaspoons chopped fresh lemon verbena. Kaffir lime trees are available at Pacific Tree Farms, 4301 Lynwood Dr., Chula Vista, Calif. 91910. They can be grown outside where there is no frost or in containers to bring indoors in winter. Leaves may be harvested when they are 3 inches long. Fresh leaves may be wrapped tightly in plastic wrap and frozen for future use.

Georgeanne Brennan says Red Pepper Sauce is especially popular in Spain, where peppers are an important part of the cuisine. The smooth puree is traditionally spooned into Mediterranean fish soup and can be added to other soups and stews as well. It also can be used as a sauce for filled pasta such as tortellini and ravioli or for beef, chicken or vegetables such as eggplant, zucchini and pumpkin. If you want a spicier sauce, add a little cayenne pepper.

RED PEPPER SAUCE

1 large red bell pepper
2 ripe tomatoes, peeled and seeded
2 cloves garlic, unpeeled
2 tablespoons chopped fresh marjoram or oregano
1 slice day-old baguette or other coarse bread
1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

Place the bell pepper, tomatoes and garlic on a roasting pan and roast for about 5 minutes. Remove from the oven and put the pepper and garlic in a sealed plastic bag for a few minutes to sweat. With your fingertips or a knife, peel away the skins and remove the seeds and ribs from the pepper. Remove the skin from the garlic and the skin and core from the tomatoes.

Place the garlic cloves, marjoram or oregano, and bread in a blender or food processor and process to grind. Add the olive oil and puree. Add the peppers, tomatoes, salt and black pepper and puree until smooth.

Makes about 1 cup.

"While the idea of herbs in desserts may be exotic to many of us, it's nothing new, for herbs and flowers have been used to flavor confections throughout the centuries in many cultures," Jerry Traunfeld writes.

"Herb sprigs can be steeped in milk or cream to flavor custards and ice creams or infused in wine, honey, or simple sugar syrup to flavor fruit desserts. The chopped leaves can be added to cake batters or cookie doughs...," he adds.

Clafouti is a French country dessert of fruit baked in a flour-thickened custard and served hot.

PEAR, MAPLE AND ROSEMARY CLAFOUTI

1 tablespoon unsalted butter, softened, for the pan
4 medium-size ripe pears, such as Bartlett or Comice
1 cup pure maple syrup
4 springs of fresh rosemary, each about 3 inches long
2 large eggs
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/2 cup whole milk

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Generously butter a 9-inch shallow round baking dish with straight sides or a 10-inch glass pie pan with sloping sides.

Peel pears and cut them lengthwise in half. Use a melon-baller to scoop out the cores, then use a paring knife to remove the blossom scar, the stem and the coarse fiber that runs from the stem to the core. Pour the maple syrup into a 10-inch skillet and place it over medium heat. Arrange the pear halves in the pan, rounded side down, and tuck the rosemary sprigs between them. Cook the pears uncovered at a gentle boil for about 5 minutes. Turn them cut side down and gently boil until the pears are very soft and the syrup is slightly thickened, about 5 minutes longer. (If the pears are not quite ripe, cook them covered for 10 minutes on the first side, then cook on the second side, partially covered, until you can insert a paring knife with no resistance.)

Transfer the pears to the prepared baking dish, cut side down and stem end toward the center. Remove the rosemary springs from the skillet and pour the remaining syrup into a measuring cup. If there is less than 1/2 cup, top it off with more maple syrup. If there is more, pour it back into the pan and boil it further.

In a medium mixing bowl, whisk 1 egg with the flour until smooth. Whisk in the other egg, then whisk in the syrup, vanilla, salt, cream and milk. Pour the batter over the pears. Bake the clafouti on the center oven rack until puffed, set in the center and a golden color around the edges, 25 to 30 minutes. Cool slightly. Cut into wedges and serve warm.

Makes 8 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Two dates are too many for teen attending prom

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. I am 18 years old, and somehow got myself into the awkward situation of having two dates to the prom!

Van Buren

A few weeks ago, I was asked by a sophomore boy whom I am sort of friends with. I waited awhile before accepting because I really wanted to go with this cute guy who's in college, but I was too afraid to ask him.

Well, last night I got up the courage to talk to my college friend, and he said he would really like to go to the prom with me!

Now I am in a predicament. I would much rather go to the prom with the college guy, but I don't want to hurt the sophomore boy's feelings. What should I do? — SENIOR IN A PANIC

DEAR SENIOR: If you break the prom date after having accepted the invitation, you will cause hurt feelings — and it's very late for him to ask someone else. Act like the adult you are. Honor your commitment to the young man whose invitation you accepted. It's the proper and considerate thing to do.

DEAR ABBY: "Hurting Heart" said she was upset that her husband told her he would evaluate the situation before committing to jump into the ocean to save her from drowning. Well, I agree with her husband.

I was trained as a lifeguard, and the husband's response made a great deal of sense to me. One of the key points stressed in lifesaving is the importance of evaluating the situation carefully before attempting a rescue.

A drowning person becomes a very different and dangerous individual. While in a state of panic and confusion, people have been known to drown the lifesaver! It is dangerous for even a well-trained lifeguard to attempt a rescue, which is why the training course is so rigorous.

Should the wife drown her rescuing husband, their four children would be orphaned — which would truly be a senseless tragedy. That wife should borrow a little of her husband's common sense, instead of thinking only of herself. — S.J.B. IN TORONTO

DEAR S.J.B.: The wife should have exercised some common sense and not asked the "what if" question — and the husband should have used common sense by softening his honest, but tactless, answer. In the interest of water safety, whenever families are playing near water, there should always be a life preserver to toss for just such emergencies.

DEAR ABBY: If you are entertaining guests and the telephone rings, should you answer it, politely tell the caller that you have guests, and ask if you can call back at a more convenient time? — WANT TO DO THE RIGHT THING

DEAR WANT: Yes. It is impolite to carry on a telephone conversation while guests are waiting. Some people resolve this question by letting their answering machine take calls while they're entertaining.

DEAR ABBY: My friend is planning a wedding for next May. Under any other circumstances I would be happy for her, but she isn't engaged and has not yet been proposed to by her boyfriend!

Apparently, she has simply decided that now would be a good time to get married. She has always thought that 26 to 28 is a good age to marry, and she's not considering any other factors. She and her boyfriend are both 26, but he's not at all responsible. He tried college several times without success, then worked for a while to pay off his student loans, and is now enrolled in a technical college. He does not seem mature enough for marriage, and frankly, neither does she.

Abby, I don't know what to do. My friend has gone as far as talking to a priest about the wedding (without her boyfriend present), and is about to put money down on a hall. I feel like I can't just stand back and let all this happen. Should I say something? Please don't use my name. Just sign me ... WORRIED ABOUT THE WEDDING

DEAR WORRIED: Someone must inject a note of reality in this fantasy. Tell your friend that tradition dictates that it is necessary to have a fiance and set the date together before you plan a wedding, and that you don't want her to get hurt and lose deposit money she can't afford.

She may not follow your advice, but at least your conscience will be clear.

Staff Reports

Brunch is back!!! And blueberries make it a breeze.

You don't have to fire up the grill every time good friends get together. Summer is the perfect season to simplify menus by serving brunch foods instead of dinner. These recipes, courtesy of the North American Blueberry Council, are perked up with blueberries, which are available fresh from April to October.

FLUFFY BLUEBERRY PANCAKES WITH BLUEBERRY GINGER SAUCE

1-1/2 cups part-skim ricotta cheese or drained small-curd cottage cheese
1/4 cup butter, melted
4 egg yolks
1/2 cup flour
1/4 cup sugar
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel (yellow part only)
8 egg whites
2 cups fresh blueberries

Fluffy Blueberry Pancakes are topped with Blueberry Ginger Sauce.

In medium-sized bowl, combine ricotta, butter and egg yolks until blended. In small bowl, stir together flour, sugar and lemon peel. Stir dry ingredients into ricotta mixture. In medium-sized bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Fold egg whites and then blueberries into batter. Over medium heat, form cakes by spooning 3/4 cup batter per pancake onto hot lightly greased griddle or skillet. Cook cakes, turning once, until browned, about 4 minutes. Serve with Blueberry Ginger Sauce

BLUEBERRY GINGER SAUCE

In large saucepan, combine 2 cups fresh blueberries, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch and 1 tablespoon finely chopped crystallized ginger or 1/2 teaspoon dried ground ginger; stir in 1/3 cup water. Over medium-high heat, bring to boil; cook and stir until sauce thickens, about 1 minute.

BLUEBERRY LEMON MUFFINS

2 cups flour
3/4 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup low-fat lemon yogurt
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 egg white
1/3 cup melted butter
1 cup fresh blueberries

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Lightly spray 12 muffin cups with non-stick cooking spray. In large bowl, combine flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt until well blended. In small bowl, whisk yogurt, eggs, egg white and melted butter until blended. Stir yogurt mixture into flour mixture just until combined. Stir in blueberries. In each muffin cup, spoon about 1/4 cup batter; sprinkle each with about 1 teaspoon of granola, if desired. Bake until golden brown, about 15 minutes. Remove muffins from cups; cool on wire rack. Repeat with remaining batter, partially filling empty cups with water.

BLUEBERRY BREAD PUDDING

1 loaf (16 ounces) sliced, firm-textured white bread, crusts removed
2 cups fresh or frozen blueberries
4 ounces light cream cheese (from 8-ounce package), cut in 1/4-inch cubes
4 eggs, lightly beaten
2 cups lowfat milk
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoons ground cinnamon

Butter 8-inch square baking dish; set aside. Cut bread in 1/2-inch cubes (makes about 7 cups). In prepared baking dish, layer half of the bread cubes and half the blueberries; sprinkle with all the cream cheese; cover with remaining bread cubes and blueberries. In bowl, combine eggs, milk, sugar, salt and cinnamon; pour over bread. Gently press bread down to absorb milk mixture; refrigerate, covered, at least 20 minutes or overnight. Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Bake uncovered, until knife inserted near center comes out clean, about 1 hour; let stand 10 minutes before serving. Slice in 8 rectangles; serve with maple syrup if desired.

Don't have time for leisurely brunch? Try these blueberry breakfasts in a hurry:

■ Blueberry Split: Halve a banana lengthwise and place in shallow bowl or plate. Top with scoop of low-fat cottage cheese, drizzle of honey or maple syrup, sprinkling of wheat germ and handful of fresh blueberries.

■ Open-face Waffle-wich: Toast a frozen, whole-grain waffle and spread with low-fat cream cheese mixed with fresh blueberries.

■ Yogurt Parfait: In a tall glass, alternate layers of vanilla low-fat yogurt, crisp cereal flakes or nuggets, and fresh blueberries. Repeat twice.

■ Melon Madness: Scoop out seeds from half a honeydew or cantaloupe and fill the cavity with a scoop of low-fat frozen yogurt and fresh blueberries.

■ Berry Smoothie: Whirl fresh blueberries in blender with ripe banana chunks, low-fat milk, ice cubes and dash of vanilla extract.

■ Hot Breakfast-in-a-Bowl: Prepare instant oatmeal as package directs. Stir in half a cup of fresh blueberries before serving.

My kids have always loved Popsicles, even when the frozen-fruit-flavored-treats-on-a-stick weren't technically the Popsicle brand (from Good Humor). The great debate on which flavor was better went on, every time I bought a box of the sweet "icicles."

Anderson

But now the kids are older and we don't always have a box of Popsicles in the freezer; but sometimes they still want one.

So I bought a box of Popsicle-brand "Great White," which are your basic Popsicles but without the artificial colorings. The box says the "New!" treats have "No Color! No Mess!" Well that may be so, but they are still sticky, so the mess isn't completely eliminated.

A box of 12 pops in orange, cherry and "mystery" flavor cost somewhere around $2.50, or maybe just about 20 cents each.

The box is decorated with drawings of Great White Sharks, naturally, which probably pleases some members of the younger generation.

The "mystery" flavor really isn't much of one, because on the top of the box are the words: "Mystery flavor may include: grape, watermelon, strawberry or raspberry." And inside the box, the mystery pops are labeled what flavor they are. We got at least one grape that I know of. (The kids got to the box before I could really count the flavors; not that it matters much anyway, since they are the ones who are eating the Popsicles.)

Since Popsicles and their clones are basically frozen sugar water, they have no fat. According to the information label on the side of the Great White box, they have pretty much nothing else either. One ice pop is listed as containing 45 calories. That's got to be from the sugar, since sugar in one form or another constitutes three of the first four items listed on the ingredients label. These are, in order, water first (of course), followed by sugar, corn syrup and high fructose corn syrup.

The box has very little label advertising, although it does list both a mailing address (Good Humor — Breyers Ice Cream, P.O. Box 19007, Green Bay, Wis. 54307-9007) and a website (http://www.popsicle.com) in case any consumer wants to contact the company.

The taste test was pretty cut and dried. The main taster said the Great White Popsicles taste just like — Popsicles. She said she could taste no difference. I guess that must be the point. That Bible verse about "no new thing under the sun" (Ecclesiastes 1:9 King James version) kept flashing through my head.

The tiniest little taster loved them. He's only got three teeth so far, so he didn't have to worry much about the cold hitting his teeth. And Popsicles was a new experience for him.

Garden is show place for caterers

By Barbara Albright

LONGMONT, Colo. (AP) — Heirloom flowers, organic produce and two accomplished cooks add up to a fresh-from-the-field-to-the-table experience. If clients can't come to Big Bang Catering, the chefs take "food landscapes" to them.

About 10 years ago, Lyle Davis and John Howlett decided to take a novel approach to entertaining. Both were well traveled and had solid culinary backgrounds and personal commitments to earth-friendly living. They pulled it all together with Big Bang. Davis was a founder of Alfalfa's, one of the nation's first natural foods supermarkets as opposed to the crunchy granola hole-in-the-wall places. Alfalfa was bought out by its competitor, Wild Oats, in 1996.

Meanwhile, Davis and his wife had bought a 32-acre spread 10 miles north of Boulder. Davis is an avid gardener; his wife, Sylvia Tawse, is a publicist for the organic food industry. Today they grow heirloom flowers and 60 varieties of vegetables, and their farm, Pastures of Plenty, is certified organic. The farm operates separately from Big Bang Caterers, but it supplies produce and flowers for the catering business. The lawn behind the rambling old farmhouse has been the site of weddings and other events.

These recipes are for dishes from Big Bang Catering.

GRILLED EGGPLANT WITH GOAT CHEESE

1 cup extra-virgin olive oil
4 garlic cloves, coarsely chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 eggplants, sliced into rounds 1/4-inch thick
3 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
8 ounces crumbled goat cheese, such as Montrachet
1 bunch Italian flat-leaf parsley, coarsely chopped
Additional olive oil for drizzling
Additional salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste

In a small bowl, stir together the olive oil, garlic, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Lightly brush the eggplant slices on both sides with the seasoned oil. Grill the slices for 2 to 5 minutes on each side, or until they are soft and cooked but still hold their shape. Arrange the cooked eggplant slices on a platter and sprinkle with the vinegar. Top with the crumbled goat cheese. Drizzle with additional olive oil and season with salt and pepper. Garnish with the chopped parsley.

PASTA SANTA CLARA

1/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1/3 pound pancetta or prosciutto, cut into 1/4-inch pieces
1 large yellow onion, cut into 1/4-inch dice
5 garlic cloves, thinly sliced
1/2 cup white wine
1 bunch arugula (optional), cleaned and stems removed
1 bunch spinach or Swiss chard, cleaned and stems removed
1-1/2 pounds pasta, such as penne or elbow macaroni
1-1/2 pounds heavy (whipping) cream
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
1/4 cup chopped Italian flat-leaf parsley, for garnish
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese, preferably Parmigiano-Reggiano

In a large skillet or saucepan, heat the 1/4 cup olive oil over medium-high heat. Add the pancetta, onion, and garlic. Cook, stirring frequently, for about 7 minutes or until the onion is soft and translucent. Add the wine and continue to cooking until the liquid is reduced by half.

Meanwhile, in a large pot bring a gallon of water to a boil. (This water will be used for blanching the greens as well as cooking the pasta.) Add salt, if desired. Add arugula leaves to the boiling water and blanch for about 30 seconds. Using a slotted spoon, remove the arugula and drain. Next blanch the spinach or chard leaves (the chard may take 1-1/2 minutes to soften). Using a slotted spoon, remove and drain. Coarsely chop the leaves and add to the skillet. Add the pasta to the boiling water and cook according to package directions until al dente. Drain pasta and drizzle with the remaining 1 tablespoon of olive oil to prevent it from drying out.

Heat the greens mixture for 2 to 3 minutes. Add the pasta and gently toss to combine. Remove the skillet from the heat. Add the heavy cream and mix thoroughly. Season with salt and pepper. Garnish with parsley and serve with grated Parmesan cheese.

WINTER SALAD WITH FRESH HERBS

1 head romaine hearts, broken into bite-size pieces
1 head radicchio, broken into bite-size pieces
1 small bunch dill weed, stems removed and leaves torn into pieces (about 1-1/2 cups)
1/2 bunch Italian flat-leaf parsley, stems removed and leaves broken apart (about 1-1/2 cups)
1/2 red onion, thinly sliced
1 cup ripe olives such as kalamata, pitted and coarsely chopped
Classic Vinaigrette (recipes follows)
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

In a large bowl, toss together the romaine, radicchio, dill, parsley, onion and olives. Give Vinaigrette a stir and pour as much as desired over the salad. Toss to coat. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

CLASSIC VINAIGRETTE

Whisk together in small bowl:
3/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1/4 cup white wine vinegar or champagne vinegar
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Hart's late grand slam wraps up another victory for RockHounds

Staff Report

Whisper if you repeat this. Midland RockHound Jason Hart is on a pace to make you forget one Adam Piatt.

Hart hit a grand slam home run in the seventh inning to seal a 12-8 win over the San Antonio Missions Tuesday night at Christensen Stadium. It was his 17th homer of the season. Piatt, who hit a franchise record 39 homers last year, had only 14 at this point of the season last year.

Midland also won three-of-four games from the Missions, knocking San Antonio out of first place in the Texas League West as Round Rock defeated El Paso, 5-0, Tuesday night.

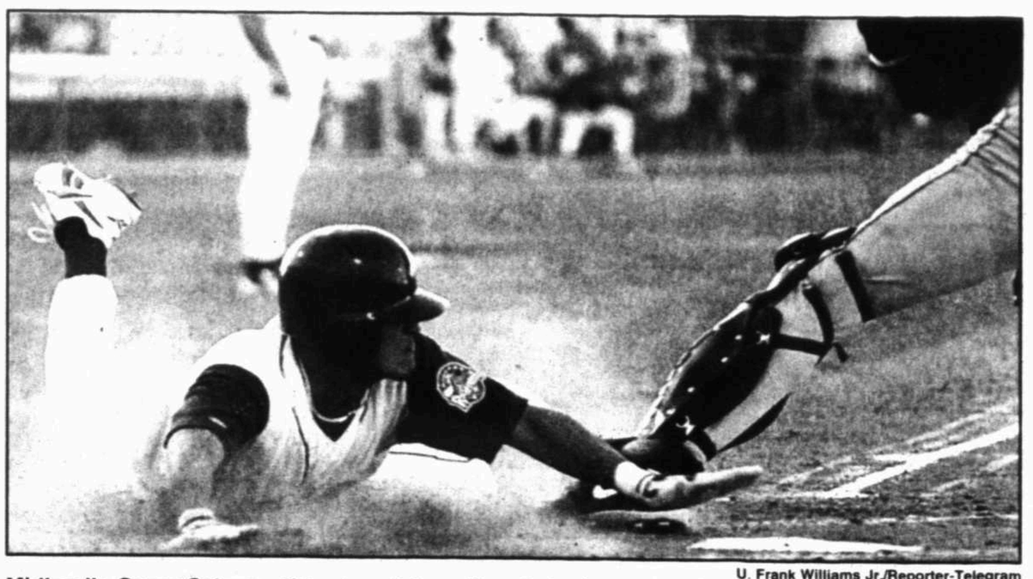

And third-place Midland is making some noise of its own, having won five of their last six games and is only 5 1/2 games out of first.

Big homers were the difference in this one. Midland shortstop Oscar Salazar hit a three-run shot in the third inning off of Mission starter Allen Davis (5-3). Hart's blast came after Mission reliever Robert Bevel walked the bases loaded with two outs in the seventh.

Midland starter Jesus Colome was going for his seventh win of the year, but had a rough outing, giving up six runs, five earned in only 3 2/3 innings of work. Leo Vasquez (2-1) came in to pick up the win in relief.

There were 377 pitches thrown in the three-hour, 40-minute game. The two pitching staffs combined for 18 walks, two hit batsmen and 27 hits. There were 45 base runners.

But the wait was worth it since Midland came into the game with a 10-15 record at home. El Paso comes into town tonight.

Pacers overwhelm Knicks

Indy's actual offense stuns New Yorkers

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Big difference between this place and Miami.

The Indiana Pacers made that clear right away Tuesday night and repeatedly hammered the point home.

Displaying the type of potent, balanced offense New York hadn't seen in weeks, the Pacers got double-figure scoring from six players and opened an early 18-point lead that the Knicks never fully recovered from in a 102-88 victory in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals.

The Knicks, accustomed to focusing on just one or two offensive threats in the first two rounds against Toronto and Miami, couldn't cope with the many Pacers who all had their touch.

"Of course they're very different than Miami. Everything they do is different," Latrell Sprewell of the Knicks said. "We've got to switch gears."

Austin Croshere came off the bench to score a playoff career-high 22 points, while Reggie Miller had 19, Jalen Rose 17 and Rik Smits 16. Dale Davis added 14 points and 16 rebounds and Mark Jackson had 11 points and 13 assists as the Pacers put together the highest-scoring game against the Knicks this postseason.

In their first 10 playoff games, the Knicks had not allowed an opponent to score more than 88 points.

The Pacers reached that mark with more than six minutes remaining on a 3-pointer by Croshere that gave them a 14-point lead, and Croshere got them to 100, too, on a 3-pointer with 42 seconds remaining.

Croshere, a bench warmer in last season's Eastern Conference finals when Indiana lost to the Knicks in six games, came off the bench to more than neutralize Marcus Camby.

Shooting 7-for-10 from the field, including 4-for-5 on 3-pointers and 4-for-4 from the free throw line, Croshere reached double figures for the fifth time this postseason and scored 11 points in the fourth quarter to keep the Knicks safely out of comeback range.

"They left me open," Croshere said. "Everybody was out there sticking shots, and they had to leave somebody open with their double teams. I'm sure I wasn't their primary focus, and that's something I've tried to take advantage of all year — the attention teams pay to our other guys."

Sprewell led New York with 22 points, while Patrick Ewing had 21. Allan Houston added 18 points for the Knicks, who were coming off seven grueling, low-scoring games against the defensively oriented Miami Heat.

Running into a different kind of team, one that can put points on the board quickly and much more easily, New York allowed the Pacers to score 35 in the first quarter — a total that the Heat usually wouldn't reach until late in the second quarter or early in the third.

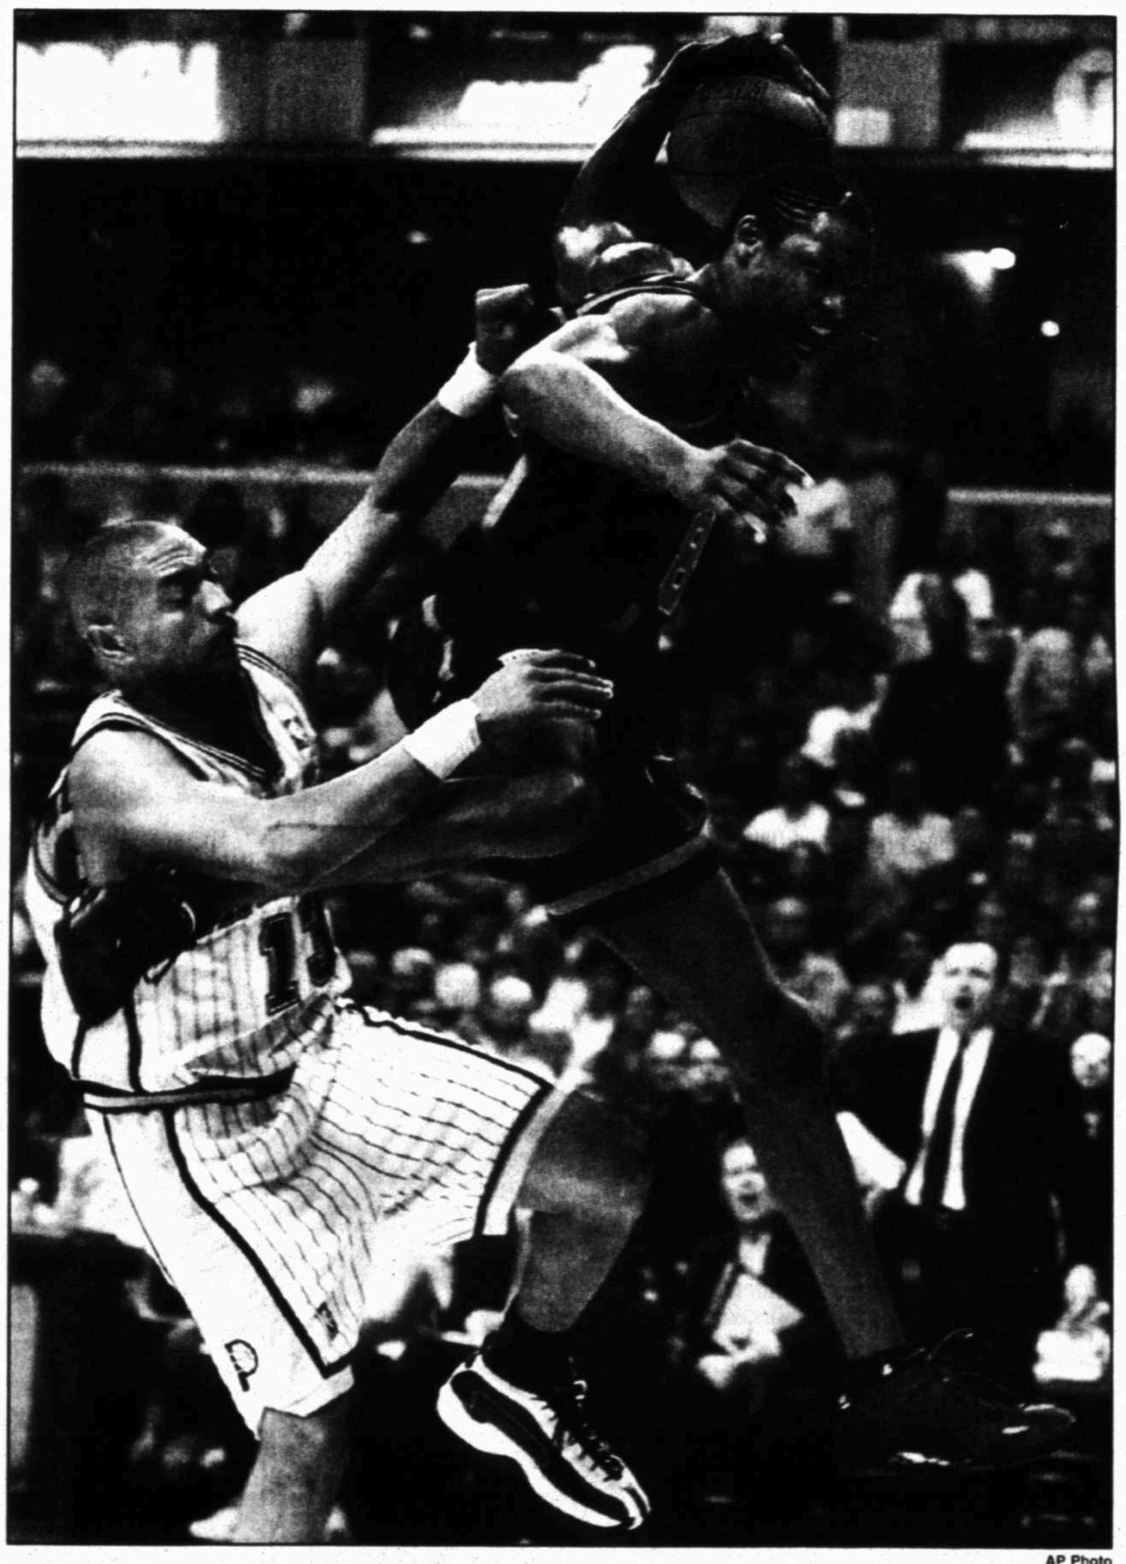

"They got the job done earlier than we did. We wasted a quarter," Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy said. "When you waste a quarter in this league, you get beat. We were ill-prepared for their intensity in the first quarter, obviously."

With Smits making five of his first six shots, the Pacers jumped to a 17-7 lead just over six minutes into the first quarter. Croshere hit his first shot, a 3-pointer, to put Indiana ahead 24-13.

A dunk by Davis, a blocked shot by Miller and a 3-pointer by Jackson got the lead up to 14, and Croshere tipped in a missed 3 at the buzzer to give the Pacers a 35-17 lead after the first quarter.

The Knicks got back into it with runs of 8-0 and 9-0, and Indiana's

Chaps take early lead at nationals

MC
NJCAA National Golf Tournament

The Chaps shot a 305 first round to hold a slim one-stroke advantage over McLennan Community College, New Mexico Junior College and Paris Junior College. There are three rounds left to go.

MC coach Delnor Poss said the windy conditions on Tuesday didn't help much playing on a course with incredibly difficult pin placements and slick greens.

"This was the most difficult putting conditions we have ever experienced in my 23 years of coaching and by far in my 13 years of coaching in the national tournament," Poss said.

The Chaps were consistent in their play with sophomore Ernie Rose leading the way with a 74, two shots behind medalist leader Kasper Jorgen of McLennan. Kevin Hoffer shot a 76, Russell Wrentz had a 77 and both Nathan Goulding and

Michael Irvin has made no announcement, but it is expected that he will retire from football this summer after a standout career with Dallas.

Irvin appears headed for retirement

By John Marshall
Associated Press Writer

IRVING — Michael Irvin's locker at the Dallas Cowboys' practice facility is filled with personal belongings, football equipment, clothes, shoes and even a pair of Taco Bell Chihuahuas. About the only thing missing from the spot at Valley Ranch is the player himself.

It has been widely expected that Irvin would retire after a neck injury against Philadelphia on Oct. 10 left him temporarily paralyzed. He went on injured reserved Dec. 4 and did not play the rest of the season.

Irvin has since been told he has a genetic condition — a narrow spinal cord — that makes him more susceptible to serious injury if he takes another blow to the head or neck. Doctors have recommended he retire to prevent possible paralysis.

Although no official word has come from him, Cowboys players and coaches attending a quarterback school Tuesday talked about Irvin in the past tense instead of the present.

"He was a great, great football player for this team and this organization for a number of years, and

Overtime win gives Stars 3-2 series lead

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Joe Nieuwendyk is once again coming through for the Dallas Stars when they need him the most.

Nieuwendyk re-directed a long blast from Richard Matvichuk 12:10 into overtime Tuesday night, giving the Dallas Stars a 3-2 victory over the Colorado Avalanche and putting the Stanley Cup champions within a win of returning to the finals.

"We had some good luck there," Nieuwendyk said. "It seemed like the only way to get to the net is to outrace a guy. I was able to do that and just got my stick on it."

Niewuendyk beat rookie Martin Skoula to get just enough of the puck to send it past Colorado goalie Patrick Roy and to give Dallas a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Western Conference finals. Game 6 is Thursday night in Denver.

Nieuwendyk was the MVP of the playoffs last year after tying an NHL record with six postseason game-winners, two of them in overtime. It was only fitting then that he ended Dallas' first overtime game of these playoffs.

His goal was the Stars' first this series that didn't come from the top line of Brett Hull, Mike Modano and Jere Lehtinen. The trio came up big in the second period, though, as Lehtinen and Hull each scored and Modano assisted on both.

Stars goalie Ed Belfour also had another outstanding night, stopping 29 shots. He's made 105 saves in three games and has yet to allow the Avalanche to score more than twice in a game.

"He's got a strong focus," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said. "He has to be the difference for us if we expect to beat Colorado."

Belfour was at his best when it mattered most. He blocked five shots during a power play in the final minutes of regulation, then in overtime turned away Joe Sakic on a breakaway and handled a three-shot flurry from Sakic and Dave Andreychuk. Andreychuk chopped his stick at the ice in frustration when it ended.

Roy, who allowed four goals in the first 11 shots in Game 4, failed to protect a 1-0 lead and had some shaky moments. He was solid in overtime, turning away strong shots from Hull, Modano and Sylvain Cote before the bouncing finale got past him.

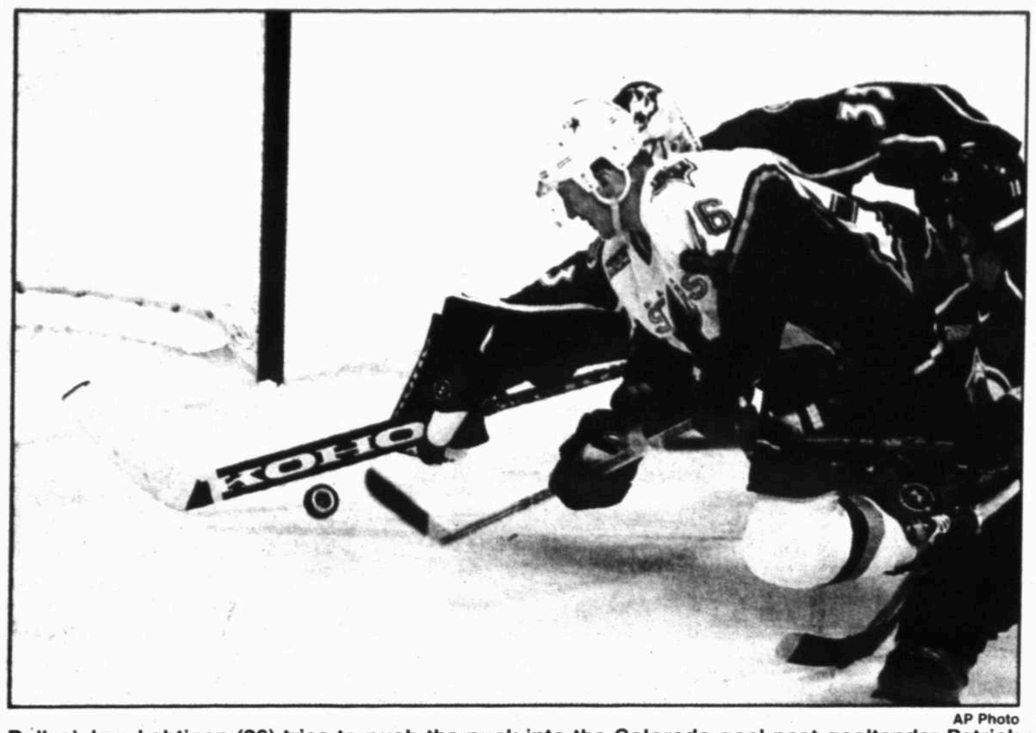

"It deflected right in front of me and I made the save sideways," Roy said. "After that, I saw the puck hit the post and then cross the line."

When these teams met in the conference finals last season, Colorado went home for Game 6 leading 3-2 only to see Dallas win in seven games. Now the Avalanche, coming off their first consecutive losses since mid-March, will try doing the same thing.

"We're still confident," said Sakic, who hasn't scored this series and has just two goals in 15 playoff games. "We've got to keep doing the same things and maybe they'll go in."

Colorado's power play remained stuck in neutral. The Avalanche went 0-for-4 for the second straight game, making them 1-for-18 over the last three games.

This was the first overtime game of the series, which is surprising considering four of the five regular-season meetings went beyond the third period. Colorado won three and there was a tie.

This also was the first overtime game this postseason for Dallas, which last summer had eight, including two triple-overtime games.

Colorado led 1-0 midway through the first period when Jon Klemme flicked a rebound over Belfour. Milan Hejduk tied it at 2 by scoring on a great feed from Sakic 2:19 into the third period.

Lehtinen tied it early in the second period by controlling a rebound and backhanding it past Roy. Hull made it 2-1 late in the period by blasting in a one-timer on a power play.

"It was a howitzer," said Hull, who moved into the lead for postseason points with 19 and tied Modano for the playoff lead in goals with eight.

Hull — whose father, Hall of Famer Bobby Hull, watched from a rink-level walkway — also tied former New York Islanders star Mike Bossy for fifth place on the career postseason list with 85 goals.

The save of the game was made by Matvichuk, who in the first period reached from outside the crease to swat away a shot by Shjon Podein just before it crossed the goal line. Belfour had come out to play the puck after failing to catch a long shot, then made a poor pass straight to Podein and fell trying to get the puck back.

Dallas lost a key player when Jamie Langenbrunner went down with a knee injury in the first period. He's expected to miss Game 6.

Colorado's first-period goal was the first allowed by the Stars in 13 home playoff games, setting an NHL record.

Rookie in name only, Montoya has great chance to win Indy

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Only once in the past 73 years has a rookie driver won the Indianapolis 500. With Juan Montoya starting from the front row on Sunday, it could happen again.

"Every year is different. I came here, just tried doing my best," Montoya said Tuesday. "It's very simple. You push it to the limit and see what you come up with."

Already a champion in the rival CART series, the 24-year-old Colombian is an Indy rookie in name only.

He was not required to take the mandatory driving test — an unusual break in tradition. His preparation in practice was consistent and impressive, and he was by far the fastest qualifier among the seven first-year drivers in the starting lineup.

Barring a complete flop in the race, it's almost certain he also will be named rookie of the year Sunday night.

"I laugh about that, to be honest," he said of the "rookie" designation. "Even last year, when they considered me a rookie in CART.

"They've got their reasons to call me rookie. For ovals, I can see I was a rookie last year. But I've done two 500-mile races, big ovals as well. But that's like a tradition here, the way they do it. ... I don't mind. I don't have a problem with that."

Montoya began racing go-karts at age 5 and worked up to the British Formula Three series in 1996. He was second in the European Formula 3000 series in 1997 and won the series title in 1998.

Last year, he joined Ganassi Racing, won seven poles, seven races and became the youngest CART champion. This year, however, Montoya has not been as successful, 17th in the series standings with just nine points.

Montoya qualified on Saturday at 223.372 mph. The only faster qualifier was Greg Ray, the defending Indy Racing League champion, whose later run at 223.471 pushed Montoya into the No. 2 starting spot in the middle of the front row.

The last rookie to start that high at Indianapolis was Tony Stewart, who qualified second in 1996 but moved over to the pole for the race after Scott Brayton was killed in practice.

The only rookie winner since 1927 was Graham Hill, a former Formula One champion, in 1966. Breaking that rookie jinx is not impossible, Montoya said.

"You just have to do everything right. That's all you've got to do, like any other race," he said. "Last year, I nearly won my first 500-mile race in Michigan but lost it by a quarter of a car-length.

"You've got to go around for 400 miles and then race for the last 100. You've got to save the equipment and then make the car right for the end of the race and be able to push it."

The other rookies, all of whom had to go through the annual Rookie Orientation Program, are Sam Hornish Jr., starting from the fifth of the 11 rows; Jason Leffler, row six; Sarah Fisher and Airton Dare, row seven; Jaques Lazier, row nine; and Andy Hillenburg, row 11.

"It's kind of weird for them to classify him as a rookie," Hornish said of Montoya. "He is here, but it's not really true. He's got a lot more experience in cars similar to this than most of the people in the rookie class have, so it's kind of difficult going up to him and compete for rookie of the year."

Fans can still bring own beer to TMS

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Motor Speedway fans are getting what they want. They will still be able to bring in coolers and their own beer to races.

Speedway general manager Eddie Gossage said Tuesday that the decision not to make any changes was made after exhaustive research, primarily a survey in which 75 percent of the fans said they wanted alcohol allowed but not sold there.

"It's a runaway and our long-term decision is based on this survey," Gossage said. "Race fans are unique; they like to carry their coolers to the races. Many believe it's almost their constitutional right."

A special Denton County election in February gave the speedway the option to sell alcohol on the premises. Texas law, however, would have prevented fans from bringing in their own beer into the speedway if it was also sold there.

Coolers could have still been allowed, but the process of inspecting the contents inside would have been cumbersome and nearly impossible.

By not selling beer during NASCAR and Indy car racing weekends, Gossage said the speedway is foregoing an annual profit of about $3 million. Some of those races draw more than 200,000 fans.

The option is now there, however, for Texas Motor Speedway to sell beer for non-racing events, such as headline concerts where coolers are not traditionally allowed.

Crews tear down rest of walkway

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — The state transportation department announced Tuesday it will inspect privately owned pedestrian bridges as crews began tearing down the rest of the Lowe's Motor Speedway walkway that collapsed and injured more than 100 people.

Speedway officials worked on how to move fans from parking lots across U.S. 29 to the track, with the collapsed walkway and another one now out of commission. Qualifying races for the Coca-Cola 600 begin Wednesday. The headline NASCAR race Sunday is expected to draw more than 190,000 people to the track.

The state DOT's Bridge Maintenance staff was instructed Tuesday to contact the owners of all privately owned pedestrian bridges over state roads and conduct immediate inspections of those bridges, the department said. There are 10 privately owned bridges over North Carolina roads, including the two at the speedway.

"We believe that immediate inspections of these facilities are in the best interest of the public to ensure their safety," said Transportation Secretary David McCoy.

An 80-foot section of the 320-foot walkway at the speedway fell 17 feet onto the highway after Saturday night's The Winston, a NASCAR all-star race, as fans crowded the bridge, trying to reach their cars. Corrosion is suspected as the cause of the failure, but engineers are puzzled that rust could have weakened a bridge that was just five years old.

The speedway's other, 4-year-old walkway, 500 yards away, was closed Monday after a rust spot was seen on exposed steel.

With both walkways out of commission, speedway officials announced Tuesday they will create two new pedestrian crosswalks on U.S. 29 before Wednesday's qualifying races begin for the Coca-Cola 600.

NBA: Balanced offense trips Knicks

(From 1C)

lead was down to 52-48 at halftime after Jackson was called for a flagrant foul against Sprewell on a breakaway with 3.2 seconds left.

The Knicks got within two points early in the third before Rose finally got on the board and scored six of Indiana's first eight points of the quarter. The Pacers went up by as many as nine before the Knicks again cut it to two.

Sprewell and Rose exchanged emphatic dunks on alternate possessions late in the quarter, as clear a sign as any that the Pacers had an answer for every Knicks' run.

It was 78-71 entering the fourth, and the Pacers got their lead back to double digits by opening the quarter with a 7-2 run ending with a layup by Davis while New York was missing seven of its first eight shots.

"This is going to be a long series, a dogfight," Miller said. "This is only one game. I'm more worried about Thursday's game because now they'll have time to prepare."

Notes: Since joining the NBA in 1976, the Pacers have played in 21 playoff series prior to this one. When they win Game 1, the Pacers are 10-0. When they lose Game 1, they are 0-11. In the five previous Knicks-Pacers series, the winner of Game 1 has gone on to win the series. ... The 35 points in the first quarter were two shy of Indiana's playoff record set in Game 6 against Philadelphia in the second round. ... Larry Johnson was a non-factor for New York with just three points and five rebounds. Last year, he was the Knicks' leading scorer in the series against the Pacers before getting injured in Game 6.

Aggressive Pippen is key to Blazers' to big road victory

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Trail Blazers have turned aggressor in the Western Conference finals, led by their only player who knows what it's like to be an NBA champion.

Scottie Pippen's relentless drives to the basket and harassing defense set the tone for Portland's 106-77 blowout of the Lakers in Los Angeles on Monday night, a victory that evened the best-of-seven series 1-1.

The series doesn't resume until Friday in Portland. The Lakers were regrouping in Southern California on Tuesday, while coach Mike Dunleavy gave the Blazers the day off in Portland.

The long layoff might help the Lakers forget their worst loss of the season, at home no less, where they had won 24 of 25 games, with the only defeat a meaningless one in a game that Shaquille O'Neal missed just after the team had clinched the homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs.

Now that advantage has been lost to Portland.

From the opening tip, Pippen took it to the Lakers. In the first half, he repeatedly drove to the basket, where he either scored or was fouled.

"My mind set was to attack," he said, "to establish that we weren't going to be a jump-shooting team."

From his days in Chicago, Pippen knows the triangle offense of Lakers coach Phil Jackson as well as any player in the series, and the Blazers stifled Los Angeles as no team has all season.

"You try to defend the penetration as much as you can — basically take it away from a passing standpoint," Pippen said. "We were able to do that."

Pippen had 21 points, 10 rebounds and three steals, Rasheed Wallace had career playoff-highs of 29 points and 12 rebounds and Steve Smith scored 24 points, 11 in the decisive 20-0 run in the third quarter.

In O'Neal and Kobe Bryant, Los Angeles has two of the best offensive players in the game, yet the Lakers scored eight points in the third quarter on Monday — O'Neal's dunk, Brian Shaw's 3-pointer and three free throws by Bryant. The output tied a franchise record for fewest points in a postseason quarter, set 28 years ago.

Los Angeles was 2-for-15 from the field in the quarter and was outrebounded 14-5. For the game, the Blazers dominated the boards 49-34.

"They just took us out of what we were trying to do and we couldn't hit any shots," O'Neal said after the Lakers watched a replay of the game on Tuesday. "I didn't play well individually, we didn't play well.

"They've got three strong, long guys doubling me. In Game 1, we lived by the jump shot. In Game 2, we died by the jump shot. We really didn't get good shots."

Wallace, thrown out of Game 1 after getting two technical fouls, went 3-for-3 from 3-point range in the 20-0 run, which left what had been a boisterous Staples Center crowd in stunned silence.

The controversy surrounding Dunleavy's unsuccessful "Hack-a-Shaq" tactics in Game 1 was forgotten in the magnitude of Los Angeles' loss.

The Lakers' vulnerability has been on display before in the playoffs — in two losses in Sacramento, in a one-point victory over Phoenix in Los Angeles and in a one-sided loss in Phoenix. But the Lakers weren't just vulnerable Monday night, they were awful.

McAdoo elected to Hall of Fame

MIAMI (AP) — Bob McAdoo, a three-time NBA scoring champion, postponed the celebration.

As good as it felt when told he had been elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame, McAdoo was too disappointed from the Miami Heat's playoff loss Sunday to the New York Knicks to revel in the honor.

"It's the ultimate goal for any player," McAdoo, an assistant coach Miami coach Pat Riley the last five years, said Tuesday. "It means all your hard work — your successes and failures — hasn't be in vain. It's something your kids and grandchildren and on down the line ... they can go see your name, your face and your jersey."

There are 16 nominees for this year's Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass. The hall will announce the results Wednesday.

However, McAdoo's election was disclosed at a Miami Heat news conference. In addition, Arizona coach Lute Olson failed to be elected, the Tucson Citizen reported, and James Worthy acknowledged he did not make it, either.

"I had my fingers crossed, but that's the way it goes," Worthy said. "At least one North Carolina guy got in and I am very happy for Bob. He was a guy who took me under his wing when I came to the Lakers and helped me out. He's quite a man."

McAdoo spent 14 years in the NBA, playing with seven teams and retiring in 1986. He was a four-time All-Star, a three-time scoring champion and the league MVP in 1975. He won two titles with Los Angeles Lakers, including Riley's first in 1982.

The nominees also include players Isiah Thomas, Bobby Jones, Sidney Moncrief, Drazen Dalipagic; coaches Pat Head Summitt, Cathy Rush, Morgan Wootten, Jim Phelan, Mirko Novosel; contributors C.M. Newton and Junius Kellogg; and veterans Grady Lewis and Danny Biasone.

Garnett responds through 'Net to fans' support after Sealy's death

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Garnett turned to the Internet to express his thoughts on the death of Malik Sealy, his teammate and childhood idol who was killed in a car accident.

"(It's) messed up that my man's gone, but I know he's gone to a better place and that's what's keeping me so strong," Garnett wrote in response to fans' condolences on his Web page.

"I think of the good times both on and off the court. I feel so special because my dream of not only playing in the NBA came true, but to play with a guy who I grew up trying to be like, my life is so complete, I only wish ya'll were me and that ya'll could have been around him like I was blessed to be."

Garnett has not spoken to the media since Sealy was killed while heading home from Garnett's 24th birthday celebration. Garnett's personal manager, Michael Moore, said Garnett planned a news conference this week.

On Monday, the State Patrol arrested Souksangouane Phengsene, 43, of Minneapolis, who remained under guard at Hennepin County Medical Center, where he has been hospitalized since the crash. Investigators have until Wednesday to present the case to the Hennepin County attorney's office for formal charges.

Investigators said Phengsene was driving the wrong way on Highway 100 early Saturday. His pickup smashed into Sealy's sport utility truck in the Minneapolis suburb of St. Louis Park, killing the 30-year-old player who helped the Minnesota Timberwolves post their best season in franchise history this year.

An emergency worker reported that Phengsene, who was convicted of drunken driving in Des Moines, Iowa, three years ago, smelled of alcohol as he was extricated from the wreckage. Blood test results were pending.

The Timberwolves are planning to fly to New York this week for Sealy's funeral in Manhattan. Sealy starred at St. John's before being drafted by the Indiana Pacers in 1992.

Gold falls

Gold closed in London at $274.10 bid per troy ounce, down from $274.70 on Monday.

Gold rose $1.80 cents in Hong Kong to close at $275.85.

Silver closed in London at $4.98 bid per troy ounce, unchanged from Monday.

Stocks tumble

The Nasdaq Composite Index tumbled to a six-month low, led by Cisco Systems Inc. and Intel Corp. on concern higher interest rates will crimp profits. Georgia-Pacific Group and Boise Cascade Corp. fell with other paper and forest-products stocks after analysts said rising interest rates could hurt spending for their products. The Nasdaq Composite fell for a fifth day, dropping 199.59, or 6 percent, to 3164.62, its lowest close since Nov. 10. The Standard & Poor's 500 Index fell 26.87, or 2 percent, to 1373.85. The Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped 120.28, or 1 percent, to 10,422.27. About seven stocks fell for every six that rose on the New York Stock Exchange.

Dollar drops

The dollar fell against the yen and euro on speculation higher interest rates will slow economic growth in the world's largest economy, damping demand for U.S. financial assets. Stocks have fallen in the week since the Federal Reserve lifted its benchmark lending rate by half a point and hinted more increases lie ahead. That could lead to a weaker currency, as a record U.S. trade deficit leaves foreigners with more dollars to unload if they decide against investing in the U.S. The U.S. currency fell to 106.49 yen, from 107.12 yesterday. The dollar slumped as far as 91.55 U.S. cents per euro, the weakest since May 15, from 90.31 late yesterday. It later pared those losses to trade at 90.59 cents per euro. The euro fell to 96.48 yen from 96.71.

Crude lowers

Crude plummeted for a second straight trading day after falling back through the $30-a-barrel level on Friday. Analysts cited as the latest catalyst remarks by OPEC president Ali Rodriguez, Venezuela's oil minister, who said the organization may look at raising production for the second time in three months when it meets in June.

The expiring June crude contract fell $1.28 to $28.61 a barrel.

Microsoft ruling

The judge who found Microsoft Corp. illegally defended its Windows monopoly is likely to signal tomorrow whether he will consider breaking up the company or just focus on curbing the software giant's conduct. What U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson billed as a hearing on proposed remedies in the two-year-old antitrust case could turn into a day of wrangling over how much time the court should give Microsoft to gather evidence to counter the breakup proposal made by the U.S. Justice Department and 17 states. Microsoft, calling the government's breakup proposal "radical" and "unwarranted," has sought a six-month delay of any hearings on the plan, saying it needs time to prepare a rebuttal.

Austin sees more Internet firm layoffs

■ This week alone, four Austin-area start-up companies have slashed jobs.

By Connie Mabin
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The high-tech job market continues to boom in the city and the rest of the state despite recent layoffs by four Austin-based Internet companies, according to the Texas Workforce Commission.

"There's a real demand right now for high-tech workers," commission spokesman Larry Jones said Tuesday. "I don't see the loss of these smaller 'dot coms' affecting the entire workforce."

On Monday, online furniture retailer living.com Inc. announced it was laying off 13 percent of its work force, making it at least the fourth Austin-area start-up company to slash jobs in recent weeks.

But data continues to point to Texas as a high-tech mecca, Jones said.

The state added more than 132,000 high-technology jobs from 1993 to 1998, increasing the tech workforce to 411,000.

That's second only to California, according to a study released last week by the American Electronics Association and the Nasdaq Stock Market.

But the boon has not helped living.com, which announced in a statement that it will cut about 50 jobs at its Austin headquarters, its New York offices and at its North Carolina warehouse and customer-service center.

The company, which has received nearly $42 million in private financing, wants to reduce its costs in view of the shaky market for Internet retailers.

Last week, Internet health site drkoop.com Inc. confirmed it had cut its work force by 35 percent since early April, including 30 recent layoffs, and is considering further cuts.

Also last week, online pharmacy Rx.com Inc. cut 20 of its 175 employees. Two weeks ago, auto seller carOrder.com Inc. said it will eliminate 100 full- and part-time jobs in Austin.

Each of the companies has been dealing with problems ranging from ailing finances to battles with the state.

Drkoop.com, co-founded by former U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, has seen its stock price plummet since the company acknowledged it was running low on cash and auditors warned they had serious concerns about drkoop.com's ability to keep operating.

CarOrder.com was founded in 1998 with the goal of buying 200 dealerships nationwide in five years to serve as distribution centers for their Internet-based sales.

But the company has suffered under sharp competition and from a spotty customer-service record.

It also been frustrated by state regulators in Texas, who have used anti-brokering laws to block it and other Internet car dealers from selling cars to residents.

Internet companies nationwide are cutting jobs as the fluctuating stock market has hurt bottom lines and halted many initial public offering plans.

Software maker J.D. Edwards also announced Monday that it cut 800 jobs, or 13 percent of its workforce. And earlier this month, KBkids.com also laid off workers. Fellow toy sellers toysmart.com shut down Friday.

TASTING VICTORY

AP Photo
Triathlete Michael Scott rests and drinks Gatorade in the Gatorade Sports Science Institute lab May 9 in Barrington, Ill., after riding an exercise bike for 90 minutes.

Science of sweat pays off for Gatorade

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press

BARRINGTON, Ill. — Whether it's science or marketing, no rival or copycat has been able to crack Gatorade's special mystique, its claim to be scientifically formulated and athletically proven.

Quaker Oats, parent of the top-selling sports drink, nurtures the image carefully.

At its research-and-development facility in this northwestern Chicago suburb, perspiration and perspirers are the focus of a building that serves as combination scientific laboratory, testing center and Gatorade shrine.

A loyal cadre of local triathletes, runners and cyclists work out; for a fee, in a room full of treadmills and other exercise machines at the Gatorade Sports Science Institute. Scientists collect their sweat, analyze their body fluids, monitor how much they drink and question them exhaustively about taste preferences.

Blood is taken intravenously; saliva, urine and breath samples are gathered; stomach fluid is collected through a tube; rectal temperatures are taken — all in the name of Gatorade research.

In a glass-paneled room underground, truly devoted subjects run for three hours in 80-degree heat without being allowed to drink Gatorade or anything else.

A poster displayed next to stacks of exercise science and sports medicine studies warns of the ubiquitous foe: "Water does not give you all you need."

The 15-year-old Gatorade Sports Science Institute has stepped up its research efforts, building an influential network of athletic and sports medicine contacts.

Quaker's chairman and chief executive officer, Robert S. Morrison, says he was "flabbergasted" to learn of the weight of scientific machinery behind his big new brand when he arrived from Kraft Foods in October 1997.

Now, interviewed in Quaker's 34-story downtown headquarters overlooking the Chicago River, he speaks as a convert, calling science "the foundation" of Gatorade. At the same time, he acknowledges, "I could tell you that what's built the brand is marketing."

Long the thirst-quencher of choice for jocks and other heavy sweaters, Gatorade has become a powerhouse product in supermarkets and convenience stores. It has only one real rival.

"The biggest enemy is tap water," pronounced Robert S. Morrison, chief of Gatorade's parent, Quaker Oats Co., during a recent interview.

Morrison wasn't joking. Gatorade has effectively declared war on water.

The company has rolled out more flavors to expand Gatorade distribution. Coming off strong debuts for its Gatorade Frost and Fierce brands the last two summers, it also has introduced a flavored "fitness water" called Propel, a lower-calorie Gatorade spin-off.

That aggressive strategy is projected to help pad Gatorade's U.S. sales by two-thirds, or $1 billion, over the next five years. The beverage already commands 82 percent of the U.S. sports drink market and had 1999 worldwide sales of $1.83 billion.

Gatorade may be quietly moving in on Coke and Pepsi, too. Having conquered the sports drink arena, Gatorade has eased into the mainstream beverage market.

"It's disguised as a sports beverage, so as not to anger Coke," says analyst Nomi Ghez of Goldman, Sachs & Co. "But in reality it's a major entry in the general beverage industry. You see kids walking around drinking Gatorade — they're not sweating."

BUSINESS SCENE

Ichabod's is espresso bar, bakery and newsstand under one roof

By Mella McEwen

An espresso bar, bakery and newsstand are all rolled into a new store named ICHABOD'Sm which has opened in Cornerstone Shopping Center at Loop 250 and Midland Drive.

"Midland needed something like this," said owner Nancy Bryson. "There's not many places to go and have just dessert and coffee."

She roasts her own coffee beans to make all kinds of specialty espresso drinks, and she also offers all kinds of teas — from chai teas to loose teas and Italian sodas. The bakery carries breakfast pastries like danishes and muffins and pies, cakes and breads. The newstand sells newspapers, magazines and some paperback books.

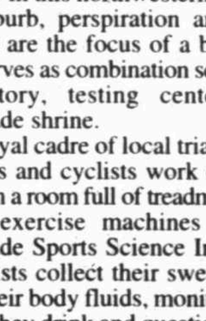

To offer a local flavor, she said local artists will be able to hang their work on the store's walls and participate in special events, like poetry night or jazz-and-blues weekends.

Hours are 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, 7 a.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Just opened at 615 W. Wall St. is CAFE CENTRAL.

Manager Steve Martin said that Cafe Central serves steak, seafood and sandwiches.

There are daily lunch and dinner specials with international dishes, different ones each day.

"Mexican, Italian, French, Spanish, Portuguese ... we do it all," he said.

He said it has a nice dining area — complete with white tablecloths and cloth napkins — that is secluded from the lounge area with its large rectangular bar and 24 stools and pool tables. A separate gaming area lets customers play shuffleboard and darts. There is also a stage and dance floor and live music will be featured on weekends.

The owner is Kang Chin, more commonly known as "King Kong."

Lunch is served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and dinner from 5 to 10 p.m. The lounge is open all day, from 11 a.m. to midnight Monday through Thursday, from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday and noon to midnight on Sunday.

Midlander Shawn Flesher and wife Betty have become the franchise owners of DR. VINYL in Midland and Odessa.

A mobile service, Dr. Vinyl reconditions and repairs vinyl, leather, fabric and plastics in the home, office or in automobiles and also fixes stars and rock dings in automobile windshields.

After 19 years with Halliburton, which transferred him to Midland in 1997, Flesher said he was ready to start a new business or buy an existing one.

"I went to look for a business to buy in the Midland area and Sunbelt Brokers had a brochure on this, so I called and checked on it. It seemed like something I'd enjoy doing," Flesher said, noting that he has always enjoyed working on cars.

Already, he has gotten regular work from several local dealerships.

He can be reached at 520-4452.

Vicki Beggs, a partner in husband Steve's business, said that the new office is 3,800 square feet, compared with 900 square feet in the former location in Fairmont Shopping Center, 3323 N. # Holt's pitching, hitting help snap Astros' losing streak

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Chris Holt won for the first time since April 28 and hit a two-run single as the Houston Astros snapped a seven-game losing streak with a 10-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Tuesday night.

Holt (2-6) had lost three straight decisions since pitching the Astros' only other complete game of the season on April 28 with a one-hit, 7-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Holt went into the season with no complete games in his career.

Holt's single to left field in the second inning put the Astros ahead 3-2. Holt allowed eight hits, struck out seven and walked four.

Holt was impressive in the seventh. After yielding a single and walk, he struck out Doug Glanville, Ron Gant and Bobby Abreu.

Randy Wolf (3-3) was the winning pitcher at Enron Field in a 4-1 victory over the Astros to open the regular season April 7. He lasted only three innings Tuesday, allowing six runs and eight hits as the Phillies lost for the eighth time in 10 games.

Wolf helped his own cause with a two-run single in the second inning, the first RBIs of his major league career in 47 major league at-bats. Mickey Morandini walked and went to third on Desi Relaford's double before Wolf's hit.

The Astros got the lead right back in the second on an RBI double by Tim Bogar and Holt's two-run single.

Wolf got the first two batters out in the third, but walked Ken Caminiti before Moises Alou hit his sixth homer. Richard Hidalgo followed with a single and scored on Tony Eusebio's double for a 6-2 lead.

Craig Biggio's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk by Jason Boyd gave the Astros two more runs in the seventh. They made it 10-2 in the eighth on Roger Cedeno's two-run homer.

Cardinals 10, Marlins 3

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire and Ray Lankford gave the St. Louis Cardinals back-to-back homers for the 13th time this year, one shy of the NL record, in a victory over the Florida Marlins.

McGwire hit his major-league leading 19th homer leading off the second against Ryan Dempster (5-3) and Lankford followed with his eighth on the next pitch.

Jim Edmonds added his 14th in the third inning as the Cardinals hiked their major league-leading total to 92 while winning for the fifth time in seven games.

Darryl Kile (7-2) allowed two runs and four hits and in eight innings, while striking out a season-high 11.

Mets 5, Padres 3

SAN DIEGO — Mike Piazza had pinch-hit, two-run homer off Trevor Hoffman (0-1) with two outs in the 10th inning.

New York wasted a 3-0 lead and starter Al Leiter left with a no-decision, but the Mets improved to 9-0 in games started by the left-hander.

Winner Turk Wendell (4-2) gave up two hits in two innings, and Armando Benitez pitched the 10th for his 12th save in 13 chances.

Brewers 7, Braves 6

MILWAUKEE — Jose Hernandez hit his second grand slam in four days and Jamey Wright (1-0) won his Milwaukee debut, allowing five runs and two hits in 5 1-3 innings as the Brewers won for the sixth time in seven games.

Milwaukee got three innings of near-flawless relief from David Weathers and Bob Wickman, who got his fifth save in six chances. Jeromy Burnitz also had a two-run homer for the Brewers.

Kevin Millwood (4-3) allowed six runs and four hits in three innings.

Rockies 10, Cubs 7

DENVER — Neifi Perez hit a go-ahead, two-run homer, backing Brian Bohanon's 3 2-3 innings of shutout relief as Colorado rallied from a 6-0 deficit It was the eighth straight home game the Rockies scored 10 or more runs, extending their own major league record.

Perez gave the Rockies a 7-6 lead with his homer off Daniel Garibay (0-1). Bohanon (2-3) gave up one hit and struck out one after taking over for Rolando Arrojo.

Tom Goodwin also homered for Colorado, and Jeffrey Hammonds' three-run homer in the eighth brought the Rockies to double digits.

■ AL Roundup

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chad Curtis and David Segui homered, and the Texas Rangers won their seventh straight game, 4-3 over Kansas City on Tuesday night.

Rick Helling (7-1) went seven-plus innings and won his fifth straight start as the Rangers moved within percentage points of first-place Seattle, a 4-2 loser in Baltimore, in the AL West. The Rangers have won 10 of 12, and their 16-5 record in May is the best in the majors.

Carlos Febles hit his first home run of the year leading off the eighth, making it 4-3 and bringing Jeff Zimmerman from the bullpen to replace Helling, who has not lost since April 25. He gave up three runs and six hits.

Zimmerman gave up a double to Mike Sweeney, but he was stranded there. Kansas City got runners to first and third with one out in the ninth, but John Wetteland got out of the jam for his 11th save, and his sixth of the seven-game winning streak.

Curtis hit a three-run homer with two outs in the third off Miguel Batista (2-2). Jason McDonald walked and Luis Alicea singled before Curtis hit a 2-1 pitch 432 feet into the visitor's bullpen.

In the Kansas City fourth, Joe Randa singled and Dave McCarty homered to make it 3-2.

In the sixth, Segui hit his fifth homer, the league-leading 78th given up by Kansas City.

Orioles 4, Mariners 2

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, and the Baltimore Orioles ended a four-game losing streak by defeating the Seattle Mariners.

The Orioles blew a 2-0 lead in the top of the inning, but Ripken's shot off Jose Mesa (2-3) enabled Baltimore to salvage only its third win in 18 games.

Blue Jays 3, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Chris Carpenter outpitched Pedro Martinez, and Tony Batista homered in Toronto's victory over Boston, the third consecutive loss for the Red Sox.

Martinez (7-2) allowed a season-high seven hits and three earned runs in eight innings as his major league-leading ERA rose from 0.90 to 1.19. Martinez, who struck out seven and walked three, had not given up three earned runs in 18 starts since last Aug. 19, a span that included last year's playoffs.

Devil Rays 6, Athletics 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — John Flaherty homered and Jose Canseco drove in three runs to back the strong relief pitching of Bryan Rekar in Tampa Bay's victory over Oakland.

Rekar (1-2) allowed one run and six hits in a club-record 5 2-3 innings of relief after starter Dave Eiland injured his left hip in the first inning.

Flaherty hit a solo homer off Omar Olivares (3-5) in the second inning and added an RBI single in Tampa Bay's two-run third. Canseco had a RBI single off the A's starter in the third and singled off T.J. Mathews with the base loaded to drive in two more runs in the seventh.

White Sox 8, Yankees 2

CHICAGO — Brook Fordyce celebrated his return to the majors with a three-run homer off Roger Clemens, one of five Chicago homers against New York.

The White Sox hit three homers off Clemens (4-4), sending the Yankees to their eighth loss in 11 games. Chicago has won seven of nine.

Tigers 10, Indians 4

DETROIT — Bobby Higginson and Dean Palmer keyed a six-run Detroit fifth with consecutive home runs against Cleveland.

Alex Ramirez homered for the Indians, who have hit home runs in 14 straight games and were coming off a 7-2 homestand.

Willie Blair (2-0) relieved starter C.J. Nitkowski and gave up one run and three hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Angels 7, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Mo Vaughn and Darin Erstad homered as Anaheim chased Joe Mays early in beating Minnesota.

Brian Cooper (1-0), making his first major league start since last Sept. 29, scattered five hits in six innings for his first victory since Sept. 7, when he won his major league debut against the Chicago White Sox at Anaheim.

GOLF: Chaps hold very slim lead

(From 1C)

Jamie McQuaker scored a 78 for the Chaps.

"It took a lot of courage to stay focused today with the conditions of the greens as they were," said Poss of his team. "I was proud of the team effort."

With a one-stroke lead there is no room to relax in this four-round tournament. Playing on a course as difficult as this one, anything can happen.

"There are seven teams within three strokes of each other so it's still anyone's tournament to win," Poss said. "We must be better prepared tomorrow and play more intelligently than we did today. The course is in great condition and if the pin placements are more reasonable, there will be much better scoring opportunities the rest of the week.

"There is much more depth in the field this year and the fact that there are seven teams within three shots of the lead is indicative of this. Wednesday will be vitally important to us, and we must put up a good score."

IRVIN: Star still hasn't decided

(From 1C)

you don't replace that," quarterback Troy Aikman said. "I don't know when Michael's going to make the decision, but whatever it is he's certainly going to be missed, no question about that."

Cowboys officials said they have heard nothing official from Irvin and the decision is up to him. Irvin does not have to make a retirement decision by next week when teams announce their June cuts.

Dallas already made plans for life without the 34-year-old star receiver when it traded for Joey Galloway in February.

"He's had a wonderful career and I respect his career, but he's making some very difficult decisions on what he's going to do and I don't think it would be appropriate for me to talk a whole lot about it," said Cowboys coach Dave Campo, who coached at the University of Miami from 1987-88 while Irvin was there. "It's a decision that's basically out of my hands. For me to talk about it until anything's official would be not a good idea."

As for when a decision will be made, no one really knows except Irvin, who was not at the Cowboys' minicamp in April nor either one of their quarterback schools this month.

"It's up to Michael to comment on that," said Irvin's agent, Steve Endicott. "Michael hasn't done anything yet or said anything yet."

Irvin has established himself over 12 seasons as one of the NFL's best receivers. His final catch last season was the 750th of his career, tying him for No. 10 in league history. He holds every significant receiving record for the Cowboys and is ninth in receiving yards in NFL history.

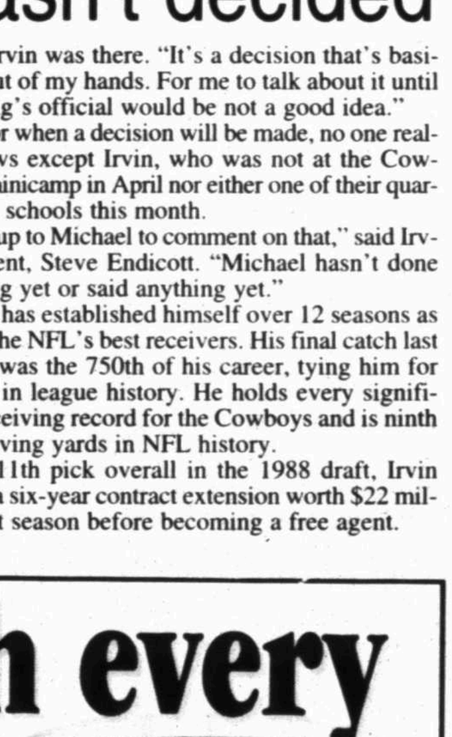

The 11th pick overall in the 1988 draft, Irvin signed a six-year contract extension worth $22 million last season before becoming a free agent.

Prosecutors link Lewis to killings by trail of blood

By Chad Roedemeier
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Baltimore Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis squeezed a tennis ball in his hand and watched quietly Tuesday as prosecutors tried to link him to a double murder through "a trail of blood."

Fulton County District Attorney Paul Howard used his opening statement to tell jurors that blood from one of the two victims was found in Lewis' limousine and in his hotel room after a fight that led to the stabbing deaths of two men.

Lawyers for Lewis said he acted as peacemaker in the Jan. 31 fight and didn't stab or hit anyone.

Lewis, the leading tackler in the NFL last season, is charged with murder along with friends Reginald Oakley and Joseph Sweeting for the deaths of Jacinth Baker and Richard Lollar.

The victims were stabbed in a melee after a post-Super Bowl party at a nightclub in Atlanta. Lewis, 25, was in town to watch the game and take part in Super Bowl activities.

Some prosecution witnesses Tuesday seemed to actually help the defense case.

Melissa Keeler, who watched the killing from her apartment window, described the vicious attack on the two victims, but could not link any of the defendants to the attack.

Keeler said all of the attackers were over 6 feet tall — Sweeting is about 5-6 and Oakley is 5-11. And she said none of the attackers wore their hair in braids, as Sweeting did at the time of the attack. She also could not pick any of the attackers out of a photo lineup that included the defendants.

Another witness, Tony Williams, told jurors he had the receipt to one of the knives believed to be used in the fight. Lewis had scribbled his phone number on the receipt when he saw Williams — a family friend — while signing autographs at a sporting goods store. But the bulk of Williams' testimony centered on investigators' rude treatment of him and a racial slur one officer made during their interview.

Two other witnesses — both workers at the store — told of selling the knife to a man that fit the description of Sweeting.

Some legal experts thought the three defendants would blame each other for the killings, but the defense attorneys generally stuck together and used their opening statements to cast doubt on the prosecutor's case.

Lewis' attorney, Ed Garland, noted that police have never found two men in Lewis' limousine, and that several witnesses disagree with the prosecution's star witness, limousine driver Duane Fassett.

Defense attorneys also said the prosecution does not have a single witness who saw any of the defendants holding a knife at the scene of the stabbing deaths.

Howard said the knives were used in a punching motion — not an overhand stab — making it difficult for any witnesses to see the knives.

The prosecution said the limousine driver will testify that he saw Lewis punch Lollar, which Garland says is not true.

"All of Ray Lewis' actions were actions to attempt to stop the fight, to attempt to break up the fight," Garland said.

NFL owners approve new player conduct program

BALTIMORE (AP) — NFL owners on Tuesday approved a program that refines and expands the current league policy on player conduct.

"We evaluated what we have been doing and feel we already have the right kinds of programs in place," said Harold Henderson, chairman of the NFL management council. "What we did today was explain to the owners some enhancements and modifications to the program."

Among the changes:

—The league wide screening process of players will be expanded to include testing, interviewing and evaluation at the annual scouting combine. There will also be a broader list of college players (beyond combine invitees) submitted for background investigations.

—A mandatory intervention process to support and counsel at-risk incoming players, as identified by the league wide screening process.

—The training of coaches to identify at-risk players will be expanded through the use of professional counselors.

—The "Violent Crime Policy" will cover other criminal conduct and will be renamed the "Personal Conduct Policy."

"The structure is there for a very uniform, adequate and useful system," said Henderson, noting that the new program has met the approval of the player's union.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue did not address the media. He is expected to speak Wednesday upon the conclusion of the two-day session.

While the NFL is serious about stemming the outbreak of player violence, Henderson suggested that the problem should be dealt with first and foremost by each of the 31 teams.

"It's the responsibility of each owner to step up to the plate and make sure their club has the right kind of resources," he said. "The individual team certainly has to have a major role. It's impossible to do it remote from Park Avenue. We'll try to coordinate it and keep the teams consistent."

Mickelson tries to rise to challenging height set by Tiger

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

Winning only reminds Phil Mickelson how high the bar has been raised.

His come-from-behind victory in the Colonial was his third of the year on the PGA Tour, the second time in his young career he has won three times before the end of May. Only eight other players since 1980 have done that.

What does that mean?

That he's tied with Tiger Woods for most victories on tour, and still trailing Woods by more than $1 million on the money list.

Mickelson thought he had a banner season four years ago. He won four times and finished second on the money list only when Tom Lehman surpassed him on the last week by claiming the lucrative Tour Championship.

"It's amazing how in the last year or two, it seems as if the standard has been raised," Mickelson said. "At the time, four wins was a lot. Now, four wins is a nice year."

David Duval knows the feeling.

Last year, he became the first player since Johnny Miller in 1974 to win four times before the Masters. By the end of the season, he was a forgotten man. Woods closed out the year with four consecutive victories, giving him eight for the season.

Four victories is better than just a "nice year." But as Mickelson points out, "It's nothing like what we've seen last year."

"I think the bars are raised a little bit higher, and I think that's good," said Mickelson, who turns 30 next month during the U.S. Open. "Whether it's a conscious effort or a subconscious effort, guys are really trying to shoot lower scores and win more tournaments, and not be satisfied with a good finish."

Mickelson has never been satisfied with second.

Along with winning the U.S. Amateur and three NCAA titles, he became the first "can't miss" prospect of the decade by winning the 1991 Tucson Open as a junior at Arizona State. Then, he won at least once in every full season on the PGA Tour for six seasons.

Whether he has lived up to his potential depends on the perspective.

Since the youth of Jack Nicklaus, only three other players have won at least 16 tour events before their 30th birthday — Tom Watson (16), Miller (17) and Woods (18 and counting). The difference is that Miller, Watson and Woods could count major championships in that mix.

Mickelson is 0-for-31 majors heading into Pebble Beach.

When he won Tucson as an amateur, he figured that 16 victories by the time he turned 30 was realistic. Then again, he thought he would have won a major — or more — by now.

"Certainly, I'm pleased with the career I've had," Mickelson said.

But while Woods has clearly raised the level of performance, Mickelson has shown that he, too, is capable of reaching higher.

His streak of six straight years with at least one victory ended last year with only a few shining moments. He was runner-up to Payne Stewart in the U.S. Open, and runner-up to Woods in the NEC Invitational at Firestone after nearly making up a seven-stroke deficit in the final round.

It was a difficult year for Mickelson. The first half of the season, his mind was on his wife, Amy, who had a difficult first pregnancy. The second half was an adjustment to fatherhood. There was little time for the kind of work he usually devotes to his game.

"I analyzed my game and what I needed to improve on," he said. "I felt that from 150 yards in, I wasn't getting the ball close enough. I wasn't making enough birdies."

Mickelson worked hard in the offseason, put his old Ping wedges back in the bag and started playing like the old Phil.

He is second on tour in putting, up from 20th a year ago. He leads in birdie conversion at 37 percent, up from 33 percent last year, which Mickelson attributes to hitting it close to the hole.

The best example of that was in the Buick Invitational. His seven-stroke lead had evaporated against Woods when Mickelson hit a 9-iron from 116 yards into 2 feet for a birdie that sent him to his first victory in 18 months.

Four years ago, Mickelson might have felt comfortable with himself, that it was only a matter of time before a major championship followed.

Now, he is looking to take his game up one more notch.

He is taking the next two weeks off, sticking to his plan of playing the week before every major to stoke his competitive spirit.

"I look at it as, 'Hey, I've got some momentum,'" Mickelson said. "Let's carry this through. Let's continue to work hard and hit the shots I've been hitting, and bring this into the majors."

And maybe this time, clear the bar that matters.

Navratilova makes victorious return to professions tennis

Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — It looked as if Martina Navratilova never retired.

Back after 5 1/2 years, Navratilova made an impressive return to professional tennis Tuesday as she and South Africa's Mariaan de Swardt won their opening-round doubles match in the Madrid Open in straight sets.

The winningest player in tennis history and her new partner beat Japan's Rika Hiraki and Meghann Shaughnessy of the United States, 6-3, 7-5, in 69 minutes.

Afterward, the 43-year-old Navratilova said she had been "nerve-wracked. ... I expected to have more fun than I did."

It was Navratilova's first preparation for a return to Wimbledon, where she has won 19 titles, one shy of the record. She also is scheduled to play doubles at the French Open next week.

"I haven't come back. I decided to play Wimbledon and I wanted to prepare for it," Navratilova said. "I never said I would never play doubles again. I retired from singles."

Prior to retiring, Navratilova won 167 singles titles, more than any man or woman, as well as 165 doubles. A victory in the doubles at Wimbledon this year would tie Navratilova with Billie Jean King for most championships won at the All England Club.

Navratilova and De Swardt, playing their first tournament match, broke serve for 2-0 before Navratilova was broken, then swept the final three games for the first set.

With Navratilova's mother in the crowd, Hiraki and Shaughnessy took a 3-0 in the second and built a 4-1 lead. But Navratilova and De Swardt rallied for the victory, breaking for 6-5 and wrapping up the match on Navratilova's serve.

Navratilova said she was unhappy with her serve but more so with her return, which she described as "very iffy."

"The serve is always worse if you haven't played for a while and I was tossing the ball. ... I was really fishing," she said. "The part that disappointed me most was my return. All in all, it's something to build on. Hopefully I'll get better."

Navratilova said she has no plans for after Wimbledon, although she ruled out playing singles.

"That's too much work," she said. "This is fun for a couple of months and then I'll go back to (ice) hockey.

"I just wanted to be on that central court in Wimbledon again. ... That's a pretty special place. And when I get there I don't want to look foolish."

Earlier in the day Ai Sugiyama of Japan put up with sweltering Madrid heat to beat Spain's Maria Antonia Sanchez 7-5, 7-5, while American Kristina Brandi downed Slovakia's Katarina Srebotnik 6-4, 7-6 (5).

Last year's runner-up Paola Suarez of Argentina won her first-round match against Erika De Lone of the United States, 6-2, 6-4.

Rana rules himself out of running as IOC president

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Mario Vazquez Rana, one of the world's most powerful Olympic leaders, announced Tuesday he would not be a candidate to succeed Juan Antonio Samaranch as president of the IOC.

Vazquez Rana, the wealthy Mexican media magnate who heads the umbrella group of 199 national Olympic committees, has long harbored ambitions to take over the International Olympic Committee.

While insisting he has all the qualities to be president, Vazquez Rana cited his age and reluctance to move to the IOC's home city of Lausanne, Switzerland, as the reasons for ruling himself out as a candidate.

"Obviously I have all the merits to be president of the IOC," he said at the start of weeklong Olympic meetings. "But the next president must live in Lausanne, and I can't do that. I love my country. Being out of Mexico for more than two weeks makes me cry."

TEXAS NATURAL RESOURCE CONSERVATION COMMISSION

NOTICE OF APPLICATION AND PRELIMINARY DECISION

PERMIT NO. 11247-001

APPLICATION AND PRELIMINARY DECISION. Airline Mobile Home Park, Ltd., 700 N. Grant, Suite 600, Odessa, Texas 79761, has applied to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) for a renewal of Permit No. 11247-001, which authorizes the disposal of treated domestic wastewater at a daily average flow not to exceed 25,000 gallons per day via irrigation of 9.83 acres of nonpublic access grassland. This permit will not authorize a discharge of pollutants into waters in the State. This application was submitted to the TNRCC on June 16, 1999.

The wastewater treatment facilities and disposal site are located on the north side of U.S. Highway 80 approximately 1.25 miles west of the Loop 250 overpass over U.S. Highway 80 in Midland County, Texas. The disposal site is located in the drainage area of Colorado River Below Lake J.B. Thomas in Segment No. 1412 of the Colorado River Basin.

The TNRCC executive director has completed the technical review of the application and prepared a draft permit. The draft permit, if approved, would establish the conditions under which the facility must operate. The executive director recommends issuance of this draft permit. The permit application, executive director's preliminary decision as contained in the technical summary and/or fact sheet, and draft permit are available for viewing and copying at Midland County Courthouse, 200 North Main Street, Midland, Texas 79701.

MAILING LISTS. You may ask to be placed on a mailing list to obtain additional information regarding this application. You may also ask to be on a county-wide mailing list to receive public notices for TNRCC permits in the county. To get on a mailing list, send a request to the Office of the Chief Clerk, at the address listed below.

PUBLIC COMMENT / PUBLIC MEETING. You may submit public comments or request a public meeting about this application. The purpose of a public meeting is to provide the opportunity to submit written or oral comment or to ask questions about the application. The TNRCC will hold a public meeting if the executive director determines that there is a significant degree of public interest in the application or if requested by a local legislator. A public meeting is not a contested case hearing.

Written public comments and requests for a public meeting should be submitted to the Office of the Chief Clerk, MC 105, TNRCC, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, TX 78711-3087 within 30 days of the date of newspaper publication of the notice.

OPPORTUNITY FOR A CONTESTED CASE HEARING. After the deadline for public comments, the executive director will consider the comments and prepare a response to all relevant and material, or significant public comments. The response to comments, along with the executive director's decision on the application, will be mailed to everyone who submitted public comments or who requested to be on a mailing list for this application. The mailing will also provide instructions for requesting reconsideration of the executive director's decision and for requesting a contested case hearing. A contested case hearing is a legal proceeding similar to a civil trial in a state district court.

A contested case hearing will only be granted based on disputed issues of fact that are relevant and material to the Commission's decision on the application. The TNRCC may act on this application to renew a permit without providing an opportunity for a contested case hearing if certain criteria are met. Further, the Commission will only grant a hearing on issues that were raised during the public comment period and not withdrawn. Issues that are not raised in public comments may not be considered during a hearing.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR ACTION. The executive director may issue final approval of the application unless a timely contested case hearing request or a timely request for reconsideration is filed. If a timely hearing request or request for reconsideration is filed, the executive director will not issue final approval of the permit and will forward the application and requests to the TNRCC Commissioners for their consideration at a scheduled Commission meeting.

INFORMATION. If you need more information about this permit application or the permitting process (such as being added to the mailing list), please call the TNRCC Office of Public Assistance, Toll Free, at 1-800-687-4040 or write to them at MC 105, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas, 78711-3087. General information about the TNRCC can be found at our web site at www.tnrcc.state.tx.us.

Further information may also be obtained from Airline Mobile Home Park at the address stated above or by calling Mr. Roy Allen at (915) 334-8881.
