Muleshoe

Muleshoe will welcome a new doctor. Dr. Bruce Purdy, a native of Muleshoe, will return and open his practice at West Plains Medical Center on July 5. Dr. Purdy is a 1967 graduate of Muleshoe High School and the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Purdy, Muleshoe.

Also at West Plains Medical Center, Carol O'Donald, formerly of Albuquerque, has begun work as a registered nurse. Hospital officials said they expect to move into the new hospital shortly.

Sally Rosas, 15, was treated at West Plains Medical Center Monday night for painful burns to her face and hands. Miss Rosas received the burns from a water heater.

Expected to return to his home near Muleshoe from Methodist Hospital in Lubbock is Mitch Black.

He has been hospitalized in Lubbock for approximately a week and a half. Mitch is the son of Muleshoe City Police and Mrs. Buddy Black.

A former Muleshoe resident, Mrs. Jessica P. Hall, was married Saturday morning in San Antonio to Colonel Robert Joseph Standley. The wedding was in the chapel at St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

She is the mother of college students, Lawren and Perry Hall, of Muleshoe.

Col. Standley, a widower, has four daughters. The youngest is age 16.

A group of Naval enlistees, called "The Golden Plains Company" will leave for the Naval Training Center in San Diego on Saturday, June 25.

Administering the oath and acting as speaker at induction services in Amarillo prior to leaving will be Rear Admiral Robert W. Watkins, USN.

Local Jaycees Go To Seminar At San Angelo

Several Muleshoe Jaycees have returned from a Local Officer Training Seminar in San Angelo. The seminar was conducted on campus at Angelo State University.

The school was designed to train newly elected officers to better serve in their local chapters, said a spokesman for the group. Classes included Chapter Planning and Control; Personal Skills; Building Enthusiasm; Communications; Personal Management; Project Planning and Extension.

Attending from Muleshoe were Monty Dollar, president; Hugh Young, first vice president; Kem Bales, secretary; Gary Bender, treasurer; Mack Hodges, reporter; Gene McGuire, state director; Rusty Whitt, Kenny Kittrell, and Marty McGuire, directors and members Allen Smyer and Butch Duncan.

SHOWING A GOOD FORM...The diving boards at the Muleshoe swimming pool were busy Monday as the local youths practiced their skills during swimming hours. Pool Manager Bob Graves reported that large crowds are taking advantage off the pool to cool off and sharpen up swimming skills. The pool is open daily, except Friday.

Memorial Fund For Hospital Gets New Boost

Dorothy Green, president of the Muleshoe Hospital and Nursing Home Auxiliary, said she would like to remind area residents of the Memorial Fund, established by the Auxiliary and to give some of the points.

Mrs. Green said, "It is a special fund set up to be used for something specific, either in the hospital and/or the nursing home. It is a lovely way to memorialize a loved one deceased, or to honor a loved one still living."

"We accept Memorial Gifts to honor special occasions, such as birthdays, anniversaries and other occasions, as well as a memorial to those deceased."

She added that an appropriate card will be sent to a designated person to notify them of the tax deductible gift which was made.

Also, Mrs. Green said that a gift of $100 or more will be acknowledged with a bronze plaque, which is hung in the Day Room of the nursing home. Anyone wishing to make memorials may mail their check to Dorothy Green, P. O. Box 396, Muleshoe, 79347 or call 272-3104.

Local Youth In Competition At Roundup

Texas 4-H Roundup brings together the top youth talents in the state in judging contests and various demonstrations and skill events. Their goal is to be the best in Texas.

Joining the some 1,600 4-H boys and girls who will be at Texas A&M University June 7 and 8 for the annual event were Sharla Farmer, Casey Farmer, Curtis Carpenter and Tommy Wheeler. They were accompanied to A&M by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Farmer and Bailey County Extension Agent Spencer Tanksley.

Competition is keen in the 36 events which range from public speaking and livestock judging to demonstrations on safety and use of electricity. A new contest in method demonstrations has been added that opened to all members regardless of their project interests.

A major event of 4-H Roundup is the State 4-H Food Show on June 7, which was judging of food entries. All other competition was on June 8, and the local group competed on that day.

State 4-H Roundup not only attracts a host of youth but also brings together some 500 adults, including county Extension agents, 4-H leaders, friends of 4-H, mass media representatives, contest donors and members of the board of directors of the Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation, the service organization of 4-H in the state.

"Many in 4-H consider Roundup the top event of the year," said Tanksley. "It provides an opportunity for youth to grow and develop and to share learning experiences across a broad spectrum of activities. And, really, that's what 4-H is all about."

He pointed out that Texas 4-H Roundup is one of the oldest statewide 4-H events in the nation. Through the years, it has offered challenges and thrills to those who have competed.

More activities, a gigantic, expanded county fair and additional kid's activities highlight the annual Fourth of July celebration for Muleshoe.

Activities are expected to get underway around 7:30 a.m. Monday, July 4, for residents and visitors in Muleshoe with the Pony Relay Race from Needmore to Muleshoe. The race utilizes approximately 20 horses on each side of the road, running the ditches to the edge of Muleshoe.

In the past, the Muleshoe Jaycees have hosted a ride-in, fly-in breakfast, however, the event is not scheduled for this year. Instead, the Jaycees will have a coffee booth, where they plan to serve coffee, juices and donuts to the visitors.

Muleshoe pitching and the county fair are scheduled for the courthouse lawn again, and the expanded fair will have many more booths this year, offering a myriad of activities and fun for participants.

One highlight of the county fair will be the popular dunking board. This year, several dignitaries are expected to mount the platform to be dunked.

Two Injured In Wreck Near Y-L

Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson of Muleshoe were hospitalized at West Plains Medical Center following an early evening accident Monday.

The Johnsons were on a county dirt road in Parmer County northeast of Muleshoe around 8:30 p.m. Monday when their vehicle was in an intersection collision with a vehicle driven by Brad Treider of Lazbuddie. Treider received only minor injuries and did not require treatment.

Johnson received scalp lacerations and Mrs. Johnson was treated for a knee injury and bruised ribs. Both were hospitalized for observation.

THP Trooper Andy Hernandez of Friona investigated the accident, which occurred just north of the Bailey-Parmer County line. He was assisted by THP Trooper Louis Cardinal and Deputy Sheriff Pete Black, both of Muleshoe.

Officer Hernandez said both vehicles spun into a deep ditch following the accident.

Settlers Reunion will be in the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church, with prizes given in several categories in the afternoon.

Ribbons and trophies and plaques have been awarded for the parade, kid's day activities, which will be west of the courthouse and for winners in the world's championship Mule Shoe Pitching contest, as well as the parade.

More kid's day activities are planned, with events for all ages. Included will be sack races, potato races, a bicycle decorating contest, bicycle riding contest, skate board contest, dart throws, archery and other cont. on page 3 col. 1

Two Honorary Citizens Named Here Saturday

Saturday night, during the Fellowship dinner for the Cassie Precure-Larry Shaffer wedding, a special presentation was held. Visiting the dinner were Muleshoe Mayor Ken Henry, Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture Executive Director Tommy Black and the Journal's Cleta Williams.

Two young men from the U.S. Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo., were presented Honorary Citizenships to Muleshoe.

Designated honorary citizens were Ed Collins and Jim Myer. Collins is originally from the Bronx, New York and Myer is formerly from St. Paul, Minn. Both men, who have visited with the Shafers numerous times since being at the Air Force Academy with their son, Larry, had indicated a desire to eventually make Muleshoe their home.

They said they were impressed by the friendliness of the people and liked the country around here, as well as the climate.

Mayor Henry presented both certificates designating them as honorary citizens of Muleshoe until they complete their military obligations and return to Muleshoe to make their home.

Other young men from the Air Force Academy were presented the Mule Memorial coins to commemorate their visit to Muleshoe to participate in the Sunday wedding of Larry and Cassie.

Colon Cancer Research Providing New Clues

Cancer of the colon and rectum, second to skin cancer as the most common form of cancer among American men and women, will not be so common in the future if researchers have their way.

In recent years, a growing number of important new findings have been made which translate positively into a better understanding of the disease, improved patient care and programs of early detection and prevention. They include:

- The discovery that the highest death rates from colon cancer occur in an area north of the Ohio River and east of the Mississippi River — an area deficient in the element selenium. Animal studies suggest that selenium acts as an inhibitor to the disease.

- Evidence that diets rich in fat and beef, which are popular with Americans, are implicated in increased occurrences of colorectal cancer.

- A better understanding of the colon's cellular functions which is essential for knowing how and why normal colon cells are transformed into cancerous cells.

- While a number of chemical compounds have been demonstrated to promote the development of colon cancer in test animals, several other chemical compounds have shown an ability to inhibit the cancer-causing effects of carcinogens.
- Important, new information about two heritable diseases which often represent precancerous conditions of colon cancer. Such new findings may play a key role in identifying persons at high risk for colorectal cancer from birth.

- Increased understanding of immunology and the body's natural defenses against colon cancer. It has been demonstrated that animals immunized with tumor antigens reject the transplants of colon cancer cells.

- Improved screening methods for finding colorectal cancers at the earliest stages when a cure is possible.

These are just several of many bright directions in the war against colon cancer, according to a spokesman for the National Large Bowel Cancer Project, which is operated under the direction of the National Cancer Institute and headquartered at M. D. Anderson in Houston.

Created in 1972 out of the urgent need to organize a direct attack on colon cancer, the program is designed to approve, coordinate and guide the research of numerous scientists and physicians throughout the country.

New findings such as those mentioned are the result of thousands of research hours. Working together and comparing notes, scientists continue to apply these and other findings to the ultimate goal of one day conquering this major form of cancer.

Unique Program on Equine Health Care Instructions

CHRISTINE, Texas — Within the past three years, a unique educational program in equine health care has become an integral part of the activities for girls and boys here at Camp Chaparral.

"We want our campers to learn the fundamentals of proper equine health care," camp director Bettie Seiffert explains. "Many pleasure horse owners lack the experience necessary to keep their horses in tip-top shape."

Much of the credit for the program's success goes to Camp Chaparral's consulting veterinarian from nearby Pleasanton, according to Mrs. Seiffert.

In a typical instructional session, she reports, the veterinarian might caution the campers that damage from internal parasitic worms is not readily visible and horse owners have little reason to suspect their presence.

But, he warns, these worms are almost always affecting horses adversely to some degree. "Worms such as large and small strongyles and large roundworms sap the nutrients horses need to grow and develop," the veterinarian tells the campers.

"These worms," he points out, "often burrow into the digestive tract or blood vessels where they damage tissues and, by interfering with circulation, sometimes cause clots that lead to colic, lameness and even death."

He adds that there are innumerable opportunities for internal parasites to enter a horse. "Strongyle larvae, for example, can be found in practically all equine areas ranging from pasture grass to stable floors. From the first mouthful of grass, weanling foals can pick up these parasites."

Parasitic worms and their damage can be managed, the veterinarian insists, even though worms such as strongyles lay thousands of eggs a day.

"An anthelmintic such as Banminth (pyrantel tartrate) for horses and colts, which is used at Camp Chaparral for mixture with feed by counselors and campers, has proven effective in controlling large and small strongyles and large roundworms," he reports.

In other instructional sessions, the veterinarian might explain that bad teeth in a horse leads to inadequate chewing which, in turn, can result in poor nutrition or digestive upsets.

Or perhaps, he might point out that horses are sometimes accident-prone and any contaminated wound can prove the breeding ground for deadly Clostridium tetani, making tetanus vaccinations imperative.

No matter what the subject, it's a good bet that the background in equine health that Chaparral campers receive will some day pay off for many of them in more responsible horse ownership.

Grandmother Shower Held Sunday

A Baby Blue Grandmother shower was given in honor of Mrs. Ike Wilcox Sunday, June 5, in the Tri-County community room.

The serving table was laid with a blue cloth overlaid with lace. The centerpiece was a white potted chair with blue and white carnations, greenery and fern built inside the pot. The centerpiece was given to Mrs. Jeff Meyers, mother of Ronald Isaac, by Miss Terina Whalin of Lubbock and Mrs. Terri Otwell of Baytown. Banana punch and thumbprint cookies were served from crystal appointments. Corsages of rattlers were presented to the grandmothers and to Mrs. Meyers. They were made by Mrs. Johnnie Melvin Williams.

The hostess gift was a car seat.

Bailey County Contestants Sought For State Pageant

The American Girl Pageant is now accepting applications from this county as candidates-at-large to the Texas American Girl Pageant to be held on June 7-8 at the Holiday Inn in Waco.

The American Girl Pageant is for young ladies three to 26 consisting of five categories: American Tot, three to six years; American Little Miss, seven to nine; American Miss, ten to twelve; American Teen, 13 to 17 and the American Girl, ages 18 to 26. All contestants compete in sportswear, street length party dress for the Tot, Miss and Little Miss divisions and evening gown for the Teen and Girl divisions. Contestants are evaluated by the judges also in close-up appraisals, and in talent presentations except for Tot contenders, who do not compete in talent.

Promoting the ideals of the youth of America, contestants should be personable, attractive and talented. The American Girl Pageant encourages the performing and creative arts by presenting trophies for excellence in instrumental music, voice, dancing, acting, gymnastics and baton. In addition to the state titleholders in each age category, the overall talent winners are invited to compete at

By The Cup Or The Pot-- Make Coffee Dollars Count

Homemade coffee is still a good beverage buy. The recent severe price rises for all forms of coffee, however, have made it all-important to use good coffee-making techniques to ensure that every ounce of coffee brings the maximum possible enjoyment--and the minimum waste.

According to home economists at General Foods Consumer Center, good coffee-making begins with choosing the right coffee for your taste and your coffee-making method and then brushing up on your brewing techniques and storage methods.

Perking Up Your Coffee Skills Today it's possible to buy a wide variety of coffees blended and ground for particular coffee makers, such as automatic drip machines and electric percolators.

While extraction of coffee flavor and coffee "solids" is somewhat more efficient with drip and fine grind coffees, many people prefer coffee for that inviting "wake up" aroma that wafts through the house. For perked coffee, regular grind remains the best choice, or use a variety specially made for electric or range-top percolators. Grinds finer than regular will produce more sediment in the pot which often leads to pouring that last half cup down the kitchen drain--and no one can afford to give the sink a "coffee break" these days.

While an added filter in the basket might hold back sediment from finer grinds in some percolators, with many pots the result is "flooding." When this happens, liquid does not flow through the grounds for proper extraction; water fills up the basket and washes grounds up over the top and into the beverage. This can occur even with the tight-fitting basket cover, which comes with most percolators.

Carefully check your perking time; maximum flavor is developed by perking between five and eight minutes. While a heavier brew might result from perking longer, more of the bitter oil is extracted, resulting in a less-than-pleasing coffee. Burnt flavor notes will also develop and the "aromatics" will also be removed or destroyed, according to coffee experts performing technical research for the Maxwell House Division of General Foods Corporation. If your coffee maker has a setting for strength however, set it at the stronger end of the range and adjust amounts of water and coffee to suit your taste.

It's vital to check your measuring techniques against those recommended for your pot and your own cups or mugs. Using a rounded tablespoon, a pound of ground coffee yields 60 cups; at one level tablespoon about 80 cups are obtained. With a "standard" coffee measure (two level tablespoons) one pound will make 45 cups.

In general, coffee-making directions are based on the use of six ounces of water per cup of coffee. (After perking however, because grounds retain some water, the yield is about five and one half ounces of brewed coffee per cup.) Some percolators and drip coffee makers have water measure indicators based on different amounts, such as five or five and one half ounces. Check these measures against your own cups, which could run anywhere from five ounces up to eight to 10 ounces for many mugs. You may find you are using more coffee or less water than you really need.

Start with a sparkling clean coffee maker, since oil and sediment which cling to the pot may impair flavor. Also, for best flavor always use freshly drawn cold tap water for brewed coffee, freshly boiled water for instant or freeze-dried.

Best extraction results when you use at least three fourths of the pot's capacity unless you own a coffee maker which has a specially designed basket allowing flexibility. In loading baskets for percolators or drip pots, take care to distribute the coffee evenly, not letting it mound up on one side.

And even if time is limited, take that moment or two after perking or dripping to assure that all the brewed coffee has come through the basket and won't wind up dribbling down the sink drain instead. But do remove the basket shortly, so that steam won't continue to steep the grounds and release bitter or burnt flavor notes.

Leftover Coffee--Waste Not! When using ground coffee, it's best to plan to make only the amount of coffee you'll use right away, but don't despair if you find yourself with a cup or two extra. If your automatic pot has a "keep warm" setting, use it for a maximum of one-half hour. Beyond that time bitterness can develop and you also risk loss by evaporation. Better to let the coffee cool and gently re-heat later.

Leftover coffee can be refrigerated for up to 24 hours without much loss of flavor. The cold coffee can be gently re-warmed (but never boiled) or that coffee can be added to freshly brewed coffee. But do not use the leftover coffee as part of the water to brew the new pot.

Store With Care Vacuum-packed coffee lasts almost indefinitely before opening and soluble coffees also have a long life unopened. But once the seal is opened gradual flavor loss begins.

Coffee should always be stored tightly covered; check your canister for airtightness if it's your habit to transfer ground coffee from the original container (about 40 percent of homemakers do). Stored in the coolest place in your kitchen (not near the range) not much flavor will be lost up to two weeks--perhaps a bit less if your climate is humid or your kitchen extremely warm.

For storage beyond that time (up to six to eight weeks) the refrigerator is recommended, but only if you follow certain precautions. Reseal the container tightly and re-refrigerate at once after removing what you need. If you allow the coffee to stand out at room temperature, the colder surface of the coffee can condense moisture vapor from the air. The increased moisture content of the coffee will hasten staling. Soluble coffee can also be stored in the refrigerator, following the same precautions, and will last about two months without too much loss of aromatics.

With freezing, opened ground and soluble coffees will last up to six months, but again, the same "quickly in and out" rule is all-important.

Once brewed, coffee grounds should never be dried and reused. Not only will the flavor of the brew be drastically impaired, but a potential safety problem could occur since the temperature and moisture levels involved are ideal for mold growth.

Shopping Sense That Saves Cents

Skyrocketing prices have brought more and more consumers down to earth in considering how to spend their money. Whether budgets are large or limited, working at becoming wise shoppers seems to be the norm these days.

When you consider that grocery shopping is the largest single outlay of money that many families have each week, it's important to know how much you're getting for your money for each item placed in the shopping cart.

Reminders for concerned consumers that make a lot of sense are provided from the Scott Paper Company Home Service Center. Start with a basic, yet often overlooked rule: be prepared.

Remember to make a shopping list -- not only to prevent forgetting something, but as a means of controlling what you buy and as a deterrent from purchasing unnecessary items.

Remember those coupons -- you can't use a coupon that you left at home.

Make an extra effort to check unit prices. Those are the little price per pound tags on the shelves under specified items. By using that helpful device, you'll know exactly what you are getting for your money.

Concentrate on good buys for non-food items in the same way you look for best values in the foods you buy. After a trip up and down the aisles of a supermarket, it's easy to see that shopping baskets are filled not only with food, but with a variety of non-food items as well.

It's not unusual to see

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa:

My son and his wife are taking a vacation and have asked me to care for their three children while they are away. They are two, three and five years old. I am sixty-five years old. I have offered to stay but I am wondering if I will be able to hold out, taking care of three active children.

What do you think of this?

Grandma-La.

Answer: If the vacation lasts only one week, you will probably make it but the thing to do is to get organized before you start. The first thing to do is to get all detergents and cleaners as well as pills and medicines high enough in the house to keep the little ones from reach-people checking produce to make sure it's fresh, and not wilted or bruised. Just as much attention should be given to non-edibles.

Always read the label -- for toothpaste, cleaning supplies, and other non-perishables -- just as carefully as the label on a can of string beans. A plain bottle of shampoo at 12 ounces can give you more shampoo than a fancy bottle that weighs 8 ounces -- you have a choice, so exercise that right by choosing well.

Since bathroom tissue -- an everyday necessity -- is bought on a frequent basis, choose wisely with value in mind. Although one package may appear the same as another, careful checking might reveal that one selection is a better buy than another. One with more sheets on a roll, such as ScottTissue, constitutes a true value because it lasts longer.

Just think about the essential, disposable paper products used frequently -- towels, napkins -- take time to find good buys. For instance, if you use paper napkins for most meals as well as for lunch boxes and snacks, then look for ones, such as Scott Family Napkins, that are both economical and attractive. By keeping a more watchful eye on all non-perishable items that you buy, many dollars can be saved each year.

ing them--also get any object with sharp points such as scissors and sharp sticks out of reach.

If children are playing in the yard try and arrange so that you can see them even tho' you are working in the house. Children wander away--they can be bitten by wasps, snakes or ticks, or they can fall and hurt themselves.

You will have a rewarding experience if you use common sense. If the vacation is a long one you will need help so arrange for some reliable person to take over for an afternoon or so.

ABOUT YOUR HOME

A word of advice on storing knitted garments would be to fold them carefully and store flat in a box or a drawer.

Set a large potted plant on a lazy Susan. It makes the job of turning the plant to keep growth uniform much easier.

Fill empty frozen juice cans with water and freeze for cylinders of ice to use in pitchers of cold drinks.

Rub lemon juice (or use a slice of lemon) on your hands to remove onion or fish odors.

Paper Files Are Costing Business A Bundle

American business is paying dearly for the dubious practice of storing tons of dusty paper files in space that could be put to better use.

That's the report from Bell & Howell, which made a comparative study using its own figures and those of the American Records Management Association and the Dartnell Institute of Research.

According to the study, a typical company with 500,000 documents in 20,000 file folders (25 documents to a folder) spends $29,000 a year for those files. That cost is figured on the basis of $7.00 a filing inch, a figure from both Dartnell and ARMA which includes the cost of filing cabinets, storage space and labor to maintain the files.

But that isn't all! ARMA reports that from 1 to 5% of all paper records in the average office are misfiled, and the average cost of a misfile is $75.00, most of which involves employee time spent searching for files that are out. Using a middle-of-the-road 3% misfile rate and the typical company's 20,000 file folders, that's a total of 600 misfiles a year, for a whopping annual cost of $45,000!

Adding this $45,000 misfile cost to the $29,000 annual maintenance cost brings the total yearly expense of storing 20,000 file folders to a shocking figure of $74,000!

The company said this figure can be cut dramatically with a microfilm jacket system; a micro-thin four-by-six inch plastic envelope into which strips of microfilm can be inserted. One jacket holds up to 60 documents, and 110 jackets can be filed in one inch of file space. The jackets are so thin and small they save at least 90% of the space required for paper files.

According to the study, a company with 20,000 files can convert to a microfilm jacket system at a cost of under $24,000. The conversion cost includes the new equipment needed: camera, jackets, unit for automatically filling the jackets, microfilm readers and printers, duplicator for making copies of the original jacket and so on. Also included is the space and labor cost, figuring three full-time employees for two months.

The study further shows that the first year of operating the new microfilm system will cost $18,889.68 for supplies, labor (two full-time employees) and space. Thus, the total conversion cost and first year's expense will come to a total of $42,761.94, a figure substantially lower than the annual cost with paper files.

Bell & Howell points out in the study that there is no misfile expense with microfilm jackets, since the original jacket never leaves the file. An inexpensive copy is made on a printer/processor, and only the copy leaves the file room.

The gap between paper files and microfilm widens over an extended period of time, according to the study. For example, figuring a 12% file growth over a 10-year period, the costs of maintaining paper files will soar almost 280%, and the increase will be alarmingly higher with the cost of misfiles added. However, during the same 10-year period, the cost of the same files on microfilm would go up only a trifle--about 12%.

Storage and maintenance costs of paper files during a 10-year period will run $508,900, while the misfile cost ($45,000 a year) will total almost another half million dollars. Together the two major expenses of paper files will approach the astronomical figure of $1 million over 10 years! By contrast, the total microfilm cost over the same period of time will run only $355,600, figuring the 12% file growth.

The money that can be saved with microfilm in 10 years can thus be figured two ways: without the misfile cost, microfilm will produce savings of $153,300. With the misfile cost included, the savings will skyrocket to more than $600,000!

Either way, the payback period is short. Without the misfile cost, the investment would be paid off in about two years, and the time would be cut drastically with the misfile cost figured in.

The study points out the figures do not take into account such hidden costs as mailing paper or the expense of making copies of paper files; and, they do not consider sales that could be lost because of delays and confusion created by paper files. Nor do they take into account the investment tax credit. Thus, these figures tend to be on the conservative side.

The Beam

A respected aviation magazine reported recently that the Russians had leapfrogged a generation of advanced physics technology and built an experimental weapon which may soon neutralize the entire U.S. missile force.

The weapon is a direct-energy beam weapon which could intercept incoming missiles and destroy them with charged atomic particles moving at the speed of light. This takes us another giant step forward into the world of Buck Rogers (if anyone remembers Buck) and, worse, apparently puts the U.S. at a further disadvantage vis-a-vis the Soviets in the field of sophisticated nuclear weapons and counter weapons.

Since the Russians are already far ahead of this country in shelters, bunkers and civilian protection, and since the Russians also have bigger intercontinental nuclear warhead missiles, and more of them, the news is sobering.

The Russians already have anti-missile missiles in place around Moscow and a few other potential targets (again being ahead of the U.S.). The newly-reported weapon is in the experimental stage. When tested and ready, it could drastically alter the balance of military power (and terror). That's disturbing news and emphasizes anew the need for Washington to do everything possible to conclude a new nuclear weapons limitation treaty (SALT) with Russia.

A Thin Line

Under our republic's system of government, it's vitally important that the military remain under the firm authority of elected civilian leadership. That principle has been supported by our greatest generals and admirals.

There's also a danger in the muzzling of dissent in the armed services. President Carter was understandably annoyed recently by General John Singlaub's disturbing remarks in Korea. Singlaub was thereupon recalled, somewhat theatrically perhaps, and is being reassigned.

Singlaub afterward told a congressional committee, before which he is duty-bound to give his opinion, if Carter's withdrawal plan in Korea is implemented, North Korea will attack.

Singlaub erred, and was recalled. But is he right? He says most senior officers in Korea agree with him.

It's a delicate task to draw the line between vocal military disobedience and muzzling conscientious dissent.

WASHINGTON NEWS REPORT

Health Insurance-
What Chance?
Social Security-
Kennedy's Dilemma-

WASHINGTON, D. C.-- President Carter is facing two especially tough fiscal problems and may be headed toward compromises on both.

Senate leaders have warned him there's no way to inaugurate a national health service program and balance the budget in the next four years--especially so in view of fat tax cuts just voted (which the nation can't afford).

Mr. Carter is said to be considering the next best thing--and maybe the best thing according to some solons--national health insurance for catastrophic illnesses only, as a first step.

Senators such as Finance Chairman Russell Long of Louisiana have said this is the only practical course in view of the financial outlook--if the President means to keep his promise and balance the budget by 1981. And polls show catastrophic illness insurance is popular with the public. Many feel they can somehow manage to pay for more normal medical expenses but fear being wiped out after a lifetime of work and savings by the cost of one catastrophic illness.

The President is also said to be considering a plan whereby recipients of increasing social security payments (based on the cost of living) would pay some income tax.

For those living only on their social security the tax would be small or non-existent. But for those with additional income some tax would be paid. It's estimated such a system would bring into the Treasury some six billion dollars a year.

This might be enough to avoid the unhappy precedent of dipping into general revenue funds to supplement social security tax income. Mr. Carter is said now to recognize the undesirability of using general revenue funds to keep the social security system in the black.

Forward-looking families are now planning their summer outings.

The Speaker Reports

by Bill Clayton

AUSTIN--The record has been written for the 65th Texas Legislature. Over a five month period more than $15 billion in expenditures for the next two years were committed and several hundred laws and resolutions adopted.

The session period from January to the end of May was a time of long hours and hard work for the men and women of the Texas House. Through it all these representatives from over the state proved their devotion to their fellow Texans.

When the session began there were a number of areas which were given priority status. The House met every one of these major issues, although no final agreement was reached on public school financing. Through the legislative system of compromise and refinement we have spoken to measures of statewide significance. The House tackled an enormous work load and the result of those efforts is new solutions and approaches to many of the problems with which we have been plagued.

Certainly the budget was important and the bill provides a sensible approach to the disbursement of taxpayer funds.

School finance, so unwieldy as to almost defy solution, was packaged in a compromise bill which is a real step in the right direction. We have a way to go, because there are no easy answers to this dilemma which we agonized over in 1975 and unfortunately this session did not complete because of time limitations.

There were many pieces of legislation with which we dealt that are important to the vitality of the state. We needed a highway funding increase, malpractice insurance, law and order legislation and new district courts to keep Texas moving.

We approved legislation to limit state government and we made it known that the need is present for reorganization of all our agencies. In the future, the impact of these measures to cut away the bureaucracy will come into full bloom.

This legislative session may become known as the one in which lawmakers got tough on crime. We passed a number of bills dealing with crime, welfare and our courts.

We spoke to the needs of rural areas for medical care. We approved the manufacture of a drug to possibly help cancer victims. Strong opposition was registered to pornography, prostitution and unregulated massage parlors.

The list of groups who received assistance is long. Motorcycle riders, displaced homemakers, newspaper delivery boys, our retired teachers, dependent children, state employees and others got a helping hand.

We spoke to any number of subjects. We abandoned the state's electric chair and replaced it with an injection needle. Ballots, babies, banking and budgeting all had their days on the floor.

We tackled the state's problems head-on. All our actions in the House were done for the good of our great state and its people.

I think the 65th Legislature has written a record that will stand as one for the good of Texas.

John Singlaub, Chief of Staff of U.S. forces in Korea, testifying to a House panel:

"It is easier to say you will withdraw forces without endangering the security of South Korea, than it is to execute it."

Roy D. Chapin, Chairman of American Motors: "Within a few years we'll see a small car market maybe of 6 to 8 million."

Youth Summer Camp Standards Emphasized

Some 600,000 youngsters will attend at least one of the 600 youth camps in Texas this year, and parents can send them off with the assurance that they are being well supervised.

For the past three years, says the Texas Department of Health Resources (TDHR), Texas camps have been operating under standard rules set forth in the Texas Youth Camp Safety and Health Act. And, in that period, says Kenneth C. Lauderdale, Director of the General Sanitation Division of TDHR, safety and health regulations in camps have increased greatly.

A survey was taken in 1974 which showed that children in youth camps were placed in excellent surroundings, according to Bobby Davis and Roy Burton, Youth Camp Program of TDHR.

Under the Camp Safety and Health Act, the Director of TDHR was delegated as chairman of an Advisory Council on Youth Camp Safety which the law created. Eleven members are named by the Governor to two-year terms on the council. The Advisory Council's responsibilities include advising and consulting on policy matters relating to camp activities, particularly on the matter of promulgating youth camp safety standards.

Safety and sanitation are the prime areas for concentrating regulatory and enforcement measures. Campers must be provided a sanitary place to live, as well as a safe one.

Consideration is given to adequate and proper supervision in all activities by qualified personnel wherever camp activities are conducted. Proper safeguards for sanitation encompass such areas as proper procedures for food preparation and serving, healthful and sufficient water supply, and proper waste disposal.

Safety covers such areas as: proper water safety procedures for swimming pools, lakes and waterways; proper maintenance and safe use of motor vehicles; safe buildings and physical facilities and proper fire precautions; safe equipment used in all recreational pursuits; and proper regard for the number of persons using a facility.

Several guidelines were used in setting up safety and health standards. These include the Texas Water Safety Act, a manual on Fire Safety for Suburban Areas of Texas, Food and Drug Laws already enforced by the Department of Health

Resources, and environmental health practices falling under the Department.

Each camp must be inspected and found to conform with the Act. In order to ensure uniformity in inspections, training was held recently in Austin for inspectors from the 10 Public Health Regions of the Department. A field trip was made to Friday Mountain Camp for first-hand inspection training. Two environmental interns from Colorado attended to learn more about the excellent Texas program.

Heaviest concentration of camps in Texas is in the Fort Worth-Dallas area, with Girl Scout Camps and YMCA day care programs adding to the total. Heavy concentrations also are seen in East Texas, the Houston area and Hill Country section near Kerrville. State-wide, 22 Southern Baptist camps handle approximately 180,000 summer campers.

The Advisory Council is composed of persons with experience in youth camp activities. Members include Miss Alice H. Mulkey, Raymond B. Bean and Armin F. Luehrs of Dallas; Miss Louise Fargher of Fort Worth; Silas B. Ragsdale Jr. of Hunt; Tom Manison, Friendswood; Olen Miles, Driftwood; Hugh Hornsby III, Rodney J. Kidd and Paul Beisenherz, of Austin; and Carol Ann Flores of Floresville.

Improvement Is Worth Cash

Improving the appearance of your community may pay cash dividends. The community resource development staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service may be able to show your community how to receive cash for a community cleanup project.

"With the increased interest in fuel conservation and recycling, community sponsored removal of junk cars has paid cash dividends to many rural areas," points out Tim Shaunt, Extension area resource development specialist. "Depending on the location, some towns or clubs have received $35 per car."

Shaunt suggests that anyone interested in participating in a program of junk car removal for profit or any other cleanup project should contact the local county Extension office for assistance with the legal requirements, ordinances and collection procedures.

"Not only will such a project help make the community a better place in which to live, but it can also lead to some income to support certain community activities," adds the specialist.

Women To Be Assigned Coast Guard Sea Duty

Women will be assigned to sea duty this fall for the first time in the 186-year history of the Coast Guard. Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams made the announcement to the graduating class at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. May 25.

"It is my privilege to announce that the Coast Guard will soon have women at sea," Secretary Adams told the all-male class of 1977. "I am also happy to announce that you women cadets of the class of 1980 can also expect to be assigned to sea duty on graduation." The Academy began admitting women last year.

Following the Secretary's announcement, the Commandant of the Coast Guard, Admiral Owen W. Siler, added more details. It is expected that two women officers and up to ten enlisted women will be assigned to permanent duty aboard each of two 378-foot cutters.

Admiral Siler said that the Coast Guard has already succeeded in integrating women into a wide variety of Coast Guard missions and programs. "If women are denied an opportunity to serve at sea," he commented, "we are not using the great available resources of the many well qualified women who desire to serve aboard ship to broaden their potential for advancement," he added.

Action by Congress will not be required as current statutes do not bar the assignment of women to full time sea duty.

The Coast Guard plans to issue an immediate call for volunteers. Women selected will serve aboard the USCGC GALLATIN homeported at Governors Island, New York and the USCGC MORGENTHAU to be based in San Francisco. Selected personnel will report to these units this fall.

As experience is gained with the program, Coast Guard officials expect it to be extended to other cutters of the class and size which offer appropriate compartments for the required privacy.

Women aboard these cutters will be replaced by male personnel during military readiness operations with the U.S. Navy in order to demonstrate the Coast

Guard's capability to meet the legal restriction prohibiting the assignment of women to combatant ships in times of national emergency when the Coast Guard becomes part of the Navy.

Coast Guard officials pointed out that under current U.S. law, women may not be assigned to duty in U.S. Navy aircraft engaged in combat missions, nor may they be assigned to duty on vessels of the U.S. Navy other than hospital ships and transports.

TFU Gives Warning On Vote

On the eve of producer registration for a vote on the proposed Beef Market Development Plan, Texas Farmers Union President Jay Naman warns cattle producers to "be sure you know who it is that wants to control your $40 million, why they want it, and what they intend to do with it."

Speaking in behalf of the state-wide general farm organization, Naman claims the Beef Research and Information Act "is vague and unspecific in assuring that it will be controlled by those who pay the tab. The only sure thing is that producers themselves will in not way be able to speak out or vote on anything. Special interest groups deemed 'qualified' by the Secretary of Agriculture will control all the decisions, and one of them in each state stands to get a 10 percent kickback. In Texas, that means some group is in line for around $600,000."

Naman noted there has not been enough talk about opposition to the plan, mostly due to general apathy among beef producers. "But if each producer doesn't take the time to register and vote NO," says Naman, "everyone who owns even one head will find himself in the position of book-keeper/collector for a Beef Board which could be spending millions of dollars without considering the producer."

Registration is set up June 6-17 through the local ASCA office. Certified producers will then vote July 5-15.

"The Texas Farmers Union is certainly in favor of self-help programs so that producers can promote and research their commodities. We just want to be sure that the program doesn't become a wasteful boondoggle that only helps the advertising and travel-tour industry. Democratic representation is totally absent from this legislation."

Naman concluded by once again urging producers to register and vote "NO," calling the government-enforced check-off a "mandatory rip-off that the cattle industry does not need."

Youth Summer Camp Standards Emphasized

Some 600,000 youngsters will attend at least one of the 600 youth camps in Texas this year, and parents can send them off with the assurance that they are being well supervised.

For the past three years, says the Texas Department of Health Resources (TDHR), Texas camps have been operating under standard rules set forth in the Texas Youth Camp Safety and Health Act. And, in that period, says Kenneth C. Lauderdale, Director of the General Sanitation Division of TDHR, safety and health regulations in camps have increased greatly.

A survey was taken in 1974 which showed that children in youth camps were placed in excellent surroundings, according to Bobby Davis and Roy Burton, Youth Camp Program of TDHR.

Under the Camp Safety and Health Act, the Director of TDHR was delegated as chairman of an Advisory Council on Youth Camp Safety which the law created. Eleven members are named by the Governor to two-year terms on the council. The Advisory Council's responsibilities include advising and consulting on policy matters relating to camp activities, particularly on the matter of promulgating youth camp safety standards.

Safety and sanitation are the prime areas for concentrating regulatory and enforcement measures. Campers must be provided a sanitary place to live, as well as a safe one.

Consideration is given to adequate and proper supervision in all activities by qualified personnel wherever camp activities are conducted. Proper safeguards for sanitation encompass such areas as proper procedures for food preparation and serving, healthful and sufficient water supply, and proper waste disposal.

Safety covers such areas as: proper water safety procedures for swimming pools, lakes and waterways; and safe boating equipment; proper maintenance and safe use of motor vehicles; safe buildings and physical facilities and proper fire precautions; safe equipment used in all recreational pursuits; and proper regard for the number of persons using a facility.

Several guidelines were used in setting up safety and health standards. These include the Texas Water Safety Act, a manual on Fire Safety for Suburban Areas of Texas, Food and Drug Laws already enforced by the Department of Health

Resources, and environmental health practices falling under the Department.

Each camp must be inspected and found to conform with the Act. In order to ensure uniformity in inspections, training was held recently in Austin for inspectors from the 10 Public Health Regions of the Department. A field trip was made to Friday Mountain Camp for first-hand inspection training. Two environmental interns from Colorado attended to learn more about the excellent Texas program.

Heaviest concentration of camps in Texas is in the Fort Worth-Dallas area, with Girl

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN—Fraud and deception on the part of some moving companies has been widely reported recently. Our Consumer Protection Division attorneys indicate that a number of deceptive practices have been uncovered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the agency responsible for licensing moving companies which transport goods between states.

Some families have been reported to have lost as much as $500 on a moving trip due to practices which result in their paying for a heavier load than is necessary.

Consumers have been "ripped off" by fraudulent moving companies which the I.C.C. has caught adding bricks, steel ingots, old engine parts, packing crates, and other items to a load when it is weighed, in order to increase the load and thereby the charge to the customer.

Our Consumer Protection Division attorneys and attorneys in our Transportation Division, which represents the Texas Railroad Commission, the licensing agency for intrastate moving companies, caution persons preparing to pack up and head for new territory to be sure they select a reliable mover.

Spokespersons for the Railroad Commission say many interstate movers have Texas representatives who are also licensed as intrastate movers, and therefore come under Railroad Commission supervision.

Selecting a reputable, reliable moving company is possible if a check is made with the Railroad Commission to see if the company is listed as a certified intrastate carrier or as designated agent for such a company.

In order for a company to be certified, it must prove the need for increased service. Public hearings are held, and, if the need is demonstrated, a permit can be granted by the Railroad Commission.

Specialized carriers holding certificates or permits for the transportation of household goods must adhere to certain requirements.

1. They must take a look at the goods to be moved and give a written estimate of the moving cost.

2. The moving van must be weighed both before and after the loading of the goods.

3. The weight to be moved then must be checked against a fixed tariff rate to determine the actual cost of the move.

4. If the cost exceeds the original estimate by 10% or $25, whichever is greater, the customer must be notified.

5. The mover also must inventory all of the belongings to be moved, and provide the customer with a copy.

6. Certified intrastate moving companies must also be bonded, carry insurance, pay a licensing fee, and pay transportation taxes. Individuals employing such movers can also take out additional insurance on their goods, if desired. Our attorneys recommend this as an extra precaution in case of loss.

If you have any doubt about the accuracy of the weight of your moving load, you may request a re-weighing of the shipment in your presence before you accept delivery. You will not be charged for this re-weighing if there is a difference of more than 100 pounds for a load of up to 5,000 pounds, or of more than 2% for a heavier load, from the original weight. If the difference is less, you will be charged $10 for the re-weighing. And if you suspect any kind of fraud by a moving company, you should report it to the Attorney General's Transportation Division or the Railroad Commission.

Ag Officials Report Dairy Herd Numbers Drop, Production Up

AUSTIN—Dairy herds in Texas, while down in numbers, are making up the loss through increased production per animal, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has reported.

The total output in the state last year was up three per cent to more than 3.3 billion pounds, according to figures from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Milk cow numbers, on the other hand, were down to 320,000 head, a four per cent drop from the figure set in 1975.

"Farmer gross receipts from dairy products also increased in 1976," Brown said, "with the $351 million received 16 per cent above the previous year."

"Lower milk prices in the first part of 1977, as well as higher feed costs, have altered the picture somewhat for dairymen, though," he explained, "with the March, 1977, milk-feed price ratio some 10 per cent below a year ago."

Prices for milk in 1976 averaged $10.60 per 100

Grain Warehouse Bill Restores Public Confidence in Industry

AUSTIN—"The new Grain Warehouse Act is good for operators, good for the Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) as the regulatory agency, and good for Texas producers," Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown told members of the grain elevator industry recently.

Brown said he felt the new legislation would "restore the public's faith in the warehouse industry" after widespread adverse publicity over grain fraud cases this year.

"That one rotten apple has always had the ability to make the whole barrel stink," he said, telling the group it was to their credit that they were involved in the initial planning of the legislation. Members of the agricultural banking community, TDA, and the Texas Grain and Feed Association worked on provisions included in the bill.

"The increased bonding provisions will work to your favor," he pointed out, "by increasing your lending value at the bank."

Experts with the U.S. Department of Agriculture view the support increase as a way to keep dairymen producing milk despite higher production costs.

Cold Cash
Have you heard about the new drink? It's "Foregnade," the refreshment that never pauses.
—Tribune, Ames, Ia.

FDA plans ban on saccharin effective July 1.

Brown also applauded the measure's strict requirement for numbered grain receipts and scale tickets which will enable more accurate record keeping by TDA.

"This facet of the bill will tighten up accounting procedures for determining grain deposited in the warehouse," Brown said. Warehousemen will be required to use serially numbered scale tickets and maintain them in numerical order to facilitate auditing by TDA.

Brown credited the efforts of producers and warehousemen in moving grain out of storage into markets. "Over 140 million bushels a year pass through the facilities in Corpus Christi alone," he pointed out.

"Even though grain production in the state will be down this year, we will still be harvesting around 286 million bushels of grain sorghum and over 100 million bushels of wheat."

As far as we can see, the beach beauties this year are the best yet.

MOVING GRAIN—Despite drops in grain production this year, the Texas Department of Agriculture is expecting around 286 million bushels of grain sorghum and over 100 million bushels of wheat to be moving through storage facilities in the state this year.

Billion Dollar Cotton Crop Is Reported

AUSTIN—Cotton production during 1976 totaled over $1 billion, just under the record set in 1973, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

Total value of last year's crop was 84 per cent over the 1975 crop, according to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. A total of 3,307,000 bales were produced last year.

"All indications point toward an even bigger crop in the state this year," Brown said. "There is little indication so far that foreign demand will lessen and prices should remain good, despite the increased acreage."

The average price per pound of lint in 1976 for Texas upland cotton was 62.4 cents, over a third higher than 1975. American Pima sold for an average of $1.18 a pound. Cottonseed prices moved up to $99 a ton, above the $89.80 mark set the previous year.

Upland cotton lint brought $990,513,000; American Pima, $4,191,000 and cotton seed $127,314,000.

TWO FOR TEXAS LTD

Who says a big car can't be economical?

EPA estimates the full-size LTD gets 19 mpg highway, 15 city! That's above government recommended "big car" economy standards! Plus, you get comfort and safety, from the car that kept its size while the competition didn't!

THE BIG CAR THAT'S THRIFTIER THAN YOU THINK.

Farm Exports Pay For Imported Goods

The wheat a local farmer is raising could very well pay for your foreign car, imported wine or new camera.

This is because America exports more food and fiber products than it imports. This "favorable balance of trade" pays for many foreign products, a leading one today being the huge amounts of imported oil, points out Dr. William E. Black, marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The 'balance of trade' is the dollar difference between how much we buy from overseas and how much we sell to the overseas markets," says Black. To buy the foreign goods we want, we have to sell overseas to get the money to buy. It's much the same as in your own personal finances—you have to have an income before you can buy.

"If you buy more than you make, you go in debt. The more debt you have, the more shaky your financial situation is. After awhile, your credit isn't as good," notes Black.

The same applies to this country, the economist explains. If we buy more on the foreign market than we sell, we have a negative balance of trade. If that gets too big, our dollar gets shaky in the international market. After awhile, foreign markets lose faith in the value of the dollar and it won't buy as much overseas.

"When the value of our im-

CATTLE PRODUCERS CAN CALL TOLL-FREE HOTLINE

The Texas Beef Development Taskforce (BDT) has established a toll-free "Hotline" to answer questions from cattle producers about the Beef Referendum.

Registration for the long-awaited Referendum is taking place June 6 - 17 at nearly 2,000 county ASCS offices across the nation. Cattle producers who wish to vote must register before the June 17 deadline. Actual voting will take place back at the ASCS offices between July 5 - 15.

"Beef producers who have a question about the program can call 1-800-682-4106 weekdays between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m.," says BDT Chairman J. D. Sartwell of Sealy.

The Referendum, if approved by two-thirds of the cattle producers voting, would authorize the first nationwide self-help program for the beef industry. Using the value-added system, each cattle producer would contribute 3/10 of 1% (30¢ per $100) of the value of each animal sold. This rate would raise $30 million to $40 million per year for beef research, education and promotion, says Sartwell.

Simple things and simple people are often the great among us.

ports is greater than the value of what we export, the deficit saps the strength of the U.S. dollar in foreign markets. As the deficit grows, the value of the dollar weakens and it takes more dollars to buy foreign products. That creates problems for the American consumer," asserts Black.

In 1971, American farm exports cancelled one-half of a $4 billion potential deficit in total U.S. trade. Overseas farm sales reduced by 2 per cent what would have been a huge $9 billion deficit in 1972.

Agricultural exports in 1973 made a record-breaking "net" contribution of $9.3 billion to the American balance of trade while the nonagricultural sector turned in an $8 billion deficit. In 1974, farm exports contributed an incredible $11.7 billion net, and the favorable trade balance reached $12.6 billion in 1975. This balance should show a similar level for 1976.

Between 1965 and 1975, net agricultural exports have made a total contribution of $49 billion to America's balance of trade. This more than offset the $28 billion deficit chalked up by the nonagricultural sector.

"The export market plays an important role in Texas agriculture," adds Black. "Currently, the production from one out of every four acres is imported. Leading imports include rice, sorghum, wheat and cotton."

So, the next time you purchase an imported item, think about American agriculture. It opens the door for many imported products.

Q: My bills are stacking up faster than I can pay them. If I have to take bankruptcy, what must I give up? Will I lose my car and my household goods?

A: Federal bankruptcy law exempts property which is also exempt under applicable state law. Under the law of Texas, you would not lose your car and your household goods in the event you declare bankruptcy. Beyond that, you'll be allowed to keep your homestead, household and kitchen furniture, tools and books of your trade, family portraits and pictures, one pick-up truck in addition to the car, current wages for personal services, provisions on hand for home consumption like food, all wearing apparel and one dog.

Q: The house next door has changed hands several times in the past year or two. There is a large tree on the edge of the lot which is about to fall on our house. What can we do? We asked the original owner to remove it before she sold the house, but she refused.

A: If this tree actually fell on your house, you would, of course, be able to sue for the damages it did. With that in mind, the law also provides a remedy to keep the tree from falling on your house. You must file suit to remove the tree. It's called a suit to abate a nuisance.

Q: I've been wanting to ask this for a long time. While in college, I lived in an apartment. When I left, my $25 deposit was withheld, presumably for cleaning and a cracked window. Both reasons were totally untrue. Is there anything I can do about it?

A: If you owed no rent and if you gave proper notice, your landlord was legally required to refund your deposit. Though he's not entitled to deduct for normal wear and tear, a landlord can deduct charges representing actual damages and cleaning costs, if the lease allows. But, the landlord must furnish you with a written description and itemized list of all deductions. If the landlord acted in bad faith and the statute of limitations hasn't run out, he could be required to pay $100 plus three times the amount wrongfully withheld.

Q: A teenager in our neighborhood was stopped by the police for driving while intoxicated, but no DWI charges were filed against him. Does the DWI law extend to someone under the age of 17?

A: Under Texas law, a person under the age of 17 cannot be held criminally liable for driving while intoxicated. This means that a juvenile stopped by the police and suspected of driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs cannot be arrested as an adult and therefore does not face the possibility of having the driver's license suspended. The police, however, may turn over the young man or woman to juvenile court authorities as a child in need of supervision.

Pork Producers Short Course Slated June 30

Pork producers will examine prospects for swine industry's future at Texas Tech University's 25th annual Swine Short Course June 30. About 150 people are expected to attend.

Featured speakers for the one-day course will be: G. Richard (Dick) Carlisle, extension swine specialist for the University of Illinois at Urbana, David H. Bache, extension economist at Purdue University, and Glenn Conatser, executive secretary of the American Yorkshire Club. Program topics include: "Future Trends in the Swine Industry" and "Ideas for Improving Sow Performance" by Carlisle, "Record-keeping for a Swine Operation" and "Outlook for Swine Production and Prices" by Bache, and "Hog Production in Japan (A Look to the Future for the U.S.)" and "Soundness in Swine" by Conatser.

Drs. Max A. Lennon, Donald E. Orr and Leland F. Tribble, all of Texas Tech's Animal Science Department, will present progress reports on the university's swine research. Reports from the Texas Pork Producers Association by outgoing executive vice president John Fair and incoming executive vice president Kenneth Horton will be given. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. at the Farmers Co-op Complex, 3800 Southeast Drive in Lubbock. The course, which is being held at the complex to provide ample parking space for those attending, is expected to adjourn about 3:45 p.m. Registration fees are $3 for agriculture teachers and county agents and $10 for all others.

The course is sponsored by the Texas Pork Producers Association, Texas Pork Producers Board and Animal Science Department of Texas Tech University. All participants will be lunch-con guests of Elanco Production Co. and Wallace International.

It is hard to believe President Carter would carry out his threat to veto the Senate-passed farm bill because of "executive cost," states Donald Johnson of Lubbock, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. "And if he does," Johnson says, "it will be a direct contradiction of his pre-election campaign promises and will destroy the Carter image that bought the farm vote last November."

Carter has indicated he may veto any farm bill with an annual estimated commodity support program cost substantially exceeding the arbitrary figure of $2 billion. The Administration, operating on the illogical assumption of favorable crop production weather for each of the five years of the bill's duration, sets cost of the Senate farm law at an average $3.9 billion per year.

The Senate Ag Committee, acknowledging the high probability of variable weather during the five-year period, says the average cost is more likely to be in the neighborhood of $2 billion.

Moreover, as Committee Chairman Herman Talmadge of Georgia pointed out in his presentation of the bill, nearly a third of the commodity cost figure consists of crop loans, most of not all of which will be repaid by producers or recovered by the government when the commodities are sold. Talmadge also pointed out the inconsistency of the President "quibbling" over a $2 billion or even $4 billion government program to assure the economic health of the nation's biggest industry while signing "with such pride and fanfare" the recently enacted economic stimulus program.

That program allocates $2.6 billion for employment and training assistance, $6.8 billion for temporary employment assistance and $4 billion for local public works.

"The most enthusiastic supporters of the economic stimulus program claim the total outlay of $12.4 billion would result in the employment of only a few hundred thousand people," Johnson notes, "whereas the comparatively small cost of the farm bill would protect the much more productive employment of over four million people directly employed in agriculture and another 12 to 15 million people working in closely related enterprises." The House is slated to consider in July a farm bill with less costly commodity support provisions than the Senate measure, and it is assumed the bill which winds up on Carter's desk will contain provisions that indicate a cost somewhere between the House and Senate versions.

Other federal expenditures cited by Talmadge included $20 billion for natural resources, environment and energy; $44.3 billion for health; $43 billion for interest on the national debt, and an estimated $98.9 billion for defense. When one places the farm program in the context of these outlays, he said "what we are requesting appears paltry by comparison."

Johnson adds "What Talmadge didn't say but might have said is that without adequate food and fiber, all these huge expenditures will go for naught."

DEAR MR. BULLOCK:
A friend of mine was bragging recently about getting his cigarettes at a premium price by ordering them by mail from states that have lower cigarette taxes than Texas' 18 and one-half cents per pack. I'd like to order some myself, but I want to be sure that there aren't any hitches. Are there?

You bet there are. And your friend is going to find out that those "cheap" cigarettes he's been buying aren't so cheap after all. Firms that ship cigarettes into Texas are required by federal law to notify my office of each shipment. State law requires me to bill the purchaser for the state's $1.85 per carton tax, plus an additional $1.85 per carton for failing to pay the state tax at the time of the purchase.

So instead of avoiding the Texas tax, your friend and others like him may end up paying double the state tax for their smokes. DEAR BOB: Are newspapers taxable? Newspapers are now subject to the state and local sales tax—but they won't be for long. A bill approved by the legislature and signed by the governor exempts newspaper and magazine sales from the tax effective August 29.

WANTED: Hay bailing, stacking and hauling. 272-4634 day, 272-4768 nights. 15-23t-2tp

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights

by Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Legislators barely got out of town before Gov. Dolph Briscoe served notice they will probably have to come back to work in mid-July.

A special session was virtually mandated by failure on closing night of the regular 140-day meeting to come to grips with the hot issues of school finance.

A $900 million "compromise" school bill, which included funds for teacher pay raises, never got a direct vote in either house. Briscoe said he will call a special session next month if legislative leaders can show him evidence a majority of lawmakers are now ready to face up to education finance issues.

A medical malpractice bill squeezed through the session on closing night. Doctors didn't like it, but some spokesmen for Texas Medical Association conceded it was better than nothing.

In spite of failures, the legislature did manage to pass a sweeping variety of bills.

Among them:

The "Sunset Law" requiring state agencies to justify their existence periodically... Merger of three major state water agencies into a Department of Water Resources... A "natural death" act allowing terminally ill patients to specify that their lives are not to be prolonged by artificial methods... The $528 million emergency highway funding bill... Substitution of lethal drugs for the electric chair as the legal method of execution... Legalization of laetrile in cancer treatment... A no-pain speed bill banning insurance penalties for 55-70 miles an hour speeding violations.

Crime Increasing
One in five Texas adults responding to a survey said they had been victims of crimes, and one in 15 were victims of violence.

Texas Department of Public Safety released the figures as the result of a "crime trend survey" which also disclosed fear of crime is widespread.

Thirty-nine per cent of prior crime victims said they expect to be victims a second time, and 14 per cent who have escaped don't figure their luck will hold out.

The survey indicated most of the crimes involved property offenses, while violence declined slightly.

Amendments on Ballot
Half a dozen proposed constitutional amendments will be on the ballot next November and nine more in 1978.

To be voted on this year are amendments to allow judges to deny bail to repeat felons, permit tax relief for historic buildings and sites, enlarge the Court of Criminal Appeals, permit use of electronic banking systems, expand Judicial Qualifications Commission powers and authorize another $200 million to finance low-interest veterans land loans.

Courts Speak

Texas Court of Criminal Appeals up-held the death penalty assessed a Fort Worth man in the 1975 murder of a grocery clerk.

At the same time, a Corpus Christi man sentenced to life in prison for murder got a new trial because jurors were not informed on circumstantial evidence laws.

The high court directed a new trial in a Harris County workmen's compensation case where a lawyer compared the suit to famous state scandals.

Third Court of Civil Appeals upheld a district court finding that The University of Texas student newspaper should be allowed to endorse political candidates.

A teen-aged girl convicted of burglary won a new trial after lying about her age at the time of the original trial.

AG Opinions

The Department of Public Welfare may require counties to collect a $20 application fee from non-welfare recipients for child support services, Atty. Gen. John Hill held.

In other recent opinions, Hill concluded:

Hospital district records at least five years old can be destroyed after they have been duplicated and notice given the state librarian.

Deputy sheriffs may be appointed to patrol an annual celebration only if they meet requirements as peace officers.

The legislature cannot delegate its power to establish maximum loan interest rates to an administrative agency.

Short Snorts

Value of Texas construction authorizations declined during April from the record level of March.

Sen. Don Adams of Jasper is new president pro tempore of the Texas Senate.

Dr. George G. Killinger succeeds Paul F. Cromwell Jr. on the State Board of Pardons and Paroles July 1.

Comptroller Bob Bullock reminded religious and other non-profit, tax-exempt organizations they can hold one sale or auction annually without having to collect sales taxes. A new law allowing the exemption became effective May 24.

Judge Thomas H. Rout of Houston was named by Gov. Dolph Briscoe as judge of the 208th district court of Harris County.

R. Kenneth Towery, University of Texas assistant to the chancellor, has rejoined U.S. Sen. John Tower's staff as state executive director.

Texas crude oil production totaled 95.3 million barrels in March, down from 99 million in March 1976, the Railroad Commission reported. March allowable was 113.7 million barrels.

State senators voted themselves $4,900 a month to hire staff members between legislative sessions.

BIBLE VERSE

"And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and look-eth, and behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush (was) not consumed."

1. To whom did the angel appear?
2. Where?
3. What book of the Bible tells this story?

Answers To Bible Verse

1. Moses.
2. Horeb, a mountain.
3. Exodus 3:2.
