BLACK GOLD HAS PREDICATED A GREATER FUTURE FOR CITY THAN ITS BUILDERS EVER DREAMED

Fitzgerald Recalls the Prediction a Great Oil Field Lies Between Red River and the Pacific Railway

Editor's note: This is the second of a series of articles written especially for The Record News by Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald, dean of Texas newspapermen. Fitzgerald, permanently associated with the staff of The Record News spent several days visiting in this city recently, and is now writing this series of articles for this newspaper. Incidentally, these articles are appearing in five other newspapers of Texas, spreading the facts of Wichita Falls, its vision and its growing greatness.

PETROLEUM is one of the ranking industries of America. It is one of the ranking industries of the world. Not many years ago Richard Delaney was engaged by W. T. Waggoner to drill a well for water at what is now known as Electra. Waggoner, a cattle king and land king desired more water or a larger water supply for his stock. Delaney drilled. He did not bring in water. He did bring in an oil well and then began the romance of black gold in what is known as the Mid-Continent territory.

Some Day a Great Development.

Delaney is in the land of the living. He is a prosperous and respected citizen of the city that faith built. Waggoner is in the land of the living. His possessions are said to have a value of $50,000,000. Some day he may endow a great college. Some day he may build a great library for the people of the city that faith built. Some day he may do something to show his fellowmen and the world at large, that he is appreciative of what the great God Luck and Dick Delaney's drill did to create for him one of the huge fortunes of the southwest.

But this is neither here nor there. A billion dollars worth of black gold has been taken out of the earth, in Wichita county or adjoining counties. Men who play the oil game have been made multi-millionaires. Many who played it have been made paupers. Petroleum hunting is a great game, and some of the keenest and most zealous hunters of black gold in America are prominent citizens of Wichita Falls.

Everywhere Oil In the West

They are in every building enterprise, including the irrigation success. There is black gold everywhere in the west —west Texas. There is black gold in the Red River channel as well as under the banks of the Red River. Not long ago a famous oil authority of America said, "another great field is to be brought in some day lying south of the Red River and north of the Pacific railway.

Three are men here who say that the Reagan field, on University land, is certain to become one of the most productive in America. If predictions come true, then some day the University of Texas may have an oil fund for building and educational purposes that will touch the $50,000,000 mark. Then there is the Amarillo field. Walter Cline and his associates, indeed representatives of all the big companies, are working Carson and Hutchinson counties, were the prospects are said to be rich, and where the town of Panhandle may come into its own some day.

In Archer-Young

There are men finding fortunes in Archer and Young and Wilbarger counties. Really, the geologists and scouts say, that what is known as the mid-continent territory, or rather the face of the territory, hasn't even been scratched. All the reading world knows that Wichita Falls is the oil center of north and west Texas. All the oil using world knows that the Mid-Continent territory, or rather the tract at a flat rate. This fuel oil is high gravity, paraffine base, with a high gasoline content, which commands a premium over the posted price regardless of the conditions in the petroleum world.

A Refining Center

Wichita Falls is one of the great refining centers of America. There are eighteen refineries in the Wichita Falls area, and seven within the immediate vicinity of the city. Daily capacity of these refineries is between sixty and seventy thousand barrels, and in seven plants in the city proper, more than a thousand persons are employed with a monthly payroll approximating $200,000. It is interesting to note that a large majority of these refinery workers are home owners and progressive citizens of the city that faith built.

As for natural gas, it is produced in huge quantities, providing a cheap fuel and making Wichita Falls an ideal spot for all manufacturing industries and enterprises. There is more fuel oil here which is sold at a cheaper rate than can be found in any other large city in the southwest, and it is available at a price which will ordinarily effect a fifty percent saving over the use of coal and can be secured from the refineries on contract at a flat rate. his fuel oil is piped directly to all industrial plants, thus, avoiding high cost, waste in transportation and labor and having the added advantage of being clean and easy to handle.

Manufacturers to Come

All the surface signs today indicate that Texas is to become a great manufacturing state, that the cotton mills and all textile activities are to be transferred from New England to the south and southwest where labor is easily obtainable, the climate is ideal, fuel for heat and light and power purposes cheap and accessable, and the saving of freight rates, one of the essentials of the hour.

These are some of the reasons why Wichita Falls is a manufacturing city and why it is destined to become one of the chief manufacturing cities of the future. Never forget that this city is the distributing center for northwest Texas and southern Oklahoma, that it is the commercial capitol of a rich region of a million purchasers. And, that regardless of the black gold wealth, it is in the very heart of the greatest wheat production sections of Texas and the spots where the cotton blossom is in evidence, and where irrigation is certain to force a yield of two bales to the acre.

U.S. ADMITS A $4,800 ERROR; REFUSES COIN

M. J. Bashara Faces Statute Of Limitations Seeking Big Refund

Equity matters in which income tax disputes furnished controverted points took up the afternoon hearings before Judge William H. Atwell in federal court Wednesday.

Suit styled M. J. Bashara of this city vs the United States involving $4,800 which Bashara seeks to collect on grounds he paid this amount above his proper assessment took up the afternoon. It appeared from the testimony that Bashara had paid in this excess amount through a mistake of his own and the government's; that now he is barred from having it returned because he did not make demand for the refund within the five-year limit prescribed by law. The government plead the statute of limitations.

In the end the matter was passed over until this morning to allow counsel to look up some special law to present to Judge Atwell.

Lost Standing In Court, He Says, By A Delayed Telegram

Alleged failure of the Western Union Telegraph company to deliver a message on time, thereby causing a customer to lose "an important civil case" on trial in district court, is made the basis of a $2,400 damage suit filed Wednesday by W. B. Jarrell of this city. Actual damages of $1,200 and exemplary of $1,200 are asked.

In his petition the plaintiff sets forth that on November 7 at 6:55 p. m. the defendant company received at its office here a message from New York directed to him. The message did not reach him, however, until 8:30 on the night of November 9, and was then delivered with the statement that it had originally been delivered to the wrong person.

In the meantime, his petition alleges, he lost all standing in court in a case in which he was involved and accordingly seeks to recover damages.

BURNED STEAMER IN PORT.

30-Mile Race of Blazing Ship to Shore Is Ended.

LEWES, Del., Nov. 18.—(AP)—The Clyde line steamship Lenape was destroyed by fire and scuttled in the Delaware breakwater today after a 30-mile race from the open sea with flames sweeping her hold and roaring up through the cabins and decks and after all but one of 350 passengers and crew had been safely landed by coast guard cutters and pilot boats. One passenger became panic stricken, jumped overboard and was drowned. He was Robert Leverton of Williamansett, Mass.

RHINELANDER'S NERVE SHAKES AS HE RELATES HIS INTIMACIES

Scion of Wealth Testifies His Negro Wife's Arms Were Brown

APPEALS TO COURT

On Two Occasions Begs He Be Excused and Two Recesses Granted

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 18. (AP)—Leonard Kip Rhinelander visibly began to wilt today under a merciless, steady cross examination that dragged from his reluctant lips intimate details of his pre-martial relations with Alice Beatrice Jones, his negro wife, from whom he now seeks freedom.

Stammering and red of face, he struggled through a mass of questions put to him by Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander in her husband's annulment suit. Once during the afternoon young Rhinelander turned to Justice Morschauser and complained that he was tired.

A ten-minute recess was granted. Again late in the afternoon in the midst of personal questions as to his love life he complained of fatigue. Adjournment then was taken for the day and the wealthy youth left the stand, his face drawn and haggard.

Many Contradictions.

He had been subjected to a full day of pounding that had resulted in many contradictions. He had been asked questions that reflected on his gentlemanliness and his sense of honor. He had admitted to a secret marriage pact with the daughter of a negro hack driver, as far back as 1922, and had confessed to suspicions of her color. Through it all, however, he clung to his contention that he did not believe she was a negress when be married her.

"Love Bound In Wichita Falls"

As Written for the Record News By the Flapper Wife

CHAPTER I.

There comes one moment in the life of every woman when she looks at a man and knows she loves him.

That moment came to Mary Rose Middleton in Wichita Falls one day last April when she walked into Mr. Manners' office in the Morgan building, with the afternoon mail.

Just so she had crossed that room a thousand times before to lay his letters upon his desk. And just so he had glanced up at her, as he did now, to say "Thanks, Miss Middleton" in an ordinary tone.

Things had always been like that between them—ordinary and business like.

But this time there was a difference. In an instant everything was changed for Mary Rose.

She stood looking down at John Manners, and it seemed to her that she never had seen him before—his dark head bent over his work, his hands resting upon the desk. His brown, flexible hands.

Suddenly Mary Rose wanted to touch them. She wanted to lay her cheek down upon that dark, bent head.

For the first time in her twenty-two years there came to her the aching wish to be close held in a man's arms.

She wanted to be in Mr. Manners arms.

"Panther tracks! I'm in love with him!" she told herself.

She felt herself trembling, and a fever of shame ran over her body. What if he should happen to look up and see her standing there, shaking like a leaf!

Filled with fear that he might do that very thing, Mary Rose turned on her neat heel and fled. When the door had closed between them she gave a quick sigh of relief . . . as if she had had a narrow escape from some threatening danger.

"Silly!" she thought, out of patience with herself.

In the outer office Miss Brown and Miss Minnick were busily typing under the green-shaded lights. Adolph, the office boy, whistled, "I'm Tired of Everything But You," as he sealed envelopes at the table in the corner.

Everything just as usual. The big bright room exactly as it had been when Mary Rose had left it a moment ago. . . . But in those sixty seconds the whole face of the world had changed for her!

Even Eighth Street looked different.

She knew now why she loved her job as stenographer for the Dexter company.

She knew why the office was for her the most wonderful spot in the world. Because it was here that she saw John Manners every day!

She knew that she was in love with Brown and Miss Minnick until she had time to pull herself together.

Downstairs, the washroom was empty.

In the wide mirror that ran along the wall, Mary Rose took stock of herself—trying to see herself with John Manners' eyes.

"I wonder if he thinks I'm pretty?" she said to herself.

The eyes that met hers in the glass were darkly blue under thick lashes. Mary Rose's hair was black satin, her skin was like thick cream, and health glowed in her cheeks.

A creature of warm color and pulsing youth she was. And yet she never had thought of herself as a beauty.

She had always agreed with her mother that Flossie carried the looks for the family—Flossie, the little sister who had graced the filing department of the Dexter company for two years as a daisy might grace a brickyard.

"But in my own way, I'm not so bad looking," Mary Rose decided.

She opened her vanity case and began to fluff rachel powder over her nose. "Wouldn't it be wonderful if Mr. Manners—" him . . . and always would be.

The Real Thing had come to her as it comes once to every woman. Like magic.

DEAN TAYLOR EMPLOYED FOR WATER SURVEY

Texas "U" Expert Employed By City on Extensive Survey

Steps looking to solution of the water situation here were taken Wednesday by city officials when they engaged T. U. Taylor, dean of the school of engineering of the University of Texas, to make a complete survey of the local distribution system and submit recommendations on its improvement. Dean Taylor hopes to have a report ready by the first of the year.

The "situation," it seems, is one involving not the water supply especially, but the equipment used in distributing it. There is no concern as to the adequacy of supply.

There is said to be ample cause, however, for study of the filter beds, pumping units, the network of mains and pipes spread beneath the city and, above all else, for the open irrigation ditch that forms the connecting link between Lake Wichita and the filter beds. Growing pains have been felt in the water department for several years; the amazing extension of residential sections has kept the department hard pressed to keep up.

Scores Indicted In Beer Scandal

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP)— A federal grand jury investigating an alleged $800,000 a month beer syndicate operating through the east and middle west today returned indictments against the Boston & Main railroad, three prohibition agents, Chicago police lieutenant and nearly a score of others.

The indictments charged conspiracy to violate the prohibition law and federal officials indicated the charges were only the first step in breaking up the operation, throughout the country, of beer running and liquor selling syndicates.

Moody's Audit In Evidence At Suit Recounts Fabulous Profits In Highway Work

Auditor Among First On Stand In Action To Recover $650,000 In Alleged Excess Profits Made by Company

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A tale of fabulous profits recorded in the books of the American Road company was unfolded today in the 53rd district court here, with W. D. Prince, who audited the books, telling the story. Since April 7, the road company, now being sued by the state for recovery of $650,000 alleged excess profits has realized on its state highway contracts a net profit of $1,112,232.77 on a total investment of $51,731.69, the auditor said the books show.

Details the Cost

The average cost a square yard to the defendant company for asphalt surfacing under sub-contracts of 4,444,258 square yards was 8.87 cents. For this work, the state paid the American Road company thirty cents a square yard. On asphalt surfacing contracts, the state has paid or approved estimates for $1,333,269.05, with the company paying out to date $394,219.84 to sub-contractors, leaving a profit of $939,049.21 on the surfacing contract.

The defense contended that from the net profits of more than a million dollars as shown in the books approximately $224,000, representing a reserve of five cents a yard which had been set up for anticipated retreatment of the 4,444,258 square yards, should be deducted.

Mr. Prince said he had talked over the reserve with H. L. McLlyar, president of the road company, and that Mr. McLlyar had told him the reserve unit should be eliminated for all work accepted by the highway commission, and that he estimated expenditures of $50,300 would be sufficient to place in acceptable condition all highways the company had been ordered to re-treat.

Auditor Unshaken

Joe Worsham, attorney for the defendant company, sought hard to shake Prince from this story, but the auditor refused to change it substantially. One of the answers of the American Road company to the charges of the attorney general is, that as it was understood between it and the highway commission that all roads were to receive a second treatment of asphalt, it is unfair to charge exorbitant profits until the second treatment has been applied. The answer also points out the second treatment, because of unfavorable weather conditions, might cost more than the first.

Development that the company did not live up to its contract to place at least half a gallon of asphalt to each square yard of surfacing, since another high light of today's hearing. The auditor said that, making the most liberal allowance for shrinkage, the company had failed by at least 162,364 gallons to live up to its contract.

70 Cents For 8.07 Cents

He estimated the state paid seventy cents for every gallon of asphalt the American Road company was instrumental in placing on the highway, while the boows of the company showed the average delivered cost to the company for a gallon of asphalt was 8.07 cents, and that at point of shipment the cost was 5 1-2 cents a gallon.

Other outstanding developments were:

That the company made a profit of $66,015.35 on maintenance of contracts in Tarrant and Dallas counties; that it made a profit of $110,646.92 on Parker county highway construction job, which cost the state $270,620; that it made a net profit of $22,986.29 on work done at cost-plus ten per cent; that the general expenses of the corporation including a salary of about $13,500 for the president, during the six months it was making more than a million dollars, amounted to only $26,465; that the company had set aside for E. S. Heyser and W. Brodnax, as reward for getting contracts a special fund of ten per cent of the gross receipts to be shared equally, and that they were paid $190,111.35 out of funds received from the state for highway work; and that the state had never been able to learn details of the purchase

WHARVES STILL ABLAZE

Move Already Taken to Replace $3,000,000 New Orleans Docks

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—(AP) While tongues of curling flames still covered the mountain of crumpled steel, charred good and molten ashes that yesterday was $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 in docks and merchandise, the New Orleans board of port commissioners today authorized immediate rebuilding of the seven block section of wharves razed in a spectacular midnight fire here.

Congress to Hear Texas Road Facts

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—(AP)— The federal government may take a hand in the Texas highway investigation, developments today hinted, according to the Austin American.

Demand will be made in the United States senate for congressional investigation of the manner in which federal highway funds in Texas have been used, it was apparently indicated, says the American, when it became known Senator Earle B. Mayfield has secured copies of all the petitions filed by Attorney General Dan Moody in his three state highway suits, and has taken them to Washington for study before the opening of congress, in December.

Sums of $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 of federal money are applied biennially to Texas highways, to be spent along with state funds.

Chairman Frank Lanham of the Texas highway commission, in a statement, here has already hinted the question of withdrawing of federal funds because the controversy over highway matters, may be raised in Washington.

RESUME JURY PROBE

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Travis county grand jury, which has been investigating state affairs for several weeks, today resumed inquiry into the state highway department, it was indicated by the witnesses summoned. Nearly a dozen other witnesses were summoned to appear later in the week, after which a report is expected.

POSTPONE MEETINGS

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—(AP)— The state highway commission meeting scheduled for November 23 in Austin was postponed today to the regular meeting December 14. The postponement was made because of litigation.

COLLIER'S CASE TO HIGH COURT

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—The appeal of Frank Collier, former mayor of Wichita Falls, from a three-year manslaughter sentence imposed for the murder of Elzie Robertson, his son-in-law, was submitted on record to the court of crimminal appeals today.

Collier alleges a number of errors in the trial court's proceedure and on this pleads for reversal.

Where Color Makes No Difference

"Us black chilluns got to live."

This is the appeal from these grinning ebony faces at the colored day nursery where negro mothers of the city are being afforded a place to leave their youngsters when necessity requires that they go out to earn a living.

Never less than half a dozen negro babies are cared for at the nursery every day, while sometimes the number runs as high as 12 or 15. The institution is operated exactly as is the white Day Nursery on Lamar avenue which in the past five years has contributed a service of inestimable value to Wichita Falls.

The colored day nursery this year as last is to be included in the community chest from which it derives its principal financial support. The drive for a $55,000 fund to operate the nine participating chest organizations for the next year will be put over here November 23, 24 and 25.

Babe Of Unwed Girl Wins Way Into Heart Of Unhappy Parents After Welfare Workers Give Aid

Story book writers could take a leaf now and then from the records of welfare organizations operating in Wichita Falls and from them weave tales to rival the typings of even the most gifted fictionist.

Human credulity is taxed sometimes by recountings of naked truths brought to light in the work of the city's welfare workers. They find things as amazing as they are unusual; as sordid as they are appalling —and once in a while as happily terminated as could be imagined.

All that is incidental, however. The real beginning of this story was found here a year or so ago when a 15-year-old girl, frantic with fright and remorse, appealed to Miss Katherine Henricle of the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society. An enormous affair with a young man had resulted disastrously; the girl was soon to become a mother; she was afraid to confide in her parents; she needed help and she needed it badly.

Miss Henricle took charge of her case and the parents—a father and mother in straightened financial circumstances—were told of the situation. Then Miss Henricle took the girl to a Methodist rescue home in San Antonio where her baby was born.

Complications speedily developed. When the young mother was ready to come home her parents insisted positively and finally that the baby be turned over to a welfare society. They didn't want it in their home, they said, and their daughter was to return to them only on condition that she release the child. That was final.

But—

Mother Love.

Mother love protested. A tearful girl begged and pleaded, cried and implored but all to no avail. She was overruled and eventually after many a stormy domestic scene, the girl consented to come back to Wichita Falls without the infant. She turned it over to Miss Henricle and returned, empty handed and heavy hearted.

When skies seem darkest, though, a rift may be forming in the clouds, and so it was in this case. None of the family knew, but the baby, after the usual period of observation and examination, was placed in the keeping of a relative of the girl and her parents. This good lady, of course, knew the circumstances; she took the babe, adopted it as her own and gave it all the care and treatment a real mother could.

Parents Were Won Over.

In the course of events the young ster's own mother, still grief-struck but a little more contented, paid a visit in this relative's home. Without recognizing her own child the little mother promptly formed an attachment for it. More and more visits were made at this home and finally the girl's parents themselves came. They, too, it seems, took fancy to the cooing mite and as the weeks progressed this fancy ripened into an attachment scarcely less fervent than that of their daughter's.

At last came the revelation. It just couldn't be concealed any longer and—the whole family was told.

The tears and entreaties that failed to move a father and mother at the hospital bedside had a different effect when they were mixed with the softening grace of personal sympathy.

"Bring her home," they told their daughter, "we'll let you keep the baby; we'll give it our name; its all right now."

The Role of Welfare Workers.

And they did.

In this case as in all the others, an organized welfare organization played an effective though inconspicuous part. Without it that mother probably never would have seen her baby again. Without the aid of organized welfare work, in fact, the conditions of its birth are even in doubt. As it is, she was allowed to make the best of a situation bad in the beginning, and now through the grace of parental love and the consideration of the ones whose province it was to handle the case, she has the youngster as her own. Who will question that, even in the light of its illegitimacy, it is not in proper hands.

There is a wide variation in the type of cases organized welfare work is called on to handle in this city; but the instance cited above will serve to illustrate that there are times when it is imperative that an association or society of some kind be ready and able to serve an afflicted one. That was what happened here and it is what is happening in scores of other instances each week. Somewhere in the city somebody is requiring aid of some kind all the time.

To provide this aid a community chest is maintained from which is distributed financial support for nine participating organizations, each of which has some specific type of work to do. Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Wichita Falls will be called on to subscribe a fund of $55,000 to maintain the chest another 12 months and assure a continuation of the work that is now being done.

TEXAN SHOT TO DEATH

Dallas Railroad Engineer Dies After Shooting in Marshall, Texas.

MARSHALL, Texas, Nov. 18.—W. C. Melton, an engineer on the Texas and Pacific railway, and a former citizen of Marshall, recently of Dallas, was shot today and died in a local hospital.

I. Z. Winn, painter, was placed under arrest by Constable Bechtold and turned over to Sheriff Sanders.

Iowa Park Woman Hurt In Auto Wreck

IOWA PARK, Nov. 18.—C. C. Hudson, editor of the Iowa Park Herald, and Mrs. Hudson were in an auto wreck Sunday afternoon in Wichita Falls. Just after the editor had passed under the railroad bridge at the end of Ohio street, an auto turned in front of the Hudson's car and collided. Mrs. Hudson suffered several severe cuts from flying glass. Mr. Hudson was unhurt. Both cars were damaged badly.

IOWA PARK ITEMS

Mayor J. C. Hines and wife are visiting friends and kind folks in Iowa Park this week.

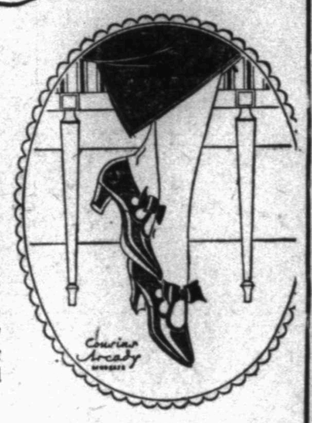

W. D. McClure left Tuesday for Mineral Wells to spend several days for his health.

One of the most active clubs of Iowa Park is the Stitch and Chatter club. These ladies meet every Tuesday night and enjoy the evening together.. At their last meeting they voted to attend a picture show in Wichita Falls together and last Saturday night this body of ladies boarded a bus and saw "The Freshman." They enjoyed the picture and the outing together also.

College Station P. O. Clerk Arrested; Charged With Taking Money From Letters

Shortage in Funds in Y. M. C. A. Mail Box Brings Probe

HOUSTON, Nov. 18.—Horace C. Beard, 30, clerk in the postoffice at College Station, was arrested today by postal inspector S. C. Caldwell of Austin and was charged with extracting money from letters. He was arraigned before Winston McMahon, United States commissioner and released under $500 bond signed by two business men of Bryan.

A shortage in funds that developed in the Y. M. C. A. box at College Station led to an investigation by Postmistress Florence M. Geyer. Beard was arrested as a result of the investigation conducted by Miss Geyer and postoffice inspectors from Dallas and Austin.

Large sums of money pass through the College Station post office at this time of the year to the football games, according to postal authorities. They refused to disclose the amount of alleged shortage.

Lubbock Store Is Damaged By Fire

LUBBOCK, Nov. 18.—Fire originating in the work clothes department of the Perkins Men's Shop here last night caused estimated damage of $8,000 to stock and fixtures. The shop occupied a corner of a two story building, but the blaze was confined to the mercantile establishment.

OIL FIRM LOSES SUIT

Humphreys Company Must Pay $30,610 To Limestone County Woman

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Affirming the decisions of the lower courts the Texas supreme court held in an opinion today that Mrs. Lizzie Liles is entitled to $30,690 damages from the Humphreys Oil company for converting waste oil from her land to its own use in Limestone county. Mrs. Liles, according to the court record, built dykes and dams to salvage waste oil which flowed from adjacent oil fields over her 144 acre farm; that employes of the Humphreys Oil company destroyed these dams and structures 15 times and obtained the oil. The original suit was for $75,000 damages.

Fred Carter, his companion, who asked a suspended sentence, was also found guilty and sentenced to serve three years.

T. O. Oil Royalty Fuss Taken to Public

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—(AP)—In an effort to determine public opinion as to whether the oil royalties from University of Texas land would be deposited to the permanent fund, as the board of regents desires, W. Gregory Hatcher, state treasurer, sent circular lettes to Texas county officials today. The letter explains that the 39th legislature passed a law placing the royalties in the available building fund, which Attorney General Dan Moody ruled unconstitutional and that the regents have asked the attorney general to file suit to compel the treasurer to place $1,500,000 to credit of the permanent fund. The letter indicates that if the public desires the money placed to the permanent fund, it will be done.

ELECTRA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PLANS BUDGET SYSTEM

ELECTRA, Nov. 18.—The first step in placing Electra's chamber of commerce upon a budget system of appropriation and expenditure was taken at the auditorium of the high school here tonight when definite plans for raising a budgeted amount for 1926 activity were announced to about 200 representative business men of the city. A committeed headed by E. R. rBown, in charge of the budget campaign, will call upon the business men of the city Thursday morning and take the pledges of thirty or more for two hours work on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, toward soliciation of the $12,500 that directors of the chamber of commerce have decided the organization needs for its 1925 work.

Two Hours, 3 Days.

But two hours on each of the three days set aside for the campaign will be required of the workers, according to Mr. Brown last night. Noontime luncheons will be held on each day and reports made of progress toward the $12,500 goal.

Definite announcements of the budget campaign plans came as the climax to the chamber's "indoor barbecue and community meeting." Dinner was served in the "help-yourself" syle, barbecue sandwiches, pickles and coffee, and a doughnut comprising the informal repast.

There was music of all sorts, a sing-song at both the beginning and the end of the program led by W. L. Underwood; several selections of the Rotary club quartet composed of W. P. Slaton, W. L. Underwood, Gordon Hall, and Bill Hinds; and tw vocal duets by Misses Irene Keller and Leatrice Wofford.

Addresses Given.

C. E. McDavid, president of the Electra chamber of commerce and agricultural, and M. J. Norrell of the Dallas chambre of commerce, were the principal speakers of the evening. Mr. McDavid called attention to what the chamber of commerce had done for electra, and what it proposed to do. He explained the budget plan.

"We're not asking you for more money than you gave us last year, just asking for the assurance of that much so that we can proceed in spending it in a business like manner and above all without forever asking you for other contributions. We pledge ourselves not to attempt to raise special funds during the year of 1926 when this amount is subscribed.

Mr. Norrell's talk was along similar lines. His words bespoke the ideals of the right kind of chamber of commerce, and the value in point sof service that such an organization might be.

NON SECTARIAN

The plea of the community chest is one that knows no bounds of sect, religion, class or social standing; and for that reason it is carrying a city wide appeal in Wichita Falls.

In the five years it has been operative in this community its fairness, its efficiency, its worth while intents have impressed themselves on those here who each year make possible a continuation of work. In other words the chest idea has "sold" itself and now, as never before, perhaps, Wichita Falls is giving recognition to the fact that the chest is a community enterprise in which all ought to share.

In the preparatory work for this year's campaign which will be launched Nov. 24 and continues on through the 24th and 25th, if necessary, executives in charge of the work are finding a ready response from all quarters. This has been true before, of course, but it seems to be even more pronounced now.

Retail merchants, for example, are giving liberally of their display window space for the placing of chest posters and other publicity matter; professional men have been taking an active interest in the coming drive; theatres and places of amusement are co-operating in excellent fashion by allowing all time wanted for chest speeches.

And one of the most interested groups in the city is the laboring class, which, through union leaders here, have pledged their full support and entire co-operation in the chest movement. William Awker, president of the central trades council here, lent the full endorsement of organized labor in Wichita Falls to the chest idea when he declared that "the laboring man here believes the community chest is a necessary factor in our civic life, and since he believes that he is going to support it to the best of his ability."

Past records have borne out this statement, for in years gone by the laboring class in the city has been one of the most consistent contributors to the chest fund each year. Their donations are perhaps not quite so large as some others, but there has been a unified and wholehearted response from the laboring element that gives concrete proof of the sincerity of its belief in organized social work.

Campaign heads are counting in no small degree on the laboring man's support in the Nov. 23, 24 and 25 drive for $55,000.

THE BEST TIME TO ENJOY YOURSELF

Experience seems to show that there is great wisdom in Seneca's advice, to live each day as if it were our whole life.

Instead of always thinking about our plans and anxiously looking to the future, or of giving ourselves up to regret for the past, we should never forget that the present is the only reality, the only certainty.

Both the past and the future are of less consequence to us than we generally think.

The past was very different from what we suppose it to have been.

Distance which makes objects look small to the eye, makes them look big to the eye of thought.

The present alone is true and actual;

It is the only time that possesses full reality, and our existence lies in it exclusively.

We ought then, to enjoy every hour with a full consciousness of its value.

We shall hardly be able to do this if we bemoan the past and worry about the future.

"It is," Schopenhauer remarks, "the height of folly to refuse the present hour of happiness, or want only to spoil it by vexation by bygones or uneasiness about what is to come.

"There is a time for forethought, yea, ever for repentance; but when it is over, let us think of what is past as something to which we have said farewell—and of the future as of that which lies beyond our power, in the lap of the gods."

We apppreciate and enjoy the present more when, in those days when we are well and strong, we remember how, in sickness and sorrow, every past hour that was free from pain and privation seemed in our memory so infinitely to be envied—as it were, a lost paradise.

But most of us believe through our days of happiness without noticing them; and it is only when pain comes upon us that we wish them back.

If we are not careful, a thousand gay and pleasant hours of our lives are wasted in ill-humor; we let them slip by unenjoyed.

The present is the time to enjoy yourself. To repeat, live each day as if it were your whole life.

MAN'S INSATIABLE DESIRE

Most everyone is familiar with Emerson's line, "Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm."

The sentence preceding it in the essay in which it appears (circles) is: "The one thing which we seek with insatiable desire is to forget ourselves.

"To be surprised out of our propriety,

"To lose our sempiternal (everlasting) memory,

"And to do something without knowing how or why; in short to draw a new circle."

The way of life is wonderful. It is by abandonment.

"A man," said Oliver Cromwell, "never rises so high as when he knows not whither he is going." History gives us eloquent proof of this.

Dreams and drunkenness, the use of drugs, are the semblance and counterfeit of this oracular genius, and hence their dangerous attraction to men.

For the same reason they ask the aid of wild passions, as in gambling and war, to ape in some manner "those flames and generosities to the heart."

Yet people wish to be settled.

They should see that only so far as they are unsettled is there any hope for them.

In nature every moment is new; the past is always swallowed and forgotten.

Nothing is secure but life, transition and what Emerson calls the energizing spirit.

No love can be bound by oath to secure it against a higher love.

No truth is so sublime but it may be trival tomorrow in the light of new thoughts or deeds.

Life is a series of surprises.

We do not guess today the mood, the pleasure, the power of tomorrow, when we are building up our being.

Uncommon Sense

THE "SMART CROOK."

Stories of brilliant burglars, and clever forgers, and keen minded train robbers are interesting, but they are not true.

The crook may be crafty, but if he were clever he would not be a crook.

There is an intellectual lack in any one who makes his living by crime of any kind.

He may for a while baffle the police, but while he is doing it he is in a state of mental worry which honest men can not understand.

He may impress the guileless with some swindling scheme, and for a while get their money away from them, but sooner or later he will be found out, and either go to prison or flee to some country where he has to live under an assumed name, and be in constant dread of capture.

If you have ever visited a prison you have noticed that the great majority of the inmates have the faces of morons.

It is the fact that they are dull, not the fact that they are smart, that makes them lawbreakers.

I once worked in an office with a young engineer, who though he seemed to be industrious and had a fair degree of ability, I instinctively mistrusted.

He used to talk to me at luncheon about the impossibility of getting ahead with the "world all organized against him," as he put it.

He said that every man ought to be for himself, and to use his own brains to help him, irrespective of the rights of anybody else.

When I intimated that this was hardly a sound philosophy he merely smiled pityingly, and said that it was a good deal sounder than that of the clerks and book-keepers in the office who plodded along for small wages, and were contented to take the contempt of the men who had employed their brains to get along.

A few years later this man was employed in a contracting company, and in charge of a big payroll.

One of his ideas of how to use his brains to get ahead was to maintain dummy names on the payroll, and draw the money that would have been due them if they had existed.

By this means he made considerable money, stole it rather—which he employed in speculation.

A year later he was rich, and by those who did not know him—respected.

Then one day he suddenly blew his brains out, and it developed afterward that he had been caught in a plot to rob a bank. His philosophy convinced him that he was entitled to do anything that "he could get away with" and his speculations having gone bad, he needed money to maintain his position.

This is one case out of many thousands.

The worst thing for the beginner in crime is to succeed.

He can only succeed for a time, and he is bound to come crashing down before long.

He may have the shrewdness to play ways to swindle and rob, but he lacks real brains or he would go straight, and keep out of trouble.

Never think that a crook is clever. The very fact that he is a crook shows that he is really stupid, and without real power of thought.

SYNCOPHANTS AND SYCOPHANTS

It has become so that heretical opinions, i. e., opinions contrary to those commonly held, do not perceptibly gain or even lose, ground.

They never blaze out far and wide, but continue to smoulder in the narrow circles of thinking and studious persons among whom they originate, without ever lighting up the general affairs of mankind with either a true or deceptive light.

And thus is kept up a state of things very satisfactory to some minds, as John Stuart Mill points out in his masterful Essay on Liberty, because, without the unpleasant process of tarring and feathering or imprisoning anybody, it maintains all prevailing opinions outwardly undisturbed, while it does not absolutely interdict the exercise of dissentients afflicted with the malady of thought.

A convenient plan for keeping all things going on very much as they are.

But the price paid for this sort of intellectual pacification is the sacrifice of the entire moral courage of the human mind.

It is a state of things in which a large portion of the most active and inquiring intellects find it advisable to keep their genuine principles and grounds of their convictions within their breasts, and attempt, in what they address to the public, to fit as much as they can of their own conclusions, to the premises which they have internally renounced.

Any newspaper reporter will tell you that the things most of our leaders say "not for publication" are contrary to what they allow to be printed.

Few outstanding men of the country have, for instance, expressed in public their whole and true opinion of prohibition.

The sort of men who can be looked for under such a state of things are either mere conformers to commonplace, as for example, nearly all our public officials, or what Mill calls "time-servers for truth" whose arguments on all important subjects are meant for their hearers, and not those which have convinced themselves.

It can hardly be denied that intolerance is making this country not a place of mental freedom.

We are becoming a nation of syncophants, dancing to the jazz ideas of those who bawl the loudest, with the least regard for wisdom.

Sycophants are more to be admired, for they at least have a mind of their own.

PEACE-TIME INDEMNITIES

The colossal size of the indemnities the allied nations sought to collect from the central powers has caused the world to forget the tremendous tribute wrung from France by Bismark in 1871. But for more than forty years the nations regard the Prussian exaction as the last word in indemnities and marveled that any nation should wring from a weaker one a tribute of such proportions.

The indemnity paid by France to Prussia in 1871 approximated $200,000,000. Compare this tremendous sum with the amount annually wrung from American agriculture by inequitable tariff schedules and then decide whether war or peace is the more disastrous to the human race.

On January 11, 1924, there appeared in the Weekly News Letter, published by the American Farm Bureau Federation, tables showing just how much profit the Fordney-McCumber act is bringing to American agriculture and just what loss this act forces agriculture to sustain. The tables show that for the year 1921, the tariff schedules brought to agriculture $125,000,000 that agriculture otherwise would not have received and took from agriculture $426,000,000 that it otherwise would not have been forced to pay.

Thus, according to the official word of the American Farm Bureau Federation, inequitable schedules in a single year took from American agriculture a net tribute of $301,000,000—a tribute 50 percent greater than the victorious Prussian wrung from the people of France. And all in a single year.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

Scorpio.

The favorable planetary aspects that prevailed during the latter part of yesterday continue in full force today until the late afternoon. They then become overcast, although not altogether adverse. The task that was commenced yesterday can be prosecuted with undim energy for such times the good omens prevail, which are especially auspicious for real estae or legal business. After this, i twould be advisable to "slow up," and to make a mental review of what has been accomplished, taking care to exercise self-control so as not to give way to either ibpulsive speech or action.

Children born today will, so far as physical conditions go, be absolutely normal during their infancy. They will, however, demand much care and attention on reaching the age of adolescence, and at that time one serious illness, at least, threatens them. In character, the girl will, unfortunately, be weak and shallow. More fond of finery than of ability and more influenced by externals, than by sterling worth of character. She should marry young. A boy, on the other hand, will be very introspective and rather reserved. He will possess a very strong will, and is destined, according to the signs to "make good," not only in a material, but in a spiritual, way.

If today is your birtbday, your life runs alongo in smooth and orderly channels. You never allow anything to upset the even tenor of your way, and possess remarkable poise and self-control. Nothing can ever ruffle your disposition, and though you may feel as "mad as a March hare" no one, judging by your actions, would ever know it. You are cheerful, contented, truthful and affectionate.

There runs through your system a slight vein of selfishness, and this is evidenced when your personal comfort is menaced.

Your ambition is very limited, and owing to your inherently calm temperament, you are not capable of fighting for a cause, or against one. It is, therefore, fair to assume that you do not, and will not, enjoy any exceptional measure of material success.

On the whole, you are a very satisfactory companion, and a faithful and loyal mate.

Man Was on Earth 150,000 Years Ago, Scientist Claims

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Scientists expect to prove to the world by skeletons, that man existed 150,000 years ago, Roy Chapman Andrews naturalist and explorer, native of Beloit, Wis., said in a lecture here last night.

Dr. Andrews, leader of the third Asiatic expedition sponsored by the American Museum of Natural History, declared that on the latest expedition into Asia led by himself the group of scientists found weapons and tools of the man of 150,000 years ago.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Directors of Mack Truck Inc., today declared a stock dividend of fifty per cent on the common stock payable in common stock December 31 to holders of record December 15. A special stockholders meeting has been called for December 4 to increase the common stock by 224,429 shares.

HOW IT STARTED

"Mercurial."

This term, which is applied to people or actions that are swift, active, in the parlance of the day, "full of pep," is an interesting example of the wealth of color there is in words.

Derived from the Latin "mercurialis," (pertaining to Mercury), it is a survival of the days when astrology was a matter of daily concern in the lives of the people. For "Mercury" is the name of the planet nearest the sun. And in accordance with the old belief that persons born under a planet were endowed with characteristics corresponding to the nature of the planet, those born under Mercury were expected to be the human version of the chemical quicksilver which because of its nature was also endowed with the name Mercury! It is easily comprehensible then that when they did manifest such qualities they should have been called "Mercurial"—a use of the term which has persisted to this day.

POEMS THAT LIVE

Admonition

Well may'st thou halt and gaze with brightening eye!
The lovely cottage in the guardian nook
Has stirred thee deeply; with its own dear brook,
Its own small pasture, almost its own sky!
But covet not the abode; forbear to sigh,
As many do, repining while they look;
Intruders who would tear from Nature's book
This precious leaf, with harsh impiety,
Think what the home must be if it were thine,
Even thine, though few thy wants! Roof, window, door,
The very flowers are sacred to the poor,
The roses to the porch which they entwine!
Yea, all that now enchants thee from the day
On which it should be touched, would melt away.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 18.—(AP)—An elederly Turk whose baggage bore th elabel "Prince Rajah second," disemebarked from the North German Lloyd liner Berlin in Hoboken this afternoon. Customs officials said he carried $32,000 in cash and jewelry and antiques and other art objects having a value o fabout $5,000,000.

Squads of police escorted him from the pier to the Twenty-third Street ferry. He was to register at the Vanderbilt hotel in New York.

SUB ROSA BY MIMI

May He Have Your Photograph?

Time was when an aspiring suitor timidly approached the lady of his heart and with much flatering and blushing asked whether she'd deign to favor him with an inexpensive but handsome likeness of herself.

And she, after some hesitation and consultation with mother carefully wrapped up the desired portrait and sent it to him marked "confidential," and "handle with care."

Not so in these gay days. Witness the young gallant who has danced twice with the same girl in one evening.

They are standing talking between dances and he asks carelessly: "Haven't got a snap of yourself or a real good picture, have you? I'd like to have one for my rogues gallery. Ought to make all the others look pretty sick."

And she answers in the same spirit: "Afraid I haven't any with me, but if you'll give me your address, perhaps I can dig up one for you."

Yet some girls are still flattered by a request for their pictures, from boys they've known exactly 35 minutes.

These girls write to me in the greatest excitement, asking me whether I believe in love at first sight, and isn't it wonderful how some people get along with each other almost at once—and they all end up with the pathetic query: "May he have my photograph?"

Certainly he may have your photograph if you don't mind having it stuck up beside that of the girl from his home town, and Tessie the Beautiful Circus Lady and a few thousand movie stars he's never met.

You girls forget that the craze for popularity today is not entirely a feminine mania. The boys are rather fond of being thought sheiks in their heart of hearts.

And the boy whose room is a sort of gallery of beauty feels rather pleased with himself when he surveys the landscape.

That's why there are so many sudden requests for photos, nowadays, and why so many girls are led to believe that they have made an instantaneous hit.

If a boy asks you for a nice picture of yourself, within a couple of hours after meeting you, don't flush with pleasure and ask yourself: "What is this power I have over men?"

Just use your common sense and realize that if he wants to see you again badly enough, he'll have plenty of time to ask for your picture in the weeks to come. Don't waste your photographs on a lot of collectors.

Save them for someone who shows that he really wants them not as trophies but as remembrances of you.

(Mimi will be glad to answer any inquiries directed to this paper provided a stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Also she will be glad to send food for conversation and how to overcome self-consciousness.)

Hypnotist Claims His Powers Reach For Long Distance

MOSCOW, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A youngg Soviet scientist, Dr. Koshinsky, who has been studying the forces behind telepathy and hypnotism since 1919 announced today that he had succeeded in transfering human thoughts to animals at a distance while he himself was enclosed in a specially constructed iron box. He also hypnotized these animals he declares after he had placed them in the box while he was a considerable distance away.

Koshinsky asserts that he is able to convey his thoughts by means of hypnotism to human beings from an isolated locality without actually seeing the person. He thinks the results he says he has obtained prove his theory that physical rays emanate not only from the brain but from the entire nervous system of every animal organism.

COOLIDGE'S FATHER BETTER

Recovers Enough to Leave Bed Following Heart Attack

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Colonel John C. Coolidge, father of the president who has been ill at his home here from a recurrence of "heart block," had so far recovered today that he dressed himself and sat down to lunch shortly after noon today. He told inquirers that he felt materially better as he waited for the afternoon call of his personal hpysician, Dr. Albert M. Cram of Bridgewater.

ASK FEE OF $300,000.

Lawyers for Texon Oil Co. Stockholders Present Claims to Court.

EL PASO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Attorneys for stockholders in the Texon Oil and Land company suit recently decided here, have asked for fees of $300,000. The attorneys, B. L. Batts, San Antonio and W. H. Burgess, El Paso submitted their claim to Judge P. R. Price who ruled that the fees should be fixed by the court if they could not be fixed otherwise. The two lawyers assert that the decree compelled the company to return stock worth about $5,000,000 to their clients, and that the fee is not exorbitant.

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore has swam to shore from a yacht in Long Island Sound. Bugle, a faithful dog, accompanied her. Bugle disappeared from the beach and returned bearing a man's oilskin coat, which Connie was glad enough to put on. Then the dog reappeared bearing a package containing $50,000, which the mysterious Pooch gave her the night before, but which she induced David Lacy to take. And now Lacy himself suddenly presents himself. Connie was much in the company of rum-runners or revenue officers—she doesn't know which—last night.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

"If I have the strength," repeated Connemara. "You are not suggesting walking, are you? Isn't there a team or a car we can use?" And the tone brought tears to Lacy's eyes.

"Not a chance. I'm sorry, but it's walk or stay here."

"All right," Connemara sighed, "I suppose I'll be warmer walking, anyway. Just turn your back until I get this sailor's kimono draped around me—and by the way, I suppose this is yours."

Lacy blushed, although, of course, Connemara couldn't see him. He was rather nicely ingenuous at times for so experienced a young man. Finally Connemara was as well draped as she could be. "All right," she called. "I guess this will do. I'll make you walk ahead of me, and that will give me a little bit more privacy."

"Do you think you'll be able to walk five miles in those?" he asked, pointing to her muddy little silver slippers.

"Why not? I've danced more than twice that number and never thought much about it. If I can't stand them I can take them off, or at least the heels. Come on."

And so they started on their journey, Bugle at their heels, Connemara mincing along in her little high-heeled slippers, the slicker slapping at her legs like a wet sail, the once carefully wound and jaunty turban now slipped rakishly over to the side of her head, damp and grimy. And Lacy—the always immaculate Lacy, looking like nothing an outfitter of class would use as an ad for "the well-dressed man"—strode on in front, forging ahead one moment and then, as Connemara called out to him, shortening his stride to keep one respectful pace ahead of her.

As they trudged along, Connemara told her experiences and how she and McTish went over the side of the boat, and Lacy recounted the last dive of the Bloody Nuisance and the capture of the Filomena and her company.

"I got away because they thought I was knocked up so badly there wasn't any need of watching me," he wound up.

"Do you believe that Aunt Celimena's in danger?" Connemara asked anxiously.

"Well, of course, she has been safer," he admitted, "but there has been a split in policy between our friend Pooch and the Swede, so I fancy for the present—till tonight, anyhow, they won't take any definite steps one way or the other."

Now they walked in silence. Lacy had led the way along the beach instead of taking the road, and they had come to a stretch of hard sand where they were able to synchronize their gait a little better. Connemara even drew level with Lacy and, slipping her arm through his, allowed herself to be almost towed.

"There is something I want to ask you," she said gravely. "Why did you send me that money by Bugle? You're not sure even now whether I am a crook or not, are you?" And then, as Lacy tried to stutter a reply, she continued: "Oh, you needn't protest, it doesn't matter—but feeling that way I'd like to know why you gave up the money."

"By the way, where is it?" he evaded.

"That's my secret and Bugle's," said Connemara, and she turned to call Bugle but he had disappeared. He may have felt that with Lacy's appearance his responsibility was at an end, and had quietly melted out of the picture like the gentleman he was. Maybe he had gone back to guard the treasure, or maybe he just had a date somewhere. Whatever it was his doggish fancy had turned to, he most certainly was nowhere to be seen.

"Bugle's gone," wailed Connemara.

"He's all right," assured Lacy. "Don't worry about him, he'll turn up some time."

"I hope so. I never had a chance to really thank him for all he did for me. I don't want him to think me ungrateful."

"I'll explain it to him when I see him," said Lacy with a little laugh. That laugh was his mistake, for it brought Connemara right back to her topic. Too many men have made the mistake of laughing and appearing at ease when they thought they had a woman sidetracked from a topic, particularly when a woman develops a one-track mind.

"You haven't answered my question. Why did you give up the money?"

"Well," he faltered, "I am rather given to doing impulsive things. You can understand the feeling better than anyone, I should say. You know what the feeling is when——"

"You're wandering," she warned.

"Well, I'm puzzled about you—curious—so when Bugle came back to me after taking you the slicker, I staged a little experiment that ought to give me the answer to the puzzle of you."

"Go on," Connemara commanded.

"Well, you see"—Lacy was speaking very slowly and accusingly now—"I half believe you're that girl I met at Auteuil only— Well, it's all very confusing and improbable—all the Pooch and Sweetie and Doc business and their being so chummy with you, and especially handing over all that money to you. Oh, I feel like a rotter even saying this to you," he interrupted himself to exclaim in very real distress.

"So, thinking I am a crook, you sent the fifty thousand back to me. It was nice and generous of you—but why?"

"I told you I was impulsive."

"I should say so—fifty thousand dollars!"

"And yet there was a thought back of it all," he went on. "If you really were the girl of Auteuil, I was safe, wasn't I? And if you were mixed up with that gang against your will, there was a nice tidy little sum of money that you probably had as much right to as any of the rest of the gang. Anyway, it gave you a chance to break away, go somewhere and——"

"Start all over again," Connemara finished for him. "Yes, for an impulsive act, it was very well thought out. Well, let's see how it works."

Sometimes the beach became very rocky, and then Lacy would turn to help her. At times she accepted his assistance and at others would draw herself up haughtily and wait for him to walk on. By the time they had reached their journey's end she would gladly have allowed him to carry her.

Lacy's house was one of those old-fashioned houses which have been remodelled, and about which one is supposed to keep saying "How quaint!" Connemara eventually ran out of "How quaints." Yet it really was a picture, set in a little grove of pines which must have helped to make it nice and damp at times, but provided a charming background. However, pictures meant nothing to Connemara at this time, and Lacy was sensible enough to realize the fact.

"The first thing you'll want is a change of clothes and then a piping hot breakfast, and there, waiting for us, is the person who can furnish them both."

UNIFICATION IS DEFEATED AT WAXAHACHIE

182 to 162 Vote Cast At Central Texas Methodist Conference

WAXAHACHIE, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The issue of unification was settled speedily in the Central Texas conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, by a vot of 162 in favor to 182 against the proposition, a few hours after the conference opened here today.

With the vote of the Central Texas conference, the last of the fivve conferences of the church in the state registered the total vote on unification stands 771 in favor of the proposition, 654 agfainst it.

The conference, presided over by Bishop James E. Dickey, anti-unification leader, another of Bishop Dickey's conferences—the northwest Texas conference—in returning a vote against the issu.

The total vote throughout the entire denomination on uniting of the southern church with the northern church stands 3,652 in favor of the proposition to 3,222 against lacking the necessary three fourths majority.

Following the unification vote the conference plunged immediate into its business, proceeding to the election of delegates to the general conference. The lay men elected their delegates as follows: W. W. Lastinger, Waco; W. S. Rowlands, Temple; B. F. Cherry, Weatherford; Mrs. E. W. Kimble, Gorman; W. Leake Akers, Gatesville; A. K. Doss, Ballinger; J. W. Mitchell, Brownwood; W. B. Williams, Fort Worth.

The eight clerical delegates were elected as follows: The Reverends L. P. Culver, Fort Worth; F. B. Hawk, Waxahachie; J. E. Crawford, Fort Worth (the Rev. Mr. Crawford is Centenary secretary residing in Nashville, Tenn.); J. W. Bergin, Fort Worth; O. F. Sensabaugh, Cleburne; P. E. Reily, Dallas, and F. G. Thompson, Georgetown.

lander kept his poise, but when he was asked question after question about the week in December, 1921, when he stayed at the Hotel Marie Antoinette in New York with Alice he blushed violently and began to show the strain. Alice, herself, spent the day with her face buried in her coat.

"Before I start asking about this matter," said Mr. Davis, "I want you to remember that it was your side that dragged filth into this case."

Tells of Trips.

The story of the trip was told jerkily in response to innumerable questions. He said that he and Alice had made the trip to New York in his father's automobile, driven by his father's chauffeur. They registered at the Marie Antoinette under the names of Mr. and Mrs. James Smith of Rye," and then went to a theatre and a restaurant, returning to the hotel later. Previously he told how he had persuaded her to accompany him.

Mr. Davis asked a series of questions designed to show that Rhinelander was not so unsophisticated as he had been represented. The questions were personal and Rhinelander haltingly answered thm, his face red with blush. The crowded room hung on every word. In the midst of it he complained that he was tired and the trial went over until tomorrow.

During the day five of Rhinelander's letters to his bride and seven postal cards to her parents from him were read. One of the letters, written at the Canal Zone when he was on a long trip at the order of his father, Philip Rhinelander, was 17 pages in length and was filled with fervid protestations of love. It revealed that young Rhinelander had been sent away to keep him from Alice. He promised, however, that he would "carry on, no matter how long the fight may last."

Wrote from Bermuda.

Another was from Bermuda where Rhinelander wrote that the girls he met disgusted him because of their cigarette smoking and drinking.

"You were shocked at these society girls drinking until they became light," said Mr. Davis. "Did it shock your sense of refinementt o register at the Hotel Marie Antoinette with a woman who was not your wife?"

The question made Rhinelander squirm.

"No," he answered at length in a low voice.

Another letter revealed that Alice and he had gone on a motor trip through New England in August, 1924, a few months before their marriage.

Once Mr. Davis asked him what was the color of Alice's body and he replied that the arms were brown.

"No more," he added, "than the arms of many women I have seen in Havana.

"Are you color blind?" he was asked.

"No."

"Can you distinguish brown from white?"

"Yes."

"Was your brain all right in 1922?"

"Yes."

The bill of particulars which Rhinelander yesterday admitted contained five falsehoods again was brought up and he again conceded that it was wrong. Davis then switched to another attack.

"Do you know that you have dragged your wife's name in the gutter before the world?" he asked.

"I followed my counsel's advice."

"You wouldnt like like a gentleman to protect a woman, then?"

"Not when I was deceived."

39 PLUS GIVEN SHORT WOOL IN ANGELO BIDS

March Bros. Sell 100,000 Pounds Accumulation Wednesday

SAN ANGELO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A fraction over 39 cents a pound was the price in the first sale of 1925 short wool in Texas when March Brothers here late today sold their season's accumulation of almost 100,000 pounds to Henry D. Allen, Philadelphia.

Representatives of nine Boston houses also entered bids.

The grade of the fleeces, principally from Crockett and Sutton counties, was about the same as last fall, with the staple a bid shorter and the shrinkage, 1 to 2 per cent heavier, S. W. March said.

On 450,000 pounds of short wool rejected by the Wool Growers Central Storage company here Tuesday in the first sealed bid offerings in the state this season ranged from 33 to a fraction over 39 cents a pound, it was reported today.

NON SECTARIAN

The plea of the community chest is one that knows no bounds of sect, religion, class or social standing; and for that reason it is carrying a city wide appeal in Wichita Falls.

In the five years it has been operative in this community its fairness, its efficiency, its worth while intents have impressed themselves on those here who each year make possible a continuation of work. In other words the chest idea has "sold" itself and now, as never before, perhaps, Wichita Falls is giving recognition to the fact that the chest is a community enterprise in which all ought to share.

In the preparatory work for this year's campaign which will be launched Nov. 24 and continues on through the 24th and 25th, if necessary, executives in charge of the work are finding a ready response from all quarters. This has been true before, of course, but it seems to be even more pronounced now.

Retail merchants, for example, are giving liberally of their display window space for the placing of chest posters and other publicity matter; professional men have been taking an active interest in the coming drive; theatres and places of amusement are co-operating in excellent fashion by allowing all time wanted for chest speeches.

And one of the most interested groups in the city is the laboring class, which, through union leaders here, have pledged their full support and entire co-operation in the chest movement. William Awker, president of the central trades council here, lent the full endorsement of organized labor in Wichita Falls to the chest idea when he declared that "the laboring man here believes the community chest is a necessary factor in our civic life, and since he believes that he is going to support it to the best of his ability."

Past records have borne out this statement, for in years gone by the laboring class in the city has been one of the most consistent contributors to the chest fund each year. Their donations are perhaps not quite so large as some others, but there has been a unified and wholehearted response from the laboring element that gives concrete proof of the sincerity of its belief in organized social work.

Campaign heads are counting in no small degree on the laboring man's support in the Nov. 23, 24 and 25 drive for $55,000.

THE BEST TIME TO ENJOY YOURSELF

Experience seems to show that there is great wisdom in Seneca's advice, to live each day as if it were our whole life.

Instead of always thinking about our plans and anxiously looking to the future, or of giving ourselves up to regret for the past, we should never forget that the present is the only reality, the only certainty.

Both the past and the future are of less consequence to us than we generally think.

The past was very different from what we suppose it to have been.

Distance which makes objects look small to the eye, makes them look big to the eye of thought.

The present alone is true and actual;

It is the only time that possesses full reality, and our existence lies in it exclusively.

We ought then, to enjoy every hour with a full consciousness of its value.

We shall hardly be able to do this if we bemoan the past and worry about the future.

"It is," Schopenhauer remarks, "the height of folly to refuse the present hour of happiness, or want only to spoil it by vexation by bygones or uneasiness about what is to come.

"There is a time for forethought, yea, ever for repentance; but when it is over, let us thiuk of what is past as something to which we have said farewell —and of the future as of that which lies beyond our power, in the lap of the gods."

We appreciate and enjoy the present more when, in those days when we are well and strong, we remember how, in sickness and sorrow, every past hour that was free from pain and privation seemed in our memory so infinitely to be envied—as it were, a lost paradise.

But most of us believe through our days of happiness without noticing them; and it is only when pain comes upon us that we wish them back.

If we are not careful, a thousand gay and pleasant hours of our lives are wasted in ill-humor; we let them slip by unenjoyed.

The present is the time to enjoy yourself. To repent, live each day as if it were your whole life.

MAN'S INSATIABLE DESIRE

Most everyone is familiar with Emerson's line, "Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm."

The sentence preceding it in the essay in which it appears (circles) is: "The one thing which we seek with insatiable desire is to forget ourselves.

"To be surprised out of our propriety,

"To lose our sempiternal (everlasting) memory,

"And to do something without knowing how or why; in short to draw a new circle."

The way of life is wonderful. It is by abandonment.

"A man," said Oliver Cromwell, "never rises so high as when he knows not whither he is going." History gives us eloquent proof of this.

Dreams and drunkenness, the use of drugs, are the semblance and counterfeit of this oracular genius, and hence their dangerous attraction to men.

For the same reason they ask the aid of wild passions, as in gambling and war, to ape in some manner "those flames and generosities to the heart."

Yet people wish to be settled.

They should see that only so far as they are unsettled is there any hope for them.

In nature every moment is new; the past is always swallowed and forgotten.

Nothing is secure but life, transition and what Emerson calls the energizing spirit.

No love can be bound by oath to secure it against a higher love.

No truth is so sublime but it may be trival tomorrow in the light of new thoughts or deeds.

Life is a series of surprises.

We do not guess today the mood, the pleasure, the power of tomorrow, when we are building up our being.

Uncommon Sense

THE "SMART CROOK."

Stories of brilliant burglars, and clever forgers, and keen minded train robbers are interesting, but they are not true.

The crook may be crafty, but if he were clever he would not be a crook.

There is an intellectual lack in any one who makes his living by crime of any kind.

He may for a while baffle the police, but while he is doing it he is in a state of mental worry which honest men can not understand.

He may impress the guileless with some swindling scheme, and for a while get their money away from them, but sooner or later he will be found out, and either go to prison or flee to some country where he has to live under an assumed name, and be in constant dread of capture.

If you have ever visited a prison you have noticed that the great majority of the inmates have the faces of morons.

It is the fact that they are dull, not the fact that they are smart, that makes them lawbreakers.

I once worked in an office with a young engineer, who though he seemed to be industrious and had a fair degree of ability, I instinctively mistrusted.

He used to talk to me at luncheon about the impossibility of getting ahead with the "world all organized against him," as he put it.

He said that every man ought to be for himself, and to use his own brains to help him, irrespective of the rights of anybody else.

When I intimated that this was hardly a sound philosophy he merely smiled pityingly, and said that it was a good deal sounder than that of the clerks and book-keepers in the office who plodded along for small wages, and were contented to take the contempt of the men who had employed their brains to get along.

A few years later this man was employed in a contracting company, and in charge of a big payroll.

One of his ideas of how to use his brains to get ahead was to maintain dummy names on the payroll, and draw the money that would have been due them if they had existed.

By this means he made considerable money, stole it rather—which he employed in speculation.

A year later he was rich, and by those who did not know him—respected.

Then one day he suddenly blew his brains out, and it developed afterward that he had been caught in a plot to rob a bank. His philosophy convinced him that he was entitled to do anything that "he could get away with" and his speculations having gone bad, he needed money to maintain his position.

This is one case out of many thousands.

The worst thing for the beginner in crime is to succeed.

He can only succeed for a time, and he is bound to come crashing down before long.

He may have the shrewdness to play ways to swindle and rob, but he lacks real brains or he would go straight, and keep out of trouble.

Never think that a crook is clever. The very fact that he is a crook shows that he is really stupid, and without real power of thought.

SYNCOPHANTS AND SYCOPHANTS

It has become so that heretical opinions, i. e., opinions contrary to those commonly held, do not perceptibly gain or even lose, ground.

They never blaze out far and wide, but continue to smoulder in the narrow circles of thinking and studious persons among whom they originate, without ever lighting up the general affairs of mankind with either a true or deceptive light.

And thus is kept up a state of things very satisfactory to some minds, as John Stuart Mill points out in his masterful Essay on Liberty, because, without the unpleasant process of tarring and feathering or imprisoning anybody, it maintains all prevailing opinions outwardly undisturbed, while it does not absolutely interdict the exercise of dissentients afflicted with the malady of thought.

A convenient plan for keeping all things going on very much as they are.

But the price paid for this sort of intellectual pacification is the sacrifice of the entire moral courage of the human mind.

It is a state of things in which a large portion of the most active and inquiring intellects find it advisable to keep their genuine principles and grounds of their convictions within their breasts, and attempt, in what they address to the public, to fit as much as they can of their own conclusions, to the premises which they have internally renounced.

Any newspaper reporter will tell you that the things most of our leaders say "not for publication" are contrary to what they allow to be printed.

Few outstanding men of the country have, for instance, expressed in public their whole and true opinion of prohibition.

The sort of men who can be looked for under such a state of things are either mere conformers to commonplace, as for example, nearly all our public officials, or what Mill calls "time-servers for truth" whose arguments on all important subjects are meant for their hearers, and not those which have convinced themselves.

It can hardly be denied that intolerance is making this country not a place of mental freedom.

We are becoming a nation of syncophants, dancing to the jazz ideas of those who bawl the loudest, with the least regard for wisdom.

Sycophants are more to be admired, for they at least have a mind of their own.

PEACE-TIME INDEMNITIES

The colossal size of the indemnities the allied nations sought to collect from the central powers has caused the world to forget the tremendous tribute wrung from France by Bismark in 1871. But for more than forty years the nations regard the Prussian exaction as the last word in indemnities and marveled that any nation should wring from a weaker one a tribute of such proportions.

The indemnity paid by France to Prussia in 1871 approximated $200,000,000. Compare this tremendous sum with the amount annually wrung from American agriculture by inequitable tariff schedules and then decide whether war or peace is the more disastrous to the human race.

On January 11, 1924, there appeared in the Weekly News Letter, published by the American Farm Bureau Federation, tables showing just how much profit the Fordney-McCumber act is bringing to American agriculture and just what loss this act forces agriculture to sustain. The tables show that for the year 1921, the tariff schedules brought to agriculture $125,000,000 that agriculture otherwise would not have received and took from agriculture $426,000,000 that it otherwise would not have been forced to pay.

Thus, according to the official word of the American Farm Bureau Federation, inequitable schedules in a single year took from American agriculture a net tribute of $301,000,000—a tribute 50 percent greater than the victorious Prussian wrung from the people of France. And all in a single year.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

Scorpio.

The favorable planetary aspects that prevailed during the latter part of yesterday continue in full force today until the late afternoon. They then become overcast, although not altogether adverse. The task that was commenced yesterday can be prosecuted with undim energy for such times the good omens prevail, which are especially auspicious for real estae or legal business. After this, i twould be advisable to "slow up," and to make a mental review of what has been accomplished, taking care to exercise self-control so as not to give way to either ibpulsive speech or action.

Children born today will, so far as physical conditions go, be absolutely normal during their infancy. They will, however, demand much care and attention on reaching the age of adolescence, and at that time one serious illness, at least, threatens them. In character, the girl will, unfortunately, be weak and shallow. More fond of finery than of ability and more influenced by externals, than by sterling worth of character. She should marry young. A boy, on the other hand, will be very introspective and rather reserved. He will possess a very strong will, and is destined, according to the signs to "make good," not only in a material, but in a spiritual, way.

If today is your birthday, your life runs alongo in smooth and orderly channels. You never allow anything to upset the even tenor of your way, and possess remarkable poise and self-control. Nothing can ever ruffle your disposition, and though you may feel as "mad as a March hare" no one, judging by your actions, would ever know it. You are cheerful, contented, truthful and affectionate.

There runs through your system a slight vein of selfishness, and this is evidenced when your personal comfort is menaced.

Your ambition is very limited, and owing to your inherently calm temperament, you are not capable of fighting for a cause, or against one. It is, therefore, fair to assume that you do not, and will not, enjoy any exceptional measure of material success.

On the whole you are a very satisfactory companion, and a faithful and loyal mate.

Man Was on Earth 150,000 Years Ago, Scientist Claims

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Scientists expect to prove to the world by skeletons, that man existed 150,000 years ago, Roy Chapman Andrews naturalist and explorer, native of Beloit, Wis., said in a lecture here last night.

Dr. Andrews, leader of the third Asiatic expedition sponsored by the American Museum of Natural History, declared that on the latest expedition into Asia led by himself the group of scientists found weapons and tools of the man of 150,000 years ago.

HOW IT STARTED

"Mercurial."

This term, which is applied to people or actions that are swift, active, in the parlance of the day, "full of pep," is an interesting example of the wealth of color there is in words.

Derived from the Latin "mercurialis," (pertaining to Mercury), it is a survival of the days when astrology was a matter of daily concern in the lives of the people. For "Mercury" is the name of the planet nearest the sun. And in accordance with the old belief that persons born under a planet were endowed with characteristics corresponding to the nature of the planet, those born under Mercury were expected to be the human version of the chemical quicksilver which because of its nature was also endowed with the name Mercury! It is easily comprehensible then that when they did manifest such qualities they should have been called "Mercurial" —a use of the term which has persisted to this day.

POEMS THAT LIVE

Admonition

Well may'st thou halt and gaze with brightening eye!
The lovely cottage in the guardian nook
Has stirred thee deeply; with its own dear brook,
Its own small pasture, almost its own sky!
But covet not the abode; forbear to sigh,
As many do, repining while they look;
Intruders who would tear from Nature's book
This precious leaf, with harsh impiety,
Think what the home must be if it were thine.
Even thine, though few thy wants! Roof, window, door,
The very flowers are sacred to the poor;
The roses to the porch which they entwine!
Yea, all that now enchants thee from the day
On which it should be touched, would melt away.

Squads of police escorted him from the pier to the Twenty-third Street ferry. He was to register at the Vanderbilt hotel in New York.

SUB ROSA BY MIMI

May He Have Your Photograph?

Time was when an aspiring suitor timidly approached the lady of his heart and with much flatering and blushing asked whether she'd deign to favor him with an inexpensive but handsome likeness of herself.

And she, after some hesitation and consultation with mother, carefully wrapped up the desired portrait and sent it to him marked "confidential," and "handle with care."

Not so in these gay days. Witness the young gallant who has danced twice with the same girl in one evening.

They are standing talking between dances and he asks carelessly: "Haven't got a snap of yourself or a real good picture, have you? I'd like to have one for my rogues gallery. Ought to make all the others look pretty sick."

And she answers in the same spirit: "Afraid I haven't any with me, but if you'll give me your address, perhaps I can dig up one for you."

Yet some girls are still flattered by a request for their pictures, from boys they've known exactly 35 minutes.

These girls write to me in the greatest excitement, asking me whether I believe in love at first sight, and isn't it wonderful how some people get along with each other almost at once —and they all end up with the pathetic query: "May he have my photograph?"

Certainly he may have your photograph if you don't mind having it stuck up beside that of the girl from his home town, and Tessie the Beautiful Circus Lady and a few thousand movie stars he's never met.

You girls forget that the craze for popularity today is not entirely a feminine mania. The boys are rather fond of being thought sheiks in their heart of hearts.

And the boy whose room is a sort of gallery of beauty feels rather pleased with himself when he surveys the landscape.

That's why there are so many sudden requests for photos, nowadays, and why so many girls are led to believe that they have made an instantaneous hit.

If a boy asks you for a nice picture of yourself, within a couple of hours after meeting you, don't flush with pleasure and ask yourself: "What is this power I have over men?"

Just use your common sense and realize that if he wants to see you again badly enough, he'll have plenty of time to ask for your picture in the weeks to come. Don't waste your photographs on a lot of collectors.

Save them for someone who shows that he really wants them not as trophies but as remembrances of you.

(Mimi will be glad to answer any inquiries directed to this paper provided a stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Also she will be glad to send food for conversation and how to overcome self-consciousness.)

Hypnotist Claims His Powers Reach For Long Distance

MOSCOW, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A youngg Soviet scientist, Dr. Koshinsky, who has been studying the forces behind telepathy and hypnotism since 1919 announced today that he had succeeded in transfering human thoughts to animals at a distance while he himself was enclosed in a specially constructed iron box. He also hypnotized these animals he declares after he had placed them in the box while he was a considerable distance away.

Koshinsky asserts that he is able to convey his thoughts by means of hypnotism to human beings from an isolated locality without actually seeing the person. He thinks the results he says he has obtained prove his theory that physical rays emanate not only from the brain but from the entire nervous system of every animal organism.

Lawyers for Texon Oil Co. Stockholders Present Claims to Court.

EL PASO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Attorneys for stockholders in the Texon Oil and Land company suit recently decided here, have asked for fees of $300,000. The attorneys, B. L. Batts, San Antonio and W. H. Burgess, El Paso submitted their claim to Judge P. R. Price who ruled that the fees should be fixed by the court if they could not be fixed otherwise. The two lawyers assert that the decree compelled the company to return stock worth about $5,000,000 to their clients, and that the fee is not exorbitant.

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore has swam to shore from a yacht in Long Island Sound. Bugle, a faithful dog, accompanied her. Bugle disappeared from the beach and returned bearing a man's oilskin coat, which Connie was glad enough to put on. Then the dog reappeared bearing a package containing $50,000, which the mysterious Pooch gave her the night before, but which she induced David Lacy to take. And now Lacy himself suddenly presents himself. Connie was much in the company of rum-runners or revenue officers—she doesn't know which—last night.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

"If I have the strength," repeated Connemara. "You are not suggesting walking, are you? Isn't there a team or a car we can use?" And the tone brought tears to Lacy's eyes.

"Not a chance. I'm sorry, but it's walk or stay here."

"All right," Connemara sighed, "I suppose I'll be warmer walking, anyway. Just turn your back until I get this sailor's kimono draped around me—and by the way, I suppose this is yours."

Lacy blushed, although, of course, Connemara couldn't see him. He was rather nicely ingenuous at times for so experienced a young man. Finally Connemara was as well draped as she could be. "All right," she called. "I guess this will do. I'll make you walk ahead of me, and that will give me a little bit more privacy."

"Do you think you'll be able to walk five miles in those?" he asked, pointing to her muddy little silver slippers.

"Why not? I've danced more than twice that number and never thought much about it. If I can't stand them I can take them off, or at least the heels. Come on."

And so they started on their journey, Bugle at their heels, Connemara mincing along in her little high-heeled slippers, the slicker slapping at her legs like a wet sail, the once carefully wound and jaunty turban now slipped rakishly over to the side of her head, damp and grimy. And Lacy—the always immaculate Lacy, looking like nothing an outfitter of class would use as an ad for "the well-dressed man"—strode on in front, forging ahead one moment and then, as Connemara called out to him, shortening his stride to keep one respectful pace ahead of her.

As they trudged along, Connemara told her experiences and how she and McTish went over the side of the boat, and Lacy recounted the last dive of the Bloody Nuisance and the capture of the Filomena and her company.

"I got away because they thought I was knocked up so badly there wasn't any need of watching me," he wound up.

"Do you believe that Aunt Celimena's in danger?" Connemara asked anxiously.

"Well, of course, she has been safer," he admitted, "but there has been a split in policy between our friend Pooch and the Swede, so I fancy for the present—till tonight, anyhow, they won't take any definite steps one way or the other."

Now they walked in silence. Lacy had led the way along the beach instead of taking the road, and they had come to a stretch of hard sand where they were able to synchronize their gait a little better. Connemara even drew level with Lacy and, slipping her arm through his, allowed herself to be almost towed.

"There is something I want to ask you," she said gravely. "Why did you send me that money by Bugle? You're not sure even now whether I am a crook or not, are you?" And then, as Lacy tried to stutter a reply, she continued: "Oh, you needn't protest, it doesn't matter—but feeling that way I'd like to know why you gave up the money."

"By the way, where is it?" he evaded.

"That's my secret and Bugle's," said Connemara, and she turned to call Bugle but he had disappeared. He may have felt that with Lacy's appearance his responsibility was at an end, and had quietly melted out of the picture like the gentleman he was. Maybe he had gone back to guard the treasure, or maybe he just had a date somewhere. Whatever it was his doggish fancy had turned to, he most certainly was nowhere to be seen.

"Bugle's gone," wailed Connemara.

"He's all right," assured Lacy. "Don't worry about him, he'll turn up some time."

"I hope so. I never had a chance to really thank him for all he did for me. I don't want him to think me ungrateful."

"I'll explain it to him when I see him," said Lacy with a little laugh. That laugh was his mistake, for it brought Connemara right back to her topic. Too many men have made the mistake of laughing and appearing at ease when they thought they had a woman sidetracked from a topic, particularly when a woman develops a one-track mind.

"You haven't answered my question. Why did you give up the money?"

"Well," he faltered, "I am rather given to doing impulsive things. You can understand the feeling better than anyone, I should say. You know what the feeling is when——"

"You're wandering," she warned.

"Well, I'm puzzled about you—curious—so when Bugle came back to me after taking you the slicker, I staged a little experiment that ought to give me the answer to the puzzle of you."

"Go on," Connemara commanded.

"Well, you see"—Lacy was speaking very slowly and accusingly now —"I half believe you're that girl I met at Auteuil only— Well, it's all very confusing and improbable —all the Pooch and Sweetie and Doc business and their being so chummy with you, and especially handing over all that money to you. Oh, I feel like a rotter even saying this to you," he interrupted himself to exclaim in very real distress.

"So, thinking I am a crook, you sent the fifty thousand back to me. It was nice and generous of you—but why?"

"I told you I was impulsive."

"I should say so—fifty thousand dollars!"

"And yet there was a thought back of it all," he went on. "If you really were the girl of Auteuil, I was safe, wasn't I? And if you were mixed up with that gang against your will, there was a nice tidy little sum of money that you probably had as much right to as any of the rest of the gang. Anyway, it gave you a chance to break away, go somewhere and——"

"Start all over again," Connemara finished for him. "Yes, for an impulsive act, it was very well thought out. Well, let's see how it works."

Sometimes the beach became very rocky, and then Lacy would turn to help her. At times she accepted his assistance and at others would draw herself up haughtily and wait for him to walk on. By the time they had reached their journey's end she would gladly have allowed him to carry her.

Lacy's house was one of those old-fashioned houses which have been remodelled, and about which one is supposed to keep saying "How quaint!" Connemara eventually ran out of "How quaints." Yet it really was a picture, set in a little grove of pines which must have helped to make it nice and damp at times, but provided a charming background. However, pictures meant nothing to Connemara at this time, and Lacy was sensible enough to realize the fact.

"The first thing you'll want is a change of clothes and then a piping hot breakfast, and there, waiting for us, is the person who can furnish them both."

lander kept his poise, but when he was asked question after question about the week in December, 1921, when he stayed at the Hotel Marie Antoinette in New York with Alice he blushed violently and begau to show the strain. Alice, herself, spent the day with her face buried in her coat.

"Before I start asking about this matter," said Mr. Davis, "I want you to remember that it was your side that dragged filth into this case."

Tells of Trips.

The story of the trip was told jerkily in response to innumerable questions. He said that he and Alice had made the trip to New York in his father's automobile, driven by his father's chauffeur. They registered at the Marie Antoinette under the names of Mr. and Mrs. James Smith of Rye," and then went to a theatre and a restaurant, returning to the hotel later. Previously he told how he had persuaded her to accompany him.

Mr. Davis asked a series of questions designed to show that Rhinelander was not so unsophisticated as he had been represented. The questions were personal and Rhinelander haltingly answered thm, his face red with blush. The crowded room hung on every word. In the midst of it he complained that he was tired and the trial went over until tomorrow.

During the day five of Rhinelander's letters to his bride and seven postal cards to her parents from him were read. One of the letters, written at the Canal Zone when he was on a long trip at the order of his father, Philip Rhinelander, was 17 pages in length and was filled with fervid protestations of love. It revealed that young Rhinelander had been sent away to keep him from Alice. He promised, however, that he would "carry on, no matter how long the fight may last."

Wrote from Bermuda.

Another was from Bermuda where Rhinelander wrote that the girls he met disgusted him because of their cigarette smoking and drinking.

"You were shocked at these society girls drinking until they became light," said Mr. Davis. "Did it shock your sense of refinement o register at the Hotel Marie Antoinette with a woman who was not your wife?"

The question made Rhinelander squirm.

"No," he answered at length in a low voice.

Another letter revealed that Alice and he had gone on a motor trip through New England in August, 1924, a few months before their marriage.

Once Mr. Davis asked him what was the color of Alice's body and he replied that the arms were brown.

"No more," he added, "than the arms of many women I have seen in Havana."

"Are you color blind?" he was asked.

"No."

"Can you distinguish brown from white?"

"Yes."

"Was your brain all right in 1922?"

"Yes."

The bill of particulars which Rhinelander yesterday admitted contained five falsehoods again was brought up and he again conceded that it was wrong. Davis then switched to another attack.

"Do you know that you have dragged your wife's name in the gutter before the world?" he asked.

"I followed my counsel's advice."

"You wouldnt like like a gentleman to protect a woman, then?"

"Not when I was deceived."

March Bros. Sell 100,000 Pounds Accumulation Wednesday

SAN ANGELO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A fraction over 39 cents a pound was the price in the first sale of 1925 short wool in Texas when March Brothers here late today sold their season's accumulation of almost 100,000 pounds to Henry D. Allen, Philadelphia.

Representatives of nine Boston houses also entered bids.

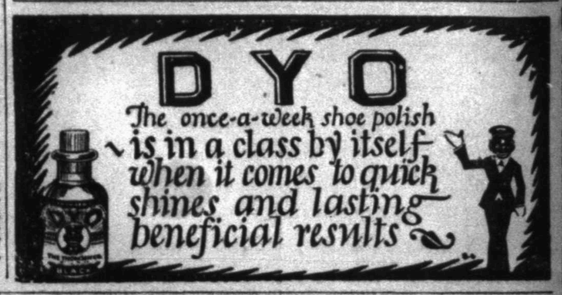

The grade of the fleeces, principally from Crockett and Sutton counties, was about the same as last fall, with the staple a bid shorter and the shrinkage, 1 to 2 per cent heavier, S. W. March said.

On 450,000 pounds of short wool rejected by the Wool Growers Central Storage company here Tuesday in the first sealed bid offeringgs in the state this season ranged from 33 to a fraction over 39 cents a pound, it was reported today.

Danger Signals Of Indigestion

The Disease That Strikes Like Lightnig

Beware of indigestion—the disease that kills more people and kills them quicker than any other. This warning, by physicians, is particularly applicable this season of the year when your system needs all of its healthy vigor to withstand colds, flu, and other winter ills.

What are the warnings that nature gives you of the approach of indigestion? The medical books tells us: 1. Gas, which means that your food is fermenting instead of digesting. 2. A feeling of fullness or oppression in the region of the stomach after eating. This means that the gas has ballooned your stomach and is pressing up against your heart and lungs. 3. A dull lazy feeling, which means that you are not getting nourishment from what you are eating. 4. Restlessness, unrefreshing sleep, which means that the poisons of indigestion are disturbing your brain and nerves. 5. Sometimes, pain and fluttering around the heart, though this symptom may come later.

Don't take chances with indigestion—you are too apt to lose. If you have had any of the symptoms mentioned above, get your digestive organs to work at once with Ferraline, Nature's great stomach treatment that has given relief to thousands. Ferraline immediately aids and assists every one of your stomach, liver and bowels. Ferraline makes your digestion "perfect and complete." You feel its helpful effects from the very first dose. Get a bottle of Ferraline today at any drug store. Ferraline is so much superior to any other remedy for indigestion that the owners have instructed every druggist to refund the purchase price, One Dollar, if you do not get relief, so it costs you nothing if you are not delighted with results. Delay might be dangerous. Get Ferraline today from your druggist.—Adv.

WOMAN VERY NERVOUS

Weak, Blue, Discouraged—Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicine

Cincinnati, Ohio.—"I was nervous and could not sleep, had crying spells and the blues, and didn't care if I lived or died. My right side was very bad and I had backache and a weakness. I read about your medicines in the papers and wrote for further information. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Medicine and Liver Pills, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I have had good results in every way and am able to do my work again and can eat anything that comes along. My friends tell me how well I am looking."—Mrs. F. K. CORIELL, 129 Peete St., Cincinnati, O.

CITY WILL BUY LOT TO FINISH FRONT ST. ROW

Special Meeting of City Council Sees Way to End Squatter Argument

Another chapter was added Wednesday to the seemingly endless narrative of "The Front Street War."

At special meeting of city council, Mayor Shepherd was authorized to purchase a vacant lot somewhere near Front and Bridge Streets to which a brick house ordered moved by a court ruling is to be transferred. When this is accomplished, after years of squabbling and wrangling, will be free of the troublesome question.

Briefly, the city of Wichita Falls several years ago started action to evict a number of residents from houses the city claimed were situated in the middle of a public thoroughfare, i. e, Front Street.

Eventually a court ruling was obtained saying that the houses should be moved but the city would have to do it and pay the costs. Arrangements were made with all but one property owner down there and all but this one house have now been moved back from the roadway and on to private property. This latter individual, however, proved a stumbling block and the best deal the city has been able to drive is to buy a lot and move his house to it.

Nance Tells Judge He Saw Gun Play

Bootlegging and narcotic cases were called during the morning session of federal court Wednesday.

A two year sentence in Leavenworth was imposed on George Mitchell who plead guilty to a narcotic complaint and who appeared in court with his left arm in a sling—the result of a gunshot wound sustained late last week. He was shot in front of the Union station when Federal Narcotic Agent Buck Nance sought to arrest him.

"Nance shot me without any provocation," Mitchell told Judge Atwell.

"He reached for his hip pocket and I thought he was going for a gun," Nance testified.

Forgery Cases Are Heard Before Martin

The trial of Frank Halyard, under indictment on a forgery charge, was in progress Thursday before a jury and Judge P. A. Martin in the eighty-ninth district court. Halyard is being defended by Robt. K. Crain and J. Earl Kuntz.

One two year sentence without a suspension and one with it were returned in the eighty-ninth court Wednesday. Travis Gerdes was given a two year suspended term on a forgery charge pending the duration of his good behavoir; while W. Rhymes entered a plea of guilty to a similar charge and asked for but did not receive the suspended sentence provision.

DOROTHY DIX ADVICE

How to Make the Long-Silent Sweetheart Speak. The Wise Business Girl Who Hesitates to Marry Her Jealous and Tyrannical Fiance; How Can 'Her' Children, 'My' Children and 'Our' Children Agree?

Dear Miss Dix: I am a woman 38 years of age, interested in a man of 40. We have lived in the same town all our lives and have been silent sweethearts, for, although he gives me to understand that I am the only one, he has never mentioned marriage. He has taken me to places of entertainment since we were young, but we were always accompanied by his mother or sisters.

Now, there is a man in my office who likes me and wants to call on me. Would let him come and leave the other man to his mother sad sisters?—Dumb-bell.

Answer: By all means accept the attentions of the other man. If that doesn't ring your dumb-bell lover and make your silent sweetheart speak nothing will, and it will give you at least the advantage of knowing where you stand and what you can depend upon.

To a woman there is nothing more aggravating than the pepless romance that begins in her high school days and runs endlessly on through the years without leading to the altar. Some boy who used to carry her books for her and bring her red apples attaches himself to her in their teens. When they are older they still continue to go together. Gossip links their names. Their friends speculate for a while about when they will get married, but they drift along without doing it. They are never actually engaged. The woman has no real hold upon the man, nothing definite to look forward to, yet he has absorbed her youth and kept other men away from her and narrowed her matrimonial chances down to him or nothing.

The man doesn't intend to do the girl an injustice. He doesn't realize he is being selfish. In the back of his head is the vague idea that some time he will marry her, but he feels that there is no hurry about it. It is something he can do when he gets good and ready, and in the meantime the situation is most satisfactory to him.

He can go to see Sally whenever he feels like it, secure of a warm welcome and her sympathy and interest in all his plans. She is always ready to pal around with him when he wants a companion, and he isn't afflicted with any of the drawbacks of matrimony, such as having to support a wife and put up with her whims and peculiarities.

His reason for not marrying is, in effect, that of the Frenchman who said that the reason he did not marry was because he would have no pleasant place in which to spend his evenings.

And it doesn't even occur to the man that Sally is wasting her youth and the freshness thereof, and eating out her heart longing for the home and the husband and the children that belong to her.

There is only one thing to do in such a case, and that is to jolt the slothful lover awake. The woman has become a habit with the man of which he cannot break himself, and she must break it either by going away and letting him realize how much he misses her and how necessary she is to his happiness, or else by setting up a rival and scaring him to death about losing her.—Dorothy Dix.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been engaged for almost three years to a man who has splendid principles but a disagreeable disposition, and I live in constant dread of doing something that he can find fault with or be suspicious of. Sometimes I think he is wonderful and at other times I almost hate him, but I can't seem to break with him.

My father died recently, leaving my mother and little sister dependent on me. I have a splendid position; in fact, make more than my fiance, although he has a good, substantial income. As things stand I will have to keep my position for the next ten years if I want to be independent of outside help. Of course, no man would wait that long for me. My fiance urges me to marry him, saying that he can support all three of us, but I know better.

What do you think would be the best thing for me to do, considering that the young man's disposition has already made me doubtful of the wisdom of marrying him?—Independent.

Answer: The man who is tyrannical before marriage will make a Simon Legree of a husband.

The man whose mind is filled with petty jealousies and suspicions, who is so evil-minded himself that he attributes his own unworthy motives to every one else, will be doubly and trebly suspicious of his wife and make her life a burden to her with his spying upon her.

The girl who has to be continually placating her sweetheart to keep him from taking offense at something will have to spend her days soft-soaping him. And believe me, in time that gets on any woman's nerves.

I can see no happiness in marriage with a selfish, jealous, grouchy man, and if anything comes up to keep you from marrying such a one, regard it as the work of your guardian angel and return thanks accordingly.

It is highly desirable, of course, that a man should have good principles and be a go-getter, but the thing that makes or mars his wife's happiness is his disposition. That is what she has to live with, and whether a woman is happy or miserable depends upon her husband's attitude about the little common, every-day affairs; whether he tells her how pretty she looks in her new hat or knocks her for paying $25 for it; whether he is reasonable and human when she tells him about meeting Tom Smith or raises ructions over it.

As for your not being willing to dump your mother and sister down on your husband to support, that shows the right spirit; and while your fiance may say now that he would be willing to take care of them, the chances are that he would regard them as a burden and make you very unhappy over the situation.—Dorothy Dix.

Dear Miss Dix: I was a widower with children, married a widow with children and there are children of this last union. Life has become unbearable in our home by the continual fighting between her children and my children and our children. Is there anything we can do about it?—Job.

Answer: Well, Job, you certainly must be the world's greatest optimist if you expect anything else than a three-cornered fight between three sets of children.

Birds in their little nests may agree, but not children. Own brothers and sisters nearly always fight, and when you add the step complication you have the ingredients for perpetual civil warfare.

The easiest way to settle your problem is to send the children off to different schools if you can afford it.

If you have not money enough to do this, just accept the situation philosophically. They will outgrow their pugnacity in a few years, and in the meantime just let them fight it out without taking any sides.

I should set apart a place in the cellar or an outbuilding, rope it in like a prize ring, get them some boxing gloves and tell them that they would have to stage all their fights there, out of earshot, and vanquished. Force them to make it a sporting event.—Dorothy Dix.

GEORGE CREEL WILL LECTURE HERE TONIGHT

Famed Author, Editor And Wits Arrives This Afternoon

George Creel, noted author, lecturer, editor, and humorist brought to Wichita Falls by the City Tteachers' association will arrive on the 1:55 p. m. Denver Thursday, it is announced by President A. K. Presson of the teachers organization. People of the city will therefore have the opportunity of meeting off-stage President Wilson's great publicity director, now in the front rank of American humorists and political critics in the role of "Uncle Henry" of Collier's Weekly.

At 8 o'clock this evening Creel will appear at Junior college auditorium to deliver one of his lectures on current topics and social and political problems that have delighted audiences all over the country during the past several years.

The complete program for the event has been announced by A. K. Presson, head of the city teachers association as follows:

Prelude—High school orchestra.
(a) Should Arms
(b) Homeless
(c) Dancing in the Barn.
Overture—High school orchestra.
Poet and Peasant—Von Suppe.
Foreword—A. K. Presson.
Introduction—Dr. J. W. Cantwell.
Address—Part one—George Creel.

Gives Advice to Expectant Mothers

"I ADVISE all expectant mothers to use Mother's Friend." Writes Mrs. Wesley Miller, Hudson, Mich. "I have had nine children. With my first three I suffered for 24 hours. Beginning with the fourth I used Mother's Friend and was sick only 15 minutes. Since then I have had five and was only sick about 10 minutes with each."

Mother's Friend is the formula of an eminent physician and has been a positive blessing to thousands of expectant mothers for over three generations. Plain oils only penetrate the skin. But the highly refined oils and other ingredients in Mother's Friend make it penetrate through the skin to the muscles and ligaments; making them soft and pliable, thus aiding the tissues to relax and adjust themselves to the changes during motherhood.

The mothers who praise Mother's Friend the most are those who did not use it with their first baby but through its use with the second, were able to realize its almost unbelievable results.

Mother! Insist on Mother's Friend—the same as used by our mothers and grandmothers—don't wait—start using tonight—and meanwhile write Bradfield Regulator Co., Dept. 34, Atlanta, Ga., for free valuable booklet "Motherhood and the Coming Baby" (sent in plain envelope). It tells how Mother's Friend can help you during expectancy and at childbirth. This booklet also tells you many other things you want to know. "Mother's Friend" is sold by all druggists—everywhere.

After-Dinner Magic!

They had asked the popular speaker how a man of his age stood a steady diet of rich, heavy banquets, night after night. "It's magic!" he declared, "and every man present ought to employ it. One little tablet I hold in this hand is a match for any ten-course dinner."

Ailments like dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach—are not caused by what you eat. Give your digestive system a little scientific help. And eat what you like! Yes, even doughnuts; baked beans; dishes cooked with onions. Stuart's dyspepsia tablets give your stomach the alkaline it needs—and that's all there is to it! Eat your fill, and don't fear acidity, gas, or distress in any form!

Your First Box FREE!

Any druggist in the land has Stuart's dyspepsia tablets. A big box is only 60c—they are less than a penny apiece! So, why suffer? Get a 25c trial box of Stuart's for the pocket—and keep it filled. One box free if you write the F. A. Stuart Company, Dept. F, Marshall, Mich.

RADIO BUSINESS NOW $5,000,000

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Radio has climbed in a little more than five years from the hobby of a few scientists with a total annual business of less than $6,000,000 to a business of more than $500,000,000 in 1925, a growth almost unparalleled in American history.

Schools, churches and newspapers have seized upon this new medium of reaching the homes until one-third of the broadcasting stations which supply the entertainment for the millions of sets are operated by these three roups.

DR W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every day or two was nesseceary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

DULL HEADACHES AND BILIOUSNESS

Poisons that are not properly carried out of the system and are reabsorbed by the blood often cause many distressing, and sometimes dangerous, disorders. Mrs. Jeanette S. Carneale, of Elevon, Va., tells below how she suffered from such disorders and how she learned to obtain relief from them.

"I have suffered from constipation," says Mrs. Carneale. "I get in such bad condition sometimes that I do not know what to do. My head aches with a dull kind of ache, and I get bilious.

"I have found Black-Draught to be the best relief for this I have ever tried. We have come to depend on it in my family as a family friend. Black-Draught is very convenient to take. I take half a spoonful in cold water as long as I need it and it is the finest regulator for the bowels.

"I used to have regular attacks. I suffered with very bad gas pains. I had a full, swollen feeling through my stomach. Sometimes I would even faint, they would get so bad. Now when I feel myself getting the least bi constipated, I immediately begin the use of Black-Draught.

"I have given it to my children and grandchildren. Everybody here takes it, from the littlest to the biggest. Sometimes my granddaughter eats too much and this is followed by a sour stomach. She runs at once for the Black-Draught. I am glad to recommend it."

Thedford's Black-Draught is a pure, mild, vegetable, product of nature. It is made only of medicinal roots and herbs that have been carefully selected, and then scientifically combined in clean, up-to-date laboratories. It contains no dangerous, or harmful, mineral drugs.

Black-Draught acts gently on the liver and bowels, helping them to ric the system of poisonous impurities and then aiding them to return to thei normal healthy state. Price 25c. JA-1

Everybody Would Go "To Farm" If U. S. Improved Waste Lands, Texan Avers

A. and M. Man Offers Extensive Reclamation Program

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—This is no time, in the opinion of Director B. Youngblood of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college, for the federal government to embark on extensive reclamation projects.

Addressing the association of land grant colleges today he ascribed all of the movements of unrest among the farmers to the situation which was at its peak in 1830 when there was an overbalanced agricultural population. In 1830, he said, there were 15 farm families to every urban family.

The farmers provided for their own food and clothing and 15 of them were taking care of one man in town, the speaker averred.

"They were unable to market all of their surplus advantageously in foreign ports," said Mr. Youngblood. "The number of farmers was kept excessive by the opening up of new land for settlement. Now this land is pretty thoroughly occupied except the marginal waste land of doubtful value. Efficient farming has made it unnecessary for everybody to befarmers, but even now there are all the farmers that are needed, and if high prices should encourage too intensive production or the government should embark on vast reclamation schemes there probably would be over-production. Even now we have a surplus beyond our domesti ceeds. It is a good time to let well enough alone."

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 18.—(AP)—While trading was somewhat more active today than it was on the two preceding days, it was still influenced by pre-bureau estimates on the one hand which limited the desire to enter upon new commitments and by the strength of the December position on the other which sustained the general market. The strength of December was due to the small certificated stock here and in New York and the fear of much untenderable cotton in the unmarketed balance of the crop. After an irregular opening and an early decline of 2 to 4 points the market rallied at first on a bullish construction placed on the weekly weather report and later on the firmness of December, that month rallying 27 points from the early low, while later months gained 14 to 21 points.

The market weakened during the afternoon on reports from the southwest that recently harvested cotton was showing better grades and on the slump in stocks in New York which precipitated Wall street selling. December eased off to within a few points of the low and the later months made new lows, 3 to 7 points below the early lows. The close was steady, showing unchanged on March and net losses of 2 to 5 points on other months.

The market opened irregular, 4 points down to 2 up, but soon rallied 17 to 23 points above the close of yesterday. The afternoon slump carried December down to 20.01, or 3 points above the early lows, and other months made net lows at 19.80 for January and 19.50 for March. The close was a little above the low levels.

A private report estimating the crop at 15,068,000 bales and ginnings at 12,475,000 was issued during the day. Exports for the day totaled 62,009 bales.

NEW YORK FUTURES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed steady at net five points up to three down.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The cotton market was quiet today again, prices fluctuating within a range of 25 to 35 points. January sold up to 20.09 and off to 19.86, closing at 19.87 compared with 19.88 at the close of the previous day. The general market closed steady, net 5 points higher to 6 points lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of 7 to 14 points in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables and unfavorable features in the weekly report of the weather bureau. A private report estimating the crop at 15,068,000 bales showed a slight increase over end-October figures, but being under the last government estimate, seemed to make a more bullish impression on sentiment than otherwise. At any rate, the comparatively small offerings attracted by the opening advance were readily absorbed and the mid-day market worked about 17 to 23 points net higher on covering and trade buying.

An early afternoon flurry of Wall street selling which was supposed to be influenced by the weakness on the stock market, lead to setbacks. Some southern hedging also was reported. After selling off from 20.78 to 20.56 for December and from 20.22 to 19.97 on March, the market steadied up again on a renewal of trade buying and covering, but met continued liquidation on the bulges and closed within a few points of the lowest.

Private advices received in the trade here today said the British trade authorities estimated the world's consumption of American cotton this season at 14,300,000 bales, including British consumption of 2,700,000. These figures were supposed to exclude linters and to indicate an increase of about a million bales in probable consumption for the season as compared with last year. A private report this morning estimated ginning to November 14 at 12,476,000 bales.

Exports today 60,509, making 3,192,070 so far this season. Port receipts 60,541. U. S. pork stocks 1,367,612 bales.

SPOT MARKETS.

GALVESTON, Nov. 18.—The spot market closed steady, unchanged. Sales 930 bales.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The spectre of higher federal reserve bank rates cast its shadow over today's stock market and prices collapsed 3 to 15 points under a flood of offerings for both accounts. Total sales of 2,621,800 compared with 3,340,000 in the record breaking session of November 10, which followed the raising of the Boston federal reserve bank rediscount rate from 3½ to 4 per cent.

Speculative belief that the speech in Boston last night of A. C. Miller, federal reserve board member, warning against the granting of federal reserve credit facilities on too easy terms was officially inspired, influenced the selling movement which embraced practically the entire list. The break came after an early period of firmness during which speculators for the advance endeavored to restore speculative confidence on the long side by bidding up a selected list of motors and specialties.

The reaction took place in the face of several favorable developments. These included the lowering of the call money rate, the declaration of a 50 per cent stock dividend on Mack Trucks common, the announcement that Chrysler Motor would be split up on a 4 to 1 basis, publication of optimistic steel trade reviews and reports of another sharp decrease in crude oil production last week.

Special pressure was directed against the motor shares, several of which broke through the low levels recorded in last Thursday's drastic decline. Chrysler, which recently established a record high of 253, dropped from 217 to 196¾ and then rallied to 200 for a net loss of 12⅛ points on the day. Hudson dropped over 40 points below its recent high to 97¼, closing slightly above that figure for a net loss of 5½ points. General Motors showed a net decline of 3⅜ at 126¼ after selling as low as 125½.

Standard industrials also were hard hit. American Can broke from 254½ to 242 and then rallied to 244 for a net loss of 7⅝. Baldwin dropped over 3 points to 123¼. U. S. Steel common sank to 128⅛, or 5 points below its earlier high, and then rallied to 129 for a net loss of 2½.

Mack Trucks closed 3 points lower at 218 after having sold down to 215, despite the declaration of the stock dividend.

American Brake Shoe showed outstanding independent strength, climbing over 6 points to a new high record at 130½.

Rails yielded with the industrials, although the declines were not as large, the average of 20 leading issues showing a net loss of less than 1 point as against 2½ for the average of 20 leading industrials.

Call money renewed at 5 per cent and then dropped to 4½, closing at the bottom figure. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were reactionary. Demand sterling dropped nearly a quarter of a cent to around $4.84⅛. French francs broke 5 points to 3.95½ cents and Italian lire yielded 3¼ points to 3.97 cents. Polish zlotys collapsed 50 points to a new low record for the year at 15.20 cents.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Heavy selling, much of it on orders from the northwest, Winnipeg in particular, had a good deal to do today with setbacks in the value of wheat. Failure of Liverpool quotations to respond to yesterday's sharp advance here counted also as a depressing factor. Wheat closed weak, ⅝ to 2¼c net lower, new style, December $1.55½ to $1.55⅝ and May $1.52¼ to $1.52¾. Corn finished 1 to 1¼c down, oats unchanged to ¼c higher and provisions unchanged to a decline of 42 cents.

Corn went lower with wheat. Favorable weather throughout the corn belt acted also as a bearish influence. Oats trade consisted almost entirely of changing over of hedges from December to May.

Provisions reflected downturns in the value of hogs.

KANSAS CITY LIVESTOCK.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Cattle 3,500; calves 2,000; steady; short feed steers $8.00@9.50; butcher cows $4.00@5.00; heifers $5.00@7.00; canners and cutters $3.25@3.75; top vealers $10.00; bologna bulls $4.25@4.75; stockers and feeders $5.75@8.00.

Hogs, 10,500; slow; bulk of sales $11.00@11.50; packing sows $10.50@10.75; stock pigs $11.50@12.25.

Sheep 5,000; higher; fed lambs $14.85@15.15; fed clipped lambs $14.00; Texas wethers $8.50.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 18.—The generally steady trend of values on the cattle market for mid-week was interrupted only in the calf section where a decline of a quarter was registered along toward the end of the trading.

Receipts of cattle were moderate and seasonal cattle 4,400 and calves 1,400, compared with 4,614 cattle a week ago and with 2,304 calves at the same period. Cattle show a falling off in numbers for the half week of around 12200, compared with the half week last week.

Receipts again ran largely to the stock o fthe less desirable kind with a showing of better quality in yearlings and heifers. The beef cattle run was hardly up to that of formed days of the week in point of numbers, but it carried good quality in the main.

Beef steers moved at the spread of $8 to $7.50, the higher grades of the supplies showing good feeding and fatness.

The early takings in the butcher cow section revolved around 10 loads at $4.35@4.50, with a few individuals selling to $5. Bulk of the she stock moved within the spread of $2.50 to $3.75 and bulk of the drafts were of small figures. Peddling was the order of the day in the cow section.

Good, fed quality appeared in the yearlings and heifer supply, the latter showing drafts at $7 and $9 and the former temperiaing at $8 on car lots. These figures do not indicate any rise in values; they are indicative of bettered quality.

Bulls were steady, one carload selling at $3.65 and the general spread taking in bolognas at $2.70@3.85.

The calf trade opened steady and closed a quarter higher. Receipts were insufficient to fill all orders. Heavy calves competed with light veals for supremacy, the former taking up to $6.55 and the best of the latter moving at $6. The general spread was $4 to $5.75.

With but thre ecars of hogs offered, the market remained steady, shippers and butchers taking small orders and full cars at $12 to $12.10 and packers getting supplies of medium hogs at $11.90. Pigs and packing sows were unchanged.

The sheep trade was featured by the opening of the first fall fed lambs to sell on this market since 1910 at $15. Wethers moved from $8.15 to $9.00 and fat lambs were generally selling at $13 to $14.

Cattle, 5,500 including 1,400 calves; market steady; calves 25c lower; beeves $5.00@8.00; stockers $4.50@7.75; fat cows $3.25@6.00; heifers $5.00@10.00; yearlings $5.50@12.00; canners $2.00@3.25; cutters $2.40@2.75; bulls $2.50@3.75; calves $3.50@7.25.

Hogs, 200; market steady; best medium weight $11.20@12.10; good mixed $11.30@12.00; good light $11.60@11.75; fair mixed $11.50@11.65; fair light $11.25@11.50; common $7.00@8.00; packing sows $11.00@11.25; pigs $7.00@11.00.

Sheep 300; market 25c higher; lambs $12.00@15.00; feeder lambs $11.00@12.00; wethers $7.50@9.00; yearlings $11.00@12.00; ewes $7.00@7.50; culls $3.00@6.00; stockers $7.00@12.00; goats $1.50@3.10.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Cattle, 13,000; best steers generally 15 to 25 cents higher; choice weighty kind showing maximum advance; stockers and feeders firm at week's 25 to 50c advance; extreme top 1,337 pound bullocks $13.50; yearlings upward to $12.15; bulk fed steers $8.50@11.00; sprinkling western grassers $7.25@8.75; fat she stock 25 to 50 cents lows; heifers off most; canners and cutters, bologna bulls and vealers around steady.

Hogs, 21,000; mostly 10c lower than yesterday's average; packing sows and underweights little changed; closed fairly active; bulk good and choice 160 to 320 pound averags $11.40@11.65; practical top $11.65; 140 to 150 pound selections largely $11.50@11.65; odd lots up to $11.75; majority packing sows $9.00@10.05; bulk better slaughter pigs $11.50@11.75; shippers took 3,500; estimated holdover 88,000.

Sheep, 12,000, fat lambs uneven, closing slow and weak; early top to shippers $16.00; most desirable kinds $15.25@15.50; yearling wethers mostly $12.25@12.50; feeding lambs upward to $15.50; no choice light kind on sale; bulk desirable fat ewes $7.50@8.00.

TEXAS HAY MARKET.

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—With top grades of hay unchanged and the less desirable grades in less active demand, the situation at leading markets today was about unchanged.

CITY DADS ASK PEOPLE'S VIEW ON PARK PLAN

Taxpayers Called to Meeting This Morning To Discuss New Proposals

City officials are going to headquarters today to determine the attitude of tax payers on a proposed expansion in the improvement program in the new south side park and golf grounds. A public meeting of property owners has been called for 10 o'clock this morning in directors room of the City National bank, at which time proposals of W. F. and H. C. Weeks, donners of 260 acres of land on which the park is now located, will be outlined and discuseed.

Fred Weeks, attorney, has asked that the city build through the park a concrete road. He will turn over a deed to the land only when this is done, and his original contract with the city, drawn when he made the gift of the land, called for simply "a paved road through the park."

Now, however, he seeks a larger improvement for that territory and is asking that the road, instead of being an 18-foot concrete highway, be widened to a 30-foot street with curb and gutter. He is willing to pay half the cost of this additional 12 feet, paving six feet on each side, plus curb and gutter installation, with the city doing the same thing on the other side. The total cost will be about $40,000, of which Mr. Weeks proposes to pay half.

The county is putting the highway through the park, connecting it at either end with other projects which, when linked up, will give a paved route south on Holliday street, through the new park and on to a termination near the pavillion with the present Lake Wichita road. The county, of course, will bear the expense of the regular 18 feet through the park while the city and Mr. Weeks will share the additional cost. About 5,000 feet of highway would be included in the work.

The matter has been before the city officials for some time, but no definite action has as yet been taken. Mayor Shepherd is now asking that property owners here who have an interest in city affairs attend the meeting today to hear it discussed in detail and make suggestions.

IRRIGATION

The contact of a diseased root with a live healthy one is the only method of transmitting cotton root rot that has been definately determined.

Nevertheless, it has been contended by various people including farmers and scientists that root rot is conveyed from field to field in some other manner than through the medium of underground root contact.

One scientist who had studied the matter claimed that the wind would transmit the fungus by blowing fragments of the thread-like growth that some times appears on the surface of the ground around an infected plant.

Dr. Taubenhaus, the great expert on this disease does not agree with this theory and points out that plows and other agricultural implements would be an even better medium than the wind if the disease could be transported in this way. They do not carry the disease.

It may be, Dr. Taubenhaus admits, that the disease is conveyed in some other manner from field to field than by direct root contact, but if so it is under special conditions which are so unusual that the average farmer need not have any fear of his fields ever becoming infected in this way.

The vast majority of infections must come from direct root contact and the farmer can so consider it. If the farmer can rid his fields of all living roots he can and will eliminate the root rot.

BURNED STEAMER IN PORT.

30-Mile Race of Blazing Ship to Shore Is Ended.

LEWES, Del., Nov. 18.—(AP)—The Clyde line steamship Lenape was destroyed by fire and scuttled in the Delaware breakwater today after a 30-mile race from the open sea with flames sweeping her hold and roaring up through the cabins and decks and after all but one of 350 passengers and crew had been safely landed by coast guard cutters and pilot boats. One passenger became panic stricken, jumped overboard and was drowned. He was Robert Leverton of Williamansett, Mass.

THIMBLE THEATRE

Versatile Majestic Bill Hailed By Critic As a Real Show of the Season

Any citizen of Wichita Falls territory who misses this week's bill at the Majestic theatre has reason to be sorry for the rest of the season, for it is unlikely that any of the coming troupes will bring a better-balanced bill and a more enjoyable bit of genuine entertainment to this city.

First, the bill is versatile. There is real entertainment for the most exacting vaudeville fan. If you fancy be music, you get it in several acts. There is, in addition, dancing, song, frolic, humor, slapstick comedy and drama.

Great Clown Show.

The clown show is the headliner. Olson and Johnson and other members of this week's bill warm up to the audience readily and keep the house in an uproar for nearly a half an hour. Things move so swiftly that the audience is kept on its feet for fear of missing something. They take Paule Revere, Pocahontas and a few other characters from history and litereature and from the time of their unique entry onto the stage until the last Redskin bites the dusty canvas, there is mirth and merriment. The act turns into a real party in which the guests are the audience, who are served with fruit and saucers of coffee. Olson laughs himself to death and the audience dies with him; Johnson has a broad grin that cheers one up and puts him in na receptive mood for the frolic of the evening. Incidentally, Olson at the piano and Johnson on his feet singing, would make a good act alone. But to supplement this splendid offering, there are the other members of the week's bill who contribute in novel manner to the general merriment. The net is so mirthful that the air is filled with carnival—and smoke and fruit and eggs. Too much praise can not be given this act, and when this act is praised, the whole week's bill is commended, for everyone takes a part.

Richard Kean, the Actor.

Richard Kean, whom vaudeville attracted from the legitimate stage, furnishes an excellent act. His is of the drama type, but his numbers are so well chosen that the audience cheers him to the echo. Last night the audience applauded so persistently for an encore, that Mr. Kean was obliged to come to the rootlights and praise Wichita Falls. Mr. Kean is a real actor.

His first offering is from the lips of Tommy Atkins, whom Kipling immortalized. It is one of Kipling's stories of British army life that never fails to entertain and amuse Americans.

As "Shylock," in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," Kean gives "Shylock's Justification of the Jew." It is the heaviest of his three numbers. In this he does justice, almost, to the words of the man whose works he interprets. But it took Mr. Kean in the role of the aged man, "Peter the Miser," to really win the plaudits of popular appeal, although his Shylock role unquestionably was the outstanding offering of the evening.

An intimation that he is to remain on the vaudeville stage for a few years at least came from Mr. Kean's expression of gratitude, in which he said, "You have been so kind to me tonight that I am going to ask you to remember me when I come back to Wichita Falls again."

Other Acts.

The bill opens with Pathe News and Aesop's Fables and ends with "Bag and Baggage," the exceptional motion picture film.

Eunice Miller and Ned Bolles, toe dancers, begin the evening's vaudeville entertainment, while Jean Chandler's voice entertains the theatergoers between dancing acts.

Jones, Morgan and Rush, in "Among the Swells," furnish a bit of wit and song as refreshing as the seabreeze which blows from the scenery.

Clara Barry admits she is fat and her partner, Orville Whitledge, never allows the audience to forget this. much to the discomfort of the clever Clara, who has a good line of repartee, a few songs and some trick steps Barry is exceptionally good at the piano and keeps things going with a chest of chatter that makes every body laugh.

Strange Story Is Shown at Garden.

"The Wild Bull's Lair," a strange story by Marion Jackson who has written son many of the Fred Thomson successes, is proving one ofthe athletic star's most popular vehicles at the Garden theatre where it is now being shown; and certainly it is the most original plot which has been flashed on the screen in a "western" setting within memory. Supported by an excellent cast and mounted on his noted co-star, Silver King, Thomson sweeps through this story of superstition, mystery and the supernatural in whirlwind fashion; finally conquering a full grown bull in a thrilling tight at the close of the picture. Plenty of fine comedy keeps the story from becoming too "heavy" at times, and the direction is superb. Thomson is gaining histronic ability to such a point that he will soon have to be seriously considered when the "champion actors" are up for ranking, as well as at the head of the list of champion athletes.

Vaudeville Today At the Olympic.

Jimmy Norton, famed English character comedian, is one of the group of five stellar acts which open at the Olympic theatre here today for a three-day stay. Norton is offering a comedy song cycle interminized with clever dancing. His imitable idea of an Englishman doing the now popular American step, "The Charleston," has won him much praise all along the circuit.

Another o fthe outstanding acts is to be presented by Keith and Grear, in "A Voice and a Violin." Miss Grear will be remembered as a former member of the Chicago Civic Opera company, while Mr. Keith comes from the St. Louis Symphony orchestra. They offer a selected program of popular and classic melodies.

Giddy and Giddy are a pair of foreign artists who are paying a short visit to the United States en route from South America to Australia. They offer comedy and original feats of balancing.

Fred Palmer and Jessie Huston are a clever couple of singers, dancers and humorists who have a pleasing act, "Poppies."

Reno Bodle and Reno are styled pantomimic absurdities. They have a comedy acrobatic novelty.

"Souls for Sables" At the Olympic.

A picture of unusual merit showing at the Olympic theatre, when the Tiffany production "Souls for Sables," suggested from "Garlan and Co.," by David Graham Phillips.

Featured in this picture of modern life is the beautiful Claire Windsor and Eugene O'Brien. The former never looked better than she did in this, her latest, screen appearance, and the gorgeous array of clothes worn by her must have cost a fortune.

"Souls for Sables," tells of a girl who used to the luxuries of life, marries a young business man. Unable to furnish her with beautiful things, she sets about getting them by other means.

The pretty wife meets a rich man, who is immediately attracted to her. At a card game she wins enough money to be invested by the new found friend in the stock market. From this investment she realizes enough to buy a sable coat. Her husband, unaware of his wife's investment, accuses her of receiving the coat in another way, and the couple separate.

Misfortune comes to the husband in his business. is wife, stout to leave for Paris to get her divorce, sells the sable coat. She leaves the money for her husband through his secretary, and leaves for Paris. How the husband and wife again are reunited is one of the dramatic sequences o fthis more than interesting photoplay.

LAMAR AVENUE AND ALL POINTS EAST

Eight building permits with a combined valuation of $19,975 were issued Wednesday by the city clerk. None were for more than $5,000.

Mrs. and Mrs. William R. Little of this city were in Grandbury Wednesday attending funeral services for Mr. Little's father who died at his home there. The Noble-Little hardware store was closed throughout the day yesterday.

Organization of a new girl's' reserve unit here was accomplished last Tuesday when 31 girls from the Austin school met with Miss Zoe Liles, their advisor. Miss Ivo Wilson, Y. W. C. A. secretary, was one of the speakers.

Judge A. H. Carrigan, attorney of this city, and E. F. Huppertz, general secretary of this district, Christian Endeavor societies, will be the principal speakers when the district convention is held in the First Christian church here Friday and Saturday of this wek.

Two small boys, one aged 11 and the other 12, were in custody of Juvenile Officer Bralley Wednesday in connection with the robbery last week of the home of H. Moaley, 2104 Virginian street. About $200 worth of jewelry, part of which has been recovered, was taken.

Wichita county, up to Nov. 1 of this year, had gained 672 bales over the corresponding period for last year, according to cotton ginning reports received here yesterday from the department of commerce. With three other counties, Jones, Hall and Donely, it is the only one to show an increase in 15 west Texas counties.

The "Business Men's Social Club," a negro organization which flourishes in the flats, yielded another quota to the law early Wednesday morning when city police raided the club rooms an darrested 29 blacks on charges of gaming. It was the third raid in less than two weeks and every one got results. Police are taking steps to close the place.

A discussion of a temporay free bridge across Red river near Burkburnett to serve for the public and also as a supply artery for the contractor in building of the permanent concrete structure was held Wednesday morning between A. R. Backey of Denver, Colo., and directors of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce.

The city of Wichita Falls lost its initial court battle Wednesday morning when Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court overruled a general demurrer filed by the city to an application for a permanent injunfection restraining it from enforcing provisions of the new abattoir ordinance. A final hearing of the case will be held before Judge Martin some time next week.

A word-picture of Wichita Falls as it was in 1885 and thereabout, a dust-swept village of overgrown proportions with saloons, gambling halls and all their accoutrements running wide was sketched Wednesdaf noon for the Lions by J. C. Hunt, one of the early residents here who has seen the city grow from a cattle-trail stopping point to the metropolis of today.

A warning that continued failure to comply with the saniary law would result in another arrest and a much heavier fine was sounded Wednesday morning by Acting Recorder Eugene Mathis in city court when a defendant was brought in charged with failure to connect to the sanitary sewer system. Mathis fined him $15 to start with and then sounde his warning. The connection must be made not later than Dec. 5.

An order to bring the witness into court if he could be found anywhere in the United States was issued Wednesday by Judge William H. Atwell in federal court when the government asked for continuance of a case involving interstate transportation of a stolen automobile. The government's principal witness, a man named R. L. Read, cannot be found, although process servers have located him in California, Oklahoma and other points. He disappears each time.

About the Bonds

A possible reason for the placing of $395,000 of the company's funds in the Commerce Trust company of Kansas City, Mo., was developed from Mr. Prince over objection of counsel for defense. Mr. Prince said R. J. Windrop, auditor for Smith Brothers Construction company, to whose check the $395,000 was subject, told him in Kansas City the money was taken out of Texas, in order that it might not be known that Mr. Heyser and Mr. Brodnax, officials of the company, had each borrowed personally from the Republic National bank of Dallas $25,000. The auditor said he told Mr. Windrow he regarded the reason most insignificant.

Two cancelled checks on the Commerce Trust company, each for $25,000 and made payable to the Republic National bank, one dated July 6, and the other July 18, were presented by the state. These checks, among others, were first refused the attorney general by the company, and its refusal is made by Moody one of the causes for asking forfeiture of its permit to do business in Texas.

The auditor figured the company had made a net profit of $1,112,232.77 by adding $939,049.21, profit on asphalt surfacing, $66,015.35, profit on maintenance in Dallas and Tarrant counties, $110,646.92, profit on the Parker county contract, and $22,086.29, profit on the cost-plus ten per cent work, and subtracting $26,405. general expenses. The books show the state has paid to the American Road company $1,525,009.95 and approved unpaid estimates for $194,470.46, making a total of $1,719,480.41

Says Windrow Silent

Mr. Prince said Mr. Windrow refused to tell him where he bought, with American company funds $428,000 worth of Liberty bonds which were deposited in the Commerce Trust company. He said C. A. Bennett, apparently another representative of the road company in Kansas City, had told him President McIlyar had wired him (Bennett) to tell him (Prince) about the liberty bonds but that the order later was countermanded.

Out of dividends, Mr. Heyser and Mr. Brodnax each paid Mr. Bennett $25,000 which he had advanced them, it was developed. Details of the placing in escrow of $436,000 of the defendant company's funds in the American Exchange National bank of Dallas were told in detail.

Largest percentages of profit were made on asphalt surfacing work let by the company to sub-contractors. The four firms getting sub-contracts were Brown and Root, Georgetown; Cocke and Turner, Marshall; Hogan Construction company, Little Rock, Ark.; and J. E. Ward and company, Dalls.

Counties Involved

Some of the counties, together with the amount at which the sub-contract was let and the price paid by the state to the defendant company follow:

Somerrell, $3,566—$29,718; Hood, $17,811—$77,628; Angelina, $4,203—$18,509; Bowie, $46,884—$154,783; Delta, $21,526—$65,835; and Williamson, $2,435—$22,350.

Allegation the company had made over 900 per cent profit on the Williamson county project was bitterly protested by Mr. Worsham, who pointed out $2,435 would not be more than enough to pay the sub-contractor for cleaning the road, and hauling and distributing the asphalt, as provided for in the contracts with the American Road company. He insisted there was an error in the company's book, since so small a cost would not provide for the asphalt, which records show cost the company an average of 8.87 cents a square yard.

The auditor said there must have been an error, but that he could offer no explanation for the error.

Market Gossip

R. E. Flowerree and Co., brokers, Staley Bldg., today received the following market comment from Fenner and Beane of New York, New Orleans and Chicago:

COTTON.

Market was strong and higher during the early trading on bullish construction placed on the weekly weather review and tightness of the nears, but lost all its gains and a little more in the late trading.

The reaction was due mostly to liquidation brought on by the weakness in stocks and warnings against over speculation in land and stocks from a member of the federal reserve board. Many accepted this warning as pointing to active measures on the part of the reserve board to curb speculation unless it subsided and liquidated increasing tightness of the nears as first notices for December approaches, continued active demand for spots and confirmation from the weather bureau of a large amount of low grades in northern and northwestern sections were the chief bullish factors. The trade were inclined to ignore for a time a forecast of 13,476,000 bales ginned to November 14, issued by a spot house and its estimate of 15,088,000.

GRAIN.

The wheat market at the present time might be termed a weather proposition, inasmuch as the southern hemisphere holds the key to the world's situation for the remainder of the year. Argentine crop is in its critical stage, weather in that country being closely watched, likewise the action of their markets. Decline today was not surprising in face of Buenos Aires not maintaining its full advance of the past few days. Nevertheless, the news from Argentina was decidedly bullish. Winnipeg did not fully reflect our weakness. Up to the close only a moderate amount of wheat was confirmed for export. All things considered, it seems to us the market has an excellent foundation and is in a position to advance easily coincdent with the appearance of foreign buyers in North American markets or additional damage news from Argentine and Australia.

The corn market again was a dragy affair, feeling the influence of small volume of selling by cash houses and local longs. Outside speculative interest on the buying side has so far been inadequate to absorb offerings. However, such a condition is not unusual at this time of year when traders carry the weight of an impending movement from the country.

STOCKS.

Initial trading was at higher prices on expectation of some favorable developments at today's directors meeting of Mack Truck and Chrysler Motors. Rails continued active with heavy trading in the St. Paul issues. Oils and steels were also higher, but after the early strength in the market it again turned heavy on continued apprehension over possible changes in the discount rate with special attention attached to action of federal reserve bank of Philadelphia, which meets this afternoon. The market became exceedingly nervous and broke sharply after the announcement of capital changes in Mack and Chrysler. The motor stocks had to bear the brunt of the selling, but liquidation soon spread to the entire list with U. S. Steel under pronounced pressure.

News of the Fields

Wise County

Magnolia's deep test near Chico, Wise county, No. 1, Cassidy southwestern commission company, is reported still plugging away, a depth of 5,440 feet having been breached.

Lomax Area

Staley-Wynne-Lomax No. 3, Wilson, in the northeast corner of the 37 acres, section 88, A. T. N. C. L. central Archer county, were down 1,400 feet and drilling yesterday.

North Wichita

Staley-Wynne-Cranfill No. 1, Mrs. Marshall, northwest of the Hirschi pool, in north Wichita county, has spudded and was last reported drilling at a depth of 500 feet.

Hill and Roberts Pool

Atlantic Oil Producing company No. 7, Murray, Roberts and Hill pool, south Wichita county, located 450 feet each way from the southwest corner of the lease, has spudded and is drilling.

Wilmot Pool

Atlantic Oil Producing company's No. C-8, Wilson, on their C-lease, Wilmot pool, central Archer county, was setting casing to test a formation which looked none too good yesterday at a depth of 1,598 feet, a sandy lime. Casing was set at 1,579 feet.

Throckmorton County

Magnolia Petroleum company No. 1 M. L. B. Davis, in the T. E. & L. Co. survey, block 2326, north of the Masters Dome production was down 3,485 feet yesterday and drilling.

Hoyle et al. No. 1, Michna, in northern Throckmorton county, was reported down 1,832 feet and drilling.

East Archer County

Steward et al are reported putting their No. 1, Crawford and Plowman, in the southwest corner of the Corzine survey, north of the old Delmar pool and northeast of the Archer City, on the pump with estimates on its probable production placed as high as 50 barrels. The send as at 1,021-22 feet.

West Olney

Roamer Oil company's No. 1, Mrs. E. McClatchy, in block 172, TE&LCO survey, on the hill just west of Olney, north Young county, was down 600 feet and drilling early yesterday.

Shasta Oil company's No. 1, J. E. Egan, located in block 404, TE&LCO survey, west of Olney, was down 1,205 feet early yesterday and should be on the sand today or tomorrow.

SE Baylor County

Petroleum Producers and Cranfill No. 4, Mills, in the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of block 2,-427, TE&LCO survey, southeast Baylor county, north of their other production on this lease, was expected to swab and bail yesterday afternoon. Casing had been set at a depth of about 1,406 feet.

Terminal Area

Lester et al have a derrick up for a test in the northwest corner of block 63, Falls County School Lands, east of the Terminal well, north of the Carey pool.

Atlantic Oil Producing company has spudded and is drilling on its No. 1, Falls County School Lands, located in block 64 of the same survey, south and a bit west of the well.

SE Litchfield

Texhoma Oil and Refining company and Camp Oil and Gas company No. 8, Campbell, in block 1,483, TE&LCO survey, a location south of the southeast Litchfield discovery well, had sand yesterday rather low and was setting casing to test at a depth of 916 feet.

Texhoma-Camp No. 7, Campbell, looks like 100 barrels from the usual sand just above 900 feet.

South Fowlkes

Texhoma Oil and Refining company No. M-3, Burnett, northwest of the No. 1, which is in the southeast corner of the northwest quarter of the S&MGR&CO survey, abstract 270, south of Fowlkes Station, central Wichita county, is going on the pump and looks like a 35 barrel well, sand at 1,524 feet. It is a better well than the old No. 1, the east offset to which was a dry hole.

South of Harmel

Atlantic Oil Producing company's No. 1, Powell, located in the northwest corner of the southwest fuarter of the northeast quarter of TE&LCO survey, block 1,586, south of the Harmel pool and on the Archer-Young line, was spudded yesterday and down 120 feet.

W. J. Greene et al were putting their test to the north on the pump with the prospect of making a 50 barrel well from sand at a depth of 1,340 feet.

Orth Vicinity

Consolidated Oil company's No. 1, Jefferys, in lot 51, TE&LCO survey, just southwest of Orth, central Young county, was down 600 feet and drilling yesterday.

Murchison and Fain No. 1, Jefferies, located in block 58, TE&LCO survey, not so far away, was down 700 feet and drilling.

Reed and Anderson No. 1, Lebreman, in TE&LCO survey, block 210, between Orth and Olney, north central Young county, bailed dry yesterday in sand at 850 feet.

NE of Gambrell

The M. & V. Oil company has a derrick up, is rigging up, and should be spudded in a day or so on an east offset to the Mahlstedt and Mook Lauster well. The test will be in the southwest corner of their forty acres on the Kunkel farm, offsetting the Lauster to the east, section 3, H. B. R. & C. R. R. Co. survey, abstract 51.

Mahlstedt and Mook No. 1 Lauster, in the southeast corner of the Lauster far msouthwest quarter of section 3, B. B. B. Q C. R. R. Co. survey abstract 51, had the casing slip a full seven feet to the bottom of the hole and have pulled it to reseat and cement.

Wilbarger County

Landreth, Waggoner.

Landreth Production company has two new wells on its Noble district Wilbarger acreage, one of them credited with flowing at a rate of about 700 barrels a day. The well is No. D-6, located the third test removed to the west from the northeast corner of the northeast forty of the northeast quarter of section 43, block 4, northwest of the old Noble well. Sand is at 1,887-1,900 feet.

The other well is G-1, in the northwest corner of the northeast forty acres of the northwest quarter of the same sections, offsetting A-1 to the east, which flowed 33 barrels in one hour from sand at a depth 1,859-69 feet.

Craig-Kleeden, Castlebury.

Craig and Kleeden (Vernon Gas company) have about 6,000,000 cubic feet of gas in their No. 1, Waggoner, in the southwest corner of section 67, block 14, southeast of South Vernon, Wilbarger county. The sand is at 1,372-77 feet.

Humble, Waggoner.

Humble Oil and Refining company No. H-3, Waggoner, in section 46, block 4, is reported on the 1,800-foot sand and setting casing to test. Humble No. G 3, Waggoner, 340 feet north of G-2, also in section 46, has set and cemented casing on sand at a depth of 1,869 feet.

Elsewhere on Landreth acreage D-5, offsetting the D-6, mentioned above to the west, was looking for the sand below 1,850 feet yesterday. A-2, west offset to A-1, which is in the northeast corner of the northwest forty of the northwest quarter of section 43, block 4, is on the sand at 1,849 feet and drilling in.

F-3, in the southeast quarter of section 46, was on the 1,800 foot sand yesterday and setting casing. E-4, in section 42, block 4, northwest quarter was setting casing on sand at a depth of 1,849 feet.

Milham, Waggoner.

The Milham corporation has made location for its No. 2, Waggoner, 300 feet east of the No. 1-A, which is located in the southwest corner of section 38 block 4, H. & T. C. R. R. Co. survey, and will get started at once. The No. 1-A, is reported doing about 85 barrels a day from the deepest Wilbarger pay at a depth of 2,371 feet.

BAPTISTS HEAR DR. HOLCOMB IN EARLY SERVICE

Scores Gather at First Church for Morning Service

Dr. T. L. Holcomb, evangelist, was heard by a large audience at First Baptist church Wednesday morning when he brought a very forceful message on the theme of the Twenty-third Psalm, emphasizing the fact that the Lord of David, the Psalmist, is the Lord of today and that His power is as great as of Bible days. Dr. Holcomb said, "Our Lord is the Lord of Deliverence, Provision, Victory and Salvation and is the Shepherd of all who wil believe and follow Him. Truly, He is the Good Shepherd who gave His life for His sheep. The least we can do is to trust Him as a personal Savior and to follow in the paths of Christian obedience."

The audience are increasing in number since the arrival of Dr. Holcomb, Monday evening. Special music is being given at each service 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

More Truth Than Poetry

NOT SUCH A HARDSHIP

The Shah of Persia seemed not at all disturbed when told that he had been deposed.

Time was, when they said to a King,
After hurling him out through the door—
"We hate to be brutal, old thing,
But you ain't going to reign any more!"
He did not regard such a form of address
As proper or pleasant or seemly,
But cried, with a blending of rage and distress:
"My friends, I resent this extremely!"

In the age that has recently past
A monarch was proud of his sway,
And always regarded aghast
Any effort to chase him away.
And when an unrising or raid or revolt
Removed him abruptly from power,
He seldom if ever got over the jolt—
But remained disappointed and sour.

But now when the fact is disclosed
To an emperor, Emir or Shah
That last week he was duly deposed
He cries with a jolly "Ha! Ha!
No more of the troubles of statecraft for me,
No foreign affairs to embarrass,
I am charmed to discover that now I am free
And can live out my life time in Paris."

Once a ruler would rather fall dead
Or be up to his armpits in gore
Than to have people snatch from his head
The circlet of gold that he wore.
Today, when deprived of his rights and renown
He is jovial, polly and breezy.
For in these times, the pate is clad in a crown—
As Shakespeare remarked—lies uneasy!

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE PUMPKIN PIE PRINCESS—IV

by W.J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

ONCE THERE WAS A LITTLE GIRL WHO LIVED ALL ALONE IN A BIG PUMPKIN ON THE EDGE OF THE WORLD. ONE NIGHT THE WIND BLEW IT OVER THE EDGE, AND IT FELL WITH A GREAT THUD CLEAR TO THE MOON. THE LITTLE GIRL WAS SO FRIGHTENED SHE SAT DOWN ON HER DOORSTEP AND CRIED. SUDDENLY A GRUFF VOICE SAID, "WHERE DID YOU COME FROM?" AND SHE LOOKED UP AND THERE WAS THE KING OF THE MOON. SO SHE STOPPED CRYING AND DRIED HER EYES.

WHEN THE KING ASKED THE LITTLE GIRL WHERE SHE CAME FROM SHE REPLIED, "PLEASE, MR. KING, I CAME FROM THE EDGE OF THE WORLD."

"THE OLD WIND BLEW ME OFF, AND I'M VERY SORRY TO BOTHER YOU," SAID THE LITTLE GIRL. "NO BOTHER AT ALL," REPLIED THE KING. "BUT COME INSIDE. I DON'T WANT YOUR ASTRONOMERS TO SAY THERE IS A SPOT ON MY MOON WHEN WE WORK ALL THE TIME THAT WE ARE BEHIND THE WORLD TO KEEP IT POLISHED.

"BUT I CAN'T LEAVE MY PUMPKIN, FOR I LIVE IN IT," SAID THE LITTLE GIRL. "DO ALL EARTH PEOPLE LIVE IN PUMPKINS?" ASKED THE KING. "OH, NO!" REPLIED THE CHILD. "I LIVE IN ONE BECAUSE I AM SO LITTLE. OTHER PEOPLE MAKE PIES OF THEM." "AND WHAT MIGHT A PIE BE?" ASKED THE KING.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

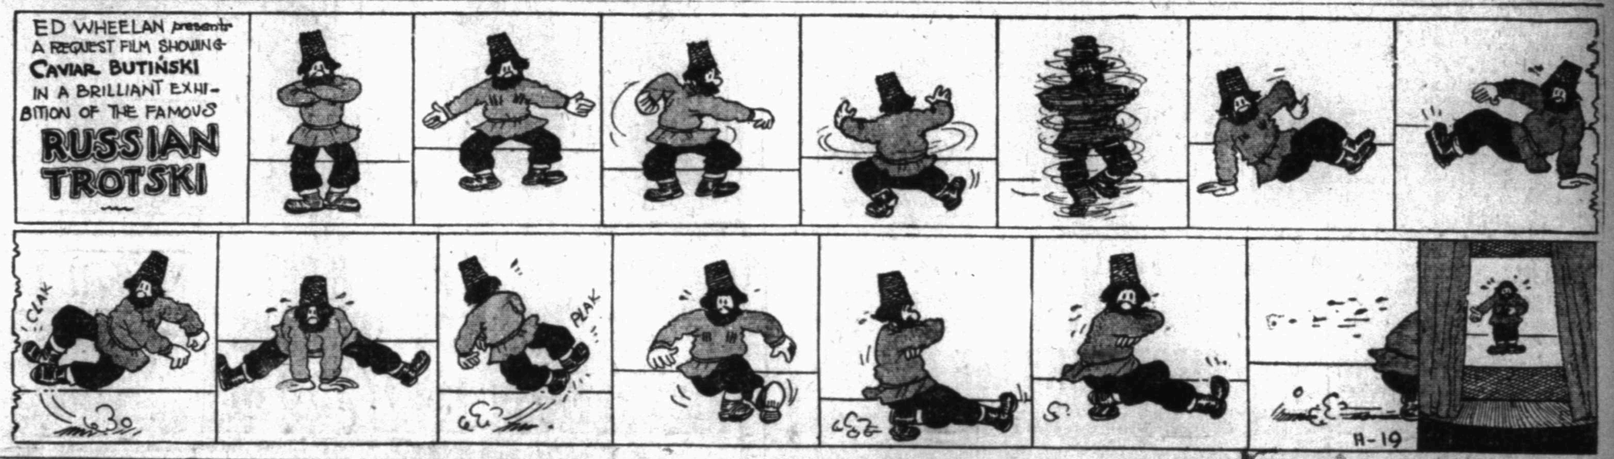

"A PIE?" SAID THE LITTLE GIRL. "DON'T YOU KNOW WHAT A PIE IS? A PUMPKIN PIE? IT'S SOMETHING TO EAT AND IT'S PERFECTLY DELICIOUS!" "WELL, THEN," SAID THE KING, WITH A SMILE, "WE'LL BRING THE PUMPKIN IN, TOO."

SPORTING NEWS — THE RECORD NEWS — FIRST ACCURATE COMPLETE

TOP O' MORN STUFF
By Blondy Cross.

Stecher? Maybe.

That Stecher-Santell match for Wichita Falls, Dec. 22 is not closed as was thought by some of the sporting gentry Wednesday, according to Matchmaker Ross.

It is planned, however, to bring the world's heavyweight mat king to this city with some formidable opponent on that date if arrangements can be made.

Mayor Shepherd intends to inaugurate this year the first annual "mayor's Christmas dinner" for Wichita Falls newsboys. A wrestling card is to be staged with a per cent of the proceeds going to a fund to cover expenses of the dinner and to build cash presents for these young business men.

Ross declared yesterday that a pair of topnotch grapplers will be brought here to headline the card, but said he is not certain as yet who will be the principals. He hopes, he said, to match Joe Stecher with somebody. But as was said, no contract for such a match has been closed so far.

Jones Doesn't Want Him.

They certainly fear this Ad Santell, most of the wrestling gentlemen do. An illustration of this was given the other day when Ross in trying to get a suitable opponent for the Dutchman in substitution for the Munn-McGill match, asked Jaul Jones of Houston to meet the light heavy champ. "Hell, no!" yelled Jones. "I'm not ready for him yet."

Jones, by the way, is rated as one of the cleverest and toughest heavyweights in the game. It is our opinion that he stands a great chance of becoming champion some day. But—"he's not ready yet."

Santell originally was known as Adolph Ernst. He's the man who taught the now dead Pet Brown, Texas' greatest matman, what he knew. It was when the Dutchman was traveling under the Ernst cognoman that he was associated with Brown.

Santell is a colorful figure in the mat game. As you remember, he offered $10,000 to anybody who would get him a match with Munn when the big Nebraskan won the championship from Lewis. Also, right after Munn beat the Strangler in that memorable Kansas City mill, throwing the champion from the ring, and scribes over the nation began yapping about the upset to the wrestling trust and how an honest grappler was king at last and all that sort of stuff, Santell stepped out with a standing offer of 1,000 bucks to the gent who could ever produce any evidence he participated in a crooked or "fixed" match.

That possibly is one of the reasons so many of the big fellows dodge this light heavy—because they know they can't buy him off. And they say, the same holds true with Stecher.

MATTY.

Matty Matsuda, the Jap welter king, is another of this type. Matty doesn't have to frame 'em. He can beat anything in his class, anyway. Its possible the Jap has let an opponent stay longer than he should before pinning him just to give the promoter and fans a run for their money, but Matsuda is one athlete who never laid down in a match. You might look over his record. Very few bouts has he lost, those not recently, and then it was after terrific struggles.

Dick Morgan has been bucking the breaks quite regularly the past year. Now his hard luck has been climaxed. In letter to Spudder moguls yesterday the big Wichita Falls hurler now at Wel[illegible]ton, said his baby had passed

SANDSTORM MAY BE TOUGH OUTFIT AND ALL THAT, BUT COYOTES AREN'T BOTHERING

Moore and Hodges Return to Squad, But Steed and Powell In Poor Shape While Zeke's Out

That Amarillo, Panhandle team sent back into the Texas high school football race as a title contender by league order Tuesday cutting Plainview from the running on an ineligibility charge, is far stronger than Plainview and will prove a very tough opponent Saturday at Spudder park in district title play with Wichita Falls' Coyotes, both team and coaching staff here agree.

But the Pack is not letting the formidable front of the Golden Sandstorm darken the outlook. McCallum's youngsters instead are buckling down more seriously than ever and are grimly determined to fight through for a victory regardless of the odds against them.

Prospects were brightened considerably Wednesday by the return to practice of Dempsey Moore, sock-'em-hard fullback who messed up an old injury in the Vernon game Monday, and Jot Hodges, flashy halfback who was forced out early in the season under doctor's orders.

It was feared at first that Moore would be in no condition to step in the Amarillo struggle, and Hodges was expected to be out the remainder of the season.

More Trouble.

However, the horizon was dimmed a bit when it was discovered that Buck Steed, classiest broken field runner on the squad and one who can beat any ball packer in North Texas if given good interference until he's past the line of scrimmage, may not be able to perform Saturday. Hodges probably will be used at Steed's position if Buck doesn't round into shape rapidly. The side-stepping star has come up with a bad side injury, outcome of that hard Vernon struggle.

Another blow to Coyote chances is the fact Zeke Taylor, tackle, is expected out of the game the rest of the season because of an injured shoulder. The loss of Taylor is no smiling matter, for the squad is short on material for those tackle positions any way.

Ed Powell, quarterback and quite modest hero of the victory over Vernon, returned to the fold Wednesday after being out Tuesday. He is in none too good condition with a rising on an arm and a torn lip.

So, after all is said and done, you can't tell whether the squad is better off today than it was day before yesterday or whether it's worse. Just as fast as one set of cripples crawl back into the moleskins another bunch fall out.

Still That Fight!

But there's still that Coyote fight, that battling spirit displayed in the 19-7 smashing victory over Vernon Monday, to carry them over all other barriers. For if the crew wages the same vicious attack they did against the Lions, Amarillo is sure to take the count. That scrapping brand of ball played by the Wichita Falls team Monday was the greatest shown here over the past two seasons. Never since the days of Leo Baldwin did the Coyotes fight as hard and consistently as they did Monday.

The squad went through a very light workout Wednesday. To some it appeared hard, but the gang has seen more real action than that. Light practice is expected to be the order the rest of the week. If it were otherwise there would be a great possibility of the team going stale following that terrific fight of Monday. No high school team can work as hard in a game as the Coyotes did against Vernon then drill hard through the week and expect to show up without a display of staleness on the week-end

LEGION MITTSTERS ALL SET FOR TONIGHT'S FROLIC WITH MARTIN AND LEE TOPLINERS

The American Legion's slam-bangers tapered off their training sprees with light workouts Wednesday afternoon, and each declared himself in fit condition to step at top speed tonight in the weekly fight card slated for the 812 1-2 Scott Street ring.

Buster Martin, speedily improving Wichita Falls heavyweight, declared he expected to slap the dream poke to George Lee, sturdy Oklahoma havy, in short order.

Lee and Martin are scheduled for a ten round main event. Both boys are willing mixers, and the scrap is expected to be a tough one. Lee laughed when told of Martin's declaration and came back with the retort: "If anybody goes out this time I suspect it'll be Buster.

The card on the whole stacks up as a potentially good one. Buckshot Peoples is expected to give Wildcat Monte plenty of trouble in a four-rounder. Both are local featherweights well known to Wichita Falls fight fandom.

Eddie Murdock and Redcap Martin also two featherweight favorites here, are billed for a six-rounder. Murdock isn't rated a bit the edge on Redcap although he has fought more formidable boys than has Martin.

Zollie Combs and Sam Mitchell, negro heavies, the former from Wichita Falls and the latter from Electra, are to mix it up in a four-round opener. The black boys are press agented as donning the mitts for a "grudge" fight.

Two Of Oldest Classics Of Grid Between Traditional Foes Billed In East Sector This Week-End

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Two of the oldest classics of the gridiron, one of them between traditional foes that have met in a record total of 58 conflicts will call four elevens to the center of the football stage Saturday for their final appearance of the 1925 sason.

Although the LaFayette-Lehigh series does not date back as far as the Yale-Harvard struggle on the same day, teams from the Pennsylvania colleges played two games each season from 1884 to 1901 to run up a total of conflicts exceeding that of the "big three" classic.

LaFayette and Yale Favored.

The Yale-Princeton series whict had its 1925 renewal last week ranks second, the Bulldog having battled the Tigers 49 times, while the Crimson has tussled with the Elis on 43 occasions, one more than the total of Amherst-Williams grapples another ancient feud.

Lafayette and Yale are the favored teams on the basis of their early season records. The former's outstanding achievement was an unexpected triumph over Pittsburgh, but the Easton eleven also was held to a tie by Colgate, 6-6, before losing by a single point to Washington and Jefferson.

Yale has a big margin over Harvard in games since New Haven and Cambridge elevens met for the first time in 183. Of the 43 games they have played the Blue has captured 23 against 16 for the Crimson. Five of their games resulted in tie scores.

Fordham vs. Georgetown.

Harvard's chances have taken on a brighter hue as a result of last Saturday's developments. The Crimson's defeat at the hands of Holy Cross, Dartmouts and Princeton were partly offset then in the comeback of Captain Cheek's team with a 3-0 victory over Brown, while the Yale cohorts were being toppled unexpectedly by Princeton.

A third classic provides interest this week as a test for the unbeaten and untied Fordham eleven against Georgetown at the Polo grounds. The teams come together for the first time since 1907. Of the 12 games they have played each team has won six.

Army, Brown, Columbia and Syracuse on Saturday will prepare for keener tests during the following week. The Cadets will take on Ursinus at West Point, in preparation for their game with the Navy one week later, while Brown looks upon its game with New Hampshire as a warm-up for the Colgate battle Thanksgiving.

PUPS WILL GO AFTER ARCHER CITY ELEVEN WITH VENGEANCE AT SPUDDER PARK TOMORROW

Captain Farris Declares His Men Are On Their Metal—Wildcats Beat Iowa Park Club

"The Coyote Pups will be ready to go Friday, and will full force!"

That was team captain Hunky Farris speaking.

And Cap'n Hunky voiced the feeling of his mates to a man, for they're all figuring on tearing into the fast Archer City club tomorrow afternoon on the Spudder park gridiron with a vengeance. The Pups with but one victory behind them so far this season, are all ired up and intend entering the contest with a do-or-die spirit that will either make or break for another Wichita Falls victory.

Montgomery's lads have worked hard the past several days, getting into shape for this affray, and right now they're in the best condition of the year.

One man is out, Dale Carter, halfback. His loss may prove a great setback, but the lads expect to make up for this in sheer fight.

Pete Powell, Ted Davenport, Fat Tandy, Clarence Bains, Hack Giles, and Babe Anderson have whipped themselves into a line that ranks with any of their class. This forward wall is light, but is made up for in fighting spirit.

Slyde Fly has made a name for himself in the backfield, and now is adding more glory with his work as field general. Hunky Farris and Roy Brackett have been hitting the line hard, and gaining almost at will. Most of their gains have been short, but have come regularly.

They will go up with a hard team Friday, and will have their work cut out for a win, but with the fighting spirit shown in the Burkburnett game they should be able to give Archer City a run for their money.

Archer City defeated the Iowa Park Hawks Tuesday afternoon in Archer City by the score of 25 to 0. For the Wildcats Black, Hutchison and Larkin were the outstanding players. Each of these men rattled off some good gains. Black made one for thirty yards and several shorter ones. Bill Larkins made three touchdowns and Henry Wilson one.

Burney, of Iowa Park, was their outstanding player and made several good gains. Archer City has played seven games this year, and won all but two.

GRANGE 'MOST SURE TO TURN PRO GRIDMAN

Famous Red Has Consent Of Father to Grab Shekels

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—It appeared certain tonight that Harold "Red" Grange will toss aside his amateur status to become a professional football player and also end his college career, leaving the University of Illinois after the Ohio State-Illinois game at Columbus Saturday.

Reports persisted that in a conference with his father at Wheaton, Ills., today this famous young red head who at the age of 22 years has a prospect of a fortune being dumped into his lap, reached a decision with his father's consent to play professional football and to leave the university.

REVOKE RUM PERMITS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Taking one of the most drastic steps since the reorganization of the federal prohibition enforcement began last April, the treasury today revoked, effective Dec. 31, every outstanding alcohol permit issued under the federa lprohibition law. Simultaneously, a sweeping investigation was begun to determine whether any or all of the permits should be renewed.

MEBBE HE'D STOP HIM.

Rod Dodd, Wichita Falls sport fan, comes forth with the expression that he believes the skinny blonde of the Junior college (Skyscrapper Crites) would have stopped Ryan, Vernon quarter, Saturday had it been the college the Lions were playing. Maybe he would, and maybe he wouldn't.

Tiger Quint to Be Light and Speedy

Electra, last year's basket ball champ in this district, will flash back this year with a light and fast team as well as one that can ring the old loops for the points, it is said. Buzz Smith seems confident that the Tigers would come through. The Tigers, however, will have to be a good bunch to replace Thomas, Hayes, Gonce and Hammond. Four men off a basket ball five makes a lot of difference.

JACKETS RUN OVER MATADOR OUTFIT, 29 TO 0

First Contest Texas Tech Has Lost—Forwards Weaken

BROWNWOOD, Texas, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Black and Crimson warriors from Texas Tech at Lubbock met their first defeat here this afternoon when Howard Payne's Yellow Jackets ran rough-shod over the Matadors for a 29 to 0 victory. The Jackets played their best football of the season.

Coach Ewing Freeland's men could not hold the Howard Payne line and time after time the Jackets' backs ripped, ploughed and tore the Black and Crimson for 10, 12 and 15 yard gains. Never once during the entire game did the Matadors get nearer than the Howard Payne 20-yard line.

For the Yellow Jackets, McAlister, playing his last game in a Jacket uniform, Boyd, playing his first year and Bissett, playing his last at full, were the outstanding stars.

For the Matadors, Earnie Wilson, Cisco high school youth, and Woolridge, Oak Cliff youth, were the stellar performers. Several times Wilson got through for first down and good gains with his twisting and side-stepping. Miller, Matador center, also played well for the Matadors.

Martin May Scrap Sully Montgomery

There is talk of matching Sully Montgomery with Buster Martin should Martin continue to win at the same pace he has set the past several months. Montgomery, declared in letter to the Record News sports editor Tuesday that he was coming to Texas during the Christmas holidays and desired a match with some good boy in Wichita Falls.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Austen Chamberlain's motion for ratification of the Locarno security pact was carried in the house of commons tonight, 375 to 13. A labor amendment to Mr. Chamberlain's motion was defeated, 332 to 130.

COWBOYS GET ON TEACHERS IN 17 TO 0 WIN

Simmons Looks Like Sure T. I. A. A. Moleskin Champ

COMMERCE, Texas, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Simmons college Cowboys of Abilene loked like sure winners in the T. I. A. A. with a steady, consistent game here today that brought them out victors 17 to 0 over the East Texas Teachers college.

The Cowboys unlimbered their attack in the second quarter and scored their first touchdown, after returning a bad punt to the Teachers' one yard line. A line smash put the ball over. A beautiful field goal from the 22-yard line in the third period, and a juggled Teachers' pass, the Coyboys nabbed on the 50-yard line, acounted for the remaining points.

Simmons played her first-string for approximately three quarters.

Rowdy Says "Moco" Of Amarillo Red Grange of Texas

Rowdy Curtin, ex-captain of the Coyotes, cleared out his memory Wednesday afternoon, and giving a vivid account of his former meeting with "Moco," the powerful Amarillo football team. From the tale given by the former Coyote halfback, Red Grange hasn't got a thing on "Moco" in the way of playing football.

Burnett to Have Game Preserve

AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The first game preserve to be located in central Texas by Turner E. Hubby, fish and game commissioner, is the 10,000 acre ranch owned by Mrs. F. S. Smooth and George Nalle in the northwest part of Burnett county, near the Colorado river breaks. This makes nine preserves, of 25 to be designated. It is ideally located and is one of the largest tracts of land remaining in central Texas, Commissioner Hubby said.

THREE FROG STARS TO PLAY FOURTH YEAR

FORT WORTH, Nov. 18.—Three of the best gridmen ever to be produced by Fort Worth high schools—three of the greatest who ever played for T. C. U. will play their fourth year of football with the Horned Frogs in 1926, according to no less an opinion that that of Dr. A. D. Penick, president of the southwest conference.

It means that John Washmon, Herman Clark and Harry Taylor will play for the Frogs again in 1926, that they will be eligible until February 1927.

Seems East-West Play Is All Off

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Chances of an outstanding eastern eleven competing in any post-season conflicts on the Pacific coast New Years Day are dwindling rapidly.

In addition to Dartmouth and Pennsylvania, which already have announced they will not consider any post-season invitations, Colgate today was removed from the list of possibilities by graduate Manager W. JUNIOR COLLEGE-CORDELL TILT SATURDAY CALLED OFF DUE TO CONFLICT WITH HIGH CONTEST

Arrangement Life Saver For Crippled Up Tribe—Decatur Game Be Held In Wichita Falls

The Cordell college-Wichita Falls Junior college football game billed for Spudder Park Saturday is off, announced Wichita Falls Coach Bubs Mosley Wednesday. Mosley by long distance telephone, following with a letter explaining in full his reasons, cancelled the contest with Cordell, he said because under league ruling Tuesday Wichita Falls high gridders must play Amarillo here Saturday in combat for the district one championship of the University of Texas interscholastic league.

Cordell officials, said Mosley, were anxious to play the game and declared willingness to come to Wichita Falls Friday. But Montgomery's Coyote Pups are scheduled with Archer City at Spudder Park tomorrow afternoon, so rathen than run any competition to this game, Mosley declared he could see no way out other than calling off the contest with the Oklahomans.

Game Wasn't Needed.

The tussle with Cordell would have been a non-conference affair, would have meant little to the Wichita Falls team, and possibly would have been injurious in that should any of the Indians get injured prior to the conference game with Decatur Baptist college Thanksgiving, Wichita Falls' chances to cop the contest would be lessened greatly. The squad is in none too good shape now as it is.

Should John Tarleton, as was carried in these columns yesterday, sectional leader, be defeated Thanksgiving in grudge play with the North Texas Aggies, while the Redskins turn back Decatur, the standing would leave Wichita Falls tied at the top with the Stephenville outfit. So it can easily be seen that the Cordell game were better called off than played, for Mosley will need his best lineup to cope with the powerful Decatur crew.

Many Cripples.

Further announcement was made yesterday that it is quite possible the Decatur-Wichita Falls tilt will be played at Spudder Park instead of at Decatur as originally slated. In communication with Decatur officials Mosley came practically to an agreement to shift the scene of the battle to Wichita Falls, pending the outcome of the high school race here and the possibility of conflicting with the Coyotes.

The Indians went through a light workout yesterday afternoon. The roster right now is sorely depleted. Karns, guard, is out with a torn leg ligament. Saunders, also a guard, is ineligible. Datson, halfback, hurt in the McMurray game last week, is still in no shape to play. Rawls, halfback, has a bad ankle. Crites, end, and West, back, are nursing minor injuries, too. Deems, quarterback, has a bad hip, and Beaty, full, is limping around with charley horses in both legs.

With proper care, however, most of the cripples are expected back in shape Thanksgiving day.

OLD GRIDIRON FEUD RESUMED WHEN ZUPPKE MEETS WILCE AT ILLINI- BUCKEYE SET-TO

URBANA, Nov. 18.—An old gridiron duel which for the past 11 years has provided the ultimate in thrills for the climax of the middle west's football season will be renewed when Coach Bob Zuppke herds his Illini against Dr. Jack Wilce's Ohio State eleven at Columbus next Saturday. Of the eleven games "Zup's" teams have won six, Wilce's four and one has been tied.

Zuppke and Wilce both broke into the conference in 1913, and since that date they have kept busy upsetting Big Ten dope buckets, especially in games with each other. This Illinois-Ohio game is not expected to prove any exception to the rule of bitter competition and last-minute thrills.

"Zup" and Wilce did not meet in 1913, their first year in coaching. In 1914 "Zup's" championship team walked all over the Buckeyes 37 to 0, the only time there has ever been more than 13 points between them. The 1915 game was tied. Ohio won in 1916 and 1917 by scores of 7 to 6 and 13 to 0. Illinois came back in 1918 with a 13 to 0 verdict and added another triumph by a 9 to 7 score in 1919. Wilce got revenge in 1920, 7 to 0, but Zuppke turned the tables with a 7 to 0 win in 1921 and spoiled Ohio's championship hopes. Wilce won in 1922, but "Red" Grange wrecked him in 1923 when Illinois triumphed by a 9 to 0 score and again by 7 to 0 last year.

The Ohio game is always the last on Illinois' schedule, and draws the attention of the middle west. "Red" Grange notwithstanding, the Illini expect a terrific argument before the final whistle.

KING OF LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHT WRESTLERS AGREES TO BOUT HERE TUESDAY WITH PAPPAS

Ad Santell, the light heavyweight mat champion and of whom it has been said few of the big boys of the wrestling fraternity and none of the so-called heavyweight that trust care to meet in finish match, has been scheduled with Gus Pappas, the Greek light heavyweight champion, for a match at the Majestic theatre next Tuesday evening, announced Matchmaker Alec Ross Wednesday.

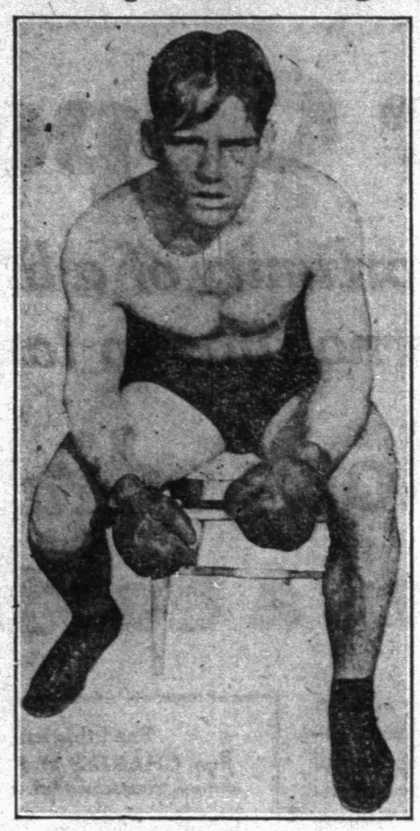

Completion of the deal whereby Santell is brought to Wichita Falls to wrestle Pappas was realized yesterday afternoon after it was ascertained that Wayne (Big) Munn, originially billed to perform with Pat McGill, Canadian heavy king, Tuesday night would be in no condition to appear. Munn was injured in match with Strangler Lewis Monday at Houston.

Santell and Peppas are the first of the big time light heavies and heavyweights who will be brought to Wichita Falls during the next several months, said Promoter Ross, who declared he has lined up a goodly number of the leading matmen in the game today for near future dates here.

If Santell defeats Pappas (he is doped to do so, but, of course, there is ever a chance for the bucket to be kicked over) efforts will be taken said Ross, to bring the world's heavyweight champion Joe Stecher to Wichita Falls to meet the Dutchman Dec. 22 on a benefit Christmas dinner card for the newsboys of this city.

Santell and Pappas are expected in Wichita Falls this week-end. Matty Matsuda is expected here then, also. Matty meets Charley Mason of Butte, Pacific coast middleweight champion, in a finish match as preliminary to the Pappas-Santell go.

Suddenly she stopped. Oh, what was the use of bothering about her looks, anyway? John Manners probably never saw her except as part of the office furniture!

No doubt, he was head over heels in love with some girl whom Mary Rose had never heard of! Some lovely creature who toiled not nor spun . . . who had never so much as touched a typewriter in her life.

"Dolling up for your boss, eh? That's the time I caught you at it!"

Mary Rose wheeled at the sound of the light voice behind her. Flossie Middleton had come noiselessly into the room, and stood now in the slanting light from the west window. There was mockery in her eyes.

Flossie's favorite saying was that every girl was in love with the man for whom she worked—either that, or he was in love with her. One of the two things, she declared, was bound to happen, wherever men and women worked together in an office.

Under her mocking eyes, Mary Rose felt herself blushing uncomfortably. She clicked her vanity case shut and dropped it back into the pocket of her plain black dress.

"No, I'm not dolling up for my boss, thanks!" she said, all the more emphatically because Flossie had hit the nail on the head.

"Well, I am for mine—and I should worry who knows it." Flossie's tone was matter-of-fact. She opened a tin make-up box on the shelf below the mirror and began to lather her face with cold cream.

Suddenly she burst into a laugh. "The Big Boss is certainly running around in circles about me, these days," she said. "Honestly, he doesn't know whether he's coming or going! . . . . This noon he wanted me to go out to lunch with him, again."

Mary Rose stared for a moment. "You don't mean Mr. Dexter, Flossie?" she asked finally, with a sort of gasp.

Her sister nodded so that all the little blond curls on her bobbed head danced wildly.

"Sure, I mean Mr. Dexter, and nobody else but!" she answered with slangy cheerfulness.

"Is—is he in love with you?"

"Bats about me, I told you," Flossie said calmly as she rubbed paste-rouge into her smooth cheeks. Then she caught a glimpse of Mary Rose's face in the glass.

"Oh, you needn't look so shocked, Purity!" she went on. "I guess a little thrill never hurt anybody."

A little thrill.

Surely it wasn't possible that Flossie was "thrilled" even the least bit by the stout, middle-aged head of the Dexter company!

Mary Rose couldn't imagine that, by any wild stretch of the imagination.

But it was perfectly easy to understand how Mr. Dexter could lose his head over Flossie.

Men would always lose their heads over her. She was the type of girl that nine men out of ten "fell for" the minute they laid eyes on her.

Mary Rose had often thought that Helen of Troy and Lady Hamilton and all the other blonde beauties of history must have looked a great deal like Flossie.

She was little and slim, but deliciously curved for all her slimness. There was lure in the grace of her body, the sway of her hips as she moved.

Her blue eyes were as innocent as a child's, and she had learned a trick of holding her mouth pouted as if it waited for a kiss. Make-up and fate hours had not yet had time to spoil Flossie's babyish beauty. For she was not quite twenty.

Mary Rose looked at her thoughtfully. Was this little kitten of a sister really playing the most dangerous game that a girl can play—the game of love with a married man, a man who had grown daughters of his own?

Ah, no! Flossie must be joking.

"Look here, infant," she said sharply, "you've no business saying things like that about Mr. Dexter. He has a wife—"

"Pooh! that old girl!" Flossie broke in, waving a powderpuff carelessly. "What does he care about her? All she does is razz him, he says . . . And besides, don't kid yourself that he's the only man on earth who has an eye for a flapper! The woods are full of 'em! Ask any one. Look around you if you don't believe it"

Mary Rose was only half-listening. A sudden thought from the back of her troubled mind had just struck her: Flossie had not been home to dinner for the last three or four nights. Where had she been?

She had phoned her mother to say that she was having supper downtown with Sam Jessup, who was Mr. Dexter's secretary.

At the time it had not occurred to Mary Rose to doubt her word, but now she did. Had Flossie really been with Sam Jessup? . . . Or had she been with the Big Boss, himself?

Mary Rose put one of her hands on her sister's shoulder and turned her, so that she could look straight into the innocent blue eyes.

"You aren't running around with Mr. Dexter, are you, Floss?" she asked gravely. "You know, mother'd lose her mind if she thought you were!"

Flossie made no answer. She set her soft little chin stubbornly and turned away with a jerk. Without another word, Mary Rose left her and went slowly upstairs to her desk.

She knew there was no earthly use in asking Flossie for the truth about Mr. Dexter—unless she was in a mood to tell it.

For Flossie was not above a lie. She would tell any one any kind of a yarn to get herself out of a tight place.

To Flossie a lie was not a thing to be shunned. It was a convenience. One that she used as freely as she used her little perfumed lipstick!

"If she really is running around with Mr. Dexter, I'll have to put a stop to it, somehow," Mary Rose made up her mind an hour later as she locked her desk for the night.

But how to do it—that was the question.

"Well, I can see to it that she goes home wtih me tonight, at least," she said firmly to herself, "just for a good beginning."

She ran upstairs to the filing department only to find that Flossie had stolen a march on her. She had left two minutes before, so Miss MacFarlane, who was in charge, said.

"She had some marketing to do for her mother, and I let her go early," she explained. "If you hustle, you may be able to catch her."

Mary Rose hustled. But when she reached the street Flossie was nowhere in sight.

"Well, she really may have had some errands to do," thought Mary Rose as she began her long walk home.

Spring lagged last year in Wichita Falls, if you remember, and the April evening was cold. But there were tiny leaves on the trees and the air smelled fresh and fragrant.

As the girl walked along she forgot about Flossie. Her thoughts turned toward John Manners.

"Maybe it's only the stir of spring makes me feel this way about him," she told herself, remembering a line in the old brown Tennyson on the living room table at home.

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," it read.

"Mine, too, perhaps," thought Mary Rose Middleton. But deep down within her heart, she knew that her love for Manners had nothing to do with spring. She knew it was going to last through all her springtimes, and all her winters, too.

She was sure it was "for keeps."

"I suppose it ought to make me happy but it doesn't," she went on to herself. "It can't make you happy to love a man who looks at you as if you were a typewriter or a telephone."

And then: "If I can't marry him, I shall never marry anybody!"

That brought her around to the question of Tom Fitzroy—Tom, who had asked her to marry him only a week ago.

She was still thinking about him when she turned the corner of Lamar Street and all but bumped into him. At the sight of her, he turned a bright shade of pink, and grinned, showing a mouthful of handsome teeth. But he seemed to have lost his voice.

"Hello, Thomas! How's the busy doctor?" Mary Rose saluted him.

In his own mind, Tom Fitzroy knew himself for the desirable and attractive young bachelor he was. His father was the most popular doctor in town, and at thirty, Tom bid fair to follow in his footsteps. His patients liked him tremendously.

But with Mary Rose, Tom was like a bashful schoolboy. He stammered a little now as he spoke to her.

"My stink-wheel's parked around the corner, Mary Rose," he said. "Take you home? Glad to!"

Mary Rose shook her head. "No thanks, it's only a step," she answered, smiling at him with the sweetness that was natural to her.

Drawn by that sweetness, Tom went on: "Come to see you tonight?"

Mary Rose hesitated. She hated to hurt Tom's feelings. But she didn't want to see him tonight. She wanted to be alone after the racket of the day—to think about John Manners.

And, anyway, was it fair to lead Tom on, when she knew she could never really care about him?

"Not tonight, Tom. I'm awfully tired," she said, and went past him.

He stood watching her until she disappeared into the deepening dusk of Lamar Street | Then he kicked a tree with such vigor that his foot was numb for minutes afterward.

"Oh, Lord, I always lose out with her!" he remarked aloud and bitterly.

He had hung around that corner since sundown waiting for her, when he should have been making rounds with his father at General Hospital.

He burned up the road on his way there now.

Mary Rose opened the gate and went around to the back of the house. In the warm, bright kitchen, her mother was standing at the stove, tasting something. She turned, spoon in hand, as the girl opened the door.

"Where's Flossie?" she asked anxiously. "Didn't she come home with you?"

Mary Rose bent to kiss the troubled forehead before she answered. "No," she said, "but she'll be along soon. You didn't ask her to do any errands, by any chance, did you?"

Mrs. Middleton shook her head. Her frown deepened.

"No, I didn't," she said fretfully. "I suppose she's somewhere or other with that young Jessup again! Dear me, I can't see why she wants to waste her time on an upstart like him, I'm sure. With her looks, too!"

"Maybe she likes him, dear," Mary Rose suggested, hoping from the bottom of her soul that Flossie was with Sam Jessup. She was dreadfully afraid that she wasn't.

Upstairs in the little bedroom that she shared with Flossie, she took off her hat, and put an apron on over her black dress. As she opened the top drawer of the old walnut bureau for a clean handkerchief, her eyes caught the gleam of gold in one corner.

A little cigaret holder lay there, half-hidden by an untidy mass of ribbons, handkerchiefs, collars and water-wave combs. The sisters shared the drawer, and Flossie's half of it was always in wild disorder.

Mary Rose picked up the little trinket and examined it. Even before she saw the 18-karat mark on it, she realized that it was very, very expensive. Stripes of jade and platinum banded it brilliantly.

Not in a month of Sundays could Flossie Middleton have afforded to buy it, with her $20 a week. And Mary Rose knew it.

"Good grief! Now, where did she get that thing, do you suppose?" she asked herself.

As she stood there looking at it the telephone downstairs rang sharply. Then the sound of her mother's voice answering it, and a moment later she called:

"That was Flossie on the phone. She's not coming home for supper, so we may as well sit down and eat right away. Everything's ready."

The table was set in the kitchen—the room that was the heart and soul of the fatherless house. Here the three women ate their meals, and chatted cosily aftereward as they washed the dishes. Here they brought their sewing and their reading, at the end of the day.

The arrangement saved not only work but fuel and light—important items. For the Middletons were poor. When Dan Middleton had died of a stroke five years before, the little house had been all the heritage he had left to his widow and his daughters.

But they got along beautifully on Mary Rose's $30 a week, and Flossie's $20—or part of Flossie's twenty. For money flowed through Flossie's hands like water.

She had never been known to bring her pay envelope home, unopened.

There was always something that she "just had to have" for herself—a bottle of French perfume, a pair of chiffon stockings and fancy garters, a slave bracelet of plated silver. Pretty things to wear were a passion with Flossie.

"Did she say she was with Sam Jessup, when she 'phoned?" Mary Rose asked her as she helped herself to hash and green peppers stuffed with corn.

Mrs. Middleton nodded. "Yes, she did. And I suppose I may just as well make up my mind that she's going to marry him and be poor all her life, like I've been," she said in a dreary tone. "Work and worry—worry and work. That's all I've had."

"You had Dad, and you loved him," Mary Rose pointed out sensibly. "You never would have been happy with any one but him, and you know it."

Mrs. Middleton raised her hands and let them fall into her lap.

"I'd been happier if we'd had a little money," she said. "Now, don't get it into your head that I think you girls ought to marry for money, Mary Rose. But it's just as easy to fall in love with a rich man as a poor one."

The girl laughed. Her mother was the most humorous mixture of the romantic and the practical.

"Dear," she said, "it isn't easy to fall in love with any man but the right man. Money hasn't a thing to do with it. I've found that out."

In the front hall the telephone rang again, and Mary Rose ran to answer it.

"Hello," she said.

The deep voice of Sam Jessup answered her. "Hello, yourself," he said. "Let me talk to Flossie, will you?"

To Flossie! . . . Why, then, she wasn't with him at all! . . . She must have lied to her mother over the telephone, when she said she was with him!

But if she wasn't with him, where in the world was she?

The questions flashed themselves across Mary Rose's mind as she spoke again in a voice so low that it could not possibly be heard in the kitchen.

"I'm sorry, Flossie's not here, Sam," she said. "I thought she was having supper downtown with you."

There was no use trying to shield Flossie from Sam Jessup. He'd be sure to find her out sooner or later for himself, Mary Rose decided.

After a long pause he answered: "No, she's not with me. I'm at home. Ask her to give me a ring when she comes in, will you?"

"If it's not too late," Mary Rose promised.

But it was too late.

The black marble clock on the living room mantel had chimed twelve before the grating of Flossie's key in the front door came to Mary Rose as she lay wide awake in bed.

"That you, baby?" asked Mrs. Middleton from the room across the hall, as the stairs creaked under Flossie's light feet.

Mrs. Middleton always waited up for her girls. She liked, she said to hear about "all the little ups and downs" of their days.

"My girls are more like chums than daughters," she was fond of saying to her neighbors. "I know everything that happens to them. They tell me everything—everything!"

Mary Rose heard Flossie go into her mother's room now.

"Sam and I saw a wonderful movie," she heard her say before the door had closed upon her.

"I wonder if she'll put that over on mother—that she's been at a movie until this hour of the night," thought Mary Rose, listening to the low hum of their voices. Presently she dozed off.

Light against her closed lids awakened her. Flossie had come into the room and was undressing.

Mary Rose watched her sleepily, with half-closed eyes.

What a pretty graceful thing she was as she stood with her golden head thrown back, looking at something that she held up toward the light! Something square and bright! What was it?

Mary Rose was wide awake now. She saw that the thing that Flossie held was a vanity case—a gold vanity case banded with twin stripes of jade and platinum.

"Why!" she thought, "it matches that cigaret holder in the top drawer!"

Suddenly she sat straight up in bed.

"Flossie Middleton!" she cried. "Where in the world did you get that thing? . . . Now, tell me the truth!"

CHAPTER II.

"Tell you the truth? Why, sure, I'll tell you the truth. Why should I fib about the thing? Mr. Dexter gave it to me tonight," Flossie said in the noble tones of a George Washington or any other famous teller of the truth.

With a flash of her bare pretty arm she tossed the vanity case down upon the covers of her sister's narrow bed.

"Want to take a look-see at it, sweetie?" she asked cheerfully.

Mary Rose shook her head. "No, thanks, Floss. I don't care to look at it."

Surprise widened Flossie's sea-blue eyes.

"Why not, for the love of Mike?" she asked, plainly puzzled.

Mary Rose gave a little groan of despair.

What was the use of trying to explain to Flossie why it was wrong of her to take presents from a married man if she couldn't see it herself?

"Why not?" Flossie asked again. "Why won't you look at it?"

"Because," Mary Rose began, "because I'm ashamed of you for taking it. Oh, Flossie, can't you see for yourself that it's dreadful for you to go out with Mr. Dexter? To take presents from him? He's married."

Flossie didn't answer at once. Instead she picked up the vanity case and stood, smoothing it thoughtfully with her little hands, for a moment. Then she dropped it into the top drawer of the old walnut dresser.

Mary Rose watched her as she slipped into her pink muslin nightgown and dabbed her soft skin with cold cream.

How young and innocent she looked, as she stood there before the dim mirror! Like a little girl, really. And after all, wasn't that all she was? Only nineteen—

She turned suddenly, and came on bare feet to the side of her sister's bed.

"I never thought of it in just that way, Mary Rose," she said. "It didn't seem dreadful to me—until just now."

A little frown puckered her brow as she sat down on the edge of the bed, her hands clasped around her knees.

"You remember that day a couple of weeks ago when I turned my ankle, running downstairs?" she asked.

Mary Rose nodded.

"Well, that night I was limping out of the building when who should come along but Mr. Dexter in that wonderful car of his!" Flossie began her story. "He offered me a ride home, and I got in. And, of course, I raved about the car. So he drove me 'way out in the country to show me its speed.

"It goes like the wind," she went on. "And before we knew it, it was nine o'clock, and we stopped at a Pig Stand on the lake road for a sandwich—"

"And then what?" asked Mary Rose, as she paused.

Flossie raised her eyebrows. "Well, nothing, except that he said he hadn't had such a good time in years," she said. "And the next day he gave me a little gold cigaret holder—a souvenir of a happy evening, he said."

Mary Rose smiled grimly. "I know I saw it in your handkerchief box tonight," she remarked.

"My stars!" cried Flossie, "did I leave that thing in the drawer? I sure thought I'd locked it up where mother couldn't find it! She'd have seventeen fits if she knew I ever smoked, wouldn't she?"

"She'd have seventeen fits if she knew you'd been out with Mr. Dexter—that's certain.

Flossie considered this. "I suppose she would," she said. "But honestly, Mary Rose, there's nothing so awful about it. We just have an awfully good time together. He calls me his 'Little Pal'."

She threw out her hands in sudden appeal. "Oh, Mary Rose, I do get so tired of eating stew and bread pudding in the kitchen every night with you and mother! Or else going to a serve-self with Sam Jessup!" she said pathetically.

"If you only knew what it means to me to get out and have a little fun, you wouldn' be so cross with me abou Mr. Dexter! If you only knew what it means to me to have a gold vanity case and some of the nice things that other girls have—"

"I know what it's going to mean to you, all right!" Mary Rose broke in. "It's going to mean a lot of trouble for you, sooner or later. Probably sooner!"

She went on with a wisdom far beyond her twenty-two years: "Just suppose that a certain girl is running around with a certain married man, and people find it out? There's sure to be a big scandal, and the girl loses her good name. But the man goes scotfree. He always does—always!

"Now promise me that you'll return those presents from Mr. Dexter first thing tomorrow morning," she added. "And tell him you're never going out with him again."

The younger girl tossed her fluffy head wilfully. "I'll do nothing of the kind!" she said bluntly. "And just you try to start anything with me, Mary Rose Middleton, and I'll leave home! I'm not going to have you butting in on me and my affairs! If you do, I'll go and live with Alice James in her flat! I'm getting sick and tired of being treated like a baby in this house, any way."

She snapped out the lights, opened the windows and got into bed.

Mary Rose said nothing more. Flossie's daily threat to leave home and go to live with Alice James, a chum, always silenced her. She was dreadfully afraid that Flossie would

For Alice James was not all that she ought to be, in Mary Rose's opinion, at least. It was she who taught Flossie to smoke cigarets and to paint her lovely mouth with scarlet lipstick. Flossie blindly adored her, copied her clothes and borrowed her slang.

Just as Mary Rose was dropping off to sleep, Flossie's voice roused her.

"Did Sam Jessup call me up last night?" she wanted to know.

"Yes, he did, and I told him I didn't know where you were."

There was another long silence. Then Flossie spoke again.

"I wish you hadn't told him that," she said. "He gets so peeved if I go out anywhere except with him. And I'm pretty crazy about Sam Jessup if anybody should happen to fall off a freight train and ask you about it."

Promptly at seven the next morning Mary Rose Middleton yawned, stretched and opened her eyes to a new day. For years she had been training herself to waken at this time, and she needed no shrieking alarm clock.

Her first thought was of John Manners. It was as if the thought of him had been in her mind all night, she slept.

"I love him," she said to herself as simply as she might have said "the world is round." It had become one of the facts of life to her.

She went on thinking about him as she bathed and dressed and set to work getting breakfast down in the neat little kitchen.

AUTO MISHAPS COST $750 IN CITY EACH DAY

Smashups in Traffic Is Costly, Kiwanis Club Told

A loss of approximately $750 a day is sustained in Wichita Falls through traffic accidents, five automobile dealers here have estimated according to a report read Monday at the Kiwanis club meeting by Ira L. Cain, chairman of a committee appointed some time ago to investigate traffic conditions.

"Five automobile dealers here estimate that they sell $220 worth of new wheels and fenders every day," the report read. This does not include other parts which have to be purchased in more serious wrecks, nor does it include the labor cost of replacing these damaged parts.

The Danger Spot.

The committee found, the report said, that Eleventh and Brook streets formed the most dangerous intersection in the city, for more smash-ups occur there than at any other point. It also found that Tenth and Brook, Eleventh and Burnett, Ninth and Denver, Eleventh and Lamar, Seventh and Lamar and Tenth and Van Buren presented especially dangerous corners where collisions come with disconcerting frequency.

Commendation was voiced of the traffic lights in the down town district and the report recommended that if possible the city should provide the dangerous residential section corners with automatic control lights.

Adoption of the report was taken by the club after it was read and the committee instructed to continue its work and submit some definite recommendations.

Chest Campaign.

Mrs. C. R. Hartsook, prominent civic leader and club woman here, and R. O. Kenley, local attorney, spoke before the Kiwanians on the community chest campaign to be launched here next week. J. N. Sherrill, chairman of the speakers committee for the campaign, announced that members of the club, in addition to being asked to subscribe to the chest fund, would be called on to take their places in the working teams. Next week's meeting of the club will be turned over entirely to the chest campaign and the actual solicitation will start immediately after the luncheon.

Evade City Manager Issue.

After considerable parliamentary dispute, the club voted to make no recommendations one way or the other on a city manager proposal here. A committee report was submitted by Walter Caldwell relative to this and the club after some discussion, voted to keep out of politics.

Later on it also voted a plan presented by Dave Paul which called for Kiwanis support of a matinee and evening performance next Sunday of the revue being put on here for the Elks and Optimists by Dan Folan.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Every body uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.

Joint-Ease
For Swollen Joints

Most remedies fail but Joint-Ease surely and speedily succeeds.

It's for joint troubles only, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, finger or spine—whether rheumatic or not.

It limbers up stiff, inflamed, swollen, painful, creaky joints so quickly you'll be astonished.

Two seconds' rubbing and away it goes through skin and flesh right down to the bone and ligaments—that's why it succeeds. Ask Smith's Drug Stores, or any reliable druggist.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Adv.

Read this letter
from CHARLES M. SCHWAB
Chairman, BETHLEHEM STEEL CORPORATION

The publication of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in the "New Form" at such a low price is something much more important than any purely commercial undertaking could be. It is bringing the most important and authoritative work of its kind in the world within reach of those ambitious people of moderate means who need it most, the men who are raising themselves from the ranks to positions of responsibility. We have many thousand men in our mills and plants, and I wish a lot more of them would profit by the knowledge that is in the Britannica.

Yours very truly,

Chas M Schwab.

All the world's knowledge can now be yours

There is no subject of interest to any man, woman or child that is not covered thoroughly and authoritatively in the Britannica. It contains all knowledge of all time—including the World War and the momentous years since; also the marvelous recent developments in all fields of activity, written in an easy narrative style that holds the reader's interest.

The Standard of the World

To-day the Britannica stands alone, as it has for 157 years, the standard of the world. Statesmen, scientists, judges, governments, as well as private individuals, recognize it everywhere as the final court of appeal. Its verdict in every dispute is accepted without question, because in this book you are given the plain, unbiased truth, the complete and authoritative facts, in every field of human knowledge.

The finest scholarship, the fruits of original thought and research, make the Britannica the very foundation of knowledge for intelligent people all over the world.

This offer may never be repeated

To-day, if you act promptly, you can obtain this wonderful work at a price within the reach of everybody.

Such an opportunity seldom occurs more than once in a lifetime. This offer may never be repeated. It is the greatest bargain we have ever been able to offer in 157 yars. And that is the reason eager thousands jumped at the chance to buy the Britannica during this sale.
