Graham Greene dies

Graham Greene, whose novels of suspense and moral ambiguity plumbed the sordid politics of the modern world and the inner torments of mankind during a 60-year writing career, died Wednesday at La Providence Hospital in Vevey, near Lake Geneva in Switzerland. He was 86. The official cause of death was not immediately known, but his daughter, Caroline Bourget, said that her father had died of a blood disease, according to Reuters. Among Greene's 24 novels and dozens of short stories, many of which were adapted into films, were "The Power and the Glory," "The Heart of the Matter," "The Third Man," "The Quiet American," "Our Man in Havana" and "The Comedians."

Soviets yield

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union yielded to black market pressure Wednesday, offering more than four times more rubles for a dollar on a key exchange rate and pushing the Soviet currency toward use in international trade. The change in the foreign exchange rate for tourists was a tacit admission that many travelers and Soviets are bypassing the state bank in search of better deals, depriving Kremlin coffers of badly needed hard currency. Soviets said the higher cost of buying dollars — up from 5.8 rubles per dollar to 27.6 rubles — will prevent many from traveling outside their country.

Fonda's closes

LOS ANGELES — They'll have to go for the burn someplace else. Jane Fonda's Workout, the Beverly Hills aerobics studio that launched her fitness empire, has taken a permanent breather. The studio closed Tuesday, unable to compete with health clubs that offered services ranging from juice bars to racquetball, a spokesman said in today's Los Angeles Times. Fonda also wants to concentrate on her core businesses, which include a string of fitness videos, books and audiotapes, the spokesman said. Fonda, 53, opened the studio in 1979. Fonda, whose exhortation to "go for the burn" became a rallying cry of the fitness craze, often taught morning classes there.

Tully

AUSTIN (NYT) — This state boasts a rich history of bizarre politics, but the story that surfaced here Wednesday stretches even Texas standards.

Inside the majestic Texas Capitol with the U.S. flag draped around his neck stood one John Johnson, owner of fajita and hot dog stands, candidate for mayor of Austin and, as he confessed to reporters Wednesday afternoon, a former hit man for the Mafia.

Brandishing a seven-page rap sheet, a certificate of baptism and a collection of news articles about mob crime, Johnson set about proving an identity that he said he had spent a decade hiding.

He proclaimed himself John Patrick Tully, a confessed murderer and cocaine smuggler whose cooperation with the government helped convict nine members of the Campisi crime family in Newark, N.J.

"I'm going to put John Johnson off to the side for now," he said, as he launched into the story of a past life in crime and the difficulties he said he has had starting over.

Tully was indicted in 1973 on charges of committing five murders and some 100 robberies and for engaging in a conspiracy to operate illegal gambling and narcotics enterprises. In 1975 he became a government

Bills would place judicial election issue on ballot

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Voters will be able to decide whether state judges should be elected from single-member districts if lawmakers pass three joint resolutions pending in the state Legislature.

The issue could be moot, however, if the U.S. Supreme Court overturns a 5th Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that at-large judicial elections do not violate the Voting Rights Act.

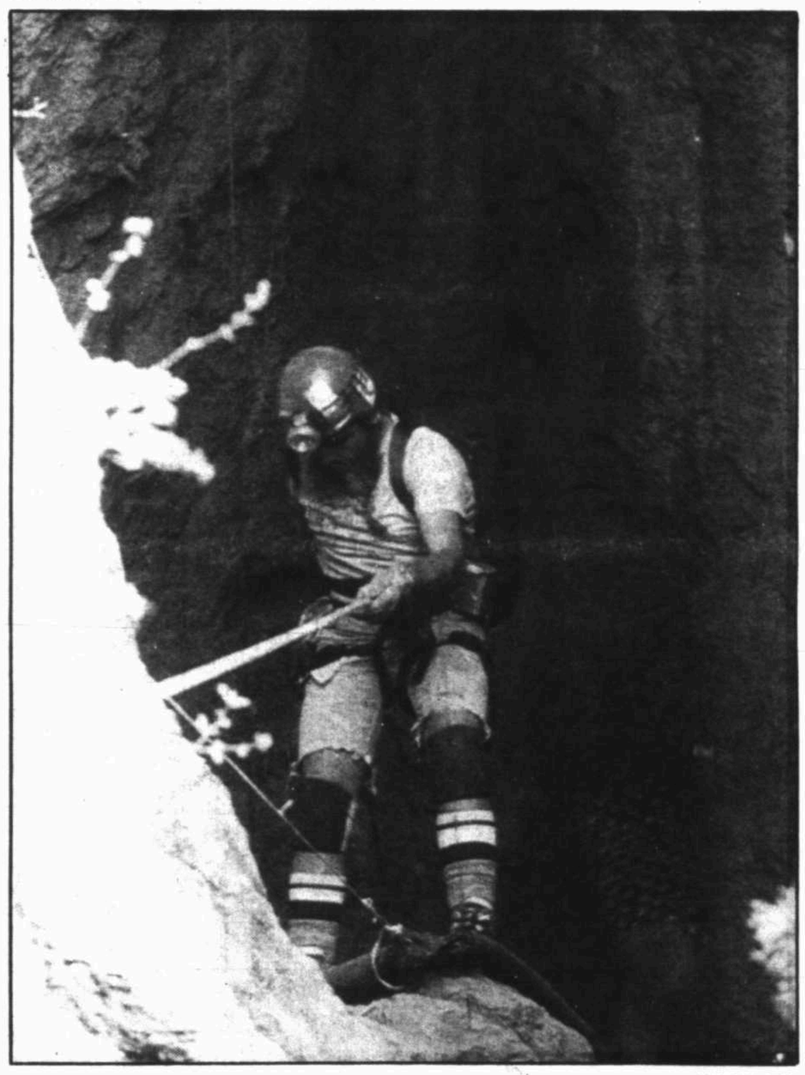

The resolutions, introduced in January by Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, would amend the state constitution to eliminate at-large elections for state district courts, appeals courts and the state Supreme Court.

"This bill sets out to correct the dilution of minority voting strength," a spokesman in Ms. Johnson's Austin office said. "It would be across the board in terms of district courts on up."

The resolutions, which probably would appear on the ballot next November, have been sent to the Senate's Jurisprudence Committee.

Caver almost out

Bill Liebman of Pasadena, Calif., lowers himself into the Lechuguilla Cave in Carlsbad, N.M., Wednesday. Liebman is one of about 80 people involved in rescuing Emily Mobley.

Rescue operation moves spelunker near freedom

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — A fits-and-starts rescue operation Wednesday moved an injured spelunker to within a half-mile of freedom from the nation's deepest cave.

Rescuers hoped to have Emily Davis Mobley out by this morning.

"It looks good. They're moving along very quickly, faster than they had expected," Carlsbad Caverns National Park spokeswoman Lynn Carranza said late Wednesday.

Park Ranger Duane Alire said the effort was taking its toll on rescuers trying to bring Mobley out of Lechuguilla Cave, which is 1,565 feet deep and 54.3 miles long.

"They're still moving well, but they are tiring a little bit," Alire said.

Mobley was also tiring.

"She's still in good spirits, but when you've been hauled around for 10 to 12 hours on your back, the spirits start to drop down," Alire said.

Mobley, 40, of Schoharie, N.Y., has been working her way to the entrance with help from some of the nation's top cave-rescue experts since Sunday, when an 80-pound rock she had been holding onto gave way, and fell on her, fracturing her left leg below the knee. She was about 1,000 feet deep and about two miles into the cave when the accident occurred.

U.N. adopts tough truce resolution

■ Measure holds Iraq liable for injury, damage and loss of property, including damage to the environment.

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The Security Council on Wednesday adopted a truce resolution that forces a defeated Iraq to its knees, demanding it abolish weapons of mass destruction, renounce terrorism and pay war reparations.

If Iraq accepts the measure, it would take effect immediately. The U.N.-ordered trade embargo on Iraq would be lifted in stages, and U.N. peacekeeping troops would replace allied soldiers.

Iraq's U.N. envoy called the resolution "outrageous" and "one-sided," but he said his government had yet to decide on compliance. Under pressure, Baghdad has accepted all previous council resolutions since its defeat in late February.

"Iraq now has a clear choice," declared Sir David Hannay, the British ambassador. "It can, by accepting this resolution and by implementing it rapidly and honestly, turn its back on the errors and crimes of the recent past, or it can perpetuate the suffering ... for a further period until it becomes intolerable."

A provisional truce has prevailed between Iraqi and allied forces since late February.

The United States led efforts to squelch moves for a separate council resolution de-

U.S. position at meeting is awkward

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Having decided not to intervene further in Iraq, the Bush administration found itself Wednesday in the awkward position in the Security Council of seeming reluctant to back appeals for strong action to halt the repression of the Kurds.

Many political figures and foreign policy experts argue the administration's position in recent weeks is morally indefensible and in the long run may not produce the stability in Iraq or the Persian Gulf region that the White House says its policy is designed to encourage.

But the administration, which based its gulf military operation in part on upholding the principle of self-determination for Kuwait, appears determined now to put other considerations ahead of the question of self-determination for Iraqi religious and ethnic

City considers zoning change to allow bed and breakfasts

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

A home may be a castle, but in Midland it could become a quaint motel if the city allows single-family dwellings to become bed-and-breakfast establishments.

The concept hit Midland City Hall this week when a local homeowner asked the Planning and Zoning Commission for permission to convert her home into a bed and breakfast.

However, that type of establishment would fall into the same city zoning category as motels and hotels and would not be allowed in single-family dwelling areas.

Planning and Development Director Richard Hennessy said a zoning change, approved by the commission and City Council, is required before the facilities could operate in those areas.

Kennedy assault probe: Police face media onslaught

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Police won't talk about the investigation of an alleged rape at the Kennedy compound, but that hasn't stopped hordes of reporters, some armed with cash, from searching for clues.

Palm Beach, a genteel, well-manicured resort town, took on a circus atmosphere Wednesday as reporters quarreled with police, offered money for interviews and even questioned each other.

"In this day and age, nothing does surprise me," said police spokesman Craig Gunkel. "I'm sure careers and promotions revolve around this sort of story."

Agnes Ash, publisher of The Palm Beach Daily News, which specializes in society news, said the reported rape has triggered the biggest local media bonfire in years. Ms. Ash held up a stack of telephone messages.

"Look at this," she said. "These are calls from TV stations ... this always happens when the Kennedys are involved."

Police Chief Joseph L. Terlizzese said a 30-year-old woman went to the Kennedy estate after encountering Sen. Edward Kennedy, his son, Patrick, and his nephew, William Kennedy Smith, on Friday night at a popular Palm Beach night club, Au Bar.

The woman reported meeting the Kennedy group late Friday or early Saturday, then going to the estate "for a couple of cocktails," Terlizzese said.

The senator, his son and his nephew have denied any wrongdoing.

"Any suggestion that I was involved in any offense is erroneous," Smith said late Wednesday in a statement.

"The news reports circulating about events last weekend at the Kennedy family residence in Palm Beach, Fla., are inaccurate and have unfairly embarrassed my uncle, Sen. Ted Kennedy, and my cousin, Patrick Kennedy," Smith said. "I make this statement in the hopes that it will help stem the tide of unwarranted suspicions."

Smith, a 30-year-old student at Georgetown University Medical School and the son of Sen. Kennedy's older sister, Jean Kennedy Smith, and the late Stephen Smith, a New York businessman, had not been available for comment until he released the statement.

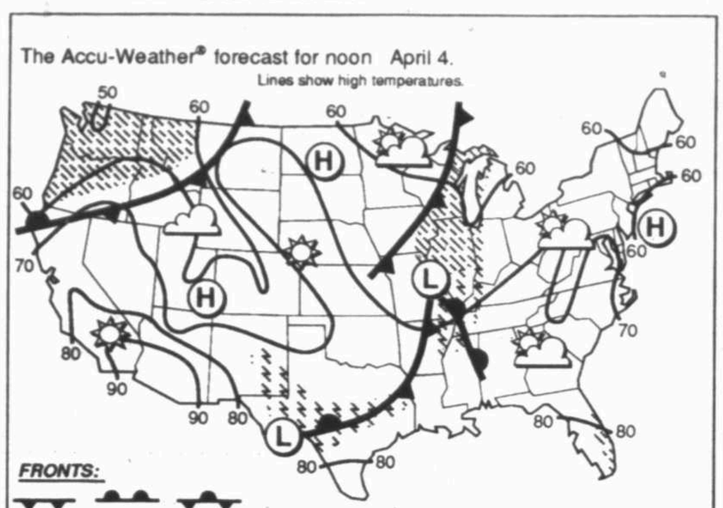

Sen. Kennedy spoke briefly with reporters Wednesday, urging calm.

"All the members of the Kennedy family are obviously distressed by the reports that have come out of Florida over a period of the past few days," he said. "I think all of us are hopeful that all of the parties will be treated fairly and there will be a full and complete investigation."

Partly cloudy skies forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-70s, winds from the east at 10 to 20 mph and a 20 percent chance of showers, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 40s.

Friday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 39, Wednesday's high was 79 compared with the record high for that date of 94 set in 1946. The record low for today's date was 28 in 1945.

STATE

Most of Texas was fair and warm Wednesday although a weak cold front extended from a nearly stationary low pressure system over eastern Oklahoma. The front stretched from near Gainesville in North Texas to near Abilene in West Central Texas and then into the Big Bend.

Meanwhile, a dry line separating moist gulf air to the east from dry air to the west was located over central North Texas. It extended from near Sherman south to the Dallas area and farther south to the eastern sections of the Hill Country.

Variable high level clouds covered most of the state with low clouds over East Texas and the Gulf Coast. South Texas was partly cloudy.

Southerly winds prevailed across East Texas, southeasterly in South Texas, westerly winds ahead of the cold front and northwesterly breezes behind the front. Wind speeds were mainly 10 to 20 miles an hour.

Temperatures were generally in the 70s and 80s across Texas.

Forecasters expected increasing cloudiness today with a chance for showers and thunderstorms over all Texas except for the northwest. Highs in the 70s to 80s.

NATION

At midday, showers and thunderstorms reached from central and northern Arkansas across southeastern Kansas and southern Missouri.

Heaviest rain during the six hours up to noon CST was 1.07 inches at Quillayute, Wash.

RESOLUTION: U.N. demands Iraq abolish weapons

manding that Iraq respect the lives of Kurdish and Moslem Shiite peoples who rose up at the war's end to try to overthrow the country's Sunni leadership. Thousands have reportedly died as Saddam Hussein crushed those rebellions; hundreds of thousands are said to be fleeing Iraq.

After approving the truce, the five permanent members of the Security Council met privately to discuss what action the council could take to protect the Kurds. France, which had called on the council to help protect the rebellious minorities, was meeting with other nations to discuss a possible resolution condemning the government attacks.

The truce resolution, the longest and most complex in U.N. history, demands the U.N.-supervised destruction of Iraq's chemical and biological weapons, nuclear weapons-grade materials, and ballistic missiles with a range of more than 90 miles. That would leave Iraq unable to fire missiles into Israel, as it did during the war.

The truce maintains the U.N. embargo on conventional arms sales to the Baghad government, but the ban will be reviewed periodically.

The truce holds Iraq liable for injury, damage and loss of property stemming from its Aug. 2 invasion and occupation of Kuwait, including damage to the environment. It says Baghdad must return all booty and documents taken from Kuwait.

Iraq also must renounce terrorism and expel any terrorist groups from the country.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas R. Pickering said the resolution was "tough, but it is fair." He held out a frail olive branch, saying, "If the people of Iraq will work with us ... and military tension recedes, the international community can turn to assisting with the reconstruction of Iraq, as well as of Kuwait."

POLICY: U.S. finds itself in awkward position communities.

"I feel frustrated any time innocent civilians are being slaughtered," President Bush said Wednesday. "But the United States and these other countries with us in this coalition did not go there to settle all the internal affairs of Iraq."

Administration officials say the priority for them is to prevent Iraq from fragmenting and to speed the withdrawal of American troops from the region. They believe these ends can best be realized by not intervening in the Iraqi civil conflict.

Nevertheless, the apparent crushing of the Kurdish and Shiite rebellions this week by the Iraqi Army, and the stream of refugees produced by the conflict, have left the administration on the defensive. Some Democrats and conservative Republicans are calling the Bush policy a betrayal of American principles, and the issue is likely to generate more political heat when Congress returns to work next week after its Easter recess.

"It's not just a tough call, it is a perfect dilemma," said Robert W. Tucker, a historian of international relations. "The administration's policy has its own logic, but there is an equally strong sense that by doing nothing it will be viewed as a betrayal of values that we have always seen ourselves as championing."

Foreign-policy experts say the administration is understandably hesitant about using American troops to back the Shiite and Kurdish uprisings in Iraq, considering that these rebellions could lead to the disintegration of that country.

But many contend the long-term moral and diplomatic implications for the United States of doing nothing, particularly after Bush made the gulf war a test case for a new world order, are great.

They say the administration must find some way to handle the outcry in some quarters for the United States to support the anti-Saddam forces, who were inspired in part by America's own appeal to topple the Iraqi leader.

(From 1A)

Her leg was splinted and Mobley hobbled when there was space to stand upright and was carried or slid on stretchers elsewhere.

Officials said Tuesday that it would be today or Friday before the rescue operation could be completed. The rescue operation was fast-paced early Wednesday, then slowed, but picked up by evening.

The undeveloped cave in a remote area of the park is closed to the general public. Mobley was part of an official cave-mapping expedition.

Mobley spoke to reporters Wednesday via a line rescuers had stretched to her from the entrance.

"I'm feeling real good this morning. I'm being taken care of real well down here," said Mobley, a 22-year cave explorer and an expert cave rescuer.

She was about 600 feet deep at the time of the news conference and about to begin the treacherous journey through the boulder-strewn area with large holes called The Rift.

"This cave rescue couldn't be run better," Mobley said. "I'm comfortable at all times. ... I'm not being treated like a package. I'm being treated like a person."

Rescuers moved her through The Rift and across a formation known as Glacier Bay by Wednesday evening, Carranza said.

Dennis Curry of the Hamilton County Cave Rescue Team in Chattanooga, Tenn., said rescuers had to conduct 15- to 20-foot climbs without a lot of sophisticated equipment.

Earlier Wednesday, rescuers moved Mobley across a 40-foot-long traverse known as Freakout Traverse, the longest in the cave, said rescuer Mark Rosbrook.

Rosbrook said ropes were anchored to two large boulders. Mobley, who was on a stretcher attached to pulleys, was pulled across the chasm with a 100-foot drop.

Mobley told reporters she had been exploring caves since 1969 when a friend at the University of Denver introduced to spelunking.

"The first time I went caving I thought it was the most exciting thing I've ever done," she said. "Ever since then, caving has been a major part of my life."

The cave is not open to the public but the National Park Service allows a limited number of experienced cave explorers.

BILLS: Legislation would put issue before voters

(From 1A)

Public hearings on the resolutions have not yet been scheduled but are necessary before the resolutions can go before the full Senate, a committee spokesman said.

State District Judge John Hyde, who presides over Midland's 238th District Court, said he opposes efforts to require single-member judicial districts.

"I do not think single-member districts really belong with the judiciary," he said. "Judges at any level are not representatives, and that's one of the things that the 5th Circuit Court's opinion emphasizes."

Last September, the appeals court overturned a ruling by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton that at-large judicial elections in nine Texas counties violate Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act.

Bunton, who is based in Midland, ordered the nine counties — Midland, Ector, Harris, Dallas, Tarrant, Bexar, Travis, Jefferson and Lubbock — divided into electoral subdistricts.

The League of United Latin American Citizens had challenged the at-large election system in a 1988 federal lawsuit in Bunton's court.

The case is scheduled to go before the U.S. Supreme Court later this month.

Gene Collins, president of the Odessa chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he hoped the Supreme Court would mandate single-member districts and put the question to rest once and for all. He said he didn't have any faith in either the Legislature or the voters to adequately resolve the issue.

"I think the Legislature is more split on this issue than on school finance, and they'll never come to an agreement on that," Collins said.

He also said the state's white majority probably would vote down resolutions establishing single-member districts.

Chris McCormack, chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party, said whites as well as minorities stand to benefit from elimiantion of the at-large system.

"I agree that they (judges) are different from legislators, but they do represent the community in the legal arena," he said. "They do more than sit as impartial arbitrators. They appoint grand jurors and sit on boards. ... They are pillars of the community, and they are elected, so it's appropriate to give them a closer connection to the communities they represent. And that's what single-member districts would do."

But Judge Dean Rucker, who presides over Midland's 318th District Court, said judges should not be advocates of a particular area of a community.

A judge's decisions, he said, "should be based solely on the law and the facts of the the case."

LODGING: Concept hit Midland City Hall this week

(From 1A)

Marilyn Johnson, who presented the idea to commissioners Monday, said bed and breakfasts would do a booming business after the Confederate Air Force museum opens here.

"There's a lot of people who travel about the country who enjoy that type of lodging," said Ms. Johnson, 45, a single mother and marketing coordinator for a local oil company. "A lot of people like the interaction with the people in the community they're visiting."

Hennessy said city management and planning commissioners will study the idea and develop a proposal to present to councilmen. No timetable has been set, he said.

The commission is receptive to the overall bed-and-breakfast concept, Hennessy said.

"I think the commission members felt it would be a way of promoting tourism," he said. "It will provide an alternative means of lodging for tourists. There may be persons visiting Midland who prefer a bed-and-breakfast type of lodging."

He said bed-and-breakfast owners likely would have to secure special use permits from the city before they could open their establishments.

"The more restrictive the districts get, the more reasons there may be for having a special-use permit," Hennessy said.

Victor Hardy, Midland Hotel-/Motel Association president, said having competition from the residential sector would not bother him.

"Bed and breakfasts usually are just a one-night stand for a vacation traveler," said Hardy, manager of the Plaza Inn, 4108 N. Big Spring St. "The concept of the bed and breakfast would not interfere with our business."

Councilman J.D. Faircloth also said he favors the idea.

"Once Midland understands what she's (Ms. Johnson) trying to do, I think the city will be in favor of the idea," Faircloth said. "It's an interesting concept."

After conducting a survey of five other West Texas cities, Hennessy found that none of them has zoning codes for bed and breakfast facilities. They are considered hotels or motels in all cities surveyed except Lubbock.

Amarillo bed and breakfasts are found in multifamily, office, retail and commercial zoning districts, while those in Odessa are allowed in commercial zoning districts.

The establishments are considered boarding houses in Lubbock if there are fewer than 12 sleeping rooms. They are classified as motels if there are more than 12 sleeping rooms. Lubbock boarding houses are allowed in apartment zoning districts, while motels are allowed in commercial zones.

Bed and breakfasts in San Angelo are allowed in commercial districts. The city is studying the concept to determine whether to allow the establishments in other zones.

PROBE: Police say little

(From 1A)

The combination of alleged sexual misconduct and the Kennedy name set tabloids into a feeding frenzy.

The Sun of London ran a report under the headline: "Rape Quiz Girl 'Wanted Sex With a Kennedy.' " London's Daily Star led with: "The curse of the Kennedys has struck again."

New York papers were not to be outdone. The New York Post headlined the story: "Bachelors Party."

In contrast, The Boston Globe, the Kennedys' hometown paper, ran the headline: "Police: Kennedy Pull Won't Affect Rape Probe." The Boston Herald was equally subdued.

Humana Hospital spokesman Al Gonzales said a man identifying himself as a reporter handed his business card to a woman at the desk, inscribed with the message, "$500 for the name" of the woman who filed the complaint.

As soon as the story broke Sunday, tabloid reporters with their checkbooks in hand were negotiating for interviews at Au Bar, the nightspot where the Kennedys were seen Friday night.

Palm Beach has been through it before, from the 1984 drug overdose of David Kennedy, the son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, to the steamy 1982 divorce case of Roxanne Pulitzer and newspaper heir Peter Pulitzer.

The Kennedys have also had their share of tribulations, including the assasinations of President Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy and plane crashes that claimed the lives of Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. and Kathleen Kennedy.

Mary Jo Kopechne drowned when a car driven by Sen. Kennedy went off the Dike Bridge on Chappaquiddick Island.

Local media have hired an attorney to seek the full police complaint. Police have only released the cover sheet, with the woman's name and address blacked out.

Ms. Ash, whose newspaper is among news organizations seeking the police report, said they are not seeking the woman's name, but want details of the alleged assault.

Sen. Kennedy said Wednesday he had "absolutely no idea" of the woman's identity.

witness.

The man making his confession here Wednesday said that after more than six years in prison, he entered the witness protection program, taking on the name Johnson and bringing hot dog and fajita stands to Austin.

Now 53 years old, Johnson is a stocky, gray-haired man whose East Coast accent sticks out here.

He said he decided to reveal his identity because he was afraid the local police would kill him. Johnson said the police began harassing and beating him after they arrested him for drunken driving six years ago and learned of his criminal past.

His aim, he said, is "to protect myself in the limelight because a lot of these type of crimes are committed in darkness."

He said he did not fear retaliation from the Campisi family for events that occurred so many years ago.

"Right now, I have more fear of the police department than I have of any mob or any criminal," he said. "I don't believe that they would come looking for me after 20 years in a state with a death penalty to settle an old, moth-eaten grudge."

Capt. John Pope of the Austin police denied that any officers had mistreated Johnson. "He's always bugging us down here," Pope said. "He's a schizo as far as I'm concerned."

Officials in the U.S. Marshals Service, which administers the witness protection program, would not comment, as a matter of policy.

"There would never be a time or a situation when we would ever acknowledge whether an individual was ever in the witness protection program," said Stephen Boyle, chief of congressional and public affairs for the service.

But Frederick Martens, who worked on the Campisi investigation for the New Jersey state police, said the description and comments that Johnson made jibe with those of the hit man.

"It certainly sounds like the John Tully," Martens, now executive director of the Pennsylvania crime commission, said in a telephone interview.

Johnson, one of eight mayoral candidates in the May 4 election, announced his candidacy on March 12 on the steps of City Hall, carrying a beer and again wearing a flag.

"Why do I wear the flag?" he asked. "Because I have no place else to hide," he answered."

Johnson said he considered himself a serious candidate. "I don't have any pipe dreams about winning this race. But every person who enters the lottery has a chance to win it — unless they don't enter."

Remember, he told the group gathered before him, "I'm No. 7 on the ballot."

GOP, Democrats fighting over campaign finance reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the name of campaign finance reform, Democrats and Republicans are trying to undercut each other's strengths in raising and spending money.

Both parties say they want bipartisan reform in the wake of the Keating Five influence-peddling allegations. But both are also reluctant to make concessions that could cost them seats at election time.

The issue could hit the Senate floor as early as next week, with major disagreements still far from resolved.

For example, the Democrats insist on sharp restrictions on election-campaign spending. "Everything is negotiable, except real spending limits," said Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., chairman of the Senate Rules Committee.

But such limits are anathema to Republicans. GOP leaders maintain their only chance to regain control of Congress is to provide candidates with enough money to overcome the name-recognition and other campaign advantages of Democratic incumbents.

Other issues blocking a compromise include the idea of using tax dollars to subsidize spending on congressional campaigns — a concept pushed by Democrats but vehemently opposed by Republicans.

On the other hand, Republicans want to attack the "soft money" advantage historically held by Democrats. This refers to unreported money, often spent by unions, that provides Democrats with valuable voter-education assistance.

"If nothing's done about union soft money, there will not be a bill this year, period," said one key Republican negotiator. "There's a willingness to compromise, but we're not going to commit suicide."

"I've felt all along that this bill will be written in a conference committee" of negotiators in the House and Senate after each acts on widely disparate packages, said Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky. He had been floor manager for the Republicans on this issue last year.

McConnell, the GOP's most fervent opponent of Democratic attempts to gain public financing and limits on spending, gave only 50-50 odds that any reforms will be enacted this year.

Lawmakers in both parties, particularly House members, worry that any changes in the present laws — which have worked well enough to put and keep them in office — will turn to their disadvantage, particularly after their districts are redrawn to reflect the 1990 census.

"An overwhelming number of seats will be designed to favor one party over the other, or the incumbent against a challenger, and the results will be locked in for a decade," said Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich.

A majority of Senate Democrats and a large minority of them in the House want to use a voluntary checkoff on income tax returns to effectively finance half a candidate's general election campaign costs through government vouchers for buying TV and radio ad time.

Republicans call the proposal a "food stamp program for politicians" but say they have no objection to allowing the two parties — particularly since the GOP is more adept than Democrats at raising money for party coffers — establish their own trust funds for buying TV time for candidates.

Federal prosecutors drop Flake charges

NEW YORK (AP) — The government acknowledged Wednesday that its case against U.S. Rep. Floyd H. Flake was crippled beyond repair and dropped its conspiracy and tax evasion charges against him and his wife.

In an unusual move a month into the federal trial, Assistant U.S. Attorney William J. Muller told the judge that the government would be unable to prove the charges because of a ruling earlier this week that greatly reduced the bounds of the case.

Flake, who is also a clergyman, and his wife, Margarett, showed little emotion when U.S. District Judge Eugene H. Nickerson tossed out the 17-count indictment.

But outside the courtroom Flake tearfully greeted supporters and members of his congregation who had filled the courtroom most days of the trial.

"It feels great," Flake said, adding that he harbored no bitterness against the prosecutors.

"It would be inconsistent for me to have hard feelings," the 46-year-old Democrat said. "I think everything's done for a reason. I think maybe it's God's way of letting our work be known."

Many black leaders — including the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Rep. Charles Rangel — said the prosecution was part of a larger pattern of investigations and prosecution of black officials and community leaders.

"It's just amazing how they had to climb over so many churches to get to Reverend Flake," Rangel said after the acquittal.

Mayor David Dinkins said, "I always have believed that, on balance, the judgments of our criminal justice system are fair. Today justice was done and my faith in that system was reaffirmed."

Flake, now in his third term representing part of the borough of Queens in Congress, declined to characterize the prosecution of him and his wife in racial terms, but a member of his congregation said he saw the conspiracy.

"The Reverend Flake was a very aggressive black leader in his community, so therefore he stood out and it was easy for them to go after him," said Whip Wilson, 62, a member of Flake's Allen African Methodist Episcopal Church.

"Absolutely false and unfounded," U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney said of the race charges. "This case would have been brought against any kind of public official with the kind of figures and allegations we were talking about."

Maloney insisted that his case against Flake was a good one and said Nickerson's ruling was wrong.

Nickerson ruled that a ministerial-expenses fund account was a church account, not a personal fund set up by the Flakes to funnel church money into their own pockets as the prosecution charged.

Jurors interviewed after they were dismissed said the panel had been ready to exonerate the Flakes.

"I do believe he was a victim of a witch hunt," said Joseph Taylor, 42, an X-ray technician. "From everything I saw, there was nothing there."

The government's case against the minister and his 42-year-old wife was troubled from the first day of testimony. Witness after witness called by the prosecution portrayed the Flakes as a selfless couple dedicated to church and community, not lawbreakers.

The indictment was returned last summer after a two-year investigation. It alleged that the Flakes conspired between 1983 and 1986 to embezzle $75,000 from the apartments through a scheme that involved overbilling the complex for transportation costs for residents.

They were also accused of diverting $66,700 more in church funds to their own use, and failing to claim on their personal joint income-tax returns $45,000 in Christmas, vacation and other church-paid bonuses.

The Flakes had faced the possibility of 10 years imprisonment on the embezzlement charge and five years for conspiracy.

IRS on alert for more bombs

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Internal Revenue Service offices across the country tightened security after 10 pipe bombs were launched at the center where most California income tax returns are sent, authorities said Wednesday.

George Vinson, special agent in charge of the FBI office in Fresno, said the IRS has done perimeter checks, looking for anything suspicious outside their buildings.

The agency has 10 regional service centers, 64 district offices and the main headquarters in Washington, D.C., said Frank Keith, a spokesman at IRS headquarters.

The security was heightened after someone used a homemade launcher to lob explosive devices at the sprawling complex here during lunchtime Monday. About half of the pipebombs exploded, damaging cars in the parking lot but causing no injuries.

The FBI is investigating the possibility that the Fresno bombings are related to bomb attempts at IRS offices at Los Angeles 200 miles south, Vinson said. No one has claimed responsibility for the Fresno blasts, but a group calling itself "Up the IRS Inc." said it was responsible for one incident in Los Angeles last year.

As the law enforcement investigation continued, the IRS center's 5,000 employees were busy processing returns with the April 15 filing deadline approaching.

Book tells tales of top-level trysts

NEW YORK (AP) — Where did George Washington REALLY sleep? Who liked Ike more than his wife? Tippecanoe and 10 kids, too?

History class was never like this. It's "Presidential Passions," a new book that looks at the lives and loves of our chief executives from Abe to Zachary.

One read of author Michael John Sullivan's book will convince you that the Blue Room is the most important one in the White House. Tales of closet trysts by Warren Harding, nude poolside parties given by JFK — it's all fair game in this book of love and scores.

"There's a connection between power and sex, definitely," Sullivan said in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles home. "It's the ultimate aphrodisiac, I believe Kissinger said."

The book by Sullivan, who has a master's degree in modern history, started out as a historical treatise on the Harding presidency. But his efforts focused on the seamier side of White House life after he discovered that book publishers weren't drooling over a book on the Harding years.

"Harding's not exactly a blockbuster-type subject. But I though his hidden love affairs were so interesting that if you found out the same things about the other presidents, and collected it all in one book, it would make a pretty fascinating book," Sullivan said.

And so we read that the real first lady in George Washington's life was Sally Fairfax, although their love was never consummated; about Dwight Eisenhower's liaison with his personal assistant during World War II; that the president with the shortest White House stay, William Henry Harrison, had the most children (10).

Try these chapter titles: "A Paragon of Promiscuity" (Harding). "The Beast of Buffalo" (Grover Cleveland). "Mr. President and His Slave Mistress" (Thomas Jefferson). "Jack and the Sex Goddess" (You already know this one).

"I kept my tongue in my cheek through several of the chapters," Sullivan confirmed.

Even the book blurbs are entertaining: " 'George Washington slept here' is a sign that could hang on the door of Martha's best friend, Sally Fairfax. ... Lyndon Johnson was truly a 'vice' president, following in JFK's notorious footsteps."

John F. Kennedy gets four full chapters to himself.

"What's generally known about Kennedy is just the tip of the iceberg," Sullivan confided. "If you made it up out of your head, a sort of Playboy fiction, you couldn't come close to the outrageous things that happened."

The book is due in stores this month from Shapolsky Publishers of Manhattan.

Clear-eyed view must for schools

State District Judge F. Scott McCown's decision to allow Texas legislators a two-week extension of the deadline for devising a new state school financing plan was a noteworthy gesture. It showed that McCown is fully aware of the proper role of the legislative and judicial branches of government. The Legislature has a responsibility to enact laws and McCown should only interpret law, not legislate from the bench.

But if the judge is to stay within the bounds dictated by propriety, Texas legislators have to design a new school financing law by April 15 or McCown will take over the public schools.

Now the matter is back in the laps of legislators and they should not waste this opportunity. What is needed at this time, in Austin, is a clear-eyed view of the financing dilemma and less interest in social engineering.

In the long and at times confusing quest for a financing law, the issue has been muddied by special interests that have sought to protect or give advantage to their particular agendas. But this particular issue does not lend itself to special-interest politicking. The name of the game, rather, is fashioning a law that will afford an equal educational opportunity to all Texas' public school students so that they depart high school with essentially the same academic skills.

A "Robin Hood" approach that seeks to take from wealthy school districts in order to enhance property-poor districts while at the same time effectively holding back what enhancements local districts can add to their educational curriculum isn't going to cut it with the majority of Texans and should not. Yet a solution must be found, perhaps in the area of setting and assessing minimum basic skills, and then permitting other districts with greater resources to enhance the education of students as they please.

Attempting to limit what school districts can do to enhance their educational offerings smacks too much of unbridled socialism to find acceptance in Texas. Rather, the crux of the school financing argument lies in what it will take to reach the minimum basic skills level for ALL Texas schools and at what level that determination is established. It might be nice to have every school district in Texas possessing the advantages of Dallas Oak Cliff, but is that really reasonable? We think not.

It seems that a good level would be one at which students could perform the necessary skills to function in society — to read, write and perform mathematical calculations, plus other general knowledge covering the sciences, health, history, government, etcetera.

In other words, all public school students in Texas need to have the same equality of opportunity at a basic, minimum education but not the same guaranteed level of education. That wouldn't be realistic.

It is diversity, to a great extent, which compels families to move from one location to another seeking new jobs, a new social life or new advantages. Legislators do not want to write a school financing law that compromises the special incentive that diversity brings. What they must do, from a legal as well as humanitarian standpoint, is to write a law that will give all Texas children essentially the same opportunity in the public schools. That won't be easy, we concede. But it is necessary for the good of public education in Texas as well as the future of the state.

The 'Sing Praises' editorial praised

All ye anti-media religious folk and doomsday soothsayers need to sit up and take notice! Not in any of my 75 good years — through storms, trials, troubles, tribulations and "man's inhumanity to man" in two wars, and all the many joys our Lord had provided — have I ever read a more apropos editorial than that which appeared in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on March 31st.

Needless to say, I have no earthly idea who penned it, who printed it, or who made the final determination regarding its publication. It is my earnest contention, however, that those who were responsible for the word, "Sing Praises — Christ is risen," should be praised by every Midlander who has breath and a voice or access to a pen.

One day, as the Scriptures do clearly declare, "Every tongue will confess that Jesus Christ is Lord." Thankfully, these of the Midland Reporter-Telegram have done this and set the example for each and every one of the rest of us.

Therefore, we need to praise God for the Midland Reporter-Telegram and the staff who have so wonderfully declared, "Our world turns daily through new conflicts; wars begin and end, hardships mount and tragedies occur. But Christianity promises that the grave is not an end but a beginning, and that Jesus Christ is our strength and our salvation. Through death, we find everlasting life and the Savior's promise fulfilled . . . The grave could not hold Him, and it will not hold us . . ."

It may seem that our churches have failed to bring revival to our good city. Nevertheless, perhaps our hopes may rise anew for less crime, less drugs, less family violence, and more good in the City of Midland, Texas, because these friends of ours at Midland Reporter-Telegram have had the courage to proclaim, "Sing Praises — Christ is risen"! Through our faith in Him who died and arose, there is hope unending for all.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 4, 1968, civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone to support a strike by sanitation workers. He was 39 years old.

Today's Birthdays: Broadcaster John Cameron Swayze is 85. Composer Elmer Bernstein is 69. Author-poet Maya Angelou is 63. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., is 59. Actress Catherine Spaak is 46. Actress Christine Lahti is 41. Actress Nancy McKeon is 25.

Thought for Today: "You can kill a man but you can't kill an idea." — Medgar Evers, American civil rights activist (1926-1963).

Frozen Iraqi assets hurt American firms

WASHINGTON — The embargo on trade between Iraq and the United States was designed to put the squeeze on Iraq, but some American companies say they are the ones feeling the pinch. They're happy to oblige current foreign policy, but it may cost them their businesses.

Anderson

Joseph Kilani, export manager for Top Value Auto Exporters of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., has had a particularly tough eight months. His company exports parts for General Motors cars, and he lost $3 million because Saddam Hussein decided to invade Kuwait.

Top Value once concentrated its business in Saudi Arabia, but in 1985, the company began sending auto parts to Iraq too. By 1990, Iraqi purchases made up half the company's business. That was because the Iraqi government bought 30,000 GM cars in the 1980s from GM Canada — Malibus, Celebrities and Cutlasses. GM Canada even sent technicians to Iraq to train Iraqi mechanics, and the company drew up plans to build a plant in Iraq. Top Value kept the spare parts coming.

Kilani was paid through an American bank that held accounts for Iraq. But when President Bush ordered a freeze on Iraqi assets after the invasion, Top Value's money for parts already delivered was frozen too. Kilani couldn't collect on what he had already shipped to Iraq and he lost his best customer.

Weeks after the invasion, the Iraqi Embassy in Washington offered to meet with the bank and authorize payment to Kilani, but the bankers were prohibited from having such a meeting under Bush's executive order mandating the freeze.

The Treasury Department, which is enforcing the freeze, finally agreed that Kilani should get his money, but it was too late. Iraq's letter of credit with the American bank expired two months after the invasion.

Kilani is looking forward to the day when the United Nations embargo against trade with Iraq is lifted so he can go back to business as usual. Kilani told our reporter Jonathan Ullman, "If we have to close the business, who will win? The Japanese or the Germans will."

Other American companies that used to do business with Iraq aren't so sure that lifting the embargo will make a difference now that Iraq's economy has been decimated by the war. A spokesman for one air-conditioning company in York, Pa., said that even without an embargo Iraq "won't have the money to buy our equipment."

The companies are looking to Kuwait to take up the slack as that nation begins shopping around for the things it needs to rebuild.

Larger companies, such as Hewlett-Packard, are diversified enough that the loss of Iraq will not hurt them, but they are still in the dark about what happened to their offices and employees in Iraq. Some said they have been afraid to contact those employees for fear that the contact may endanger the workers' lives.

While few high-tech firms put most of their eggs in the Iraqi basket, American farmers are a different story. Before the invasion, Iraq was the 10th largest recipient of U.S. food exports. It was the eighth largest consumer of American wheat in the year before the invasion. Iraq also bought 20 percent of all American rice exports.

The loss of Iraq as a customer won't cripple the American wheat industry, according to the National Association of Wheat Growers, but it doesn't help a market that is already flooded with too much wheat.

LIBERATING KUWAIT — Allied military power may have liberated Kuwait, but for whom? The Kuwaiti royal family still expects the working class — 600,000 "guest workers" from other countries — to keep supporting the lifestyle of the 200,000 Kuwaiti citizens. The foreign workers have no rights. They live from paycheck to paycheck. The government of Kuwait is refusing to pay for the medical treatment of Palestinian workers. Martial law closed down most of the Palestinian newspapers. That was calculated to keep the Palestinians from having a forum for their complaints. Growing unrest among those workers means that there will be more to clean up in Kuwait than the rubble of war.

MINI-EDITORIAL — America will not soon forget the sickening spectacle of white police officers clubbing a unarmed black motorist who had given them chase in Los Angeles. Police brutality is a malevolent combination of racism and fear. The police are outmanned and outgunned by armed criminals. They fear for their lives. And fearful people without proper training will become hateful people who return violence for violence. The most urgent problem confronting America is not to bring peace to the Middle East, but to bring peace to urban America.

Players worry about more than the game

The baseball season is about to begin, and the voice of salaries can be heard throughout the land.

Never have players been paid as much or have revenues from product endorsements been as high. The numbers are so large that many newspapers are seriously considering taking baseball off the sports pages and having it covered in their business section instead.

Buchwald

Has big money changed the game? You better believe it. Just listen in on the conversation from the dugout of the Los Angeles Bandits.

Jim Akers, the manager, tells his team, "Everyone be sharp today. The Fatfree Diet Powder Company is going to do a TV commercial in the dugout, and I don't want any screwing up while my contract renewal is on the table."

He looks down at the players, "McMurtry, you're first at bat."

"I can't, boss. I have to see my broker this afternoon. He wants me to get out of Treasury notes and into something more comfortable."

"Damn it, McMurtry, you should have done that this morning."

"I was buying apartment houses this morning. Heck, I only have two hands."

"Boss, my lawyer wants to know if he can stand next to me at shortstop to discuss a suit we're filing against a thrift that went bankrupt last weekend."

"That's a stupid question, Bowditch, and you know it. Lawyers aren't allowed on the field during the game."

"Not even if there's no one on the bases?"

"OK, I want heads-up ball. Merrill Lynch is thinking of building an entire advertising campaign around the team, and all their big shots are in the stands to make sure that we're bullish on America."

"Rickleberg, there's a little kid out here and he wants your autograph on a baseball card."

"Tell him it will cost him $25, and I don't take personal checks."

Brad Taicher turned to Potsdam sitting next to him and said, "This is a big day for me. Paine Webber is going to take me public."

"You mean, you're being listed on the stock market!" Potsdam exclaimed.

"Part of my contract with the team is that if I hit 40 home runs, they have to make me one of the Fortune 500."

Potsdam said, "I'm only batting 220 on the Dow Jones average. I should never have listened to my brother-in-law when he advised me to invest in Iraqi war bonds."

"Paine Webber wants me to merge my steak house chain with the Kansas City Royals," Taicher told him.

"They say that with our combined assets, we could be the largest steak baseball conglomerate in the league."

"He's down here reading The Wall Street Journal."

"Babalew, you're up."

"I lost a bundle on IBM. How can you expect me to hit the ball?"

"Shut up and get on base."

"That's easy for you to say. Don't you ever think of anything besides baseball?"

GEORGE WILL

Chip thrower likely presidential nominee

WASHINGTON — Jugs of hard cider and split-rail fences have been symbols of presidential campaigns. But buffalo chips?

In 1980, at age 29, Dave McCurdy was campaigning for the Democratic congressional nomination in Oklahoma's Fourth District, 8,000 square miles of it. It is larger than Massachusetts, and more sensible, politically. It runs from the outskirts of Oklahoma City to the border of Baja, Oklahoma (as Oklahomans call Texas). Much cotton springs from it, much oil comes out of it and many buffalos roam on it, in a refuge where in 1980 McCurdy found himself with some political rivals in a buffalo chip throwing contest.

Will

His rivals were older and less robust. Besides, only McCurdy had placed third in the state in high school discus throwing. He tossed the stuff about three times farther than his rivals did. That night, campaigning at a rodeo, he thrust some campaign literature at a cowboy who said he didn't need it: "The way you throw (noun not suitable for family newspapers), you belong in Congress."

Chip throwing should be second nature to a fifth-generation Oklahoman whose congressional office contains a picture of his great-great-grandfather and family. McCurdy says the picture can be dated in the 1890s because the two babies in the picture died then, less than a year apart.

Two months ago he became the youngest congressman ever to chair a permanent committee (Intelligence). It is possible, although not yet probable, that a few months from now he will become a presidential candidate.

Democrats have 16 months to decide who to nominate, but sooner than that they should decide what they will be trying to do in 1992. They have two basic choices:

They can forfeit the election in a sterile manner, running some eminent elder — say, Lloyd Bensten — who probably will not win and probably has no presidential hope beyond 1992. Or they can run a rising star who probably will lose this time around the track but who can accomplish two things: He can give the party a fresh face while honing its message and his rhetorical and organizational skills for the next time.

There is nothing wrong with anticipating the next time. Nixon and Bush won on their second tries, Reagan on his third (counting, as one should, his 1968 effort).

Dick Gephardt and Al Gore are hesitant for a good reason: Each has already lost once. Chuck Robb is terminally cautious. Sam Nunn and Bill Bradley say they will not go this time. But someone must run and McCurdy's record bears comparison with the records of those more frequently mentioned as candidates.

Furthermore, he comes from among the kind of people Democrats must attract but have recently been driving away in droves. He remembers that "the alarm clock went off every morning." His mother worked in the factory where his father was an electrician. They drove to and from work together and ate lunch together.

Today his wife Pam is a child psychiatrist with a practice in suburban Virginia. They were married 20 years ago, just as he headed for law school and she for medical school. After a year studying international economics in Edinburgh, he briefly practiced law, pronounced himself "bored stiff," then headed for Congress, via buffalo country and the "Safeway strategy" (campaigning in front of Safeways from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.).

He was 10 when a politician — a presidential candidate — first caught his imagination. On election day, 1992, he will be just 10 months younger than John Kennedy was on election day, 1960.

Soviets devalue ruble exchange rate

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union yielded to black market pressure Wednesday, offering more than four times more rubles for a dollar on a key exchange rate and pushing the Soviet currency toward use in international trade.

The change in the foreign exchange rate for tourists was a tacit admission that many travelers and Soviets are bypassing the state bank in search of better deals, depriving Kremlin coffers of badly needed hard currency.

Soviets said the higher cost of buying dollars — up from 5.8 rubles per dollar to 27.6 rubles — will prevent many from traveling outside their country.

The new rate, which comes the same week as stiff price increases and a new 5 percent sales tax, is roughly the rate available on the black market. It was unclear if the black market rate would change.

Foreign currency exchange offices in Moscow were closed Wednesday as employees besieged the Gosbank state bank for details of the sudden announcement. But one Western journalist reported changing money at the new rate in Kiev, the Ukrainian capital.

"Closed for technical reasons," said the sign at the Belgrade Hotel's currency exchange office. But on the wall was a big chart giving new and improved ruble rates for 20 different foreign currencies.

The ruble is all but worthless outside Soviet borders. Its artificially set rates and lack of convertibility have hampered Soviet efforts to join the world economy.

The artificial rates have also prompted a flourishing black market at nearly every tourist spot in the Soviet capital. Foreigners are asked to change money by some taxi drivers, peddlers along the popular Arbat pedestrian mall and even inside a shop that sells Communist Party posters.

The new "auction" or "market" exchange rate will change twice a week following currency auctions at the state bank beginning Tuesday, said Alexander Polyakov, a manager at the government's Vneshekonombank, the foreign affairs bank.

The starting rate of 27.6 rubles to the dollar was fixed following an initial auction Monday.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Bomblets kill 2 U.S. soldiers

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Two American soldiers were killed and three others were injured by cluster bomblets in two separate incidents in southern Iraq, the U.S. Central Command reported Wednesday.

The command said the casualties raised to 112 the number of Gulf War non-combat deaths. It has said 141 Americans were killed in action in the war.

The names of the soldiers were withheld pending notification of their relatives. All were assigned to the 3rd Armored Division based in Germany.

In the first incident Tuesday, four soldiers approached an area containing cluster bomblets. One soldier picked one up and as he tried to put it down, it exploded in his hand, killing him and injuring three other soldiers.

The four soldiers were assigned to the 5th Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade of the 3rd Armored Division.

In the second incident, a soldier was killed when he stepped on a bomblet. He was assigned to the 4th Battalion, 32nd Armor, 1st Brigade of the 3rd Armored Division.

A spokesman for the Central Command said he did not know whether the bomblets, the size of a grenade, were Iraqi or U.S. explosives left from the war. Tons of unexploded ordnance still litter the battlefields.

Terrorists hit U.N. center

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — An explosion at a U.N. information center late Wednesday caused minor damage to the building's facade, police said. There were no injuries.

A police spokesman said callers claiming to represent the leftist terrorist groups May First and Armed Popular Struggle warned three newspapers that there was a bomb at the downtown center.

Earlier Wednesday, five bomb blasts in a residential area of Athens destroyed nine cars. One of the vehicles belonged to the French embassy and another to the European Community mission. No one was injured and no group claimed responsibility.

Wednesday's callers did not explain the motive of the U.N. center bombing, said the spokesman. The building also houses a Jewish museum.

Since January, a terror group called the November 17th movement has bombed U.S. and other allied targets to protest the Gulf War.

The May First and Armed Popular Struggle groups last claimed responsibility for bomb attacks in April 1990, when they hit financial and EC targets in Athens to protest the government's economic policies.

Police nab baby sellers

BEIJING (AP) — Police have cracked a ring they say sold 55 babies to couples who were childless or without sons, an official newspaper reported.

The 23-member ring operated in southern China, buying children for the equivalent of $55 to $385 from a poor area of the Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region and reselling them for up to $960 in Guangdong and Henan provinces, said a report Tuesday in the Yangcheng Daily. It was seen in Beijing on Wednesday.

From 1987 to 1990, the gang made nearly $17,700 by selling 53 infants and two toddlers, the paper said.

MHS considers adding 7th period

■ Principal Jimmie Kelly proposes adding another period so students can receive tutoring or participate in social activities.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Will extending the school day 30 minutes at Midland High School help students academically and socially?

MHS principal Jimmie Kelly is betting that it will.

While the amount of time added to the day will be minimal, teachers and administrators think the opportunities afforded students will be monumental in the scheme of the scholastic environment.

Nonetheless, some teachers oppose the plan since they will be required to work an additional 25 minutes per day without compensation.

Kelly recently presented his innovative proposal to school board trustees, who requested he survey teachers to seek their opinions of the proposal and host a public forum for parents, students and teachers.

"THIS IS our first full-blown example of site-based management," said Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education. "It was initiated at the campus level, from the bottom up. It involved collaborative efforts and curriculum issues."

Torres added that the plan will need board approval. "But from what I am seeing, it has widespread teacher support and will offer something beneficial for all students," he said.

MHS students are required to attend six periods per day from 7:50 a.m.-3:05 p.m. There is an optional hour which students may attend now, dubbed "zero hour," which begins at 7 a.m.

Kelly would like to make attending school seven periods mandatory, but this would not mean that students would be required to take seven academic courses. Instead, they would have an option to garner credits, get tutorial help or participate in social activities.

"The seven-period day is designed to increase student participation, allow students to grow academically, and to provide opportunities for acceleration — which is of the utmost importance," Kelly said at a recent school board meeting.

Students could use the additional period to seek tutorial help to study for the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test, which they will need to pass in order to graduate, or take a class which they have previously failed.

"STUDENTS NEED room in their schedule to take classes they failed in the past," Kelly said. "At the present time they can do this in summer school or in correspondent courses."

Extending the day will also allow students to participate in club activities such as student council or other teacher-sponsored organizations.

"Technically, the day will be extended by 30 minutes," said Torres. "School will start five minutes earlier in the morning and get out at 3:30 rather than 3:05 p.m."

Teachers' instructional time would be extended 25 minutes per day.

Teachers — who all have one period per day set aside for (non-instructional) conference time — would teach a total of 300 minutes (six 50-minute instructional periods) rather than 275 minutes (five instructional periods of 55 minutes).

"In effect, the school day is being restructured so some teachers will be working for free," said Sam Manning, a Lee High School teacher and president of the Midland Federation of Teachers.

"I HAVEN'T seen one survey which has indicated that teachers want to work for free," Manning said.

Some MHS teachers at a recent board meeting supported the extended day.

Torres said Kelly has developed a survey concerning the proposal which has been distributed to teachers. The completed surveys are expected to be turned in to Kelly by Friday.

"It was asserted at the board meeting that the seven-period day would be implemented at no cost to the school district," Manning said. "That means MHS teachers who are paid the same as LHS teachers will be paid the same to work a longer day."

"This may be legal," Manning said, "but it's not ethical. I think the few teachers who have come out and said they are in favor of this were intimidated."

Torres said that no dissenting teachers have contacted him. "This is something which has been brewing at MHS for awhile," he said. "It hasn't been an issue with teachers, this far."

TORRES NOTED that a teachers' workday is actually 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"From 3:30 to 4 p.m. teachers will usually do things around the classroom — running off materials or doing other school-related activities to prepare for the next day," he said. "A teacher can use his or her conference period to do the same things."

As for operating the program, Torres said that the additional period shouldn't effect operating costs.

"I don't know to what degree going to a mandatory seven-period day will cost more money," Torres said. "But we operate lean and mean in this district and we provide the sections based on student request during pre-registration."

The administrator said the issue boils down to increasing the amount of contact time between students and teachers.

"I see that as a positive thing," he said. "Kids will be able to graduate earlier and accelerate their learning. People complain that Texas schools are not up to par on academics; this is one way to change that."

Midland High School Principal Jimmie Kelly and staff will conduct an open forum on the seven-period day 7 p.m. tonight in Midland High School auditorium. Interested parents, students and teachers are invited to attend.

MHCC may not be able to purchase Mission Square

■ Chamber member says shopping center owners have accepted money from another investor.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commeree has apparently failed in its efforts to purchase the Mission Square shopping center, board members and officer learned at Wednesday's board meeting.

Jim Slaton, a member of the chamber, reported to the group that the center's owners have accepted earnest money from another investor, an independent oilman. "Now we'll just have to see if the sale closes," he said.

The chamber was seeking to buy Mission Square to establish a Southwest cultural center and had planned to also lease space in the center to retailers. Mission Square would have been the center of subsequent development that would have included a Marriott hotel, convention center, man-made lake and walkway.

As the chamber waits to see if the Mission Square sale is finalized, Slaton told the group other properties are being considered. He said that he and MHCC President Elvia Hernandez had visited every major bank in Midland, without success and "If this project is to stay alive, we'll need to find funding from other sources."

Hernandez called the effort, and dealings with the banks, "an eye-opening experience."

In other business, Hernandez told the board that MHCC member Ray Chapa will be submitting proposals to the Private Industry Council of the Permian Basin for funding of the Minority Procurement Assistance Center and to the Department of Defense to reopen a procurement assistance center for the DOD.

Science exhibits to be at UTPB

Staff Report

The largest number of science exhibits ever displayed at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will be open for public viewing 3-4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Approximately 540 entries, representing 676 students, will be on display during the Permian Basin Regional Science Fair in the university's gymnasium.

State Rep. Gary Watkins will attend the awards ceremony from 2-3 p.m. Saturday.

Students will compete for awards in two divisions. The junior division, for pupils in grades 3-6, will feature projects in life science, chemistry, earth and space, and math and physics. The senior division, for students in grades 9-12, will represent 13 categories.

The exhibits will be open to the public for viewing following the awards ceremony.

Registration for entries is 3:30-8:30 p.m. Friday and 8-9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Judging will be completed Saturday morning.

The fair is affiliated with the International Science and Engineering Fair, a nonprofit organization.

The top two senior high students and their advisors will travel to Orlando, Fla., to represent the Permian Basin in the International fair. Students in a 20-county region will participate.

Fair to benefit MISD drug abuse program

■ Students and PTA members scheduled to participate in 'Just Say No' family fair.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ClayDesta Atrium will take on a carnival atmosphere Saturday with a high school football team tug-of-war, cotton candy, school bands, theater performances, dart throws, game booths, raffles, cake walks and face painting.

Students from every school in the district and members from every Midland PTA have signed up to participate in the fourth annual "Just Say No" family fair.

Fair hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. with entertainment scheduled back-to-back throughout the day.

"This fair is unique in the respect that so many organizations have become involved," said Alma Thompson, one of the fair coordinators. "We have involved every single public school, teachers, parents, students and even a corporate business," Ms. Thompson said, referring to Pappagallo, the business sponsor organizing the fair this year.

Karen Campbell of Pappagallo, said Sally Reeder, the clothing store's owner, selected the "Just Say No" fair as an annual fund raising project "because drug abuse most directly affects our children and grandchildren."

Drug abuse prevention organizations and treatment facilities will have booths at the fair, including DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education), the Just Say No program, the Texas War on Drugs, Glenwood Hospital, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, and Memorial West Hospital.

"The fair will have something for people of every age," Ms. Thompson said.

The students, however, will play a great part in the event, with some of them manning booths, some performing and others attending the fair.

Cheerleaders, school choirs, drama departments, Midland Community Theatre actors, orchestras and dancers are all scheduled to perform.

"There will be lots of food — nachos, hot dogs and snow cones," said Nancy Roberts, booth chairman. "We will have about 13 information booths and 28 carnival and food booths with games geared toward family fun, plus we will have entertainment provided constantly during the fair."

Ms. Roberts said the attractions will include Midland Freshman School's photo booth and a dunking booth.

"Food and booth tickets will be 25 cents each," Ms. Roberts said. "Most of the game booths will require two tickets and food tickets will cost about 75 cents."

Tickets will also be sold to a raffle for a trip for four to Disneyland.

Informal parade welcomes home Rankin soldier

RANKIN — It was more than just a homecoming for Edward Peterson.

It was a proud time for him, his family and his community when Peterson, escorted by Sheriff Dan Brown, drove into town last week on the wings of Desert Shield turned Desert Storm, which drummed up a victory for American troops and their Allies in the 1991 war "over there."

Todd

Peterson, a 39-year-old soldier who served in the Persian Gulf war, was Rankin's first trooper to return home.

"I'm a proud ol' pappa," said his father, Ruben Peterson, a Rankin businessman and former mayor.

The gathering of friends, family and fellow patriots evoked yells and cheers not just for Edward Peterson's safe return but for the safe return of all the country's troopers.

And Edward Peterson wasn't exactly ready for the fanfare.

"He didn't have his uniform on," his father said. "He didn't have any idea they were going have a parade."

Edward Peterson, who is a sergeant first class in the U.S. Army, had a Desert Storm shirt tucked away and a grand ol' feeling for his commanding general, Norman Schwarzkopf. "He thinks a heck of a lot of him," said Ruben Peterson. "He seems to think he did one swell job. He was proud of the way the war was run."

Edward Peterson, who is back on the road with his family and heading to a new stateside station, "wasn't really in the fighting end" of the war, said his father. "His outfit was just unloading and loading equipment."

The younger Peterson, who was stationed in Germany before he was assigned to Saudi Arabia to help move military equipment and supplies, "looked great" and was in "great spirits" at the homecoming, said Upton County Judge Peggy Sue Garner.

"It was very touching," she said, "to see how happy his family was to see him. The whole community was happy."

The parade and gathering "wasn't anything structured or planned, you know," she said. "It was very informal. It was cute.

"One of his friends had a pickup, and I bet they had 10 flags," the judge recalled. "They had the American flag and the Texas flag sticking in the back. It was an old pickup. It had been wrecked, and it was all crushed up, but it had flags all over it."

There was a shedding of tears at the homecoming.

And Peterson "just thanked everybody for all the letters" he received when he was "over there."

Townspeople, including Carolyn Shankle, had prepared, packaged, and mailed Edward Peterson and other troopers batches of cookies, candy, popped corn and other stuff. By the time they got to him by way of Europe, the "cookies were ruined" — molded. The other stuff was fine. And back home last week, Peterson got generous batches of fresh cookies and sweet remembrances from his friends.

"You are our county cannon," the judge told the soldier, "our first shot home."

Services for Velma McCarty, 80, of San Angelo are set for 2 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Cecil Maxey officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday at a local hospital.

She was born July 24, 1910, in Comanche, where she grew up. She moved to McCamey.

She married John O. McCarty in 1928 in Venus. They lived in McCamey until 1968 when they moved to San Angelo.

She worked as a telephone operator in Rotan before her marriage.

She was a member of First United Methodist Church of McCamey.

Survivors include: her husband, John O. McCarty; two sons, Don McCarty of Midland and Jerry McCarty of Lubbock; one brother, J.R. Ott of Houston; three sisters, Edith Pugh of Dallas and Vida Alford and Adean Welch, both of Burleson; six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be members of Masonic Lodge No. 623 Dean Porter, F.L. "Les" Cooper, Frank O'Donnell, Allen Lowe, O.W. "Preacher" Roberts and Bob Kiker.

George Vannaman

Services for George Franklin Vannaman, 87, of Midland are set for 2 p.m. Saturday in the Glass Memorial Chapel of First United Methodist Church with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Masonic graveside services will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Vannaman

He died Wednesday at an Odessa care center.

He was born June 20, 1903, in Eastland. He grew up in Eastland and Breckenridge, where he graduated from high school.

He married Ellen Key in 1924 in Breckenridge. She preceded him in death on Sept. 10, 1979.

He worked for Firestone Co. in the Fort Worth, Cleburne and Gainesville areas before moving to Midland in 1939.

He worked as manager of Western Auto until World War II began and then he worked as post exchange manager at Midland Air Field.

He was a representative of Texas Life Insurance Co. of Waco from 1946 to 1985.

Vannaman was a member of First United Methodist Church and the Midland Masonic Lodge, where he was past master and a 32nd degree Mason. He was a member of the Midland Optimist Club and the Midland Downtown Lions Club.

Survivors include: one son, Thomas L. Vannaman of Midland; one daughter, Georgan Wemple of Odessa; five grandchildren; three great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Sherman Denneker

Rosary for Sherman Denneker, 80, will be recited at 7:30 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel by the Rev. Frank Colachicco of St. Joseph Catholic Church in Stanton officiating. Additional services are under the direction of McDonald Funeral Home in Picayune, Miss. Local arrangements are by Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Tuesday at a Big Spring hospital.

He was born Aug. 11, 1910, in Melville, La., where he lived much of his life and married Lillie "Pete" Harris on Sept. 26, 1935. He served in the U.S. Navy from 1943-45, including the invasion of the Palau Islands.

He worked as an ironworker in New Orleans and Metairie until his retirement.

He recently moved to Midland.

He was preceded in death by his wife in 1973 and one daughter, Beatrice Cate in 1977.

Survivors include several nieces and nephews, including Victoria Weatherford of Midland.

Ebrahim Savahl

Services for Ebrahim "Wally" Savahl, 58, of Midland are set for 11 a.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Abulbasher Faizullah officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday at a local hospital.

He was born May 14, 1932 in Cape Town, South Africa, where he grew up and attended auto mechanics trade school.

In 1978, he moved to Midland and worked as a mechanic at Friendly Pontiac.

Savahl was a member of the Muslim Society of West Texas.

Survivors include: his wife, Freda Savahl of Midland; one son, Sharief Savahl of San Diego, Calif.; two daughters, Adeela Harrell of Plainview and Latiefa Savahl of Dallas; and two brothers, Cassiem Savahl and Ali Savahl, and two sisters, Fatima Wallace and Gadhija Davids, all of Cape Town.

Memorials should be directed to the Muslim Society of West Texas, P.O. Box 9386, Midland, Texas 79702.

Services for Roberta Sanders, 93, are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

George E. Vortruba

Services for George E. Vortruba are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday at his Midland home.

MHCC: Other sites being considered

(From 1B)

According to John Arredondo of the procurement center, the center is in the process of putting together a minority business directory and that, since January, has helped clients gain three contracts totaling $75,000. The center is also working with other companies to get contracts worth a combined total of $375,000.

Also discussed:

■ The awards banquet honoring the chamber's Hispanic Businessman and Businesswoman, Member and Corporate Member of the Year will be May 10 at the Plaza Club, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Winners of MHCC scholarships will also be announced at the luncheon. Arturo Morales told the board that 40 scholarship applications had been received.

■ The chamber will be looking for a new board member following the resignation of Linda Neely, who has left First City Bancorp. to join Parker & Parsley as a public affairs officer.

■ The chamber is seeking entries for the Cinco De Mayo parade, set for May 4. Parade Marshall will be Ecce Mendoza, Consul from Mexico, who is helping bring in 55 entertainers from Juarez, Mexico for the celebration.

■ Volunteers are also being sought to begin organizing the Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-off, set for July 12-14.

■ Rick Menchaca with the City of Midland reported that the city is working with the state of Texas on plans to widen Fairgrounds Road from Wadley south to Garden City Highway.

Blue Bell may stop making pecan flavors

BRENHAM (AP) — The skyrocketing cost of pecans may spell the end for three popular flavors of Blue Bell ice cream.

Blue Bell Creameries' supply of pecans is dwindling and when the supply runs out, the creamery may discontinue its buttered pecan, caramel pecan fudge and Pecan Pralines 'n Cream flavors, said advertising manager Jennifer Eckermann.

The company may halt the manufacture of the flavors until pecan prices drop, or continue making the flavors but raise prices to cover the pecan costs.

FAIR: Proceeds to benefit MISD

(From 1B)

Proceeds from the fair will be donated to the Midland Independent School District, which will disperse funds for drug abuse prevention programs in the schools.

"Last year Pappagallo gave the school district $10,000 for drug abuse programs," Ms. Campbell said. "We are aware that the school district tries to provide for these programs from their general fund. We are hoping to provide allocations like this each year to keep the school district's general fund from being depleted."

Magic 102.1 FM radio, one of the fair's sponsors, will broadcast live on remote from the event. Other fair sponsors include First City Texas, Casa de Amigos, DARE and Midland PTAs.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Drug indictments

Staff Reports

WACO — A federal grand jury returned a 16-count indictment Tuesday charging 14 people with conspiracies to distribute and import the drug "ecstasy," the U.S. Attorney's Office reported.

Three of the alleged co-conspirators also were charged with continuing criminal enterprise, five also were charged with tax violations, and one also was charged with money laundering.

An additional two defendants also were charged with tax violations related to the distribution of the drug.

Those indicted were: Charles Frederick Pofahl of Dallas, currently serving a prison term in Germany; Morris Dale Key of Dallas, also serving a prison term in Germany; Amy Ralston Pofahl of Marina Del Rey, Calif.; Daniel Glass Bernard of Houston; Robert Petty, Larry Norman Morrow, Charles Wesley Knight, Susan Brittain Knight, Thomas Drath, Daniel Drath and Randy White of Dallas; Autumn Michelle Knight of Houston; Richard Welt of Huntington Beach, Calif.; and Jerry Williamson of Lauderhill, Fla.

The indictments were the culmination of a 2½-year investigation by the federal Organized Crime Drug Task Force based in Austin into a statewide network, the attorney's office reported.

More than $1.7 million in assets were seized in Texas, Florida, Louisiana, Luxembourg and Germany during the investigation, according to the attorney's office. Also seized were more than 350,000 tablets of "ecstasy," also known as MDMA.

The drug is a hallucinogen that is chemically produced and usually distributed in tablet or capsule form. Average cost per tablet on the street is $20, the attorney's office reported.

Attempted murder

ODESSA — A 25-year-old man was arrested on a warrant following the shooting of a 25-year-old woman Wednesday afternoon at Woodson Park located in the 1100 block of East Murphy Street, police officials said.

Tammy Rochelle Dixon suffered minor injuries after being shot with a shotgun, police said. She was transported to Medical Center Hospital where she treated and released, hospital officials said.

The suspect, John Thomas Peterson Jr., was charged with attempted murder and was awaiting arraignment Wednesday evening.

A motive had not been established nor had the weapon been recovered, police said Wednesday evening.

Oil field theft

ODESSA — Theft of about $33,000 of oil field equipment that occurred between June 1990 and April of this year was reported to the police Wednesday, police officials said.

Police reports state that 450 two-inch ball valves were taken from Foster Valve Corp., 2301 E. 2nd St., according to Harry M. Kuehler, controller for the company.

Two Odessa men, former employees of the company, are alleged to have taken orders and made sales of the valves and kept the proceeds for themselves. The scam was discovered during an audit.

No arrests had been made Wednesday.

Drug arrest

A man and woman were arrested for possession of cocaine following a tip to Crime Stoppers, according to Terry Lowe, Crime Stoppers coordinator.

The arrests were made about 2:30 p.m. at a house in the 1200 block of East New York Avenue by Midland sheriff and constable officers after a search warrant was obtained, Lowe said.

Crime Stoppers received a tip that drugs were being sold at the location of the arrest, Lowe said.

Some cocaine was confiscated but the amount was not available.

The two people arrested remained in jail Wednesday evening awaiting arraignment expected Thursday morning, jail officials said.

Bomb threat

The Midland County Courthouse received a bomb threat about 9:16 a.m. Wednesday, according to Midland County Sheriff's Office reports.

The call was made to the information operator at the courthouse by a man who said a bomb was in the building and it would go off.

The building was subsequently searched by sheriff's deputies and no bomb was found.

Parker: School bill has chance

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Senate and House leaders worked behind the scenes Wednesday to break the school financing stalemate and find a solution acceptable to a diverse and split membership in the House.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, predicted in an interview early Wednesday that the House would bring up a compromise bill for another vote and the bill would have a chance to pass after some minor changes. He said several House members have told him they had changed their mind and would vote for the compromise bill now.

If the House does not approve the bill, Parker said, most likely the courts will end up devising a school finance plan.

Parker said at a news conference Wednesday afternoon, however, that chances of passing a bill "are getting a little dimmer every day."

The House voted to kill the compromise bill by an 87-63 vote March 27, despite an April 1 deadline set by the state Supreme Court for the Legislature to provide equal access to school funds by all school districts. The court has ruled that the current financing system is unconstitutional because it discriminates against property-poor school districts.

Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, sponsored a finance equalization bill approved by the Senate. The House amended that bill, and a 10-member Senate-House conference committee headed by Parker produced the compromise bill.

House members, led by Republicans, voted the bill down because it would take money from property-rich school districts and share it with poor districts. But other opponents said the bill simply would cost the state too much money or that it was a complicated measure that didn't really solve the problem.

Craddick said he still is opposed to the bill, while an aide to Fraser said the Big Spring Republican is working on a plan of his own that would set a minimum property tax for schools, but would allow districts to approve additional taxes beyond that without having to share the money. Watkins and Rudd had not commented as of late Wednesday.

A lot of proposals have been floated by House members, but Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he would prefer that the House vote again on the compromise bill.

"My intent is to try to make some adjustments to the current plan, and hopefully we can reconsider that," Lewis said. "As for going back again and reinventing the wheel, I am not for that."

If negotiators come up with a plan a majority in the House will vote for, the House can bring up the compromise bill and refer it back to the conference committee for changes. It then would have to gain approval from the Senate and House, and, if challenged in court, would have to be ruled constitutional to take effect.

State District Court Judge Scott McCown ruled on Monday that the court injunction against the state providing money for public schools was in effect. However, the next checks from the state to schools are not scheduled to be mailed until April 25.

McCown also said he would decide on April 15 whether to grant the state's request for more time, until June 1, to come up with a solution. The Supreme Court previously warned the district judge not to extend the April 1 deadline on the injunction against using state funds.

McCown also said he would decide April 15 on a request by the plantiffs in the case to halt not only state money but also to forbid the use of local revenues by schools.

Currently, Texas schools get about half their money from the state and half from local property taxes.

The district judge also ordered Deputy Commissioner of Education Lynn Moak to develop an alternative court plan to redistribute state education aid.

The possibility of a court-ordered plan hangs over represenatatives from property-rich districts who, thus far, have opposed legislative plans to equalize school financing.

Because a court plan would not include an additional $1.2 billion to $2 billion that legislative plans would have added to school aid, a court plan could devastate wealthy districts by depriving them of all their state money.

Iraqis investigated for illegal export of technology

HOUSTON (AP) — An Iraqi family business suspected of illegally exporting American technology to Libya and possibly Iraq now is the subject of a federal grand jury investigation, the Houston Chronicle reported Wednesday.

In a copyright story, the Chronicle said the grand jury in Houston began hearing testimony Tuesday involving the family business organization of Dr. Ihsan Barbouti, who reportedly died last year in London at age 63.

Barbouti and at least one son, Haidar Barbouti, 23, are suspected of illegally exporting American technology that could have both military and industrial applications, the Chronicle reported.

Besides technology exports to Libya, banned under a 1986 presidential order, sources told the Chronicle that the grand jury will consider allegations that the Barbouti organization made tens of millions of dollars worth of U.S. investments with laundered Libyan government funds.

The Barbouti holding company, IBI Industries Inc., has interests in Texas and several other states, and has an office in London.

Attorneys hired on behalf of Barbouti interests have repeatedly denied any wrongdoing on the part of their clients.

Ihsan Barbouti, a civil engineer who operated from London, has been identified by U.S. authorities as designing and being the primary contractor of a chemical weapons plant at Rabta, Libya.

His Houston operation allegedly was a front to export petroleum industry technology illegally to the Middle East.

Several former business associates of the Barboutis have filed lawsuits in three states claiming that they were defrauded by the Barboutis' export plans.

One of those associates is Bruce Munden, who testified before the grand jury Tuesday. Munden is the owner of Pipeline Recovery Systems Inc., which has operations in Dallas and Midland.

Munden has said his business relationship with Barbouti ended after he learned Barbouti intended to export his process — a method of chemically coating the interior of pipes — to Libya in violation of U.S. trade prohibitions.

Munden has said the process has nuclear applications.

The U.S. Customs Service has been investigating the Barboutis for at least a year. Barbouti assets in the United States are valued at some $200 million, according to court records.

At least one federal grand jury in Florida also is looking into the Barboutis.

U.S. Customs Service agents in Florida are investigating allegations that Ihsan Barbouti and Haidar Barbouti invested $5 million in a Boca Raton soft-drink coloring plant to produce and export a by-product, hydrogen cyanide. The poison can be used in chemical weapons.

Federal authorities in Florida also are investigating allegations of the illegal export of aircraft parts to Libya.

'Massacre' survivors shocked by release of one of the killers

DALLAS (AP) — Survivors of the 1971 "Trinity River Massacre" in which three sheriff's deputies were killed say they're shocked by the release of one of the killers.

Leonardo Ramos Lopez, 44, was released Dec. 18 to a private home in Houston after a panel of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles voted to free him, the Dallas Times Herald reported in a copyright story Wednesday.

His release came without the knowledge of Dallas police or prosecutors, the newspaper said.

Lopez and an accomplice were originally sentenced to die, but they later received life terms when retried.

"This is the most horrible miscarriage of justice that ever walked," said Wendell Dover, 69, of Ennis, one of two deputies who survived the carnage despite a gunshot wound to the chest.

"I can very well say it was the most terrifying thing I've ever known in my life. I never thought I'd see them out of prison."

The other survivor, A.D. McCurley, 65, a Dallas County deputy who was the only officer to escape the carnage unharmed, called Lopez's release "a shame."

Lopez's accomplice to the execution-style shootings in the Trinity River bottoms of Dallas remains in prison. Rene Adolpho Guzman, 53, will next be considered for release in September 1992.

Dallas County deputies Sam Infante and William Don Reese and Ellis County deputy A.J. Robertson were shot to death on the Trinity River bank on Feb. 15, 1971.

The incident began when Dover and Robertson went to a west Dallas home to serve a burglary warrant. The other officers were called to help execute a search warrant.

While the other deputies were on their way, the men disarmed Dover and Robertson and tied them with wire. The other officers were ambushed, disarmed and bound when they arrived.

The five deputies were then driven in the Ellis County squad car to the deserted flood plains bordering the Trinity River. As all seven got out of the car, Reese worked his hands free and swung at Guzman, who opened fire with a gun in each hand.

Infante, Reese and Robertson were killed and Dover shot in the chest and left for dead. McCurley rolled down an incline to escape.

Dallas County officials were not notified of the parole hearing because Lopez was tried in Bell County on a change of venue. Bell County officials were notified, but under state law at the time, officials were not required to notify Dallas County officials. The law has since been changed, authorities said.

Guzman, 44, has been denied parole 12 times. Lopez had been denied parole 16 times.

State Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall and a former police officer, said Wednesday in a Senate speech how "shocked, saddened and literally sick at my stomach" he was when he first heard of the killings.

"I hope to the good Lord above that we can stand here 10 years from now and this kind of thing doesn't happen again. We've got to have the courage and foresight ... to keep these people in jail," he said.

Celebration marks TRC anniversary

The State

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission is as important to the state today as it was at its inception 100 years ago, Gov. Ann Richards said Wednesday during the agency's centennial celebration.

The commission is the oldest state regulatory agency and was one of the first of its kind in the nation.

The agency celebrated its 100th anniversary with a barbecue lunch on the grounds of its headquarters, historical displays and a scheduled evening reunion.

Railroad Commission Chairman Robert Krueger and commissioners Lena Guerrero and Jim Nugent presented plaques to former commission members, including State Comptroller John Sharp and unsuccessful GOP gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance.

In its original charter, the Railroad Commission was directed to regulate rates and operations of "railroads, and wharves, docks, piers, elevators, warehouses, sheds, tracks, and other property used in connection therewith."

Over the years, the mandate expanded to include jurisdiction over oil and gas in 1919; gas utilities in 1920; buses in 1927; trucking in 1929; and surface mining of coal, lignite, and uranium, and the reclamation of mined lands in 1975.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said when the agency was created, Texas was a mostly rural state with a population of about 2 million, its agricultural economy virtually dependent upon the railroad.

"It was 10 years before Spindletop gusher was brought in, an event that will forever change the destiny of this state," Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said.

"There is no other state agency that has been more closely involved in the development of our state's economy over the last 100 years. The commission has had the task of governing the development of our energy resources and transportation, the lifeblood and the arteries of our state's commerce for the past century," he said.

Richards told more than 1,000 people attending Wednesday's ceremony that Gov. Jim Hogg had carried out his campaign promise to regulate the railroad by helping create the Texas Railroad Commission, established by the Texas Legislature on April 3, 1891.

"And now, 100 years later, this commission has looked after the interests of the consuming public of the state of Texas," Richards said.

"I wish all of these commissioners and this agency a great and illustrious future, because the future of Texas depends on the activities in this building every bit as much as it did 100 years ago," she said.

'There is no other state agency that has been more closely involved in the development of our state's economy over the last 100 years.'

— House Speaker Gib Lewis

Dallas DA not ready to close Railey case

DALLAS (AP) — Prosecutors aren't ready to close an investigation into the near-fatal attack almost four years ago on the wife of a former Dallas minister, the district attorney's office said Wednesday.

"As far I'm concerned, the case will never be closed until it's solved," said Norman Kinne, first assistant district attorney.

FBI agents and Dallas police had asked prosecutors to re-examine all evidence in the 1987 choking attack on Margaret "Peggy" Railey and conclude whether a criminal case could be made against anyone, including the woman's husband, Walker L. Railey.

Railey, 43, is the former senior pastor of First United Methodist Church of Dallas. He has not been charged in the April 21, 1987, attack that left his 42-year-old wife in a vegetative state, though police have called him a key suspect in the case.

Railey has maintained he is innocent.

He has been ordered to pay $18 million in damages to his wife after being found liable for the incident by a civil jury. But Railey has claimed he is too poor to pay.

Last week, police and FBI agents presented a 2½-hour presentation on their investigations, which included charts, graphs, timelines and photo layouts of the crime. Kinne said he would review the results and issue a response.

On Wednesday, the district attorney's office released a three-paragraph statement.

"No case will be filed by the Dallas Police Department or submitted to the grand jury by the district attorney until all parties are satisfied that the investigation into the matter is complete," the statement said.

"There is not a statute of limitations for murder or attempted murder. Charges in this matter may therefore be filed at any time in the future," it said.

Railey's attorney, Doug Mulder of Dallas, who had just returned from Hawaii, said Wednesday afternoon that he had not yet seen a copy of the statement.

Responding to earlier reports that the district attorney's office had dropped its investigation, Mrs. Railey's father, Bill Nicolai, said he hoped the probe would continue.

"We were hoping they would be able to continue on and really clear this thing up," he said.

On Easter, Railey preached at First United Methodist Church in Santa Ana, Calif., his first sermon since 1987.

Railey moved to California after attempting suicide in Dallas while his wife was in a hospital.

Sunday's sermon, titled "Stumbling Into Easter," addressed the pessimistic outlook of some Americans. Railey also mentioned his own 1987 suicide attempt.

Milk proteins and minerals lower cholesterol, uric acid, new heart studies suggest

By Jean Carper

Could it be that something in milk is good for the cardiovascular system? That's what three new studies suggest.

Carper

A recent look at 5,000 middle-aged British men found that only 1 percent of the men who drank a pint of whole milk a day had heart attacks. In contrast, of the non-milk drinkers, 10 percent were stricken during a 10-year period. Researchers speculate milk has an ingredient that lowers cholesterol.

However, Canadian scientists have credited specific proteins in milk with somehow protecting the heart. They noted that 10 healthy humans fed milk proteins, including casein, had lower blood concentrations of uric acid. High uric acid has been linked with more heart disease and high blood pressure.

Certain milk minerals may also depress blood pressure. Dutch researchers found that milk with normal amounts of calcium, potassium and magnesium decreased systolic (lower number) blood pressure by 4 percent in 60 young women. They drank a liter of milk daily for six weeks. Milk with the minerals mostly removed reduced blood pressure very slightly.

The potential heart benefits of milk need further study, say experts. In the meantime, most advise using low-fat milk, which has the same high mineral and protein content as high-fat milk.

sugar, no copper, a heart hazard

A high-fat, high-cholesterol diet may not be the only bad foodstuff for the heart. What about the dangerous combination of eating too much sugar and too little copper? That, too, may trigger severe cardiovascular damage, U.S. Department of Agriculture researchers recently reported.

They had pigs eat a diet skimpy in copper (similar to that of most Americans) and high in fructose, a type of sugar extremely popular in the United States. For example, high-fructose corn syrups are loaded into soft drinks and processed foods, such as pastries.

Pigs are good stand-ins for people, says Agriculture's Daniel J. Scholfield, because their cardiovascular systems are similar to ours.

After 10 weeks, the hearts of pigs on the low-copper, high-fructose diet had swelled to twice normal size. Further, the pigs were anemic, had enlarged livers and had low levels of certain enzymes, notably one that prevents aneurysms (ruptures) in blood vessels triggering heart attack.

Eat foods high in heart-saving copper, says Scholfield, such as organ meats, chick peas, dark chocolate and shellfish.

Tea-sip mice don't have ulcers

The Japanese have a lot of peptic ulcers, but the situation might be worse if they didn't drink tea. So suggests a new study by Japanese scientist Dr. Yukihoko Hara, which he reported at a recent scientific conference on tea in New York City.

"It's very clear that green-tea agents (polyphenols) can reduce the number and size of ulcers in mice," he said.

He put the tea compounds in the animals' drinking water, then gave them chemicals known to induce ulcers. The more tea compounds the mice got, the fewer ulcers they had. In fact, at the highest doses, the tea chemicals blocked ulcer development 100 percent.

Even so, he says, "The doses are low, equal to what people ordinarily drink in Japan."

Dr. Hara thinks tea thwarts ulcers by suppressing the release of stomach acid and digestive enzymes, both of which promote ulcers. Additionally, the tea compounds have antibacterial powers, and experts now declare that infectious bacteria called H. pylori are a prime cause of peptic ulcers.

Prozac's safety under debate

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Panacea or perilous drug?

That is the question that has plagued Prozac — today the most widely prescribed anti-depressant in the United States — making it a topic of controversy and scrutiny over the past two years.

Is Prozac (clinically known as fluoxetine hydrochloride) a safe and highly effective treatment for depression, or is it the cause of violent or suicidal behavior in a fraction of patients, as some published reports over the past two years have suggested?

Or is suicidal behavior — a documented and well-known symptom in a small percentage of severely depressed patients — likely to occur regardless of the introduction of Prozac or other drugs?

Right now, there are few definitive answers about Prozac and plenty of heated and well-publicized debate between mental-health experts and those representing former users of the drug.

Since Prozac's introduction in December 1987, psychiatric experts largely have embraced the drug because of its effectiveness, few and mild side effects and low risk of danger in the event of overdose.

The majority of medical evidence supports Prozac as a safe and effective drug, and an estimated 3 million people worldwide have been treated with it.

"It's my first-choice anti-depressant," said Michael M. Ferguson, a Woodland Hills psychiatrist and an associate director of Pine Grove Hospital and Mental Health Center, a private facility in Canoga Park. "The reason is not because it works so much better, but because ... with older anti-depressants, people had significant problems with side effects, like dry mouth, constipation and substantial weight gain."

Dr. Robert Gerner, an associate research professor of psychiatry at UCLA and director of the Center for Mood Disorders, a private practice and clinic in West Los Angeles, has been studying depression since 1974 and Prozac, specifically, since 1985.

"I've had patients say that they consider Prozac the greatest thing ever and that it has saved their life," Gerner said. "Prozac is very safe, and no one, professionally, thinks there is a reason to pull the drug off the market. I really don't know why all this (controversy) has come up."

Nevertheless, reports of alleged dangerous adverse reactions to Prozac in a small percentage of patients have made headlines and even led to the formation of a national support group and hot line for former Prozac users.

Dozens of lawsuits have been filed against the maker of Prozac, Eli Lilly & Co. of Indianapolis, for allegedly failing to test the drug properly before putting it on the market.

Moreover, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has received more than 10,000 reports of adverse reactions to the drug.

"That is a significantly high number of complaints, considering the drug has only been on the market a short time," FDA spokeswoman Eva Kemper said.

Some patients claim to have experienced uncharacteristically violent or suicidal thoughts shortly after they began taking Prozac, while others have blamed the drug for triggering violent or self-mutilating behavior that, in some cases, has led to death.

Since September 1989, the Citizens Commission on Human Rights in Los Angeles has been gathering such reports in an effort to have Prozac taken off the market.

"We have received in excess of 3,000 calls from people who say Prozac has caused them to behave unpredictably violent and suicidal," said Mike O'Brien, the commission's research director. "These are people who were put on the drug for minor depression and wound up trying to kill their family."

One of the most noted suits against Eli Lilly & Co. was filed in January by the wife of the late pop singer Del Shannon, who shot himself to death with a .22-caliber rifle in his Santa Clarita home on Feb. 8, 1990.

Shannon's wife alleges that the 50-year-old singer had taken seven doses of Prozac in the two weeks before he committed suicide.

Earlier suits were filed after Joseph Wesbecker walked into a printing plant in Louisville, Ky., on Sept. 14, 1989, and gunned down 20 people, killing eight. Wesbecker, who then took his own life, allegedly had been taking Prozac.

Bonnie Leitsch, a Louisville, Ky., greeting-card distributor, said she took Prozac for eight months but stopped taking the drug after experiencing severe anxiety, memory loss, weight gain, auditory hallucinations and, eventually, suicidal thoughts.

"I know it sounds ignorant, but I had no reason to question it," said Leitsch, who said her doctor prescribed Prozac as a "pick-me-up."

Leitsch said her mood improved for about six weeks after she began taking Prozac, but she soon began to feel differently and, after several months, attributed it to Prozac.

"I wanted to take an overdose of all the medicine I could get my hands on," Leitsch said. "Ten days after I was off Prozac, I was clear as a bell."

Leitsch is now national director of the Prozac Survivors Support Group and has filed a $150 million lawsuit against Eli Lilly & Co.

Lilly has steadfastly maintained that Prozac was thoroughly tested for 15 years on more than 25,000 people. A company spokesman said the company will "vigorously defend" against the suits.

"A review of our clinical data has not shown a cause-and-effect relationship between Prozac and suicidal behavior," said Clark Kaufman, the company's official spokesman.

Psychiatric experts have argued that suicidal behavior has long been a well-known symptom of depression in a small percentage of patients — both those taking anti-depressants and those not on medication.

UCLA's Gerner conceded that there may be an "unidentifiably very small group" of Prozac users who may exhibit dangerous behavior. But that can be expected of any depressed patient, he said.

Furthermore, Gerner said, it is not unusual for patients to blame anti-depressants for side effects — even in case studies in which they were given placebos (a harmless, unmedicated substance used in controlled studies to test the effectiveness of another).

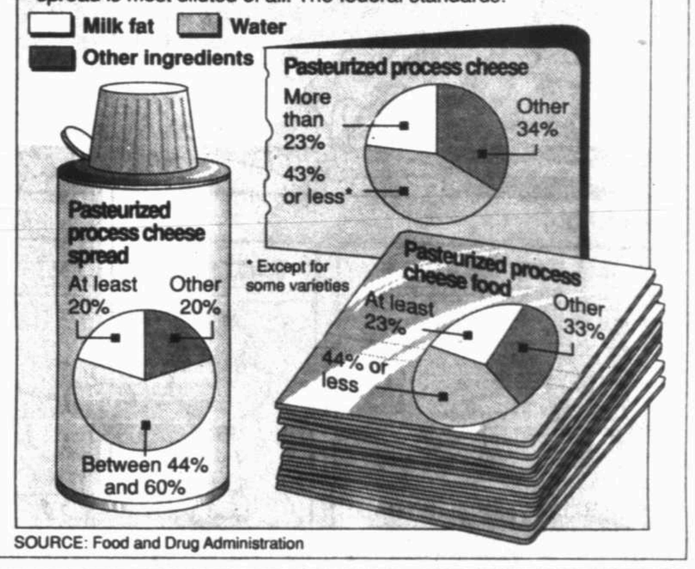

The fact that Prozac has become so widely prescribed, Gerner and other experts say, is at least partly responsible for the seemingly large number of complaints against the drug.

"Definitely, some people feel worse after they take Prozac, and they say, 'It must be because of the medicine I'm taking,' " Gerner said. "But is it the active drug causing them to feel worse, or is it because the drug isn't working and the depression is still present? That is the question.

AIDS patients at higher risk

NEW YORK (NYT) — AIDS patients who develop a potentially fatal pneumonia while receiving aerosol drugs may be at risk of developing a collapsed lung.

New York scientists found that a collapsed lung, though rare among people with pneumonia, has been seen more frequently among AIDS patients with a type of pneumonia.

They found that 20 of 1,030 AIDS patients developed a collapsed lung unrelated to trauma.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone (SWBT) has filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to offer a new optional service called Family Space Listing.

Family Space Listing is a new optional service designed for residential customers. It will give customers the option to list the names or nicknames of household members within a customized space in the white page telephone directory.

The proposed monthly charge for this service is $7.00. No charge to set up the service is proposed. Customers electing not to subscribe to this optional service will continue to receive their non-distinctive directory listings at no charge. SWBT anticipates this new service will generate sales of approximately $63,000 in the first year that the service is available. If approved by the Commission, this service will be available beginning May 6, 1991.

This new service will not affect the directory listings that existing residential customers have in SWBT's white page telephone directories.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by April 26, 1991. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at 512-458-0256 or 512-458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your determination and honesty will help you attain certain long-cherished goals. Once you decide on your priorities in June, you will be off to a flying start! Your finances should be in excellent shape by late fall. Travel for business and pleasure in November and December. A stable, long-lasting romantic relationship could turn permanent early in 1992. Your love for the limelight could lead to a career in show business or politics by this time next year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your visionary ideas have great appeal today. Influential people will make a money offer. Your social life may be too hectic. Be honest with other people and they will follow your lead.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone's facts and figures could be in disarray. Avoid taking anything at face value. By acting independently, you will score a major victory. Do not crow or you could lose admirers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep a low profile until you see how the land lies. Communicating your long-term plans is not a good idea. A shopping trip could prove timely if you can afford to buy in bulk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make sure you show team spirit today. Success is assured if you do your share. A candid chat with your colleagues leads to new rapport. Loved ones will share their secrets. Be supportive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have a flair for decorating. Use your artist's eye to choose lively colors to brighten your living quarters. Forge ahead with party plans. Your friends are eager to see you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go ahead and shop but avoid running up credit card bills. Timely correspondence is the key to improved profits. Visits will put you where you want to be. Romance blossoms anew.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A private conversation with an influential person gives you an entirely different perspective. Financial support is available for a pet project. Loved one makes things happen. Show your gratitude!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be alert to unusual financial offers and shopping values today. Your versatility lets you accomplish great things at work. A voice from the past reminds you of a lost love. Get in touch!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Any service you provide today could bring startling results. Be conscientious. Seniors can find new personal fulfillment through community work. A teen-ager will make you proud.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep your emotions in check when conducting business negotiations. Work the phone lines and write letters. A friendship provides a healing balm if your ego has been wounded.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Self-reliance is essential now; do not count on receiving assistance. Your colleagues could offer valuable tips, however. Reflect carefully before making a romantic commitment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can be a mover and shaker today. Phone calls and face-to-face meetings help you negotiate a better deal. Ask for top dollar and you will get it! Attend group functions.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are bright and exceptionally articulate. With the right encouragement, they can reach great heights. Curious and energetic, these Aries have a tendency to scatter their energies too widely. Encourage them to finish one project before launching another. True "party animals," they love to socialize and be in the limelight. They thrive on competition and will delight in vanquishing their romantic rivals.

The Stratified Pairs event at the recent Long Island Regional was won by Gene Saxe of Stamford, Conn., and Margaret Kropp of South Windsor, Conn. Good card-reading on this hand by Kropp paved the way for her first Regional title.

East's spade overcall after the Stayman inquiry did not prevent North-South from reaching a reasonable four-heart contract. It was likely to depend on the diamond finesse, and East's overcall made it probable that the queen of diamonds was favorably placed. However, declarer demonstrated the contract could be made despite the 4-1 trump break and the fact the diamond finesse was doomed to failure.

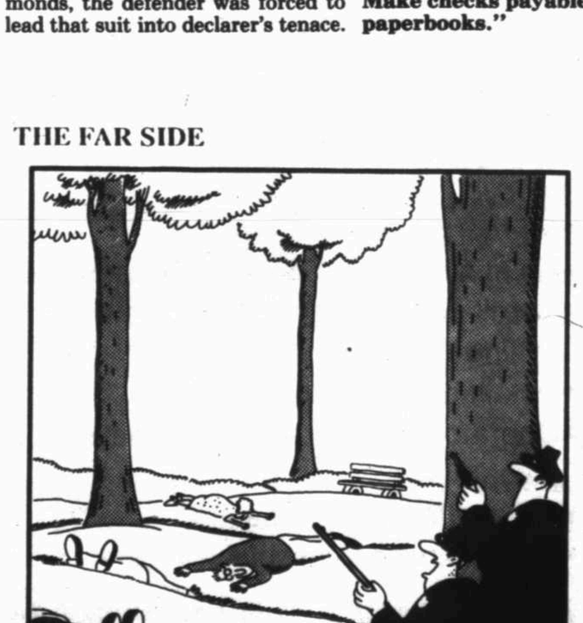

The opening spade lead was allowed to hold, declarer winning the continuation. Since West was more likely to hold heart length than East, declarer started by cashing the ace of hearts, fetching the queen from East. For those familiar with the Rule of Restricted Choice, it was twice as likely that East had started with a singleton honor than specifically queen-jack doubleton, so declarer continued by finessing the ten of hearts. When that held, declarer made the good shot of a low club to the ten, losing to the jack.

West exited with the jack of hearts, but declarer was in control. After winning the king of hearts, a club to the ace felled the queen. Declarer cashed out her two club tricks, then threw West on lead by exiting with a trump.

On lead with nothing but diamonds, the defender was forced to lead that suit into declarer's tenace. So despite the bad trump break and the queen of diamonds off side, declarer brought home her contract with the loss of just one trick in each suit except diamonds.

Powell, Schwarzkopf to get New York ticker-tape parade

NEW YORK (AP) — Two generals whose names became household words during the Gulf War — Colin Powell and Norman Schwarzkopf — will be honored in a ticker-tape parade, along with thousands of U.S. and allied troops.

"This will be New York's and perhaps the world's largest ticker-tape parade," Mayor David Dinkins said Tuesday.

Troops from the Vietnam, Korean and other wars will take part in "Operation Welcome Home" festivities, the mayor said.

Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Schwarzkopf, commander of Allied Forces in the Gulf, have accepted invitations to appear in the June 10 parade, Dinkins said.

President Bush, Secretary of Defense Richard Cheney and the governors of New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have been invited.

NEW YORK (AP) — A deal is likely for film rights to "American Psycho," Bret Easton Ellis' controversial novel about a yuppie serial killer, the author's agent said Wednesday.

"We're talking to a variety of people about motion pictire rights," Amanda Urban told the Associated Press.

The agent declined to say with whom she was talking, but added: "I think there'll be some come kind of deal, yeah."

The book is being issued in paperback by Vintage Books following its cancellation last year by Simon & Schuster.

"American Psycho" is filled with mayhem and torture and the Los Angeles chapter of the National Organization for Women has called for a boycott its publisher.

Ellis' novel has been almost universally condemned by critics. Jonathan Yardley of The Washington Post called it "the literary equivalent of a snuff flick."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comic Tom Arnold, stepping out from behind wife Roseanne Barr's shrinking shadow with his own solo comedy special, has come a long way since drilling hog's skulls at an Iowa meat packing plant.

The 32-year-old writer-actor on ABC's "Roseanne" TV series will star in a 30-minute "Tom Arnold: The Naked Truth" special airing Friday on cable's Home Box Office.

"I'm not eating at McDonald's three times a day anymore," the formerly 310-pound Arnold said Wednesday, noting his wife has joined him in the weight-loss crusade. Arnold has dropped 40 pounds.

Roseanne wants to lose enough to get pregnant. She has said she starts in-vitro fertilization in June.

Arnold conceded in a telephone interview with the Associated Press that his wife has opened doors for him.

"The way I look at it, all guys are in the shadows of their wives. They all stand behind their wives. In a way I'm in there because of Rosie," Arnold said, adding the HBO special gave him a sense of independence.

"It was the first time I got out and went to work by myself."

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Television anchorwoman Jane Pauley, former congresswoman Lindy Boggs and Surgeon General Antonia Novello will be among 13 people receiving honorary degrees from the University of Notre Dame.

Pauley, a native of Indianapolis who hosts "Real Life with Jane Pauley" for NBC News, will receive a law degree at graduation ceremonies May 19.

Also receiving honorary degrees will be Ireland's head of government, Charles J. Haughey, and newspaper executive Alvah H. Chapman Jr., chairman of the executive committee of Knight-Ridder Inc.

The commencement address will be delivered by Margaret O'Brien Steinfels of New York, editor of Commonweal magazine, the university said Wednesday.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A concert featuring Willie Nelson, Dolly Parton and Ray Benson and his band drew a cheering crowd of up to 3,000 people at Austin's Palmer Auditorium.

It was all for a television movie, "Big T."

Ms. Parton plays a country singer nicknamed "Big T" from Austin who is involved in an abusive relationship with her lover-manager, played by Gary Busey. Benson plays T's best friend, Asleep at the Wheel is her band called "The Texas Wheel," and Nelson makes a cameo appearance at the concert.

Those wanting to be part of the filmed concert audience formed a line several blocks long waiting for the doors to open at noon Tuesday.

STATE in brief

Senate OKs smoking ban

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has voted to prohibit smoking, except for designated areas, in state buildings and at state public meetings.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said state agency heads already have authority to designate smoking areas but his bill sets uniform standards.

The bill specifies that a common work area divided only by partial walls is not suitable for a designated smoking area.

Senators on Wednesday also approved a bill that restricts locations for cigarette machines. The machines would be allowed in bars, lounges or private facilities, according to a written bill analysis.

Both measures were sent to the House on voice vote.

Oil price war waged

HOUSTON (AP) — A price war being waged by a handful of major oil companies means Houston motorists have been getting a bargain at the gas pumps for more than a month.

Only Los Angeles has lower gasoline prices than Houston in the average price of regular unleaded gasoline in a Lundberg survey taken March 22. Houston averaged 94.53 cents a gallon, while Los Angeles bottomed out at 94.19 cents a gallon.

At the other end, Long Island, N.Y. residents paid $1.15 a gallon and in Chicago, had to pay $1.19 for a gallon of unleaded gasoline.

The price war is making life difficult for independent retailers, who now pay as much as a dime more a gallon wholesale than the self-serve super stations owned by big-oil majors such as Exxon, Chevron or Shell are selling at retail.

Some industry experts blame Exxon and Chevron for starting the Houston price war, although neither company agreed. They and the other majors say they're just responding to competition.

Teacher shot to death

BAILEY'S PRAIRIE (AP) — A high school math teacher was killed when a shotgun blast ripped into her car and struck her in the neck as she drove to work.

Donna Beth Sanford, 31, was found slumped over in the front seat of her car shortly before 8 a.m. Tuesday, Brazoria County sheriff's deputies said.

Investigators Wednesday still were seeking clues to the slaying. The woman's body was found by a state trooper who spotted her car in a pasture where it apparently had rolled to a halt.

The Angleton High School teacher, pronounced dead at the scene, had been hit by one of two close-range shotgun blasts that shattered the driver's window of her 1987 Lincoln Mark III, police said.

Mrs. Sanford and her husband, Curtis Wayne Sanford, had no children.

Murder suspect charged

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas woman has been charged with trying to arrange the killing of the wife and son of Carrollton's recreation manager.

Carol Lynn Ripley, 38, was charged Tuesday with two counts of attempted capital murder, Denton County authorities said. She remained jailed Tuesday on $200,000 bond.

Ms. Ripley, community program recreation coordinator for the Dallas Parks and Recreation Department, was arrested Sunday night shortly after she allegedly gave a man a .22-caliber pistol to kill Suzanne and Allen Swafford, sheriff's investigator Bill Fitzgerald said.

They are the wife and son of recreation manager Bob Swafford, who knew Ms. Ripley in a professional capacity, he said.

Bill would aid ranchers

AUSTIN (AP) — State Agriculture Rick Perry says pending legislation would help Texas agriculture by lowering in-state transportation costs for moving cattle to and from feedlots and slaughterhouses.

"Texas is America's top cattle and calf producer, with livestock sales accounting for nearly 50 percent of the state's entire agricultural income. However, Texas ranks second nationally in the number of cattle slaughtered and fourth in the production of red meat," Perry said.

In written testimony submitted to a House committee Wednesday, Perry said the state should lower transportation costs for moving cattle to and from feedlots, livestock marketing facilities and slaughterhouses.

Tarpley admits

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks forward Roy Tarpley admits he violated the provisions of his drug treatment after-care program by drinking on the night of his arrest on charges of drunken driving, but denies he was intoxicated.

Tarpley, who has twice violated the NBA's anti-drug policy and is recuperating from a season-ending knee injury, also said that if he drinks again, he won't leave the house.

Tarpley has disputed police accounts of his arrest Saturday morning, but does acknowledge he drank three beers before going out that night. Police said he was unruly and refused a Breathalyzer or blood test, but failed five field sobriety tests.

Tarpley said he cooperated with police, but was nervous and distracted because of the crowd of about 80 people watching the scene. He said that in one test he was standing solely on his injured leg, which caused him to wobble.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The oddsmakers were not the only ones surprised when UNLV failed to repeat as NCAA champions.

Las Vegas post offices canceled about 400,000 pieces of mail Monday with the message "UNLV National Champions, Las Vegas, NV."

The postmark was made up in advance, before Duke upset the Rebels in a semifinal game Saturday night.

Bo-dacious Chisox

■ Refusing to put stock in the Kansas City medical reports, the Chicago White Sox sign free agent Bo Jackson.

Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — Boston has its Bosox, but Chicago now has the Bo Sox.

Bo Jackson, promising to return from a hip injury that threatens his two-sport career, signed a free-agent contract Wednesday with the Chicago White Sox.The one-year deal with club options for 1992 and 1993 could be worth as little as $700,000 or as much as $8.15 million over three years plus award bonuses.

"Right now, I feel like a caged animal," Jackson said at a news conference, a Sox cap atop his head and a Sox jersey slung across his shoulder.

"I can't wait for them to open the chutes and let me go and do what I've been doing my whole life, and that's running."

The one-year contract with options for 1992 and 1993 pays Jackson even if he doesn't play this season, which appears likely.

"Realistically, we don't expect him until 1992," general manager Ron Schueler said.

Terms of the deal were not immediately available.

The 28-year-old Jackson, the only athlete of his generation who has successfully paired All-Star careers in baseball and the NFL, injured his left hip while being tackled in a Raiders-Cincinnati Bengals playoff game on Jan. 13.

He has been on crutches since and, after being waived by the Kansas City Royals last month, was said to be suffering from avascular necrosis, the partial loss of blood supply to the ball in the ball-and-socket joint.

Doctors have speculated Jackson will never play football or baseball again, but Jackson's physican, sports specialist Dr. James Andrews of Birmingham, Ala., was critical of those "doom and gloom" reports.

"We have had some very favorable information relative to the prognosis of Bo's hip," Andrews said. " We think Bo has an excellent potential to heal ... (and) the White Sox have been willing to accept the risk."

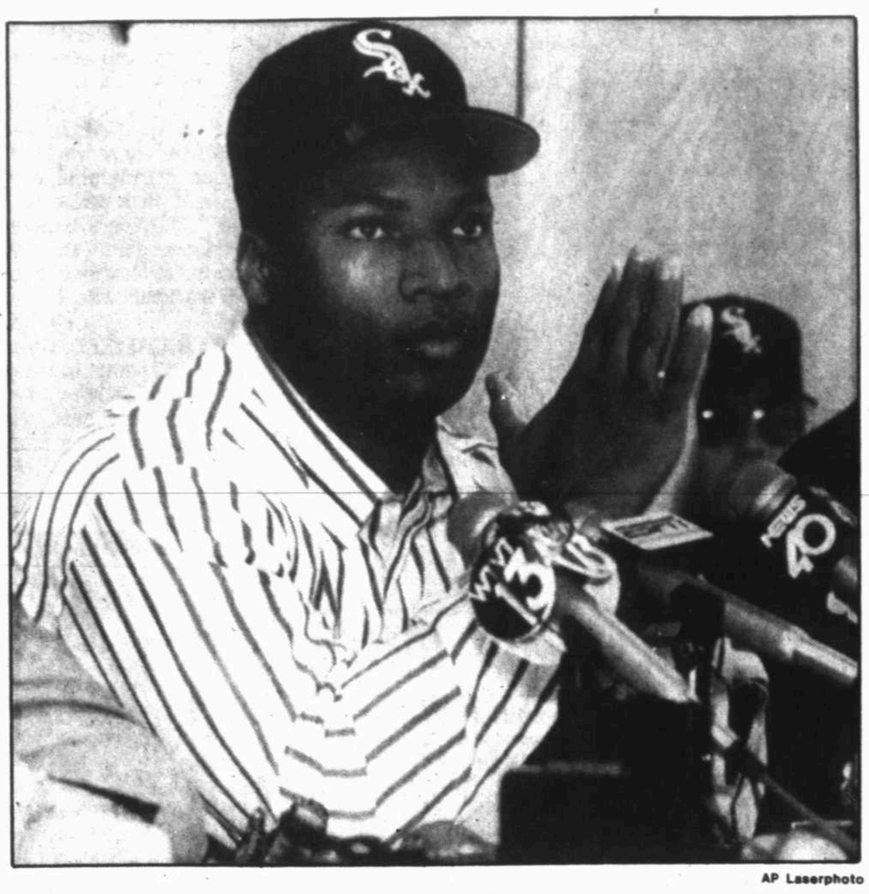

Schueler convinced owner Jerry Reinsdorf a week ago to spend considerable dough on the ailing Bo, saying, "Any time you can get an athlete of Bo's caliber, you've got to take that gamble. If he can bounce back, we've made a great gamble."

"We won't risk his condition just to meet some timetable," said Dr. James Boscardin, the White Sox's orthopedic surgeon. "He'll be on the field when his hip is ready."

"My prognosis has come a long way since the injury," Jackson said. "I'm able to walk with no pain. They won't let me go out and run — yet. But things are coming along great."

Jackson's contract calls for a $700,000 salary in 1991 with bonuses of $10,000 for each game available up to 80. The club option for 1992 is for his 1991 earnings less $100,000 and includes bonuses of $10,000 for each game available up to 150. The 1993 option is for his 1992 earnings plus bonuses of $10,000 for each game available, with a $3.75 million maxiumum.

Prime Time on the air

■ Deion Sanders, another two-sport star, will get his shot to start for the Atlanta Braves on opening day.

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Nobody called a news conference. There were no bold predictions. With little fanfare, the Atlanta Braves simply said Wednesday that Deion Sanders was their starting left fielder and leadoff hitter.

Sanders

With that, the Atlanta Falcons' "Prime Time" cornerback had accomplished his goal: becoming the first pro athlete to play football and baseball in the same city, on the same field.

Gene Conley had pitched for the Braves in Boston and played basketball for the Celtics there, but on different playing surfaces.

"It's one of the biggest accomplishments of my life, probably the biggest," said Sanders, the Falcons' No. 1 NFL draft pick two years ago. "It's like the motto I've got taped inside my football helmet: You gotta believe."

Sanders believed from the first day of spring training he would make the club, even though the Braves had him ticketed for their Triple A club in Richmond, Va., after signing him as a non-roster player for $650,000.

"Against all odds," he said. "I was written off."

Sanders hit .158 in 57 games with the New York Yankees last season and .321 in 22 games with Triple A Columbus. Then he was released by the Yankees last Sept. 24.

Tulsa boosters woo Richardson

Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — While Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson says he is 80 percent sure he'll stay put, some University of Tulsa boosters are holding out hope that he will return to coach the Hurricane.

"I really think he will," Lee Levinson told The Tulsa Tribune in Wednesday's editions. "It would be a boon for Tulsa sports. It would create some excitement around here again."

Richardson, who is scheduled to speak at the Texas vs. the USA Junior College All-Star game banquet in Midland Friday, reportedly was in Tulsa on Wednesday to meet with some boosters who support his return to Tulsa.

Levinson told The Associated Press he did not know about a meeting and "we'll have to wait and see" if Richardson is serious about returning.

Ed Beshara, a Tulsa businessman who is a longtime friend of Richardson and a supporter of the Tulsa athletic program, said he doesn't think there is anything to a Richardson move.

"I think he'd be crazy to leave the University of Arkansas," Beshara said. "He likes the people of Arkansas. There are just a few who could destroy an empire."

Tulsa was 119-37 in the five years that Richardson was coach. He left in 1985 to take the Arkansas job.

Tulsa fired coach J.D. Barnett on March 20, and Richardson's name has surfaced as a possible candidate since then.

Richardson told the Arkansas Gazette that he preferred not to say what Tulsa people he would meet with Wednesday, but added that Tulsa athletic director Rick Dickson was not among them.

The Tulsa World quoted an unnamed source as saying Tulsa was close to completing a financial package similar to the one Richardson has at Arkansas.

Johnson receives Wooden Award

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Admitting it was not the prize he wanted most, UNLV's Larry Johnson nevertheless called it a great honor when he was presented with the John Wooden Award as college basketball's player of the year Wednesday.

Johnson received the award, given by the Los Angeles Athletic Club, four days after the Runnin' Rebels lost to Duke 79-77 in the semifinals of the NCAA tournament. Duke went on to beat Kansas 72-65 to win the national championship.

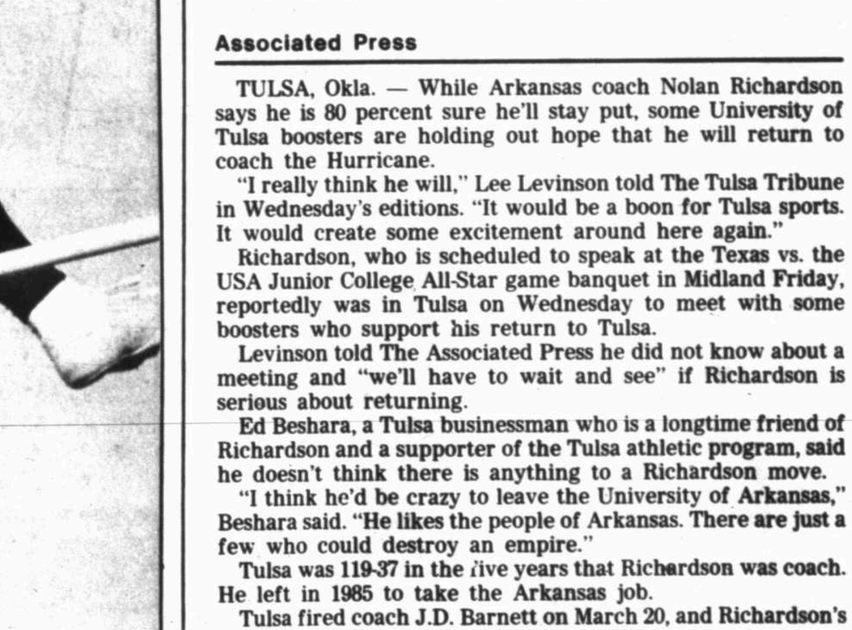

"It's really a great honor; just being here is a great honor," said Johnson, who played junior college basketball at Odessa College. "I'm just so happy to have been on the team I've been on for the last two years.

"This might take the sting away for my family, but not for the university. Winning the national championship was basically what I set out to do, that was my goal. It's always going to hurt but life goes on, you have to get over it.

"I'd just like to congratulate Duke. I'm not too happy we lost, but I've got to give them the credit."

The loss to Duke broke UNLV's 45-game winning streak, covering the last 11 games last season and the first 34 this year. The Rebels the beat Blue Devils 103-73 in the championship game last year.

Johnson, a 6-foot-7, 250-pound senior forward, was the Wooden Award winner in voting by 1,000 sports writers and broadcasters.

Maxwell unhappy with salary

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets got the kind of news Wednesday they've thrived on all season — Vernon Maxwell threatened to leave the team in a contract dispute and the other starting guard, Kenny Smith, is hobbled with a strained foot.

Maxwell, who leads the NBA with 142 3-point goals and is averaging 16.7 points, has sparred with the Rockets throughout the season over his contract, which pays him $200,000 this season and $275,000 next season.

"Right now, I feel like walking away from it all," Maxwell told the Houston Chronicle. "I'd do it. It's possible. Sometimes, you've got to do what you've got to do."

Maxwell has been a key factor in Houston's 25-5 record over the second half of the season, the hottest streak in the NBA. He said he'd been told since February that a deal would be worked out.

"Everybody has told me not to go to the papers, to wait and not say anything, but it's time for me to stand up and say something," Maxwell said. "I've been broke all my life, so what's another four or five months if I walk out?"

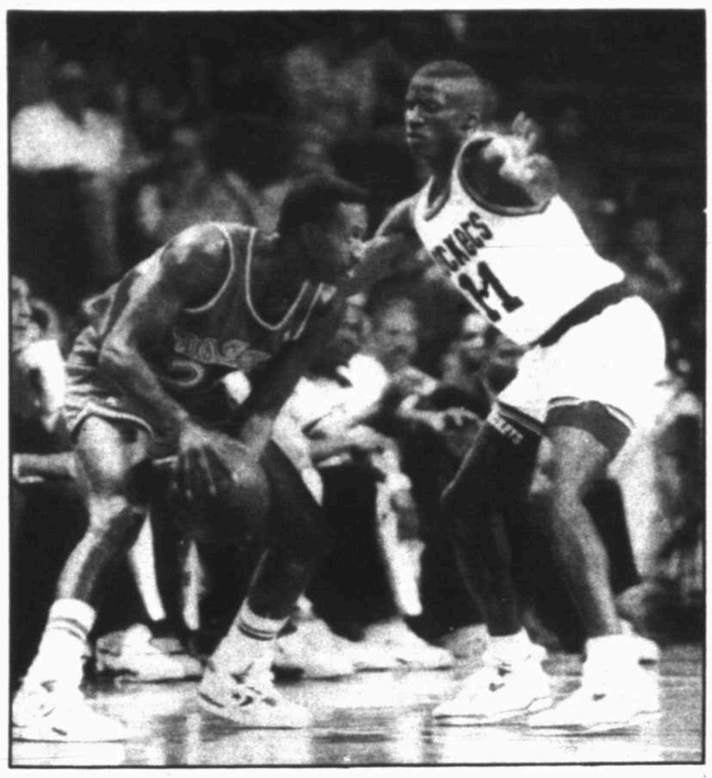

Maxwell said he is underpaid compared to other starting shooting guards in the NBA.

"I want to be paid like a starting 'two' guard that's all," Maxwell said. "They said they would work with me, but nothing's happened."

Maxwell's contract talk brought a firm "no comment" from Coach Don Chaney, who made a similar contract plea to the Rockets earlier this season.

"I really have no comment at all on that," Chaney said. "Anything related to that, I can't comment on because I'm in the same situation."

Chaney is in the final year of his contract and so far has been unable to negotiate a new deal with the Rockets despite the Rockets' mid-season comeback.

Rockets crush Mavs

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon had 22 points and 22 rebounds, and the Houston Rockets survived Dallas' third-quarter charge to beat the Mavericks 102-86 Wednesday night.

Olajuwon got 20-plus rebounds for the sixth time this season and Vernon Maxwell led Houston in scoring with 27 points as the Rockets won for the 15th time in 16 games and pulled within a half-game of first-place San Antonio in the Midwest Division.

The Mavericks lost for the 12th time in 15 games and extended their road losing streak to seven.

76ers 107, Pacers 104

INDIANAPOLIS — Ron Anderson came off the bench to score 23 of his 27 points in the first half as Philadelphia, playing without Charles Barkley and Rick Mahorn, beat Indiana.

The 76ers handed Indiana its 11th loss in 37 home games despite the absence of Barkley, out for at least two weeks with a sprained ankle, and Mahorn, who has a bruised right heel.

Cavaliers 95, Knicks 84

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Larry Nance scored 10 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter, leading Cleveland to a 95-84 victory over the New York Knicks.

The Cavaliers, who trailed by 16 points in the second quarter, took the lead at 65-63 on a jumper by Nance with 2:11 left in the third period. The

NBA Roundup

Jazz 99, Clippers 97

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 39 points, including the last five of the game in the final 2:07, as Utah rallied to snap the Los Angeles Clippers' five-game winning streak.

The Clippers led 97-94 on a jumper by Charles Smith with 2:24 left, but Los Angeles didn't score again. Malone tied it with 2:07 to go with a three-point play after he was fouled by Smith.

SuperSonics 106, Kings 91

SEATTLE — Shawn Kemp and Eddie Johnson scored 20 points apiece, and the Seattle SuperSonics used a 16-4 second-half spurt to hand the Sacramento Kings their 33rd consecutive road defeat.

Antoine Carr scored 29 points, keeping the Kings in contention through three quarters, but it wasn't enough as they pulled within one more road loss of the NBA record. Sacramento already holds the single-season record for road defeats without a win.

Losses cost Bruins, Penguins home-ice edge

Associated Press

Two regular-season division champions, the Boston Bruins and Pittsburgh Penguins, saw the home-ice advantage they worked 80 games to get disappear in 60 minutes on Wednesday night.

The Bruins, who won the Adams Division, were shocked 5-2 by Hartford in their playoff opener as John Cullen had a goal and two assists. The Patrick Division-champion Penguins, who won the first title of any sort in their 24-year history, managed only one goal against New Jersey and lost 3-1 at the Civic Arena.

In the other Adams Division semifinal series opener, Montreal rallied from an early 2-0 deficit to outscore Buffalo 7-5. The New York Rangers beat Washington 2-1 in the other Patrick Division semifinal opener.

All four series resume Friday night.

The Norris and Smythe Division semis open on Thursday night. In the Norris, it's Minnesota at Chicago and Detroit at St. Louis. In the Smythe, Los Angeles hosts Vancouver and Calgary entertains Edmonton.

Whalers 5, Bruins 2

The Whalers, who finished the season on an 0-5-2 slide, appeared headed for an early wipeout at Boston Garden when Jeff Lazaro scored 23 seconds into the game and Mark Hunter's major penalty for elbowing 21 seconds later gave the Bruins a five-minute power play.

But the Whalers allowed only one shot while killing off the penalty, tied the game at 14:11 on Pat Verbeek's power-play goal and went ahead to stay in the second period on goals by Kevin Dineen and Rob Brown.

"We didn't get down after they scored so early," Verbeek said. "We kept working."

NHL Playoffs

Petri Skriko's power-play goal late in the second period made it 3-2 but John Cullen and Paul Cyr scored 28 seconds apart late in the third period to put the game away.

"We were beaten," Boston coach Mike Milbury said. "They outworked us. They outchecked us. They finished their opportunities better. They had better defense. They had better goaltending."

Devils 3, Penguins 1

New Jersey was 0-for-4 at Pittsburgh during the regular season, but it didn't matter Wednesday night.

Peter Stastny scored twice for the Devils. His second goal, a wraparound at 4:12 of the third period, broke a 1-1 tie. Laurie Boschman finished off a 2-on-1 break 50 seconds later by beating Tom Barrasso over the left shoulder for a 3-1 lead.

Mario Lemieux gave the Penguins the lead with a power-play goal midway through the second period, but Stastny, who had just one point in his last 12 regular-season games, tied the score at 15:42 by knocking in a rebound.

The Devils put on an exhibition of defensive hockey that made their coach proud.

"It was that old-time hockey," Tom McVie said. "Old-time hockey in my book is hard hitting, checking and the forechecking game I love dearly. I'm not interested in this breakaway-type hockey. You won't win anything with that."

Canadiens 7, Sabres 5

Montreal spotted Buffalo an early 2-0 lead, then roared back with four first-period goals to win at The Forum.

Benoit Hogue and Grant Ledyard scored in the first 2:12 as Buffalo stunned the crowd of 16,343. But Russ Courtnall's second goal of the game capped a four-goal surge by the Canadiens and the Sabres were unable to get any closer.

Rangers 2, Capitals 1

Erixon opened the scoring with a spectacular breakaway goal at 4:20 of the second period, one-handing the puck past Don Beaupre after being tripped by defenseman Kent Paynter. Nicholls made it 2-0 with a slap shot from the left faceoff dot at 16:58.

Richter made 28 saves and was within 1:33 of his first career shutout before Michal Pivonka knocked in Calle Johansson's rebound.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed two separate applications with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to introduce two new optional directory services. One service is Directory Assistance Call Completion (DACC) and the other service is Multiple List Directory Assistance (MLDA).

DACC is an optional service that provides customers the option of having their Directory Assistance call completed to the requested number (when they call Directory Assistance for a number) by either the Directory Assistance operator or a mechanized audio response system.

The proposed rates* for fully-automated DACC calls are: $.30 if the call is sent paid or billed to a calling card, $1.00 if the call is collect or billed to a third number and $.25 from a coin telephone.

The proposed rates* for semi-automated (operator assisted) DACC calls are: $.85 for calls that are sent paid or billed to a calling card, $1.20 if the call is collect or billed to a third number and $2.60 for a person-to-person call.

Multiple List Directory Assistance (MLDA) allows the customer to request more than two listing requests per call to Directory Assistance. Customers can either call on "demand" and receive up to 10 listings, or schedule an "appointment" and receive the assistance of a Directory Assistance operator for as long as required. The rates for "demand" MLDA are $.30 per listing request (after applicable allowances), with a maximum of 10 listing requests per call. The rates for "appointment" MLDA are $1.00 per minute, with a 15-minute minimum.

The optional services DACC and MLDA are intended for use by both residence and business customers. Those persons who qualify for exemption of Directory Assistance charges because of visual or physical handicaps will be able to use DACC and "demand" MLDA free of charge. If approved by the commission, DACC and MLDA will be available beginning May 13, 1991. First-year projected revenues for DACC are approximately $9.6 million. First-year projected revenues for MLDA are approximately $1.7 million.

Persons who wish to comment on these applications should notify the commission by May 3, 1991. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Southwestern Bell Telephone

*The charges for DACC are in addition to the charge for the Directory Assistance Listing (if applicable) and/or any local or intraLATA toll charges that would apply to the completed call.

Clemens vents anger on Pirates

Associated Press

In a matchup of Cy Young Award winners on Wednesday, Roger Clemens was just a little better than Doug Drabek.

Clemens, the American League Cy Young Award winner in 1986 and '87 who is scheduled to start in Toronto on Monday while an appeal of a five-game suspension is on file with Commissioner Fay Vincent, allowed just one hit, struck out six and walked none as Boston beat Pittsburgh 3-0.

Clemens said he was confused and shocked by AL president Bobby Brown's decision upholding the suspension and a $10,000 fine for the pitcher's actions in Game 4 of the playoffs against Oakland.

Dodgers 3, Mets 2

VERO BEACH, Fla. — Eddie Murray drove in two runs and Bob Ojeda pitched five strong innings against his former teammates as Los Angeles beat the Mets.

Phillies 7, Cardinals 2

CLEARWATER, Fla. — John Kruk hit a two-run homer and Lenny Dykstra had two doubles to lead Philadelphia over St. Louis.

Braves 6, Yankees 5

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — David Justice had two hits, scored twice and drove in two runs as Atlanta held off the Yankees.

Justice had a two-run double in Atlanta's three-run fifth inning and Mark Lemke added an RBI single for a 6-2 lead off New York starter Dave Eiland, who gave up 10 hits and struck out six in six innings.

Twins 11, Rangers 1

White Sox 7, Blue Jays 1

DUNEDIN, Fla. — Toronto's Dave Stieb had a rough outing in his opening day tuneup, giving up seven runs in five innings to the White Sox.

Baseball

Indians 7, Mariners 0

TUCSON, Ariz. — Albert Belle hit his major league-leading eighth exhibition home run and Greg Swindell pitched eight strong innings as Cleveland beat Seattle. Belle has 23 RBIs in 20 games.

Athletics 9, Cubs 2

PHOENIX — Rookie Kirk Dressendorfer, awarded a spot in Oakland's starting rotation a day earlier, picked up his third exhibition victory by allowing five hits and one run in five innings to the Cubs.

Padres 5, Angels 3

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Eric Nolte and Craig Lefferts combined to pitch seven shutout innings and San Diego Padres withstood a late rally to beat California's opening day starter Chuck Finley.

Brewers 4, Giants 2

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Greg Vaughn's two-out homer in the seventh inning, his fourth in four games, broke a tie and gave Milwaukee the victory.

Royals 8, Astros 1

HAINES CITY, Fla. — Mike Macfarlane hit a three-run homer and Bret Saberhagen allowed one run on five hits in eight innings as Kansas City won its sixth straight game.

Reds 6, Tigers 4

LAKELAND, Fla. — A triple by Glenn Braggs and doubles by Reggie Jefferson and Jeff Reed keyed a four-run Cincinatti ninth inning.

Angels win again

Staff Report

MESA, Ariz. — The Midland Angels made their preseason record 6-3 here Wednesday with an 11-8 victory over the El Paso Diablos.

The win was the fourth straight for the Haloes, who also smacked out exactly 16 hits for the third time in the last four games.

Midland shortstop Damion Easley led the Angels' offensive cause by going 4-for-6 at the plate with five RBI on a triple and two doubles.

Sox fans wonder about Jackson

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Seventy years after Shoeless Joe Jackson, the White Sox on Wednesday gave Jobless Bo Jackson work. And Chicago baseball fans are skeptical about the deal.

"He's a heck of a ballplayer if he's healthy," said Ted Kramer, 54, an accountant and White Sox fan from the Comiskey Park neighborhood. "He could be a drawing card."

Kramer hopes Bo will be healthy enough to play.

"It would be hard to see a 28-year-old have his career end," he said.

Kramer likes Jackson.

"He seems like a nice guy. Some guys want too much," he said.

Ray Janisch, 35, said he doesn't understand where Jackson would play.

"What is he going to do? Our outfield is set," Janisch said. "But he should be good if they use him as a DH."

Dan O'Neill, another White Sox fan-accountant, said Bo just muddies the outfield picture.

"I was worried over the winter about (outfielders) Cory Snyder and Dan Pasqua getting playing time. Now, we get another outfielder," he said.

Yet, fans expect Jackson can help the White Sox if he can play.

That's the uncertainty — when Jackson will be ready to go to bat.

"Realistically, we don't expect him until 1992," general manager Ron Schueler said.

The one-year contract with options for 1992 and 1993 pays Jackson even if he doesn't play this season.

Bo's signing highlighted quite a day for the White Sox. A wrecking ball began tearing down the walls of old Comiskey Park, where Shoeless Joe played before the 1919 Black Sox scandal led him to be banned him from baseball.

Also Wednesday, the Sox beat Toronto 7-1 in a Florida exhibition game and a media open house was held at new Comiskey Park.

Some Chicago sportswriters think the White Sox landing Bo was a great public relations stroke.

"It's good public relations even if he never plays an inning," said Southtown Economist columnist Bill Gleason.

O'Neill suggests the Chicago Bears should sign Bo, a member of the Los Angeles Raiders — so he can stay in town for both football and baseball like Atlanta's Deion Sanders.

"It would be hard for him to get to LA on crutches," he said.

BO: Jackson still wants to play football

(From 1C)

Thus, if Jackson returns at midseason and stays healthy, he could earn $1.5 million in 1991, $2.9 million in 1992 and $3.75 million in 1993. The deal also includes several award bonuses.

The contract doesn't bar Jackson, who has a year left on his $7.4 million Raiders' contract, from playing football again.

"We can't prevent that (Bo playing football), but we can protect ourselves, and we have," Schueler said.

Raiders executive assistant Al LoCasale said Wednesday the team expects Jackson at the "middle of the season, just as we have the past four seasons.

"The Raiders are confident he has the best medical advice and care possible. We expect he will play football again this fall, and be a major contributor to the Raiders in the second half of the season and help us return to the playoffs."

Richard Woods, Jackson's agent, said about half the teams in baseball contacted him after the Royals, fearful Jackson's hip injury was career-ending, released him. Under baseball's basic agreement, the Royals were required to pay Jackson $391,484, or about one-sixth of a one-year contract worth $2,375,000.

"There were two or three teams in hot pursuit of him," Schueler said. "Some clubs that were interested, I know from their track records that he could have gotten more money. ... I'm sure they are disappointed they won't get the chance to outbid us."

Andrews, well-regarded by the White Sox for his work with players for their Class AA Birmingham farm club, and team medical specialists examined Jackson's records in detail Tuesday night. The two sides then needed "less than two hours" to draw up a contract, Schueler said.

Jackson, a former Heisman Trophy winner at Auburn, hit a career-high .278 with 28 homers and 78 RBIs in 111 games last year. He is a power hitter — his 109 career homers have averaged 398 feet in length — and a power runner, rushing for 698 yards in about a half-season with the Raiders in 1990.

He was picked for the Pro Bowl before being injured.

Jackson is convinced he will play again — and play both sports — but Bo knows nothing is certain.

"Hey, if it's meant to be this way, I have to accept it. I can't change the Lord's will. If it's meant to be I'm through with sports, I'll have to do that," he said. "I know that I can go on and so something else."

DEION: Sanders' father arrested for crack possession

(From 1C)

Braves general manager John Schuerholz, who had said he would not make a decision on Sanders until Friday, simply said "yes" when asked Wednesday if the speedy outfielder had made the club for Tuesday's opening night game against Los Angeles at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"He's a guy, obviously, who plays up to a challenge," said Schuerholz. "And the challenge was there."

Sanders, whose fondness for gold jewelry and expensive sports cars prompted some to question his attitude during his first season with the Falcons, has been relatively subdued with the Braves.

"He's been great," said Schuerholz. "He's hard working; as a matter of fact, he's worked as hard as anybody in camp."

Sanders, who hit his first homer of the spring Tuesday, was batting .281 in 57 at-bats going into Wednesday's exhibition game.

"I've got a long way to go," said Sanders, who returned to Atlanta Thursday for a cortisone shot in his left shoulder. "I'm not going to say I feel comfortable, but I was hoping to get a good shot and that hope was not denied."

He also credited the Braves with taking the time to work with him on his bunting, fielding and hitting the ball to left field.

"They made me believe I could play this game," he said. "My hard work paid off, and then another player unfortunately got injured and the chips fell my way."

That player was Lonnie Smith, who hit .305 last season but underwent arthroscopic surgery on his left knee last week and will be on the disabled list until April 14.

When Smith returns, what happens to Sanders?

"I don't know," said Schuerholz. "I have no idea. We'll just have to see what Lonnie can do when he returns, and find out the circumstances with the team at that time."

But for now, Sanders is the man.

"Right now, he's our leadoff hitter on opening night," said manager Bobby Cox. "He brings excitement and speed, and hopefully he'll continue to hit like he has."

The tendinitis in his shoulder caused only slight concern.

"He has a tender shoulder and went to Atlanta to see (team doctor) Joe Chandler," manager Bobby Cox said. "He'll be back tonight and will be in the lineup Friday. There's no problem."

Of more concern was the state of Sanders' father, Mims. The 48-year-old man was ordered held on $5,000 bond Wednesday after Lee County, Fla., sheriff's detectives found crack cocaine on his tongue.

Detectives also discovered a rock of crack and a pipe for smoking the drug inside a black 1990 Corvette registered to Deion Sanders and parked at the North Fort Myers motel where Mims Sanders was staying, Lee County sheriff's spokeswoman Geraldine Poole said.

this year, lost in the regional finals to Kansas. They reached the Final Four last year, losing to Duke in the semifinals.

Richardson said earlier that he didn't like the constant scrutiny of his program at Arkansas and that he began evaluating his situation before the end of this season.

"I know basically the time is coming when the attitude of a lot of people is getting out of control. Sometimes you don't want to be a part of that.

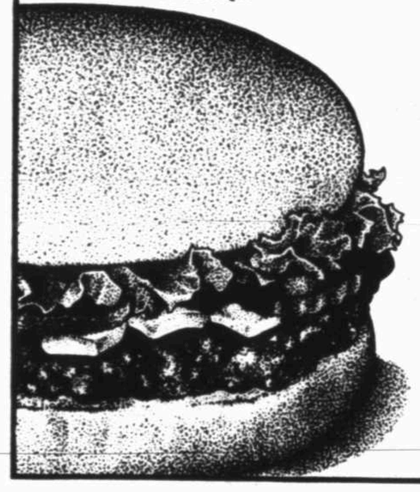

"You can get into a situation where you have done so much as far as putting games together and winning by big margins. I go back in my head and say, 'Man, you're creating something here that's ridiculous.'

Prices fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline futures prices headed lower Wednesday as traders took profits while anticipating a steady supply of gasoline in the near future. Crude oil futures also fell but less significantly, as traders realized a reported increase in crude oil stocks Tuesday was not a sign of increased oil supplies.

Oil prices also moved lower, but were moderated by an industry report released late Tuesday by the American Petroleum Institute. The report showed a 6.7 million barrel-a-day increase in crude oil stocks, but the increase was due to a transfer from the U.S. government's Strategic Petroleum Reserve, and not an increase in imports, said Bob Baker, an energy analyst with Prudential Securities Inc.

West Texas Intermediate for May delivery settled 23 cents lower at $19.47 per 42-gallon barrel. Later contract months slipped as well.

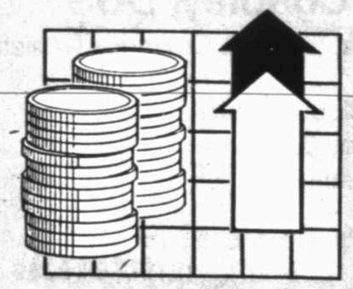

Natural gas for delivery in May settled at $1.417, down 0.3 cent a gallon.

Stocks mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned in a mixed showing Wednesday in a session marked by selling of blue chips but continued gains in many smaller "secondary" issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 63.86 on Tuesday, dropped back 18.32 to 2,926.73.

Silver rallies

Silver futures prices rose for the fourth straight day Wednesday, as hopes for an economic recovery helped lift the metal's value to its highest level in nearly three weeks on New York's Commmodity Exchange.

Other precious metals also rose Wednesday.

Silver futures settled 7.2 cents to 7.8 cents higher with the contract for delivery in April at $4.063 a troy ounce, the highest settlement for a spot silver contract since March 15.

Gold futures ended 90 cents to $1.80 higher with April at $360.30 a troy ounce; platinum was $7.10 to $7.40 higher with April at $400.20 a troy ounce.

Study questions U.S.-Mexico accord

■ A group questioning a U.S.-Mexico free trade pact released a study that casts doubts on the benefits both governments claim would come from an agreement.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Skeptics of a free trade agreement with Mexico released a report Wednesday that claims the accord could result in a net loss of income and employment to many working families in the United States.

The study also claims the free trade agreement as currently envisioned would result in a significant shift in U.S. production to Mexico and a weakening of U.S. environmental, health and safety standards.

The report by the Economic Policy Institute, a liberal think tank devoted to economic issues, comes on the eve of Sunday's meeting in Houston between President Bush and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari. The two leaders are expected to discuss negotiations for a North American free trade agreement that will also involve Canada.

The Economic Policy Institute said its findings dispute Bush administration claims that the free trade agreement would benefit most U.S. workers by increasing the demand for U.S. goods in Mexico.

The group's report said most Mexicans, however, are too poor to consume many American-made products, and that the export gains from the free trade agreement would also be small because most trade between the two nations is already free as a result of trade liberalization begun in 1986.

The institute also challenges findings by the International Trade Commission that unskilled workers in the United States would suffer a slight decline in real income as a result of the free trade agreement.

The report's authors say that using the ITC's own definitions, unskilled workers refers to 73 percent of the workforce. The study also claims workers who would be hurt most are the poorest and least mobile, such as those in the apparel industry, and those without a college degree.

The institute also says the ITC study is also based on the explicit assumption that a major shift of capital investment from the United States to Mexico would not occur, but that the assumption cannot be sustained.

Indeed, many more U.S. firms would move capital investment from factories in the United States to new plants in Mexico in search of low wages and virtually non-existent environmental and worker safety regulations if the accord is not carefully crafted, the study said.

The Economic Policy Institute is opposed to giving the Bush administration the authority to negotiate the agreement on the "fast-track," meaning the accord could not be amended later by Congress and would have to be voted on in a fixed period of time.

Congress has until the first of June to decide whether to grant the administration a two-year extension in fast-track negotiating authority.

Solar energy advance announced

By Evan Ramstad

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. and Southern California Edison Co. have developed a process that could cut the cost of solar-energy generation in half, the companies said Wednesday.

Six years of research have yielded a way to use inexpensive, low-purity silicon in solar cells that convert sunlight into electricity, the companies said.

"This has the potential to be the type of breakthrough technology we've all been working for in the solar industry," said Robert Dietch, a vice president for Southern California Edison.

The company hopes to perfect a manufacturing process by the end of next year and will determine whether commercial production is viable, spokesman Ted Jernigan said. Some field trials will be made later this year also, he said.

"They have a unique and bold idea," said Scott Sklar, executive director of the Solar Energy Industries Association.

"It should be one of the many technological paths that make photovoltaics commonplace," he said.

The use of expensive pure silicon in photovoltaic cells now makes them economical only in remote areas where the cost of running utility lines is very high.

The pure silicon costs up to $75 per kilogram as compared to $1 to $2 per kilogram for so-called metallurgical-grade material.

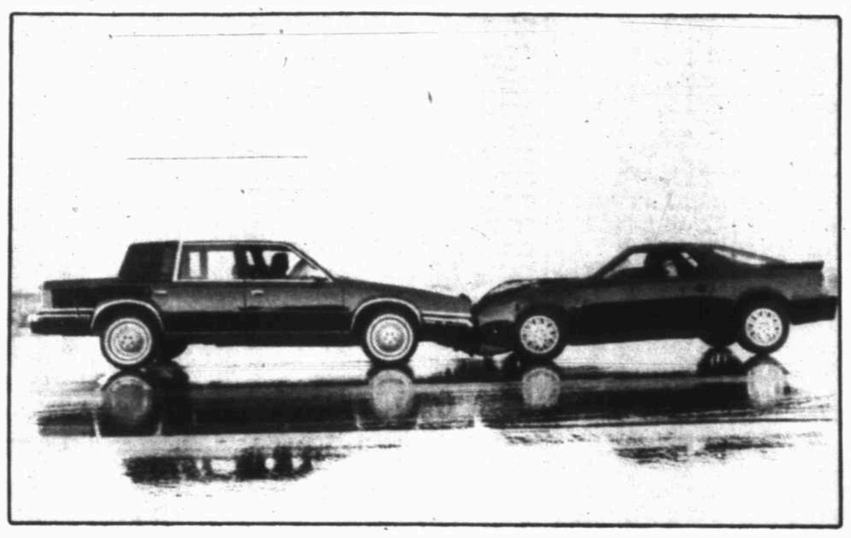

"So you have an incredible savings on just raw materials," said Nick Patapoff, senior research engineer who works exclusively on solar projects for Southern California Edison.

The companies said they believe the production process will save money too.

In that process, heat causes impurities to be distinguished from tiny silicon spheres. The spheres, smaller than a pencil point, are then fashioned onto a strong, flexible aluminum foil four inches square.

"The process has been pretty well demonstrated in lab. Now we want to see if we can meet the cost targets," Patapoff said.

Ensco after control of Penrod Drilling

The Dallas company made the $8-a-share offer Tuesday for 12.5 million shares owned by investors and trusts organized by R.D. Smith & Co. of New York.

Energy Service, known as Ensco, and R.D. Smith have quarreled about how Penrod should be run since they purchased controlling interest in it a year ago from the Hunt brothers' bankers.

The bankers gained Penrod after the trusts of Nelson Bunker, Lamar and Herbert Hunt defaulted on $537 million in debt.

Ensco has not obtained financing for the offer but has a commitment from Fort Worth investor Richard Rainwater to provide a loan guarantee to back financing of up to $100 million, spokesman Allen Brooks said.

Rainwater is Ensco's largest investor.

Ensco and various investment partnerships organized by Rainwater control 58.6 percent of Penrod but only 50 percent of Penrod's voting stock. Smith-organized investors control 41.4 percent.

Penrod stock has been recently trading at between $6.50 and $7.50 a share.

The company's chief assets are drilling rigs. Penrod has 19 offshore jack-up rigs, eight on-shore drilling rigs and two anchor-handling vessels that aid in oilfield operations in the Gulf of Mexico.

■ Compaq Computers of Houston has bought a stake in Silicon Graphics for $135 million, hoping to gain a strong foothold in the workstation market.

Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Compaq Computer Corp. will pay $135 million for a 13 percent stake in Silicon Graphics Inc., the companies announced Wednesday in a joint competitive move within the hotly contested workstation market.

"I wouldn't be surprised if the Compaq investment in Silicon Graphics helps the companies nail down the technology for the next generation of workstations," said Peter Kastner, a computer industry analyst with the Aberdeen Group Inc. of Boston.

Workstations, basically desk-top computers with about three times the power, cost from a low-end of about $5,000 to as much as $75,000.

Houston-based Compaq, maker of high quality clones of IBM personal computers, has been trying to enter the growing workstation market. It was rumored to be considering a merger with Mountain View-based Silicon Graphics.

Silicon Graphics, a leader in workstation graphics because of its 3-D technology, was the first in 1985 to use the high-speed MIPS chips. Silicon Graphics also was an early user of RISC, or reduced instruction-set computing, which simplifies and

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Unlisted corporate bonds cause for concern

By Bill Doyle

Q. Our broker put us in a number of corporate bonds. These purchases apparently were made through greed or stupidity, some of which was ours. Unfortunately, we thought anything we bought would be traded on the New York Stock Exchange. These bonds are not listed there or on any other exchange.

Doyle

We are in the process of breaking off our relationship with that broker. What procedure can we follow to find the current prices of these unlisted bonds?

A. You'll have to obtain price quotations from other brokers. You would be wise to check with a number of brokerage firms. You'll probably find the price of the same bond varying among different brokers. Unlike on an exchange, where bond and stock prices are a matter of public record and are printed in newspapers, the market for unlisted bonds can be wild and wooly.

In that market, a brokerage usually does not act as "agent" for a customer — buying and selling at the best possible price and charging a commission. Instead, the brokerage acts as a "principal" — buying from customers at a "bid" price and selling to customers at a higher "asked" price. The difference between the two prices is the "spread" — the brokerage's profit.

To fend off a batch of screaming-mad letters from brokers, it must be pointed out that this arrangement is not without risk. Sometimes, a brokerage cannot sell unlisted bonds it has purchased and takes the bonds into its inventory. If the market prices of those bonds fall, the brokerage can suffer a loss.

Your problem is especially severe because the bonds you named in your letter are "junk" bonds, rated below investment grade. And your mention of greed and stupidity is, as the kids say, "right on." Billions upon billions of such bonds were peddled during the corporate raider, merger mania and company restructuring craze of the 1980s. Brokers pocketed fat profits on sales to customers who were mesmerized by the fantastically high interest rates the junk bonds promised to pay.

Now that some of the companies financed by junk have gone bankrupt and many others have defaulted on their bonds, reality has set in. Market prices of the vast majority of junk bonds have plunged.

Good luck in getting the quotations you seek. It's unlikely you will be happy with the prices you hear.

Q. After I was widowed some years ago, two close friends advised me to purchase American Telephone & Telegraph Corp. I have $30,000 worth. They are 83/4 percent debentures due May 15, 2000. As I will be 81 this summer, it is doubtful I will be around then.

Is it possible to sell these bonds? If so, what would I get for them?

A. This column seldom mentions individual securities, but your query provides an opportunity to give an example. Along with all investors who own bonds listed on stock exchanges, you can find price quotations in the financial section of many newspapers.

Run your finger down the New York Stock Exchange bond list until you find "ATT 83/4 00." (Without abbreviations we couldn't squeeze bond, stock and other price tables into newspapers.) You'll learn your bonds are trading around "101." That's 101 percent of face value and means, if you sell your $30,000 face value of bonds, you will receive $30,300 plus interest accrued since the most recent interest payment date minus brokerage commission.

Any securities brokerage firm can handle the sale for you. If you don't know a broker, your bank most likely can point you toward one or even handle the details.

Q. Are owners of debentures issued by a major corporation protected in any way?

A. Only by the issuing company's credit rating and its promise to pay. Unlike a mortgage bond, it is not secured by a lien on specific property. A debenture is best likened to a corporate IOU.

Because a debenture is a debt security, a company can be put into bankruptcy if it fails to meet interest payments on its debentures and/or fails to redeem them at face value when they mature.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 63.86 on Tuesday, rose 0.99 to 2,946.04 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 969 up, 579 down and 453 unchanged.

Analysts attributed renewed enthusiasm for stocks to expectations that the Federal Reserve might take further steps soon to relax its credit policy.

Evidence of persistent weakness in the economy is expected on Friday, when the Labor Department issues its report on employment for March.

Advance estimates call for the data to show a drop of between 100,000 and 150,000 in nonfarm payroll employment, and an increase in the unemployment rate from 6.5 percent in February to perhaps 6.7 percent.

Though that would raise the prospect of a delay in recovery from the recession, brokers say, it could mean that the rebound is stronger and longer-lasting when it eventually arrives.

Mesa moves managers to Dallas

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership will move 45 employees from its division office in Amarillo to its Dallas headquarters, a spokesman said.

The employees are senior managers who already work closely with the corporate staff in Dallas, spokesman Jay Rosser said Tuesday.

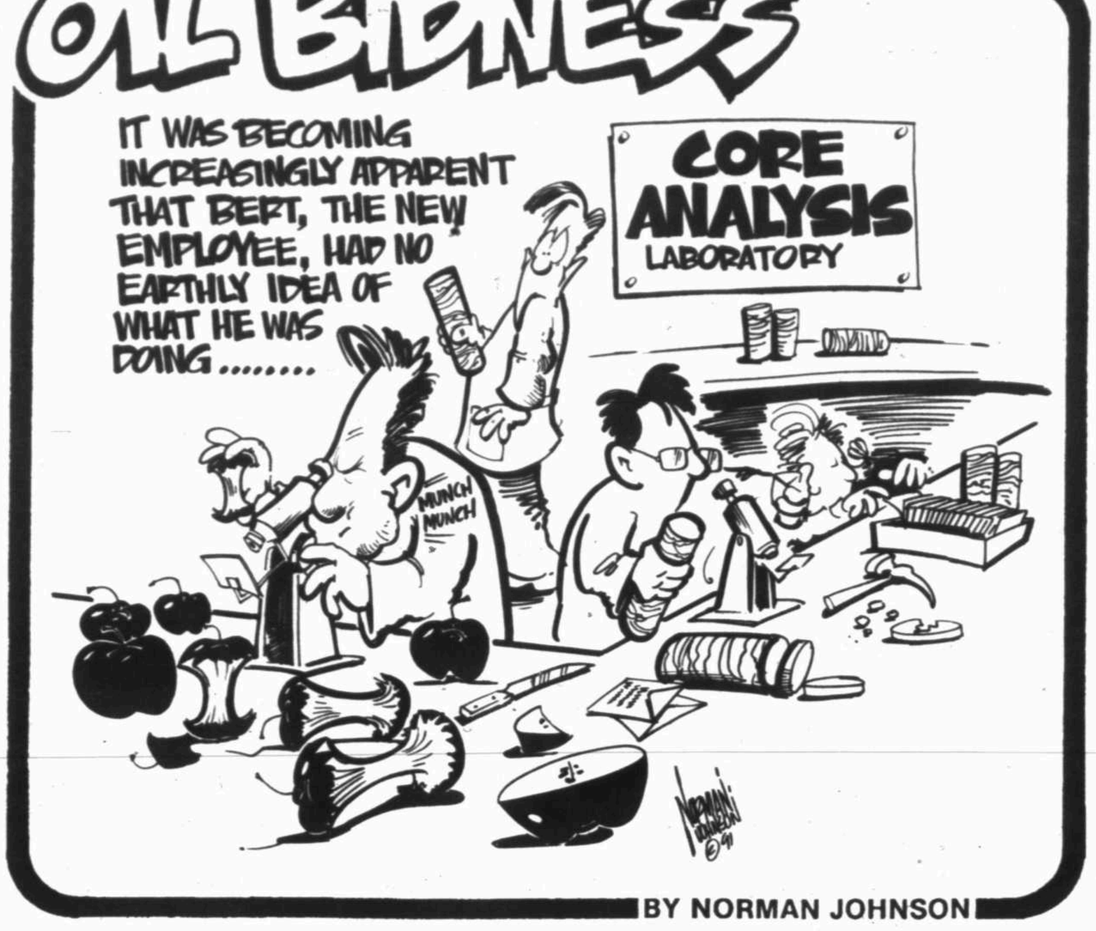

The move and transfer of about 50 Mesa employees to Seagull Energy Corp. will leave Mesa with 200 employees in the Panhandle city.

"Our critical support functions will remain at our divisional headquarters in Amarillo," Rosser said.

Mesa General Partner T. Boone Pickens Jr. and the partnership's top executives moved from Amarillo to Dallas in 1989. City leaders have feared Mesa would move the rest of its employees.

"We sure don't want to lose 200 employees from any company," said. Michael Bourn, executive director of Amarillo Economic Development Corp.

COMPAQ: Eyes hot workstation market

simplifies and speeds processing. But the company has found it difficult to reach beyond scientific and technical users.

The stock buying and shared technology deal gives Compaq a boost in entering the workstation market, and Silicon Graphics benefits from Compaq's mass distribution system, according to the companies.

"We are both very complimentary companies," said Silicon Graphics President and CEO Edward McCracken. "We have the advanced technology and they're real marketing leaders."

Rod Canion, president and CEO of Compaq, called the deal between the two companies a "strategic relationship" that will include an emphasis on research and development with creating an industry standard as the goal.

"Both Compaq and Silicon Graphics are very well positioned for the future," Canion said, refusing to say whether Compaq would seek a larger stake in Silicon Graphics.

Silicon Graphics lost some ground to competitors such as No.1 workstation maker Sun Microsystems, Inc. of Sunnyvale after selling its highly regarded 3-D graphics technology to companies such as IBM. Strong competition also is coming from Hewlett Packard, which just announced what they claim is the fastest performing workstation at 76 MIPS for up to $20,000.

"Some people are calling it the workstation of the 1990s," analyst Kastner said of the Hewlett Packard machine. "The competition is fierce."

Sharing graphics expertise with Compaq is part of a larger move to make Silicon Graphics' advanced technology an industry standard.

ADVANCE: Could cut solar-energy costs

(From 7C)

The goal is for the cells to produce electricity for about 14 cents a kilowatt hour, about what Southern California Edison charges residential customers. The electric output of the cell peaks in the late afternoon when demand is typically greatest.

"If they can cut the costs of the modules, excellent. We need it," said Marshall Blalock of Southwest PV Co. in Houston, the largest photovoltaic distributor in Texas.

The development could yield many applications for solar in urban areas where other forms of energy have been more cost-effective, Blalock said.

"There's nothing guaranteed about this technology. It's not a slam dunk," Patapoff said.

But he said it is enough of a breakthrough for him to envision the new cells on rooftops of many suburban homes, reducing demand from other energy sources, especially those that pollute.

"This technology allows us to generate electricity without generating any additional environmental impact," Patapoff said.

"Potentially there are a lot of other places where you could apply solar energy if it was less expensive," Jernigan said.

Both companies have a history of solar energy projects. Southern California Edison developed a 100-megawatt solar thermal plant in Barstow, Calif. The plant is inactive, but may restart soon, Patapoff said.

Texas Instruments took part in some Department of Energy programs to research photovoltaics in the 1970s. Jernigan said there is no direct relationship between the earlier experiments and the new breakthrough except that some scientists worked on both.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Crockett County nets 172-barrel discovery

Staff Report

SHARP IMAGE ENERGY INC., Big Spring, has completed a Lower Detrital discovery in Crockett County, north of the company's Wolfcamp gas discovery, the No. 2-C Hawk, northeast of the Huber field, seven miles south of McCamey.

The No. 1 Phoenix was tested to flow 172 barrels of 40.5 gravity crude and no water on a 1/64 inch choke from perforatins 5,365 to 5,369 ft. Production was natural. Gas-oil ratio is 1,773:1.

The well was drilled to 5,543 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,542 ft. On ground elevation of 2,304.7 ft., formation tops include the Lower Detrital at 5,350 ft., Devonian at 5,408, Detrital 5,240, and Wichita-Albany at 4,100 ft.

Wardrobe designers set studio style

By Nancy Miller Lewis
Copley News Service

"Dynasty" usually gets all the credit.

But when TV's Alexis (Joan Collins) needed to study a soap-opera grande dame — her clothes, her attitude — she went to the tapes of "The Young and the Restless," actress Jeanne Cooper notes.

Cooper, the real-life mother of "L.A. Law's" Corbin Bernsen, plays Kay Chancellor, the pivotal female role on the CBS daytime show that's got the attention of 9 million viewers.

Interestingly enough, while prime-time "Dynasty" glittered before TV viewers' eyes, insiders considered "The Young and the Restless" to be the soap that put style on the daytime dial. (Evidence: In 1973, a whopping $175,000 was spent to acquire antique furniture for just one "Young and Restless" set.)

Then, four years ago, CBS took another giant step into style. The network introduced "The Bold and the Beautiful." This soap revolves around a fashion industry family in Beverly Hills and a rival family in the "knockoff" business.

But be you bold, beautiful, young or restless, as a character, you've got to dress the part. And while that aspect of the job is easy for the cast, it's murder on the keepers of the closets, the wardrobe designers.

Take Greg York, who masterminds the clothes worn on "The Young and the Restless," the top-rated serial about to start its 18th season. He works 12 hours a day, five days a week and has 40 contract players who depend on him for the clothes on their backs. That adds up to somewhere between 60 and 80 changes of clothes per week.

THEN, CONSIDER Sandra Bojin-Sedlik, York's counterpart for "The Bold and the Beautiful." Last year, she had to design six different wedding dresses, in addition to pulling off two major fashion shows and all the while keeping the No.5-rated show's 20 contract players stylishly turned out.

"A lot (of wardrobing) for daytime is shopping and coordinating. We're fast shoppers with an eye to what will work," explains York, who estimates he shops three days a week.

"If there is something you need, you don't leave the store without it," she says. Translation: When you need a dress and you can't find the one you really want, you buy the best of what is available and never look back. (At least not in daytime TV — no reruns, you know.)

Adds York: "You have to be organized. There's no time to change your mind."

Of course, there's a lot more to wardrobing than organization and single-mindedness.

Usually, daytime soap opera designers receive the scripts two weeks in advance. They read them, then break them down for clothes changes. Next comes the shopping, then the fittings. Accessorizing the outfits is the final step.

The cast members don't all get new outfits for every show, though. In some cases "we go through what's already in the actors' closet," Bojin-Sedlik says.

Each show has a communal closet as big as a warehouse room with racks and racks stacked three-high of neatly categorized clothes that are organized according to character. Shoes — everything from Charles Jourdan and Yves St. Laurent to Kinney's — are in boxes from floor to ceiling.

Female characters may repeat an outfit after six or eight months. Male actors are stocked with six to 10 sport coats and an equal number of suits. Different shirts and neckties (quite important because of closeups) vary the looks of the jackets.

IF THE PROPER attire can't be found in the closet, then the shopping commences. Clothes are bought at retail prices from regular department stores. There are no price breaks for the shows, and the dreaded "B" word — budget — does come up frequently.

"To put things into perspective, 'Murder, She Wrote' has a $20,000-a-week clothing budget. We have less than half that — (and we have) twice as many actors to dress," York says, adding that the "Dynasty" razzle-dazzle did loosen the purse strings on the daytime soaps. "We needed a level of glitz to compete," he acknowledges.

Once in the stores, though, the theatrical part of a designer's job comes into play.

"On soap operas, things are broad. There's a melodramatic style. Villains are dressed darkly and others are theatrically overglamorous. If the character is rich, he or she will get expensive clothes," York explains.

York and Bojin-Sedlik agree that if you're dressing a woman of dubious virtue, it's best to turn her out in stretch materials and find designs that emphasize the bust, waist and hips. On the other hand, if a character is in a traumatic situation, he or she will be dressed simply with few accessories and in demure colors.

For York, in between the tart and the traumatic, there's ever-popular Nikki on "The Young and the Restless." "She's the stripper who married the richest guy in town," York says and chuckles.

"Her clothes are always bourgeois. She always has on big earrings. She'd clean out the garage in a Christian Dior suit."

"In many ways, this is fantasy," York observes.

York turns to his cast for input, especially when it comes to choosing colors, shoes and earrings. Of course, in the hierarchy, the higher up the actor is, the more he or she has to say about the outfits.

Jeanne Cooper likes to work in separates.

"My personal taste is classic, not glitzy. I can wear Chanel very well," she says. "I insist that I wear the clothes, that they don't wear me. Clothes have to relate to the person — but that doesn't mean they have to be astronomical in cost.

"The worst thing they ever made me wear was a cotton paisley dress. It was pitiful. Pathetic. But I was supposed to be pitiful and pathetic," says Cooper, who frequently is dressed in designs by Valentino and Ungaro for her part.

Janelle Jones

Janelle Jones, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orval L. Jones, was elected queen of the West Side Lions Club at a Sweetheart Banquet at the Ramada Inn. She will represent the group at the Lions' Convention of Multiple District 2-A1 in Sweetwater April 26-27.

Miss Jones is a junior at Greenwood High School. She was named to Who's Who in American High Schools and was a 1990 Ambassador to the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Seminar. She is an A-honor roll student, named seven times to the Superintendent's Honor List and a member of National Honor Society. She also is a recipient of the National Leadership and Service Award and the U.S. Business Education Award.

A percussionist in band, Miss Jones was selected as a member of the All-Region Band and the McMurry College Bi-State High School Honor Band. She tied for second runner-up in the Miss Photogenic Midland 1990 contest and was a finalist in the West Texas Division, 1991 America's Miss National Teenager Pageant.

She was recently selected for the All-Star Cast in 1991 UIL One-Act Play Competition. She is in the Drama Club, P.O.L.O. and Furture Homemakers of America.

Miss Jones is a Midland Memorial Hospital Candy Striper, a member of Big Brothers/Big Sisters and BSA Medical Explorers. She has been recreation leader and substitute teacher for Vacation Bible School and is serving on the Formal Wear Teen Board of Midland.

Wrinkle Cream Great Success

Millions of jars of the exciting wrinkle cream developed by Pharmacist Robert Heldfond have been sold to women who are reporting wonderful results.

EB5 Wrinkle Cream is not only perfect for the woman who may already have the dreaded signs of looking older...crow's feet, facial lines, dry skin, and other symptoms of aging skin...but is also perfect for the woman who may only have a few lines and is worried about looking old too soon.

EB5 acts like five creams in one jar...a Wrinkle Cream (to help facial lines appear smoother), a Moisturizer, a Day Cream, a Night Cream, and a Makeup Base all in one. Your skin will feel soft, velvety and younger looking.

If you feel that your skin is appearing to age too quickly, go into the cosmetic department and buy a jar of EB5 Wrinkle Cream today.

A GIFT FROM PHARMACIST HELDFOND

THE PERFECT CLEANSER
Improper facial cleansing may cause the skin to look older than it should. Natural oils are robbed and skin may be left dry, sallow, and lined. Pharmacist Heldfond has developed the perfect cleansing formula. EB5 Facial Cleanser is soap-free, yet cleans deeply and gently, removing the traces of dirt, makeup and dead surface cells which can make skin look old. EB5 Facial Cleanser really works...really leaves the skin feeling clean, moist, soft, and velvety.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a married man. He has four children. I am also married with two children. I have a great job and appear to be very happy. In truth, I am under great stress, break into tears for no reason at all, can't sleep or eat, and feel that my life is on a roller coaster.

Van Buren

From the first, we agreed that neither of us would ever leave our spouses and we would not let our affair interfere with our marriages. Of course, that's impossible.

Is it worth it? Of course not. But I'm terrified at the thought of not having him in my life — and I don't know why. We both have loving, caring spouses, so it's not as though we are lonely, abused or sex-starved. Some days I feel as though I'm coming apart at the seams.

How can I break this cycle? "Just break it off" sounds so easy, but I just can't do it. I see him often because we have mutual friends and community activities in common. Please help me.

Sign me ... MESSED UP IN MICHIGAN

DEAR MESSED UP: This may sound like a broken record, but you are sick! Lovesick. And the only cure for that is psychotherapy. Yes, counseling. I have long maintained that love is a "mental disease" — and people can actually become lovesick. You need a therapist to help you become better acquainted with your emotions, and learn how they are tied to your physical desires (love, lust or whatever you want to call it).

You can regain your sanity if you really want to and try hard enough. I wish you well.

DEAR ABBY: You have printed several letters pertaining to this subject, but please print this as a reminder:

Please, if you are a stranger, do not touch my baby. If you see us walking on the street and you want to see him, do so. Do not grab his hands and play "pat-a-cake"; do not touch his head or try to pick him up. You are a stranger; I do not know you. I do not know if you have any diseases — not just the obvious ones; you may have poison ivy, a cold, you may not have washed your hands, and heaven knows where they have been.

You may admire him, ask me how old he is, smile at him and talk to him, but please do not touch him! I would hate to have to be rude to otherwise friendly well-wishers, but this has been bothering me for quite a while, as I am sure it bothers other mothers. — A FRIENDLY BUT CAUTIOUS MOMMY

DEAR FRIENDLY BUT CAUTIOUS: Your problem is one that has bothered mothers for years. Save the speech. When someone admires your baby and moves toward touching him, quickly and firmly say, "Please don't touch the child. Thank you." And if the would-be toucher is hurt and annoyed, that's his or her problem.

Mini dress is major trauma

By Erma Bombeck

The "dress" of the '90s is not a dress at all. It's a strip of Lycra no bigger than a tabloid, designed with a slut-cut that sticks to the human form like bad wallpaper.

Bombeck

It is called the mini dress. To be able to wear it, a woman must have no bones and be no older than 4.

When it first came on the fashion scene, I was willing to bet that the style wouldn't fly. Yet these dresses have become the staple of every awards show, every gala, and are worn (barely) by every teen-ager in America. They hang from the racks in department stores and boutiques like Barbie blouses.

Every week, I receive 35 pounds of mail-order catalogs. Every hemline on every dress in them measures no less than 28 inches from the floor. As I am 5 foot 2, that translates to a level of my body seen only by my gynecologist.

The mini dress asks much from its wearer. My thin friends tell me that once they slip into one, they must be prepared to stay on their feet all night. Sitting in it is more than a luxury; it's inconceivable.

My husband and I were walking behind a girl wearing a mini dress the other day when he asked, "What do you wear under something like that?"

I said, "When she steps up on the curb, you can find out for yourself."

It's hard to criticize the coming and going of styles. Each generation has had its nightmare trend that later becomes an I-can't-believe-I-ever-wore-that memory.

There was a time when teen-age girls wore 50 yards of felt gathered at the waist that dragged on the floor and had a large sequined poodle emblazoned on it. I have a picture of me wearing one. I would kill for the negative.

My mother has a picture of herself in a dropped-waist dress with no form whatsoever. She looks like a Russian street cleaner.

The fashion world vacillates between decorum and decadence. One season we are layering bulky sweaters that you can wear sitting on a piano and no one would know you were sitting on a piano. The next season, we are Velcro-ing our knees together to ward off chills.

What's a woman to do? This year I feel like a car that has stalled at a traffic light. It's easier to sit here for a while and wait for the light to turn red than to try to fix it.

Urology

Q. During my previous marriage, I had a vasectomy done. Since4 then, I have divorced and remarried. We would like to begin our own family. Can vasectomies be reversed, and if so, how successful are they?

A. Yes, Vasectomy reversals (called vasoyasostomy) are commonly performed using an operation microscope. The procedure takes 2-4 hours and requires anesthesia. It is, obviously, a much more difficult and complicated procedure than a vasectomy.

Depending on whether sperm are found at the time of the surgery, the success rate varies from around 60-90%. The best results occur in men who had their vasectomy less than 10 years prior to the reversal.

Weight Management

Q. I am trying to lose weight. Do I have to exercise, and, if so, how much?

A. For every pound of weight to be lost a deficit of 3500 caloreis must be made. This deficit could occur through decreasing input (eating less or selecting lower caloric foods), increasing output (exercising) or, preferably, a combination of both. Most persons find strictly "eating less" an unsuccessful venture. Our data reveals physical activity to be the strongest prediction of long-term weight management success. Specifically, expenditures of 2,000 or more weekly calories correlates to the least percentage of weight regain. Exercise of this level also maximizes body fat loss, minimizes muscle loss, and represents a lifestyle incorporation of activity. It is advised to check with your physician before starting a rigorous exercise program.

Ophthalmology

Q. What are lid spasms and can they be treated?

A. The three most common types of lid spasm are lid twitch, essential blepharospasm and hemifacial spasm. The cause of minor lid twitch is unknown. A slight spasm of the lids is common and usually of no concern. These usually resolve spontaneously and require no treatment, although reducing stress may help. The condition where the lids close involuntarily is called essential blepharospasm. When the spasm occurs there may be a temporary decrease in vision due to the lid closure. Hemifacial spasm involves the eyelid muscles and usually the muscles around the mouth on one side of the face only. It is usually caused by an artery pressing on the nerve to the facial muscles. There is a neurosurgical procedure to relieve the pressure that is highly successful but has a possibility of serious complications.

Two types of surgery for essential blepharospasm are available. The first type involves destruction of the nerve to the muscles. This procedure provides relief, but often recurs and the relief is incomplete. The second type involves removal of the muscle that is going into spasm. This may provide relief but it is a major surgery and the results are variable. Both of the above surgical procedures have side effects which may include widening or drooping of the upper lids, drying and irritation due to the temporary inability to completely close the lid, and in rare cases, blurry vision or loss of vision. A new treatment that is available is the injection of a botulinum toxin called Oculinium. It is injected into the muscles that are involved and usually relief is provided for about three months. There have been no systemic side effects using the Oculinium, but it is only temporarily effective and must be repeated to control the disease and is not a cure. One very common side effect is the drooping of the lids which generally resolves itself in about three weeks, if it occurs at all. Oculinium has been effective for most patients with lid spasm.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. What can be done for ears that stick out?

A. Otoplasty typically is performed to create or restore the center fold to disproportionately large or prominent ears. The extent of the procedure depends on what changes are desired and what your surgeon seems appropriate. On your surgeon's recommendation, you may be operated on in the surgeon's office, in ana outpatient surgical facility or you may be admitted to a hospital.

Otoplasty may be performed under a local anesthetic which numbs the area around the ears, or under a general anesthetic which will make you sleep through the entire operation.

There are several possible surgical approaches to otoplasty. Using a commonly employed technique, the surgeon makes incisions in the back of the ear and removes skin to expose ear cartilage. Then, the surgeon uses sutures to fold the cartilage in on itself to reshape the ear. In some instances, the same result can be achieved without sutures by weakening the cartilage before folding it. The incisions are closed with sutures.

By creating a more pronounced fold in the central portion of the ear, the surgeon brings the ear close to the head.

Depending on the extent of the surgery, the procedure usually lasts about two hours.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. Can scars be totally removed?

A. Complete removal of scars is impossible since it is the body's natural response in the healing process. At best, the reconstructive surgeon can minimize unfavorable scar development by eliminating all of the known obstacles to primary healing. Planning surgical excisions within the normal tension lines and natural skin folds will be advantageous, as will meticulous care in surgical wound closure technique. It is not possible, however, to predict the character of final healing with complete accuracy. It should also be noted that complete healing for most scars will require a minimum of six to eight months. Under some circumstances, final healing may require twelve months and possibly longer. Cardiology

Q. What is "balloon angioplasty"?

A. This is a nonsurgical procedure in which a tiny balloon at the end of a long tube (catheter) is guided into a narrowed segment of the coronary artery. The balloon is inflated and deflated several times to compress arterial plaque (fatty deposits) against the arterial walls. This technique results in widening the narrowed channel to increase blood flow to the affected part of the heart.

The success rate is 70-75% the artery will stay open and 25-30% the problem will re-occur. If it does re-occur, usually it happens within six months to a year. This procedure can be repeated up to three times. In some cases your physician may recommend a coronary artery bypass grafting to supply new blood flow to sections of the heart.

Q. If I loose several teeth, is there an alternative to wearing full or partial dentures?

A. Yes, if you have lost one, several, or all of your natural teeth, there is an alternative to wearing full or partial dentures. The solution is called dental implants. A dental implant is a metallic cylinder which is made of surgical titanium coated with a synthetic "bone-like" substance called hydroxylapatite. The hydroxylapatite allows the surrounding jaw bone to actually grow into the implant, a process called osseointegration. The implant is surgically implanted into the jaw to replace the root of the missing tooth. This process is performed in the dental office under either local or general anesthesia. The implant must remain "buried" under the gum for approximately three months. After the implant is exposed, your general dentist would then proceed with the fabrication of crowns, fixed bridge work, or fixed implant dentures.

Turkey claims Iraq endangering Kurds

N.Y. Times News Service

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkey accused Iraq on Wednesday of putting the lives of more than 200,000 Kurds in "mortal danger" by trying to push them out of northern Iraq, but said it would not permit a mass entry of refugees into Turkey's largely Kurdish southeast.

Nevertheless, Turkish officials insisted that Iraqi Kurds who managed to drift across the rugged 206-mile-long border would not be sent back and would be fed, sheltered and given medical treatment.

Thousands of Kurds fleeing President Saddam Hussein's army are said to have trekked into Turkey illegally in the last few days, many of them women, children and old people who stumbled across snowy mountain passes.

Foreign correspondents accompanying them described painful scenes of ill-fed and poorly clothed refugees struggling to escape reprisals that they believe await them for their monthlong, and apparently unsuccessful, uprising against Saddam.

"It took us — young men, reasonably fit — 12 hours to reach the Turkish border, to get there walking solidly through the night," said Tom Carver, a reporter for the British Broadcasting Corp. "For these old people and young children, it was taking them up to two days.

"There was snow covering the top of the ridge," he said, "and these children, with no shoes on, were just standing in the snowy field and crying because their feet were frozen."

Exactly how many Iraqis made it across the mountains into Turkey is not clear. One unconfirmed report said that as many 50,000 Kurds had straggled across passes near the southeastern border town of Uludere. But some officials said they considered that an improbably high figure.

Whatever the real numbers may be, it was evident that a human drama of potentially enormous proportions was unfolding at the Turkish-Iraqi border.

Senior Turkish officials said the fleeing Kurds could face death, and they warned Iraq against attacking the tens of thousands massed along the border. The officials also pleaded for United Nations help to deal with the problem.

On Tuesday night, Turkey's National Security Council said that more than 200,000 people were "in mortal danger" because and were "being forced to take shelter in Turkey under military pressure and mortar fire."

Nonetheless, Turkish officials said they were not prepared to open their doors to a flood of Kurdish arrivals. The only legal entry point, the Habur border gate in the southeastern pocket of the country, remained closed, as it has been since before the start of the Persian Gulf war.

There were news reports that Turkish troops had fired over the heads of escaping Kurds to discourage them from coming any closer, but those accounts were denied by the chief Foreign Ministry spokesman.

The spokesman, Murat Sungar, also denied reports that Turkey, while trying to reject the Kurds, was giving preferential treatment to ethnic Turks from Iraq known as Turcomans.

Turkey's hard-line stand against a mass migration is born of lingering resentment over the international response to a sudden flood of 60,000 Iraqi Kurds who fled into Turkey in the late summer of 1988, asserting that Saddam's troops had attacked their villages with chemical weapons.

At the time, Iraq had just agreed to a cease-fire in its eight-year war against Iran, and Saddam took advantage of it to turn his fire on Kurdish guerrillas, whom he regarded as having been a pro-Iran fifth column.

Some 27,000 of those 60,000 Kurds are still being sheltered in camps near the southeastern cities of Diyarbakir and Kiziltepe, and Turkey feels that it has been unfairly forced to bear the costs while the rest of the world, after some loud tongue-clucking over the Kurds' plight, looked the other way.

Demonstrators, army clash following Albania elections

N.Y. Times News Service

TIRANA, Albania — By most accounts, Albania's national elections on Sunday, the first multiparty voting in 68 years, went smoothly. But it has since become clear that they left this Communist-ruled country bitterly divided.

That became apparent on Tuesday as violence between anti-Communist demonstrators and Communist security forces broke out in six cities. In the northern city of Shkoder, three demonstrators were killed by army units using rifles and a 20-millimeter cannon.

The elections gave the Communists, who had run Albania for 46 years, a comfortable majority of 162 seats in the 250-member Parliament. Their strength came almost exclusively from rural areas, where two-thirds of the 3.5 million Albanians live.

Albania's main cities voted overwhelmingly for the opposition Democratic Party, which was founded and legalized under popular pressure three months ago.

In addition to the split between town and country, the elections opened rifts between parents and children, army officers and ordinary soldiers, and between north and south.

Southern Albania, the region below the Shkumbi River, is the homeland of the Tosks, who retain a distinctive dialect. It remains a Communist stronghold, having produced Enver Hoxha, the longtime Stalinist dictator, who died in 1985.

Northern Albania is the homeland of the Ghegs, also distinguished by their dialect. One of the few prominent Communist leaders it produced is President Ramiz Alia, a native of Shkoder who began a process of what he called democratization in Albania 11 months ago.

The events of the last three days culminating in the violence in Shkoder have also revealed a sharp division — partly reflecting the Tosk-Gheg rivalry — within the Communist Party.

The election underlined that. Alia, leader of the reform-minded faction, was defeated in his parliamentary race in a central district of Tirana. His hard-line rival, Xhelil Gjoni, who hails from the village of Maqulare in eastern Albania, won in his district.

Witnesses said the violence in Shkoder was set off by the tough-talking Gjoni, who said at a news conference on Monday that the Communist Party victory was a clear endorsement of "Marxism-Leninism" in Albania.

The mostly young supporters of the opposition Democrats, whose party carried all of Shkoder's districts, took that as an affront and started a sit-down strike that ended with shooting.

There are several factors in the Communist victory at the polls.

Albania is mostly mountainous. In the interior, transport and communications are primitive. The Stalinist majority of the Communist Party enjoyed a monopoly in power for most of the last five decades, which it enforced by isolating Albania from the rest of the world throughout that period.

For nearly half a century, Albania's rural residents, who make up 60 percent of the population, have never known any but Communist leaders. In the cities, exposure to the outside world was much greater by virtue of the availability of Western television and radio broadcasts.

The opposition Democrats, in the brief campaign time allowed them, were unable to penetrate the Albanian countryside.

There is another aspect to the Albanian people. They still abide in many ways by an ancient code of patriarchal ethics.

That common-law tradition is known as the Canon of Leke Dukagjina, named for a 15th-century hero in wars against the Turkish invaders who codified the canon.

The basic principle of the canon is captured in the Albanian word "besa," which means a vow that is given to this day with the right hand placed on the heart. To break a vow is to risk death, possibly in a blood feud.

The Communist Party under Hoxha and Alia, his hand-picked successor, tried to suppress the Canon of Leke Dukagjina, preventing its publication or circulation here.

But the canon has lived on among the Albanians, and Dr. Sali Berisha, leader of the Democratic Party, said in an interview on Monday that it surely played a role in the mountain vote for the Communists.

Defrocked Spanish priest leads Colombian guerrilla organization

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The leader of a guerrilla group now engaged in its most ambitious offensive is a defrocked Spanish priest who preaches the "gospel of the poor" with a rifle in his hands.

Perez

Manuel Perez, leader of the National Liberation Army, is a key to the question of whether peace or war lies ahead for this violent South American nation of 30 million people.

Other Roman Catholic priests who chose revolution died in combat, but Perez has survived more than 20 years of armed insurrection.

"I joined the guerrillas because they were the only ones who took me in," the former cleric, 54, said in a radio-telephone interview with The Associated Press.

He said he lived among the poor and worked in the port of Cartagena, a colonial fortress town, before joining the the National Liberation Army, known by its Spanish initials ELN.

Perez was prohibited from practicing the priesthood after he took up the guerrilla cause in the 1960s, church officials said.

Being Spanish doesn't disqualify him from fighting the government of another country, Perez said.

"I was born in Spain, but I now feel like a poor Colombian," he told the interviewer. "I feel exploited in this oppressed Colombia."

His rebels are "the army of the poor," with a mission to "bring about peace with social justice," and he is pround to command them, Perez said.

The ELN and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, or FARC, are cooperating in an offensive that has cost an estimated 582 lives since January in attacks on towns, army bases and local businesses. Officials say the dead include 292 insurgents and the attacks have cost the economy $500 million.

Perez and other rebel commanders say the offensive is retaliation for the army's bombing and capture of the FARC jungle headquarters in early December.

Although he declares himself interested in talking with the government "to find a way out of the violence," Perez has a long list of demands to be met before there can be peace.

They include nationalizing the entire oil industry and a change in development plans that he says "exclude the majority of the population."

"There must first be an accord to eliminate all the problems that generate violence," Perez said. "As a consequence of that, the guerrilla movement will be able to disarm."

Four other rebel groups have either made peace with the government or are in the process of doing so. In exchange, the government is allowing them to participate in an assembly that is rewriting the 104-year-old constitution.

Neither the National Liberation Army nor Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia shows much interest in renouncing revolution. Perez's group has increased its attacks on petroleum installations, bombing the main oil pipeline every few days.

Since 1986, the ELN has made 154 attacks on the Cano-Limon pipeline, which carries 220,000 barrels crude oil a day, causing an estimated $600 million in losses, according to the state-run oil company Ecopetrol.

Its goal, the ELN says, is to see the rest of the industry nationalized and foreign oil companies expelled.

Some Colombians suspect a less idealistic purpose. Many businessmen have become convinced that paying off the rebels is better than risking attack.

Perez denies newspaper and magazine reports that he has become rich from "revolution taxes," which ranchers and businessmen call extortion.

"I am a poor man," he said in the interview. "I don't even have five cents."

He dismissed claims that the guerrilla offensive endangers Colombia's economic well-being and said: "The economic opening program has caused more damage by leaving thousands of workers unemployed."

'I was born in Spain, but I now feel like a poor Colombian. I feel exploited in this oppressed Colombia.'

— Manuel Perez, Defrocked Spanish priest

His reference was to President Cesar Gaviria's attempt to make Colombian companies more competitive in world markets by eliminating trade barriers and other protectionist measures.

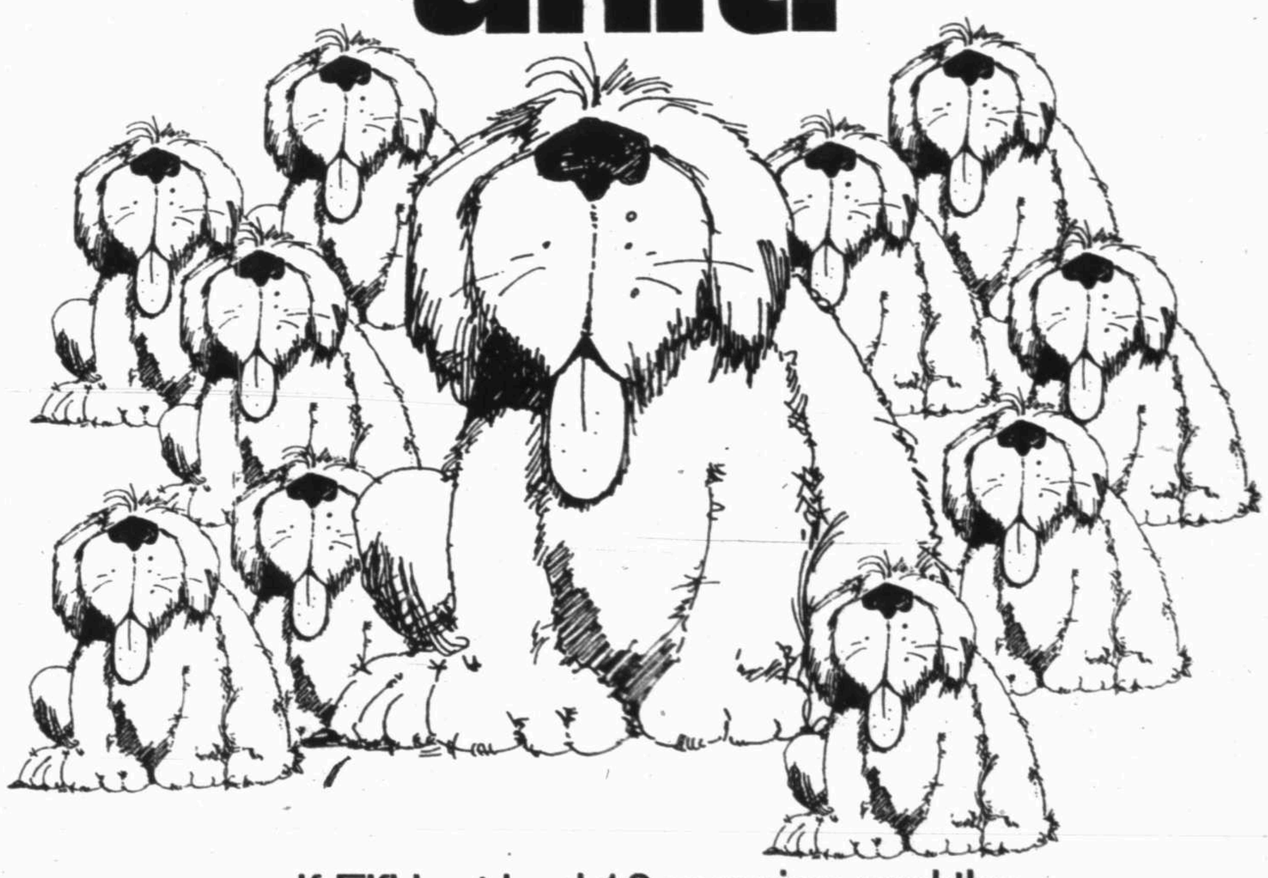

The government and rebels have agreed to hold cease-fire talks, but they have been delayed by disagreement on a site. Colombia's Roman Catholic Church has agreed to mediate.

Perez said he was eager to speak with "my brothers of the gospel."

"The Jesus of the Bible is with us," he said. "I would like to talk with all the bishops because I profoundly love the gospel."

ELN guerrillas shot and killed Bishop Jesus Emilio Jaramillo of eastern Arauca province on Sept. 3, 1989.
